If, however, the plaintiff challenging enforcement of the forum selection clausedid not have sufficient notice of the clause prior to entering into the contract, the requisite mutual consent to that contractual term is lacking, and no valid contract with respect to the clause exists [Carnival Cruise Lines, Inc. v. Superior Court (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 1019, 1026-1027, 286 Cal. Rptr. 323 (remanding on the issue of notice; clause unenforceable as to any plaintiff with insufficient notice); see Hunt v. Superior Court (2000) 81 Cal. App. 4th 901, 908-909, 97 Cal. Rptr. 2d 215 (forum selection clause contained in adhesion contract is enforceable even if defendant did not actually read it as long as clause provided adequate notice to defendant that defendant was agreeing to jurisdiction cited in contract; clause in question held not valid because it gave no such notice)].

In the case of a permissive forum selection clause, a forum non conveniens motion requires the weighing of a gamut of factors of public and private convenience. The normal forum non conveniens analysis applies. Although a permissive forum selection clause is always entitled to substantial weight, it is only one factor in the forum selection mix [Berg v. MTC Electronics Technologies Co. (1998) 61 Cal. App. 4th 349, 358-359, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 523 (for definition of permissive forum selection clause, see [1], above; for discussion of factors considered in a motion to quash, see § 323.35[6]].

A challenge to a forum selection clause cannot properly be raised by demurrer [Miller-Leigh v. Henson (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 1143, 1150, 62 Cal. Rptr. 3d 83] .

[7] Void Clauses

[a] Provisions Made Invalid by Statute

Some forum selection provisions are declared to be void by statute, as noted in [b]-[e], below.

[b] In Franchise Agreements

A provision in a franchise agreement restricting venue to a forum outside California is void with respect to any claim arising under or relating to a franchise agreement involving a franchise business operating within California [Bus. & Prof. Code § 20040.5].

[c] In Agreements Between Equipment Dealers and Suppliers

A provision in any contract or agreement with a supplier that requires jurisdiction or venue outside California is void with respect to a claim otherwise enforceable under Bus. & Prof. § 22900 et seq., relating to equipment dealers [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22927].

[d] In Beer Distribution Agreements

A provision in an agreement between a beer manufacturer and a beer wholesaler for the sale and distribution of beer in California, which restricts venue to a forum outside California, is void with respect to a claim arising under or relating to the agreement involving a beer wholesaler operating within California [Bus. & Prof. Code § 25000.6].

[e] In Contracts Between Contractors and Subcontractors

The following provisions of a contract between the contractor and a subcontractor with principal offices in California, for the construction of a public or private work of improvement in California are void and unenforceable [Code Civ. Proc. § 410.42]:

- A provision that purports to require any dispute between the parties to be litigated, to be arbitrated, or otherwise to be determined outside California.

- A provision that purports to preclude a party from commencing such a proceeding or obtaining a judgment or other resolution in California or the courts of California.

For purposes of these provisions, "construction" means any work or services performed on, or materials provided for, a work of improvement as defined in Civ. Code § 3106, and for which a lien may be claimed pursuant to Civ. Code § 3110 (whether or not a lien is in fact claimed) or for which such a lien could be claimed but for Civ. Code § 3109 [Code Civ. Proc. § 410.42].

[8] Standard of Review

The case law is in conflict on the standard of appellate review of a motion to enforce a forum selection clause [Intershop Communications v. Superior Court (2002) 104 Cal. App. 4th 191, 199, 127 Cal. Rptr. 2d 847] . One line of decisions finds that in a contractual forum non conveniens motion, the trial court must determine if there is sufficient evidence to satisfy the requirements for invalidating a binding contract, and if there are facts present that satisfy these criteria, it must act in a particular way; there is no discretion involved; the reviewing court is thus involved in determining the quantum of evidence adduced, not the manner in which factors were applied [Cal-State Business Products & Services, Inc. v. Ricoh (1993) 12 Cal. App. 4th 1666, 1680-1681, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 417 (italics in original)]. Another line of cases holds that the abuse of discretion standard, not the substantial evidence standard, applies to the review of a trial court's decision not to enforce a forum selection clause [America Online, Inc. v. Superior Court (2001) 90 Cal. App. 4th 1, 9, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 699] .

Language by the Supreme Court suggest that the trial court retains a measure of discretion regarding the choice of forum even when there is a forum selection clause: "Forum selection clauses are valid and may be given effect, in the court's discretion and in the absence of a showing that enforcement of such a clause would be unreasonable" [Smith, Valentino & Smith, Inc. v. Superior Court (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 491, 496, 131 Cal. Rptr. 374] . A case with similar reasoning held: "Although not even a 'mandatory' forum selection clause can completely eliminate a court's discretion to make appropriate rulings regarding choice of forum, the modern trend is to enforce mandatory forum selection clauses unless they are unfair or unreasonable" [Berg v. MTC Electronics Technologies Co. (1998) 61 Cal. App. 4th 349, 358, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 523] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionPersonal Jurisdiction & In Rem ActionsIn Personam ActionsConsentCivil ProcedureVenueForum Non ConveniensContracts LawContract Conditions & ProvisionsForum Selection Clauses

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329

Chapter 323 JURISDICTION: PERSONAL JURISDICTION, INCONVENIENT FORUM, AND APPEARANCES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Inconvenient Forum

28-323 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 323.35

§ 323.35 Establishing Inconvenient Forum on Motion to Stay or Dismiss Action

[1] Alternative Relief

A defendant may move to stay or dismiss on the ground of inconvenient forum pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10. For further discussion of the procedure for making such motions, see § 323.50 et seq. For forms of motions to stay or dismiss an action on the ground of inconvenient forum, see § 323.150 and § 323.157.

When a court finds, on the motion of a party or on its own motion, that in the interest of substantial justice an action should be heard in a forum outside California, it shall stay or dismiss the action in whole or in part on any conditions that may be just [Code Civ. Proc. § 410.30(a); for additional discussion of whether to grant a stay or dismissal, see § 323.35[7]].

The inquiry on the motion is not whether the other forum is better than California, but whether California is a seriously inconvenient forum [Ford Motor Co. v. Insurance Co. of North America (1995) 35 Cal. App. 4th 604, 611, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 342] .

[2] Burden of Proof on Motion

The defendant, as the moving party, bears the burden of proof on a forum non conveniens motion [Stangvik v. Shiley, Inc. (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 744, 751, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 556, 819 P.2d 14 ; Chong v. Superior Court (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 1032, 1036, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 427 ; Boaz v. Boyle & Co. (1995) 40 Cal. App. 4th 700, 707, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 888] . However, when the motion is based on a forum selection clause in a contract, the plaintiff bears the burden of proof in opposing enforcement of the clause and must demonstrate that enforcement of the clause would be unreasonable under the circumstances of the case [see Nam Tai Electronics, Inc. v. Titzer (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 1301, 1311-1313, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 769 (forum clause in Internet agreement for registering a nickname or alias with Yahoo!, a California-based Internet message board, was not negotiable and therefor a contract of adhesion and unenforceable); CQL Original Products, Inc. v. National Hockey League Players' Assn. (1995) 39 Cal. App. 4th 1347, 1354, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 412 ; for additional discussion of burden of proof in context of forum selection clause, see § 323.34[6]].

[3] Trial Court's Discretion

Other than the nondiscretionary threshold determination whether the alternative forum is a place suitable for trial [American Cemwood Corp. v. American Home Assurance Co. (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 431, 436, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 670] , the question whether the doctrine of inconvenient forum should be applied in a particular case rests in the discretion of the trial court. Its decision on a motion to stay or dismiss on the ground of inconvenient forum will be disturbed on appeal only when the order is unsupported by substantial evidence under apposite law, and an order granting the motion will not be overturned on appeal unless the balance of factors weigh strongly against the moving party [Credit Lyonnais Bank Nederland, N.V. v. Manatt, Phelps, Rothenberg & Tunney (1988) 202 Cal.App. 3d 1424, 1431, 249 Cal. Rptr. 559] . That is, the granting or denial of the motion is within the discretion of the trial court, and substantial deference is accorded its determination by an appellate court in this regard [Stangvik v. Shiley Inc. (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 744, 751, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 556, 819 P.2d 14 ; Boaz v. Boyle & Co. (1995) 40 Cal. App. 4th 700, 707, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 888] . A court has exercised discretion appropriately when it acts within the range of options available under governing legal criteria in light of the evidence before it [Hansen v. Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp. (1996) 51 Cal. App. 4th 753, 758, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 229] . For the moving party to prevail, there must be evidence, not merely bald assertions, to support the trial court's determination [Ford Motor Co. v. Insurance Co. of North America (1995) 35 Cal. App. 4th 604, 610, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 342] .

The trial court's discretion may not, however, be arbitrary but must be exercised in conformity with the spirit of the law and in a manner to subserve and not to impede the ends of substantial justice [Corrigan v. Bjork Shiley Corp. (1986) 182 Cal. App. 3d 166, 173, 227 Cal. Rptr. 247 (reversing order staying action; disapproved on another ground in Stangvik v. Shiley, Inc. (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 744, 764, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 556, 819 P.2d 14)]. If the balance does weigh heavily in a defendant's favor, it becomes the trial court's duty to apply the doctrine [Outboard Marine Corp. v. Superior Court (1976) 59 Cal. App. 3d 434, 439, 130 Cal. Rptr. 642 (issuing writ of mandate directing trial court to dismiss action for inconvenient forum].

[4] Availability of Suitable Alternate Forum

In deciding whether to grant a forum non conveniens motion, a court must first determine whether the alternate forum is a "suitable" place for trial [Stangvik v. Shiley, Inc. (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 744, 751, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 556, 819 P.2d 14 (declining to follow Holmes v. Syntex Laboratories, Inc. (1984) 156 Cal. App. 3d 372, 202 Cal. Rptr. 773 , which appeared to consider the "suitability" of the alternative forum as part of the discretionary determination of the balance of conveniences rather than as a threshold inquiry); Chong v. Superior Court (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 1032, 1036, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 427] . This is a nondiscretionary determination[American Cemwood Corp. v. American Home Assurance Co. (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 431, 436, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 670 ; Chong v. Superior Court (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 1032, 1036, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 427] .

The question of a suitable alternative forum does not depend on the factors relevant to the convenience of the parties and the interests of the public, but on whether an action may be commenced in the alternative jurisdiction and a valid judgment obtained there against the defendant [Stangvik v. Shiley, Inc. (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 744, 752 n.3, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 556, 819 P.2d 14] . A forum is suitable if there is jurisdiction and no statute of limitations bar to hearing the case on the merits. A forum is suitable if the action can be brought in that forum, although not necessarily won [Chong v. Superior Court (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 1032, 1036-1037, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 427] .

All the defendants must be subject to the jurisdiction of the alternative court [American Cemwood Corp. v. American Home Assurance Co. (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 431, 436, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 670 (distinguishing Hansen v. Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp. (1996) 51 Cal. App. 4th 753, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 229 , and noting that it was decided in an narrow context)].

If a suitable alternative forum is not available to the plaintiff, the action will not be dismissed. Thus, a suit will be entertained, no matter how inappropriate the forum may be, if the defendant cannot be subjected to jurisdiction in other states. The same is true if the plaintiff's cause of action would elsewhere be barred by the statute of limitations, unless the court is willing to accept the defendant's stipulation that he or she will not raise this defense in the second state [Stangvik v. Shiley, Inc. (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 744, 752, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 556, 819 P.2d 14] , or presumably because the forum is in a foreign country in which a due process decision by an independent judiciary cannot be expected [see Boaz v. Boyle & Co. (1995) 40 Cal. App. 4th 700, 711-712, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 888 ; see also Chong v. Superior Court (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 1032, 1037, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 427 (in rare circumstances forum may not be suitable where alternative is in foreign country that lacks independent judiciary)].

A trial court must be flexible in its weighing of the Stangvik factors. Private and public interest factors must be applied flexibly, without giving undue emphasis to any one element. The doctrine of forum non conveniens may not be based on identification of a single factor rather than the balancing of several. An undue emphasis on a single factor is especially threatening to a balanced analysis because some of the matters to be weighed will by their nature point to a grant or denial of the motion. For example, the jurisdiction's interest in deterring future wrongful conduct of the defendant will usually favor retention of the action if the defendant is a resident of the forum, whereas the court congestion factor will usually weigh in favor of trial in the alternate jurisdiction. The court must consider the public policy considerations, such as California's interest in deciding actions against resident corporations whose conduct in the state causes injury to persons in other jurisdictions [Morris v. AGFA Corp. (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 1452, 1465, 51 Cal. Rptr. 3d 301] .

[5] Evidentiary Showing Concerning Alternative Forum

The principal evidentiary showing required by Stangvik v. Shiley Inc. (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 744, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 556, 819 P.2d 14 , is that trial may be had in the alternative forum and that some form of relief may be granted. Examination of the private and public interests at stake involve more general considerations [Campbell v. Parker-Hannifin Corp. (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 1534, 1542-1543, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 202 (plaintiffs' argument that defendants failed to present any evidence to support their assertion that California was inconvenient rejected as ignoring much of analytical framework set forth in Stangvik; plaintiffs' further argument that defendants failed to show California was inconvenient rejected as incorrect because defendants made such showing in their briefs and during argument before trial court; scales not tipped on basis of this factor in any event)].

[6] Factors Relevant to Determination of Motion

[a] Private Versus Public Interests

If the alternate forum is a suitable place for trial, the next step is to consider the private interests of the litigants and the interests of the public in retaining the action for trial in California. The private interest factors are those that make trial and the enforceability of the ensuing judgment expeditious and relatively inexpensive, such as the ease of access to sources of proof, the cost of obtaining attendance of witnesses, and the availability of compulsory process for attendance of unwilling witnesses. The public interest factors include avoidance of overburdening local courts with congested calendars, protecting the interests of potential jurors so that they are not called on to decide cases in which the local community has little concern, and weighing the competing interests of California and the alternate jurisdiction in the litigation [Stangvik v. Shiley, Inc. (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 744, 752, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 556, 819 P.2d 14 , citing Piper Aircraft Co. v. Reyno (1981) 454 U.S. 235, 259-261, 102 S. Ct. 252, 70 L. Ed. 2d 419 , and Gulf Oil Corp. v. Gilbert (1947) 330 U.S. 501, 507-509, 67 S. Ct. 839, 91 L. Ed. 1055 ; Roulier v. Cannondale (2002) 101 Cal. App. 4th 1180, 1187, 124 Cal. Rptr. 2d 877 (California's strong interest in preventing sale of defective products in state); Chong v. Superior Court (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 1032, 1037, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 427 ; Ford Motor Co. v. Insurance Co. of North America (1995) 35 Cal. App. 4th 604, 610, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 342] .

[b] Specific Factors Enumerated

In making its determination to stay or dismiss an action, the court may take into account any consideration that legitimately bears on the relative suitability or convenience of the alternative forums [Delfosse v. C.A.C.I., Inc.-Federal (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 683, 687-688, 267 Cal. Rptr. 224] . The following private and public interest factors have been variously articulated by courts as proper considerations in determining whether to stay or dismiss an action or proceeding for inconvenient forum [see Stangvik v. Shiley, Inc. (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 744, 751-761, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 556, 819 P.2d 14 ; Delfosse v. C.A.C.I., Inc.-Federal (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 683, 688 n.3, 267 Cal. Rptr. 224 ; Magnecomp Corp. v. Athene Co. (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 526, 539, 257 Cal. Rptr. 278 ; Corrigan v. Bjork Shiley Corp. (1986) 182 Cal. App. 3d 166, 174 n.2, 227 Cal. Rptr. 247 (disapproved on another ground in Stangvik v. Shiley, Inc. (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 744, 764, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 556, 819 P.2d 14 , discussed); Appalachian Ins. Company v. Superior Court (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 427, 435-436 n.2, 208 Cal. Rptr. 627 ; Hemmelgarn v. Boeing Co. (1980) 106 Cal. App. 3d 576, 584-585, 165 Cal. Rptr. 190 (disapproved in effect on another ground in Stangvik v. Shiley, Inc. (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 744, 761, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 556, 819 P.2d 14 , discussed above); Jagger v. Superior Court (1979) 96 Cal. App. 3d 579, 585-586, 158 Cal. Rptr. 163 ; Henderson v. Superior Court (1978) 77 Cal. App. 3d 583, 595-597, 142 Cal. Rptr. 478 ; Great Northern Ry. Co. v. Superior Court (1970) 12 Cal. App. 3d 105, 113-115, 90 Cal. Rptr. 461 , cert. denied sub nom. Curtin v. Superior Court of California (1971) 401 U.S. 1013 ; see also Code Civ. Proc. § 410.30, Judicial Council Comment]:

(1) The amenability of the defendant to personal jurisdiction in the alternative forum;

(2) The relative convenience to the parties and witnesses of trial in the alternative forum;

(3) The choice of law, that is, the differences between conflict of law rules applicable in California and those applicable in the alternative forum;

(4) The defendant's principal place of business, and the inconvenience to the defendant to defend himself or herself in the local forum;

(5) The extent to which the situation, transaction, or events out of which the action arose exists, occurred in, or had a substantial relationship to this state, or, conversely, the absence of a substantial relationship to this state of the situation, transaction, or events out of which the action arose;

(6) Whether any party would be substantially disadvantaged by having to try the action either in California or in the forum suggested by the moving party;

(7) The relative enforceability of judgments rendered in California and in the alternative forum;

(8) Whether witnesses would be inconvenienced if the action were prosecuted either in California or in the forum suggested by the moving party;

(9) The relative expense to the parties of proceeding in California or in the alternative forum;

(10) Whether a view of the premises by the trier of fact will or might be necessary or helpful in deciding the case;

(11) Whether prosecution of the action in California will or may place a burden on the state judicial resources which is unfair, inequitable, or disproportionate to the relationship of the parties or cause of action to California;

(12) Whether the parties participating in the action have a relationship to this state which imposes on them an obligation to participate in judicial proceedings in the courts of this state;

(13) The interest of California in providing a forum for some or all of the parties to the action;

(14) The interest, if any, of this state in regulating the situation or conduct involved;

(15) The avoidance of a multiplicity of suits and inconsistent adjudications;

(16) The relative availability and access to sources of evidence, which would include relative ease of access to sources of proof;

(17) The availability of compulsory process to secure the attendance of witnesses in California as contrasted with such availability in the alternative forum;

(18) The relative advantages and obstacles to a fair trial in California and in the alternative forum;

(19) The California public interest in the case;

(20) Whether administrative difficulties and other inconveniences from crowded calendars and congested courts are more probable in California as opposed to the alternative forum;

(21) Whether imposition of jury duty is imposed on a community having no relation to the litigation;

(22) The injustice to and burden on local courts and taxpayers;

(23) The difficulties and inconvenience to the moving party, to the court, and to the jurors hearing the case, attending presentation of evidence by deposition; and

(24) The other practical considerations that make trial of a case convenient, expeditious, and inexpensive.

If the action is against a California manufacturer by a foreign plaintiff for an injury sustained outside the country, other factors to be considered are (1) the competitive disadvantage to California business that would result if California manufacturers were called on to defend lawsuits involving extraterritorial injuries, and (2) the interests and policy concerns in the litigation of the countries of residence of the foreign plaintiffs [Stangvik v. Shiley, Inc. (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 744, 760, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 556, 819 P.2d 14] . In addition, the relative financial condition of the parties is a factor which every court must necessarily take into account to some degree in determining the convenience or inconvenience of the forum [Allison v. Superior Court (1979) 99 Cal. App. 3d 993, 1001, 160 Cal. Rptr. 309] .

[c] Application of Factors

The private and public interest factors must be applied flexibly, without giving undue emphasis to any one element. A court should not decide that there are circumstances in which the doctrine will always apply or never apply. Otherwise, the flexibility of the doctrine would be threatened, and its application would be based on identification of a single factor rather than on the balancing of several [Stangvik v. Shiley, Inc. (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 744, 753, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 556, 819 P.2d 14] . An undue emphasis on a single factor is especially threatening to a balanced analysis because some of the matters to be weighed will by their nature point to a grant or denial of the motion. For example, the jurisdiction's interest in deterring future wrongful conduct of the defendant will usually favor retention of the action if the defendant is a resident of the forum, whereas the court congestion factor will usually weigh in favor of trial in the alternative jurisdiction [Stangvik v. Shiley, Inc. (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 744, 753 n.4, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 556, 819 P.2d 14] .

[d] Plaintiff's Choice of Forum

The Supreme Court of California has pointed out that many cases hold that a plaintiff's choice of a forum should rarely be disturbed unless the balance is strongly in favor of the defendant, but that the reasons advanced for this rule apply only to residents of the forum state, namely: (1) if the plaintiff is a resident of the jurisdiction in which the suit is filed, the plaintiff's choice of forum is presumed to be convenient (citing Piper Aircraft Co. v. Reyno (1981) 454 U.S. 235, 255-256, 102 S. Ct. 252, 70 L. Ed. 2d 419 ; Thomson v. Continental Ins. Co. (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 738, 744-745, 59 Cal. Rptr. 101, 427 P.2d 765); and (2) a state has a strong interest in assuring its own residents an adequate forum for the redress of grievances (citing Archibald v. Cinerama Hotels (1976) 15 Cal. 3d 853, 859, 126 Cal. Rptr. 811, 544 P.2d 947) [Stangvik v. Shiley, Inc. (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 744, 754-755, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 556, 819 P.2d 14 ; see also Northrop Corp. v. American Motorists Ins. Co. (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 1553, 1560-1561, 270 Cal. Rptr. 233] . The Stangvik Court said that it is difficult to justify giving preferential status to a plaintiff's choice of forum if the plaintiff is not a resident. Since the preference is based on factors that apply only to residents, it would appear that the underlying justification for the preference does not apply to nonresidents. The Court acknowledged, however, that the defendants did not make this argument, and that this view is admittedly contrary to Piper, which states that there is ordinarily a strong presumption in favor of the plaintiff's choice of forum [Stangvik v. Shiley, Inc. (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 744, 755 n.7, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 556, 819 P.2d 14] .

Nonetheless, it remains the case in California that the plaintiff's choice of forum is entitled to great weight even though the plaintiff is a nonresident [Hansen v. Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp. (1996) 51 Cal. App. 4th 753, 760, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 229 ; Ford Motor Co. v. Insurance Co. of North America (1995) 35 Cal. App. 4th 604, 610-611, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 342] . Although the Stangvik court criticized the rule as applied to nonresidents, it declined to state a different one. The holding of Stangvik, as discussed below, is that a foreign, noncitizen plaintiff's choice of forum is entitled to less deference [Ford Motor Co. v. Insurance Co. of North America (1995) 35 Cal. App. 4th 604, 611, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 342 ; see Chong v. Superior Court (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 1032, 1038, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 427 (plaintiff from Hong Kong; foreign plaintiff's choice of forum is entitled to less deference than that of a citizen plaintiff)].

With respect to plaintiffs who are citizens of foreign countries, the Stangvik Court said that the Supreme Court of the United States, in Piper Aircraft Co. v. Reyno (1981) 454 U.S. 235, 255, 259-261, 102 S. Ct. 252, 70 L. Ed. 2d 419 , held that when the plaintiff resides in a foreign country, the plaintiff's choice of forum is much less reasonable, and is not entitled to the same preference as a resident of the state in which the action is filed. The Court held that, under the rule laid down in Piper, the fact that plaintiffs (residents of Norway and Sweden) in the cases before it chose to file their complaint in California was not a substantial factor in favor of retaining jurisdiction here of their actions against a California heart valve manufacturer for negligence and strict liability arising out of the implant in plaintiffs' decedents of allegedly defective heart valves manufactured by the defendant [Stangvik v. Shiley, Inc. (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 744, 755, n.7, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 556, 819 P.2d 14 (disapproving the ruling in Holmes v. Syntex Laboratories, Inc. (1984) 156 Cal. App. 3d 372, 202 Cal. Rptr. 773 , that substantial deference is accorded even a foreign plaintiff's choice of forum); Campbell v. Parker-Hannifin Corp. (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 1534, 1543, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 202 (forum choice of plaintiff who resides outside United States is not a substantial factor in favor of retaining jurisdiction)].

[e] Effect of Party's Being a California Resident

Under case law prior to 1986, the trial court had no discretion, except in extraordinary cases, to dismiss an action for inconvenient forum when the plaintiff was a California resident [see Archibald v. Cinerama Hotels (1976) 15 Cal. 3d 853, 858-859, 126 Cal. Rptr. 811, 544 P.2d 947 (noting rule was inapplicable when California resident was but a nominal plaintiff suing on behalf of a foreign beneficiary or creditor); Thomson v. Continental Ins. Co. (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 738, 742, 59 Cal. Rptr. 101, 427 P.2d 765 ; Corrigan v. Bjork Shiley Corp. (1986) 182 Cal. App. 3d 166, 176 (disapproved on another ground in Stangvik v. Shiley, Inc. (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 744, 764, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 556, 819 P.2d 14)].

In 1986, the Legislature amended Code Civ. Proc. § 410.30 to provide that the domicile or residence in this state of any party to the action shall not preclude the court from staying or dismissing the action. The purpose of the amendment was to overcome the holding of Archibald, above, and other cases, that a trial court was powerless to dismiss an action on the ground of forum non conveniens if the plaintiff was a California resident [see Stangvik v. Shiley, Inc. (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 744, 756, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 556, 819 P.2d 14] . The Legislative intent was to abrogate the former case law rule and to broaden inconvenient forum stays or dismissals. Specifically, courts, under the amended statute, were required to assign less weight to the factor of the plaintiff's residence, and, instead, consider the justice, fairness, and convenience of California as a forum, without giving any special emphasis to the fact that a party to the action was a California resident [Credit Lyonnais Bank Nederland, N.V. v. Manatt, Phelps, Rothenberg & Tunney (1988) 202 Cal. App. 3d 1424, 1432, 1434, 249 Cal. Rptr. 559 ; see also Delfosse v. C.A.C.I., Inc.-Federal (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 683, 688 n.3, 267 Cal. Rptr. 224] .

The 1986 version of Code Civ. Proc. § 410.30 was, however, repealed by its own terms effective January 1, 1992, at which time the pre-1986 version of the statute became reoperative. The reoperative version does not contain the provision that the domicile or residence in this state of any party to the action shall not preclude the court from staying or dismissing the action. It would therefore appear that the rule of Archibald, above, prohibiting the dismissal of an action if the plaintiff is a California resident is reinstated. In contrast to dismissal of an action, however, it has been held that in applying the doctrine of forum non conveniens, a California court has the power to stay an action even though the sole plaintiff is a California resident [Hansen v. Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp. (1996) 51 Cal. App. 4th 753, 761, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 229 ; see Berg v. MTC Electronics Technologies Co. (1998) 61 Cal. App. 4th 349, 362, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 523] . A stay of an action filed by a California resident, however, is rare [Berg v. MTC Electronics Technologies Co. (1998) 61 Cal. App. 4th 349, 362, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 523 (case, however, was one in which stay justified)].

In addition, there was a presumption that the forum was convenient to a defendant who was a resident of California. This presumption of convenience, which follows from the defendant's residence in California, remained in effect despite the 1986 amendment of Code Civ. Proc. § 410.30. But this presumption is not conclusive, and a resident defendant may overcome the presumption of convenience by evidence that the alternate jurisdiction is a more convenient place for trial of the action, even if the defendant is a corporation that has its principal place of business in California and the tort was allegedly committed in this state [Stangvik v. Shiley, Inc. (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 744, 756, 760-761, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 556, 819 P.2d 14 (rejecting contrary analysis in Corrigan v. Bjork Shiley Corp. (1986) 182 Cal. App. 3d 166, 181-182, 227 Cal. Rptr. 247); Hemmelgarn v. Boeing Co. (1980) 106 Cal. App. 3d 576, 580, 165 Cal. Rptr. 190 ; and Brown v. Clorox Co. (1976) 56 Cal. App. 3d 306, 313-314, 128 Cal. Rptr. 385); see Campbell v. Parker-Hannifin Corp. (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 1534, 1541, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 202 ; see also Northrop Corp. v. American Motorists Ins. Co. (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 1553, 1562, 270 Cal. Rptr. 233] .

[f] Effect of Forum Law More Favorable to Plaintiff

The fact that the law in the forum state is more favorable to the plaintiff than the law in the alternative foreign jurisdiction should not be accorded any weight in deciding a motion for forum non conveniens provided, however, that the foreign jurisdiction affords some remedy [Stangvik v. Shiley Inc. (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 744, 753-754 n.5, 764, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 556, 819 P.2d 14 ; accord Roulier v. Cannondale (2002) 101 Cal. App. 4th 1180, 1187, 124 Cal. Rptr. 2d 877 ; Campbell v. Parker-Hannifin Corp. (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 1534, 1541, 1543-1544, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 202 ; see also Credit Lyonnais Bank Nederland, N.V. v. Manatt, Phelps, Rothenberg & Tunney (1988) 202 Cal. App. 3d 1424, 1435 n.17, 249 Cal. Rptr. 559 (trial court may not consider probability that a California jury may be more generous in its award than the proper forum)]. In Stangvik, the Supreme Court disapproved Holmes v. Syntex Laboratories, Inc. (1984) 156 Cal. App. 3d 372, 202 Cal. Rptr. 773 , to the extent it held that the factor of fundamental importance in favor of denying a forum non conveniens motion is that plaintiff would be substantially disadvantaged if the case were tried in Britain because that country did not afford recovery on the basis of strict liability [Stangvik v. Shiley Inc. (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 744, 763-764, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 556, 819 P.2d 14] . The Court said that, if substantial weight is given to the fact that the law in the forum state is more favorable to a plaintiff than in the foreign jurisdiction, the balance will ordinarily favor denial of the motion, and that substantial weight should be given to this factor only if the alternative forum provides no remedy at all [Stangvik v. Shiley, Inc. (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 744, 764, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 556, 819 P.2d 14 (citing Piper Aircraft Co. v. Reyno (1981) 454 U.S. 235, 102 S. Ct. 252, 70 L. Ed. 2d 419)]. The Court also disapproved Corrigan v. Bjork Shiley Corp. (1986) 182 Cal. App. 3d 166, 227 Cal. Rptr. 247 , to the extent it held that the absence of a precise remedy in the foreign jurisdiction was entitled to some weight [Stangvik v. Shiley Inc. (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 744, 764, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 556, 819 P.2d 14] .

The Court explained that one basis underlying this doctrine is to avoid burdening the trial court by requiring it to interpret the law of foreign jurisdictions, which compels it to conduct complex exercises in comparative law, and that to impose such a burden on the trial court for the purpose of facilitating its consideration of a factor of only slight significance in the forum non conveniens balance would be unwarranted [Stangvik v. Shiley Inc. (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 744, 754 n.5, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 556, 819 P.2d 14] .

Thus, for example, the fact that a plaintiff has available a cause of action that is recognized by California law, but not by an alternative forum, cannot be considered by the court in determining the issue of a suitable place for trial. A showing that it would be more difficult or impossible to recover in the foreign forum does not demonstrate that the alternative forum is inadequate. A forum in which an action can be brought, although not necessarily won, is a suitable forum provided that [Boaz v. Boyle & Co. (1995) 40 Cal. App. 4th 700, 710-711, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 888] :

- The defendant is amenable to process there;

- There is no procedural bar that would prevent the foreign courts from reaching the issues raised on their merits (or if there is, typically the statute of limitations, defendants have waived such a bar); and

- Adjudication in the alternative forum is by an independent judiciary applying what is generally regarded by American courts as due process of law.

[7] Determining Whether to Grant Stay or Dismissal on Finding of Inconvenient Forum

Once the court determines that in the interest of substantial justice a forum other than California would be more convenient, the court may either dismiss or stay the action [Code Civ. Proc. § 410.30(a)]. If the court stays the action, it retains jurisdiction over the parties and the cause and can compel the foreign party to cooperate in bringing about a fair and speedy hearing in the foreign forum by resuming proceedings if the foreign action is unreasonably delayed or fails to reach a resolution on the merits. If the court dismisses the suit on the ground of forum non conveniens it has lost jurisdiction over the suit and thereby deprived itself of the power to protect the interests of the plaintiff [see Archibald v. Cinerama Hotels (1976) 15 Cal. 3d 853, 857-858, 126 Cal. Rptr. 811, 544 P.2d 947 ; for discussion of the effect of a party being a California resident, see § 323.34[6][e]].

Ordinarily, dismissal is an exceptional remedy and a stay is the usual one, so that if obstacles to litigation develop in the convenient forum the parties may resume litigation in California [Jagger v. Superior Court (1979) 96 Cal. App. 3d 579, 589, 158 Cal. Rptr. 163 ; see, e.g., Chong v. Superior Court (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 1032, 1035, 1040, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 427 (California proceedings stayed; real party will have opportunity to apply to lift the stay if it can show a breakdown of the rule of law in Hong Kong)]. Dismissal of an action is appropriate only in the exceptional case when neither party resides in or has any connection with California [see Henderson v. Superior Court (1978) 77 Cal. App. 3d 583, 598, 142 Cal. Rptr. 478 ; see also Century Indemnity Co. v. Bank of America (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 408, 411, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 132 (action brought by California resident may not be dismissed on grounds of forum non conveniens except in extraordinary circumstances)].

[8] Conditions on Grant of Dismissal or Stay

The court may dismiss or stay the action in whole or in part on any conditions that may be just [Code Civ. Proc. § 410.30(a); see, e.g., Stangvik v. Shiley Inc. (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 744, 750 n.2, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 556, 819 P.2d 14] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureVenueForum Non ConveniensCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to DismissCivil ProcedureJudicial OfficersJudgesDiscretionEvidenceProcedural ConsiderationsBurdens of ProofAllocation

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 323 JURISDICTION: PERSONAL JURISDICTION, INCONVENIENT FORUM, AND APPEARANCES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Inconvenient Forum

28-323 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 323.36-323.49

[Reserved]

§§ 323.36[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329

Chapter 323 JURISDICTION: PERSONAL JURISDICTION, INCONVENIENT FORUM, AND APPEARANCES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Motion to Quash Service or to Stay or Dismiss Action

28-323 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 323.50

§ 323.50 Motion to Quash Service or to Stay or Dismiss Action

[1] Time for Making Motion

A defendant, on or before the last day of the time to plead or within any further time that the court may for good cause allow, may serve and file a notice of motion for one or more of the following purposes:

- To quash service of summons on the ground of lack of jurisdiction of the court over him or her [Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(a)(1)].

- To stay or dismiss the action on the ground of inconvenient forum [Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(a)(2)].

- To dismiss the action pursuant to the applicable provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 583.110 et seq. for delay in prosecution [Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(a)(3)].

Raising any other issues in this motion, even the issue of subject-matter jurisdiction, will usually result in the moving party making a general appearance, thereby waiving objections to personal jurisdiction [see Greener v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 1028, 1036-1037, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 539, 863 P.2d 784 ; cf. Great Western Casinos, Inc. v. Morongo Band of Mission Indians (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 1407, 1415-1418, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 828 (hybrid motion to quash/dismiss concerning claim of Indian sovereign immunity and federal preemption not construed as general appearance)]. On the other hand, a motion under Code Civ. Proc. 473 or 473.5 when joined with a Section 418.10 motion does not constitute a general appearance [Code Civ. Proc. 418.10(d); see Floveyor Internat., Ltd. v. Superior Court (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th 789, 792 n.2, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 457] . Also, neither an application to the court nor a stipulation of the parties for extension of the time to plead constitutes a general appearance by the defendant [Code Civ. Proc. 418.10(d)].

The mere fact that a defendant has previously moved to quash service under Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10 and petitions the court of appeal to overturn denial of its motions does not grant the defendant immunity from making a general appearance by subsequent participation in the litigation [see Mansour v. Superior Court (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 1750, 1757, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 191] . For discussion of general versus special appearances, see § 323.60 et seq.

The notice of motion must designate, as the time for making the motion, a date not more than 30 days after the filing of the notice [Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(b); see also Code Civ. Proc. § 1167.4(a)] (time for making motion in proceeding for unlawful detainer, forcible entry, or forcible detainer). The notice must be served in the same manner, and at the same times, prescribed in Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b) [Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(b)].

The provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10 do not apply to a motion to stay or dismiss the action for inconvenient forum by a defendant who has made a general appearance [Code Civ. Proc. § 410.30(b); for discussion of general appearances, see § 323.31[3]]. In such case, the motion to stay or dismiss for inconvenient forum is governed by Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(a)(13)].

Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(e) provides that a defendant or cross-defendant may make a motion under Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10 and simultaneously answer, demur, or move to strike the complaint or cross-complaint. Notwithstanding Code Civ. Proc. § 1014, no act by a party who makes a motion under Section 418.10, including filing an answer, demurrer, or motion to strike constitutes an appearance, unless the court denies the motion made under Section 418.10. If the court denies the motion made under Section 418.10, the defendant or cross-defendant is not deemed to have generally appeared until entry of the order denying the motion [Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(e)(1)]. If the motion made under Section 418.10 is denied and the defendant or cross-defendant petitions for a writ of mandate pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(c), the defendant or cross-defendant is not deemed to have generally appeared until the proceedings on the writ petition have finally concluded [Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(e)(2)]. Failure to make a motion under Section 418.10 at the time of filing a demurrer or motion to strike constitutes a waiver of the issues of lack of personal jurisdiction, inadequacy of process, inadequacy of service of process, inconvenient forum, and delay in prosecution [Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(e)(3)]. A defendant who chooses to demur or move to strike must also move to quash; he or she cannot reserve the jurisdictional objection and later file it with his or her answer if the challenge to the pleadings fails [Roy v. Superior Court (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 337, 344, 25 Cal. Rptr. 3d 488] .

Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(e) does not change the essential rule that a defendant submits to the court's jurisdiction by making a general appearance in an action by participating in the action in a manner which recognizes the court's jurisdiction. It merely delays the effect of such actions until the motion to quash is denied or, if the defendant seeks writ review, until proceedings on the writ have concluded. Once the motion is denied or writ proceedings have concluded, the actions undertaken by the defendant while the motion or writ was pending which recognized the trial court's jurisdiction will be deemed to constitute a general appearance, and no further objection to jurisdiction will be permitted [see State Farm General Ins. Co. v. JTs Frames, Inc. (2010) 181 Cal. App. 4th 429, 104 Cal. Rptr. 3d 573] .

For a form of notice of motion to quash service on grounds of lack of personal jurisdiction or to stay or dismiss action on grounds of inconvenient forum, see § 323.150. For discussion of the substantive grounds for making the motion for lack of personal jurisdiction, see § 323.17. For discussion of the substantive grounds for making the motion on grounds of inconvenient forum, see § 323.35.

For discussion and forms of motions to dismiss for delay in prosecution under Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(a)(3), see Ch. 212, Dismissal .

[2] Motion Extends Defendant's Time to Plead

The service and filing of the notice of motion extends the defendant's time to plead until 15 days after service on him or her of a written notice of entry of an order denying the motion, except that for good cause shown the court may extend the defendant's time to plead for an additional period not exceeding 20 days [Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(b); see also Code Civ. Proc. § 1167.4(b) (in proceeding for unlawful detainer, forcible entry, or forcible detainer, service and filing of notice of motion extends the defendant's time to plead until five days after he or she is served with a written notice of the entry of an order denying the motion, except that for good cause shown the court may extend a defendant's time to plead for an additional period not exceeding 15 days)].

No default may be entered against the defendant before expiration of the time to plead. In addition, no motion under Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10, or under Code Civ. Proc. § 473 or 473.5 (relating to relief from default) when joined with a Section 418.10 motion, and no application to the court or stipulation of the parties for an extension of time to plead, is deemed a general appearance by the defendant [Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(d)].

[3] Burden of Proof

When a defendant properly moves to quash out of state service of process for lack of jurisdiction, the burden of proof is on the plaintiff to establish the facts of jurisdiction by a preponderance of the evidence [Vons Companies, Inc. v. Seabest Foods, Inc. (1996) 14 Cal. 4th 434, 449, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 899, 926 P.2d 1085] . The defendant, as the moving party, bears the burden of proof on a forum non conveniens motion [Stangvik v. Shiley, Inc. (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 744, 751, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 556, 819 P.2d 14] ; For detailed discussion of burden of proof on grounds of lack of personal jurisdiction, see § 323.17[2]; for detailed discussion of burden of proof on grounds of inconvenient forum, see § 323.35[2].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProceduresPleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to DismissCivil ProceduresPleading & PracticeMotion PracticeSupporting MemorandaCivil ProceduresPleading & PracticeMotion PracticeTime LimitationsEvidenceProcedural ConsiderationsBurdens of ProofBurden Shifting

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 323 JURISDICTION: PERSONAL JURISDICTION, INCONVENIENT FORUM, AND APPEARANCES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Motion to Quash Service or to Stay or Dismiss Action

28-323 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 323.51

§ 323.51 Opposition to Motion

On a motion to quash service of summons for lack of jurisdiction, the burden of proof is on the plaintiff to establish the facts of jurisdiction by a preponderance of the evidence. The plaintiff ordinarily seeks to carry this burden by the service and filing of opposing affidavits or declarations [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009, 2015.5], setting forth the probative facts of jurisdiction, and of opposing points and authorities. Declarations, however, are insufficient to support the assertions for which they are offered if they consist primarily of vague assertions of ultimate facts rather then specific evidentiary facts permitting a court to form an independent conclusion on the issue [Jewish Defense Organization, Inc. v. Superior Court (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 1045, 1055, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 611] .

A verified complaint may be treated as a counteraffidavit or counterdeclaration, if it alleges the essential probative facts establishing jurisdiction [Arnesen v. Raymond Lee Organization, Inc. (1973) 31 Cal. App. 3d 991, 995, 107 Cal. Rptr. 744 ; see Crea v. Busby (1996) 48 Cal. App. 4th 509, 514, 55 Cal. Rptr. 2d 513] . But because affidavits or declarations relied on as probative must state probative facts, and because affidavits or declarations that recite only ultimate facts or conclusions of law are insufficient, a complaint that alleges only ultimate facts, which is normally the case, and that omits any allegation of probative facts cannot be used as a substitute for a counteraffidavit or counterdeclaration [see Thomas J. Palmer, Inc. v. Turkiye Is Bankasi A.S. (1980) 105 Cal. App. 3d 135, 148-149, 164 Cal. Rptr. 181 ; see also § 323.81[4]].

Allegations in an unverified complaint cannot be used to establish jurisdiction [Jewish Defense Organization, Inc. v. Superior Court (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 1045, 1055, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 611 ; Goehring v. Superior Court (1998) 62 Cal. App. 4th 894, 908-909, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 105] .

On a motion to stay or dismiss an action for inconvenient forum, the plaintiff will want to set forth in his or her counterdeclaration all those factors that militate in favor of the court's retention of jurisdiction [see, e.g., Corrigan v. Bjork Shiley Corp. (1986) 182 Cal. App. 3d 166, 173-174, 174 n.2, 176, 227 Cal. Rptr. 247 (disapproved on another ground in Stangvik v. Shiley Inc. (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 744, 764, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 556, 819 P.2d 14); see also discussion under § 323.23[6]].

A plaintiff is generally entitled to conduct discovery with regard to a jurisdiction issue before the court rules on a motion to quash [Goehring v. Superior Court (1998) 62 Cal. App. 4th 894, 911, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 105] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to DismissCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeOpposing Memoranda

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 323 JURISDICTION: PERSONAL JURISDICTION, INCONVENIENT FORUM, AND APPEARANCES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Motion to Quash Service or to Stay or Dismiss Action

28-323 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 323.52

§ 323.52 Order

If the motion to quash service of summons or to stay or dismiss the action is granted, counsel for the defendant ordinarily prepares the formal order for the judge's signature. If the motion is denied, counsel for the plaintiff normally prepares the formal order, if any is required. In either event, the prevailing party must give to all other parties or their attorneys [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1015] the notice required by Code Civ. Proc. § 1019.5(a) in the manner provided in Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1010-1020, unless the court otherwise orders or unless notice is waived by all parties in open court and is entered in the minutes [Code Civ. Proc. § 1019.5(a)].

For forms of orders granting a motion to quash service or stay or dismiss the action, see § 323.152 and § 323.158. For a form of notice of the court's ruling, see Ch. 372, Motions and Orders .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to DismissCivil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsMotions

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 323 JURISDICTION: PERSONAL JURISDICTION, INCONVENIENT FORUM, AND APPEARANCES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Motion to Quash Service or to Stay or Dismiss Action

28-323 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 323.53

§ 323.53 Review of Order

[1] When Motion Denied--Writ of Mandate

[a] Appeal Not Available

An order denying a motion to quash service of summons is nonappealable [Varra v. Superior Court (1960) 181 Cal. App. 2d 12, 14, 4 Cal. Rptr. 920 ; Kneeland v. Ethicon Suture Laboratories, Inc. (1952) 113 Cal. App. 2d 335, 337-338, 248 P.2d 447.]

[b] Time and Service Requirements

If a motion under Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10 is denied, the defendant, within 10 days after being served with a written notice of entry of the court's order, or within such further time not exceeding 20 days that the trial court may for good cause allow, and before pleading, may petition an appropriate reviewing court for a writ of mandate to require the trial court to enter its order quashing the service of summons or staying or dismissing the action [Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(c); for form of a petition for writ of mandate, see § 323.155; for a form of notice to plaintiff of filing a petition for writ of mandate, see § 323.156]. The initial 10-day period is extended by the periods allowed by Code Civ. Proc. § 1013(a) when service is by mail [Shearer v. Superior Court (1977) 70 Cal. App. 3d 424, 426, 138 Cal. Rptr. 824] .

Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(c) is not, however, jurisdictional in the sense that it deprives the trial court of the power to grant relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b), from a default judgment or order when the defendant failed to apply for an extension of time within the original 10-day period. Rather, during the period within which time could have been extended, the trial court may, on a proper showing grant relief from default in the form of an extension of time. When the trial court would have been authorized to grant relief from default under equitable principles or under Code Civ. Proc. § 473, a reviewing court may grant similar relief [Cornell University Medical College v. Superior Court (1974) 38 Cal. App. 3d 311, 314-315, 113 Cal. Rptr. 291 ; see also Quattrone v. Superior Court (1975) 44 Cal. App. 3d 296, 301, 118 Cal. Rptr. 548] .

The defendant must file or enter his or her responsive pleading in the reviewing court within the time prescribed by Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(b) unless, on or before the last day of the time to plead, the defendant serves on the adverse party and files with the court a notice that he or she has petitioned for a writ of mandate. The service and filing of the notice extends the defendant's time to ple ad until 10 days after the defendant is served with a written notice of the final judgment in the mandate proceeding. The time to plead may, however, for good cause shown, be extended by the trial court for an additional period not exceeding 20 days [Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(c); see also Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.491 (extension until 10 days after Supreme Court files order denying petition seeking review of court of appeal's denial of writ of mandate)].

[c] Petition Filed in Appellate Division of Superior Court

The appellate division of the superior court may grant a writ of mandate directed to the superior court for a limited civil case, and where the appellate division grants a writ of review directed to the superior court, the superior court is an inferior tribunal for purposes of the petition [Code Civ. Proc. § 1085(b); for form of a petition for writ of mandate, see § 323.155; for a form of notice to plaintiff of filing a petition for writ of mandate, see § 323.156].

If the petition is to be filed in a superior court, the local rules, if any, of that court should be checked to determine what requirements are imposed on the writ petition. Even in the absence of such rules, however, counsel may wish to follow the requirements of a petition filed in an appellate court to show that the petition is meritorious, since, in the absence of such showing, the petition may be denied out of hand without a hearing. For further discussion of the requirements, see [c], below.

[d] Requirements of Petition Filed in Appellate Court

Whenever a writ petition filed in a court of appeal or the Supreme Court seeks review of a trial court ruling, it must be accompanied by an adequate record, including copies of (1) the ruling from which the petition seeks relief; (2) all documents and exhibits submitted to the trial court supporting and opposing the petitioner's position; (3) any other documents or portions of documents submitted to the trial court that are necessary for a complete understanding of the case and the ruling under review; and (4) a reporter's transcript of the oral proceedings that resulted in the ruling under review. If no transcript is available, the record must include a declaration by counsel (a) explaining why the transcript is unavailable and fairly summarizing the proceedings, including counsel's arguments and any statement by the court supporting its ruling; or (b) stating that the transcript has been ordered, the date it was ordered, and the date it is expected to be filed, which must be a date prior to any action requested of the reviewing court other than issuance of a temporary stay supported by other parts of the record. A declaration may omit a full summary of the proceedings if part of the relief sought is an order to prepare a transcript for use by an indigent criminal defendant in support of the petition and if the declaration demonstrates the petitioner's need for and entitlement to the transcript. In exigent circumstances, the petition may be filed without the required documents if counsel files a declaration that explains the urgency and the circumstances making the documents unavailable and fairly summarizes their substance. If the petitioner does not submit the required record or explanations or does not present facts sufficient to excuse the failure to submit them, the court may summarily deny a stay request, the petition, or both [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.486(b)(4); see also Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.486(c) (format for documents and exhibits); for form of a petition for writ of mandate, see § 323.155; for a form of notice to plaintiff of filing a petition for writ of mandate, see § 323.156].

Although an appellate court has original jurisdiction in any mandate proceeding involving an inferior court or other entity [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1085], it will not exercise this jurisdiction, absent a showing of exceptional circumstances, if the petition for a writ of mandate could have been made first to a lower court [Funeral Dir. Assn. v. Bd. of Funeral Dirs. (1943) 22 Cal. 2d 104, 110, 136 P.2d 785 ; Cohen v. Superior Court (1968) 267 Cal. App. 2d 268, 270, 274, 72 Cal. Rptr. 814] . Thus, a petition for a writ of mandate filed in an appellate court, which could lawfully be made to a lower court in the first instance, must set forth the circumstances that, in the opinion of the petitioner, render it proper that the writ should issue originally from the reviewing court [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.486(a)(1)].

For further discussion of mandate proceedings generally, the format requirements of a petition for writ of mandate filed in a court of appeal or the Supreme Court of California, the essential allegations of the petition, and the number of copies to prepare, see Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition .

[e] Effect of General Appearance

The provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10 do not apply to a motion to stay or dismiss the action for inconvenient forum by a defendant who has generally appeared in the case [see Code Civ. Proc. § 410.30(b)].

[2] When Motion Granted--Appeal

If a motion under Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10 is granted, the plaintiff may appeal from the order [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 904.1(a)(3), 904.2(d)]. An order granting a motion to quash service of summons or to stay or dismiss action for inconvenient forum is appealable [Thomas J. Palmer, Inc. v. Turkiye Is Bankasi A.S. (1980) 105 Cal. App. 3d 135, 138, 164 Cal. Rptr. 181 ; Gould, Inc. v. Health Sciences, Inc. (1976) 54 Cal. App. 3d 687, 690 n.1, 126 Cal. Rptr. 726] .

In reviewing a trial court order granting a motion to quash, the appellate court is guided by the following principles: (1) where a defendant properly moves to quash out of state service of process for lack of jurisdiction, the burden of proof is on the plaintiff to establish facts of jurisdiction by a preponderance of the evidence; (2) evidence of those facts or their absence may be in the form of declarations; (3) where there is a conflict in the declarations, resolution of the conflict by the trial court will not be disturbed on appeal if the determination of that court is supported by substantial evidence. Substantial evidence is not synonymous with any evidence, but, rather, is evidence of ponderable legal significance, that is, evidence which is reasonable in nature, credible, and of solid value [Magnecomp Corp. v. Athene Co. (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 526, 533, 257 Cal. Rptr. 278 ; see also Serafini v. Superior Court (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 70, 77, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 159 ; Crea v. Busby (1996) 48 Cal. App. 4th 509, 514, 55 Cal. Rptr. 2d 513 ; Kroopf v. Guffey (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 1351, 1356, 228 Cal. Rptr. 807 , and § 323.88[5]]. The appellate court may not, however, consider evidence not properly before the trial court [see Crea v. Busby (1996) 48 Cal. App. 4th 509, 514, 55 Cal. Rptr. 2d 513 ; Magnecomp Corp. v. Athene Co. (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 526, 533-534, 257 Cal. Rptr. 278] .

When the evidence of jurisdictional facts is not conflicting, the question of whether defendant is subject to personal jurisdiction is one of law, and the lower court's determination is not binding on the reviewing court [Hall v. LaRonde (1997) 56 Cal. App. 4th 1342, 1346, 66 Cal. Rptr. 2d 399 ; Great-West Life Assurance Co. v. Guarantee Co. of North America (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 199, 204, 252 Cal. Rptr. 363 ; accord Jewish Defense Organization, Inc. v. Superior Court (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 1045, 1055, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 611] .

After a defendant's motion to quash service of a summons is granted for lack of personal jurisdiction over the defendant, if the plaintiff fails to seek reconsid eration or appellate review, the plaintiff may be barred from relitigating the issue by direct estoppel [Sabek, Inc. v. Engelhard Corp. (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 992, 997, 999-1000, 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 882 (distinguishing and disagreeing with GMS Properties, Inc. v. Superior Court of Fresno County (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 407, 33 Cal. Rptr. 163 ; for discussion of direct estoppel, see Ch. 491, Res Judicata].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProceduresPleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to DismissCivil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsAppellate ReviewCivil ProcedureRemediesWritsCommon Law WritsMandamus

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 323 JURISDICTION: PERSONAL JURISDICTION, INCONVENIENT FORUM, AND APPEARANCES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Motion to Quash Service or to Stay or Dismiss Action

1-323 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 323.54

§ 323.54 Jurisdiction Over Attorney Fee Motion Following Granting of Motion to Quash

While it is true that once a motion to quash is granted, the court may not review the merits of the underlying action, at least as far as they pertain to the defendant that prevailed on the motion to quash for lack of personal jurisdiction [Nelson v. Horvath (1970) 4 Cal. App. 3d 1, 84 Cal. Rptr. 101], it does not necessarily follow that the lack of power to rule on the merits of the lawsuit deprives the trial court of jurisdiction to rule upon a collateral motion for attorney fees. A defendant does not forfeit a collateral right to attorney fees by choosing to assert the right to challenge the court's in personam jurisdiction [Shisler v. Sanfer Sports Cars, Inc. (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 1, 8, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 771] (noting that it would be unfair to allow a plaintiff to sue an out-of-state defendant in California, force that defendant to the expense required to quash service, then preclude that defendant from collecting attorney fees that would be available had the defendant prevailed on the merits of the case)].

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 323 JURISDICTION: PERSONAL JURISDICTION, INCONVENIENT FORUM, AND APPEARANCES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Motion to Quash Service or to Stay or Dismiss Action

28-323 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 323.55-323.59

[Reserved]

§§ 323.55[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 323 JURISDICTION: PERSONAL JURISDICTION, INCONVENIENT FORUM, AND APPEARANCES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Appearances

28-323 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 323.60

§ 323.60 Governing Law

Acts constituting an appearance in civil actions and proceedings are listed in Code Civ. Proc. § 1014.

Acts constituting an appearance under the Family Law Act are set forth in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.120.

Statutes providing that specific acts are not general appearances are discussed under § 323.43.

The effect of a general appearance on in personam jurisdiction is set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 410.50(a).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionPersonal Jurisdiction & In Rem ActionsIn Personam ActionsChallengesCivil ProcedureJurisdictionPersonal Jurisdiction & In Rem ActionsIn Personam ActionsConsent

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329

Chapter 323 JURISDICTION: PERSONAL JURISDICTION, INCONVENIENT FORUM, AND APPEARANCES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Appearances

28-323 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 323.61

§ 323.61 Definitions

[1] "Appearance"

The term "appearance" is defined as (1) a coming into court as a party to a suit, either in person or by attorney, whether as plaintiff or defendant; (2) the formal proceeding by which a defendant submits him or herself to the jurisdiction of the court; and (3) the voluntary submission to a court's jurisdiction [Black's Law Dictionary (5th ed. 1979)].

[2] "General" vs. "Special" Appearance

An "appearance" is either "general" or "special" [see Black's Law Dictionary (5th ed. 1979)]. By a general appearance, the defendant submits to the in personam jurisdiction of the court; in the case of a special appearance, he or she does not [Titus v. Superior Court (1972) 23 Cal. App. 3d 792, 800-801, 100 Cal. Rptr. 477] .

[3] "General Appearance"

A general appearance is made when a defendant either enters an appearance in an action without limiting the purpose of the appearance or, except as otherwise provided by statute, when he or she asks for relief which only a court with personal jurisdiction over him or her can give [see Davenport v. Superior Court (1920) 183 Cal. 506, 511, 191 P. 911 ; Olcese v. Justice's Court (1909) 156 Cal. 82, 87, 103 P. 317 ; see also Code Civ. Proc. § 410.10, Judicial Council Comment].

Except as otherwise provided by statute, the court in which an action is pending has jurisdiction over a party from the time summons is served on him or her. A general appearance by a party is equivalent to personal service of summons on that party [Code Civ. Proc. § 410.50(a); see, e.g., Harrington v. Superior Court (1924) 194 Cal. 185, 189, 228 P. 15 ; Southern Pac. Transportation Co. v. State Bd. of Equalization (1985) 175 Cal. App. 3d 438, 442, 221 Cal. Rptr. 12 ; Neihaus v. Superior Court (1977) 69 Cal. App. 3d 340, 345, 137 Cal. Rptr. 905] .

A general appearance made after the mandatory period for service of summons has run [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210] does not give the court jurisdiction over the defendant when the summons has not been timely served [Dale v. ITT Life Ins. Corp. (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 495, 499 n.4, 255 Cal. Rptr. 8] .

[4] "Special Appearance"

A special appearance is made when a defendant appears in court for the sole purpose of objecting to the court's lack of jurisdiction over his or her person, without submitting to such jurisdiction [see Greener v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Board (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 1028, 1036-1037, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 539, 863 P.2d 784 ; Olcese v. Justice's Court (1909) 156 Cal. 82, 87, 103 P. 317 ; Josephson v. Superior Court (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 354, 361, 33 Cal. Rptr. 196] . No particular form is required, but a defendant must make it clear, normally by a formal motion to quash service of summons [see § 323.80], that he or she objects to such jurisdiction [see Code Civ. Proc. § 410.10, Judicial Council Comment, Bases of Judicial Jurisdiction Over Individuals, (6) Appearance, and Bases of Judicial Jurisdiction Over Corporations, (4) Appearance-Foreign Corporations].

Seeking any other relief, such as challenging subject matter jurisdiction, risks making a general appearance [see Greener v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Board (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 1028, 1036-1037, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 539, 863 P.2d 784 ; Janzen v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1997) 61 Cal. App. 4th 109, 116-117, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 260 ; see Great Western Casinos, Inc. v. Morongo Band of Mission Indians (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 1407, 1415-1418, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 828 (hybrid motion to quash/dismiss concerning claim of Indian sovereign immunity and federal preemption not construed as general appearance)]. There are, however, certain other acts that do not constitute general appearances [see, e.g., Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(d); for discussion of acts not constituting general appearance, see § 323.63].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionPersonal Jurisdiction & In Rem ActionsIn Personam ActionsChallengesCivil ProcedureJurisdictionPersonal Jurisdiction & In Rem ActionsIn Personam ActionsConsent

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 323 JURISDICTION: PERSONAL JURISDICTION, INCONVENIENT FORUM, AND APPEARANCES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Appearances

28-323 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 323.62

§ 323.62 Acts Constituting General Appearance

[1] Acts Listed in Statute

As used in the statutes, the word "appearance," standing alone, usually means a "general" and not a "special" appearance [see O'Keefe v. Miller (1965) 231 Cal. App. 2d 920, 927, 42 Cal. Rptr. 343] . Thus, the words "appear," "appeared," and "appearance," as used in Code Civ. Proc. § 1014, listing acts constituting an appearance, refer to and mean a general appearance [see Goodwine v. Superior Court (1965) 63 Cal. 2d 481, 484, 47 Cal. Rptr. 201, 407 P.2d 1 ; Chitwood v. County of Los Angeles (1971) 14 Cal. App. 3d 522, 526, 92 Cal. Rptr. 441] .

A defendant appears in an action when he or she [Code Civ. Proc. § 1014]:

- Answers.
- Demurs.
- Files a notice of motion to strike.
- Files a notice of motion to transfer under Code Civ. Proc. § 396b (motion to change venue).
- Moves for reclassification under Code Civ. Proc. § 403.040.

These acts constitute an appearance whether done by the defendant appearing in propria persona or by an attorney authorized to represent the defendant [see County of Merced v. Hicks (1885) 67 Cal. 108, 109, 7 P. 179 ; for discussion of appearance by attorney, see § 323.65].

In addition, a defendant appears in an action when he or she gives the plaintiff written notice of his or her appearance, or when an attorney gives notice of appearance for him or her [Code Civ. Proc. § 1014; for a forms of notice of general appearance, see §§ 323.170, 323.171].

[2] Acts Not Listed in Statute

The acts constituting a general appearance under Code Civ. Proc. § 1014 are not exclusive [Hamilton v. Asbestos Corp. (2000) 22 Cal. 4th 1127, 1147-1149, 95 Cal. Rptr. 2d 701, 998 P.2d 403 ; accord Creed v. Schultz (1983) 148 Cal. App. 3d 733, 739, 196 Cal. Rptr. 252] .

The term "general appearance" may apply to various acts which, under all of the circumstances, are deemed to confer jurisdiction of the person. What is determinative is whether the defendant takes a part in the particular action which in some manner recognizes the authority of the court to proceed [Hamilton v. Asbestos Corp. (2000) 22 Cal. 4th 1127, 1147, 95 Cal. Rptr. 2d 701, 998 P.2d 403 (defendant's participation in consolidated action constituted appearance in one of the actions in which defendant had not been served)].

Any act of a defendant is equivalent to a general appearance when, by that act, the defendant intentionally submits him or herself to the jurisdiction of the court for the purpose of obtaining any ruling or order of the court going to the merits of the case, and the act may reasonably be construed to imply that the court has acquired jurisdiction of the person of the defendant [Davenport v. Superior Court (1920) 183 Cal. 506, 511, 191 P. 911 ; see also Code Civ. Proc. § 410.10, Judicial Council Comment; Estateof Heil (1989) 210 Cal. App. 3d 1503, 1512, 259 Cal. Rptr. 28 ; California Overseas Bank v. French American Banking Corp. (1984) 154 Cal. App. 3d 179, 184, 201 Cal. Rptr. 400 ; Creed v. Schultz (1983) 148 Cal. App. 3d 733, 740, 196 Cal. Rptr. 252] .

Thus, when a defendant appears in an action or proceeding and asks for some relief which can only be granted on the hypothesis that the court has jurisdiction of the cause and the person, the defendant has submitted him or herself to the jurisdiction of the court as completely as if he or she had been regularly served with process, whether the appearance by its terms is limited to a special appearance or not [Goodwine v. Superior Court (1965) 63 Cal. 2d 481, 484, 47 Cal. Rptr. 201, 407 P.2d 1 ; People v. Ciancio (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 175, 192-193, 134 Cal. Rptr. 2d 531 (where defendant filed a response to an order to show cause in which it argues the merits of the motions, challenged the relief sought, and expressly requested that motions be denied on their merits, the party made a general appearance, whether or not it was a the real party in interest or otherwise a party to the proceedings); see also Greener v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 1028, 1036-1037, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 539, 863 P.2d 784 (even if movant designates motion to quash as "special appearance," if movant seeks relief on any basis other than lack of personal jurisdiction, he or she makes a general appearance); California Overseas Bank v. French American Banking Corp. (1984) 154 Cal. App. 3d 179, 184, 201 Cal. Rptr. 400] .

The mere fact that a defendant has previously moved to quash service under Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10 and petitions the court of appeal to overturn denial of its motions does not grant the defendant immunity from making a general appearance by subsequent participation in the litigation [see Mansour v. Superior Court (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 1750, 1757, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 191] . Thus, for example, it has been held that defendants waived their right to a superior court's denial of their motions to quash service of summons by making a general appearance in the action when, after denial of their motions while their petitions for mandate were pending in the court of appeal, defendants' counsel pursuant to local court rules (1) participated in preparing a joint case management statement in which they listed additional discovery they anticipated to conduct before trial, (2) appeared at an evaluation conference without limiting their appearances to other clients that they were also representing who did not object to the exertion of jurisdiction over them, and (3) after the trial court denied a request to continue the matter due to the petitions pending before the court of appeal, defendants counsel actively participated in the evaluation conference [Mansour v. Superior Court (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 1750, 1757-1758, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 191 (initiating discovery unrelated to issue of jurisdiction by issuing deposition subpenas to two treating doctors held also to constitute general appearance)].

An order to show cause for a preliminary injunction is not within the scope of Code Civ. Proc. § 418.11, which extends only to ex parte applications for provisional relief. This is because a motion for a preliminary injunction involves a determination related to the merits of the case. Thus, by filing a motion for discovery in connection with the order to show cause for a preliminary injunction, a defendant has sought affirmative relief from the court, and is found to have made a general appearance in the action [Factor Health Management v. Superior Court (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 246, 249-251, 33 Cal. Rptr. 3d 599] .

California courts have found that parties have generally appeared under varying circumstances in which the defendants sought affirmative relief. A court is thus required to analyze the defendant's papers to determine if any affirmative relief could be granted on the merits, which is a general appearance [Dial 800 v. Fesbinder (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 32, 53, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 711] .

For acts constituting an appearance in a proceeding under the Family Law Act, see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.120.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionPersonal Jurisdiction & In Rem ActionsIn Personam ActionsConsent

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329

Chapter 323 JURISDICTION: PERSONAL JURISDICTION, INCONVENIENT FORUM, AND APPEARANCES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Appearances

28-323 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 323.63

§ 323.63 Acts Not Constituting General Appearance

Certain appearances have been declared by statute or case law not to be a general appearance. For example, no motion under Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10 (defendant's motion, made within time to respond to complaint, to quash service of summons for lack of personal jurisdiction, to stay or dismiss for inconvenient forum, or to dismiss for delay in prosecution under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.110 et seq.) or Code Civ. Proc. § 473 or 473.5 (relief from default) when joined with a motion under Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10, or application to the court or stipulation of the parties for an extension of time to plead, shall be deemed a general appearance [Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(d)]. A motion to reconsider the denial of such a motion also does not constitute a general appearance if it is limited to the same grounds as the original motion [see Josephson v. Superior Court (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 354, 358, 362, 33 Cal. Rptr. 196 (reconsideration of denial of motion to quash service of summons on cross complaint)].

Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(e) provides that a defendant or cross-defendant may make a motion under Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10 and simultaneously answer, demur, or move to strike the complaint or cross-complaint. Notwithstanding Code Civ. Proc. § 1014, no act by a party who makes a motion under Section 418.10, including filing an answer, demurrer, or motion to strike constitutes an appearance, unless the court denies the motion made under Section 418.10. If the court denies the motion made under Section 418.10, the defendant or cross-defendant is not deemed to have generally appeared until entry of the order denying the motion [Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(e)(1)]. If the motion made under Section 418.10 is denied and the defendant or cross-defendant petitions for a writ of mandate pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(c), the defendant or cross-defendant is not deemed to have generally appeared until the proceedings on the writ petition have finally concluded [Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(e)(2)]. Failure to make a motion under Section 418.10 at the time of filing a demurrer or motion to strike constitutes a waiver of the issues of lack of personal jurisdiction, inadequacy of process, inadequacy of service of process, inconvenient forum, and delay in prosecution [Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(e)(3)]. A defendant who chooses to demur or move to strike must also move to quash; he or she cannot reserve the jurisdictional objection and later file it with his or her answer if the challenge to the pleadings fails [Roy v. Superior Court (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 337, 344, 25 Cal. Rptr. 3d 488] .

An appearance at a hearing at which ex parte relief is sought, or an appearance at a hearing for which an ex parte application for a provisional remedy is made, is also not a general appearance and does not constitute a waiver of the right to make a motion under Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10 [Code Civ. Proc. § 418.11].

Other acts not constituting a general appearance include the following:

- The payment of the filing fee for filing a notice of motion to quash service [Josephson v. Superior Court (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 354, 356-357, 362 & n.4, 33 Cal. Rptr. 196] .

- An objection to interrogatories on the ground that they are oppressive, made during the pendency of a motion to quash service of summons [1880 Corp. v. Superior Court (1962) 57 Cal. 2d 840, 843, 22 Cal. Rptr. 209, 371 P.2d 985] .

Although the California Supreme Court formerly held that a motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction was not a general appearance [Goodwine v. Superior Court (1965) 63 Cal. 2d 481, 484-485, 47 Cal. Rptr. 201, 407 P.2d 1] , the Court, without overruling, or even citing, Goodwine, has stated that raising the issue of subject matter jurisdiction does constitute a general appearance [Greener v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 1028, 1036-1037, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 539, 863 P.2d 784] . The Court stated that it does not approve of the use of a motion to quash as an alternative to a demurrer and that notwithstanding a "special appearance" designation on a motion to quash, if the movant seeks relief on any basis other than lack of personal jurisdiction, he or she makes a general appearance [Greener v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 1028, 1036-1037, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 539, 863 P.2d 784 (ultimately holding, however, that the court lacked subject matter jurisdiction)]. The Court acknowledged, without approving, the existence of an exception recognized by Delta Imports, Inc. v. Municipal Court (1983) 146 Cal. App. 3d 1033, 1035-1036, 194 Cal. Rptr. 685 , that allows the issue of lack of subject matter jurisdiction to be raised on a motion to quash in unlawful detainer, in which demurrer is not available [Greener v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 1028, 1036 & n.5, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 539, 863 P.2d 784 ; see Great Western Casinos, Inc. v. Morongo Band of Mission Indians (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 1407, 1415-1418, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 828 (hybrid motion to quash/dismiss concerning claim of Indian sovereign immunity and federal preemption not construed as general appearance)].

For discussion of acts that do not constitute a general appearance for the purposes of Code Civ. Proc. § 583.220 (relating to involuntary dismissal for delay in service), see Ch. 212, Dismissal .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionPersonal Jurisdiction & In Rem ActionsIn Personam ActionsConsent

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 323 JURISDICTION: PERSONAL JURISDICTION, INCONVENIENT FORUM, AND APPEARANCES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Appearances

28-323 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 323.64

§ 323.64 Appearance Confers Right to Notice of Proceedings

After an appearance, a defendant or a defendant's attorney is entitled to notice of all subsequent proceedings of which notice is required to be given. However, service of notice or papers need not be made on a defendant who has not appeared [Code Civ. Proc. § 1014; see also Code Civ. Proc. § 1010 (providing that no bill of exceptions, notice of appeal, or other notice or paper, other than amendments to the pleadings, or an amended pleading, need be served on any party who has not appeared in the action or proceeding); Slaybaugh v. Superior Court (1977) 70 Cal. App. 3d 216, 221, 138 Cal. Rptr. 628)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionPersonal Jurisdiction & In Rem ActionsIn Personam ActionsConsentCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329

Chapter 323 JURISDICTION: PERSONAL JURISDICTION, INCONVENIENT FORUM, AND APPEARANCES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Appearances

28-323 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 323.65

§ 323.65 Appearance by Attorney

[1] Presumption of Authority to Appear

In the absence of any statutory requirement that the authority of an attorney be evidenced by a writing, the act of an attorney in entering the appearance of a defendant carries with it a presumption of due authority to do so [see Gagnon Co., Inc. v. Nevada Desert Inn (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 448, 459, 289 P.2d 466 ; Voinich v. Rolleri (1928) 203 Cal. 379, 382, 264 P. 240 ; Pacific Paving Co. v. Vizelich (1903) 141 Cal. 4, 8, 74 P. 352 ; Garrison v. McGowan (1874) 48 Cal. 592, 600] . However, the presumption is rebuttable [Sullivan v. Dunne (1926) 198 Cal. 183, 190, 244 P. 343 ; Wilson v. Barry (1951) 102 Cal. App. 2d 778, 780, 228 P.2d 331 ; see Milrot v. Stamper Medical Corp. (1996) 44 Cal. App. 4th 182, 187 (foundation for presumption lacking in that there was no evidence that corporation was attorney's client at time of postjudgment motion, which was five months before its incorporation, or that attorney had any authority to appear on its behalf at the hearing)].

[2] Unauthorized Appearance

When an attorney, having no authority to do so, enters the appearance of a defendant in an action without service of jurisdictional process, and the fact of the lack of authority is made to appear, the proceeding is void as to the defendant whose appearance was so entered [Garrison v. McGowan (1874) 48 Cal. 592, 599-600] . That is, when the only basis for jurisdiction of the person in a particular case is appearance, the purported appearance by an unauthorized attorney cannot confer such jurisdiction [Neihaus v. Superior Court (1977) 69 Cal. App. 3d 340, 346, 137 Cal. Rptr. 905 ; see also Milrot v. Stamper Medical Corp. (1996) 44 Cal. App.4th 182, 186-188, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 424 (court without jurisdiction to add corporation as judgment debtor at hearing on motion to amend judgment based on attorney's appearance without actual or ostensible authority to represent corporation); Zirbes v. Stratton (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1407, 1414, 232 Cal. Rptr. 653 (trial court was without jurisdiction to enter judgment against unserved defendant represented by unauthorized attorney)].

Moreover, in an action against several defendants in which summons was not served on any of them, the appearance by an attorney at the request of one defendant, although purporting to be on behalf of all, is not binding on those who did not authorize the appearance [County of Merced v. Hicks (1885) 67 Cal. 108, 109, 7 P. 179] . The fact that an attorney may possess the necessary authority to represent a client in one case is not evidence of the attorney's authority to represent the client in another and distinct proceeding [Sullivan v. Dunne (1926) 198 Cal. 183, 190, 244 P. 343] .

[3] Raising Issue of Unauthorized Appearance

[a] Issue to Be Promptly Raised in Trial Court

Any disputes as to the authority of the counsel of record to act for the party he or she purports to represent may be raised in the trial court [Abeles v. State Bar (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 603, 609 n.7, 108 Cal. Rptr. 359, 510 P.2d 719 ; Mills Land & Water Co. v. Golden West Refining Co. (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 116, 131, 230 Cal. Rptr. 461] . A defendant who seeks to raise the issue of an unauthorized appearance by an attorney is required to do so promptly after discovery [see Parkside Realty Co. v. MacDonald (1914) 167 Cal. 342, 347, 139 P. 805 ; Machado v. Machado (1944) 66 Cal. App. 2d 401, 406, 152 P.2d 457] .

[b] By Direct Attack Before Judgment

The issue as to the attorney's lack of authority may be raised by a motion to withdraw the appearance [see Omega Video Inc. v. Superior Court (1983) 146 Cal. App. 3d 470, 476, 194 Cal. Rptr. 574 ; Neihaus v. Superior Court (1977) 69 Cal. App. 3d 340, 346, 137 Cal. Rptr. 905 ; Wilson v. Barry (1951) 102 Cal. App. 2d 778, 780, 228 P.2d 331 ; for a form of notice of motion to withdraw an appearance, see Ch. 72, Attorney Practice and Ethics, § 72.190 et seq.].

Additionally or alternatively, if the attorney's unauthorized appearance was made by the filing of a demurrer, answer, or other paper constituting an appearance [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1014], the defendant may move to strike the pleading or paper [see Code Civ. Proc. § 436(b); Sullivan v. Dunne (1926) 198 Cal. 183, 186-187, 244 P. 343 (motion to strike demurrer); People v. Honey Lake Valley Irr. Dist. (1926) 77 Cal. App. 367, 374, 246 P. 819 (motion to strike answer); see also Kellar v. Hendey (1961) 189 Cal. App. 2d 86, 87-88, 10 Cal. Rptr. 748 (motion to strike answer); for a form of notice of motion to withdraw an appearance and strike the answer, see Ch. 72, Attorney Practice and Ethics, § 72.190 et seq.; for additional forms of motions to strike, see Ch. 375, Motions to Strike: Pleadings]. If the motion is granted, the defendant will still be required to file a responsive pleading to avoid a default if the court has otherwise obtained jurisdiction over the defendant by service of the summons and complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 585]. If the service made was not valid, the defendant may wish to combine the motion to strike with a motion to quash service of summons on the ground of lack of jurisdiction of the court over his or her person [see Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(a)(1)].

[c] By Direct Attack After Judgment

A motion under Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b), or 473.5 (relief from default) is proper when a defendant not served with summons has had a judgment taken against him or her in an action in which he or she was represented by an attorney who had no authority from the defendant to do so [see Zirbes v. Stratton (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1407, 1410-1411, 232 Cal. Rptr. 653] . A motion under Code Civ. Proc. § 473 or 473.5 may be combined with a motion under Code Civ. Proc. § 436(b) to strike the pleading or paper that constitutes the unauthorized appearance. A motion under Code Civ. Proc. § 473 or 473.5 may also be combined with a motion under Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(d) to quash service of summons for lack of in personam jurisdiction or to stay or dismiss the action for inconvenient forum.

A void judgment may be set aside on the motion of either party after notice to the other [Code Civ. Proc. § 473(d)].

A judgment secured by extrinsic fraud may be set aside by an independent action in equity, or by means of a timely motion in the court that rendered the judgment to vacate and set it aside [see Olivera v. Grace(1942) 19 Cal. 2d 570, 575-576, 122 P.2d 564 ; Parkside Realty Co. v. MacDonald (1914) 167 Cal. 342, 347-348, 139 P. 805 ; see also Code Civ. Proc. § 86(b)(3) (limited civil cases); for discussion of collateral attack, see [e], below].

Thus, when, after a jury verdict in plaintiffs' favor and defendants' appeal from the judgment, plaintiffs brought a postjudgment motion to amend the judgment which resulted in the addition of another entity as a judgment debtor, a trial court has been held to have committed reversible error in not thereafter granting that entity's motion to set aside the judgment against it because the trial court that added it as a judgment debtor never had personal jurisdiction over it based on the following: (1) the entity was never named in the pleadings, or served with either a complaint or motion to amend the judgment, or a notice of appeal and thus proceeded to the status of judgment debtor without ever having been a defendant, (2) the record was devoid of any evidence that the attorney appearing on defendants' behalf at the hearing pursuant to plaintiffs' motion to amend the judgment had any actual or ostensible authority to represent the entity, but to the contrary, that attorney's declaration stated that he had no such authority and that he only had authority to act on the other defendants' behalf, and (3) the entity named as a judgment debtor did not exist in that form at the time of the hearing and was not incorporated until five months thereafter [Milrot v. Stamper Medical Corp. (1996) 44 Cal. App. 4th 182, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 424] . Moreover, under those circumstances, it was held that because a judgment entered without jurisdiction is void and a void judgment may be set aside anytime, the time limitations in Code Civ. Proc. § 473 and Code Civ. Proc. §§ 663, 663a (motions to vacate a judgment) did not apply [Milrot v. Stamper Medical Corp. (1996) 44 Cal. App. 4th 182, 188, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 424] .

For further discussion and forms relating to direct attack after judgment by motion, see Ch. 489, Relief For Judgments and Orders .

[d] Pending Appeal

When an appeal has been taken from the judgment by the attorney who appeared for the party and is pending, the trial court has no power to vacate the judgment on the ground it lacked in personam jurisdiction because (1) the summons had not been served on the party and (2) the attorney who appeared for the party was not authorized to do so. In such case, the issue of an unauthorized appearance by the attorney in the trial court and in taking the appeal can be raised only in the appellate court [Parkside Realty Co. v. MacDonald (1914) 167 Cal. 342, 346, 139 P. 805] .

[e] By Collateral Attack

A judgment that is void on its face may be attacked at any time either directly or collaterally [see, e.g., Ivory v. Superior Court (1938) 85 P.2d 894 ; Forbes v. Hyde (1866) 31 Cal. 342, 347] . Conversely, as a general rule, a judgment of a California state court may not be attacked collaterally unless the judgment is void on its face [see Hill v. City Cab etc. Co. (1889) 79 Cal. 188, 190, 21 P. 728] . That is, jurisdiction is presumed to exist unless lack of jurisdiction appears on the face of the record, which is defined normally as the judgment roll [see, e.g., Gagnon Co., Inc. v. Nevada Desert Inn (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 448, 456, 289 P.2d 466 ; Latta v. Tutton (1898) 122 Cal. 279, 282, 54 P. 844 ; see also Code Civ. Proc. § 670 (judgment roll in a civil action)]. However, in a proceeding for dissolution of marriage, when the defendant's appearance had been by a notice of appearance and waiver without any pleading being filed by him, and there was, therefore, no judgment roll as defined by statute, it has been held that the court could, insofar as issues as to children of the marriage were concerned, look to other relevant papers filed in the case (probation officer's report) to establish that the judgment was void in part for lack of subject matter jurisdiction [Swain v. Swain (1967) 250 Cal. App. 2d 1, 10-11, 58 Cal. Rptr. 83] .

Consequently, a California judgment may not be impeached collaterally on the ground that a regularly licensed attorney appearing as such for a party to an action had no authority to act on the party's behalf, because that fact would not appear from the judgment roll [Gagnon Co., Inc. v. Nevada Desert Inn (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 448, 456, 289 P.2d 466] . But, in the case of an unauthorized appearance by counsel, if a party admits facts which show that the appearance was unauthorized and, therefore, that the judgment is void, or if he or she allows those facts to be established without opposition, then, as a question of law on such facts, the case is treated as one where the judgment is void on its face and the attack on the judgment will succeed [Hill v. City Cab etc. Co. (1889) 79 Cal. 188, 191, 21 P. 728 ; see also discussion under § 323.45[3][b]; for further discussion of collateral attack after judgment, see Ch. 489, Relief From Judgments and Orders].

[f] Action Based on Foreign Judgment

The clause of the U.S. Constitution which requires full faith and credit to be given in each state to the records and judicial proceedings of every other state (U.S. Const., art. IV, § 1) applies to the records and proceedings of courts only so far as they have jurisdiction, and the courts of one state are not required to give full faith and credit to, or regard as valid or conclusive, any judgment of a court of another state which had no jurisdiction of the subject matter, or of the parties, or, in proceedings in rem, of the res [Gagnon Co., Inc. v. Nevada Desert Inn (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 448, 457, 289 P.2d 466] . Accordingly, the jurisdiction of a court rendering a judgment is open to inquiry under proper averments when questioned in the court of another state, and this applies in the case of a foreign judgment entered on an attorney's unauthorized appearance for a party [Gagnon Co., Inc. v. Nevada Desert Inn (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 448, 457, 461, 289 P.2d 466] .

Thus, the lack of authority of an attorney to appear for the defendant in a sister state action may be alleged in a California state court in an answer to the complaint to establish the sister state judgment as a California judgment. That is, the sister state judgment is subject to collateral attack by the defendant showing that he or she made no appearance in the sister state action [Slack v. Slack (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 530, 539, 50 Cal. Rptr. 763 ; Raynum v. Wallace (1938) 28 Cal. App. 2d 136, 137-138, 82 P.2d 74] . The issue as to the authority of an attorney to appear for a party in a sister state action and to dismiss the action with prejudice may also be raised in a California action against the defense of res judicata based on the sister state judgment in the case since the California court may inquire into the foreign court's jurisdiction [Gagnon Co., Inc. v. Nevada Desert Inn (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 448, 457, 289 P.2d 466 (nevertheless affirming judgment sustaining defense)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionPersonal Jurisdiction & In Rem ActionsIn Personam ActionsConsentCivil ProcedureCounselGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 323 JURISDICTION: PERSONAL JURISDICTION, INCONVENIENT FORUM, AND APPEARANCES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Appearances

28-323 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 323.66-323.79

[Reserved]

§§ 323.66[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 323 JURISDICTION: PERSONAL JURISDICTION, INCONVENIENT FORUM, AND APPEARANCES
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
A. Personal Jurisdiction

28-323 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 323.80

§ 323.80 Related Publications from Matthew Bender

For discussion of service of summons and forms of summonses, see Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers

For discussion and forms relating to relief from defaults and default judgments and relief from void judgments generally, see Ch. 489, Relief From Judgments and Orders

For discussion and forms of notices of motion and orders generally, see Ch. 372, Motions and Orders

For memoranda supporting and opposing a motion to set aside and vacate a default and default judgment, see California Points and Authorities, Ch. 70, Defaults, Default Judgments , and Relief From Judgments and Orders

For memoranda supporting and opposing a motion to quash service of summons for lack of personal jurisdiction or to stay or dismiss an action for inconvenient forum, or to set aside and vacate a default and default judgment for lack of personal jurisdiction, see California Points and Authorities, Ch. 132, Jurisdiction: Personal Jurisdiction and Inconvenient Forum

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProceduresPleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to DismissCivil ProceduresPleading & PracticeMotion PracticeOpposing MemorandaCivil ProceduresPleading & PracticeMotion PracticeSupporting MemorandaCivil ProceduresPleading & PracticeService of ProcessSummonsGeneral OverviewCivil ProceduresPretrial JudgmentsDefaultRelief From DefaultCivil ProceduresJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentVoid Judgments

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 323 JURISDICTION: PERSONAL JURISDICTION, INCONVENIENT FORUM, AND APPEARANCES
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
A. Personal Jurisdiction

28-323 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 323.81

§ 323.81 Federal Constitution

Exemption from arrest, except for treason, felony, and breach of the peace, of U.S. Congress members while going to, attending, and returning from sessions of their respective houses. U.S. Const., art. I, § 6, cl. 1

Prohibition against depriving person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law. U.S. Const, amends. V, XIV

Requirement that full faith and credit be given in each statute to judicial proceedings of every other state. U.S. Const., art. IV

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Constitutional LawCongressional Duties & PowersSpeech & Debate ImmunityConstitutional LawRelations Among GovernmentsFull Faith & CreditConstitutional LawBill of RightsFundamental RightsProcedural Due ProcessScope of ProtectionConstitutional LawSubstantive Due ProcessScope of Protection

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 323 JURISDICTION: PERSONAL JURISDICTION, INCONVENIENT FORUM, AND APPEARANCES
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
A. Personal Jurisdiction

28-323 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 323.82

§ 323.82 State Constitution

Prohibition against depriving person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law. Cal. Const., art. I, § 7(a)

Immunity of California legislators to civil process during and for five days before and after legislative session. Cal. Const., art. IV, § 14

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Constitutional LawCongressional Duties & PowersSpeech & Debate ImmunityConstitutional LawBill of RightsFundamental RightsProcedural Due ProcessScope of ProtectionConstitutional LawSubstantive Due ProcessScope of Protection

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 323 JURISDICTION: PERSONAL JURISDICTION, INCONVENIENT FORUM, AND APPEARANCES
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
A. Personal Jurisdiction

28-323 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 323.83

§ 323.83 Federal Statutes

Venue of actions against national banks. 12 U.S.C. § 94

Requirement that action or proceeding against foreign officer entitled to diplomatic immunity be dismissed. 22 U.S.C. § 254d

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureVenueCorporationsInternational LawImmunityConsuls & Diplomats

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 323 JURISDICTION: PERSONAL JURISDICTION, INCONVENIENT FORUM, AND APPEARANCES
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
A. Personal Jurisdiction

28-323 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 323.84

§ 323.84 State Statutes

[1] Appeal

Appeal of order granting motion to quash service of summons for lack of personal jurisdiction or to stay or dismiss action on ground of inconvenient forum. Code Civ. Proc. §§ 904.1(a)(3), 904.2(d)

[2] Immunity to Service of Process

Nonresident witness while in California under subpoena to testify in criminal matter is not subject to local civil or criminal process. Penal Code § 1334.4

Nonresident witness while passing through California to testify in another state under subpoena is not subject to local civil or criminal process. Penal Code § 1334.5

Person brought into California on or after waiver of extradition based on criminal charge is not subject to service of process in civil actions arising out of same facts as criminal proceedings for which he or she was returned until conviction or, if acquitted, until he or she has had reasonable opportunity to return to state from which he or she was extradited. Penal Code § 1555

[3] Jurisdiction

Authority of court to exercise jurisdiction on any basis not inconsistent with federal or state constitution. Code Civ. Proc. § 410.10

Jurisdiction over parties. Code Civ. Proc. §§ 410.50-410.70

Jurisdiction necessary to sustain judgment. Code Civ. Proc. § 1917

Authority of court to appoint an attorney to represent a service member, as defined, in any action or proceeding in which that service member is a party, if the service member does not personally appear therein or is not represented by an authorized attorney. Mil. and Vet. Code § 401 (providing that no attorney so appointed to protect a service member shall have the power to waive any right of the person for whom he or she is appointed or bind him or her by his or her acts)

[4] Motion to Quash Service of Summons

Motion to quash service of summons for lack of personal jurisdiction over defendant. Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(a)(1), (b)

Written notice of motion to quash summons as required to be given as prescribed in Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b). Code Civ. Proc. §§ 418.10(b), 1005(a)(4)

[5] Motion to Vacate Default Judgment

Motion to set aside and vacate default and default judgment under Code Civ. Proc. § 473 or 473.5, when joined with motion under Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10 to quash service of summons or to stay or dismiss action, is not to be deemed general appearance. Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(d)

Grounds of motion to set aside and vacate default and default judgment. Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(b), (d), 473.5

[6] Review of Denial of Motion

Mandate to review denial of motion to quash service of summons for lack of personal jurisdiction or to stay or dismiss action for inconvenient forum. Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(c)

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionPersonal Jurisdiction & In Rem ActionsIn Personam ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to DismissCivil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsAppellate ReviewCivil ProcedurePretrial JudgmentsDefaultRelief From Default

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 323 JURISDICTION: PERSONAL JURISDICTION, INCONVENIENT FORUM, AND APPEARANCES
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
A. Personal Jurisdiction

28-323 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 323.85

§ 323.85 California Rules of Court

Time for responsive pleading under Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(c) after Supreme Court denies petition to review Court of Appeal denial of writ of mandate that was sought to review trial court's denial of motion to quash. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.491

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesWritsCommon Law WritsMandamus

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 323 JURISDICTION: PERSONAL JURISDICTION, INCONVENIENT FORUM, AND APPEARANCES
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
A. Personal Jurisdiction

28-323 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 323.86

§ 323.86 Decisions

[1] Bases of Jurisdiction

[a] Causing Effect in State by Act Done Elsewhere

California superior court had in personam jurisdiction over nonresident defendants in libel action by California resident against editor of national magazine, incorporated and having its principal place of business in Florida, and reporter employed by magazine, for libelous article written by reporter and edited by editor, both acts occurring in Florida, because their intentional conduct in Florida in writing and editing the libelous article for publication in the magazine was calculated to cause a tortious injury to plaintiff in California where the magazine had a wide circulation. Calder v. Jones (1984) 465 U.S. 783, 790, 104 S. Ct. 1482, 79 L. Ed. 2d 804 , aff'g Jones v. Calder (1982) 138 Cal. App. 3d 128, 134, 187 Cal. Rptr. 825

Out-of-state act having effect within state is permissibly sufficient to support jurisdiction in non-tort situation. Haisten v. Grass Valley Medical Reimbursement (9th Cir. 1986) 784 F.2d 1392, 1399

California has recognized that state may exercise jurisdiction over one who causes effects in state by act or omission done elsewhere with respect to causes of action arising from effects, unless nature of effects and of individual's relationship to state make exercise of jurisdiction unreasonable. Secrest Machine Corp. v. Superior Court (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 664, 669, 190 Cal. Rptr. 175, 660 P.2d 399

One of recognized bases for jurisdiction in California arises when defendant has caused an "effect" in California by act or omission which occurs elsewhere, although mere causing of effect in California is not necessarily sufficient to afford constitutional basis for jurisdiction if imposition of jurisdiction would be unreasonable. Sibley v. Superior Court (1976) 16 Cal. 3d 442, 445-446, 128 Cal. Rptr. 34, 546 P.2d 322 ; Brown v. Watson (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 1306, 1314, 255 Cal. Rptr. 507

Under the "effects" test for determining purposeful availment in personal jurisdiction analysis, a defendant might be subject to jurisdiction in the forum state if the defendant engaged in intentional conduct expressly aimed at or targeting the forum state, and the defendant knew the intentional conduct would cause harm in the future. Archdiocese of Milwaukee v. Superior Court (2003) 112 Cal. App. 4th 423, 5 Cal. Rptr. 3d 154

Despite not being present in state, natural person who commits tort while acting on corporation's behalf is subject to state's jurisdiction when delict intended to inflict tortious harm within state; natural person may also be subject to jurisdiction if delict could reasonably be expected to inflict tortious harm within state. Serafini v. Superior Court (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 70, 81, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 159

Mere causing of effect is not necessarily sufficient to afford constitutional basis for jurisdiction; jurisdiction may be invoked only where actor committed out-of-state act intending to cause effects in California or reasonably expecting that effects in California would result. Goehring v. Superior Court (1998) 62 Cal. App. 4th 894, 908-909, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 105

In typical scenario when patient travels out of state to see doctor and there receives allegedly negligent treatment, courts consistently hold patient's home state cannot exercise personal jurisdiction over physician even though effects of doctor's negligence are felt in patient's home state; more difficult cases are those where some aspect of relationship crosses state lines; just because doctor and patient communicate across state lines, however, does not establish minimum contacts necessary for personal jurisdiction; follow-up consultation ancillary to examination and treatment made by the out-of-state doctor, telephone calls about patient's status, or arrangements for patient to continue with medication that doctor prescribed do satisfy minimum contacts requirement; out-of-state physician's follow-up care of patient by telephone, even when home state patient pays for it, is not sufficient basis for personal jurisdiction; distinguishing cases in which minimum contacts have been found sufficient for exercise of personal jurisdiction because interstate marketing scheme was involved or doctor's services were fundamentally interstate in nature from inception of relationship. Prince v. Urban (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 1056, 1058, 1061, 1067, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 181

California court lacked jurisdiction over out-of-state company in action by plaintiffs for alleged preconception torts based on plaintiffs' grandmothers ingesting drug diethylstilbestrol (DES) while pregnant with plaintiffs' mothers resulting in plaintiffs' mothers suffering disabilities manifesting themselves at various points after birth and plaintiffs suffering similar injuries when they were born when only one plaintiff was domiciled in California, none of plaintiffs' grandmothers ingested DES in California but rather in New York, and none of the grandmothers acquired the product as a result of defendant's activities related to California; plaintiffs lacked element to support specific (limited) jurisdiction, that is, that nonresident's acts must cause forum-related injury of which plaintiff complains. Boaz v. Boyle & Co. (1995) 40 Cal. App. 4th 700, 715-719, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 888

In plaintiff's action against out-of-state attorney and out-of-state law firm for defamation and false light invasions of privacy based on allegations to effect that attorney letter opinion contained defamatory statement and that others repeated the false statements in California, California lacked jurisdiction over defendants who denied living, maintaining an office, doing business or owning property in California and attorney declared only communications concerning plaintiff were with persons and entities in Arizona and that he never caused another to speak or write about plaintiff in California, when among other reasons, plaintiff failed to establish requisites for basing jurisdiction over nonresident who commits an act elsewhere causing an effect in the state, that is, plaintiff failed to establish that defendants' tortious conduct was subject to special regulation or that defendants in connection with causing an affect within the forum state invoked benefits and protections of its laws; it is reasonable to exercise jurisdiction on basis of defendant intentionally causing effects in state by omission or act done elsewhere whenever (a) effects are of nature that state treats as exceptional and subjects to special regulation or (b) defendant has, in connection with causing such effects in forum state, invoked benefits and protections of its laws. Mansour v. Superior Court (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 1750, 1758-1762, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 191

California court has jurisdiction over out-of-state parents of minor attending University of California based on parents intentionally causing effect of minor's unsupervised presence in California when action is based on parent's liability for minor's willful misconduct; exercise of jurisdiction is reasonable both because effect is of nature that state treats as exceptional and subjects to special regulation (Civ. Code § 1714.1) and because parents' invoked benefits and protections of California law by acquiescing in minor's choice of school and paying tuition. Jamshid-Negad v. Kessler (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 1704, 1708-1709, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 621

"Latticework" of contacts linking defendants and California, including act in another state of declaring California conservatorship an "event of default" terminating relationship to California limited partnership, constituted sufficient minimum contacts to justify jurisdiction over defendants. Checker Motors Corp. v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 1007, 1018, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 618

Foreign corporation's alleged inducement outside California of codefendant to breach contract with plaintiff was insufficient effect to justify personal jurisdiction over corporation. Beckman v. Thompson (1992) 4 Cal. App. 4th 481, 485, 6 Cal. Rptr. 2d 60

Out-of-state act done with intention of causing effects in state is proper basis for state's exercise of judicial jurisdiction over actor, or over one who caused act to be done, as to causes of action arising from these effects to same extent it could have had effects resulted from act done within state. Seagate Technology v. A.J. Kogyo Co. (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 696, 703, 268 Cal. Rptr. 586

State has jurisdiction over action arising out of act done elsewhere having effects within state unless nature of effects and defendant's relationship to state make exercise of jurisdiction unreasonable; exercise of jurisdiction on this basis is reasonable whenever (1) act is of nature that state treats as exceptional and subject to special regulation, or (2) defendant has, in connection with his or her causing such effects in forum state, invoked benefits and protections of its laws; but merely causing an effect in California is not in and of itself sufficient to invoke jurisdiction. Wolfe v. City of Alexandria (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 541, 547-548, 265 Cal. Rptr. 881

Criminal nature of obscene telephone calls placed by out-of-state defendant to California plaintiffs and fact that they were intended to cause effects in California support California's exercise of in personam jurisdiction over defendant in action for damages for intentional infliction of emotional distress. Schlussel v. Schlussel (1983) 141 Cal. App. 3d 194, 197-199, 190 Cal. Rptr. 95

In action by wife against husband for child and spousal support, husband's acts and omissions outside California caused effect within state sufficient to confer jurisdiction, when husband and wife lived in California at various times prior to and during marriage, husband was traded to Chicago baseball team, altercations ensued, husband refused to support wife and two children, and wife returned to California with children to live on public assistance at her parents' residence. McGlothen v. Superior Court (1981) 121 Cal. App. 3d 106, 111-113, 175 Cal. Rptr. 129

Representation of mother by Louisiana attorney and his law firm, neither of which had any contact with the State of California, in child custody litigation in Louisiana pursuant to order of California court in proceeding in which California court had personal jurisdiction over both parents was insufficient basis for subjecting Louisiana attorney and his firm to suit in California for child abduction based on fact that attorney and his law firm performed acts outside California which had effects inside California. Demarest v. Superior Court (1980) 103 Cal. App. 3d 791, 799, 165 Cal. Rptr. 641

[b] Consent

Law is well settled that parties to contract may agree in advance to submit to jurisdiction of given court. National

Equipment Rental v. Szukhent (1964) 375 U.S. 311, 315-316, 84 S. Ct. 411, 11 L. Ed. 2d 354 ; see also Smith, Valentino & Smith, Inc. v. Superior Court (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 491, 494-496, 131 Cal. Rptr. 374, 551 P.2d 1206

Pennsylvania insurance guaranty association was not impliedly consenting to be sued in California since it stood in shoes of insolvent Pennsylvania insurer only for some purposes, extent of its liability was limited to statutorily defined claims, and it was not in the business of insurance for profit. Pennsylvania Life & Health Ins. Guaranty Ass'n v. Superior Court (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 477, 485-487, 27 Cal. Rptr. 2d 507

With respect to plaintiff, jurisdiction is conferred by consent and generally extends beyond plaintiff's particular cause of action to encompass any cross complaint of defendant as well; plaintiff impliedly consents to rendition of affirmative judgment against it within issues presented by its pleadings and affecting subject matter of its action. In re Marriage of Aron (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 1086, 1095, 274 Cal. Rptr. 357

[c] Doing Act in State

There is nothing unreasonable about subjecting a defendant to the jurisdiction of California courts in an independent action to renew a 1992 judgment. Defendant had entered into a contract in California (a promissory note) that was to be performed in California (i.e., payment of the debt), which he breached when he failed to repay the debt. An action on the note was filed in California, and defendant submitted himself to the jurisdiction of the California court when he appeared in the action. A money judgment was entered against defendant in California, and he has failed to pay his obligations. The passage of time between the original California litigation and the revival action, during which defendant has had no additional contacts with California, does not defeat personal jurisdiction as concerns the enforcement of the 1992 judgment. Such a conclusion could encourage judgment debtors to evade legal obligations imposed by a judgment of this state's courts by simply packing up their assets and leaving the jurisdiction. The Cadle Co. II v. Fiscus (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 1232, 1240, 78 Cal. Rptr. 3d 238

Where the only contact a Virginia university had with California was the university's recruiting coordinator visit to plaintiff in California to recruit him to play football for the university, and the execution of a scholarship agreement by plaintiff in California, the court found that the university had not purposely availed itself of the benefits of doing business in California such that it could expect to be subject to the jurisdiction of California courts. The nexus between the university's activities in California and the injury plaintiff suffered in Virginia was so attenuated as to be virtually nonexistent. Roman v. Liberty University, Inc. (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 670, 680, 75 Cal. Rptr. 3d 828

Where claim arises directly from services rendered by appellant law firm for services rendered to a former client in California, limited jurisdiction existed for resolution of the claim, even when respondent was dismissed from previous unrelated action based on insufficient contacts with California. Daar & Newman v. VRL Int'l (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 482, 493, 28 Cal. Rptr. 3d 566

Negotiation and execution in California of contract to provide medical treatment to California residents while passengers on cruise on foreign commercial vessel out of state was sufficient contact with state to support exercise of in personam jurisdiction by California court over nonresident defendants in action for negligently rendering that medical treatment, there being logically no reason why tort cannot grow out of contractual contact when contractual contact is a "but for" causative factor for tort. Dialysis at Sea, Inc. v. Superior Court (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 788, 795, 265 Cal. Rptr. 71 , overruled by Vons Cos., Inc. v. Seabest Foods, Inc. (1996) 14 Cal. 4th 434, 468-469, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 899 (rejecting "but for" test as overly mechanical)

When California is asked to exercise specific jurisdiction over a particular claim and the court is satisfied the defendant purposefully availed itself of the benefits of conducting business within California, the appropriate inquiry becomes whether the plaintiff's cause of action arises out of or has a substantial connection with a business relationship defendant has purposefully established within California. The courts thus asks (1) what is the business relationship between the defendant and the California-based interests, (2) what is the claim asserted by the plaintiff against the defendant, and (3) is there a substantial nexus or relationship between the two because the latter arises out of or it substantially connected to the former. The first inquiry addresses the purposeful availment issue, and the latter two inquiries focus on whether the particular claim is substantially related to the defendant's forum contacts. VirtualMagic Asia, Inc. v. Fil-Cartoons, Inc. (2002) 99 Cal. App. 4th 228, 239-240, 121 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1

Where a complaint alleges that a defendant, during the course of his employment, acquired trade secrets and other confidential information regarding his employer's products, customers, and employees, which he then used to cause harm to the employer and thus to the employer's customers and to its business revenues in California, a court may find that claims raised are directly related to the defendant's contacts with California in that they arise from the employment relationship, and that the requisite substantial nexus exists between the controversy at issue and the defendant's contacts with California. Integral Development Corp. v. Weissenbach (2002) 99 Cal. App. 4th 576, 587, 122 Cal. Rptr. 2d 24

State has special interest in exercising jurisdiction over those who commit tortious act within its territory; exercise of jurisdiction by state over those who commit or cause to be committed in state what is claimed to be a tortious act is reasonable; under California's long-arm statute and federal due process, tortious act, standing alone, is sufficient to find personal jurisdiction if act is aimed at resident of forum state or has effects in forum state. Magnecomp Corp. v. Athene Co. (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 526, 535-536, 257 Cal. Rptr. 278 ; Kaiser Aetna v. Deal (1978) 86 Cal. App. 3d 896, 900, 150 Cal. Rptr. 615

California court had in personam jurisdiction over nonresident defendant in paternity action by county against nonresident defendant when act of sexual intercourse leading to conception and birth occurred in California. County of Humboldt v. Harris (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 857, 860-861, 254 Cal. Rptr. 49

Personal jurisdiction over any nonresident individual must be premised on forum-related acts personally committed by that individual; hence, personal jurisdiction in California over nonresidents who are alleged coconspirators does not attach on basis of fraudulent acts or omissions committed in California by another defendant. Kaiser Aetna v. Deal (1978) 86 Cal. App. 3d 896, 901, 150 Cal. Rptr. 615

State has power to exercise judicial jurisdiction over individual who has done, or has caused to be done, act in state with respect to cause of action in tort arising from such act, and any cause of action not in tort arising from such act unless nature of act and individual's relationship to state make exercise of jurisdiction unreasonable. National Life of Florida Corp. v. Superior Court (1971) 21 Cal. App. 3d 281, 287, 98 Cal. Rptr. 435

Defendant is clearly subject to the personal jurisdiction of California courts under both the general and specific categories of personal jurisdiction where complaint alleged that defendant systematically and continually does business in California, and the defendant did not deny that it maintains numerous offices and does extensive business in this state, and where the action (involving defendant's alleged recording of telephone conversations relating to business transactions) plainly arises directly out of defendant's business activity in this state. Kearney v. Salomon Smith Barney, Inc. (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 95, 103-04, 45 Cal. Rptr. 3d 730

[d] Doing Business in State

Corporation which purposefully avails itself of privilege of conducting activities within forum state has clear notice that it is subject to suit there, and can act to alleviate risk of burdensome litigation by procuring insurance, passing expected costs on to customers, or, if risks are too great, severing its connection with state. World-Wide Volkswagen

Corp. v. Woodson (1980) 444 U.S. 286, 297, 100 S. Ct. 559, 62 L. Ed. 2d 490 ; St. Joe Paper Co. v. Superior Court (1981) 120 Cal. App. 3d 991, 999, 175 Cal. Rptr. 94 , cert. denied, 455 U.S. 982 (1982)

Even where a California resident initiates a phone call to a telemarketing corporation to buy a product, if the telemarketer who handles the order then initiates a sale of a separate product (referred to as an "upsell"), the telemarketing corporation has purposefully availed itself of the privileges of conducting activities within California. West Corp. v. Superior Court (2004) 116 Cal. App.4th 1167, 1177-1178, 11 Cal. Rptr. 3d 145

Corp. Code § 31420, a service of process statute, does not create an independent basis for personal jurisdiction for claims arising under the California Franchise Investment Law. Notwithstanding Section 31420, there must be grounds for exercising personal jurisdiction, pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 410.10, over a nonresident defendant that are consistent with the U.S. Constitution. Thomson v. Anderson (2004) 113 Cal. App. 4th 258, 266-271, 6 Cal. Rptr. 3d 262

Minimal resales of a product in California by a distributor, standing alone, do not amount to the substantial, continuous, and systematic contacts with the forum state necessary for the exercise of general jurisdiction over a foreign manufacturer doing business in its home country. Carretti v. Italpast (2002) 101 Cal. App. 4th 1236, 1253-1254, 125 Cal. Rptr. 2d 126

Meaning of term "doing business" in state. Circus Circus Hotels, Inc. v. Superior Court (1981) 120 Cal. App. 3d 546, 563-567, 174 Cal. Rptr. 885 , disapproved to extent inconsistent with Vons Companies, Inc. v. Seabest Foods, Inc. (1996) 14 Cal. 4th 434, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 899

[e] Domicile

Domicile in state is alone sufficient to bring absent defendant within reach of state's jurisdiction for purposes of personal judgment by means of appropriate substituted service. Milliken v. Meyer (1940) 311 U.S. 457, 463-464, 61 S. Ct. 339, 85 L. Ed. 278 ; Allen v. Superior Court (1953) 41 Cal. 2d 306, 310-311, 259 P.2d 905

A refusal by California courts to exercise jurisdiction cannot be justified by the mere fact that a claim arising from California contacts is prosecuted by a nonresident. While the foreign status of an assignee might in some cases reduce the state's interest in adjudicating a dispute, that interest is at most a subsidiary consideration that cannot by itself justify a denial of access to California's courts. Epic Communications, Inc. v. Richwave Technolgy, Inc. (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 314, 317-318, 101 Cal. Rptr. 3d 572

A refusal by California courts to exercise jurisdiction cannot be justified by the mere fact that a claim arising from California contacts is prosecuted by a nonresident. While the foreign status of an assignee might in some cases reduce the state's interest in adjudicating a dispute that is at most a subsidiary consideration which cannot by itself justify a denial of access to California's courts. Epic Communications, Inc. v. Richwave Technolgy, Inc. (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 314, 317-318, 101 Cal. Rptr. 3d 572

Mere fact of past residency fails to provide sufficient contacts of such nature and quality to entertain personal jurisdiction over a defendant consistent with traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice. Muckle v. Superior Court (2002) 102 Cal. App. 4th 218, 225-231, 125 Cal. Rptr. 2d 303

Former domicile of defendant in forum state is insufficient by itself to confer jurisdiction when domicile had no relation to litigation; but domicile at time cause of action arose, in addition to allegations that action was based on defendant's activities within forum state, affords state constitutional basis for personal jurisdiction. Kroopf v. Guffey (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 1351, 1358, 228 Cal. Rptr. 807

[f] Presence

Presence in California when service of process was effected meets jurisdictional requirement. Silverman v. Superior Court (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 145, 150, 249 Cal. Rptr. 724 ; see Burnham v. Superior Court of California (1990) 495 U.S. 604, 607-640, 110 S. Ct. 2105, 109 L. Ed. 2d 631 (lead opinion and separate opinions concurring in judgment only)

[g] Ownership, Use, or Possession of Thing in State

Ownership of car, agreement to be responsible for acts of minor son, and allowing uninsured son to take car from California to Indiana rendered owner liable under Indiana law for injuries sustained when car driven by son was involved in accident in Indiana and subjected owner to personal jurisdiction of Indiana court under Indiana's long-arm statute; default judgment subsequently entered in Indiana was enforceable in California. Indiana Insurance Co. v. Pettigrew (1981) 115 Cal. App. 3d 862, 864-868, 171 Cal. Rptr. 770

[2] Classification of Actions and Judgments

[a] In Personam

Valid judgment imposing personal obligation or duty in favor of plaintiff as permitted to be entered only by court having jurisdiction over person of defendant. Kulko v. California Superior Court (1978) 436 U.S. 84, 91, 98 S. Ct. 1690, 56 L. Ed. 2d 132

In personam action and judgment defined. Shaffer v. Heitner (1977) 433 U.S. 186, 199, 97 S. Ct. 2569, 53 L. Ed. 2d 683 ; Hanson v. Denckla (1958) 357 U.S. 235, 246 n.12, 78 S. Ct. 1228, 2 L. Ed. 2d 1283

Any judgment purporting to bind person of defendant over whom court had not acquired in personam jurisdiction as void within state as well as outside state. Hanson v. Denckla (1958) 357 U.S. 235, 250, 78 S. Ct. 1228, 2 L. Ed. 2d 1283

State, being forbidden to enter judgment attempting to bind person over whom it has no jurisdiction, as having even less right to enter judgment purporting to extinguish interest of person in property over which court has no jurisdiction. Hanson v. Denckla (1958) 357 U.S. 235, 250, 78 S. Ct. 1228, 2 L. Ed. 2d 1283

For in personam jurisdiction to exist, court as required to have personal jurisdiction over defendant. Hartford v. Superior Court (1956) 47 Cal. 2d 447, 454, 304 P.2d 1 ; Titus v. Superior Court (1972) 23 Cal. App. 3d 792, 799, 100 Cal. Rptr. 477

Although custody of children is question of in rem jurisdiction, attempt to impose child support payments on nonresident as question of in personam jurisdiction as court is seeking to fasten personal obligation on defendant. Titus v. Superior Court (1972) 23 Cal. App. 3d 792, 797-805, 100 Cal. Rptr. 477

[b] In Rem

When court's jurisdiction is based on court's power over property within its territory, action as called "in rem" or "quasi in rem." Shaffer v. Heitner (1977) 433 U.S. 186, 199, 97 S. Ct. 2569, 53 L. Ed. 2d 683

In rem judgment defined. Shaffer v. Heitner (1977) 433 U.S. 186, 199 n.17, 97 S. Ct. 2569, 53 L. Ed. 2d 683 ;

Hanson v. Denckla (1958) 357 U.S. 235, 246 n.12, 78 S. Ct. 1228, 2 L. Ed. 2d 1283

All assertions of state jurisdiction, including jurisdiction of actions in rem, as required to be evaluated by "minimum contacts" standards. Shaffer v. Heitner (1977) 433 U.S. 186, 207, 97 S. Ct. 2569, 53 L. Ed. 2d 683

Because judicial jurisdiction over a thing refers to jurisdiction over interests of persons in a thing, in order to justify exercise of jurisdiction in rem, basis for jurisdiction as required to be sufficient to justify exercise of jurisdiction over interests of persons in a thing. Shaffer v. Heitner (1977) 433 U.S. 186, 207, 97 S. Ct. 2569, 53 L. Ed.2d 683

Basis of in rem jurisdiction as presence of subject property within territorial jurisdiction of forum state. Hanson v. Denckla (1958) 357 U.S. 235, 246, 78 S. Ct. 1228, 2 L. Ed. 2d 1283

Probate proceedings as proceedings in rem. Estate of Neilson (1962) 57 Cal. 2d 733, 748, 22 Cal. Rptr. 1, 371 P.2d 745 (proceeding to determine heirship); Estate of Neubauer (1958) 49 Cal. 2d 740, 745, 321 P.2d 741 (probate of will); Estate of Plaut (1945) 27 Cal. 2d 424, 428, 164 P.2d 765 (will contest); Lilienkamp v. Superior Court (1939) 14 Cal. 2d 293, 298, 93 P.2d 1008 (distribution of estate); Security First Nat. Bk. v. Superior Court(1934) 1 Cal. 2d 749, 755, 37 P.2d 69 (administration of testamentary trust; overruled on another point by implication in Estate of Charters (1956) 46 Cal. 2d 227, 293 P.2d 778 ; see Estate of Auslender (1960) 53 Cal. 2d 615, 626 n.1, 2 Cal. Rptr. 769, 349 P.2d 537)

In rem jurisdiction as required to be authorized by statute. Lee v. Silva (1925) 197 Cal. 364, 371, 240 P. 1015

Eminent domain proceedings as in nature of actions in rem. Harrington v. Superior Court (1924) 194 Cal. 185, 189, 228 P. 15 ; San Bernardino etc. Water Dist. v. Gage Canal Co. (1964) 226 Cal. App. 2d 206, 210, 37 Cal. Rptr. 856

Validation action is a proceeding in rem. Bernardi v. City Council (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 718, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 895

Action affecting status of persons as action in rem. In re Hanley (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 1109, 1119, 245 Cal. Rptr. 441 (marriage status); Titus v. Superior Court (1972) 23 Cal. App. 3d 792, 798, 100 Cal. Rptr. 477 (status of children presently within state); Mungia v. Superior Court (1964) 225 Cal. App. 2d 280, 284, 37 Cal. Rptr. 285 (marriage status); but see Hartford v. Superior Court (1956) 47 Cal. 2d 447, 453-457, 304 P.2d 1 , overruled on other grounds in Leadford v. Leadford (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 571, 8 Cal. Rptr. 2d 9 (action or proceeding seeking to fasten relationship on defendant, such as action seeking to declare defendant plaintiff's father, as in personam rather than in rem, and personal jurisdiction over defendant as required)

[c] Quasi in Rem

Defendant's insurer's obligation under policy to defend as not sufficient contact with forum state to permit exercise of quasi in rem jurisdiction over defendant when defendant's insurer did business in forum state but defendant was nonresident and accident which was basis of cause of action occurred outside of state. Rush v. Savchuk (1980) 444 U.S. 320, 328, 330, 100 S. Ct. 571, 62 L. Ed. 2d 516

When court's jurisdiction is based on court's power over property within its territory, action as called "in rem" or "quasi in rem." Shaffer v. Heitner (1977) 433 U.S. 186, 199, 97 S. Ct. 2569, 53 L. Ed. 2d 683, 694

Quasi in rem judgment defined. Shaffer v. Heitner (1977) 433 U.S. 186, 199 n.17, 97 S. Ct. 2569, 53 L. Ed. 2d 683, 694 ; Hanson v. Denckla (1958) 357 U.S. 235, 246 n.12, 78 S. Ct. 1228, 2 L. Ed. 2d 1283 ; Estate of Johnson (1965) 233 Cal. App. 2d 785, 791, 43 Cal. Rptr. 913

All assertions of state jurisdiction, including jurisdiction of quasi in rem actions, as required to be evaluated by "minimum contacts" standards. Shaffer v. Heitner (1977) 433 U.S. 186, 200 n.17, 207, 97 S. Ct. 2569, 53 L. Ed. 2d 683

Presence of property in state as perhaps decisive factor bearing on existence of jurisdiction by providing contacts among forum state, defendant, and litigation, such as when claims to property itself are source of underlying controversy between plaintiff and defendant or when cause of action is otherwise related to rights and duties growing out of defendant's ownership of property. Shaffer v. Heitner (1977) 433 U.S. 186, 207, 97 S. Ct. 2569, 53 L. Ed. 2d 683

When property which is sought to serve as basis for assertion of state court jurisdiction is completely unrelated to plaintiff's cause of action, in absence of existence of other ties among defendant, forum state, and litigation, such property as incapable of supporting exercise of jurisdiction. Shaffer v. Heitner (1977) 433 U.S. 186, 203-204, 209-209, 97 S. Ct. 2569, 53 L. Ed. 2d 683 (overruling prior United States Supreme Court cases which permitted state court to assert jurisdiction over nonresident solely on basis of nonresident's property in state)

Writ of attachment levied against defendant's insurer's obligation to indemnify and defend as quashed because obligation was so contingent and uncertain that it was not subject to garnishment and attachment and could not be basis of quasi in rem jurisdiction. Javorek v. Superior Court of Monterey County (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 629, 633-647, 131 Cal. Rptr. 768, 552 P.2d 728

Action to invalidate redevelopment plan considered to be "reverse" validation action, which is quasi in rem. Co unty of Riverside v. Superior Court (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 443, 445, 446 n.5, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747

Before quasi in rem jurisdiction may be obtained over party, some property of defendant within forum state as required to be subjected to court's control by procedure such as attachment, garnishment, or receivership. Fount Wip, Inc. v. Golstein (1973) 33 Cal. App. 3d 184, 189, 108 Cal. Rptr. 732

Court as acquiring no jurisdiction over defendant as result of attachment of property in which defendant no longer had any interest. Fount Wip, Inc. v. Golstein (1973) 33 Cal. App. 3d 184, 190, 108 Cal. Rptr. 732

[3] Corporate Directors and Officers

In action for wrongful termination, contacts of nonresident officer and director of out of state parent corporation not sufficient under facts to give rise to either general or specific jurisdiction; regarding general jurisdiction, defendant unequivocally ceased defendant's activities as a director and officer of out of state corporation before service of process in action; when corporation ceases to do business in state there is no longer any general jurisdiction, i.e., jurisdiction as to causes of action independent of that business; regarding specific jurisdiction, no showing that defendant caused tort to be committed against plaintiff in California for which defendant would be personally liable. Serafini v. Superior Court (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 70, 78-82, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 159

Corporate directors are not vicariously liable for corporation's torts in which they do not participate; their liability, if any, stems from their own tortious conduct, not from their status as directors or officers of enterprise; directors are jointly liable with corporation and may be joined as defendants if they personally directed or participated in tortious conduct; this rule has its roots in law of agency that agent is liable for his or her own acts, regardless of whether principal is liable or amenable to judicial action. Seagate Technology v. A.J. Kogyo Co. (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 696, 701-702, 268 Cal. Rptr. 586

[4] Effect of Order or Judgment Entered by Court Without Personal Jurisdiction

Order entered without personal jurisdiction over defendant is void; thus, personal service by party, in violation of Code Civ. Proc. § 414.10, is ineffective and renders any judgment or order arising from proceeding void, despite defendant's actual notice. Caldwell v. Coppola (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 859, 863, 865, 268 Cal. Rptr. 453

[5] Immunity to Service of Process or Suit

U.S. Const., art. I, § 6, cl. 1, conferring on members of U.S. Congress privilege from arrest in all cases except treason, felony, and breach of peace during their attendance at session of their respective houses and in going to and returning from same does not confer immunity from service of summons in a civil case. Long v. Ansell (1934) 293 U.S. 76, 81-83, 55 S. Ct. 21, 79 L. Ed. 208

Sister states that engage in activities within California are not immune from suit in California with respect to those activities. Hall v. University of Nevada (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 522, 524, 105 Cal. Rptr. 355, 503 P.2d 1363 , cert. denied, 414 U.S. 820 (1973) ; Hall v. University of Nevada (1977) 74 Cal. App. 3d 280, 284, 141 Cal. Rptr. 439 , aff'd sub nom. Nevada v. Hall (1979) 440 U.S. 410, 99 S. Ct. 1182, 59 L. Ed. 2d 416 ; State of Oregon v. Superior Court (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 1550, 1561-1562, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 909 (disapproved to extent it is inconsistent with opinion in Vons Companies, Inc. v. Seabest Foods, Inc. (1996) 14 Cal. 4th 434, 465 n.8, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 899, 926 P.2d 1085)

Immunity from service rule with respect to nonresident parties to civil actions is no longer law in California. Silverman v. Superior Court (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 145, 149, 249 Cal. Rptr. 724

Rule granting nonresident witness in civil case immunity from service is no longer law of California. Severn v. Adidas Sportschuhfabriken (1973) 33 Cal. App. 3d 754, 762-764, 109 Cal. Rptr. 328

Cal. Const., art. IV, § 14, immunizing California legislators to civil process during legislative session and for five days before and after, creates exemption from civil process without qualification as to kind or subject matter of lawsuit; prohibition is proper remedy to restrain trial court from proceeding with action when claim of legislative immunity to service of process was made in trial court and denied. Harmer v. Superior Court (1969) 275 Cal. App. 2d 345, 347-348, 79 Cal. Rptr. 855

[6] In Personam Jurisdiction

[a] Actions in Personam

Court must have jurisdiction over person of defendant in order to impose personal obligation or duty in favor of plaintiff. Kulko v. Superior Court of California (1978) 436 U.S. 84, 91, 98 S. Ct. 1690 , reh'g denied, 438 U.S. 908 ; Pennoyer v. Neff (1878) 95 U.S. 714, 732-733, 24 L. Ed. 565 (leading case)

Because judicial jurisdiction over thing refers to jurisdiction over interests of persons in thing, in order to justify exercise of jurisdiction in rem or quasi in rem, basis for jurisdiction must be sufficient to justify exercise of jurisdiction over interests of persons in thing. Shaffer v. Heitner (1977) 433 U.S. 186, 207, 97 S. Ct. 2569, 53 L. Ed. 2d 683

Whether United States District Court has personal jurisdiction over defendant is determined by law of forum state. Hunt v. Erie Ins. Group (9th Cir. 1984) 728 F.2d 1244, 1246

Holding company's mere ownership of a subsidiary did not constitute purposeful availment where plaintiff did not show that the holding company purposefully directed its activities at California, either directly or through its subsidiary or any other person or entity. Absent evidence that the holding company purposefully directed the activities of the subsidiary toward the state, there was no basis for personal jurisdiction over the holding company. Healthmarkets, Inc. v. Superior Court (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 1160, 1168-69, 90 Cal. Rptr. 3d 527

The exemption from the 10-year statute of limitations for "actions based on willful misconduct" applies to cross-complaints for indemnity, and a willful misconduct claim may be made in a cross-complaint by way of incorporating by reference allegations contained in the complaint. Pine Terrace Apartments, LP v. Windscape, LLC (2009) 170 Cal. App. 4th 1, 87 Cal. Rptr. 3d 630

The proper jurisdictional question is not whether a defendant can be liable for the acts of another person or entity under state substantive law, but whether the defendant has purposefully directed its activities at the forum state by causing a separate person or entity to engage in forum contacts. That constitutional question does not turn on the specific state law requirements of alter ego or agency, although the inquiry may be similar in some circumstances. Anglo Irish Bank Corp. v. Superior Court (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 969, 983, 81 Cal. Rptr. 3d 535

Once acquired, jurisdiction is not defeated by subsequent events that might have prevented jurisdiction had they occurred before personal service of the action was made; continuing jurisdiction to enforce money judgment is not subject to attack on the ground that the debtor has insufficient personal contacts with California to establish personal jurisdiction when the renewal is entered. Goldman v. Simpson (2008) 160 Cal. App. 4th 255, 263, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 729

A guarantee provided by an out-of-state utility for its subsidiary's financial obligations under a weather derivative contract did not destroy the separateness of the parent and subsidiary so as to justify application of the representative services doctrine. Therefore, the utility's motion to quash service of summons should have been granted. Aquila, Inc. v. Superior Court (2007) 2007-1 Trade Cas. (CCH) P75633, 148 Cal. App. 4th 556, 576-580, 55 Cal. Rptr. 3d 803

The Foreign Money-Judgments Act does not exempt compliance with the procedures applicable to civil actions, including service of a summons. Compliance with the statutory procedures for service of process is essential to establish personal jurisdiction. Renoir v. Redstar Corp. (2004) 123 Cal. App. 4th 1145, 1152, 20 Cal. Rptr. 3d 603

When a Native American undertakes to avail himself or herself of the services of a state court in a domestic relations matter, the state court has jurisdiction to act and to grant whatever relief is contemplated by the action initiated by the Native American. In Re Marriage of Maria and Randy Jacobsen (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 1187, 1193, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 162

The representative services doctrine, a species of agency, supports the exercise of jurisdiction when a local subsidiary performs a function that is compatible with, and assists the parent in the pursuit of, the parent's own business. If a parent uses a subsidiary to do what it otherwise would have done itself, it has purposely availed itself of the privilege of doing business in the forum. Paneno v. Centres for Academic Programmes Abroad (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 1447, 1456, 13 Cal. Rptr. 3d 759

Parent company's ownership or control of a subsidiary corporation does not, without more, subject parent corporation to the jurisdiction of the state where the subsidiary does business. Parent holding company may be subject to general jurisdiction only under limited circumstances, such as an alter ego relationship or the parent's exercise of such a degree of control of the subsidiary as to reflect the parent's purposeful disregard of the subsidiary's independent corporate existence. DVI, Inc. v. Superior Court (2002) 104 Cal. App. 4th 1080, 1087, 128 Cal. Rptr. 2d 683 , agreeing with Sonora Diamond Corp. v. Superior Court (2000) 83 Cal. App. 4th 523, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 824

Ins. Code §§ 1610, 1611 are simply service statutes providing that specified acts by nonresident insurer not admitted to do business in California constitute appointment by insurer of Insurance Commissioner as attorney for service of process; before Ins. Code §§ 1610, 1611 may be utilized to obtain jurisdiction, power to exercise jurisdiction over that insurer must be found to exist under Code Civ. Proc. § 410.10. Tri-West Ins. Services, Inc. v. Seguros Monterrey Aetna, S.A. (2000) 78 Cal. App. 4th 672, 676, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 78

California does not recognize conspiracy as basis for acquiring personal jurisdiction over party. Mansour v. Superior Court (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 1750, 1760-1761, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 191 ; but see Taylor-Rush v. Multitech Corp. (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 103, 114, 265 Cal. Rptr. 672 (dictum that acts of coconspirator within California may give rise to jurisdiction over coconspirator in another state)

Nonresident defendant corporation has liberty interest in not being subjected to jurisdiction of California courts if its connection with state falls below minimum contacts threshold, or if so doing will violate traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice. Cassiar Mining Corp. v. Superior Court (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 550, 554, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 167

Even if proper basis of personal jurisdiction is present and notice is given in manner to satisfy requirements of constitutional due process, if state by statute prescribes manner in which notice shall be given and considers compliance with procedure to be jurisdictional, no jurisdiction of person isacquired by court without compliance; defendant or unnamed party who was never served in action and who never appeared in proceedings but whose rights were directly adjudicated therein may attack judgment directly or collaterally as void for failure to obtain jurisdiction over his or her person; party seeking judgment binding on another cannot compel that person to intervene; rather, person must be joined. St. Sava Mission Corp. v. Serbian Eastern Orthodox Diocese (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 1354, 1366, 1374, 1378, 273 Cal. Rptr. 340

Proper service is required for court's exercise of personal jurisdiction; under Code Civ. Proc. § 414.10, party is prohibited from personally serving defendant, and although attorneys are competent to serve process, prohibition on service by opposing party is strictly enforced; when party makes service on defendant, court lacks personal jurisdiction over defendant. Caldwell v. Coppola (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 859, 863, 865, 268 Cal. Rptr. 453

Ins. Code §§ 1610, 1611, relating to substituted service on nonresident insurance companies under Unauthorized Insurers Process Act (Ins. Code §§ 1610-1620), are service of process statutes and do not constitute basis for jurisdiction over nonresident defendant; power to exercise jurisdiction over insurer must be found under Code Civ. Proc. § 410.10. In re Marriage of Martin (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 1426, 1433, 255 Cal. Rptr. 720

Code Civ. Proc. § 410.10, under which California court may exercise jurisdiction over nonresident defendants on any basis not inconsistent with United States or California constitutions, manifests intent to exercise broadest possible jurisdiction, limited only by constitutional considerations; as general constitutional principle, court may exercise personal jurisdiction over nonresident defendant as long as defendant has such minimum contacts with forum that maintenance of suit does not offend traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice. Brown v. Watson (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 1306, 1311-1312, 255 Cal. Rptr. 507 ; Rollins Burdick Hunter of So. Cal., Inc. v Alexander & Alexander Services, Inc. (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 1, 7, 253 Cal. Rptr. 338 ; Great-West Life Assurance Co. v. Guarantee Co. of North America (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 199, 204, 252 Cal. Rptr. 363

Personal jurisdiction over nonresident defendant depends on existence of essentially two criteria: (1) basis for jurisdiction due to defendant's minimum contacts with forum state, and (2) acquisition of jurisdiction by service of process in strict compliance with requirements of service statutes (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 412.10-417.40); on by specially appearing nonresident defendant under Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10, plaintiff must establish that both criteria are met. Ziller Electronics Lab GmbH v. Superior Court (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 1222, 1229, 254 Cal. Rptr. 410

While jurisdiction over wholly owned subsidiary does not alone give court jurisdiction over parent corporation, judicial jurisdiction over subsidiary corporation gives state judicial jurisdiction over parent corporation if parent so controls and dominates subsidiary as in effect to disregard latter's independent corporate existence; basic test is whether one corporation is alter ego of the other. Rollins Burdick Hunter of So. Cal., Inc. v Alexander & Alexander Services, Inc. (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 1, 9, 253 Cal. Rptr. 338

Foreign parent corporation is not subject to personal jurisdiction in California based solely on independent activities of its wholly owned domestic subsidiary, even when parent owns subsidiary's outstanding shares of stock and shares overlapping officers and directors, and even when parent exercises general executive responsibility for operations of subsidiary and reviews its major policy decisions; so long as separation between parent and subsidiary corporations is real, even if merely formal, use of subsidiary to conduct business in California does not automatically subject parent to suit in this state; to establish general jurisdiction of California courts over parent, plaintiff must show "continuous and systematic" contacts of parent with California. Sammons Enterprises, Inc. v. Superior Court (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 1427, 1434, 253 Cal. Rptr. 261

Foreign corporation parent, which had granted exclusive master distribution rights to California subsidiary, was not subject to personal jurisdiction in California for allegedly conspiring in subsidiary's termination of plaintiff's distributorship when only forum-related activity, as opposed to relations of parent and subsidiary and on master distribution contract, were two electronic messages to subsidiary urging it not to eliminate wholesale distributors. J.M. Sahlein Music Co., Inc. v. Nippon Gakki Co., Ltd. (1987) 197 Cal. App. 3d 539, 543-545, 243 Cal. Rptr. 4

Unverified pleading provides sufficient factual basis for exercising jurisdiction over nonresident parties. Lundgren v. Superior Court (1980) 111 Cal. App. 3d 477, 485, 168 Cal. Rptr. 717

Requisites to court's acquisition of fundamental jurisdiction. Abelleira v. District Court of Appeal (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 280, 288, 109 P.2d 942 ; Harrington v. Superior Court (1924) 194 Cal. 185, 188-189, 228 P. 15

Jurisdiction under Code Civ. Proc. § 410.10, providing that California courts may assert personal jurisdiction over nonresidents who are served with process beyond California's borders on any basis consistent with United States or California Constitutions, jurisdiction is to be exerted with full power of state limited only by due process guarantees. University Financing Consultants, Inc. v. Barouche (1983) 148 Cal. App. 3d 1165, 1169, 196 Cal. Rptr. 484

Recognized bases of judicial jurisdiction. Quattrone v. Superior Court (1975) 44 Cal. App. 3d 296, 302-303, 118 Cal. Rptr. 548 ; Titus v. Superior Court (1972) 23 Cal. App. 3d 792, 799, 100 Cal. Rptr. 477

Out-of-state purchaser of services from California resident by way of contract negotiated through interstate communications was not subject to jurisdiction of California court in suit to enforce payment for services. Belmont Industries, Inc. v. Superior Court (1973) 31 Cal. App. 3d 281, 285, 107 Cal. Rptr. 237

[b] Class Actions

Because states place fewer burdens on absent class plaintiffs than they do on absent defendants in nonclass suits, due process clause does not afford absent class plaintiffs as much protection from state-court jurisdiction as it does absent defendants in nonclass suits. Phillips Petroleum Co. v. Shutts (1985) 472 U.S. 797, 811, 105 S. Ct. 2965, 86 L. Ed. 2d 628

Forum state may exercise jurisdiction over claim of an absent class-action plaintiff, even though that plaintiff may not possess the minimum contacts with forum which would support personal jurisdiction over a defendant; but forum state, if it wishes to bind absent plaintiff concerning claim for money damages or similar relief at law, must provide minimal procedural due process protection, that is, best practicable notice of action plus an opportunity to be heard or to opt out of class action. Phillips Petroleum Co. v. Shutts (1985) 472 U.S. 797, 811-812, 105 S. Ct. 2965, 86 L. Ed. 2d 628, 641-642

[c] Corporate Officers and Directors

In action for wrongful termination, contacts of nonresident officer and director of out-of-state parent corporation not sufficient under facts to give rise to either general or specific jurisdiction; regarding general jurisdiction, defendant unequivocally ceased defendant's activities as a director and officer of out-of-state corporation before service of process in action; when corporation ceases to do business in state there is no longer any general jurisdiction; regarding specific jurisdiction, there was no showing that defendant caused tort to be committed against plaintiff in California for which defendant would be personally liable. Serafini v. Superior Court (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 70, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 159

Corporate officers and directors as not ordinarily personally liable for acts or obligations of their corporation; however, liability as existing if they directly authorize or actively participate in wrongful or tortious conduct. Taylor-Rush v. Multitech Corp. (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 103, 113, 265 Cal. Rptr. 672

[d] General vs. Limited Jurisdiction

[i] General Jurisdiction

Constitutionally sufficient relationship to warrant jurisdiction for all causes of action asserted against nonresident defendant exists when nonresident's activities within state are extensive or wide-ranging, or substantial, continuous, and systematic. Pacific Atlantic Trading Co. v. M/V Main Exp. (9th Cir. 1985) 758 F.2d 1325, 1327 ; Cornelison v. Chaney (1976) 16 Cal. 3d 143, 147, 127 Cal. Rptr. 352, 545 P.2d 264 ; Magnecomp Corp. v. Athene Co. (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 526, 534, 257 Cal. Rptr. 278 ; Rollins Burdick Hunter of So. Cal., Inc. v. Alexander & Alexander Services, Inc. (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 1, 7, 253 Cal. Rptr. 338 ; Rice Growers Assn. v. First National Bank (1985) 167 Cal. App. 3d 559, 567, 214 Cal. Rptr. 468 ; University Financing Consultants, Inc. v. Barouche (1983) 148 Cal. App. 3d 1165, 1169, 196 Cal. Rptr. 484

Nonresident defendant may be subject to general jurisdiction of forum if his or her contacts in forum state are substantial, continuous and systematic; in such case, specific cause of action alleged need not be connected with defendant's business relationship to forum; such defendant's contacts with forum are so wide ranging that they take place of physical presence in forum as basis for jurisdiction. Vons Companies, Inc. v. Seabest Foods, Inc. (1996) 14 Cal. 4th 434, 445-446, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 899, 926 P.2d 1085

General jurisdiction arises if nonresident defendant has substantial, continuous, and systematic contacts in forum. Tri-West Ins. Services, Inc. v. Seguros Monterrey Aetna, S.A. (2000) 78 Cal. App. 4th 672, 677, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 78

Nonresident defendant may be subject to general jurisdiction of forum if his or her contacts in forum state are substantial, continuous and systematic; in such case, not necessary that specific cause of action alleged be connected with defendant's business relationship to forum. Jewish DefenseOrganization, Inc. v. Superior Court (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 1045, 1054, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 611

General jurisdiction in case of nonresident corporation viewed analogously to presence of natural person; nonresident corporation doing business of sufficiently substantial and continuous nature is treated as if it had physical presence in forum, placing it within jurisdiction of state as to causes of action independent from that business; when corporation ceases to do business in state, however, there is no longer any general jurisdiction, that is, jurisdiction as to causes of action independent of that business. Serafini v. Superior Court (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 70, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 159

California's long-arm statute permits California courts to exercise jurisdiction on any basis not inconsistent with federal or state constitution; under federal constitutional due process clause, court may assume jurisdiction over nonresident defendant if defendant has sufficient minimum contacts with forum state; court may assert jurisdiction over defendant if defendant's contacts with forum state are substantial, continuous and systematic. Goehring v. Superior Court (1998) 62 Cal. App. 4th 894, 904, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 105

When nonresident's contacts with forum are substantial, continuous, and systematic, court may assert general jurisdiction over person of the nonresident; such jurisdiction does not require connection between specific transaction at issue and forum state. Hall v. LaRonde (1997) 56 Cal. App. 4th 1342, 1345, 66 Cal. Rptr. 2d 399

State has general jurisdiction over nonresident for all causes of action asserted against that nonresident if his or her activities within state are (1) extensive or wide-ranging, or (2) substantial, continuous, and systematic; nonresidents contacts with California are insufficient to justify exercise of general jurisdiction over nonresident when nonresident's only contact with state is maintaining California law license. Crea v. Busby (1996) 48 Cal. App. 4th 509, 514-516, 55 Cal. Rptr. 2d 513

In action for personal injuries sustained by guest in hotel in Mexico brought against membership organization to which hotel belonged, evidence established continuous and purposeful transactions with California for purposes of general jurisdiction where defendant was authorized to do business in California with designated agent for service of process, maintained business office in California from which it solicited guests for affiliate members and advertised collectively for affiliate members in California. Hesse v. Best Western Internat., Inc. (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 404, 410, 38 Cal. Rptr. 2d 74

Foreign corporation's designation of agent for service of process alone is insufficient to warrant exercise of general jurisdiction over corporation. Gray Line Tours v. Reynolds Electrical & Engineering Co. (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 190, 193-195, 238 Cal. Rptr. 419

Foreign bank's maintenance of California bank account and its participation, in California, in international banking transactions conducted exclusively among banks was insufficient basis for exercise of general jurisdiction over it by California court. Thomas J. Palmer, Inc. v. Turkiye Is Bankasi A.S. (1980) 105 Cal. App. 3d 135, 145, 146-148, 164 Cal. Rptr. 181

In action for damages for personal injuries sustained by plaintiff injured by exploding bottle in Arizona, California court had no jurisdiction over defendant liquor store in Arizona, which did no business in California, because when injury occurs outside forum, jurisdiction over nonresidents is proper only when substantial activity by nonresident exists within forum. Spirits, Inc. v. Superior Court (1980) 104 Cal. App. 3d 918, 924-926, 164 Cal. Rptr. 101

[ii] Limited Jurisdiction

When contacts that create substantial connection with forum state proximately result from defendant's own actions, as opposed to those of third party, jurisdiction is proper. Asahi Metal Industry Co. v. Superior Court (1987) 480 U.S. 102, 109, 107 S. Ct. 1026, 94 L. Ed. 2d 92 ; Burger King Corp. v. Rudzewicz (1985) 471 U.S. 462, 475, 105 S. Ct. 2174, 85 L. Ed. 2d 528

When nonresident defendant's activities in forum are not so pervasive as to justify exercise of general jurisdiction over him or her, jurisdiction depends on quality and nature of his or her activity in forum in relation to particular cause of action; in such situation, cause of action must arise out of act done or transaction consummated in forum, or defendant must perform some other act by which he or she purposefully avails him or herself of privilege of conducting activities in forum thereby invoking benefits and protections of its laws. Burger King Corp. v. Rudzewicz (1985) 471 U.S. 462, 474-475, 105 S. Ct. 2174, 85 L. Ed. 2d 528 ; Kulko v. California Superior Court (1978) 436 U.S. 84, 93-94, 98 S. Ct. 1690, 56 L. Ed. 2d 132 , reh'g denied, 438 U.S. 908 ; Hanson v. Denckla (1958) 357 U.S. 235, 251, 78 S. Ct. 1228, 2 L. Ed. 2d 1283 ; Sinatra v. National Enquirer, Inc. (9th Cir. 1988) 854 F.2d 1191, 1195 ; Cornelison v. Chaney

(1976) 16 Cal. 3d 143, 147-148, 127 Cal. Rptr. 352, 545 P.2d 264 ; Buckeye Boiler Co. v. Superior Court (1969) 71 Cal. 2d 893, 898, 80 Cal. Rptr. 113, 458 P.2d 57 ; Wolfe v. City of Alexandria (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 541, 547, 265 Cal. Rptr. 881 ; Taylor-Rush v. Multitech Corp. (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 103, 112, 265 Cal. Rptr. 672 ; Magnecomp Corp. v. Athene Co. (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 526, 531, 534-539, 257 Cal. Rptr. 278

Unilateral activity of those who claim some relationship with a nonresident defendant cannot satisfy requirement of contact with forum state. Burger King Corp. v. Rudzewicz (1985) 471 U.S. 462, 474-475, 105 S. Ct. 2174, 85 L. Ed. 2d 528 ; Kulko v. California Superior Court (1978) 436 U.S. 84, 93-94, 98 S. Ct. 1690, 56 L. Ed. 2d 132 , reh'g denied, 438 U.S. 908 ; Hanson v. Denckla (1958) 357 U.S. 235, 251, 253, 78 S. Ct. 1228, 2 L. Ed. 2d 1283 ; Circus Circus Hotels, Inc. v. Superior Court (1981) 120 Cal. App. 3d 546, 562, 568, 174 Cal. Rptr. 885 , disapproved to extent inconsistent with Vons Cos., Inc. v. Seabest Foods, Inc. (1996) 14 Cal.4th 434, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 899

In determining whether particular exercise of state-court jurisdiction is consistent with due process, inquiry must focus on relationship among defendant, forum, and litigation. Keeton v. Hustler Magazine, Inc. (1984) 465 U.S. 770, 775, 104 S. Ct. 1473, 79 L. Ed. 2d 790 ; Rush v. Savchuk (1980) 444 U.S. 320, 327, 100 S. Ct. 571, 62 L. Ed. 2d 516 ; Secrest MachineCorp. v. Superior Court (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 664, 668, 190 Cal. Rptr. 175, 660 P.2d 399 ; Great-West Life Assurance Co. v. Guarantee Co. of North America (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 199, 205, 252 Cal. Rptr. 363

Personal jurisdiction over Swedish corporation and Swedish individuals did not comport with fair play and substantial justice when defendants lacked connections to United States and whose purposeful interjection into California was very limited. Core-Vent Corp. v. Nobel Industries AB (9th Cir. 1993) 11 F.3d 1482, 1490

"Purposeful availment" requirement is satisfied when defendant takes deliberate actions within forum state or creates continuing obligations to forum residents, or has purposefully directed his or her efforts or acts toward forum residents. Hirsch v. Blue Cross, Blue Shield of Kansas City (9th Cir. 1986) 800 F.2d 1474, 1478

If nonresident defendant's activities in forum are not sufficiently pervasive to support general jurisdiction, nature and quality of forum-related activities must be evaluated in relation to specific cause of action sued on to determine whether court can exercise limited in personam jurisdiction over nonresident defendant. Pacific Atlantic Trading Co. v. M/V Main Exp. (9th Cir. 1985) 758 F.2d 1325, 1327

To determine specific jurisdiction in context of ongoing franchise relationships, "proximate cause" test rejected as too narrow, "but for" test rejected as too broad and amorphous, and "substantive relevance" test rejected as inapplicable; reasoning of Sklar v. Princess Properties International, Ltd. (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 1202, 240 Cal. Rptr. 102 , and Circus Circus Hotels, Inc. v. Superior Court (1981) 120 Cal. App. 3d 546, 174 Cal. Rptr. 885 , applying "proximate cause" test, rejected as inconcistent with rational underlying specific jurisdiction in context of ongoing franchise relationship; reasoning of State of Oregon v. Superior Court (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 1550, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 909 , and Dialysis at Sea, Inc. v. Superior Court (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 788, 265 Cal. Rptr. 71 , applying "but see" test, similarly disapproved. Vons Companies, Inc. v. Seabest Foods, Inc. (1996) 14 Cal. 4th 434, 464, 465 n.8, 475, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 899, 926 P.2d 1085

Nonresident defendant may be subject to specific jurisdiction of forum if defendant has purposefully availed himself or herself of forum benefits and controversy is related to or arises out of defendant's contacts with forum; forum contacts necessary to establish specific jurisdiction include nonresident who has purposely directed activities at forum residents, purposefully derived benefit from forum activities, or purposefully availed himself or herself of privilege of conducting activities in forum state, thus invoking benefits and protections of its laws; requisite forum contacts also include nonresident defendant who deliberately has engaged in significant activities within state, or created continuing obligations between himself or herself and residents of forum; it is fair to subject defendants to specific jurisdiction because their forum activities should put them on notice that they will be subject to litigation in that forum; once it is decided defendant purposefully established minimum contacts in forum state, these contacts may be considered in light of other factors to determine if assertion of personal jurisdiction would comport with fair play and substantial justice; courts may evaluate burden on defendant in appearing in forum, forum state's interest in adjudicating claim, plaintiff's interest in convenience and effective relief within forum, judicial economy, and shared interest of several states in furthering fundamental substantive social policies. Vons Companies, Inc. v. Seabest Foods, Inc. (1996) 14 Cal. 4th 434, 446-448, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 899, 926 P.2d 1085

In cases where jurisdiction is based on defendant's occasional activities, some act is essential by which defendant purposefully avails itself of privilege of conducting activities within forum state, thus invoking benefits and protections of its laws. Secrest Machine Corp. v. Superior Court (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 664, 669, 190 Cal. Rptr. 175, 660 P.2d 399

As relationship of defendant with state seeking to exercise personal jurisdiction grows more tenuous, scope of jurisdiction also retracts, and fairness is assured by limiting circumstances under which plaintiff can compel defendant to appear and defend; crucial inquiry concerns character of defendant's activity in forum, whether cause of action arises out of or has a substantial connection with that activity, and balancing of convenience of parties and interests of state in assuming jurisdiction. Cornelison v. Chaney (1976) 16 Cal. 3d 143, 148, 127 Cal. Rptr. 352, 545 P.2d 264 ; Magnecomp Corp. v. Athene Co. (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 526, 534, 257 Cal. Rptr. 278 ; Brown v. Watson (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 1306, 1312-1313, 255 Cal. Rptr. 507

Unless defendant's forum-related activity reaches such extensive or wide-ranging proportions as to make defendant sufficiently "present" in forum state to support jurisdiction over it concerning causes of action which are unrelated to that activity, particular cause of action must arise out of or be connected with defendant's forum-related activity. Buckeye Boiler Co. v. Superior Court (1969) 71 Cal. 2d 893, 898-899, 80 Cal. Rptr. 113, 458 P.2d 57

In action alleging child molestation by a priest, the California court did not have specific personal jurisdiction over defendant, an archdiocese located in Ireland. Substantial evidence showed that defendant did no more than accept tuition money and related expenses from a California diocese for the priest's seminary training, much the same as any other school that is a passive recipient of a student's tuition from a nonprofit scholarship fund. There was also substantial evidence to support findings that the priest was not an agent or employee of defendant, that defendant did not know the priest had a propensity to molest children, and that it did not assign or send him to the California diocese. The priest's alleged acts of molestation were very much attenuated from defendant's extremely limited contacts with California. Doe v. Roman Catholic Archbishop of Cashel & Emly (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 209, 99 Cal. Rptr. 3d 158

Where a California resident initiates a phone call to a telemarketing corporation to buy a product, and the telemarketer who handles the order then initiates a sale of a separate product (referred to as an "upsell"), the telemarketing corporation purposefully availed itself of the privilege of conducting business in California, such that minimum contacts existed for the assertion of specific jurisdiction. West Corp. v. Superior Court (2004) 116 Cal. App. 4th 1167, 1177-1180, 11 Cal. Rptr. 3d 145

A nonresident defendant who has not had substantial, continuous, and systematic contacts in forum may be subject to specific jurisdiction of forum if defendant has purposefully availed himself or herself of forum benefits and controversy is related to or arises out of defendant's contacts with forum; specific jurisdiction arises when nonresident defendant has purposefully directed his or her activities at forum residents, or has purposefully derived benefits from forum activities, or has purposefully availed himself or herself of privilege of conducting activities within forum, or has deliberately engaged in significant activities with a state or has created continuing obligations between himself or herself and residents of the forum; in such cases defendant has availed himself or herself of privilege of conducting business in forum, and because defendant's activities are shielded by benefits and protections of forum's laws it is presumptively not unreasonable to require defendant to submit to burdens of litigation in that forum. Tri-West Ins. Services, Inc. v. Seguros Monterrey Aetna, S.A. (2000) 78 Cal. App. 4th 672, 677, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 78

If nonresident defendant does not have substantial and systematic contacts in forum sufficient to establish general jurisdiction, defendant still may be subject to specific jurisdiction of forum, if defendant has purposefully availed himself or herself of forum benefits, and controversy is related to or arises out of defendant's contacts with forum; purposeful availment requires that defendant have performed affirmative conduct that allows or promotes transaction of business within forum state; contract with out-of-state party does not automatically establish purposeful availment in other party's home forum; court must evaluate contract terms and circumstances to determine whether defendant purposefully established minimum contacts with forum; relevant factors include prior negotiations, contemplated future consequences, parties' course of dealings, and contract's choice of law provision; with respect to interstate contractual obligations, parties who reach out beyond one state and create continuing relationships and obligations with citizens of another state are subject to sanctions in other state for consequences of their activities; due process requires substantial connection between contract at issue and forum state. Stone v. State of Texas (1999) 76 Cal. App. 4th 1043, 1047-1048, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 657

If nonresident defendant does not have substantial and systematic contacts in forum sufficient to establish general jurisdiction, defendant may still be subject to forum's specific jurisdiction if defendant purposefully availed himself or herself of forum benefits and controversy is related to or arises out of defendant's contacts with forum; in analyzing exercise of specific jurisdiction, once it is decided that defendant purposefully established minimum contacts with forum state, these contacts may be considered in light of other factors to determine if assertion of personal jurisdiction comports with fair play and substantial justice; courts may evaluate burden of defendant appearing in forum, forum state's interest in adjudicating claim, plaintiff's interest in convenient and effective relief within forum, judicial economy, and shared interest of several states in furthering fundamental substantive social policies; thus, specific jurisdiction determined under three-part test: (1) nonresident defendant must do some act or consummate some transaction with forum or perform some act by which he or she purposefully avails himself or herself of privilege of conducting activities in forum, thereby invoking benefits and protections of its laws; (2) claim must be one that arises out of or results from defendant's forum related activities; and (3) exercise of jurisdiction must be reasonable; in tort cases, purposeful availment requirement can be satisfied by effects test set out in Calder v. Jones (1984) 465 U.S. 783, 104 S. Ct. 1482, 79 L. Ed. 2d 804 , under which personal jurisdiction can be based on (1) intentional actions, (2) expressly aimed at forum state (3) causing harm, the brunt of which is suffered, and which defendant knows is likely to be suffered, in forum state. Jewish Defense Organization, Inc. v. Superior Court (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 1045, 1054, 1057, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 611

With regard to specific jurisdiction, despite not being present in state, natural person who commits tort while acting on corporation's behalf subject to state's jurisdiction when delict intended to inflict tortious harm within state; natural person may also be subject to jurisdiction if delict could reasonably be expected to inflict tortious harm within state; rule inapplicable under facts. Serafini v. Superior Court (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 70, 81, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 159

Although nonresident defendant corporation's contacts with California do not appear to be so continuous and systematic as to establish California's general jurisdiction over any cause of action against defendant, regardless of its relationship with forum, inquiry does not end; even if nonresident defendant had severed any California connection long before suit, it still may be subject to state's specific jurisdiction if it has (1) purposefully derived benefits from California activities, and (2) the subject lawsuit is related to or arises out of California contacts. Cassiar Mining Corp. v. Superior Court (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 550, 555, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 167

When general jurisdiction over defendant cannot be established, court may assume specific jurisdiction over defendant in particular case if plaintiff shows (1) defendant has purposefully availed himself or herself of forum benefits, (2) the controversy is related to or arises out of defendant's contacts with forum, and (3) assertion of jurisdiction would comport with fair play and substantial justice. Goehring v. Superior Court (1998) 62 Cal. App. 4th 894, 904, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 105

Specific jurisdiction may be asserted when defendant has purposefully availed himself or herself of forum benefits and controversy is related to or arises out of defendant's contacts with forum; sufficient minimum contacts for specific jurisdiction exist when nonresident deliberately has engaged in significant activities within state, or has created continuing obligations between himself or herself and residents of forum. Hall v. LaRonde (1997) 56 Cal. App. 4th 1342, 1346, 66 Cal. Rptr. 2d 399

For limited jurisdiction, crucial inquiry concerns character of defendant's activity in forum, whether cause of action arises out of or has substantial connection with that activity, and on balancing convenience of parties and state's interest in assuming jurisdiction; court must focus on nature and quality of the activity in forum state, not quantity; court must look to see if defendant purposefully availed itself of benefits and protections of California law to make it reasonably foreseeable to be haled into court in forum state to defend itself in action relating to its product; when manufacturer makes direct effort to serve market for its products in forum state, requisite level of foreseeability is met; enterprise obtains benefits and protection of California laws if as matter of commercial reality it has engaged in economic activity within state. As You Sow v. Crawford Laboratories, Inc. (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 1859, 1869-1871, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 654

When nonresident's activities are not substantial enough for state to exercise general jurisdiction over him or her, state may nevertheless exercise limited jurisdiction over nonresident if (1) quality and nature of nonresident's activities are such that cause of action arises out of act or transaction completed in state, (2) quality and nature of nonresident's activities indicate that he or she purposefully availed himself or herself of privileges of conducting activities in state, or (3) state has passed special legislation on subject matter at issue that supports exercise of jurisdiction over nonresident; nonresident's activities within California are insufficient for state to exercise limited jurisdiction over nonresident when nonresident's only contact with state is maintaining California law license. Crea v. Busby (1996) 48 Cal. App.4th 509, 514-516, 55 Cal. Rptr. 2d 513 Foreseeability of causing injury in another state is not sufficient benchmark for exercising personal jurisdiction; California does not recognize conspiracy as basis for acquiring personal jurisdiction over party. Mansour v. Superior Court (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 1750, 1759-1761, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 191 ; but see Taylor-Rush v. Multitech Corp. (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 103, 114, 265 Cal. Rptr. 672 (dictum that acts of coconspirator within California may give rise to jurisdiction over coconspirator in another state)

California superior court may exercise limited personal jurisdiction over Japanese corporation for misappropriation of trade secrets where uncontroverted evidence established that person alleged to have stolen trade secrets from plaintiff was agent of Japanese corporation, which engaged in no business or other activities knowingly or purposefully directed toward United States, because corporations can operate only through their appointed agents and jurisdiction can be based on agents' activities within forum state. Magnecomp Corp. v. Athene Co. (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 526, 531, 535, 538-539, 257 Cal. Rptr. 278

When jurisdiction over individual is based solely on act or omission committed out of state but having effect within state, only claim for relief arising from such act or omission may be asserted against individual. Rollins Burdick Hunter of So. Cal., Inc. v. Alexander & Alexander Services, Inc. (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 1, 8-9, 253 Cal. Rptr. 338

Due process clause requires that individuals have fair warning that particular activity may subject them to jurisdiction of foreign sovereign; when forum seeks to assert specific jurisdiction over out of state defendant who has not consented to suit there, fair warning requirement is satisfied if defendant has purposefully directed its activities at residents of forum, and litigation results from alleged injuries that arise out of or relate to those activities. Sammons Enterprises, Inc. v. Superior Court (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 1427, 1435, 253 Cal. Rptr. 261 California court had in personam jurisdiction over nonresident defendant in action for wrongful seizure of funds from resident judgment debtor's bank account when nonresident utilized California statutory collection procedures to enforce out-of-state federal court judgment against judgment debtor; even at common law, jurisdiction was proper if nonresident initiated judicial action in California directly relating to first action. Professional Travel, Inc. v. Kalish & Rice, Inc. (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 762, 765-767, 245 Cal. Rptr. 159

In action for breach of consulting contract brought by California corporation against Nevada resident, California had jurisdiction over defendant when defendant came to California to negotiate contract, contract provided that its terms were to be governed by California law, defendant made monthly trips to California to consult with company, and five percent of defendant's activities under contract were directed at California. Safe-Lab, Inc. v. Weinberger (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 1050, 1053, 238 Cal. Rptr. 712

California had neither general nor limited jurisdiction over Texas corporation with principal place of business in Nevada when corporation's activities in California were extremely limited, cause of action arose in Nevada, and cause of action was unrelated to corporation's contacts with California. Gray Line Tours v. Reynolds Electrical & Engineering Co. (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 190, 192-193, 238 Cal. Rptr. 419

Personal jurisdiction attaches when cause of action arises out of breach of contract made and to be performed in California. Kroopf v. Guffey (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 1351, 1358, 228 Cal. Rptr. 807 ; Neadeau v. Foster (1982) 129 Cal. App. 3d 234, 240, 180 Cal. Rptr. 806

Defendant who engages in economic activity within state as matter of "commercial actuality" obtains benefits and protections of forum, and defendant conducts economic activity within state as matter of "commercial actuality" whenever purchase or use of its product within state generates income for defendant and is not so fortuitous or unforeseeable as to negative existence of intent on its part to bring about this result. Rice Growers Assn. v. First National Bank (1985) 167 Cal. App. 3d 559, 567, 214 Cal. Rptr. 468

In order for California to exercise limited jurisdiction over nonresident, due process requires that nonresident have certain minimum contacts with state such that maintenance of suit does not offend traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice; some cases view minimum contacts requirement as distinct from fairness requirement; other cases imply that two requirements are incorporated, such that defendant's contacts with state are said to be minimum if it is fair to assert jurisdiction under circumstances; regardless of which construction court uses, imposition of jurisdiction must be constitutionally reasonable. University Financing Consultants, Inc. v. Barouche (1983) 148 Cal. App. 3d 1165, 1169, 196 Cal. Rptr. 484

Purchase of stock in California medical corporation by nonresident physician who was licensed to practice in California provided basis for in personam jurisdiction over physician in action against him for damages for breach of contract to purchase corporation. Bresler v. Stavros (1983) 141 Cal. App. 3d 365, 369-372, 189 Cal. Rptr. 58

To create basis for assertion of limited personal jurisdiction over nonresident, nonresident's forum-related contact must have put in motion events that ultimately gave rise to cause of action. E.I.C., Inc. v. Bank of Virginia (1980) 108 Cal. App. 3d 148, 154, 166 Cal. Rptr. 317

Creation of agency relationship by Missouri corporations, which were not qualified to do business in California and had no property here, with California investment corporation involved in nationwide marketing efforts to find investors for its clients, by sales agency agreement pursuant to which California corporation was to find purchasers for Missouri property, were insufficient contacts for California court to exercise jurisdiction over Missouri corporations in action by California corporation against them involving the sales agency agreement. R.E. Sanders & Co. v. Lincoln-Richardson Enterprises, Inc. (1980) 108 Cal. App. 3d 71, 77-80, 166 Cal. Rptr. 269

[e] Jurisdiction to Determine Personal Jurisdiction

Trial court has jurisdiction to make initial determination as to its own in personam jurisdiction or lack of it when challenged by "specially appearing" defendant; jurisdiction to determine personal jurisdiction is distinct from trial court's general jurisdiction to make binding determination against defendant relating to merits of action. Ziller Electronics Lab GmbH v. Superior Court (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 1222, 1228, 254 Cal. Rptr. 410

[f] Stockholders of Defendant Foreign Corporation

When foreign corporation is alter ego of its stockholders so as to justify disregard of corporate entity, jurisdiction over corporation supports jurisdiction over its stockholders. Sheard v. Superior Court (1974) 40 Cal. App.3d 207, 210-212, 114 Cal. Rptr. 743

[g] Voluntary Intrusion Into Lawsuit

Corporation, by voluntarily intruding into lawsuit in which it was not named a party, thereby consents to court's jurisdiction over its corporate being and is bound by adjudications made in case. California Concrete Co. v. Beverly Hills Savings & Loan Assn. (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 260, 267-268, 261 Cal. Rptr. 484

[7] Lack of Jurisdiction

Term "lack of jurisdiction" in its fundamental sense as meaning entire absence of power to hear or determine case, an absence of authority over subject matter or parties. Abelleira v. District Court of Appeal (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 280, 288, 109 P.2d 942

"Lack of jurisdiction" can take different forms and have different consequences; lack of jurisdiction in most fundamental or strict sense means an entire absence of power to hear or determine case, absence of authority over subject matter or parties; but in ordinary usage phrase "lack of jurisdiction" is also applied to case where, though court has jurisdiction over subject matter and parties in fundamental sense, it has no jurisdiction or power to act except in particular manner, or to give certain kinds of relief, or to act without occurrence of certain procedural prerequisites; distinction between lack of jurisdiction over cause and act in excess of jurisdiction has significant consequences; for instance, court cannot acquire subject matter jurisdiction through consent, estoppel or waiver; by contrast, when court has jurisdiction of subject, party who seeks or consents to act beyond court's power as defined by statute or decisional rule may be estopped to complain of ensuing action in excess of jurisdiction. People v. National Automobile & Casualty Ins. Co. (2000) 82 Cal. App. 4th 120, 125-126, 97 Cal. Rptr. 2d 858

Judgment of court lacking personal jurisdiction is violation of due process, and is null and void everywhere, including state in which it is rendered. Yu v. Signet Bank/Virginia (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 1377, 1385, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 304

Lack of jurisdiction in most fundamental or strict sense means entire absence of power to hear or determine case, an absence of authority over subject matter or parties; however, ordinary usage of phrase "lack of jurisdiction" is not limited to fundamental situation; for purpose of determining right to dismiss action, much broader meaning is recognized; it may be applied to case where, though court has jurisdiction over subject matter and parties in the fundamental sense, court has no jurisdiction or power to act except in a particular manner, or to give certain kinds of relief. Dale v. Dale (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 1172, 1178, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 513

"Lack of jurisdiction" describes situations in which court is without authority to act; in most fundamental sense, lack of jurisdiction means entire absence of power to hear particular subject matter of case; term also relates to court's inability to render judgments against individuals who have not properly been made parties to action; even when court has jurisdiction over subject matter and parties in fundamental sense, it may have no jurisdiction or power to make orders not authorized by statute. Janzen v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1997) 61 Cal. App. 4th 109, 113, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 260

Judgment of court lacking jurisdiction over subject matter or over parties as void. County of Ventura v. Tillett (1982) 133 Cal. App. 3d 105, 110, 183 Cal. Rptr. 741 , cert. denied, 460 U.S. 1051 (1983) (disapproved on another point in

County of Los Angeles v. Soto (1984) 35 Cal. 3d 483, 492 n.4, 198 Cal. Rptr. 779, 674 P.2d 750); see also Kulko v. California Superior Court (1978) 436 U.S. 84, 91, 98 S. Ct. 1690, 56 L. Ed. 2d 132 ; Hanson v. Denckla (1958) 357 U.S. 235, 250, 78 S. Ct. 1228, 2 L. Ed. 2d 1283

In unusual instance in which court that originally had territorial jurisdiction to hear action loses jurisdiction during pendency of case because territory is transferred from boundaries of California to a neighboring state, court as unable to continue hearing matter in absence of legislation specially saving such jurisdiction. River Farms, Inc. v. Superior Court (1967) 252 Cal. App. 2d 604, 607-609, 60 Cal. Rptr. 665

[8] Minimum Contacts Requirement

[a] Due Process

Due process clause of Fourteenth Amendment protects individual's liberty interest in not being subject to binding judgments of forum with which he or she has established no meaningful contacts, ties, or relations; by requiring that individuals have fair warning that particular activity may subject them to jurisdiction of foreign sovereign, due process clause gives degree of predictability to legal system that allows potential defendants to structure their primary conduct with some minimum assurance as to where that conduct will and will not render them liable to suit; when forum seeks to assert specific jurisdiction over out-of-state defendant who has not consented to suit there, this "fair warning" requirement is satisfied if defendant has purposefully directed his or her activities at residents of forum and litigation results from alleged injuries that arise out of or relate to those activities. Burger King Corp. v. Rudzewicz (1985) 471 U.S. 462, 471-472, 105 S. Ct. 2174, 85 L. Ed. 2d 528

Individual's contract with out-of-state party alone does not automatically establish sufficient minimum contacts in other party's home forum for purpose of assertion of in personam jurisdiction; prior negotiations and contemplated future consequences, along with terms of contract and parties' actual course of dealing must be evaluated in determining whether defendant purposefully established minimum contacts within forum. Burger King Corp. v. Rudzewicz (1985) 471 U.S. 462, 478-479, 105 S. Ct. 2174, 85 L. Ed. 2d 528

Unilateral activity of those who claim some relationship with nonresident defendant does not satisfy requirement of contact with forum state; although application of that rule will vary with quality and nature of defendant's activity, some act by which defendant purposefully availed itself of privilege of conducting activities within forum state, thus invoking benefits and protections of its laws, is required. Helicopteros Nacionales de Colombia v. Hall (1984) 466 U.S. 408, 417, 104 S. Ct. 1868, 80 L. Ed. 2d 404 ; Kulko v. California Superior Court (1978) 436 U.S. 84, 93-94, 98 S. Ct. 1690, 56 L. Ed. 2d 132 , reh'g denied, 438 U.S. 908, 98 S. Ct. 3127, 57 L. Ed. 2d 1150 (1978) ; Hanson v. Denckla (1958) 357 U.S. 235, 253, 78 S. Ct. 1228, 2 L. Ed. 2d 1283 ; Hirsch v. Blue Cross, Blue Shield of Kansas City (9th Cir. 1986) 800 F.2d 1474, 1478 ; J.M. Sahlein Music Co., Inc. v. Nippon Gakki Co., Ltd. (1987) 197 Cal. App. 3d 539, 544-545, 243 Cal. Rptr. 4

In judging minimum contacts, court properly focuses on relationship among defendant, forum, and litigation. Calder v. Jones (1984) 465 U.S. 783, 788, 104 S. Ct. 1482, 79 L. Ed. 2d 804 , aff'g Jones v. Calder (1982) 138 Cal. App. 3d 128, 187 Cal. Rptr. 825 ; Keeton v. Hustler Magazine, Inc. (1984) 465 U.S. 770, 775, 104 S. Ct. 1473, 79 L. Ed. 2d 790 ; Secrest Machine Corp. v. Superior Court (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 664, 668, 190 Cal. Rptr. 175, 660 P.2d 399

Because plaintiff is not required to have minimum contacts with forum state in order for state to assert personal jurisdiction over nonresident defendant, nonresident plaintiff's lack of contacts with forum state does not defeat jurisdiction otherwise proper under both law of forum and due process clause. Keeton v. Hustler Magazine, Inc. (1984) 465 U.S. 770, 775, 779-780, 104 S. Ct. 1473, 79 L. Ed. 2d 790

In federal court action by nonresident plaintiff against nonresident magazine corporation for damages for libel contained in five issues of defendant's magazines, thousands of copies of which were sold regularly on monthly basis in forum state, court, in judging minimum contacts, properly focused on relationship among defendant, forum, and litigation; relevant to jurisdictional inquiry in libel action applying "single publication" rule is fact that plaintiff is seeking to recover damages suffered in all states in the one suit and contacts between defendant and forum must be judged in light of that claim, rather than a claim for only damages sustained in forum state; that is, contacts between defendant and forum state must be such that it is "fair" to compel defendant to defend multistate lawsuit in forum state seeking nationwide damages for all copies of five issues in question, even though only small portion of those copies were distributed in forum state. Keeton v. Hustler Magazine, Inc. (1984) 465 U.S. 770, 775, 104 S. Ct. 1473, 79 L. Ed. 2d 790

Requirement of minimum contacts protects defendant against burdens of litigation in distant or inconvenient forum and insures that states do not exceed limits of coequal sovereigns in federal system. World-Wi de Volkswagen Corp. v. Woodson (1980) 444 U.S. 286, 291-292, 100 S. Ct. 559, 62 L. Ed. 2d 490

"Minimum contacts" requires some act by which defendant purposefully avails himself or herself of privilege of conducting activities within forum state, thus invoking benefits and protections of state laws. Hanson v. Denckla (1958) 357 U.S. 235, 253, 78 S. Ct. 1228, 2 L. Ed. 2d 1283 ; Sibley v. Superior Court (1976) 16 Cal. 3d 442, 446-447, 128 Cal. Rptr. 34, 546 P.2d 322 ; Buckeye Boiler Co. v. Superior Court (1969) 71 Cal. 2d 893, 898, 80 Cal. Rptr. 113, 458 P.2d 57 ; In re Marriage of Lontos (1979) 89 Cal. App. 3d 61, 67, 152 Cal. Rptr. 271

However minimal burden of defending in foreign tribunal might be, defendant is not required to do so unless he or she has had the minimal contacts with that state that are a prerequisite to its exercise of power over him. Hanson v. Denckla (1958) 357 U.S. 235, 251, 78 S. Ct. 1228, 2 L. Ed. 2d 1283 ; In re Marriage of Martin (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 1426, 1438, 255 Cal. Rptr. 720

Trend since Pennoyer v. Neff (1878) 95 U.S. 714, 733, 24 L. Ed. 565 , has been toward expanding permissible scope of state jurisdiction over foreign corporations and other nonresidents. McGee v. International Life Ins. Co. (1957) 355 U.S. 220, 226, 78 S. Ct. 199, 2 L. Ed. 2d 223 ; but see World-Wide Volkswagen Corp. v. Woodson (1980) 444 U.S. 286, 295-298, 100 S. Ct. 559, 62 L. Ed. 2d 490 (limiting foreseeability of litigation in forum state as criterion for establishing minimum contacts)

Due process requires that in order to subject defendant to judgment in personam, defendant who is not present within territory of forum state must have certain minimum contacts with forum state such that maintenance of suit does not offend traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice. International Shoe Co. v. Washington (1945) 326 U.S. 310, 316, 66 S. Ct. 154, 90 L. Ed. 95 (leading case); see also Asahi Metal Industry Co. v. Superior Court (1987) 480 U.S. 102, 105, 107 S. Ct. 1026, 94 L. Ed. 2d 92 ; Burger King Corp. v. Rudzewicz (1985) 471 U.S. 462, 476, 105 S. Ct. 2174, 85 L. Ed. 2d 528 ; Sinatra v. National Enquirer, Inc. (9th Cir. 1988) 854 F. 2d 1191, 1194 ; Secrest Machine Corp. v. Superior Court (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 664, 668, 190 Cal. Rptr. 175, 660 P.2d 399 ; Checker Motors Corp. v. Superior Court (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 1007, 1015, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 618 ; County of Humboldt v. Harris (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 857, 860, 254 Cal. Rptr. 49

Under Code Civ. Proc. § 410.10, California state court may exercise jurisdiction on any basis not inconsistent with California or United States Constitution; assertion of personal jurisdiction over nonresident defendant not served with process within state comports with requirements of due process clause of federal constitution if defendant has such minimum contacts with state that assertion of jurisdiction does not violate traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice. Tri-West Ins. Services, Inc. v. Seguros Monterrey Aetna, S.A. (2000) 78 Cal. App. 4th 672, 676-677, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 78

Under federal Constitution's due process clause, court may assume jurisdiction over nonresident if he or she has constitutionally sufficient minimum contacts with forum state; defendant's conduct and connection with forum state must be such that defendant should reasonably anticipate being haled into court there. Stone v. State of Texas (1999) 76 Cal. App. 4th 1043, 1047, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 657

State's assertion of personal jurisdiction over nonresident defendant not served with process within state comports with due process requirements of federal constitution if defendant had such minimum contacts with state that assertion of jurisdiction does not violate traditional notions of fair play and substantial justices. Jewish Defense Organization, Inc. v. Superior Court (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 1045, 1054, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 611

As matter of due process, personal jurisdiction over defendant who is outside forum requires that he or she have certain minimum contacts with it such that maintenance of suit does not offend traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice; must appear that defendant purposefully directed his or her activities at residents of forum such that he or she should reasonably anticipate being haled into court there; with respect to interstate contracts, parties who reach out beyond one state and create continuing relationships and obligations with citizens of another state are subject to latter state's jurisdiction; however, contract with out-of-state party does not alone automatically confer jurisdiction on other party's home forum; fortuitous, or attenuated contacts with forum are insufficient, and jurisdictional rules may not be employed in such a way to make litigation so gravely difficult and inconvenient that party unfairly is at severe disadvantage in comparison to opponent; jurisdiction may not be grounded on contract whose application would render litigation so gravely difficult and inconvenient that party will for all practical purposes be deprived of his or her day in court; jurisdictional rules may not be employed against small consumers to cripple their defense. Yu v. Signet Bank/Virginia (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 1377, 1386-1388, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 304

California's long-arm statute is intended to provide broadest possible jurisdiction subject only to federal constitutional limitations; nonresident defendant corporation has liberty interest in not being subjected to jurisdiction of California courts if its connection with state falls below minimum contacts threshold, or if so doing will violate traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice. Cassiar Mining Corp. v. Superior Court (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 550, 554, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 167

California's long-arm statute permits California courts to exercise jurisdiction on any basis not inconsistent with federal or state constitution; under federal constitutional due process clause, court may assume jurisdiction over nonresident defendant if defendant has constitutionally sufficient minimum contacts with forum state. Goehring v. Superior Court (1998) 62 Cal. App. 4th 894, 904, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 105

Speed and ease of electronic communications have increased number of transactions that are consummated without either party leaving the office; use of electronic mail and telephone by party in another state may establish sufficient minimum contacts with California to support personal jurisdiction. Hall v. LaRonde (1997) 56 Cal. App. 4th 1342, 1344, 1347, 66 Cal. Rptr. 2d 399

Only federal limitation on California's long-arm jurisdiction under Code Civ. Proc. § 410.10 is whether party has "minimum contacts" with state so that prosecuting suit locally does not offend traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice; application of this standard requires that there be some act by which nonresident purposefully avails himself or herself of privilege of conducting activities within forum state; further, quality and nature of defendant's contacts with forum state must on balance be such that it is reasonable and fair to hale him or her before foreign court; fairness question necessitates balancing burden or inconvenience to defendant against state's interest in resolving dispute. In re Marriage of Aron (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 1086, 1094-1095, 274 Cal. Rptr. 357

Code Civ. Proc. § 410.10, California's long-arm statute, manifests intent to exercise broadest possible jurisdiction, limited only by constitutional considerations; state is constitutionally permitted to exercise personal jurisdiction over nonresident as long as he or she has "minimum contacts" with that forum such that maintenance of the suit does not offend traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice. Taylor-Rush v. Multitech Corp. (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d

103, 112, 265 Cal. Rptr. 672 ; see also Wolfe v. City of Alexandria (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 541, 545, 265 Cal. Rptr. 881

Because corporations by their nature can only operate through their appointed agents, courts consistently exercises personal jurisdiction over corporations based on their agents' activities within forum state. Magnecomp Corp. v. Athene Co. (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 526, 535, 257 Cal. Rptr. 278

"Minimum contacts" analysis required by Code Civ. Proc. § 410.10 does not apply to establish personal jurisdiction over nonresident in action to partition his military retirement benefits when federal law established more restrictive jurisdictional standard. In re Marriage of Hattis (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 1162, 1167, 1170, 242 Cal. Rptr. 410

Under California's long-arm statute (Code Civ. Proc. § 410.10), California court may exercise jurisdiction over nonresident defendant on any basis not inconsistent with United States or California Constitutions; court as permitted to exercise personal jurisdiction over nonresident defendant as long as defendant has such minimum contacts with forum that maintenance of suit does not offend traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice. Rice Growers Assn. v. First National Bank (1985) 167 Cal. App. 3d 559, 567, 214 Cal. Rptr. 468

Plaintiff's connections with forum state are irrelevant to jurisdiction issue as it is only defendant's activities in forum state which are significant in deciding question of jurisdiction. Circus Circus Hotels, Inc. v. Superior Court (1981) 120 Cal. App. 3d 546, 562, 174 Cal. Rptr. 885 , disapproved to extent inconsistent with Vons Cos., Inc. v. Seabest Foods, Inc. (1996) 14 Cal.4th 434, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 899

Contacts required for bringing suit for invasion of privacy based on out-of-state publication in newspaper. Sipple v. Des Moines Register & Tribune Co. (1978) 82 Cal. App. 3d 143, 150-151, 147 Cal. Rptr. 59

"Minimum contact" for due process purposes requires more than "foot-fall" within state, and requires at very least act by defendant which produces an effect within state so as to make exercise of jurisdiction reasonable. Floyd J. Harkness Co. v. Amezcua (1976) 60 Cal. App. 3d 687, 693, 131 Cal. Rptr. 667 ; Belmont Industries, Inc. v. Superior Court (1973) 31 Cal. App. 3d 281, 286, 107 Cal. Rptr. 237

Jurisdiction based on minimum contacts may be exercised over both individuals and corporations. Arnesen v. Raymond Lee Organization, Inc. (1973) 31 Cal. App. 3d 991, 996, 107 Cal. Rptr. 744

California jurisdiction over foreign corporation, under so-called "long-arm" statute (Code Civ. Proc. § 410.10), depends on existence of certain minimum contacts with this state so that maintenance of action does not offend traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice. Vibration Isolation Products, Inc. v. American Nat. Rubber Co. (1972) 23 Cal. App. 3d 480, 483, 100 Cal. Rptr. 269

Financing by national bank of purchase and sales of airplanes within California is activity which may subject financing institution to jurisdiction of California courts with respect to disputes connected with such transactions, and jurisdiction may attend an isolated transaction. Michigan Nat. Bank v. Superior Court (1972) 23 Cal. App. 3d 1, 6, 99 Cal. Rptr. 823

[b] Minimum Contacts Requirement Satisfied

California court had jurisdiction of action against foreign insurer, served by registered mail at its principal place of business in Texas, based on insurance contract which had substantial connection with California, in that contract was delivered in California, premiums were mailed from California, and insured was resident of California when he died. McGee v. International Life Ins. Co. (1957) 355 U.S. 220, 223, 78 S. Ct. 199, 2 L. Ed. 2d 223

Solicitation of business in California, combined with unauthorized use of another's name in order to promote that business, with knowledge that such use will injure a California plaintiff in California constituted sufficient minimum contacts to establish purposeful direction. Sinatra v. National Enquirer, Inc. (9th Cir. 1988) 854 F. 2d 1191, 1192-1198

Minimum contacts were satisfied in declaratory judgment case involving ERISA and pendent state law claims, when plaintiff physician had moved to California and continued to employ Kansas resident defendant as accountant and defendant had traveled to California periodically for that purpose. T.M. Hylwa, M.D., Inc. v. Palka (9th Cir. 1987) 823 F.2d 310, 314-315

Arizona doctors and hospital had purposefully taken some action by which they invoked protection of California laws and, hence, were subject to jurisdiction in California malpractice suit, where doctors practiced in town on California border, hospital was located in that town, physicians and hospital had maintained white pages listing in telephone directories distributed in California, hospital had yellow pages advertising in same directory, physicians had applied for and received Medi-Cal numbers and received reiumbursement from Medi-Cal program, over one-quarter of hospital's patients were California residents, and suit was based on treatment of California patient. Cubbage v. Merchent (9th Cir. 1984) 744 F.2d 665, 668-669 , cert. denied, 470 U.S. 1005 (1985)

French winemakers' contacts were sufficient to support in personam jurisdiction in action for breach of contract and antitrust violations despite their having sent only one shipment of wine to California when contacts viewed in totality indicated that winemakers knew that their wine was going to California and that their actions would cause injury there. Taubler v. Giraud (9th Cir. 1981) 655 F.2d 991, 994

Assertion of specific jurisdiction is fair where a hotel advertised heavily in California, obtained a significant percentage of its business from California residents, and maintained an Internet website and toll-free phone number where visitors or callers could obtain room quotes and make reservations. The hotel purposefully availed itself of the privilege of doing business in California. The guest's causes of action were premised on alleged omissions during the hotel's consummation of transactions with California residents and in its California advertisements. Because the harm alleged by the guest related directly to the content of the hotel's promotional activities in California, an inherent relationship between the guest's claims and the hotel's contacts with California existed. By purposefully and successfully soliciting the business of California residents, the hotels could reasonably anticipate being subject to litigation in California in the event their solicitations caused an injury to a California resident. Snowney v. Harrah's Entertainment, Inc. (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 1054, 1064-1065, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 33, 112 P.3d 28

Exercise of jurisdiction by California court over Delaware corporation, which had its principal place of business in Virginia, in product liability case by worker who was severely injured while operating leveling machine designed and manufactured by Delaware corporation was proper when, although corporation did not regularly maintain any offices or have any agents, representatives, employees, or property in California and had never applied for authorization to do business in California, it sold machine to California buyer for use in California, sale was deliberate act generating substantial gross income and constituting economic activity in California, and, even though buyer approached seller out of state, seller sent an employee to California to assist in installing machine, communicated with buyer both by mail and phone between corporation's Virginia office and buyer in California, and, after sale, gave advice on maintenance of machine, sold spare parts, and sent drawings on spare parts for machine, as well as advertisements of special sales on its products, to buyer in California, and placed advertisements in a national trade publication which was distributed in California. Secrest Machine Corp. v. Superior Court (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 664, 667, 670-672, 190 Cal. Rptr. 175, 660 P.2d 399

Sufficient minimum contacts were present for in personam jurisdiction where manufacturer sold boilers to middleman under circumstances where it was deemed manufacturer knew or should have known that boilers would be incorporated in products sold in California. Buckeye Boiler Co. v. Superior Court (1969) 71 Cal. 2d 893, 902-905, 80 Cal. Rptr. 113, 458 P.2d 57

California courts have personal jurisdiction over a nonresident who signed a settlement agreement in a California class action where the nonresident agreed to pay the administrator's fees and agreed that the trial court would retain jurisdiction over the settlement agreement, including disputes relating to the administrator. Although his mere presence in California to negotiate and sign the settlement agreement might not have been sufficient to confer personal jurisdiction over him, he also obtained the trial court's approval of the settlement while understanding that the trial court would retain jurisdiction, accepted the benefits of the administrator's services, and agreed to pay the administrator's fees. Szynalski v. Superior Court (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 1, 9, 90 Cal. Rptr. 3d 683

California's long-arm statute [Code Civ. Proc. § 410.10] gives California courts specific jurisdiction over an Italian olive oil company where the subject of the dispute was the company's alleged nondelivery of $406,000 worth of olive oil to a purchaser in California. The company purposefully availed itself of the California forum, conducting all negotiations in Italy and California via long-distance communications with the implicit understanding that the goods were only useful to the buyer if they were delivered to California, and the seller maintained responsibility for the goods until they arrived in California. Luberski v. Oleificio F.Lli Amato S.R.L. (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 409, 419, 89 Cal. Rptr. 3d 774

The exercise of general jurisdiction over a Canadian parent corporation in a personal injury/product liability action alleging that a child booster seat was defective was proper under the representative services doctrine because there was evidence that the grandparent corporation's Indiana subsidiary, over which there was no dispute as to jurisdiction, performed functions that were compatible with and assisted the grandparent corporation in the pursuit of the grandparent's own business as a Canadian operating company. Dorel Industries, Inc. v. Superior Court (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 1267, 1280, 36 Cal. Rptr. 3d 742

Where a California resident initiates a phone call to a telemarketing corporation to buy a product, and the telemarketer who handles the order then initiates a sale of a separate product (referred to as an "upsell"), the telemarketing corporation purposefully availed itself of the privilege of conducting business in California, such that minimum contacts existed for the assertion of specific jurisdiction. West Corp. v. Superior Court (2004) 116 Cal. App. 4th 1167, 1177-1178, 11 Cal. Rptr. 3d 145

Defendants who own and operate Nevada hotels have sufficient contacts with California to justify the exercise of personal jurisdiction based on their advertising in California, interactive Internet site, toll-free telephone number for hotel reservations, and other activities purposefully directed at California residents. Snowney v. Harrah's Entertainment (2004) 116 Cal. App. 4th 996, 1004-1005, 11 Cal. Rptr. 3d 35

A manufacturer's placement of goods in the stream of commerce with the expectation that they will be purchased or used by consumers in California indicates an intention to serve the California market directly or indirectly and constitutes purposeful availment if the income earned by the manufacturer from sale or use of its product in California is substantial. Bridgestone Corporation v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County (2002) 99 Cal. App. 4th 767, 775,121 Cal. Rptr. 2d 673

Where a complaint alleges that a defendant, during the course of his employment, acquired trade secrets and other confidential information regarding his California-based employer's products, customers, and employees, which he then used to cause harm to the employer and thus to the employer's customers and to its business revenues in California, a court may find that claims raised are directly related to the defendant's contacts with California in that they arise from the employment relationship, and that the requisite substantial nexus exists between the controversy at issue and the defendant's contacts with California. Integral Development Corp. v. Weissenbach (2002) 99 Cal. App. 4th 576, 587, 122 Cal. Rptr. 2d 24

The commission of an intentional tort that is directed at a California resident may provide sufficient minimum contacts to support the exercise of personal jurisdiction over the non-resident defendant. Integral Development Corp. v. Weissenbach (2002) 99 Cal. App. 4th 576, 587, 122 Cal. Rptr. 2d 24

Sufficient minimum contacts established for jurisdiction over out-of-state attorney and law firm where attorney, a California licensed lawyer, performed legal services for California residents and therefore, practiced law in state. Simons v. Steverson (2001) 88 Cal. App. 4th 693, 713, 106 Cal. Rptr. 2d 193

Sufficient minimum contacts satisfied for California to exercise specific jurisdiction over defendant when (1) defendant Canadian corporation for some 40 years admittedly sold raw asbestos directly to California manufacturers who incorporated it into finished products, (2) defendant had no further contacts with California once it halted its ordinary business operations in 1991, (3) plaintiffs, California workers, allegedly were exposed to asbestos fibers in California, although not at plants where defendant shipped asbestos, thereby sustaining progressive diseases, and (4) plaintiffs claimed defendant failed to warn adequately of health risks. Cassiar Mining Corp. v. Superior Court (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 550, 553-558, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 167

When complaint alleged parties had entered into contract authorizing New York defendant to sell licenses for use of computer software application to general public and providing for defendant to pay California plaintiff $1 for every license sold, and plaintiff received no payments after September, 1995, even though defendant continued to market software, sufficient minimum contacts were established with California to support specific jurisdiction over defendant when record showed that defendant's contacts with California consisted of more than simply purchasing software module from the plaintiff, but that plaintiff originally contacted defendant by electronic mail concerning software module plaintiff had written, defendant responded with idea of integrating plaintiff's module into defendant's software package, defendant worked with plaintiff to integrate module into defendant's software package by suggesting various modifications, plaintiff made modifications and module was incorporated into defendant's retail product, even after plaintiff finished module, plaintiff continued to assist defendant in upgrading its application to new and existing software, plaintiff performed all work on module in California, contract contemplated that defendant would make continuing royalty payments to plaintiff, all negotiations were conducted by electronic mail and telephone, and plaintiff had no other business or personal connections with New York. Hall v. LaRonde (1997) 56 Cal. App. 4th 1342, 1344-1347, 66 Cal. Rptr. 2d 399

Defendant insurance company, which was incorporated under the laws of Georgia and maintained its principal place of business in Georgia with no physical presence in state of California, had sufficient contacts with California to be subject to personal jurisdiction in action brought by its insured alleging wrongful refusal to defend losses arising in California where insurer provided nationwide commercial liability coverage. Southeastern Express Systems v. Southern Guaranty Ins. Co. (1995) 34 Cal. App. 4th 1, 10-11, 40 Cal. Rptr. 2d 216

Requirement of minimum contacts by defendant foreign corporation sufficient to sustain limited jurisdiction of California court in action for misappropriation of trade secrets was met by act of defendant's agent, within scope of his authority, allegedly tortiously misappropriating plaintiff's trade secrets in California. Magnecomp Corp. v. Athene Co. (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 526, 531, 535-539, 257 Cal. Rptr. 278

Alleged negligence of group of Texas attorneys with whom plaintiffs' California attorneys had associated themselves in personal injury and wrongful death actions arising out of automobile accident in Texas in failing to serve and file summons and complaint within period provided by Texas law, which resulted in dismissal of lawsuit, was sufficient for in personam jurisdiction over them by California court in legal malpractice action against them and California attorneys on ground their negligence caused an effect in California, and that act or omission causing effect in California is recognized basis for jurisdiction in California, when Texas attorneys purposefully availed themselves of privilege of conducting activities in California by associating themselves with California attorneys in representing plaintiffs, their contacts with California attorneys and plaintiffs personally extended over four-year period, they were retained in California through California attorneys, to file and prosecute action in Texas, material and information necessary for prosecution of action were furnished to them by California attorneys, they telephoned and corresponded with plaintiffs and California attorneys regarding Texas lawsuit, and their fee was to be paid through fee-splitting arrangement with California attorneys. Brown v. Watson (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 1306, 1314-1316, 255 Cal. Rptr. 507

Requirement of minimum contacts may be satisfied not only by doing business or owning property in forum state, but also by doing an act, provided (1) cause of action alleged arises from act done in state and (2) in light of circumstances exercise of jurisdiction is reasonable; thus, nonresident putative father was lawfully subject to jurisdiction of California court in county's action on behalf of minor to establish paternity, set child support, and recover reimbursement of aid to families with dependent children funds expended by county for child's support; father's alleged act of sexual intercourse with child's mother in California, birth of child in California, and financial support by public assistance given in California constituted requisite miniumum contacts sufficient to satisfy due process requirements for personal jurisdiction. County of Humboldt v. Harris (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 857, 859-864, 254 Cal. Rptr. 49

Successor foreign corporation that assumes contracts solicited and executed in California between predecessor corporation and California residents had minimum contacts with state for purpose of residents' contract action, when California could have exercised personal jurisdiction over predecessor corporation in dispute arising from contracts. Bruns v. DeSoto Operating Co. (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 876, 878, 881, 251 Cal. Rptr. 462

In action for breach of consulting contract brought by California corporation against Nevada resident, California had jurisdiction over defendant when defendant came to California to negotiate contract, contract provided that its terms were to be governed by California law, defendant made monthly trips to California to consult with company, and five percent of defendant's activities under the contract were directed at California. Safe-Lab, Inc. v. Weinberger (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 1050, 1053, 238 Cal. Rptr. 712

Nonresident insurer who entered into insurance contracts in another jurisdiction but who derived substantial economic benefit from insuring California assets and activities had sufficient contacts with California for exercise of jurisdiction over it by California courts. A.I.U. Ins. Co. v. Superior Court(1986) 177 Cal. App. 3d 281, 291, 222 Cal. Rptr. 880 , cert. denied sub nom. Oil Insurance Limited v. Superior Court of California (1986) 479 U.S. 821

Person acting both as officer of corporation and as individual with intent to do business and litigate in California was subject to personal jurisdiction regarding cause of action arising from conduct in California. Mihlon v. Superior Court (1985) 169 Cal. App. 3d 703, 711, 215 Cal. Rptr. 442

Corporate counsel who allegedly committed intentional tort by inducing foreign corporation to breach contract with California resident was subject to personal jurisdiction to same extent as individual not connected to corporation; counsel was not in protected position of corporate officers and directors acting as corporation. Mihlon v. Superior Court (1985) 169 Cal. App. 3d 703, 712-716, 215 Cal. Rptr. 442

Substantial purchases of California goods, title to which was taken in California, by out-of-state buyer in transactions initiated by buyer and effected by recurrent telephone orders placed outside California to seller in California provided sufficient minimum contacts with state to sustain its jurisdiction over buyer in suit for breach of contract in failing to pay for goods. Rocklin De Mexico, S.A. v. Superior Court (1984) 157 Cal. App. 3d 91, 93, 95-98, 203 Cal. Rptr. 547

State has jurisdiction over foreign personal representative of decedent when decedent would have satisfied minimum contacts requirement by having entered into California contract, resided in California, and conducted California business. Mitsui Manufacturers Bank v. Tucker (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 428, 430-431, 199 Cal. Rptr. 517

Manufacturer of product placed in stream of commerce and sold in California is subject to state's jurisdiction in products liability case when sale in California was not mere isolated occurrence but arose from manufacturer's efforts to directly or indirectly serve California market for its products. Rowe v. Dorrough (1984) 150 Cal. App. 3d 901, 907-908, 198 Cal. Rptr. 131

Nonresident defendants' signing of letters that they knew would be mailed and received in California for express purpose of defaming political candidate constituted sufficient forum-related activities to support jurisdiction by California court in defamation action resulting from letters. Heilig v. Superior Court (1983) 149 Cal. App. 3d 978, 984-985, 197 Cal. Rptr. 371 , cert. denied, Heilig v. Miller (1984) 466 U.S. 966 (1984)

California court had jurisdiction over defendants in action for breach of contract by California mortgage broker against Hawaiian condominium developers whose single connection with California was engagement of brokerage services from plaintiff through intermediary when plaintiff was licensed by California to perform services set forth in contract and defendants refused to acknowledge that plaintiff could obtain access to Hawaiian courts to prosecute action. University Financing Consultants, Inc. v. Barouche (1983) 148 Cal. App. 3d 1165, 1170, 196 Cal. Rptr. 484

Minimum contacts sufficient to permit exercise of jurisdiction over nonresident corporations exist when defendant corporations engaged in out-of-state conspiracy designed to affect prices charged in California and when corporations elected to serve market in California, making sales and deliveries at artificially fixed prices that harmed California consumers. St. Joe Paper Co.v. Superior Court (1981) 120 Cal. App. 3d 991, 997-999, 175 Cal. Rptr. 94 , cert. denied, 455 U.S. 982 (1982)

Jurisdiction under Indiana nonresident motorist statute, providing for jurisdiction over nonresident operator or "his duly authorized agent," was properly extended to California car owner pursuant to Veh. Code § 17707, which creates limited type of "agency" by imposing vicarious liability on parent who signs minor's application for driver's license; by allowing uninsured son to take car to Indiana where it was involved in automobile accident, defendant vicariously participated in operation of car by his son and such participation amounted to sufficient minimum contacts with that state such that maintenance of an action there did not offend traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice. Indiana Insurance Co. v. Pettigrew (1981) 115 Cal. App. 3d 862, 865-867, 171 Cal. Rptr. 770

California was reasonable and fair forum for action against nonresident husband to enforce judgment of dissolution of marriage and to obtain money judgment for alleged arrearages in support payments when California was marital domicile, all children of marriage were born in California, marriage was dissolved in California, and validity of judgment of dissolution which wife sought to enforce was not disputed by husband. Bergan v. Bergan (1981) 114 Cal. App. 3d 567, 570-571, 170 Cal. Rptr. 751

Conduct by person outside forum state purposefully availing him or herself of law of state for purpose of entering into contract with resident of forum is sufficient minimum contact for jurisdictional purposes. Arnesen v. Raymond Lee Organization, Inc. (1973) 31 Cal. App. 3d 991, 996, 107 Cal. Rptr. 744

Conduct outside forum state intended, or reasonably designed, to accomplish tort within forum state is sufficient minimum contact for jurisdictional purposes if tort occurs. Arnesen v. Raymond Lee Organization, Inc. (1973) 31 Cal. App. 3d 991, 996-997, 107 Cal. Rptr. 744

Defendant publisher and seller of books of tickets enabling purchaser to obtain two dinners for price of one at participating restaurants had sufficient minimum contacts with state to invoke long-arm statute when it first accepted and then canceled orders plaintiff had obtained. Ault v. Dinner for Two, Inc. (1972) 27 Cal. App. 3d 145, 148-151, 103 Cal. Rptr. 572

Federally chartered national bank, though located solely in State of Michigan, waived its right to rely on federal statute (12 U.S.C. § 94) limiting jurisdiction over it to that of place in which it was established and located, and was subject to jurisdiction of California courts on proper service of summons effected through service on California Secretary of State, in action for taking and conversion of aircraft which plaintiff, a California resident, had purchased from a dealer in California, when bank refinanced purchase of aircraft and used its own forms to refinance purchase, to accept assignment of chattel mortgage on aircraft, and to assume dealer's obligations and duties, and exercised self-help to repossess aircraft knowing, that plane would be based in California, that plaintiff's payments would be made from California, and that title would pass in California on completion of payments. Michigan Nat. Bank v. Superior Court (1972) 23 Cal. App. 3d 1, 4, 6, 8-11, 13, 99 Cal. Rptr. 823

[c] Minimum Contacts Requirement Not Satisfied

Contacts of Columbian corporation to Texas were insufficient to establish jurisdiction when only contacts were sending chief officer to Texas to negotiate contract with Peruvian consortium, accepting checks drawn by consortium on Texas bank, purchasing helicopters, equipment, and training sessions from Texas manufacturer and sending personnel to manufacturer's facilities for training. Helicopteros Nacionales de Colombia v. Hall (1984) 466 U.S. 408, 416-418, 104 S. Ct. 1868, 80 L. Ed. 2d 404

Sending child from New York to California to live with mother were insufficient minimum contacts for California state courts to exercise in personam jurisdiction over nonresident, nondomiciliary father of minor children domiciled within this state in child support action. Kulko v. California Superior Court (1978) 436 U.S. 84, 86, 91-98, 98 S. Ct. 1690, 56 L. Ed. 2d 132 , reh'g denied, 438 U.S. 908

In California action by Canadian corporation against private Finnish corporation and two state-owned Finnish corporations for product disparagement, unfair competition, tortious interference with contract, intentional interference with prospective business advantage, and breach of implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, minimum contacts test was not satisfied by showing that defendants, while in Finland, performed acts detrimental to corporation in Canada, and that conduct may have had foreseeable effects in United States when it was not shown that defendants' acts were purposefully directed towards United States. Teledyne, Inc. v. Kone Corp. (9th Cir. 1989) 892 F.2d 1404, 1411

Federal district court's personal jurisdiction over foreign corporation in diversity action is tested under forum state's jurisdictional standard; one party's execution of contract in California and delivery of payment in California as insufficient contact when subject matter and performance were in Fiji. FDIC v. British-American Ins. Co., Ltd. (9th Cir. 1987) 828 F.2d 1439, 1441-1445

Fact that company not doing business in California is parent of codefendant that does business in California is insufficient to establish personal jurisdiction over parent company. Transure, Inc. v. Marsh and McLennan, Inc. (9th Cir. 1985) 766 F.2d 1297, 1299

In deciding the existence of minimum contacts for purposes of exercising limited jurisdiction by U.S. District Court in California over east coast insurance company, which did no business and had no contact with California, in action by third party who was injured in a vehicle accident in Colorado as a result of negligence of defendant's insured, a resident of Pennsylvania, purposeful availment requirement was not established because plaintiff was compelled to relocate in California to take advantage of its Medi-Cal program as a result of defendant's refusal to assume unlimited liability for plaintiff's medical care, or because defendant sent payments concededly due under policy to plaintiff in California. Hunt v. Erie Ins. Group (9th Cir. 1984) 728 F.2d 1244, 1247-1248

Injury to California resident from defamation in local, privately owned Nevada newspaper was insufficiently foreseeable for in personam jurisdiction in California when paper was not qualified to do business, had no offices or agents for service, and solicited no subscriptions in California. Demaris v. Greenspun (9th Cir. 1983) 712 F.2d 433, 434

Jurisdiction was lacking under Code Civ. Proc. § 410.10 over nonresident defendant who was not served in California, had only attended California trade show in corporate capacity, and had insufficient contacts or transactions with California over which jurisdiction may be asserted. Kransco Mfg., Inc.v. Markwitz (9th Cir. 1981) 656 F.2d 1376, 1378-1380

Insured, who was issued a long-term care insurance policy delivered to her Florida residence, subsequently relocated to California. The court found no basis to justify the imposition of either general or specific jurisdiction over the insurer in California. The insurer did not subject itself to either general or specific jurisdiction in the state merely by accepting premium payments from California and by processing and paying claims submitted by its California insureds for services rendered in California. The insurer did not solicit any business in California, nor could it do so, because it was not licensed or authorized to do business in the state. It was the unilateral decision of the insured and other insureds to relocate to California that caused the insurer to accept payments from California and to process and pay claims for services rendered in California. Those circumstances did not support a finding the insurer purposefully availed itself of forum benefits so as to make it subject to specific jurisdiction in California. Elkman v. National States Ins. Co. (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 1305, 1318, 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 768

Where Canadian trade organization did not target its allegedly tortious conduct at California consumers, and where consumers did not establish sufficient California acts in furtherance of the alleged conspiracy such that the state courts could properly exercise specific jurisdiction over the trade organization on that basis, California courts could not exercise personal jurisdiction over the trade organization without violating due process. In Re Automobile Antitrust Cases I & II (2005) 135 Cal. App. 4th 100, 108-126, 37 Cal. Rptr. 3d 258

Trial court's exercise of jurisdiction over Swiss pharmaceutical company defendants based solely on the global exchange and management of medical and scientific information relative to drug safety and regulatory compliance offended due process considerations, where as to neither Swiss defendant was there any evidence of direct minimum contacts or purposeful availment of the forum such that the exercise of jurisdiction, whether general or specific, by a California court would be proper. F. Hoffman-La Roche, Ltd. v. Superior Court (2005) 130 Cal. App. 4th 782, 805, 30 Cal. Rptr. 3d 407

Minimal resales of a product in California by a distributor, standing alone, do not amount to the substantial, continuous, and systematic contacts with the forum state necessary for the exercise of general jurisdiction over a foreign manufacturer doing business in its home country. Carretti v. Italpast (2002) 101 Cal. App. 4th 1236, 1253-1254, 125 Cal. Rptr. 2d 126

When out-of-state resident's only contact with California is single purchase from California vendor of goods for delivery out of state, there are insufficient minimum contacts to establish personal jurisdiction even though California vendor supplies financing to buyer; although regular purchasing activities in California may be basis for jurisdiction over out-of-state buyer, predominant rule in federal courts and in California is that nonresident making one-time purchase of goods from seller in forum state cannot be constitutionally subject to exercise of personal jurisdiction by courts of seller state; choice of law clause appearing to provide that California law controls standing alone was insufficient to confer jurisdiction. Hunt v. Superior Court (2000) 81 Cal. App. 4th 901, 906, 907 n.3, 97 Cal. Rptr. 2d 215

Cross-defendant Mexican insurance company did not have minimum contacts with California for assertion of specific jurisdiction when cross-defendant (1) never had insurance agents in California, (2) never had office or conducted business in California, (3) never advertised or solicited business in California, (4) never delivered an insurance policy or collected premiums in California, (5) required its insureds to have business address in Mexico to which notices and bills could be sent, and (6) property policy it issued included no liability coverage and merely covered specified property while in transit in California to company that maintained address in California; cross-defendant did not volunteer to litigate in California, but merely to pay claims to its insured for property loss; issuance of policy was not sufficient contact for exercise of jurisdiction. Tri-West Ins. Services, Inc. v. Seguros Monterrey Aetna, S.A. (2000) 78 Cal. App. 4th 672, 675-680, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 78

In action for breach of contract, breach of implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, and violation of Lab. Code § 970, court lacked minimum contacts to exercise specific jurisdiction over Texas employer that solicited plaintiff in San Diego, when one-year employment contract was formed in Texas, all future consequences of employment were in Texas, and plaintiff alleged breach of his third one-year employment contract, which did not arise out of the initial recruitment in California, but out of contract entered into in Texas more than two years after plaintiff established residency there. Stone v. State of Texas (1999) 76 Cal. App. 4th 1043, 1046-1049, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 657

In defamation action, California could not properly assert jurisdiction over nonresident defendants based on their contracting with one or more Internet service providers who happen to maintain offices in California, so as to permit defendants to operate passive website from their New York residence; defendants' conduct of contracting via computer in New York, with Internet service providers, which may be California corporations or which may maintain offices or databases in California, insufficient to constitute purposeful availment and did not satisfy first prong of three-part test for specific jurisdiction. Jewish Defense Organization, Inc. v. Superior Court (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 1045, 1057-1062, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 611

Unsophisticated California consumers who, pursuant to preapproved credit card solicitation received by mail from Virginia corporations, signed up for card, used card, and made payments on card, were not subject to personal jurisdiction in Virginia; consumers had no relationship with Virginia other than their card and it is fundamentally unfair to expect them to travel thousand of miles to litigate matters concerning their account. Yu v. Signet Bank/Virginia (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 1377, 1385, 1386-1388, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 304

Contract with out-of-state party does not automatically establish purposeful availment in other party's home forum; rather court must evaluate contract terms and surrounding circumstances to determine whether defendant purposefully established minimum contacts within forum; "purposeful averment" requires defendant to have performed some type of affirmative conduct that allows or promotes transaction of business within forum state; defendants did not purposefully avail themselves of California benefits by executing sales, security and escrow agreements so as to give rise to sufficient minimum contacts with forum to confer jurisdiction over them when (1) contract negotiations occurred in Texas, (2) sales, security agreements and promissory notes were governed by Texas law, (3) transaction documents were prepared by Texas law firm, (4) transactions closed in Texas, (5) documents were executed in Texas and payments to close transaction were provided to bank in Texas, (6) sales and security agreements concerned only Texas-based pay telephones that were required to remain in Texas; thus, all future consequences were in Texas; filing single California UCC-1 financial statement in California Secretary of State's office, signed by partner, considered alone or in connection sales and security agreements, did not demonstrate purposeful availment; filing financing statements is not akin to soliciting business in forum, introducing products into forum, or signing and performing contract in forum; moreover, jurisdiction could not be based on out-of-state conduct causing effect in California, i.e., injury to plaintiffs; mere causing of effect is not necessarily sufficient to afford constitutional basis for jurisdiction; jurisdiction may be invoked only if actor committed out-of-state act intending to cause effects in California or reasonably expecting that effects in California would result. Goehring v. Superior Court (1998) 62 Cal. App. 4th 894, 907-909, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 105

In typical scenario when patient travels out of state to see doctor and there receives allegedly negligent treatment, courts consistently hold patient's home state cannot exercise personal jurisdiction over physician even though effects of doctor's negligence are felt in patient's home state; when out-of-state doctor's contact with forum state consists of nothing more than telephonic follow-up on services rendered in doctor's own state, it is unreasonable for patient's home state to exercise jurisdiction over the doctor. Prince v. Urban (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 1056, 1058-1059, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 181

In plaintiff's action against out-of-state attorney and out-of-state law firm for defamation and false light invasions of privacy based on allegations to effect that an attorney letter opinion contained defamatory statement and that others repeated the false statements in California, California was without jurisdiction over defendants who denied living, maintaining an office, doing business or owning property in California and attorney declared only communications concerning plaintiff were with persons and entities in Arizona and that he never caused another to speak or write about plaintiff in California when (1) record devoid of any evidence indicating defendants had wide-ranging, systematic or continuous contacts with California permitting state to exercise general jurisdiction over them, (2) plaintiff failed to establish that causes of action arose out of act committed or transaction consummated in California, or that defendants performed some other act by which they purposefully availed themselves of privilege of conducting activities within state, thus invoking benefits and protections of state's law's, or (3) plaintiff failed to establish the requisites for basing jurisdiction over a nonresident who commits an act elsewhere causing an effect in the state, that is, plaintiff failed to establish that defendants' tortious conduct was subject to special regulation or that defendants in connection with causing an affect within the forum state invoked the benefits and protections of its laws. Mansour v. Superior Court (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 1750, 1758-1762, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 191

Minimum contacts were lacking in action against Hawaii attorney not admitted to practice in California for professional negligence arising out of Hawaii litigation when attorney's representation was confined to litigation in Hawaii action and extended after settlement to limited assistance in sale of real property in Hawaii, attorney did not author or cause to be sent documents constituting alleged breach of fiduciary duty, attorney's comments on them were de minimis in context of entire transaction and substantial evidence was lacking of defendant's tortious conduct in California or nexus between causes of action alleged and defendant's activities causing effect in California. Edmunds v. Superior Court (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 221, 232-236, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 281

Contacts of Pennsylvania insurance guaranty association to California were insufficient to establish jurisdiction when only contacts were sending two letters to insured in California as part of its effort to wind up affairs of insolvent Pennsylvania insurance company and thus association did not direct its activities toward California resident or "purposefully avail" itself of benefits and protections of California. Pennsylvania Health & Life Ins.Guaranty Ass'n v. Superior Court (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 477, 483, 27 Cal. Rptr. 2d 507

Dismissal by California court for lack of jurisdiction was proper in indemnity suit by Canadian corporation against Canadian insurance corporation based on fraudulent acts of employee in plaintiff's California office, when defendant had no contact with state; unilateral activity on plaintiff's part as unable to satisfy requirement of contact with forum state. Great-West Life Assurance Co. v. Guarantee Co. of North America (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 199, 204-209, 252 Cal. Rptr. 363

Ownership of locally incorporated subsidiary does not warrant exercise of jurisdiction over foreign corporation unless parent manipulates subsidiary to detriment of creditors or subsidiary is alter ego of parent. J.M. Sahlein Music Co., Inc. v. Nippon Gakki Co., Ltd. (1987) 197 Cal. App. 3d 539, 543, 243 Cal. Rptr. 4

Contacts were too fortuitous and tenuous to warrant exercise of personal jurisdiction over defendant when only possible contacts that defendant could be said to have in California were its design and manufacture of parts used in automobiles sold in California. Felix v. Bomoro Kommanditgesellschaft (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 106, 115-117, 241 Cal. Rptr. 670

In personal injury action no connection sufficient for jurisdictional purposes existed between plaintiff's slip and fall at defendant hotel and defendant's activities in California, consisting of selling accommodations. Sklar v. Princess Properties International, Ltd. (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 1202, 1206-1209, 240 Cal. Rptr. 102 ; but see Vons Companies, Inc. v. Seabest Foods, Inc. (1996) 14 Cal. 4th 434, 464, 475, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 899, 926 P.2d 1085 (in context of ongoing franchise relationships, court rejected "proximate cause" test applied by Sklar v. Princess Properties International, Ltd.)

Foreseeability that product will enter forum state is not in itself sufficient for asserting jurisdiction over defendants when their contacts with state are so minimal that defendants could not reasonably have foreseen being sued in forum state; Oregon defendants who installed truck lift gate that later injured plaintiff, who drove truck to California and was injured there, did not have minimum contacts with forum state when defendants did not live, own property, advertise, or do business in California. Alexander v. Heater (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 1241, 1243, 1245-1247, 238 Cal. Rptr. 795

California had neither general nor limited jurisdiction over Texas corporation with principal place of business in Nevada when corporation's activities in California were extremely limited and cause of action arose in Nevada and was unrelated to corporation's contacts with California. Gray Line Tours v. Reynolds Electrical & Engineering Co. (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 190, 193, 238 Cal. Rptr. 419

Foreign corporation's designation of agent for service of process is insufficient by itself to warrant exercise of general jurisdiction over corporation. Gray Line Tours v. Reynolds Electrical & Engineering Co. (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 190, 193-195, 238 Cal. Rptr. 419

Minimum contacts are not present merely because California resident foreseeably loses money as result of defendant's tortious act in another state. Farris v. Capt. J. B. Fronapfel Co. (1986) 182 Cal. App. 3d 982, 989-990, 227 Cal. Rptr. 619

California had neither general nor limited jurisdiction over insurance companies incorporated and doing business only in Indiana when those companies did no business in California and were not licensed to do so, had never solicited or sold policies in California, had no offices in California, owned no property in California, and were not registered with California Commissioner of Insurance. Thiebaut v. Blue Cross of Indiana (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 1157, 1160-1161, 224 Cal. Rptr. 277

New Jersey man's numerous telephone calls to woman in California to induce her to leave her job and apartment in California to become his confidante and companion and his sending her money in California did not provide sufficient business or other contacts to establish in personam jurisdiction in breach of contract action. Walter v. Superior Court (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 677, 680-682, 224 Cal. Rptr. 41

Trial court properly granted Hong Kong defendants' motion to quash service of summons for lack of personal jurisdiction in action against religious organization and several individuals for allegedly libelous magazine editorial and misleading conduct in soliciting donations, when undisputed declarations showed that defendants' only contacts with California were that 600 out of 8,500 copies per month of magazine were sent to California readers and that allegedly misleading receipts for contributions were sent to California contributors, and when trial court was entitled to accept defendants' declaration that no information for magazine article was gathered in California and that the several defendants' only contact with California was while "in transit," vacationing, or visiting relatives and attending a funeral. Evangelize China Fellowship, Inc. v. Evangelize China Fellowship (1983) 146 Cal. App. 3d 440, 444, 448-449, 194 Cal. Rptr. 240

Under Warsaw Convention ("Convention for Unification of Certain Rules Relating to International Transportation by Air"), which is a treaty of the United States, California court lacks "treaty" jurisdiction over foreign chartered aircraft carrier, existing under laws of Indonesia, which was in business of providing charter aviation services in southeast Asia and which had no contacts with California or United States, in wrongful death action arising out of plane crash in Sumatra when carrier was bound by contract with deceased's employer to transport deceased only from Singapore to Sumatra and there was no contract within meaning of Warsaw Convention by which carrier undertook or promised to undertake to transport decedent on one leg of undivided trip on which he would ultimately arrive in California, and until such time as decedent presented himself for flight to Singapore from Sumatra on his return trip to United States, such a contract could not arise. P. T. Airfast Services, Indonesia v. Superior Court (1983) 139 Cal. App. 3d 162, 166,

168-170, 188 Cal. Rptr. 628

Foreign corporation composed of several hundred member insurance companies did not have sufficient minimum contacts with California to subject it to personal jurisdiction when alleged cause of action did not arise from corporation's activities within California and corporation had no offices, property, bank accounts, employees, or officers within California; fact that some member companies were located in California and corporation consultant spent 100 hours per year in state was insufficient to support jurisdiction. Szabo v. Medical Information Bureau (1981) 127 Cal. App. 3d 51, 54-57, 179 Cal. Rptr. 368

Assertion of jurisdiction over nonresident based solely on ownership, as opposed to use or possession, of property in forum state is improper unless property was brought into state with owner's knowledge or consent or owner has learned of its presence in state and has had opportunity to reclaim it. 500 Motors, Inc. v. Superior Court (1981) 122 Cal. App. 3d 827, 830, 176 Cal. Rptr. 349

Jurisdiction over nonresident based on ownership of vehicle involved in accident in California was improper when defendant divested itself of ownership under Oregon law prior to accident and claim arose out of transferee's negligence; full faith and credit had to be given to Oregon transfer. 500 Motors, Inc. v. Superior Court (1981) 122 Cal. App. 3d 827, 832, 176 Cal. Rptr. 349

Sales and sales promotion by nonexclusive agents or independent contractors in forum state is not "doing business" so as to extend jurisdiction to foreign corporation which retained services of nonexclusive agents or independent contractors for these purposes in forum state; merely advertising in forum state, together with maintaining an "800" telephone number there, confers no general in personam jurisdiction on forum state to try culpability of advertiser's allegedly tortious conduct occurring elsewhere; hence, advertising its hotel accommodations in California newspaper and maintaining 800 telephone number in California were insufficient contacts with California to confer in personam jurisdiction over Nevada corporation in action for adjudication of alleged wrongs (burglary of their hotel room) suffered by California plaintiffs exclusively in Nevada while traveling there solely for recreational purposes. Circus Circus Hotels, Inc. v. Superior Court (1981) 120 Cal. App. 3d 546, 567-572, 174 Cal. Rptr. 885 ; but see Vons Companies, Inc. v. Seabest Foods, Inc. (1996) 14 Cal. 4th 434, 464, 475, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 899, 926 P.2d 1085 (in context of ongoing franchise relationships, court rejected "proximate cause" test applied by Circus Circus Hotels, Inc.)

Officer and shareholder of foreign corporation subject to California jurisdiction is not subject to such jurisdiction when he did not personally participate in corporation's activity in question and when law of foreign state does not impute to him legal responsibility for corporation's activity in question. Lundgren v. Superior Court (1980) 111 Cal. App. 3d 477, 487, 168 Cal. Rptr. 717

That two California customers maintained sizeable checking accounts in out-of-state bank, a third secured $1-million line of credit, and bank maintained correspondent banking relations with two California banks, keeping noninterest-bearing compensating balances of $500,000 with such banks, were insufficient contacts with California to give California personal jurisdiction over nonresident bank in action to enforce deficiency judgment obtained in Kentucky in which defendant cross complained against Virginia bank and resident of Virginia, alleging conspiracy to defraud. E. I. C., Inc. v. Bank of Virginia (1980) 108 Cal. App. 3d 148, 153-154, 166 Cal. Rptr. 317

Foreign corporation was not subject to California process based on its solicitation of medical students and holding banquet in California, when these activities were unrelated to subject matter of litigation. Cornell University Medical College v. Superior Court (1974) 38 Cal. App. 3d 311, 316-317, 113 Cal. Rptr. 291

California does not have jurisdiction over foreign parent corporation merely because its subsidiary does business in California. Watson's Quality Turkey Products, Inc. v. Superior Court (1974) 37 Cal. App. 3d 360, 364-365, 112 Cal. Rptr. 345

California lacks jurisdiction over foreign corporation when corporation's activities in forum are insufficient to justify exercise of general jurisdiction and cause of action involved does not arise out of and is not connected with corporation's forum-related activities. Watson's Quality Turkey Products, Inc. v. Superior Court (1974) 37 Cal. App. 3d 360, 367, 112 Cal. Rptr. 345

Presence of foreign corporation's president at California convention and erroneous listing in trade publication in California branch office six years prior to suit was insufficient to show, for jurisdictional purposes, course of "doing business" in California. Frederick Fell, Inc. v. Superior Court (1973) 36 Cal. App. 3d 93, 95-96, 111 Cal. Rptr. 219

Insufficient minimum contacts to subject foreign corp oration to California jurisdiction under Code Civ. Proc. § 410.10 when goods involved in contract sued on were custom-designed and built to highly special specifications of buyer, but no representative of buyer ever came to California in connection with manufacture or purchase. Interdyne Co. v. SYS Computer Corp. (1973) 31 Cal. App. 3d 508, 511-512, 107 Cal. Rptr. 499 ; cf. Hall v. LaRonde (1997) 56 Cal. App. 4th 1342, 1346-1347, 66 Cal. Rptr. 2d 399 (court noted that unlike court in Interdyne it did not believe physical presence of representative of defendant in California should be determinative on question of sufficiency of minimum contacts requirement; no reason requisite minimum contacts cannot be electronic)

Out-of-state purchaser of services from California resident by way of contract negotiated through interstate communications consummated outside of California is not subject to judicial jurisdiction of California in suit to enforce payment for services. Belmont Industries, Inc. v. Superior Court (1973) 31 Cal. App. 3d 281, 285, 107 Cal. Rptr. 237

[9] Nonphysical Entry

[a] Electronic Contact

Traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice do not allow the exercise of jurisdiction over a defendant who merely maintains a website advertisement in one state and has no contacts with the forum state other than maintaining an essentially passive home page that is accessible to citizens of the forum state, and everyone else, over the Internet. Cybersell, Inc. v. Cybersell, Inc. (9th Cir. 1997) 130 F.3d 414, 415, 420 (distinguishing cases involving interactive websites and greater levels of actual contact)

An attorney's mere physical presence or absence in California is not determinative of jurisdiction over the attorney and his or her firm where the practice of law in the state occurs by the attorney's advising a California client on California law in connection with a California legal dispute by telephone, fax, computer, or other modern technological means. Birbrower, Montalbano, Condon & Frank v. Superior Court (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 119, 128-128, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 304, 949 P.2d 1

Where there is no evidence of continuous and systematic contact with California, a car seller's maintenance of a web site alone was insufficient to establish personal jurisdiction. Purposeful availment was not shown because the web site did not target California residents and because there was no ongoing business relationship between the parties. Shisler v. Sanfer Sports Cars, Inc. (2006) 146 Cal. App. 4th 1254, 1261, 53 Cal. Rptr. 3d 335

California may constitutionally assert personal jurisdiction over a nonresident telemarketing corporation when a California resident initiates a phone call to buy a product and reaches a telemarketer who handles the order, and the telemarketer then initiates a sale of a separate product (referred to as an "upsell") and allegedly makes misrepresentations during the sales pitch for the separate product. Telemarketers who upsell a product to residents of a forum state have purposefully availed themselves of the privileges of conducting activities within the forum state. West Corp. v. Superior Court (2004) 116 Cal. App. 4th 1167, 1177-1180, 11 Cal. Rptr. 3d 145

By themselves, the acts of registering a nickname or alias with Yahoo!, a California-based Internet message board, agreeing to Yahoo!'s terms of service, and posting allegedly defamatory messages on Yahoo! do not justify subjecting a nonresident defendant to California jurisdiction for purposes of a lawsuit brought by a third party about whom the allegedly defamatory messages were about. Nam Tai Electronics, Inc. v. Titzer (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 1301, 1311-1313, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 769

Sufficient minimum contacts for jurisdiction over out-of-state attorney and firm exist where attorney, a California licensed lawyer, performed legal services for California residents and therefore, practiced law in state. Simons v. Steverson (2001) 88 Cal. App. 4th 693, 713, 106 Cal. Rptr. 2d 193

California may not properly assert jurisdiction over nonresident defendants based on their contracting with one or more Internet service providers who happen to maintain offices in California, so as to permit defendants to operate passive website from their New York residence when the Internet providers were engaged by a corporate defendant from its computer in New York. Jewish Defense Organization, Inc. v. Superior Court (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 1045, 1057-1062, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 611 (defamation action)

Use of electronic mail and the telephone by a party in another state may establish sufficient minimum contacts with California to support personal jurisdiction. Hall v. LaRonde (1997) 56 Cal. App. 4th 1342, 1344, 66 Cal. Rptr. 2d 399

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionPersonal Jurisdiction & In Rem ActionsIn Personam ActionsConsentCivil ProcedureJurisdictionPersonal Jurisdiction & In Rem ActionsIn Personam ActionsDoing BusinessCivil ProcedureJurisdictionPersonal Jurisdiction & In Rem ActionsIn Personam ActionsDomicileCivil ProcedureJurisdictionPersonal Jurisdiction & In Rem ActionsIn Personam ActionsMinimum ContactsCivil ProcedureJurisdictionPersonal Jurisdiction & In Rem ActionsIn Personam ActionsPurposeful AvailmentCivil ProcedureJurisdictionPersonal Jurisdiction & In Rem ActionsIn Rem ActionsQuasi in Rem ActionsCivil ProcedureJurisdictionPersonal Jurisdiction & In Rem ActionsIn Rem ActionsQuasi in Rem ActionsCivil ProcedureFederal & State InterrelationshipsGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 323 JURISDICTION: PERSONAL JURISDICTION, INCONVENIENT FORUM, AND APPEARANCES
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
A. Personal Jurisdiction

28-323 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 323.87

§ 323.87 Law Reviews

Mullenix, Class Actions, Personal Jurisdiction, and Plaintiffs' Due Process: Implications for Mass Tort Litigation, 28 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 871 (1995)

Weintraub, A Map Out of the Personal Jurisdiction Labyrinth, 28 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 531 (1995)

Rose, Related Contacts and Personal Jurisdiction: The "But For" Test, 82 Cal. L. Rev 1545 (1994)

Comment, Corporate Officials Beware: "Calder v. Jones" May Pierce Your Fiduciary Shield, 24 Loy. L.A. L. Rev. 809 (1991)

Comment, International Shoe Gets the Boot: Burnham v. Superior Court Resurrects the Physical Power Theory, 24 Loy. L.A. L. Rev. 851 (1991)

Borchers, The Death of the Constitutional Law of Personal Jurisdiction: From Pennoyer to Burnham and Back Again, 24 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 19 (1990)

Kogan, A Neo-Federalist Tale of Personal Jurisdiction, 63 S. Cal. L. Rev. 257 (1990)

Note, Constructing the State Extraterritorially: Jurisdictional Discourse, the National Interest, and Transnational Norms, 103 Harv. L. Rev. 1273 (1990)

Degnan and Kane, The Exercise of Jurisdiction Over and Enforcement of Judgments Against Alien Defendants, 39 Hastings L.J. 799 (1988)

Colloquy, Related Contacts and Personal Jurisdiction, 101 Harv. L. Rev. 1444 (1988)

Greenstein, The Nature of Legal Argument: The Personal Jurisdiction Paradigm, 38 Hastings L.J. 855 (1987)

Comment, Jurisdiction over Unnamed Plaintiffs in Multistate Class Actions, 73 Cal. L. Rev. 181 (1985)

Comment, The Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act: Defining Commercial Activity and Direct Effects Jurisdiction, 25 Santa Clara L. Rev. 105 (1985)

Knudsen, Jurisdiction Over the Travel Industry: A Proposal to End Its Preferential Treatment, 17 Bev. Hills B.J. 162 (1983)

Comment, Standing for State and Federal Legislators, 23 Santa Clara L. Rev. 811 (1983)

Ottonello, California's Convenience Oriented Approach to Personal Jurisdiction: A Critical Review, 13 Lincoln L. Rev. 21 (1982)

Brunet, The Burger Court and the Minimum-Contact Test, 56 Cal. St. B.J. 318 (1981)

Josephs, A Checklist for Determining Domicile, 27(5) Prac. Law. 55 (1981)

Comment, Asserting Jurisdiction Over Nonresident Corporations on the Basis of Contractual Dealings: A Practical Analysis, 12 Pac. L.J. 1039 (1981)

Comment, Personal Jurisdiction Over Retailers and Regional Distributors in Products Liability Litigation: Sufficiency of a Single Contact, 18 San Diego L. Rev. 325 (1981)

Note, World-Wide Volkswagen v. Woodson: A Limit to the Expansion of Long-Arm Jurisdiction, 69 Cal. L. Rev. 611 (1981)

Note, Suits by Foreigners Against Foreign States in United States Courts: A Selective Expansion of Jurisdiction, 90 Yale L.J. 1861 (1981)

Family Law Symposium, Jurisdiction and Service of Process in Domestic Relations Actions, L.A. County Bar Association (1980)

Lopez, The Law of the Domicile with Greater Compensation Rule: Toward Policy-Oriented Rules for Choice of Law, 17 Cal. W. L. Rev. 26 (1980)

Comment, Securing Personal Jurisdiction over Nonresidents in Spousal and Child Support Suits: Is California's Long-Arm Too Short? 17 San Diego L. Rev. 895 (1980)

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionPersonal Jurisdiction & In Rem ActionsIn Personam ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewTortsProcedureCommencement & ProsecutionPersonal Jurisdiction

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 323 JURISDICTION: PERSONAL JURISDICTION, INCONVENIENT FORUM, AND APPEARANCES
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
A. Personal Jurisdiction

28-323 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 323.88

§ 323.88 Text References

Li, Attorney's Guide to California Jurisdiction and Process, Part I, Jurisdiction and Service of Process Act, §§ 1.2, 1.7-1.9, 1.18, 1.35, 1.38, 2.9, 2.10, 2.24-2.26, 3.8 (Cal. C.E.B. 1970)

Witkin, California Procedure, vol. 2, Jurisdiction, §§ 108-233; vol. 3, Actions, §§ 886-895; vol. 8, Extraordinary Writs, §§ 98-101; vol. 9, Appeal, §§ 128, 148-154 (4th ed. 1996)

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionPersonal Jurisdiction & In Rem ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesWritsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 323 JURISDICTION: PERSONAL JURISDICTION, INCONVENIENT FORUM, AND APPEARANCES
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
A. Personal Jurisdiction

28-323 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 323.89-323.99

[Reserved]

§§ 323.89[Reserved]

146 of 181 DOCUMENTS

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 323 JURISDICTION: PERSONAL JURISDICTION, INCONVENIENT FORUM, AND APPEARANCES
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
B. Inconvenient Forum

28-323 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 323.100

§ 323.100 Related Publications from Matthew Bender

For discussion and forms relating to venue, see Ch. 571, Venue

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureVenueGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 323 JURISDICTION: PERSONAL JURISDICTION, INCONVENIENT FORUM, AND APPEARANCES
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
B. Inconvenient Forum

28-323 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 323.101

§ 323.101 State Statutes

[1] Motion to Stay or Dismiss Action for Inconvenient Forum

Motion to stay or dismiss action on ground of inconvenient forum. Code Civ. Proc. §§ 410.30, 418.10(a)(2), (b)

[2] Review of Denial of Motion

Mandate to review denial of motion to quash service of summons for lack of personal jurisdiction or to stay or dismiss action for inconvenient forum. Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(c)

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureVenueForum Non ConveniensCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to DismissCivil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsAppellate ReviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsMotions

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329

Chapter 323 JURISDICTION: PERSONAL JURISDICTION, INCONVENIENT FORUM, AND APPEARANCES
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
B. Inconvenient Forum

28-323 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 323.102

§ 323.102 Decisions

[1] Appeal

Grant of forum non conveniens motion is discretionary and is accorded substantial deference on appeal; because dismissal of action results in California's loss of jurisdiction over matter, action brought by California resident may not be dismissed on grounds of forum non conveniens except in extraordinary circumstances; trial court has wider discretion to grant stays because under stay California retains jurisdiction. Century Indemnity Co. v. Bank of America (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 408, 411, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 132

Trial court's decision to dismiss or stay action for inconvenient forum under Code Civ. Proc. § 410.30(a) on ground that it was in interest of substantial justice for matter to be heard in forum other than California is discretionary and is disturbed on appeal only if order is unsupported by substantial evidence under apposite law. Northrop Corp. v. American Motorists Ins. Co. (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 1553, 1559, 270 Cal. Rptr. 233

Decision to apply doctrine of inconvenient forum is within trial court's sound discretion and not disturbed on appeal unless unsupported by substantial evidence; order granting motion is not to be overturned on appeal unless balance of factors weighs strongly against moving party. Celotex Corp. v. American Ins. Co. (1987) 199 Cal. App. 3d 678, 682, 245 Cal. Rptr. 429

[2] Choice of Law

Questions of choice of law are determined in California by governmental interest analysis that requires forum to search to find proper law to apply based on interests of litigants and involved states; however, fact that two states are involved does not in itself indicate that there is "conflict of laws" or "choice of laws" problem; there is no problem when laws of two states are identical. Rivera v. Southern Pacific Transportation Co. (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 294, 298, 266 Cal. Rptr. 11

[3] Codification

Doctrine of forum non conveniens is codified in Code Civ. Proc. § 410.30. Archibald v. Cinerama Hotels (1976) 15 Cal. 3d 853, 857, 126 Cal. Rptr. 811, 544 P.2d 947 ; Ferreira v. Ferreira (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 824, 838, 109 Cal. Rptr. 80, 512 P.2d 304 ; Credit Lyonnais Bank Nederland, N.V. v. Manatt, Phelps, Rothenberg & Tunney (1988) 202 Cal. App. 3d 1424, 1431, 249 Cal. Rptr. 559

Code of Civ. Proc. § 418.10 provides rules for bringing a forum non conveniens motion when a defendant has not yet appeared in an action, and Code of Civ. Proc. § 410.30 applies to a defendant bringing a forum non conveniens action after having generally appeared in the action. Under § 410.30(b), a defendant who has generally appeared may make a forum non conveniens motion at any time, not only on or before the last day to plead. Britton v. Dallas Airmotive, Inc. (2007) 153 Cal. App. 4th 127, 133, 62 Cal. Rptr. 3d 487

Equitable doctrine of forum non conveniens, codified as Code Civ. Proc. § 410.30, embraces discretionary power of court to decline to exercise jurisdiction it has over transitory cause of action when it believes action before it may be more appropriately and justly tried elsewhere; doctrine is drastic remedy to be exercised with caution and restraint. Bechtel Corp. v. Industrial Indem. Co. (1978) 86 Cal. App. 3d 45, 47-53, 150 Cal. Rptr. 29 (motion to stay action on ground of inconvenient forum may not be granted when both plaintiff and defendant are California residents; reversing order granting motion and staying action)

[4] Conflict of Laws Problems

Untangling problems in conflict of law is itself a basis to apply doctrine of forum non conveniens. Boaz v. Boyle & Co. (1995) 40 Cal. App. 4th 700, 713, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 888

California courts have demonstrated willingness to assume burden of resolving conflict of laws problems and do not invoke forum non conveniens doctrine simply to avoid choice of law analysis. Corrigan v. Bjork Shiley Corp. (1986) 182 Cal. App. 3d 166, 177, 227 Cal. Rptr. 247 , cert. denied, 479 U.S. 1049 (1987)

[5] Discretion of Court

A district court has discretion to respond at once to a defendant's forum non conveniens plea, and need not take up first any other threshold objection. In particular, a court need not resolve whether it has authority to adjudicate the cause (subject matter jurisdiction) or personal jurisdiction over the defendant if it determines that, in any event, a foreign tribunal is the more suitable arbiter of the merits of the case. Sinochem Int'l Co. Ltd v. Malaysia Int'l Shipping Corp. (2007) 549 U.S 422, 127 S. Ct. 1184, 167 L. Ed. 2d 15

Except in extraordinary cases, trial court has no discretion to dismiss action brought by California resident on grounds of forum non conveniens; this limitation on doctrine does not rest on any conclusion derived from balancing of conveniences, but reflects overriding state policy of assuring California residents adequate forum for redress of grievances. Archibald v. Cinerama Hotels (1976) 15 Cal. 3d 853, 858-859, 126 Cal. Rptr. 811, 544 P.2d 947 ; Corrigan v. Bjork Shiley Corp. (1986) 182 Cal. App. 3d 166, 176, 227 Cal. Rptr. 247

The rule on forum non conveniens is an equitable doctrine invoking the discretionary power of a court to decline to exercise the jurisdiction it has over a transitory cause of action when it believes that the action may be more appropriately and justly tried elsewhere. Roulier v. Cannondale (2002) 101 Cal. App. 4th 1180, 1186, 124 Cal. Rptr. 2d 877

Granting or denial of motion for forum non conveniens is within trial court's discretion and substantial deference is accorded its determination in this regard. Campbell v. Parker-Hannifin Corp. (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 1534, 1541, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 202

Court has discretion to refrain from exercising jurisdiction if case may be more appropriately tried elsewhere; California codified this principle, known as forum non conveniens, in Code Civ. Proc. § 410.30; moving party bears burden of showing case should be tried elsewhere; in determining whether to grant motion, court must first determine if alternate forum is suitable place for trial, and if suitable, court must then balance private interests of litigants and interests of public in retaining action in California; forum is suitable if there is jurisdiction and no statute of limitations bar to hearing case on merits; forum is suitable if action can be brought in that forum, although not necessarily won; in rare circumstances, forum may not be suitable where proposed alternative is in foreign country that lacks independent judiciary; when China promised by international treaty that Hong Kong judiciary would remain independent, case was distinguishable from cases that found Iran, Ecuador, and Chile did not constitute suitable forums because there was evidence that the judiciary would not provide due process; because there was evidence that Hong Kong will continue to provide due process, Hong Kong remains suitable alternate forum; because real party will have opportunity to apply to lift stay of California proceedings if it can show breakdown of rule of law in Hong Kong, writ of mandate issued directing trial court to stay proceedings during pendency of Hong Kong proceedings. Chong v. Superior Court (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 1032, 1035-1037, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 427

Even though plaintiff's choice of forum is normally entitled to substantial deference, deference accorded nonresident plaintiff is less than that accorded California resident. Celotex Corp. v. American Ins. Co. (1987) 199 Cal. App. 3d 678, 683, 245 Cal. Rptr. 429 ; Corrigan v. Bjork Shiley Corp. (1986) 182 Cal. App. 3d 166, 176, 227 Cal. Rptr. 247 , cert. denied, 479 U.S. 1049 (1987)

Act of staying action for inconvenient forum is act of discretion which may not be arbitrary, but must be exercised in conformity with spirit of law and in manner to subserve and not impede ends of substantial justice. Corrigan v. Bjork Shiley Corp. (1986) 182 Cal. App. 3d 166, 173, 227 Cal. Rptr. 247 , cert. denied, 479 U.S. 1049 (1987)

[6] Dismissal

When California plaintiffs failed to file suit in the proper forum for over four years, the trial court has discretionary authority to dismiss the action for a failure to diligently prosecute the actions when stayed on forum non conveniens grounds. Van Keulen v. Cathay Pacific Airways, Ltd. (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 122, 75 Cal. Rptr. 3d 471

On motion for forum non conveniens moving party bears burden of proof; because dismissal of action results in California's loss of jurisdiction over matter, action brought by California resident may not be dismissed on grounds of forum non conveniens except in extraordinary circumstances; trial court has wide discretion to grant stays because under stay California retains jurisdiction. Century Indemnity Co. v. Bank of America (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 408, 411-412, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 132

[7] Factors to Be Considered

Choice of law provisions in contracts are usually respected by California courts, and while parties may not deprive courts of their jurisdiction over causes by private agreement, courts possess discretion to decline to exercise jurisdiction in recognition of parties' free and voluntary choice of different forum. Smith, Valentino & Smith, Inc. v. Superior Court (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 491, 494-495, 131 Cal. Rptr. 374, 551 P.2d 1206 (declining to follow General Acceptance Corp. v. Robinson (1929) 207 Cal. 285, 289, 277 P. 1039)

In challenging the trial court's granting of a motion based on forum non conveniens, plaintiff argued that no suitable alternative forum is available because Virginia applies contributory, rather than comparative, negligence principles, and plaintiff's own negligence or assumption of the risk would completely bar his recovery under Virginia law. As a general rule, comparative law questions are irrelevant to a forum non conveniens analysis, except when the alternate forum provides no remedy at all. Accordingly, the court of appeal affirmed, holding that plaintiff has identified no bar to filing a negligence action in Virginia. If he proves his case, and proves that he was not contributorily negligent, he will be entitled to recover damages under Virginia law; a forum is suitable where an action can be brought, although not necessarily won. Roman v. Liberty University, Inc. (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 670, 683, 75 Cal. Rptr. 3d 828

Private and public interest factors must be applied flexibly, without giving undue emphasis to any one element. The doctrine of forum non conveniens may not be based on identification of a single factor rather than the balancing of several. An undue emphasis on a single factor is especially threatening to a balanced analysis because some of the matters to be weighed will by their nature point to a grant or denial of the motion. For example, the jurisdiction's interest in deterring future wrongful conduct of the defendant will usually favor retention of the action if the defendant is a resident of the forum, whereas the court congestion factor will usually weigh in favor of trial in the alternate jurisdiction. The court must consider the public policy considerations, such as California's interest in deciding actions against resident corporations whose conduct in the state causes injury to persons in other jurisdictions. Morris v. AGFA Corp. (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 1452, 1465, 51 Cal. Rptr. 3d 301

To satisfy threshold inquiry regarding suitability of alternative forum, all defendants must be subject to jurisdiction of proposed alternate forum. American Cemwood Corp. v. American Home Assurance Co. (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 431, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 670 ; Northrop Corp. v. American Motorists Ins. Co. (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 1553, 1562, 270 Cal. Rptr. 233

Standards for determining whether to grant forum non conveniens motion are set forth in Stangvik v. Shiley Inc. (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 744, 751, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 556, 819 P.2d 14 ; first court must determine if alternative forum is suitable place for trial; if it is, next step is to consider private interests of litigants and interests of public in retaining action for trial in California; defendant, as moving party, bears burden of proof; Stangvik does not require extensive evidentiary showing, but does require showing that trial may be had in alternative forum and that some form of relief may be granted; examination of public and private interests at stake involve more general considerations; no requirement that trial court make any express ruling on motion to stay/dismiss. Campbell v. Parker-Hannifin Corp. (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 1534, 1540-1542, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 202

If alternative forum is suitable, court must balance private interests of litigants and of the public in retaining action in California; trial court's balancing is given substantial deference; private interest factors are those that make trial and enforceability of ensuing judgment expeditious and relatively inexpensive, such as ease of access to sources of proof, cost of obtaining attendance of witnesses, and availability of compulsory process for attendance of unwilling witnesses; public interest factors include avoidance of overburdening local courts with congested calendars, protecting interests of potential jurors so they are not called on to decide cases in which local community has little concern, and weighing competing interests of California and alternate jurisdiction in litigation; no single factor is predominant; instead, all factors should be weighed together; when plaintiff is resident of forum state, plaintiff's choice of forum in that state is afforded substantial weight; nonresident plaintiff's choice of forum is entitled to less deference. Chong v. Superior Court (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 1032, 1037-1038, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 427

In deciding whether to issue stay, trial court should consider importance of discouraging multiple litigation designed solely to harass adverse party, and of avoiding unseemly conflicts with courts of other jurisdictions as well as whether rights of parties can best be determined by court of other jurisdiction because of nature of subject matter, availability of witnesses, or stage to which proceedings in other court have already advanced; trial court can take into account any consideration that bears on relative suitability or convenience of forums. Century Indemnity Co. v. Bank of America (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 408, 411-412, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 132

Action will be dismissed or stayed if suitable alternative forum exists and balance of private and public interests weigh in favor allowing litigation to proceed in alternative forum; if court determines that alternative forum is suitable place for trial, next step is to consider litigants' private interests and public interest in retaining action for trial in California; private interest factors are those that make trial and enforceability of ensuing judgment expeditious and relatively inexpensive, e.g., ease of access to sources of proof, cost of obtaining attendance of witnesses, and availability of compulsory process for attendance of unwilling witnesses; public factors include avoidance of overburdening local courts with congested calendars, protecting interests of jurors so that they are not called on to decide cases in which local community has little concern, and weighing competing interests of California and alternate jurisdiction in litigation. Hansen v. Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp. (1996) 51 Cal. App. 4th 753, 758-759, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 229

Trial court's orders of dismissal as to nonresident plaintiffs based on doctrine of forum non conveniens affirmed when only basis for bringing action in California was prospect that law in California more hospitable to plaintiffs claims than New York Law; in deciding motion for forum non conveniens, court cannot consider that under California procedural or substantive law more favorable result will occur or even that cause of action is available to plaintiff under California law that is not recognized in alternative forum; showing that recovery more difficult or even impossible in foreign forum does demonstrate that alternative forum is inadequate; alternative forum is suitable if defendant amenable to process, there is no procedural bar to ability of foreign court to reach issues raised on merits (or if such bar exists, for example, statute of limitations, defendants waived it), and adjudication in alternative forum is by independent judiciary applying what is generally regarded by American courts as due process of law. Boaz v. Boyle & Co. (1995) 40 Cal. App. 4th 700, 704, 710-711, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 888

Trial court abused discretion in granting motion to dismiss on grounds of inconvenient forum in action brought by automobile manufacturer against numerous insurance companies to establish rights to insurance coverage for liabilities arising from environmental contamination of various sites in several states, including California, given following factors: insurance policies contained "service of suit" clauses, California bore substantial interest in regulating conduct at issue, California court had superior ability to decide case expeditiously, burden on California courts was not disproportionate, situation did not involve unfairness in imposing jury duty on community unrelated to action, there was no possibility of needless multiplicitous actions and inconsistent adjudication, and defendants failed to establish party and witness inconvenience. Ford Motor Co. v. Insurance Co. of North America (1995) 35 Cal. App. 4th 604, 618, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 342

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in granting motion to dismiss due to forum non conveniens in action brought by residents of Nevada against foreign vehicle manufacturer and California corporations, manufacturer's wholly owned subsidiaries, where substantial evidence established vehicle was purchased in Nevada from Nevada resident, accident occurred in Nevada, witnesses residing in Nevada declared extreme inconvenience by California trial, California corporations did not manufacture or design vehicle and lawsuit would burden California courts. Rinauro v. Honda Motor Co. (1995) 31 Cal. App. 4th 506, 510, 37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 181

Trial court as not abusing discretion in staying action arising from commercial contracts with enforceable forum-selection clause; boilerplate nature of clause as immaterial since plaintiff signed them voluntarily. Cal-State Business Products & Services, Inc. v. Ricoh (1993) 12 Cal. App. 4th 1666, 1681, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 417

In action arising out of employment contract containing a forum selection clause mandating Texas as forum for actions arising out of contract, factors to be considered by California court in determining whether to honor clause as including, in addition to forum selection clause, other relevant factors including: relative availability of evidence and burden of trial in one place rather than other; state's interest in providing its residents a forum or regulating activity involved; ease of access to alternative forums; avoidance of multiplicity of suits and conflicting adjudications; and closeness of connection between cause of action and defendant's local activities. Lifeco Services Corp. v. Superior Court (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 331, 335, 271 Cal. Rptr. 385

In determining applicability of forum non conveniens doctrine, courts must consider public interest as well as private interests of litigants. Goodwine v. Superior Court (1965) 63 Cal. 2d 481, 485, 47 Cal. Rptr. 201, 407 P.2d 1 ; Appalachian Ins. Company v. Superior Court (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 427, 434, 208 Cal. Rptr. 627

Private interest factors are those that make trial and enforceability of ensuing judgment expeditious and relatively inexpensive, such as ease of access to sources of proof, cost of obtaining attendance of witnesses, and availability of compulsory process for attendance of unwilling witnesses; public interest factors include overburdening local courts with congested calendars, protecting interests of potential jurors so that they are not called on to decide cases in which local community has little concern, and weighing competing interests of California and alternate jurisdiction in litigation; in reviewing private interests, no weight should be given to fact California law is more beneficial to plaintiffs than law of alternative jurisdiction so long as alternative jurisdiction affords some remedy; when plaintiff resides outside United States, plaintiff's choice of forum is not a substantial factor in favor of retaining jurisdiction here; when defendant is California resident, California is presumptively convenient forum, but presumption may be overcome by showing that alternate jurisdiction is more convenient place for trial of action. Campbell v. Parker-Hannifin Corp. (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 1534, 1541-1544, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 202

Considerations pertaining to convenient forum includes, inter alia, interest of state in providing forum to its residents; choice of law; relative availability of evidence; ease of access to alternative forum; avoidance of multiplicity of suits and conflicting adjudications; and inconvenience to defendant to defend in local forum. Magnecomp Corp. v. Athene Co. (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 526, 539, 257 Cal. Rptr. 278

In declaratory relief action to determine insurers' obligations to defend and pay asbestos related property damage claims, trial court's grant of motion to stay on inconvenient forum grounds pending resolution of related cases in Ohio federal district court was proper when (1) all parties were before Ohio court, (2) issues in California case and Ohio cases were inextricably intertwined, (3) relevant insurance policy would likely be interpreted under Ohio law, and (4) neither California nor Ohio was demonstrably more convenient for prospective witnesses. Celotex Corp. v. American Ins. Co. (1987) 199 Cal. App. 3d 678, 683-685, 245 Cal. Rptr. 429

Stay of California action concerning defendants' allegedly fraudulent handling of Swiss decedent's estate was proper when plaintiffs had already instituted suit involving similar issues in Switzerland and such suit had both criminal and civil aspects; fact that defendants' invocation of self-incrimination privileges and related problems would require application of Swiss law and that California lawsuit would require defendants to defend themselves simultaneously in two languages and under two different legal systems weighed in favor of application of forum non conveniens. Klein v. Superior Court (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 894, 901-905, 244 Cal. Rptr. 226

Applicable law under choice of law principles is factor in determining whether to invoke doctrine of inconvenient forum; doctrine of inconvenient forum is not to be invoked if it will deprive plaintiff of remedy, but fact that applicable law in California is more favorable to plaintiff does not preclude finding of inconvenient forum. Corrigan v. Bjork Shiley Corp. (1986) 182 Cal. App. 3d 166, 177-179, 227 Cal. Rptr. 247 , cert. denied, 479 U.S. 1049 (1987)

In making its determination to stay or dismiss action for inconvenient forum, court may take into account any consideration which legitimately bears on relative suitability or convenience of the alternative forums; basically, court looks to relative convenience and fairness to parties and witnesses in favoring one forum over another, which forum will best serve interests of judicial efficiency, which forum is most able to obtain jurisdiction over parties and compel witnesses to testify, and relative interest of each state in adjudicating issue. Corrigan v. Bjork Shiley Corp. (1986) 182 Cal. App. 3d 166, 173-174, 174 n.2, 227 Cal. Rptr. 247 , cert. denied, 479 U.S. 1049 (1987)

Imposition of limited jurisdiction over foreign corporations was not precluded by doctrine of inconvenient forum when applicable law was that of forum, relative availability of evidence was in forum, and policy of avoiding multiplicity of suits and conflicting adjudications in other forums would be served. Rice Growers Assn. v. First National Bank (1985)

167 Cal. App. 3d 559, 579-580, 214 Cal. Rptr. 468

Balancing of criteria is appropriate on motion to dismiss for inconvenient forum even when contract contains clause in which parties submit to jurisdiction of any court of competent jurisdiction; court's enforcement of service of suit contract clause as error when public and private interests dictated otherwise. Appalachian Ins. Company v. Superior Court (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 427, 436, 434-438, 208 Cal. Rptr. 627

Fact that large national corporation conducts some business in California does not bring it within favored position, for forum non conveniens purposes, of plaintiff residing solely in California, although different situation would be presented if litigants were incorporated in California or had their principal place of business here. Appalachian Ins. Company v. Superior Court (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 427, 436, 436 n.3, 208 Cal. Rptr. 627

Existence of consolidated Nevada action involving most claims from Nevada hotel fire outweighed California plaintiff's interest in local action, despite presence of some California defendants. Dendy v. MGM Grand Hotels, Inc. (1982) 137 Cal. App. 3d 457, 461-462, 187 Cal. Rptr. 95

[8] Forum Selection Clauses

Non-negotiated forum selection clause in form ticket contract was reasonable and enforceable when (a) no indication that defendant had chosen Florida as forum to discourage legitimate passenger claims, (b) no evidence plaintiffs acceded to clause only through fraud or overreaching, and (c) plaintiffs, Washington residents, conceded receiving notice of clause and therefore presumably had option of rejecting contract with impunity. Carnival CruiseLines, Inc. v. Shute (1991) 499 U.S. 585, 593-595, 111 S. Ct. 1522, 113 L. Ed. 2d 622

Forum selection clause is generally given effect unless it is unfair or unreasonable, or invalid because of fraud or overreaching. M/S Bremen v. Zapata Off-Shore Co. (1972) 407 U.S. 1, 15, 92 S. Ct. 1907, 32 L. Ed. 2d 513

Inconvenience or additional expense not sufficient to render clause unreasonable; court stayed rather than dismissed jurisdiction, permitting opportunity to seek reinstatement of California action if necessary. Smith, Valentino & Smith, Inc. v. Superior Court (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 491, 496, 131 Cal. Rptr. 374, 551 P.2d 1206

A challenge to a forum selection clause cannot properly be raised by demurrer. Miller-Leigh v. Henson (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 1143, 1150, 62 Cal. Rptr. 3d 83

Forum selection clause may be enforced against a plaintiff who is not a party to the contract in question if the plaintiff is closely related to the contractual relationship. The plaintiff challenging the forum selection clause has the burden of showing, in response to a defendant's motion to stay or dismiss, that enforcement of the clause would be unreasonable under the circumstances. Where an entity that is not itself a party to a contract sues in a representative capacity challenging certain contractual terms, it purports to assert the rights of those who are parties to the contract, and is thus "closely related" to the contractual relationship. Net2Phone, Inc. v. Superior Court (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 583, 135 Cal. Rptr. 2d 149

Case law in conflict regarding standard of appellate review of a motion to enforce a forum selection clause; substantial evidence test versus abuse of discretion standard. Intershop Communications v. Superior Court (2002) 104 Cal. App. 4th 191, 199, 127 Cal. Rptr. 2d 847

Forum clause in Internet agreement for registering a nickname or alias with Yahoo!, a California-based Internet message board, was not negotiable and therefor a contract of adhesion and will not create personal jurisdiction. Nam Tai Electronics, Inc. v. Titzer (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 1301, 1311-1313, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 769

Forum selection clause in adhesion contract is enforceable even if defendant did not actually read it if clause provided adequate notice to defendant that defendant was agreeing to jurisdiction cited in contract; however, when clause does not give adequate notice to defendant that he or she is agreeing to jurisdiction cited in contract, requisite mutual consent to that contract is lacking and no valid contract with respect to that clause exists; thus, provision that defendants "Freely Consent to Personal Jurisdiction of the Applicable Jurisdiction ... ," held not to be valid forum selection compelling defendants to litigate in California because it did not give notice that defendants were consenting to have California exercise personal jurisdiction over them in dispute involving their transaction. Hunt v. Superior Court (2000) 81 Cal. App. 4th 901, 908-909, 97 Cal. Rptr. 2d 215

For defendant who is not party to contract to demonstrate it was so closely related to contractual relationship as to be entitled to enforce forum selection clause, defendant must show (1) agreement to be bound, (2) contracting parties' intent to benefit defendant, or (3) defined and intertwining business relationship with contracting party; key to "closely related" test is whether nonsignatories were close to contractual relationship, not whether they were close to third party signator; giving standing to all closely related entities serves judicial economy by making all parties closely allied to contractual relationship accountable in same forum, thereby abating proliferation of actions and inconsistent rulings. Bugna v. Fike (2000) 80 Cal. App. 4th 229, 233-235, 95 Cal. Rptr. 2d 161

One not party to agreement containing forum selection clause has no standing to assert clause unless it can show that it was either an intended third party beneficiary to agreement or so closely involved in agreement or associated with a party to the transaction as to be functionally equivalent to that party. Berclain America Latina v. Baan Co. (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 401, 403, 405-408, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 745

Modern trend is to enforce mandatory forum selection clause unless unfair or unreasonable; factors that apply to forum non conveniens motion do not control, and clause is usually given effect without extensive analysis of factors relating to convenience; clauses that grant jurisdiction to particular forum without expressly making that forum mandatory situs for resolution of disputes (e.g., clauses that call for a party to submit to jurisdiction of "any court of competent jurisdiction" known as a "Lloyd's-type" clause, or more narrowly focused clause that, e.g., party submits to jurisdiction in Los Angeles) are considered permissive only; absent mandatory forum selection clause, forum non conveniens motion requires weighing factors of public and private convenience and normal forum non conveniens analysis applies; although permissive forum selection clause is always entitled to substantial weight, it is only one factor in forum selection mix. Berg v. MTC Electronics Technologies Co. (1998) 61 Cal. App. 4th 349, 358-359, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 523

Defendant who is nonparty to agreement that contains forum selection clause lacks standing to claim benefits from clause unless defendant can establish that defendant is third party beneficiary to agreement or was closely related to the contractual relationship between the parties to the agreement. Bancomer, S.A. v. Superior Court (1996) 44 Cal. App. 4th 1450, 1458-1461, 52 Cal. Rptr. 2d 435

Plaintiff bears burden of proof in opposing enforcement of forum selection clause and must demonstrate that enforcement of clause would be unreasonable under circumstances of case. CQL Original Products, Inc. v. National Hockey League Players' Assn. (1995) 39 Cal. App. 4th 1347, 1354, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 412

In contrast with abuse of discretion standard of review in noncontractual forum non conveniens motion, substantial evidence standard of review applies when forum is selected by contract. CQL Original Products, Inc. v. National Hockey League Players' Assn. (1995) 39 Cal. App. 4th 1347, 1354, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 412 ; but see Bancomer, S. A. v. Superior Court (1996) 44 Cal. App. 4th 1450, 1457, 52 Cal. Rptr. 2d 435 (abuse of discretion standard applies to review of trial court's decision to enforce or refuse to enforce forum selection clause; Cal-State Business Products & Services, Inc. v. Ricoh (1993) 12 Cal. App. 4th 1666, 1680-1681, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 417 relied on for the appropriate standard of review in CQL Original Products, Inc. not followed in Bancomer)

Non-negotiated forum selection clause on form ticket contract is unenforceable as to any plaintiff with insufficient notice of clause since contract may lack mutual consent to that term; remand on issue of notice. Carnival Cruise Lines, Inc. v. Superior Court (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 1019, 1027, 286 Cal. Rptr. 323

Court is required to enforce forum selection clause unless it would be unreasonable to do so on facts of case. Lifeco Services Corp. v. Superior Court (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 331, 334, 271 Cal. Rptr. 385

[9] Motion to Stay or Dismiss Action

Dismissal of action between two east coast corporations respecting an east coast claim, was appropriate remedy, notwithstanding fact that both parties conducted some business in California and contract between parties authorized suit in any court of competent jurisdiction within United States, when California had no interest in lawsuit and neither party was a California resident. Appalachian Ins. Company v. Superior Court (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 427, 438, 440, 208 Cal. Rptr. 627

Balancing of criteria was appropriate on motion to dismiss action between two east coast corporations on east coast claim for inconvenient forum, although contract sued on contained clause in which parties submitted to jurisdiction of any court of competent jurisdiction within United States; trial court's enforcement of service of suit clause and denial of inconvenient forum motion was error when public interests dictated otherwise. Appalachian Ins. Company v. Superior Court (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 427, 434-440, 208 Cal. Rptr. 627

Motion to stay or dismiss action for inconvenient forum involves weighing process relative to convenience of forum. Gould, Inc. v. Health Sciences, Inc. (1976) 54 Cal. App. 3d 687, 692, 126 Cal. Rptr. 726

Motion to dismiss action for inconvenient forum encompasses motion under Code Civ. Proc. § 389 to dismiss for lack of indispensable parties who are nonresidents and not subject to process of California courts. Atlantic Richfield Co. v. Superior Court (1975) 51 Cal. App. 3d 168, 175, 124 Cal. Rptr. 63

[10] Waiver

Forum non conveniens objection is waived if not interposed in trial court; in dependency litigation, nonjurisdictional issues must be subject of objection or appropriate motions in juvenile court, or are waived and may not be raised for first time on appeal; Fam. Code § 3407 [repealed; now see Fam. Code § 3427] permits trial court to find its state to be inconvenient forum even after making initial decree. In re Christopher B. (1996) 43 Cal. App. 4th 551, 558-559, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d. 43 (distinguishing case in which foreign country, acting as amicus curiae, was permitted to raise forum non conveniens issue on appeal although not raised in trial court)

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionPersonal Jurisdiction & In Rem ActionsIn Personam ActionsConsentCivil ProcedureVenueForum Non ConveniensCivil ProcedureFederal & State InterrelationshipsChoice of LawGovernmental InterestsCivil ProceduresPleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to DismissCivil ProcedureJudicial OfficersJudgesDiscretionCivil ProcedureAppealsStandards of ReviewSubstantial EvidenceGeneral OverviewContracts LawContract Conditions & ProvisionsForum Selection Clauses

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 323 JURISDICTION: PERSONAL JURISDICTION, INCONVENIENT FORUM, AND APPEARANCES
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
B. Inconvenient Forum

28-323 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 323.103

§ 323.103 Law Reviews

Stewart, Forum Non Conveniens: A Doctrine in Search of a Role, 74 Cal. L. Rev. 1259 (1986)

Comment, Considerations of Choice of Law in the Doctrine of Forum Non Conveniens, 74 Cal. L. Rev. 565 (1986)

Note, Forum Non Conveniens and the Extraterritorial Application of United States Antitrust Law, 94 Yale L.J. 1693 (1985)

Comment, Jagger v Superior Court: Forum Non Conveniens as a Protective Legal Device, 13 U. West L.A. L. Rev. 221 (1981)

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureVenueForum Non ConveniensCivil ProcedureFederal & State InterrelationshipsChoice of LawGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 323 JURISDICTION: PERSONAL JURISDICTION, INCONVENIENT FORUM, AND APPEARANCES
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
B. Inconvenient Forum

28-323 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 323.104-323.109

[Reserved]

§§ 323.104[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 323 JURISDICTION: PERSONAL JURISDICTION, INCONVENIENT FORUM, AND APPEARANCES
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
C. Motions to Quash

28-323 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 323.110

§ 323.110 Related Publications from Matthew Bender

For discussion of service of summons and forms of summonses, see Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers

For discussion and forms relating to relief from defaults and default judgments and relief from void judgments generally, see Ch. 489, Relief From Judgments and Orders

For discussion and forms of notices of motion and orders generally, see Ch. 372, Motions and Orders

For memoranda supporting and opposing a motion to set aside and vacate a default and default judgment, see California Points and Authorities, Ch. 70, Defaults, Default Judgments, and Relief From Judgments and Orders

For memoranda supporting and opposing a motion to quash service of summons for lack of personal jurisdiction or to stay or dismiss an action for inconvenient forum, or to set aside and vacate a default and default judgment for lack of personal jurisdiction, see California Points and Authorities, Ch. 132, Jurisdiction: Personal Jurisdiction and Inconvenient Forum

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProceduresPleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to DismissCivil ProceduresPleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProceduresPleading & PracticeService of ProcessSummonsGeneral OverviewCivil ProceduresPretrial JudgmentsDefaultRelief From Default

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 323 JURISDICTION: PERSONAL JURISDICTION, INCONVENIENT FORUM, AND APPEARANCES
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
C. Motions to Quash

28-323 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 323.111

§ 323.111 State Statutes

Motion to quash service of summons for lack of personal jurisdiction over defendant. Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(a)(1), (b)

Written notice of motion to quash summons as required to be given as prescribed in Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b). Code Civ. Proc. §§ 418.10(b), 1005(a)(4)

Appeal of order granting motion to quash service of summons for lack of personal jurisdiction or to stay or dismiss action on ground of inconvenient forum. Code Civ. Proc. §§ 904.1(a)(3), 904.2(d)

Mandate to review denial of motion to quash service of summons for lack of personal jurisdiction or to stay or dismiss action for inconvenient forum. Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(c)

Time for responsive pleading under Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(c) after Supreme Court denies petition to review Court of Appeal denial of writ of mandate that was sought to review trial court's denial of motion to quash. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.491

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureVenueForum Non ConveniensCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to DismissCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeTime LimitationsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessSummonsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesWritsCommon Law WritsMandamus

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 323 JURISDICTION: PERSONAL JURISDICTION, INCONVENIENT FORUM, AND APPEARANCES
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
C. Motions to Quash

28-323 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 323.112

§ 323.112 Decisions

[1] Appeal

In connection with motion to quash service of process on jurisdictional grounds, if there is conflict of evidence trial court's factual determinations are not disturbed on appeal if supported by substantial evidence; if there is no conflict in the evidence, however, question of jurisdiction is purely question of law and reviewing court engages in independent review of record. Vons Companies, Inc. v. Seabest Foods, Inc. (1996) 14 Cal. 4th 434, 449, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 899, 926 P.2d 1085

Petition for writ of mandate is appropriate method to order denying motion to quash service of summons for lack of personal jurisdiction; appellate review is de novo because facts were undisputed and because controlling issue was proper construction of terms of written contract; abuse of discretion standard of review concerning a trial court's decision to enforce or not enforce a forum selection clause distinguished. Hunt v. Superior Court (2000) 81 Cal. App. 4th 901, 905 & n.1, 97 Cal. Rptr. 2d 215

When evidence undisputed, jurisdiction question is purely one of law subject to de novo review. Stone v. State of Texas (1999) 76 Cal. App. 4th 1043, 1048, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 657

When no conflict in evidence, question is one of law; in such case, lower court's determination is not binding on reviewing court. Jewish Defense Organization, Inc. v. Superior Court (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 1045, 1055, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 611

With regard to motion to quash, when there is conflicting evidence, trial court's factual determinations will not be not disturbed on appeal if supported by substantial evidence; when no conflict in evidence, however, question of jurisdiction is purely one of law and reviewing court engages in independent review of record. Serafini v. Superior Court (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 70, 77, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 159

When evidence conflicts, appellate court reviews trial court for abuse of discretion, whereas when parties do not dispute facts, appellate court reviews issue of jurisdiction de novo. As You Sow v. Crawford Laboratories, Inc. (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 1859, 1866, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 654

When defendant moves to quash out-of-state service of process for lack of jurisdiction, plaintiff has burden of proof to establish facts of jurisdiction by preponderance of the evidence; evidence of those facts or their absence may be from declarations or verified complaint being treated as declaration for that purpose; if there is conflict in declarations, trial court's resolution of conflict will not be disturbed on appeal if substantial evidence supports that determination; evidence not before the trial court cannot be considered on appeal. Crea v. Busby (1996) 48 Cal. App. 4th 509, 514, 55 Cal. Rptr. 2d 513

In reviewing trial court order granting motion to quash service of summons, appellate court is guided by following principles: (1) where defendant properly moves to quash out of state service of process for lack of jurisdiction, burden of proof is on plaintiff to establish facts of jurisdiction by preponderance of the evidence; (2) evidence of those facts or their absence may be in form of declarations; (3) resolution by trial court of any conflict in declarations will not be disturbed on appeal if determination of that court is supported by substantial evidence. Magnecomp Corp. v. Athene Co. (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 526, 533-534, 257 Cal. Rptr. 278

In reviewing order on motion to quash service of summons, when evidence of jurisdictional facts is not conflicting, question of whether defendant is subject to personal jurisdiction is one of law, and lower court's determination is not binding on reviewing court. Great-West Life Assurance Co. v. Guarantee Co. of North America (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 199, 204, 252 Cal. Rptr. 363 ; Felix v. Bomoro Kommanditgesellschaft (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 106, 111, 241 Cal. Rptr. 670

Facts are viewed most favorably to defendant on review of order granting motion to quash service of summons. Sklar v. Princess Properties International, Ltd. (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 1202, 1208, 240 Cal. Rptr. 102 , disapproved on other grounds in Vons Cos., Inc. v. Seabest Foods, Inc. (1996) 14 Cal.4th 434, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 899 ; University Financing Consultants, Inc. v. Barouche (1983) 148 Cal. App. 3d 1165, 1168, 196 Cal. Rptr. 484 ; Messerschmidt Development Co. v. Crutcher Resources Corp. (1978) 84 Cal. App. 3d 819, 825, 149 Cal. Rptr. 35

When facts set out in affidavits and declarations are widely at variance, those affidavits favoring contention of prevailing party establish not only facts stated in them but also all facts which reasonably may be inferred from them; in event of substantial conflict in facts stated, determination of controverted facts by trial court as binding. R.E. Sanders & Co. v. Lincoln-Richardson Enterprises, Inc. (1980) 108 Cal. App. 3d 71, 74, 166 Cal. Rptr. 269

Failure to seek mandate after motion to quash service is denied and filing answer constitutes general appearance waiving jurisdictional objection; error, if any, in denying motion is not subject to review on appeal from subsequent judgment. McCorkle v. City of Los Angeles (1969) 70 Cal. 2d 252, 256-258, 74 Cal. Rptr. 389, 449 P.2d 453

Appellate courts have inherent power to grant extraordinary relief to prevent action by trial court in excess of its jurisdiction once trial court has rejected objection on that ground. McIntire v. Superior Court (1975) 52 Cal. App. 3d 717, 719-720 n.4, 125 Cal. Rptr. 379

Mandate was remedy to compel trial court to quash service of summons on former administratrix of estate of deceased tortfeasor when, prior to service of summons, order discharging administratrix and sureties was entered, and no notice of pendency of tort action was filed in estate proceeding as required by Prob. Code § 714 (repealed, now see Prob. Code § 9354(b)). Toledo v. Superior Court (1971) 19 Cal. App. 3d 450, 452-455, 96 Cal. Rptr. 842

[2] Burden of Proof

On motion to quash service of summons, plaintiff bears burden of proving existence of jurisdiction, including element of reasonableness, although there is a presumption of reasonableness on a showing that defendant purposefully directed his or her activities at forum residents. Haisten v. Grass Valley Medical Reimbursement (9th Cir. 1986) 784 F. 2d 1392, 1397

When defendant moves to quash service of process on jurisdictional grounds, plaintiff has initial burden of demonstrating facts justifying jurisdiction; however, once facts showing minimum contacts with forum state established, defendant has burden to demonstrate exercise of jurisdiction would be unreasonable. Vons Companies, Inc. v. Seabest Foods, Inc. (1996) 14 Cal. 4th 434, 449, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 899, 926 P.2d 1085 ; Stone v. State of Texas (1999) 76 Cal. App. 4th 1043, 1048, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 657

Once defendant files motion to quash, burden is on plaintiff to prove by preponderance of evidence validity of service and court's jurisdiction over defendant. Bolkiah v. Superior Court (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 984, 991, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 540

When nonresident defendant s personal jurisdiction burden shifts to plaintiff to demonstrate by preponderance of evidence that all necessary jurisdictional criteria are met; once facts showing minimum contacts with forum state established, however, it becomes defendant's burden to demonstrate exercise of jurisdiction would be unreasonable. Jewish Defense Organization, Inc. v. Superior Court (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 1045, 1054-1055, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 611

When plaintiff moves to quash service of process on jurisdictional grounds, plaintiff has initial burden of demonstrating facts justifying exercise of jurisdiction; once facts showing minimum contacts with forum state established, however, it becomes defendant's burden to demonstrate that exercise of jurisdiction would be unreasonable. Serafini v. Superior Court (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 70, 77, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 159

When defendant moves to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction, plaintiff has initial burden of demonstrating facts justifying exercise of jurisdiction; once facts showing minimum contacts with forum state are established, it becomes defendant's burden to demonstrate that exercise of jurisdiction would be unreasonable; when there is conflicting evidence, trial court's factual determinations are not disturbed on appeal if supported by substantial evidence; when no conflict in evidence exists question of jurisdiction is one of law and reviewing court engages in independent review of record. Goehring v. Superior Court (1998) 62 Cal. App. 4th 894, 903-904, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 105

In connection with motion to dismiss or stay for forum non conveniens, although suit will not be dismissed if moving defendant cannot be subjected to jurisdiction in other states, court was unaware of any authority that a moving defendant must show all defendants are subject to jurisdiction in particular alternative forum; in asbestos cases such as that before the court, when there are 200 named defendants, it is unreasonable to expect moving defendant to prove all defendants are subject to jurisdiction in a particular alternative forum. Hansen v. Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp. (1996) 51 Cal. App. 4th 753, 758-759, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 229

When defendant moves to quash out-of-state service of summons, plaintiff has burden of proving jurisdiction by preponderance of evidence. As You Sow v. Crawford Laboratories, Inc. (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 1859, 1866, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 654

When defendant moves to quash out-of-state service of process for lack of jurisdiction, plaintiff has burden of proof to establish facts of jurisdiction by preponderance of evidence; evidence of those facts or their absence may be from declarations or verified complaint being treated as declaration for that purpose. Crea v. Busby (1996) 48 Cal. App. 4th 509, 514, 55 Cal. Rptr. 2d 513

When defendant has moved to dismiss for lack of jurisdiction, plaintiff has burden of establishing that jurisdiction is proper. Seagate Technology v. A. J. Kogyo Co. (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 696, 700, 268 Cal. Rptr. 586

On motion to quash service of summons for lack of personal jurisdiction, plaintiff bears burden of proof to establish facts of jurisdiction; trial court, in ruling on motion, considers evidence relevant to that issue which may be set forth in declarations, treating verified complaint as declaration; on appeal, any conflicts in evidence are resolved against appellant and in support of order. Wolfe v. City of Alexandria (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 541, 546, 265 Cal. Rptr. 881

On motion to quash service of summons, burden of proof is on plaintiff to demonstrate that minimum contacts exist between defendant and forum state to justify imposition of personal jurisdiction, and plaintiff as having right to conduct discovery with regard to issue of jurisdiction to develop facts necessary to sustain that burden. Magnecomp Corp. v. Athene Co. (1989)209 Cal. App. 3d 526, 533, 257 Cal. Rptr. 278 ; Omega Video Inc. v. Superior Court (1983) 146 Cal. App. 3d 470, 481, 194 Cal. Rptr. 574

When defendant properly moves to quash out of state service of process for lack of jurisdiction, burden of proof is on plaintiff to establish facts of jurisdiction by a preponderance of the evidence. Magnecomp Corp. v. Athene Co. (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 526, 533, 257 Cal. Rptr. 278 ; Ziller Electronics Lab GmbH v. Superior Court (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 1222, 1232-1233, 254 Cal. Rptr. 410 ; Felix v. Bomoro Kommanditgesellschaft (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 106, 110, 241 Cal. Rptr. 670 ; Sklar v. Princess Properties International, Ltd. (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 1202, 1208, 240 Cal. Rptr. 102 , disapproved on other grounds in Vons Cos., Inc. v. Seabest Foods, Inc. (1996) 14 Cal.4th 434, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 899

Burden, on motion to quash, is on plaintiff to establish facts of jurisdiction by preponderance of evidence; when evidence of jurisdictional facts, which may be in form of declarations, is in conflict, trial court's resolution of them is not disturbed on appeal if supported by substantial evidence; on review of order granting motion to quash, facts must be viewed most favorably to defendant. Kroopf v. Guffey (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 1351, 1356, 228 Cal. Rptr. 807 ; Messerschmidt Development Co. v. Crutcher Resources Corp. (1978) 84 Cal. App. 3d 819, 825, 149 Cal. Rptr. 35

[3] Evidence

When defendant moved to quash o n ground federal law preempted state jurisdiction of issues involving Indian gaming activities and on ground court lacked personal jurisdiction over tribe, its officers, members, and agents due to sovereign immunity, court concluded that, even assuming sovereign immunity relates to subject matter rather than personal jurisdiction, appellate court is not limited in its review of trial court's ruling to allegations of complaint as if defendant had demurred; trial court had reviewed parties' papers, including documentary evidence and affidavits and rendered judgment in defendants' favor; court of appeal affirmed. Great Western Casinos, Inc. v. Morongo Band of Mission Indians (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 1407, 1415-1418, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 828

Plaintiff's burden to demonstrate by preponderance of evidence that all necessary jurisdictional criteria are met must be by competent evidence in affidavits and authenticated documentary evidence; unverified complaint cannot supply necessary facts; moreover, declarations are insufficient to support assertions for which they are offered if they consist primarily of vague assertions of ultimate facts rather then specific evidentiary facts permitting court to form independent conclusion on issue. Jewish Defense Organization, Inc. v. Superior Court (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 1045, 1054-1055, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 611

Allegations in unverified complaint cannot be used to establish jurisdiction. Goehring v. Superior Court (1998) 62 Cal. App. 4th 894, 909, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 105

Plaintiff is not required to prove truth of allegations constituting causes of action in order to justify exercise of jurisdiction over nonresident parties; however, plaintiff must present facts demonstrating that conduct of defendants related to pleaded causes is such as to constitute constitutionally cognizable "minimum contacts." Magnecomp Corp. v. Athene Co. (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 526, 533, 257 Cal. Rptr. 278

Plaintiff's burden of demonstrating by preponderance of evidence that all necessary jurisdictional criteria are met must be met by competent evidence in affidavits and authenticated documentary evidence; unverified complaint is not to be considered as affidavit supplying necessary facts. Ziller Electronics Lab GmbH v. Superior Court (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 1222, 1232-1233, 254 Cal. Rptr. 410

On defendant's motion to quash out of state service of process for lack of jurisdiction, evidence of facts establishing lack of jurisdiction, or their absence, may be in form of declarations; resolution by trial court of any conflict in declarations is not disturbed on appeal if resolution is supported by substantial evidence. Sammons Enterprises, Inc. v. Superior Court (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 1427, 1430, 253 Cal. Rptr. 261 ; Kroopf v. Guffey (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 1351, 1356, 1359, 228 Cal. Rptr. 807 ; Messerschmidt Development Co. v. Crutcher Resources Corp. (1978) 84 Cal. App. 3d 819, 825, 149 Cal. Rptr. 35

Motion to quash service may be made and determined on hearsay affidavits. Kroopf v. Guffey (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 1351, 1358, 228 Cal. Rptr. 807

[4] Grounds of Motion

Trial court erred in denying Canadian defendant's motion to quash service when service was improperly effected by publication due to plaintiff's failure to exercise reasonable diligence in attempting to locate defendant prior to seeking court permission for service by publication; service abroad under Code Civ. Proc. § 413.10(c) subject to Hague Service Convention; service void if not in compliance with Hague Service Convention even if valid under California law; only method under California law that does not implicate Hague Service Convention is service by publication. Kott v. Superior Court (1996) 45 Cal. App. 4th 1126, 1133-1139, 53 Cal. Rptr. 2d 215

Motion to quash service of summons is strictly limited to question of jurisdiction over defendant; determination of merits of complaint is not within scope of issues raised by motion. Kroopf v. Guffey (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 1351, 1360, 228 Cal. Rptr. 807

Noncompliance with Code Civ. Proc. § 474, relating to fictitiously named defendants, is proper ground of motion to quash. Maier Brewing Co. v. Flora Crane Service, Inc. (1969) 270 Cal. App. 2d 873, 875, 76 Cal. Rptr. 219

Service of summons on fictitiously named defendants was properly quashed when service was made after default judgment against named defendants had become final, and plaintiff had then amended its complaint without permission of court to substitute purported defendants in place of fictitiously named defendants. Mason & Associates, Inc. v. Guarantee Sav. & Loan Asso. (1969) 269 Cal. App. 2d 132, 134, 74 Cal. Rptr. 669

[5] Ruling on Motion

Determination that minimum contacts exist when motion to quash is granted on ground of defective service of process is binding on parties on subsequent motion to quash following second service of process, absent reconsideration by court on proper motion. Ziller Electronics Lab GmbH v. Superior Court (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 1222, 1228-1230, 254 Cal. Rptr. 410

Trial court erred in refusing to quash service of summons on nonresident when plaintiff's claim was based on ownership of vehicle involved in accident in California and defendant had transferred ownership under Oregon law prior to accident. 500 Motors, Inc. v. Superior Court (1981) 122 Cal. App. 3d 827, 832, 176 Cal. Rptr. 349

In ruling on motion to quash service of summons when foreign defendant has insufficient minimum contacts with California to support in personam jurisdiction, court is not required to undertake additional process of balancing inconvenience of defending action in this state against interests of plaintiff in suing locally and of state in assuming jurisdiction. Sibley v. Superior Court (1976) 16 Cal. 3d 442, 448, 128 Cal. Rptr. 34, 546 P.2d 322 ; Sipple v. Des Moines Register & Tribune Co. (1978) 82 Cal. App. 3d 143, 153, 147 Cal. Rptr. 59

[6] Jurisdiction Over Attorney Fee Motion Following Granting of Motion to Quash

Lack of power to rule on the merits of the lawsuit does not necessarily deprive the trial court of jurisdiction to rule upon a collateral motion for attorney fees. A defendant does not forfeit a collateral right to attorney fees by choosing to assert the right to challenge the court's in personam jurisdiction. Shisler v. Sanfer Sports Cars, Inc. (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 1, 8, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 771

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProceduresPleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to DismissCivil ProceduresPleading & PracticeMotion PracticeSupporting MemorandaCivil ProceduresAppealsStandards of ReviewAbuse of DiscretionCivil ProceduresAppealsStandards of ReviewDe Novo ReviewEvidenceProcedural ConsiderationsBurdens of ProofGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 323 JURISDICTION: PERSONAL JURISDICTION, INCONVENIENT FORUM, AND APPEARANCES
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
C. Motions to Quash

28-323 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 323.113

§ 323.113 Law Reviews

Taylor, The Forum Selection Clause: A Tale of Two Concepts, 66 Temple L. Rev. 785 (1993)

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Contracts LawContract Conditions & ProvisionsForum Selection Clauses

155 of 181 DOCUMENTS

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 323 JURISDICTION: PERSONAL JURISDICTION, INCONVENIENT FORUM, AND APPEARANCES
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
C. Motions to Quash

28-323 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 323.114-323.119

[Reserved]

§§ 323.114[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 323 JURISDICTION: PERSONAL JURISDICTION, INCONVENIENT FORUM, AND APPEARANCES
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
D. Appearances

28-323 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 323.120

§ 323.120 Related Publications from Matthew Bender

For further discussion relating to the authority of an attorney to appear and forms for use in proceedings to withdraw an appearance and to strike the answer filed by an attorney without defendant's authority, see Ch. 72, Attorney Practice and Ethics, § 72.190 et seq.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionPersonal Jurisdiction & In Rem ActionsIn Personam ActionsConsentCivil ProcedureCounselGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 323 JURISDICTION: PERSONAL JURISDICTION, INCONVENIENT FORUM, AND APPEARANCES
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
D. Appearances

28-323 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 323.121

§ 323.121 State Statutes

General appearance by party as equivalent to personal service of summons on such party. Code Civ. Proc. § 410.50(a)

Motion under Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10 to (1) quash service of summons for lack of personal jurisdiction, (2) stay or dismiss for inconvenient forum, or (3) dismiss for delay in prosecution under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.110-583.430, and Code Civ. Proc. § 473 or 473.5 motion joined with Section 418.10 motion, as not constituting general appearance by defendant. Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(d)

Application to court or stipulation of parties for extension of time to plead as not constituting general appearance by defendant. Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(d)

Appearance at hearing at which ex parte relief is sought, or appearance at hearing for which ex parte application for provisional remedy is made, as not constituting general appearance or waiver of right to make motion under Code Civ. Proc. § 418 to quash service of summons or to stay or dismiss action. Code Civ. Proc. § 418.11

Stipulation of time within which service of summons must be made, motion to dismiss for want of prosecution, whether joined with motion to quash service or to set aside default judgment, or otherwise, or extension of time to plead after motion to dismiss is made as not constituting general appearance within meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 583.220 (providing that limit within which service of summons must be made does not apply time when defendant generally appears in action). Code Civ. Proc. § 583.220

Bill of exceptions, notice of appeal, or other notice or paper, other than amendments to pleadings, as not required to be served on party who has not appeared in action or proceeding. Code Civ. Proc. § 1010

Answer, demurrer, notice of motion to strike, notice of motion to transfer pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 396b, notice of motion to reclassification pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 403.040 and written notice of appearance constitute appearances. Code Civ. Proc. § 1014

After appearance, defendant as entitled to notice of subsequent proceedings. Code Civ. Proc. § 1014

Service of notice or papers on defendant who has not appeared as not required. Code Civ. Proc. § 1014

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionPersonal Jurisdiction & In Rem ActionsIn Personam ActionsConsentCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to Dismiss

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 323 JURISDICTION: PERSONAL JURISDICTION, INCONVENIENT FORUM, AND APPEARANCES
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
D. Appearances

28-323 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 323.122

§ 323.122 Decisions

[1] Appearance by Attorney

[a] Presumption and Effect

Presumption that attorney has authority to appear for any person for whom attorney professes to act. Gagnon Co., Inc. v. Nevada Desert Inn (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 448, 459, 289 P.2d 466 ; Voinich v. Rolleri (1928) 203 Cal. 379, 382, 264 P. 240 ; Parkside Realty Co. v. MacDonald (1914) 167 Cal. 342, 346, 139 P. 805 ; Pacific Paving Co. v. Vizelich (1903) 141 Cal. 4, 8, 74 P. 352 ; Garrison v. McGowan (1874) 48 Cal. 592, 600 ; People v. American Bankers Ins. Co. (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 742, 746, 236 Cal. Rptr. 501 ; McGee v. Superior Court (1985) 176 Cal. App. 3d 221, 225, 221 Cal. Rptr. 421

Settled law as being that attorney of record has exclusive right to appear in court for his or her client and to control court proceedings, so that neither party, nor another attorney, can be recognized by court in conduct or disposition of case. Wells Fargo & Co. v. San Francisco (1944) 25 Cal. 2d 37, 42-43, 152 P.2d 625

While litigant has duly employed attorney of record, that attorney as retaining exclusive right to appear and control court proceedings on trial or appeal of case, and litigant as precluded from appearing in his or her own behalf. Electric Utilities Co. v. Smallpage (1934) 137 Cal. App. 640, 641-642, 31 P.2d 412

Presumption of due authority of attorney as disputable. Sullivan v. Dunne (1926) 198 Cal. 183, 190, 244 P. 343 ; Wilson v. Barry (1951) 102 Cal. App. 2d 778, 780, 228 P.2d 331

Attorney's notice of appearance for party under Code Civ. Proc. § 1014 as not necessarily required to be in writing, since notice of such appearance may be given by attorney's act of appearing in open court on an application for affirmative relief which could only be granted on hypothesis that defendant had submitted him or herself to jurisdiction of court. Salmonson v. Streiffer (1910) 13 Cal. App. 395, 397, 110 P. 144

[b] Unauthorized Appearance

Fact that attorney may possess necessary authority to represent client in one case as no evidence of attorney's authority to represent client in another and distinct proceeding. Sullivan v. Dunne (1926) 198 Cal. 183, 190, 244 P. 343

Unauthorized appearance by attorney as not constituting appearance by party. County of Merced v. Hicks (1885) 67 Cal. 108, 109, 7 P. 179

When attorney at law, who has no authority to do so, enters appearance of defendant in action without service of process, and fact of want of authority is made to appear, entry of appearance as void. Garrison v. McGowan (1874) 48 Cal. 592, 599-600

Trial court as without jurisdiction to enter judgment against unserved defendant who was represented by unauthorized counsel. Zirbes v. Stratton (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1407, 1414, 232 Cal. Rptr. 653

Defendant for whom general appearance has been entered by unauthorized counsel as able to withdraw from action on sufficient factual showing to overcome rebuttable presumption that attorney has authority to appear for person for whom attorney professes to act. Omega Video Inc. v. Superior Court (1983) 146 Cal. App. 3d 470, 476, 194 Cal. Rptr. 574 ; Wilson v. Barry (1951) 102 Cal. App. 2d 778, 780, 228 P.2d 331

Nonexistent entity as unable to be effectively served with summons as named defendant and as not subjected to court's jurisdiction by general appearance on its behalf unless reasonable confusion by plaintiff and awareness by intended defendant of plaintiff's mistake are inferred from relationship and common financial interest of nonentity and entity making appearance. Omega Video Inc. v. Superior Court (1983) 146 Cal. App. 3d 470, 477, 480, 194 Cal. Rptr. 574

When only basis for jurisdiction of person in a particular case is appearance, purported appearance by an unauthorized attorney as not conferring such jurisdiction. Neihaus v. Superior Court (1977) 69 Cal. App. 3d 340, 346, 137 Cal. Rptr. 905

Attorney as not authorized to appear in action without authority from party on whose behalf he or she appears; hence, insurance company as not required under uninsured motorist provisions of policy to appear and defend action against defendant who has not been served with summons and is under no obligation to appear. Lofberg v. Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co. (1968) 264 Cal. App. 2d 306, 308, 70 Cal. Rptr. 269

[2] Appearance by Answer to Complaint in Intervention

Filing of answer to complaint in intervention does not constitute general appearance with respect to complaint in underlying action so as to prevent discretionary dismissal under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410(a), 583.420(a)(1) for failure to serve summons within two years. Kuchins v. Hawes (1990) 226 Cal. App. 3d 535, 538-541, 276 Cal. Rptr. 281

[3] Appearance by Corporation

Corporation as unable in fact to appear in court except through an agent who, in actions in courts of record, must be a member of State Bar, and lay person who represents corporation as engaged in unlawful practice of law. Merco Constr. Engineers, Inc. v. Municipal Court (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 724, 730, 147 Cal. Rptr. 631, 581 P.2d 636 ; Rogers v. Municipal Court (1988) 197 Cal. App. 3d 1314, 1318, 243 Cal. Rptr. 530

Corporate litigant, although it cannot proceed as moving party in propria persona, as not prevented by its own filing of invalid notice of substitution of attorneys from receiving, and being bound, by notices served on it. Johnson v. Hayes Cal Builders, Inc. (1963) 60 Cal. 2d 572, 577, 35 Cal. Rptr. 618, 387 P.2d 394

Corporation as unable to represent itself in court, either in propria persona or through officer or agent who is not an attorney; corporation as artificial entity created by law and as such can neither practice law nor appear or act in person; out of court it must act in its affairs through its agents and representatives and in matters in court it can act only through licensed attorneys. Paradise v. Nowlin (1948) 86 Cal. App. 2d 897, 898, 195 P.2d 867 ; see also Vann v. Shilleh (1975) 54 Cal. App. 3d 192, 199, 126 Cal. Rptr. 401

By express statutory provision [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 116.540(b)], corporation as authorized to appear in small claims court in propria persona through some representative other than attorney. Prudential Ins. Co. v. Small Claims Court (1946) 76 Cal. App. 2d 379, 386, 173 P.2d 38 ; see also Merco Constr. Engineers, Inc. v. Municipal Court (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 724, 730-732, 147 Cal. Rptr. 631, 581 P.2d 636

[4] Appearance by Fugitive From Justice

Due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. XIV, requires that fugitive from justice be permitted to appear through counsel when sued in civil action based on conduct for which he or she was convicted in criminal prosecution. Doe v. Superior Court (1990) 222 Cal App. 3d 1406, 1407-1411, 272 Cal. Rptr. 474

[5] Appearance by Nonparty

Right of party not named in complaint to appear. Wilson v. Frakes (1960) 178 Cal. App. 2d 580, 582, 3 Cal. Rptr. 434

Order allowing person not a party to action or a necessary party to its determination to file cross complaint as subject to motion to vacate under Code Civ. Proc. § 473. Strauss v. Owens (1957) 148 Cal. App. 2d 570, 574, 307 P.2d 81

[6] Appearance by Plaintiff

Plaintiff as appearing in action by filing complaint subscribed by him or herself or by his or her attorney. In re Estate of Guilford (1885) 67 Cal. 380, 384, 7 P. 763 ; Brown v. Swickard (1985) 163 Cal. App. 3d 820, 826-827, 209 Cal. Rptr. 844

By commencing action for divorce, plaintiff as submitting not only him or herself to jurisdiction of court, but also the res, that is, his status as husband and father; court thereafter as having power to enter effective judgment for or against him, in personam, relative to any substantial allegation of the pleadings. Mikulski v. Mikulski (1969) 2 Cal. App. 3d 1047, 1051, 83 Cal. Rptr. 15

[7] Appearance by Unincorporated Association

Because an unincorporated association resembles a corporation more than it does an individual, unincorporated association is unable to appear in court except through an agent who, in actions in courts of record, must be a member of State Bar, and lay person who represents association is engaged in unlawful practice of law. Clean Air Transport Systems v. San Mateo County Transit Dist. (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 576, 578-579, 243 Cal. Rptr. 799 , cert. denied, 488 U.S. 862 (1988)

[8] General and Special Appearances

[a] Acts Constituting General Appearance

Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(e) does not change the essential rule that a defendant submits to the court's jurisdiction by making a general appearance in an action by participating in the action in a manner which recognizes the court's jurisdiction. It merely delays the effect of such actions until the motion to quash is denied or, if the defendant seeks writ review, until proceedings on the writ have concluded. Once the motion is denied or writ proceedings have concluded, the actions undertaken by the defendant while the motion or writ was pending which recognized the trial court's jurisdiction will be deemed to constitute a general appearance, and no further objection to jurisdiction will be permitted. State Farm General Ins. Co. v. JTs Frames, Inc. (2010) 181 Cal. App. 4th 429, 104 Cal. Rptr. 3d 573

An order to show cause for a preliminary injunction is not within the scope of Code Civ. Proc. § 418.11, which extends only to ex parte applications for provisional relief. This is because a motion for a preliminary injunction involves a determination related to the merits of the case. Thus, by filing a motion for discovery in connection with the order to show cause for a preliminary injunction, a defendant has sought affirmative relief from the court, and is found to have made a general appearance in the action. Factor Health Management v. Superior Court (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 246, 249-251, 33 Cal. Rptr. 3d 599

A defendant who chooses to demur or move to strike must also move to quash; he or she cannot reserve the jurisdictional objection and later file it with his answer if his challenge to the pleadings fails. Active participation in the suit by filing a case management statement, attending conferences, propounding discovery, filing numerous motions to compel when satisfactory responses were not received, requesting various continuances, and filing a motion for summary judgment acts constituting a general appearance. Roy v. Superior Court (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 337, 340-346, 25 Cal. Rptr. 3d 488

Statutory list of acts constituting appearance under Code Civ. Proc. § 1014 is not exclusive; rather term may apply to various acts which, under all of circumstances, are deemed to confer jurisdiction of the person; what is determinative is whether defendant's participation in particular action in some manner recognizes authority of court to proceed; defendant made general appearance in action in which defendant had not been served when trial court ordered action consolidated with another in which defendant had been served and defendant fully participated without objection in consolidated action. Hamilton v. Asbestos Corp. (2000) 22 Cal. 4th 1127, 1147, 95 Cal. Rptr. 2d 701, 998 P.2d 403

Party who has made special appearance for sole purpose of contesting subject matter jurisdiction waives objection to personal jurisdiction and is thereby deemed to have submitted to personal jurisdiction. Janzen v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1997) 61 Cal. App. 4th 109, 116-117, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 260 (Goodwine v. Superior Court (1965) 63 Cal. 2d 481, 484, 47 Cal. Rptr. 201, 407 P.2d 1 distinguished)

Notwithstanding "special appearance" designation on motion to quash, if movant seeks relief on any basis other than lack of personal jurisdiction, he or she makes general appearance. Greener v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 1028, 1037, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 539, 863 P.2d 784

Acts listed in Code Civ. Proc. § 1014 amount to general appearance, but list is not exhaustive. Goodwine v. Superior Court (1965) 63 Cal. 2d 481, 484, 47 Cal. Rptr. 201, 407 P.2d 1 ; Davenport v. Superior Court (1920) 183 Cal. 506, 511, 191 P. 911 ; Brown v. Swickard (1985) 163 Cal. App. 3d 820, 827 n.10, 209 Cal. Rptr. 844 ; Creed v. Schultz (1983) 148 Cal. App. 3d 733, 739, 196 Cal. Rptr. 252 ; Chitwood v. County of Los Angeles (1971) 14 Cal. App. 3d 522, 526, 92 Cal. Rptr. 441

A party who files a response to an order to show cause in which it argues the merits of the motions, challenges the relief sought, and expressly requests that the motions be denied on their merits, has made a general appearance in the matter, whether or not it was a the real party in interest or otherwise a party to the proceedings. People v. Ciancio

(2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 175, 192-193, 134 Cal. Rptr. 2d 531

Initiating discovery unrelated to issue of jurisdiction by issuing deposition subpenas to two treating doctors constituted general appearance; also, while petitions for mandate were pending before court of appeal, participation by defendants' counsel in preparing joint case management statement and appearing and participating in evaluation conference pursuant to local court rules, without limiting appearance to other defendants they represented that did not object to exertion of jurisdiction over them, constituted general appearance thereby waiving objecting defendants rights to superior court's denial of their motion. Mansour v. Superior Court (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 1750, 1757-1758, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 191

Party, even one who has no minimum contacts with forum state, may consent to jurisdiction of court over him or her in particular case by taking part in action or proceeding; when party takes part in action or proceeding, for example, by pleading or participating in trial, party has made general appearance and has consented to jurisdiction. Estate of Heil (1989) 210 Cal. App. 3d 1503, 1512, 259 Cal. Rptr. 28

General appearance is not required to be formal technical step or act; rather term applies to various acts which, under all the circumstances, are deemed to confer jurisdiction of the person; what is determinative is whether defendant takes part in particular action which in some manner recognizes authority of court to proceed. Sanchez v. Superior Court (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 1391, 1399, 250 Cal. Rptr. 787

Defendant has made general appearance, thereby waiving objection to court's lack of jurisdiction over it, by appearing by counsel at hearing for temporary restraining order and order to show cause for preliminary injunction, at which counsel introduced himself as counsel for defendant, failed to confine his remarks to jurisdictional issue and addressed merits of case, and on basis of which trial court denied plaintiff's application. California Overseas Bank v. French American Banking Corp. (1984) 154 Cal. App. 3d 179, 183-184, 201 Cal. Rptr. 400

Service by defendant on plaintiff of notice to take deposition and produce documents constituted general appearance, although notice was not filed with court. Creed v. Schultz (1983) 148 Cal. App. 3d 733, 739-740, 196 Cal. Rptr. 252

Defendant's general appearance in action as obviating necessity of serving and returning summons. Slaybaugh v. Superior Court (1977) 70 Cal. App. 3d 216, 221, 138 Cal. Rptr. 628

Nonresident defendant not subject to judicial jurisdiction in California who appears by formally answering complaint makes general appearance and confers jurisdiction on California court, notwithstanding clause contained in answer to effect that defendant did not intend to subject his person to jurisdiction of court. Neihaus v. Superior Court (1977) 69 Cal. App. 3d 340, 345, 137 Cal. Rptr. 905

Answering interrogatories is general appearance. Chitwood v. County of Los Angeles (1971) 14 Cal. App. 3d 522, 527-528, 92 Cal. Rptr. 441

Appearance of defendant to object only to consideration of case or any procedure in it because court has not acquired jurisdiction over his or her person is special; appearance to ask for any relief which could be given only to party in pending case, or which itself would be regular proceeding in case, is general, regardless of how denominated. Chitwood v. County of Los Angeles (1971) 14 Cal. App. 3d 522, 527, 92 Cal. Rptr. 441 ; Armstrong v. Superior Court (1956) 144 Cal. App. 2d 420, 423, 301 P.2d 51

Filing of motion predicated on theory that court has personal jurisdiction constitutes general appearance. Wilson v. Barry (1951) 102 Cal. App. 2d 778, 781, 228 P.2d 331

Filing of affidavit, other than for purpose of presenting matters bearing on court's jurisdiction is general appearance; affidavit in support of defendant's motion for summary judgment constitutes general appearance. Wilson v. Barry (1951) 102 Cal. App. 2d 778, 781, 228 P.2d 331

[b] Acts Not Constituting General Appearance

Motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction is special, rather than general, appearance. Goodwine v. Superior Court (1965) 63 Cal. 2d 481, 484, 47 Cal. Rptr. 201, 407 P.2d 1 ; contra Greener v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 1028, 1036-1037, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 539, 863 P.2d 784

Objection to interrogatories on ground that they are oppressive made during pendency of motion to quash, was not a general appearance. 1880 Corp. v. Superior Court (1962) 57 Cal. 2d 840, 843, 22 Cal. Rptr. 209, 371 P.2d 985

Defendant makes special, rather than general, appearance when he or she appears in court for sole purpose of objecting to court's lack of jurisdiction over his or her person, without submitting to such jurisdiction. Olcese v. Justice's Court (1909) 156 Cal. 82, 87, 103 P. 317 ; Josephson v. Superior Court (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 354, 361, 33 Cal. Rptr. 196

Filing by defendant of answer to complaint in intervention that was subsequently dismissed did not constitute general appearance in main action by plaintiff against him. Duckett v. Superior Court (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 1419, 1422-1425, 255 Cal. Rptr. 733

Appearance by defendant in one of two actions consolidated for trial does not constitute appearance in the other action. Sanchez v. Superior Court (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 1391, 1397, 250 Cal. Rptr. 787

Husband's motion to quash service of summons and to set aside default judgment, although he had entered general appearance in action after judgment, was proper because by enacting Jurisdiction and Service of Process Act (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 410.10-418.10), Legislature preempted common law rule that general appearance retroactively transforms invalid service into valid one. In re Marriage of Smith (1982) 135 Cal. App. 3d 543, 546, 185 Cal. Rptr. 411

Action on complaint must be distinguished from related action on cross complaint, and general appearance in one action does not necessarily constitute general appearance in other action; appearance by unserved defendant by way of answer to codefendant's cross complaint does not constitute general appearance with regard to original complaint so as to permit plaintiff to serve summons and complaint on defendant's attorney by mail; personal service on defendant is required. Glenwood Homeowners Assn., Inc. v. Prosher Development Ltd. (1980) 111 Cal. App. 3d 1002, 1004-1008, 169 Cal. Rptr. 48

On appeal from judgment of dismissal for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, appearance by defendants, whose motions to quash service of summons had been granted by trial court for lack of personal jurisdiction over them and order had long since become final, by filing of reply brief to merits of appeal, as well as to issue of in personam jurisdiction, as not constituting submission by them to jurisdiction of California courts. League to Save Lake Tahoe v. Tahoe Regional Planning Agency (1980) 105 Cal. App. 3d 394, 399-400, 164 Cal. Rptr. 357

General appearance in action on cross complaint as not constituting general appearance in action on complaint so as to avoid dismissal of complaint for failure to serve and return summons within three (now two) years after commencement of action. Botsford v. Pascoe (1979) 94 Cal. App. 3d 62, 67-68, 156 Cal. Rptr. 177

If, in proceeding begun by attachment in court which has no jurisdiction over defendant, defendant enters appearance for purpose of contesting validity of plaintiff's claim, defendant as not thereby subjecting him or herself personally to jurisdiction of court. Fount Wip, Inc. v. Golstein (1973) 33 Cal. App. 3d 184, 190, 108 Cal. Rptr. 732

Peremptory disqualification of trial judge for prejudice pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 170.6 by party specially appearing for purposes of moving to quash service of summons as not a general appearance. Loftin v. Superior Court (1971) 19 Cal. App. 3d 577, 579-580, 97 Cal. Rptr. 215

Payment of filing fee for filing notice of motion to quash service of summons as not constituting general appearance. Josephson v. Superior Court (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 354, 356-357, 362 n.4, 33 Cal. Rptr. 196

Motion to reconsider denial of motion to quash service of summons as not constituting general appearance when it is limited to the same grounds as original motion. Josephson v. Superior Court (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 354, 358, 362, 33 Cal. Rptr. 196

Notice of motion by "special appearance" to dismiss action against nonresident defendant on ground it is not and has not been corporation licensed to do business in California and was not served in California as special appearance. Hernandez v. National Dairy Products (1945) 126 Cal. App. 2d 490, 492-494, 272 P.2d 799

[c] Effect of Appearance

Defendant who makes special appearance to court's personal jurisdiction but who simultaneously answers to merits as no longer entitled to personal jurisdiction. California Dental Assn. v. American Dental Assn. (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 346, 351-352, 152 Cal. Rptr. 546, 590 P.2d 401

General appearance of party without objection to failure of opposing party to serve process as conferring jurisdiction over person. Harrington v. Superior Court (1924) 194 Cal. 185, 189, 228 P. 15 ; Southern Pac. Transportation Co. v. State Bd. of Equalization (1985) 175 Cal. App. 3d 438, 442, 221 Cal. Rptr. 12 ; Neihaus v. Superior Court (1977) 69 Cal. App. 3d 340, 345, 137 Cal. Rptr. 905

A defendant who makes a general appearance forfeits any objection to personal jurisdiction based on defective service, even when the defendant does not know at the time that such an objection is available. Any rule that a general appearance does not waive objections to service unless the waiver is knowing and intelligent would exalt form over substance; a defendant who has actual knowledge of the action and who has submitted to the authority of the court should not be able to assert a violation of rules that exist only to bring about such knowledge and submission. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. v. Sparks Construction (2004) 114 Cal. App. 4th 1135, 1148, 8 Cal. Rptr. 3d 446

Under Code Civ. Proc. § 410.50(a), general appearance is equivalent of personal service of summons for jurisdictional purposes, dispensing with any need to effect such service and curing defective service or other lack of notice. 366-386 Geary St., L.P. v. Superior Court (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 1186, 1193, 268 Cal. Rptr. 678

General appearance after period for service of summons has run as not giving court jurisdiction over defendant. Dale v. ITT Life Ins. Corp. (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 495, 499 n.4, 255 Cal. Rptr. 8

Defendant who has made formal appearance in case as having submitted him or herself to jurisdiction of court. California Overseas Bank v. French American Banking Corp. (1984) 154 Cal. App. 3d 179, 184, 201 Cal. Rptr. 400

Nonexistent entity as not subjected to court's jurisdiction by general appearance on its behalf unless reasonable confusion by plaintiff and awareness by intended defendant of plaintiff's mistake are inferred from relationship and common financial interest of nonentity and entity making appearance. Omega Video Inc. v. Superior Court (1983) 146 Cal. App. 3d 470, 477, 480, 194 Cal. Rptr. 574

By general appearance, defendant as submitting to in personam jurisdiction of court; by special appearance, he or she as not so submitting. Titus v. Superior Court (1972) 23 Cal. App. 3d 792, 800-801, 100 Cal. Rptr. 477

Appearance in action as conferring jurisdiction on court to enter personal judgment. Riggs v. Riggs (1963) 223 Cal. App. 2d 594, 602, 35 Cal. Rptr. 793

Appearance and failure to answer as constituting admission of truth of allegations of complaint. Haden v. Haden (1953) 120 Cal. App. 2d 722, 725, 262 P.2d 73

[d] Relief Requested

Character of relief asked, not intention of party, controls whether appearance is special or general. Goodwine v. Superior Court (1965) 47 Cal. Rptr. 201, 407 P.2d 1 ; California Overseas Bank v. French American Banking Corp. (1984) 154 Cal. App. 3d 179, 184, 201 Cal. Rptr. 400 ; Hernandez v. National Dairy Products Co. (1945) 126 Cal. App. 2d 490, 492, 272 P.2d 799

California courts have found that parties have generally appeared under varying circumstances in which the defendants sought affirmative relief. A court is thus required to analyze the defendant's papers to determine if any affirmative relief could be granted on the merits, which is a general appearance. Dial 800 v. Fesbinder (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 32, 53, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 711

In determining whether party has made general appearance, court does not look to whether party characterizes its appearance as general or special; rather, court looks to character of relief asked; appearance is general if party contests merits of case or raises other than jurisdictional objections. 366- 388 Geary St., L.P. v. Superior Court (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 1186, 1193, 268 Cal. Rptr. 678

[9] Notice of Appearance

Written notice of appearance as document drawn up especially for that purpose. Russell v. Landau (1954) 127 Cal. App. 2d 682, 698, 274 P.2d 681

Notice of appearance by party in propria persona as required under Code Civ. Proc. § 1014 to be in writing. Salmonson v. Streiffer (1910) 13 Cal. App. 395, 397, 110 P. 144

[10] Sister State Judgments

U.S. Const., art. IV, § 1, which requires full faith and credit be given in each state to records and judicial proceedings of every other state, as applying to records and proceedings of courts only so far as they have jurisdiction, and courts of one state as not required to give full faith and credit to, or regard as valid or conclusive, any judgment of court of another state which had no jurisdiction of subject matter, or of parties, or, in proceedings in rem, of the res; accordingly, jurisdiction of court rendering judgment as open to inquiry, under proper averments, when questioned in court of another state; these rules as applied in case of foreign judgment entered on attorney's unauthorized appearance for party. Gagnon Co., Inc. v. Nevada Desert Inn (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 448, 457, 461, 289 P.2d 466

Lack of attorney's authority to appear and dismiss sister state action with prejudice as permitted to be raised in California action against affirmative defense that California action is barred, under doctrine of res judicata, by sister state judgment. Gagnon Co., Inc. v. Nevada Desert Inn (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 448, 457, 289 P.2d 466

Lack of authority of attorney to appear for defendant in sister state action as permitted to be alleged in California state court in answer to complaint to establish sister state judgment as California judgment; that is, sister state judgment as subject to collateral attack by defendant showing that he or she made no appearance in sister state action. Slack v. Slack (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 530, 539, 50 Cal. Rptr. 763 ; Raynum v. Wallace (1938) 28 Cal. App. 2d 136, 137-138, 82 P.2d 74

[11] Void Appearance

Appearance by guardian ad litem for minor not regularly served as void. Redmond v. Peterson (1894) 102 Cal. 595, 599, 36 P. 923 ; Bank of America v. Carr (1956) 138 Cal. App. 2d 727, 739, 292 P.2d 587

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionPersonal Jurisdiction & In Rem ActionsIn Personam ActionsChallengesCivil ProcedureJurisdictionPersonal Jurisdiction & In Rem ActionsIn Personam ActionsConsentCivil ProcedureCounselGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 323 JURISDICTION: PERSONAL JURISDICTION, INCONVENIENT FORUM, AND APPEARANCES
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
D. Appearances

28-323 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 323.123

§ 323.123 Law Reviews

Note, Special Appearance in California, 10 Stan. L. Rev. 711 (1958)

Note, Procedure: Motions to Quash, Strike, and Dismiss, 43 Cal. L. Rev. 695 (1955)

Comment, Service of Process in Civil Actions in California, 37 Cal. L. Rev. 80 (1949)

Note, Practice: Appearance; Effect of Motion to Dismiss Plaintiff's Action for Failure to Prosecute, 31 Cal. L. Rev. 342 (1943)

Note, Practice: Objection to Jurisdiction Over the Person and the Subject Matter, 30 Cal. L. Rev. 690 (1942)

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionPersonal Jurisdiction & In Rem ActionsIn Personam ActionsChallengesCivil ProcedureJurisdictionPersonal Jurisdiction & In Rem ActionsIn Personam ActionsConsentCivil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to DismissCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 323 JURISDICTION: PERSONAL JURISDICTION, INCONVENIENT FORUM, AND APPEARANCES
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
D. Appearances

28-323 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 323.124

§ 323.124 Text References

Witkin, California Procedure, vol. 2, Jurisdiction, §§ 184-216 (4th ed. 1996)

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 323 JURISDICTION: PERSONAL JURISDICTION, INCONVENIENT FORUM, AND APPEARANCES
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
D. Appearances

28-323 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 323.125-323.129

[Reserved]

§§ 323.125[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 323 JURISDICTION: PERSONAL JURISDICTION, INCONVENIENT FORUM, AND APPEARANCES
PART IV. PROCEDURAL CHECKLIST

28-IV California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated Scope

Scope

NOTE: The following guide is illustrative only of matters generally considered and procedures commonly followed. It is not exclusive. Any given case may require consideration of matters or utilization of procedures not discussed.

The guide is oriented to motions under Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10, that is, to motions by parties who have not previously appeared in the action to quash service of summons for lack of jurisdiction over the person of the defendant, cross defendant, or respondent and/or to stay or dismiss the action for inconvenient forum. The guide also contains some discussion of motions under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473 and 473.5, because they are referred to in Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(d).

For discussion, procedure, and forms relating to Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(a)(3) motions to dismiss for delay in prosecution, see Ch. 212, Dismissal .

However, motions to stay or dismiss actions for inconvenient forum may be made apart from Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10 by parties who have generally appeared in the action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10]. Moreover, with respect to the power to quash service of summons, all courts at law, in the exercise of their inherent power confirmed by statute [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 86(b)(3), 473(d)] to grant relief from void judgments and orders, have power on the motion of a party to grant relief from default judgments that are void for lack of jurisdiction over the person of the defendant [see generally Ch. 489, Relief From Judgments and Orders], and, in granting such relief, to order service of the summons quashed as well.

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 323 JURISDICTION: PERSONAL JURISDICTION, INCONVENIENT FORUM, AND APPEARANCES
PART IV. PROCEDURAL CHECKLIST

28-323 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 323.130

§ 323.130 Moving Party's Guide

[1] Ascertain Facts

1. When, where, and how the summons and complaint were served; obtain the copies served.

2. What the plaintiff's claim against the client is.

3. If the client did not receive a copy of the summons and complaint, how he or she found out about the case.

4. The client's residence and business addresses, employment, and any personal information as to his or her background.

5. If the client is a nonresident, all contacts he or she has or has had with California, including any visits to, property owned, or business interests in this state.

6. Whether a proof of service of summons on the defendant has been filed; if so, obtain a copy).

7. Whether any default or default judgment has been entered against the client, and, if so, whether a Request to Enter Default was served on the client [see Code Civ. Proc. § 587 and Ch. 205, Defaults and Default Judgments ; for discussion of a motion to vacate and set aside a default or default judgment and to quash service of summons, see § 323.157].

8. Any defenses the client may have that will defeat the complaint in whole or in part.

9. If the client is a nonresident of California, any facts that would show that California is an inconvenient forum. For discussion of the factors to be considered, see § 323.35.

[2] Make Preliminary Determinations

1. When any responsive pleading or motion must be filed.

2. Whether the court has or lacks jurisdiction over the defendant. For discussion of the bases of judicial jurisdiction, see the § 323.15. The court lacks personal jurisdiction over a defendant, for example, when:

a. The defendant was not served with the summons and complaint and has made no appearance in the action [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 410.50(a), 410.60].

b. The service of the summons on the moving party was defective, for example:
(1) The summons was not served in a manner authorized either by statute or other law, or by court order [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 413.10, 413.30], or

(2) The service was made by the plaintiff personally [see Code Civ. Proc. § 414.10; see also Code Civ. Proc. § 413.40].

NOTE:
For discussion of the manners in which a summons must be served, see Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers .

c. The summons served on the moving party was defective. For discussion of the required form and contents of a summons in a civil action, see Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers .

d. The moving party is a nonresident of California and has had no contacts of any kind with California, other than the present lawsuit [see Code Civ. Proc. § 410.10; and discussions in the § 323.14 and § 323.15].

e. The moving party is a nonresident of California and lacks sufficient contacts with this state to support the exercise of general jurisdiction over him or her in that the cause of action did not arise out of, and does not relate to, the defendant's limited contacts with California [see Code Civ. Proc. § 410.10; for discussion of minimum contacts, see § 323.14[3]];

f. The defendant is by law immune to suit [for discussion of immunity, see § 323.16].

g. The defendant, although not generally immune to suit, was immune at the time the summons was served on him or her.

h. Defendant is a nonresident who was served while in or passing through California to attend and testify in a criminal matter or grand jury proceeding pursuant to the Uniform Act to Secure the Attendance of Witnesses From Without the State in Criminal Cases [see Penal Code §§ 1334-1334.6; for discussion of witnesses in criminal proceedings, see § 323.16[2]].

i. The defendant is a national bank having no branch in California [see 12 U.S.C. § 94; for discussion of national banks, see § 323.16[4]].

j. The defendant is an American Indian who has not waived his or her immunity or consented to the court's jurisdiction [see generally 25 U.S.C. § 81; 28 U.S.C. § 1360; for discussion of American Indian subject matter jurisdiction, see Ch. 324, Jurisdiction: Subject Matter].

3. If the court has personal jurisdiction over the defendant, determine from the factors ascertained whether California is a convenient or an inconvenient forum for trial.

4. Determine the procedure to be followed. This will include any or all of the following:

a. If the court lacks jurisdiction over the defendant but a proof of service, whether true or false, has been filed, a motion to quash the service of the summons [see Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(a)(1); for a form of noticed motion to quash service of summons, see § 323.150].

b. If the court has jurisdiction, but California is an inconvenient forum, a motion to stay or dismiss the action on that ground [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 410.30(b) (motion made after party has appeared in action), 418.10(a)(2) (motion made before party has appeared in action); for a form of noticed motion to quash service of summons or to stay or dismiss on ground of inconvenient forum, see § 323.150].

c. If a default or a default and default judgment have been entered against the defendant, a motion under Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b), to vacate and set them aside [for a notice motion to vacate and set aside a default or default judgment and to quash service of summons or to stay or dismiss on ground of inconvenient forum, see § 323.157; see also Ch. 489, Relief From Judgments and Orders].

[3] Prepare Papers

1. Notice of motion [for forms, see §§ 323.150, 323.153 and 323.157].

The notice of motion must designate, as the time for making the motion, a date not more than 30 days after filing of the notice [Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(b)].

2. Supporting declarations [for forms of declarations, see §§ 323.151 and 323.154].

3. Written statement setting forth the nature and extent of any oral evidence proposed to be introduced and a reasonable time estimate for the hearing.

4. Memorandum

For forms of memoranda supporting a motion to quash service of summons or to stay or dismiss the action for inconvenient forum, see California Points and Authorities, Ch. 132, Jurisdiction: Personal Jurisdiction and Inconvenient Forum (Matthew Bender). For memoranda supporting a motion to vacate and set aside a void default and default judgment, see California Points and Authorities, Ch. 70, Defaults, Default Judgments, and Relief From Judgments and Orders , Pt. II (Matthew Bender).

5. Proof of service.

For forms of proof of service of papers [Code Civ. Proc. § 1013a], see Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers .

6. Proposed order, if desired [for forms of orders, see §§ 323.152 and 323.158].

[4] Serve and File Papers

1. Serve a conformed copy of the notice of motion and accompanying papers on the other party's attorney, or on the other party if he or she has no attorney [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1015], at least 16 court days, plus any applicable additional period, before the hearing. The 16-day period is extended by a varying number of days depending if service is by mail, facsimile transmission, or overnight delivery [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1005(a)(13), (b), 1010; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 3.1103, 3.1300(a); see also Code

Civ. Proc. § 1010.6(a)(6) (extension in case of electronic service that may apply)]. For a more complete outline of the procedures to follow in serving a notice of motion, see Ch. 372, Motions and Orders , and Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers .

a. Attach an unsigned copy of the proof of service to the papers to be served or:
(1) If service is to be by mail or overnight service, note the date and place of mailing or deposit with the delivery service on the papers served [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1013(b), (d)].

(2) If service is by facsimile transmission, note the date and place of transmission and the facsimile telephone number to which transmitted on the papers served [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1013(f)].

b. Have the person who made the service sign the original and conform the remaining copies.

2. Deliver the originals of the notice of motion and accompanying papers to the court clerk's office for filing [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1302(a)] at least 16 court days, plus any applicable additional period, before the hearing [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1005(b), 1010.6(a)(6); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1300(a)], and pay the required fee [see Gov. Code § 70611 (unlimited civil cases), Gov. Code § 70613 (limited civil cases)]. If not filed with the original papers, deliver the proof of service of the moving papers for filing no later than five court days before the time appointed for the hearing [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1300(c)].

3. If there is a statement regarding oral testimony, file it no later than three days before the hearing. If it is filed less than five court days before the hearing, serve a conformed copy of it on the opposing party, that is, on that party's attorney [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1015] in a manner to assure delivery to that person no later than two days before the hearing [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1306(b)].

[5] Responses to Opposing Party's Declarations, Affidavits, and Memorandum

1. Prepare any reply declarations and any reply memorandum in response to any counterdeclarations and opposing memorandum filed by the opposing party.

2. Serve a conformed copy of each declaration and any reply memorandum on opposing counsel (or on the opposing party if he or she is appearing in pro per), and file the originals, at least five court days before the hearing [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1005(b), 1015; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1300(a); cf. Code Civ. Proc. § 1010.6(a)(6) (two court day extension in case of electronic service; although Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b) expressly excludes extensions under Code Civ. Proc. § 1013, it is silent as to section 1010.6)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProceduresPleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to DismissCivil ProceduresPleading & PracticeMotion PracticeSupporting MemorandaCivil ProceduresPretrial JudgmentsDefaultRelief From Default

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 323 JURISDICTION: PERSONAL JURISDICTION, INCONVENIENT FORUM, AND APPEARANCES
PART IV. PROCEDURAL CHECKLIST

28-323 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 323.131

§ 323.131 Opposing Party's Guide

[1] Make Preliminary Determinations

1. Whether the motion to quash service of summons or to stay or dismiss the action for inconvenient forum is timely. It must have been made [see Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(a)]:

a. On or before the last day of defendant's time to plead or

b. Within any further time that the court allowed.

NOTE:
For when relief after the time specified in Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(a) may be available, see the note at the beginning of this guide.

2. If a motion to vacate and set aside a default or a default and default judgment on the ground that they are void for lack of jurisdiction over the person of the defendant is included [see Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(d)], or if it is the only motion made, whether it was filed within the time limitation specified in Code Civ. Proc. § 473.5(a), which applies by analogy. It must have been made within a reasonable time, in no event exceeding the earlier of two years after entry of a default judgment or 180 days after service of written notice that the default or default judgment has been entered [Code Civ. Proc. § 473.5(a)].

NOTE:
For discussion of potential problems in joining this motion with the statutory motion to quash service of summons, see § 323.157; for discussion of attacks on void judgments, see Ch. 489, Relief From Judgments and Orders .

3. If the motion is timely, whether it and its supporting papers establish a ground for relief. If they do, and there is no defense to the motion, counsel may wish to stipulate that the motion be granted [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 128.6, 128.7 (sanctions for bad-faith actions or tactics, which term includes both the making and opposing of motions)].

[2] Prepare Opposition Papers

1. Counterdeclarations.

2. Written statement setting forth the nature and extent of any oral evidence proposed to be introduced and a reasonable time estimate for the hearing.

3. Memorandum

For forms of memoranda opposing a motion to quash service of summons or to stay or dismiss the action for inconvenient forum, see California Points and Authorities, Ch. 132, Jurisdiction: Personal Jurisdiction and Inconvenient Forum (Matthew Bender). For memoranda opposing a motion to vacate and set aside a void default and default judgment, see California Points and Authorities, Ch. 70, Defaults, Default Judgments, and Relief from Judgments and Orders , Pt. II (Matthew Bender).

4. Proof of Service

For forms of proof of service of papers [Code Civ. Proc. § 1013a], see Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers .

5. Proposed order, if desired.

For form of order denying a motion, see Ch. 372, Motions and Orders .

[3] Serve and File Papers

1. Serve a conformed copy of each of the above described papers on the other party's attorney, or on the other party if he or she has no attorney [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1015], at least 10 calendar days before the hearing [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 418.10(b), 1005(a)(4), (b); Cal. Rules of Ct. Rule 3.1300(a); cf. Code Civ. Proc. § 1010.6(a)(6) (two court day extension in case of electronic service; although Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b) expressly excludes extensions under Code Civ. Proc. § 1013, it is silent as to section 1010.6)]. Notwithstanding any other provision of § 1005, all papers opposing a motion and all reply papers must be served by personal delivery, facsimile transmission, express mail, or other means consistent with sections §§ 1010, 1011, 1012, and 1013, and reasonably calculated to ensure delivery to the other party or parties not later than the close of the next business day after the time the opposing papers or reply papers, as applicable, are filed. This applies to the service of opposition and reply papers regarding motions for summary judgment or summary adjudication, in addition to the motions listed in § 1005(b) [Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(c)].

a. Attach an unsigned copy of the proof of service to the papers to be served or:
(1) If service is to be by mail or overnight service, note the date and place of mailing or deposit with the delivery service on the papers served [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1013(b), (d)].

(2) If service is by facsimile transmission, note the date and place of transmission and the facsimile telephone number to which transmitted on the papers served [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1013(f)].

b. Have the person who made the service sign the original and conform the remaining copies.

2. Deliver the originals of each of the above described papers to the court clerk's office for filing [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1302(a)] at least 9 court days before the hearing [Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b)]; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1300(a); cf. Code Civ. Proc. § 1010.6(a)(6) (two court day extension in case of electronic service; although Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b) expressly excludes extensions under Code Civ. Proc. § 1013, it is silent as to section 1010.6)]. The normal practice is to file the original of the proof of service with the originals of the opposition papers, although it may be filed separately. The latest a paper may be filed to be timely is at the close of business of the clerk's office on the day the paper is due [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1300(e)].

3. If there is a statement regarding oral testimony, file it no later than three days before the hearing. If it is filed less than five court days before the hearing, serve a conformed copy of it on the opposing party, that is, on that party's attorney [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1015] in a manner to assure delivery to that person no later than two days before the hearing [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1306(b)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProceduresPleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to DismissCivil ProceduresPleading & PracticeMotion PracticeOpposing MemorandaCivil ProceduresPretrial JudgmentsDefaultRelief From Default

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 323 JURISDICTION: PERSONAL JURISDICTION, INCONVENIENT FORUM, AND APPEARANCES
PART IV. PROCEDURAL CHECKLIST

28-323 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 323.132

§ 323.132 Hearing and Ruling

[1] Attendance at Hearing

Both counsel should attend the hearing, have any witnesses testify, cross-examine witnesses for the other party, and argue the motion.

[2] Motion Granted

If counsel for the moving party has prepared a proposed order granting the motion, and it is in accord with how the judge ruled, present the original of the order to the courtroom clerk for the judge's signature. Otherwise, prepare the order after the hearing, have opposing counsel approve it as to form, and deliver the original to the judge or to the judge's courtroom clerk to deliver the original to the judge for signature. In either case, have the courtroom clerk conform the copies.

[3] Motion Denied

If the motion is denied, the entry of the order in the court's minute order may be all that is required. However, the judge may direct the prevailing party to draft a formal order. If the judge does so, counsel for the opposing party will prepare the order and present it to the judge, or to the judge's courtroom clerk, for signing, and after it is signed have the courtroom clerk conform the copies.

[4] Notice of Ruling

Unless otherwise ordered by the court, or unless waived by all parties in open court and the waiver is entered in the court's minutes, the prevailing party must [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1019.5(a)]:

1. Prepare a notice of the court's order and a proof of service; for a form of notice of order, see Ch. 372, Motions and Orders ;

2. Serve on opposing counsel; and

3. File the original of the notice and proof of service with the court.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to DismissCivil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsMotions

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 323 JURISDICTION: PERSONAL JURISDICTION, INCONVENIENT FORUM, AND APPEARANCES
PART IV. PROCEDURAL CHECKLIST

28-323 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 323.133

§ 323.133 Post Hearing Proceedings

[1] Procedure When Motion Is Denied

1. Writ Review Not Sought.

If the motion is denied, the defendant, if he or she does not intend to seek writ review (see Paragraph (2), below) must, to avoid the entry of default [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 418.10(d), 585], prepare, serve, and file a responsive pleading within 15 days after he or she has been served with a written notice of the entry of the order denying the motion, or within such additional time not exceeding 20 days as the court may allow on application for good cause shown (see Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(b)). For procedure and forms that may be adapted for use in moving for an extension of time under Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10, see Ch. 524, Shortening and Extension of Time .

2. Writ Review Sought

a. If the defendant intends to seek writ review, he or she must, before pleading and within 10 days after he or she has been served with a written notice of the entry of the order denying the motion, or within such additional time not exceeding 20 days that the trial court may, on application for good cause shown, allow, prepare, serve, and file in the appropriate reviewing court a petition for writ of mandate to require the trial court to enter its order quashing the service of summons or staying or dismissing the action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(c)]. For discussion, forms, and a procedural guide for use in seeking a writ of mandate, see Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibiton .

b. The defendant must also, on or before the last day of his or her time to plead [discussed in Paragraph (1), above], serve on the adverse party and file with the trial court a notice that a petition for writ of mandate has been filed. The timely service and filing of the notice extends the defendant's time to plead until 10 days after he or she has been served with a written notice of the final judgment in the mandate proceeding, or such additional time not exceeding 20 days that the trial court may allow on application for good cause shown [see Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(c); see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.491 (extension of time to plead until 10 days after Supreme Court files it order denying petition for review of court of appeal's denial of writ of mandate)]. Failure to timely serve and file this notice will require that the defendant file his or her responsive pleading as set forth in Paragraph (1), above [see Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(c)].

c. If the writ of mandate is denied, prepare, serve, and file in the trial court a responsive pleading within the time discussed above.

[2] Procedure When Motion Is Granted

An order granting a motion to quash service of summons or to stay or dismiss the action on the ground of inconvenient forum is appealable [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 904.1(a)(3), 904.2(d)], and the plaintiff's remedy is, therefore, to file an appeal. For discussion, checklists, and forms relating to appeals, see Ch. 40, Appeal: An Overview , through Ch. 54, Appeal: California Supreme Court Review , and Ch. 345A, Limited Civil Cases .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to DismissCivil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsAppellate ReviewCivil ProcedurePretrial JudgmentsDefaultRelief From DefaultCivil ProcedureRemediesWritsCommon Law WritsMandamus

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 323 JURISDICTION: PERSONAL JURISDICTION, INCONVENIENT FORUM, AND APPEARANCES
PART IV. PROCEDURAL CHECKLIST

28-323 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 323.134-323.149

[Reserved]

§§ 323.134[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 323 JURISDICTION: PERSONAL JURISDICTION, INCONVENIENT FORUM, AND APPEARANCES
PART V. FORMS
A. Personal Jurisdiction and Inconvenient Forum

28-323 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 323.150

§ 323.150 Notice of Motion to Quash Service of Summons on Ground of Lack of Personal Jurisdiction [Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(a)(1)] or to Stay or Dismiss Action on Ground of Inconvenient Forum [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 410.30(a), 418.10(a)(2)] [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 418.10(b)]

[1] FORM Notice of Motion to Quash Service of Summons on Ground of Lack of Personal Jurisdiction [Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(a)(1)] or to Stay or Dismiss Action on Ground of Inconvenient Forum [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 410.30(a), 418.10(a)(2)] [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 418.10(b)]

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	NOTICE OF MOTION AND MOTION TO
vs.	)	_____ [QUASH SERVICE OF
_____ [name],	)	SUMMONS and/or STAY OR DISMISS ACTION]
Defendant.	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	Judge: _____
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

To _____ [name], plaintiff, and to _____ [name], his/her attorney of record:

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that defendant _____ [name] [appears specially to make this motion only and, so specially appearing,] hereby does and will, on _____ [date], at _____

[time], or as soon thereafter as the matter may be heard, in [_____ (Department or Division) _____ of] this court, located at _____ [street address], _____ [city], move for an order _____ [quashing the service of summons on this defendant and/or staying or dismissing the action]. The motion will be made on the ground(s) that _____ [the court lacks jurisdiction over the person of this defendant and/or California is an inconvenient forum and this action, in the interest of substantial justice, should be heard in a forum outside this state].

The motion will be based on this notice of motion, on the declaration(s) of _____ [name(s)] and the supporting memorandum served and filed herewith, on the records and file herein, and on such evidence as may be presented at the hearing of the motion.
Dated: _____.

_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, is for use by a defendant who has not appeared generally in the action or proceeding to apply for (1) an order quashing the service of the summons on him or her for lack of personal jurisdiction, (2) an order staying or dismissing the action on the ground that California is an inconvenient forum, or both [see Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(a)(1), (2)]. The form may also be used by a defendant after he or she has made a general appearance in the action or proceeding to move for an order staying or dismissing the action for inconvenient forum [see Code Civ. Proc. § 410.30(a); for discussion of what constitutes a general appearance, see § 323.60 et seq.; for discussion of enforcement of forum selection clauses by motion to stay or dismiss, see § 323.34]. With appropriate modifications, the form may also be used by a cross defendant to move to quash service of summons on the cross complaint.

For the showing required to establish the court's lack of in personam jurisdiction over the defendant, and for a list of the factors the court will consider in ruling on a motion to stay or dismiss the action for inconvenient forum, see §§ 323.17, 323.35, 323.50 et seq.

For a notice of motion to quash service of summons based on immunity from service of process or suit, see § 323.153. For a notice of motion on either or both of the grounds set forth in this form joined with a motion for relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 473 or 473.5, see § 323.157.

For further discussion relating to notices of motion generally, including when appearances may be made by telephone in nonevidentiary law and motion hearings, and for a procedural guide that may be followed in making or opposing a noticed motion generally, see Ch. 372, Motions and Orders .

[3] Motion to Dismiss for Lack of Subject Matter Jurisdiction

The California Supreme Court has indicated that a motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, even if raised on a motion to quash along with a to personal jurisdiction, constitutes a general appearance [Greener v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 1028, 1036-1037, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 539, 863 P.2d 784] . The Court did not expressly overrule or even cite earlier Supreme Court cases that allowed a motion to dismiss to be made as a special appearance [see Boisclair v. Superior Court (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 1140, 1144 n.1, 276 Cal. Rptr. 62, 801 P.2d 305 ; Goodwine v. Superior Court (1965) 63 Cal. 2d 481, 484-485, 47 Cal. Rptr. 201, 407 P.2d 1] . Given Greener, counsel should not join a motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction with a motion to quash for lack of personal jurisdiction. Under Greener, joining the two might result in making a general appearance, which would waive the personal jurisdiction objection [see California Dental Assn. v. American Dental Assn. (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 346, 351-352, 152 Cal. Rptr. 546, 590 P.2d 401] . For further discussion of appearances, see § 323.60 et seq.

[4] Form and Contents

A notice of motion under Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(a) generally must designate, as the time for making the motion, a date not more than 30 days after the filing of the notice [Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(b); see also [7], below].

[5] Accompanying Papers

The evidentiary or probative facts establishing the court's lack of personal jurisdiction over the defendant or that in the interest of substantial justice the action should be heard outside California are set forth in an affidavit or declaration [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009, Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5], a copy of which must be served and filed with the notice of motion [Code Civ. Proc. § 1010; see also Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b)].

Evidence received at a law and motion hearing must be by declaration and affidavit and by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code §§ 452-454] without testimony or cross examination, except as allowed in the court's discretion for good cause shown or as permitted by local rule [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 3.1306(a), (b) (setting forth the procedure to follow to request permission to introduce oral evidence); see also Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1306(c) (additional requirements for invoking judicial notice in law and motion proceedings)]. For a form of supporting declaration, see § 323.151.

The motion must also be accompanied by a supporting memorandum. The court may construe the absence of the memorandum as an admission that the motion is not meritorious and cause for its denial [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(a); see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1005(b), 1010].

For memoranda supporting and opposing a motion to quash service of summons for lack of personal jurisdiction or to stay or dismiss an action for inconvenient forum, see California Points and Authorities, Ch. 132, Jurisdiction: Personal .

[6] Copies to Prepare

The notice of motion, and its accompanying papers, should be prepared in an original for filing, one copy for service on the plaintiff or plaintiff's counsel [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1015], one office copy, and any additional copies that may be required by the court.

[7] Service and Filing

[a] Time Requirements

A defendant must serve and file the notice of motion no later than the last day of his or her time to plead, unless the court for good cause allows further time [see Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(a)].

The notice of motion under Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(a) must designate, as the time for making the motion, a date not more than 30 days after the filing of the notice [Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(b); see also Code Civ. Proc. § 1167.4(a) (in proceeding for unlawful or forcible detainer or forcible entry, time for making motion is not less than three or more than seven days after the filing of the notice)]. Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(b) further provides that the notice must be served in the same manner, and at the same times, prescribed by Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b) [Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(b); see also Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(a)(4)].

Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b) provides that, unless otherwise ordered or specifically provided by law, copies of all moving and supporting papers must be served (and the originals filed) at least 16 court days before the hearing, but that, if the notice is served by mail, the required 16-day period of notice before the hearing is increased by five calendar days if the place of mailing and the place of address are within California, 10 calendar days if either the place of mailing or the place of address is outside California but within the United States, and 20 calendar days if either the place of mailing or the place of address is outside the United States. If notice is served by facsimile transmission or overnight delivery, the required 16-day period of notice before the hearing is increased by two calendar days [Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b); cf. Code Civ. Proc. § 1010.6(a)(6) (two court day extension in case of electronic service; although Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b) expressly excludes extensions under Code Civ. Proc. § 1013, it is silent as to section 1010.6)]. The court, or judge of the court, may prescribe a shorter time [Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b); see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1300(b)].

[b] Motion to Stay or Dismiss Made After General Appearance

Unlike a motion to quash service of summons, a motion to stay or dismiss an action for inconvenient forum can be made after the defendant has made a ge neral appearance in the action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 410.30(a)], in which case the provisions for service and filing under Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10 do not apply [Code Civ. Proc. § 410.30(b)]. Instead, the motion is governed solely by Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(a)(13)].

[8] Cross References

For a declaration in support of this motion, see § 323.151

For an ordering granting a motion to quash service of summons of to stay or dismiss the action on grounds of inconvenient forum, see § 323.152

See discussion and forms relating to affidavits and declarations generally, see Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations

For memoranda supporting and opposing a motion to quash service of summons for lack of personal jurisdiction or to stay or dismiss an action for inconvenient forum, see s California Points and Authorities, Ch. 132, Jurisdiction: Personal Jurisdiction and Inconvenient Forum

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 323 JURISDICTION: PERSONAL JURISDICTION, INCONVENIENT FORUM, AND APPEARANCES
PART V. FORMS
A. Personal Jurisdiction and Inconvenient Forum

28-323 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 323.151

§ 323.151 Declaration in Support of Motion to Quash Service of Summons on Ground of Lack of Personal Jurisdiction or to Stay or Dismiss Action on Ground of Inconvenient Forum

[1] FORM Declaration in Support of Motion to Quash Service of Summons on Ground of Lack of Personal Jurisdiction or to Stay or Dismiss Action on Ground of Inconvenient Forum [Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	DECLARATION OF _____ [name]
vs.	)	IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO
_____ [name],	)	_____ [QUASH SERVICE OF Defendant.	)	SUMMONS and/or STAY OR DISMISS ACTION]
	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	Judge: _____
		Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

I, _____ [name], declare:

1. I am _____ [identify declarant, e.g., the defendant herein or an attorney at law duly admitted to practice before all the courts of the State of California and the attorney of record herein for the defendant] and I make this declaration in support of _____ [specify, e.g., my or defendant's] motion _____

[to quash service of summons for lack of jurisdiction and/or to stay or dismiss the action for inconvenient forum]. [My authority in this case is limited to appearing on behalf of defendant _____ (name) on this motion and for no other purpose.]

[EITHER, if service of summons was defective]

2. _____ [Set forth specific evidentiary or probative facts which establish the ground of the motion to quash for defective service, e.g., On or about August 14, 1990, I was contacted by phone by _____ (name) (hereinafter referred to as "my client") who told me he/she had just received by mail a paper entitled "Amendment to Complaint" in which it was stated that the complaint in the action had been amended to show that my client was the person sued therein as "Doe I." I asked what the lawsuit was about and my client said he/she didn't know, that this was the first he/she had heard of it. I secured the file number from my client and went immediately to the courthouse, where I pulled the court file and examined it. I found that the original complaint named one person (not my client) and 50 Does as defendants. I examined the proofs of service and discovered one which stated that my client had been served on August 4, 1990, by leaving a copy of the summons and a copy of the complaint at my client's home address (which is stated as "1001 Windsor Street, Erehwon") with a "Rose Beam, a person over the age of 18 years and a competent member of defendant's household" and by "thereafter on the same day mailing a copy of the summons and a copy of the complaint to him/her at the same address." The court is hereby requested to take judicial notice of the foregoing return of summons in this case. My client is a childless widower/widow who lives alone at 1001 Tudor Street in Erehwon and has, to my knowledge, resided alone at that address and no other for the past 15 years. As shown by the declaration of my client, herewith submitted, my client has never heard of any Rose Beam, hasn't the slightest idea who she is, whether she resides at 1001 Windsor Street, Erehwon, or whether she exists at all (no person by that name is listed in the local phone directory), and has never been served with the summons and complaint, or either of them, in this action].

[OR, if summons served was defective]

2. _____ [Set forth specific evidentiary or probative facts which establish the ground of the motion to quash for defective summons, e.g., The summons herein issued, served on _____ (name) (hereinafter referred to as "my client"), and returned to the court is a typewritten summons that neither contains the matter required by Section 412.20 of the Code of Civil Procedure nor is the form prescribed by the Judicial Council of California, use of which is mandatory. Specifically, the summons omits the following statements required by the foregoing code section: _____ (specify). Moreover, neither the complaint herein nor the summons specifically names my client as a defendant and if he/she is a defendant at all it must be because he/she is one of the defendants fictitiously named. Yet, the summons fails to state that my client is a person sued as one or any of the fictitiously named defendants and the return of service fails to indicate that he/she was so served. The court is hereby requested to take judicial notice of the complaint, summons, and return of summons filed in this case].

[OR if defendant lacks sufficient minimum contacts with California or California is an inconvenient forum]

2. _____ [Set forth in this and the following paragraphs specific evidentiary or probative facts, and, if appropriate, reference to the court's records and file in the case, which establish the ground of the motion to quash service of summons for insufficient contacts with California or to stay or dismiss the action for inconvenient forum, e.g., As shown by the complaint herein, this action arose out of a vehicle collision in Colorado between a car owned and being driven by plaintiff, then a resident of Nevada and now a resident of California, and a car owned and being driven by defendant. As shown by defendant's declaration herewith submitted, defendant now is and at the time of the collision was a resident of Colorado and (at all times, other than for a brief 10-day vacation in Hawaii, hereinafter mentioned) was _____ (served with process in this action in that state or and is amenable to service of process in that state). As further shown by defendant's declaration, defendant herewith submitted, my client has never resided or done business of any kind in California (and his/her only connection with this state was his/her laying over in San Francisco on August 14, 1990, on his/her way to vacation in Honolulu, Hawaii, at which time he/she was personally served with the summons and complaint herein.)]

3. On _____ [date], I phoned the _____ (law enforcement investigative agency) in Colorado and in response to my inquiry was informed that an accident report covering the subject collision had been prepared and filed by _____ (name of investigating officer), a _____ (title or rank) assigned to _____ (investigating agency) and whose unit address and phone number were _____. On the same day, I phoned the investigating officer who confirmed that he/she had prepared and filed an accident report and that he/she would send me a verified copy of it. Thereafter, on or about _____ (date), I received a copy of the accident report verified by the affidavit of _____ (name), the investigating officer. A copy of this report and affidavit are attached hereto as Exhibit A and made a part hereof. This report concludes that the collision was caused by plaintiff's _____ (describe negligent act). In his/her cover letter accompanying the report and affidavit, a copy of which is attached hereto as Exhibit B and made a part hereof, the investigating officer expresses a desire to furnish me with whatever information he/she has and a willingness to testify as a witness in any trial held in Colorado, but specifically declines to attend any trial in California. As further shown by the report, the names of the witnesses to the collision, all of whom gave a Colorado address, are as follows: _____ (set forth names of witnesses).]

4. [On _____ (date), I phoned each of these witnesses at his or her home in Colorado and ascertained from each facts from which I concluded that each was a percipient witness to the collision and that the testimony of each would be required at the trial of this action. Of these witnesses, _____ (name(s)) categorically stated that they would not come to California for trial or for any other purpose. Witness _____ (name) told me that he/she would come to California only if he/she could bring his wife and children and all their expenses were paid by the defendant. On the other hand, each of these witnesses would, if the action were filed in Colorado, either testify willingly or be subject to subpoena in that state.]

[CONTINUE]

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of California that the foregoing is true and correct.

_____ [date]

_____ [signature]

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, illustrates the contents of a declaration under penalty of perjury (Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5) that might be filed in support of a either (1) motion to quash service of summons by a defendant, who has made no general appearance in the case, on the ground that the court lacks jurisdiction over his or her person, or (2) to stay or dismiss the action on the ground of inconvenient forum before or after the defendant has made a general appearance in the case [Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(a)(1), (2); see Code Civ. Proc. § 410.30(a)].

The declaration must set forth the facts, as opposed to conclusions, that establish the grounds of the motion. For further discussion regarding the showing required to establish the court's lack of in personam jurisdiction over the defendant, and for a list of the factors the court will consider in ruling on a motion to stay or dismiss the action for inconvenient forum, see §§ 323.17, 323.35.

[3] Authority for Use of Affidavits or Declarations

Code Civ. Proc. § 2009, which sets forth generally the purposes for which affidavits may be used, authorizes their use "upon a motion." The use of affidavits on a motion to quash service of summons has expressly been held to be authorized by Code Civ. Proc. § 2009 [Fuller v. Lindenbaum (1938) 29 Cal. App. 2d 227, 230, 84 P.2d 155 ; see also Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1306].

Nevertheless, in determining the authority for the use of affidavits on a motion to quash service of summons for lack of personal jurisdiction, one court of appeal has said that Code Civ.Proc. § 2009 does not specifically set forth among the uses of an affidavit the support of a motion to quash service and that Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10, authorizing motions to quash, does not expressly permit such use of an affidavit [Kroopf v. Guffey (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 1351, 1358 n.3, 228 Cal. Rptr. 807] . Although the court in Kroopf was of the opinion that affidavits on a motion to quash were not specifically authorized by Code Civ. Proc. § 2009, it nevertheless concluded that case law does support the use of affidavits in support of a motion to quash service of summons [Kroopf v. Guffey (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 1351, 1358 n.3, 228 Cal. Rptr. 807] . In any event, even though Code Civ. Proc. § 2009 does not specifically mention a motion to quash service of summons, neither does it mention any other motion; it is general statute authorizing the use of affidavits "upon a motion." Because Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10 does not prohibit the use of affidavits on a motion to quash either expressly or by implication, it would appear that better view is that Code Civ. Proc. § 2009 does authorize their use in a motion under Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10.

The use of declarations under penalty of perjury in lieu of affidavits is authorized by Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5.

[4] Form and Contents of Affidavit or Declaration

An affidavit (or declaration under penalty of perjury [Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) normally has to set forth facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant, and show that the affiant, if sworn as a witness, would be competent to testify to the facts stated [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2002; see also Evid. Code §§ 700, 702, 1200(b)].

Although some statutes expressly require that affidavits or declarations filed on a motion be based on the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see, e.g., Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(d) (motion for summary judgment)], and other statutes permit affidavits or declarations on information and belief [see, e.g., Code Civ. Proc. § 482.040 (application for attachment orders)], most statutes relating to motions are silent as to the whether the affidavits or declarations must be based on personal knowledge or may be made on information and belief [see, e.g., Code Civ. Proc. §§ 418.10 (motions to quash service of summons for lack of jurisdiction or to stay or dismiss an action for inconvenient forum), 2009 (authorizing the use of affidavits on a motion)].

The Supreme Court has stated that, while an affidavit is normally presumed to state matters personally known to the affiant and lacks evidentiary value when based on information and belief or hearsay, it is not true that an affidavit on information and belief is an anomaly in the law, bereft of legal significance. There are numerous exceptions to the general rule prohibiting affidavits on information and belief, either where the facts to be established are incapable of positive averment, or where expressly permitted by statute, and that it is incorrect to suggest that a statute which requires the filing of an affidavit necessarily implies a requirement of personal knowledge on the part of the affiant [City of Santa Cruz v. Municipal Court (1989) 49 Cal. 3d 74, 88-89, 260 Cal. Rptr. 520, 776 P.2d 222 (involving a motion under Evid. Code § 1043)].

The Court in City of Santa Cruz cited Davis-Heller-Pearce Co. v. Ramont (1924) 66 Cal. App. 778, 780, 226 P. 972 , involving a motion to quash service, as authority for its statement that affidavits on information and belief may be sufficient when the facts would otherwise be difficult or impossible to establish [City of Santa Cruz v. Municipal Court (1989) 49 Cal. 3d 74, 88, 260 Cal. Rptr. 520, 776 P.2d 222] . However, the Court's citation of Davis-Heller-Pearce should be regarded as implying that an affidavit on information and belief is sufficient to support a motion to quash service of summons. The only issue involved in Davis-Heller-Pearce was the sufficiency of an affidavit for publication of the summons which was made by a stranger to the action and stated on information and belief that the defendant was no longer residing in California but was a resident of Tucson, Arizona; the court in Davis-Heller-Pearce held that an affidavit may be made by a stranger to the action and that the affidavit was sufficient to obtain the order for publication of summons because the affiant showed due diligence in acquiring the information and set forth the facts on which his belief was based. So holding, the court affirmed the order denying the motion to quash.

An affidavit to be used as evidence must be positive, direct, and not based on inadmissible hearsay to which a proper objection is made [see Star Motor Imports, Inc. v. Superior Court (1979) 88 Cal. App. 3d 201, 204, 151 Cal. Rptr. 721 ; Flood v. Simpson (1975) 45 Cal. App. 3d 644, 649, 119 Cal. Rptr. 675] . Thus, the better, if not required, practice, in the case of an affidavit or declaration in support of a motion to quash service of summons or to stay or dismiss an action for inconvenient forum, is to set forth probative facts within the affiant's or declarant's personal knowledge unless the facts are difficult or impossible to establish as so come within the exception discussed in City of Santa Cruz. In addition, any documents to be attached to a declaration in support of the motion should be properly authenticated [see Evid. Code § 1400 et seq. (writings); see also Evid. Code §§ 1151 et seq. (specific matters), 1200 et seq. (hearsay rule and exceptions)].

On the other hand, an affidavit or declaration based on information and belief is competent evidence unless an objection is interposed on the ground that the affiant or declarant has no personal knowledge of the matter [McLellan v. McLellan (1972) 23 Cal. App. 3d 343, 359-360, 100 Cal. Rptr. 258] . Moreover, hearsay or other incompetent evidence in an affidavit or declaration received without a proper objection or motion to strike, is to be regarded as competent evidence in support of the subsequent order [Flood v. Simpson (1975) 45 Cal. App. 3d 644, 649, 119 Cal. Rptr. 675 ; see also Kroopf v. Guffey (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 1351, 1358-1360, 228 Cal. Rptr. 807 (holding that 15 attachments to plaintiff's affidavit in opposition to a motion to quash service of summons were properly considered by the trial court which received them without any hearsay objection; motion to quash service of summons may be heard and determined on hearsay affidavits)].

[5] Cross References

For a notice of motion to quash service of summons of to stay or dismiss the action on grounds of inconvenient forum that is filed with this declaration, see § 323.150

For an ordering granting a motion to quash service of summons of to stay or dismiss the action on grounds of inconvenient forum, see § 323.152

See discussion and forms relating to affidavits and declarations generally, see Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 323 JURISDICTION: PERSONAL JURISDICTION, INCONVENIENT FORUM, AND APPEARANCES
PART V. FORMS
A. Personal Jurisdiction and Inconvenient Forum

28-323 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 323.152

§ 323.152 Order Granting Motion to Quash Service of Summons on Ground of Lack of Personal Jurisdiction or to Stay or Dismiss Action on Ground of Inconvenient Forum

[1] FORM Order Granting Motion to Quash Service of Summons on Ground of Lack of Personal Jurisdiction or to Stay or Dismiss Action on Ground of Inconvenient Forum

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)
Plaintiff,	)
vs.	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	ORDER
Defendant.	)
	)
	)

The motion of defendant _____ [name] [,who appeared specially only,] for an order _____ [quashing service of summons on him/her and/or staying or dismissing the action on the ground of inconvenient forum] came on regularly for hearing by the court on _____ [date]. Plaintiff appeared by counsel _____ [name]; defendant appeared by counsel _____ [name].

On proof made to the satisfaction of the court that _____ [the court has no jurisdiction over the person of the defendant and/or California is an inconvenient forum for the trial of this action which, in the interest of substantial justice, should be tried in the proper court in the State of _____ (specify, e.g., Colorado)], and that the motion, therefore, ought to be granted,

IT IS ORDERED that the motion be, and it hereby is, granted and that the _____ [service of the summons on the defendant herein be and is quashed and/or the above-entitled action be and is _____ (stayed [on the condition that _____ (specify)] or dismissed)]
Dated: _____.

_____ [signature]
Judge of the Superior Court

[2] Use of Form

The form of order in [1], above, is for use to order that the service of summons on a defendant be quashed for lack of personal jurisdiction [see Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(a)(1)] or that the action be stayed or dismissed on the ground of inconvenient forum [see Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(a)(2)].

For a form of notice of the court's ruling to be served by the prevailing party on all other parties as provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 1019.5(a), see Ch. 372, Motions and Orders .

[3] Cross References

For a notice of motion to quash service of summons of to stay or dismiss the action on grounds of inconvenient forum that is filed with this declaration, see § 323.150

For an a declaration in support of a motion to quash service of summons of to stay or dismiss the action on grounds of inconvenient forum, see § 323.151

For discussion of orders by the court, see Ch. 372, Motions and Orders

171 of 181 DOCUMENTS

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 323 JURISDICTION: PERSONAL JURISDICTION, INCONVENIENT FORUM, AND APPEARANCES
PART V. FORMS
A. Personal Jurisdiction and Inconvenient Forum

28-323 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 323.153

§ 323.153 Notice of Motion to Quash Service of Summons on Ground of Lack of Personal Jurisdiction [Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(a)(1)] Because Defendant Is Immune to Service of Process or Suit [22 U.S.C. § 254d; Cal. Const., art. IV, § 14; Penal Code §§ 1334.4, 1334.5, 1555] [Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(b)]

[1] FORM Notice of Motion to Quash Service of Summons on Ground of Lack of Personal Jurisdiction [Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(a)(1)] Because Defendant Is Immune to Service of Process or Suit [22 U.S.C. § 254d; Cal. Const., art. IV, § 14; Penal Code §§ 1334.4, 1334.5, 1555] [Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(b)]

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	NOTICE OF MOTION AND MOTION TO QUASH
Plaintiff,	)	SERVICE OF SUMMONS
vs.	)	Date: _____
_____ [name],	)	Time: _____
Defendant.	)	Location: _____
	)	Judge: _____
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
	)	[Trial Date: _____]

_____

To _____ [name], Plaintiff, and to _____ [name], his/her attorney of record:

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that defendant appears specially to make this motion only and, so specially appearing, will, on _____ [date], at _____ [time], or as soon thereafter as the matter may be heard, in [_____ (Department or Division) _____ of] this court, located at _____ [street address], _____ [city], move, and hereby does move, for an order quashing service of the summons on him/her. The motion will be made on the ground that the court lacks jurisdiction over the defendant for the reason that defendant is _____ [specify, e.g., a nonresident] who was at the time the summons was served on him/her immune to _____ [service of process in this _____ (action or proceeding) or suit].

The motion will be based on this notice of motion, on the declaration(s) of _____ [name(s)] and the supporting memorandum served and filed herewith, on the records and file herein, and on such evidence as may be presented at the hearing of the motion.
Dated: _____.

_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Use of Form

The notice of motion in [1], above, is for use by a defendant to secure an order quashing service of the summons on the ground that defendant was immune to service of process or to suit at the time the summons was served [see, e.g., 22 U.S.C. § 254d; Cal. Const., art. IV, § 14; for further discussion of this immunity, see the Introduction under Immunities From Service or Suit]. For a form of order granting the motion that may be adapted for use if the motion is granted, see § 323.152.

It appears that a person who is immune to civil process would be immune to a subpoena issued in a civil case as well as to a summons [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1985, 1987.1, 1989; Gov. Code § 22]. For further discussion of subpoenas and general forms of notice of motion to quash service of subpoenas and related papers, see Ch. 535, Subpoena .

[3] Accompanying Papers

The evidentiary or probative facts establishing the court's lack of personal jurisdiction over the defendant or that in the interest of substantial justice the action should be heard outside California are set forth in an affidavit or declaration [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009, Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5], a copy of which must be served and filed with the notice of motion [Code Civ. Proc. § 1010; see also Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b)]. For a form of declaration to accompany this notice of motion, see § 323.154. For additional discussion of declarations and evidence to be received at the hearing on the motion, see § 323.150[5].

The motion must also be accompanied by a supporting memorandum. The court may construe the absence of the memorandum as an admission that the motion is not meritorious and cause for its denial [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(a); see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1005(b), 1010].

For memoranda supporting and opposing a motion to quash service of summons for lack of personal jurisdiction or to stay or dismiss an action for inconvenient forum, see California Points and Authorities, Ch. 132, Jurisdiction: Personal .

[4] Cross References

For a declaration in support of this motion, see § 323.154

For an ordering granting a motion to quash service of summons that may be modified to provide that the defendant is immune to service of process, see § 323.152

For discussion of form and contents of the motion, copies, service, and filing requirements, see § 323.150

172 of 181 DOCUMENTS

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 323 JURISDICTION: PERSONAL JURISDICTION, INCONVENIENT FORUM, AND APPEARANCES
PART V. FORMS
A. Personal Jurisdiction and Inconvenient Forum

28-323 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 323.154

§ 323.154 Declaration in Support of Motion to Quash Service of Summons on Ground of Lack of Personal Jurisdiction Because Defendant Is Immune to Service of Process or Suit

[1] FORM Declaration in Support of Motion to Quash Service of Summons on Ground of Lack of Personal Jurisdiction Because Defendant Is Immune to Service of Process or Suit

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	DECLARATION OF _____ [name]
vs.	)	IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO QUASH SERVICE
_____ [name],	)	OF SUMMONS
Defendant.	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	Judge: _____
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

I, _____ [name], declare:

1. I am the defendant herein and make this declaration in support of my motion to quash the service of the summons on me for lack of jurisdiction.

[Specify fact or facts exempting defendant from service of process or suit, e.g.:]

[EITHER, if defendant has diplomatic immunity]

2. I am the _____ [head of a foreign diplomatic mission or a member of the staff of a foreign diplomatic mission and have diplomatic rank] in that _____ [specify title, position, and function showing foregoing status], and am therefore immune to civil suit pursuant to the provisions of Section 254d of Title 22 of the United States Code.

[OR, if defendant has legislative immunity]

2. I am a duly qualified and acting member of the California State _____ [Assembly or Senate], having been elected from the _____ District. I was served with the summons in this _____ [action or proceeding] on _____ [date] as I was leaving a session of the California State _____ [Assembly or Senate] at the State Capitol in Sacramento for _____ [specify, e.g., a lunch break]. At the time of service, I was immune to process under the provisions of Article IV, Section 14, of the California Constitution.

[OR, if nonresident defendant was served while in California in response to subpoena in criminal case]

2. I neither live nor reside [, and have never lived or resided,] in California and am a resident of the _____ (e.g., State) of _____]. I arrived in California on _____ [date] [on my way to _____ [city] and was served with summons in this action on _____ [that date or on _____ (date)], at _____ [place]. As shown by the complaint herein, the cause of action sued on arose prior to my entry into California. At the time the summons was served on me, I was in California in response to a subpoena issued under the Uniform Act to Secure the Attendance of Witnesses from Without the State in Criminal Cases requiring my presence to testify in the _____ [matter or proceeding or case] of _____ [title], then pending before the _____ [title of court]. A copy of the subpoena is attached hereto as Exhibit A and made a part hereof. I _____ [attended the court proceeding to which I had been subpoenaed to testify as a witness from _____ (date) to _____ (date), on which latter date I was discharged and left California or commenced attendance at the court proceeding to which I had been subpoenaed as a witness to testify and I have not yet been discharged from such attendance, nor has the testimony closed. I will not leave California until the testimony is closed or until I am sooner discharged from attendance by the court].

[OR, if nonresident defendant was served while passing through California in response to subpoena issued in criminal case]

2. I neither live nor reside [, and have never lived or resided,] in California and am a resident of the _____ (e.g., State) of _____]. I arrived in California on _____ [date] [on my way to _____ [city and state] and was served with summons in this action on _____ [that date or on _____ (date)], at _____ [place]. As shown by the complaint herein, the cause of action sued on arose prior to my entry into California. At the time the summons was served on me, I was passing through California on my way _____ [to or from] _____ [city and state] where I was obligated _____ [to go or to have gone] in response to a subpoena requiring my presence to testify in the _____ [matter or proceeding or case] of _____ [title], then pending before the _____ [title of court]. A copy of the subpoena is attached hereto as Exhibit A and made a part hereof.

[OR, if nonresident defendant was served while in California on or after waiver of extradition based on criminal charge and was acquitted]

2. I neither live nor reside [, and have never lived or resided,] in California and am a resident of the _____ (e.g., State) of _____]. I was brought into California _____ [on or after waiver of] extradition based on a criminal charge pending in the _____ [title of court] in the case entitled _____ [title of case], number _____, in which on _____ [date] I was acquitted. On that date, on leaving the courthouse after acquittal, I was served with a summons in this _____ [action or proceeding] which arose out of the same facts as the criminal proceedings for which I was returned, in that _____ [specify].

[CONTINUE]

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of California that the foregoing is true and correct.

_____ [date]

_____ [signature]

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, of declaration is for use to support a motion to quash the service of the summons when the ground of objection is that the court lacks jurisdiction over the person of the defendant because the defendant at the time of service of the summons was immune to service or suit. The fact situations illustrated are those described in 22 U.S.C. § 254d, Cal. Const., art. IV, § 14, and Penal Code §§ 1334.4, 1334.5, and 1555, respectively. For further discussion of immunity to service or suit, see § 323.16.

[3] Cross References

For a notice of motion to quash service of summons on ground of lack of personal jurisdiction because defendant is immune to service of process or suit, see § 323.153

For discussion of declarations and evidence to be received at the hearing on the motion, see § 323.151

See discussion and forms relating to affidavits and declarations generally, see Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 323 JURISDICTION: PERSONAL JURISDICTION, INCONVENIENT FORUM, AND APPEARANCES
PART V. FORMS
A. Personal Jurisdiction and Inconvenient Forum

28-323 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 323.155

§ 323.155 Petition for Writ of Mandate and Declaration to Compel Lower Court to Enter Order Quashing Service of Summons for Lack of Jurisdiction Over Defendant or Staying or Dismissing Action for Inconvenient Forum [Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(c)]

[1] FORM Petition for Writ of Mandate and Declaration to Compel Lower Court to Enter Order Quashing Service of Summons for Lack of Jurisdiction Over Defendant or Staying or Dismissing Action for Inconvenient Forum [Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(c)]

IN THE COURT OF APPEAL OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA, APPELLATE DISTRICT _____

[OR]

IN THE APPELLATE DIVISION OF THE SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)
Petitioner,	)
vs.	)
_____ [name of court],	)	NO. _____
Respondent,	)	PETITION FOR WRIT OF MANDATE TO COM-
_____ [name],	)	PEL TRIAL COURT TO _____ Real Party in Interest.	)	[QUASH SERVICE OF SUMMONS and/or STAY
	)	OR DISMISS ACTION]
	)

_____

Petitioner alleges:

1. Petitioner is the defendant in the action hereinafter described [, is _____ (describe capacity, if other than an individual prosecuting this proceeding in his or her own behalf),] and is a party beneficially interested herein.

2. Respondent is the _____ Court of _____.

3. Real party in interest is the plaintiff in the action hereinafter described and is a party beneficially interested in this proceeding.

4. On _____ [date], real party in interest filed in respondent court against this petitioner, as defendant, a complaint, numbered _____ in the file and records of the respondent court, for _____ [specify relief sought and basis of action as alleged in complaint, e.g., damages for personal injuries allegedly sustained in a vehicle collision occurring in the State of Colorado between a vehicle being operated and owned by real party in interest, a resident of the State of Nevada, and a vehicle being operated and owned by petitioner, a resident of the State of Colorado]. A copy of this complaint is attached hereto as Exhibit A and made a part hereof. On _____ [date], petitioner, as defendant, was [purportedly] served with summons in the above-described action in _____ [city and state] pursuant to the provisions of Section _____of the Code of Civil Procedure. [In due course, the summons was returned to respondent court with proof of service, a copy of which is attached hereto as Exhibit B and made a part hereof.]

5. Petitioner made no general appearance in respondent court. Rather, on _____ [date], petitioner appeared specially in respondent court and, pursuant to the provisions of Section(s) [410.30(a) and] 418.10(a) of the Code of Civil Procedure, moved for an order _____ [quashing service of summons and/or staying or dismissing the action] on the ground(s) that _____ [the court lacked jurisdiction of the person of the defendant and/or California is an inconvenient forum for the trial of this action and in the interest of substantial justice the action should be heard in a forum outside California]. A copy of petitioner's notice of motion and supporting papers is attached hereto as Exhibit C and made a part hereof. A copy of real party in interest's opposing papers is attached hereto as Exhibit D and made a part hereof. Respondent court denied the motion on _____ [date]. A certified copy of the court's order is attached hereto as Exhibit E and made a part hereof.

[ADD, if petition is to be filed in court of appeal]

6. _____ [Attached hereto as Exhibit F and made a part hereof is a copy of the transcript of the proceedings at the hearing on the motion or A transcript of the proceedings at the hearing of the motion was ordered on _____ (date) and will be transmitted to this court for filing as soon as it is available. It is expected that it will be filed on or before _____ (date) or No transcript of the oral proceedings at the hearing on the motion is available for the reason that the proceedings were not reported. However, a fair summary of the proceedings is set forth in the declaration of _____ (name of counsel) appended hereto and made a part hereof].

[CONTINUE]

7. Respondent court _____ [has no jurisdiction over the petitioner in the above-described action and/or is an inconvenient forum for the trial of the above-described action within the meaning of Section(s) [410.30(a)

and] 418.10(a) of the Code of Civil Procedure for the reasons that _____ [specify reasons as set forth in attached exhibits which were before respondent court].

8. Petitioner has no plain, speedy, and adequate remedy in the ordinary course of law to compel respondent court to _____ [quash the service of the summons and/or stay or dismiss the action for inconvenient forum] in that this is the only proceeding authorized by statute to obtain the relief sought.

WHEREFORE, petitioner prays:

1. That this court issue an alternative writ of mandate directing respondent court to make and enter its order _____ [quashing the service of summons on this petitioner and/or staying or dismissing the action] or to show cause before this court at a specified time and place why it has not done so;

2. That, on the hearing of this petition and the return to it, if any, this court issue a peremptory writ of mandate directing respondent court to so order;

3. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

4. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.
Dated: _____.

_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Petitioner

Dated: _____.

_____ [signature]
Attorney for Petitioner

VERIFICATION

I, _____ [name], am the [attorney for] petitioner in the above-entitled proceeding. I have read the foregoing petition for writ of mandate and know the contents thereof. The same is true of my own knowledge.

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of California that the foregoing is true and correct.

_____ [date]

_____ [signature]

[Add if petition is to be filed in a court of appeal and no transcript of the proceedings at the hearing on the motion in respondent court is available]

DECLARATION OF COUNSEL

I, _____ [name], declare:

I am the attorney for petitioner in this proceeding and represented the petitioner on the motion to _____ [quash service of summons and/or to stay or dismiss the action on the ground of inconvenient forum] in respondent court. No transcript of those proceedings is available for the reason that _____ [specify, e.g., the proceedings were not reported]. Nevertheless, a fair summary of those proceedings is as follows:

_____ [fairly summarize proceedings, including arguments of counsel and the basis of the trial court's decision, if it was stated].
Dated: _____.

_____ [signature]

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, is for use to petition a reviewing court for a writ of mandate to compel the trial court to enter an order quashing service of summons or staying or dismissing the action for inconvenient forum, or both, after it has denied petitioner's motion to do so [Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(c); for discussion of review of an order regarding a motion to quash service or to stay or dismiss an action for inconvenient forum, see § 323.27].

Paragraph 6 and the appended declaration of counsel are required to be included by Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.486(b) when the petition is to be filed in a court of appeal or the Supreme Court.

[3] Requirements When Filed in Appellate Division of Superior Court

The appellate division of the superior court may grant a writ of mandate directed to the superior court for a limited civil case, and where the appellate division grants a writ of review directed to the superior court, the superior court is an inferior tribunal for purposes of the petition [Code Civ. Proc. § 1085(b)].

If the petition is to be filed in a superior court, the local rules, if any, of that court should be checked to determine what requirements are imposed on the writ petition. Even in the absence of such rules, however, counsel may wish to follow the requirements of a petition filed in an appellate court to show that the petition is meritorious, since, in the absence of such showing, the petition may be denied out of hand without a hearing. For further discussion of the requirements, see [4], below.

[4] Requirements When Filed in Appellate Court

Whenever a writ petition filed in a court of appeal or the Supreme Court seeks review of a trial court ruling, it must be accompanied by an adequate record, including copies of (1) the ruling from which the petition seeks relief; (2) all documents and exhibits submitted to the trial court supporting and opposing the petitioner's position; (3) any other documents or portions of documents submitted to the trial court that are necessary for a complete understanding of the case and the ruling under review; and (4) a reporter's transcript of the oral proceedings that resulted in the ruling under review. If no transcript is available, the record must include a declaration by counsel (a) explaining why the transcript is unavailable and fairly summarizing the proceedings, including counsel's arguments and any statement by the court supporting its ruling; or (b) stating that the transcript has been ordered, the date it was ordered, and the date it is expected to be filed, which must be a date prior to any action requested of the reviewing court other than issuance of a temporary stay supported by other parts of the record. A declaration may omit a full summary of the proceedings if part of the relief sought is an order to prepare a transcript for use by an indigent criminal defendant in support of the petition and if the declaration demonstrates the petitioner's need for and entitlement to the transcript. In exigent circumstances, the petition may be filed without the required documents if counsel files a declaration that explains the urgency and the circumstances making the documents unavailable and fairly summarizes their substance. If the petitioner does not submit the required record or explanations or does not present facts sufficient to excuse the failure to submit them, the court may summarily deny a stay request, the petition, or both [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.490(c); see also Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.486(c)] (format for documents and exhibits).

Although an appellate court has original jurisdiction in any mandate proceeding involving an inferior court or other entity [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1085], it will not exercise this jurisdiction, absent a showing of exceptional circumstances, if the petition for a writ of mandate could have been made first to a lower court [Funeral Dir. Assn. v. Bd. of Funeral Dirs. (1943) 22 Cal. 2d 104, 110, 136 P.2d 785 ; Cohen v. Superior Court (1968) 267 Cal. App. 2d 268, 270, 274, 72 Cal. Rptr. 814] . Thus, a petition for a writ of mandate filed in an appellate court, which could lawfully be made to a lower court in the first instance, must set forth the circumstances that, in the opinion of the petitioner, render it proper that the writ should issue originally from the reviewing court [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.486(a)].

For further discussion of mandate proceedings generally, the format requirements of a petition for writ of mandate filed in a court of appeal or the Supreme Court of California, the essential allegations of the petition, and the number of copies to prepare, see Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition .

[5] Accompanying Papers

The petition must be accompanied by a supporting memorandum [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 8.486(a)(5) (petition filed as original proceeding in reviewing court), 3.1100, 3.1103(a)(2), 3.1113(a) (petition filed in superior court)]. For discussion and forms, see Ch. 417, Points and Authorities .

[6] Verification

A petition for writ of mandate must be verified [Code Civ. Proc. § 1086] on the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant and not on information and belief [Star Motor Imports, Inc. v. Superior Court (1979) 88 Cal. App. 3d 201, 204, 151 Cal. Rptr. 721 ; see also City of Santa Cruz v. Municipal Court (1989) 49 Cal. 3d 74, 87, 260 Cal. Rptr. 520, 776 P.2d 222] .

[7] Proof of Service

A petition for writ of mandate, when presented for filing, must be accompanied by proof of service of a copy of the petition on the respondent and real party in interest (except when the court, in its discretion and for good cause, grants the application for the writ ex parte) [Code Civ. Proc. § 1107]. For the method of serving the petition, see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1010-1020, 1107, and Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition .

[8] Cross References

For a notice of filing of a petition of writ of mandate, see § 323.156

For discussion of writs of mandate and prohibition, see Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition

For memoranda supporting and opposing a petition for writ of mandate generally, see California Points and Authorities, Ch. 150, Mandate and Prohibition

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 323 JURISDICTION: PERSONAL JURISDICTION, INCONVENIENT FORUM, AND APPEARANCES
PART V. FORMS
A. Personal Jurisdiction and Inconvenient Forum

28-323 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 323.156

§ 323.156 Notice of Filing of Petition for Writ of Mandate

[1] FORM Notice of Filing of Petition for Writ of Mandate

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)
Plaintiff,	)
vs.	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	NOTICE OF FILING OF PETITION FOR WRIT OF Defendant.	)	MANDATE
	)
	)

_____

To _____ [name], plaintiff, and to _____ [name], his/her attorney of record:

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that defendant has filed a petition in the _____ [title of court] for a writ of mandate to compel the above-named court to enter an order _____ [quashing the service of summons on defendant in and/or staying or dismissing] the above-entitled action on the ground(s) that _____ [the court lacks jurisdiction over the person of the defendant and/or California is an inconvenient forum and in the interest of substantial justice the action should be heard in a forum outside California]. The petition was filed on _____ [date].
Dated: _____

_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Use of Form

This form is for use to give plaintiff notice of the filing of the petition for writ of mandate [Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(c); for discussion of a review of an order denying a motion to quash service of summons on ground of lack of personal jurisdiction or to stay or dismiss action on ground of inconvenient forum, see § 323.53[1]].

[3] Cross References

For a petition for writ of mandate and declaration to compel a lower court to enter an order quashing service of summons for lack of jurisdiction over the defendant or staying or dismissing action for inconvenient forum, see § 323.155

For discussion of writs of mandate and prohibition, see Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition

For memoranda supporting and opposing a petition for writ of mandate generally, see California Points and Authorities, Ch. 150, Mandate and Prohibition

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 323 JURISDICTION: PERSONAL JURISDICTION, INCONVENIENT FORUM, AND APPEARANCES
PART V. FORMS
A. Personal Jurisdiction and Inconvenient Forum

28-323 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 323.157

§ 323.157 Notice of Motions and Motions to Vacate and Set Aside Default and Default Judgment [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473, 473.5] and to Quash Service of Summons for Lack of Personal Jurisdiction or to Stay or Dismiss Action on Ground of Inconvenient Forum [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 410.30(a), 418.10(a), (d)] [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 418.10(b), 473.5(b)]

[1] FORM Notice of Motions and Motions to Vacate and Set Aside Default and Default Judgment [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473, 473.5] and to Quash Service of Summons for Lack of Personal Jurisdiction or to Stay or Dismiss Action on Ground of Inconvenient Forum [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 410.30(a), 418.10(a), (d)] [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 418.10(b), 473.5(b)]

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	NOTICE OF MOTIONS AND MOTIONS TO VA-
vs.	)	CATE AND SET ASIDE DEFAULT AND DE-
_____ [name],	)	FAULT JUDGMENT AND TO Defendant.	)	_____ [QUASH SERVICE OF )	SUMMONS and/or STAY OR DISMISS ACTION]
	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
		Judge: _____
		Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

To plaintiff _____ [name] and to _____ [name], his/her attorney of record:

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that on _____ [date], at _____ [time], or as soon thereafter as the matter may be heard, in [_____ (Department or Division) _____ of] this court, located at _____ [street address], _____ [city], defendant will, and hereby does, move for an order vacating and setting aside the default and default judgment entered in the above-entitled cause [and for leave to defend the action] and for an order _____ [quashing service of summons on this defendant and/or staying or dismissing the action]. The motion to vacate and set aside the default and default judgment will be made on the ground(s) _____ [they were taken through defendant's _____ (mistake or inadvertence or surprise or excusable neglect or any combination of these) or they are void or the service of summons in this cause did not result in actual notice to the defendant in time to defend the action or any combination of these grounds], and the motion _____ [to quash service of summons and/or to stay or dismiss the action] will be made on the ground(s) _____ [the court lacks jurisdiction over the person of this defendant and/or California is an inconvenient forum and in the interest of substantial justice the cause should be heard in a forum outside California].

The motion will be based on this notice of motion, on the declaration(s) of _____ [name(s)] and the supporting memorandum served and filed herewith, on the records and file herein, and on such evidence as may be presented at the hearing of the motion.
Dated: _____.

_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Use of Form

The notice of motion in [1], above, is for use by a defendant (1) to move to set aside a default and default judgment under Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b) or (d), or Code Civ. Proc. § 473.5, or any combination of these, and (2) to move to quash service of summons for lack of jurisdiction over the defendant under Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(a)(1) or to stay or dismiss the action for inconvenient forum under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 410.30(a) and 418.10(a)(2), or both. For the required contents of a notice of motion, the papers that must accompany it, and the number of copies to prepare, see § 323.80.

For a discussion and forms of notices of motion for relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b) or (d) or 473.5 that are not joined with a motion under Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10 and forms of supporting declarations, as well as a discussion of (1) relief based on an attorney's affidavit of fault, (2) conditions that may be imposed on granting relief, and (3) sanctions that may be imposed on an offending attorney or party when granting relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 473(d) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 473(c) (sanctions)], see Ch. 489, Relief From Judgments and Orders .

For a form of declaration in support of a motion to quash service of summons for lack of jurisdiction or to stay or dismiss the action for inconvenient forum, or both, see § 323.151.

[3] Time Limitation on Motion to Quash or to Stay or Dismiss Action for Inconvenient Forum

A defendant's notice of a Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(a) motion (1) to quash service of summons on the ground the court lacks jurisdiction over him or her or (2) to stay or dismiss the action on the ground of inconvenient forum must be served and filed on or before the last day of his or her time to plead, or within any further time that the court may for good cause allow [Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(a)]. Neither motion brought under this section and within this time frame will constitute a general appearance [Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(d)].

To avoid waiving the jurisdictional objection by inadvertently making a general appearance [Code Civ. Proc. § 410.50(a)], no motion should be joined with the Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(a) motion to quash service of summons for lack of jurisdiction except for an inconvenient forum motion brought under the same section and/or a motion for relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 473 or 473.5 [see Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(d) (473 and 473.5 motions do not constitute general appearance if joined with 418.10 motion)].

For discussion of time limitations on motions under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473 and 473.5, see Ch. 489, Relief From Judgments and Orders .

[4] Joining Code Civ. Proc. § 473 or 473.5 Motion

A defendant's default and default judgment cannot lawfully be entered before the time to plead to the complaint has passed [see Code Civ. Proc. § 585(a), (b)]. Moreover, the filing of a motion to quash service of summons or to stay or dismiss the action for inconvenient forum under Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10 extends the defendant's time to plead [Code Civ. Proc. § 585(a), (b), (c)] until after the denial of the motion and of any subsequent petition for writ of mandate [Code Civ. Proc. § 586(a)(4)].

Because a judgment cannot be lawfully entered until after the defendant's time to plead has passed, and a motion for relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 473 or 473.5 cannot be made until after the judgment is entered, it is difficult to see how any motion for relief under those statutes could be joined with a motion to quash service of summons or to stay or dismiss the action for inconvenient forum under Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10, which must be made before the time to plead has expired.

However, apart from the time limitations set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(a), there obviously are situations where one would want to join a motion to vacate and set aside a default and default judgment with a motion to quash service of summons. For example, a nonresident defendant who has suffered entry of a default and default judgment that are not void on their face but are void in fact, as, for example, where a false return of service is filed, and who lacks sufficient contacts with California to support the exercise of jurisdiction over him or her by a court of this state, might want to move for relief both under Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b), and for an order quashing service of summons. However, unless the phrase "or within any further time that the court may for good cause allow" in Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(a) were to be construed to permit the motion after the time to plead has expired, the motion to quash would not be proper under the statute. Apart from Section 418.10, the aggrieved party might in such a case justify the motion on the ground it is a nonstatutory motion directed to the court's inherent power at law or in equity [for discussion and forms for use in attacks on void judgments at law or in equity, see Ch. 489, Relief From Judgments and Orders].

[5] Accompanying Papers

The evidentiary or probative facts establishing the court's lack of personal jurisdiction over the defendant or that in the interest of substantial justice the action should be heard outside California are set forth in an affidavit or declaration [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009, Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5], a copy of which must be served and filed with the notice of motion [Code Civ. Proc. § 1010; see also Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b)].

The motion must also be accompanied by a memorandum to be relied on. The court may construed the absence of the memorandum as an admission that the motion is not meritorious and cause for its denial [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(a); see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1005(b), 1010].

For memoranda supporting and opposing a motion to quash service of summons for lack of personal jurisdiction or to stay or dismiss an action for inconvenient forum, see California Points and Authorities, Ch. 132, Jurisdiction: Personal

.

[6] Cross References

For discussion, forms, and a procedural checklist for use in obtaining entry of default and default judgment, see Ch. 205, Defaults and Default Judgments

For discussion, forms, and procedural checklists for use in moving for relief under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473 and 473.5, see Ch. 489, Relief From Judgments and Orders

For memoranda supporting and opposing a motion to quash service of summons for lack of personal jurisdiction or to stay or dismiss an action for inconvenient forum, or to set aside and vacate a default and default judgment for lack of personal jurisdiction under Code Civ. Proc. § 473(d) (void judgments), see California Points and Authorities, Ch. 132, Jurisdiction: Personal Jurisdiction and Inconvenient Forum (Matthew Bender)

For memoranda supporting and opposing a motion for relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 473 or 473.5, see California Points and Authorities, Ch. 70, Defaults, Default Judgments, and Relief From Judgments and Orders , Pts. I and II (Matthew Bender)

For a notice of motion to quash service of summons on grounds other than immunity and to stay or dismiss the action on grounds of inconvenient forum, as well as discussion of required papers and service, see § 323.150

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 323 JURISDICTION: PERSONAL JURISDICTION, INCONVENIENT FORUM, AND APPEARANCES
PART V. FORMS
A. Personal Jurisdiction and Inconvenient Forum

28-323 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 323.158

§ 323.158 Order Granting Motion to Vacate and Set Aside Default and Default Judgment and to Quash Service of Summons for Lack of Personal Jurisdiction or to Stay or Dismiss Action on Ground of Inconvenient Forum

[1] FORM Order Granting Motion to Vacate and Set Aside Default and Default Judgment and to Quash Service of Summons for Lack of Personal Jurisdiction or to Stay or Dismiss Action on Ground of Inconvenient Forum

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)
Plaintiff,	)
vs.	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	ORDER
Defendant.	)
	)
	)

_____

The motions of the above-named defendant, appearing specially, for an order vacating and setting aside the default and default judgment heretofore entered in the above-entitled cause [and for leave to defend the action] and for an order _____ [quashing service of the summons on defendant and/or staying or dismissing the action] came on regularly for hearing by the court on _____ [date]. Plaintiff appeared by counsel _____ [name]; defendant appeared by counsel _____ [name].

Having read and considered the supporting and opposing declarations and points and authorities and having heard and considered the arguments of counsel, the court finds that the motion to vacate and set aside the default and default judgment was made within the time prescribed by law, that _____ [the default and default judgment were taken against defendant through the _____ (mistake or inadvertence or surprise or excusable neglect or any combination of these) of _____ (defendant or defendant's counsel) or the default and default judgment are void for lack of jurisdiction over the person of the defendant or the service of the summons did not result in actual notice to the defendant in time to defend the action and defendant's lack of actual notice in time to defend was not caused by his/her avoidance of service or inexcusable neglect], and that _____ [this court has no jurisdiction over the person of the defendant and/or California is an inconvenient forum for the trial of this action and in the interest of substantial justice the action should be _____ (tried in a proper court in the _____ (e.g., State) of _____ or dismissed)]. Therefore,

IT IS ORDERED that the motions be and are granted, that the _____ [specify, e.g., default and default judgment be and are vacated and set aside, that service of the summons on defendant be and is quashed, and that the action be and is dismissed].

[IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that defendant's counsel, _____ (name), pay compensatory legal fees and costs in the sum of $_____ to _____ (identify adverse party or adverse party's counsel to whom fees and costs are to be paid, e.g., plaintiff's counsel, _____ (name)].
Dated: _____.

_____ [signature]
Judge of the _____ Court

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, is for use as a formal order in conjunction with the motion to vacate and set aside default and default judgment and to quash service of summons for lack of personal jurisdiction or to stay or dismiss action on ground of inconvenient forum [see § 323.157] when at least one of the multiple motions is granted. If all the motions are denied, a formal order is not normally required.

[3] Variations of Order

There can be several variations in the actual order when multiple motions are made. Assuming the motions were made on all the grounds indicated in the motion [see § 323.157], the court, if it grants any motion, must grant one of the motions to vacate and set aside the default and default judgment, since a motion to quash service of summons or to stay or dismiss the action could be effectively granted only when the default and judgment are first vacated and set aside.

Also, alternative motions under Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b), 473(d), and 473.5 may be made concurrently. The court could, for example, grant the motion under Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b), or 473.5 (both of which involve valid judgments) and deny the other motions. If it does this, the order should include (1) any terms imposed by the court, and (2) an order that the answer or other pleading proposed be filed [see Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b), (c)] or that the defendant be allowed to defend the action by the answer, motion, or other pleading proposed to be filed [Code Civ. Proc. § 473.5(a), (c)].

The court could also grant the motion under Code Civ. Proc. § 473(d) (which involves a void judgment) and the motion to quash service of summons under Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(a)(1) and deny the other motions, or it could grant the motion under Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b), or 473.5 and the motion to stay or dismiss the action for inconvenient forum and deny the other motions.

Another possibility is the one illustrated in this form; that is, the court could grant the motion under Code Civ. Proc. § 473(d), the motion to quash service of summons under Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(a)(1), and the motion to dismiss the action under Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(a)(2) and, by failing to mention them, deny the other motions that, in fact, seek the same relief as that granted under Code Civ. Proc. § 473(d). It would, however, be inconsistent for the court to grant the motion under Code Civ. Proc. § 473(d), because the judgment is void for lack of personal jurisdiction over the defendant, yet to deny the motion to quash service when a return of service was made. It would be equally inconsistent for the court to grant the motion under Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b) (involving a valid judgment) and to grant the motion to quash service of summons on the ground that defendant was never properly served.

If the court grants relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b), based on an attorney's affidavit of fault as provided for in that statute, the court may direct the attorney to pay reasonable compensatory legal fees and costs to opposing counsel or parties [Code Civ. Proc. § 473(c)(1)]. Therefore, if the motion to vacate and set aside the default and default judgment seeks relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b), and is accompanied by an attorney's sworn affidavit attesting to his or her mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or neglect, the optional paragraph of the order, directing the payment of legal fees and costs, should be included in the form. However, where the court grants relief from a default or default judgment based on the affidavit (or declaration) of the defaulting party's attorney attesting to his or her mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or neglect, the relief shall not be made conditional on the attorney's payment of compensatory legal fees or costs or monetary penalties imposed by the court or on compliance with other sanctions ordered by the court [Code Civ. Proc. § 473(c)(2)].

[4] Findings

The general rule is that findings are not required on an order made on a motion [see, e.g., Beckett v. Kaynar Mfg. Co., Inc. (1958) 49 Cal. 2d 695, 699, 321 P.2d 749 ; Waymire v. California Trona Co. (1917) 176 Cal. 395, 399-400, 168 P. 563 ; Allstate Ins. Co. v. Orlando (1968) 262 Cal. App. 2d 858, 867, 69 Cal. Rptr. 702] . Neither Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b) or (d), nor Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10 requires that the court, in ruling on the motions under those sections, make findings and, hence, findings are not required. The general rule that findings are not required on a motion has specifically been applied to an order denying a motion for relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 473 [see In re Marriage of Simmons (1975) 49 Cal. App. 3d 833, 836, 123 Cal. Rptr. 213 ; Costa v. Traina (1962) 200 Cal. App. 2d 655, 662, 19 Cal. Rptr. 521] .

On the other hand, Code Civ. Proc. § 473.5 expressly requires a "finding" by the court. That statute provides that on a finding by the court that the motion was made within the period permitted by Code Civ. Proc. § 473.5(a) and that the defendant's lack of actual notice in time to defend the action was not caused by his or her avoidance of service or inexcusable neglect, the court may set aside the default or default judgment on such terms as may be just and allow such party to defend the action [Code Civ. Proc. § 473.5(c)]. Although the section does not contemplate "findings of fact and conclusions of law" as formerly provided for in Code Civ. Proc. § 632, or in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1590(b)-(n), it would nevertheless seem to require that the court state in its order a finding that the required conditions exist [see, e.g., Goya v. P.E.R.U. Enterprises (1978) 87 Cal. App. 3d 886, 890, 151 Cal. Rptr. 258 (trial court granted motion on finding that motion was made within the time specified by Code Civ. Proc. § 473.5(a), and lack of actual notice was not caused by an avoidance of service or inexcusable neglect)].

Moreover, it would appear, at least from the standpoint of appellate review, that the better practice would be for the court to include in its recital in the order a finding that the particular ground supporting the order exists when any doubt concerning the basis of the order might arise from a failure to do so. This seems particularly true when motions seeking substantially the same relief under different but mutually exclusive statutory provisions are joined, such as motion for relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b), 473(d), and 473.5, and the relief is granted on one or more but not all of the statutory grounds, or when a motion is made on multiple grounds but is granted on fewer than all of them. The finding could be stated in the form of an ultimate fact, as indicated in Code Civ. Proc. § 473.5 and illustrated in the foregoing form, or by citation to the appropriate statute [see, e.g., Gould, Inc. v. Health Sciences, Inc. (1976) 54 Cal. App. 3d 687, 691, 126 Cal. Rptr. 726 (trial court cited Code Civ. Proc. §§ 410.30 and 418.10 in granting defendant's motion to quash service of summons and court upheld order on ground service of summons could properly be quashed under forum non conveniens doctrine)].

[5] Supporting Evidence

Whether the finding or order is supported by the evidence would be determined from the facts stated in the affidavits or declarations filed on the motion. The rule on appeal is that, when an issue is tried on affidavits or declarations, those favoring the contentions of the prevailing party establish not only the facts stated in them but also all facts that reasonably may be inferred from them. When there is a substantial conflict in the facts presented by the affidavits or declarations, the determination of the controverted facts by the trial court will not be disturbed on appeal [Beckett v. Kaynar Mfg. Co., Inc. (1958) 49 Cal. 2d 695, 699, 321 P.2d 749] . This rule has been held to apply to orders made on motions for relief from default under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473 and 473.5 [see Goya v. P.E.R.U. Enterprises (1978) 87 Cal. App. 3d 886, 891, 151 Cal. Rptr. 258] , as well as to orders made on motions under Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(a) [see R.E. Sanders & Co. v. Lincoln-Richardson Enterprises, Inc. (1980) 108 Cal. App. 3d 71, 74, 166 Cal.d b Rptr. 269 ; Belmont Industries, Inc. v. Superior Court (1973) 31 Cal. App. 3d 281, 283 n.1, 107 Cal. Rptr. 237 ; see also Serafini v. Superior Court (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 70, 77, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 159] .

[6] Cross References

For discussion of orders by the court, see Ch. 372, Motions and Orders

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 323 JURISDICTION: PERSONAL JURISDICTION, INCONVENIENT FORUM, AND APPEARANCES
PART V. FORMS
A. Personal Jurisdiction and Inconvenient Forum

28-323 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 323.159-323.169

[Reserved]

§§ 323.159[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 323 JURISDICTION: PERSONAL JURISDICTION, INCONVENIENT FORUM, AND APPEARANCES
PART V. FORMS
B. Appearances

28-323 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 323.170

§ 323.170 Notice of General Appearance by Defendant in Propria Persona [Code Civ. Proc. § 1014]

[1] FORM Notice of General Appearance by Defendant in Propria Persona [Code Civ. Proc. § 1014]

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)
Plaintiff,	)	NO. _____
vs.	)	NOTICE OF APPEARANCE
_____ [name],	)	[Code Civ. Proc. § 1014]
Defendant.	)
	)
	)

_____

To _____ [name], plaintiff, and to _____ [name] his/her attorney of record:

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that I, _____ [defendant _____ (name) or the above-named defendant], hereby appear in this _____ [action or proceeding].
Dated: _____.

_____ [signature]
Defendant

[2] Use of Form

The notice in [1], above, is for use by a defendant to make a general appearance in an action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1014; for further discussion, see § 323.42]. For a form of notice of appearance given by defendant's attorney, see §

323.171.

[3] Filing

Code Civ. Proc. § 1014 does not expressly require that the notice of appearance be filed, but, rather, that it be "given" to the plaintiff. Nevertheless, it would appear that the better, if not required, practice is to deliver the original to the court clerk for filing [see, e.g., Farmers etc. Nat. Bk. v. Superior Court (1945) 25 Cal. 2d 842, 846, 155 P.2d 823 (appearance invokes general jurisdiction of court over defendant when it is in form of written notice filed in action for that purpose); Harrington v. Superior Court (1924) 194 Cal. 185, 189, 228 P. 15 (paper executed by defendant making an appearance in action filed with court)].

[4] Copies to Prepare

The notice should be prepared in an original for filing, one copy for service on the plaintiff or plaintiff's counsel [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1015], and one copy to be retained by the defendant.

[5] Cross References

For a notice of general appearance by an attorney of defendant, see § 323.171

For alternative forms of captions and introductions, see Ch. 108, Captions and Introductions

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 323 JURISDICTION: PERSONAL JURISDICTION, INCONVENIENT FORUM, AND APPEARANCES
PART V. FORMS
B. Appearances

28-323 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 323.171

§ 323.171 Notice of General Appearance by Attorney for Defendant

[1] FORM Notice of General Appearance by Attorney for Defendant

[Caption. See § 323.150.]

To _____ [name], plaintiff, and to _____ [name] his/her attorney of record:

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that I have been retained by, and hereby appear for, _____ [the above-named defendant or defendant _____ (name)] in this _____ [action or proceeding].
Dated: _____.

_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Use of Form

The notice in [1], above, is for use by an attorney to give notice of a general appearance of a defendant in the action or proceeding [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1014 [for discussion of appearance by attorney, see § 323.65]]. For a form of notice of appearance by a party in propria persona, see § 323.170.

[3] Cross References

For discussion of filing and copies to prepare, see § 323.171

For alternative forms of captions and introductions, see Ch. 108, Captions and Introductions

180 of 181 DOCUMENTS

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 323 JURISDICTION: PERSONAL JURISDICTION, INCONVENIENT FORUM, AND APPEARANCES
PART V. FORMS
B. Appearances

28-323 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 323.172

§ 323.172 Notice of Appearance and Waiving of Rights by Defendant, in Propria Persona, Consenting That Action or Proceeding Be Heard as Uncontested Matter

[1] FORM Notice of Appearance and Waiving of Rights by Defendant, in Propria Persona, Consenting That Action or Proceeding Be Heard as Uncontested Matter

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name], Plaintiff, vs. _____ [name], Defendant.	)))))))))	NO. _____ NOTICE OF APPEARANCE AND WAIVER OF RIGHTS [Code Civ. Proc. § 1014]

To _____ [name], plaintiff, and to _____ [name] his/her attorney of record:

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that I, _____ [defendant _____ (name) or the above-named defendant], hereby appear in this _____ [action or proceeding], and that I waive service of the summons and complaint on me, waive time to answer, demur, and otherwise plead or move to the complaint herein, and notice of all subsequent proceedings of which notice is required to be given, and consent that this _____ [action or proceeding] may be heard as an uncontested matter.
Dated: _____.

_____ [signature]
Defendant

[2] Use of Form

The notice in [1], above, is for use by an unrepresented defendant to make a general appearance in an action or proceeding and expressly to waive service of the summons and the complaint, time to plead, and notice of subsequent proceedings, and to consent to the action's or proceeding's being heard as an uncontested matter. The waiver of service is not essential because the notice of appearance constitutes a general appearance, and a general appearance is equivalent to personal service of the summons on such party [Code Civ. Proc. § 410.50(a)]. The waiver of notice of subsequent proceedings, such as notice of the time and place of trial, is a waiver of the defendant's right to notice of all subsequent proceedings of which notice is required to be given [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1014].

[3] Cross References

For discussion of filing and copies to prepare, see § 323.171

For alternative forms of captions and introductions, see Ch. 108, Captions and Introductions

181 of 181 DOCUMENTS

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 323 JURISDICTION: PERSONAL JURISDICTION, INCONVENIENT FORUM, AND APPEARANCES
PART V. FORMS
B. Appearances

28-323 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 323.173

§ 323.173 Notice by Defendant, in Propria Persona, Admitting Service of Summons and Complaint, Waiving Further Notice, and Waiving Rights Under Servicemembers Civil Relief Act and State Statutes for Members of the National Guard and Military Reservists [50 U.S.C. App. § 501 et seq.; Mil. & Vet. Code § 402 et seq.]

[1] FORM Notice by Defendant, in Propria Persona, Admitting Service of Summons and Complaint, Waiving Further Notice, and Waiving Rights Under Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act of 1940 [50 U.S.C. App. § 520]

[Caption. See § 323.150.]

To _____ [name], plaintiff, and to _____ [name] his/her attorney of record:

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that I, _____ [defendant _____ (name) or the above-named defendant],

1. Admit due service of the summons and the complaint in this _____ [action or proceeding], copies of which were delivered to me on _____ [date];

2. Hereby appear in this _____ [action or proceeding], and waive time to answer, demur, or otherwise plead or move to the complaint;

3. Hereby waive notice of all subsequent proceedings of which notice is required to be given including, but not limited to, notice of the time and place of trial, and notice of the taking of any deposition; and

4. Specifically waive all rights and privileges which I may now have or hereafter acquire under the Servicemembers Civil Relief Act (50 U.S.C. App. § 501 et seq.), and amendments thereto.

5. Specifically waive all rights and privileges under California statutes for members of the National Guard and military reservists (Mil. & Vet. Code § 402 et seq.).

Dated: _____.

_____ [signature]
Defendant

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, is for use by a defendant in the U.S. military service to enter an appearance in the action or proceeding, to admit service of the summons and complaint, and to waive both notice of subsequent proceedings required to be given and defendants' rights under the Servicemembers Civil Relief Act [50 U.S.C. App. § 501 et seq.] and California statutes for members of the National Guard and military reservists [Mil. & Vet. Code § 402 et seq.]. With appropriate modifications, the foregoing form may be used by an attorney to give notice of appearance and waiver on behalf of the defendant [for discussion and related form, see § 323.171].

[3] Cross References

For discussion of filing and copies to prepare, see § 323.171

For discussion of ascertaining a defendant's military status at the time of service of summons and its benefits and effect on subsequent proceedings, see Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers, § 518.19

For discussion and an application for a stay of a pending action or proceeding based on military service, see Ch. 136, Continuances, §§ 136.20[2], 136.78A

For discussion and a plaintiff's declaration under penalty of perjury setting forth facts showing that the defendant is not in the military service prior to entry of default judgment, see Ch. 205, Defaults and Default Judgments, §§ 205.25[5], 205.92-205.94

For detailed discussion of relief under the Servicemembers Civil Relief Act and related California legislation, see Ch. 501, Sales: Retail Installment Contracts; §§ 501.60 et seq.

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION

28-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated 324.syn

§ 324.syn Synopsis to Chapter 324: JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION

§ 324.01 Scope of Chapter

§ 324.02 Cross References

§§ 324.03-324.09 [Reserved]

§ 324.10 Governing Law

§ 324.11 Definitions

[1] Jurisdiction

[2] Lack of Jurisdiction

[3] Excess of Jurisdiction

[4] Subject Matter Jurisdiction

[5] Personal Jurisdiction

[6] "Action," "Proceeding," "Cause of Action," and "Case" Distinguished

§ 324.12 Jurisdiction Required for Valid Judgment

§ 324.13 Jurisdiction Is in Court Rather Than in Judge of Court

§ 324.14 Jurisdiction to Determine Jurisdiction

§ 324.15 Primary Jurisdiction Doctrine and Administrative Remedies

§§ 324.16-324.19 [Reserved]

§ 324.20 Organization of California Courts

[1] Governing Law

[2] Judicial Power of California

[a] Vested in Courts and Administrative Agencies

[b] Classification of California Courts

[3] Organization of California Courts

[a] Supreme Court

[b] Courts of Appeal

[c] Superior Courts

[d] Small Claims Courts

§ 324.21 Subject Matter Jurisdiction of Supreme Court

[1] Original and Appellate Jurisdiction

[a] Original Jurisdiction

[b] Appellate Jurisdiction and Transfer Between Courts

[c] Questions of California Law From Federal and Other State Courts

[2] Jurisdiction to Review Decisions or Orders

[a] Of Courts of Appeal

[b] Of Administrative Agencies

[3] Jurisdiction in Miscellaneous Proceedings

§ 324.22 Subject Matter Jurisdiction of Courts of Appeal

[1] Original and Appellate Jurisdiction

[2] Jurisdiction to Review Administrative Orders

§ 324.23 Subject Matter Jurisdiction of Superior Courts

[1] Original Jurisdiction

[2] Appellate Jurisdiction

[3] Jurisdictional Classification of Civil Cases

§ 324.24 Jurisdiction Over Native Americans and Indian Nations

[1] Jurisdiction Over Individuals Not Tribe

[1A] Jurisdiction and the Indian Child Welfare Act (ICWA)

[2] Immunity of Native American Tribes and Officials

[3] Waiver of Immunity

[4] Limitations on Scope of Jurisdiction

[5] Applicability of Tribal Ordinance or Custom

§ 324.25 Concurrent Jurisdiction

[1] Between State and Federal Courts

[2] Between Courts of Same State

[a] Same Parties on Same Cause

[b] Rule of Exclusive Concurrent Jurisdiction

[i] Defined

[ii] Distinguished From Another Action Pending

[iii] As Ground for Abatement

[iv] Policy Underlying Rule

[c] Exclusive Jurisdiction in Multidepartment Superior Court

[3] Between Courts of Sister States

[a] Priority in Time

[b] When Earlier Judgment Is Superseded

§§ 324.26-324.39 [Reserved]

§ 324.40 No Waiver of Defense of Lack of Subject Matter Jurisdiction

§ 324.41 Judicial Act Lacking Jurisdiction

§ 324.42 Judicial Act in Excess of Jurisdiction

[1] Void or Voidable

[2] Challenge by Writ

§ 324.43 Transfer or Dismissal Based on Lack of Subject Matter Jurisdiction

[1] Transfer of Case from Court Lacking Jurisdiction

[2] Determining Lack of Subject Matter Jurisdiction

§ 324.44 Transfer of Action When Another California Court Has Jurisdiction

[1] In General

[2] Dismissal for Nonpayment of Fees and Costs

[3] Notice of Transfer

[4] Jurisdiction of Transferee Court

[5] Effect on Power of Transferring Court

§ 324.45 Dismissal When No California Court Has Jurisdiction

§ 324.46 Review of Jurisdiction

[1] On Appeal

[a] Superior Court Orders Other Than in Limited Civil Cases

[b] Superior Court Orders in Limited Civil Cases

[2] By Extraordinary Writ

[a] Prohibition and Certiorari

[b] Mandate

[i] Traditional Writ

[ii] Under Code Civ. Proc. § 400 to Review Superior Court Orders

[c] Administrative Mandate

§§ 324.47-324.59 [Reserved]

§ 324.60 Jurisdictional Classification

§ 324.61 Unlimited Civil Case

§ 324.62 Limited Civil Case

[1] Dependent on Amount in Controversy and Type of Relief

[2] Amount in Controversy $25,000 or Less

[a] Cases at Law

[b] Dissolution of Partnership

[c] Interpleader Actions

[d] Cancel, Rescind or Revise Contract

[e] Eviction Actions

[f] Enforcement of Personal Property Liens

[g] Enforcement of Mechanics' Liens and Similar Liens

[h] Declaratory Relief

[i] TROs, Preliminary Injunctive Relief, Accounts, and Receivers

[j] Determining Title to Personal Property

[k] Creditor's Suits

[l] Arbitration-Related Petitions

[i] Contractual Arbitration

[ii] Attorney Fee Arbitration

[m] Long-Term Care Health Care

[3] Cases in Equity

[a] Trying Title to Personal Property

[b] Defenses

[c] Vacating Judgment or Order

[4] Relief Not Available in Limited Civil Case

[a] In Excess of $25,000

[b] Permanent Injunctive Relief

[c] Determining Title to Real Property

[d] Declaratory Relief

[5] Costs and Attorney's Fees

[6] Prior Law Assessing Amount in Controversy Before Court Unification

[a] In General

[b] Class Action

[c] Action for Conversion

[d] Action in Replevin

[e] Proceeding in Unlawful or Forcible Detainer or Forcible Entry

[f] Actions to Enforce Liens

[g] Single Plaintiff With Multiple Claims

[h] Multiple Plaintiffs

[i] Cross Claims

§ 324.63 Pleadings Required to Identify Limited Civil Case in Superior Court

§ 324.64 Reclassification of Case by Plaintiff

§ 324.65 Reclassification of Case by Stipulation

§ 324.66 Reclassification of Limited Civil Case by Filing of Cross Complaint

§ 324.67 Motion to Reclassify Case if Erroneously Classified in Initial Pleading

[1] By Party Within Time to Amend or Respond to Initial Pleading

[a] Motion Authorized

[b] Motion Does Not Extend Time to Respond

[c] Motion Constitutes Appearance

[2] By Party After Expiration of Time to Respond to Initial Pleading

[3] By the Court's Own Motion

[4] Notice and Opportunity to be Heard Required

[5] Determination of Amount in Controversy

[6] Reclassification Not Required After Trial or Hearing Because Judgment Could Have Been Rendered in Limited Civil Case

§ 324.68 Continuation as Limited Civil Case if Amount in Excess of Jurisdiction Is Remitted

§ 324.69 Right to Amend Pleadings Not Affected

§ 324.70 Costs and Fees

[1] Reclassification From Limited to Unlimited Civil Case

[2] Reclassification From Unlimited to Limited Civil Case

[3] Payment

[a] Prompt Reclassification on Payment

[b] Payment by Any Interested Party

[c] No Further Proceedings Until Payment Is Made

[d] Dismissal In Case of Nonpayment

§ 324.71 Continuation of Case as Reclassified

[1] Statute of Limitations Measured From Original Filing Not From Time of Reclassification

[2] Treated as Though Commenced as Reclassified With Prior Proceedings Saved

[3] Amendment of Pleadings for Proper Presentation and Determination Case as Reclassified

§ 324.72 Review of Order Granting or Denying Reclassification

[1] By Writ of Mandate

[2] Time Limit for Filing Petition

[3] Stay of Proceedings

[4] Notice to Trial Court of Court of Appeal Order or Judgment

§§ 324.73-324.79 [Reserved]

§ 324.80 Related Publications from Matthew Bender

§ 324.81 Federal Constitution

§ 324.82 State Constitution

§ 324.83 State Statutes

[1] Claim of Lack of Jurisdiction

[2] Courts of Appeal

[3] Limited Civil Cases

[4] Reclassification of Civil Case

[5] Small Claims Courts

[6] Superior Courts

[7] Supreme Court

[8] Transfer to Court Having Subject Matter Jurisdiction

§ 324.84 Decisions

[1] Advisory Opinions

[2] Appellate Jurisdiction

[3] Compelling Court to Take Jurisdiction

[4] Concurrent Jurisdiction

[a] California Courts

[b] Courts of Two or More States

[c] State and Federal Courts

[d] Action Pending in a Foreign Country

[5] Conflict and Choice of Laws

[6] Constitutionality of Subject Matter Classification of Courts

[7] Excess of Jurisdiction

[8] Exhaustion of Remedies

[9] Indian Tribes

[10] Jurisdiction Is In Court Rather Than in Judge of Court

[11] "Jurisdiction Defined"

[12] Jurisdiction to Determine Jurisdiction

[13] "Jurisdictional" Defined

[14] Lack of Subject Matter Jurisdiction

[a] Generally

[b] To Enjoin Other Department of Same Court

[c] To Hear Local Actions Arising Out of State

[d] Waiver and Estoppel

[15] Political Question

[16] Prerequisites

[17] Sister-State Judgments

[18] Small Claims Courts

[19] Standing to Sue

[20] Subject Matter Jurisdiction of Superior Courts

[21] Transfer of Action to Court Having Jurisdiction

[22] Reclassification of Case

[23] Review

§ 324.85 Law Reviews

§ 324.86 Text References

§§ 324.87-324.89 [Reserved]

§ 324.90 Moving Party's Guide

[1] Ascertain Facts

[2] Make Preliminary Determinations

[3] Determine Manner of Raising Issue

[4] Move to Transfer or Dismiss

[5] Respond to Opposing Party's Declarations, Affidavits, and Memorandum

§ 324.91 Opposing Party's Guide

[1] Ascertain Facts

[2] Make Preliminary Determinations

[3] Prepare Opposition Papers

[4] Serve and File Papers

[5] Prehearing Procedures

§ 324.92 Hearing and Ruling

[1] Attendance at Hearing

[2] Motion Granted

[3] Motion Denied

[4] Notice of Ruling

§ 324.93 Dismissal for Failure to Pay Costs and Fees if Case Ordered Transferred

[1] Payment of Fees

[2] Motion to Dismiss for Failure to Pay

§§ 324.94-324.99 [Reserved]

§ 324.100 Proceedings to Transfer or Dismiss Appeal or Petition on Ground Court Lacks Subject Matter Jurisdiction [Code Civ. Proc. § 396]--Notice of Motion

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Motion is General Appearance

[4] Noticed Motion

[5] Accompanying Papers

[6] Copies to Prepare

[7] Service and Filing

[8] Opposition and Reply Papers

[9] Cross References

§ 324.101 Declaration [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009, 2015.5] in Support of Motion to Transfer or Dismiss Appeal or Petition on Ground Court Lacks Subject Matter Jurisdiction

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Form and Contents

[4] Cross References

§ 324.102 Order Granting Motion to Transfer or Dismiss Appeal or Petition on Ground Court Lacks Subject Matter Jurisdiction

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Notice of Court's Ruling

[4] Cross References

§ 324.103 Proceedings to Dismiss Appeal or Petition for Failure to Pay Costs and Fees of Transfer [Code Civ. Proc. § 399]--Notice of Motion

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Accompanying Papers

[4] Who Must Pay Fees

[5] When Motion May Be Made

[6] Cross References

§ 324.104 Declaration [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009, 2015.5] in Support of Motion to Dismiss Appeal or Petition for Failure to Pay Costs and Fees of Transfer

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

§ 324.105 Order Granting Motion to Dismiss Appeal or Petition for Failure to Pay Costs and Fees of Transfer

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

§ 324.106 Demurrer [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(a)] on Ground of Exclusive Concurrent Jurisdiction

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Exclusive Concurrent Jurisdiction

[4] Accompanying Papers

[5] Cross References

§§ 324.107-324.119 [Reserved]

§ 324.120 Proceedings to Reclassify Case--By Plaintiff, Cross-Complainant, or Petitioner Within Time Allowed for Amending Initial Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. § 403.040(a)]--Notice of Motion and Supporting Declaration

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Accompanying Papers

[4] Copies to Prepare

[5] Service and Filing

[6] Length of Notice Required

[7] Opposition and Reply Papers

[8] Cross References

§ 324.121 Proceedings to Reclassify Case--By Defendant or Cross Defendant Within Time Allowed for Responding to Initial Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. § 403.040(a)]--Notice of Motion and Supporting Declaration

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Motion is General Appearance

[4] Accompanying Papers

[5] Copies to Prepare

[6] Service and Filing

[7] Length of Notice Required

[8] Opposition and Reply Papers

[9] Cross References

§ 324.122 Order Granting Motion to Reclassify Case When Motion Made Within Time Allowed for Amending or Responding to Initial Pleading

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Cost and Fees

[4] Notice of Court's Ruling

[5] Cross References

§ 324.123 Proceedings to Reclassify Case- By Party After Time to Amend or Respond to Complaint or Other Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. § 403.040(b)]--Notice of Motion and Supporting Declaration

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Accompanying Papers

[4] Service and Filing

[5] Opposition and Reply Papers

[6] Cross References

§ 324.124 Order Granting Motion to Reclassify Case When Motion Made After Time to Amend or Respond to Complaint of Other Pleading

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Cost and Fees

[4] Cross References

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION
PART I. SCOPE

28-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 324.01

§ 324.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter discusses the fundamentals of jurisdiction [see § 324.10 et seq.], the California court system and subject matter jurisdiction of the California courts [see § 324.20 et seq.], challenges to subject matter jurisdiction [see § 324.40 et seq.], and the classification and reclassification of cases within the Superior Court [see § 324.60 et seq.]. For analysis of personal jurisdiction and the related subjects of inconvenient forum and appearances, see Ch. 323, Jurisdiction: Personal .

This chapter includes the following forms relating to subject matter jurisdiction:

- A notice of motion, a supporting declaration, and an order for use in a proceeding to transfer a case from a court lacking subject matter jurisdiction to a court having such jurisdiction pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 396 [see §§ 324.100-324.102].

- A notice of motion, a supporting declaration, and an order dismissing an action because of plaintiff's failure to pay the costs of transfer [see §§ 324.103-324.105].

- A form of demurrer on the ground of exclusive concurrent jurisdiction [see § 324.106].

- Notice of motion and order for use in a proceeding to reclassify a case as a limited or unlimited civil case within time allowed for amending initial pleading pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 403.040(a) [see §§ 324.120-324.122].

- Notice of motion and orders for use in a proceeding to reclassify a case as a limited or unlimited civil case after time to amend or respond to a complaint or other pleading pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 403.040(b) [see §§ 324.123-324.124].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION
PART I. SCOPE

28-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 324.02

§ 324.02 Cross References

- For discussion and forms relating to personal jurisdiction, see Ch. 323, Jurisdiction: Personal .

- Motions made under Code Civ. Proc. § 396 reach only the question of jurisdiction and not that of improper venue [see Apartments, Inc. v. Trott (1959) 172 Cal. App. 2d 7, 13, 342 P.2d 32] . For a discussion of venue and forms relating to change of venue generally, see Ch. 571, Venue .

- For discussion and forms for use to demur to a complaint on the ground the court lacks jurisdiction of the subject of the action (Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(a)), see Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

- For discussion and forms for use in securing relief from defaults and judgments that are void for lack of jurisdiction, see Ch. 489, Relief From Judgments and Orders .

- For a discussion of the subject matter jurisdiction of the small claims courts (Code Civ. Proc. § 116.110 et seq.), which are not separate courts but, rather, the exercise of limited jurisdiction by the superior court, see Ch. 526, Small Claims .

- For discussion and forms relating to the jurisdiction of federal courts, see Ch. 265, Federal Courts: Jurisdiction and Removal .

- For a discussion and forms for use in securing the dismissal of a federal action for lack of subject matter jurisdiction and for removing an action within the original jurisdiction of the federal district courts from a California state court to a federal court, see Ch. 265, Federal Courts: Jurisdiction and Removal .

- For further discussion and forms for use in challenging judicial acts in excess of jurisdiction by petition for extraordinary writ, see Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition and Ch. 492, Review (Certiorari), Writ of.

- For the jurisdictional issues that may be considered on a petition for a writ of mandate to determine the validity of a final administrative order or decision, see Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5(b) and Ch. 474B, Standards in Reviewing Agency Decisions .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionPersonal Jurisdiction & In Rem ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureVenueGeneral OverviewCivil ProceduresPleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsDemurrersCivil ProcedureRemediesWritsCommon Law WritsMandamusCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionState Court Review

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION
PART I. SCOPE

28-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 324.03-324.09

[Reserved]

§§ 324.03[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Fundamentals of Jurisdiction

28-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 324.10

§ 324.10 Governing Law

The California court system is established by Cal. Const., art. VI, § 1.

Subject matter jurisdiction is governed by Cal. Const., art. VI, §§ 10, 11, and by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85, 86, 86.1 (limited civil cases) and 116.220 (small claims division).

Transfers of actions lacking proper subject matter jurisdiction are governed by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 396, 399.

The judicial remedies available in California are set forth in Code Civ. Proc. §§ 20-30, and the forms of judicial relief available in Part One of Division 4 of the Civil Code, commencing with Civ. Code § 3274.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionJurisdictional SourcesConstitutional SourcesCivil ProcedureJurisdictionJurisdictional SourcesStatutory SourcesCivil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionGeneral OverviewConstitutional LawThe JudiciaryJurisdictionGeneral OverviewGovernmentsCourtsCreation & Organization

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329

Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Fundamentals of Jurisdiction

28-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 324.11

§ 324.11 Definitions

[1] Jurisdiction

Jurisdiction, in its broadest sense, means the power to hear and determine causes. Jurisdiction is generally divided into two components: subject matter jurisdiction and personal jurisdiction. Subject matter jurisdiction is the authority of a court to try actions of the type or class to which a suit belongs. Personal jurisdiction is the authority of a court over parties and properties. Stated another way, subject matter jurisdiction addresses whether a court has the authority to hear a particular type of suit, while personal jurisdiction addresses whether state and federal due process requirements are met based on the person's or property's relationship to the state.

The term "jurisdiction" does not have a single, fixed meaning, but has different meanings in different situations [St. Sava Mission Corp. v. Serbian Eastern Orthodox Diocese (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 1354, 1365, 273 Cal. Rptr. 340] . The word "jurisdiction," in its judicial sense, means the power to hear and determine causes [Mueller v. Elba Oil Co. (1942) 21 Cal. 2d 188, 206, 130 P.2d 961 ; Gray v. Hall (1928) 203 Cal. 306, 314-315, 265 P. 246 ; see also In re Hughes (1911) 159 Cal. 360, 363, 113 P. 684 (jurisdiction, as applied to a particular claim or controversy, is the power to hear and determine that controversy); Crew v. Pratt (1897) 119 Cal. 139, 151, 51 P. 38 (jurisdiction to pronounce judgment or order under Code Civ. Proc. § 1908, relating to conclusiveness and effect of judgment, refers to the court's right or power to adjudicate a point); Ex Parte Bennett (1872) 44 Cal. 84, 88 (jurisdiction is the power to hear and determine, but includes the power to do both, to hear without determining, or to determine without hearing); Burns v. Municipal Court (1961) 195 Cal. App. 2d 596, 599, 16 Cal. Rptr. 64 (jurisdiction is the power of a court to hear and determine, or to act in a certain manner, and is synonymous with the power to render a valid judgment against a person)].

Jurisdiction is, however, a term of large and comprehensive import and embraces every kind of judicial action. Thus, every movement by a court is necessarily the exercise of jurisdiction [Harrington v. Superior Court (1924) 194 Cal. 185, 188, 228 P. 15] . The term embraces a large number of ideas of similar character, some fundamental to the nature of any judicial system, some derived from the requirement of due process, some determined by the constitutional or statutory structure of a particular court, and some based on mere procedural rules originally devised for convenience and efficiency, and by precedent made mandatory and jurisdictional [Abelleira v. District Court of Appeal (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 280, 291 109 P.2d 942] .

[2] Lack of Jurisdiction

Lack of jurisdiction in its most fundamental or strict sense means an entire absence of power to hear or determine a case; an absence of authority over either the subject matter or over the parties or over both the subject matter and the parties [see Abelleira v. District Court of Appeal (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 280, 287-288, 109 P.2d 942 ; In re Jody R. (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 1615, 1622, 267 Cal. Rptr. 746 ; People v. Ruiz (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 574, 584, 265 Cal. Rptr. 886 ; Schwenke v. J & P Scott, Inc. (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 71, 76, 252 Cal. Rptr. 91] , or over the thing, when a specific thing is the subject of the action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1917]. For further discussion of the jurisdiction necessary to support judicial action, see § 324.12. For discussion of challenging a court's act lacking jurisdiction, see § 324.41.

[3] Excess of Jurisdiction

Excess of jurisdiction refers to a situation in which a court has jurisdiction in the fundamental sense over the subject matter and the parties, but exercises that jurisdiction in an unauthorized manner, that is, in excess of the authority possessed [see Abelleira v. District Court of Appeal (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 280, 288-290, 109 P.2d 942 ; In re Jody R. (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 1615, 1622, 267 Cal. Rptr. 746 ; People v. Ruiz (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 574, 584, 265 Cal. Rptr. 886 ; Jones v. World Life Research Institute (1976) 60 Cal. App. 3d 836, 846, 131 Cal. Rptr. 674 ; see also People v. National Automobile & Casualty Co. (2000) 82 Cal. App. 4th 120, 125-126, 97 Cal. Rptr. 2d 858 ; Lovett v. Carrasco (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 48, 54-55, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 496] .

For example, a court may grant relief that it is not authorized to grant, or it may act in the absence of certain procedural prerequisites. Such acts are strictly in excess of jurisdiction, although in common usage they are frequently not distinguished from acts in which the court wholly lacks jurisdiction [see Abelleira v. District Court of Appeal (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 280, 288, 109 P.2d 942 ; People v. Nat'l Automobile and Casualty Ins. Co. (2000) 82 Cal. App. 4th 120, 125, 97 Cal. Rptr. 2d 858 ; Jovine v. FHP, Inc. (1998) 64 Cal. App. 4th 1506, 1527 n.26, 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 322 ; see also Crittenden v. Superior Court (1964) 61 Cal. 2d 565, 567, 39 Cal. Rptr. 380, 393 P.2d 692 ; Schwenke v. J & P Scott, Inc. (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 71, 76, 252 Cal. Rptr. 91 ; compare Jovine v. FHP, Inc. (1998) 64 Cal. App. 4th 1506, 1527, 1531-1532, 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 322 (while it is not uncommon for cases to state that act in excess of court's jurisdiction is void, only acts in excess of subject matter jurisdiction are void, while acts in excess of other kinds of jurisdiction are voidable) with Plaza Hollister Ltd. Partnership v. County of San Benito (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 1, 20, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 715 (granting relief that court under no circumstances has any authority to grant has been considered an aspect of fundamental jurisdiction for purposes of declaring a judgment or order void)].

For discussion of a lack of jurisdiction, see [2], above. For discussion of challenging a court's act in excess of jurisdiction, see § 324.42.

[4] Subject Matter Jurisdiction

Subject matter jurisdiction has been defined as the authority of a court to try actions of the type or class to which a suit belongs. A question of subject matter jurisdiction necessarily involves choice of forum: since all legally cognizable grievances may be considered in some forum, a claim that a particular agency has or does not have authority to adjudicate a case inevitably implies that another court or agency does not have or does have such power [Hughes v. Blue Cross of Northern California (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 832, 849, 263 Cal. Rptr. 850] .

[5] Personal Jurisdiction

While subject matter jurisdiction is the authority of a court to try particular types of actions, personal jurisdiction addresses whether a court may exercise jurisdiction over a person that is either 1) within the state, or 2) if not in the state, that the person has "certain minimum contacts with it such that the maintenance of the suit does not offend traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice;" and that the person's due process rights are protected by giving sufficient notice of the action and an opportunity to be heard [see Code Civ. Proc. § 410.10; International Shoe Co. v. Washington (1945) 326 U.S. 310, 66 S. Ct. 154, 90 L. Ed. 95] .

For discussion and forms relating to personal jurisdiction, see Ch. 323, Jurisdiction: Personal .

[6] "Action," "Proceeding," "Cause of Action," and "Case" Distinguished

Judicial remedies in California civil cases are divided into actions and special proceedings [Code Civ. Proc. § 21]. An action is an ordinary proceeding in a court of justice by which one party prosecutes another for the declaration, enforcement, or protection of a right or for a redress or prevention of a wrong [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 22, 30]. Every other remedy is a special proceeding [Code Civ. Proc. § 23]. A number of special proceedings are covered in Part Three of the Code of Civil Procedure. Code Civ. Proc. § 396, governing the transfer of an action or proceeding from a court lacking subject matter jurisdiction, applies by its own terms to appeals or petitions filed in the superior court over which the superior court lacks jurisdiction but over which a court of appeal or the Supreme Court would have jurisdiction [Code Civ. Proc. § 396(b)].

The term "action," however, is not limited to the complaint but refers to the entire judicial proceeding at least through judgment, and is generally considered synonymous with "suit" [Nassif v. Municipal Court (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 1294, 1298, 263 Cal. Rptr. 195] . Moreover, "action" is not the same as "cause of action." Whereas "action" refers to the judicial remedy to enforce an obligation, "cause of action" refers to the obligation itself [Nassif v. Municipal Court (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 1294, 1298, 263 Cal. Rptr. 195] .

The term "case" is a word of larger import and is not synonymous with the term "action" or "cause of action." Rather, the word "case" applies whenever two or more causes of action (as opposed to counts) are prosecuted together, for example, when both a complaint and a cross complaint have been filed or when two or more plaintiffs join in a case but each has his or her own cause of action. The term also applies when a single plaintiff prosecutes a cause of action against two or more defendants in which several judgments will be entered, as, for example, in an action against a principal and his or her surety [see Emery v. Pacific Employers Ins. Co. (1937) 8 Cal. 2d 663, 665-666, 67 P.2d 1046 (disapproved on another point in Barrera v. State Farm Mut. Automobile Ins. Co. (1969) 71 Cal. 2d 659, 679, 79 Cal. Rptr. 106, 456 P.2d 674)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionPersonal Jurisdiction & In Rem ActionsIn Personam ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Fundamentals of Jurisdiction

28-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 324.12

§ 324.12 Jurisdiction Required for Valid Judgment

The jurisdiction sufficient to sustain a record is jurisdiction over the cause, over the parties, and over the thing, when a specific thing is the subject of the judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 1917]. Thus, the judgment of a court lacking this jurisdiction is void [for additional discussion of a judicial act lacking jurisdiction, see § 324.41].

In other words, a court, in order to exercise jurisdiction over a given action or proceeding, must have jurisdiction over the subject matter, that is, the constitutional and statutory power to adjudicate the matter in controversy [see Abelleira v. District Court of Appeal (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 280, 288 ; Harrington v. Superior Court (1924) 194 Cal. 185, 188, 228 P. 15 ; Workmen's Comp. Appeals Bd. v. Small Claims Court (1973) 35 Cal. App. 3d 643, 645, 111 Cal. Rptr. 6] . Subject matter jurisdiction cannot be conferred by consent, waiver or estoppel [Buckley v. California Coastal Com. (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 178, 190, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 562] , nor can parties expand a court's jurisdiction by contract [Crowell v. Downey Community Hospital Foundation (2002) 95 Cal. App. 4th 730, 739, 115 Cal. Rptr. 2d 810] .

To exercise jurisdiction over the subject matter, the court must, to render a judgment in personam, secure personal jurisdiction over the defendant [Titus v. Superior Court (1972) 23 Cal. App. 3d 792, 799, 100 Cal. Rptr. 477] . Thus, in cases involving in personam actions or proceedings, the court must also have jurisdiction over the parties [see Hartford v. Superior Court (1956) 47 Cal. 2d 447, 454, 304 P.2d 1 ; see generally Chapter 323]. To render a judgment in rem or quasi in rem, the court must have jurisdiction over the specific thing that is the subject of the action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1917]. For further discussion of in personam, in rem, and quasi in rem judgments, see Chapter 323.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionPersonal Jurisdiction & In Rem ActionsIn Personam ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionJurisdiction Over ActionsGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Fundamentals of Jurisdiction

28-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 324.13

§ 324.13 Jurisdiction Is in Court Rather Than in Judge of Court

Jurisdiction lies in the court and not in a particular judge of the court. Thus, an individual judge, as distinguished from the court, is not empowered to retain jurisdiction of a cause. The cause is before the court, not the individual judge of the court, and the jurisdiction that the judge exercises is the jurisdiction of the court, not of the judge [People v. Osslo (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 75, 103-104, 323 P.2d 397 ; People v. Madrigal (1995) 37 Cal. App. 4th 791, 795-796, 43 Cal. Rptr. 2d 498 In re Marriage of Regnery (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 1367, 1377, 263 Cal. Rptr. 243 ; see also Sandco American, Inc. v. Notrica (1990) 216 Cal. App. 3d 1495, 1508, 265 Cal. Rptr. 587] .

The jurisdiction of a multijudge, multidepartment superior court is vested in the court as a whole. If one department exercises authority in the matter that might properly be heard in another department, that action, although irregular, does not amount to a defect of jurisdiction [People v. Madrigal (1995) 37 Cal. App. 4th 791, 795, 43 Cal. Rptr. 2d 498 ; Shane v. Superior Court (1984) 160 Cal. App. 3d 1237, 1249, 207 Cal. Rptr. 210] . The action, however, may constitute an act in excess of jurisdiction [see, e.g., People v. Malveaux (1997) 50 Cal. App. 4th 1425, 1439, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 371 (when defendant charged, detained, and sentenced in juvenile court before determination was made that defendant was over 18, because the crimes charged were within the jurisdiction of the superior court, they were within the juvenile court's fundamental jurisdiction, but the court's acts were in excess of jurisdiction); for discussion of excess of jurisdiction generally, see §§ 324.11[3], 324.42].

Similarly, the court rather than an individual judge retains jurisdiction of a cause. Court rules may properly provide that post trial proceeding shall be heard by the judge that tried the matter. An individual judge, however, cannot order that such matters be heard by himself or herself [People v. Osslo (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 75, 104, 323 P.2d 397 ; People v. Madrigal (1995) 37 Cal. App. 4th 791, 795, 43 Cal. Rptr. 2d 498 ; Ayala v. Municipal Court (1982) 137 Cal. App. 3d 484, 487, 187 Cal. Rptr. 75] .

For discussion of the exclusive jurisdiction of different departments within a superior court, see § 324.25[2][c].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionPersonal Jurisdiction & In Rem ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Fundamentals of Jurisdiction

28-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 324.14

§ 324.14 Jurisdiction to Determine Jurisdiction

Although a court may not act in a matter over which it has no jurisdiction, it has jurisdiction to determine its own jurisdiction [Abelleira v. District Court of Appeal (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 280, 302-303, 109 P.2d 942 ; Ziller Electronics Lab GmbH v. Superior Court (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 1222, 1228, 254 Cal. Rptr. 410] . Thus, a court has inherent power to inquire into its jurisdiction of a matter on its own motion, regardless of whether the issue is raised by the litigants. The power of inquiry rests partially on the theory that until the court determines that it has jurisdiction and does some act in consequence, there can be no injury to the party who denies its jurisdiction. The exercise of jurisdiction to determine jurisdiction is a preliminary step, not a final one, and no interference in the tribunal's inquiry is permitted. However, once a court decides that it has jurisdiction, then any subsequent act is always subject to inquiry by a higher court [Abelleira v. District Court of Appeal (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 280, 302-303, 109 P. 2d 942 ; see Bernardi v. City Council (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 426, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 347] . That is, once the determination is made, the question is no longer one of jurisdiction to determine jurisdiction, but, rather, one of jurisdiction to act, and, if the court acts, its action is subject to review by a higher court [Harden v. Superior Court (1955) 44 Cal. 2d 630, 634, 284 P.2d 9 ; Housing Authority v. Superior Court (1950) 35 Cal. 2d 550, 557, 219 P.2d 457 ; for further discussion relative to personal jurisdiction, see Ch. 323, Jurisdiction: Personal].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionPersonal Jurisdiction & In Rem ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329

Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Fundamentals of Jurisdiction

28-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 324.15

§ 324.15 Primary Jurisdiction Doctrine and Administrative Remedies

Under the primary jurisdiction doctrine, a court has discretion to defer ruling on a claim within its original jurisdiction pending an administrative determination of the claim if the interests of justice so require. In exercising this discretion, the court may consider various factors, including the need for administrative expertise and the promotion of uniformity in the application of regulatory law. If, however, a claim is cognizable in the first instance by an agency alone, the doctrine of exhaustion of administrative remedies applies rather than the primary jurisdiction doctrine. The exhaustion doctrine is not a matter of judicial discretion, but is a fundamental rule of procedure under which relief must be sought from the administrative body and this remedy exhausted before the courts will act [Economic Empowerment Foundation v. Quackenbush (1997) 57 Cal. App. 4th 677, 683-684, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 323 (dismissing action for failure to exhaust remedies); for discussion of the doctrine of exhaustion of administrative remedies and exceptions, see Ch. 474A, Timing of Judicial Review of Agency Decisions, §§ 474A.11, 474A.12].

When a claim is originally cognizable in the courts, the primary jurisdiction doctrine comes into play whenever enforcement of the claim requires resolution of issues that, under a regulatory scheme, have been placed within the special competence of an administrative body. The doctrine does not permanently foreclose judicial action, but provides the appropriate administrative agency with an opportunity to act if it chooses to do so [Wise v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (1999) 77 Cal. App. 4th 287, 295-296, 298, 91 Cal. Rptr. 2d 479 (doctrine applied)]. Under the doctrine, a court has discretion to defer ruling on a claim within its original jurisdiction pending an administrative determination of the claim if the interests of justice so require [Cundiff v. GTE California Inc. (2002) 101 Cal. App. 4th 1395, 1412-1413, 125 Cal. Rptr. 2d 445 ; Wise v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (1999) 77 Cal. App. 4th 287, 295-296, 298, 91 Cal. Rptr. 2d 479 ; Economic Empowerment Foundation v. Quackenbush (1997) 57 Cal. App. 4th 677, 683-684, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 323] . In exercising this discretion, the court may consider various factors, including the need for administrative expertise and the promotion of uniformity in the application of regulatory law [Economic Empowerment Foundation v. Quackenbush (1997) 57 Cal. App. 4th 677, 683-684, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 323] .

The doctrine of primary jurisdiction advances two related policies: it enhances court decisionmaking and efficiency by allowing courts to take advantage of administrative expertise, and it helps assure uniform application of regulatory laws

[Aicco, Inc. v. Insurance Co. of North America (2001) 90 Cal. App. 4th 579, 594, 109 Cal. Rptr. 2d 359 , citing Farmers Ins. Exchange v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 377, 390-391, 826 P.2d 730] . No rigid formula exists for applying the primary jurisdiction doctrine. Instead, resolution generally hinges on a court's determination of the extent to which the policies noted above are implicated in a given case. This discretionary approach leaves courts with considerable flexibility to avoid application of the doctrine in appropriate situations, as required by interests of justice. [Aicco, Inc. v. Insurance Co. of North America (2001) 90 Cal. App. 4th 579, 594, 109 Cal. Rptr. 2d 359 , citing Farmers Ins. Exchange v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 377, 390-391, 826 P.2d 730] .

The proper procedure in applying the doctrine of primary jurisdiction is not to dismiss the action, but to stay it pending resolution of the issues within the administrative body's expertise [Southbay Creditors Trust v. General Motors Acceptance Corp. (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 1068, 1081, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1 ; accord Wise v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (1999) 77 Cal.App. 4th 287, 296, 91 Cal. Rptr. 2d 479] . Thus, the primary jurisdiction doctrine creates a timing issue, not a jurisdictional issue [Piscioneri v. City of Ontario (2002) 95 Cal. App. 4th 1037, 1052-1053, 116 Cal. Rptr. 2d 38 , citing Farmers Ins. Exchange v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 377, 826 P.2d 730] .

The primary jurisdiction doctrine obligates a litigant to apply to an outside regulatory agency for relief before pursuing a civil action. It, like the closely related doctrine of exhaustion of external administrative remedies, arises in the context of complex regulatory schemes utilizing expert administrative agencies. Both doctrines are, in the words of the Supreme Court, essentially doctrines of comity between courts and agencies. They are two sides of the timing coin: Each determines whether an action may be brought in a court or whether an agency proceeding, or further agency proceeding, is necessary [Palmer v. Regents of the University of California (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 899, 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 567] .

A three-pronged test is used to determine whether a superior court action brought by private parties would impede the execution by the Public Utilities Commission (PUC) of its duties. These factors are: 1) whether the PUC is authorized to make a certain policy; 2) whether it has adopted regulations to effect that policy; and 3) whether maintenance of the superior court action would interfere with that policy [Anaheim v. Pacific Bell Telephone Co. (2004) 119 Cal. App. 4th 838, 844, 14 Cal. Rptr. 3d 725] .

A trucking company participating in the California Automobile Assigned Risk Plan (CAARP), a statutorily created program governed by the Insurance Commissioner designed to make automobile liability insurance available to those unable to obtain insurance through ordinary methods, is not required to exhaust the administrative remedies available to those participating in the CAARP before bringing a lawsuit in which the central issues was the determination of the proper premium to be charged, a matter governed by the CAARP's and the Insurance Commissioner's internal regulations. However, the doctrine of primary jurisdiction required the trial court to stay proceedings and refer the premium billing dispute to the Department of Insurance and the Insurance Commissioner [Neil & Associates v. Jones (2004) 33 Cal. 4th 917, 930, 16 Cal. Rptr. 3d 849, 94 P.3d 1055] .

The primary jurisdiction doctrine contemplates that a ruling issued by an agency is subject to judicial review. When primary jurisdiction is properly invoked, the doctrine requires that the suit be stayed until the agency resolves the issue, whereupon the lawsuit resumes if the agency's resolution (assuming it survives review by whatever court has jurisdiction to review the agency's decisions) has not resolved the entire controversy [Wise v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 725, 741, 34 Cal. Rptr. 3d 222] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Administrative LawJudicial ReviewReviewabilityJurisdiction & VenueCivil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionJurisdiction Over ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudicial OfficersJudgesDiscretion

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Fundamentals of Jurisdiction

28-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 324.16-324.19

[Reserved]

§§ 324.16[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Organization and Jurisdiction of California Courts

28-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 324.20

§ 324.20 Organization of California Courts

[1] Governing Law

The powers, or branches, of the government of this state, and the separation of these powers, are established by Cal. Const., art. III, § 3. The California court system is established by Cal. Const., art. VI.

Subject matter jurisdiction is conferred by Cal. Const., art. VI, §§ 10, 11, and by statute to the extent authorized by the Constitution.

Subject matter jurisdiction of the superior court in limited civil cases is covered in Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85, 86, and 86.1, and that of small claims courts in Code Civ. Proc. § 116.220.

Subject matter jurisdiction of the appellate division of superior courts is governed by Code Civ. Proc. § 77(e).

The transfer of an appeal or petition over which the superior court has no jurisdiction but over which a court of appeal or the Supreme Court would have jurisdiction is required by Code Civ. Proc. § 396(b).

[2] Judicial Power of California

[a] Vested in Courts and Administrative Agencies

Cal. Const., art. III, § 3, provides that the powers of state government are legislative, executive, and judicial, and that persons charged with the exercise of one power may not exercise either of the others "except as permitted by this Constitution." Cal. Const., art. VI, § 1, provides that the judicial power of this state is vested in the Supreme Court, courts of appeal, and the superior courts.

Because the constitution creates certain statewide administrative agencies in which it vests limited judicial power, and other statewide administrative agencies have been legislatively endowed with judicial powers pursuant to a specific constitutional authorization, these agencies exercise some of the judicial power of the state [McHugh v. Santa Monica Rent Control Bd. (1989) 49 Cal. 3d 348, 355, 261 Cal. Rptr. 318, 777 P.2d 91 ; see also Lentz v. McMahon (1989) 49 Cal. 3d 393, 404, 261 Cal. Rptr. 310, 777 P.2d 83 ; Strumsky v. San Diego County Employees Retirement Ass'n (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 28, 35-36, 112 Cal. Rptr. 805, 520 P.2d 29] . These agencies include:

- The Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control [see Cal. Const, art. XX, § 22, and Ch. 18, Alcoholic Beverage Licenses];

- The Public Utilities Commission [see Cal. Const., art. XII, §§ 4, 5, and Ch. 480, Public Utilities]; and

- The Workers' Compensation Appeals Board [see Cal. Const., art. XIV, § 4, and Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation].

In addition, the state Senate exercises limited judicial power when it tries public officers or officials impeached by the state Assembly [see Cal. Const. art. IV, § 18].

Cal Const., art. III, § 3, and art. VI preclude the exercise of judicial power by nonconstitutional administrative agencies, that is, by those agencies whose authority is derived solely from a grant of power by the state or local government entity [Lentz v. McMahon (1989) 49 Cal. 3d 393, 404, 261 Cal. Rptr. 310, 777 P.2d 83] . Cal. Const., art. VI, disposes of all judicial power of the state not disposed of elsewhere in the constitution. Thus, agencies not vested by the constitution with judicial powers may not exercise such powers; although the Legislature has authority to grant a multitude of powers to local bodies pursuant to Cal. Const., art. XI, powers of a judicial nature are not at its disposal [McHugh v. Santa Monica Rent Control Bd. (1989) 49 Cal. 3d 348, 356, 261 Cal. Rptr. 318, 777 P.2d 91] . Nevertheless, limited judicial or quasi-judicial power is exercised by a number of legislatively created statewide administrative agencies and by various local public agencies. This has been held not to violate the judicial powers doctrine so long as (1) the exercise of such power is reasonably necessary to effectuate the administrative agency's primary, legitimate regulatory purposes; and (2) the essential judicial power remains ultimately in the courts, through review of agency determinations [see McHugh v. Santa Monica Rent Control Bd. (1989) 49 Cal. 3d 348, 359, 261 Cal. Rptr. 318, 777 P.2d 91 ; see also Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5; Gov. Code § 11500 et seq.; Lentz v. McMahon (1989) 49 Cal. 3d 393, 404, 261 Cal. Rptr. 310, 777 P.2d 83 ; Bixby v. Pierno (1971) 4 Cal. 3d 130, 137-140, 93 Cal. Rptr. 234, 481 P.2d 242 ; Temescal Water Co. v. Dept. of Public Works (1955) 44 Cal. 2d 90, 101, 280 P.2d 1] . For discussion concerning the scope of review by the courts of the decisions of such agencies, see Ch. 474, Availability of Judicial Review of Agency Decisions .

[b] Classification of California Courts

There are two classes of California courts:

- Appellate or reviewing courts

- Trial courts

The appellate courts are the Supreme Court of California, the courts of appeal, and the appellate divisions of the superior courts when exercising appellate or review jurisdiction over orders and judgments made in 1) specified limited civil cases on appeal from the superior court, and 2) small claims court.

The trial courts are the superior courts.

Juvenile courts, family law courts, probate courts, etc., are not separate courts but are merely departments of the superior courts. Small claims courts are divisions of the superior courts [see Code Civ. Proc. § 116.210].

[3] Organization of California Courts

[a] Supreme Court

California has one Supreme Court [Cal. Const., art. VI, § 1]. It consists of the Chief Justice of California and six associate justices. The concurrence of four judges (justices), present at the argument is necessary for a judgment [Cal. Const., art. VI, § 2]. Statutory provisions relating to the Supreme Court are contained in Gov. Code §§ 68801-68915 and 68926-68932.

The Supreme Court of California is located in San Francisco, and its contact information is:

Supreme Court of California
350 McAllister Street
San Francisco, CA 94102-4783
Office of the Clerk: 415-865-7000

[b] Courts of Appeal

Pursuant to constitutional mandate (Cal. Const., art. VI, § 3), the Legislature has divided the state into appellate districts, each district containing a court of appeal with one or more divisions. Each division (1) consists of a presiding justice and two or more associate justices, (2) has the power of a court of appeal, and (3) must conduct itself as a three-judge court. Concurrence of two judges present at the argument is necessary for a judgment [Cal. Const., art. VI, § 3]. At the present time, there are six appellate districts and, therefore, six courts of appeal [see Gov. Code § 69100; see also Code Civ. Proc. § 38(a) (statutory reference to judicial district as it relates to court of appeal refers to court of appeal district)]. Statutory provisions relating to the courts of appeal are contained in Gov. Code §§ 68926-68932 and 69100-69154. The appellate districts and the counties of which they are composed are listed below, and include the county seat of each county.

First Appellate District [District Office: San Francisco]:

- Alameda (Oakland)
- Contra Costa (Martinez)
- Del Norte (Crescent City)
- Humboldt (Eureka)
- Lake (Lakeport)
- Marin (San Rafael)
- Mendocino (Ukiah)
- Napa (Napa)
- San Francisco (San Francisco)

- San Mateo (Redwood City)
- Solano (Fairfield)
- Sonoma (Santa Rosa)

Second Appellate District [District Offices: Los Angeles, Ventura]:

- Los Angeles (Los Angeles)
- Ventura (Ventura)
- Santa Barbara (Santa Barbara)
- San Luis Obispo (San Luis Obispo)

Third Appellate District [District Office: Sacramento]:

- Alpine (Markleeville)
- Amador (Jackson)
- Butte (Oroville)
- Calaveras (San Andreas)
- Colusa (Colusa)
- El Dorado (Placerville)
- Glenn (Willows)
- Lassen (Susanville)
- Modoc (Alturas)
- Mono (Bridgeport)
- Nevada (Nevada City)
- Placer (Auburn)
- Plumas (Quicy)
- Sacramento (Sacramento)
- San Joaquin (Stockton)
- Shasta (Redding)

- Sierra (Downieville)
- Siskiyou (Yreka)
- Sutter (Yuba City)
- Tehama (Red Bluff)
- Trinity (Weaverville)
- Yolo (Woodland)
- Yuba (Marysville)

Fourth Appellate District [District Offices: San Diego, Riverside, Santa Ana]:

- San Diego (San Diego)
- Imperial (El Centro)
- Orange (Santa Ana)
- San Bernardino (San Bernardino)
- Riverside (Riverside)
- Inyo (Independence)

Fifth Appellate District [District Office: Fresno]:

- Fresno (Fresno)
- Kern (Bakersfield)
- Kings (Hanford)
- Madera (Madera)
- Mariposa (Mariposa)
- Merced (Merced)
- Stanislaus (Modesto)
- Tulare (Tulare)
- Tuolumne (Sonora)

Sixth Appellate District [District Office: San Jose]:

- Santa Clara (San Jose)
- Santa Cruz (Santa Cruz)
- San Benito (Hollister)
- Monterey (Salinas)

[c] Superior Courts

In each county there is a superior court with one or more judges [Cal. Const., art. VI, § 4]. There are 57 counties and one city and county in California; hence, there are presently 58 superior courts. Refer to [b], above, for a listing of counties per appellate district and their corresponding county seats.

A statutory reference to judicial district as it relates to a superior court or to a county means the county [Code Civ. Proc. § 38(b), (d)].

The number of judges and the officers and employees of each superior court are prescribed by the Legislature [Cal. Const., art. VI, § 4]. The general statutory provisions relating to superior courts are set forth in Gov. Code §§ 69504-70148 and 71386.

The process of each superior court extends throughout the state [Code Civ. Proc. § 71].

[d] Small Claims Courts

The small claims courts are divisions of the superior courts exercising limited jurisdiction [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 116.210, 116.220; see also Ch. 526, Small Claims].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionJurisdictional SourcesConstitutional SourcesCivil ProcedureJurisdictionJurisdictional SourcesStatutory SourcesCivil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionJurisdiction Over ActionsLimited JurisdictionConstitutional LawThe JudiciaryJurisdictionGeneral OverviewConstitutional LawSeparation of PowersGovernmentsCourtsCreation & OrganizationGovernmentsCourtsSmall Claims Courts

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329

Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Organization and Jurisdiction of California Courts

28-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 324.21

§ 324.21 Subject Matter Jurisdiction of Supreme Court

[1] Original and Appellate Jurisdiction

[a] Original Jurisdiction

The Supreme Court and their judges have original jurisdiction in habeas corpus proceedings. The Court also has original jurisdiction in proceedings for extraordinary relief in the nature of mandamus, certiorari, and prohibition [Cal. Const. art. VI, § 10]. In exercising its original jurisdiction, the Supreme Court acts as a reviewing court rather than as an appellate court. It is appropriate for the Supreme Court to exercise its original jurisdiction when issues of great public importance are involved and should be promptly resolved [Raven v. Deukmejian (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 336, 340, 276 Cal. Rptr. 326, 801 P.2d 1077] .

[b] Appellate Jurisdiction and Transfer Between Courts

The Supreme Court has appellate jurisdiction when judgment of death has been pronounced [Cal. Const., art. VI, § 11; see also Penal Code § 1506]. Appeals from other superior court judgments and orders are taken to the courts of appeal [see Cal. Const., art. VI, § 11]. However, the Supreme Court may, before decision, transfer to itself a cause in a court of appeal and may, before decision, transfer a cause from itself to a court of appeal or from one court of appeal or division to another [Cal. Const., art. VI, § 12(a); see also Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 8.516]. The court to which a cause is transferred has jurisdiction [Cal. Const. art. VI, § 12(a); see Whittaker v. Superior Court (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 357, 360, 66 Cal. Rptr. 710, 438 P.2d 358] . Moreover, the Supreme Court may decide one or more issues and transfer the cause to a Court of Appeal for decision of any remaining issues [Cal. Const., art. VI, § 12; Cal. Rules of Ct, Rules 8.500 and 8.528(c); Snukal v. Flightways Manufacturing, Inc. (2000) 23 Cal. 4th 754, 766, 772-776, 98 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1, 3 P.3d 286] .

For discussion of the power of the Supreme Court, see Ch. 54, Appeal: California Supreme Court Review .

[c] Questions of California Law From Federal and Other State Courts

The Supreme Court may decide questions of state law on request of the United States Supreme Court, a United States Court of Appeals, or the court of last resort of any state, territory, or commonwealth if the decision could determine the outcome of a matter pending in the requesting court, and there is no controlling precedent [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.548; Los Angeles Alliance for Survival v. City of Los Angeles (2000) 22 Cal. 4th 352, 356-362, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1, 993 P.2d 334 (certification request granted)].

[2] Jurisdiction to Review Decisions or Orders

[a] Of Courts of Appeal

The Supreme Court may review the decision of a court of appeal in any cause [Cal. Const., art. VI, § 12(b); see also Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 8.500-8.552, and Ch. 54, Appeal: California Supreme Court Review].

[b] Of Administrative Agencies

The Supreme Court has jurisdiction to review, reverse, correct, or annul any order or decision of the Public Utilities Commission [Pub. Util. Code §§ 1756(a), (f), (g), 1759], the Workers' Compensation Appeals Board [Lab. Code § 5955], and the Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control [Bus. & Prof. Code § 23090].

[3] Jurisdiction in Miscellaneous Proceedings

The Supreme Court has jurisdiction over petitions for review of the determinations of the Commission on Judicial Performance to retire, remove, censure, admonish, or disqualify a judge or former judge [Cal. Const., art. VI, § 18(d)]. It is also empowered to admit attorneys to practice in California, to suspend or disbar attorneys, and to review other State Bar proceedings relating to attorneys [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 6060, 6062, 6081-6084, 6100, 6102; Cal. Rules. of Ct., Rule 9.13; for further discussion and forms, see Ch. 70, Attorney Admission , and Ch. 71, Attorney Discipline].

A majority of the Supreme Court must agree to the Governor's grant of a pardon or commutation of a sentence of a person "twice convicted of a felony" [Cal. Const., art. V, § 8(a)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Administrative LawJudicial ReviewReviewabilityJurisdiction & VenueCivil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionJurisdiction Over ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionState Court Review

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Organization and Jurisdiction of California Courts

28-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 324.22

§ 324.22 Subject Matter Jurisdiction of Courts of Appeal

[1] Original and Appellate Jurisdiction

Courts of appeal and their judges have original jurisdiction in habeas corpus proceedings. These courts also have original jurisdiction in proceedings for extraordinary relief in the nature of mandamus, certiorari, and prohibition [Cal. Const., art. VI, § 10]. In exercising their original jurisdiction, the courts of appeal act as reviewing courts rather than as appellate courts.

Except for criminal cases in which a death penalty has been imposed, the courts of appeal have appellate jurisdiction over all cases of which the superior courts have original jurisdiction and in other causes prescribed by statute [Cal. Const., art. VI, § 11; see also Penal Code § 1506]. Superior court judgments and orders appealable to the courts of appeal are listed in Code Civ. Proc. § 904.1 (civil actions), Prob. Code § 1300-1304 (proceedings governed by the Probate Code), and Penal Code §§ 1237-1238 (criminal cases). Appellate jurisdiction vested in the courts of appeal by Cal. Const., art. VI, § 11 encompasses review by extraordinary writ as well as review by direct appeal [Leone v. Medical Board (2000) 22 Cal. 4th 660, 665, 668-670, 94 Cal. Rptr. 2d 61, 995 P.2d 191 (Bus. & Prof. Code § 2337, providing for review by writ rather than direct appeal of superior court administrative mandate judgments in physician licensing matters, does not violate Cal. Const., art. VI, § 11)].

Appeals are deemed taken to the court of appeal of the district in which the superior court sits [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.100(a)(2)].

Other causes prescribed by statute include certification to a court of appeal of cases on appeal to the superior court [see Code Civ. Proc. § 911; Penal Code § 1471; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 8.264(b), 8.1000-8.1018]. When a court of appeal, in its discretion, has transferred to itself a case from the appellate department of the superior court to secure uniformity of decision or to settle important questions of law, under Code Civ. Proc. § 911 and Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 8.1002, 8.1005, 8.1016 the court of appeal is not authorized to decide selected issues that are not dispositive of the appeal. Rather, the court must decide the issues necessary to resolution of the appeal and thereafter transmit the remittitur to the superior court. Code Civ. Proc. § 911, however, does not appear to preclude the Judicial Council from revising the current rules of court to implement such a limited review and remand procedure [Snukal v. Flightways Manufacturing, Inc. (2000) 23 Cal. 4th 754, 758, 761-762, 766, 773-776, 787, 98 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1, 3 P.3d 286] . For discussion of powers of the courts of appeal, see Ch. 40, Appeal: An Overview , through Ch. 52, Appeal: Rehearing .

Once appellate jurisdiction has been conferred by the Constitution, it cannot be destroyed or abridged by legislative action. Any attempt to do so is void. Thus, the phrase in Gov. Code § 6026 specifying that appeals of judgments deciding the issue of general-circulation newspaper petitions can be heard by the Supreme Court instead of or in addition to the Court of Appeal is void because it abridges the appellate jurisdiction constitutionally reserved for the Court of Appeal [In Re Perris City News (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 1194, 1197-1198, 118 Cal. Rptr. 2d 38] .

For discussion of the Supreme Court's power to transfer causes, before decision, either from itself to a court of appeal or from a court of appeal to itself, see § 323.24[1][b].

[2] Jurisdiction to Review Administrative Orders

The courts of appeal have jurisdiction to review, reverse, correct, or annul any order or decision of the Workers' Compensation Appeals Board [Lab. Code § 5955] and the Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control [Bus. & Prof. Code § 23090] and of most orders and decisions of the Public Utilities Commission [Pub. Util. Code §§ 1756(a), (f), (g), 1759]. For discussion of the primary jurisdiction doctrine as is relates to administrative remedies, see § 324.15. For discussion of the doctrine of exhaustion of administrative remedies and exceptions, see Ch. 474A, Timing of Judicial Review of Agency Decisions, §§ 474A.11, 474A.12].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Administrative LawJudicial ReviewReviewabilityJurisdiction & VenueCivil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionJurisdiction Over ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionState Court Review

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Organization and Jurisdiction of California Courts

28-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 324.23

§ 324.23 Subject Matter Jurisdiction of Superior Courts

[1] Original Jurisdiction

Superior Courts and their judges have original jurisdiction in habeas corpus proceedings and original jurisdiction in proceedings for extraordinary relief in the nature of mandamus, certiorari, and prohibition [Cal. Const., art. VI, § 10].

Superior courts also have original jurisdiction in all causes except those given by statute to other trial courts [Cal. Const., art. VI, § 10; see Walker v. Superior Court (1991) 53 Cal. 3d 257, 264, 279 Cal. Rptr. 576, 807 P.2d 418 ; Whittaker v. Superior Court (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 357, 362, 66 Cal. Rptr. 710, 438 P.2d 358 ; Davis v. Superior Court (1972) 25 Cal. App. 3d 596, 599, 102 Cal. Rptr. 238] . In other words, the superior courts are courts of general jurisdiction, but this jurisdiction is residual in that all original jurisdiction not delegated to other trial courts resides in the superior courts [see Arnold, California Courts and Judges Handbook, Part One, § 2.64 (Law Book Service Co., 6th ed. 1993)].

As of February 2001, all counties have elected to unify their trial courts and there are no municipal courts in the state. The superior court has jurisdiction over all causes which had been in the jurisdiction of the municipal court, that is, limited civil cases [see Cal. Const., art. VI, § 5(e); for discussion of unlimited and limited civil cases, see § 324.60 et seq.].

The appellate division of the superior court has original jurisdiction of proceedings for extraordinary relief in the nature of mandamus, certiorari, and prohibition directed to the superior court in limited civil cases [Cal. Const., art. VI, § 10; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 77(e), 85.1, 1068(b), 1085(b), 1103(b)].

Parties cannot confer subject matter jurisdiction upon the court by consent, waiver, or estoppel [Housing Group v. United Nat'l Ins. Co. (2001) 90 Cal. App. 4th 1106, 1113, 109 Cal. Rptr. 2d 497] .

[2] Appellate Jurisdiction

Except for the cases placed in the appellate jurisdiction of the Supreme Court and courts of appeal by Cal. Const. art. VI, § 11(a), the appellate divisions of superior courts have appellate jurisdiction in causes prescribed by statute [Cal. Const. art. VI, § 11(b)]. Thus, the superior court's appellate jurisdiction is purely statutory [see Smith v. City of Los Angeles Dept. of Transportation (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th Supp. 7, 9 , 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 838] .

By statute, the appellate divisions of superior courts have jurisdiction over appeals in limited civil cases [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 77(e), 904.2]. These appeals may be from the superior court itself [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 77(e), 85.1].

Appealable judgments and orders in limited civil cases are listed in Code Civ. Proc. § 904.2 and Penal Code § 1466].

Superior courts also have appellate jurisdiction over appeals filed by defendants from small claims court judgments [Code Civ. Proc. § 116.710].

The powers of the superior courts on appeal are governed by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 906-909 and Penal Code § 1469. Cal. Const., art. VI, § 13, and Code Civ. Proc. § 475 limit the power of the superior courts to set aside a judgment or grant a new trial.

[3] Jurisdictional Classification of Civil Cases

Within the superior court, civil cases are to be classified as unlimited or limited civil cases depending on the amount of damages plead and the nature of relief sought [see Code Civ. Proc. § 85 et seq.]. For analysis of classifying and reclassifying cases, see § 324.60 et seq.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionJurisdiction Over ActionsGeneral JurisdictionCivil ProcedureRemediesWritsCommon Law WritsMandamusCivil ProcedureRemediesWritsCommon Law WritsProhibitionCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionState Court ReviewCriminal Law & ProcedureHabeas CorpusProcedureFiling of PetitionJurisdiction

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329

Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Organization and Jurisdiction of California Courts

28-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 324.24

§ 324.24 Jurisdiction Over Native Americans and Indian Nations

[1] Jurisdiction Over Individuals Not Tribe

Congress has given California courts jurisdiction over civil causes of action arising in Native American tribal territory and between individual Native Americans or to which Native Americans are parties to the same extent that those courts have jurisdiction over other civil causes of action [28 U.S.C. § 1360; Hydrothermal Energy Corp. v. Fort Bidwell IndianCommunity Council (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 489, 494, 494 n.4, 216 Cal. Rptr. 59] .

28 U.S.C. § 1360, however, confers jurisdiction only over individual Indians, not over Indian tribes themselves [Great Western Casinos, Inc. v. Morongo Band of Mission Indians (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 1407, 1427, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 828 ; Trudgeon v. Fantasy Springs Casino (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 632, 643, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 65] . 28 U.S.C. § 1360 does not confer on California jurisdiction over disputes between tribal members and tribes [Ackerman v. Edwards (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 946, 954, 17 Cal. Rptr. 3d 517] .

For discussion of additional limitations on the jurisdiction conferred by Section 1360, see [4], below.

[1A] Jurisdiction and the Indian Child Welfare Act (ICWA)

Congress enacted the Indian Child Welfare Act (ICWA) to recognize the special relationship between the United States and the Indian tribes and their members by protecting the continued existence and integrity of Indian tribes and their children [25 U.S.C. § 1901 et seq.]. Federal law [25 U.S.C. 1911(a)] establishes exclusive jurisdiction in the tribal courts for proceedings concerning an Indian child who resides or is domiciled within the reservation of such tribe, as well as for wards of tribal courts regardless of domicile. In any State court proceeding for foster care placement or termination of parental rights, 25 U.S.C. § 1911(b) creates a presumption that cases involving Indian children not domiciled on the reservation must be transferred to the tribal court upon the petition of either parent or the tribe, except in cases of objection by either parent, good cause to deny the transfer, or declination of jurisdiction by the tribal court. Further, in any State court proceeding for the foster care placement of, or termination of parental rights to, an Indian child, the Indian custodian of the child and the Indian child's tribe must have a right to intervene at any point in the proceeding. [25 U.S.C. § 1911(c)].

The United States Supreme Court has held that an Indian tribe has exclusive jurisdiction over an adoption matter involving a child born outside of a tribe's reservation, provided that the natural mother was domiciled on the reservation [see Mississippi Band of Choctaw Indians v. Holyfield (1989) 490 U.S. 30, 48-49, 109 S. Ct. 1597, 104 L. Ed. 29]. In Mississippi Band of Choctaw Indians v. Holyfield (1989) 490 U.S. 30, 109 S. Ct. 1597, 104 L. Ed. 29 , the fact that the parents left the reservation prior to the birth of their twins did not change the children's domicile. The Court found that the appellant Indian tribe had exclusive jurisdiction over the adoption of the children [Mississippi Band of Choctaw Indians v. Holyfield (1989) 490 U.S. 30, 48-49, 109 S. Ct. 1597, 104 L. Ed. 29].

The Indian tribe status of the child need not be certain. Notice is required whenever the court knows or has reason to believe the child is an Indian child [ICWA, 25 U.S.C. § 1912; see In re Junious M. (1983) 144 Cal. App. 3d 786, 193 Cal. Rptr. 40 ; In re Kahlen W. (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 1414, 285 Cal. Rptr. 507]. Even in child custody cases where a minor child might be an "Indian child," the court is required to notify the tribe in question and seek its determination of the Indian child's status, and thus, whether the ICWA applies for jurisdiction [In re Junious M. (1983) 144 Cal. App. 3d 786, 788, 193 Cal. Rptr. 40]. Certified mail notification of custody proceedings was required to petitioner mother's Indian tribe; telephone contact was insufficient to provide the requisite notice under the Section 1912 of the ICWA [In re Kahlen W. (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 1414, 1423, 285 Cal. Rptr. 507].

In its decisions, the courts have adhered strictly to the provisions of the ICWA, and more specifically 25 U.S.C. § 1911 [see In re M.A. (2006) 137 Cal. App. 4th 567, 40 Cal. Rptr. 3d 439 ; Mississippi Band of Choctaw Indians v. Holyfield (1989) 490 U.S. 30, 109 S. Ct. 1597, 104 L. Ed. 29 ; In re Baby Girl A. (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 1611, 282 Cal. Rptr. 105 ; In re Kahlen W. (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 1414, 285 Cal. Rptr. 507].

In a juvenile dependency proceeding, a trial court granted a tribe's petition, transferring the matter from the juvenile court to the tribal court pursuant to the ICWA, notwithstanding that the Secretary of the United States Department of the Interior (Secretary) had not approved its tribal court [In re M.A. (2006) 137 Cal. App. 4th 567, 569-571, 40 Cal. Rptr. 3d 439]. The tribal court did not decline jurisdiction; rather, the tribe had petitioned for transfer. No statutory good cause to reject the transfer was shown. In addition, neither parent objected to the transfer. Under the circumstances, 25 U.S.C. § 1911(b) and Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 1439(c)(2) [now see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 5.664], required the juvenile court to transfer the case to the tribal court [In re M.A. (2006) 137 Cal. App. 4th 567, 573, 40 Cal. Rptr. 3d 439]. The tribe's failure to obtain the Secretary's approval did not mean that it lacked jurisdiction to adjudicate the proceeding or to accept transfer of the case; thus, the Third District found that the juvenile court properly granted the transfer petition [In re M.A. (2006) 137 Cal. App. 4th 567, 577-578, 40 Cal. Rptr. 3d 439].

Further, in child custody proceedings for children who are found to be protected under the ICWA, the child's tribe has an absolute right to intervene at any point in the proceedings, regardless of whether or not the child resides on a reservation [25 U.S.C. § 1911(c); Welf. & Inst. Code § 224.4; In re Riva M. (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 403, 410, 286 Cal. Rptr. 592]. In the adoption case of In re Baby Girl A. (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 1611, 282 Cal. Rptr. 105 , the appellate court allowed the tribe to intervene, despite the facts that the mother was a former member of the tribe but had been raised by non-Indians since age 3, the father was a non-Indian man, and both the mother and father wanted to place the child with a non-Indian couple and opposed the tribe's intervention [In re Baby Girl A. (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 1611, 1614, 1620-1621, 282 Cal. Rptr. 105]. Congress made it very clear that the ICWA is intended to protect the rights of Indian tribes, as well as those of Indian children and families [In re Baby Girl A. (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 1611, 1618, 282 Cal. Rptr. 105 , citing 25 U.S.C. §§ 1901(3), 1902].While the ICWA did not expressly permit the appellant tribe to intervene, the interests of protecting the tribe under the Act were sufficiently important to support allowing it to join the proceeding [In re Baby Girl A. (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 1611, 1619, 282 Cal. Rptr. 105].

Despite the court's strict application of the ICWA, the court did acknowledge in dicta the tribe's interest in actions involving Indian children living off the reservation is not as great [In re Baby Girl A. (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 1611, 1621, 282 Cal. Rptr. 105]. The court also stated in dicta that the tribe must be permitted to intervene despite the facts that both parents made it clear that they did not want the child placed with an Indian family, the child is only part-Indian, the child had never lived in a tribal environment, and that if the natural parents chose not to place the child for adoption, she would not have been raised in an Indian culture [In re Baby Girl A. (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 1611, 1620, 282 Cal. Rptr. 105].

For further discussion of the ICWA, see Hollinger, Adoption Law and Practice, Ch. 15 (Matthew Bender); Kirkland, Lurvey, Richmond and Wagner, California Family Law Practice and Procedure, 2d ed., Ch. 176 (Matthew Bender); and §§ 12A.18, 12B.270 and 328.32A.

[2] Immunity of Native American Tribes and Officials

Native American tribes are immune to suit unless there has been an effective waiver or consent [People ex rel. Dept. of Transportation v. Naegele Outdoor Advertising Co. (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 509, 519, 213 Cal. Rptr. 247, 698 P.2d 150 ; Hydrothermal Energy Corp. v. Fort Bidwell Indian Community Council (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 489, 494, 216 Cal. Rptr. 59 ; see Trudgeon v. Fantasy Springs Casino (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 632, 636, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 65] . Because tribal immunity emanates from federal law, the immunity is not subject to diminution by the states [Trudgeon v. Fantasy Springs Casino (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 632, 636, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 65] .

Sovereign immunity is not a discretionary doctrine that may be applied as a remedy depending on the equities of a given situation; rather, it presents a pure jurisdictional question. In determining whether sovereign immunity extends to a tort case against a separate business entity organized by an Indian tribe, as opposed to immunity from a tort claim against the tribe itself, the court applies a three-part test setting forth the relevant criteria to address the immunity issue, including these considerations: (1) whether the business entity is organized for a purpose that is governmental in nature, rather than commercial; (2) whether the tribe and the business entity are closely linked in governing structure and other characteristics; and (3) whether federal policies intended to promote Indian tribal autonomy are furthered by the extension of immunity to the business entity [Warburton/Buttner v. Superior Court (2002) 103 Cal. App. 4th 1170, 1182-1183, 127 Cal. Rptr. 2d 706 , citing Trudgeon v. Fantasy Springs Casino (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 632, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 65] .

Tribal immunity extends to individual tribal officials acting in their representative capacity and within the scope of their authority. This immunity applies to officials sued in their individual capacities [Lamere v. Superior Court (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 1059, 1065, 31 Cal. Rptr. 3d 880 (where an enrollment committee is engaged in deciding issues of Band membership, the members are serving an essential tribal function)]. On the other hand, an agent of an immune sovereign may be held liable for an act that exceeds his or her authority. When, however, the plaintiff alleges no viable claim that tribal officials acted outside their authority, immunity applies [see Trudgeon v. Fantasy Springs Casino (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 632, 643-644, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 65 ; accord Great Western Casinos, Inc. v. Morongo Band of Mission Indians (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 1407, 1421-1424, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 828 (immunity also covered counsel in providing legal representation, even if allegedly conspiring with tribe to wrongfully terminate contract)]. To qualify as "tribal officials" for immunity purposes, defendants must show that they performed discretionary or policymaking functions within or on behalf of the tribe, so that exposing them to liability would undermine the immunity of the tribe itself. In addition to establishing that defendants qualify as tribal officials for immunity purposes, defendants must also satisfy the second requirement for tribal official immunity, i.e., that the official must have acted within the scope of his or her authority [Turner v. Martire (2000) 82 Cal. App. 4th 1042, 1044, 1046, 1054, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 587 (defendants, as law enforcement officers of Indian tribe, held not protected by tribe's sovereign immunity against liability for allegedly assaulting and improperly detaining plaintiffs)]. Sovereign immunity does not generally apply to acts of individual tribal members [Great Western Casinos, Inc. v. Morongo Band of Mission Indians (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 1407, 1422, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 828 ; see Turner v. Martire (2000) 82 Cal. App. 4th 1042, 1046, 1054-1055, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 587] .

Depending on appropriate factors, tribal immunity may extend to a tribal entity such as a tribal corporation [see Trudgeon v. Fantasy Springs Casino (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 632, 638-643, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 65 (in action for personal injuries, immunity extended to corporation formed to operate casino; applying three-factor analysis); cf. Great Western Casinos, Inc. v. Morongo Band of Mission Indians (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 1407, 1427, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 828 (28 U.S.C. § 1360 does not confer jurisdiction over tribal entities); Redding Rancheria v. Superior Court (2001) 88 Cal. App. 4th 384, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 773 , petition for cert. Dec. 3, 2001 (court did not have jurisdiction over Indian tribal casino in tort action for injuries received off-reservation)].

In a case with limited applicability, the California Supreme Court has held that a tribe lacks immunity from suit for its alleged failure to follow the Political Reform Act's mandated reporting requirements. The Court reasoned that allowing tribal members to participate in the state electoral process while leaving the state powerless to effectively guard against political corruption would have put the state in an untenable and indefensible position, in light of the constitutionally significant importance of the state's ability to provide a transparent election process with rules applying equally to all parties in the electoral fray. In so holding, the Court recognized that its abrogation of the sovereign immunity doctrine is narrow and carefully circumscribed to apply only in cases where California, through its Fair Political Practices Commission, sues an Indian tribe for violations of state fair political practice laws [Agua Caliente Band of Cahuilla Indians v. Superior Court (2006) 40 Cal. 4th 239, 261, 52 Cal. Rptr. 3d 659] .

Similarly, San Manuel Indian Bingo and Casino v. N.L.R.B. (D.C. Cir. 2007) 475 F.3d 1306, 1311-1315, 374 U.S. App. D.C. 435 considered whether an Indian tribe was subject to the provisions of the National Labor Relations Act [29 U.S.C. § 151 et seq.] relating to union organizing efforts at a casino it operated on its reservation. The U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit held that principles of tribal sovereign immunity did not preclude the enforcement of the Act's provisions relating to employment activities at the casino. In doing so, the circuit court recognized Congress's plenary authority to limit, modify, or eliminate the powers of local self-government that the tribes otherwise possess.

[3] Waiver of Immunity

Either Congress or the tribe can waive the tribe's immunity [Hydrothermal Energy Corp. v. Fort Bidwell Indian Community Council (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 489, 494-495, 216 Cal. Rptr. 59 ; see Trudgeon v. Fantasy Springs Casino (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 632, 636, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 65 (tribe subject to suit only when Congress authorized suit or tribe waived its immunity)].

Congressional authorization and tribal consent are separate and independent bases for jurisdiction. If a tribe elects to waive sovereign immunity and submit itself to state court jurisdiction, nothing in the language of 28 U.S.C. § 1360 stands as a bar to assumption of that jurisdiction [Friends of East Willits Valley v. County of Mendocino (2002) 101 Cal. App. 4th 191, 203, 123 Cal. Rptr. 2d 708] .

A tribe official cannot waive the tribe's immunity, unless the tribal council has expressly delegated that duty to the official [Hydrothermal Energy Corp. v. Fort Bidwell Indian Community Council (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 489, 496, 216 Cal. Rptr. 59] . Thus, for tribal immunity to be waived by a contract provision, the tribal officer signing the contract will need the authority of the tribal council [Hydrothermal Energy Corp. v. Fort Bidwell Indian Community Council (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 489, 496, 216 Cal. Rptr. 59] . Some contracts also require the approval of the Secretary of the Interior or the Secretary's designee [25 U.S.C. § 81; see Mission Indians v. American Management & Amusement (9th Cir. 1987) 840 F.2d 1394, 1403-1404 (contracts "relative to [Indian] lands," including bingo management agreements with non-Indian contractors, require Secretary's signature)].

Agreeing to an arbitration clause, and to enforcement of an arbitration award in any court having jurisdiction thereof, constitutes an explicit waiver by a tribe of its sovereign immunity [Smith v. Hoplandband of Pomo Indians (2002) 95 Cal. App. 4th 1, 115 Cal. Rptr. 2d 455 (relying on C & L Enterprises v. Potawatomi Indian Tribe (2001) 532 U.S.

411, 121 S. Ct. 1589, 149 L. Ed. 2d 623 , in which the U.S. Supreme Court resolved the split of authority that had emerged in the state and federal courts on the question whether, by agreeing to an arbitration clause, and to enforcement of an arbitral award, in any court having jurisdiction thereof, a tribe has waived its sovereign immunity)]. However, a Tribe's consent to arbitrate and to judicial enforcement of an award cannot be interpreted as its consent to be sued for all causes of action arising from a contract containing an arbitration clause [Big Valley Band of Pomo Indians v. Superior Court (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 1185, 1195, 35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 357] .

A waiver of tribal immunity cannot be implied but must be unequivocally expressed [Trudgeon v. Fantasy Springs Casino (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 632, 643-644, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 65 ; Hydrothermal Energy Corp. v. Fort Bidwell Indian Community Council (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 489, 496, 216 Cal. Rptr. 59 (appearance by tribe; attorney and declaration by attorney that tribe was not waiving any aspect of its immunity by that appearance but was there to protest the proceedings constituted at best an implied waiver that was legally insufficient); see Campo Band of Mission Indians v. Superior Court (2006) 137 Cal. App. 4th 175, 185, 39 Cal. Rptr. 3d 875 (tribe's compact with the state included a waiver of the tribe's tribal sovereign immunity relating to patron claims for negligence resulting in personal injury up to specific limits; court had limited subject matter jurisdiction over the patron's claim against the tribe); Great Western Casinos, Inc. v. Morongo Band of Mission Indians (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 1407, 1419, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 828] .

By entering into a gaming compact with the State of California, defendant Indian Tribe waived its sovereign immunity to certain negligence claims against it, but such waiver did not constitute a consent to suit in state court on negligence claims against it; instead, the tribal court was the exclusive forum for the resolution of such claims. The tribe did not waive its sovereign tribal immunity or otherwise consent to a suit against it in state court on the plaintiffs' claims. Although plaintiffs contended that the process established by the tribe for handling claims against the tribe did not provide for the fair resolution of such claims, none of the causes of action set forth in their complaint challenged the propriety of the Tribe's claims-handling procedures, nor did they contain any allegations relating thereto. While the Tribe agreed to waive its tribal sovereign immunity to certain claims against it, it was permitted to choose the forum for the resolution of those claims and the terms governing the process for such resolution. That the plaintiffs found the Tribe's choices unacceptable did not render the Tribe subject to suit in state court [Lawrence v. Barona Valley Ranch Resort and Casino (2007) 153 Cal. App. 4th 1364, 1370-71, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 23] .

[4] Limitations on Scope of Jurisdiction

Although 28 U.S.C. § 1360(a) gives certain states, including California, jurisdiction over civil disputes that involve Native Americans and arise in Native American country, 28 U.S.C. § 1360(b) provides that nothing in Section 1360 does any of the following [28 U.S.C. § 1360(c); see Inland Casino Corp. v. Superior Court (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 770, 777, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 497 (lack of jurisdiction over property installed on Indian realty)]:

- Authorizes the alienation, encumbrance, or taxation of any real or personal property, including water rights, belonging to any Native American or to any Native American tribe, band, or community that is held in trust by the United States or is subject to a restriction against alienation imposed by the United States.

- Authorizes the regulation of the use of such property in a manner inconsistent with any federal treaty, agreement, or statute, or any other regulation made pursuant to it.

- Confers jurisdiction on the state to adjudicate, in probate proceedings or otherwise, the ownership or right to possession of that property or any interest in it.

[5] Applicability of Tribal Ordinance or Custom

Any tribal ordinance or custom adopted by a Native American tribe, band, or community in the exercise of any authority that it may possess, if not inconsistent with any applicable civil law of the state, is to be given full force and effect in the determination of civil causes of action pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1360 [28 U.S.C. § 1360(c)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionJurisdiction Over ActionsGeneral OverviewGovernmentsNative AmericansAuthority & JurisdictionGovernmentsNative AmericansEleventh Amendment Defense in Land Claims

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Organization and Jurisdiction of California Courts

28-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 324.25

§ 324.25 Concurrent Jurisdiction

[1] Between State and Federal Courts

Some federal statutes creating a right of action expressly give the state courts concurrent jurisdiction with the federal courts to enforce the right. Examples are 8 U.S.C. § 1421 (naturalization proceedings), 28 U.S.C. § 1352 (action on a bond executed under any law of the United States, except matters within the jurisdiction of the Court of International Trade), and 45 U.S.C. § 56 (claims under the Federal Employers' Liability Act, discussed in Ch. 485, Railroads, § 485.30 et seq.).

Moreover, the general rule is that state courts may assume subject matter jurisdiction over a federal cause of action, absent a provision by Congress to the contrary or a disabling incompatibility between the federal claim and state court adjudication [Tafflin v. Levitt (1990) 493 U.S. 455, 459, 110 S. Ct. 792, 107 L. Ed. 2d 887 ; Gulf Offshore Co. v. Mobil Oil Corp. (1981) 453 U.S. 473, 477-478, 101 S. Ct. 2870, 69 L. Ed. 2d 784 (federal courts do not have exclusive jurisdiction over personal injury and indemnity cases under the federal Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act (43 U.S.C. § 1331 et seq.)); see also S. P. Growers Asso. v. Rodriguez (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 719, 726, 131 Cal. Rptr. 761, 552 P.2d 721 ; Miller v. Municipal Court (1943) 22 Cal. 2d 818, 836, 142 P.2d 297 ; Garofalo v. Princess Cruises, Inc. (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 1060, 1080, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 754] . This general rule is premised on the concurrent sovereignty exercised by the states and the national government [Gulf Offshore Co. v. Mobil Oil Corp. (1981) 453 U.S. 473, 478, 101 S. Ct. 2870, 69 L. Ed. 2d 784] .

The U.S. Supreme Court has pointed out that, in considering the propriety of state court jurisdiction over any particular federal claim, it begins with the presumption that state courts enjoy concurrent jurisdiction, but that Congress may confine jurisdiction to the federal courts either explicitly or implicitly. Hence, the presumption of concurrent jurisdiction can be rebutted by an explicit statutory directive, by unmistakable implication from legislative history, or by a clear incompatibility between state court jurisdiction and federal interests [Gulf Offshore Co. v. Mobil Oil Corp. (1981) 453 U.S. 473, 478, 101 S. Ct. 2870, 69 L. Ed. 2d 784 ; see also Kingston Constructors, Inc. v. Washington Metropolitan Area Transit Authority (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 939, 948, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 866, 928 P.2d 581 (presumption of concurrent jurisdiction between federal courts and state courts arises when jurisdictional provision is silent as to jurisdiction of state courts, which, however, was not the case before the court); Bunnell v. Department of Corrections (1998) 64 Cal. App. 4th 1360, 1367, 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 58 (to give federal courts exclusive jurisdiction over federal cause of action, Congress must, in exercise of its powers under the Supremacy Clause, affirmatively divest state courts of their presumptively concurrent jurisdiction); Aalgaard v. Merchants Nat. Bank, Inc. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 674, 686, 274 Cal. Rptr. 81 , cert. denied, 502 U.S. 901 (1991) (preemption applied)]. Justice Scalia, in a concurring opinion joined by Justice Kennedy in Tafflin v. Levitt (1990) 493 U.S. 455, 110 S. Ct. 792, 107 L. Ed. 2d 887 , questioned that part of the language in Gulf Offshore Co. which suggested that exclusive jurisdiction in the federal courts could be found by unmistakable implication from legislative history, noting that if it were ever proper to find exclusive federal jurisdiction by implication, it would have to be from the language of the statute, not merely from legislative history. The concurring opinion also questioned whether exclusive federal jurisdiction could be found by implication at all, noting the paucity of cases that have actually done so [Tafflin v. Levitt (1990) 493 U.S. 455, 471-473, 110 S. Ct. 792, 107 L. Ed. 2d 887] .

Thus, for example, California courts lack jurisdiction over the subject matter of a cause of action when jurisdiction is vested by federal law exclusively in a federal court or agency [see, e.g., Kingston Constructors, Inc. v. Washington Metropolitan Area Transit Authority (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 939, 943-947, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 866, 928 P.2d 581 (involving action against transit authority established by a compact initiated and consummated by Congress for federal purposes entered into between District of Columbia, Maryland, and Virginia when compact provided that original jurisdiction vested with the United States District Courts concurrent with the courts of Maryland and Virginia concerning actions brought by or against transit authority); Cairl v. Boeing Co. (1974) 39 Cal. App. 3d 137, 139-140, 113 Cal. Rptr. 925 (involving action under Federal Death on the High Seas Act (46 U.S.C. § 761 et seq.)); Gordon v. Reynolds (1960) 187 Cal. App. 2d 472, 477-478, 10 Cal. Rptr. 73 (same)].

Notwithstanding the rule of concurrent jurisdiction, a defendant may in certain cases of concurrent jurisdiction between state and federal courts have an action removed from the state to the federal courts under 28 U.S.C. §§ 1441-1452. For further discussion and forms relating to removal, see Ch. 265, Federal Courts: Jurisdiction and Removal .

Federal supremacy principles prohibit state courts of general jurisdiction from refusing to entertain suits under the Federal Employers' Liability Act (FELA) [45 U.S.C.S. § 51 et seq.], which is incorporated by reference into the Jones Act [46 U.S.C.S. App. § 688 et seq.], solely because suit is brought under federal law or because enforcement of the federal right of action is deemed contrary to state policy or apt to cause inconvenience and confusion because of differing state and federal standards. Thus, states must entertain suits timely filed under the Jones Act despite state limitation statutes that might otherwise bar suit [Donaldson v. National Marine (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 503, 510, 25 Cal. Rptr. 3d 584, 107 P.3d 254] .

[2] Between Courts of Same State

[a] Same Parties on Same Cause

When two state courts have concurrent jurisdiction over the same parties and subject matter, the tribunal that first acquires jurisdiction of the parties is entitled to retain it exclusively, and the other court must ordinarily abate its proceedings on demand [Mission Imports, Inc. v. Superior Court (1982) 31 Cal. 3d 921, 926 n.3, 184 Cal. Rptr. 296, 647 P.2d 1075 ; In re Hanley (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 1109, 1115, 245 Cal. Rptr. 441 (overruled on other grounds in Leadford v. Leadford (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 571, 575 n.5, 8 Cal. Rptr. 2d 9 ; see County of San Diego v. State of California (1997) 15 Cal. 4th 68, 87-88, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 134, 931 P.2d 312)]. In applying this rule, it is the tribunal where process is served first that has priority, regardless of which action was filed first [In re Hanley (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 1109, 1116, 245 Cal. Rptr. 441 (overruled on other grounds in Leadford v. Leadford (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 571, 575 n.5, 8 Cal. Rptr. 2d 9 ; Mungia v. Superior Court (1964) 225 Cal. App. 2d 280, 283, 37 Cal. Rptr. 285)].

If there is another action pending between the same parties on the same cause of action, a plea in abatement pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(c) may be made by demurrer or answer [Plant Insulation Co. v. Fibreboard Corp. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 781, 787, 274 Cal. Rptr. 147 ; see also People ex rel. Garamendi v. American Autoplan, Inc. (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 760, 770-771, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 192] . In determining whether the causes of action are the same for purposes of pleas in abatement, the rule is that such a plea may be maintained only when a judgment in the first action would be a complete bar to the second action [Plant Insulation Co. v. Fibreboard Corp. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 781, 787-788, 274 Cal. Rptr. 147 ; see also People ex rel. Garamendi v. American Autoplan, Inc. (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 760, 770-771, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 192] . If a demurrer is sustained on the ground of another action pending, the proper order is not a dismissal, but abatement of further proceedings pending termination of the first action [Plant Insulation Co. v. Fibreboard Corp. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 781, 788, 274 Cal. Rptr. 147 ; see also People ex rel. Garamendi v. American Autoplan, Inc. (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 760, 770-771, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 192 ; see Ch. 3, Abatement of Actions, § 3.50, for further discussion and forms; see also Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings , for a form of demurrer on the ground of another action pending)].

[b] Rule of Exclusive Concurrent Jurisdiction

[i] Defined

Although similar in effect to the statutory plea in abatement [for discussion see [a], above] the rule of exclusive concurrent jurisdiction may apply when the narrow grounds required for a statutory plea of abatement do not exist [Plant Insulation Co. v. Fibreboard Corp. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 781, 788, 274 Cal. Rptr. 147 ; see also People ex rel. Garamendi v. American Autoplan, Inc. (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 760, 769-771, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 192] .

Under the rule of exclusive concurrent jurisdiction, as in the case of a statutory plea in abatement, if two trial courts of equal jurisdiction have concurrent jurisdiction over the subject matter and all parties involved in litigation, the first to assume jurisdiction has exclusive and continuing jurisdiction over the subject matter and all parties involved until such time as all necessarily related matters have been resolved [Plant Insulation Co. v. Fibreboard Corp. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 781, 786-787, 274 Cal. Rptr. 147 ; see Franklin & Franklin v. 7-Eleven Owners for Fair Franchising (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 1168, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 770 ; Glade v. Glade (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 1441, 1450, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 695 (as between courts of different counties having coequal jurisdiction over a matter, exclusive jurisdiction is acquired by the first court of equal dignity to assume and exercise control over the matter; applying principle to case involving different departments of one superior court)].

Because the rule of exclusive concurrent jurisdiction, like the statutory plea in abatement, is a mandatory rather than a discretionary judicial action, the issue should be raised by demurrer if the issue appears on the face of the complaint and by answer if factual issues must be resolved [People ex rel. Garamendi v. American Autoplan, Inc. (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 760, 770-771, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 192] .

However, the rule of exclusive concurrent jurisdiction is not jurisdictional in the sense that failure to comply renders subsequent proceedings void [People ex rel. Garamendi v. American Autoplan, Inc. (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 760, 772, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 192] . Thus, a court's erroneous refusal to stay further proceedings does not render those further proceedings void for lack of jurisdiction [County of San Diego v. State of California (1997) 15 Cal. 4th 68, 88, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 134, 931 P.2d 312 (court that refuses to defer to another court's primary jurisdiction is not without jurisdiction)]. Moreover, the defendant must properly raise the matter by demurrer or answer or by motion to dismiss, stay, or transfer. Prior to the filing of such an appropriate pleading, the trial court in the second action retains jurisdiction to act [People ex rel. Garamendi v. American Autoplan, Inc. (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 760, 774, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 192 (raising issue in opposition to a request for a preliminary injunction held insufficient; injunction upheld)]. Thus, as there is no reason to divest the court of jurisdiction over the subsequent action until a final determination is made in the pending suit that definitely bars the instant action, the subsequent action should be stayed rather than dismissed [Plant Insulation Co. v. Fibreboard Corp. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 781, 792, 274 Cal. Rptr. 147 ; see County of San Diego v. State of California (1997) 15 Cal. 4th 68, 88, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 134, 931 P.2d 312] .

[ii] Distinguished From Another Action Pending

Unlike the statutory plea of abatement, however, the rule of exclusive concurrent jurisdiction does not require absolute identity of parties, causes of action, or remedies sought in the initial and subsequent actions [Plant Insulation Co. v. Fibreboard Corp. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 781, 788, 274 Cal. Rptr. 147] . If the court exercising original jurisdiction has the power to bring before it all the necessary parties, the fact that the parties in the second action are not identical does not preclude application of the rule. Moreover, the remedies sought in the separate actions need not be precisely the same so long as the court exercising original jurisdiction has the power to litigate all the issues and to grant all the relief to which any of the parties might be entitled under the pleadings [Plant Insulation Co. v. Fibreboard Corp. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 781, 788, 274 Cal. Rptr. 147] . Finally, for the rule of exclusive concurrent jurisdiction to apply, the judgment rendered in the first action need not be res judicata in the second action [Plant Insulation Co. v. Fibreboard Corp. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 781, 789, 274 Cal. Rptr. 147 (rejecting, as having not been followed, the contrary statement in Stearns v. Los Angeles City School Dist. (1966) 244 Cal. App. 2d 696, 714, 53 Cal. Rptr. 482)]; all that is required is that the first and second actions arise from the same transaction [Plant Insulation Co. v. Fibreboard Corp. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 781, 789, 274 Cal. Rptr. 147] .

[iii] As Ground for Abatement

The rule of exclusive concurrent jurisdiction may constitute a ground of abatement of the subsequent action. An order of abatement issues as a matter of right, not as a matter of discretion, when the conditions for its issuance exist [People ex rel. Garamendi v. American Autoplan, Inc. (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 760, 772, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 192 ; Plant Insulation Co. v. Fibreboard Corp. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 781, 787, 274 Cal. Rptr. 147] . Abatement, however, is not appropriate if the first action cannot afford the relief sought in the second [Plant Insulation Co. v. Fibreboard Corp. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 781, 787, 274 Cal. Rptr. 147] . For a form of demurrer on the ground of exclusive concurrent jurisdiction, see § 324.106.

[iv] Policy Underlying Rule

The rule of exclusive concurrent jurisdiction is based on the public policies of avoiding conflicts that might arise between courts if they were free to make contradictory decisions or awards relating to the same controversy, and of preventing vexatious litigation and multiplicity of suits [Plant Insulation Co. v. Fibreboard Corp. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 781, 787, 274 Cal. Rptr. 147] . The rule exists not so much to protect the rights of parties as to protect the rights of courts of coordinate jurisdiction to avoid conflict of jurisdiction, confusion, and delay in the administration of justice [Plant Insulation Co. v. Fibreboard Corp. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 781, 787, 274 Cal. Rptr. 147] .

[c] Exclusive Jurisdiction in Multidepartment Superior Court

A superior court, even if composed of several departments, is one tribunal. An order made in one department during the case's progress cannot be overlooked or ignored in another department because Cal. Const., art. VI, § 4 vests jurisdiction in the court rather than a particular judge or department, and judges hold but one and the same court whether sitting separately or together. One superior court department cannot enjoin, restrain, or otherwise interfere with the judicial act of another superior court department. Exclusive jurisdiction is acquired by the first department to assume and exercise control over the matter. A judgment rendered by one superior court department is binding on the matter on all other departments until the judgment is overturned [People v. Madrigal (1995) 37 Cal. App. 4th 791, 795-796, 43 Cal. Rptr. 2d 498 (trial judge acted in excess of jurisdiction when judge revoked defendant's probation after defendant's probation violation matter had been duly assigned to another judge in accordance with local court rules); Silverman v. Superior Court (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 145, 150-151, 249 Cal. Rptr. 724] .

When the presiding judge of a superior court, in conformity with that court's rules, duly assigns a proceeding for hearing and determination to a department within the court and the assigned proceeding is not finally disposed of or legally removed from that department, it is beyond the jurisdictional authority of another department of the same court to interfere with the exercise of the power of the department to which the proceeding was assigned. Stated another way, while one department is exercising jurisdiction vested by the Constitution in a superior court in that county, other departments of that court are as distinct as other superior courts. If the law were otherwise, conflicting adjudications by different departments of the same court concerning the same subject matter would bring about an anomalous situation and lead to confusion [Williams v. Superior Court (1939) 14 Cal. 2d 656, 662-663, 96 P.2d 334 ; People v. Madrigal (1995) 37 Cal. App. 4th 791, 795-796, 43 Cal. Rptr. 2d 498] . The superior court department rule applies equally to different superior court districts [People v. Madrigal (1995) 37 Cal. App. 4th 791, 796, 43 Cal. Rptr. 2d 498 ; Shane v. Superior Court (1984) 160 Cal. App. 3d 1237, 1249-1250, 207 Cal. Rptr. 210] .

The principle that the first department to assume and exercise control over the matter has exclusive jurisdiction, and therefore has priority of jurisdiction, applies not only to ordinary departments but also to departments that exercise subject matter jurisdiction that is distinct [Glade v. Glade (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 1441, 1450, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 695 , citing Slone v. Inyo County Juvenile Court (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 263, 269, 282 Cal. Rptr. 126 , quoting Witkin, Cal. Procedure, vol. 2, Courts, § 192 (3d ed. 1985)]. Thus, for example, when a dissolution proceeding is pending in the family court, another department of the superior court may not act so as to interfere with the family court's exercise of its powers in that proceeding [Dale v. Dale (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 1172, 1183, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 513] . Accordingly, it has been held proper for a family law court in which a marital dissolution action was pending which vested it with jurisdiction over alleged community property to stay a latter commenced foreclosure action pending in another superior court department concerning a community property residence to avoid a multiplicity of actions and inconsistent verdicts that could undermine the family law court's ability to characterize and dispose of community property. The family law court had priority of jurisdiction [Glade v. Glade (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 1441, 1456, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 695] .

However, after a dissolution proceeding has been disposed of by a final judgment, a party to it may bring a subsequent civil action (in another department) under Fam. Code § 2120 et seq. to set aside the judgment on grounds of actual fraud, perjury, duress, mental incapacity, or mistake [Rubenstein v. Rubenstein (2000) 81 Cal. App. 4th 1131, 1138 n.3, 1146-1147, 97 Cal. Rptr. 2d 707 (also holding that defrauded spouse may not bring tort action for concealment of community assets as alternative to moving to set aside the dissolution judgment; Dale v. Dale (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 1172, 1178-1183, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 513 (holding that such a tort action may be brought, does not apply to judgments entered on or after January 1, 1993)]. Allowing plaintiff to proceed with the action would not interfere with the family court's exercise of its powers in the earlier proceeding [see Dale v. Dale (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 1172, 1183, 1187, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 513] .

[3] Between Courts of Sister States

[a] Priority in Time

The rule that the pendency of an earlier action growing out of the same transaction and between the same parties is a ground for abatement of the second action applies to determine which court may retain jurisdiction as between a California court and the court of another state. However, abatement is only mandatory when the multiple actions are pending in courts of the same state. When the actions are pending in courts of different states, the determination whether to stay the later-filed action is discretionary, not mandatory [Leadford v. Leadford (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 571, 575 n.5, 8 Cal. Rptr. 2d 9 (disavowing In re Hanley (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 1109, 1115-1116, 245 Cal. Rptr. 441 , to the extent it suggests abatement is mandatory); In re Marriage of Gray (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 1239, 1250, 251 Cal. Rptr. 846] .

Because the determination is discretionary, it should be raised by a motion to stay the proceedings, not by demurrer [Leadford v. Leadford (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 571, 574, 8 Cal. Rptr. 2d 9] .

Although a California court might have power to issue a temporary restraining order (TRO) to prevent multiple proceedings, a court may not ignore additional proceedings that arise after the initial action commences, and the use of injunctive relief to prohibit a person from resorting to a foreign court is a power rarely and sparingly employed, for its exercise represents a challenge, albeit an indirect one, to the dignity and authority of that tribunal [Advanced Bionics Corp. v. Medtronic, Inc. (2002) 29 Cal. 4th 697, 705, 128 Cal. Rptr. 2d 172] . The first filed rule in California means that when two courts of the same sovereignty have concurrent jurisdiction, the first to assume jurisdiction over a particular subject matter of a particular controversy takes it exclusively, and the second court should not thereafter assert control over that subject matter; however, the first filed rule "was never meant to apply where the two courts involved are not courts of the same sovereignty... . Restraining a party from pursuing an action in a court of foreign jurisdiction involves delicate questions of comity and therefore requires that such action be taken only with care and great restraint" [Advanced Bionics Corp. v. Medtronic, Inc. (2002) 29 Cal. 4th 697, 707, 128 Cal. Rptr. 2d 172] .

[b] When Earlier Judgment Is Superseded

A judgment rendered in one state will not be recognized or enforced in sister states if an inconsistent but valid judgment is subsequently rendered in another action between the parties in another state and if the earlier judgment is superseded by the later judgment under the local law of the state in which the latter judgment was rendered [In re Hanley (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 1109, 1117-1118, 245 Cal. Rptr. 441 (citing Restatement (Second) of Conflicts of Law § 114; overruled on other grounds in Leadford v. Leadford (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 571, 575 n.5, 8 Cal. Rptr. 2d 9)]. Moreover, if, in two actions, inconsistent final judgments are rendered, it is the later, not the earlier, judgment that is accorded conclusive effect in a third action under the rules of res judicata [In re Hanley (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 1109, 1118, 245 Cal. Rptr. 441 (citing Restatement (Second) of Judgments § 15; overruled on other grounds in Leadford v. Leadford (1992) 6 Cal. App.4th 571, 575 n.5, 8 Cal. Rptr. 2d 9)]. This is the case even when the court that rendered the later judgment denied full faith and credit to the first judgment or made other errors of fact or law [In re Hanley (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 1109, 1118, 245 Cal. Rptr. 441 , overruled on other grounds in Leadford v. Leadford (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 571, 575 n.5, 8 Cal. Rptr. 2d 9 (citing Restatement (Second) of Conflicts of Law § 114, comment a)].

The rationale for the foregoing rule is based on principles of res judicata and full faith and credit. It is appropriate that the losing party should be precluded from attacking the later inconsistent judgment if he or she has not sought review of this judgment both by the appellate courts of the state of rendition and by the Supreme Court of the United States or if the judgment has been affirmed by these courts. So, if under these circumstances, the same issue has been differently decided in different actions between the parties, the determination that is later in time should control if it would have this effect under the local law of the state of rendition. The later judgment may be erroneous and the first judgment correct, but the parties had the opportunity to litigate the point at issue before the second court, to appeal from its judgment, and ultimately to seek review by the Supreme Court [In re Hanley (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 1109, 1118, 245 Cal. Rptr. 441 (citing Restatement (Second) of Conflict of Laws § 114 comment b (1971), overruled on other grounds in Leadford v. Leadford (1992) 6 Cal. App.4th 571, 575 n.5, 8 Cal. Rptr. 2d 9)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionJurisdiction Over ActionsConcurrent JurisdictionCivil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionJurisdiction Over ActionsExclusive Jurisdiction

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Organization and Jurisdiction of California Courts

28-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 324.26-324.39

[Reserved]

§§ 324.26[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Challenges to Subject Matter Jurisdiction

28-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 324.40

§ 324.40 No Waiver of Defense of Lack of Subject Matter Jurisdiction

Lack of subject matter jurisdiction can be raised at any time, even for the first time on appeal [DeTomaso v. Pan American World Airways, Inc. (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 517, 520 n.1, 235 Cal. Rptr. 292, 733 P.2d 614 ; Consolidated Theatres, Inc. v. Theatrical Stage Employees Union (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 713, 721, 73 Cal. Rptr. 213, 447 P.2d 325 ; Miranda v. 21st Century Ins. Co. (2004) 117 Cal. App. 4th 913, 920, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 159 ; Parrott v. Mooring Townhomes Assn., Inc. (2003) 112 Cal. App. 4th 873, 875, 6 Cal. Rptr. 3d 116 ; National Union Fire Ins. Co. v. Stites Prof. Law Corp. (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1718, 1724, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 570 ; see Kingston Constructors, Inc. v. Washington Metropolitan Area Transit Authority (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 939, 952, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 866, 928 P.2d 581 (party cannot waive based on lack of subject matter jurisdiction)].

For forms regarding a motion to transfer or dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, see § 324.100 et seq.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionJurisdiction Over ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to Dismiss

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Challenges to Subject Matter Jurisdiction

28-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 324.41

§ 324.41 Judicial Act Lacking Jurisdiction

The judgment of a court wholly lacking jurisdiction over the subject matter, parties, or specific thing, is void [see Kulko v. California Superior Court (1978) 436 U.S. 84, 91, 98 S. Ct. 1690, 56 L. Ed. 2d 132 ; Hanson v. Denckla (1958) 357 U.S. 235, 250, 78 S. Ct. 1228, 2 L. Ed. 2d 1283 ; County of Ventura v. Tillett (1982) 133 Cal. App. 3d 105, 110, 183 Cal. Rptr. 741 , cert. denied, 460 U.S. 1051 (1983) (disapproved on another point in County of Los Angeles v. Soto (1984) 35 Cal. 3d 483, 492 n.4, 198 Cal. Rptr. 779, 674 P.2d 750); see also Code Civ. Proc. § 1916 ("judicial record" may be impeached by evidence, among other things, of want of jurisdiction in the court or judicial officer)]. For additional discussion of a lack of jurisdiction, see § 324.11[2]. For discussion of methods of review and attacking void judgments and orders, and related forms, see Ch. 489, Relief From Judgments and Orders .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentVoid Judgments

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329

Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Challenges to Subject Matter Jurisdiction

28-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 324.42

§ 324.42 Judicial Act in Excess of Jurisdiction

[1] Void or Voidable

It has been said that while it is not uncommon for cases to state that an act in excess of a court's jurisdiction is void, only acts in excess of subject matter jurisdiction are void. Acts in excess of other kinds of jurisdiction are voidable [Jovine v. FHP, Inc. (1998) 64 Cal. App. 4th 1506, 1527, 1531-1532, 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 322 (doctrine of waiver and estoppel apply to voidable acts, i.e., to acts in excess of jurisdiction (when the court has subject matter jurisdiction)); see People v. Malveaux (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 1425, 1434, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 371 (judgment void rather than voidable only if trial court lacked subject matter jurisdiction); People v. Ruiz (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 574, 584, 265 Cal. Rptr. 886 (act in excess of jurisdiction is valid until set aside, and parties may be precluded from setting it aside by such things as waiver, estoppel or passage of time)].

On the other hand, granting relief that the court under no circumstances has any authority to grant has been considered an aspect of fundamental jurisdiction for the purposes of declaring a judgment or order void [Plaza Hollister Ltd. Partnership v. County of San Benito (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 1, 20, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 715 ; see also County of Ventura v. Tillett (1982) 133 Cal. App. 3d 105, 110, 183 Cal. Rptr. 741 , cert. denied, 460 U.S. 1051 (judgment void on its face if court which rendered judgment lacked personal or subject matter jurisdiction or exceeded its jurisdiction in granting relief that court had no power to grant), disapproved on another point in County of Los Angeles v. Soto (1984) 35 Cal. 3d 483, 492 n.4, 198 Cal. Rptr. 779, 674 P.2d 750] . For discussion of methods of review and attacking judgments and orders, including Code Civ. Proc. § 473(d) and related forms, see Ch. 489, Relief From Judgments and Orders .

In determining whether a prematurely entered summary judgment is void or voidable, the court must look first to the language of the relevant statute. The court's failure to comply with Penal Code § 1306 by prematurely entering summary judgment did not deprive it of jurisdiction over the subject matter of the bail bond forfeiture or personal jurisdiction over the surety, and thus the premature entry of summary judgment was voidable, not void [People v. American Contractors Indemnity Co. (2004) 33 Cal. 4th 653, 662, 16 Cal. Rptr. 3d 76, 93 P.3d 1020] .

[2] Challenge by Writ

Judicial acts made in excess of a court's jurisdiction may be challenged on petition for a writ of certiorari [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1067, 1068] or prohibition [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1102, 1103]. These writs will issue to review or prohibit acts in excess of jurisdiction when there is, in the case of prohibition, no plain, speedy, and adequate remedy in the ordinary course of law, and, in the case of certiorari, no appeal and no plain, speedy, and adequate remedy [see Crittenden v. Superior Court (1964) 61 Cal. 2d 565, 567, 39 Cal. Rptr. 380, 393 P.2d 692 (prohibition granted); Auto Equity Sales, Inc. v. Superior Court (1962) 57 Cal. 2d 450, 454-455, 20 Cal. Rptr. 321, 369 P.2d 937 (certiorari)]. Generally, any act that exceeds the defined power of a court in any instance, whether that power be defined by constitutional provision, express statutory declaration, or rules developed by the courts and followed under the doctrine of stare decisis, are in excess of jurisdiction and may be restrained by prohibition or annulled on certiorari [Abelleira v. District Court of Appeal (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 280, 287-288, 109 P.2d 942 ; for further discussion and forms, see Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition , and Ch. 492, Review (Certiorari), Writ of].

Mandate is the appropriate remedy to inquire into the validity of any final administrative order or decision made without or in excess of jurisdiction [Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5(b)], in any proceeding in which by law a hearing is required to be given, evidence is required to be taken and discretion in the determination of facts is vested in an inferior tribunal, corporation, board, or officer [Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5(a); for further discussion and forms relating to Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5, see Ch. 474, Availability of Judicial Review of Agency Decisions , through Ch. 474C, Procedures in Reviewing Agency Decisions].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionJurisdiction Over ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentVoid JudgmentsCivil ProcedureRemediesWritsCommon Law WritsProhibitionCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionState Court Review

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329

Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Challenges to Subject Matter Jurisdiction

1-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 324.43

§ 324.43 Transfer or Dismissal Based on Lack of Subject Matter Jurisdiction

[1] Transfer of Case from Court Lacking Jurisdiction

No appeal or petition filed in the superior court shall be dismissed solely because the appeal or petition was not filed in the proper state court [Code Civ. Proc. § 396(a)]. If the superior court lacks jurisdiction of an appeal or petition, and a court of appeal or the Supreme Court would have jurisdiction, the appeal or petition shall be transferred to the court having jurisdiction upon terms as to costs or otherwise as may be just, and proceeded with as if regularly filed in the court having jurisdiction [Code Civ. Proc. § 396(b)].

[2] Determining Lack of Subject Matter Jurisdiction

Jurisdiction may be exclusively in the higher courts. For example, under statutes governing some public agencies, the superior courts lack jurisdiction to render any judgment which would interfere with the administrative agency's performance of its official duties [see Greener v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 1028, 1044-1046, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 539, 863 P.2d 784 ; Sexton v. Atchison etc. Ry. Co. (1916) 173 Cal. 760, 762-763, 161 P. 748 (plaintiff's request for injunction to restrain the defendant railroad from providing free transportation to members of the railroad commission and its employees as it was required to do by the Public Utilities Act was beyond superior court's power)]. Thus, the superior court lacks subject matter jurisdiction to adjudicate a to the constitutionality of workers' compensation statutes because Lab. Code § 5955 confers exclusive jurisdiction over such a on the Court of Appeal and the Supreme Court [Greener v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 1028, 1044-1046, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 539, 863 P.2d 784] .

California state courts lack subject matter jurisdiction of a local action arising in another state or to determine title to real property situated in another state [see Ophir Silver Min. Co. v. Superior Court (1905) 147 Cal. 467, 473-478, 82 P. 70 (action for trespass on and injury to, and to quiet title to, real property in Nevada); River Farms, Inc. v. Superior Court (1967) 252 Cal. App. 2d 604, 609, 60 Cal. Rptr. 665] . In such a case, with no court of California having subject matter jurisdiction, the action would have to be dismissed rather than transferred [see, e.g., Boisclair v. Superior Court (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 1140, 1156, 1158, 276 Cal. Rptr. 62, 801 P.2d 305] .

California courts also lack subject matter jurisdiction when jurisdiction is vested by federal law exclusively in a federal court or agency [see, e.g., 28 U.S.C. §§ 1251 (actions by and against foreign ambassadors), 1333 (admiralty, maritime, and prize cases)], or if jurisdiction of the cause is vested by the state constitution or state statute in an administrative tribunal or agency [see, e.g., Ankeny v. Lockheed Missiles & Space Co. (1979) 88 Cal. App. 3d 531, 534-536, 151 Cal. Rptr. 828 (employee's action against employer and fellow employees for damages for intentional infliction of emotional distress, coupled with physical injury and disability barred by exclusive remedy provisions of Workers' Compensation Law (Lab. Code §§ 3200 et seq.)].

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329

Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Challenges to Subject Matter Jurisdiction

28-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 324.44

§ 324.44 Transfer of Action When Another California Court Has Jurisdiction

[1] In General

On the making of an order for transfer, proceedings must be had as provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 399. When the transfer is sought solely, or is ordered, because the action or proceeding was commenced in a court other than that designated as proper by Tit. 4, Part 2 of the Code Civ. Proc., those costs and fees must be paid by the plaintiff before the transfer is made; and if the defendant has paid those costs and fees at the time of filing a notice of motion, the same shall be repaid to the defendant, upon the making of the transfer order [Code Civ. Proc. § 399(a)].

When an order is made transferring an action or proceeding under any of the provisions of Tit. 4, Part 2 of the Code Civ. Proc., the clerk must, after expiration of the time within which a petition for writ of mandate could have been filed pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 400, or if a writ petition is filed after judgment denying the writ becomes final, and upon payment of the costs and fees, transmit the pleadings and papers therein to the clerk of the court to which the same is transferred [Code Civ. Proc. § 399(a)].

If the costs and fees have not been so paid by the plaintiff within five days after service of notice of the transfer order, then any other party interested therein, whether named in the complaint as a party or not, may pay those costs and fees, and the clerk must thereupon transmit the papers and pleadings therein as if those costs and fees had been originally paid by the plaintiff, and the same must be a proper item of costs of the party so paying the same, recoverable by that party in the event that party prevails in the action; otherwise, the same shall be offset against and deducted from the amount, if any, awarded the plaintiff in the event the plaintiff prevails against that party in the action [Code Civ. Proc. § 399(a)].

[2] Dismissal for Nonpayment of Fees and Costs

The action may not be further prosecuted in any court until the costs and fees are paid [Code Civ. Proc. § 399(a)].

If the costs and fees are not paid within 30 days after service of notice of the transfer order, or within 30 days after notice of the finality of the order of transfer (when a petition for writ of mandate is filed in the trial court under Code Civ. Proc. § 400 or when an appeal is taken under Code Civ. Proc. § 904.2), the court on a duly noticed motion by any party may dismiss the action without prejudice to the cause on the condition that no other action on the cause may be commenced in another court prior to satisfaction of the court's order for costs and fees [Code Civ. Proc. § 399(a)]. When a petition for writ of mandate or appeal does not result in a stay of proceedings, the time for payment of those costs is 60 days after service of the notice of the order [Code Civ. Proc. § 399(a)].

[3] Notice of Transfer

At the time the papers and pleadings are transmitted, the clerk is required to mail notice to all parties who have appeared in the action or special proceeding stating the date on which transmittal occurred. Promptly on receipt of the papers and pleadings, the clerk of the court to which the action or proceeding was transferred is required to mail notice to all parties who have appeared in the case, stating the date of the filing of the case and number assigned to the case in the court [Code Civ. Proc. § 399(b)].

[4] Jurisdiction of Transferee Court

The court to which the action or proceeding is transferred has the same jurisdiction over the case that it would have had the action or proceeding been commenced there [Code Civ. Proc. § 399(c)].

[5] Effect on Power of Transferring Court

A court has no jurisdiction to hear or determine a case when the type of proceeding or the amount in controversy is beyond the jurisdiction defined for that particular court by statute or constitutional provision [Abelleira v. District Court of Appeal (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 280, 288, 109 P.2d 942] . Hence, once it is clear from the pleadings that an action must be transferred under Code Civ. Proc. § 396, the only action which the court may take is to transfer the case to the appropriate court, and any other judicial action is improper [see Eveleth v. American Brass & Iron Foundry (1962) 203 Cal. App. 2d 41, 42-45, 21 Cal. Rptr. 95 ; Cal. Emp. etc. Com. v. Municipal Ct. (1944) 62 Cal. App. 2d 781, 783-786, 145 P.2d 361 ; Brady v. Kobey (1938) 27 Cal. App. 2d 505, 507-508, 81 P.2d 263] . When Code Civ. Proc. § 396 applies, its provisions for transfer of the cause are mandatory, and any other orders relating to parties or pleadings are void [Schwenke v. J & P Scott, Inc. (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 71, 77, 252 Cal. Rptr. 91 ; see also Security Pac. Nat. Bank v. Lyon (1980) 165 Cal. Rptr. 95] .

A court that renders a judgment without having subject matter jurisdiction may set aside its judgment and order the case transferred to the proper court [see Kee v. Becker (1942) 54 Cal. App. 2d 466, 469, 129 P.2d 159] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionAmount in ControversyCivil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionJurisdiction Over ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureVenueMotions to TransferGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Challenges to Subject Matter Jurisdiction

28-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 324.45

§ 324.45 Dismissal When No California Court Has Jurisdiction

If there is no court in California having jurisdiction of the subject matter, the action must be dismissed [Cairl v. Boeing Co. (1974) 39 Cal. App. 3d 137, 138, 113 Cal. Rptr. 925] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Challenges to Subject Matter Jurisdiction

28-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 324.46

§ 324.46 Review of Jurisdiction

[1] On Appeal

[a] Superior Court Orders Other Than in Limited Civil Cases

No order or judgment can be appealed unless the right of appeal is expressly authorized by the California Constitution or by statute [Milliken v. Gray (1969) 276 Cal. App. 2d 595, 596, 81 Cal. Rptr. 525] .

The only appeal expressly authorized by the Constitution is in death penalty cases [see Cal. Const., art. VI, § 11]. Appeals in all other cases are authorized by statute.

Code Civ. Proc. § 904.1, specifying the superior court orders and judgments in civil cases, other than limited civil cases, that are appealable, contains no provision authorizing an appeal from a superior court order transferring or refusing to transfer an action or proceeding from a court lacking to a court having subject matter jurisdiction. Hence, such an order is nonappealable [see Milliken v. Gray (1969) 276 Cal. App. 2d 595, 599, 81 Cal. Rptr. 525 ; see also Ash v. Hertz Corp. (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 1107, 1110-1112, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 192 , discussed under § 324.53[1][b], concerning appellate review of such an order on appeal from a final judgment].

For further discussion of statutes authorizing appeal, see Ch. 42, Appeal: Notice of Appeal .

[b] Superior Court Orders in Limited Civil Cases

Code Civ. Proc. § 904.2, specifying the orders and judgments in limited civil cases that are appealable, does not expressly authorize an appeal from an order transferring or refusing to transfer an action or proceeding from a court lacking to a court having subject matter jurisdiction. However, unlike Code Civ. Proc. § 904.1, it does authorize an appeal from orders in limited civil cases changing or refusing to change the place of trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 904.2(c)].

An appeal cannot be taken from a judgment of the appellate division of a superior court granting or denying a petition for issuance of a writ of mandamus or prohibition directed to the superior court, or a judge thereof, in a limited civil case or a misdemeanor or infraction case [Code Civ. Proc. § 904.3]. An appellate court may, in its discretion, upon petition for extraordinary writ, review the judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 904.3].

[2] By Extraordinary Writ

[a] Prohibition and Certiorari

The extraordinary writs of prohibition (Code Civ. Proc. § 1102 et seq.) and certiorari (Code Civ. Proc. § 1067 et seq.) are jurisdictional writs that arrest (prohibition) or review (certiorari) the proceedings of a lower tribunal that is acting or is threatening to act (prohibition), or has acted (certiorari), without or in excess of its jurisdiction [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1068(a) (certiorari), 1102(a) (prohibition); Crittenden v. Superior Court (1964) 61 Cal. 2d 565, 567, 39 Cal. Rptr. 380, 393 P.2d 692 (prohibition); Auto Equity Sales, Inc. v. Superior Court (1962) 57 Cal. 2d 450, 454-455, 20 Cal. Rptr. 321, 369 P.2d 937 (certiorari); Abelleira v. District Court of Appeal (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 280, 287, 109 P.2d 942 (prohibition)]. The appellate division of the superior court may also direct these writs to the superior court in a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1068(b), 1102(b)].

These writs are not available, however, to review mere error in the exercise of jurisdiction. For example, if a lower tribunal has power to make a correct determination of a particular issue, it clearly has power to make an incorrect determination, but that determination is subject only to appellate review [Abelleira v. District Court of Appeal (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 280, 287, 109 P.2d 942] .

However, when a court, lacking jurisdiction of the subject matter, refuses to transfer the case to a Cali fornia court having such jurisdiction, if one exists, prohibition will lie to restrain the court without jurisdiction from proceeding further with the case [see Cal. Emp. etc. Com. v. Municipal Ct. (1944) 62 Cal. App. 2d 781, 787, 145 P.2d 361] . The court issuing the writ may also issue a writ of mandate compelling the lower court to transfer the case as required by Code Civ. Proc. § 396 on the ground the transfer is an act the performance of which is especially enjoined by law [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1085, discussed under § 324.53[2][b]].

For a discussion and forms for use in obtaining a writ of prohibition or a writ of certiorari, see Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition , and Ch. 492, Review, (Certiorari), Writ of, respectively.

Statutory law has in some instances substituted the normally nonjurisdictional writ of mandate for the writ of prohibition to review jurisdictional issues, also placing time limits on when the petition for writ of mandate may be filed.

[b] Mandate

[i] Traditional Writ

The writ of mandate compels the performance of an act which the law specially enjoins or compels the admission of a party to the use and enjoyment of a right or office to which he or she is entitled and from which or she is unlawfully excluded [Code Civ. Proc. § 1085(a)]. This is the historical use of the writ and this writ is sometimes referred to as "traditional" mandate.

With respect to jurisdiction, a writ of mandate may be issued to compel a lower court to assume jurisdiction of a matter when the lower court has erroneously refused to act under the mistaken view that it did not have jurisdiction to do so [see Erlich v. Superior Court (1965) 63 Cal. 2d 551, 556, 47 Cal. Rptr. 473, 407 P.2d 649 ; McMahon v. Municipal Court (1970) 6 Cal. App. 3d 194, 197, 85 Cal. Rptr. 782] . The appellate division of the superior court may also direct the writ to the superior court in a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. § 1085(b)].

Mandate may also be issued to compel a court lacking jurisdiction of the subject matter to transfer the case to the California court having such jurisdiction, if one exists [see Cal. Emp. etc. Com. v. Municipal Ct. (1944) 62 Cal. App. 2d 781, 787, 145 P.2d 361] .

For a discussion of traditional mandate, a procedural checklist, and forms for use in securing issuance of the writ, see Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition .

[ii] Under Code Civ. Proc. § 400 to Review Superior Court Orders

Code of Civil Procedure § 400 provides that when an order is made by the superior court granting or denying a motion to change the "place of trial," the party aggrieved by such order may, within 20 days after service of a written notice of the order, petition the court of appeal for the district in which the court granting or denying the motion is situated for a writ of mandate requiring trial of the case in the proper court [Code Civ. Proc. § 400]. The statute further provides that [Code Civ. Proc. § 400]:

- The superior court may, for good cause, and prior to the expiration of the initial 20-day period, extend the time for one additional period not to exceed 10 days.

- The petitioner must file a copy of the petition in the trial court immediately after the petition is filed in the court of appeal.

- The court of appeal may stay all proceedings in the case, pending judgment on the petition becoming final.

- The clerk of the court of appeal must file with the clerk of the trial court a copy of any final order or final judgment immediately after such order or judgment becomes final.

It would appear that the phrase "place of trial" in Code Civ. Proc. § 400 should have the same meaning it has in Code Civ. Proc. § 904.2, that is, that it should be limited to a review of orders relating to venue and not to jurisdiction [see discussion under § 324.53[1][b]].

[c] Administrative Mandate

First by case law, and then by statute [Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5], the writ of mandate came into use as the remedy to review certain orders and decisions of administrative agencies, other than those agencies whose orders or decisions are reviewed as provided in the state Constitution or in state statutes enacted pursuant to constitutional directive (for example, the Workers' Compensation Appeals Board, the state Public Utilities Commission, and the state Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control). This writ was originally referred to by legal writers as "certiorarified" mandamus or mandate and is today referred to as "administrative" mandamus or mandate. The matters that may be inquired into by the court in reviewing the orders or decisions of administrative agencies include the questions whether the agency has proceeded without, or in excess, of jurisdiction [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5(b)], and, to this extent, the writ resembles the writ of certiorari. For a full discussion of administrative mandate and forms for use in securing issuance of the writ, see Ch. 474, Availability of Judicial Review of Agency Decisions .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Administrative LawJudicial ReviewRemediesMandamusCivil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionJurisdiction Over ActionsLimited JurisdictionCivil ProcedureRemediesWritsCommon Law WritsMandamusCivil ProcedureRemediesWritsCommon Law WritsProhibitionCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate

JurisdictionState Court ReviewCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityGeneral Overview

26 of 150 DOCUMENTS

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Challenges to Subject Matter Jurisdiction

28-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 324.47-324.59

[Reserved]

§§ 324.47[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Classification and Reclassification of a Superior Court Case

28-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 324.60

§ 324.60 Jurisdictional Classification

The jurisdictional classification of a case means its classification as a limited civil case or an unlimited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. § 32.5]. A civil case that is not a limited civil case may be referred to as an unlimited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. § 88].

While the term limited civil case was used to denote an action filed in the limited jurisdiction of a municipal court, since 1998 the distinction of limited and unlimited civil cases was added to the Code of Civil Procedure to reflect unification of the trial courts [see Cal. Const. art. VI, §§ 5(e); Cal. L. Revision Comm'n Comment to Code Civ. Proc. § 85]. On February 8, 2001, the superior and municipal courts of Kings County were the last courts to unify into a single superior court, and with this unification, municipal courts no longer exist in California. Superior courts are now the only California state trial courts.

While the limited and unlimited classification is a relatively new development, this classification system models portions of the prior court system by distinguishing cases in superior court that seek a limited amount of damages (limited civil cases have a jurisdictional limit of $25,000 or less and derives from the $25,000 jurisdictional limit that applied to the municipal courts) [see Cal. L. Revision Comm'n Comment to Code Civ. Proc. § 85; Trial Court Unification: Revision of Codes, 28 Cal. L. Revision Comm'n Reports 51, 144 (comment to Code Civ. Proc. § 86 (limited civil case equivalent to matter within jurisdiction of municipal court under former law))]. Limited civil cases have abridged pleading, discovery, and evidentiary procedures relative to unlimited civil cases, with appeals to the appellate department of the superior court [see Code Civ. Proc. § 90 et seq.].

Reclassification has no effect on the fundamental jurisdiction of the court; the statutes governing reclassification strongly indicate that a matter may proceed to trial and judgment as a limited case even though it might be subject to reclassification [Pajaro Valley Water Management Agency v. McGrath (2005) 128 Cal. App. 4th 1093, 1103, 27 Cal. Rptr. 3d 741] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionJurisdiction Over ActionsGeneral JurisdictionCivil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionJurisdiction Over ActionsLimited Jurisdiction

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Classification and Reclassification of a Superior Court Case

28-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 324.61

§ 324.61 Unlimited Civil Case

A civil case that is not a limited civil case may be referred to as an unlimited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. § 88].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionJurisdiction Over ActionsGeneral Jurisdiction

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Classification and Reclassification of a Superior Court Case

28-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 324.62

§ 324.62 Limited Civil Case

[1] Dependent on Amount in Controversy and Type of Relief

An action or special proceeding shall be treated as a limited civil case if all of the conditions listed below are satisfied [Code Civ. Proc. § 85].

No action or special proceeding may be treated as a limited civil case unless all of the conditions listed below are satisfied, notwithstanding any statute that classifies an action or special proceeding as a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. § 85].

The conditions that must be met for a case to be classified as a limited civil case are:

- The amount in controversy does not exceed $25,000. As used in this section, "amount in controversy" means the amount of the demand, or the recovery sought, or the value of the property, or the amount of the lien, that is in controversy in the action, exclusive of attorneys' fees, interest, and costs [Code Civ. Proc. § 85(a)].

- The relief sought is a type that may be granted in a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. § 85(b); see Code Civ. Proc. § 86].

- The relief sought, whether in the complaint, a cross-complaint, or otherwise, is exclusively of a type described in one or more statutes that classify an action or special proceeding as a limited civil case, including, but not limited to, the following provisions [Code Civ. Proc. § 85(c)]:

  1. Civ. Code § 798.61 (abandoned mobilehomes).

  2. Civ. Code § 1719 (passing a check on insufficient funds).

3. Civ. Code § 3342.5 (dog bites).

4. Code Civ. Proc. § 86 (jurisdiction; for discussion, see [2]-[4], below).

5. Code Civ. Proc. § 86.1 (long term health care).

6. Code Civ. Proc. § 1710.20 (enforcement of sister state judgments).

7. Food & Agric. Code §§ 7581, 12647, 27601, 52514, 53564 (abatement as public nuisance of various agricultural products that are contaminated or otherwise not in compliance with law).

8. Food & Agric. Code § 31503 (loss or damage of livestock caused by dog).

9. Food & Agric. Code § 31621 (vicious dogs).

10. Gov. Code § 53069.4 (appeal of fine or penalty imposed under local ordinance).

11. Gov. Code §§ 53075.6, 53075.61 (impounding taxicab operated by person without valid certificate, license, or permit).

12. Pub. Util. Code § 5411.5 (arrest, seizure and impoundment of vehicle at airport or Mexican border).

13. Veh. Code § 9872.1 (impoundment of vessel with hull identification number removed).

14. Veh. Code § 10751 (disposition of vehicle or part the identification number of which has been removed, defaced, altered, or destroyed).

15. Veh. Code § 14607.6 (impoundment and forfeiture of vehicle driven by unlicensed driver).

16. Veh. Code § 40230 (parking violation appeals).

17. Veh. Code § 40256 (notice of toll evasion appeals).

The existence of a statute relating to the court's authority in a limited civil case does not, by itself, imply that the same authority does or does not exist in an unlimited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. § 89(a)]. The converse is also true; the existence of a statute relating to the court's authority in an unlimited civil case does not, by itself, imply that the existence or nonexistence of the same authority in a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. § 89(b)].

[2] Amount in Controversy $25,000 or Less

[a] Cases at Law

All cases at law in which the demand, exclusive of interest, or the value of the property in controversy amounts to $25,000 or less are limited civil cases [Code Civ. Proc. § 86(a)(1)].

This includes actions to enforce payment of delinquent unsecured personal property taxes if the legality of the tax is not contested by the defendant, but otherwise, cases involving the legality of a tax, impost, assessment, toll, or municipal fine, are not limited civil cases [Code Civ. Proc. § 86(a)(1); see Minor v. Municipal Court (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 1541, 1547, 268 Cal. Rptr. 919 ; Cal. Emp. etc. Com. v. Municipal Ct. (1944) 62 Cal. App. 2d 781, 784-785, 145 P.2d 361 ; see also Crawford v. Herringer (1978) 85 Cal. App. 3d 544, 547-551, 149 Cal. Rptr. 578 (discussing whether various charges are "taxes," "imposts," "tolls," or "municipal fines" within the meaning of this provision)].

The court in a limited civil case may not grant relief exceeding $25,000, exclusive of attorney's fees, interest, and costs [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85(a), 580(b)(1)].

Although the reclassification statutes have made numerous changes, the jurisdictional amount in controversy has not changed and continues to provide a basis for reclassification of cases at law [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85(a), 86(a)(1), 403.010 et seq.], the statutory changes have not altered substantive and procedural law governing how a trial court values a case to determine the jurisdictional amount in controversy, and the Walker test [Walker v. Superior Court (1991) 53 Cal. 3d 257, 262] continues to govern the determination of the jurisdictional amount in controversy for reclassification as a limited civil case, i.e., that the matter will "necessarily" result in a verdict below the jurisdictional amount [Stern v. Superior Court (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 223, 229-231, 129 Cal. Rptr. 2d 275] .

[b] Dissolution of Partnership

Actions to dissolve a partnership when the total partnership assets do not exceed $25,000 are limited civil cases [Code Civ. Proc. § 86(a)(2); see Ch. 406, Partnerships: Dissolution].

[c] Interpleader Actions

Interpleader actions when the amount of money or the value of the property involved does not exceed $25,000 are limited civil cases [Code Civ. Proc. § 86(a)(2); see Ch. 314, Interpleader].

[d] Cancel, Rescind or Revise Contract

Actions to cancel or rescind a contract sought in connection with an action to recover money not exceeding $25,000 or property of a value not exceeding $25,000 paid or delivered under, or in consideration of, the contract are limited civil cases [Code Civ. Proc. § 86(a)(3); see Ch. 490, Rescission and Restitution].

Actions to revise a contract when sought in an action on the contract if the action is otherwise a limited civil case, is also a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. § 86(a)(3); see Ch. 488, Reformation of Instruments].

[e] Eviction Actions

Proceedings in forcible entry, forcible detainer, or unlawful detainer when the whole amount of damages claimed is $25,000 or less are limited civil cases [Code Civ. Proc. § 86(a)(4); see Ch. 333, Landlord and Tenant: Eviction Action].

[f] Enforcement of Personal Property Liens

Actions to enforce and foreclose liens on personal property when the amount of the lien is $25,000 or less [Code Civ. Proc. § 86(a)(5); see Ch. 342, Liens and Wage Preferences].

[g] Enforcement of Mechanics' Liens and Similar Liens

The following actions are limited civil cases [Code Civ. Proc. § 86(a)(6)]:

- Actions to enforce and foreclose, or petitions to release, liens of mechanics, materialpersons, artisans, laborers, and of all other persons to whom liens are given under Chapter 2 of Title 15 of Part 4 of Division 3 of the Civil Code (Civ. Code § 3109 et seq. (relating to works of improvement) [see Ch. 361, Mechanics' Liens].

- Actions to enforce and foreclose an assessment lien on a common interest development as defined in Civ. Code § 1351 when the amount of the lien is $25,000 or less [see Ch. 124, Condominiums and Other Common Interest Developments].

However, these actions are not limited civil cases [Code Civ. Proc. § 86(a)(6)]:

- When an action to enforce the lien affects property that is also affected by a similar pending action that is not a limited civil case, or

- When the total amount of the liens sought to be foreclosed against the same property aggregates an amount in excess of $25,000.

[h] Declaratory Relief

Declaratory relief actions are limited civil cases in two situations:

- When brought by way of cross complaint as to a right of indemnity with respect to the relief demanded in the complaint or a cross complaint in an action or proceeding that is otherwise a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 86(a)(7)(A), 1060; see Minor v. Municipal Court (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 1541, 1547-1548, 268 Cal. Rptr. 919 ; see also Ch. 182, Declaratory Relief].

- When brought to conduct a trial after nonbinding fee arbitration between an attorney and client, pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 6200 et seq. when the amount in controversy is $25,000 or less [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 86(a)(7)(B), 1060; for discussion of fee arbitration, see Ch. 72, Attorney Practice and Ethics, § 72.350 et seq.].

Other than these two situations, declaratory relief may not be granted in a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. § 580(b)(4)].

[i] TROs, Preliminary Injunctive Relief, Accounts, and Receivers

The court in a limited civil case has jurisdiction as listed below when necessary to preserve the property or rights of any party to a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. § 86(a)(8)]:

- To issue temporary restraining orders and preliminary injunctions, and to take accounts, where necessary to preserve the property or rights of any party to a limited civil case.

- To make any order or perform any act, pursuant to the Enforcement of Judgments Law (Code Civ. Proc. § 680.010 et seq.) in a limited civil case [see Ch. 254, Executions and Enforcement of Judgments, § 254.130 et seq., and Ch. 486, Receivers].

- To appoint a receiver [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 564-570; Ch. 486, Receivers].

[j] Determining Title to Personal Property

The court in a limited civil case has jurisdiction to determine title to personal property seized in a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. § 86(a)(8); see Ch. 119, Claim and Delivery].

[k] Creditor's Suits

Actions under Code Civ. Proc. § 708.210 et seq., relating to creditors' suits, to recover an interest in personal property or to enforce the liability of the debtor of a judgment debtor when the interest claimed adversely is of a value not exceeding $25,000 or the debt denied does not exceed $25,000 is a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. § 86(a)(9); see Ch. 254, Executions and Enforcement of Judgments, § 254.180 et seq.].

[l] Arbitration-Related Petitions

[i] Contractual Arbitration

All arbitration-related petitions filed pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1292 et seq., except for uninsured motorist arbitration proceedings under Ins. Code § 11580.2, are limited civil cases if [Code Civ. Proc. § 86(a)(10)(A); see Ch. 34, Contractual Arbitration: Judicial Review]:

- The petition is filed before the arbitration award becomes final and the matter to be resolved by arbitration is a limited civil case under Code Civ. Proc. § 86(a)(1)-(9), or

- The petition if filed after the arbitration award becomes final and the amount of the award and all other rulings, pronouncements, and decisions made in the award are within Code Civ. Proc. § 86(a)(1)-(9).

[ii] Attorney Fee Arbitration

All arbitration petitions filed to confirm, correct, or vacate a fee arbitration award between an attorney and client that is binding or has become binding, pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 6200 et seq., are limited civil cases if the arbitration award is $25,000 or less [Code Civ. Proc. § 86(a)(10)(B); see Ch. 72, Attorney Practice and Ethics, § 72.350 et seq.].

[m] Long-Term Care Health Care

An action brought pursuant to the Long-Term Care, Health, Safety, and Security Act of 1973 [Health & Safety Code § 1417 et seq.] is a limited civil case if civil penalties are not sought or amount to $25,000 or less [Code Civ. Proc. § 86.1].

An action under the act brought as a limited civil case in the superior court may be reclassified as an unlimited civil case for the superior court for consolidation with any other citation enforcement action pending in that court on the motion of either party [Code Civ. Proc. § 86.1].

[3] Cases in Equity

[a] Trying Title to Personal Property

A case in equity to try title to personal property is a limited civil case when the amount involved is not more than $25,000 [Code Civ. Proc. § 86(b)(1)].

[b] Defenses

A case when equity is pleaded as a defensive matter in any case that is otherwise a limited civil case is also a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. § 86(b)(2)].

[c] Vacating Judgment or Order

A case to vacate a judgment or order of the court obtained in a limited civil case through extrinsic fraud, mistake, inadvertence, or excusable neglect is a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. § 86(b)(3)].

[4] Relief Not Available in Limited Civil Case

[a] In Excess of $25,000

The court in a limited civil case may not grant relief exceeding $25,000, exclusive of attorney's fees, interest, and costs [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85(a), 580(b)(1)].

[b] Permanent Injunctive Relief

The court in a limited civil case may not grant a permanent injunction, except as authorized by statute [Code Civ. Proc. § 580(b)(2)].

[c] Determining Title to Real Property

The court in a limited civil case may not grant as relief a determination of the title to real property [Code Civ. Proc. § 580(b)(3)].

[d] Declaratory Relief

The court may not grant declaratory relief in a limited civil case, except as authorized by Code Civ. Proc. § 86 [Code Civ. Proc. § 580(b)(4); see Code Civ. Proc. § 86(a)(7), discussed under § 324.27[3][e]].

[5] Costs and Attorney's Fees

The following discussion applies to the power of the court in a limited civil case [see Trial Court Unification: Revision of Codes, 28 Cal. L. Revision Comm'n Reports 51, 144 (comment to Code Civ. Proc. § 86; limited civil case equivalent to matter within jurisdiction of municipal court under former law)].

If the recovery on the substantive demand falls within the jurisdiction of the court in a limited civil case, that court retains jurisdiction to award costs and attorney's fees when appropriate, even though those items, when added to the substantive portion of the judgment, aggregate an amount in excess of the court's jurisdictional limit [Stokus v. Marsh (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 647, 653, 266 Cal. Rptr. 90 ; see Bakkebo v. Municipal Court (1981) 124 Cal. App. 3d 229, 235, 177 Cal. Rptr. 239] . The court in Bakkebo, however, added that attorney's fees awarded as costs and incidental to the judgment "must be reasonable and bear some rational relationship to the amount of the substantive recovery, and the award for attorney fees cannot in itself exceed the jurisdictional limit" of the court [Bakkebo v. Municipal Court (1981) 124 Cal. App. 3d 229, 236, 177 Cal. Rptr. 239 (italics added)]. The italicized language was characterized as nonbinding dicta without precedent and, as such, was rejected by the court of appeal in Stokus, which, on certification to it by the superior court, affirmed a municipal court judgment in unlawful detainer for possession of the property and $6,166 damages, and an award of attorney's fees as costs under Civ. Code § 1717 in the sum of $75,000 [Stokus v. Marsh (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 647, 651, 657, 266 Cal. Rptr. 90] .

[6] Prior Law Assessing Amount in Controversy Before Court Unification

NOTE:

The cases in this subsection analyze the amount in controversy for purposes of determining if jurisdiction was vested in the superior court or municipal court before court unification. While all trial courts are now unified into superior courts in California, the principles in these prior cases may be useful in assessing the amount in controversy for purposes of classifying a case as unlimited or limited. Counsel should be careful to inform the court of the nature of these cases if attempting to use them as persuasive authority.

[a] In General

The nature and amount of the demand are normally shown by the prayer of the complaint or cross complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 425.10(b)], but the pleading as a whole may be examined to determine whether the court has subject matter jurisdiction [see Sellery v. Ward (1942) 21 Cal. 2d 300, 305, 131 P.2d 550 ; Campbell v. Superior Court (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 147, 151, 261 Cal. Rptr. 509 ; Security Pac. Nat. Bank v. Lyon (1980) 105 Cal. App. 3d Supp 8, 14, 165 Cal. Rptr. 95 ; Babcock v. Antis (1979) 94 Cal. App. 3d 823, 828, 156 Cal. Rptr. 673] . The amount of money sued for, exclusive of interest, normally is the test of jurisdiction in an action to recover money or damages [see Code Civ. Proc. § 86(a); Hoban v. Ryan (1900) 130 Cal. 96, 98, 62 P. 296] . This amount includes all damages claimed, whether actual, special, compensatory, exemplary (punitive), statutory, or other [Hoban v. Ryan (1900) 130 Cal. 96, 98-99, 62 P. 296 ; see Wells Fargo Bk. & U. T. Co. v. Broad (1934) 3 Cal. App. 2d 45, 46-47, 39 P.2d 241] .

Except for punitive damages [see Civ. Code § 3295(e)] and except for actions for actual or punitive damages for personal injury or wrongful death filed in a superior court, in which the amount of damages sought must not be stated, a complaint or cross complaint seeking recovery of money or damages must state the amount demanded [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.10(a)(2)]. The amount of damages in these superior court personal injury or wrongful death cases is determined in the first instance by the Statement of Damages requested and served as provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 425.11.

[b] Class Action

In a class action, jurisdiction is determined by the total amount sought on behalf of the represented class rather than on the amount of damages suffered by each individual member of the class [Archibald v. Cinerama Hotels (1976) 15 Cal. 3d 853, 861, 126 Cal. Rptr. 811, 544 P.2d 947 ; see, e.g., Daar v. Yellow Cab Co. (1967) 67 Cal. 2d 695, 702, 63 Cal. Rptr. 724, 433 P.2d 732] .

[c] Action for Conversion

In an action for damages for conversion of personal property, the demand or prayer of the complaint made in good faith and reasonably supported by the allegations on which it is founded determines the amount in controversy [Hall v. Cline (1920) 45 Cal. App. 616, 617, 188 P. 295] .

[d] Action in Replevin

In an action to recover personal property (replevin, or claim and delivery), the value of the property determines the amount in controversy; any damages sought are incidental and may not be combined with the value of the property in computing the amount in controversy [Holm v. Davis (1935) 8 Cal. App. 2d 328, 329-330, 47 P.2d 537] .

[e] Proceeding in Unlawful or Forcible Detainer or Forcible Entry

The amount in controversy in proceedings in unlawful or forcible detainer or forcible entry is determined by the total amount of damages sought [see Code Civ. Proc. § 86(a)(4), discussed under § 324.27[2][b][v]].

[f] Actions to Enforce Liens

In actions to enforce and foreclose liens on personal property, the amount in controversy is determined by the amount of the lien [Code Civ. Proc. § 86(a)(5), discussed under § 324.27[2][b][vi]]. This is also true of actions to enforce or foreclose other liens, including mechanics' liens, subject, however, to transfer and consolidation with other actions to foreclose liens relating to the same property [Code Civ. Proc. § 86(a)(6)].

[g] Single Plaintiff With Multiple Claims

The rules set out below apply in determining which trial court has subject matter jurisdiction of a case having a single plaintiff prosecuting multiple claims.

1. When a single plaintiff brings several claims against the same defendant, it is the total sum sued for which is the amount in controversy for purposes of subject matter jurisdiction, even if some of the claims have been assigned to plaintiff for collection only [Emery v. Pacific Employers Ins. Co. (1937) 8 Cal. 2d 663, 666, 67 P.2d 1046 (disapproved on another point in Barrera v. State Farm Mut. Automobile Ins. Co. (1969) 71 Cal. 2d 659, 679, 79 Cal. Rptr. 106, 456 P.2d 674)].

2. When a single plaintiff brings several joinable causes of action against the same defendant, and one cause is within the superior court's jurisdiction, the superior court has jurisdiction of the whole case [St. James Church v. Superior Court (1955) 135 Cal. App. 2d 352, 358, 287 P.2d 387] .

3. When a single plaintiff brings properly joinable causes of action against several defendants, the total claim against each being for an amount within the amount which would designate the matter as a limited civil case, the action must be brought in the court of limited jurisdiction, even if the total amount sued for is within the unlimited jurisdiction of the superior court [Emery v. Pacific Employers Ins. Co. (1937) 8 Cal. 2d 663, 666, 67 P.2d 1046 (disapproved on another point in Barrera v. State Farm Mut. Automobile Ins. Co. (1969) 71 Cal. 2d 659, 679, 79 Cal. Rptr. 106, 456 P.2d 674)].

4. When a single plaintiff brings properly joinable causes of action against several defendants, the claim in one cause being within the unlimited jurisdiction of the superior court, the entire case is one of unlimited jurisdiction [Kaufman v. Pacific Indem. Co. (1936) 5 Cal. 2d 761, 764, 56 P.2d 504] .

[h] Multiple Plaintiffs

The rules set out below apply in determining which court has subject matter jurisdiction of a case involving multiple plaintiffs prosecuting multiple claims.

1. When multiple plaintiffs are properly joined in the same action, some plaintiffs with limited civil cases and others with unlimited civil cases, the unlimited jurisdiction court has jurisdiction over all the claims [see Emery v. Pacific Employers Ins. Co. (1937) 8 Cal. 2d 663, 667-669, 67 P.2d 1046 (disapproved on another point in Barrera v. State Farm Mut. Automobile Ins. Co. (1969) 71 Cal. 2d 659, 679, 79 Cal. Rptr. 106, 456 P.2d 674); Aldrich v. Transcontinental Land etc. Co. (1955) 131 Cal. App. 2d 788, 796, 281 P.2d 362] .

2. When multiple plaintiffs are properly joined in the same action each with a limited civil case, the limited jurisdiction court has jurisdiction of the entire cause notwithstanding the aggregate of the claims is above the jurisdictional maximum of that court [see Armstrong v. Transcon. L. & W. Co. (1955) 285 P.2d 1031] .

[i] Cross Claims

The rules set out below apply in determining whether the court has subject matter jurisdiction of the case when a cross complaint is filed. The rules are:

1. A superior court with unlimited jurisdiction having jurisdiction of the action set forth in the complaint has jurisdiction of a proper cross complaint even though the cross complaint involves determination of issues within the limited jurisdiction of the court [Collison v. Thomas (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 490, 499, 11 Cal. Rptr. 555, 360 P.2d 51] .

2. When an unlimited civil case is commenced on a demand within limited jurisdiction of the court and a cross complaint is thereafter filed within the original jurisdiction of the superior court, the court of unlimited jurisdiction may decide both claims [Brix v. Peoples Mut. Life Ins. Co. (1935) 2 Cal. 2d 446, 449-450, 41 P.2d 537] . But when the cross complaint sets up a limited jurisdiction demand, the court lacks jurisdiction over both the complaint and cross complaint and must transfer the case to the court of limited jurisdiction [see Jacobson v. Superior Court (1936) 5 Cal. 2d 170, 174, 53 P.2d 756] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionAmount in ControversyCivil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionJurisdiction Over ActionsLimited JurisdictionCivil ProcedureEquityGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Classification and Reclassification of a Superior Court Case

28-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 324.63

§ 324.63 Pleadings Required to Identify Limited Civil Case in Superior Court

In limited civil cases, the caption of every pleading must state that the case is a limited civil case, and the clerk classifies the case accordingly [Code Civ. Proc. § 422.30(b); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(10), (11)].

For discussion of what constitutes a limited civil case, see § 324.62.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionJurisdiction Over ActionsLimited JurisdictionCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsComplaintsRequirements

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Classification and Reclassification of a Superior Court Case

28-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 324.64

§ 324.64 Reclassification of Case by Plaintiff

If a plaintiff, cross complainant, or petitioner files an amended complaint or other amended initial pleading that changes the jurisdictional classification from limited to unlimited, the party at the time of filing the pleading shall pay the reclassification fee provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 403.060, and the clerk shall promptly reclassify the case. If the amendment changes the jurisdictional classification from unlimited to limited, no reclassification fee is required, and the clerk shall promptly reclassify the case [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 403.020(a); for discussion of the fees, see § 324.70].

The same rule applies in the case of an amendment to a pleading [Code Civ. Proc. § 403.010].

If a case is reclassified by an amended complaint, cross-complaint, amended cross-complaint, or other pleading under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 403.020 or 403.030, the caption must indicate that the action or proceeding is reclassified by this pleading [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(11)]. If a case is reclassified by stipulation under Code Civ. Proc. § 403.050, the title of the stipulation must state that the action or proceeding is reclassified by this stipulation. The caption or title must state that the case is a limited civil case reclassified as an unlimited civil case, or an unlimited civil case reclassified as a limited civil case, or other words to that effect [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(11)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionJurisdiction Over ActionsGeneral JurisdictionCivil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionJurisdiction Over ActionsLimited JurisdictionCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Classification and Reclassification of a Superior Court Case

28-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 324.65

§ 324.65 Reclassification of Case by Stipulation

The parties to the action or proceeding may stipulate to reclassification of the case within the time allowed to respond to the initial pleading [Code Civ. Proc. § 403.050(a)]. If the stipulation for reclassification changes the jurisdictional classification of the case from limited to unlimited, the reclassification fee provided in Section 403.060 must be paid at the time the stipulation is filed. [Code Civ. Proc. § 403.050(b)]. Upon filing of the stipulation and the payment of the reclassification fee provided in Section 403.060, if required for changing from limited to unlimited, the clerk must promptly reclassify the case [Code Civ. Proc. § 403.050(c)].

If a case is reclassified by stipulation under Code Civ. Proc. § 403.050, the title of the stipulation must state that the action or proceeding is reclassified by this stipulation. The caption or title must state that the case is a limited civil case reclassified as an unlimited civil case, or an unlimited civil case reclassified as a limited civil case, or other words to that effect [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(11)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionJurisdiction Over ActionsGeneral JurisdictionCivil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionJurisdiction Over ActionsLimited Jurisdiction

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Classification and Reclassification of a Superior Court Case

28-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 324.66

§ 324.66 Reclassification of Limited Civil Case by Filing of Cross Complaint

If a party in a limited civil case files a cross-complaint that causes the action or proceeding to exceed the maximum amount in controversy for a limited civil case, or otherwise fails to satisfy the requirements for a limited civil case as prescribed by Code Civ. Proc. § 85, the caption of the cross-complaint shall state that the action or proceeding is a limited civil case to be reclassified by cross-complaint, or words to that effect [Code Civ. Proc. § 403.030; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(11)]. The party at the time of filing the cross-complaint shall pay the reclassification fees provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 403.060, and the clerk shall promptly reclassify the case [Code Civ. Proc. § 403.030; for discussion of the fees, see § 324.66[1]].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionAmount in ControversyCivil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionJurisdiction Over ActionsLimited JurisdictionCivil ProceduresPleading & PracticePleadingsComplaintsCross-Complaints

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Classification and Reclassification of a Superior Court Case

28-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 324.67

§ 324.67 Motion to Reclassify Case if Erroneously Classified in Initial Pleading

[1] By Party Within Time to Amend or Respond to Initial Pleading

[a] Motion Authorized

If the caption of the complaint, cross-complaint, petition, or other initial pleading erroneously states or fails to state, pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 422.30(b), that the action or proceeding is a limited civil case, a party may file a motion for reclassification, within the time allowed for that party to amend or respond to the initial pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 403.010, 403.040(a)].

For forms of motion and notices of motion to reclassify a case, see §§ 324.120 and 324.121.

[b] Motion Does Not Extend Time to Respond

A motion for reclassification does not extend the moving party's time to amend, answer, or otherwise respond [Code Civ. Proc. § 403.040(a)].

[c] Motion Constitutes Appearance

A defendant's motion for reclassification pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 403.040 constitutes an appearance in the action [Code Civ. Proc. § 1014].

For discussion of appearances, see Ch. 323, Jurisdiction: Personal .

[2] By Party After Expiration of Time to Respond to Initial Pleading

A party may file a motion for reclassification after the time for that party to amend or respond to the complaint, cross complaint, or other initial pleading. The court is to grant the motion only if [Code Civ. Proc. § 403.040(b)]:

- The case is incorrectly classified.
- The moving party shows good cause for not seeking reclassification earlier.

For a form of motion and notice of motion to reclassify a case after time to amend or respond to a complaint, see § 324.123.

[3] By the Court's Own Motion

The case may be reclassified on the court's own motion at any time [Code Civ. Proc. § 403.040(a)]. See [4], below, for notice and hearing requirements if court seeks reclassification on its own motion.

[4] Notice and Opportunity to be Heard Required

Whether a party makes a motion or the court raises the jurisdictional issue on its own motion, the court must provide sufficient opportunity to respond and offer reasons why reclassification should or should not be ordered, and even if no hearing is held, before ordering reclassification the court must afford the parties an opportunity to contest reclassification [Stern v. Superior Court (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 223, 230-231, 129 Cal. Rptr. 2d 275] .

[5] Determination of Amount in Controversy

Although the reclassification statutes have made numerous changes, the jurisdictional amount in controversy has not changed and continues to provide a basis for reclassification of cases at law [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85(a), 86(a)(1), 403.010 et seq.], the statutory changes have not altered substantive and procedural law governing how a trial court values a case to determine the jurisdictional amount in controversy, and the Walker test [Walker v. Superior Court (1991) 53 Cal. 3d 257, 262] continues to govern the determination of the jurisdictional amount in controversy for reclassification as a limited civil case, i.e., that the matter will "necessarily" result in a verdict below the jurisdictional amount [Stern v. Superior Court (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 223, 229-231, 129 Cal. Rptr. 2d 275] .

The unlikeliness of a judgment in excess of $25,000 is not the test. The trial court reviews the record to determine whether the result is obtainable. Simply stated, the trial court looks to the possibility of a jurisdictionally appropriate verdict, not to its probability. Accordingly under Walker the superior court must deny the motion to reclassify the case as limited (and thus keep the matter in the unlimited civil court) unless it appears to a legal certainty that the plaintiff's damages will necessarily be less than $25,000. This standard of "legal certainty" is not met when it appears a verdict within the unlimited court's jurisdiction is "possible" [Ytuarte v. Superior Court (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 266, 277, 28 Cal. Rptr. 3d 474] .

[6] Reclassification Not Required After Trial or Hearing Because Judgment Could Have Been Rendered in Limited Civil Case

Nothing in Code Civ. Proc. § 403.040, discussed above, is to be construed to require the superior court to reclassify any action or proceeding because the judgment to be rendered, as determined at the trial or hearing, is one that might have been rendered in a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. § 403.040(e)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionAmount in ControversyCivil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionJurisdiction Over ActionsLimited JurisdictionCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsLeave of Court

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Classification and Reclassification of a Superior Court Case

28-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 324.68

§ 324.68 Continuation as Limited Civil Case if Amount in Excess of Jurisdiction Is Remitted

In any case where the erroneous classification is due solely to an excess in the amount of the demand, the excess may be remitted and the action may continue as a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. § 403.040(f)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionAmount in ControversyCivil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionJurisdiction Over ActionsLimited Jurisdiction

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Classification and Reclassification of a Superior Court Case

28-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 324.69

§ 324.69 Right to Amend Pleadings Not Affected

Nothing in Code Civ. Proc. § 403.010 et seq. expands or limits the law whether a plaintiff, cross complainant, or petitioner may file an amended complaint or other initial pleading [Code Civ. Proc. § 403.010].

Moreover, nothing in Code Civ. Proc. § 403.010 et seq. expands or limits the the law on whether, and to what extent, an amendment relates back to the date of filing of the original complaint or other pleading [Code Civ. Proc. § 403.010(b)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionJurisdiction Over ActionsLimited JurisdictionCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329

Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Classification and Reclassification of a Superior Court Case

28-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 324.70

§ 324.70 Costs and Fees

[1] Reclassification From Limited to Unlimited Civil Case

When a court grants a motion for reclassification, if a party misclassified a case as a limited civil case, the party must pay as a reclassification fee the difference between the fee paid for filing the first paper in a limited civil case and the fee for filing the first paper in an unlimited civil case. A similar adjustment must be made for other fees paid before the reclassification. The payment of the reclassification fee shall be determined, unless the court orders otherwise, as set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 403.040(c).

[2] Reclassification From Unlimited to Limited Civil Case

When a court grants a motion for reclassification, if a party failed to classify a case as a limited civil case, the party is not required to pay a new fee for filing the first paper in a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. § 403.040(c)(2)].

[3] Payment

[a] Prompt Reclassification on Payment

If the court orders reclassification under Code Civ. Proc. § 403.040, discussed above, and fees have been paid as provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 403.060, the clerk is to reclassify the case promptly [Code Civ. Proc. § 403.040(d)(1)].

[b] Payment by Any Interested Party

If the fees have not been paid as provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 403.040, discussed above, within five days after service of notice of the order for reclassification, any party interested in the case, regardless of whether that party is named in the complaint, may pay the fees, and the clerk is to reclassify the case as if the fees had been paid as provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 403.060 [Code Civ. Proc. § 403.040(d)(2)]. The fee shall then be a proper item of costs of the party paying it, recoverable if that party prevails in the action or proceeding; otherwise, the fee shall be offset against and deducted from the amount, if any, awarded to the party responsible for the fee, if that party prevails in the action or proceeding [Code Civ. Proc. § 403.040(d)(2)].

[c] No Further Proceedings Until Payment Is Made

The cause of action cannot be further prosecuted in any court until the reclassification fees are paid [see Code Civ. Proc. § 403.040(d)(2)].

[d] Dismissal In Case of Nonpayment

If the reclassfication fees are not paid within 30 days after service of notice of an order for reclassification, the court on its own motion or motion of any party may order the case to proceed as a limited civil case, dismiss the action or cross-action without prejudice on the condition that no other action or proceeding on the same matters may be commenced in any other court until the reclassification fee is paid, or take such other action as the court may deem appropriate [see Code Civ. Proc. § 403.040(d)(3)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionJurisdiction Over ActionsGeneral JurisdictionCivil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionJurisdiction Over ActionsLimited JurisdictionCivil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Classification and Reclassification of a Superior Court Case

28-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 324.71

§ 324.71 Continuation of Case as Reclassified

[1] Statute of Limitations Measured From Original Filing Not From Time of Reclassification

An action or proceeding that is reclassified shall be deemed to have been commenced at the time the complaint or petition was initially filed, not at the time of reclassification [Code Civ. Proc. § 403.070(a); see also Code Civ. Proc. § 403.010 (reclassification has no effect on rules relating to relation back of amended pleading)].

[2] Treated as Though Commenced as Reclassified With Prior Proceedings Saved

The court shall have and exercise over the reclassified action or proceeding the same authority as if the action or proceeding had been originally commenced as reclassified. All prior proceedings are saved [Code Civ. Proc. § 403.070(b)].

[3] Amendment of Pleadings for Proper Presentation and Determination Case as Reclassified

The court may allow or require whatever amendment of the pleadings, filing and service of amended, additional, or supplemental pleadings, or giving of notice, or other appropriate action, as may be necessary for the proper presentation and determination of the action or proceeding as reclassified [Code Civ. Proc. § 403.070(b)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionJurisdiction Over ActionsGeneral JurisdictionCivil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionJurisdiction Over ActionsLimited JurisdictionCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Classification and Reclassification of a Superior Court Case

28-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 324.72

§ 324.72 Review of Order Granting or Denying Reclassification

[1] By Writ of Mandate

When an order is made by the superior court granting or denying a motion to reclassify an action or proceeding pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 403.040, the party aggrieved by the order may petition the court of appeal for the district in which the court granting or denying the motion is situated for a writ of mandate requiring proper classification of the action or proceeding pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 403.040 [Code Civ. Proc. § 403.080].

The petitioner must file a copy of the petition in the trial court immediately after the petition is filed in the court of appeal [Code Civ. Proc. § 403.080].

[2] Time Limit for Filing Petition

The petition must be filed within 20 days after service of a written notice of the order. The superior court may, for good cause, and prior to the expiration of the initial 20-day period, extend the time for one additional period not to exceed 10 days [Code Civ. Proc. § 403.080].

[3] Stay of Proceedings

The court of appeal may stay all proceedings in the case, pending judgment on the petition becoming final [Code Civ. Proc. § 403.080].

[4] Notice to Trial Court of Court of Appeal Order or Judgment

The clerk of the court of appeal is required to file with the clerk of the trial court, a copy of any final order or final judgment immediately after the order or judgment becomes final [Code Civ. Proc. § 403.080].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionJurisdiction Over ActionsGeneral JurisdictionCivil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionJurisdiction Over ActionsLimited JurisdictionCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsTime LimitationsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsStays Pending AppealsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityNotice of Appeal

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Classification and Reclassification of a Superior Court Case

28-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 324.73-324.79

[Reserved]

§§ 324.73[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

28-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 324.80

§ 324.80 Related Publications from Matthew Bender

For discussion and forms for use in securing relief from judgments that are void for lack of jurisdiction, see Ch. 489, Relief From Judgments and Orders

For discussion and forms for use to demur to a complaint on the ground the court lacks subject matter jurisdiction of the action, see Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings

For discussion and forms for use in securing dismissal of a federal action for lack of subject matter jurisdiction and for removing an action within the original jurisdiction of the federal district courts from a California state court to a federal court, see Ch. 265, Federal Courts: Jurisdiction and Removal

For discussion, a procedural guide, and forms for use in obtaining a writ of mandate, see Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition

For discussion, procedural guide, and forms of notices of motions and orders generally, see Ch. 372, Motions and Orders

For discussion of the jurisdictional issues that may be considered on a petition for writ of mandate under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5 to determine the validity of a final administrative order or decision, see Ch. 474B, Standards in Reviewing Agency Decisions

For a discussion, procedural guide, and forms for use in obtaining a writ of certiorari, see Ch. 492, Review (Certiorari), Writ of

For a discussion of the jurisdiction of the small claims courts, see Ch. 526, Small Claims

For a discussion of venue and forms relating to change of venue generally, see Ch. 571, Venue

For memoranda supporting and opposing a demurrer to a complaint for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, see California Points and Authorities, Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings , Pt. I

For memoranda supporting a motion to transfer an action from a court lacking to a court having subject matter jurisdiction, see California Points and Authorities, Ch. 133, Jurisdiction: Subject Matter Jurisdiction

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemovalBasisGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureVenueGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsDemurrersCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to DismissCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentVoid JudgmentsCivil ProcedureRemediesWritsCommon Law WritsMandamusCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionState Court ReviewGovernmentsCourtsSmall Claims Courts

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

28-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 324.81

§ 324.81 Federal Constitution

Requirement that full faith and credit be given in each statute to judicial proceedings of every other state. U.S. Const., art. IV

Prohibition against depriving person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law. U.S. Const., amends. V, XIV

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Constitutional LawRelations Among GovernmentsFull Faith & CreditConstitutional LawBill of RightsFundamental RightsProcedural Due ProcessScope of ProtectionConstitutional LawSubstantive Due ProcessScope of Protection

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

28-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 324.82

§ 324.82 State Constitution

Prohibition against depriving person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law. Cal. Const., art. I, § 7(a)

Courts of California judicial system. Cal. Const., art. VI, § 1

California Supreme Court. Cal. Const., art. VI, §§ 1, 2, 10-12

California courts of appeal. Cal. Const., art. VI §§ 1, 3, 10, 11

Superior courts. Cal. Const., art. VI, §§ 1, 4, 10, 11

Limitations on powers of courts to set aside judgment or grant new trial. Cal. Const., art. VI, § 13

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Constitutional LawBill of RightsFundamental RightsProcedural Due ProcessScope of ProtectionConstitutional LawSubstantive Due ProcessScope of ProtectionGovernmentsCourtsCreation & Organization

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

28-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 324.83

§ 324.83 State Statutes

[1] Claim of Lack of Jurisdiction

Objection that court has no jurisdiction of subject of cause of action alleged in pleading is not waived by party's failure to raise objection by demurrer or answer. Code Civ. Proc. § 430.80(a)

[2] Courts of Appeal

Jurisdiction to review decisions of Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control. Bus. & Prof. Code § 23090

Powers on appellate review. Code Civ. Proc. §§ 43, 906-909

Statutory provisions governing courts of appeal generally. Gov. Code §§ 68926-68932 and 69100-69154

Court of appeal districts. Gov. Code & sect; 69100

Jurisdiction to review decisions of Workers' Compensation Appeals Board. Lab. Code § 5955

Jurisdiction to review decisions of Public Utilities Commission. Pub. Util. Code §§ 1756(a), (f), (g), 1759

[3] Limited Civil Cases

Limited civil cases defined. Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85, 86, 86.1

Appealable judgments and orders. Code Civ. Proc. § 904.2

[4] Reclassification of Civil Case

Reclassification of civil actions and proceedings. Code Civ. Proc. § 403.010 et seq.

[5] Small Claims Courts

Statutory provisions governing. Code Civ. Proc. § 116.110 et seq.

Jurisdiction. Code Civ. Proc. § 116.220

[6] Superior Courts

Appellate divisions. Code Civ. Proc. § 77

Appealable judgments and orders. Code Civ. Proc. §§ 904.1, 904.2

Powers on appellate review. Code Civ. Proc. §§ 906-909

Statutory provisions governing superior courts generally. Gov. Code §§ 69504-70148 and 71386

[7] Supreme Court

Jurisdiction to review decisions of Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control. Bus. & Prof. Code § 23090

Powers on appellate review. Code Civ. Proc. §§ 43, 906-909

Jurisdiction to review decisions of Workers' Compensation Appeals Board. Lab. Code § 5955

Jurisdiction to review orders of Public Utilities Commission. Pub. Util. Code §§ 1756(a), (f), (g), 1759

[8] Transfer to Court Having Subject Matter Jurisdiction

Costs and fees on transfer and procedure. Code Civ. Proc. § 399

Transfer of appeal or petition from court lacking to court having subject matter jurisdiction. Code Civ. Proc. § 396

Dismissal of action for failure to pay costs of transfer. Code Civ. Proc. § 399

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Administrative LawJudicial ReviewReviewabilityJurisdiction & VenueCivil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionJurisdiction Over ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionJurisdiction Over ActionsLimited JurisdictionCivil ProcedureVenueMotions to TransferGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionState Court ReviewGovernmentsCourtsSmall Claims Courts

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

28-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 324.84

§ 324.84 Decisions

[1] Advisory Opinions

High court's answer to a certified question under [former] Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 29.5 is not improper advisory opinion if (1) court addresses only issues truly contested by parties and presented on factual record, and (2) court's opinion on certified question will be dispositive of issue and res judicata between parties. Los Angeles Alliance for Survival v. City of Los Angeles (2000) 22 Cal. 4th 352, 362, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1, 993 P.2d 334

The controversy that is the subject of declaratory relief must be of a character which admits of specific and conclusive relief by judgment within the field of judicial determination, as distinguished from an advisory opinion upon a particular or hypothetical state of facts. Gafcon, Inc. v. Ponsor & Associates (2002) 98 Cal. App. 4th 1388, 1402-1403, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 392

To invoke the jurisdiction of a court of justice, it is primarily essential that there be involved a genuine and existing controversy, calling for present adjudication as involving present rights; normally, in a civil action, the court is apprized of such a controversy by the filing of a complaint, which must describe the facts giving rise to a cause of action and state a demand for appropriate relief [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.10]; in the absence of a present controversy between the parties, the superior court should not assume jurisdiction. Housing Group v. United Nat'l Ins. Co. (2001) 90 Cal. App. 4th 1106, 1111, 109 Cal. Rptr. 2d 497

Court may not issue rulings not ripe for review; trial court improperly issued advisory opinion in granting petition for writ of mandate brought by public employees association compelling city to refrain from reducing or eliminating retirement medical and dental benefits unless offsetting benefits were provided, when city and collective bargaining units simply agreed to meet and confer regarding retiree benefits, but did not agree to eliminate or modify those benefits. San Bernardino Public Employees Assn. v. City of Fontana (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 1215, 1226-1227, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 634

California courts are not empowered to render advisory opinions to satisfy curiosity of parties motivated by reasons ulterior to resolution of an actual dispute. Nowlin v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 1529, 1539, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 409

[2] Appellate Jurisdiction

Under Cal. Const., art. VI, § 12 and Cal. Rules of Ct, Rules 29.2 and 29.4(b) [now see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 8.500 and 8.528(c)], Supreme Court may decide one or more issues and transfer cause to court of appeal for decision of any remaining issues; when, however, court of appeal, in its discretion, has transferred to itself case from appellate department of superior court to secure uniformity of decision or to settle important questions of law, under Code Civ. Proc. § 911 and former Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 62, 63 and 68 (now see 8.1002, 8.1005 and 8.1016) court of appeal is not authorized to decide selected issues that are not dispositive of appeal; rather, court of appeal must decide issues necessary to resolution of appeal and thereafter transmit remittitur to the superior court; Code Civ. Proc. § 911, however, does not appear to preclude Judicial Council from revising current rules of court to allow such limited review and remand procedure. Snukal v. Flightways Manufacturing, Inc. (2000) 23 Cal. 4th 754, 758, 761-762, 766, 772-776, 787, 98 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1, 3 P.3d 286

A court's lack of subject matter jurisdiction is never waived and can be raised for the first time on appeal. Miranda v. 21st Century Ins. Co. (2004) 117 Cal. App. 4th 913, 920, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 159 ; Parrott v. Mooring Townhomes Assn., Inc. (2003) 112 Cal. App. 4th 873, 875, 6 Cal. Rptr. 3d 116

Appellate jurisdiction is solely within province of Legislature, since right to appeal is not conferred by California Constitution but by statute; court of appeal lacks power to bestow jurisdiction on itself, nor may parties create jurisdiction by consent, waiver, or estoppel. Sy First Family Ltd. Partnership v. Cheng (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 1334, 1344-1345, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 340

Appealable judgment or order is essential to appellate jurisdiction. State Farm Fire & Casualty v. Hardin (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 501, 505, 259 Cal. Rptr. 433

Although trial court is deprived of jurisdiction over case when appeal is perfected, wholly void judgment or order is subject to being disregarded by parties and trial court and set aside by trial court on its own motion though appeal from it is pending. In re Marriage of McNaughton (1983) 145 Cal. App. 3d 845, 848, 194 Cal. Rptr. 176

Appellate court is without jurisdiction to review any decision or order from which appeal might have been but was not timely taken. League to Save Lake Tahoe v. Tahoe Regional Planning Agency (1980) 105 Cal. App. 3d 394, 399, 164 Cal. Rptr. 357

Jurisdiction is not subject to being conferred on appellate court by consent or stipulation of parties, or by estoppel or waiver. Todd v. Todd (1969) 272 Cal. App. 2d 786, 797, 78 Cal. Rptr. 131

[3] Compelling Court to Take Jurisdiction

Mandate is proper remedy to compel lower court to assume jurisdiction of matter when lower court has erroneously refused to act under mistaken view that it did not have jurisdiction. Erlich v. Superior Court (1965) 63 Cal. 2d 551, 556, 47 Cal. Rptr. 473, 407 P.2d 649 ; McMahon v. Municipal Court (1970) 6 Cal. App. 3d 194, 197, 85 Cal. Rptr. 782

Mandate is proper remedy to compel court having jurisdiction of matter to assume jurisdiction when neither it nor lower court would do so because each believed other had subject matter jurisdiction. Great-West Life Assur. Co. v. Superior Court (1969) 271 Cal. App. 2d 124, 124, 76 Cal. Rptr. 284

[4] Concurrent Jurisdiction

[a] California Courts

Under statutory procedure (Gov. Code § 17500 et seq.) for determining whether statute imposes state-mandated costs on local agency within meaning of Cal. Const., art. XIIIB, § 6, court hearing test claim has primary jurisdiction; thus, if action asserting same unfunded mandate claim is filed in any other superior court, that court, on being informed of pending test claim, should postpone proceeding before it and allow court having primary jurisdiction to determine test claim; however, court's erroneous refusal to stay further proceedings does not render those proceedings void for lack of jurisdiction; court that refuses to defer to another court's primary jurisdiction is not without jurisdiction. County of San Diego v. State of California (1997) 15 Cal. 4th 68, 81-82, 88, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 134, 931 P.2d 312

Pub. Util. Code § 1759(a) provides that only the Supreme Court and Courts of Appeal have jurisdiction to review, reverse, correct, or annul any order or decision of the Public Utilities Commission (PUC) or to suspend or delay the execution or operation thereof, or to enjoin, restrain, or interfere with the PUC in the performance of its official duties. Although Pub. Util. Code § 2106 provides that a party may bring a civil action in superior court for damages against a utility that does any act prohibited (or omits to do any act required) by law of the state, section 1759 prevails over section 2106, unless the superior court action would not interfere with or obstruct the PUC in carrying out its own policies. Anaheim v. Pacific Bell Telephone Co. (2004) 119 Cal. App. 4th 838, 844, 14 Cal. Rptr. 3d 725

The primary jurisdiction doctrine contemplates that a ruling issued by an agency is subject to judicial review. When primary jurisdiction is properly invoked, the doctrine requires that the suit be stayed until the agency resolves the issue, whereupon the lawsuit resumes if the agency's resolution (assuming it survives review by whatever court has jurisdiction to review the agency's decisions) has not resolved the entire controversy. Wise v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 725, 741, 34 Cal. Rptr. 3d 222

Public Utilities Commission does not have exclusive jurisdiction over a case involving deception (defendants' alleged intentional or negligent misrepresentation about the true nature of their telephone equipment rental charges). This is not a topic about which the Commission would have more expertise than the trial court, or even as much expertise. Actions based on alleged deceit are not known to be within the technical expertise of the Commission. Cundiff v. GTE California Inc. (2002) 101 Cal. App. 4th 1395, 1412-1413

When two state courts have concurrent jurisdiction over same parties and subject matter, tribunal that first acquires jurisdiction of parties is entitled to retain it exclusively, and other court as required ordinarily to abate its proceedings on demand. Mission Imports, Inc. v. Superior Court (1982) 31 Cal. 3d 921, 926 n.3, 184 Cal. Rptr. 296, 647 P.2d 1075 ; In re Hanley (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 1109, 1115, 245 Cal. Rptr. 441 , overruled to extent inconsistent with Leadford v. Leadford (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 571, 575

Where two or more courts have concurrent subject matter jurisdiction over case, whichever court first asserts jurisdiction does so to exclusion of all other courts. Franklin & Franklin v. 7- Eleven Owners for Fair Franchising (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 1168, 1175, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 770

Rule of exclusive concurrent jurisdiction must be raised by request for affirmative relief by demurrer or answer or by motion to dismiss, stay, or transfer; second court retains jurisdiction to act until appropriate pleading is filed. People ex rel. Garamendi v. American Autoplan, Inc. (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 760, 774, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 192

Superior court and administrative board possess concurrent jurisdiction to determine jurisdiction, but first-filed superior court action takes priority; jurisdiction, once determined, will be exclusive, not concurrent. Aetna Casualty & Surety Co. v. Aceves (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 544, 552-554, 284 Cal. Rptr. 477

Abatement of action under rule of exclusive concurrent jurisdiction distinguished from abatement on statutory ground of another action pending between same parties on same cause (Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(c)); requirements for applicability of rule. Plant Insulation Co. v. Fibreboard Corp. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 781, 786-789, 274 Cal. Rptr. 147

In applying rule that first court which acquires jurisdiction of parties is entitled to retain it exclusively, tribunal where process is served first as tribunal having priority, regardless of which action was filed first. In re Hanley (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 1109, 1116, 245 Cal. Rptr. 441 , overruled to extent inconsistent with Leadford v. Leadford (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 571, 575

Between superior courts of different counties, having coequal jurisdiction over a matter, first court of equal dignity to assume and exercise jurisdiction over matter acquires exclusive jurisdiction. Ford v. Superior Court (1986) 188 Cal. App. 3d 737, 742, 233 Cal. Rptr. 607

When two or more California tribunals have concurrent jurisdiction over same parties and subject matter, tribunal of case in which process is served first has priority, regardless of which action was filed first; if other tribunal refuses to abate its proceedings on demand, remedy is by writ of prohibition. Mungia v. Superior Court (1964) 225 Cal. App. 2d 280, 283, 37 Cal. Rptr. 285

[b] Courts of Two or More States

The first filed rule in California means that when two courts of the same sovereignty have concurrent jurisdiction, the first to assume jurisdiction over a particular subject matter of a particular controversy takes it exclusively, and the second court should not thereafter assert control over that subject matter; however, the first filed rule "was never meant to apply where the two courts involved are not courts of the same sovereignty ... . Restraining a party from pursuing an action in a court of foreign jurisdiction involves delicate questions of comity and therefore requires that such action be taken only with care and great restraint." Advanced Bionics Corp. v. Medtronic, Inc. (2002) 29 Cal. 4th 697, 707, 128 Cal. Rptr. 2d 172

It has long been the rule in California that an intangible, unlike real or tangible personal property, has no physical characteristics that would serve as a basis for assigning it to a particular locality. The location assigned to it depends on what action is to be taken with reference to it. When the issue involves jurisdiction to compel an obligor to pay one claimant and not a competing claimant, the debt or claim is usually regarded as having a situs in any state in which personal jurisdiction of the debtor can be obtained. Pacific Decision Sciences Corp. v. Superior Court of Orange County (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 1100, 1108, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 104

Rule in California as being that when two courts have concurrent jurisdiction over same parties and subject matter, tribunal which first acquires jurisdiction is entitled to retain it exclusively, and other court, as ordinarily required to abate its proceedings on demand; in applying this rule, it is tribunal where process is served first that has priority, regardless of which action was filed first. In re Hanley (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 1109, 1115-1116, 245 Cal. Rptr. 441 (finding State of Washington had same rule and holding that Washington court first obtained jurisdiction and right to proceed with divorce proceeding initiated by wife to exclusion of California court where wife first completed service of her complaint on husband in Washington proceeding, despite fact that husband's complaint was filed first in California), overruled to extent inconsistent with Leadford v. Leadford (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 571, 575

Judgment rendered in a state of the United States is not recognized or enforced in sister states if an inconsistent, but valid, judgment is subsequently rendered in another action between parties and if earlier judgment is superseded by later judgment under local law of state where latter judgment was rendered; moreover, when in two actions inconsistent final judgments are rendered, it is later, not earlier, judgment that is accorded conclusive effect in third action under rules of res judicata; this is case even when court which rendered later judgment denied full faith and credit to first judgment or made other errors of fact or law. In re Hanley (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 1109, 1117-1118, 245 Cal. Rptr. 441 , overruled to extent inconsistent with Leadford v. Leadford (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 571, 575

[c] State and Federal Courts

State courts may assume subject matter jurisdiction over federal cause of action absent provision by U.S. Congress to contrary or disabling incompatibility between federal claim and state court adjudication. Gulf Offshore Co.v. Mobil Oil Corp. (1981) 453 U.S. 473, 477-478, 101 S. Ct. 2870, 69 L. Ed. 2d 784

Federal district court erred in remanding to state court when forum selection clause referring to California courts in Orange County was permissive, not mandatory. Hunt Wesson Foods, Inc. v. Supreme Oil Co. (9th Cir. 1987) 817 F. 2d 75, 77-78

Presumption of concurrent jurisdiction between federal courts and state courts arises when jurisdictional provision in question is silent as to jurisdiction of state courts. Kingston Constructors, Inc. v. Washington Metropolitan Area Transit Authority (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 939, 943-949, 928 P.2d 581

Federal supremacy principles prohibit state courts of general jurisdiction from refusing to entertain suits under the Federal Employers' Liability Act (FELA) [45 U.S.C.S. § 51 et seq.], which is incorporated by reference into the Jones Act [46 U.S.C.S. App. § 688 et seq.], solely because suit is brought under federal law or because enforcement of the federal right of action is deemed contrary to state policy or apt to cause inconvenience and confusion because of differing state and federal standards. Thus, states must entertain suits timely filed under the Jones Act despite state limitation statutes that might otherwise bar suit. Donaldson v. National Marine (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 503, 510, 25 Cal. Rptr. 3d 584, 107 P.3d 254

Where a legal malpractice action presents substantial issues of federal patent law in the elements of causation and damages, the matter should have been adjudicated in federal court. Landmark Screens, LLC v. Morgan, Lewis & Bockius, LLP (2010) 183 Cal. App. 4th 238, 248, 107 Cal. Rptr. 3d 373

Where a matter has a core proceeding in bankruptcy law, the bankruptcy court has subject matter jurisdiction over it. Bankruptcy judges may hear and determine all cases under Title 11 and all core proceedings arising under Title 11, or arising in a case under Title 11, including matters concerning the administration of the estate and other proceedings affecting the liquidation of the assets of the estate or the adjustment of the debtor-creditor or the equity security holder relationship, except personal injury tort or wrongful death claims. However, these provisions do not require the preemption of a subsequent malicious prosecution action based on an underlying fraud action, which was filed outside of bankruptcy and was not based in federal law. State court jurisdiction over the malicious prosecution case that is founded upon the unsuccessful fraud allegations will not improperly accomplish the adjustment of rights and duties within the bankruptcy process itself, which is uniquely and exclusively federal, nor will it interfere with uniformity of application of bankruptcy law. Satten v. Webb (2002) 99 Cal. App. 4th 365, 384-387, 121 Cal. Rptr. 2d 234 .

State courts have inherent authority to adjudicate federal claims unless federal government expressly divests state courts of their concurrent jurisdiction; thus, claims under the Death on the High Seas Act (DOHSA), 46 Appen. U.S.C. § 761 et seq., may be litigated in state court. Garofalo v. Princess Cruises, Inc. (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 1060, 1080, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 754

State courts have concurrent jurisdiction over actions under Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act (RICO), 18 U.S.C. § 1961 et seq. Cianci v. Superior Court (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 903, 908, 221 Cal. Rptr. 575, 710 P.2d

375 ; Gervase v. Superior Court (1995) 31 Cal. App. 4th 1218, 1228, 37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 875

State courts have inherent authority, and are presumptively competent, to adjudicate claims arising under laws of United States; to give federal courts exclusive jurisdiction over federal cause of action, Congress must, in exercising its powers under Supremacy Clause, affirmatively divest state courts of their presumptively concurrent jurisdiction. Bunnell v. Department of Corrections (1998) 64 Cal. App. 4th 1360, 1367, 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 58

Action brought under Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery, and Enforcement Act of 1989, 12 U.S.C. § 1811 et seq., did not deprive state courts of jurisdiction over lawsuits filed prior to appointment of Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation as receiver. Robbins v. Foothill Nissan (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 1769, 1780-1783, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 190

Rule of prior exclusive jurisdiction is merely discretionary when applied to potential conflict between state and federal courts. Sumitomo Bank v. Davis (1992) 4 Cal. App. 4th 1306, 1312, 6 Cal. Rptr. 2d 381

Even where Congress has not completely displaced state regulation in specific area, state law is nullified to extent it actually conflicts with federal law; conflict arises when compliance with both federal and state regulations is physical impossibility or state law stands as obstacle to accomplishment and execution of full purposes and objectives of Congress; action by former cashier of chartered national bank with fewer than 20 employees against bank and its officers for age discrimination under Gov. Code § 12941(a) (since repealed) and violation of employment covenants under California law were preempted by National Bank Act provision (12 U.S.C. § 24 para. 5) granting bank power to dismiss cashier at pleasure. Aalgaard v. Merchants Nat. Bank, Inc. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 674, 677, 686-695, 274 Cal. Rptr. 81

Concurrent jurisdiction of California courts over maritime torts. Fahey v. Gledhill (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 884, 887, 191 Cal. Rptr. 639, 663 P.2d 197 ; Dugas v. C. Brewer Co. (1985) 165 Cal. App. 3d 203, 208, 211 Cal. Rptr. 573

Rule that when two or more tribunals have concurrent jurisdiction, tribunal first asserting jurisdiction retains it to exclusion of all others applies if tribunals are in same state but not when jurisdiction is taken by state and federal courts, in which case, first judgment rendered has res judicata effect in other court. Fowler v. Ross (1983) 142 Cal. App. 3d 472, 476-477, 191 Cal. Rptr. 183

Rule is well established that state court has concurrent jurisdiction to enforce right created by federal law unless law excludes concurrent jurisdiction or is incompatible with such jurisdiction. S. P. Growers Asso. v. Rodriguez (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 719, 726, 131 Cal. Rptr. 761, 552 P.2d 721

California courts lack jurisdiction over subject of cause of action when jurisdiction is vested by federal law exclusively in federal court or agency. Cairl v. Boeing Co. (1974) 39 Cal. App. 3d 137, 139-140, 113 Cal. Rptr. 925 (involving action under Federal Death on the High Seas Act (46 U.S.C. §§ 761-767)); Gordon v. Reynolds (1960) 187 Cal. App. 2d 472, 477-478, 10 Cal. Rptr. 73

[d] Action Pending in a Foreign Country

As to the pendency of a dispute in the courts of another nation, the controlling rule of law is as follows: The pendency of the action in a foreign country is not a bar to the institution of another action between the same parties and for the same cause of action in the courts of California, nor is it the duty of the Superior Court to stay an action pending the determination of an earlier suit in a foreign country, even if the entire controversy might there be disposed of. However, a California judge has discretion to stay a trial in this state's court pending the outcome of a foreign action. Dial 800 v. Fesbinder (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 32, 53, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 711

[5] Conflict and Choice of Laws

When a bargained-for choice of law provision has been included in a contract, the analytical analysis is governed by the Restatement Second of Conflict of Laws, section 187. Such an analysis requires the court first to determine either: (1) whether the chosen state has a substantial relationship to the parties or their transaction or (2) whether there is any other reasonable basis for the parties' choice of law. If neither of these tests is met, that is the end of the inquiry, and the court need not enforce the parties' choice of law. If, however, either test is met, the court must next determine whether the chosen state's law is contrary to a fundamental policy of California. If there is no such conflict, the court shall enforce the parties' choice of law. If, however, there is a fundamental conflict with California law, the court must then determine whether California has a materially greater interest than the chosen state in the determination of the particular issue. ABF Capital Corp. v. Grove Properties Co. (2005) 126 Cal. App. 4th 204, 216, 23 Cal. Rptr. 3d 803

Choice of law questions in California are determined by "governmental interest analysis," which requires that forum court search to find proper law to apply based on interests of litigants and involved states; first step of analysis is to examine laws of states involved; "true conflict" of laws arises only if both states have an interest in having their own law applied. Denham v. Farmers Ins. Co. (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 1061, 1065-1066, 262 Cal. Rptr. 146

[6] Constitutionality of Subject Matter Classification of Courts

Neither equal protection clause of U.S. Const., amend. XIV nor those provisions of state Constitution which embody principle of equality before law as proscribing legislative classification of court system. Whittaker v. Superior Court (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 357, 368, 66 Cal. Rptr. 710, 438 P.2d 358

Legislative classification as to treatment and procedure within state judicial system according to factors such as geographical area, population, or other relevant considerations as not denying equal protection of laws unless such classification is shown to be palpably arbitrary and without a sound basis in reason. Whittaker v. Superior Court (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 357, 370, 66 Cal. Rptr. 710, 438 P.2d 358

The First Amendment, U.S. Const. amend. I, severely circumscribes the role that civil courts may play in resolving church property disputes. However, not every civil court decision as to property claimed by a religious organization jeopardizes values protected by the First Amendment. Civil courts do not inhibit free exercise of religion merely by opening their doors to disputes involving church property. Neutral principles of law, developed for use in all property disputes, can be applied without establishing churches to which property is awarded. However, First Amendment values are plainly jeopardized when church property litigation is made to turn on the resolution by civil courts of controversies over religious doctrine and practice. The First Amendment enjoins the employment of organs of government for essentially religious purposes and commands civil courts to decide church property disputes without resolving underlying controversies over religious doctrine. Singh v. Singh (2004) 114 Cal. App. 4th 1264, 1278-1279, 9 Cal. Rptr. 3d 4

[7] Excess of Jurisdiction

Trial court as acting in excess of jurisdiction when on mistrial of divorce case it assigns case by stipulation of counsel over express objection of plaintiff to another judge for decision on basis of record previously made. Linsk v. Linsk (1969) 70 Cal. 2d 272, 275, 74 Cal. Rptr. 544, 449 P.2d 760

Term "lack of jurisdiction," for purposes of determining right to review by certiorari or restraint by prohibition, as also applied to case where, although court has jurisdiction over subject matter and parties in fundamental sense, it has no jurisdiction or power to act except in particular manner, or to give certain kinds of relief, or to act without occurrence of certain procedural prerequisites, that is, to situations in which court acts in excess of its jurisdiction. Abelleira v. District Court of Appeal (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 280, 289, 291, 109 P.2d 942

Speaking generally, any acts which exceed defined power of a court in any instance, whether that power be defined by constitutional provision, express statutory declaration, or rules developed by courts and followed under doctrine of stare decisis, as in excess of jurisdiction, insofar as that term is used to indicate that those acts may be restrained by prohibition or annulled on certiorari. Abelleira v. District Court of Appeal (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 280, 291, 109 P.2d 942

Trial court's failure to comply with Penal Code § 1306 by prematurely entering summary judgment did not deprive it of jurisdiction over the subject matter of the bail bond forfeiture or personal jurisdiction over the surety, and thus the premature entry of summary judgment was voidable, not void. People v. American Contractors Indemnity Co. (2004) 33 Cal. 4th 653, 662, 16 Cal. Rptr. 3d 76, 93 P.3d 1020

Parties may not expand a court's jurisdiction by contract to include a review of an arbitration award on the merits Crowell v. Downey Community Hospital Foundation (2002) 95 Cal. App. 4th 730, 739, 115 Cal. Rptr. 2d 810

Generally, any acts that exceed defined power of court in any instance, whether that power be defined by constitutional provision, express statutory declaration, or rules developed by courts and followed under doctrine of stare decisis, are in excess of jurisdiction; when court has jurisdiction of subject, party who seeks or consents to act beyond court's power as defined by statute or decisional rule may be estopped to complain of ensuing action in excess of jurisdiction; thus, litigant who has stipulated or otherwise consented to procedure in excess of jurisdiction may be estopped to question it. People v. National Automobile & Casualty Ins. Co. (2000) 82 Cal. App. 4th 120, 125-126, 97 Cal. Rptr. 2d 858

While not uncommon for cases to state that act in excess of court's jurisdiction is void, only acts in excess of subject matter jurisdiction are void; acts in excess of other kinds of jurisdiction are merely voidable; doctrine of waiver and estoppel apply only to voidable acts, i.e., to acts in excess of jurisdiction (when the court has subject matter jurisdiction). Jovine v. FHP, Inc. (1998) 64 Cal. App. 4th 1506, 1527 n.26, 1531-1532, 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 322 ; but see Ruisi v. Thieriot (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 1197, 1208, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 766 (contrary to Jovine holding, invalid reference constitutes jurisdictional error that cannot be waived)

Unlike some other jurisdictional defects, a party may, by its conduct, be estopped from contesting action in excess of jurisdiction; lien claimants estopped from challenging procedure by which their claims were adjudicated because they stipulated to that procedure and expressly asked court to adjudicate their claims. Lovett v. Carrasco (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 48, 54-55, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 496

When defendant was charged, detained, and sentenced in juvenile court before determination was made that defendant was over 18, because crimes charged were within jurisdiction of superior court, they were within juvenile court's fundamental jurisdiction, but court's acts were in excess of jurisdiction; judgment is void rather than voidable only if trial court lacked subject matter jurisdiction; since juvenile court's judgment was in excess of jurisdiction, judgment was only voidable and not void; consequently, court lost jurisdiction over its own judgment after notice of appeal filed; trial court loses jurisdiction to vacate its own judgment once party files notice of appeal unless judgment is void; trial court may also enter orders that only determine ancillary or collateral matters. People v. Malveaux (1997) 50 Cal. App. 4th 1425, 1434, 1439, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 371

Trial judge who revoked defendant's probation after probation violation matter had been duly assigned to another judge in accordance with local court rules acted in excess of jurisdiction; superior court is but one tribunal even if composed of different departments and order made in one department during progress of cause can neither be ignored nor overlooked in another department; first department to assume jurisdiction over matter acquires exclusive jurisdiction and judgment rendered in one department is binding on that matter on all other departments until such time as judgment is overturned. People v. Madrigal (1995) 37 Cal. App. 4th 791, 43 Cal. Rptr. 2d 498

Where statute requires court to exercise its jurisdiction in particular manner, follow particular procedure, or subject to certain limitations, act beyond those limits as in excess of jurisdiction and void. Burtnett v. King (1949) 33 Cal. 2d 805, 807, 205 P.2d 657 ; Vershbow v. Reiner (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 879, 883, 282 Cal. Rptr. 684

Even though court has subject matter jurisdiction and jurisdiction over parties, its actions may be in excess of its jurisdiction. In re Marriage of Mansell (1989) 217 Cal. App. 3d 219, 229, 265 Cal. Rptr. 227

Court exceeds its jurisdiction in making order not authorized by statute under which order was purportedly rendered. Shane v. Superior Court (1984) 160 Cal. App. 3d 1237, 1248, 207 Cal. Rptr. 210

Judgment of court which exceeds its jurisdiction by granting relief which it has no power to grant is void. County of Ventura v. Tillett (1982) 133 Cal. App. 3d 105, 110, 183 Cal. Rptr. 741 , cert. denied, 460 U.S. 1051 (1983) (disapproved on another point in County of Los Angeles v. Soto (1984) 35 Cal. 3d 483, 492 n.4, 198 Cal. Rptr. 779, 674 P.2d 750)

[8] Exhaustion of Remedies

Trucking company participating in the California Automobile Assigned Risk Plan (CAARP), a statutorily created program governed by the Insurance Commissioner designed to make automobile liability insurance available to those unable to obtain insurance through ordinary methods, is not required to exhaust the administrative remedies available to those participating in the CAARP before bringing a lawsuit in which the central issues was the determination of the proper premium to be charged, a matter governed by the CAARP's and the Insurance Commissioner's internal regulations. However, the doctrine of primary jurisdiction required the trial court to stay proceedings and refer the premium billing dispute to the Department of Insurance and the Insurance Commissioner. Neil & Associates v. Jones (2004) 33 Cal. 4th 917, 930, 16 Cal. Rptr. 3d 849, 94 P.3d 1055

Unless party to quasi-judicial proceedings agency's adverse findings made in that proceeding, by means of mandate action in superior court, those findings are binding in later civil actions; this requirement of judicial remedies is to be distinguished from requirement of exhaustion of administrative remedies; exhaustion of administrative remedies is jurisdictional prerequisite to resort to courts; exhaustion of judicial remedies, on other hand, is necessary to avoid giving binding effect to administrative agency's decision, because that decision has achieved finality due to aggrieved party's failure to pursue the exclusive judicial remedy for reviewing administrative action. Johnson v. City of Loma Linda (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 61, 70-71, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 316

Ordinarily, counties seeking to pursue unfunded mandate claim under Cal. Const., art. XIIIB, § 6 must exhaust their administrative remedies; however, counties may pursue § 6 claims in superior court without first resorting to administrative remedies if they can establish an exception to exhaustion requirement; futility exception applies if county can state with assurance that Commission would rule adversely in its own particular case; county's failure to submit test claim to Commission before seeking judicial relief held not to affect superior court's jurisdiction. County of San Diego v. State of California (1997) 15 Cal. 4th 68, 89-90, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 134, 931 P.2d 312 (applying futility exception)

Exhaustion of administrative remedies as jurisdictional prerequisite to resort to courts. Abelleira v. District Court of Appeal (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 280, 293, 109 P.2d 942

Plaintiff's failure to pursue the remedy of administrative mandamus when challenging the decision of a Stanford University judicial panel following a formal hearing serves is a valid basis for demurrer under the doctrine of exhaustion of judicial remedies. Administrative mandamus is not limited to public agencies; rather it applies to private organizations that provide for a formal evidentiary hearing. Gupta v. Stanford Univ. (2004) 124 Cal. App. 4th 407, 411, 21 Cal. Rptr. 3d 192

Failure by the Department of Fair Employment and Housing to issue a right-to-sue notice after one year does not preclude a determination that employee has exhausted her administrative remedies. Grant v. Comp USA, Inc. (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 637, 135 Cal. Rptr. 2d 177

Requirement of exhaustion of administrative remedy is jurisdictional prerequisite, not matter of judicial discretion; exhaustion doctrine operates as defense to litigation commenced by persons who have been aggrieved by action taken in administrative proceeding which has in fact occurred but who failed to exhaust remedy available to them in course of proceeding itself; failure to raise issue in administrative appeal after raising issue in first public or administrative hearing constitutes failure to exhaust administrative remedies and prevents issue from being raised in subsequent judicial action; requirement of standing, i.e., that plaintiff is a person entitled to judicial relief, is sometimes confused with entirely separate issue of exhaustion of administrative remedies; person lacking standing may not bring action even if available administrative remedy was otherwise pursued. Tahoe Vista Concerned Citizens v. County of Placer (2000) 81 Cal. App. 4th 577, 589-592, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 880

When statute provides administrative remedy, relief must be sought from administrative body and that remedy exhausted before courts will act; state employees may pursue claims of employment discrimination with either State Personnel Board or Department of Fair Employment and Housing (DFEH); thus, plaintiff exhausted administrative remedies when plaintiff filed complaint with DFEH and DFEH sent right to sue letter to plaintiff before plaintiff filed suit. Ruiz v. Department of Corrections (2000) 77 Cal. App. 4th 891, 899-900, 92 Cal. Rptr. 2d 139

[9] Indian Tribes

28 U.S.C. § 1360(b) precludes states from asserting jurisdiction over disputes concerning Indian land, including disputes in which one party claims property is non-Indian; threshold question is whether one possible outcome of litigation is determination that disputed property is in fact Indian trust land; if that outcome is possible, then state court is barred from assuming jurisdiction and must dismiss case for want of subject matter jurisdiction. Boisclair v. Superior Court (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 1140, 1146-1147, 1152-1153, 1156, 276 Cal. Rptr. 62, 801 P.2d 305

Tribal officials who commit or conspire to commit tortious acts primary situs of which is outside Indian territorial boundaries act beyond their sovereign authority and are not protected by sovereign immunity. Boisclair v. Superior Court (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 1140, 1158, 276 Cal. Rptr. 62, 801 P.2d 305

Although entering into a gaming compact with the State of California meant that defendant Indian Tribe waived its sovereign immunity to certain negligence claims against it, such waiver did not constitute a consent to suit in state court on negligence claims against it; instead, the tribal court was the exclusive forum for the resolution of such claims. Lawrence v. Barona Valley Ranch Resort and Casino (2007) 153 Cal. App. 4th 1364, 1370-71, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 23

Public Law 280 [28 U.S.C.S. § 1360] cannot be viewed as a general grant of jurisdiction to state courts to determine intratribal disputes. Where a tribe has provided for an internal appeal of crucial decisions, there is no need for state courts to act as a tribal court. Lamere v. Superior Court (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 1059, 1064, 1066, 31 Cal. Rptr. 3d 880

28 U.S.C. § 1360 does not confer on California jurisdiction over disputes between tribal members and tribes. Ackerman v. Edwards (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 946, 954, 17 Cal. Rptr. 3d 517

Native American tribes are immune to suit unless there has been an effective waiver or consent. People ex rel. Dept.

of Transportation v. Naegele Outdoor Advertising Co. (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 509, 519, 213 Cal. Rptr. 247, 698 P.2d 150 , cert. denied, 475 U.S. 1045 (1986) ; Hydrothermal Energy Corp. v. Fort Bidwell Indian Community Council (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 489, 494, 216 Cal. Rptr. 59

Sovereign immunity is not a discretionary doctrine that may be applied as a remedy depending on the equities of a given situation; rather, it presents a pure jurisdictional question. In determining whether sovereign immunity extends to a tort case against a separate business entity organized by an Indian tribe, as opposed to immunity from a tort claim against the tribe itself, the court applies a three-part test setting forth the relevant criteria to address the immunity issue, including these considerations: (1) whether the business entity is organized for a purpose that is governmental in nature, rather than commercial; (2) whether the tribe and the business entity are closely linked in governing structure and other characteristics; and (3) whether federal policies intended to promote Indian tribal autonomy are furthered by the extension of immunity to the business entity. Warburton/Buttner v. Superior Court (2002) 103 Cal. App. 4th 1170, 127 Cal. Rptr. 2d 706 , citing Trudgeon v. Fantasy Springs Casino (1999) 71 Cal.App. 4th 632, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 65

Congressional authorization and tribal consent are separate and independent bases for jurisdiction. If a tribe elects to waive sovereign immunity and submit itself to state court jurisdiction, nothing in the language of 28 U.S.C. § 1360 stands as a bar to assumption of that jurisdiction. Friends of East Willits Valley v. County of Mendocino (2002) 101 Cal. App. 4th 191, 203, 123 Cal. Rptr. 2d 708

Agreeing to an arbitration clause, and to enforcement of an arbitration award in any court having jurisdiction thereof, constitutes an explicit waiver by a tribe of its sovereign immunity from suit. Smith v. Hoplandband of Pomo Indians (2002) 95 Cal. App. 4th 1, 115 Cal. Rptr. 2d 455 (relying on C & L Enterprises v. Potawatomi Indian Tribe (2001) 532 U.S. 411, 121 S. Ct. 1589, 149 L. Ed. 2d 623 , in which the U.S. Supreme Court resolved the split of authority that had emerged in the state and federal courts on the question whether, by agreeing to an arbitration clause, and to enforcement of an arbitral award, in any court having jurisdiction thereof, a tribe has waived its sovereign immunity from suit)

Indian tribes long recognized to possess common-law immunity from suit traditionally enjoyed by sovereign powers; tribal immunity generally does not immunize individual members of tribe, but has been extended to "tribal officials" acting "in their official capacity and within their scope of authority"; to qualify as "tribal officials" for immunity purposes, defendants must show that they performed discretionary or policymaking functions within or on behalf of tribe, so that exposing them to liability would undermine immunity of tribe itself; defendants must also satisfy second requirement for tribal official immunity, i.e., that official must have acted within scope of his or her authority; defendants, as law enforcement officers of Indian tribe held not protected by tribe's sovereign immunity against liability for allegedly assaulting and improperly detaining plaintiffs; only evidence as to defendants' official duties established no more than fact defendants performed ordinary law enforcement duties; no facts were presented to show defendants performed discretionary or policymaking functions within or on behalf of tribe; moreover, defendants produced no evidence as to scope of their authority as tribal law enforcement officers. Turner v. Martire (2000) 82 Cal. App. 4th 1042, 1044, 1046, 1054-1055, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 587

Substantial number of opinions discussing sovereign immunity in context of Indian affairs generally presume a to a state's authority to act involves a to that court's subject matter jurisdiction; in holding that tribe did not waive its sovereign immunity for purpose of suit and individual defendants were similarly immune, court noted that Indian tribes long recognized as possessing common-law immunity from suit traditionally enjoyed by sovereign powers; this aspect of tribal sovereignty, like all others, is subject to superior and plenary control of Congress; but without congressional authorization, Indian Nations are exempt from suit; waiver of immunity cannot be implied, but must be unequivocally expressed; tribal officials are not necessarily immune from suit; when tribal officials act beyond their authority they lose their right to sovereign's immunity; on other hand, sovereign immunity does extend to tribal officials when they act in their official capacity and within scope of their authority; sovereign immunity does not generally apply to acts of individual tribal members; tribe's sovereign immunity also covers counsel in providing legal representation, even allegedly advising, counseling and conspiring with tribe to wrongfully terminate contract, so that counsel immune from liability for those professional services; alternatively, court held federal law, the Indian Gaming Regulatory Act (25 U.S.C. § 2701 et seq.), has completely preempted field of indian gaming, thus state court had no jurisdiction over claims raised in complaint; plaintiff's action did not fall within 28 U.S.C. § 1360 as an exception to federal preemption because 28 U.S.C. § 1360 confers jurisdiction over individual Indians, not over Indian tribes or tribal entities. Great Western Casinos, Inc. v. Morongo Band of Mission Indians (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 1407, 1417-1419, 1421-1427, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 828

Tribal sovereignty over their members and their territory depends on and is subordinate only to federal government, not states; plaintiff barred from recovering gambling losses incurred at casino on Indian lands by strong California public policy against judicial resolution of claims arising out of lawful or unlawful gambling contracts or transactions; forum state may refuse to entertain lawsuit on sister state cause of action if enforcement is contrary to strong public policy of forum. Kelly v. First Astri Corp. (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 462, 466, 477, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 810 (recognizing at p. 469 n.7 that "sister state" is misnomer when used in reference to Indian lands)

In action for personal injuries, tribal immunity extended to tribal corporation formed to operate casino; three-factor analysis applied; federal government has plenary and exclusive power to deal with Indian tribes; 28 U.S.C. § 1360 confers jurisdiction only over individual Indians, not over tribes; under federal law, Indian tribes possess common-law immunity from suit traditionally enjoyed by sovereign powers; as matter of federal law, Indian tribe is subject to suit only when Congress authorized suit or tribe waived immunity; any such authorization or waiver cannot be implied and must be unequivocally expressed; tribal immunity is not subject to diminution by state; tribe's sovereign immunity extends to commercial activities and to tort claims; tribal immunity extends to individual tribal officials acting in their representative capacity and within scope of their authority; this immunity applies to officials sued in their individual capacities, but agent of immune sovereign may be held liable for act that exceeds his or her authority; if plaintiff alleges no viable claim that tribal officials acted outside their authority, immunity applies. Trudgeon v. Fantasy Springs Casino (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 632, 635-644, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 65

Either Congress or tribe may waive tribe's immunity to suit. Hydrothermal Energy Corp. v. Fort Bidwell Indian Community Council (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 489, 494-495, 216 Cal. Rptr. 59

Waiver of tribal immunity is not to be implied but must be unequivocally expressed. Hydrothermal Energy Corp. v. Fort Bidwell Indian Community Council (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 489, 496, 216 Cal. Rptr. 59

Congress has given California courts jurisdiction over civil causes of action arising in Native American tribal territory and between individual Native Americans or to which Native Americans are parties to same extent that those courts have jurisdiction over other civil causes of action (28 U.S.C. § 1360). Hydrothermal Energy Corp. v. Fort Bidwell Indian Community Council (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 489, 494, 494 n.4, 216 Cal. Rptr. 59

[10] Jurisdiction Is In Court Rather Than in Judge of Court

Jurisdiction is in the court and not in particular judge; judge who conducted trial of parties' dissolution action improperly ruled that he had retained personal jurisdiction over all further family law issues in case. In re Marriage of Regnery (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 1367, 1377, 263 Cal. Rptr. 243

[11] "Jurisdiction Defined"

Jurisdiction, in its judicial sense, as power to hear and determine causes. Mueller v. Elba Oil Co. (1942) 21 Cal. 2d 188, 206, 130 P.2d 961 ; Gray v. Hall (1928) 203 Cal. 306, 314, 265 P. 246

Concept of jurisdiction as embracing large number of ideas, some fundamental to nature of any judicial system, some derived from requirement of due process, some determined by constitutional or statutory structure of particular court, and some based on mere procedural rules. Abelleira v. District Court of Appeal (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 280, 291, 109 P.2d 942

Jurisdiction as term embracing every kind of judicial action so that every movement by court as necessarily exercise of jurisdiction. Harrington v. Superior Court (1924) 194 Cal. 185, 188, 228 P. 15

[12] Jurisdiction to Determine Jurisdiction

Trial court as having jurisdiction to make initial determination as to its own jurisdiction or lack of it. Abelleira v. District Court of Appeal (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 280, 302-303, 109 P.2d 942 ; Ziller Electronics Lab GmbH v. Superior Court (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 1222, 1228, 254 Cal. Rptr. 410

Court always has jurisdiction to determine its own jurisdiction regardless of whether question is raised by litigants. In re Corienna G. (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 73, 77, 261 Cal. Rptr. 462

[13] "Jurisdictional" Defined

Term "jurisdictional" applies to situation in which court may act only in a certain way; for example, statute requiring dismissal of action for delay in prosecution is jurisdictional in sense that court has no power to excuse delay, or to refuse to act merely because party fails to make a motion for dismissal. Gonsalves v. Bank of America (1940) 16 Cal. 2d 169, 172, 105 P.2d 118

Standing to appeal is jurisdictional, and thus to that standing is not waivable. Life v. County of Los Angeles (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 1287, 1292, 267 Cal. Rptr. 557

Jurisdictional defect is act done without occurrence of certain procedural prerequisites. Munns v. Stenman (1957) 152 Cal. App. 2d 543, 556, 314 P.2d 67

"Jurisdictional" means going to root of authority to act; involving omission of step which could not have been dispensed with. Jones v. Walker (1941) 47 Cal. App. 2d 566, 569, 118 P.2d 299

[14] Lack of Subject Matter Jurisdiction

[a] Generally

Term "lack of jurisdiction" in its fundamental sense as meaning entire absence of power to hear or determine case, an absence of authority over subject matter or parties. Abelleira v. District Court of Appeal (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 280, 288, 109 P.2d 942

A judgment void on its face--because rendered when the court lacked subject matter jurisdiction or exceeded its jurisdiction in granting relief--is subject to collateral attack at any time. Sindler v. Brennan (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 1350, 1353, 129 Cal. Rptr. 2d 888

"Lack of jurisdiction" can take different forms and have different consequences; lack of jurisdiction in most fundamental or strict sense means an entire absence of power to hear or determine case, absence of authority over subject matter or parties; but in ordinary usage phrase "lack of jurisdiction" is also applied to case where, though court has jurisdiction over subject matter and parties in fundamental sense, it has no jurisdiction or power to act except in particular manner, or to give certain kinds of relief, or to act without occurrence of certain procedural prerequisites; distinction between lack of jurisdiction over cause and act in excess of jurisdiction has significant consequences; for instance, court cannot acquire subject matter jurisdiction through consent, estoppel or waiver; by contrast, when court has jurisdiction of subject, party who seeks or consents to act beyond court's power as defined by statute or decisional rule may be estopped to complain of ensuing action in excess of jurisdiction. People v. National Automobile & Casualty Ins. Co. (2000) 82 Cal. App. 4th 120, 125-126, 97 Cal. Rptr. 2d 858

Lack of jurisdiction is entire absence of power to hear or determine case, an absence of authority over subject matter or parties; subject matter jurisdiction cannot be conferred by consent, waiver or estoppel. Buckley v. California Coastal Com. (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 178, 190, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 562

Lack of jurisdiction in most fundamental or strict sense means entire absence of power to hear or determine case, an absence of authority over subject matter or parties; however, ordinary usage of phrase "lack of jurisdiction" is not limited to fundamental situation; for purpose of determining right to dismiss action, much broader meaning is recognized; it may be applied to case where, though court has jurisdiction over subject matter and parties in the fundamental sense, court has no jurisdiction or power to act except in a particular manner, or to give certain kinds of relief. Dale v. Dale (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 1172, 1178, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 513

"Lack of jurisdiction" describes situations in which court is without authority to act; in most fundamental sense, lack of jurisdiction means entire absence of power to hear particular subject matter of case; term also relates to court's inability to render judgments against individuals who have not properly been made parties to action; even when court has jurisdiction over subject matter and parties in fundamental sense, it may have no jurisdiction or power to make orders not authorized by statute. Janzen v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1997) 61 Cal. App. 4th 109, 113, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 260

Judgment of court lacking jurisdiction over subject matter or over parties as void. County of Ventura v. Tillett (1982) 133 Cal. App. 3d 105, 110, 183 Cal. Rptr. 741 , cert. denied, 460 U.S. 1051 (1983) (disapproved on another point in County of Los Angeles v. Soto (1984) 35 Cal. 3d 483, 492 n.4, 198 Cal. Rptr. 779, 674 P.2d 750); see also Kulko v. California Superior Court (1978) 436 U.S. 84, 91, 98 S. Ct. 1690, 56 L. Ed. 2d 132 ; Hanson v. Denckla (1958) 357 U.S. 235, 250, 78 S. Ct. 1228, 2 L. Ed. 2d 1283

[b] To Enjoin Other Department of Same Court

One department of superior court has no jurisdiction to review, enjoin, restrain, or otherwise interfere with judicial act of another department of same superior court. Ford v. Superior Court (1986) 188 Cal. App. 3d 737, 742, 233 Cal. Rptr. 607

[c] To Hear Local Actions Arising Out of State

California state courts lack jurisdiction of subject matter of local action arising in another state. Ophir Silver Min. Co. v. Superior Court (1905) 147 Cal. 467, 473-477, 82 P. 70 (action for injury to, and to restrain continuing trespass on, mining property situated in Nevada)

California state courts lack subject matter jurisdiction to determine title to real property situated in another state. Ophir Silver Min. Co. v. Superior Court (1905) 147 Cal. 467, 478, 82 P. 70 ; River Farms, Inc. v. Superior Court (1967) 252 Cal. App. 2d 604, 609, 60 Cal. Rptr. 665

Rule that court of one state cannot directly affect or determine title to land in another is rule of federal constitutional magnitude. St. Sava Mission Corp. v. Serbian Eastern Orthodox Diocese (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 1354, 1365, 273 Cal. Rptr. 340

[d] Waiver and Estoppel

Subject matter jurisdiction is subject to at any time during course of action. Boisclair v. Superior Court (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 1140, 1144 n.1, 276 Cal. Rptr. 62, 801 P.2d 305 ; Long Beach Unified Sch. Dist. v. State of California (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 155, 177, 275 Cal. Rptr. 449

Question of lack of subject matter jurisdiction as permitted to be raised on appeal, since parties cannot by their consent confer jurisdiction. Emery v. Pacific Employers Ins. Co. (1937) 8 Cal. 2d 663, 665-666, 67 P.2d 1046 (disapproved on another point in Barrera v. State Farm Mut. Automobile Ins. Co. (1969) 71 Cal. 2d 659, 679, 79 Cal. Rptr. 106, 456 P.2d 674)

A court's lack of subject matter jurisdiction is never waived and can be raised for the first time on appeal. Miranda v. 21st Century Ins. Co. (2004) 117 Cal. App. 4th 913, 920, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 159 ; Parrott v. Mooring Townhomes Assn., Inc. (2003) 112 Cal. App. 4th 873, 875, 6 Cal. Rptr. 3d 116

Parties cannot confer subject matter jurisdiction on court by consent. Harrington v. Superior Court (1924) 194 Cal. 185, 188, 228 P. 15 Court cannot acquire subject matter jurisdiction through consent, estoppel or waiver. People v. National Automobile & Casualty Ins. Co. (2000) 82 Cal. App. 4th 120, 125, 97 Cal. Rptr. 2d 858

Court of appeal lacks power to bestow jurisdiction on itself, nor may parties create jurisdiction by consent, waiver, or estoppel. Sy First Family Ltd. Partnership v. Cheng (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 1334, 1345, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 340

Subject matter jurisdiction is not conferred by consent or estoppel; thus, parties to judicial proceeding are unable, either jointly or severally, to effectively stipulate or to concede that court either has or lacks jurisdiction to act in particular matter; and lack of jurisdiction renders judgment void, subject not only to reversal on appeal, but to collateral attack. People v. Nguyen (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 1612, 1619-1620, 272 Cal. Rptr. 523

Claim that trial court lacked subject matter jurisdiction is issue that may be raised for first time on appeal because claim of jurisdictional defect goes to lower court's jurisdiction in strictest, most fundamental sense. Minor v. Municipal Court (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 1541, 1547, 268 Cal. Rptr. 919

Jurisdiction over subject matter is conferred by law, and purported waiver of jurisdictional defects at beginning of trial is of no effect. People v. Leney (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 265, 268 n.2, 261 Cal. Rptr. 541

[15] Political Question

"Political question" rule relates to appropriate role of judiciary in tripartite system of government; court's function is to resolve cases and controversies before them and in process interpret and apply laws; in so doing, courts may not usurp the governmental functions of legislative or executive branches; thus, political question doctrine excludes from judicial review controversies that revolve around policy choices and value determinations constitutionally committed for resolution to legislative and executive branches; nevertheless, it is judicial function to interpret law, including constitution, and, when appropriately presented in case or controversy, to declare when legislative or executive act is beyond constitutional authority vested in those branches; lawsuit seeking adjudication of constitutionality of state budget act was justiciable. Schabarum v. California Legislature (1998) 60 Cal. App. 4th 1205, 1213-1215, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 745

[16] Prerequisites

Requirements for court to acquire jurisdiction in fundamental sense. Abelleira v. District Court of Appeal (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 280, 288, 109 P.2d 942 ; Harrington v. Superior Court of County of Placer (1924) 194 Cal. 185, 188-189, 228 P. 15

[17] Sister-State Judgments

Clause of U.S. Constitution which requires full faith and credit be given in each state to records and judicial proceedings of every other state (U.S. Const., art. IV, § 1) applies to records and proceedings of courts only so far as they have jurisdiction, and courts of one state are not required to give full faith and credit to, or regard as valid or conclusive, any judgment of a court of another state which had no jurisdiction of subject matter, or of parties, or, in proceedings in rem, of the res; accordingly, jursidiction of court rendering judgment as open to inquiry under proper averments, when questioned in court of another state. Gagnon Co., Inc. v. Nevada Desert Inn (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 448, 457, 289 P.2d 466

In determining whether to give full faith and credit to sister state judgment, with certain exceptions not relevant in case, inquiry is limited to whether court had jurisdiction over subject matter and relevant parties; if court in first state expressly litigated question of jurisdiction, its determination is res judicata and is itself protected by full faith and credit clause; if sister state court had jurisdiction over subject matter and parties, sister state judgment is entitled to full faith and credit even as to matters of law or fact erroneously decided. Bank of America v. Jennett (1999) 77 Cal. App. 4th 104, 108, 114, 118, 91 Cal. Rptr. 2d 359

Judgment not entitled to full faith and credit unless rendering court had jurisdiction to render judgment; before court bound by judgment rendered in another state, it may inquire into jurisdictional basis of foreign court's decree; however, when another state has fully and fairly litigated its jurisdiction, and has finally decided question, second state may not reexamine question. Yu v. Signet Bank/Virginia (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 1377, 1385, 1393-1394, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 304

[18] Small Claims Courts

Small claims jurisdiction applies to actions arising out of either contract or tort. Leuschen v. Small Claims Court (1923) 191 Cal. 133, 137, 215 P. 391

When case within monetary limitation of small claims court is filed as a limited civil case, former Code Civ. Proc. § 396 does not authorize superior court to transfer it to small claims court even if plaintiff agrees to waive damages in excess of $5,000 dollars; specifically noted, however, that court did not address any issues that may arise from consolidation of superior and municipal courts with regard to transfer from consolidated courts to small claims court. Rosenberg v. Superior Court (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 860, 866-869, 869 n.3, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 365

When subject matter of actions filed in small claims court was within exclusive jurisdiction of Workers' Compensation Appeals Board, small claims court was without jurisdiction to hear them. Workmen's Comp. Appeals Bd. v. Small Claims Court (1973) 35 Cal. App. 3d 643, 647, 111 Cal. Rptr. 6

[19] Standing to Sue

Contentions based on party's lack of standing to sue involve jurisdictional s and may be raised at any time in the proceeding. Common Cause v. Board of Supervisors (1989) 49 Cal. 3d 432, 438, 261 Cal. Rptr. 574, 777 P.2d 610

[20] Subject Matter Jurisdiction of Superior Courts

Entry of judgment divests a trial court of authority to rule on a motion for reconsideration. Safeco Ins. Co. v. Architectural Facades Unlimited, Inc. (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 1477, 1482, 36 Cal. Rptr. 3d 754

Under Code Civ. Proc. § 916, trial court is divested of subject matter jurisdiction over any matter embraced in or affected by an appeal from the denial of a special motion to strike under the anti-SLAPP statute during the pendency of that appeal. The effect of the appeal is to remove the subject matter of the order from the jurisdiction of the lower court. Thus, that court is without power to proceed further as to any matter embraced therein until the appeal is determined. Code Civ. Proc. § 916 necessarily renders any subsequent trial court proceedings on matters embraced in or affected by the appeal void--and not merely voidable. Varian Medical Systems, Inc. v. Delfino (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 180, 193-197, 25 Cal. Rptr. 3d 298

Code Civ. Proc. § 664.6 does not furnish subject matter jurisdiction to enforce a settlement after a judgment has been entered and become final. Walton v. Mueller (2009) 180 Cal. App. 4th 161, 172-174, 102 Cal. Rptr. 3d 605

Probate court, which is department of superior court, has jurisdiction over proceedings under Probate Code concerning administration of decedent's estate; although probate court has all powers of superior court when considering cases brought before it under Probate Code, its jurisdiction is limited in sense that it exercises only those powers over decedents' estates that are conferred on it by statute; if decedent's will makes no provision for disposition of decedent's remains, probate court has no jurisdiction over dispute regarding disposition of remains, remedy being civil action in superior court, or a petition under Health & Safety Code § 7526. Estate of Jimenez (1997) 56 Cal. App. 4th 733, 739-742, 65 Cal. Rptr. 2d 710

Superior court does not have subject matter jurisdiction over claim for injunction to restrain judicial action of another department of same superior court. Ford v. Superior Court (1986) 188 Cal. App. 3d 737, 741-742, 233 Cal. Rptr. 607

Probate jurisdiction is in superior court, with probate department of superior court exercising probate jurisdiction; however, jurisdiction and powers of probate court is wholly statutory and therefore limited. Conservatorship of Coffey (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 1431, 1439, 231 Cal. Rptr. 421

Neither jurisdictional provisions of Gov. Code § 66801 (relating to bistate Tahoe Regional Planning Compact) nor fact that adverse effects might ensue in California, was sufficient to confer subject matter jurisdiction on California courts, when property in question was located in Nevada. League to Save Lake Tahoe v. Tahoe Regional Planning Agency (1980) 105 Cal. App. 3d 394, 397-398, 164 Cal. Rptr. 357

[21] Transfer of Action to Court Having Jurisdiction

Apart from former Code Civ. Proc. § 396, court has inherent power to transfer case. Walker v. Superior Court (1991) 53 Cal. 3d 257, 267-268, 279 Cal. Rptr. 576, 807 P.2d 418

Court has no jurisdiction to hear or determine case when type of proceeding or amount in controversy is beyond jurisdiction defined for that particular court by statute or constitutional provision. Abelleira v. District Court of Appeal (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 280, 288, 109 P.2d 942

A noticed motion prior to transfer of case to another court is preferable, but not mandatory so long as plaintiff is afforded adequate notice and opportunity to be heard prior to transfer. Campisi v. Superior Court (1993) 17 Cal. App. 4th 1833, 1839-1840, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 335

When former Code Civ. Proc. § 396 applies, its provisions for transfer are mandatory, and any other orders relating to parties or pleadings is void. Schwenke v. J & P Scott, Inc. (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 71, 77, 252 Cal. Rptr. 91

Once transfer pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 396 is required, any other judicial action but transfer by original court is improper. Eveleth v. American Brass & Iron Foundry (1962) 203 Cal. App. 2d 41, 42-45, 21 Cal. Rptr. 95 ; Cal. Emp. etc. Com. v. Municipal Ct. (1944) 62 Cal. App. 2d 781, 783-786, 145 P.2d 361 ; Brady v. Kobey (1938) 27 Cal. App. 2d 505, 507-508, 81 P.2d 263

Entry of a default is not a step in acquiring jurisdiction, but an act done after jurisdiction has been acquired by court. Eveleth v. American Brass & Iron Foundry (1962) 203 Cal. App. 2d 41, 45, 21 Cal. Rptr. 95

Motion based on former Code Civ. Proc. § 396 is determined by state of pleadings at time motion is made. Apartments, Inc. v. Trott (1959) 172 Cal. App. 2d 7, 13, 342 P.2d 32

[22] Reclassification of Case

Reclassification has no effect on the fundamental jurisdiction of the court; the statutes governing reclassification strongly indicate that a matter may proceed to trial and judgment as a limited case even though it might be subject to reclassification. Pajaro Valley Water Management Agency v. McGrath (2005) 128 Cal. App. 4th 1093, 1103, 27 Cal. Rptr. 3d 741

The superior court must deny the motion to reclassify the case as limited (and thus keep the matter in the unlimited civil court) unless it appears to a legal certainty that the plaintiff's damages will necessarily be less than $25,000. This standard of "legal certainty" is not met when it appears a verdict within the unlimited court's jurisdiction is "possible." Ytuarte v. Superior Court (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 266, 277, 28 Cal. Rptr. 3d 474

The Walker test [Walker v. Superior Court (1991) 53 Cal. 3d 257, 262] continues to govern the determination of the jurisdictional amount in controversy for reclassification as a limited civil case, i.e., that the matter will "necessarily" result in a verdict below the jurisdictional amount. Stern v. Superior Court (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 223, 229-231, 129 Cal. Rptr. 2d 275

[23] Review

Where the evidence is not in dispute, a determination of subject matter jurisdiction is a legal question subject to de novo review. Dial 800 v. Fesbinder (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 32, 42, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 711 ; Warburton/Buttner v. Superior Court (2002) 103 Cal. App. 4th 1170, 1180, 127 Cal. Rptr. 2d 706

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJusticiabilityExhaustion of RemediesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionJurisdiction Over ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionJurisdiction Over ActionsConcurrent JurisdictionCivil ProcedureVenueMotions to TransferGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesWritsCommon Law WritsMandamusCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionState Court ReviewGovernmentsCourtsSmall Claims CourtsGovernmentsNative AmericansAuthority & Jurisdiction

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

28-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 324.85

§ 324.85 Law Reviews

Cohen, "Arising Under" Jurisdiction and the Copyright Laws, 44 Hastings L.J. 337 (1993)

Selvin, The Strange Case of Alienage Jurisdiction, 27 Bev. Hills B. Ass'n J. 169 (Fall 1993)

Comment, The Aftermath of Burnham v. Superior Court: A New Rule of Transient Jurisdiction? 32 Santa Clara L. Rev. 989 (1992)

Twitchell, The Myth of General Jurisdiction, 101 Harv. L. Rev. 610 (1988)

Althouse, How to Build a Separate Sphere: Federal Courts and State Power, 100 Harv. L. Rev. 1485 (1987)

Luftig, Blurring the Jurisdictional Line Between Municipal and Superior Courts, 56 Cal. St. B.J. 114 (1981)

Hazard, Requisites of a Valid Judgment, 24(3) Prac. Law. 35 (1978)

Comment, A Legal Lohengrin: Federal Jurisdiction Under the Alien Tort Claims Act of 1789, 14 U.S.F. L. Rev. 105 (1979)

Note, The Extension of County Jurisdiction Over Indian Reservations in California: Public Law 280 and the Ninth Circuit, 25 Hastings L.J. 1451 (1974)

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionJurisdiction Over ActionsGeneral OverviewCopyright LawCivil Infringement ActionsJurisdiction & VenueGeneral OverviewGovernmentsNative AmericansAuthority &

JurisdictionImmigration LawEnforcementCivil LiabilityGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

28-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 324.86

§ 324.86 Text References

Witkin, California Procedure, vol. 2, Courts, §§ 167-346; Jurisdiction, §§ 1-107, 387-400; vol. 3, Actions, §§ 71, 702, 708-709, 715, 848 (4th ed. 1996)

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionGeneral OverviewGovernmentsCourtsGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

28-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 324.87-324.89

[Reserved]

§§ 324.87[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION
PART IV. PROCEDURAL CHECKLIST

28-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 324.90

§ 324.90 Moving Party's Guide

NOTE:
The following guide is illustrative only of matters generally considered and procedures commonly followed. It is not exclusive. Any given case may require consideration of matters or utilization of procedures not discussed.

[1] Ascertain Facts

1. What relief is sought in the pleading under consideration.

2. Whether the court has jurisdiction to grant that relief.

3. If the court lacks jurisdiction, what court or tribunal, if any, does have jurisdiction.

4. If the court has jurisdiction to grant the kind of relief sought generally:

a. Whether the amount in controversy is properly classified as a limited or unlimited civil case.

b. Whether the particular basis for the relief brings it within the exclusive jurisdiction of another court or tribunal.

NOTE:
Jurisdiction may be vested by law in a federal court, or in a California reviewing court, or in an entity such as the California Workers' Compensation Appeals Board.

c. Whether the pleading seeks relief on a local action that must be tried in some other jurisdiction, for example, an action involving adjudication of title to real property situated in another state or country which may be adjudicated only in the other state or country [see Ophir Silver Min. Co. v. Superior Court (1905) 147 Cal. 467, 473-478, 82 P. 70] .

5. Whether any other action on the same cause has been filed in a court of concurrent jurisdiction, and, if so, in which action the summons was served first.

[2] Make Preliminary Determinations

1. Legal basis for lack of jurisdiction.

a. California or federal constitution or statute, of which the court must take judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 451(a)],

b. Ordinance or the records of another court, of which the court in which the action is pending may be requested to take judicial notice [see Evid. Code §§ 452(d), 453], or

c. Case law.

2. Whether the lack of jurisdiction appears from the face of the pleading filed and matters of which the court must or may take judicial notice or whether it must be shown by extrinsic evidence.

3. If the face of the pleading and judicial notice does not show the lack of jurisdiction, how the evidence to establish lack of jurisdiction will be presented. Ascertain the names, addresses, and phone numbers of all persons who can testify by affidavit, declaration, or oral examination to the facts showing the lack of jurisdiction, and determine whether they are amenable to the court's process and will be willing to testify at the hearing.

4. Whether another California state court has subject matter jurisdiction.

[3] Determine Manner of Raising Issue

1. At the beginning of the action or proceeding:

a. By demurrer, if the lack of jurisdiction appears from the face of the complaint or other pleading or from matter subject to judicial notice [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10(a), 430.30(a), 430.70; Evid. Code § 451 et seq.].

NOTE:
For discussion and a form of demurrer to a complaint for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, see Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

b. By affirmative defense in the answer, if the lack of jurisdiction does not appear from the face of the complaint or other pleading or from matters subject to judicial notice [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(b); see Evid. Code §§ 451, 452], and by a subsequent motion for separate trial of that defense [see Code Civ. Proc. § 597].

NOTE:
For forms for use in moving for separate trial of an affirmative defense, see Ch. 3, Abatement of Actions*, § 3.110 et seq.*

c. By a motion to transfer the action to a court of appeal or the Supreme Court having subject matter jurisdiction [see Code Civ. Proc. § 396(b)].

d. If no California court has subject matter jurisdiction, by a nonstatutory motion to dismiss the action for lack of jurisdiction.

2. Later in the action or proceeding, for example:

a. By a nonstatutory objection at trial to the introduction of evidence.

b. On appeal.

NOTE:

The objection that the court lacks jurisdiction of the subject matter is never waived [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.80(a)] and can be initially made at any time.

[4] Move to Transfer or Dismiss

1. Prepare Papers

a. Notice of motion [Form: see § 324.100].

b. Supporting declarations [Form: see § 324.101].

c. Written statement setting forth the nature and extent of any oral evidence proposed to be introduced and a reasonable time estimate for the hearing.

d. Memorandum

For forms of memoranda supporting a motion to transfer or dismiss an action for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, see California Points and Authorities, Ch. 133, Jurisdiction: Subject Matter Jurisdiction (Matthew Bender).

e. Proof of Service.

For forms of proof of service of papers [Code Civ. Proc. § 1013a], see Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers .

f. Proposed order, if desired [Form: see § 324.102].

2. Serve and file papers.

a. Serve a conformed copy of the notice of motion and accompanying papers on the other party's attorney, or on the other party if he or she has no attorney [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1015], at least 16 court days, plus any applicable additional period, before the hearing. The 16-day period is extended by a varying number of days depending if service is by mail, facsimile transmission, or overnight delivery [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1005(a)(13), (b), 1010; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 3.1103(a)(1), 3.1300(a); see also Code Civ. Proc. § 1010.6(a)(6) (extension in case of electronic service that may apply)]. For a more complete outline of the procedures to follow in serving a notice of motion, see Ch. 372, Motions and Orders , and Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers .

(1) Attach an unsigned copy of the proof of service to the papers to be served or:

(a) If service is to be by mail or overnight service, note the date and place of mailing or deposit with the delivery service on the papers served [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1013(b),(d)].

(b) If service is by facsimile transmission, note the date and place of transmission and the facsimile telephone number to which transmitted on the papers served [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1013(f)].

(2) Have the person who made the service sign the original and conform the remaining copies.

b. Deliver the originals of the notice of motion and accompanying papers to the court clerk's office for filing [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1302(a)] at least 16 court days, plus any applicable additional period, before the hearing [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1005(a)(13),(b), 1010.6(a)(6); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1300(a)], and pay the required fee [see Gov. Code §§ 70611 (other than in a limited civil case), 70613 (limited civil cases)]. If not filed with the original papers, deliver the proof of service of the moving papers for filing no later than five court days before the time appointed for the hearing [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 3.1100, 3.1300(c)].

c. If there is a statement regarding oral testimony, file it no later than three days before the hearing. If it is filed less than five court days before the hearing, serve a conformed copy of it on the opposing party, that is, on that party's attorney [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1015] in a manner to assure delivery to that person no later than two days before the hearing [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1306(a), (b)].

[5] Respond to Opposing Party's Declarations, Affidavits, and Memorandum

1. Prepare any reply declarations and any reply memorandum in response to any counterdeclarations and opposing memorandum filed by the opposing party.

2. Serve a conformed copy of each declaration and any reply memorandum on opposing counsel (or on the opposing party if he or she is appearing in pro per), and file the originals, at least five court days before the time appointed for the hearing [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1005(a)(13), (b), 1015; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1300(a); cf. Code Civ. Proc. § 1010.6(a)(6) (two court day extension in case of electronic service; although Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b) expressly excludes extensions under Code Civ. Proc. § 1013, it is silent as to section 1010.6)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionJurisdiction Over ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureVenueMotions to TransferGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to DismissCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeSupporting MemorandaCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsComplaintsRequirements

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329

Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION
PART IV. PROCEDURAL CHECKLIST

28-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 324.91

§ 324.91 Opposing Party's Guide

[1] Ascertain Facts

1. Review papers submitted in support of the motion to determine validity of motion. If the court does, in fact, have jurisdiction, counsel should prepare opposition papers.

2. If the objection is valid, ascertain which, if any, courts in California have jurisdiction, and, if more than one, which would be the most convenient.

[2] Make Preliminary Determinations

1. If subject matter jurisdiction is lacking, consider whether to stipulate to dismissal of the action if no California court has subject matter jurisdiction, or to transfer of the case to a California court of appeal or the Supreme Court having jurisdiction [see Code Civ. Proc. § 396(b); for discussion and forms of stipulations, see Ch. 533, Stipulations].

2. If the action is in a limited jurisdiction court and the lack of jurisdiction results from a claim that exceeds the monetary relief that the lower court can grant, and the client is willing to waive the excess, determine how this should be done. It may be accomplished by:

a. Moving to amend the complaint to expressly remit the excess, and for an order shortening time for service of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1300(b)] so that this motion will be heard at the same time as the motion to transfer or dismiss. For discussion and forms relating to amending complaints, see Ch. 21, Amended and Supplemental Pleadings . For discussion and forms relating to shortening time, see Ch. 524, Shortening and Extension of Time .

b. Obtaining opposing counsel's stipulation to amendment of the complaint to remit the excess. For discussion and forms relating to amending a complaint or entering into a stipulation, see Ch. 21, Amended and Supplemental Pleadings , and Ch. 533, Stipulations , respectively.

3. If the action is in a limited jurisdiction court and the lack of jurisdiction results from a claim that exceeds the monetary relief that the lower court can grant and the client is not willing to waive the excess amount, consider stipulating with opposing counsel that the motion be granted. If stipulating, present to the court with the stipulation, an order of transfer to another California state court or if no California court has jurisdiction, an order of dismissal.

[3] Prepare Opposition Papers

1. Counterdeclarations.

2. Written statement setting forth the nature and extent of any oral evidence proposed to be introduced and a reasonable time estimate for the hearing.

3. Memorandum

For the rules governing memoranda see Ch. 417, Points and Authorities . For forms of memoranda opposing a motion to transfer an action from a court lacking to a court having subject matter jurisdiction, see California Points and Authorities, Ch. 133, Jurisdiction: Subject Matter Jurisdiction (Matthew Bender).

4. Proof of service.

For forms of proof of service of papers [Code Civ. Proc. § 1013a], see Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers .

5. Proposed order, if desired.

For form of order denying a motion, see Ch. 372, Motions and Orders .

[4] Serve and File Papers

1. Serve a conformed copy of each of the above described papers on the other party's attorney, or on the other party if he or she has no attorney [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1015], at least 9 court days before the time appointed for the hearing [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 418.10(b), 1005(a)(13),(b); Cal. Rules of Ct. Rule 3.1300(a); cf. Code Civ. Proc. § 1010.6(a)(6) (two court day extension in case of electronic service; although Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b) expressly excludes extensions under Code Civ. Proc. § 1013, it is silent as to section 1010.6)]. Notwithstanding any other provision of § 1005, all papers opposing a motion and all reply papers shall be served by personal delivery, facsimile transmission, express mail, or other means consistent with sections §§ 1010, 1011, 1012, and 1013, and reasonably calculated to ensure delivery to the other party or parties not later than the close of the next business day after the time the opposing papers or reply papers, as applicable, are filed. This applies to the service of opposition and reply papers regarding motions for summary judgment or summary adjudication, in addition to the motions listed in § 1005(b) [Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(c)].

a. Attach an unsigned copy of the proof of service to the papers to be served or:
(1) If service is to be by mail or overnight service, note the date and place of mailing or deposit with the delivery service on the papers served [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1013(b),(d)].

(2) If service is by facsimile transmission, note the date and place of transmission and the facsimile telephone number to which transmitted on the papers served [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1013(f)].

b. Have the person who made the service sign the original and conform the remaining copies.

2. Deliver the originals of each of the above described papers to the court clerk's office for filing [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1302(a)] at least 9 court days before the time appointed for the hearing [Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1300(a); cf. Code Civ. Proc. § 1010.6(a)(6) (two court day extension in case of electronic service; although Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b) expressly excludes extensions under Code Civ. Proc. § 1013, it is silent as to section 1010.6)]. The normal practice is to file the original of the proof of service with the originals of the opposition papers, although it may be filed separately. The latest a paper may be filed to be timely is at the close of business of the clerk's office on the day the paper is due [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1300(e)].

3. If there is a statement regarding oral testimony, file it no later than three days before the hearing. If it is filed less than five court days before the hearing, serve a conformed copy of it on the opposing party, that is, on that party's attorney [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1015] in a manner to assure delivery to that person no later than two days before the hearing [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1306(a), (b)].

[5] Prehearing Procedures

If a countermotion to amend is to be made, present any order shortening time [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1300(b)] for service of any countermotion, together with the countermotion and supporting papers.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionJurisdiction Over ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureVenueMotions to TransferGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to DismissCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeOpposing MemorandaCivil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsStipulations

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION
PART IV. PROCEDURAL CHECKLIST

28-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 324.92

§ 324.92 Hearing and Ruling

[1] Attendance at Hearing

Both counsel should attend the hearing, have any witnesses testify, cross-examine witnesses for the other party, and argue the motion.

[2] Motion Granted

If counsel for the moving party has prepared a proposed order granting the motion, and it is in accord with how the judge ruled, present the original of the order to the courtroom clerk for the judge's signature. Otherwise, prepare the order after the hearing, have opposing counsel approve it as to form, and deliver the original to the judge or to the judge's courtroom clerk to deliver the original to the judge for signature. In either case, have the courtroom clerk conform the copies.

[3] Motion Denied

If the motion is denied, the entry of the order in the court's minute order may be all that is required. However, the judge may direct the prevailing party to draft a formal order. If the judge does so, counsel for the opposing party will prepare the order and present it to the judge, or to the judge's courtroom clerk, for signing, and after it is signed have the courtroom clerk conform the copies.

[4] Notice of Ruling

Unless otherwise ordered by the court, or unless waived by all parties in open court and the waiver is entered in the court's minutes, the prevailing party must [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1019.5(a)]:

1. Prepare a notice of the court's order and a proof of service; for a form of notice of order, see Ch. 372, Motions and Orders ;

2. Serve on opposing counsel; and

3. File the original of the notice and proof of service with the court.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureVenueMotions to TransferGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to DismissCivil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsMotions

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION
PART IV. PROCEDURAL CHECKLIST

28-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 324.93

§ 324.93 Dismissal for Failure to Pay Costs and Fees if Case Ordered Transferred

[1] Payment of Fees

If the court has ordered the case transferred to the proper superior court, the plaintiff must either [Code Civ. Proc. § 399(A)]:

1. Pay the fees for transfer within 30 days, or

2. Petition for review of the order by writ of mandate, and

a. If the petition stays the proceeding, pay the costs and fees within 30 days of notice of finality of the order of transfer, or

b. If the petition does not stay the proceeding, pay the costs and fees within 60 days after service of the notice of the order.

NOTE:
Other parties may pay the costs and fees, which will ultimately be recoverable from the plaintiff as costs, or if plaintiff ultimately prevails, as an offset from plaintiff's recovery [see Code Civ. Proc. § 399(A)].

[2] Motion to Dismiss for Failure to Pay

If the costs and fees of transfer are not timely paid, the defendant may move for an order dismissing the case for nonpayment of costs.

1. Prepare papers.

a. Notice of motion [Form: see § 324.103].

b. Supporting declaration [Form: see § 324.104].

c. Memorandum

d. Proposed order [Form: see § 324.105].

2. Serve and file papers [see § 324.90[4]].

3. Hearing and ruling. [see § 324.92].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureVenueMotions to TransferGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsMotions

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION
PART IV. PROCEDURAL CHECKLIST

28-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 324.94-324.99

[Reserved]

§§ 324.94[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION
PART V. FORMS

28-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 324.100

§ 324.100 Proceedings to Transfer or Dismiss Appeal or Petition on Ground Court Lacks Subject Matter Jurisdiction [Code Civ. Proc. § 396]--Notice of Motion

[1] FORM Proceedings to Transfer or Dismiss Action, Proceeding, or Case on Ground Court Lacks Subject Matter Jurisdiction [Code Civ. Proc. § 396]--Notice of Motion

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	NOTICE OF MOTION AND MOTION TO
vs.	)	_____ [TRANSFER or DISMISS]
_____ [name],	)	_____ [APPEAL or PETITION]
Defendant.	)	FOR LACK OF SUBJECT MATTER JURISDIC-)	TION[, SUPPORTING DECLARATION(S) OF
	)	_____ (name(s)),] AND SUPPORT-
	)	ING MEMORANDUM
	)	Date: _____
		Time: _____
		Location: _____
		Judge: _____
		Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

To _____ [identify party, e.g., plaintiff] _____ [name] and to his/her attorney of record:

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that on _____ [date], at _____ [time], or as soon thereafter as the matter may be heard, in [_____ (Department or Division) _____ of] this court, located at _____ [street address], _____ [city], _____ [specify party, e.g., defendant] will, and hereby does, move for an order _____ [either, if a California court of appeal or the California Supreme Court has subject matter jurisdiction, transferring this _____ (appeal or petition) from this court to the _____ Court of _____ or, if there is no California court having subject matter jurisdiction, dismissing this _____ (appeal or petition)]. The motion will be made on the ground that this court lacks jurisdiction of the subject of this _____ [appeal or petition] and that _____ [the _____ Court of _____ has such jurisdiction or there is no California court having jurisdiction of the subject matter].

The motion will be based on this notice of motion, on the [declaration(s) of _____ (name(s)) and] supporting memorandum served and filed herewith _____ [, and] on the records and file herein[, and on such evidence as may be presented at the hearing of the motion].
Dated: _____.

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for_____ [party status and name]

SUPPORTING DECLARATION OF _____ [name]

[Add supporting declaration]

SUPPORTING MEMORANDUM

[Add supporting memorandum]

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, is for use by a party to move for an order transferring the case from that court to the California court of appeal or the California Supreme Court, having subject matter jurisdiction, or, if there is no such court, dismissing the action for lack of jurisdiction. The ground for the motion is that the court in which the action or proceeding is pending lacks jurisdiction of the subject matter [see Code Civ. Proc. § 396; see also discussion in § 324.43]. The final phrase of the form relating to evidence to be presented at the hearing on the motion should be included if local rule permits evidence at the hearing or if, for some reason, the evidence is unavailable at the time of serving and filing the notice of motion and good cause can be shown for its presentation at the hearing [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1306(a), (b)].

For further discussion relating to notices of motion generally, including when appearances may be made by telephone in nonevidentiary law and motion hearings, and for a procedural guide that may be followed in making or opposing a noticed motion generally, see Ch. 372, Motions and Orders .

[3] Motion is General Appearance

The California Supreme Court has indicated that a motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, even if raised on a motion to quash along with a to personal jurisdiction, constitutes a general appearance [Greener v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 1028, 1036-1037, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 539, 863 P.2d 784] . The Court did not expressly overrule or even cite earlier Supreme Court cases that allowed a motion to dismiss to be made as a special appearance [see Boisclair v. Superior Court (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 1140, 1144 n.1, 276 Cal. Rptr. 62, 801 P.2d 305 ; Goodwine v. Superior Court (1965) 63 Cal. 2d 481, 484-485, 47 Cal. Rptr. 201, 407 P.2d 1] . Given Greener, counsel should not join a motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction with a motion to quash for lack of personal jurisdiction. Under Greener, joining the two might result in making a general appearance, which would waive the personal jurisdiction objection [see California Dental Assn. v. American Dental Assn. (1979)23 Cal. 3d 346, 351-352, 152 Cal. Rptr. 546, 590 P.2d 401] . For further discussion, see Ch. 323, Jurisdiction: Personal .

[4] Noticed Motion

In those cases in which the trial court sua sponte ordered the transfer of an action to another court, the appellate courts have emphasized that a noticed motion is the preferred proceeding. Notice is preferred to assure that litigants will have a full opportunity to resist transfer and to inform the trial court of all the matters it should consider in the sound exercise of its discretion [see Williams v. Superior Court (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 171, 179, 268 Cal. Rptr. 61 ; Williams v. Superior Court (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 378, 386, 264 Cal. Rptr. 677 ; Campbell v. Superior Court (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 147, 154 n.3, 261 Cal. Rptr. 509] .

[5] Accompanying Papers

Evidence received at a law and motion hearing must be by declaration and affidavit and by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code §§ 452-454] without testimony or cross examination, except as allowed in the court's discretion for good cause shown [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1306(a), (b) (also setting forth the procedure to follow to request permission to introduce oral evidence); see also Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1306(c) (additional requirements for invoking judicial notice in law and motion proceedings)]. Thus, the evidentiary or probative facts establishing the court's lack of subject matter jurisdiction, if they do not appear from the court's records and file, should be set forth in an affidavit [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion)] or declaration under penalty of perjury [Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5], a copy of which must be served and filed with the notice of motion [Code Civ. Proc. § 1010; see also Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b)]. For a form of supporting declaration, see § 324.101.

The motion also must be accompanied by a memorandum to be relied on, and the court may construe the absence of the memorandum as an admission that the motion is not meritorious and cause for its denial [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(a); see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1005(b), 1010]. For discussion and forms on memoranda see Ch. 417, Points and Authorities .

[6] Copies to Prepare

The notice of motion, and its accompanying papers, should be prepared in an original for filing, one copy for service on the plaintiff or plaintiff's counsel [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1015], one office copy, and any additional copies that may be required by the court.

[7] Service and Filing

The notice of motion and its supporting papers must be "served and filed" in the cause [see, e.g., Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1010, 1013a; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 3.1103, 3.1103(b), 3.1113(a)]. That is, the notice of motion filed must be accompanied by proof of prior service of a copy of the notice of motion and its supporting papers on counsel for the adverse party or on the adverse party if he or she has no attorney [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 1.21(b), 3.1103(b); see also Code Civ. Proc. § 1015]. If served by mail, facsimile transmission, or overnight delivery, the copies served should either bear a notation of the date and place of mailing, deposit, or transmission, or be accompanied by an unsigned copy of the proof of service, although this requirement is directory and not mandatory [Code Civ. Proc. § 1013(b), (d), (f), (g)]. The original of the executed proof of service, under the above-cited rules, must accompany the originals of the papers delivered to the court clerk's office for filing. For a discussion and forms of proof of service by mail, facsimile transmission, or overnight delivery, see Ch. 264, Fax Filing and Service of Papers , and Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers .

Code Civ. Proc. § 396 does not specify when the notice of motion to transfer or dismiss must be served or filed. Consequently, the motion is governed by the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(a)(13)]. Hence, unless otherwise ordered or specifically provided by law, all moving and supporting papers must be filed and copies served at least 16 court days before the hearing. However, if the notice is served by mail, the required 16-day period of notice before the time appointed for the hearing is increased by five calendar days if the place of mailing and the place of address are within California, 10 calendar days if either the place of mailing or the place of address is outside California but within the United States, and 20 calendar days if either the place of mailing or the place of address is outside the United States [Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b)]. If the notice is served by facsimile transmission, Express Mail, or another method of overnight delivery, the required 16-day period of notice before the time appointed for the hearing is increased by two calendar days [Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b); cf. Code Civ. Proc. § 1010.6(a)(6) (two court day extension in case of electronic service; although Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b) expressly excludes extensions under Code Civ. Proc. § 1013, it is silent as to section 1010.6)].

[8] Opposition and Reply Papers

All opposing papers must be filed with the court and a copy served on each party at least 9 court days, and all reply papers at least five court days, before the time appointed for hearing [Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b)].

Notwithstanding any other provision of § 1005, all papers opposing a motion and all reply papers shall be served by personal delivery, facsimile transmission, express mail, or other means consistent with sections §§ 1010, 1011, 1012, and 1013, and reasonably calculated to ensure delivery to the other party or parties not later than the close of the next business day after the time the opposing papers or reply papers, as applicable, are filed. This applies to the service of opposition and reply papers regarding motions for summary judgment or summary adjudication, in addition to the motions listed in § 1005(b) [Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(c)].

[9] Cross References

For general discussion of notices of motion, procedural guide, and general form of notice of motion, see Ch. 372, Motions and Orders

For a discussion of service of papers and a form of proof of service by mail, see Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers

For memoranda supporting a motion to transfer a case from a court lacking to a court having subject matter jurisdiction, see California Points and Authorities, Ch. 133, Jurisdiction: Subject Matter Jurisdiction

Witkin, California Procedure, vol. 2, Courts, § 287; Jurisdiction, §§ 28, 387-389 (4th ed. 1996)

55 of 150 DOCUMENTS

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION
PART V. FORMS

28-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 324.101

§ 324.101 Declaration [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009, 2015.5] in Support of Motion to Transfer or Dismiss Appeal or Petition on Ground Court Lacks Subject Matter Jurisdiction

[1] FORM Declaration [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009, 2015.5] in Support of Motion to Transfer or Dismiss Action, Proceeding, or Case on Ground Court Lacks Subject Matter Jurisdiction

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	DECLARATION OF _____
vs.	)	[name] IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO
_____ [name],	)	_____ TRANSFER
Defendant.	)	_____ or DISMISS]
	)	_____ [APPEAL or PETITION]
	)	FOR LACK OF SUBJECT MATTER JURISDIC-
	)	TION
	)	Date: _____
		Time: _____
		Location: _____
		Judge: _____
		Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

I, _____ [name], declare:

1. I am _____ [identify declarant, e.g., an attorney at law duly admitted to practice before all the courts of the State of California and the attorney of record herein for _____ (moving party) or other statement as appropriate].

2. This court lacks jurisdiction of the subject of this _____ [appeal or petition] for the following reason(s): _____ [specify, e.g., this action involves a claim for damages in excess of the monetary limit of this court or this action is to quiet title to land which, as shown by the allegations of the verified complaint on file herein, is situated in the country of Mexico].

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of California that the foregoing is true and correct.

_____ [date]

_____ [signature]

[2] Use of Form

The form of declaration in [1], above, is for use to support a motion to transfer an appeal or petition from a superior court lacking to a court of appeal or the Supreme Court having subject matter jurisdiction, or, if none exists, to dismiss the appeal or petition for lack of subject matter jurisdiction [see Code Civ. Proc. § 396; for a form of noticed motion to transfer for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, see § 324.100].

If the lack of jurisdiction clearly appears from, for example, a pleading filed in the case, it would appear that no supporting declaration would be necessary. The fact that the court lacks subject matter jurisdiction would be established by the law set forth in the memorandum accompanying the notice of motion, and the memorandum, in such event, should contain a request that the court take judicial notice of the specific pleading in question [see Evid. Code §§ 452(d), 453; see also Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1306(c)].

[3] Form and Contents

If the declaration is attached to the notice of motion, the caption to this form should be omitted and the title of the paper should be centered above the body of the form. The supporting declaration would, however, be included in the caption to the notice of motion [for form of notice of motion, see § 324.100].

The title of the paper, whether it appears in a caption or is centered above the body of the form, must state the name of the declarant and identify the motion which it supports [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1115(a)].

[4] Cross References

For a discussion and general forms of declarations supporting motions, see Ch. 372, Motions and Orders

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION
PART V. FORMS

28-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 324.102

§ 324.102 Order Granting Motion to Transfer or Dismiss Appeal or Petition on Ground Court Lacks Subject Matter Jurisdiction

[1] FORM Order Granting Motion to Transfer or Dismiss Action, Proceeding, or Case on Ground Court Lacks Subject Matter Jurisdiction

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)
Plaintiff,	)
vs.	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	ORDER
Defendant.	)
	)
	)

The motion of _____ [identify party, e.g., defendant] for an order _____ [transferring this _____ (appeal or petition) to the _____ Court of _____ or dismissing the _____ (appeal or petition)] came on regularly for hearing by the court on _____ [date]. Plaintiff appeared by counsel _____ [name], and defendant appeared by counsel _____ [name].

It appearing to the satisfaction of the court that the determination of this _____ [appeal or petition] will necessarily involve the determination of questions not within the jurisdiction of this court,

IT IS ORDERED that the motion be, and it hereby is, granted and that this _____ [appeal or petition] _____ [either be transferred to the _____ Court of _____, and that all further proceedings in this (appeal or petition) in this court be, and they hereby are, suspended or be, and it hereby is, dismissed].

[IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the _____ (identify party, e.g., plaintiff) pay to the clerk of this court the costs and fees of the transfer, and that the clerk transmit to the clerk of the _____ Court of _____ (court to which appeal or petition is ordered transferred) all pleadings and papers herein filed.]
Dated: _____.

_____ [signature]
Judge of the Superior Court

[2] Use of Form

The form of order in [1], above, is for use when the superior court grants a motion to transfer or dismiss an appeal or petition for lack of subject matter jurisdiction [see Code Civ. Proc. § 396; for a form of motion, see § 324.100].

[3] Notice of Court's Ruling

When a motion is granted or denied, unless the court otherwise orders, notice of the court's decision or order shall be given by the prevailing party to all other parties or their attorneys in the manner provided by Code Civ. Proc. § 1010-1020, unless notice is waived by all parties in open court and is entered in the minutes [Code Civ. Proc. § 1019.5(a)]. For a form of notice of the court's ruling, see Ch. 372, Motions and Orders .

[4] Cross References

For a general discussion and forms of orders, see Ch. 372, Motions and Orders

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION
PART V. FORMS

28-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 324.103

§ 324.103 Proceedings to Dismiss Appeal or Petition for Failure to Pay Costs and Fees of Transfer [Code Civ. Proc. § 399]--Notice of Motion

[1] FORM Proceedings to Dismiss Action, Proceeding, or Case for Failure to Pay Costs and Fees of Transfer [Code Civ. Proc. § 399]--Notice of Motion

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____ MOTION AND NOTICE OF MOTION
Plaintiff,	)	TO DISMISS FOR FAILURE TO PAY TRANSFER
vs.	)	COSTS AND FEES [SUPPORTING DECLARA-
_____ [name],	)	TION OF _____ (name),] AND Defendant.	)	MEMORANDUM
	)	[Code Civ. Proc. § 399]
	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
		Judge: _____
		Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

To _____ [identify party, e.g., plaintiff] _____ [name] and to his/her attorney of record:

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that on _____ [date], at _____ [time], or as soon thereafter as the matter may be heard, in [_____ (Department or Division) _____ of] this court, located at _____ [street address], _____ [city], _____ [identify party, e.g., defendant] will, and hereby does, move for an order dismissing this _____ [action or proceeding or case] pursuant to the provisions of Section 399 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The motion will be made on the ground that on _____ [date] this court ordered this _____ [appeal or petition] transferred to the _____ Court of _____, pursuant to Section 396 of the Code of Civil Procedure, on the ground that this court lacks, and the _____ Court of _____ has, subject matter jurisdiction, that _____ [pursuant to the provisions of Section 399(a), of the Code of Civil Procedure, _____ (identify party, e.g., plaintiff) was obligated to pay the costs or _____ (identify party, e.g., plaintiff) was ordered to pay the costs] of transfer and has failed to do so, and that the time within which the costs and fees may be timely paid under the provisions of Section 399 of the Code of Civil Procedure has expired.

The motion will be based on this notice of motion, on the [declaration(s) of _____ (name(s)) and the] memorandum served and filed herewith, on the records and file herein, and on such evidence as may be presented at the hearing of the motion.
Dated: _____.

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for_____ [party status and name]

SUPPORTING DECLARATION OF _____ [name]

[Add supporting declaration]

SUPPORTING MEMORANDUM

[Add supporting memorandum]

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, is for use by a party to seek dismissal of an appeal or petition on the ground that the party required by Code Civ. Proc. § 399(a), or by court order, has failed to pay the transfer costs and fees required by Code Civ. Proc. § 399 when the court, pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 396, has ordered the matter transferred from itself for lack of subject matter jurisdiction to a court having subject matter jurisdiction.

[3] Accompanying Papers

The motion must be accompanied by a memorandum to be relied on, and the court may construe the absence of the memorandum as an admission that the motion is not meritorious and cause for its denial [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(a); see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1005(b), 1010]. For discussion and forms on points and authorities, see Ch. 417, Points and Authorities .

The evidentiary or probative facts establishing the court's lack of subject matter jurisdiction, if they do not appear from the court's records and file, should be set forth in an affidavit [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion)] or declaration under penalty of perjury [Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5], a copy of which must be served and filed with the notice of motion [Code Civ. Proc. § 1010; see also Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b)]. For a form of supporting declaration, see § 324.101. For additional discussion on evidence received at a law and motion hearing and accompanying papers involving declarations, affidavits, and requests for judicial notice, see § 324.101[6].

[4] Who Must Pay Fees

When the transfer is sought solely, or is ordered, because the action or proceeding was commenced in a court other than that designated as proper by Tit. 4, Part 2 of the Code Civ. Proc., those costs and fees shall be paid by the plaintiff before the transfer is made, and if the defendant has paid those costs and fees at the time of filing a notice of motion, the same shall be repaid to the defendant, upon the making of the transfer order [Code Civ. Proc. § 399(a)]. Code Civ. Proc. § 399(a) also discusses when the fees and costs may be paid by another party on the failure of the obligated party to pay them and recovered as an item of costs.

[5] When Motion May Be Made

If the costs and fees of transfer are not paid within the time prescribed by Code Civ. Proc. § 399, the court, on the duly noticed motion of any party, may dismiss the action without prejudice to the cause on the condition that no other action on the cause may be commenced in another court prior to satisfaction of the court's order for costs and fees [Code Civ. Proc. § 399(a)].

[6] Cross References

For discussion and forms for proceedings to transfer or dismiss an action, proceeding, or case on the groung that the court lacks subject matter jurisdiction, see §§ 324.100-324.102

Action filed in court lacking subject matter jurisdiction as not to be dismissed if there is Witkin, California Procedure, vol. 2, Courts, § 375, Jurisdiction, § 396 vol. 3, Actions, § 853 (4th ed. 1996)

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION
PART V. FORMS

28-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 324.104

§ 324.104 Declaration [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009, 2015.5] in Support of Motion to Dismiss Appeal or Petition for Failure to Pay Costs and Fees of Transfer

[1] FORM Declaration [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009, 2015.5] in Support of Motion to Dismiss Action, Proceeding, or Case for Failure to Pay Costs and Fees of Transfer

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	DECLARATION OF _____ [name]
vs.	)	IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO DISMISS FOR
_____ [name],	)	FAILURE TO PAY TRANSFER COSTS AND FEES
Defendant.	)	[Code Civ. Proc. § 399]
	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	Judge: _____
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

I, _____ [name], declare:

1. I am _____ [identify declarant, e.g., an attorney at law duly admitted to practice before all the courts of the State of California and the attorney of record herein for _____ (name of moving party) or other statement as appropriate].

2. _____ [Specify exact facts supporting dismissal, e.g., As shown by the records and file herein, of which this court is requested to take judicial notice: (a) this court, on _____ (date), in accordance with the provisions of Section 396 of the Code of Civil Procedure, ordered that this _____ (appeal or petition) be transferred to the _____ (specify court) on the ground that this court lacks jurisdiction of the subject matter and that the _____ (specify court) has such jurisdiction; (b) notice of the court's order was served on _____ (plaintiff's attorney of record or, if none, plaintiff) on _____ (date); (c) _____ (specify facts of record relating to any appeal or petition for an extraordinary writ to review the order of transfer, e.g., plaintiff has not petitioned for a writ of mandate under the provisions of Section 400 of the Code of Civil Procedure); (d) plaintiff has failed to pay the costs and fees of transfer; and (e) the _____ (30-day period after service of the notice of the order or 30-day period after notice of the finality of the order of transfer or 60-day period after service of the notice of order) expired on _____ (date)].

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of California that the foregoing is true and correct.

_____ [date].

_____ [signature]

[2] Use of Form

The form of declaration in [1], above, is for use to support a motion to dismiss an action, proceeding, or case on the ground that the party required by Code Civ. Proc. § 399 to pay the costs of transfer has failed to do so. With respect to the manner in which an order of transfer may be reviewed by a higher court, see discussion in § 324.46.

Because the foregoing declaration sets forth no evidentiary facts that do not appear from the court's records and file in the case, of which the court may take judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 452(d)], the declaration would appear to be unnecessary, as both the request that the court take judicial notice and the information to be judicially noticed can be contained and identified in the memorandum [see Evid. Code § 453 (adverse party must be given notice of request, "through pleadings or otherwise" and court must be furnished with sufficient information to enable it to take judicial notice of matter); cf. Code Civ. Proc. § 430.70 (relating to demurrers and requiring that matter to be judicially noticed be specified in demurrer or in supporting memorandum)]. Counsel in requesting that the court take judicial notice must in addition, however, comply with the requirements of Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1306(c).

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION
PART V. FORMS

28-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 324.105

§ 324.105 Order Granting Motion to Dismiss Appeal or Petition for Failure to Pay Costs and Fees of Transfer

[1] FORM Order Granting Motion to Dismiss Action, Proceeding, or Case for Failure to Pay Costs and Fees of Transfer

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)
Plaintiff,	)	NO. _____
vs.	)	ORDER
_____ [name],	)	[Code Civ. Proc. § 399]
Defendant.	)
	)
	)

The motion of _____ [identify party, e.g., defendant] for an order dismissing this _____ [appeal or petition] on the ground that _____ [identify party, e.g., plaintiff] has failed to pay the costs and fees of transfer of this _____ [appeal or petition] to the _____ Court of _____, came on regularly for hearing by the court on _____ [date]. Plaintiff appeared by counsel _____ [name]; defendant appeared by counsel _____ [name].

It appearing from the record herein that this _____ [appeal or petition] was ordered transferred as hereinabove set forth on the ground that this court lacks jurisdiction of the subject matter and that the _____ Court of _____ has such jurisdiction, and on proof made to the satisfaction of the court that the _____ [specify party, e.g., plaintiff] has failed to pay the costs and fees of the transfer within the period required by Section 399 of the Code of Civil Procedure, or at all, and that the motion ought, therefore,

to be granted,

IT IS ORDERED that the motion be, and it hereby is, granted and that this action be, and it hereby is, dismissed without prejudice.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that no other action on this cause be commenced in another court until this court's order for costs and fees of the transfer is satisfied.
Dated: _____.

_____ [signature]
Judge of the Superior Court

[2] Use of Form

The form of order in [1], above, is for use when the court grants a motion to dismiss for the failure of the party required to pay the costs and fees of transfer to do so [see Code Civ. Proc. § 399].

A dismissal ordered by the court must be in the form of a written order signed by the court and filed in the action and when so filed constitutes a judgment and is effective for all purposes [Code Civ. Proc. § 581d].

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION
PART V. FORMS

28-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 324.106

§ 324.106 Demurrer [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(a)] on Ground of Exclusive Concurrent Jurisdiction

[1] FORM Demurrer [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(a)] on Ground of Exclusive Concurrent Jurisdiction

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	DEMURRER OF _____ [name] TO Plaintiff,	)	COMPLAINT
vs.	)	Date: _____
_____ [name],	)	Time: _____
Defendant.	)	Location: _____
	)	Judge: _____
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
	)	[LIMITED CIVIL CASE]

_____

Defendant demurs to the complaint on the following ground:

There is another action pending in which another trial court has exclusive concurrent jurisdiction over the subject matter at issue and all parties. That action is Case No. _____, filed on _____ [date], in the _____ [name of court] by _____ [name], plaintiff, against _____ [name], defendant, alleging a cause of action for _____ [specify] based on _____ [describe the transaction], and seeking the following relief: _____ [specify]. Summons was issued in that action and served on _____ [date]. [A certified copy of the complaint and a certified copy of the proof of service of summons are attached hereto as Exhibits "1" and "2," respectively, and made a part hereof.]
Dated: _____.

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant

[2] Use of Form

The form of demurrer in [1], above, is for use when it appears on the face of the complaint or from matters of which the court may take judicial notice [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(a); Evid. Code § 452] that a case is pending in another trial court that has exclusive concurrent jurisdiction over the same subject matter and parties.

[3] Exclusive Concurrent Jurisdiction

Under the rule of exclusive concurrent jurisdiction, if two trial courts of equal jurisdiction have concurrent jurisdiction over the subject matter and all parties involved in litigation, the first to assume jurisdiction has exclusive and continuing jurisdiction over the subject matter and all parties involved until such time as all necessarily related matters have been resolved [Plant Insulation Co. v. Fibreboard Corp. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 781, 786-787, 274 Cal. Rptr. 147] . The rule of concurrent jurisdiction may constitute a ground of abatement of the subsequent action. An order of abatement issues as a matter of right, not as a matter of discretion, when the conditions for its issuance exist [Plant Insulation Co. v. Fibreboard Corp. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 781, 787, 274 Cal. Rptr. 147] .

For discussion of exclusive concurrent jurisdiction, see § 324.25[2][b].

[4] Accompanying Papers

The demurrer must be accompanied by a memorandum to be relied on, and the court may construe the absence of the memorandum as an admission that the special demurrer is not meritorious and cause for its denial and as a waiver of grounds not supported [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 3.1113(a), 3.1320(b)]. For discussion and forms on memoranda in general, see Ch. 417, Points and Authorities . For discussion and forms specific to demurrers, see Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings . For additional discussion on requests for judicial notice, see § 324.101[6].

[5] Cross References

For alternative forms of demurrers, see Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings

For discussion and forms regarding abatement, see Ch. 3, Abatement of Actions .

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION
PART V. FORMS

28-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 324.107-324.119

[Reserved]

§§ 324.107[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION
PART V. FORMS

28-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 324.120

§ 324.120 Proceedings to Reclassify Case--By Plaintiff, Cross-Complainant, or Petitioner Within Time Allowed for Amending Initial Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. § 403.040(a)]--Notice of Motion and Supporting Declaration

[1] FORM Proceedings to Reclassify Case--By Plaintiff, Cross-Complainant, or Petitioner Within Time Allowed for Amending Initial Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. § 403.040(a)]--Notice of Motion and Supporting Declaration

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MOTION AND NOTICE OF MOTION TO RE-
vs.	)	CLASSIFY CASE, [SUPPORTING DECLARA-
_____ [name],	)	TION(S) OF _____ (name(s)),]
Defendant.	)	AND SUPPORTING MEMORANDUM
	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	Judge: _____
		Date Action Filed: _____
		Trial Date: _____

_____

To _____ [identify party, e.g., defendant] _____ [name] and to his/her attorney of record:

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that on _____ [date], at _____ [time], or as soon thereafter as the matter may be heard, in [_____ (Department or Division) _____ of] this court, located at _____ [street address], _____ [city], _____ [ specify party, e.g., plaintiff] will, and hereby does, move for an order pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure section 403.040(a) to reclassify this action as _____ [a limited or an unlimited] civil case. The motion will be made on the ground that the caption of the _____ [complaint or identify cross complaint or other initial pleading] _____ [misstates the jurisdictional classification of this _____ (action or proceeding) or mistakenly fails to state that the _____ (action or proceeding) is a limited civil case].

The motion will be based on this notice of motion, on the [declaration(s) of _____ (name(s)) and] supporting memorandum served and filed herewith _____ [, or and] on the records and file herein [, and on such evidence as may be presented at the hearing of the motion].
Dated: _____.

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for_____ [party status and name]

SUPPORTING DECLARATION OF _____ [name]

I, _____ [name], declare:

1. I am _____ [specify, e.g., the plaintiff in this action].

2. _____ [State facts establishing that the action or proceeding is not properly classified in as many paragraphs as necessary].

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of California that the foregoing is true and correct.
Dated: _____.

_____ [signature]
Judge of the Superior Court

SUPPORTING DECLARATION OF _____ [name]

[Add supporting declaration]

SUPPORTING MEMORANDUM

[Add supporting memorandum]

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, is for use by a plaintiff, or cross-complainant, or petitioner to move for an order reclassifying a case when the caption of the complaint, cross complaint, or other initial pleading misstated or mistakenly failed to state the jurisdictional classification of the case [see Code Civ. Proc. § 403.040(a); see also Code Civ. Proc. § 422.30(b) (caption to state that case is limited civil case)]. This form is for use when the motion is being made within time allowed for amending the initial pleading. For a form of notice of motion for use when the motion is made later in the action or proceeding, see § 324.123.

For discussion of this motion, see § 324.64.

For discussion relating to notices of motion generally, and for a procedural guide that may be followed in making or opposing a noticed motion generally, see Ch. 372, Motions and Orders .

[3] Accompanying Papers

The motion must be accompanied by a supporting memorandum and the court may construe the absence of the memorandum as an admission that the motion is not meritorious and cause for its denial [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(a); see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1005(b), 1010]. For discussion and forms on memoranda, see Ch. 417, Points and Authorities .

The evidentiary or probative facts establishing the grounds for reclassification, if they do not appear from the court's records and file, should be set forth in an affidavit [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion)] or declaration under penalty of perjury [Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5], a copy of which must be served and filed with the notice of motion [Code Civ. Proc. § 1010; see also Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b)]. For additional discussion on evidence received at a law and motion hearing and accompanying papers involving declarations, affidavits, and requests for judicial notice, see § 324.101[6].

[4] Copies to Prepare

The notice of motion, and its accompanying papers, should be prepared in an original for filing, one copy for service on the defendant or defendant's counsel [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1015], one office copy, and any additional copies that may be required by the court.

[5] Service and Filing

The notice of motion and its supporting papers must be served and filed in the cause [see, e.g., Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1010, 1013a; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 3.1103, 3.1103(b), 3.1113(a)]. For a discussion and forms of proof of service by mail, facsimile transmission, or overnight delivery, see Ch. 264, Fax Filing and Service of Papers , and Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers .

[6] Length of Notice Required

The moving and supporting papers must be filed and served as provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 1005 [Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(a)(13)]. Thus, unless otherwise ordered or specifically provided by law, all moving and supporting papers must be filed and copies served at least 16 court days before the time appointed for the hearing. If the notice is served by mail, the required 16-day period of notice before the time appointed for the hearing is increased by five calendar days if the place of mailing and the place of address are within California, 10 calendar days if either the place of mailing or the place of address is outside California but within the United States, and 20 calendar days if either the place of mailing or the place of address is outside the United States [Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b)]. If the notice is served by facsimile transmission, express mail, or another method of overnight delivery, the required 16-day period of notice before the time appointed for the hearing is increased by two calendar days [Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b); cf. Code Civ. Proc. §

1010.6(a)(6) (two court day extension in case of electronic service; although Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b) expressly excludes extensions under Code Civ. Proc. § 1013, it is silent as to Code Civ. Proc. § 1010.6); cf. Code Civ. Proc. § 1010.6(a)(6) (two court day extension in case of electronic service; although Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b) expressly excludes extensions under Code Civ. Proc. § 1013, it is silent as to Code Civ. Proc. § 1010.6)].

[7] Opposition and Reply Papers

All opposing papers must be filed with the court and a copy served on each party at least 9 court days, and all reply papers at least five court days, before the for hearing [Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b); cf. Code Civ. Proc. § 1010.6(a)(6) (two court day extension in case of electronic service; although Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b) expressly excludes extensions under Code Civ. Proc. § 1013, it is silent as to Code Civ. Proc. § 1010.6)].

Notwithstanding any other provision of § 1005, all papers opposing a motion and all reply papers shall be served by personal delivery, facsimile transmission, express mail, or other means consistent with sections §§ 1010, 1011, 1012, and 1013, and reasonably calculated to ensure delivery to the other party or parties not later than the close of the next business day after the time the opposing papers or reply papers, as applicable, are filed. This applies to the service of opposition and reply papers regarding motions for summary judgment or summary adjudication, in addition to the motions listed in § 1005(b) [Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(c)].

[8] Cross References

For a related form of an order granting this motion, see § 324.122.

For general discussion of notices of motion, procedural guide, and general form of notice of motion, see Ch. 372, Motions and Orders

For a discussion of service of papers and a form of proof of service by mail, see Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION
PART V. FORMS

28-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 324.121

§ 324.121 Proceedings to Reclassify Case--By Defendant or Cross Defendant Within Time Allowed for Responding to Initial Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. § 403.040(a)]--Notice of Motion and Supporting Declaration

[1] FORM Proceedings to Reclassify Case--By Defendant or Cross Defendant Within Time Allowed for Responding to Initial Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. § 403.040(a)]--Notice of Motion and Supporting Declaration

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MOTION AND NOTICE OF MOTION TO RE-
vs.	)	CLASSIFY CASE[, SUPPORTING DECLARA-
_____ [name],	)	TION(S) OF _____ (name(s)),]
Defendant.	)	AND SUPPORTING MEMORANDUM
	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	Judge: _____
		Date Action Filed: _____
		Trial Date: _____

_____

To _____ [identify party, e.g., plaintiff] _____ [name] and to his/her attorney of record:

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that on _____ [date], at _____ [time], or as soon thereafter as the matter may be heard, in [_____ (Department or Division) _____ of] this court, located at _____ [street address], _____ [city], _____

[specify party, e.g., defendant] will, and hereby does, move for an order pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure section 403.040(a) to reclassify this action as _____ [a limited or an unlimited] civil case. The motion will be made on the ground that the caption of the _____ [complaint or identify cross complaint or other initial pleading] _____ [misstates the jurisdictional classification of this _____ (action or proceeding) or mistakenly fails to state that the _____ (action or proceeding) is a limited civil case].

The motion will be based on this notice of motion, on the [declaration(s) of _____ (name(s)) and] supporting memorandum served and filed herewith _____ [, or and] on the records and file herein[, and on such evidence as may be presented at the hearing of the motion].
Dated: _____.

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for_____ [party status and name]

SUPPORTING DECLARATION OF _____ [name]

I, _____ [name], declare:

1. I am _____ [specify, e.g., the defendant in this action].

2. _____ [State facts establishing that the action or proceeding is not properly classified in as many paragraphs as necessary].

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of California that the foregoing is true and correct.
Dated: _____.

_____ [signature]
Judge of the Superior Court

SUPPORTING MEMORANDUM

[Add supporting memorandum]

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, is for use by a defendant or cross defendant to move for an order reclassifying a case when the caption of the complaint, cross complaint, or other initial pleading misstated or mistakenly failed to state the jurisdictional classification of the case [see Code Civ. Proc. § 403.040(a); see also Code Civ. Proc. § 422.30(b) (caption to state that case is limited civil case)]. This form is for use when the motion is being made within time allowed for responding to initial pleading. For a form of notice of motion for use when the motion is made later in the action or proceeding, see § 324.123.

For discussion of this motion, see § 324.67.

For discussion relating to notices of motion generally, and for a procedural guide that may be followed in making or opposing a noticed motion generally, see Ch. 372, Motions and Orders .

[3] Motion is General Appearance

A motion to reclassify under Code Civ. Proc. § 403.040 constitutes an appearance in the action [Code Civ. Proc. § 1014].

[4] Accompanying Papers

The motion must be accompanied by a supporting memorandum and the court may construe the absence of the memorandum as an admission that the motion is not meritorious and cause for its denial [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(a); see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1005(b), 1010]. For discussion and forms on memoranda, see Ch. 417, Points and Authorities .

The evidentiary or probative facts establishing the grounds for reclassification, if they do not appear from the court's records and file, should be set forth in an affidavit [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion)] or declaration under penalty of perjury [Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5], a copy of which must be served and filed with the notice of motion [Code Civ. Proc. § 1010; see also Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b)]. For additional discussion on evidence received at a law and motion hearing and accompanying papers involving declarations, affidavits, and requests for judicial notice, see § 324.101[6].

[5] Copies to Prepare

The notice of motion, and its accompanying papers, should be prepared in an original for filing, one copy for service on the plaintiff or plaintiff's counsel [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1015], one office copy, and any additional copies that may be required by the court.

[6] Service and Filing

The notice of motion and its supporting papers must be served and filed in the cause [see, e.g., Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1010, 1013a; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 3.1103, 3.1103(b), 3.1113(a)]. For a discussion and forms of proof of service by mail, facsimile transmission, or overnight delivery, see Ch. 264, Fax Filing and Service of Papers , and Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers .

[7] Length of Notice Required

The moving and supporting papers must be filed and served as provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 1005 [Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(a)(13)].

Thus, unless otherwise ordered or specifically provided by law, all moving and supporting papers must be filed and copies served at least 16 court days before the time appointed for the hearing. If the notice is served by mail, the required 16-day period of notice before the time appointed for the hearing is increased by five calendar days if the place of mailing and the place of address are within California, 10 calendar days if either the place of mailing or the place of address is outside California but within the United States, and 20 calendar days if either the place of mailing or the place of address is outside the United States [Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b)]. If the notice is served by facsimile transmission, express mail, or another method of overnight delivery, the required 16-day period of notice before the time appointed for the hearing is increa sed by two calendar days [Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b); cf. Code Civ. Proc. § 1010.6(a)(6) (two court day extension in case of electronic service; although Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b) expressly excludes extensions under Code Civ. Proc. § 1013, it is silent as to section 1010.6); cf. Code Civ. Proc. § 1010.6(a)(6) (two court day extension in case of electronic service; although Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b) expressly excludes extensions under Code Civ. Proc. § 1013, it is silent as to section 1010.6)].

[8] Opposition and Reply Papers

All opposing papers must be filed with the court and a copy served on each party at least 9 court days, and all reply papers at least five court days, before the hearing [Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b); cf. Code Civ. Proc. § 1010.6(a)(6) (two court day extension in case of electronic service; although Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b) expressly excludes extensions under Code Civ. Proc. § 1013, it is silent as to section 1010.6)].

Notwithstanding any other provision of § 1005, all papers opposing a motion and all reply papers shall be served by personal delivery, facsimile transmission, express mail, or other means consistent with sections §§ 1010, 1011, 1012, and 1013, and reasonably calculated to ensure delivery to the other party or parties not later than the close of the next business day after the time the opposing papers or reply papers, as applicable, are filed. This applies to the service of opposition and reply papers regarding motions for summary judgment or summary adjudication, in addition to the motions listed in § 1005(b) [Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(c)].

[9] Cross References

For a related form of order granting this motion, see § 324.122.

For general discussion of notices of motion, procedural guide, and general form of notice of motion, see Ch. 372, Motions and Orders

For a discussion of service of papers and a form of proof of service by mail, see Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION
PART V. FORMS

28-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 324.122

§ 324.122 Order Granting Motion to Reclassify Case When Motion Made Within Time Allowed for Amending or Responding to Initial Pleading

[1] FORM Order Granting Motion to Reclassify Case When Motion Made Within Time Allowed for Amending or Responding to Initial Pleading

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)
Plaintiff,	)
vs.	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	ORDER
Defendant.	)
	)
	)

The motion of _____ [identify party, e.g., defendant] for an order pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 403.040(a) reclassifying this _____ [action or proceeding] as _____ [a limited or an unlimited] civil case came on regularly for hearing by the court on _____ [date]. Plaintiff appeared by counsel _____ [name], and defendant appeared by counsel _____ [name].

It appearing to the satisfaction of the court that the caption of the _____ [complaint or identify cross complaint or other initial pleading] mistakenly _____ [stated or failed to state] that this _____ [action or proceeding or case] was a limited civil case,

IT IS ORDERED that the motion be, and it hereby is, granted and that this _____ [action or proceeding or case] be reclassified as _____ [a limited or an unlimited] civil case.

Dated: _____.

_____ [signature]
Judge of the Superior Court

[2] Use of Form

The form of order in [1], above, is for use when the court grants a motion by a party to reclassify an action, proceeding, or case for lack of subject matter jurisdiction when the motion is brought within the time to amend or respond to the initial pleading [see Code Civ. Proc. § 403.040(a)].

[3] Cost and Fees

If the reclassification is from limited to unlimited civil case, the party who misclassified a case as a limited civil case must pay a reclassification fee equivalent to the higher cost of filing an unlimited civil case. Other fees paid before reclassification are similarly adjusted, and each party is responsible for paying for reclassification of its pleadings [see Code Civ. Proc. § 403.050(c)].

If the reclassification is from unlimited to limited civil case, no reclassification fee is required. The parties are not entitled to any refund of higher fees paid while the case was classified as an unlimited civil case [see Code Civ. Proc. § 403.050(a)].

For further discussion, including payment of the fees and the effect of failure to pay, see § 324.66.

[4] Notice of Court's Ruling

When a motion is granted or denied, unless the court otherwise orders, notice of the court's decision or order must be given by the prevailing party to all other parties or their attorneys in the manner provided by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1010-1020, unless notice is waived by all parties in open court and is entered in the minutes [Code Civ. Proc. § 1019.5].

For a form of notice of the court's ruling, see Ch. 372, Motions and Orders .

[5] Cross References

For a general discussion and forms of orders, see Ch. 372, Motions and Orders

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION
PART V. FORMS

28-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 324.123

§ 324.123 Proceedings to Reclassify Case- By Party After Time to Amend or Respond to Complaint or Other Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. § 403.040(b)]--Notice of Motion and Supporting Declaration

[1] FORM Proceedings to Reclassify Case- By Party After Time to Amend or Respond to Complaint or Other Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. § 403.040(b)]--Notice of Motion and Supporting Declaration

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MOTION AND NOTICE OF MOTION TO RE-
vs.	)	CLASSIFY CASE [SUPPORTING DECLARA-
_____ [name],	)	TION(S) OF _____ (name(s)),]
Defendant.	)	AND SUPPORTING MEMORANDUM
	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	Judge: _____
		Date Action Filed: _____
		Trial Date: _____

_____

To _____ [identify party, e.g., plaintiff] _____ [name] and to his/her attorney of record:

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that on _____ [date], at _____ [time], or as soon thereafter as the matter may be heard, in [_____ (Department or Division) _____ of] this court, located at _____ [street address], _____ [city], _____

[specify party, e.g., defendant] will, and hereby does, move for an order pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure section 403.040(b) to reclassify this case as _____ [a limited or an unlimited] civil case. The motion will be made on the ground that the caption of the _____ [complaint or identify cross complaint or other initial pleading] _____ [misstates or mistakenly fails to state] the jurisdictional classification of the case and that good cause exists for _____ [specify moving party, e.g., defendant] not having sought reclassification at an earlier time.

The motion will be based on this notice of motion, on the [declaration(s) of _____ (name(s)) and] supporting memorandum served and filed herewith _____ [, or and] on the records and file herein[, and on such evidence as may be presented at the hearing of the motion].
Dated: _____.

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for_____ [party status and name]

SUPPORTING DECLARATION OF _____ [name]

I, _____ [name], declare:

1. I am _____ [specify, e.g., the defendant in this action].

2. _____ [State facts establishing that the action or proceeding is mistakenly classified, using as many paragraphs as necessary].

3. _____ [State facts establishing good cause for not having sought reclassification earlier, using as many paragraphs as necessary].

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of California that the foregoing is true and correct.
Dated: _____.

_____ [signature]

SUPPORTING MEMORANDUM

[Add supporting memorandum]

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, is for use by a party to move for an order reclassifying a case when the caption of the complaint, cross complaint, or other initial pleading misstated or mistakenly failed to state the jurisdictional classification of the case [see Code Civ. Proc. § 403.040(b); see also Code Civ. Proc. § 422.30(b) (caption to state that case is limited civil case)]. This form is for use whenever the misclassification becomes apparent after the time for the moving party to respond to the complaint, cross complaint, or other initial pleading. The moving party must, however, show good cause why a motion to reclassify was not made earlier [see Code Civ. Proc. § 403.040(b)]. For a form of notice of motion for use when the motion is by a party within the time to respond to the initial pleading, see §§ 324.120 and 324.121.

For discussion relating to notices of motion generally, and for a procedural guide that may be followed in making or opposing a noticed motion generally, see Ch. 372, Motions and Orders .

[3] Accompanying Papers

The motion must be accompanied by a supporting memorandum and the court may construe the absence of the memorandum as an admission that the motion is not meritorious and cause for its denial [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(a); see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1005(b), 1010]. For discussion and forms on memorandum, see Ch. 417, Points and Authorities .

The evidentiary or probative facts establishing the grounds for reclassification and the reasons for good cause why reclassification was not sought earlier are set forth in an affidavit [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion)] or declaration under penalty of perjury [Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5], a copy of which must be served and filed with the notice of motion [Code Civ. Proc. § 1010; see also Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b)]. For additional discussion on evidence received at a law and motion hearing and accompanying papers involving declarations, affidavits, and requests for judicial notice, see § 324.101[6].

[4] Service and Filing

For discussion of service and filing of the motion, including the notice requirements [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1005(a)(13), (b)], see §§ 324.120[5], 324.121[6].

[5] Opposition and Reply Papers

For discussion of opposition and reply papers, including the time requirements [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1005(a)(13), (b)], see §§ 324.120[7], 324.121[8].

[6] Cross References

For a related form of order granting this motion, see § 324.124.

For general discussion of notices of motion, procedural guide, and general form of notice of motion, see Ch. 372, Motions and Orders

For a discussion of service of papers and a form of proof of service by mail, see Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 324 JURISDICTION: SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION
PART V. FORMS

28-324 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 324.124

§ 324.124 Order Granting Motion to Reclassify Case When Motion Made After Time to Amend or Respond to Complaint of Other Pleading

[1] FORM Order Granting Motion to Reclassify Case When Motion Made After Time to Amend or Respond to Complaint of Other Pleading

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)
Plaintiff,	)
vs.	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	ORDER
Defendant.	)
	)
	)

_____

The motion of _____ [identify party, e.g., defendant] for an order pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 403.040(b) reclassifying this _____ [action or proceeding] as _____ [a limited or an unlimited] civil case came on regularly for hearing by the court on _____ [date]. Plaintiff appeared by counsel _____ [name], and defendant appeared by counsel _____ [name].

It appearing to the satisfaction of the court that the caption of the _____ [complaint or identify cross complaint or other initial pleading] in this _____ [action or proceeding or case] _____ [is incorrectly classified, and good cause appearing for the moving party not having sought reclassification earlier],

IT IS ORDERED that the motion be, and it hereby is, granted and that this _____ [action or proceeding or case] be reclassified as _____ [a limited or an unlimited] civil case.

Dated: _____.

_____ [signature]
Judge of the Superior Court

[2] Use of Form

The form of order in [1], above, is for use when the court grants a motion to reclassify an action, proceeding, or case on the motion of a party made after the time to respond to the complaint, cross complaint, or other initial pleading has expired [see Code Civ. Proc. § 403.040(b)].

[3] Cost and Fees

For discussion of costs and fees of reclassification, see § 324.70.

[4] Cross References

For a general discussion and forms of orders, see Ch. 372, Motions and Orders

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 325 [RESERVED]

28-325 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated Chapter 325

[RESERVED]

Chapter 325[RESERVED]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326 JURY INSTRUCTIONS

28-326 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated 326.syn

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt Editorial Consultant William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents.

§ 326.syn Synopsis to Chapter 326: JURY INSTRUCTIONS

§ 326.01 Scope of Chapter

§ 326.02 Cross References

§§ 326.03-326.09 [Reserved]

§ 326.10 Governing Law

§ 326.11 Purpose of Jury Instructions

§ 326.12 Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions ("CACI")

§§ 326.13-326.19 [Reserved]

§ 326.20 Court's Discretion to Comment on Evidence

§ 326.21 Court's Own Instructions to Jury

§ 326.22 Timing and Service Requirements for Requesting Jury Instructions

§ 326.23 Drafting Proposed Jury Instructions

[1] Format

[2] Using CACI

[3] Statutory Language

[4] Language From Judicial Opinions

[5] Using Other Sources

[6] Formula Instructions

[a] "Formula Instruction" Defined

[b] Permissible Use

[c] Danger of Incompleteness

[d] Danger of Repetition, Undue Emphasis, or Argumentativeness

[7] Gender Neutral Language

§ 326.24 Right to Proper Jury Instructions

[1] Court Cannot Weigh Evidence

[2] Instructions Based on Different Theories of Law

[3] No Right When Party Refuses or Withdraws Instruction

[4] No Right When Counsel's Conduct Amounts to Waiver

§ 326.25 Effect of Failure to Propose or Request Complete Jury Instructions

§ 326.26 Court's Discretion in Considering Proposed or Requested Jury Instructions

[1] Framing Instructions

[2] Setting Sequence of Instructions

[3] Refusing Instructions

§ 326.27 Court's Disposition of Proposed or Requested Jury Instructions

§ 326.28 Opportunity to Demand Clarification of Jury Instructions

§ 326.29 Instructions Deemed Excepted to Automatically

[1] "Exception" Generally

[2] Certain Jury Instructions

§ 326.30 Instructing the Jury

§ 326.31 Statement of Points of Law

§ 326.32 Retirement of Jury for Deliberations

[1] Documents Jury May Take Into Deliberations

[2] Custody, Privacy, and Secrecy of Jury During Deliberations

[3] Jury's Requests for Further Information

[a] What Jury May Request

[b] Presence of Parties, Counsel, or Judge

[4] Recall of Jury for Further Instructions on Court's Own Motion

§ 326.33 Alleging Prejudice by Motion for New Trial

§§ 326.34-326.39 [Reserved]

§ 326.40 Appeals Based on Erroneous Jury Instructions

[1] Jury Instructions Considered as a Whole on Appeal

[2] Verdict in Accord With Evidence and Law Will Be Upheld

[3] Invited Error

§ 326.41 Designation of Clerk's Transcript on Appeal

§ 326.42 Grounds for Challenges to Instructions

[1] Repetition

[2] Undue Emphasis

[3] Argumentativeness

[4] Irrelevance

[5] Inconsistency

§ 326.43 Requirement of Prejudice

[1] No Reversal Unless Error Is Prejudicial and Results in Miscarriage of Justice

[2] Standard for Determining Prejudicial Error

[a] No Presumption of Inherent Prejudice

[b] Must Be Probable That Error Affected Verdict

[c] Multi-Factor Test

[d] Jury Must Have Been Misled

[3] Error Cured by Other Instructions

§§ 326.44-326.49 [Reserved]

§ 326.50 Related Matthew Bender Publications

§ 326.51 State Constitution

§ 326.52 State Statutes

[1] Proposing, Modifying, Refusing, and Giving Jury Instructions

[2] Retirement of Jury for Deliberations

[3] Errors Relating to Jury Instructions

§ 326.53 California Rules of Court

§ 326.54 Decisions

[1] Court's Own Instructions to Jury

[2] Form of Jury Instructions

[a] Use of Approved Instructions

[b] Formula Instructions

[i] In General

[ii] Danger of Incompleteness

[iii] Danger of Repetition, Undue Emphasis, or Argumentativeness

[c] Use of Judicial Opinions

[d] Use of Statutory Language

[3] Right to Proper Jury Instructions

[4] Court's Discretion in Considering Proposed or Requested Jury Instruction

[a] Framing Instructions

[b] Refusing Instructions

[5] Effect of Failure to Propose or Request Complete Jury Instructions

[6] Opportunity to Demand Clarification of Instructions

[7] Instructions Deemed Automatically Excepted to

[8] Jury's Requests for Further Information

[9] Erroneous Jury Instructions

[a] Argumentativeness

[b] Inconsistency

[c] Irrelevance

[d] Repetition

[e] Undue Emphasis

[10] Prejudicial Instructions

[a] Alleging Prejudice by Motion for New Trial

[b] Standard for Determining Prejudicial Error

[c] Error Cured by Other Instructions

[11] Particular Instructions

[a] Design Defect

[b] Strict Liability

[12] Timeliness of Request for Jury Instruction

§ 326.55 Law Reviews

§ 326.56 Text References

§§ 326.57-326.79 [Reserved]

§ 326.80 Request for Jury Instructions

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Time for Submission and Service of Proposed Instructions

§ 326.81 General Form of Proposed Jury Instruction

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Contents of Instruction

[4] CACI Instructions Strongly Encouraged

§ 326.82 CACI Form of Proposed Jury Instruction

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] CACI Instructions Strongly Encouraged

[4] Format of CACI Instructions

William G. McDevitt
Editorial Consultant n*

FOOTNOTES:
(n55)Footnote *.
William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents.

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326 JURY INSTRUCTIONS
PART I. SCOPE

28-326 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326.01

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt Editorial Consultant William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents.

§ 326.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter discusses and contains forms relating to:

- The purpose of jury instructions [see § 326.11].
- Issues related to jury instructions in the trial court, including:
  - The court's comments on evidence and its own instructions to the jury [see §§ 326.20, 326.21].
  - Litigants' requests for jury instructions in civil actions, including timing and service requirements, form, right to proper instructions, and failure to propose instructions [see §§ 326.22-326.25; for forms, see §§ 326.80-326.82].
  - The court's exercise of discretion and grant, refusal, or modification of instructions [see §§ 326.26, 326.27].
  - Instructing the jury and retirement for deliberations [see §§ 326.30-326.32].
  - Raising instructional error by motion for new trial [see § 326.33].
- Issues related to jury instructions on appellate review, including:
  - Grounds for challenging instructions [see § 326.42].

- Prejudice requirement [see § 326.43].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersJudgesDiscretionCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326 JURY INSTRUCTIONS
PART I. SCOPE

28-326 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326.02

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt Editorial Consultant William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents.

§ 326.02 Cross References

For the official jury instructions for use in California, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions ("CACI") (LexisNexis Matthew Bender, Official Publisher).

For a comprehensive source of discussion and forms for specific jury instructions in contract, business, and real property cases, including all CACI instructions, see California Forms Of Jury Instruction(Matthew Bender).

Other topics related to jury instructions are addressed in the following chapters in this publication:

- For discussion and forms for seeking appellate review based on errors in jury instructions, see Ch. 40, Appeal: An Overview , et seq.

- For discussion and forms for entering judgments on general and special verdicts, see Ch. 318, Judgments .

- For discussion and forms for use in selecting juries and other issues affecting juries generally, see Ch. 322, Juries and Jury Selection .

- For discussion and forms relating to verdicts, see Ch. 326A, Jury Verdicts .

- For discussion and forms for use in making motions after trial on the basis of prejudicial instructions, see Ch. 371, Motions After Trial .

- For discussion relating to jury deliberations and misconduct, see Ch. 551, Trial .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJurorsMisconductCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJurorsSelectionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury DeliberationsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsStandard InstructionsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326 JURY INSTRUCTIONS
PART I. SCOPE

28-326 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 326.03-326.09

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt Editorial Consultant William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents.

[Reserved]

§§ 326.03[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326 JURY INSTRUCTIONS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. In General

28-326 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326.10

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt Editorial Consultant William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents.

§ 326.10 Governing Law

Cal. Const., art. VI, § 10 governs a judge's right to comment on testimony.

Various aspects of jury instructions are addressed in Code Civ. Proc. §§ 607-619, which govern the conduct of trials. Code Civ. Proc. § 607a sets forth the parties' and court's duties with respect to proposing, evaluating, and approving jury instructions.

Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.1055 [see § 326.23[1]], and Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.1050 [see § 326.12], address the format, requirements, and judge's consideration of proposed jury instructions. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1580, govern requests for special findings by a jury. Local rules of court generally establish when proposed jury instructions must be tendered, when they will be evaluated, and when counsel will be informed which instructions are approved. Therefore, counsel must consult local rules to insure that proposed jury instructions are tendered in a timely manner. However, no local court form or rule for the filing or submission of proposed jury instructions may require that the instructions be submitted in any manner other than as prescribed by this rule [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.1055(e)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsGeneral OverviewEvidenceProcedural ConsiderationsJudicial Intervention in TrialsComments by JudgesGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326 JURY INSTRUCTIONS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. In General

28-326 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326.11

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt Editorial Consultant William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents.

§ 326.11 Purpose of Jury Instructions

Jury instructions provide the jury with the law applicable to claims and defenses tendered by the litigants and form part of the record on appeal. For discussion of the right to complete and comprehensive instructions, see § 326.24. For discussion of the creation of a record on appeal, see §§ 326.40, 326.41.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326 JURY INSTRUCTIONS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. In General

28-326 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326.12

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt Editorial Consultant William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents.

§ 326.12 Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions ("CACI")

In 2003, the California Judicial Council released a comprehensive set of civil jury instructions: the Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions ("CACI"--pronounced "Casey"). LexisNexis Matthew Bender is the Official Publisher of these instructions [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.1050(c) (Administrative Office of Courts may contract with official publisher)]. CACI covers many areas of law, such as negligence, damages, insurance, employment relations, civil rights, unfair practices, and eminent domain, and are the "official instructions for use" in California [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.1050(a)]. Their use is strongly encouraged [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.1050(e)].

On the adoption of former Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 855 [see now Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.1050], the prior rule governing the use of "California Jury Instructions--Civil (BAJI)" was revised to delete references to BAJI [see former Cal. Rules of Ct., Appendix, Div. 1, § 5].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsStandard Instructions

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326 JURY INSTRUCTIONS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. In General

28-326 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 326.13-326.19

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt Editorial Consultant William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents.

[Reserved]

§§ 326.13[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326 JURY INSTRUCTIONS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. In Trial Court

28-326 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326.20

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt Editorial Consultant William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents.

§ 326.20 Court's Discretion to Comment on Evidence

A court may comment on the evidence, on the testimony, and on the credibility of any witness when, in the court's opinion, commentary is necessary for the proper determination of a cause [Cal. Const., art. VI, § 10]. Pursuant to Cal. Const., art. VI, § 10, a trial judge's comments are appropriate and fair if they are attenuated from and do not directly comment on crucial issues before the jury [see Orient Handel v. United States Fid. & Guar. Co. (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 684, 700, 237 Cal. Rptr. 667] .

A judge's power to comment on the evidence is limited, because a judge may not withdraw material evidence from the jury or distort the testimony. The judge must inform the jurors that they are the exclusive judges of all questions of fact and of the credibility of the witnesses [Orient Handel v. United States Fid. & Guar. Co. (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 684, 699, 700, 237 Cal. Rptr. 667 ; see Code Civ. Proc. § 608 (discussed at § 326.21)].

ILLUSTRATION:

Comment Beyond Permissible Scope. After closing arguments in a personal injury case, in which plaintiff claimed to have been injured taking a shortcut by stepping over a chain closing off a portion of defendant's place of business, the trial judge commented to the jury that he had never before, in 22 years on the bench, commented on a case, but that he intended to do so in this case because it was so "unusual." The judge then commented, among other things, that "no defect in this premises had anything to do with plaintiff's fall," that any damages should be assessed not on the original injury, but on any possible aggravation when an employee moved plaintiff's arm to test whether it was really hurt, that there was no horrendous pain and suffering in a broken arm that had healed perfectly, and that plaintiff's doctor never said the injury would lead to permanent pain. The judge also told the jury that they could ignore his comments. During deliberations, when the jurors asked to have the judge's comments read to them, the judge refused and sent back the message that his comments were "[c]ompletely irrelevant to the jury's duties." The jury returned a nine-to-three verdict in favor of defendant.

The court of appeal found that the judge's comments had gone too far. The judge commented on the crucial issue of proximate cause, and his comments conflicted with uncontroverted testimony that plaintiff sustained permanent injury from the fall. The comments taken as a whole were confusing; their cumulative impact may well have swayed the opinion of at least one juror [Lewis v. Bill Robertson & Sons, Inc. (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 650, 655-657, 208 Cal. Rptr. 699] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
EvidenceProcedural ConsiderationsJudicial Intervention in TrialsComments by JudgesGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326 JURY INSTRUCTIONS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. In Trial Court

28-326 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326.21

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt Editorial Consultant William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents.

§ 326.21 Court's Own Instructions to Jury

In charging a jury, a court may instruct the jury on all matters of law the court believes necessary for the jury's information in reaching a verdict. If a court comments on the testimony in the case, it must inform the jury that the jury is the exclusive judge of all questions of fact. On request of a party, a court must furnish a statement of the legal authority supporting the charge or sign a statement adopting the law prepared and submitted by counsel [Code Civ. Proc. § 608].

It is the duty of a court to protect parties from unjust verdicts arising from:

- Ignorance or misstatement of the rules of law and of evidence.
- Impulse of passion or prejudice.
- Any other violation of a party's lawful rights in the conduct of the trial.

This is done, in part, by instructing the jury in the rules of law to be applied to the evidence presented [Thomas v. Buttress & McClellan, Inc. (1956) 141 Cal. App. 2d 812, 819-820, 297 P.2d 768] .

A trial court ordinarily has no duty to instruct the jury in the absence of a party's specific request. However, it does have a duty to instruct on controlling legal principles [see § 326.25], to ensure that the jury has a complete understanding of the law applicable to the facts. Failure to do so constitutes reversible error. The parties' submission of faulty or inadequate instructions does not relieve the court of its responsibility [Paverud v. Niagara Machine & Tool Works (1987) 189 Cal. App. 3d 858, 863, 234 Cal. Rptr. 585] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326 JURY INSTRUCTIONS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. In Trial Court

28-326 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326.22

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt Editorial Consultant William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents.

§ 326.22 Timing and Service Requirements for Requesting Jury Instructions

In any case tried before a jury, before the first witness is sworn for trial, counsel must deliver to the trial judge and serve on opposing counsel proposed jury instructions covering the law as disclosed by the pleadings [Code Civ. Proc. § 607a; for forms for proposed jury instructions generally, see §§ 326.81, 326.82]. For a form request for jury instructions, see § 326.80.

Before the commencement of argument, counsel may deliver to the trial judge and serve on opposing counsel additional proposed jury instructions on questions of law arising during the trial that were developed by the evidence and not disclosed by the pleadings [Code Civ. Proc. § 607a].

If during argument issues are raised that are not covered by the instructions given or refused, on the request of counsel the court may give additional jury instructions on those issues [Code Civ. Proc. § 607a].

PRACTICE TIP:

Check Local Rules and Custom for Timing and Service Methods. Despite the times for submission of proposed instructions prescribed by Code. Civ. Proc. § 607a, the time for submission and the method of service of proposed jury instructions vary from county to county and court to court. Refer to local court rules and to other local practitioners to clarify the preference of the presiding judge in a case.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsRequests for Instructions

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326 JURY INSTRUCTIONS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. In Trial Court

28-326 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326.23

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt Editorial Consultant William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents.

§ 326.23 Drafting Proposed Jury Instructions

[1] Format

Each proposed instruction must [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.1055(c)]:

- Be on a separate page or pages;
- Contain the instruction number and title of the instruction at the top of the first page of the instruction; and
- Be prepared without any blank lines or unused bracketed portions, so that it can be read directly to the jury.

Each instruction presented, except instructions presented by CACI number reference, must have at the bottom of the page a citation of authorities which supports the instruction. No citation is required for approved instructions [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.1055(d)]. Citing a decision as authority for a requested jury instruction does not preclude a party from arguing on appeal that the trial court erred in giving a different instruction based on the same decision but stating a different proposition of law [Asgari v. City of Los Angeles (1997) 15 Cal. 4th 744, 759, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 842, 937 P.2d 273 ; see generally § 326.40[3] (invited error)].

All proposed instructions must be submitted to the court in the form and format specified by Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 2.100-2.119 [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.1055(b)(1)]. Each set of proposed jury instructions must have a cover page, containing the caption of the case and stating the name of the party proposing the instructions, and an index listing all the proposed instructions [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.1055(b)(2)].

In the index, approved jury instructions must be identified by their reference numbers and special jury instructions must be numbered consecutively. The index must contain a checklist that the court can utilize to indicate whether the instruction was [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.1055(b)(3)]:

(1) Given as proposed;

(2) Given as modified;

(3) Refused; or

(4) Withdrawn.

Each set of proposed jury instructions must be bound loosely [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.1055(b)(4)].

The format rules apply to any proposed jury instructions that a party submits to the court, including "approved jury instructions" and "special jury instructions" [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.1055(a)(1)]. This rule defines "approved" instructions as the Judicial Council's Civil Jury Instructions (CACI) and "special" instructions as instructions from other sources, those specially prepared by the party, or CACI that have been substantially modified by the party. The format rules do not apply to the form or format of jury instructions presented to the jury. That is left to the court's discretion [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.1055(a)(2)].

No local court form or rule for the filing or submission of proposed jury instructions may require that the instructions be submitted in any manner other than as prescribed by this rule [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.1055(e)].

For discussion of and a form for the preparation of CACI instructions, see §§ 326.23[2] and 326.82, respectively. For a general form for proposed jury instructions, see § 326.81. For discussion of the various forms in which legal principles can be couched in jury instructions, see § 326.23[3]-[5].

[2] Using CACI

As noted in § 326.12, in 2003, the California Judicial Council released a comprehensive set of civil jury instructions. The goal of the CACI instructions is to improve the quality of the jury decision-making by providing standardized instructions that accurately state the law in a way that is understandable to the average juror [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.1050(a)].

If the latest edition of CACI contains an instruction applicable to a case, and the trial judge determines that the jury should be instructed on the subject, it is recommended that the judge use the CACI instruction unless the judge finds that a different instruction would more accurately state the law and be understood by jurors. Whenever the latest edition of CACI does not contain an instruction on a subject on which the trial judge determines that the jury should be instructed, or when a CACI instruction cannot be modified to submit the issue properly, the instruction given on that subject should be accurate, brief, understandable, impartial, and free from argument [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.1050(e)].

The Judicial Council intends that CACI be freely available for use and reproduction by parties, attorneys, and the public. However, commercial publishers of CACI must get a license from the Administrative Office of the Courts [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.1050(c)]. The Judicial Council maintains a website that includes the CACI instructions, a user's guide, and frequently asked questions, among other things [see www.courtinfo.ca.gov/jury/civiljuryinstructions/].

If the trial court refuses to give an approved instruction containing the only reference to a major theory of the case because the court believes the instruction is loaded with naked abstractions and not a ready tool to assist a lay jury, the court's omission is prejudicial error if the requested instruction is more accurate and complete than the instructions given by the court [Godwin v. La Turco (1969) 272 Cal. App. 2d 475, 479, 480, 77 Cal. Rptr. 305] .

For a CACI form of proposed instructions, see § 326.82. For the official jury instructions, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions (CACI) (LexisNexis Matthew Bender, Official Publisher). For a comprehensive source of jury instructions in contract, business, and real property cases, including all CACI instructions as well as instructions that enhance and supplement CACI, see California Forms of Jury Instruction (Matthew Bender).

Preparation of jury instructions using computer document assembly software can save time and increase accuracy. For a software program to prepare the Judicial Council civil jury instructions using HotDocs© document assembly automation, see LexisNexis Automated Jury Instructions. Although the attorney must still exercise careful attention to detail, the LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions program walks the user through questions and decisions that surface, and leads to the creation of better jury instructions. The attorney must review all instructions to make sure that they apply correctly to the particular facts and circumstances of the case for which they are submitted.

[3] Statutory Language

Jury instructions may be given in the language of a statute only if a jury will have no difficulty in understanding the statute without guidance from the court [Lourence v. West Side Irrigation Dist. (1965) 233 Cal. App. 2d 532, 538, 43 Cal. Rptr. 889 ; see Conservatorship of Gregory (2000) 80 Cal. App. 4th 514, 520, 95 Cal. Rptr. 2d 336 (proper to instruct jury in applicable statute's language)].

ILLUSTRATION:

Basic Speed Law. It is proper for the court in a personal injury action to give an instruction in the terms of the applicable section of the Vehicle Code setting forth the basic speed law and to inform the jury that a violation of the statute constitutes negligence as a matter of law [Hardin v. San Jose City Lines, Inc. (1953) 41 Cal. 2d 432, 438, 260 P.2d 63] .

If a code section is not applicable, it is error to instruct on it [Shamblin v. Polich (1973) 32 Cal. App. 3d 756, 762, 108 Cal. Rptr. 410] . Even though an instruction is couched in proper statutory language, it is improper if it is not supported by the evidence. For example, an instruction on negligent failure to have equipment prescribed by a statute from which defendant's type of vehicle is specifically exempted is error. The very giving of an instruction on an inapplicable statute indicates to a jury that the court considers the statute to be relevant [Davis v. Pine Mountain Lumber Co. (1969) 273 Cal. App. 2d 218, 224-225, 77 Cal. Rptr. 825] .

For discussion of the proper format for preparing jury instructions, see § 326.23[1]. For a general form of proposed jury instructions, see § 326.81.

[4] Language From Judicial Opinions

If an instruction taken from the language of a legal opinion is substantially correct and, even though erroneous is innocuous to the jury, giving the instruction does not constitute prejudicial error [Schance v. H. O. Adams Tile Co. (1955) 131 Cal. App. 2d 549, 556, 280 P.2d 851] . However, the language used by a court in an opinion seeking to apply principles of law to the facts of a given case is not necessarily proper to use in instructing the jury in another case if the same principles are inapplicable or the facts are different. An opinion should always be read in conjunction with the facts of the case in which the opinion is given. Often an opinion may use expressions by way of argument or illustration that are correct in their application to that case, but are inapplicable in other cases. Thus, it is not always proper to give jury instructions on a principle of law couched in language taken from a judicial opinion [Pearce v.

Boggs (1893) 99 Cal. 340, 343-344, 33 P. 906 ; Schance v. H.O. Adams Tile Co. (1955) 131 Cal. App. 2d 549, 555-556, 280 P.2d 851] . For discussion of the proper format for preparing jury instructions, see § 326.23[1].

[5] Using Other Sources

There are a wide variety of sources from which parties may draw instructions, so long as the instructions are correct statements of law. These include, in addition to statutes (see § 326.23[3]) and judicial opinions (see § 326.23[4]), treatises, hornbooks, legal encyclopedias, digests, and form books. Thus, for example, in a proper case, instructions may be based on state or federal regulations [Conservatorship of Gregory (2000) 80 Cal. App. 4th 514, 523, 95 Cal. Rptr. 2d 336] .

[6] Formula Instructions

[a] "Formula Instruction" Defined

A formula instruction is one in which the jury is directed to find for a party if it finds certain facts to be true [see Dodge v. San Diego Electric Ry. Co. (1949) 92 Cal. App. 2d 759, 764, 208 P.2d 37] .

[b] Permissible Use

Formula instructions are justified only if they contain all of the elements necessary for a party to prevail [Mazzotta v. Los Angeles Ry. Corp. (1944) 25 Cal. 2d 165, 170, 153 P.2d 338 ; see Bertero v. Nat'l General Corp. (1974) 13 Cal. 3d 43, 58, 118 Cal. Rptr. 184, 529 P.2d 608 (test for determining whether formula instruction constitutes prejudicial error)]. A formula instruction based on an incorrect or unauthorized premise gives rise to reversible error even if the correct instruction is given in another part of the instructions as a whole [Hubbard v. Calvin (1978) 83 Cal. App. 3d 529, 534, 147 Cal. Rptr. 905] .

PRACTICE TIP:

Avoid Formula Instructions When Possible to Avoid Reversal. Although merely giving formula instructions does not mandate reversal, their use is disfavored by reviewing courts [Bertero v. Nat'l General Corp. (1974) 13 Cal. 3d 43, 58, 118 Cal. Rptr. 184, 529 P.2d 608] .

For discussion of the proper format for preparing jury instructions, see § 326.23[1].

[c] Danger of Incompleteness

Formula instructions are often defective in failing to recite all the legal prerequisites for a verdict for a party [Murrell v. State of California ex rel. Dept. Pub. Wks. (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 264, 269, 120 Cal. Rptr. 812] . The proper test in determining whether a formula instruction constitutes prejudicial error is whether the instruction purports to address all the elements and whether the omitted elements are covered by specific instructions elsewhere [Bertero v. Nat'l General Corp. (1974) 13 Cal. 3d 43, 58, 118 Cal. Rptr. 184, 529 P.2d 608] .

Generally, the absence of one of the necessary elements in an instruction cannot be compensated for or cured by the fact that other instructions state in a general way the omitted factors required for a verdict [see Mazzotta v. Los Angeles Ry. Corp. (1944) 25 Cal. 2d 165, 170, 153 P.2d 338] . However, this rule is relaxed when the conditions warrant [Amidon v. Hebert (1949) 93 Cal. App. 2d 225, 228, 208 P.2d 733] . Thus, the use of a formula instruction that does not include all of the essential factors is not prejudicial error if the instructions, considered together in their entirety, fully and fairly charge the jury with the law applicable in the case [Mazzotta v. Los Angeles Ry. Corp. (1944) 25 Cal. 2d 165, 170, 153 P.2d 338] . For example, giving formula instructions is not prejudicial error if [Amidon v. Hebert (1949) 93 Cal. App. 2d 225, 227, 208 P.2d 733] :

- The method of giving the instructions indicates that they are not intended to state all of the elements involved in the case.

- The omitted elements are covered by specific instructions given elsewhere.

- The jury is instructed to regard each instruction in light of all the others.

For further discussion of when instructions may be cured by other instructions, see § 326.43[3]. For further discussion of what constitutes prejudicial error, see § 326.43[2].

[d] Danger of Repetition, Undue Emphasis, or Argumentativeness

Formula instructions often contain repetitious references to elements a jury must find for a particular party. The practice of giving formula instructions has met with disapprobation because these instructions frequently amount to argument rather than a fair discussion of the law [Cal. Shoppers, Inc. v. Royal Globe Ins. Co. (1985) 175 Cal. App. 3d 1, 65, 221 Cal. Rptr. 171]. Formula instructions, like argumentative instructions, are objectionable because they emphasize certain portions of the testimony and may confuse and mislead the jury [Roy v. Mission Taxi Co. (1950) 101 Cal. App. 2d 438, 446, 225 P.2d 920] .

ILLUSTRATION:

Singling Out Facts Showing Negligence in Personal Injury Action. It was improper in a personal injury action for the trial court to single out certain testimonial facts and instruct the jury that those facts constituted negligence if a prudent person would not have so conducted himself or herself [Powell v. Bartmess (1956) 139 Cal. App. 2d 394, 404, 294 P.2d 150] .

For further discussion of repetition, undue emphasis, and argumentativeness with respect to instructions generally, see § 326.42[1]-[3], respectively.

[7] Gender Neutral Language

All instructions submitted to the jury must be written in gender-neutral language. If standard jury instructions such as CACI are submitted to the jury, the court, or counsel at the court's request, must recast the instructions as necessary to ensure that gender-neutral language is used in each instruction [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.1058(b)]. All Judicial Council civil jury instructions (CACI) as well as Matthew Bender specific instructions are drafted using gender neutral language [see California Forms of Jury Instruction (Matthew Bender)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsRequests for InstructionsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsStandard Instructions

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326 JURY INSTRUCTIONS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. In Trial Court

28-326 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326.24

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt Editorial Consultant William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents.

§ 326.24 Right to Proper Jury Instructions

[1] Court Cannot Weigh Evidence

Each party is entitled to have the jury instructed on all of the party's theories of the case that are reasonable and supported by the pleadings and evidence or inferences that may be properly drawn from the evidence [Alcala v. Vazmar Corporation (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 747, 754, 84 Cal. Rptr. 3d 402 ; Orient Handel v. United States Fid. & Guar. Co. (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 684, 698, 237 Cal. Rptr. 667] , regardless of whether the evidence was considered persuasive by the trial court [Maxwell v. Powers (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 1596, 1607, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 62 (citing Fish v. Los Angeles Dodgers Baseball Club (1976) 56 Cal. App. 3d 620, 633, 128 Cal. Rptr. 807)], and irrespective of the manner in which issues are framed in a complaint or in a pretrial order [Alvarez v. Felker Mfg. Co. (1964) 230 Cal. App. 2d 987, 998, 41 Cal. Rptr. 514] , without assuming the existence of disputed facts [see Slovick v. James I. Barnes Constr. Co. (1956) 142 Cal. App. 2d 618, 626, 298 P.2d 923] .

Although evidence on the proponent's theory may be weak when compared to conflicting evidence, the trial judge may not weigh or appear to weigh the conflicting evidence by refusing the proferred instructions [Barrett v. Bank of America (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 1362, 1369, 229 Cal. Rptr. 16 ; Byrne v. City & County of San Francisco (1980) 113 Cal. App. 3d 731, 737, 170 Cal. Rptr. 302] . However, the court need not give instructions on a party's theory of the case unless that theory is supported by substantial evidence [Soule v. General Motors Corp. (1994) 8 Cal. 4th 548, 572, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 607, 882 P.2d 298 ; Morey v. Vannucci (1998) 64 Cal. App. 4th 904, 915, 75 Cal. Rptr. 2d 573] .

In determining whether a party was entitled to an instruction, the appellate court reviews the evidence most favorable to the contention that the requested instruction is applicable [Maxwell v. Powers (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 1596, 1607, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 62 (citing Christian v. Bolls (1970) 7 Cal. App. 3d 408, 415-416, 86 Cal. Rptr. 545); Fish v. Los Angeles Dodgers Baseball Club (1976) 56 Cal. App. 3d 620, 634, 128 Cal. Rptr. 807].

[2] Instructions Based on Different Theories of Law

If opposing parties rely on different theories and request conflicting instructions, the court should give instructions on the theories of each party [Skoglie v. Crumley (1972) 26 Cal. App. 3d 294, 298, 103 Cal. Rptr. 205 ; see also § 326.24[1]].

ILLUSTRATION:

Res Ipsa Loquitur Instruction. A conditional res ipsa loquitur instruction is justified if a plaintiff produces evidence sufficient to support findings that the requisite conditions are present. The plaintiff need not demonstrate all of the facts necessary to the res ipsa loquitur inference [Diamond Springs Lime Co. v. American River Constructors (1971) 16 Cal. App. 3d 581, 601, 94 Cal. Rptr. 200] .

When evidence is received for a restrictive purpose, the party against whom it is offered is entitled to a limiting instruction showing the specific reason for which the evidence is admitted [Mangrum v. Union Pac. R.R. Co. (1964) 230 Cal. App. 2d 960, 981, 41 Cal. Rptr. 536] .

[3] No Right When Party Refuses or Withdraws Instruction

A trial court's duty to instruct a jury fully does not include an obligation to discuss a subject when the court has effectually offered a party, and the party has refused, an instruction on that subject [McCloud v. Roy Riegels Chemicals (1971) 20 Cal. App. 3d 928, 935, 97 Cal. Rptr. 910] . By agreeing to the proposed instructions, a party effectively withdraws other proposed instructions on a subject and waives the right to complain that a proferred instruction was refused [Sill Properties, Inc. v. CMAG, Inc. (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 42, 53, 33 Cal. Rptr. 155] . Thus, a party who withdrew a proposed instruction or agreed at trial that a proposed instruction be deemed withdrawn cannot contend on appeal that the proposed instruction should have been given [Swails v. General Electric Co. (1968) 264 Cal. App. 2d 82, 85, 70 Cal. Rptr. 143] .

However, a party may always challenge an erroneous instruction on appeal even though the party did not request modification of the instruction or that the court give another in its place [Clawson v. Stockton Golf & Country Club (1963) 220 Cal. App. 2d 886, 899, 34 Cal. Rptr. 184] . For discussion of the bases for an appeal based on erroneous instructions, see § 326.42.

[4] No Right When Counsel's Conduct Amounts to Waiver

Generally, counsel has the right to have the jury instructed on his or her legal theory of the case. However, this general rule does not apply when counsel's conduct is tantamount to a waiver of the instruction. For example, refusal to modify an instruction on request from the court is an implied waiver of the right to raise the issue on appeal [see Roberts v. City of Los Angeles (1980) 109 Cal. App. 3d 625, 632-633, 167 Cal. Rptr. 320] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsRequests for Instructions

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326 JURY INSTRUCTIONS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. In Trial Court

28-326 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326.25

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt Editorial Consultant William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents.

§ 326.25 Effect of Failure to Propose or Request Complete Jury Instructions

Each party must propose complete and comprehensive jury instructions in accordance with the party's theories. If the parties fail to propose instructions, the court owes no duty to instruct on its own motion [Switzer v. State of California (1969) 269 Cal. App. 2d 627, 635, 75 Cal. Rptr. 371] .

A party's failure to propose an instruction waives any objection to a jury instruction that is legally correct, even though it may be too general or incomplete for the state of the evidence [Suman v. BMW of North America, Inc. (1994) 23 Cal. App. 4th 1, 9, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 133] . Nevertheless, the trial judge is obliged to see that justice is done and to furnish the jurors with some guidance on the controlling legal principles applicable to the case [Thomas v. Buttress & McClellan, Inc. (1956) 141 Cal. App. 2d 812, 819, 297 P.2d 768] . For discussion of when a party is deemed to have excepted to jury instructions that have been given, refused, or modified by a court, see § 326.29.

Additionally, a party who fails to request a particular jury instruction cannot raise on appeal the trial court's failure to instruct on that subject [Orient Handel v. United States Fid. & Guar. Co. (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 684, 699, 237 Cal. Rptr. 667 ; Switzer v. State of California (1969) 269 Cal. App. 2d 627, 636, 75 Cal. Rptr. 371 ; see Conservatorship of Gregory (2000) 80 Cal. App. 4th 514, 520-521, 95 Cal. Rptr. 2d 336 ; Kitzig v. Nordquist (2000) 81 Cal. App. 4th 1384, 1398, 97 Cal. Rptr. 2d 762 (failure to propose special verdict to offset noneconomic damages attributable to another person's fault)]. For example, a party in an action based on breach of an oral agreement and fraudulent misrepresentations could not complain on appeal of a failure to instruct on the measure of damages when that party did not propose any instructions concerning the measure to be applied by the jury in assessing damages [Meyer v. Ford Motor Co. (1969) 275 Cal. App. 2d 90, 108, 79 Cal. Rptr. 816] . Similarly, a party who submitted no jury instruction could not argue on appeal the trial court's failure to instruct the jury in detailed legal principles, when the court submitted a special verdict and the party made no objection [Olson v. Arnett (1980) 113 Cal. App. 3d 59, 66, 169 Cal.

Rptr. 629 ; see also Conservatorship of Gregory (2000) 80 Cal. App. 4th 514, 520-521, 95 Cal. Rptr. 2d 336 (defendant's failure to specifically request that jury be instructed in accordance with Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 15610.57 and 15610.63 waived issue on appeal)]. However, a party's failure to propose instructions does not waive the right to argue on appeal that an instruction incorrectly states the law [see Suman v. BMW of North America, Inc. (1994) 23 Cal. App. 4th 1, 9, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 133] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsRequests for Instructions

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326 JURY INSTRUCTIONS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. In Trial Court

28-326 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326.26

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt Editorial Consultant William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents.

§ 326.26 Court's Discretion in Considering Proposed or Requested Jury Instructions

[1] Framing Instructions

Although it is incumbent on a trial court to instruct on all material issues involved in an action, the court is not required to give every instruction offered by a litigant or to instruct in the language selected by the litigant [Fleck v. Bollinger Home Corp. (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 926, 934, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 407 ; Ray v. Jackson (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 445, 455, 33 Cal. Rptr. 339] . Instructions are sufficient if they fairly and accurately state the necessary legal principles when read as a whole [Fleck v. Bollinger Home Corp. (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 926, 934, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 407] . The court may modify a proffered instruction or give one of its own instead of that proposed by a party, as long as the instruction given states the law correctly [Byrum v. Brand (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 926, 939, 268 Cal. Rptr. 609 ; Grimshaw v. Ford Motor Co. (1981) 119 Cal. App. 3d 757, 805, 174 Cal. Rptr. 348 ; see Ewing v. Gill Industries, Inc. (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 601, 610, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 640] .

A trial court acts properly in modifying and condensing an instruction offered by a party if the omitted portion of the requested instruction addresses matters of general information that are not principles of law and are more appropriately the subject of argument [see Mezerkor v. Texaco, Inc. (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 76, 101, 72 Cal. Rptr. 1 (instruction proposed by plaintiff in personal injury action)].

[2] Setting Sequence of Instructions

The sequence in which instructions are given to a jury rests in the sound discretion of the trial court. The trial court does not mislead, misdirect, or confuse a jury if the instructions given are appropriate to the issues and evidence in the case and correctly express the law, and the trial judge makes a conscientious effort to fully instruct the jury on all legal principles and to arrange the instructions in logical order so that the jury might better comprehend them [Davis v.

Nelson (1963) 221 Cal. App. 2d 62, 69, 34 Cal. Rptr. 201] .

[3] Refusing Instructions

On request, a party is entitled to correct, nonargumentative instructions on every theory of the case advanced by the party supported by substantial evidence. The court may not force the party to rely on abstract generalities. The court must instruct in specific terms that relate the party's theory to the case [Daum v. SpineCare Medical Group, Inc. (1997) 52 Cal. App. 4th 1285, 1307, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 260 (error in refusing to instruct on negligence per se in medical malpractice action based on failure to obtain informed consent for implantation of device)].

However, a party may not complain on appeal that the court refused the party's requested instruction as long as the court's instruction correctly stated the applicable law, even when the requested instruction stated the principles of law more clearly and definitely than the instructions given by the court [Eagar v. McDonnell Douglas Corp. (1973) 32 Cal. App. 3d 116, 121, 107 Cal. Rptr. 819] . The court may refuse instructions on points of law sufficiently covered by other instructions even though the proffered instructions are correctly drawn and applicable to the evidence [Doupnik v. General Motors Corp. (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 849, 864, 275 Cal. Rptr. 715 ; Mezerkor v. Texaco, Inc. (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 76, 100, 72 Cal. Rptr. 1] .

The trial court must refuse a proposed instruction that is incomplete or misleading. The court is not required to correct, modify, or edit an incomplete proposed instruction [Orient Handel v. United States Fid. & Guar. Co. (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 684, 698, 237 Cal. Rptr. 667 ; Alvarez v. Felker Mfg. Co. (1964) 230 Cal. App. 2d 987, 1001, 41 Cal. Rptr. 514 ; see also Conservatorship of Gregory (2000) 80 Cal. App. 4th 514, 522, 95 Cal. Rptr. 2d 336 (court not required to give instructions that are not correct statements of law, or are incomplete or misleading)]. Nor is the trial court compelled to redraft a proposed inaccurate instruction [Orient Handel v. United States Fid. & Guar. Co. (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 684, 698, 699, 237 Cal. Rptr. 667 ; Barth v. B. F. Goodrich Tire Co. (1968) 265 Cal. App. 2d 228, 243, 71 Cal. Rptr. 306] .

However, the trial court errs by refusing a proffered instruction because there is conflicting evidence on the issue, i.e., the court may not weigh conflicting evidence by refusing a proffered instruction [Fish v. Los Angeles Dodgers Baseball Club (1976) 56 Cal. App. 3d 620, 641, 128 Cal. Rptr. 807 ; McGoldrick v. Porter-Cable Tools (1973) 34 Cal. App. 3d 885, 891, 110 Cal. Rptr. 481 ; see also John B. Gunn Law Corp. v. Maynard (1987) 189 Cal. App. 3d 1565, 1573, 235 Cal. Rptr. 180 (prejudicial refusal of instruction); § 326.24[1]]. Conversely, the court should refuse instructions on principles of law not applicable to the issues in the case. To do otherwise is likely to confuse and mislead the jury [Perry v. Schwartz (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 825, 829, 33 Cal. Rptr. 511] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersJudgesDiscretionCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsRequests for Instructions

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329

Chapter 326 JURY INSTRUCTIONS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. In Trial Court

28-326 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326.27

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt Editorial Consultant William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents.

§ 326.27 Court's Disposition of Proposed or Requested Jury Instructions

Before the commencement of argument, a trial court must, at the request of counsel, do the following [Code Civ. Proc. § 607a]:

- Decide whether to give, refuse, or modify the proposed instructions.
- Decide which instructions, if any, to give in addition to those proposed.
- Advise counsel of all instructions to be given.

If the latest edition of the Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions (CACI) (LexisNexis Matthew Bender, Official Publisher) contains an instruction applicable to a case and the trial judge determines that the jury should be instructed on the subject, it is recommended that the judge use the CACI instruction unless the judge determines that a different instruction would more accurately state the law and be understood by jurors. Whenever the latest edition of CACI does not contain an instruction on a subject on which the trial judge determines that the jury should be instructed, or when a CACI instruction cannot be modified to submit the issue properly, the instruction given on that subject should be accurate, brief, understandable, impartial, and free from argument [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.1050(e)]. For discussion of the use of CACI, see §§ 326.23[2], 326.82.

If a party requests special instructions, the court must do any of the following [see Code Civ. Proc. § 609]:

- Give the instructions as requested.

- Refuse to give the instructions as requested.

- Give the instructions with modifications in a manner that makes distinct which instructions were given in whole or in part.

For discussion of the use of non-CACI instructions, see § 326.23; for a general form for proposed jury instructions, see § 326.81.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsRequests for InstructionsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsStandard Instructions

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326 JURY INSTRUCTIONS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. In Trial Court

28-326 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326.28

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt Editorial Consultant William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents.

§ 326.28 Opportunity to Demand Clarification of Jury Instructions

If the trial court gives an instruction that is legally correct, but one of the parties complains that the instruction is too general, lacks clarity, or is incomplete, the complaining party may request additional or qualifying instructions. If the party fails to request additional or qualifying instructions, the party waives that issue on appeal [Weeks v. Baker & McKenzie (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 1128, 1162, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 510 ; see Conservatorship of Gregory (2000) 80 Cal. App. 4th 514, 520, 95 Cal. Rptr. 2d 336 ; Switzer v. State (1969) 269 Cal. App. 2d 627, 636, 75 Cal. Rptr. 371] .

ILLUSTRATION:

Instruction Incomplete Compared to Facts in Evidence. In a negligence action, an instruction was not entirely applicable to the facts of the case and the plaintiff did not request amplification of, or proffer an instruction on, when a driver may pass on the right side of the road. The court of appeal found that the plaintiff forfeited the right to complain on appeal of the incompleteness of the instruction given. This was the type of error that a party must have raised in the trial court to preserve it for appeal [Downing v. Barrett Mobile Home Transport, Inc. (1974) 38 Cal. App. 3d 519, 523, 113 Cal. Rptr. 277] .

PRACTICE TIP: Request Clarification if Any Doubt as to Jury's Understanding. If you have any doubt whether the jury understood an instruction or whether the jury might misapprehend its meaning, either ask the court to explain the instruction or prepare and proffer an instruction that explains the law clearly [O'Connor v. United Railroads of San Francisco (1914) 168 Cal. 43, 52, 141 P. 809] . For discussion of when a party is deemed to have excepted to jury instructions given, refused, or modified, by a court, see § 326.29.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsSupplemental Instructions

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326 JURY INSTRUCTIONS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. In Trial Court

28-326 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326.29

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt Editorial Consultant William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents.

§ 326.29 Instructions Deemed Excepted to Automatically

[1] "Exception" Generally

An exception is an objection on a matter of law to a decision made, before or after judgment, by a court, tribunal, judge, or other judicial officer in an action or proceeding. An exception must be taken at the time a decision is made [Code Civ. Proc. § 646]. Certain actions by the trial court are deemed automatically excepted to [see Code Civ. Proc. § 647]. For the exceptions specifically in the context of jury instructions, see § 326.29[2].

The trial court or the court of appeal may vacate a verdict and modify or vacate any other decision, in whole or in part, and grant a new or further trial on all or part of the issues on application of an aggrieved party for an error in law that occurs at the trial and is excepted to by the party making the application, and that materially affects the substantial rights of the applicant [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(7)]. For discussion and forms for use in moving to vacate a verdict and for a new or further trial, see Ch. 371, Motions After Trial .

[2] Certain Jury Instructions

The parties are deemed to except to the giving of an instruction, refusal to give an instruction, or modification of an instruction [Code Civ. Proc. § 647]. If a party, at the time the ruling on an instruction is sought or made, or within a reasonable time afterwards, makes the party's position known by objection or otherwise, all other orders, rulings, actions, or decisions are deemed to have been excepted to [Code Civ. Proc. § 647]. Hence, instructions requested by an adverse party are deemed excepted to by the complaining party under the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 647, even though the complaining party makes no objection to them [Pappert v. San Diego Gas & Electric Co. (1982) 137 Cal. App. 3d 205, 212, 186 Cal. Rptr. 847].

Similarly, a party's failure to request an instruction does not bar the party from asserting on appeal that it was error for the court to give the instruction, because Code Civ. Proc. § 647 expressly provides that giving an instruction is deemed excepted to [Griesel v. Dart Industries, Inc. (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 578, 583-584 n.4, 153 Cal. Rptr. 213, 591 P.2d 503] . At least one court has interpreted Code Civ. Proc. § 647 to mean that when an instruction contains an incorrect statement of the law, in contrast to an instruction is too general or is incomplete, failure to object or to propose a correct instruction will not bar a party from raising the error on appeal [U.S. Roofing, Inc. v. Credit Alliance Corp. (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 1431, 1447, 279 Cal. Rptr. 533] .

For discussion of the effect of a party's failure to propose complete jury instructions, see § 326.25. For discussion of the effect of a party's failure to request additional or qualifying instructions, see § 326.28.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsObjections to Instructions

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326 JURY INSTRUCTIONS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. In Trial Court

28-326 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326.30

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt Editorial Consultant William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents.

§ 326.30 Instructing the Jury

Immediately after the jury is sworn, the trial judge may, in his or her discretion, "preinstruct" the jury. Preinstructions can relate to the elements of the charges or claims, the jury's duties, the jury's conduct, the order of proceedings, the procedure for submitting written questions, and the legal principles that will govern the proceedings [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.1035].

At the close of evidence or after closing arguments, the court charges the jury with instructions [Code Civ. Proc. § 607]. The court instructs on all matters of law necessary for rendering a verdict. If the court restates the testimony of the case, it must inform the jurors that they are the exclusive judges of all questions of fact [Code Civ. Proc. § 608].

The court may, at its discretion, give special instructions requested by either party [Code Civ. Proc. § 609]. For discussion of special findings and special interrogatories, see Ch. 326A, Jury Verdicts .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersJudgesDiscretionCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326 JURY INSTRUCTIONS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. In Trial Court

28-326 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326.31

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt Editorial Consultant William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents.

§ 326.31 Statement of Points of Law

If requested by either party, the court must furnish to either party a statement of the points of law charged to the jury or must sign a statement of points prepared by counsel for either party [Code Civ. Proc. § 608].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329

Chapter 326 JURY INSTRUCTIONS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. In Trial Court

28-326 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326.32

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt Editorial Consultant William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents.

§ 326.32 Retirement of Jury for Deliberations

[1] Documents Jury May Take Into Deliberations

When the court submits the case to the jury, the jury then retires for deliberation [see Code Civ. Proc. § 613 (jury may decide case in court or retire for deliberation); for discussion of requirements when the jury retires, see § 326.32[2]]. If the jury retires to deliberate, the court must advise the jury of the availability of a written copy of the jury instructions. The court may at its discretion, or must if the jury so requests, provide the jury with a written copy of the instructions given [Code Civ. Proc. § 612.5; see CACI No. 5000 (Duties of the Judge and Jury)].

The jurors may also take into deliberations all evidence except deposition transcripts and papers the court does not find advisable to take from their possessor. The jurors may also take exhibits the court deems proper and notes of testimony or other proceedings made by themselves during the course of the trial. However, the jury may not retire with the trial notes of a nonjuror [Code Civ. Proc. § 612]. Similarly, one juror may not tell other jurors about an experiment conducted with a nonjuror outside the jury room [Bell v. State of California (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 919, 930-934, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 541 (discussing propriety of juror experiments in general); see also CACI No. 100 (instruction to jurors not to conduct experiments)]. For discussion of juror misconduct generally, see Ch. 551, Trial .

Jurors may take notes during trial [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.1031] and these notes can also be taken into the jury room during deliberations [see generally CACI Nos. 102, 5010].

[2] Custody, Privacy, and Secrecy of Jury During Deliberations

When the jury retires to deliberate, the jurors are kept together in a convenient place under the charge of a court officer until at least three-fourths of them agree on a verdict or they are discharged by the court. The officer may not allow any communications to reach the jurors and is prohibited from making any communication himself or herself except on court order and except for asking if three-fourths of the jurors have agreed on a verdict. The officer may not communicate to anyone about the state of the jury's deliberations or the verdict before it is read by the clerk [see Code Civ. Proc. § 613].

[3] Jury's Requests for Further Information

[a] What Jury May Request

If there is a disagreement among jurors as to any part of the testimony, or if the jurors wish to be informed of any point of law, they may request that the officer conduct them back into the courtroom [Code Civ. Proc. § 614]. The jury may request rereading of original instructions or new instructions [Bartosh v. Banning (1967) 251 Cal. App. 2d 378, 387, 59 Cal. Rptr. 382] . The court has discretion not to give new instructions or reread original instructions when the original instructions are full and complete in themselves and readily understandable by a person of common intelligence [People v. McCleod (1997) 55 Cal. App. 4th 1205, 1219-1220, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 545 (construing language in Penal Code § 1138 substantially similar to Code Civ. Proc. § 614)]. If the jury requests that testimony be reread to them, the request must reasonably identify the testimony in question [see Hutton v. Brookside Hospital (1963) 213 Cal. App. 2d 350, 353, 29 Cal. Rptr. 774, 29 Cal. Rptr. 670] .

[b] Presence of Parties, Counsel, or Judge

Ordinarily, the court must respond to the jury's request in the presence of, or after notice to, the parties or their counsel [Code Civ. Proc. § 614]. However, there may be exceptions to this rule. For example, in one case in which the jury announced that it had already arrived at a verdict and communicated its desire to look at an exhibit, the court's message that there was no need to view the exhibit, made out of presence of counsel, was not expressly prohibited because the court had been informed that the jury had reached a verdict [Carlson, Collins, Gordon & Bold v. Banducci (1967) 257 Cal. App. 2d 212, 228-230, 64 Cal. Rptr. 915] . The trial court's communication to a jury outside the presence of counsel requires reversal only if an examination of the entire cause shows that the error resulted in a miscarriage of justice [Harris v. City of Compton (1985) 172 Cal. App. 3d 1, 11, 217 Cal. Rptr. 884] .

When the information requested is a reading of testimony previously received in evidence, the judge in his or her discretion need not be present in court during the reading, unless good cause for the judge's presence is shown [Code Civ. Proc. § 614.5].

[4] Recall of Jury for Further Instructions on Court's Own Motion

The trial court has the inherent right to recall the jurors for further instructions on its own motion. If the court recalls the jury to read an unintentionally omitted instruction, the court can avoid the danger that the jury might give undue emphasis to the instruction by doing one of the following [Weirum v. RKO General, Inc. (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 40, 50, 123 Cal. Rptr. 468, 539 P.2d 36] :

- Admonishing the jury not to attach any particular emphasis to the fact it is reading certain instructions which had been inadvertently omitted in its first reading.

- Rereading all the instructions.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury DeliberationsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsSupplemental Instructions

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326 JURY INSTRUCTIONS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. In Trial Court

28-326 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326.33

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt Editorial Consultant William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents.

§ 326.33 Alleging Prejudice by Motion for New Trial

Granting new trial is a proper remedy for the giving of an erroneous jury instruction when the improper instruction materially affected the substantial rights of the aggrieved party [Maher v. Saad (2000) 82 Cal. App. 4th 1317, 1325, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 213] .

When instructions are erroneous, the question of prejudice and whether erroneous instructions were cured by other instructions is for the discretion of the trial court on a motion for new trial [Conner v. Southern Pacific Co. (1952) 38 Cal. 2d 633, 642, 241 P.2d 535] . For discussion of whether instructional error is prejudicial, see § 326.43[2]; for discussion of curing instructional error by other instructions, see § 326.43[3]. For additional discussion and forms for use in moving for a new trial, see Ch. 371, Motions After Trial, § 357.60 et seq.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New Trials

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326 JURY INSTRUCTIONS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. In Trial Court

28-326 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 326.34-326.39

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt Editorial Consultant William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents.

[Reserved]

§§ 326.34[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326 JURY INSTRUCTIONS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. On Appeal

28-326 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326.40

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt Editorial Consultant William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents.

§ 326.40 Appeals Based on Erroneous Jury Instructions

[1] Jury Instructions Considered as a Whole on Appeal

When reviewing the record on appeal, the reviewing court considers the jury instructions in their entirety. When they state the law of a case fairly and clearly, they are not objectionable even though isolated passages of single instructions may be subject to just criticism [United Pacific Ins. Co. v. Southern Cal. Edison Co. (1985) 163 Cal. App. 3d 700, 712, 209 Cal. Rptr. 819 ; Eagar v. McDonnell Douglas Corp. (1973) 32 Cal. App. 3d 116, 120, 107 Cal. Rptr. 819] . Semantic analysis of a single line, sentence, or instruction without regard to the whole charge can only result in misleading distortion [Hom v. Clark (1963) 221 Cal. App. 2d 622, 643, 35 Cal. Rptr. 11] .

The reviewing court must scrutinize the law and facts as a whole and review all circumstances of the case, including the evidence and other instructions [Osborn v. Mission Ready Mix (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 104, 122, 273 Cal. Rptr. 457 ; People v. Coleman (1979) 89 Cal. App. 3d 312, 322-323, 152 Cal. Rptr. 407] . The appellate court will not reverse because of verbal inaccuracies in an instruction or because an instruction does not contain all of the elements contained in the instructions as a whole [Mangrum v. Union P. R. Co. (1964) 230 Cal. App. 2d 960, 967, 41 Cal. Rptr. 536]. The reviewing court must adopt the construction of the instructions that will support rather than defeat the verdict if the instructions are reasonably susceptible to that interpretation [Tele-Count Engineers, Inc. v. Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 455, 463, 214 Cal. Rptr. 276].

When a new trial was granted on the basis of an erroneous instruction, the order will not be disturbed unless the questioned instruction was absolutely accurate and under no reasonable interpretation could possibly have mislead or confused the jury [Bell v. Bayerische Motoren Werke Aktiengesellschaft (2010) 181 Cal. App. 4th 1108, 1123-1124, 105 Cal. Rptr. 3d 485 ; Maher v. Saad (2000) 82 Cal. App. 4th 1317, 1325, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 213] .

[2] Verdict in Accord With Evidence and Law Will Be Upheld

If a verdict is in accord with the evidence and the law, it is not subject to attack even if it is contrary to an erroneous instruction, because the error in the instruction is cured by the verdict [Boam v. Trident Financial Corp. (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 738, 743, 8 Cal. Rptr. 2d 177] .

[3] Invited Error

When a party requests an instruction and later complains of the instruction on appeal, any error is "invited error." A party challenging a verdict or judgment has the burden of presenting a record on appeal that is sufficiently complete to establish that the claimed errors were not invited by that party. In the absence of that showing, the party cannot complain [Phillips v. Noble (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 163, 169, 323 P.2d 385 ; see Fortman v. Hemco, Inc. (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 241, 255, 259 Cal. Rptr. 311] .

On appeal, a party cannot legitimately object to instructions when the party tendered instructions on the same principles as those to which the party objects [Moreno v. Herrera (1968) 260 Cal. App. 2d 418, 426, 67 Cal. Rptr. 151 ; Davis v. Nelson (1963) 221 Cal. App. 2d 62, 65, 34 Cal. Rptr. 201] , unless the objecting party's proposed instructions were sufficiently different [see Pappert v. San Diego Gas & Electric Co. (1982) 137 Cal. App. 3d 205, 212, 186 Cal. Rptr. 847 (different test for superseding cause)].

ILLUSTRATION:

Extra-Statutory Language Invited Error. A county's request for a companion instruction containing extra-statutory language later incorporated in the instruction given by the court amounted to invited error. [Johnston v. County of Yolo (1969) 274 Cal. App. 2d 46, 58, 79 Cal. Rptr. 33] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsStandards of ReviewHarmless & Invited ErrorsInvited Errors Doctrine

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326 JURY INSTRUCTIONS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. On Appeal

28-326 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326.41

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt Editorial Consultant William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents.

§ 326.41 Designation of Clerk's Transcript on Appeal

If a party attacks the jury instructions on appeal, the party must designate the clerk's transcript on appeal to include all written instructions given and show at whose request the instructions were given [Perry v. Schwartz (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 825, 828, 33 Cal. Rptr. 511] . For designation of the clerk's transcript on appeal generally, see Ch. 44, Appeal: Preparing and Filing the Record .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsRecords on Appeal

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326 JURY INSTRUCTIONS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. On Appeal

28-326 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326.42

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt Editorial Consultant William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents.

§ 326.42 Grounds for Challenges to Instructions

[1] Repetition

The trial court need not give more than one instruction on a given principle of law; that is, repetitious instructions are improper [Crooks v. Pirrone (1964) 228 Cal. App. 2d 549, 554, 39 Cal. Rptr. 622] . The court may refuse a proposed instruction if the instructions already include the substance of the proposed instruction [Schroeder v. Auto Driveaway Co. (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 908, 915-916, 114 Cal. Rptr. 622, 523 P.2d 662] . However, the trial court may give lengthy and somewhat repetitive instructions to the jury if the issues are complicated or confusing to the jury [see Bertero v. National Gen. Corp. (1974) 13 Cal. 3d 43, 57-58, 118 Cal. Rptr. 184, 529 P.2d 608 (long, bitterly contested trial of malicious prosecution action); Sprague v. Equifax, Inc. (1985) 166 Cal. App. 3d 1012, 1046, 213 Cal. Rptr. 69] .

For discussion of the danger of repetition in formula instructions, see § 326.23[6][d].

[2] Undue Emphasis

It is error for the trial court to give and proper to refuse to give an instruction that unduly emphasizes issues, theories, or defenses by repetition or by singling them out or making them unduly prominent [Major v. Western Home Insurance Company (2009) 169 Cal. App. 4th 1197, 1217-1218, 87 Cal. Rptr. 3d 556]. Further, an instruction should state rules of law generally, rather than elaborate on matters of evidence [Slayton v. Wright (1969) 271 Cal. App. 2d 219, 238, 76 Cal. Rptr. 494] . The court's attempt to stress, overemphasize, or unduly make prominent selected portions of evidence violates the rule that instructions should not focus the jury's attention on particular items of evidence. The vice in this kind of instruction is that it puts the court in the position of making an argument to the jury, and misleads the jury into thinking that, because the court has specifically mentioned certain testimonial facts, they are of greater importance or weight or that the court believes them to be true [Slayton v. Wright (1969) 271 Cal. App. 2d 219, 238, 76 Cal. Rptr.

494] .

ILLUSTRATION:

Failure to Reread Balancing Instruction. In a wrongful death action, when the jury requested further information, the trial court reread instructions that were repetitious and stressed the duties of a pedestrian (decedent) without stating the reciprocal obligations applicable to a driver (defendant). This amounted to undue emphasis. [Clark v. State of California (1950) 99 Cal. App. 2d 616, 624, 222 P.2d 300] .

However, there is no need for a numerical balance between instructions favoring one party over another [Mason v. Case (1963) 220 Cal. App. 2d 170, 182, 33 Cal. Rptr. 710] . For example, if cases are consolidated for trial on the motion of a party and that party submits separate instructions pertaining to each of the adversarial parties, the party is not in a position to complain on appeal of the number of instructions on a given issue [see Risley v. Lenwell (1954) 129 Cal. App. 2d 608, 652, 277 P.2d 897 (no overemphasis of issue of damages to prejudice of defendants in personal injury action)].

For discussion of the danger of undue emphasis in formula instructions, see § 326.23[6][d].

[3] Argumentativeness

An argumentative instruction is one that goes too elaborately into the particular facts on which one of the parties relied. An instruction should state rules of law generally rather than elaborate on specific matters of evidence [Slayton v. Wright (1969) 271 Cal. App. 2d 219, 238, 76 Cal. Rptr. 494] . It is not the province of a court to make an argument to a jury.

The court should not give an argumentative instruction even though the argument is a legitimate one [In re Estate of Clark (1919) 180 Cal. 395, 398-399, 181 P. 639] . However, instructions that merely state the claims of a party without intimating that the claims have been proven are not objectionable as argumentative, since they do not assume the existence of facts not in evidence or with respect to which there is a conflict of evidence [Slayton v. Wright (1969) 271 Cal. App. 2d 219, 239, 76 Cal. Rptr. 494] .

For discussion of the danger of argumentativeness in formula instructions, see § 326.23[6][d].

[4] Irrelevance

An instruction is erroneous, even though abstractly correct as a statement of law, if it does not concern the issues developed by the evidence or from reasonable inferences drawn from the evidence [De George v. Crimmins (1967) 254 Cal. App. 2d 544, 547, 62 Cal. Rptr. 394] .

ILLUSTRATION:

Instruction Must Be Related to Evidence. In an action arising from a collision between a bicycle operated by a mentally retarded adult and a city bus, the trial court gave an instruction on the standard of care for a person with impaired faculties, even though there was no evidence to support the conclusion that impaired mental or physical faculties played any part in causing the collision. The court of appeal found the instruction improper. In the absence of evidence that the bicycle operator's conduct was somehow attributable to or connected with his or her impaired faculties, the instruction was likely to be confusing and therefore should not have been given [Fox v. City & County of San Francisco (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 164, 173, 120 Cal. Rptr. 779] .

The court is not precluded from calling a jury's attention to matters not in evidence, if counsel has argued that those issues were before the jury for consideration and deliberation [Tingley v. Times Mirror Co. (1907) 151 Cal. 1, 28, 89 P. 1097] .

[5] Inconsistency

The trial court can err by giving conflicting instructions that confuse the jury [see Fitch v. Le Beau (1969) 1 Cal. App. 3d 320, 325, 81 Cal. Rptr. 722 (judgment reversed after trial court gave incompatible instructions on landowner's duty to licensee)]. Because the jury must accept the court's instructions as correct statements of law, the jury is likely to be confused and misled by conflicting statements. Likewise, it is difficult to determine which of several conflicting instructions control a jury's determination [see Henderson v. Harnischfeger Corp. (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 663, 673, 117 Cal. Rptr. 1, 527 P.2d 353] .

When two instructions are inconsistent, the more specific charge controls.

ILLUSTRATION:

Contributory Negligence Instruction in Medical Malpractice Action. In a medical malpractice action, the jury was correctly instructed on general negligence [see BAJI No. 3.00 (now CACI No. 400)], but erroneously instructed on the principle of contributory negligence in the context of medical malpractice. The appellate court reversed, because it was more likely that the jury followed the improper instruction [LeMons v. Regents of University of Cal. (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 869, 878, 148 Cal. Rptr. 355, 582 P.2d 946] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsObjections to Instructions

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326 JURY INSTRUCTIONS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. On Appeal

28-326 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326.43

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt Editorial Consultant William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents.

§ 326.43 Requirement of Prejudice

[1] No Reversal Unless Error Is Prejudicial and Results in Miscarriage of Justice

Under the California Constitution, a judgment may not be reversed for instructional error in a civil case unless the court, after examining the entire cause, including the evidence, is of the opinion that the error resulted in a miscarriage of justice [see Cal. Const., art. VI, § 13; Soule v. General Motors Corp. (1994) 8 Cal. 4th 548, 580, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 607, 882 P.2d 298] .

Reversal is similarly restricted by statute. Under Code Civ. Proc. § 475, a reviewing court must disregard any error, improper ruling, instruction, or defect, in the pleadings or proceedings that does not affect the substantial rights of the parties. No judgment, decision, or decree is to be reversed or affected by an error, improper ruling, instruction, or defect unless all of the following appear from the record [Code Civ. Proc. § 475]:

- The error, ruling, instruction, or defect is prejudicial.
- The complaining or appealing party sustained and suffered substantial injury as a result of the error, ruling, instruction, or defect.
- A different result would have been probable if the error, ruling, instruction or defect did not occur or exist.

There is no presumption that error is prejudicial or that a party was injured if error is shown [Code Civ. Proc. § 475].

Thus, failure to properly instruct the jury is not inherently prejudicial and there is no automatic reversal merely because the court failed to instruct the jury properly [Soule v. General Motors Corp. (1994) 8 Cal. 4th 548, 580, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 607, 882 P.2d 298 (finding error was harmless); Logacz v. Limansky (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 1149, 1156-1166, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 257 (finding error was prejudicial and reversing)]. The reviewing court will not reverse a judgment for misdirection of the jury absent a miscarriage of justice [Soule v. General Motors Corp. (1994) 8 Cal. 4th 548, 580, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 607, 882 P.2d 298 ; Alcala v. Vazmar Corporation (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 747, 754, 84 Cal. Rptr. 3d 402 (no error in declining to instruct on negligence per se)].

For discussion of the analysis used to determine whether instructional error warrants reversal, see [2], below.

ILLUSTRATION:

Absence of Instruction May Be Prejudicial. In an asbestos exposure case, plaintiff was a smoker and had previously tested positive for tuberculosis. The court refused to give an instruction proffered by defendant requiring the jury to reduce medical-monitoring damages for monitoring already required by plaintiff's preexisting conditions. The appellate court found that the absence of that instruction was prejudicial because defendant was left without an instruction to support its argument that all the monitoring plaintiff needed was already needed for preexisting conditions [Gutierrez v. Cassiar Mining Corp. (1998) 64 Cal. App. 4th 148, 156-159, 162, 75 Cal. Rptr. 2d 132] .

[2] Standard for Determining Prejudicial Error

[a] No Presumption of Inherent Prejudice

There is no presumption of inherent prejudice from instructional error in civil cases [Rutherford v. Owens-Illinois, Inc. (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 953, 983, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 16, 941 P.2d 1203 ; Soule v. General Motors Corp. (1994) 8 Cal. 4th 548, 573-580, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 607, 882 P.2d 298 ; see Henderson v. Harnischfeger Corp. (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 663, 674, 117 Cal. Rptr. 1, 527 P.2d 353 ; Mock v. Michigan Millers Mutual Ins. Co. (1992) 4 Cal. App. 4th 306, 322, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 594 (articulating former standard)].

[b] Must Be Probable That Error Affected Verdict

Instructional error in a civil case is prejudicial when it is probable that the error affected the verdict [Soule v. General Motors Corp. (1994) 8 Cal. 4th 548, 580, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 607, 882 P.2d 298 ; Pool v. City of Oakland (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 1051, 1069, 232 Cal. Rptr. 528, 728 P.2d 1163 ; LeMons v. Regents of University of California (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 869, 875, 148 Cal. Rptr. 355, 582 P.2d 946 ; Ortega v. Pajaro Valley Unified School Dist. (1998) 64 Cal. App. 4th 1023, 1049-1050, 75 Cal. Rptr. 2d 777 ; Nat'l Med. Transp. Network v. Deloitte & Touche (1998) 62 Cal. App. 4th 412, 432, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 720] , i.e., it is reasonably probable that, absent the error the jury would have returned a verdict more favorable to the complaining party [see Fletcher v. Western National Life Ins. Co. (1970) 10 Cal. App. 3d 376, 407, 89 Cal. Rptr. 78 (no reversal; technical omissions in jury instructions)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Party in Whose Favor Verdict Rendered May Not Assert Instructional Error as Grounds for New Trial. In spite of potential prejudice, a party in whose favor a verdict is rendered may not assert instructional error as a ground for a new trial [see Bristow v. Ferguson (1981) 121 Cal. App. 3d 823, 826-827, 175 Cal. Rptr. 571 (victorious defendants could not assert potentially prejudicial instruction as ground for new trial on their case alone)]. For discussion of motions for new trial generally, see Ch. 371, Motions After Trial .

The determination of whether the error affected the verdict depends heavily on the particular nature of the error, including its natural and probable effect on a party's ability to fully present its case to the jury. Actual prejudice must be evaluated in the context of the trial record in the individual case [Soule v. General Motors Corp. (1994) 8 Cal. 4th

548, 580, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 607, 882 P.2d 298 ; Ortega v. Pajaro Valley Unified School Dist. (1998) 64 Cal. App. 4th 1023, 1050, 75 Cal. Rptr. 2d 777 ; Nat. Med.Tran. Network v. Deloitte & Touche (1998) 62 Cal. App. 4th 412, 432, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 720] .

[c] Multi-Factor Test

The multi-factor test to determine whether an erroneous instruction given or the omission or refusal to give an instruction was prejudicial, requires consideration of the following [Soule v. General Motors Corp. (1994) 8 Cal. 4th 548, 570-571, 580, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 607, 882 P.2d 298 ; Pool v. City of Oakland (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 1051, 1069-1070, 232 Cal. Rptr. 528, 728 P.2d 1163 ; LeMons v. Regents of University of California (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 869, 876, 148 Cal. Rptr. 355, 582 P.2d 946 ; Ortega v. Pajaro Valley Unified School Dist. (1998) 64 Cal. App. 4th 1023, 1050, 75 Cal. Rptr. 2d 777 ; Nat. Med. Tran. Network v. Deloitte & Touche (1998) 62 Cal. App. 4th 412, 432, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 720] :

- The degree of conflict in the evidence on critical issues.
- Whether respondent's argument to the jury may have contributed to the instruction's misleading effect.
- Whether the jury requested a rereading of the erroneous instruction or of related evidence.
- The closeness of the jury's verdict.
- The effect of other instructions in remedying the error (see [3], below).

In deciding whether an omission to instruct was prejudicial, the court must also evaluate the following [Soule v. General Motors Corp. (1994) 8 Cal. 4th 548, 580-581, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 607, 882 P.2d 298 ; Nat. Med. Tran. Network v. Deloitte & Touche (1998) 62 Cal. App. 4th 412, 432, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 720 ; Buzgheia v. Leasco Sierra Grove (1997) 60 Cal. App. 4th 374, 393-394, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 427] :

- The state of the evidence.
- The effect of other instructions.
- The effect of counsel's argument.
- Any indications by the jury itself that it was misled.

[d] Jury Must Have Been Misled

If an instruction as given does not mislead the jury, it is "harmless error," i.e., the error is not so prejudicial as to require a reversal, and the verdict will stand [Hom v. Clark (1963) 221 Cal. App. 2d 622, 658, 35 Cal. Rptr. 11] . For discussion of harmless and prejudicial error in general in appellate review, see Ch. 41, Appeal: Review Standards and Appellate Rules of Law .

The determination of whether the probable effect of an instruction was to mislead a jury depends on all the circumstances of the case, including the facts in evidence and other instructions given [see Mangrum v. Union Pacific R.R. Co. (1964) 230 Cal. App. 2d 960, 966, 41 Cal. Rptr. 536] .

[3] Error Cured by Other Instructions

Errors in instructions may be cured by other instructions [see Howarth v. Maroney (1964) 228 Cal. App. 2d 116, 123, 39 Cal. Rptr. 260] .

ILLUSTRATION:

Curing Instruction. After giving an improper instruction on the statute of limitations as a meritorious defense, which intimated that the defense was peculiarly favored over other defenses, the court instructed the jury that the court did not intend its instructions to express any opinions as to the weight of evidence, the credibility of testimony of witnesses, or the establishment of any fact, and that the jury was not to select a single instruction or be influenced by prejudice or emotion in favor of or against any party. This was sufficient to cure the error in the instruction regarding the statute of limitations defense [Hsu v. Mt. Zion Hospital (1968) 259 Cal. App. 2d 562, 576-577, 66 Cal. Rptr. 659] .

Similarly, an error in a formula instruction that omits necessary elements can be cured if the omitted elements are covered by other specific instructions and the jury is instructed that [Amidon v. Hebert (1949) 93 Cal. App. 2d 225, 227, 208 P.2d 733] :

- The formula instruction was not intended to state all elements involved in case.
- The jury is to regard each instruction in light of all other instructions.

For further discussion of the danger of incompleteness occurring in formula instructions, see § 326.23[6][c].

The prejudicial effect of a misstatement of the law cannot easily be overcome by another instruction to the contrary [Henderson v. Harnischfeger Corp. (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 663, 673, 117 Cal. Rptr. 1, 527 P.2d 353] . The province of jury is invaded when an instruction assumes the existence of a fact not in evidence or with respect to which there is a conflict of evidence. Any error in this respect cannot be cured by other instructions that submit the question of fact to the jury [Pauly v. King (1955) 44 Cal. 2d 649, 663, 284 P.2d 487] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsStandards of ReviewHarmless & Invited ErrorsPrejudicial ErrorsCivil ProcedureAppealsStandards of ReviewPlain ErrorMiscarriages of JusticeCivil ProcedureAppealsStandards of ReviewReversible Errors

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326 JURY INSTRUCTIONS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. On Appeal

28-326 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 326.44-326.49

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt Editorial Consultant William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents.

[Reserved]

§§ 326.44[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326 JURY INSTRUCTIONS
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

28-326 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326.50

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt Editorial Consultant William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents.

§ 326.50 Related Matthew Bender Publications

For the official jury instructions for use in California, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions (CACI) (LexisNexis Matthew Bender, Official Publisher).

For a comprehensive source of discussion and forms for specific jury instructions in contract, business, and real property cases, see California Forms of Jury Instruction (Matthew Bender).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsStandard Instructions

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326 JURY INSTRUCTIONS
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

28-326 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326.51

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt Editorial Consultant William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents.

§ 326.51 State Constitution

Court's right to comment on evidence, testimony, and credibility to extent necessary for jury's proper determination of cause. Cal. Const., art. VI, § 10

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
EvidenceProcedural ConsiderationsJudicial Intervention in TrialsComments by JudgesGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326 JURY INSTRUCTIONS
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

28-326 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326.52

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt Editorial Consultant William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents.

§ 326.52 State Statutes

[1] Proposing, Modifying, Refusing, and Giving Jury Instructions

Counsel may propose jury instructions covering law in pleadings prior to first witness being sworn at trial; additional jury instructions may be proposed before commencement of argument on points of law developed by evidence and, on request, on issues raised in argument. Code Civ. Proc. § 607a

Each proposed instruction must be typed on separate sheet of paper. Code Civ. Proc. § 607a

Before argument commences, trial court, if requested by counsel, must (1) decide whether to give, refuse, or modify proposed instructions; (2) decide which instructions, if any, to give in addition to those proposed; and (3) advise counsel of all instructions to be given. Code Civ. Proc. § 607a

In charging jury, court may state all matters of law it thinks necessary for jury's information in giving verdict; court, if requested, must furnish written statement of points of law contained in charge or sign statement of points of law prepared and submitted by either party. Code Civ. Proc. § 608

If either party asks for special instruction, court must either give instruction as requested, refuse to give it, or give instruction with modification in manner which makes distinct what instructions given in whole or part. Code Civ. Proc. § 609

"Exception" defined. Code Civ. Proc. § 646

Giving instruction, refusing to give instruction, or modifying instruction is deemed excepted to; reasonable time permitted for party to make known party's position by objection. Code Civ. Proc. § 647

If requested, court must instruct jury as to matters judicially noticed. Evid. Code § 457

Failure or refusal of court to take judicial notice of matter or to instruct jury with respect to judicially noticed matter does not preclude court from taking judicial notice of matter in subsequent proceedings. Evid. Code § 458

[2] Retirement of Jury for Deliberations

Presence of disabled juror's reader or interpreter in jury room; prohibition on interpreter's participation in jury deliberations. Code Civ. Proc. § 224

What jury may take into deliberations. Code Civ. Proc. § 612

Copy of written jury instructions. Code Civ. Proc. § 612.5

Case is decided by jury in court or on retirement for deliberations. Code Civ. Proc. § 613

Jurors must be kept together during deliberations without outside communications. Code Civ. Proc. § 613

Return of jurors for information or if disagreement; notice to parties. Code Civ. Proc. § 614

[3] Errors Relating to Jury Instructions

Conditions required for reversal due to error in instructions; no presumption that error is prejudicial or that injury was done in event of error. Code Civ. Proc. § 475

Error in law, when excepted to by aggrieved party and materially affecting party's substantial rights, is ground for vacating verdict and for new or further trial. Code Civ. Proc. § 657(7)

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury DeliberationsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsRequests for InstructionsCivil ProcedureAppealsStandards of ReviewHarmless & Invited ErrorsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsStandards of ReviewReversible Errors

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326 JURY INSTRUCTIONS
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

28-326 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326.53

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt Editorial Consultant William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents.

§ 326.53 California Rules of Court

Proper form for submission of jury instructions. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 2.100-2.119

Juror note-taking. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.1031

Juror questions. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.1033

Preinstruction immediately after swearing in of jury. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.1035

Assisting jury at impasse. Cal. Rules Ct., Rule 2.1036

Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions ("CACI") are "official instructions for use" in California. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.1050(a)

CACI instructions are intended to be freely available for use and reproduction by parties, attorneys, and the public; however, commercial publishers of CACI must get a license from Administrative Office of the Courts. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.1050(c)

CACI instructions are strongly encouraged unless court finds that different instructions would more accurately state the law and be understood by jurors. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.1050(e)

All proposed jury instructions must be submitted to the court in the form and format specified by Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 2.100-2.119; each set of proposed instructions must have a cover page, containing the caption of the case and stating the name of the party proposing the instructions, and an index listing all the proposed instructions; each proposed instruction must be on a separate page or pages, contain the instruction number and title of the instruction at the top of the first page of the instruction, and be prepared without any blank lines or unused bracketed portions, so that it can be read directly to the jury. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.1055

Procedure for designation of clerk's transcript on appeal. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.120

Procedure for notice to prepare reporter's transcript when instructions form basis of appeal. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.130

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsRequests for InstructionsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsStandard InstructionsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsSupplemental InstructionsCivil ProcedureAppealsRecords on AppealCivil ProcedureAppealsReviewabilityNotice of Appeal

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326 JURY INSTRUCTIONS
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

28-326 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326.54

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt Editorial Consultant William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents.

§ 326.54 Decisions

[1] Court's Own Instructions to Jury

Instruction that encouraged jurors in civil trial to reach verdict, listen with deference to other jurors, distrust their own personal judgment if majority of jurors took opposite views, but also to follow their own personal convictions of truth was proper and not coercive. Inouye v. Pacific Southwest Airlines (1981) 126 Cal. App. 3d 648, 650, 652, 179 Cal. Rptr. 13

[2] Form of Jury Instructions

[a] Use of Approved Instructions

Court properly refused to make major changes in approved instructions, particularly when they adequately, if not ideally, stated principles of law applicable to key factual issue presented. Orient Handel v. United States Fid. & Guar. Co. (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 684, 698-699, 237 Cal. Rptr. 667 (definition of fraud)

Court's refusal to give approved instruction containing only reference to major theory of case (in belief approved instruction was loaded with naked abstractions) is prejudicial error if requested approved instruction is more accurate and complete than instructions given by the court. Godwin v. La Turco (1969) 272 Cal. App. 2d 475, 479, 480, 77 Cal. Rptr. 305

[b] Formula Instructions

[i] In General

Test for determining whether formula instruction constitutes prejudicial error. Bertero v. National General Corp. (1974) 13 Cal. 3d 43, 58, 118 Cal. Rptr. 184, 529 P.2d 608

Formula instructions are justified only if they contain all elements necessary for party to prevail. Mazzotta v. Los Angeles Ry. Corp. (1944) 25 Cal. 2d 165, 170, 153 P.2d 338

[ii] Danger of Incompleteness

Absence of necessary elements in formula instruction cannot be compensated for by other instructions stating omitted factors required to sustain verdict. Mazzotta v. Los Angeles Ry. Corp. (1944) 25 Cal. 2d 165, 170, 153 P.2d 338

Rule that formula instruction contain all elements necessary for party to prevail may be relaxed if conditions and surrounding circumstances indicate rule should not be applied in original strictness. Amidon v. Hebert (1949) 93 Cal. App. 2d 225, 227, 208 P.2d 733

[iii] Danger of Repetition, Undue Emphasis, or Argumentativeness

Formula instructions are objectionable if they emphasize portions of testimony and, coming from court, confuse and mislead jury. Roy v. Mission Taxi Co. (1950) 101 Cal. App. 2d 438, 446, 225 P.2d 920

Formula instructions often contain repetitious references that jury must find in favor of party and thus may amount to argument rather than fair discussion of law. Dodge v. San Diego Electric Ry. Co. (1949) 92 Cal. App. 2d 759, 764, 208 P.2d 37

[c] Use of Judicial Opinions

Giving jury instructions on principle of law couched in language taken from judicial opinion in case reports is not always proper. Pearce v. Boggs (1893) 99 Cal. 340, 343-344, 33 P. 906 ; Schance v. H.O. Adams Tile Co. (1955) 131 Cal. App. 2d 549, 555-556, 280 P.2d 851

Instruction in language of opinion is not prejudicial error if instruction is mainly correct and, insofar as instruction is improper, it is innocuous for jury making decision. Schance v. H.O. Adams Tile Co. (1955) 131 Cal. App. 2d 549, 556, 280 P.2d 851

[d] Use of Statutory Language

Instruction in personal injury action in language of code section setting forth basic speed law and informing jury that violation of statute constitutes negligence was proper. Hardin v. San Jose City Lines, Inc. (1953) 41 Cal. 2d 432, 438, 260 P.2d 63

Whether substitution of nonstatutory term in jury instruction misled jury must be determined by reference to general context of instruction, whether words are in effect synonymous, treatment of terms by counsel for both sides, and whether trial court provided statutory definition of term. Ibrahim v. Ford Motor Co. (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 878, 887-888, 263 Cal. Rptr. 64

Instructions are properly denied by trial court when party seeking to submit them does not meet threshold burden of placing party within fact pattern covered by code section to be used. Byrne v. City & County of San Francisco (1980) 113 Cal. App. 3d 731, 737, 170 Cal. Rptr. 302

[3] Right to Proper Jury Instructions

Each party is entitled to have jury instructed on all its theories of case that are reasonable and supported by pleadings and evidence or inferences that may be properly drawn from evidence. Alcala v. Vazmar Corporation (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 747, 754, 84 Cal. Rptr. 3d 402

When court refuses to instruct on legally correct theory, plaintiff is not required to propose instruction on legally incorrect theory in order to preserve error on appeal. Ashcraft v. King (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 604, 615 n.4, 278 Cal. Rptr. 900

Litigant in jury trial is entitled to instructions on every theory advanced by litigant that finds support in evidence, even if evidence is slight, inconclusive, or opposed to preponderance of evidence. Lunghi v. Clark Equipment Co. (1984) 153 Cal. App. 3d 485, 491-493, 200 Cal. Rptr. 387 ; Byrne v. City & County of San Francisco (1980) 113 Cal. App. 3d 731, 737, 170 Cal. Rptr. 302

Court has no duty to modify erroneous instructions submitted by counsel, and may properly reject erroneous instructions. Roberts v. City of Los Angeles (1980) 109 Cal. App. 3d 625, 630, 167 Cal. Rptr. 320

When evidence is received for restrictive purpose, party against whom evidence is offered is entitled to limiting instruction showing specific reason for which evidence admitted. Mangrum v. Union Pacific R.R. Co. (1964) 230 Cal. App. 2d 960, 981, 41 Cal. Rptr. 536

[4] Court's Discretion in Considering Proposed or Requested Jury Instruction

[a] Framing Instructions

It is proper to use an applicable statute's language in giving jury instructions. Conservatorship of Gregory (2000) 80 Cal. App. 4th 514, 520, 95 Cal. Rptr. 2d 336

Instructions are sufficient if they fairly and accurately state necessary legal principles when read as whole; party is not entitled to have substance of instructions given in particular language desired. Fleck v. Bollinger Home Corp. (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 926, 934, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 407

Party does not have right to require particular phraseology of instruction, and court is permitted to modify instruction or give its own instruction in lieu of one offered by party. Byrum v. Brand (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 926, 939, 268 Cal. Rptr. 609 ; Grimshaw v. Ford Motor Co. (1981) 119 Cal. App. 3d 757, 805, 174 Cal. Rptr. 348 ; Eagar v. McDonnell Douglas Corp. (1973) 32 Cal. App. 3d 116, 121, 107 Cal. Rptr. 819

[b] Refusing Instructions

In action for false arrest and related causes of action, trial court properly refused to give instruction requested by defendants on narcotics asset forfeiture hearing being judicial proceeding, since no evidence was introduced that forfeiture hearing took place. Asgari v. City of Los Angeles (1997) 15 Cal. 4th 744, 761, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 842, 937 P.2d 273

In determining whether refusal to instruct jury as requested is erroneous, reviewing court is required to examine evidence in light most favorable to appellant. Townsend v. Turk (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 278, 280 n.1, 266 Cal. Rptr. 821

Court properly refused inaccurate and misleading instruction; in civil action, court has no duty to modify or correct instructions offered by party. Akers v. Kelley Co. (1985) 173 Cal. App. 3d 633, 652, 219 Cal. Rptr. 513 ; Wank v. Richman & Garrett (1985) 165 Cal. App. 3d 1103, 1112-1113, 211 Cal. Rptr. 919 (argumentative instruction)

In view of trial court's duty to instruct jury on controlling legal principles and to protect parties from unjust verdicts, refusal to give requested instruction was reversible error when omission misled and confused jury, and when it was reasonably probable that result more favorable to requesting party would have been reached absent court's error. Blake v. E. Thompson Petroleum Repair Co. (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 823, 834, 216 Cal. Rptr. 568

[5] Effect of Failure to Propose or Request Complete Jury Instructions

Plaintiffs were entitled to object to erroneous jury instructions when they offered modified instruction which was refused but proposed no additional modifications, and their proposed instruction was neither essentially identical to that which was given by court, nor was it inconsistent with their position on appeal. Pappert v. San Diego Gas & Electric Co. (1982) 137 Cal. App. 3d 205, 212, 186 Cal. Rptr. 847

[6] Opportunity to Demand Clarification of Instructions

If instruction given by court correctly states law, party must request additional or qualifying instruction when it is claimed instruction is (1) lacking clarity, (2) incomplete, or (3) too general; failure to do so bars review of such error on appeal. Conservatorship of Gregory (2000) 80 Cal. App. 4th 514, 520, 95 Cal. Rptr. 2d 336

Party has right to request additional or qualifying instructions when instruction given states correct law but is too general, lacking clarity, or incomplete; failure to do so bars assertion of error on appeal. Switzer v. State of California (1969) 269 Cal. App. 2d 627, 636, 75 Cal. Rptr. 371

[7] Instructions Deemed Automatically Excepted to

Jury instruction erroneous on material element of law is deemed excepted to even absent objection. Manguso v. Oceanside Unified School Dist. (1984) 153 Cal. App. 3d 574, 577, 581-582, 200 Cal. Rptr. 535

[8] Jury's Requests for Further Information

Defense counsel's signature on court's written response to jury inquiry is apparent approval of response; absence of objection in record and apparent approval of court's response to jury inquiry constitute implied waiver of any claim of error on appeal. Hurlbut v. Sonora Community Hospital (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 388, 404, 254 Cal. Rptr. 840

[9] Erroneous Jury Instructions

[a] Argumentativeness

Argumentative instruction defined. Slayton v. Wright (1969) 271 Cal. App. 2d 219, 238, 76 Cal. Rptr. 494

[b] Inconsistency

Giving conflicting instructions is prejudicial error if jury's decision is based on issue to which instructions were directed because jury could have been misled. Maupin v. Widling (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 568, 577, 237 Cal. Rptr. 521 ; Hargrave v. Winquist (1982) 134 Cal. App. 3d 916, 923-924, 185 Cal. Rptr. 30

[c] Irrelevance

Directions to jury to apportion fault among multiple defendants in negligence action was erroneous because defendants' proportionate fault was not at issue, and plaintiff had no legitimate interest in having jury determine defendants' liability for indemnity inter se. Klemme v. Hoag Memorial Hospital Presbyterian (1980) 103 Cal. App. 3d 640, 644, 163 Cal. Rptr. 109 (error not prejudicial)

Trial court's refusal to instruct jury that contributory negligence is no defense to strict product liability action was correct when no mention had been made of negligence by either side at trial; instruction on contributory negligence would have been confusing to jury. Foster v. Gillette Co. (1979) 100 Cal. App. 3d 569, 575, 161 Cal. Rptr. 134

Giving instruction that pertains to issue not before jury or supported by evidence is error. People v. Coleman (1979) 89 Cal. App. 3d 312, 321, 152 Cal. Rptr. 407 (error not prejudicial)

Irrelevant instruction defined. De George v. Crimmins (1967) 254 Cal. App. 2d 544, 547, 62 Cal. Rptr. 394

[d] Repetition

Trial court properly gave lengthy and repetitive charge to jury at conclusion of long, bitterly contested malicious prosecution trial when issues, particularly malice and probable cause, were confusing to jury. Bertero v. National General Corp. (1974) 13 Cal. 3d 43, 57-58, 118 Cal. Rptr. 184, 529 P.2d 608

[e] Undue Emphasis

Undue emphasis violates rule that instructions should not focus jury's attention on particular items of evidence. Slayton v. Wright (1969) 271 Cal. App. 2d 219, 238, 76 Cal. Rptr. 494

There is no requirement for numerical balance between instructions favoring one party against another. Mason v. Case (1963) 220 Cal. App. 2d 170, 182, 33 Cal. Rptr. 710

No overemphasis on instructions on issue of damages in complaining party's submission of separate instructions pertaining to each adversarial party. Risley v. Lenwell (1954) 129 Cal. App. 2d 608, 652, 277 P.2d 897 (appellants previously submitted separate instructions themselves, undermining their assertion of error)

[10] Prejudicial Instructions

[a] Alleging Prejudice by Motion for New Trial

Question of whether erroneous instructions cured by other instructions is one for discretion of trial court on motion for new trial. Conner v. Southern Pacific Co. (1952) 38 Cal. 2d 633, 642, 241 P.2d 535

[b] Standard for Determining Prejudicial Error

In general, error in giving improper instruction is prejudicial and ground for reversal when it appears likely to have mislead jury and therefore become factor in jury's verdict. Conservatorship of Gregory (2000) 80 Cal. App. 4th 514, 520, 95 Cal. Rptr. 2d 336

To determine whether instructional error prejudicially affected verdict, instructions must be considered as whole and not by individual paragraphs or sentences. Abbott v. Taz Express (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 853, 858, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 360 ; Conservatorship of McKeown (1994) 25 Cal. App. 4th 502, 507, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 542

Whether opposing counsel's argument to jury magnified effect of instructional error is factor in assessing prejudice. Sesler v. Ghumman (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 218, 226, 268 Cal. Rptr. 70

When original instructions are inadequate and jury asks questions indicating confusion and need for further explanation, failure to give proper additional instructions is usually reversible error. Sesler v. Ghumman (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 218, 226-227, 268 Cal. Rptr. 70

Instructional error alone is not sufficient to overturn jury verdict absent showing by appellant that error was prejudicial and resulted in miscarriage of justice; miscarriage of justice is declared only when court, after examination of entire cause including evidence, is of opinion that it is reasonably probable that result more favorable to appealing party would have been reached in absence of error; factors to be considered in determining whether instructional error was prejudicial. Jones v. Toyota Motor Co. (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 364, 371, 243 Cal. Rptr. 611

No precise formula for determining whether probable effect of instruction was to mislead jury and whether error was so prejudicial as to require reversal; determination is dependent on all circumstances, including evidence and other instructions given. Mangrum v. Union Pacific R.R. Co. (1964) 230 Cal. App. 2d 960, 966, 41 Cal. Rptr. 536

[c] Error Cured by Other Instructions

Prejudicial effect of misstatement of important principle of law is not easily overcome by another contradicting instruction. Henderson v. Harnischfeger Corp. (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 663, 673, 117 Cal. Rptr. 1, 527 P.2d 353

Instruction assuming existence of fact not in evidence or with respect to which evidence was in conflict was not cured by other instructions submitting to jury question of whether such fact existed. Pauly v. King (1955) 44 Cal. 2d 649, 663, 284 P.2d 487

Instructional error requires reversal where is seems probable the error prejudicially affected verdict; appellant must show reasonable probability of more favorable result absent the error, determination depends on particular nature of error, and its effect on appellant's ability to place full case before jury; actual prejudice must be assessed in context of trial record; five factors to be considered in assessing prejudice; refusal to give requested instruction on concurrent causation found to be prepucial. Logacz v. Limansky (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 1149, 1156-1166, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 257

In usual case, when jury has been correctly instructed on strict products liability and enters special verdict finding no defect in product, trial court's erroneous refusal to instruct on negligence in designing product is not reversible; however, error was reversible when court failed to instruct on duty to warn. Lunghi v. Clark Equipment Co. (1984) 153 Cal. App. 3d 485, 493-495, 200 Cal. Rptr. 387 (criticized on other grounds in West v. Johnson & Johnson Products, Inc. (1985) 174 Cal. App. 3d 831, 220 Cal. Rptr. 437)

[11] Particular Instructions

[a] Design Defect

Instruction on "consumer expectations test," one of two standards set forth in BAJI No. 9.00.5 (now CACI Nos. 1203 and 1204 to determine when product design is defective, is applicable to products within common experience of ordinary consumer, and was properly refused when product in issue was specialized heavy machinery. Lunghi v. Clark Equipment Co. (1984) 153 Cal. App. 3d 485, 495-496, 200 Cal. Rptr. 387 (criticized on other grounds in West v. Johnson & Johnson Products, Inc. (1985) 174 Cal. App. 3d 831, 220 Cal. Rptr. 437)

[b] Strict Liability

In strict liability action against supplier of lumber that broke under plaintiff's weight due to internal dry rot, instruction on unavoidably unsafe product defense was improper because there was no evidence at all to support defendant's theory that dry rot is unavoidably unsafe defect in wood; trial court's implicit finding that question of whether dry rot in wood is unavoidable can be decided without benefit of evidence solely on basis of "life experience" was erroneous as matter of law. Wilkinson v. Bay Shore Lumber Co. (1986) 182 Cal. App. 3d 594, 600-603, 227 Cal. Rptr. 327

[12] Timeliness of Request for Jury Instruction

Court did not error when it refused to give instruction on ground that it was too late, when it was not exactly correct statement of law and was submitted after initial instructions had been given and after initial oral argument; late instruction would have unduly emphasized its contents. Webber v. Inland Empire Investments, Inc. (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 884, 909, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 594

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersJudgesDiscretionCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsObjections to InstructionsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsRequests for InstructionsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsSupplemental InstructionsCivil ProcedureAppealsStandards of ReviewReversible Errors

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326 JURY INSTRUCTIONS
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

28-326 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326.55

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt Editorial Consultant William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents.

§ 326.55 Law Reviews

Tiersma, The Rocky Road to Legal Reform: Improving Language of Jury Instructions, 66 Brook. L. Rev. 1081 (2001)

Brown, Regulating Decision Effects of Legally Sufficient Jury Instructions, 73 S. Cal. L. Rev. 1105 (2000)

Thornburg, The Power and Process: Instructions and the Civil Jury, 66 Fordham L. Rev. 1837 (1998)

Symposium, The Sound of the Gavel: Perspectives on Judicial Speech: "What Do We Do Now?": Helping Juries Apply the Instructions, 28 Loy. L.A. L. Rev. 869 (1995)

Farrell, Communication in the Courtroom: Jury Instructions, 85 W. Va. L. Rev. 5 (1982)

Schwarzer, Communicating With Juries: Problems and Remedies, 69 Cal. L. Rev. 731 (1981)

Charrow and Charrow, Making Legal Language Understandable: A Psucholinguistic Study of Jury Instructions, 79 Columbia L. Rev. 1306 (1979)

Pollock, How to Persuade the Court to Give Non-BAJI Jury Instructions, 10 CTLJ 109 (1971)

Symposium, 1959 Institute for California Judges--Panel Discussion Part III: Instructing the Jury, 47 Cal. L. Rev. 888 (1959)

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326 JURY INSTRUCTIONS
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

28-326 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326.56

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt Editorial Consultant William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents.

§ 326.56 Text References

Witkin, California Procedure, vol. 7, Trial, §§ 268-329 (4th ed.)

BAJI (9th Ed. 2002) [California Jury Instructions, Civil]

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsStandard Instructions

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326 JURY INSTRUCTIONS
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

28-326 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 326.57-326.79

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt Editorial Consultant William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents.

[Reserved]

§§ 326.57[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

104 of 150 DOCUMENTS

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326 JURY INSTRUCTIONS
PART IV. FORMS

28-326 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326.80

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt Editorial Consultant William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents.

§ 326.80 Request for Jury Instructions

[1] FORM Request for Jury Instructions

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)
Plaintiff,	)
vs.	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	REQUEST FOR JURY INSTRUCTIONS
Defendant.	)
	)
	)

Plaintiff/Defendant _____ [name] respectfully requests this court to give the following [numbered CACI] jury instructions as well as any further or additional instructions requested hereafter.
Dated: _____.

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Use of Form

This form is for use in proposing jury instructions and additional jury instructions to be given by a court. It is the first sheet.

Each proposed instruction must [Code Civ. Proc. § 607a; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.1055(c); see § 326.23[1]]:

- Be on a separate page or pages;

- Contain the instruction number and title of the instruction at the top of the first page of the instruction; and

- Be prepared without any blank lines or unused bracketed portions, so that it can be read directly to the jury.

Each set of proposed jury instructions must have a cover page, containing the caption of the case and stating the name of the party proposing the instructions, and an index listing all the proposed instructions [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.1055(b)(2)].

In the index, approved jury instructions must be identified by their reference numbers and special jury instructions must be numbered consecutively. The index must contain a checklist that the court can utilize to indicate whether the instruction was [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.1055(b)(3)]:

(1) Given as proposed;

(2) Given as modified;

(3) Refused; or

(4) Withdrawn.

Each set of proposed jury instructions must be bound loosely [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.1055(b)(4)].

For forms of proposed instructions to be inserted in this form, see §§ 326.81 (general form of proposed instructions) and 326.82 (CACI form of proposed instructions).

[3] Time for Submission and Service of Proposed Instructions

Counsel for the respective parties to an action must deliver to the trial judge and serve on opposing counsel proposed instructions based on the pleadings in the action. Unless otherwise provided by local rule, the proposed instructions must be submitted before the first witness is sworn [Code Civ. Proc. § 607a; see Wilson v. Gilbert (1972) 25 Cal. App. 3d 607, 613, 102 Cal. Rptr. 31 ; § 326.22]. The time for submission and method of service of proposed jury instructions vary from county to county and court to court. Refer to local court rules and the preference of the presiding judge in each case.

Counsel may deliver to the trial judge and serve on opposing counsel additional proposed instruction based on the evidence developed during discovery and not disclosed in the pleadings. The additional proposed instructions must be submitted before the commencement of argument [Code Civ. Proc. § 607a]. The trial court may disregard an instruction submitted later than required by Code Civ. Proc. § 607a [Zanon v. Moher (1955) 136 Cal. App. 2d 348, 354, 288 P.2d 597] . Refer to local court rules and to the preference of the presiding judge in each case to determine if these rules are altered by local rule or practice.

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326 JURY INSTRUCTIONS
PART IV. FORMS

28-326 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326.81

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt Editorial Consultant William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents.

§ 326.81 General Form of Proposed Jury Instruction

[1] FORM General Form of Proposed Jury Instruction

[PLAINTIFF/DEFENDANT]'S PROPOSED INSTRUCTION
NO. _____

You are instructed that _____ [text of instruction].

GRANTED: _____
GIVEN AS MODIFIED: _____
REFUSED: _____
WITHDRAWN: _____

_____ [signature]

Judge of the Superior Court

Authorities:
_____
_____
_____

[2] Use of Form

This form of proposed jury instruction is for use in conjunction with the request for jury instructions form at § 326.80[1]. This format for proposed instructions, with each proposed instruction on a separate sheet of paper, must be used to propose each different instruction requested, other than a CACI instruction [see Code Civ. Proc. § 607a; see also discussion at § 326.23[1]]. See § 326.82[1] for the correct form for proposing CACI instructions.

[3] Contents of Instruction

Each proposed instruction must [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.1055(c)]:

- Be on a separate page or pages;
- Contain the instruction number and title of the instruction at the top of the first page of the instruction; and
- Be prepared without any blank lines or unused bracketed portions, so that it can be read directly to the jury.

Each instruction presented, except instructions presented by CACI number reference, must have at the bottom of the page a citation of authorities which supports the instruction. No citation is required for approved instructions [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.1055(d)].

Each set of proposed jury instructions must have a cover page, containing the caption of the case and stating the name of the party proposing the instructions, and an index listing all the proposed instructions [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.1055(b)(2)].

In the index, approved jury instructions must be identified by their reference numbers and special jury instructions must be numbered consecutively. The index must contain a checklist that the court can utilize to indicate whether the instruction was [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.1055(b)(3)]:

(1) Given as proposed;

(2) Given as modified;

(3) Refused; or

(4) Withdrawn.

Each set of proposed jury instructions must be bound loosely [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.1055(b)(4)].

For each special instruction proposed by either party, the trial court must do any of the following in a manner that makes distinct what instructions were given in whole or in part [Code Civ. Proc. § 609]:

- Give the instruction as requested.
- Refuse to give the instruction.
- Give the instruction with modifications.

[4] CACI Instructions Strongly Encouraged

Use of CACI instructions is strongly encouraged unless the court finds that different instructions would more accurately state the law and be understood by the jurors; if there is no CACI instruction on the subject or CACI instructions cannot be modified to submit the issue properly, the court may give an instruction which is accurate, brief, understandable, impartial, and free from argument [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.1050(e)].

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326 JURY INSTRUCTIONS
PART IV. FORMS

28-326 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326.82

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt Editorial Consultant William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents.

§ 326.82 CACI Form of Proposed Jury Instruction

[1] FORM CACI Form of Proposed Jury Instruction

CACI No. _____.

[EITHER]

_____ [Quote text of CACI instruction]. Exact copy of CACI No. _____.

[OR]

_____ [Quote text of CACI instruction with deletion of optional bracketed material]. Exact copy of CACI No. _____, except adaptions.

[OR]

_____ [Quote text of CACI instruction that has been modified, with modifications appearing in parenthesis or indicated by other appropriate means]. CACI No. _____, as modified.

GRANTED: _____
GIVEN AS MODIFIED: _____

REFUSED: _____
WITHDRAWN: _____

_____ [signature]

Judge of the Superior Court

[2] Use of Form

This form is for use in conjunction with the form request for jury instructions at § 326.80[1]. This form must be typed on a separate sheet of paper for each proposed instruction requested from the latest edition of CACI [see Code Civ. Proc. § 607a].

Some courts provide preprinted forms on which counsel need only check the numbers of the requested instructions; other courts require only that CACI instructions not adapted or modified be listed on a single typewritten page. Determine the local court rules and practice before preparing CACI instructions for submission.

For a form for use in proposing non-CACI instructions, see § 326.81[1].

[3] CACI Instructions Strongly Encouraged

Use of CACI instructions is strongly encouraged unless the court finds that different instructions would more accurately state the law and be understood by the jurors; if there is no CACI instruction on the subject or CACI instructions cannot be modified to submit the issue properly, the court may give an instruction which is accurate, brief, understandable, impartial, and free from argument [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.1050(e)].

[4] Format of CACI Instructions

Each proposed instruction must [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.1055

- Be on a separate page or pages;

- Contain the instruction number and title of the instruction at the top of the first page of the instruction; and

- Be prepared without any blank lines or unused bracketed portions, so that it can be read directly to the jury.

Each set of proposed jury instructions must have a cover page, containing the caption of the case and stating the name of the party proposing the instructions, and an index listing all the proposed instructions [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.1055(b)(2).

In the index, approved jury instructions must be identified by their reference numbers. The index must contain a checklist that the court can utilize to indicate whether the instruction was [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.1055(b)(3)]:

(1) Given as proposed;

(2) Given as modified;

(3) Refused; or

(4) Withdrawn.

Each set of proposed jury instructions must be bound loosely [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.1055(b)(4)].

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326A JURY VERDICTS

28-326A California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated 326A.syn

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents. Editorial Consultant

§ 326A.syn Synopsis to Chapter 326A: JURY VERDICTS

§ 326A.01 Scope of Chapter

§ 326A.02 Cross References

§§ 326A.03-326A.09 [Reserved]

§ 326A.10 Governing Statutes

§ 326A.11 Definitions

[1] Verdict

[2] General Verdict

[3] Special Verdict

[4] Special Interrogatories

§ 326A.12 Requesting Special Findings or Special Verdicts

[1] In General

[2] Special Verdict Required for Punitive Damages

[3] Advisability of Requesting Special Verdicts or Findings

[4] Time for and Manner of Requesting Special Verdicts or Findings

[5] Court's Discretion in Directing Special Verdicts or Findings

[6] Situations Commonly Employing Special Verdicts or Findings

[7] Sufficiency of Special Verdicts in Negligence Actions

§ 326A.13 Court Open for Instructions and Reception of Verdict

§ 326A.14 Reception of Verdict

[1] Number of Jurors to Agree

[2] Presentation of Verdict and Discharge of Jury

[3] Polling

§ 326A.15 Requirements of Verdict

[1] Amount

[2] Value of Property

[3] When Jury Has Discretion to Award Interest

§ 326A.16 Interpretation of Verdicts

§ 326A.17 Types of Defective Verdicts

[1] Informal Verdicts

[2] Insufficient Verdicts

[3] Ambiguous Verdicts

[4] Jury's Failure to Find on All Issues

[5] Inadequate Damages Awarded by Jury

[6] Inconsistency Between General Verdict and Special Verdicts or Findings

[7] Inconsistent Answers Within Special Verdict

§ 326A.18 Correction of Defective Verdicts

[1] Informal or Insufficient Verdicts

[2] Ambiguous Verdicts

[3] Inadequate Damages Awarded by Jury

[4] Jury's Failure to Find on Issue or Party

[5] Inconsistency Between General Verdict and Special Verdicts or Findings

[6] Inconsistent Answers Within Special Verdict

§ 326A.19 Waiver of Defects in Verdict

§ 326A.20 Entry of Verdict

[1] In General

[2] Writs of Mandate and Prohibition

§ 326A.21 Motion for Judgment Notwithstanding Verdict

§ 326A.22 Entry of Judgment

[1] In General

[2] Death of Party After Verdict and Before Judgment

§ 326A.23 Effect of Verdict

[1] In General

[2] Bifurcated Trial

§§ 326A.24-326A.29 [Reserved]

§ 326A.30 Governing Statute

§ 326A.31 When Proper

§ 326A.32 Timeliness of Motion for Directed Verdict

§ 326A.33 Grounds for Directed Verdict

§ 326A.34 Partial Directed Verdict

§ 326A.35 Directed Verdict in Favor of One of Multiple Defendants

§ 326A.36 After Jury Has Been Discharged

§ 326A.37 Effect of Directed Verdict

§§ 326A.38-326A.49 [Reserved]

§ 326A.50 Related Matthew Bender Publications

§ 326A.51 State Constitution

§ 326A.52 State Statutes

[1] Definitions

[2] Special Verdicts or Findings

[3] Adjournment or Recess

[4] Special Verdict Required for Punitive Damages

[5] Reception of Verdict

[6] Requirements of Verdict

[a] Amount

[b] Value of Property

[c] When Jury Has Discretion to Award Interest

[7] Correction of Defective Verdicts

[a] Informal or Insufficient Verdict

[b] Inconsistency Between General Verdict and Special Verdicts or Findings

[8] Entry of Verdict

[9] Entry of Judgment

§ 326A.53 California Rules of Court

§ 326A.54 Local Court Rules

§ 326A.55 Decisions

[1] Definitions

[a] General Verdict

[b] Special Verdicts

[c] Special Interrogatories

[2] Requesting Special Findings or Special Verdicts

[a] Advisability of Requesting Special Verdicts or Findings

[b] Court's Discretion in Directing Special Verdicts or Findings

[c] Situations in Which Special Verdicts or Findings Commonly Employed

[d] Sufficiency of Special Verdicts in Negligence Actions

[3] Reception of Verdict

[4] Requirements of Verdict

[a] Amount

[b] When Jury Has Discretion to Award Interest

[5] Interpretation of Verdicts

[6] Types of Defective Verdicts

[a] Ambiguous Verdicts

[b] Inadequate Damages Awarded by Jury

[c] Inconsistency Between General Verdict and Special Findings

[d] Informal Verdict

[e] Insufficient Verdicts

[f] Jury's Failure to Find on All Issues or Parties

[7] Correction of Defective Verdicts

[a] Informal or Insufficient Verdict

[b] Ambiguous Verdicts

[c] Inadequate Damages Awarded by Jury

[d] Jury's Failure to Find on Issue or Party

[e] Inconsistency Between General Verdicts and Special Verdicts or Findings

[8] Waiver of Defects in Verdict

[9] Motion for Judgment Notwithstanding Verdict

[10] Effect of Verdict

[a] In General

[b] Bifurcated Trial

§ 326A.56 Law Reviews

§ 326A.57 Text References

§§ 326A.58-326A.59 [Reserved]

§ 326A.60 State Statutes

§ 326A.61 Decisions

[1] Function of Jury in Rendering Directed Verdict

[2] Grounds for Directed Verdict

[3] Timeliness of Motion for Directed Verdict

§§ 326A.62-326A.69 [Reserved]

§ 326A.70 General Verdict

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Modification of Form

[4] Cross References

§ 326A.71 Verdict with Separate Special Findings Regarding Punitive Damages

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Cross References

§§ 326A.73-326A.79 [Reserved]

§ 326A.80 Notice of Motion for Directed Verdict

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Supporting Memorandum Required

[4] Time for Making Motion for Directed Verdict

William G. McDevitt n*
Editorial Consultant

FOOTNOTES:
(n57)Footnote *.
William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents.

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326A JURY VERDICTS
PART I. SCOPE

28-326A California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326A.01

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents. Editorial Consultant

§ 326A.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter discusses jury verdicts [see § 326A.10 et seq.] and directed verdicts [see § 326A.30 et seq.]. A Research Guide is also provided for both topics [see § 326A.50 et seq. and § 326A.60 et seq., respectively].

The chapter includes the following forms:

- General verdict [see § 326A.70].
- Verdict with separate special finding regarding punitive damages [see § 326A.71].
- Notice of motion for directed verdict [see § 326A.80].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawDirected VerdictsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329

Chapter 326A JURY VERDICTS
PART I. SCOPE

28-326A California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326A.02

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents. Editorial Consultant

§ 326A.02 Cross References

- For a form relating to special interrogatories in actions on disability insurance policies, see Ch. 308, Insurance .

- For discussion and forms relevant to requesting and entering judgment, see Ch. 318, Judgments .

- For discussion and forms relating to the right to trial by jury; the opportunities to demand or waive trial by jury; qualifications, voir dire, and challenges to prospective jurors; and conduct of the jury during deliberations, see Ch. 322, Juries and Jury Selection .

- For discussion and forms for proper instructions to jurors prior to their deliberations, see Ch. 326, Jury Instructions .

- For discussion and forms for use in seeking writs of mandate or prohibition, see Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition .

- For discussion and forms for use in making motions for new trial or for judgment notwithstanding the verdict, see Ch. 371, Motions After Trial .

- For discussion and forms relating to special interrogatories to be submitted to a jury for a special verdict, see Ch. 529, Statement of Decision .

- For discussion of juror misconduct as grounds for mistrial, see Ch. 551, Trial , and as grounds for motion for new trial, see Ch. 371, Motions After Trial .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawJudgments Notwithstanding VerdictsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJurorsMisconductCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsRight to Jury TrialCivil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New TrialsCivil ProcedureRemediesWritsCommon Law WritsMandamusCivil ProcedureRemediesWritsCommon Law WritsProhibition

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326A JURY VERDICTS
PART I. SCOPE

28-326A California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 326A.03-326A.09

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents. Editorial Consultant

[Reserved]

§§ 326A.03[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326A JURY VERDICTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Jury Verdicts

28-326A California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326A.10

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents. Editorial Consultant

§ 326A.10 Governing Statutes

Jury verdicts are governed by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 617-619 and Code Civ. Proc. §§ 624-628. Judgment notwithstanding the verdict is governed by Code Civ. Proc. § 629.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawJudgments Notwithstanding VerdictsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329

Chapter 326A JURY VERDICTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Jury Verdicts

28-326A California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326A.11

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents. Editorial Consultant

§ 326A.11 Definitions

[1] Verdict

Black's Law Dictionary defines a verdict as "the formal and unanimous decision or finding made by a jury upon a matter or question duly submitted to the jurors at trial" Black's Law Dictionary 1559 (6th ed. 1990)]. A verdict also is described in Black's Law Dictionary as "the definitive answer given by a jury to the court concerning the matters of fact committed to the jury for its deliberation and determination" Black's Law Dictionary 1559 (6th ed. 1990)].

A verdict is either general or special [Code Civ. Proc. § 624]. For definitions of general and special verdicts, see [2], [3], below, respectively.

[2] General Verdict

A general verdict is a verdict pronounced on all or any of the issues generally, either in favor of the plaintiff or defendant [Code Civ. Proc. § 624]. A general verdict implies a finding in favor of the prevailing party of every fact essential to support its claim or defense [Southern Pac. Co. v. Unarco Industries, Inc. (1974) 116 Cal. Rptr. 847] . For a form of general verdict, see § 326A.70.

If the evidence supports the verdict on any theory of the case, it is assumed the jury so found [Hazelwood v. Gordon (1967) 253 Cal. App. 2d 178, 180-181, 61 Cal. Rptr. 115]. This is referred to as the general verdict rule: When multiple alternative or inconsistent counts are alleged, the jury is instructed on multiple counts, and a general verdict is rendered, that verdict will be upheld if there is substantial evidence to support any of the claims [Henderson v. Harnischfeger Corp. (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 663, 673 , 527 P.2d 353 ; Crogan v. Metz (1956) 47 Cal. 2d 398, 403, 303 P.2d 1029 ; Rodgers v. Kemper Constr. Co. (1975) 50 Cal. App. 3d 608, 617, 124 Cal. Rptr. 143 ; Codekas v. Dyna-Lift Co. (1975)

48 Cal. App. 3d 20, 24-25, 121 Cal. Rptr. 121] . This rule applies even if the measure of damages, and thus the amount of the general damage verdict, might differ under the various theories of recovery pleaded in the complaint [Crogan v. Metz (1956) 47 Cal. 2d 398, 404-405, 303 P.2d 1029 ; Gilman v. Nemetz (1962) 203 Cal. App. 2d 81, 94, 21 Cal. Rptr. 317] , unless damages are apportioned in special findings to the various theories of recovery [see Tavaglione v. Billings (1993) 4 Cal. 4th 1150, 1158, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 608, 847 P.2d 574 , discussed at § 326A.12[3]].

ILLUSTRATION:

General Verdict Rule. A personal injury action was submitted to the jury on theories of negligence, implied warranty, and misrepresentation. There was substantial evidence to support both the negligence and implied warranty theories, and those two theories were unaffected by reversible error. However, the issue of misrepresentation also was submitted to the jury, with instructions inviting a verdict on it, without any evidence to support it. A general verdict was entered for plaintiff. That verdict should be affirmed on appeal. The general verdict rule states that a general verdict will not be disturbed by an appellate court if any theory is supported by substantial evidence [Continental Dairy Equipment Co. v. Lawrence (1971) 17 Cal. App. 3d 378, 383, 94 Cal. Rptr. 887] .

The jury is not required to itemize its verdict or relate the facts it found in arriving at its verdict (except when a special verdict is required; see [3], below) [Sill Properties, Inc. v. CMAG, Inc. (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 42, 49, 33 Cal. Rptr. 155] .

For discussion of preparing and submitting verdict forms, see California Trial Guide § 91.21 (Matthew Bender).

[3] Special Verdict

A special verdict as provided by Code Civ. Proc. § 624 is one in which the jury finds the facts only, leaving the judgment to the court. A special verdict that calls for conclusions of law, implying the facts on which it is based, is defective [see Simon v. San Paolo United States Holding Co., Inc. (2003) 113 Cal. App. 4th 1137, 1148, 7 Cal. Rptr. 3d 367] . A special verdict must present conclusions of fact as established by the evidence rather than the evidence used to prove those facts. The conclusions of fact drawn by the jury must be presented in such a manner that nothing remains for the court to do but draw the conclusions of law from them [Code Civ. Proc. § 624; see Valentine v. Baxter Healthcare Corp. (1999) 68 Cal. App. 4th 1467, 1487, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 252 (special verdict form that asked "Were the Defendants negligent in failing to exercise reasonable care in the design of Plaintiff's breast implants?" did not impermissibly call for evidentiary facts as opposed to ultimate facts)]. For discussion of requesting a special verdict, see § 326A.12. For special verdict forms, see Judicial Council Forms of California Civil Jury Instructions (CACI) (Matthew Bender).

The questions propounded to and answered by the jury constitute the ultimate facts to be found, and together those questions and answers form a special verdict [Estate of Keithley (1901) 134 Cal. 9, 11, 66 P. 5] . Thus a special verdict must pass on all the issues by presenting the conclusions of fact bearing on all of them [In re Sanderson (1887) 74 Cal. 199, 208, 15 P. 753] .

The jury is not required to itemize its verdict or relate the facts it found in arriving at its verdict, except when a special verdict is required [Sill Properties, Inc. v. CMAG, Inc. (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 42, 49, 33 Cal. Rptr. 155] .

[4] Special Interrogatories

Although the terms "special verdicts" and "special interrogatories" often are used interchangeably by the courts, and although the procedures for obtaining special verdicts and special interrogatories are similar, special verdicts and special interrogatories are different. A special interrogatory is a question put to the jury to test the validity of a general verdict. A special verdict, on the other hand, is a finding by the jury of the ultimate facts, following which the court renders judgment [Burlingame Motor Co. v. Peninsula Activities, Inc. (1971) 15 Cal. App. 3d 656, 661, 93 Cal. Rptr. 376] . A special finding on an issue incidental to a general verdict is immaterial; it may be ignored [De Gottardi v. Donati (1909) 155 Cal. 109, 111, 99 P. 492] .

If a court, on its own motion, instructs a jury on all elements of a cause of action, the court may properly refuse a request for cumbersome special interrogatories addressing the same elements of that cause of action [see Babcock v. Omansky (1973) 31 Cal. App. 3d 625, 630, 107 Cal. Rptr. 512 (partially overruled on other grounds in Canal-Randolph Anaheim, Inc. v. Wilkoski (1978) 78 Cal. App. 3d 477, 485, 144 Cal. Rptr. 474) (court instructed on all elements of fraud)].

For a form of verdict with special interrogatories regarding punitive damages, see § 326A.71.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsInterrogatoriesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsGeneral VerdictsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsSpecial Verdicts

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326A JURY VERDICTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Jury Verdicts

28-326A California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326A.12

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents. Editorial Consultant

§ 326A.12 Requesting Special Findings or Special Verdicts

[1] In General

The court may direct the jury to find a special verdict in writing and to find special verdicts as to all or any of the issues. The court also may instruct the jury to find on particular questions of fact when the jury renders a general verdict [Code Civ. Proc. § 625]. For discussions of the distinction between general and special verdicts, and which prevails when there is inconsistency between a general verdict and a special finding, see § 326A.11[2], [3], and § 326A.18[5], respectively.

A special verdict, or finding, is filed with the clerk and entered in the minutes [Code Civ. Proc. § 625].

The statutory scheme contemplates a partial special verdict, since the court can direct the jury to find a special verdict "upon all, or any of the issues" [Code Civ. Proc. § 625; see Valentine v. Baxter Healthcare Corp. (1999) 68 Cal. App. 4th 1467, 1477, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 252] . Upon a jury's return of special verdicts on some, but not all, causes of action, the trial court can enter those verdicts in the minutes as the conclusive adjudication of those causes of action, render judgment on the verdicts where appropriate or reserve judgment on those causes of action pending entry of final judgment upon termination of the case, declare a partial mistrial as to the remaining causes of action, and order a limited retrial [Code Civ. Proc. § 628; Valentine v. Baxter Healthcare Corp. (1999) 68 Cal. App. 4th 1467, 1475, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 252 (case of first impression)].

Historical disuse of special verdicts has not stemmed from ignorance of their availability but, rather, because trial counsel often shun their use. When a special verdict form is taken into a jury room, it focuses special jury attention on a particular matter. Because that matter may be something trial counsel would prefer to have the jury gloss over, the use of special verdicts often is avoided [see McCloud v. Roy Riegels Chems. (1971) 20 Cal. App. 3d 928, 936, 97 Cal. Rptr. 910] . For the conflicting views of appellate courts on the use of special verdicts, see All-West Design, Inc. v. Boozer (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 1212, 1221, 228 Cal. Rptr. 736 .

For special verdict forms, see Judicial Council Forms of California Civil Jury Instructions (CACI) (Matthew Bender).

[2] Special Verdict Required for Punitive Damages

In all cases in which the issue of punitive damages is presented to the jury, the jury must return a special verdict, separating punitive damages from compensatory damages [Code Civ. Proc. § 625]. For a form of verdict with special interrogatories regarding punitive damages, see § 326A.71.

[3] Advisability of Requesting Special Verdicts or Findings

A party has one opportunity to have the jury's findings pinpointed: the request for special verdicts or findings. Well-conceived special verdicts or findings simplify and often eliminate issues on appeal. The responsibility for requesting special verdicts or findings rests on the parties [see Codekas v. Dyna-Lift Co. (1975) 48 Cal. App. 3d 20, 24-25, 121 Cal. Rptr. 121] . An appellate court will uphold a general verdict if there is any substantial evidence to support it [see § 326A.11[2]]. Accordingly, a party concerned about the sufficiency of the evidence to support a key element of a claim or defense must request a special verdict to isolate this particular issue on appeal [see McCloud v. Roy Riegels Chems. (1971) 20 Cal. App. 3d 928, 937, 97 Cal. Rptr. 910] .

When special findings or verdicts are not used, it is assumed that the jury found in accordance with any theory of liability supported by substantial evidence in its general verdict [see § 326A.11[2]]. Thus, to attack the sufficiency of evidence to support a general verdict in favor of the plaintiff, a defendant must request special findings or verdicts on the alternate theories [see Rodgers v. Kemper Constr. Co. (1975) 50 Cal. App. 3d 608, 617, 124 Cal. Rptr. 143] . It may be especially helpful to submit special findings apportioning the various elements of damages or specifying the amount of damages attributable to each separate theory of liability [see Tavaglione v. Billings (1993) 4 Cal. 4th 1150, 1154-1158, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 608, 847 P.2d 574 ; Pressler v. Irvine Drugs, Inc. (1985) 169 Cal. App. 3d 1244, 1249, 215 Cal. Rptr. 807 (approving use of special interrogatories to allocate general verdict damages between medical expenses, lost earnings, and general damages)].

ILLUSTRATION:

Products Liability Theories. A products liability case was submitted to the jury on theories of design defect and failure to warn. With respect to design defect, the jury was instructed on both the consumer expectations and risk-benefit theories. Defendant objected to the instructions on the consumer expectations test, on the grounds the evidence did not warrant it. The jury returned a general verdict for plaintiff. Prior to submission of the case to the jury, defense counsel specifically declined to request a special verdict. The trial court did not commit reversible error in instructing the jury on the consumer expectations theory of design defect. The liability theory of defect by failure to warn was supported by substantial evidence, and thus it was immaterial whether the evidence supported either the giving of instructions on the theory of design defect under consumer expectations or a finding based on it or on the risk-benefit theory [Bresnahan v. Chrysler Corp. (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 1149, 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 804] .

[4] Time for and Manner of Requesting Special Verdicts or Findings

A party desiring special findings or special verdicts must present those issues or questions of fact to the judge in writing prior to argument. The issues or questions of fact must be in proper form for submission to the jury, and copies must be served on all other parties [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1580]. Counsel should consult local rules to determine whether there are additional or alternative requirements for the submission of requests for special verdicts or findings. For discussion of preparing and submitting special verdict and interrogatory forms, see California Trial Guide § 91.21

(Matthew Bender).

A party waives any objection under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1580, to a belated request for special findings when no objection is placed in the record [Hurlbut v. Sonora Community Hospital (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 388, 403, 254 Cal. Rptr. 840 (decided under former Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 230)] . Similarly, a party's failure to object to special verdict forms submitted by an opposing party waives that issue on appeal [Orient Handel v. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co. (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 684, 700, 237 Cal. Rptr. 667] .

[5] Court's Discretion in Directing Special Verdicts or Findings

Although it is rare for a trial judge to refuse a proper request by counsel to submit special finding or verdict forms in a proper case [see McCloud v. Roy Riegels Chems. (1971) 20 Cal. App. 3d 928, 936, 97 Cal. Rptr. 910] , submission of requests for special findings to the jury lies within the discretion of the trial court [Hurlbut v. Sonora Community Hospital (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 388, 403-404, 254 Cal. Rptr. 840 ; McCloud v. Roy Riegels Chems. (1971) 20 Cal. App. 3d 928, 936, 97 Cal. Rptr. 910] . Absent a showing of clear abuse, the trial judge's determination is not subject to reversal on review [Oakes v. McCarthy Co. (1968) 267 Cal. App. 2d 231, 266, 73 Cal. Rptr. 127] .

It is not an abuse of discretion for a trial court to refuse special interrogatories based on negligence when the record provided insufficient evidence on the issue of negligence [Hurlbut v. Sonora Community Hospital (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 388, 403-404, 254 Cal. Rptr. 840] . Similarly, it is not an abuse of discretion for a trial judge to refuse requested special verdicts on separate counts that state alternative theories of recovery presented during trial [see Ferro v. Citizens Nat'l Trust & Savings Bank (1955) 44 Cal. 2d 401, 414, 282 P.2d 849] .

A jury is not qualified to make, and should not be expected to make, findings of fact and conclusions of law; nor should a jury be saddled with lengthy and involved interrogatories of a technical legal nature [Wyler v. Feuer (1978) 85 Cal. App. 3d 392, 405-406, 149 Cal. Rptr. 626] . In the interest of simplicity, the court should prevent long, argumentative, and possibly unresponsive answers to special findings or verdicts by framing the questions so that the answers may be either "yes" or "no," so long as the jury is not cramped or prevented from giving full expression to the opinion of a majority of its members [see Law v. Northern Assurance Co. (1913) 165 Cal. 394, 405, 132 P. 590] .

[6] Situations Commonly Employing Special Verdicts or Findings

Special verdicts and special findings often are used in negligence actions to determine the basis of liability or defense [see Scott v. Industrial Accident Com. (1956) 46 Cal. 2d 76, 84, 293 P.2d 18 , and [7], below]. Special verdicts are necessary to apportion comparative negligence and to assure that a jury follows proper standards [see Li v. Yellow Cab Co. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 804, 824, 119 Cal. Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d 1226] , although special verdicts are not required in comparative negligence cases [see United Farm Workers of America v. Superior Court (1980) 111 Cal. App. 3d 1009, 1015, 169 Cal. Rptr. 94 (disapproved on other grounds in Juarez v. Superior Court (1982) 31 Cal. 3d 759, 768-769, 183 Cal. Rptr. 852, 647 P.2d 128)]. A special verdict also is necessary when one of the defenses in an action is jurisdictional, such as the allegation of an employment relationship in a personal injury case involving the question of workers' compensation coverage [Scott v. Industrial Accident Com. (1956) 46 Cal. 2d 76, 84, 293 P.2d 18] .

Special verdicts and findings also have been approved in actions based on the following:

- Fraud [see Babcock v. Omansky (1973) 31 Cal. App. 3d 625, 630, 107 Cal. Rptr. 512] .

- Indemnification [see Burlingame Motor Co. v. Peninsula Activities, Inc. (1971) 15 Cal. App. 3d 656, 661, 93 Cal. Rptr. 376] .

- Breach of contract, in which a special verdict may dispose of the necessity for giving the jury detailed instructions on principles of contract law [Olson v. Arnett (1980) 113 Cal. App. 3d 59, 66, 67, 169 Cal. Rptr. 629] .

[7] Sufficiency of Special Verdicts in Negligence Actions

If three-fourths of the jurors agree that a party is negligent and that the negligence is a proximate cause of the other party's injuries, special verdicts apportioning damages are valid if they contain the votes of any of three-fourths of the jurors on any of the issues. To hold otherwise would be to prohibit jurors who dissent on the question of liability from participating in the issues of causation, apportionment, and damages, a result that would deny the parties a jury of all jurors deliberating on all issues [Juarez v. Superior Court (1982) 31 Cal. 3d 759, 768-769, 183 Cal. Rptr. 852, 647 P.2d 128 (disapproving Borns v. Butts (1979) 98 Cal. App. 3d 208, 210, 159 Cal. Rptr. 400); see Ramona Manor Convalescent Hospital v. Care Enterprises (1986) 177 Cal. App. 3d 1120, 1142, 225 Cal. Rptr. 120 ; United Farm Workers of America v. Superior Court (1980) 111 Cal. App. 3d 1009, 1014, 1019, 169 Cal. Rptr. 94 ; for discussion of size of jury, number required to render a verdict, and related rule for general verdicts, see § 326A.14[1]]. Juarez has been given limited retroactive application only to cases in which no retrial has commenced and resulted in judgment. Cases in which the judgment on retrial is reversed also might be entitled to the limited retroactive application of Juarez under the same rationale of judicial economy [Phelps v. Superior Court (1982) 136 Cal. App. 3d 802, 811, 186 Cal. Rptr. 626] .

Jurors who do not join in a negligence special verdict still may vote on a proximate cause special verdict [Resch v. Volkswagen of America, Inc. (1984) 36 Cal. 3d 676, 682, 205 Cal. Rptr. 827, 685 P.2d 1178] . Thus, judgment may be entered on both special verdicts even though the same nine jurors are not in agreement on the questions of negligence and proximate cause [Resch v. Volkswagen of America, Inc. (1984) 36 Cal. 3d 676, 682, 205 Cal. Rptr. 827, 685 P.2d 1178 (disapproving contrary language in Collin v. Connecticut Valley Arms, Inc. (1982) 137 Cal. App. 3d 815, 187 Cal. Rptr. 306 , and United Farm Workers of America v. Superior Court (1980) 111 Cal. App. 3d 1009, 169 Cal. Rptr. 94)].

In a products liability case alleging design or manufacturing defects, jurors who voted against a special verdict regarding product defect are entitled to vote on a special verdict regarding causation [Resch v. Volkswagen of America, Inc. (1984) 36 Cal. 3d 676, 682-683, 205 Cal. Rptr. 827, 685 P.2d 1178] . For further discussion of special verdicts in negligence actions, see Ch. 380, Negligence .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersJudgesDiscretionCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsSpecial VerdictsCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesPunitive Damages

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326A JURY VERDICTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Jury Verdicts

28-326A California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326A.13

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents. Editorial Consultant

§ 326A.13 Court Open for Instructions and Reception of Verdict

While the jury is deliberating outside the courtroom, the court may conduct other business. However, the court remains open for every purpose connected with the case submitted to the jury until a verdict is rendered or the jury is discharged [Code Civ. Proc. § 617].

If the jury reaches a verdict while the court is in recess, the court may direct that the jury bring in a sealed verdict when the court resumes session [Code Civ. Proc. § 617].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury DeliberationsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326A JURY VERDICTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Jury Verdicts

28-326A California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326A.14

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents. Editorial Consultant

§ 326A.14 Reception of Verdict

[1] Number of Jurors to Agree

A verdict in a civil action requires three fourths of the jurors to agree [Code Civ. Proc. § 618; see Cal. Const., art. I, § 16 (allowing three fourths of jury to render verdict in civil action)]. Thus, when polling discloses that more than one quarter of the jurors disagree with a verdict, the trial judge retains control of the proceedings and may order the jury to retire and reconsider the case [Van Cise v. Lencioni (1951) 106 Cal. App. 2d 341, 347, 235 P.2d 236] .

The specific number required depends on the size of the jury, which may have a maximum of 12 persons or a lesser number if the parties agree in open court [see Code Civ. Proc. § 220, discussed in Ch. 322, Juries and Jury Selection].

At least nine of twelve jurors must concur that each element of a negligence cause of action has been proved by a preponderance of the evidence, but, faced with multiple or alternative acts that could support an element of a cause of action, nine jurors need not concur on which act is proved [Stoner v. Williams (1996) 46 Cal. App. 4th 986, 1002, 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 243 ; see also Valentine v. Baxter Healthcare Corp. (1999) 68 Cal. App. 4th 1467, 1486, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 252 ; for discussion of related rule for special verdicts, see § 326A.12[7]].

[2] Presentation of Verdict and Discharge of Jury

The verdict must be written, signed by the jury foreperson, and read to the jury by the clerk, and the inquiry made whether it is their verdict. Either party may require the jury to be polled by the court or clerk, asking each juror if it is the juror's verdict. If no disagreement is expressed, the verdict is complete and the jury discharged from the case [Code Civ. Proc. § 618]. For further discussion, see California Trial Guide, Unit 91, Jury Deliberations and Rendition of Verdict, §§ 91.30, 91.31 (Matthew Bender).

[3] Polling

Either party may require that the jury be polled. If a poll is requested, the clerk or court asks each juror if the verdict read back to the jury was his or her verdict. If more than one fourth of the jurors disagree, the jury is sent out again to reconsider the verdict. If no disagreement is shown, the verdict is complete and the jury is discharged from the case [Code Civ. Proc. § 618]. A juror's silence at polling, due to the trial court's failure to poll the juror on one of multiple special verdict questions, does not constitute an expressed disagreement with the verdict under Code Civ. Proc. § 618 [Keener v. Jeld-Wen, Inc. (2009) 46 Cal. 4th 247, 257-259, 92 Cal. Rptr. 3d 862, 206 P.3d 403] . Any challenge to the verdict based on the polling must be asserted before the jury is discharged if the purported defect is apparent and could be corrected, or else the challenge is forfeited [Bell v. Bayerische Motoren Werke Aktiengesellschaft (2010) 181 Cal. App. 4th 1108, 1129-1130, 105 Cal. Rptr. 3d 485] .

Even when there is ambiguity when the jury is first polled, if at least three fourths of the jurors eventually agree to the verdict, the court may direct that the verdict be recorded [Silverhart v. Mount Zion Hospital (1971) 20 Cal. App. 3d 1022, 1029, 98 Cal. Rptr. 187] . For further discussion, see California Trial Guide, Unit 91, Jury Deliberations and Rendition of Verdict, §§ 91.30, 91.31 (Matthew Bender).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsPolling of JuryCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326A JURY VERDICTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Jury Verdicts

28-326A California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326A.15

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents. Editorial Consultant

§ 326A.15 Requirements of Verdict

[1] Amount

If a verdict is found for a plaintiff or cross complainant in an action for recovery of money, the jury also must award a recovery [Code Civ. Proc. § 626]. The purpose of this rule is to assure litigants the right to have a jury determine all issues of fact. The rule is applicable only in civil cases in which the issues are presented to the jury in a single trial; it is not applicable if the parties have stipulated to separate trials on the issues of liability and damages [Little v. Superior Court (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 642, 644-645, 12 Cal. Rptr. 481, 361 P.2d 13] .

[2] Value of Property

The jury must find the value of property and, if so instructed, the value of specific portions of property, in an action for the recovery of specific personal property when either the property has not been returned to the plaintiff or the plaintiff is entitled to the return of the property. The jury may, at the same time, assess the damages sustained by the prevailing party by reason of the taking or detention of the property [Code Civ. Proc. § 627].

[3] When Jury Has Discretion to Award Interest

Interest is awarded to parties entitled to recover damages in a sum certain, or capable of being made certain by calculation, when the right to recover damages vests in that party on a particular day before the verdict is entered [Civ. Code § 3287(a)]. In addition, interest may be awarded, in a court's discretion, from a date prior to the entry of judgment when a party is entitled to damages based on a contract action; however, interest may not be awarded in those cases from a date earlier than that on which the action was filed [Civ. Code § 3287(b)].

Moreover, a jury in its discretion may award interest in the following circumstances [Civ. Code § 3288]:

- In an action for breach of an obligation not arising from contract.
- In every case of oppression, fraud, and malice.

Interest awarded or denied as damage in the discretion of a jury pursuant to Civ. Code § 3288 is of a different character than interest awarded or denied in the exercise of discretion by a court under Civ. Code § 3287 [Esgro Central, Inc. v. General Insurance Co. of America (1971) 20 Cal. App. 3d 1054, 1064, 98 Cal. Rptr. 153] . Denial of prejudgment interest is proper when the jury has considered that item in computing overall damages [Esgro Central, Inc. v. General Insurance Co. of America (1971) 20 Cal. App. 3d 1054, 1064, 98 Cal. Rptr. 153 (business interruption insurance)].

Reading Civ. Code §§ 3287 and 3288 together when fraud is alleged, the allegedly defrauded party may ask for interest from the time of the fraud [Nathanson v. Murphy (1957) 147 Cal. App. 2d 462, 467, 305 P.2d 710] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326A JURY VERDICTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Jury Verdicts

28-326A California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326A.16

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents. Editorial Consultant

§ 326A.16 Interpretation of Verdicts

The trial judge interprets a verdict in the context of the pleadings, evidence, and instructions [Cucamonga County Water Dist. v. Southwest Water Co. (1971) 22 Cal. App. 3d 245, 255, 99 Cal. Rptr. 557 ; Telles v. Title Insurance & Trust Co. (1969) 3 Cal. App. 3d 179, 185, 83 Cal. Rptr. 444] . A verdict should be liberally construed to uphold the judgment and to give it the effect intended by the jury, as well as an effect consistent with the law and the evidence [Maxwell v. Powers (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 1596, 1603, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 62 ; All-West Design, Inc. v. Boozer (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 1212, 1223, 228 Cal. Rptr. 736 ; Cucamonga County Water Dist. v. Southwest Water Co. (1971) 22 Cal. App. 3d 245, 255, 99 Cal. Rptr. 557] .

The affidavits of jurors cannot be used to construe or interpret a verdict [Telles v. Title Insurance & Trust Co. (1969) 3 Cal. App. 3d 179, 187, 83 Cal. Rptr. 444] . An appellate court will interpret a verdict only if the trial judge fails to do so or does so erroneously [Cucamonga County Water Dist. v. Southwest Water Co. (1971) 22 Cal. App. 3d 245, 255, 99 Cal. Rptr. 557 ; Telles v. Title Insurance & Trust Co. (1969) 3 Cal. App. 3d 179, 185, 83 Cal. Rptr. 444] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326A JURY VERDICTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Jury Verdicts

28-326A California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326A.17

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents. Editorial Consultant

§ 326A.17 Types of Defective Verdicts

[1] Informal Verdicts

An informal verdict is defective and should be corrected [see Code Civ. Proc. § 619; as to correction, see § 326A.18[1]]. The term "informal" as used in Code Civ. Proc. § 619 means a verdict defective in form because it is not in the usual form or manner and is contrary to custom or prescribed rule [see Crowe v. Sacks (1955) 44 Cal. 2d 590, 596, 283 P.2d 689] . For example, a verdict is informal if a jury fails to assess the value of separate interests in property sought to be condemned, as required by statutes in condemnation proceedings [Reed Orchard Co. v. Superior Court (1912) 19 Cal. App. 648, 663, 128 P. 9] .

[2] Insufficient Verdicts

An insufficient verdict is defective and should be corrected [see Code Civ. Proc. § 619; as to correction, see § 326A.18[1]]. The term "insufficient" as used in Code Civ. Proc. § 619 means a verdict is defective because it is inadequate for some need, purpose, or use [see Crowe v. Sacks (1955) 44 Cal. 2d 590, 596, 283 P.2d 689] . A verdict must encompass all the issues submitted to the jury. A verdict that goes beyond the issues of the case is insufficient because it is not in conformity with the instructions [Maxwell v. Powers (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 1596, 1603, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 62 ; Crowe v. Sacks (1955) 44 Cal. 2d 590, 596, 283 P.2d 689] .

ILLUSTRATION:

Examples of Insufficient Verdicts. A jury instructed and authorized only to determine relative fault, also apportioned damages. The verdict amounted to an insufficient verdict [Maxwell v. Powers (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 1596, 1603, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 62] . In a trial in which there was no issue of liability, and it was clear from the evidence that plaintiff suffered some damage, the jury returned a verdict awarding

"no sum" as damages. That also was an insufficient verdict [Sherwood v. Rossini (1968) 264 Cal. App. 2d 926, 930, 71 Cal. Rptr. 1] .

A verdict that is patently contrary to a court's instructions also is insufficient [Sherwood v. Rossini (1968) 264 Cal. App. 2d 926, 930, 71 Cal. Rptr. 1] .

[3] Ambiguous Verdicts

Ambiguous verdicts are "informal" or "insufficient" within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 619 [see Campbell v. Zokelt (1969) 272 Cal. App. 2d 315, 319, 77 Cal. Rptr. 561 ; as to correction, see § 326A.18[2]]. For example, a verdict in a personal injury action is ambiguous when it fails to specify whether it includes or excludes the amount paid to plaintiff as workers' compensation benefits [Woodcock v. Fontana Scaffolding & Equipment Co. (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 452, 456, 72 Cal. Rptr. 217, 445 P.2d 881] .

[4] Jury's Failure to Find on All Issues

A verdict is informal or insufficient within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 619, and thus defective, when a jury fails to find as to all issues before it [see Walters v. Marler (1978) 83 Cal. App. 3d 1, 19, 147 Cal. Rptr. 655 (verdict against one of two defendants that is silent as to other defendant is not verdict in favor of latter but merely is failure on part of jury to find on all of issues; verdict on one theory that is silent as to other theories is merely failure to find on other theories); Fransen v. Washington (1964) 229 Cal. App. 2d 570, 578, 40 Cal. Rptr. 458 ; as to correction, see § 326A.18[4]]. For example, a verdict against one of two defendants that is silent as to the other defendant amounts to a failure by the jury to find on all of the issues presented to it [Irelan-Yuba Gold Quartz Mining Co. v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (1941) 18 Cal. 2d 557, 570, 116 P.2d 611] . But failure of the court to provide the jury with specific forms of verdict as to each defendant is not fatal as long as clear and specific instructions were given regarding the various findings that could be made, and sufficient information was given to enable the jury to frame its own verdict [Fransen v. Washington (1964) 229 Cal. App. 2d 570, 579, 40 Cal. Rptr. 458] .

ILLUSTRATION:

Jury Made Its Findings Clear. In a case with two defendants, forms of verdict that would have exonerated one defendant and found another defendant liable were not submitted to the jury. The jury returned a verdict using forms of verdict that showed its intent to find both defendants liable. The failure to furnish the jury forms of verdict that would have exonerated one defendant and found another defendant liable was not prejudicial error. The verdict was sufficient [Fransen v. Washington (1964) 229 Cal. App. 2d 570, 579, 40 Cal. Rptr. 458] .

[5] Inadequate Damages Awarded by Jury

A verdict is defective if the jury awards inadequate damages. Hence, if the jury assesses damages so grossly inadequate as to show that it must have disregarded the evidence and the instructions of the court, it should be returned for further deliberation under proper instructions [Crowe v. Sacks (1955) 44 Cal. 2d 590, 598, 283 P.2d 689] .

However, it cannot be presumed on appeal that any element of damage was ignored by the jury merely because the verdict was not for a large sum of money [Crowe v. Sacks (1955) 44 Cal. 2d 590, 597, 283 P.2d 689] . Moreover, when the damages awarded are substantial, a verdict for less than the total damages supported by the uncontradicted evidence is not, by itself, a basis for assuming the verdict is defective [Pfingsten v. Westenhaver (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 12, 25, 244 P.2d 395] .

A verdict also may be challenged because the jury's apportionment of fault was not supported by the evidence. The verdict is inadequate if the apportionment of fault appears to be the result of passion and prejudice [see Scott v. County of Los Angeles (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 125, 147, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 643] . For a thorough discussion of issues concerning damages, see Ch. 177, Damages .

ILLUSTRATION:

Improper Apportionment of Fault. In a case arising out of allegations of child abuse, social services personnel placed and kept the abused child with a relative despite warnings that child was being mistreated. That relative's intentional, criminal behavior was the immediate cause of the child's injuries. Nevertheless, the jury allocated only 1 percent of fault to the relative who actually injured the child. That allocation rendered the verdict defective because the apportionment was the result of passion and prejudice [Scott v. County of Los Angeles (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 125, 147-148, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 643] .

[6] Inconsistency Between General Verdict and Special Verdicts or Findings

A verdict is defective when a special verdict or finding is inconsistent with a general verdict. This form of defective verdict occurs when the special verdict or finding taken by itself supports a judgment different from the general verdict [Wyler v. Feuer (1978) 85 Cal. App. 3d 392, 404, 149 Cal. Rptr. 626 ; see Oxford v. Foster Wheeler LLC (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 700, 716-717, 99 Cal. Rptr. 3d 418 (verdicts are inconsistent when beyond possibility of reconciliation under any possible application of evidence and instructions); Stillwell v. The Salvation Army (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 360, 374, 84 Cal. Rptr. 3d 111 (improper for trial court to grant judgment as matter of law consistent with one special verdict but notwithstanding other special verdicts)].

[7] Inconsistent Answers Within Special Verdict

A special verdict is defective under Code Civ. Proc. § 619 when it is inconsistent in the sense that it contains two or more answers that are inconsistent with each other [see Mendoza v. Club Car, Inc. (2000) 81 Cal. App. 4th 287, 302-303, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 605] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsGeneral VerdictsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsInconsistent VerdictsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsSpecial Verdicts

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326A JURY VERDICTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Jury Verdicts

28-326A California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326A.18

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents. Editorial Consultant

§ 326A.18 Correction of Defective Verdicts

[1] Informal or Insufficient Verdicts

If the jury's verdict is informal or insufficient, it may be corrected. The court may either advise the jury to correct its verdict or send the jury out again [Code Civ. Proc. § 619].

Thus, while a trial court does not have the power to order a jury to deliberate further if it has returned a complete verdict, the court does have the power under Code Civ. Proc. § 619 to return the jury to the jury room for further deliberation if its verdict is informal or insufficient in not covering the issue submitted [Sherwood v. Rossini (1968) 264 Cal. App. 2d 926, 929, 71 Cal. Rptr. 1] . In fact, the court retains control over the proceedings with power to correct informal or insufficient verdicts under Code Civ. Proc. § 619 until the verdict is recorded and the jury is finally discharged [Maxwell v. Powers (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 1596, 1603, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 62 , citing Phipps v. Superior Court (1939) 32 Cal. App. 2d 371, 374, 89 P.2d 698] . The judge should exercise caution and restraint when ordering the jury to correct its verdict so that the court does not influence the deliberations of the jury as to matters exclusively within its province [Fibreboard Paper Products Corp. v. East Bay Union of Machinists (1964) 227 Cal. App. 2d 675, 732-733, 39 Cal. Rptr. 64] .

[2] Ambiguous Verdicts

If a verdict is ambiguous, the party adversely affected should request clarification. The court then may order the jury to deliberate further to correct the informal or insufficient verdict. If no objection is made before the jury is discharged, the trial judge must interpret the verdict in light of the pleadings, evidence, and instructions [Woodcock v. Fontana Scaffolding & Equipment Co. (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 452, 456, 72 Cal. Rptr. 217, 445 P.2d 881 ; Campbell v. Zokelt (1969) 272 Cal. App. 2d 315, 319, 77 Cal. Rptr. 561] .

If a verdict is hopelessly ambiguous, a reversal is required even though a retrial may be limited only to the issue giving rise to the ambiguity [see Woodcock v. Fontana Scaffolding & Equipment Co. (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 452, 457, 72 Cal. Rptr. 217, 445 P.2d 881 (erroneous interpretation of damage award as net amount, rather than gross amount, entitles defendant to new trial on issue of damages only); McCoy v. Gustafson (2009) 180 Cal. App. 4th 56, 6667, 103 Cal. Rptr. 3d 37].

[3] Inadequate Damages Awarded by Jury

If a jury awards damages so grossly inadequate that it must have disregarded the evidence and instructions, the court should return the jury for deliberation with further instructions. This is particularly true in a trial in which there is no issue of liability and it is absolutely clear from the evidence that plaintiff suffered some damage. When a jury returns a verdict assessing damages at "no sum," the verdict is insufficient because it is contrary to the court's instructions on damages and ignores the evidence presented [Sherwood v. Rossini (1968) 264 Cal. App. 2d 926, 929-930, 71 Cal. Rptr. 1] .

If both liability and damages are at issue, a trial court has jurisdiction to return a jury for further deliberations with instructions that the verdict should not be based on a compromise as to liability and damages [Crowe v. Sacks (1955) 44 Cal. 2d 590, 598, 283 P.2d 689] . However, if the trial judge believes the damages awarded by a jury are inadequate but the verdict is not defective, the proper procedure is to set aside the verdict on a motion for a new trial [Jehl v. Southern Pacific Co. (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 821, 827, 59 Cal. Rptr. 276, 427 P.2d 988] . For discussion and forms for motions for a new trial, see Ch. 371, Motions After Trial .

[4] Jury's Failure to Find on Issue or Party

In determining whether the jury failed to find on an issue presented to it, a verdict must be construed with reference to the instructions under which it was rendered [Irelan-Yuba Gold Quartz Mining Co. v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (1941) 18 Cal. 2d 557, 570, 116 P.2d 611] . The normal proceeding is a formal correction of the verdict under Code Civ. Proc. § 619 by the jury under the direction of the court. Although explanations by a jury are not binding on the trial judge, informal explanations by jurors can be used to confirm the court's understanding of the verdict in improper form [Brand v. Norris (1953) 121 Cal. App. 2d 367, 369, 263 P.2d 456] .

A court acts properly in returning a jury for further deliberation with instructions when the jury presents a verdict form finding for plaintiff that fails to list each of the defendants [Fibreboard Paper Products Corp. v. East Bay Union of Machinists (1964) 227 Cal. App. 2d 675, 731-732, 39 Cal. Rptr. 64] .

[5] Inconsistency Between General Verdict and Special Verdicts or Findings

The purpose of the special finding or verdict as provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 625 primarily is to determine whether a general verdict is consistent with the law [Wyler v. Feuer (1978) 85 Cal. App. 3d 392, 404, 149 Cal. Rptr. 626 ; see Bate v. Marsteller (1965) 232 Cal. App. 2d 605, 615, 43 Cal. Rptr. 149] . When a special finding of fact or special verdict is inconsistent with a general verdict, the inconsistency is resolved in favor of the special finding or verdict, and the court renders judgment accordingly [see Code Civ. Proc. § 625; Tavaglione v. Billings (1993) 4 Cal. 4th 1150, 1156, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 608, 847 P.2d 574 ; see also Hasson v. Ford Motor Co. (1977) 19 Cal. 3d 530, 540-541, 138 Cal. Rptr. 705, 564 P.2d 857 ; Bate v. Marsteller (1965) 232 Cal. App. 2d 605, 614, 43 Cal. Rptr. 149] .

In resolving an inconsistency between a general verdict and special verdicts or findings, there is no presumption in favor of answers to special interrogatories, and every reasonable interpretation in favor of the general verdict should be given [Wyler v. Feuer (1978) 85 Cal. App. 3d 392, 404, 149 Cal. Rptr. 626 ; see Bate v. Marsteller (1965) 232 Cal. App. 2d 605, 615, 43 Cal. Rptr. 149] . Thus, a general verdict will stand unless the facts found by the jury in answer to special interrogatories are so clearly antagonistic to the verdict as to be absolutely irreconcilable so that both the general verdict and special findings or verdicts cannot stand [Wyler v. Feuer (1978) 85 Cal. App. 3d 392, 404-405, 149 Cal. Rptr. 626 ; see Law v. Northern Assurance Co. (1913) 165 Cal. 394, 406, 132 P. 590 ; but see Stillwell v. The Salvation Army (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 360, 375-376, 84 Cal. Rptr. 3d 111 (remedy for inconsistent verdicts is not to grant judgment as matter of law, but to order new trial)].

Special verdicts or findings should be reconciled with general verdicts whenever possible. An irreconcilable inconsistency exists only if the special verdicts or findings are such that, if supported, the general verdict could not stand on any theory under the evidence and instructions [Wyler v. Feuer (1978) 85 Cal. App. 3d 392, 404-405, 149 Cal. Rptr. 626 ; Pitcher v. Kniss (1970) 10 Cal. App. 3d 931, 940, 89 Cal. Rptr. 676 (no irreconcilable inconsistency when general verdict was in favor of plaintiff and special verdict found cross-defendants concurrently liable in negligence for plaintiff's injuries)]. If any conclusions could be drawn that would explain the apparent conflict between the general verdict and the special verdict, the jury is deemed to have drawn them [Oxford v. Foster Wheeler LLC (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 700, 716-717, 99 Cal. Rptr. 3d 418 (verdicts are inconsistent when beyond possibility of reconciliation under any possible application of evidence and instructions); Wyler v. Feuer (1978) 85 Cal. App. 3d 392, 404-405, 149 Cal. Rptr. 626] .

[6] Inconsistent Answers Within Special Verdict

When the trial court recognizes, before the jury is discharged, that a special verdict has two or more answers that are inconsistent with each other, it may properly advise the jury of the inconsistency and instruct it to deliberate further in an attempt to cure the defective verdict, pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 619. In fact, the trial court has a duty in such a case to attempt to remedy the situation before the verdict becomes final [see Mendoza v. Club Car, Inc. (2000) 81 Cal. App. 4th 287, 303, 305-306, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 605 (affirming action of trial court in advising jury of inconsistency and sending it out again to correct the inconsistency)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsGeneral VerdictsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsInconsistent VerdictsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsSpecial Verdicts

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326A JURY VERDICTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Jury Verdicts

28-326A California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326A.19

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents. Editorial Consultant

§ 326A.19 Waiver of Defects in Verdict

A waiver of a defect in a verdict occurs if the party has done any of the following [Mixon v. Riverview Hospital (1967) 254 Cal. App. 2d 364, 376-377, 62 Cal. Rptr. 379] :

- Given prior approval to the form of the verdict submitted to the jury.
- Failed to object to the form of the verdict as returned by the jury.
- Failed to seek clarification of a verdict returned by a jury.

ILLUSTRATION:

Failure to Object to Blank Verdict Form. A party that failed to object to blank verdict forms submitted to the jury waived the right to complain of the form of the verdict [Lynch v. Birdwell (1955) 44 Cal. 2d 839, 851, 285 P.2d 919] .

A waiver also occurs when no objection is made at the time the jury returns its verdict or when the court sends the jury back to insert the amount of the award in the appropriate blank on the form [Worthington Corp. v. El Chicote Ranch Properties, Ltd. (1967) 255 Cal. App. 2d 316, 320-321, 63 Cal. Rptr. 203] . However, failure to make the objection before the jury is discharged may not automatically result in a waiver [Mixon v. Riverview Hospital (1967) 254 Cal. App. 2d 364, 376-377, 62 Cal. Rptr. 379 (question as to meaning of verdicts against several defendants raised in trial court on motion for new trial)].

A party adversely affected by an ambiguous verdict waives the right to complain about the ambiguity only when the failure to object is the result of a desire to reap a technical advantage or to promote a litigation strategy [Schiernbeck v. Haight (1992) 7 Cal. App. 4th 869, 879, 9 Cal. Rptr. 2d 716 (quoting Woodcock v. Fontana Scaffolding & Equipment Co. (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 452, 456, 72 Cal. Rptr. 217, 445 P.2d 881)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326A JURY VERDICTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Jury Verdicts

28-326A California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326A.20

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents. Editorial Consultant

§ 326A.20 Entry of Verdict

[1] In General

On receipt of a verdict, an entry is made in the court's minutes specifying all of the following [Code Civ. Proc. § 628]:

- The time of the trial.
- The names of the jurors and witnesses.
- The verdict set out at length.

In addition, when a special verdict is found, the minutes must state either the judgment rendered on it or, if the case is to be reserved for further argument or consideration, the order reserving it [Code Civ. Proc. § 628].

[2] Writs of Mandate and Prohibition

When a court orders an essential question of fact to be tried before a jury in a proceeding for a writ of mandate or prohibition, the question of fact is distinctly stated in an order for trial and transmitted to the court in which the matter will be heard before the jury. The order for trial may direct the jury to assess any damages sustained by the applicant in the event the jury finds for the applicant. Argument on the writ is then postponed until a verdict is certified back to the court in which the motion for the writ is to be heard [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1090, 1105].

Within five days after a verdict is rendered, the clerk of the court hearing the essential question of fact must transmit a certified copy of the verdict, attached to the order for trial, to the court in which the writ of mandate or prohibition is pending if either (1) no notice of motion for new trial is made, or (2) notice of motion for new trial is made and denied. After the clerk's transmission, either party may bring on the argument for the application on reasonable notice to the adverse party [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1093, 1105].

For further discussion, procedural checklists, and forms related to mandate and prohibition proceedings, see Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesWritsCommon Law WritsMandamusCivil ProcedureRemediesWritsCommon Law WritsProhibition

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326A JURY VERDICTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Jury Verdicts

28-326A California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326A.21

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents. Editorial Consultant

§ 326A.21 Motion for Judgment Notwithstanding Verdict

The standards governing the trial court's power to grant a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict are the same as its power to grant a directed verdict: It cannot weigh the evidence. Unless it can be said that no other reasonable conclusion is deducible from the evidence except that the party moving for judgment notwithstanding the verdict prevail, the motion must be denied [see Valdez v. J.D. Diffenbaugh Co. (1975) 51 Cal. App. 3d 494, 513, 124 Cal. Rptr. 467] .

For discussion and forms for use in making a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict, see Ch. 371, Motions After Trial .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawJudgments Notwithstanding Verdicts

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326A JURY VERDICTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Jury Verdicts

28-326A California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326A.22

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents. Editorial Consultant

§ 326A.22 Entry of Judgment

[1] In General

Judgment must be entered by the clerk, in conformity to the verdict, within 24 hours after the jury's rendition of the verdict. This is done whether or not a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict is pending unless the court either [Code Civ. Proc. § 664]:

- Orders the case reserved for argument or further consideration; or
- Grants a stay of proceedings.

In no case is a judgment effective for any purpose until it is entered [Code Civ. Proc. § 664].

For related discussion and forms concerning the entry of judgments, see Ch. 318, Judgments .

[2] Death of Party After Verdict and Before Judgment

The court may render judgment on a case if a party dies after a verdict on any issue of fact [Code Civ. Proc. § 669]. When the judgment creditor dies, the judgment may be enforced by his or her executor or administrator or successor in interest [Code Civ. Proc. § 686.010]. When the judgment debtor dies, enforcement is governed by the Probate Code [Code Civ. Proc. § 686.020; see Prob. Code §§ 9300-9304].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326A JURY VERDICTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Jury Verdicts

28-326A California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326A.23

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents. Editorial Consultant

§ 326A.23 Effect of Verdict

[1] In General

The jury trial guarantee in the California Constitution [see Cal. Const., art I, § 16] requires submission of certain issues to a jury. For discussion of the right to a jury trial in civil actions, see Ch. 322, Juries and Jury Selection . Once a verdict has been reached, the California Constitution prohibits improper interference with the jury's decision [Jehl v. Southern Pacific Co. (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 821, 829, 59 Cal. Rptr. 276, 427 P.2d 988] . It is not a denial of the right to have a jury determination of a question of fact, however, when the court sets aside the verdict and grants the motion for a new trial [Dorsey v. Barba (1952) 38 Cal. 2d 350, 358, 240 P.2d 604 (disapproved on other grounds in Jehl v. Southern Pacific Co. (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 821, 828, 59 Cal. Rptr. 276, 427 P.2d 988)].

In an equity case, the jury's verdict is advisory only, because a jury is not available as a matter of right [Schlyen v. Schlyen (1954) 43 Cal. 2d 361, 372, 273 P.2d 897 ; see Ch. 322, Juries and Jury Selection].

[2] Bifurcated Trial

When the decision of a jury is for plaintiff on the issue of liability in a bifurcated trial, the verdict represents a determination on the issue presented and the plaintiff is entitled to proceed with its case against defendant. But when the decision is against plaintiff and for defendant, final judgment is entered and the plaintiff is barred from further proceedings against defendant absent reversal on appeal [Lauderdale v. U & I Equipment Co. (1969) 271 Cal. App. 2d 140, 142, 76 Cal. Rptr. 483] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326A JURY VERDICTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Jury Verdicts

28-326A California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 326A.24-326A.29

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents. Editorial Consultant

[Reserved]

§§ 326A.24[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326A JURY VERDICTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Directed Verdicts

28-326A California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326A.30

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents. Editorial Consultant

§ 326A.30 Governing Statute

The requirements for making a motion for directed verdict and the granting of the motion are addressed in Code Civ. Proc. § 630.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawDirected Verdicts

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326A JURY VERDICTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Directed Verdicts

28-326A California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326A.31

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents. Editorial Consultant

§ 326A.31 When Proper

A motion for directed verdict may be made by either party [Code Civ. Proc. § 630(a); Hillard v. A. H. Robins Co. (1983) 148 Cal. App. 3d 374, 394, 196 Cal. Rptr. 117 ; De La Rosa v. City of San Bernardino (1971) 16 Cal. App. 3d 739, 742-743, 94 Cal. Rptr. 175 (motion by defendant); Rooney v. Mutual Benefit Health & Accident Assn. (1946) 74 Cal. App. 2d 885, 891, 170 P.2d 72 (motion by plaintiff)]. For a form of notice of motion for directed verdict, see § 326A.80.

A motion for directed verdict, like a motion for nonsuit, is in the nature of a demurrer to the evidence [Hunt v. United Bank & Trust Co. (1930) 210 Cal. 108, 117, 291 P. 184 ; Howard v. Owens Corning (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 621, 629-630, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 386 ; Hillard v. A. H. Robins Co. (1983) 148 Cal. App. 3d 374, 394, 196 Cal. Rptr. 117] . It can be granted only when, disregarding conflicting evidence and giving to the evidence of the party against whom the verdict is sought all the value to which it is legally entitled, including indulging every legitimate inference that may be drawn from that evidence, there is no evidence of sufficient substantiality to support the claim or defense of the party opposing the motion, or a verdict in favor of that party [Dailey v. Los Angeles Unified School Dist. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 741, 745, 87 Cal. Rptr. 376, 470 P.2d 360 ; Estate of Lances (1932) 216 Cal. 397, 400, 14 P.2d 768 ; Howard v. Owens Corning (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 621, 629-630, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 386 ; Hillard v. A. H. Robins Co. (1983) 148 Cal. App. 3d 374, 395, 196 Cal. Rptr. 117] . For further discussion of the grounds for directed verdict, see § 326A.33.

The order of the court granting the motion for directed verdict is effective without assent of the jury [Code Civ. Proc. § 630(e)].

A judgment notwithstanding the verdict is proper when a motion for directed verdict should have been granted if the motion had been made previously [Code Civ. Proc. § 629]. Thus, a directed verdict is proper in situations in which a judgment notwithstanding the verdict is proper. For discussion and forms for making motions for judgment notwithstanding the verdict, see Ch. 371, Motions After Trial .

When a jury has been discharged without rendering a verdict, the court may order judgment to be entered in favor of a party whenever a motion for directed verdict for that party should have been granted had a previous motion been made [Code Civ. Proc. § 630(f); for discussion, see § 326A.36].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawDirected Verdicts

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326A JURY VERDICTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Directed Verdicts

28-326A California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326A.32

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents. Editorial Consultant

§ 326A.32 Timeliness of Motion for Directed Verdict

Unless the court specifies an earlier time for making the motion, after all parties have presented their evidence, any party may, without waiving its right to trial by jury, move for an order directing entry of a verdict in its favor [Code Civ. Proc. § 630(a)]. It is within the discretion of the trial court to permit a motion for directed verdict to be made at any time before the case is submitted to the jury [Gibson v. Southern Pacific Co. (1955) 137 Cal. App. 2d 337, 346, 290 P.2d 347] .

A motion for directed verdict also may be made after the jury has been discharged without having reached a verdict [Code Civ. Proc. § 630(f), discussed at § 326A.36].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawDirected Verdicts

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326A JURY VERDICTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Directed Verdicts

28-326A California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326A.33

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents. Editorial Consultant

§ 326A.33 Grounds for Directed Verdict

A directed verdict, like a nonsuit or judgment notwithstanding the verdict, may be granted only when, disregarding conflicting evidence and giving the evidence in favor of the party against whom the verdict is sought all the value to which it is legally entitled, including indulging in every legitimate inference that may be drawn from that evidence, the court determines there is no evidence of sufficient substantiality to support the claim or defense of the party opposing the motion, or a verdict in favor of that party [Estate of Lances (1932) 216 Cal. 397, 400, 14 P.2d 768 ; Margolin v. Shemaria (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 891, 895, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 502 ; Howard v. Owens Corning (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 621, 629-630, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 386 ; Bell v. State of California (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 919, 922, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 541 ; Heller v. Pillsbury Madison & Sutro (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 1367, 1392-1393, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 336 ; Colbough v. Hartline (1994) 29 Cal. App. 4th 1516, 1521, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 213] . The court may not grant a directed verdict if there is any substantial conflict in the evidence. If the party resisting the motion produces sufficient evidence to support a jury verdict in his or her favor, the motion must be denied [Howard v. Owens Corning (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 621, 629-630, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 386] .

Unless it can be said as a matter of law that no other reasonable conclusion is legally deducible from the evidence, and that any other holding would be so lacking in evidentiary support that a reviewing court would be impelled to reverse it on appeal, the trial court is not justified in taking the case from the jury [Short v. Nevada Joint Union High School Dist. (1985) 163 Cal. App. 3d 1087, 1095-1096 ; Frisk v. Merrihew (1974) 42 Cal. App. 3d 319, 325, 116 Cal. Rptr. 781] .

The opposing inferences drawn in favor of the party against whom the verdict is sought must be based on evidence, not mere speculation or conjecture [Atlas Vegetable Exchange, Inc. v. Bank of America (1970) 10 Cal. App. 3d 868, 873, 89 Cal. Rptr. 274] . In considering a motion for directed verdict, the trial court is not permitted to weigh or consider conflicting evidence or to judge the credibility of witnesses [Persons v. Salomon North America, Inc. (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 168, 173, 265 Cal. Rptr. 773] .

ILLUSTRATION:

Inferences in Favor of Party Against Whom Directed Verdict Is Sought. In an action against a bank for having paid checks not properly drawn on plaintiff's account, evidence was introduced from which a jury could have concluded that plaintiff was negligent in failing to compare its returned checks with the invoices on which those checks were issued. Plaintiff sought a directed verdict in its favor. The court properly denied the directed verdict. The evidence supported inferences in favor of the defendant and thus was sufficient to preclude a directed verdict against it [Atlas Vegetable Exchange, Inc. v. Bank of America (1970) 10 Cal. App. 3d 868, 873, 89 Cal. Rptr. 274] .

Once granted, a directed verdict must be sustained on appeal if it can be sustained on any theory of law applicable to the case, regardless of the considerations that moved the trial court to its conclusions [Stilson v. Moulton-Niguel Water Dist. (1971) 21 Cal. App. 3d 928, 933, 98 Cal. Rptr. 914] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawDirected Verdicts

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326A JURY VERDICTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Directed Verdicts

28-326A California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326A.34

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents. Editorial Consultant

§ 326A.34 Partial Directed Verdict

If it appears that the evidence presented supports the granting of a motion for directed verdict as to some, but not all, of the issues involved in the action, the court must grant the motion as to those issues [Code Civ. Proc. § 630(b); see Hillard v. A. H. Robins Co. (1983) 148 Cal. App. 3d 374, 396-398, 196 Cal. Rptr. 117 (reversing partial directed verdict on issue of punitive damages)]. The action then proceeds on any remaining issues. In that case, no final judgment is entered prior to the conclusion of the action, but the final judgment, in addition to any matter determined in the trial, must reflect the directed verdict ordered by the court [Code Civ. Proc. § 630(b)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawDirected Verdicts

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326A JURY VERDICTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Directed Verdicts

28-326A California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326A.35

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents. Editorial Consultant

§ 326A.35 Directed Verdict in Favor of One of Multiple Defendants

In actions that arise out of an injury to a person or property, when a motion for directed verdict is granted in favor of one defendant, no other defendant may attempt to attribute fault to or comment on the absence or involvement of that defendant [Code Civ. Proc. § 630(d)]. For a discussion of verdicts in negligence actions raising joint and several liability issues, see Ch. 380, Negligence .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawDirected VerdictsTortsProcedureMultiple DefendantsJoint & Several Liability

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326A JURY VERDICTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Directed Verdicts

28-326A California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326A.36

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents. Editorial Consultant

§ 326A.36 After Jury Has Been Discharged

When a jury for any reason has been discharged without rendering a verdict, the court may order judgment to be entered in favor of a party who would have been entitled to a directed verdict on a previous motion. A court may direct a verdict in favor of a party on its own motion or on motion of the party. A party moving for directed verdict in this situation must give notice of the motion within 10 days after the jury is discharged [Code Civ. Proc. § 630(f)]. The power of the court to act under Code Civ. Proc. § 630(f) expires 30 days after the day on which the jury was discharged. If the motion is not granted within that time, the motion for judgment is deemed denied without further order of the court [Code Civ. Proc. § 630(f)].

A directed verdict may be granted pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 630(f) even after a previous denial of the same motion by the same party [Heller v. Pillsbury Madison & Sutro (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 1367, 1393-1395, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 336] . Each case must be determined on its own merits; and an order for directed verdict made after denial of a previous motion must be based on the same grounds applicable to an "original" motion for directed verdict: Viewing the evidence and all inferences from it in favor of the party against whom the verdict is sought, there must be insufficient evidence to prove all elements of that party's case [Heller v. Pillsbury Madison & Sutro (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 1367, 1392-1393, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 336 ; cf. Jaehne v. Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. (1951) 105 Cal. App. 2d 683, 685, 234 P.2d 165 (directed verdict entered after previous denial of motion for same, and after mistrial due to jury deadlock, reversed)].

ILLUSTRATION:

Entering Directed Verdict After Previous Denial. In a suit with many causes of action arising out of plaintiff's discharge from a law firm, after several causes of action were dismissed, defendant law firm moved for a directed verdict. The motion was denied, and the remaining causes of action went to the jury. The jury deadlocked, and a mistrial was declared. Defendant again moved for directed verdict, and this time it was granted. The directed verdict was properly granted. Plaintiff contended that the directed verdict was improper only with respect to his cause of action for intentional interference with prospective business advantage. After reviewing the evidence and all inferences available from it in the light most favorable to plaintiff, there still was no substantial evidence to support the cause of action for intentional interference with prospective economic advantage [Heller v. Pillsbury Madison & Sutro (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 1367, 1395, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 336] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawDirected Verdicts

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326A JURY VERDICTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Directed Verdicts

28-326A California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326A.37

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents. Editorial Consultant

§ 326A.37 Effect of Directed Verdict

If a motion for directed verdict is granted, it operates as an adjudication on the merits unless the court specifies otherwise [Code Civ. Proc. § 630(c)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawDirected Verdicts

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326A JURY VERDICTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Directed Verdicts

28-326A California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 326A.38-326A.49

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents. Editorial Consultant

[Reserved]

§§ 326A.38[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326A JURY VERDICTS
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
A. Jury Verdicts

28-326A California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326A.50

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents. Editorial Consultant

§ 326A.50 Related Matthew Bender Publications

For discussion of general and special verdicts and special interrogatories and findings, as well as jury deliberations, see California Trial Guide, Unit 91, Jury Deliberations and Rendition of Verdict (Matthew Bender).

For discussion of juror misconduct, see California Trial Guide § 3.32[3][c], [d]; §§ 91.10-91.13 (Matthew Bender).

For discussion of preparing and submitting verdict forms, see California Trial Guide § 91.21 (Matthew Bender).

For special verdict forms, see Judicial Council Forms of California Civil Jury Instructions (CACI) (Matthew Bender).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJurorsMisconductCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury DeliberationsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsSpecial Verdicts

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326A JURY VERDICTS
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
A. Jury Verdicts

28-326A California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326A.51

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents. Editorial Consultant

§ 326A.51 State Constitution

Three-fourths of jury is required to render verdict in civil cases. Cal. Const., art. I, § 16

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326A JURY VERDICTS
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
A. Jury Verdicts

28-326A California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326A.52

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents. Editorial Consultant

§ 326A.52 State Statutes

[1] Definitions

Verdict is either general or special. Code Civ. Proc. § 624

General verdict is one pronounced on all or any issues generally either in favor of plaintiff or defendant. Code Civ. Proc. § 624

Special verdict is one in which jury finds facts only. Code Civ. Proc. § 624

[2] Special Verdicts or Findings

Special instructions at court's discretion. Code Civ. Proc. § 609

Direction of special verdict in writing on any or all issues or on particular questions of fact with general verdict. Code Civ. Proc. § 625

[3] Adjournment or Recess

Court may adjourn during deliberations but must remain open for every purpose with respect to case submitted to jury. Code Civ. Proc. § 617

Sealed verdict rendered when verdict reached during court recess or adjournment. Code Civ. Proc. § 617

[4] Special Verdict Required for Punitive Damages

When issue of punitive damages is presented to jury, court must direct jury to find special verdict in writing separating punitive from compensatory damages. Code Civ. Proc. § 625

[5] Reception of Verdict

Procedure for rendering verdict in open court. Code Civ. Proc. § 618

Polling of jury; reconsideration or discharge of jury. Code Civ. Proc. § 618

[6] Requirements of Verdict

[a] Amount

Jury is required to find amount in action for recovery of money. Code Civ. Proc. § 626

[b] Value of Property

Jury is required to find value of property in action for recovery of property and to assess damages sustained by taking or detention of property. Code Civ. Proc. § 627

[c] When Jury Has Discretion to Award Interest

Interest on certain damages or damages capable of being made certain by calculation from date of vesting of right; prejudgment interest in contract action when claim unliquidated at court's discretion. Civ. Code § 3287

Interest at jury's discretion when action for breach of noncontractual obligation or when oppression, fraud, or malice. Civ. Code § 3288

[7] Correction of Defective Verdicts

[a] Informal or Insufficient Verdict

If verdict is informal or insufficient in not covering issue submitted, verdict may be corrected by jury under advice of court or jury sent out again to reconsider. Code Civ. Proc. § 619

[b] Inconsistency Between General Verdict and Special Verdicts or Findings

Inconsistency between general and special verdicts or specific finding of fact is resolved in favor of special finding or verdict. Code Civ. Proc. § 625

[8] Entry of Verdict

Minute entry in superior courts; requirements of entry of general and special verdicts. Code Civ. Proc. § 628

Transmission of order for jury trial by court in which writ of mandate or prohibition pending. Code Civ. Proc. § 1090

Transmission of certified copy of verdict to court in which writ of mandate pending. Code Civ. Proc. § 1093

Applicability of mandate provisions to writs of prohibition. Code Civ. Proc. § 1105

[9] Entry of Judgment

Judgment effective when entered; entry within 24 hours after jury's rendition of verdict. Code Civ. Proc. § 664

Power of court to render judgment when party dies after verdict on any fact issue. Code Civ. Proc. § 669

Enforcement of judgment after party dies. Code Civ. Proc. §§ 686.010, 686.020; Prob. Code §§ 9300-9304

Requirement that costs be included in judgment. Code Civ. Proc. § 664

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersJudgesDiscretionCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury DeliberationsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsGeneral VerdictsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsSpecial VerdictsCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesPunitive Damages

138 of 150 DOCUMENTS

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326A JURY VERDICTS
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
A. Jury Verdicts

28-326A California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326A.53

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents. Editorial Consultant

§ 326A.53 California Rules of Court

Request for special findings by jury. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.158

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsSpecial Verdicts

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326A JURY VERDICTS
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
A. Jury Verdicts

28-326A California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326A.54

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents. Editorial Consultant

§ 326A.54 Local Court Rules

Procedures from submission of jury instructions through discharge of jury. Los Angeles Co. Super. Ct. Rules, Rules §§ 8.24-8.57

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsRequests for Instructions

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326A JURY VERDICTS
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
A. Jury Verdicts

28-326A California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326A.55

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents. Editorial Consultant

§ 326A.55 Decisions

[1] Definitions

[a] General Verdict

General verdict constitutes implied finding in favor of prevailing party of every fact essential to support its action or defense. Southern Pacific Co. v. Unarco Industries, Inc. (1974) 42 Cal. App. 3d 142, 152, 116 Cal. Rptr. 847

General verdict creates assumption that jury found on any theory supported by the evidence. Rodgers v. Kemper Constr. Co. (1975) 50 Cal. App. 3d 608, 617, 124 Cal. Rptr. 143 (respondeat superior, ratification, and breach of statutory duty); Codekas v. Dyna-Lift Co. (1975) 48 Cal. App. 3d 20, 24-25, 121 Cal. Rptr. 121 (negligence and intentional tort); Continental Dairy Equipment Co. v. Lawrence (1971) 17 Cal. App. 3d 378, 383, 94 Cal. Rptr. 887 ; Hazelwood v. Gordon (1967) 253 Cal. App. 2d 178, 180-181, 61 Cal. Rptr. 115

[b] Special Verdicts

Special verdict is verdict in which jury finds facts only, leaving judgment to court, and presents conclusions of facts as established by evidence; questions propounded to and answered by jury constitute ultimate facts to be found and forming special verdict. Estate of Keithley (1901) 134 Cal. 9, 11, 66 P. 5

Special verdict passes on all issues by presenting conclusions of fact bearing on all of them. In re Sanderson (1887) 74 Cal. 199, 208, 15 P. 753

On jury's return of special verdicts on some, but not all, causes of action, trial court can enter those verdicts in minutes as conclusive adjudication of those causes of action, render judgment on verdicts where appropriate or reserve judgment on those causes of action pending entry of final judgment upon termination of case, declare partial mistrial as to remaining causes of action, and order limited retrial. Valentine v. Baxter Healthcare Corp. (1999) 68 Cal. App. 4th 1467, 1475, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 252

Special verdict form identifying nonparties as "other persons" for purpose of allocating negligence was not confusing or ambiguous. Bly-Magee v. Budget Rent-A-Car Corp. (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 318, 326, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 330

[c] Special Interrogatories

Special finding on issue incidental to general verdict may be ignored if immaterial. De Gottardi v. Donati (1909) 155 Cal. 109, 111, 99 P. 492

Special interrogatory is question put to jury to test validity of general verdict; special verdict decides ultimate facts, after which judgment rendered by court. Burlingame Motor Co. v. Peninsula Activities, Inc. (1971) 15 Cal. App. 3d 656, 661, 93 Cal. Rptr. 376

[2] Requesting Special Findings or Special Verdicts

[a] Advisability of Requesting Special Verdicts or Findings

Party who attacks sufficiency of general verdict should have requested special verdicts. Rodgers v. Kemper Constr. Co. (1975) 50 Cal. App. 3d 608, 617, 124 Cal. Rptr. 143

Responsibility for requesting special verdicts or findings on party who loses verdict. Codekas v. Dyna-Lift Co. (1975) 48 Cal. App. 3d 20, 24-25, 121 Cal. Rptr. 121

Appellate court will not permit tactical choices of trial counsel in failing to request special findings or verdicts to force abstract issues on it for determination on appeal. McCloud v. Roy Riegels Chems. (1971) 20 Cal. App. 3d 928, 937, 97 Cal. Rptr. 910

[b] Court's Discretion in Directing Special Verdicts or Findings

Trial court does not abuse its discretion by denying requested instruction that jury state on which of several alternative theories it finds judgment. Ferro v. Citizens Nat'l Trust & Savings Bank of Los Angeles (1955) 44 Cal. 2d 401, 414, 282 P.2d 849

Court properly prevented long, argumentative, and possibly unresponsive answers to special findings or verdicts by framing questions so that answers may be either "yes" or "no" so long as jury was not cramped or prevented from giving full expression to opinion of majority of jurors. Law v. Northern Assurance Co. (1913) 165 Cal. 394, 405, 132 P. 590

If jury was provided with correct instructions, detailed repetition of instructions in special verdict form was not required. Neal v. Montgomery Elevator Co. (1992) 7 Cal. App. 4th 1194, 1199, 9 Cal. Rptr. 2d 497

Code Civ. Proc. §§ 624 and 625 have been streamlined to give trial court carte blanche in furnishing special finding or verdict forms to jury. McCloud v. Roy Riegels Chems. (1971) 20 Cal. App. 3d 928, 936, 97 Cal. Rptr. 910

[c] Situations in Which Special Verdicts or Findings Commonly Employed

Utilization of special verdicts or jury interrogatories of invaluable assistance in assuring that jury approaches its task with proper standards when there are issues of comparative negligence. Li v. Yellow Cab Co. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 804, 824, 119 Cal. Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d 1226

Special interrogatory is necessary to disclose whether jury's determination turned on failure to establish negligence by plaintiff or on defendant's defenses. Scott v. Industrial Accident Com. (1956) 46 Cal. 2d 76, 84, 293 P.2d 18

Special verdicts or findings are commonly used in actions based on fraud. Babcock v. Omansky (1973) 31 Cal. App. 3d 625, 630, 107 Cal. Rptr. 512

Special verdicts or findings are commonly used in actions based on indemnification. Burlingame Motor Co. v. Peninsula Activities, Inc. (1971) 15 Cal. App. 3d 656, 661, 93 Cal. Rptr. 376

[d] Sufficiency of Special Verdicts in Negligence Actions

Special verdicts are valid in personal injury action even though jurors who dissented from special verdict on existence of manufacturing defect voted on special verdict finding that defect was not substantial factor in causing plaintiff's injuries, and only seven of ten jurors finding that defect was not substantial factor in causing plaintiff's injuries also found manufacturing defect. Resch v. Volkswagen of America, Inc. (1984) 36 Cal. 3d 676, 678, 205 Cal. Rptr. 827, 685 P.2d 1178 (disapproving contrary language in Collin v. Connecticut Valley Arms, Inc. (1982) 137 Cal. App. 3d 815, 187 Cal. Rptr. 306 , and United Farm Workers of America v. Superior Court (1980) 111 Cal. App. 3d 1009, 169 Cal. Rptr. 94)

All jurors are permitted to participate in each special verdict when case is submitted to jury for special verdicts. Resch v. Volkswagen of America, Inc. (1984) 36 Cal. 3d 676, 678, 205 Cal. Rptr. 827, 685 P.2d 1178 (disapproving contrary language in Collin v. Connecticut Valley Arms, Inc. (1982) 137 Cal. App. 3d 815, 187 Cal. Rptr. 306 , and United Farm Workers of America v. Superior Court (1980) 111 Cal. App. 3d 1009, 169 Cal. Rptr. 94)

Special verdicts apportioning damages in negligence actions are valid if they command votes of any nine jurors, when nine identical jurors agreed that party is negligent and that negligence is proximate cause of other party's injuries. Juarez v. Superior Court (1982) 31 Cal. 3d 759, 768, 183 Cal. Rptr. 852, 647 P.2d 128 (retroactive application limited in Phelps v. Superior Court (1982) 136 Cal. App. 3d 802, 811, 186 Cal. Rptr. 626)

[3] Reception of Verdict

Juror's silence at polling, due to trial court's failure to poll juror on one of multiple special verdict questions, does not constitute expressed disagreement with verdict under Code Civ. Proc. § 618. Keener v. Jeld-Wen, Inc. (2009) 46 Cal. 4th 247, 257-259, 92 Cal. Rptr. 3d 862, 206 P.3d 403

No disagreement exists within meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 618 when 10 jurors state on polling that verdict returned was their verdict. Silverhart v. Mount Zion Hospital (1971) 20 Cal. App. 3d 1022, 1029, 98 Cal. Rptr. 187

[4] Requirements of Verdict

[a] Amount

Applicability of Code Civ. Proc. § 626 to single trials. Little v. Superior Court (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 642, 644-645, 12 Cal. Rptr. 481, 361 P.2d 13

[b] When Jury Has Discretion to Award Interest

Interest awarded or denied as additional damage in discretion of jury is of different character than interest awarded or denied in exercise of discretion imposed on court by statute. Esgro Central, Inc. v. General Insurance Co. (1971) 20 Cal. App. 3d 1054, 1064, 98 Cal. Rptr. 153

Discretion of trier of fact to award interest from date of fraud when fraud alleged and Civ. Code §§ 3287 and 3288 read together. Nathanson v. Murphy (1957) 147 Cal. App. 2d 462, 467, 305 P.2d 710

[5] Interpretation of Verdicts

Interpretation of verdict by trial judge in connection with pleadings, evidence, and instructions. Cucamonga County Water Dist. v. Southwest Water Co. (1971) 22 Cal. App. 3d 245, 255, 99 Cal. Rptr. 557 ; Telles v. Title Insurance & Trust Co. (1969) 3 Cal. App. 3d 179, 185, 83 Cal. Rptr. 444

[6] Types of Defective Verdicts

[a] Ambiguous Verdicts

Verdict that fails to specify whether amount awarded as damages in personal injury action represents gross figure from which payment to plaintiff as workers' compensation was not excluded or net figure reflecting exclusion of workers' compensation payments is ambiguous. Woodcock v. Fontana Scaffolding & Equipment Co. (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 452, 456, 72 Cal. Rptr. 217, 445 P.2d 881

If jury has been discharged and verdict is hopelessly ambiguous, judgment must be reversed. McCoy v. Gustafson (2009) 180 Cal. App. 4th 56, 6667, 103 Cal. Rptr. 3d 37

In breach of contract action with related causes of action based on leasing of skiploader by plaintiff to defendant, which then disappeared, jury's special verdict was hopelessly ambiguous, requiring reversal, in awarding plaintiff damages of $15,500 on breach of contract claims and common count for open book account, but, for purposes of common count for goods and services rendered, valuing skiploader at $30,000, even though neither party objected to verdict before jury was discharged, where two damages awards were internally inconsistent, so that both findings were equally against law. Zagami, Inc. v. James A. Crone, Inc. (2008) 160 Cal. App. 4th 1083, 1091-1094, 74 Cal. Rptr. 3d 235

Although special verdict form was ambiguous, form did not fail to dispose of contract cause of action and plaintiff's proposed question regarding negotiation was subsumed in it; had jury found enforceable agreement to negotiate exclusively with plaintiff, it would have properly answered there was in fact enforceable agreement. Further, plaintiff failed to show any abuse was sufficiently grave to amount to manifest miscarriage of justice, where jury found there was no enforceable contract and plaintiff failed to suggest how result would have been different if jury had been asked more specifically whether there was contract to negotiate exclusively and to provide authority for his contentions so that point was waived on appeal. Simon v. San Paolo United States Holding Co., Inc. (2003) 113 Cal. App. 4th 1137, 1148, 1172, 7 Cal. Rptr. 3d 367

Ambiguous verdicts are "informal" or "insufficient" within meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 619. Campbell v. Zokelt

(1969) 272 Cal. App. 2d 315, 319, 77 Cal. Rptr. 561

[b] Inadequate Damages Awarded by Jury

If jury allows damages so grossly inadequate as to show that it must have disregarded the evidence and instructions of court, court should return it for further deliberation under proper instructions. Crowe v. Sacks (1955) 44 Cal. 2d 590, 598, 283 P.2d 689

There is no presumption that jury ignored instruction on damages when verdict is not for large sum of money. Crowe v. Sacks (1955) 44 Cal. 2d 590, 597, 283 P.2d 689

Substantial damages in less than total shown by uncontradicted evidence is not basis for assuming verdict was result of surmise and conjecture. Pfingsten v. Westenhaver (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 12, 25, 244 P.2d 395

[c] Inconsistency Between General Verdict and Special Findings

Verdicts are inconsistent when beyond possibility of reconciliation under any possible application of evidence and instructions. Oxford v. Foster Wheeler LLC (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 700, 716-717, 99 Cal. Rptr. 3d 418

Remedy for inconsistent verdicts is not to grant judgment as matter of law, but to order new trial. Stillwell v. The Salvation Army (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 360, 375-376, 84 Cal. Rptr. 3d 111

In eminent domain proceeding, jury implicitly made inconsistent findings of fact in its special verdict, rendering verdict against the law, where, although in eminent domain proceeding jury may accept evidence of any expert and jury is not bound by valuation opinion of appraiser and may choose figure between experts based on all evidence and cannot render verdict higher or lower than shown by testimony, these rules do not override independent rule that special verdict findings must be internally consistent and logical, and where jury implicitly made inconsistent findings of fact on fair market value of property in before condition when it reached its conclusions as to fair market value of property taken and severance damages to remainder before considering project benefits. City of San Diego v. D.R. Horton San Diego Holding Co., Inc. (2005) 126 Cal. App. 4th 668, 681-684, 24 Cal. Rptr. 3d 338

Special verdict or finding is inconsistent with general verdict only if, as matter of law, special verdict or finding taken by itself authorizes judgment different from that permitted by general verdict; every reasonable intendment favoring general verdict must be given. Wyler v. Feuer (1978) 85 Cal. App. 3d 392, 404, 149 Cal. Rptr. 626; Bate v. Marsteller (1965) 232 Cal. App. 2d 605, 614-615, 43 Cal. Rptr. 149

[d] Informal Verdict

"Informal" verdict defined. Crowe v. Sacks (1955) 44 Cal. 2d 590, 596, 283 P.2d 689

[e] Insufficient Verdicts

"Insufficient" verdict defined. Crowe v. Sacks (1955) 44 Cal. 2d 590, 596, 283 P.2d 689

In action for wrongful death, negligence, and battery, special verdict form was fatally defective when it did not require jury to make finding on battery claim, because battery and lack of informed consent were separate claims. Correct way to remedy defective verdict was to grant defendant's motion for JNOV on battery claim, not order new trial. Saxena v.

Goffney (2008) 159 Cal. App. 4th 316, 325-330, 71 Cal. Rptr. 3d 469

Verdict patently contrary to court's instructions by not covering or comprehending issues submitted is insufficient. Sherwood v. Rossini (1968) 264 Cal. App. 2d 926, 930, 71 Cal. Rptr. 1

[f] Jury's Failure to Find on All Issues or Parties

Jury's silence as to one of two defendants is failure to find on issue presented to it and does not amount to verdict in favor of that defendant; construction of verdict with reference to instructions under which it was rendered. Irelan-Yuba Gold Mining Co. v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (1941) 18 Cal. 2d 557, 570, 116 P.2d 611

Granting of mistrial was proper when jury was unable to answer all questions on special verdict form submitted to it. Falls v. Superior Court (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 851, 855, 239 Cal. Rptr. 862

Verdict is defective when jury fails to find as to all issues before it. Fransen v. Washington (1964) 229 Cal. App. 2d 570, 578, 40 Cal. Rptr. 458

[7] Correction of Defective Verdicts

[a] Informal or Insufficient Verdict

Court retains control over proceedings with power to procure correction of informal or insufficient verdict under Code Civ. Proc. § 619 until verdict recorded and jury discharged. Maxwell v. Powers (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 1596, 1603, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 62 ; Fibreboard Paper Products Corp. v. East Bay Union of Machinists (1964) 227 Cal. App. 2d 675, 732-733, 39 Cal. Rptr. 64

Court's power to return jury for further deliberation if its verdict is informal or insufficient in not covering issues submitted. Sherwood v. Rossini (1968) 264 Cal. App. 2d 926, 929, 71 Cal. Rptr. 1

[b] Ambiguous Verdicts

If verdict is ambiguous, party adversely affected must request more formal and certain verdict; if trial judge has any doubts, trial judge may send jury out under proper instructions to correct informal or insufficient verdict; if no objection is made before jury discharged, trial judge must interpret verdict from its language considered in connection with pleadings, evidence, and instructions. Woodcock v. Fontana Scaffolding & Equipment Co. (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 452, 456, 72 Cal. Rptr. 217, 445 P.2d 881 ; Campbell v. Zokelt (1969) 272 Cal. App. 2d 315, 319, 77 Cal. Rptr. 561

If verdict is hopelessly ambiguous, reversal is required even though retrial will be limited to issue giving rise to ambiguity. Woodcock v. Fontana Scaffolding & Equipment Co. (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 452, 457, 72 Cal. Rptr. 217, 445 P.2d 881

If jury has been discharged and verdict is hopelessly ambiguous, judgment must be reversed. McCoy v. Gustafson (2009) 180 Cal. App. 4th 56, 66-67, 103 Cal. Rptr. 3d 37

[c] Inadequate Damages Awarded by Jury

If trial judge believes damages awarded by jury are inadequate but verdict is not defective, proper procedure is to set aside verdict on motion for new trial. Jehl v. Southern Pacific Co. (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 821, 827, 59 Cal. Rptr. 276, 427

P.2d 988

When both liability and damages are at issue, trial court has jurisdiction to return jurors making inadequate damage award for further consideration with instructions that determination should not be based on compromise of liability and damage issues. Crowe v. Sacks (1955) 44 Cal. 2d 590, 598, 283 P.2d 689

[d] Jury's Failure to Find on Issue or Party

In determining whether jury failed to find on issue presented to it, verdict is construed with reference to instructions under which it was rendered. Irelan-Yuba Gold Mining Co. v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (1941) 18 Cal. 2d 557, 570, 116 P.2d 611

Jury foreperson's explanation of why jury failed to render verdict for any party to action accepted by court in construction of verdict as a whole and confirmed court's understanding of verdict in improper form. Brand v. Norris (1953) 121 Cal. App. 2d 367, 369, 263 P.2d 456

[e] Inconsistency Between General Verdicts and Special Verdicts or Findings

Verdicts are inconsistent when beyond possibility of reconciliation under any possible application of evidence and instructions. Oxford v. Foster Wheeler LLC (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 700, 716-717, 99 Cal. Rptr. 3d 418

General verdict stands unless facts found by jury in answer to special interrogatories are clearly antagonistic so as to be absolutely irreconcilable that both general verdict and special findings or verdicts cannot stand. Law v. Northern Assurance Co. (1913) 165 Cal. 394, 406, 132 P. 590 ; Wyler v. Feuer (1978) 85 Cal. App. 3d 392, 404, 149 Cal. Rptr. 626

In action against multiple defendants, in which plaintiff dismissed some defendants as to whom jury had returned inconsistent general and special verdicts, defendants remaining in action waived any objection to judgment on this ground, because verdicts actually entered were no longer inconsistent and remaining defendants failed to make timely objection to plaintiff's motion for dismissal. Hathaway v. Spiro (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 359, 364-367, 210 Cal. Rptr. 421

"Irreconcilable inconsistency" defined. Pitcher v. Kniss (1970) 10 Cal. App. 3d 931, 940, 89 Cal. Rptr. 676

[8] Waiver of Defects in Verdict

Waiver when no objection to blank forms of possible verdicts. Lynch v. Birdwell (1955) 44 Cal. 2d 839, 851, 285 P.2d 919

Plaintiff and defendant waived error in form of special verdict by failing to object to it. Simon v. San Paolo United States Holding Co., Inc. (2003) 113 Cal. App. 4th 1137, 1148, 1171-1172, 7 Cal. Rptr. 3d 367

Plaintiff waived any inconsistency in verdict by failing to request that verdict be corrected or that jury be returned to deliberate further. United Farm Workers of America v. Superior Court (1980) 111 Cal. App. 3d 1009, 1021-1022, 169 Cal. Rptr. 94 (disapproved on other grounds in Resch v. Volkswagen of America, Inc. (1984) 36 Cal. 3d 676, 682, 205 Cal. Rptr. 827, 685 P.2d 1178)

[9] Motion for Judgment Notwithstanding Verdict

Criteria similar to directed verdict. Valdez v. J.D. Diffenbaugh Co. (1975) 51 Cal. App. 3d 494, 513, 124 Cal. Rptr. 467

[10] Effect of Verdict

[a] In General

Prohibition is proper remedy for improper interference with verdict. Jehl v. Southern Pacific Co. (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 821, 829, 59 Cal. Rptr. 276, 427 P.2d 988

Right to jury trial is not denied by court's setting aside verdict and granting motion for new trial. Dorsey v. Barba (1952) 38 Cal. 2d 350, 358, 240 P.2d 604 (disapproved on other grounds in Jehl v. Southern Pacific Co. (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 821, 828, 59 Cal. Rptr. 276, 427 P.2d 988)

Jury's verdict is advisory in equity cases and is not available to either party as matter of right. Schlyen v. Schlyen (1954) 43 Cal. 2d 361, 372, 273 P.2d 897

Court may accept or reject advisory verdict and must make findings to complete record. Posey v. Leavitt (1991) 229 Cal. App. 3d 1236, 1244, 280 Cal. Rptr. 568

[b] Bifurcated Trial

Verdict is determination of issue presented in bifurcated trial; if decision is for defendant on issue of liability, plaintiff is barred from further proceedings. Lauderdale v. U & I Equipment Co. (1969) 271 Cal. App. 2d 140, 142, 76 Cal. Rptr. 483

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersJudgesDiscretionCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawJudgments Notwithstanding VerdictsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsGeneral VerdictsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsInconsistent VerdictsCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsSpecial Verdicts

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326A JURY VERDICTS
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
A. Jury Verdicts

28-326A California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326A.56

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents. Editorial Consultant

§ 326A.56 Law Reviews

Gross & Syverud, Don't Try: Civil Jury Verdicts in a System Geared to Settlement, 44 UCLA L. Rev. 1 (1996)

Note, Jury Unanimity in California: Should it Stay or Should it Go? 29 Loy. L.A. L. Rev. (1996)

Borowsky & Nicolaisen, Punitive Damages in California: The Integrity of Jury Verdicts, 17 U.S.F. L. Rev. 147 (1983)

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsRight to Jury TrialCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentAdditurs & RemittitursAdditursCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesPunitive Damages

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326A JURY VERDICTS
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
A. Jury Verdicts

28-326A California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326A.57

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents. Editorial Consultant

§ 326A.57 Text References

California Civil Procedure During Trial, Ch. 18, Verdicts, §§ 18.1-18.38; Ch. 20, Motions After Trial, §§ 20.3-20.13 (Cal. C.E.B. 1960)

How the Jury Decides (Cal. C.E.B. 1972)

7 Witkin, California Procedure, Trial, §§ 330-407, 430-438, 446-456 (4th ed. 1997)

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsVerdictsGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326A JURY VERDICTS
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
A. Jury Verdicts

28-326A California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 326A.58-326A.59

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents. Editorial Consultant

[Reserved]

§§ 326A.58[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326A JURY VERDICTS
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
B. Directed Verdicts

28-326A California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326A.60

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents. Editorial Consultant

§ 326A.60 State Statutes

Procedures for moving for directed verdict and effect of directed verdict. Code Civ. Proc. § 630

Directed verdict of no fault in action with multiple defendants. Code Civ. Proc. § 630(d)

Directed verdict after jury discharged without rendering verdict; denial of motion when judgment not ordered within specified time. Code Civ. Proc. § 630(f)

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawDirected Verdicts

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326A JURY VERDICTS
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
B. Directed Verdicts

28-326A California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326A.61

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents. Editorial Consultant

§ 326A.61 Decisions

[1] Function of Jury in Rendering Directed Verdict

Jury is bound by court's direction of verdict; jurors act ministerially and do not exercise discretion in giving verdict on court's order. Estate of Sharon (1918) 179 Cal. 447, 460, 177 P. 283

[2] Grounds for Directed Verdict

In action alleging false arrest and false imprisonment based on plaintiff's conduct in dumping trash on floor during school board meeting held in school's multi-purpose room, as result of which police were called, trial court properly denied plaintiff's motion for directed verdict, where substantial evidence supported jury's finding that plaintiff's conduct was not legitimate element of meeting, but rather significant impairment of it. McMahon v. Albany Unif. Schl. Dist. (2002) 104 Cal. App. 4th 1275, 1282-1289, 129 Cal. Rptr. 2d 184

Situations in which directed verdict proper. Metzenbaum v. R. O. S. Associates (1986) 188 Cal. App. 3d 202, 208, 232 Cal. Rptr. 741 ; Short v. Nevada Joint Union High School Dist. (1985) 163 Cal. App. 3d 1087, 1095-1096, 210 Cal. Rptr. 297 ; Frisk v. Merrihew (1974) 42 Cal. App. 3d 319, 325, 116 Cal. Rptr. 781

Directed verdict for defendant in defamation action was not proper because question of whether utterance was privileged cannot be determined as matter of law. Frisk v. Merrihew (1974) 42 Cal. App. 3d 319, 325, 116 Cal. Rptr. 781

Directed verdict must be sustained on any applicable theory of law supporting it. Stilson v. Moulton-Niguel Water Dist. (1971) 21 Cal. App. 3d 928, 933, 98 Cal. Rptr. 914

[3] Timeliness of Motion for Directed Verdict

Motion for directed verdict is proper at conclusion of evidence to give opposing party an opportunity to introduce its evidence to overcome grounds of motion; trial court's discretion to permit motion for directed verdict at any time before case submitted to jury. Gibson v. Southern Pacific Co. (1955) 137 Cal. App. 2d 337, 346, 290 P.2d 347

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJudgment as Matter of LawDirected Verdicts

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326A JURY VERDICTS
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
B. Directed Verdicts

28-326A California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 326A.62-326A.69

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents. Editorial Consultant

[Reserved]

§§ 326A.62[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329

Chapter 326A JURY VERDICTS
PART IV. FORMS
A. Jury Verdicts

28-326A California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326A.70

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents. Editorial Consultant

§ 326A.70 General Verdict

[1] FORM General Verdict

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name(s)],	)
Plaintiff(s),	)
vs.	)	NO. _____
_____ [name(s)],	)	GENERAL VERDICT
Defendant(s).	)
	)
	)

_____

We, the jury in the above-entitled action, find for the _____[status of party, and name, if desired] and against the _____[status of party] [in the sum of $_____ as actual damages].
Dated: _____.

_____
[signature of foreperson]

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, is a form of general verdict for use in an action for the recovery of money in which there are only two parties [see Code Civ. Proc. § 624, discussed at § 326A.11[2]].

The verdict must be signed by the jury foreperson, read to the jury by the court or clerk, and inquiry made whether it is the jury's verdict. Either party may require the jury to be polled [see Code Civ. Proc. § 618, discussed at § 326A.14[3]].

In a civil action for the recovery of money, the jury must find the amount of recovery [see Code Civ. Proc. § 626, discussed at § 326A.15[1]].

The form is not appropriate for a verdict for the recovery of specific personal property [see Code Civ. Proc. § 627, discussed at § 326A.15[2]].

[3] Modification of Form

If there are multiple plaintiffs (or cross complainants), the form in [1], above, can be modified by addition of the phrase "for the _____ [status of party, and name] and against the _____ [status of party] in the sum of $_____ as actual damages" for each plaintiff (or cross complainant) who is awarded damages.

If the action is one in which the jury has discretion to award interest, the form may be modified by the addition of the phrase "together with interest thereon from and after _____ [date]" [see Civ. Code § 3288, discussed at § 326A.15[3]; see also Ch. 177, Damages, § 177.140 et seq.].

[4] Cross References

For other forms of general verdict, and a form of general verdict with special interrogatories in a medical malpractice case, see California Trial Guide, Unit 91, Jury Deliberations and Rendition of Verdict (Matthew Bender).

148 of 150 DOCUMENTS

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326A JURY VERDICTS
PART IV. FORMS
A. Jury Verdicts

28-326A California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326A.71

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents. Editorial Consultant

§ 326A.71 Verdict with Separate Special Findings Regarding Punitive Damages

[1] FORM Verdict with Separate Special Findings Regarding Punitive Damages

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name(s)],	)
Plaintiff(s),	)
vs.	)	NO. _____
_____ [name(s)],	)	VERDICT WITH SPECIAL FINDINGS REGARD-Defendant(s).	)	ING PUNITIVE DAMAGES
	)
	)

_____

We, the jury in the above-entitled action, find for the _____[status of party, and name, if desired] and against the _____[status of party or parties] [in the sum of $_____ as actual damages].

We further find in answer to the special interrogatories submitted to us as follows:

ISSUE NO. 1: If you found that plaintiff was entitled to recover actual damages from defendant[s, or any of them,], was/were defendant[s, or any of them,] guilty of oppression, fraud, or malice in doing the acts that caused plaintiff's actual damages?

Answer "yes" or "no."

ANSWER:

_____

[If you have answered Issue No. 1 yes, which defendant or defendants do you find guilty of oppression, fraud, or malice?

Name each such defendant:

_____

_____

_____

_____]

ISSUE NO. 2: If you answered Issue No. 1 yes, what amount of punitive damages, if any, do you assess against _____[each] defendant [named in your answer to Issue No. 1] for the sake of example and by way of punishment?

Name each such defendant:	Amount of Punitive Damages:
_____	_____
_____	_____
_____	_____
_____	_____

Dated: _____.

_____
[signature of foreperson]

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, is a form of general verdict with special interrogatories for use to assess punitive damages [see Code Civ. Proc. § 625, discussed at § 326A.11[2]; see also § 326A.70[2], [3]]. The first interrogatory is not necessary; it is enough that the amount of punitive damages be separately stated [see Clark v. McClurg (1932) 215 Cal. 279, 281, 9 P.2d 505 ; see also Civ. Code § 3294(b); Weeks v. Baker & McKenzie (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 1128, 1154, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 510 (employer may be liable for punitive damages for employee's sexual harassment without being guilty of oppression, fraud, or malice)].

The bracketed portions of the first interrogatory are for use only if there are multiple defendants. Similarly, if there is only one defendant, the first column of the answer to the second interrogatory and the last three lines of the second column of that answer should be omitted.

[3] Cross References

For discussion and forms relating to punitive damages generally, see Ch. 177, Damages, § 177.40 et seq.

For a form of special verdict in a personal injury case, see California Trial Guide, Unit 91, Jury Deliberations and Rendition of Verdict (Matthew Bender).

For special verdict forms, see Judicial Council Forms of California Civil Jury Instructions (CACI) (Matthew Bender).

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326A JURY VERDICTS
PART IV. FORMS
A. Jury Verdicts

28-326A California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 326A.73-326A.79

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents. Editorial Consultant

[Reserved]

§§ 326A.73[Reserved]

150 of 150 DOCUMENTS

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
Chapter 326A JURY VERDICTS
PART IV. FORMS
B. Directed Verdicts

28-326A California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 326A.80

AUTHOR: William G. McDevitt William G. McDevitt is a partner in the law firm of Jones, Clifford, McDevitt, Naekel & Johnson, LLP, in San Francisco. He specializes in personal injury cases, with an emphasis on products liability and construction site accidents. Editorial Consultant

§ 326A.80 Notice of Motion for Directed Verdict

[1] FORM Notice of Motion for Directed Verdict

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	NOTICE OF MOTION AND MOTION FOR DIR-
Plaintiff,	)	ECTED VERDICT [, SUPPORTING DECLARA-
vs.	)	TION OF _____ (name), AND
_____ [name],	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORIT-Defendant.	)	IES]
	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
		Judge: _____
		Date Action Filed: _____
		Trial Date: _____

_____

To _____ [identify party, e.g., plaintiff _____ (name)] and to _____[name], his/her/its/their attorney of record:

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that on _____[date], at _____[time], or as soon thereafter as the matter may be heard, in [_____ (Department or Division) _____ of] this court, located at _____[street address], _____[city], California, _____ [identify party, e.g., defendant] _____[name] will, and hereby does, move, pursuant to Section 630 of the Code of Civil Procedure, for an order directing entry of a verdict for the _____ [moving party, e.g., defendant] and against the _____ [opposing party, e.g., plaintiff] on _____ [all the issues or the following issues only: _____ (describe issues, e.g., whether plaintiff is entitled to punitive damages from defendant)]. The motion will be made on the grounds that _____ [specify legal grounds, e.g., disregarding conflicting evidence and giving to _____ (opposing party's, e.g., plaintiff's) evidence all the value to which it is legally entitled, including all reasonable and logical inferences that may be drawn from that evidence, as a matter of law there is no substantial evidence to support a verdict for _____ (opposing party, e.g., plaintiff) on any of the claims asserted herein; and thus, such evidence is wholly insufficient to warrant submission of the case to the jury].

The motion will be based on this notice of motion, on the _____ [affidavit(s) or declaration(s)] of _____[name(s)] and the memorandum served and filed herewith, on the records and file herein, [on such portions of the transcript of the trial and such supplemental affidavits or declarations and memoranda of points and authorities as may be filed subsequently herein,] and on such evidence as may be presented at the hearing of the motion.
Dated: _____.

_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, is for use to give notice of a motion for directed verdict [see Code Civ. Proc. § 630, discussed in § 326A.30 et seq., above]. The examples in the form assume the motion is being made by the defendant, which is the usual case; but the motion also may be made by a plaintiff [see De La Rosa v. City of San Bernardino (1971) 16 Cal. App. 3d 739, 742-743, 94 Cal. Rptr. 175 ; § 326A.31].

A directed verdict may be ordered with respect to some or all of the issues [see Code Civ. Proc. § 630(b), for discussion, see § 326A.35], or with respect to some or all of the parties [see Code Civ. Proc. § 630(d); for discussion, see § 326A.36].

A defendant's motion for directed verdict must be denied if the plaintiff presents any substantial evidence that justifies submission of the case to the jury after resolving all inferences and intendments to be drawn from the evidence in favor of denial of the motion [Bell v. California (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 919, 927, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 541 ; for discussion, see § 326A.33].

[3] Supporting Memorandum Required

A memorandum must be served and filed with the notice of motion [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(a)]. For discussion and forms, see Ch. 417, Points and Authorities .

[4] Time for Making Motion for Directed Verdict

Generally, a party moves for a directed verdict after all parties have completed the presentation of all their evidence [Code Civ. Proc. § 630(a); for discussion, see § 326A.32]. However, the trial court may permit a motion for directed verdict to be made at any time before the case is submitted to the jury [Gibson v. Southern Pacific Co. (1955) 137 Cal. App. 2d 337, 346, 290 P.2d 347] .

A motion for directed verdict also may be made or renewed after a jury has been discharged without having reached a verdict [see Code Civ. Proc. § 630(f); for discussion, see § 326A.36].

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329

CHAPTER 327 JUVENILE COURTS: JURISDICTION AND GENERAL PROCEDURES

28-327 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated 327.syn

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser and Hon. Kurt Kumli Editorial Consultants Janice M. Brickley Former Contributor

§ 327.syn Synopsis to Chapter 327: JUVENILE COURTS: JURISDICTION AND GENERAL PROCEDURES

§ 327.01 Scope of Chapter

§ 327.02 Cross References

§§ 327.03-327.09 [Reserved]

§ 327.10 Purpose of Juvenile Court System

[1] Protection of Public and Minor

[a] In General

[b] Dependent Children

[c] Delinquent Minors

[2] Recognition of Parental Duty to Support Minor Children

§ 327.11 Jurisdiction of Juvenile Court

[1] Jurisdiction Resides in Superior Courts

[2] Scope of Jurisdiction

[a] In General

[b] Dependency Proceedings

[c] Wardship and Delinquency Proceedings

[3] Dual Jurisdiction Issues

[a] Single Status Required in Most Counties

[b] Procedure for Recommending Single Status

[c] Procedure When Two Counties Are Involved

[d] Local Practice

[e] Notice and Decision Making

[f] Special Protocols for Dual Status

[4] Jurisdiction Over Matters Incidental to Proceedings

[5] Retention of Jurisdiction When Juvenile Permitted to Reside in Another County

[6] Trend Toward Expanding Jurisdiction of Juvenile Court

§ 327.12 Venue for Transfer of Juvenile Court Proceedings

[1] General Rule for Determining Proper Court

[2] Determining Residency of Minor

[3] When Minor Is Detained in County Other Than County of Jurisdiction

[a] Notice to County of Jurisdiction

[b] Transfer to County of Jurisdiction

[4] Transfer When Minor's County of Residence Changes

§ 327.13 Citation, Subpoena, and Warrant Powers of Juvenile Court

[1] Citation

[2] Subpoena

[3] Warrant for Arrest or Protective Custody

§ 327.14 Enforcement of Orders of Juvenile Court

[1] Incarceration or Other Sanctions

[2] Misdemeanor Punishment for Willful Failure to Appear as Promised

§§ 327.15-327.19 [Reserved]

§ 327.20 Juvenile Court Judges and Referees

[1] Judge

[a] Appointment of Superior Court Judge to Hear Juvenile Court Matters

[b] Authority and Role

[2] Referee

[a] Appointment and Term of Office

[b] Qualifications

[c] Authority and Role

[d] Referee Acting as Temporary Judge

[e] Disqualification

[f] Referee Findings and Orders

[i] When Effective

[ii] Service of Findings and Orders

[g] Rehearing on Orders of Referee

[i] Notice of Right to Rehearing

[ii] Application for Rehearing

[iii] Procedures on Rehearing

[3] Temporary Judge Other Than a Referee

[4] Dependency Training for Judicial Officers

§ 327.21 Other Juvenile Court Personnel

[1] Delinquency Proceedings

[a] Probation Officer

[i] Appointment and Term of Office

[ii] Authority to Employ Other Professionals

[iii] Role in Delinquency Proceedings

[b] Prosecuting Attorney

[2] Dependency Proceedings

[a] Social Worker

[b] Petitioner's Attorney

[c] Court Officer

§ 327.22 Appointment of Private Counsel

[1] In County With Public Defender

[2] Compensation

[3] Duties

§§ 327.23-327.29 [Reserved]

§ 327.30 Filing Papers and Petitions

[1] Filing Fees

[2] Facsimile Filing

§ 327.31 Conduct of Juvenile Court Proceeding

[1] Expeditious and Nonadversarial Conduct Generally Required

[2] Special or Separate Session Required

[3] Persons Entitled to Be Present

[4] General Rule Excluding Public

[5] Media Access

§ 327.32 Service of Written Findings and Orders

§ 327.33 Court Reporter Transcripts

[1] Required in Proceedings Before Judge

[2] Directive in Proceedings Before Referee

[3] Preparation of Transcript

§ 327.34 Confidentiality of Juvenile Records

[1] Limits on Disclosure

[2] Petition for Disclosure

[a] Preparation and Service of Petition

[b] Review and Determination of Petition

[i] Balancing Test

[ii] Third-Party Petitioners

[iii] Disclosure to Press

[iv] Access Requires Showing of Good Cause and Notice

[v] In Camera Hearing and Balancing Test

[vi] Records Pertaining to Deceased Child

[vii] Protective Orders

§ 327.35 Other Determinations of Confidentiality

§§ 327.36-327.39 [Reserved]

§ 327.40 Commitment or Placement of Dependents and Wards

[1] Separate Facilities Required Generally for Dependents and Wards

[2] Preference for Institutions or Family Homes of Same Religious Belief

§ 327.41 Parent Liability for Costs Incurred on Behalf of Minor

§ 327.42 Procedure for Order Requiring Reimbursement for Support

§§ 327.43-327.49 [Reserved]

§ 327.50 Matthew Bender Publications

§ 327.51 Other Text References

§ 327.52 Law Reviews

§§ 327.53-327.59 [Reserved]

§ 327.60 Purpose and Nature of Juvenile Courts

[1] State Statutes

[2] Decisions

§ 327.61 Jurisdiction and Venue of Juvenile Courts

[1] State Statutes

[2] California Rules of Court

[3] Decisions

[4] Attorney General Opinions

§ 327.62 Powers of Juvenile Courts

[1] State Statutes

[2] California Rules of Court

[3] Decisions

§§ 327.63-327.69 [Reserved]

§ 327.70 Judges and Referees

[1] State Statutes

[2] California Rules of Court

[3] Decisions

[4] Attorney General Opinions

§ 327.71 Probation Officers

[1] State Statutes

[2] Attorney General Opinions

§ 327.72 Child Welfare Workers

[1] State Statutes

[2] Decisions

§ 327.73 Appointed Counsel

[1] State Statutes

[2] Decisions

§ 327.74 Psychotherapeutic Professionals

§ 327.75 Juvenile Court System Commissions and Committees

§§ 327.76-327.79 [Reserved]

§ 327.80 State Statutes

§ 327.81 California Rules of Court

§§ 327.82-327.89 [Reserved]

§ 327.90 State Statutes

§ 327.91 Attorney General Opinions

§§ 327.92-327.149 [Reserved]

§ 327.150 Application to Commence Proceedings by Affidavit and Decision by Social Worker [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 329, 653, 653.5]--Judicial Council Form JV-210

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Obligations of Social Worker or Probation Officer in Response to Declaration

[4] Situations in Which Minor May Be Both Dependent and Ward

§ 327.151 Application to Review Decision by Social Worker Not to Commence Proceedings [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 331, 655]--Judicial Council Form JV-215

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Review of Decision Not to Commence Juvenile Court Proceedings

§§ 327.152-327.159 [Reserved]

§ 327.160 Order to Transfer Juvenile Court Proceedings [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 375, 750; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.610]--Judicial Council Form JV-550

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Transfer-Out Hearing

[4] Contents of Order

[5] Transport of Child in Custody

[6] Transmittal of Papers

[7] Cross References

§ 327.161 [Reserved]

§ 327.162 Petition for Disclosure of Juvenile Court Records [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 827, 828; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 5.504, 5.552]--Judicial Council Form JV-570

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Service of Petition

[4] Hearing on Petition

[5] Cross References

Gary C. Seiser n* and Hon. Kurt Kumli n
Editorial Consultants
Janice M. Brickley n
Former Contributor

FOOTNOTES:

(n61)Footnote *. Gary C. Seiser is one of California's leading authorities on juvenile dependency law and practice, and is certified as a Child Welfare Law Specialist by the National Association of Counsel for Children, which is accredited by the State Bar of California, Board of Legal Specialization. He is a supervising deputy with the Juvenile Dependency Division of the San Diego County Office of County Counsel. Mr. Seiser also serves as a consultant on the Judicial Benchguides for dependency hearings published by the California Center for Judicial Education and Research (CJER), and has served as faculty for CJER, the California Judges Association, and the National Council of Juvenile and Family Court Judges. His published works include articles for the American Bar Association Child Law Practice and a chapter in The Handbook of Juvenile Forensic Psychology (2002). Mr. Seiser's writing has been cited by the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals, the California Supreme Court, and numerous California appellate courts. He was a member of the California Blue Ribbon Commission on Children in Foster Care (2006-2009), and has more than 60 published decisions, including 10 at the California Supreme Court. A former Commissioner of the Riverside County Superior Court assigned to the Juvenile Court and a former prosecutor, Mr. Seiser also served as a member of the SB 1195 Task Force that rewrote much of California's dependency law through Senate Bill 243 [Stats. 1987, ch. 1485]. He is a frequent public speaker throughout California on juvenile dependency law and practice.

(n62)Footnote . Hon. Kurt Kumli is a California Superior Court Judge for the County of Santa Clara and a Commissioner on the State Commission on Juvenile Justice. He was instrumental in creating specialized delinquency courts in Santa Clara County for drug offenders, family violence, and restorative justice. He was the co-creator of the country's first juvenile mental health court and implemented Santa Clara's juvenile deferred entry of judgment (DEJ) process, which now accounts for nearly 30 percent of all first-time court referrals in that county. A nationally recognized expert on juvenile law and policy, Judge Kumli serves on the faculty at the Santa Clara University School of Law and teaches delinquency law and policy classes throughout the United States. The National Institute of Justice chose Judge Kumli as a recipient of a John B. Pickett Fellowship at Harvard's Kennedy School of Government for Senior Executives in State and Local Government Program. Judge Kumli has been a member of the California Judicial Council's Family and Juvenile Law Advisory Committee, and a faculty member and technical advisor for the California District Attorneys Association, where he chaired its Juvenile Justice Committee. He has published numerous articles on gang prosecution, juvenile justice reform, juvenile mental health court, and California's adult court certification (Fitness) process.

(n63)Footnote . Janice M. Brickley is an attorney in private practice, specializing in juvenile delinquency law. Between 1984 and 1994, she served as an Assistant Public Defender in Alameda County, handling juvenile delinquency matters that included numerous homicides and fitness hearings. Ms. Brickley has taught law school classes on juvenile law and evidence and has lectured across the state on juvenile law issues. She is a member of both the Juvenile Justice Committee of California Attorneys for Criminal Justice and the Juvenile Justice Section of the Alameda County Bar Association.

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 327 JUVENILE COURTS: JURISDICTION AND GENERAL PROCEDURES
PART I. SCOPE

28-327 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 327.01

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser and Hon. Kurt Kumli Editorial Consultants Janice M. Brickley Former Contributor

§ 327.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter provides an overview of the juvenile court system, including the following:

- The purpose of the juvenile court system.
- Its jurisdiction over persons and types of proceedings.
- The powers and duties of its judges, referees, and other personnel.
- The procedures followed in juvenile court proceedings generally.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Criminal Law & ProcedureJuvenile OffendersJuvenile ProceedingsGeneral OverviewFamily LawDelinquency & DependencyDelinquency ProceedingsFamily LawDelinquency & DependencyDependency Proceedings

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 327 JUVENILE COURTS: JURISDICTION AND GENERAL PROCEDURES
PART I. SCOPE

28-327 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 327.02

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser and Hon. Kurt Kumli Editorial Consultants Janice M. Brickley Former Contributor

§ 327.02 Cross References

For a detailed discussion and forms relating specifically to dependency proceedings in juvenile court, see Ch. 328, Juvenile Courts: Dependency Proceedings .

A discussion and forms relating specifically to juvenile court proceedings for delinquency or wardship may be found in Ch. 329, Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings .

For a discussion of specific civil actions arising out of children's issues, including suggested forms of pleadings, see the following related chapters:

- Ch. 5, Abuse of Minors and Elderly (includes discussion and forms relating to civil actions based on sexual abuse of minors).

- Ch. 12A, Adoptions: Termination of Parental Rights (discussion and forms relating to termination of parental rights).

- Ch. 259, Family Law Enforcement: Special Remedies for Support Enforcement (discussion and forms relating to enforcement of child support orders).

- Ch. 280, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Appointment of Guardians (discussion and forms relating to appointment of guardians of minors).

- Ch. 293, Harassment and Domestic Violence (discussion and forms relating to protective orders against domestic violence, including abuse of minors).

- Ch. 364, Minors: Claims and Property of Minors (discussion and forms relating to a compromise of a minor's claim).

- Ch. 367A, Minors: Tort Actions (discussion and forms relating to tort actions by and against minors).

- Ch. 394, Parent and Child (additional discussion and forms relating to parental rights and duties; coverage of child custody issues arising outside context of dissolution of marriage proceedings).

- Ch. 412, Paternity (discussion and forms relating to establishment of a parent-child relationship).

To review legal and strategic considerations involved in the increasingly broad area of child-related litigation, see Dale, et al., Representing the Child Client (Matthew Bender).

For practical guidance and techniques in representing neglected or abused children, see Peters, Representing Children in Child Protective Proceedings (Matthew Bender 2001).

An analysis of family law issues affecting children, such as the termination of parental rights, enforcement of child support orders, protective orders against domestic violence (including child abuse), parental rights and duties, custody, the establishment of the parent-child relationship, and paternity, can be found in Kirkland, Lurvey, Richmond and Wagner, California Family Law Practice and Procedure, 2d ed., Chs. 30- 35, 96, 141, and 171 (Matthew Bender).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Criminal Law & ProcedureJuvenile OffendersJuvenile ProceedingsGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportObligationsEnforcementGeneral OverviewFamily LawDelinquency & DependencyDelinquency ProceedingsFamily LawDelinquency & DependencyDependency ProceedingsFamily LawGuardiansAppointmentFamily LawParental Duties & RightsDutiesGeneral OverviewFamily LawParental Duties & RightsTermination of RightsInvoluntary TerminationGeneral Overview

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 327 JUVENILE COURTS: JURISDICTION AND GENERAL PROCEDURES
PART I. SCOPE

28-327 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 327.03-327.09

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser and Hon. Kurt Kumli Editorial Consultants Janice M. Brickley Former Contributor

[Reserved]

§§ 327.03[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329

CHAPTER 327 JUVENILE COURTS: JURISDICTION AND GENERAL PROCEDURES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Purpose, Jurisdiction, and Powers of Juvenile Courts

28-327 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 327.10

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser and Hon. Kurt Kumli Editorial Consultants Janice M. Brickley Former Contributor

§ 327.10 Purpose of Juvenile Court System

[1] Protection of Public and Minor

[a] In General

The purpose of the juvenile court system is to provide for the protection and safety of the public and each minor under the jurisdiction of the juvenile court, and to preserve and strengthen the minor's family ties whenever possible [Welf. & Inst. Code § 202(a)]. Thus, the juvenile courts and other public agencies charged with enforcing, interpreting, and administering the juvenile court law are required, in all deliberations under the juvenile court law, to consider [Welf. & Inst. Code § 202(d)]:

- The safety and protection of the public.
- The importance of redressing injuries to victims.
- The best interests of the minor.

The juvenile court system may seek removal of a minor from the custody of his or her parents only when the minor's welfare or safety and protection of the public cannot be adequately safeguarded without removal. When removal of a minor is determined by the juvenile court to be necessary, reunification of the minor with his or her family is a primary objective. When the minor is removed from his or her own family, it is the purpose of the juvenile court law to secure for the minor custody, care, and discipline as nearly as possible equivalent to that which should have been given by the parents. The requirements of the juvenile court provisions must be liberally construed to carry out these purposes [Welf. & Inst. Code § 202(a)].

[b] Dependent Children

The purpose of the juvenile dependency system is to provide the maximum protection to children who have suffered or are at substantial risk of suffering serious abuse or neglect [Welf. & Inst. Code § 300.2]. Children under the jurisdiction of the juvenile court who are in need of protective services shall receive care, treatment, and guidance consistent with their best interest and with the best interest of the public [Welf. & Inst. Code § 202(b); see also further discussion in Ch. 328, Juvenile Courts: Dependency Proceedings, § 328.11 (Goals of Dependency Proceedings)].

[c] Delinquent Minors

Minors under the jurisdiction of the juvenile court as a consequence of delinquent conduct shall, in conformity with the interests of public safety and protection, receive care, treatment, and guidance that is consistent with their best interest, that holds them accountable for their behavior, and that is appropriate for their circumstances [Welf. & Inst. Code § 202(b)].

This guidance may include punishment that is consistent with the rehabilitative objectives of this chapter. The term "punishment" means the imposition of sanctions, but does not include placement in foster care as defined by Welf. & Inst. Code § 727.3 [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 202(b), 202(e)]. If the minor has been removed from the custody of his or her parents, family preservation and family reunification are appropriate goals for the juvenile court to consider in determining the disposition of a minor under the jurisdiction of the juvenile court as a consequence of delinquent conduct, when those goals are consistent with the minor's best interests and with the best interests of the public [Welf. & Inst. Code § 202(b)].

[2] Recognition of Parental Duty to Support Minor Children

Another purpose of the juvenile court system is to reaffirm that the duty of a parent to support and maintain a minor child continues, subject to the financial ability of the parent to pay, during any period the minor may be declared a ward of the court and removed from the custody of the parent [Welf. & Inst. Code § 202(c); see also further discussion in § 327.41].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawDelinquency & DependencyDelinquency ProceedingsFamily LawDelinquency & DependencyDependency ProceedingsFamily LawParental Duties & RightsDutiesSupport of Children

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 327 JUVENILE COURTS: JURISDICTION AND GENERAL PROCEDURES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Purpose, Jurisdiction, and Powers of Juvenile Courts

28-327 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 327.11

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser and Hon. Kurt Kumli Editorial Consultants Janice M. Brickley Former Contributor

§ 327.11 Jurisdiction of Juvenile Court

[1] Jurisdiction Resides in Superior Courts

Each superior court exercises the jurisdiction of the juvenile court law and, while exercising such jurisdiction, is known and referred to as the juvenile court [Welf. & Inst. Code § 245].

[2] Scope of Jurisdiction

[a] In General

The juvenile court exercises jurisdiction in the following types of proceedings:

- Dependency proceedings under Welf. & Inst. Code § 300.
- Delinquency proceedings under Welf. & Inst. Code § 601 or 602.
- Hearings on traffic and other violations by minors enumerated in Welf. & Inst. Code § 256.

[b] Dependency Proceedings

In a dependency proceeding, the juvenile court is asked to adjudge a minor to be a dependent of the court on one or more of the grounds specified in Welf. & Inst. Code § 300. These grounds encompass various forms of child abuse and neglect. The Legislature's intent in enacting Welf. & Inst. Code § 300 was to provide maximum safety and protection for children who are currently being physically, sexually, or emotionally abused, being neglected, or being exploited, and to ensure the safety, protection, and physical and emotional well-being of children who are at risk of these harms [see Welf. & Inst. Code § 300.2].

For a complete discussion relating to the grounds for dependency and the procedure in dependency proceedings, see Ch. 328, Juvenile Courts: Dependency Proceedings .

[c] Wardship and Delinquency Proceedings

In wardship and delinquency proceedings, the juvenile court is asked to declare a minor to be a ward of the court on any of the following grounds [see Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 258, 601, 602, 603.5]:

- The minor is habitually disobedient and uncontrollable.
- The minor violates a curfew ordinance.
- The minor is habitually truant.
- The minor violates any criminal law or ordinance.
- The minor commits a traffic violation or other violations that may be heard by a juvenile hearing officer under Welf. & Inst. Code § 256.

For a complete discussion relating to the grounds for wardship and procedure in delinquency proceedings, see Ch. 329, Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings .

[3] Dual Jurisdiction Issues

[a] Single Status Required in Most Counties

It is well established that many children who have been abused or neglected later become involved in the juvenile delinquency and adult criminal justice systems [see Wiig, Widom & Tuell, Understanding Child Maltreatment & Delinquency: From Research to Effective Program, Practice, and Systemic Solutions (CWLA 2003)]. Thus, preventing child abuse and neglect is a form of delinquency prevention. So too does good child welfare case management and services in dependency cases serve as a form of delinquency prevention. Far too often, however, dependent children find their way into the delinquency system.

A minor's factual situation that could come within the juvenile court's jurisdiction under more than one of the types of proceedings pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 300, 601 and 602 raises a potential dual jurisdiction issue. These cases often appear in the context of a dependent child who has now committed an act that could bring the child into the delinquency system [see, e.g., Los Angeles County Dept. of Children & Fam. Services v. Superior Court (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 320, 322-323 ; In re Donald S. (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 134, 137-138, 253 Cal. Rptr. 274] . In other cases, a child is brought to the attention of both the dependency and the delinquency systems at the same time, or a delinquent child being considered for termination of wardship has an abusive or neglectful home situation that might justify dependency proceedings. Regardless of how the situation came to the attention of the authorities, both decisional law [In re Donald S. (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 134, 138-139, 253 Cal. Rptr. 274] , and statutory provisions [Welf. & Inst. Code § 241.1], have made it clear that a minor could not simultaneously be both a dependent and a ward of the juvenile court [In re Marcus G. (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 1008, 1012, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 84] . Effective January 1, 2005, however, some counties may choose to voluntarily develop a protocol for allowing a minor to be designated as both a delinquent and a dependent [Welf. & Inst. Code § 241.1(e)]. For counties that have developed such a protocol, see discussion in § 327.11[3][f]. For the majority of counties, however, it is anticipated the mandate for single status will continue.

Even in single status counties, however, nothing precludes the provision of informal services by a social services agency to a delinquent child and his or her family without a declaration of dependency [Welf. & Inst. Code § 301] or the informal supervision by a probation officer of a dependent child without a declaration of wardship [Welf. & Inst. Code § 654]. The same may also be true for dependent children who are placed on probation without wardship pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 725(a) or granted deferred entry of judgment pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 790-795. By coupling formal dependency with informal probation or formal probation with informal social services, both agencies are allowed to provide services to the child. While such actions may be at the outer limits of what the Legislature intended in single status cases, there is no prohibition against such practices and thus they are available options in an appropriate case.

PRACTICE TIP:

Transfer from Delinquency to Dependency. Traditionally, delinquency court has been seen as the forum to which dependent children "graduate" after committing certain offenses. This perception is not always correct. Welf. & Inst. Code § 241.1 applies equally to minors who appear to come within the description of both Section 300 and 602, regardless of the jurisdiction of origin. Consequently, delinquency attorneys should consider utilizing their local protocol to have dependency proceedings initiated in appropriate cases.

[b] Procedure for Recommending Single Status

In order to deal with the situation of a minor who may qualify for adjudication as both a dependent and a ward of the court, each county's probation and child protective services departments are mandated by statute to jointly develop a written protocol to ensure local coordination in the assessment of any such minor and for presenting a recommendation to the juvenile court as to which status is appropriate for the minor [Welf. & Inst. Code § 241.1].

Using the protocol, the probation department and the child protective services department must initially determine which status will serve the best interests of the minor and the protection of society. If possible, a determination should be made before a petition is filed concerning the minor [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.512(a)(2)]. In most instances, though, the minor will already be a dependent or a ward and the assessment under Welf. & Inst. Code § 241.1 will be done after the second petition is filed. The recommendations of both departments will then be presented to the juvenile court with the petition that is filed on behalf of the minor, and the court will determine which status is appropriate for the minor. The juvenile court is to provide notice of the recommendations within five calendar days to any other juvenile court that has jurisdiction over the minor. The notice must include "the name of the judge to whom, or courtroom to which, the recommendations were made [Welf. & Inst. Code § 241.1(a)]. One appellate court has determined the assessment and recommendation of the probation and social services departments must accompany the "later petition, i.e., the petition that creates the potential for dual jurisdiction" [In re Marcus G. (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 1008, 1013, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 84 (emphasis in original)]. Thus, if the child is already a dependent of the court and a petition is filed to declare the child to be a delinquent, the assessment and recommendation under Welf. & Inst. Code § 241.1(a) must be presented to the juvenile court hearing the delinquency petition. Under this interpretation, the dependency court in such a case would receive notice of the second proceeding, but it would be the delinquency court that would determine whether the child should be treated as a dependent child or a delinquent minor [In re Marcus G. (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 1008, 1013, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 84 ; see also In re Jaime M. (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 320, 325, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 425] . The reverse would naturally be true if the minor was already a ward of the court and the second petition was being filed to make the child a dependent.

PRACTICE TIP:

Communication Between Courts. An approach that has been taken by the juvenile courts in some counties is to have one judicial officer who is experienced in both delinquency and dependency matters designated to determine all potential dual jurisdiction issues. Under this approach the juvenile court receiving the assessment and recommendation of the probation and social services departments has both the delinquency and the dependency files before it, as well as the attorneys from both cases. In this way a full and complete consideration by an experienced judicial officer can be made as to which status is most appropriate for the minor. If this approach is not utilized, however, "best practice" is to have the delinquency and dependency courts communicate on the issue, much in the way California courts communicate with courts in other states under the Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction and Enforcement Act [see Fam. Code §§ 3410, 3424; see also In re Joseph D. (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 678, 693-694, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 574] . While such communication between courts in potential dual jurisdiction cases is not required, it should be encouraged.

In developing a protocol and in applying it to determine their recommendations to the juvenile court, the departments are required to consider, but are not limited to, the following factors [Welf. & Inst. Code § 241.1(b); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.512(d)]:

- The nature of the minor's referral.
- The age of the minor.
- The history of any physical, sexual, or emotional abuse of the minor.
- The prior record of the minor's parents for child abuse with this or any other minor.
- The prior record of the minor for out-of-control or delinquent behavior.
- The parents' cooperation with the minor's school.
- The minor's functioning at school.
- The nature of the minor's home environment.
- The history of involvement by any agencies or professionals with the minor and his or her family.
- The services or community agencies available to assist the minor and his or her family.
- The statement of any counsel currently representing the minor.
- The statement of any Court Appointed Special Advocate currently appointed for the minor.

The protocol is also required to contain provisions for resolving disagreements between the probation and child protective services departments over the need for dependency or wardship status, and for determining the circumstances under which a new petition should be filed to change a minor's status [Welf. & Inst. Code § 241.1(b)].

The rule of court indicates the hearing on the joint assessment report under Welf. & Inst. Code § 241.1 must be heard prior to the jurisdictional hearing [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.512(e)]. This is not required by the statute, however, and may not be in the best interests of the minor or the protection of the public in all cases. Some practitioners have argued that use of the protocol and assessment process should not be undertaken until after delinquency jurisdictional allegations have been adjudicated. In this way a decision would not be made as to whether a dependent child should be adjudged a delinquent with dependency status being terminated until after it was determined by the court that the jurisdictional allegations under Welf. & Inst. Code § 602 are true. Since the full nature of the delinquency allegations may not become clear until after they have been litigated and the juvenile court may or may not find those allegations true, there is substantial merit to following such a procedure in an appropriate case. This also ensures that the district attorney is involved in the decision-making process, since it is that public official who is responsible for the bringing of delinquency actions [Welf. & Inst. Code § 650(c)]. Nevertheless, the statutory provisions do not mandate such a procedure and whether it is utilized should be determined by the court itself on a case-by-case basis. If the court finds this procedure is best in an individual case, the requirement of Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.512(e) for an earlier determination may be considered inconsistent with the intent of the statute to serve the minor's best interest and the protection of the public, and thus void [cf. California Court Reporters Assn. v. Judicial Council (1995) 39 Cal. App. 4th 15, 24-26, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 44] . Timely decisions are, however, important [In re Jaime M. (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 320, 326, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 425 (after 18 months decision on single status under Welf. & Inst. Code, § 241.1 still had not been made)].

The length of available confinement time under the minor's delinquency status is not a determinative factor in deciding whether the minor should be treated as a dependent child or a delinquent minor. It is inappropriate for probation or defense counsel to suggest in a potential dual jurisdiction case that a minor's delinquency status be terminated and dependency proceedings initiated solely because the minor's confinement time has run out. A delinquent minor is often better served by probation, even without confinement time, than by social services as part of a dependency proceeding. Admittedly, it may be appropriate in some cases to terminate wardship when a minor has served all allowable time in a secure facility. But other wards may benefit more from the firmer control and closer supervision of a probation officer than from the softer approach of a social worker [see In re Marcus G. (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 1008, 1015, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 84 (noting the "firmer control and closer supervision of a probation officer" may be more appropriate than "the social services that could be provided by the welfare department")]. This requires, of course, that probation departments and juvenile courts develop non-secure placement alternatives for such children. Non-secure placement alternatives should be developed in any event. Where a minor's maximum confinement time has been used and there is little or no time left for the minor to be placed in secure facilities, the court, probation, social services, and all parties should look closely at the needs of the minor to ascertain the appropriate status. Shifting the focus to the amount of confinement time remaining improperly shifts it away from the minor.

For further discussion relating to the seeking of dependency proceedings and attempts by minor's counsel to bypass the requirements of Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 329 and 241.1, see Ch. 328, Juvenile Courts: Dependency Proceedings, § 328.45 (Application to Commence Juvenile Court Proceeding).

[c] Procedure When Two Counties Are Involved

If the minor has already been adjudicated a dependent or ward of a juvenile court pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 300, 601, or 602, and it is alleged in another county that the minor comes within Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 300, 601, or 602, a similar procedure is to be followed [Welf. & Inst. Code § 241.1(c); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.512(c)]. The county probation or child protective services department in the county that already has jurisdiction and the county probation or child protective services department in the county that is alleging jurisdiction are to initially determine which status will best serve the best interests of the minor and the protection of society. The assessment process is to be done consistent with the requirements of Welf. & Inst. Code § 241.1(b) that apply when it is alleged the minor comes within a different status in the same county in which the minor is already a dependent or ward [Welf. & Inst. Code § 241.1(c); see also discussion in § 327.11[3][a] (Single Status Required in Most Counties)].

[d] Local Practice

Counties differ markedly in their handling of potential dual jurisdiction cases. Some have not developed a local protocol as required by Welf. & Inst. Code § 241.1. Further, in those counties that have such protocols, some courts tend to downplay or disregard the protocol and assessment process and make their own decisions without requiring the assessment or without regard to the recommendations. Such practices obviously are inconsistent with both the letter and intent of the law [Welf. & Inst. Code § 241.1].

It is the philosophy of the courts and agencies, however, that may differ more from county to county than the procedure for handling such cases. Many courts, agencies and practitioners favor dependency proceedings over wardship proceedings, believing that children should be spared the consequences of a declaration of wardship if at all possible and that the services provided both the child and the family in dependency proceedings are greater. There is much to be said for this position. If the juvenile court and probation department fulfill their responsibility to develop appropriate resources for delinquents and their families, however, the accuracy of the latter argument is substantially diminished. Moreover, many minors who would qualify for both dependency and delinquency require placement in a secure facility, which is only available through a declaration of wardship, if both they and the public are to receive needed help and protection. This may be especially true in the case of minors who are fire-setters or sexual offenders. Thus strong arguments can also be made for favoring delinquency over dependency in potential dual jurisdiction cases. Nevertheless, regardless of one's personal or professional philosophy in this area, each case should be determined on its own individual facts and merits so as to ensure both the best interests of the child and the protection of the public are served [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 202, 241.1].

[e] Notice and Decision Making

Notice of the hearing on the joint assessment report and a copy of the report must be provided to the minor, the minor's parent or guardian, all attorneys of record, any Court Appointed Special Advocate, and any other juvenile court having jurisdiction over the minor. In the case of notice to a juvenile court, the notice must be directed to the judicial officer or department that conducts hearings regarding the minor. The notice must be provided at least five calendar days before the hearing on the joint assessment report [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.512(f)]. All parties and their attorneys must be given an opportunity to be heard at the hearing on the joint assessment report [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.512(g)].

A specific decision as to which status is appropriate must be made by the juvenile court. It is not enough that a minor be adjudicated under the second status; the court must make an actual decision as to which status, delinquency or dependency, is appropriate [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.512(e); In re Jaime M. (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 320, 326, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 425] . The court must also state its reasons for making its decision. The statement of reasons must be made on the record or in a written order [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.512(g)].

It is important that decisions as to which status a minor should be supervised under needs to be made in a timely fashion. Although the statute does not provide a specific time in which the decision must be made, the applicable rule of court indicates the hearing on the joint assessment report must occur "as soon as possible after or concurrent with the detention hearing, but no later than 15 court days after the order of detention and prior to the jurisdictional hearing" [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.512(e)]. In some cases determining which status is best prior to determining if the jurisdictional allegations in the second petition are true will not serve the best interest of the child or the protection of society, since those allegations may not subsequently be found true. If the court finds it appropriate in an individual case to delay the decision on which status is appropriate until it is determined if the allegations in the second petition are true, the requirement of Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.512(e) for an earlier determination may be considered inconsistent with the intent of the statute to serve the minor's best interest and the protection of the public, and thus void [cf. California Court Reporters Assn. v. Judicial Council (1995) 39 Cal. App. 4th 15, 24-26, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 44] . Minors who are caught in between the two systems can suffer by not receiving full services or stability of placement from either. Thus, as with all matters involving minors, timely resolution is important [In re Jaime M. (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 320, 326, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 425 (after 18 months decision on single status under Welf. & Inst. Code, § 241.1 still had not been made)].

[f] Special Protocols for Dual Status

Effective January 1, 2005, counties are authorized to develop protocols that would allow a minor to be designated as a "dual status child, allowing the child to be simultaneously a dependent child and a ward of the court" [Welf. & Inst. Code § 241.1(e)]. Some see this as a step forward in policy. Others view it as a step backwards to the time when dual status was allowed prior to the enactment of Welf. & Inst. Code § 241.1. The need for dual jurisdiction is questionable if delinquency courts and probation departments fulfill their responsibility to provide services for minors who are not in locked facilities and their families in much the same way as social services agencies provide services for dependent children and their families. Both dependency and delinquency laws require the court determine whether services could prevent the need for detention and require the court to make a finding that continuance in the home is contrary to the minor's welfare before the child is detained [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 319, 636]. Both require inquiries regarding paternity [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 316.2, 726.4]. Both require case plans to outline services for children likely to enter foster care that includes consideration of family strengths, the needs of both the child and the family, and the identification of services needed to work toward reunification [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 636.1, 706.6, 16501.1]. Both provide for placement with parents, relatives, nonrelative extended family members, and in foster homes [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 361.2, 361.3, 362.7, 727]. At status review hearings both require the court to review the efforts made by the probation department or social services agency to work towards either reunification or an alternative permanent plan, and the progress made by the parents and the child toward alleviating or mitigating the need for foster care placement [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 366.21, 366.22, 706.5]. And both require permanent plans that may include return to parent, adoption, legal guardianship, or another planned permanent living arrangement [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 366.21, 366.22, 366.26, 727.3]. Thus, probation departments can and should be doing everything for wards that are not in locked facilities and their families that social service agencies are doing for dependent children and their families. Further, although children may qualify for both dependency and delinquency, frequently the "firmer control and closer supervision of a probation officer" may be more appropriate than "the social services that could be provided by the welfare department" [In re Marcus G. (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 1008, 1015, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 84] . Thus, if the delinquency system is fulfilling its responsibility to children and families, the need for dual status is open to question. Nevertheless, some counties may choose to develop such protocols [Welf. & Inst. Code § 241.1(e)].

The decision to develop a protocol for dual status children is made by the county probation department and children's services agency in consultation with the presiding judge of the juvenile court. It is a discretionary action that must be voluntarily entered into by the probation department and social services agency. The statute does not give the juvenile court the authority to mandate such a protocol if either probation or social services does not desire to create such a protocol [Welf. & Inst. Code § 241.1(e)]. The protocol must be signed by the chief probation officer, the director of the county children's services agency, and the presiding judge of the juvenile court prior to implementation of the protocol, and no juvenile court can order a child be simultaneously both a ward and a dependent unless the required protocol has been created and signed by the necessary parties [Welf. & Inst. Code § 241.1(e)].

A county dual jurisdiction protocol must include:

- A description of the process to be used in determining whether the child is eligible to receive dual status designation [Welf. & Inst. Code § 241.1(e)(1)].

- A description of the procedure to be used by probation and social services in assessing the necessity for dual status and the process for making joint recommendations for the court's consideration, which recommendations shall ensure a seamless transition from one status to another so that services are not disrupted [Welf. & Inst. Code § 241.1(e)(2)].

- A provision for ensuring communication between judicial officers when dependency jurisdiction has been suspended, which may be by providing the dependency court with copies of reports filed pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 727.2 [Welf. & Inst. Code § 241.1(e)(3)].

- A plan for the collection of data so the implementation of the protocol can be evaluated pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 241.2 [Welf. & Inst. Code § 241.1(e)(4)].

- Identification of whether the county has chosen to utilize an "on-hold" system of dual jurisdiction in which dependency jurisdiction is suspended while the child is supervised as a ward of the court or a "lead > court/lead agency" system in which one court and one agency is designated as responsible for case management, conducting statutorily mandated court hearings, and submitting court reports. In either event, it is the intent of the Legislature that judges will not issue conflicting orders and that case management and services shall not be duplicative or simultaneously provided by both agencies [Welf. & Inst. Code § 241.1(e)(5)].

When a child is designated as a dual status child and the county has adopted an "on hold" system, dependency jurisdiction shall be suspended while the child is a ward of the court [Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.5].

The Judicial Council will be responsible for collecting data and preparing an evaluation of the results of the implementation of dual jurisdiction protocols and must submit a report to the Legislature with its findings and recommendations within two years of the counties first deeming a child to be a dual status child [Welf. & Inst. Code § 241.2].

[4] Jurisdiction Over Matters Incidental to Proceedings

A superior court convened as, and exercising the special powers of, a juvenile court is vested with jurisdiction to make only those limited determinations authorized by the legislative grant of those special powers. Notwithstanding the absence of specific authorization to make particular determinations, the juvenile court is vested with the authority to make determinations incidentally necessary to the performance of functions demanded of it by the Legislature pursuant to the juvenile court law or necessary to any ultimate determination with which it is charged [In re Ashley M. (2003) 114 Cal. App. 4th 1, 6, 7 Cal. Rptr. 3d 237] . For example, although the juvenile court was not specifically authorized to make determinations relative to the parentage of a minor at the time the Supreme Court considered the issue, the Court determined the juvenile court is vested with jurisdiction to determine parentage issues when that finding is necessary to reach its conclusion as to the imposition of dependency status for a child who needs care and has no parent [In re R. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 636, 643-644, 119 Cal. Rptr. 475, 532 P.2d 123 ; now see Welf. & Inst. Code § 316.2; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.635]. Other decisions have also recognized the juvenile court's inherent authority to address certain issues necessary to carrying out its mandate [see, e.g., In re Claudia E. (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 627, 637, 77 Cal. Rptr. 3d 722 ("the juvenile court has the inherent power to issue declaratory relief in such proceedings"); In re Fred J. (1979) 89 Cal. App. 3d 168, 176, 152 Cal. Rptr. 327 ("the juvenile court has inherent power to entertain a prehearing challenge to the petition's sufficiency by a motion akin to a demurrer")].

[5] Retention of Jurisdiction When Juvenile Permitted to Reside in Another County

Any person placed on probation by the juvenile court or adjudged to be a ward or dependent child of the juvenile court may be permitted by order of the court to reside in a county other than the county of his or her legal residence. The court, nevertheless, retains jurisdiction over the minor [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 380 (dependents), 755 (delinquents or wards)].

Whenever a ward or dependent of the juvenile court is permitted to reside in a county other than the county of his or her legal residence, the minor may be placed under the supervision of the probation officer of the county of actual residence, with the consent of that probation officer. The ward must comply with the instructions of the probation officer and upon failure to do so must be returned to the county of his or her legal residence for further hearing and orders of the court [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 380 (dependents), 755 (delinquents or wards)].

[6] Trend Toward Expanding Jurisdiction of Juvenile Court

While the jurisdiction of the juvenile court has traditionally been limited to dependency, delinquency, status offenders and juvenile traffic matters, some advocates are engaged in a continuing effort to bring all matters relating to children, family and human relations within one court system. In 1988 the California Child Victim Witness Judicial Advisory Committee recommended the enactment of a Family Relations Code and a Family Relations Division of the superior court [see California Child Victim Witness Jud. Adv. Comm., Final Report (Oct. 1988) p. 46]. The problems associated with bringing all matters relating to children, families and human relations into one court are significant.

Initially, efforts to consolidate all family-related matters in one court must confront the physical scattering of the existing courts in different buildings and even in the different parts of the city. The need for new buildings or remodeling to house such combined courts and the logistic and geographic problems such a change would create would be both costly and difficult to resolve. Moreover, the task of learning all of the specialized intricacies of law and human dynamics involved in juvenile dependency, family, and other types of cases related to human relations is difficult enough for attorneys and judicial officers when only one of these areas of law is involved. To expect our judicial officers and attorneys to be able to master them all is, in all likelihood, unrealistic. Nevertheless, although such a specialized division of the court has not yet been created, many areas of family and human relations law have subsequently been consolidated into California's Family Code [see Stats. 1992, ch. 162].

To date, efforts to move to the Family Code those portions of the Welfare and Institutions Code which deal with minors have not been successful. Efforts to increase the juvenile court's jurisdiction and its involvement in children's issues, however, have met with more success. For example, the juvenile court is now empowered to make orders regarding visitation between an incarcerated person and a child victim even if that child is not a dependent of the court [see Penal Code § 1202.05; Welf. & Inst. Code § 362.6]. While many may agree with the juvenile court's involvement in visitation issues for abused children regardless of whether they are dependents of the court, there is greater debate over the wisdom of expanding the court's involvement in cases beyond its traditional jurisdiction under Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 300, 601, & 602.

For further discussion regarding the crisis facing California's dependency courts and the California Court Improvement Project, see Ch. 328, Juvenile Courts: Dependency Proceedings, § 328.12A (California Court Improvement Project).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionJurisdiction Over ActionsGeneral OverviewFamily LawDelinquency & DependencyDelinquency ProceedingsFamily LawDelinquency & DependencyDependency ProceedingsFamily LawDelinquency & DependencyWards of Court

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 327 JUVENILE COURTS: JURISDICTION AND GENERAL PROCEDURES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Purpose, Jurisdiction, and Powers of Juvenile Courts

28-327 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 327.12

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser and Hon. Kurt Kumli Editorial Consultants Janice M. Brickley Former Contributor

§ 327.12 Venue for Transfer of Juvenile Court Proceedings

[1] General Rule for Determining Proper Court

The proper juvenile court in which to commence proceedings within its jurisdiction is that in any of the following counties [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 327 (dependency proceedings), 651 (delinquency proceedings); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.510(a); In re Hadley B. (2007) 148 Cal. App. 4th 1041, 1048, 56 Cal. Rptr. 3d 234] :

- The county in which a minor resides.
- The county where the minor is found.
- The county in which the acts take place or the circumstances exist that are alleged to bring the minor within the provisions of Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 300, 601, or 602.

[2] Determining Residency of Minor

Unless otherwise specified in the juvenile court law or rules, the residency of a minor for purposes of juvenile proceedings is determined under Welf. & Inst. Code § 17.1 [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.510(b)]. This section provides that, to the extent not in conflict with federal law, the residence of a minor must be determined by the following rules:

- The residence of the parent with whom a child maintains his or her place of abode, the residence of any individual who has been appointed legal guardian, or the residence of the individual who has been given the care or custody of the child by a court of competent jurisdiction, determines the residence of the child [Welf. & Inst. Code § 17.1(a)].
- Whenever it is provided that the residence of a child is determined by the residence of the person who has custody, custody means the legal right to custody of the child unless that right is held jointly by two or more persons, in which case custody means the physical custody of the child by one of the persons sharing the right to custody [Welf. & Inst. Code § 17.1(b)].

- The residence of a foundling is deemed to be that of the county in which the child is found [Welf. & Inst. Code § 17.1(c)].

- If the residence of the child is not otherwise determined, the county in which the child is living must be deemed the county of residence, if and when the child has had a physical presence in the county for one year [Welf. & Inst. Code § 17.1(d)].

- If the child has been declared permanently free from the custody and control of his or her parents, his or her residence is the county in which the court issuing the order is situated [Welf. & Inst. Code § 17.1(e)].

[3] When Minor Is Detained in County Other Than County of Jurisdiction

[a] Notice to County of Jurisdiction

Whenever a minor is taken into temporary custody in any county other than the county in which the minor is alleged to be within the jurisdiction of the juvenile court (the latter of which is referred to as the requesting county), the officer who has taken the minor into temporary custody may notify the law enforcement agency in the requesting county of the fact that the minor is in custody [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 324 (dependency proceedings), 641 (delinquency proceedings)].

[b] Transfer to County of Jurisdiction

When a law enforcement officer of the requesting county files a petition with the clerk of the juvenile court of the requesting county to commence proceedings in that court to declare a minor to be a ward or a dependent child of the court, and the officer secures a warrant, he or she may forward the warrant or a telegraphic copy to the officer having temporary custody. The warrant must be forwarded as soon as possible within 48 hours, excluding Sundays and nonjudicial days, from the time that the juvenile was taken into temporary custody. Thereafter, the officer from the requesting county takes custody of the minor within five days and takes the minor before the juvenile court judge who issued the warrant, or before some other juvenile court of the same county without unnecessary delay. If the minor is not brought before a judge of the juvenile court within the period prescribed, he or she must be released from custody [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 324 (dependency proceedings), 641 (delinquency proceedings)].

[4] Transfer When Minor's County of Residence Changes

A change in the minor's legal residence to another county after the minor is placed under juvenile court supervision allows the court in which the proceeding is pending to transfer the case to the juvenile court of the other county [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 375, 750; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.610(d)]. The minor's "residence" for this purpose is the residence of the person who has the legal right to custody of the minor pursuant to the prior court order, including (1) a juvenile court order under Welf. & Inst. Code § 361.2 (authority for juvenile court to make a juvenile court custody order awarding custody to previously noncustodial parent) and (2) an order appointing a guardian of the person of the minor [Welf. & Inst. Code § 17.1(a); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.610(a)]. Merely placing the minor with a foster parent or relative in another county is not sufficient to change the minor's legal residence for purposes of transfer, since the child is only "placed" with that caregiver; the custody and control of the minor remains with the social services agency or probation department and the juvenile court in the original county [but see In re J. C. (2002) 128 Cal. Rptr. 2d 671 (failing to consider Welf. & Inst. Code § 17.1 and suggesting Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.610(a) made the county of residence the one in which the child was placed in long term foster care, not the one in which the person who had legal custody but for the dependency order resided)]. If, however, the minor's caregiver becomes the minor's legal guardian, the minor's county of legal residence does change for purposes of transfer if the guardian moves with the minor to another county. This is true even if the parent previously having custody or from whom the minor was originally removed has not changed his or her county of residence [In re Christopher T. (1998) 60 Cal. App. 4th 1282, 1288-1292, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 116 ; California Ctr. for Jud. Educ. and Research, Cal. Judges Benchguides, Benchguide 100: Juvenile Dependency Initial Or Detention Hearing (March 2006) § 100.10, p. 100-112]. If the previously custodial parent had a court order for custody of the minor, placement of the minor with a previously noncustodial parent who resides in or moves to another county does not change the county of residence of the minor for transfer purposes, unless a family court custody order (delinquency) or juvenile court custody order (dependency or delinquency [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 302(c), 726.5(a)]) is made granting that parent legal custody of the minor [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 5.610(a); In re Judson W. (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 838, 842-844, 230 Cal. Rptr. 92 (construing Welf. & Inst. Code § 17.1(a) [residence of minor is residence of parent "with whom a child maintains his or her place of abode"] as not determinative of issue and holding Welf. & Inst. Code § 750 and Cal. Rules of Court, former Rule 1381 [now see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 5.610] control)].

Where the minor's county of legal residence has changed before the disposition hearing in a dependency case, the court may transfer the case either before or after the disposition hearing [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.610(c)]. If the minor's county of legal residence changes before the disposition hearing in a delinquency case and the court determines to transfer the case, the court must transfer the case before the disposition hearing [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.610(c)]. In either type of case, the court must not order the transfer unless it first determines the transfer will protect or further the best interests of the child [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.610(e); In re J.C. (2002) 128 Cal. Rptr. 2d 671] .

PRACTICE TIP:

Communication Between Courts Regarding Transfer. Anyone who has worked in the juvenile court system for long has witnessed or experienced the frustration of having a case bounce back and forth between two counties because the parent keeps moving or cannot be found and neither county wants to keep jurisdiction. One approach that should be considered in such cases is to have the two juvenile courts directly communicate on the issue, much in the way California courts communicate with courts in other states under the Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction and Enforcement Act [see Fam. Code §§ 3410, 3424; see also In re Joseph D. (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 678, 693-694, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 574] . While such communication between courts in transfer situations within California is not required, it should be encouraged.

Communication between courts regarding which county is the most appropriate county for a child's case is not always successful. With or without communication, cases sometimes are repeatedly transferred between counties [In re J.C. (2002) 128 Cal. Rptr. 2d 671 ("The case bounced back and forth between the two counties five times over nine months before appellant initiated this appeal.")]. A juvenile court cannot reject a transfer. If a court or party believes a transfer was incorrect, the remedy is either to appeal the transfer order or to hold a transfer out hearing [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.612(a); In re J.C. (2002) 128 Cal. Rptr. 2d 671 (dependency case); In re Carlos B. (1999) 76 Cal. App. 4th 50, 55, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 72 (delinquency case)].

When an appeal is filed to challenge a transfer order, it must be filed in the court making the transfer order [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.610(h)]. This was correctly done in the cases of In re J.C. (2002) 128 Cal. Rptr. 2d 671 , and In re Christopher T. (1998) 60 Cal. App. 4th 1282, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 116 . If the appeal is filed in the wrong court, the correct procedure is to request the appellate court ask the Supreme Court to transfer the case [National Kinney v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1980) 113 Cal. App. 3d 203, 209, 169 Cal. Rptr. 801] . A request to transfer the case to the proper appellate court does not have to be granted, however, if transferring the case would delay proceedings to the detriment of the child [In re Lisa E. (1986) 188 Cal. App. 3d 399, 405, 232 Cal. Rptr. 799] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureVenueIndividual DefendantsCivil ProcedureVenueMotions to TransferGeneral OverviewFamily LawDelinquency & DependencyDelinquency ProceedingsFamily LawDelinquency & DependencyDependency Proceedings

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329

CHAPTER 327 JUVENILE COURTS: JURISDICTION AND GENERAL PROCEDURES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Purpose, Jurisdiction, and Powers of Juvenile Courts

28-327 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 327.13

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser and Hon. Kurt Kumli Editorial Consultants Janice M. Brickley Former Contributor

§ 327.13 Citation, Subpoena, and Warrant Powers of Juvenile Court

[1] Citation

The juvenile court may issue a citation directing any parent or guardian of the person concerning whom a petition has been filed to appear at the time and place set for any hearing or financial evaluation, and directing any person having custody or control of the minor to bring the minor with him or her. The notice must, in addition, state that a parent or guardian may be required to participate in a counseling program with the minor. Personal service of the citation must be made at least 24 hours before the time stated for such an appearance [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 338 (dependency proceedings), 661 (delinquency proceedings)].

In a delinquency proceeding under Welf. & Inst. Code § 601 (wardship for minors habitually disobedient or truant, discussed in Ch. 329, Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings, § 329.20[2], [3]), the notice must also do the following [Welf. & Inst. Code § 661]:

- Inform the parent, guardian, or other person having control or charge of the minor that failure to comply with the compulsory school attendance laws is an infraction that may be charged and prosecuted before the juvenile court judge sitting as a municipal court judge and that the person having control or charge of the minor has the right to a hearing on the infraction before a judge different than the judge who has heard or is to hear the proceeding pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 601.

- Explain the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 170.6 (relating to disqualification of judges) [see discussion and forms relating to disqualification generally, Ch. 317, Judges].

[2] Subpoena

The court, the clerk of the court, or an attorney pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1985, must issue subpoenas requiring attendance and testimony of witnesses and production of papers at any hearing, upon the request of the probation officer, district attorney, the minor, the minor's parent, guardian, or custodian. The court may also issue such a subpoena on its own motion.

When a person attends a juvenile court hearing as a witness pursuant to a subpoena, the court may, in its discretion, make a minute order directing the county auditor draw his or her warrant upon the county treasurer for witness fees [Welf. & Inst. Code § 341 (dependency proceedings), Welf. & Inst. Code § 664 (delinquency proceedings)].

[3] Warrant for Arrest or Protective Custody

In case a citation cannot be served, or the person served fails to obey it, or in any case in which it appears to the court that the citation will probably be ineffective, a warrant for arrest may issue on the order of the court either against the parent, or guardian, or the person having custody of the minor, or with whom the minor is living [Welf. & Inst. Code § 339 (dependency proceedings); Welf. & Inst. Code § 662 (delinquency proceedings)].

Whenever a petition has been filed in the juvenile court alleging that the minor falls within the jurisdiction of the court as a dependent child and praying for a hearing, or whenever any subsequent petition has been filed praying for a hearing in the matter of the minor, and it appears to the court that the circumstances of the minor's home environment may endanger the health, person, or welfare of the minor, or whenever a dependent minor has run away from his or her court-ordered placement, a protective custody warrant may be issued immediately for the minor [Welf. & Inst. Code § 340; see also Welf. & Inst. Code § 663 (warrant for arrest of minor in delinquency proceedings); Fam. Code § 3451 ("warrant to take physical custody of a child" under the Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction and Enforcement Act)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePretrial MattersSubpoenasCriminal Law & ProcedureJuvenile OffendersJuvenile ProceedingsGeneral OverviewCriminal Law & ProcedureArrestsWarrantsFamily LawDelinquency & DependencyDelinquency ProceedingsFamily LawDelinquency & DependencyDependency Proceedings

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 327 JUVENILE COURTS: JURISDICTION AND GENERAL PROCEDURES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Purpose, Jurisdiction, and Powers of Juvenile Courts

28-327 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 327.14

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser and Hon. Kurt Kumli Editorial Consultants Janice M. Brickley Former Contributor

§ 327.14 Enforcement of Orders of Juvenile Court

[1] Incarceration or Other Sanctions

Any willful disobedience or interference with a lawful order of the juvenile court or of a judge or referee constitutes a contempt of court [Welf. & Inst. Code § 213]. This statute recognizes the juvenile court retains the inherent authority of the court to deal with contempt. As stated by one appellate court, a contempt proceeding "is a special proceeding, criminal in character, governed by the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure, not by those of the Penal Code; not for the punishment of an offense against the state, but intended to implement the inherent power of the court to conduct the business of the court and enforce the lawful orders of the court" [Oil Workers Intl. Union v. Superior Court (1951) 103 Cal. App. 2d 512, 570, 230 P.2d 71]. As in other courts, contempt in the juvenile court is done under Code of Civ. Proc. § 1218, and may result in a fine of one thousand dollars, incarceration for up to five days in custody, or both [Code Civ. Proc. § 1218]. Contempt proceedings are ancillary proceedings, and thus require a separate stipulation to a referee if he or she is to hear the contempt proceeding. Further, contempt judgments cannot be reviewed by appeal, but may be reviewed by an extraordinary writ [Code Civ. Proc. § 904.1(a)(1)].

There are two types of contempt judgments handed down under Code of Civ. Proc. § 1218. Criminal contempt is generally used to vindicate the authority or dignity of the court by punishing the past violation of a court order even when that violation arises in a civil proceeding. Civil contempt, however, is forward looking and is used to coerce compliance with a court order. In civil contempt it is sometimes said the person in contempt holds the key to their release by complying with the court order [In re Nolan W. (2009) 45 Cal. 4th 1217, 1236-1237, 91 Cal. Rptr. 3d 140, 203 P.3d 454] . This statement, however, is more applicable to orders that can be complied with by a single action. In juvenile proceedings, particularly juvenile dependency proceedings, orders for the protection and welfare of minors are often of a more continuing nature, requiring an ongoing course of conduct rather than a single, specific action [see, e.g., Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 245.5, 361.5(a), 362(c)]. In such cases, the line between civil and criminal contempt can become blurred, mandating the court take steps to make a clear record of the reasons for and purpose of any contempt judgment.

Whether the contempt proceeding is criminal or civil in nature, such proceedings are not commonly conducted in juvenile dependency courts. This is especially true following the Nolan W. decision, which virtually eliminated any recognition of the juvenile court's statutory and inherent authority to utilize contempt proceedings of either nature to facilitate reunification through compelling parental compliance with court ordered reunification services [In re Nolan W. (2009) 45 Cal. 4th 1217, 1230-1238, 91 Cal. Rptr. 3d 140, 203 P.3d 454] . As a result, juvenile dependency courts should tread very lightly in this area and carefully review all relevant case law before utilizing its contempt power.

In delinquency proceedings, however, the juvenile court's ability to utilize its contempt authority is more clear and accepted. If the contempt consists of the refusal of a minor under the age of 16 years to take the oath or to testify, the court must first refer the matter to the juvenile probation officer for a report and recommendation regarding the appropriateness of the imposition of a sanction. The court may, however, impose a sanction for contempt before receipt of the report and recommendation if the court enters a finding, supported by specific facts stated on the record, that the minor would be likely to flee if released before the receipt of the report and recommendation [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1219.5(a), (c)].

The juvenile court has inherent power to punish a minor for contempt of court. Thus, for example, if a status offender adjudged a ward of the court under Welf. & Inst. Code § 601 has violated a court order, the juvenile court may exercise its contempt power to incarcerate the minor, if the following conditions are met [In re Michael G. (1988) 44 Cal. 3d 283, 297, 243 Cal. Rptr. 224, 747 P.2d 1152] :

- The juvenile is given sufficient notice to comply with the order and to understand its provisions.
- The violation of court order is egregious.
- The record indicates that less restrictive alternatives were considered and found to be ineffective.
- Special confinement conditions are made to ensure that the minor does not come in contact with those minors who are confined because of their commission of a crime.

In addition to contempt, the juvenile court, including referees, is authorized to impose sanctions pursuant to Code of Civ. Proc. § 128.7, to deter or punish frivolous filings [In re Mark B. (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 61, 64-65, 56 Cal. Rptr. 3d 697].

[2] Misdemeanor Punishment for Willful Failure to Appear as Promised

In each instance in which a provision of the juvenile court law authorizes the execution by any person of a written promise to appear, or to have any other person appear, before the probation officer or before the juvenile court, any willful failure of the promisor to perform as promised constitutes a misdemeanor. The willful failure is punishable as a misdemeanor if, at the time of the execution of the written promise, the promisor is given a copy of the promise on which it is clearly written that failure to appear or to have any other person appear is punishable as a misdemeanor [Welf. & Inst. Code § 214].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSanctionsContemptGeneral OverviewFamily LawDelinquency & DependencyDelinquency ProceedingsFamily LawDelinquency & DependencyDependency Proceedings

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 327 JUVENILE COURTS: JURISDICTION AND GENERAL PROCEDURES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Purpose, Jurisdiction, and Powers of Juvenile Courts

28-327 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 327.15-327.19

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser and Hon. Kurt Kumli Editorial Consultants Janice M. Brickley Former Contributor

[Reserved]

§§ 327.15[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 327 JUVENILE COURTS: JURISDICTION AND GENERAL PROCEDURES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Juvenile Court Judges and Other Key Personnel

28-327 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 327.20

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser and Hon. Kurt Kumli Editorial Consultants Janice M. Brickley Former Contributor

§ 327.20 Juvenile Court Judges and Referees

[1] Judge

[a] Appointment of Superior Court Judge to Hear Juvenile Court Matters

In counties having more than one judge of the superior court, the presiding judge of the court or the senior judge annually designates one or more judges of the superior court to hear all cases falling within the juvenile court provisions. The presiding judge or senior judge may also appoint such additional judges as may be necessary for the prompt disposition of the business before the juvenile court [Welf. & Inst. Code § 246]. In all counties where more than one judge is designated as a judge of the juvenile court, the presiding judge must also designate one such judge as presiding judge of the juvenile court [Welf. & Inst. Code § 246].

Although Welf. & Inst. Code § 246 indicates judicial assignments to the juvenile court shall be made annually, where possible judges should be assigned to the juvenile court for a period of three years [Welf. & Inst. Code § 202; Cal. Rules of Ct., Stds. Jud. Admin., Juvenile § 5.40(a)].

[b] Authority and Role

The presiding judges of both the superior and juvenile courts are charged with motivating and educating other judges regarding the significance of the juvenile court and are to work to ensure that adequate resources, including sufficient judges, staff and facilities, are provided to the juvenile court to enable it to carry out its functions [Cal. Rules of Ct., Stds. Jud. Admin., Juvenile § 5.40(b)].

The presiding judge of the juvenile court is also given the responsibility of ensuring that both public and private attorneys working in the juvenile court are qualified to work in this specialized area, receive equivalent promotional opportunities and compensation as attorneys working in other areas, and remain working in the court for two to five years [Cal. Rules of Ct., Appendix, Div. I, § 5.40(c)]. To help accomplish this, the presiding judge of the juvenile court should establish standards of representation, develop orientation and in-service training programs for all the professionals working in the juvenile court, including the judicial officers, and encourage the leaders of public law offices to require their attorneys to meet the same standards as court appointed counsel [Welf. & Inst. Code § 202; Cal. Rules of Ct., Stds. Jud. Admin., Juvenile § 5.40(d)].

The work of juvenile court judges is not limited to the courtroom. The unique role of the juvenile court judicial officer requires that, when appropriate, they provide active leadership within the community to develop resources and services for at-risk children and families, including fulfilling a leadership role in programs of inter-agency cooperation for such services and promoting and unifying public and private sector efforts in this area [Welf. & Inst. Code § 202; Cal. Rules of Ct., Stds. Jud. Admin., Juvenile § 5.40(e)].

Juvenile court judges must also work closely with school authorities, educate the community regarding the role of the court, guide child protection agencies regarding what constitutes "reasonable efforts" to prevent the removal of or hasten the reunification of a child, and encourage the development of community resources to help homeless, truant, runaway and incorrigible children [Welf. & Inst. Code § 202; Cal. Rules of Ct., Stds. Jud. Admin., Juvenile § 5.40(e)]. Thus the role of the juvenile court judge truly is unique as compared with that of judges fulfilling other judicial assignments [see Edwards, The Juvenile Court and the Role of the Juvenile Court Judge, 43(2) Juv. & Fam. Ct. J. 1 (1992)].

[2] Referee

[a] Appointment and Term of Office

Each trial court may establish and may appoint such subordinate judicial officers as are deemed necessary for the performance of subordinate judicial duties authorized by law. The appointment of juvenile court referees was formerly done under Welf. & Inst. Code former § 247, which was repealed effective January 1, 2004, by Stats. 2003, ch. 149, § 88. The appointment of subordinate judicial officers, including juvenile court referees, is now done under Gov. Code § 71622 [Gov. Code §§ 71601(i), 71622(a)]. Persons who were already authorized to serve as subordinate judicial officers under the previous statutory authorization continue to serve under the new statutory provisions [Gov. Code § 71622(f)]. The duties and powers of juvenile court referees have not changed [see, e.g., Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 248, 249, 250]. Only the appointing statutes have changed as part of legislation addressing court consolidation. The number and type of subordinate judicial officers in a trial court are subject to approval by the Judicial Council and serve at the pleasure of the trial court [Gov. Code § 71662(a)]. See also discussion in § 327.20[2][c].

Some superior courts choose to utilize superior court commissioners in juvenile court rather than juvenile court referees. Commissioners may be assigned to perform the duties of a juvenile court referee. There is, however, no judicial position of a juvenile court commissioner [In re Brittany K. (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 805, 811-812, 117 Cal. Rptr. 2d 813 ; In re Courtney H. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 1221, 1226, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 560 , citing In re Mark L. (1983) 34 Cal. 3d 171, 176 ; see also In re Ian J. (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 833, 836, 27 Cal. Rptr. 2d 728] . Unless a commissioner is assigned to perform the duties of a referee, the commissioner is not hearing matters as a referee and can only hear matters if stipulated to as a temporary judge [In re Courtney H. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 1221, 1224-1226, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 560 ; see also Gov. Code § 71622(d), permitting cross-assignment of subordinate judicial officers if the person cross-assigned meets the qualifications established by the Judicial Council for the cross-assigned position]. Such a stipulation can be implied by the conduct of the parties and any objection waived if no timely objection is made [In re Brittany K. (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 805, 811-812, 117 Cal. Rptr. 2d 813] . See discussion in § 327.20[3].

[b] Qualifications

The minimum qualifications and training requirements necessary to serve as subordinate judicial officer are determined by rules established by the Judicial Council [Gov. Code § 71622(c)]. Formerly, every referee first appointed on or after January 1, 1977, must have been admitted to practice law in California for a period of not less than five years, or in any other state and California for a combined period of not less than 10 years [Welf. & Inst. Code former § 247]. Under trial court consolidation legislation, persons already serving as referees will continue to do so under the new statutory provisions for appointment [Gov. Code § 71622(f)].

[c] Authority and Role

A referee hears such cases as are assigned to him or her by the presiding judge of the juvenile court, with the same powers as a judge of the juvenile court, except that a referee cannot conduct hearings to which state or federal constitutional prohibitions against double jeopardy apply unless the parties stipulate in writing to the referee hearing the matter as a temporary judge [Welf. & Inst. Code § 248]. Initial delinquency proceedings, such as detention, fitness, and pretrial hearings, are often held before a referee who hears such cases as are assigned to him or her by the presiding judge. If the referee takes an admission from a minor he or she may also conduct the dispositional hearing. The referee generally has the same powers as a judge of the juvenile court [Welf. & Inst. Code § 248; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.536(a)]. See discussion in § 327.20[1][b].

A referee may hear any dependency hearing as a matter of right. However, a referee does not have authority under Cal. Const., art. VI, § 22, to conduct a delinquency jurisdictional hearing to which the state or federal constitutional prohibitions against double jeopardy attach under Welf. & Inst. Code § 602, unless the parties confer that judicial power by stipulated agreement [Welf. & Inst. Code § 248; see In re C. (1979) 26 Cal. 3d 49, 57, 160 Cal. Rptr. 704, 603 P.2d 1300 ; see also Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.831 (procedures for stipulation to temporary judge); discussion in § 327.20[2][d]].

The parties in a delinquency matter must exercise caution, however, because participation in a juvenile matter before a referee without objection to the referee's jurisdiction waives any error from failure to obtain a written stipulation [see In re Richard S. (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 857, 865-866, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 819 P.2d 843 (Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.831(a) is directory, not jurisdictional); In re Julio N. (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 1120, 1123, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 86 (participation without objection is deemed implied stipulation)]. See discussion in § 327.20[2][d].

[d] Referee Acting as Temporary Judge

The subordinate judicial classifications of referee and temporary judge are distinct, vested with different powers, and subject to different procedural constraints [In re Brittany K. (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 805, 811, 117 Cal. Rptr. 2d 813] . If a referee is an attorney admitted to practice in California, the parties may stipulate, pursuant to Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.831, that the referee act as a temporary judge with the same powers as a judge of the juvenile court [see In re Richard S. (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 857, 861-867, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 819 P.2d 843] . An official court reporter is then required to be present to take down all proceedings [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.536(b)]. The stipulation must be in writing and submitted for approval to the appropriate court, which must endorse on it the order designating the temporary judge [Welf. & Inst. Code § 248; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.831(a)].

A defect in a stipulation under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.831, does not necessarily invalidate the stipulation. That is, compliance with that rule is not a constitutional prerequisite to empowering the temporary judge to act. The rule is directory, not mandatory, to the extent that it imposes requirements beyond the constitution [In re Richard S. (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 857, 861-867, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 819 P.2d 843 , approving In re P. I. (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 316, 254 Cal. Rptr. 774 (delinquency proceeding) and In re Robert S. (1988) 197 Cal. App. 3d 1260, 243 Cal. Rptr. 459 (dependency proceeding), and disapproving In re Heather P. (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 1214, 250 Cal. Rptr. 468 , and In re Damian V. (1988) 197 Cal. App. 3d 933, 243 Cal. Rptr. 185 , to the extent they are inconsistent; see Cal. Const., art. VI, § 21].

The parties to a stipulation waive any claim of error based on omission of the superior court's signature approving the referee's appointment. They also waive any error from failure to obtain a written stipulation by participation in a juvenile matter before a referee without objection [see In re Richard S. (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 857, 861-867, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 819 P.2d 843] or an omission of an express provision applying it to the dispositional hearing [see In re P. I. (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 316, 320-323, 254 Cal. Rptr. 774 (delinquency proceeding)]. In addition, an appellate court has upheld an oral stipulation to a referee acting as a temporary judge [In re Aontae D. (1994) 25 Cal. App. 4th 167, 171, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 176] .

PRACTICE TIP:

Timely Objection to Referee. If the attorney does not want the referee to hear the jurisdictional hearing in a delinquency matter, he or she must take care to object on the record, otherwise later objections may be waived. Also, the attorney should be aware that when a referee sits as a temporary judge by stipulation of the parties there can be no rehearing of that proceeding.

For discussion of assignment of superior court commissioners, attorneys, or other nonreferees, to act as temporary judges, see § 327.20[3].

[e] Disqualification

Code Civ. Proc. §§ 170 and 170.6 relating to procedures and grounds for the disqualification of judges are applicable to referees of the juvenile court [Pamela H. v. Superior Court (1977) 68 Cal. App. 3d 916, 918, 137 Cal. Rptr. 612 ; see Guadalupe A. v. Superior Court (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 100, 109, 285 Cal. Rptr. 570 (referee disqualified because of social contact with minor during proceedings)]. If the motion under those sections is granted, the presiding judge of the juvenile court will reassign the matter to another referee or judge [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.536(c)].

For discussion and forms relating to the procedures and grounds for the disqualification of judges and referees generally, see Ch. 317, Judges .

[f] Referee Findings and Orders

[i] When Effective

No order of a referee removing a minor from his or her home is effective until expressly approved by a judge of the juvenile court [Welf. & Inst. Code § 249; see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.540(b)(1)]. This is not a jurisdictional requirement, however, and does not render the order void if the approval is not obtained. Further, if an order removing a minor from his or her home is made by a referee and no signature approving the order by a judge of the juvenile court is made, that failure is waived if not timely challenged or appealed [In re Jesse W. (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 349, 355-361, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 184] .

In one case, a referee's removal order at the detention hearing was approved by a judge but later findings and orders, including the disposition findings and orders placing the child in out-of-home care, were not. The appellate court found the original removal was done at the detention hearing and that the question at the disposition hearing was whether it would be detrimental to return the child. Based on this appellate finding, the referee's disposition findings and orders did not require approval by a judge to comply with Welf. & Inst. Code § 249. The appellate court was not persuaded by the argument that the detention order was only a temporary removal and that removal at disposition mandated a higher burden of proof [In re I.S. (2002) 103 Cal. App. 4th 1193, 1196-1199, 127 Cal. Rptr. 2d 398] . This decision is questionable, however. Just as the appellant in that case was incorrect that only the removal at disposition was a removal under Welf. & Inst. Code § 249, so too was the appellate court incorrect that at disposition there was no removal. The disposition language of Welf. & Inst. Code § 361(c) states that a dependent child may not be "taken from the physical custody" of a parent or guardian the child resided with at the time the petition was initiated unless the juvenile court makes a finding by clear and convincing evidence of one of several possible facts. This disposition language thus speaks of removal being ordered after the declaration of dependency--which can only be made at the disposition hearing [Welf. & Inst. Code § 361(c)]. Although the language of the most commonly used removal subdivision speaks of both the risk to the child if the child were returned home and the lack of reasonable means to protect the child without removing the child from the parents' or guardians' physical custody [Welf. & Inst. Code § 361(c)(1)], this provision must be read in context with the main text of Welf. & Inst. Code § 361(c) and in a manner that reconciles the two parts of the finding in Welf. & Inst. Code § 361(c)(1). The I.S. decision did not do this. The better approach is to recognize that both the temporary removal at the detention hearing and the more complete removal with the higher burden of proof at the disposition hearing are removal orders. Every removal ordered by a referee requires approval by a judge [Welf. & Inst. Code § 249].

It is also possible for the judge of the juvenile court or, in counties having more than one judge of the juvenile court, the presiding judge of the juvenile court to establish requirements that any or all orders of referees must be expressly approved by a judge of the juvenile court before becoming effective [Welf. & Inst. Code § 251; see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.540(b)(2)]. In courts requiring the approval of a juvenile court judge before a referee's order becomes effective, the order issued by the referee becomes final 10 calendar days after service of a written copy of the referee's findings and orders or 20 judicial days after the hearing at which the findings and orders are made, whichever comes later [In re Clifford C. (1997) 15 Cal. 4th 1085, 1093, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 873, 938 P.2d 932 (harmonizing Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 250 and 253)].

In the remaining instances, a referee's order is effective immediately, subject to the right of the minor, parent or guardian to apply for a rehearing within 10 calendar days of the service of a written copy of the referee's findings and order. The finality of the order is also subject to the ability of a juvenile court judge to order a rehearing on his or her own motion with 20 judicial days of hearing at which the referee's order was made, but not more than 10 calendar days after the service of a copy of the written findings and order [In re Clifford C. (1997) 15 Cal. 4th 1085, 1093, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 873, 938 P.2d 932 (harmonizing Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 250 and 253)].

When a referee sits as a temporary judge, his or her order becomes final in the same manner as an order made by a judge [Welf. & Inst. Code § 250].

For discussion of appeals in dependency proceedings, see Ch. 328, Juvenile Courts: Dependency Proceedings, § 328.19 and § 328.190 et seq. For discussion of appeals in delinquency proceedings, see Ch. 329, Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings, § 329.119.

[ii] Service of Findings and Orders

A referee must furnish a copy of his or her findings and order to the presiding judge of the juvenile court and to the minor if the minor is 14 or more years of age or, if younger, has so requested; he or she must also serve such findings and order on the minor's parent, guardian, and counsel, as well as on counsel for the parent or guardian [Welf. & Inst. Code § 248; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.538(b)].

[g] Rehearing on Orders of Referee

[i] Notice of Right to Rehearing

In addition to the service of written findings and orders, the referee must furnish a written explanation of the minor's right to seek review of the order by the juvenile court to the minor if the minor is 14 or more years of age or, if younger, has so requested. Service must be by mail to the last known address and is deemed complete at the time of mailing [Welf. & Inst. Code § 248; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.538(b)].

The notice provisions of Welf. & Inst. Code § 248 are mandatory. Notification of the juvenile's right to request a rehearing safeguards his or her right to a meaningful appeal from the final orders of the juvenile court, particularly because, in the case of a hearing held without the presence of a court reporter, the right to a rehearing is a matter of right [In re Drexel F. (1976) 58 Cal. App. 3d 801, 804-805, 130 Cal. Rptr. 253 ; see In re Gregory M. (1977) 68 Cal. App. 3d 1085, 1092, 137 Cal. Rptr. 756] .

[ii] Application for Rehearing

At any time prior to the expiration of 10 days after service of a written copy of the order and findings of a referee, a minor or his or her parent or guardian, or the social services agency in case brought under Welf. & Inst. Code § 300, may apply to the juvenile court for a rehearing. The application may be directed to all or to any specified part of the order or findings as contained in a statement of the reasons the rehearing is requested [In re Clifford C. (1997) 15 Cal. 4th 1085, 1093, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 873, 938 P.2d 932 ; Welf. & Inst. Code § 252].

If all of the proceedings before the referee have been taken down by an official reporter, the judge of the juvenile court may, after reading the transcript of the proceedings, grant or deny the application. If proceedings before the referee have not been taken down, the application must be granted forthwith as of right [Welf. & Inst. Code § 252].

If an application for rehearing is not granted, denied, or extended within 20 days following the date of its receipt, it will be deemed granted. However, the court, for good cause, may extend the period beyond 20 days, but not beyond 45 days, following the date of receipt of the application. At that time, the application will be deemed granted unless it is denied within the extended period. All decisions to grant or deny the application or to extend the period must be expressly made in a written minute order. Copies of the order must be provided to the minor or his parent or guardian and to the attorneys of record [Welf. & Inst. Code § 252; see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.542(a)-(c); see In re Ferdinand R. (1978) 85 Cal. App. 3d 303, 307, 149 Cal. Rptr. 342 (application for rehearing, made before order to which it is directed, has no legal effect)].

A judge of the juvenile court may, on his or her own motion made within 20 court days following a hearing before a referee, order a rehearing of any matter heard by the referee that requires the approval of a juvenile court judge to become effective [In re Clifford C. (1997) 15 Cal. 4th 1085, 1093, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 873, 938 P.2d 932 (harmonizing Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 250 and 253)]. For orders that do not require the approval of a judge to become effective, a judge of the juvenile court may order a rehearing on his or her own motion made within 20 judicial days of the referee's order but not more than 10 days after the service of the written copy of the findings and order [In re Clifford C. (1997) 15 Cal. 4th 1085, 1093, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 873, 938 P.2d 932] .

Upon application for rehearing, the judge must read the entire transcript of the proceeding before the referee and independently weigh and evaluate the evidence. The judge may then either grant the rehearing or adopt the referee's findings and deny the request for rehearing. A judge's signed and dated handwritten note on the order denying a rehearing within the 20 day requirement of Welf. & Inst. Code § 252 will satisfy the timeliness requirement of that section even if a formal minute order is not prepared within that time [In re B.A. (2006) 141 Cal. App. 4th 1411, 1414, 1418-1420, 47 Cal. Rptr. 3d 115] . The standard in reviewing the record on request for rehearing is not abuse of discretion or substantial evidence; rather, the judge must make an independent judgment [In re M. (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 727, 735-736, 122 Cal. Rptr. 574, 537 P.2d 406 ; In re Randy R. (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 41, 136 Cal. Rptr. 419] .

The prosecuting attorney may suggest that the court grant a rehearing on its own motion. If a prosecuting attorney does suggest the court order a rehearing, the minor must be given written notice and an opportunity to be heard [In re V. (1980) 28 Cal. 3d 587, 593-594, 169 Cal. Rptr. 713, 620 P.2d 163] .

[iii] Procedures on Rehearing

All rehearings of matters heard before a referee must be before a judge of the juvenile court and must be conducted de novo [Welf. & Inst. Code § 254; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.542(e)]. A rehearing of a detention hearing must be held within two court days after the rehearing is granted. A rehearing of other matters heard before a referee must be held within 10 court days after the rehearing is granted [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.542(e)].

Some decisions have suggested the referee's findings and orders become null and void on the granting of a rehearing, but the better rule is that they are entitled to full force and effect until the matter is actually reheard [Ricardo V. v. Superior Court (2007) 147 Cal. App. 4th 419, 422, 54 Cal. Rptr. 3d 223].

PRACTICE TIP:

Stipulation to Admission of Transcript of Original Proceeding. The parties may stipulate to having the transcript of the proceeding before the referee admitted as evidence at the rehearing, new evidence may be admitted, or both. Parties will generally stipulate to admission at the rehearing of the transcript of the original proceeding.

In a rehearing from a proceeding before a referee, the juvenile court judge may properly impose a graver or more serious dispositional order than that entered by the referee [In re Anthony M. (1976) 64 Cal. App. 3d 464, 468-469, 134 Cal. Rptr. 540] . However, if the juvenile court abandons a referee's findings and recommendations absolving a minor of the charged misconduct necessary to a determination of wardship and embarks on a hearing de novo pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 253 and 254 to redetermine the minor's status as a ward, the minor is exposed to jeopardy a second time contrary to Fifth Amendment prohibitions [Jesse W. v. Superior Court (1979) 26 Cal. 3d 41, 46-48, 160 Cal. Rptr. 700, 603 P.2d 1296] .

PRACTICE TIP:

Possibility of More Restrictive Order on Rehearing. Caution should be exercised in applying for a rehearing, particularly from a dispositional order. In making the decision the attorney must take into consideration that if a rehearing is granted, the judge could impose a more restrictive dispositional order.

[3] Temporary Judge Other Than a Referee

In some counties, superior court commissioners are assigned to the juvenile court without a designation that they are to perform the duties of a juvenile court referee. Parties appearing before commissioners in these counties must stipulate to the commissioner as a temporary judge in order for the commissioner to hear their juvenile court case [see In re Courtney H. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 1221, 1224-1226, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 560 ; In re Steven A. (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 754] . Attorneys, in some counties, also hear matters as temporary judges [see In re Heather P. (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 1214, 250 Cal. Rptr. 468] . A stipulation by a party's attorney can be effective even without the express stipulation of the party [In re Brittany K. (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 805, 813, 117 Cal. Rptr. 2d 813] . Moreover, a stipulation to an attorney, referee, or commissioner hearing a matter as a temporary judge can be implied by the conduct of the parties and any objection waived if no timely objection is made [In re Brittany K. (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 805, 811-813, 117 Cal. Rptr. 2d 813] .

One court of appeal has held that parties could stipulate that a commissioner or other attorney may hear a dependency case as a temporary judge until its final determination and further stipulate that the temporary judge may hear any new proceedings but that either party could appear at a new proceeding and, without prejudice, withdraw a stipulation to the continuing authority of the referee. A qualified stipulation of this nature gives the temporary judge irrevocable power to hear the case through the jurisdictional and dispositional hearings. It also allows the temporary judge to conduct any separate hearings that might follow, subject to withdrawal of the stipulation by either party [see In re Steven A. (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 754, 767, 771-772, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 576 (reversal of permanency planning order because commissioner refused to recognize parent's withdrawal of stipulation)].

Practitioners should be careful when entering into a stipulation of this kind, at least in dependency proceedings. The decision in Steven A. rested in part on the court of appeal's characterization of a hearing under former Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.25, which was at that time used for permanency planning, as one which the parties may have understood to be a "new" proceeding separate from and merely "ancillary" to the earlier jurisdiction and disposition hearings in which the stipulation was entered [In re Steven A. (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 754, 767-772, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 576] . The legislature, however, has characterized a hearing under Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26, which is the current section for permanency planning, as being part of the "regular review process" [Senate Sel. Comm. on Children & Youth/SB 1195 Task Force Rep. on Child Abuse Reporting Laws, Juvenile Court Dependency Statutes, and Child Welfare Services (Jan. 1988) p. 10]. Moreover, the California Supreme Court has concluded that such hearings "cannot properly be understood except in the context of the entire dependency process of which it is a part" [Cynthia D. v. Superior Court (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 242, 253, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 698, 851 P.2d 1307] , thus strengthening the argument that all hearings in a dependency case are part of the ongoing process. Because it appears clear that under current law none of the normal hearings conducted throughout the dependency process are "new" or "ancillary" hearings, a stipulation of this type is of questionable value in a dependency case.

[4] Dependency Training for Judicial Officers

Legislation required that on or before July 31, 1997, the Judicial Council develop and implement standards for the education and training of all judicial officers regularly hearing dependency proceedings [Welf. & Inst. Code § 304.7]. The training program developed by the Judicial Council is to include a component for the training of newly elected or appointed judges as well as an annual training session [Welf. & Inst. Code § 304.7(a)]. All referees and commissioners assigned to hear dependency proceedings are to meet the same minimum standards of training and education [Welf. & Inst. Code § 304.7]. The Judicial Council is to submit an annual report to the Legislature detailing the compliance of judicial officers with these standards for training and education [Welf. & Inst. Code § 304.7(c)]. While no provision is specifically made for the specialized training of attorneys who sit as temporary judges in dependency proceedings, the juvenile court should obviously only use attorneys for such assignments who meet the requirements of Welf. & Inst. Code § 317.6(c) for the education and training of dependency attorneys, thereby accomplishing much the same goal.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersJudgesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudicial OfficersRefereesAppointmentsFamily LawDelinquency & DependencyDelinquency ProceedingsFamily LawDelinquency & DependencyDependency ProceedingsGovernmentsCourtsJudgesGovernmentsCourtsSpecial Judges

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 327 JUVENILE COURTS: JURISDICTION AND GENERAL PROCEDURES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Juvenile Court Judges and Other Key Personnel

28-327 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 327.21

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser and Hon. Kurt Kumli Editorial Consultants Janice M. Brickley Former Contributor

§ 327.21 Other Juvenile Court Personnel

[1] Delinquency Proceedings

[a] Probation Officer

[i] Appointment and Term of Office

Probation officers in any county must be nominated by the juvenile justice commission or regional juvenile justice commission of each county in such a manner as the judge of the juvenile court directs. They are then appointed by the juvenile court judge [Welf. & Inst. Code § 270]. Probation officers may be removed at any time by the judge of the juvenile court for good cause; the judge of the juvenile court may in his or her discretion at any time remove any officer with the written approval of a majority of the members of the juvenile justice commission [Welf. & Inst. Code § 270]. The foregoing provisions will, however, be superseded by provisions in county charters establishing methods of appointment and tenure of office [Welf. & Inst. Code § 271].

[ii] Authority to Employ Other Professionals

The probation officer may, within budgetary limitations established by the board of supervisors, employ such psychiatrists, psychologists, and other clinical experts as are required to assist in determining appropriate treatment of minors within the jurisdiction of the juvenile court and in the implementation of such treatment [Welf. & Inst. Code § 273].

[iii] Role in Delinquency Proceedings

The probation officer plays a very significant role in delinquency proceedings. The duties of the probation officer are much broader in juvenile court than in adult court. The probation officer has the initial responsibility of investigating at intake, and making a determination of whether the minor should be released from custody [Welf. & Inst. Code § 628]. In most cases, the probation officer has the authority to decide whether a case will be settled at intake by dismissal or informal probation, or whether a petition will be filed [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 652, 654; see further discussion in Ch. 329, Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings, § 329.30 et seq.].

Except when waived by the probation officer, judge, or referee and the minor, the probation officer must be present in court to represent the interests of each person who is the subject of a petition to declare such person to be a ward or dependent child upon all hearings or rehearings of his or her case. In connection with such appearances, the probation officer is required to furnish to the court such information and assistance as the court may require. As such, the probation officer will often provide a written report to the court with information regarding appropriate facts and circumstances and a recommendation at each hearing [see Welf. & Inst. Code § 280 (court may order and consider reports and recommendations by probation officer); in some cases, including dispositional hearings, probation officer is required by statute to prepare social study of minor, including recommendations for disposition)]. The court may order a probation officer to take charge a minor before and after any delinquency hearing or rehearing [Welf. & Inst. Code § 280].

The probation officer is also responsible for supervising minors who are placed on probation, either in the family home, a group home, ranch, or other residential facility [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 725(a), 727]. In addition, the probation department runs and administers juvenile hall and other local detention facilities [Welf. & Inst. Code § 852; see further discussion in Ch. 329, Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings, §§ 329.55, 329.95].

PRACTICE TIP:

Importance of Probation Department. Given the importance of the probation officer's role in the juvenile proceeding, an attorney who practices in juvenile court should become familiar with the organization and practices of the counties probation department, as well as becoming familiar with individual probation officers.

[b] Prosecuting Attorney

In proceedings brought under Welf. & Inst. Code § 602 (wardship for criminal offenses), the prosecuting attorney must appear on behalf of the people of the State of California [Welf. & Inst. Code § 681(a); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.530(c)].

In a juvenile court hearing that is based on a petition alleging jurisdiction under Welf. & Inst. Code § 601 (wardship for minors habitually disobedient or truant) and in which the minor who is the subject of the hearing is represented by counsel, the prosecuting attorney may, with the consent or at the request of the juvenile court judge or at the request of the probation officer with the consent of the juvenile court judge, appear and participate in the hearing to assist in the ascertaining and presenting of the evidence [Welf. & Inst. Code § 681(b); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.530(c)].

[2] Dependency Proceedings

[a] Social Worker

In most counties, the responsibilities of the probation officer (discussed in § 327.21[1][a]) for dependency cases have been delegated by the county board of supervisors to the social services department pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 272. Thus, just as the probation officer serves as the juvenile court's investigatory and supervisorial arm in delinquency proceedings, the social worker serves as an arm of the juvenile court in dependency proceedings [see In re Malinda S. (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 368, 376-377, 272 Cal. Rptr. 787, 795 P.2d 1244] . This is also true for an Indian social worker of a tribe which has entered into an agreement with the State Department of Social Services pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 10553.1 concerning child welfare services or foster care payments [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 215, 272(a)(2), 306(a)]. The social worker's role in dependency proceedings, however, is not limited to that of serving as an arm of the court. The social worker has many roles within the dependency system. As noted by one appellate court, the social worker plays a

" 'hybrid' role in dependency proceedings, exercising both executive and judicial functions" [In re Ashley M. (2003) 114 Cal. App. 4th 1, 7, 7 Cal. Rptr. 3d 237] .

For a detailed discussion of the roles of the social worker in dependency proceedings, see Ch. 328, Juvenile Courts: Dependency Proceedings, § 328.63.

[b] Petitioner's Attorney

With the transfer in most counties of responsibility for dependency cases from the probation department to the social services department (as discussed in § 327.21[a]) [Welf. & Inst. Code § 272], the representation for the petitioner in dependency cases is now routinely handled by the county counsel's office or by counsel contracted for by the county counsel's office. In the City and County of San Francisco the petitioner is represented by the Office of the City Attorney. The prosecuting attorney statutorily may still represent the petitioner [see Welf. & Inst. Code § 318.5 and discussion in § 327.21[1][b]]. Historically, even when the prosecuting attorney was involved in dependency cases it did not technically represent the petitioner. Instead, it assisted the petitioner and the juvenile court in the presentation of evidence. This was consistent with the prosecuting attorney representing the People of the State of California while also assisting the juvenile court and the county social services agency.

In the few counties where the prosecuting attorney is still involved in dependency cases, his or her involvement is usually as counsel for the child [Welf. & Inst. Code § 317(c)]. The fact that a prosecuting attorney represents the child in a dependency proceeding and investigates or files a criminal complaint against a parent or other perpetrator of abuse or neglect that is related to the facts from which the dependency case arises does not in and of itself constitute a conflict of interest [Welf. & Inst. Code § 317(c)]. If, however, a prosecuting attorney has appeared in a delinquency proceeding involving the minor, neither that prosecuting attorney nor any attorney from that office may represent the child in any dependency proceeding [Welf. & Inst. Code § 681.5].

[c] Court Officer

Many counties use court officers to assist the court in handling its dependency cases. These court officers are social workers employed by the social services agency but assigned to work at the court rather than carrying cases. Court officers may appear in lieu of or in addition to the social worker handling the case. The actual role of the court officer varies greatly from county to county. In some counties, the court officers are carefully selected from amongst the "best and the brightest" of social workers and are given a great deal of authority by the agency to work to resolve cases. Moreover, experienced court officers frequently recognize when social worker's reports are missing information, anticipate the court's need for additional information, and take steps to have that information made available for the court. Some courts also rely heavily on court officers to serve as a liaison between the court and the social services agency. In those counties where the court officer performs these types of functions, the court officer becomes an integral part of the court's team while still being a member of the social services agency. This function is consistent with the social worker's dual role as a party to dependency proceedings and as the court's investigative and supervisorial arm [see discussion of social worker's multiple roles in Ch. 328, Juvenile Courts: Dependency Proceedings, § 328.63]. At the very least, court officers normally assist the court in calendar management by keeping track of the attorneys and parties present for waiting cases and calling cases that are ready for hearing. Court officers should communicate with the court to keep the court informed of the status of cases awaiting hearing and may even announce cases and appearances for the record.

PRACTICE TIP:

Court Officers as Sources of Information. Court officers are excellent source of information regarding the policies and practices of both the court and the social services agency. In the counties using them, court officers are able to further assist counsel by advising who is handling various aspects of the case and identifying the persons to contact for assistance with problems or services. Thus, in addition to helping all attorneys to get their cases in for hearing, court officers are a particularly important source of information for counsel unfamiliar with local dependency practice.

For a thorough discussion of the role and responsibilities of the court officer in juvenile court proceedings, see California Ctr. For Jud. Educ. and Research, California Juvenile Court Deskbook (3d ed. 1989) § 6.7 et seq.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Criminal Law & ProcedureJuvenile OffendersJuvenile ProceedingsGeneral OverviewFamily LawDelinquency & DependencyDelinquency ProceedingsFamily LawDelinquency & DependencyDependency Proceedings

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 327 JUVENILE COURTS: JURISDICTION AND GENERAL PROCEDURES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Juvenile Court Judges and Other Key Personnel

28-327 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 327.22

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser and Hon. Kurt Kumli Editorial Consultants Janice M. Brickley Former Contributor

§ 327.22 Appointment of Private Counsel

[1] In County With Public Defender

In proceedings in which it is necessary to appoint counsel for either the minor or the parents who desire but are unable to employ counsel [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 317-318 (dependency proceedings), 633-634.6 (delinquency proceedings)], and the proceeding is in a county that has a public defender, the court is authorized to appoint and order compensation for private counsel only after the public defender has refused to represent the individuals involved [In re J. G. L. (1974) 43 Cal. App. 3d 447, 452-453, 117 Cal. Rptr. 799 ; but see Welf. & Inst. Code § 317(g)-(h) (use of public defender for minors and alternate public defender for parents in county of the third class)].

[2] Compensation

In any case in which the court does appoint counsel to represent any person who desires but is unable to employ counsel, counsel will receive a reasonable sum for compensation and for necessary expenses, the amount of which is determined by the court and paid out of the general fund of the county [Welf. & Inst. Code § 218].

[3] Duties

Penal Code § 1240.1 imposes special duties on trial counsel representing an indigent defendant in a juvenile court proceeding, including initiating an appeal. For discussion, see Erwin, Millman, Monroe, Sevilla, Tarlow, California Criminal Defense Practice, Ch. 101, Appeal (Matthew Bender).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureCounselAppointmentsCriminal Law & ProcedureJuvenile OffendersJuvenile ProceedingsGeneral

OverviewCriminal Law & ProcedureCounselAssignmentFamily LawDelinquency & DependencyDelinquency ProceedingsFamily LawDelinquency & DependencyDependency Proceedings

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 327 JUVENILE COURTS: JURISDICTION AND GENERAL PROCEDURES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Juvenile Court Judges and Other Key Personnel

28-327 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 327.23-327.29

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser and Hon. Kurt Kumli Editorial Consultants Janice M. Brickley Former Contributor

[Reserved]

§§ 327.23[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 327 JUVENILE COURTS: JURISDICTION AND GENERAL PROCEDURES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. General Juvenile Court Procedures

28-327 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 327.30

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser and Hon. Kurt Kumli Editorial Consultants Janice M. Brickley Former Contributor

§ 327.30 Filing Papers and Petitions

[1] Filing Fees

There is no fee for filing a petition with the juvenile court, nor may any fees be charged by any public officer for his or her services in filing or serving papers or for the performance of any duty, except where the sheriff transports a person to a state institution. If the judge of the juvenile court orders that a ward or dependent child go to a state institution without being accompanied by an officer or that a ward or dependent child be taken to an institution by the probation officer or parole officer or by some other suitable person, all expenses necessarily incurred will be allowed and paid in the same manner and from the same funds as such expenses would be allowed and paid were such transportation effected by the sheriff [Welf. & Inst. Code § 212].

[2] Facsimile Filing

Facsimile filing in juvenile court proceedings became a limited option effective January 1, 1999, for those courts permitting it by local rule or other written instruction. Generally, only petitions under Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 300, 601, 602, 342, 387, 388, 777, and 778 are eligible for filing by facsimile. Other documents may be filed by facsimile if permitted by local rule or written instruction [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.522(c)].

No one other than the following expressly designated persons and agencies may file permitted documents by facsimile [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.522(d)]:

- Any named party.
- Any attorney of record.
- The county welfare department.

- The probation officer.
- The office of the district attorney.
- The office of the county counsel.
- A Court-Appointed Special Advocate (CASA).

Every "fax" [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.522(b)(4)] filing must be accompanied by a cover sheet, sent first [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.522(f)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawDelinquency & DependencyDelinquency ProceedingsFamily LawDelinquency & DependencyDependency Proceedings

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 327 JUVENILE COURTS: JURISDICTION AND GENERAL PROCEDURES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. General Juvenile Court Procedures

28-327 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 327.31

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser and Hon. Kurt Kumli Editorial Consultants Janice M. Brickley Former Contributor

§ 327.31 Conduct of Juvenile Court Proceeding

[1] Expeditious and Nonadversarial Conduct Generally Required

The court must control all proceedings with a view to the expeditious and effective ascertainment of the jurisdictional facts and of all information relevant to the present condition and welfare of the minor [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.534(a); see also Jeff M. v. Superior Court (1997) 56 Cal. App. 4th 1238, 66 Cal. Rptr. 2d 343] . Unless there is a contested issue of law or fact, the proceedings must be conducted in a nonadversarial atmosphere [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 350(a), 680; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.534(b)].

[2] Special or Separate Session Required

All juvenile court proceedings must be heard at a special or separate session of the court. No other matter may be heard at that session [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 345 (dependency proceedings), 675 (delinquency proceedings); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.534(a)].

[3] Persons Entitled to Be Present

The following persons are entitled to be present at juvenile court proceedings [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 280, 332, 347, 349, 353, 656, 656.5, 658, 677, 679, 681, 700; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.534(b)]:

- The minor.

- All parents, de facto parents, and guardians of the minor, or if no parent or guardian resides within the state, or their place of residence is not known, any adult relative residing within the county or, if none, the adult relative residing nearest to the court.

- Counsel representing the minor or the parent, de facto parent, guardian, or adult relative.

- The probation officer or social worker [see discussion in § 327.21[1][a], [2][a]].

- The prosecuting attorney when required in proceedings under Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 601, 602 [see discussion in § 327.21[1][b]].

- The petitioner's attorney in proceedings under Welf. & Inst. Code § 300 [see discussion in § 327.21[2][b]].

- Any court-appointed special advocate.

- A representative of the Indian child's tribe.

- The court clerk.

- The official court reporter.

- At the court's discretion, a bailiff.

- Any other person entitled to notice under Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 290.1 and 290.2.

- The victim, in proceedings under Welf. & Inst. Code § 602 [see discussion in Ch. 329, Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings].

[4] General Rule Excluding Public

Unless requested by the minor and by any parent, guardian, or adult relative present, the public must not be admitted to a juvenile court hearing. The judge or referee may nevertheless admit any person it deems to have a direct and legitimate interest in the particular case or work of the court [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 346 (dependency proceedings), 676(a) (delinquency proceedings); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.530(e); see, e.g., discussion in § 327.14[2][a][ii] (probation officer authorized to employ psychologist or other professional to assist in determining treatment for minor)].

In dependency proceedings, the court may also admit persons the parent or guardian has requested be admitted if the child has also requested the presence of such persons or consents to their presence [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.530(e)(1)].

In delinquency proceedings, the public must be admitted as it would be to trials in criminal court when the minor is charged with specified serious felonies [Welf. & Inst. Code § 676(a); see also discussion in Ch. 329, Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings, § 329.13].

[5] Media Access

In deciding whether to allow media access, the primary factor that a trial court must consider is the best interests of the minor. The court must balance those interests against the social values promoted by allowing public or press access to the proceedings. Generally, the court should allow press access unless there is a reasonable likelihood that press access will be harmful to the child's best interest in the case [San Bernardino County Dep't of Public Soc. Servs. v. Superior Court (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 188, 207-208, 283 Cal. Rptr. 332] .

In applying these principles to the specific facts of the case, the court may consider factors such as the following [San Bernardino County Dep't of Public Soc. Servs. v. Superior Court (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 188, 207-208, 283 Cal. Rptr.

332] :

- The minor's age.
- The nature of the allegations.
- The extent of any current and expected publicity, and any effect of the publicity on the children and on family reunification.
- The feasibility of permitting press access to part of the proceeding and excluding the press from other portions.

In an attempt to protect the confidentiality of a minor, some juvenile courts order that the media not disclose the name or likeness of the minor. However, the juvenile court may not prohibit the media from disclosing the name and image of the minor when that information has already lawfully been made known to the media prior to the court hearing, unless there is a reasonable likelihood of substantial prejudice to the minor's right to receive a fair or impartial trial [KGTV Channel 10 v. Superior Court (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 1673, 1684, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 181] .

Although the First Amendment right of public access does not extend to juvenile delinquency or dependency proceedings, the judge may allow the media to attend if he or she determines that the media have a direct and legitimate interest in the particular case or work of the court [see San Bernardino County Dep't of Public Soc. Servs. v. Superior Court (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 188, 194-196, 283 Cal. Rptr. 332 (dependency proceeding)]. The media has a right to be at any proceeding that the court has otherwise opened to the public [Welf. & Inst. Code § 676(a); see discussion in § 327.31[4]].

Because the court has no power to restrict the right of the press to investigate and publish information that has been lawfully obtained, the judiciary may not prohibit the publication of a juvenile's name and picture that the media obtained lawfully. Nor may the court circumscribe the publication of other information obtained lawfully, the circumstances under which the media may interview the participants in the proceedings, or all press conduct that might interfere with the reunification process of the family. These conditions violate U.S. Const., amend. I [San Bernardino County Dep't of Public Soc. Servs. v. Superior Court (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 188, 206-207, 283 Cal. Rptr. 332] .

The juvenile court may allow media access even if the parties have not so requested. The court may also permit media access over the objection of the parties to the proceeding [see Welf. & Inst. Code § 346; San Bernardino County Dep't of Public Soc. Servs. v. Superior Court (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 188, 205 n.10, 283 Cal. Rptr. 332] . One appellate court has noted that allowing media access in juvenile proceedings promotes the fairness of the proceeding, improves juvenile court practice, and serves to check abuse of judicial and governmental regulation that may interfere with the constitutional right of parents to decide how to raise their children. The court also noted that public access may discourage perjury and encourage witnesses to come forward voluntarily, improving the accuracy of the fact-finding process. Furthermore, the court noted that media access provides an outlet for community reaction and concerns and a means for educating the public about the system [see San Bernardino County Dep't of Public Soc. Servs. v. Superior Court (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 188, 201-203, 283 Cal. Rptr. 332] . Since this decision, California has amended Welf. & Inst. Code § 300.2 to clarify that the provisions of the juvenile court law ensuring the confidentiality of juvenile proceedings and records "are intended to protect the privacy rights of the child." Thus, in any decision regarding possible public or media access, the juvenile court must consider the privacy rights of the child.

Professor John E.B. Myers, a leading expert in evidence in child abuse and neglect cases, has stressed the importance of child welfare professionals developing and maintaining good relations with the media. As he noted, "it is a mistake to underestimate the importance of good relations with the media, and through the media, with the public" [Myers, The Backlash: Child Protection Under Fire (Sage 1994) ch. 7, The Literature of the Backlash, p. 102]. He went on to write,

"Confidentiality is important in child protection. Nevertheless, the complex web of confidentiality laws puts a counterproductive gag on CPS. Changes in confidentiality are needed so CPS can defend itself when unfairly attacked. Moreover, changes in confidentiality laws are needed so CPS can showcase its many successes. Finally, changes are needed to remove the incentive to hide mistakes behind the mask of confidentiality" [Myers, The Backlash: Child Protection Under Fire (Sage 1994) ch. 7, The Literature of the Backlash, p. 102]. California is considering such changes. In 1999 hearings were held by the legislature on this important topic. The future of California law on this issue, however, is uncertain. This is an area that should be watched for further developments.

PRACTICE TIP:

Media Access May Be Beneficial. As all who work in the dependency system for any length of time are aware, the system is not without its problems, many of which are caused by a lack of resources and overwhelming caseloads for social workers, attorneys and courts alike. Yet, unlike law enforcement agencies, prosecutors' offices and criminal courts, the juvenile dependency agencies, offices and courts are rarely considered "public safety" by society as a whole or by the powers in government who make budget decisions. To some extent, the same can be even be said regarding the delinquency system. But the juvenile dependency and delinquency systems are vital to the safety of the public and of the public's most vulnerable members; its children. Unless they are recognized as such, it is doubtful that the delinquency and dependency systems will receive the funding and resources they require to adequately address the needs of the children and families they serve. The potential benefits of valid criticism by the media aside, an informed media producing accurate coverage may be a necessary first step in bringing about the recognition that the dependency and delinquency systems are public safety systems. While courts and professionals within these systems are justifiably concerned about media access in light of the diatribes that have resulted from media coverage in the past, not all media access results in caustic or inaccurate coverage. For an excellent example of balanced and sensitive reporting by media representatives, see John Hubner and Jill Wolfson, Somebody Else's Children: The Courts, The Kids, And The Struggle To Save America's Troubled Families (Crown 1996). While juvenile courts should be quick to deny access to those media representatives who have an agenda to prove or an obvious bias against the system, they should be willing to seriously consider those requests for access by media representatives who are open to learning and committed to accurate and balanced reporting. The days when the juvenile justice and child protection systems of this state can afford to remain cloaked with a blanket of confidentiality are over. The informed support of the public and of governmental leaders is necessary if these vital public safety systems are to receive the public confidence and resources they require. Opening the doors to the public by allowing access to responsible media representatives may be a necessary first step.

It has also been held that the juvenile court can authorize the release to the media of records from juvenile court files pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 827 consistent with the child's best interests [In re Keisha T. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 220, 231-234, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 822] . Before juvenile court records are released to the media an in camera review of those documents must be conducted pursuant to Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.552(b). This procedure ensures that the juvenile court properly considers and balances the interests of the child against the need of the requesting party in making any disclosure of records [In re Keisha T. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 220, 239-241, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 822] . Although the juvenile court can normally issue protective orders in conjunction with any release of records or access [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.552(b)], if information is lawfully released to the media the court cannot restrain the media from publishing that information [In re Keisha T. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 220, 240, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 822 , citing KGTV Channel 10 v. Superior Court (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 1673, 1682, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 181 , and San Bernardino County Dep't of Public Soc. Servs. v. Superior Court (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 188, 206, 283 Cal. Rptr. 332] .

PRACTICE TIP:

Minor's Right to Confidentiality. Counsel should, when appropriate, argue that media access infringes on the minor's right to confidentiality and privacy [Welf. & Inst. Code § 300.2]. Dependency proceedings often involve very private and personal information regarding minors and their families which if exposed to the public could be detrimental to the welfare of the minor. Wardship proceedings have historically been confidential in order to protect a minor from being labeled as a criminal for life based on something he or she did at a young age, and as contrary to the minor's rehabilitative interest. Such arguments have much validity and carry great weight since the juvenile court must use the best interest of the child as its primary concern in ruling on such issues. Nevertheless, the court may in an appropriate case order access notwithstanding such objections on behalf of the minor [San Bernardino County Dep't of Public Soc. Servs. v. Superior Court (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 188, 193, 199-200, 207-208, 283 Cal. Rptr. 332] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Constitutional LawBill of RightsFundamental FreedomsFreedom of SpeechFree PressPublic AccessCriminal Law & ProcedureJuvenile OffendersJuvenile ProceedingsGeneral OverviewFamily LawDelinquency & DependencyDelinquency ProceedingsFamily LawDelinquency & DependencyDependency Proceedings

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 327 JUVENILE COURTS: JURISDICTION AND GENERAL PROCEDURES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. General Juvenile Court Procedures

28-327 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 327.32

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser and Hon. Kurt Kumli Editorial Consultants Janice M. Brickley Former Contributor

§ 327.32 Service of Written Findings and Orders

All written findings and orders of the court must be served by the clerk of the court personally or by first-class mail within three judicial days of their issuance, on the petitioner, the minor or the minor's counsel, the parent or the parent's counsel, and the guardian or the guardian's counsel [Welf. & Inst. Code § 248.5].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawDelinquency & DependencyDelinquency ProceedingsFamily LawDelinquency & DependencyDependency Proceedings

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329

CHAPTER 327 JUVENILE COURTS: JURISDICTION AND GENERAL PROCEDURES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. General Juvenile Court Procedures

28-327 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 327.33

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser and Hon. Kurt Kumli Editorial Consultants Janice M. Brickley Former Contributor

§ 327.33 Court Reporter Transcripts

[1] Required in Proceedings Before Judge

If a juvenile court proceeding is before the judge of the juvenile court, an official court reporter must be present and take down all proceedings [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 347 (dependency proceedings), 677 (delinquency proceedings); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.532(a)].

[2] Directive in Proceedings Before Referee

If the hearing is before a referee, and the referee is not acting as a temporary judge (see discussion in § 327.20[2]), a judge may direct an official court reporter to be present and to take down all proceedings [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 347, 677; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.532(b)].

[3] Preparation of Transcript

If directed by the judge or requested by the person on whose behalf the petition was brought, by his or her parent or legal guardian, or by the attorneys of such persons, the court reporter must, within a reasonable time after the hearing as the court may designate, write out the notes or such specific portions as requested in plain and legible longhand or by typewriter or other printing machine and certify the transcript as being correctly reported and transcribed. If directed by the court, the reporter must file the transcript with the clerk of the court [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 347, 677; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.532(c); see Davis v. Superior Court (1985) 166 Cal. App. 3d 13, 17, 212 Cal. Rptr. 111 (parent's right to transcript copy as absolute); but see In re R. (1978) 83 Cal. App. 3d 977, 980-981, 148 Cal. Rptr. 145 (juvenile properly notified of right to review under Welf. & Inst. Code § 252 within 10 days after service of copy of referee's order and findings, but who fails to request rehearing as waiving right to have transcript on appeal)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersCourt ReportersGeneral OverviewFamily LawDelinquency & DependencyDelinquency ProceedingsFamily LawDelinquency & DependencyDependency ProceedingsGovernmentsCourtsCourt PersonnelGovernmentsCourtsCourt Records

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 327 JUVENILE COURTS: JURISDICTION AND GENERAL PROCEDURES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. General Juvenile Court Procedures

28-327 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 327.34

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser and Hon. Kurt Kumli Editorial Consultants Janice M. Brickley Former Contributor

§ 327.34 Confidentiality of Juvenile Records

[1] Limits on Disclosure

The legislature has stated that the provisions of the juvenile court law ensuring the confidentiality of juvenile court proceedings and records "are intended to protect the privacy rights of the child" [Welf. & Inst. Code § 300.2]. Nevertheless, discovery of juvenile records and information is often sought by attorneys involved in civil or criminal litigation or by others for a variety of purposes. Such records are not subject to public access or to civil or criminal subpoena, however. Instead, they may only be obtained or inspected by the filing of a petition with the juvenile court pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 827 and Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.552 [see also Welf. & Inst. Code § 828 (records in possession of law enforcement agency)]. For instance, in a case in which a father who had molested his daughter was a school teacher, petitions under Welf. & Inst. Code § 827 were used to permit disclosure of information regarding the molests to the California Commission on Teacher Credentialing [see In re R.G. (2000) 79 Cal. App. 4th 1408, 94 Cal. Rptr. 2d 818] .

Sometimes efforts are made to obtain confidential information contained in juvenile records indirectly, such as by calling individuals as witnesses and seeking the information through testimony. As has been said in other areas of law, a litigant "may not obtain indirectly what is directly" made confidential by statute [City of San Diego v. Superior Court (1981) 136 Cal. App. 3d 236, 239, 186 Cal. Rptr. 112 ; see also Fletcher v. Superior Court (2002) 100 Cal. App. 4th 386, 403, 123 Cal. Rptr. 2d 99] . The statutes for confidentiality of information would serve no purpose if the information "could be obtained by the simple expedient of asking" for the information orally [City of San Diego v. Superior Court (1981) 136 Cal. App. 3d 236, 239, 186 Cal. Rptr. 112] . Thus, the requirements of Welf. & Inst. Code § 827 must be met when the testimony of social workers and others from the dependency system is sought in civil or criminal proceedings.

Not all information within the juvenile dependency and justice systems is covered by Welf. & Inst. Code § 827, however, and thus not all testimony by persons connected to the dependency system is covered. For instance, in one criminal prosecution the defense wanted to present testimony by a child-victim's former foster mother regarding her own observations of the child in foster care and how the child frequently lied and told half-truths while in her care. The trial court held the testimony inadmissible. The Court of Appeal, however, found the former foster mother's testimony would not have come from information in the juvenile court file, but instead were her own "percipient observations." Thus, the testimony was not covered by Welf. & Inst. Code § 827 [People v. Espinoza (2002) 95 Cal. App. 4th 1287, 1314-1316, 116 Cal. Rptr. 2d 700] .

Effective January 1, 2000, Welf. & Inst. Code § 827(e) provides that a "juvenile case file" within the protective provisions of that section includes:

- The petition filed in the juvenile court proceeding.
- Reports of the probation officer.
- All other documents filed in the case.
- All other documents made available to the probation officer in making his or her report and thereafter retained by the probation officer.
- All other documents made available to the judge, referee, or other hearing officer and thereafter retained by that judicial officer.

Prior case law has held the records subject to this general protection include [see Lorenza P. v. Superior Court (1988) 197 Cal. App. 3d 607, 610-611, 242 Cal. Rptr. 877 ; City of San Diego v. Superior Court (1981) 136 Cal. App. 3d 236, 239, 186 Cal. Rptr. 112] :

- Those documents contained in the juvenile court file.
- Probation and social services records.
- Any reports made available to probation and social services in connection with an investigation in a juvenile case.
- Testimony concerning the content of confidential records.

The protection of juvenile records applies even if proceedings are never initiated in the juvenile court [see In re Elijah S. (2005) 125 Cal. App. 4th 1532, 1548-1551, 24 Cal. Rptr. 3d 16 ; Lorenza P. v. Superior Court (1988) 197 Cal. App. 3d 607, 610-611, 242 Cal. Rptr. 877 , citing T.N.G. v. Superior Court (1971) 4 Cal. 3d 767, 780-781, 94 Cal. Rptr. 813, 484 P.2d 981 , and Wescott v. County of Yuba (1980) 104 Cal. App. 3d 103, 106-109, 163 Cal. Rptr. 385] . The Lorenza P. case suggests the proper procedure for access to juvenile records when juvenile court proceedings were never initiated is to petition the juvenile court, following the procedures set forth in Evid. Code § 915(b), and utilizing the balancing test of Evid. Code § 1040(b)(2) [Lorenza P. v. Superior Court (1988) 197 Cal. App. 3d 607, 611, 242 Cal. Rptr. 877] . The Lorenza P. approach is sound and may be the better view. It is the minority view, however. Other case law supports the use of Welf. & Inst. Code § 827 for this purpose [In re Elijah S. (2005) 125 Cal. App. 4th 1532, 1548-1551, 24 Cal. Rptr. 3d 16 ; Wescott v. County of Yuba (1980) 104 Cal. App. 3d 103, 106, 163 Cal. Rptr. 385 , citing T.N.G. v. Superior Court (1971) 4 Cal. 3d 767, 780-781, 94 Cal. Rptr. 813, 484 P. 2d 981] . Although Welf. & Inst. Code § 827 and Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.552 do not make specific reference to juvenile records if proceedings were never filed in juvenile court, common practice and the majority view is to utilize the procedures in Welf. & Inst. Code § 827 for the juvenile court's determination of whether to allow access to the records whether juvenile court proceedings were instituted or not. If, however, juvenile court proceedings were never instituted, the party seeking disclosure of juvenile records bears the burden of showing the child came under the juvenile court's jurisdiction [In re Elijah S. (2005) 125 Cal. App. 4th 1532, 1544-1545, 24 Cal. Rptr. 3d 16] . While not likely to occur frequently, in some cases this can turn what should be a straightforward discovery hearing into a contested hearing on the issue of whether the minor came within the juvenile court's jurisdiction. No case law sets forth the burden of proof on the threshold jurisdictional issue in such circumstances [see In re Elijah S. (2005) 125 Cal. App. 4th 1532, 1545, fn. 10, 24 Cal. Rptr. 3d 16] . The proper burden of proof should be preponderance of the evidence [Evid. Code § 115]. This is consistent with the burden for establishing a child comes within the juvenile court's jurisdiction in dependency cases under Welf. & Inst. Code § 300 [Welf. & Inst. Code § 355(a); Cynthia D. v. Superior Court (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 242, 248, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 698, 851 P.2d 1307] .

Certain court personnel and others are authorized to inspect juvenile records without first filing a petition with the juvenile court and obtaining a court order. These include [Welf. & Inst. Code § 827(a)(1); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.552]:

- Juvenile court personnel.

- The district attorney, a city attorney or city prosecutor who is authorized to prosecute criminal or juvenile cases under state law.

- The minor who is the subject of the juvenile proceedings.

- The minor's parents or guardian.

- The attorneys for the parties, including appellate counsel for the parties in any appellate case relating to the juvenile proceedings.

- Any judicial officers, law enforcement officers, and probation officers involved in the criminal or juvenile proceedings involving the minor.

- The county counsel, city attorney, or other attorney representing the social services agency in a dependency action.

- The superintendent or a designee of the school district where the minor is enrolled or attending school.

- Child protective agencies.

- The State Department of Social Services to carry out its duty to oversee county social services agencies, children in foster care or receiving foster care assistance, and children in out-of-state placements.

- Legal staff or special investigators who are peace officers employed by or serving as an authorized representative of the State Department of Social Services as necessary to inspect, license, and investigate community care facilities.

- Members of children's multidisciplinary teams.

- Persons or agencies providing treatment or supervision of the minor.

- A judge, commissioner, other hearing officer assigned to a family law case that has custody or visitation issues relating to the minor.

- A family court mediator assigned to and actively involved in the family law case involving the minor.

- An court appointed evaluator or other person conducting a court connected child custody evaluation, investigation, or assessment pursuant to Fam. Code §§ 3111 or 3118.

- Counsel appointed for the minor in the family law case. The juvenile court clerk may require counsel to provide a certified copy of the order appointing him or her as counsel for the minor prior to allowing the minor's counsel to inspect the file.

- A court-appointed investigator who is actively participating in a guardianship case involving a minor pursuant to Prob. Code § 1500 et seq. and acting within the scope of the investigator's duties in that case.

- A local child support agency for the purpose of establishing paternity and for establishing and enforcing child support orders.

- Juvenile justice commissions [Welf. & Inst. Code § 827(a)(1)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Local Rules and Standing Orders for Access and Copies. In some counties the juvenile court has recognized that certain individuals or organizations having a legitimate need for access to juvenile court records on an ongoing basis are not included in the list of persons and agencies authorized access. In such circumstances, some courts have adopted local rules or made standing orders for disclosure. For example, a county grand jury is not an organization authorized by statute to have access to juvenile court information and its subpoena power cannot be used to gain access to such records [People v. Superior Court (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 488, 492-496, 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 144] . Rather than require a grand jury to file a petition pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 827 every time it wants access to juvenile records, some juvenile courts have adopted local rules or issued standing orders pursuant to that section that juvenile court records are to be made available to the county grand jury on request. This not only helps to reduce the court's workload, but may also be beneficial in maintaining positive relations with a grand jury or other agency that has a legitimate reason for seeking access to juvenile court records on an ongoing basis yet does not wish to have to file a petition for disclosure each time it seeks such access. Nevertheless, it is also inconsistent with the case-by-case weighing required by Welf. & Inst. Code § 827. Even with appropriate documentation on file with the court to establish the "good cause" for the order, such local rules or orders, while well intentioned, are of questionable validity [cf. Welf. & Inst. Code § 265 (rules cannot be inconsistent with law)]. The same is true for local rules and orders that allow copies of juvenile court records to be disseminated when the statute itself requires a petition be filed before such release [In re Gina S. (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 1074, 1082-1084, 35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 277 (right to inspect does not include right to copy)]. Thus, while such local rules and orders may be practical, the better approach is to seek legislative change of the statute.

Historically, the right to inspect juvenile records did not automatically mean a right to copies of the records. Prior to January 1, 2008, the language of the statute authorizing juvenile case files to be "inspected" by certain persons did not include that such documents could be "copied" [In re Gina S. (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 1074, 1082-1084, 35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 277 , citing Opinion No. 02-103, 85 Ops. Cal. Atty. Gen. 194 (Sept. 10, 2002)]. Effective January 1, 2008, however, some of the persons entitled to inspect juvenile case files under Welf. & Inst. Code § 827(a)(1), may also receive copies of the documents [Welf. & Inst. Code § 827(a)(5)]. These include court personnel, prosecuting attorneys under state law, the minor who is the subject of the proceedings, that minor's parents or guardians, the attorneys for the parties, judicial officers, probation officers, and law enforcement officers actively participating in proceedings involving the minor, county counsel or other counsel representing the petitioning agency in the dependency action, members of child protective agencies, and the State Department of Social Services [Welf. & Inst. Code § 827(a)(5); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.552(b)(1)]. All other persons listed in Welf. & Inst. Code § 827(a)(1) as being entitled to inspect juvenile case still must obtain a court order to receive copies of the documents [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.552(b)(2)]. Regardless, in all cases persons receiving copies of the juvenile case files may not disseminate the documents to any person or agency not authorized to receive documents pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 827 [Welf. & Inst. Code § 827(a)(4)].

Notwithstanding the requirements for confidentiality set forth in Welf. & Inst. Code § 827(a), when a minor has been found by the juvenile court to have committed a felony the court is required within seven days to provide notice of the finding to the superintendent of the school district the minor attends, the sheriff of the county in which the minor resides, and the sheriff of the county where the act was committed [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 827(b)(2), 827.7(a)]. Additionally, where the true finding is that the minor committed a misdemeanor involving "curfew, gambling, alcohol, drugs, tobacco products, carrying of weapons, assault or battery, larceny, vandalism, or graffiti," such notice is required to be sent to the superintendent of the school district the minor attends [Welf. & Inst. Code § 827(b)(2)]. All such information is to be kept confidential [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 827(b), 827.1].

In family law proceedings, notwithstanding the requirements of Welf. & Inst. Code § 827 and Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.552, a family court may itself review juvenile records, including reports by social services agencies and law enforcement, as part of its duty pursuant to Fam. Code § 3011 to require substantial independent corroboration of allegations of abuse by a parent where such allegations have been made in a case in which the family court is called upon to make custody or visitation orders [Fam. Code § 3011(b)]. The "best practice" in this regard is for the local juvenile and family courts, in conjunction with law enforcement and social services, to develop a protocol for the sharing of such information and to incorporate the provisions of that protocol in a local rule.

The provisions of Welf. & Inst. Code § 827 notwithstanding, the county child welfare agency may disclose information from juvenile records to a prospective caregiver if several conditions are met: the agency intends to place the child with the prospective caregiver; the prospective caregiver is willing to become the adoptive parent of the child; and the prospective caregiver has an approved adoption assessment or home study, a foster family home license, certification by a licensed foster family agency, or approval pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 361.2, 361.4 [Welf. & Inst. Code § 16010(d)(1)]. The county child welfare agency may also disclose to such a prospective caregiver the placement history and documents that are provided to adoptive parents under Fam. Code § 8706(a)-(b) [Welf. & Inst. Code § 16010(d)(2)].

[2] Petition for Disclosure

[a] Preparation and Service of Petition

The procedure for petitioning the juvenile court for access to juvenile records is set forth in Welf. & Inst. Code § 827 and Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.552. Judicial Council Form JV-570 must be used for this purpose [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.552(c); see § 327.162 for form and discussion]. The petition must identify the specific records sought to be inspected or obtained, based on knowledge, information, and belief that the requested records exist and are relevant to the purpose for which they are sought. In addition, the petition must "describe in detail" the reasons the records are being sought and the relevance to the proceeding or purpose for which they are sought [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.552(c)].

A copy of the petition must be served or attempted to be served either personally or by first class mail on the following individuals, at least five days before the petition is submitted to the juvenile court [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.552(d); In re Keisha T. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 220, 235, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 822] :

- County counsel.

- The district attorney.
- The child.
- The attorney of record for the minor if the child is still a ward or dependent of the court.
- The parent or guardian of the child.
- The probation department or social services department as applicable.

If the petition is for the release of juvenile case files in a juvenile dependency case, the due process afforded must include "notice of and an opportunity to file an objection to the release of the record or report to all interested parties" [Welf. & Inst. Code § 827(a)(3)(B)].

[b] Review and Determination of Petition

[i] Balancing Test

The juvenile court must review the petition and can grant or deny it summarily, or grant a hearing [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.552(e)]. In determining whether to authorize release of such records, in whole or in part, the court must balance [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.552(b)]:

- The interest of the child and other parties to the juvenile court proceedings.
- The interests of the petitioner who is seeking discovery.
- The interests of the public.

In addition, the juvenile court may only permit disclosure of juvenile records as is necessary, and only if there is a reasonable likelihood that the records will be of substantial relevance to the pending litigation, investigation, or prosecution [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.552(b)].

If the juvenile case file sought pertains to a juvenile dependency matter and is privileged or confidential pursuant to any other state law or federal law or regulation, "the requirements of that state law or federal law or regulation prohibiting or limiting release of the juvenile case file or any portions thereof shall prevail" [Welf. & Inst. Code § 827(a)(3)(A)]. In such circumstances, the petition for access still must be filed with the juvenile court, which may only release that portion of the juvenile case file protected by other law if disclosure is not detrimental to the safety, protection, or physical or emotional well being of the "a child who is directly or indirectly connected to the juvenile case that is the subject of the petition" [Welf. & Inst. Code § 827(a)(3)(A)]. These requirements, however, are not to be construed to limit the ability of the juvenile court to carry out its responsibilities in juvenile court proceedings [Welf. & Inst. Code § 827(a)(3)(A)].

[ii] Third-Party Petitioners

When the petitioner is a third party, such as the media, the juvenile court must be guided by the balancing test in § 327.34[i], but is not bound by it. Although juvenile records are generally confidential, Welf. & Inst. Code § 827 allows some persons to inspect juvenile records without court order, and for a court to permit inspection by any other person as designated by court order. Thus, the juvenile court has exclusive authority to determine when a release of juvenile records to a third party, such as the media, is appropriate [In re Keisha T. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 220, 232, 44 Cal.

Rptr. 2d 822] . Situations in which the latter exercise of authority is appropriate include [In re Keisha T. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 220, 232-233, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 822] :

- A criminal defendant who needs access to the records to provide a defense, or
- If there are competing interests that require the disclosure of some material in the juvenile records.

There is a conflict between a prosecutor's obligation to disclose exculpatory evidence under federal law [Brady v. Maryland (1963) 373 U.S. 83, 83 S. Ct. 1194, 10 L. Ed. 2d 215] and the general prohibition against disclosure of juvenile records under Welf. & Inst. Code § 827. This conflict has not been addressed by California courts and may not be adequately resolved by a motion for disclosure filed in juvenile court. For a detailed discussion of the Brady conflict with Welf. & Inst. Code § 827, see § 329.15[4].

PRACTICE TIP:

The Importance of Record Sealing. Given that juvenile records may be subject to disclosure of information previously thought to be confidential, if the minor is a victim or witness in an adult criminal proceeding, the only way to assure protection of such information may be through record sealing. As a minimum, the court has the discretion to release evidence of moral turpitude conduct for the purpose of impeaching the credibility of the child testifying in criminal proceedings and this evidence may include information otherwise inaccessible under statutes designed to protect confidentiality. Consequently, sealing a child's record may be the only way to protect against disclosure, pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 827, and should be pursued whenever allowed by statute. See generally, discussion of record sealing in § 329.120.

[iii] Disclosure to Press

The press may be a party to whom disclosure may be granted, under the court's discretion. Although Welf. & Inst. Code § 827 contains some anti-dissemination language, the juvenile court may determine, consistent with the best interests of the minors, that records should be released to the press, and in so doing, makes the decision that the public can learn the content of the disclosed records. Nothing in Welf. & Inst. Code § 827 prohibits the court from making that decision, so long as the court has determined that disclosure is in the best interests of the minor. The juvenile court, then, may find guidance in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.552(b), described above, but to the extent that this rule limits the discretion of the juvenile court to disclose juvenile records only to those who need them for pending litigation, investigation, or prosecution, regardless of whether disclosure to others is in the best interest of the minor, the rule is restrictive beyond that provided in Welf. & Inst. Code § 827, and is to that extent invalid [In re Keisha T. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 220, 231-235, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 822] .

[iv] Access Requires Showing of Good Cause and Notice

To obtain access to juvenile court records, the petitioner must show good cause, and the minor and other interested parties must be given notice and an opportunity to be heard [In re Keisha T. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 220, 240, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 822 ; In re R.G. (2000) 79 Cal. App. 4th 1408, 1416, 94 Cal. Rptr. 2d 818 ; see also Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.552(d)]. Good cause for disclosure of information contained in juvenile records can be found in a variety of situations. For instance, it is within the court's discretion to permit disclosure of records to a school district regarding a father who had molested his children when that father was a teacher in the school district. In that case, the interest of the public and the school district to protect school children from sexual abuse justified the release of information [In re R.G. (2000) 79 Cal. App. 4th 1408, 1416-1418, 94 Cal. Rptr. 2d 818] .

[v] In Camera Hearing and Balancing Test

Any conflict between competing interests can be resolved at an in camera hearing, in which the juvenile court determines which material, if any, should be disclosed. The court balances the interests of the child, other parties to the court proceedings, the petitioner, and the public in making its decision. A primary concern is the best interests of the child. The juvenile court should make a record of its findings adequate for review of its ruling. If the juvenile court determines that any portion of the records should be disclosed, it should then make appropriate orders specifying the information to be disclosed and the procedure for providing access. The in camera hearing cannot be conducted by a judge pro tem, except on stipulation of the parties [In re R.G. (2000) 79 Cal. App. 4th 1408, 1417-1418, 94 Cal. Rptr. 2d 818 ; In re Keisha T. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 220, 240-241, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 822 ; see also Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.552(b)]. The court's decision to grant or deny a petition for disclosure under Welf. & Inst. Code § 827 is reviewed under the abuse of discretion standard [In re R.G. (2000) 79 Cal. App. 4th 1408, 1413, 94 Cal. Rptr. 2d 818 ; but see Pack v. Kings County Human Services Agency (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 821, 838-840, 107 Cal. Rptr. 2d 594 (decision to deny or limit access to records of deceased dependent child reviewed under substantial evidence test)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Request for Review by Judge Temporarily Assigned as Juvenile Court Judge. When disclosure is sought in connection with a pending criminal or civil case, the judicial officer in that case, of course, is not acting as a juvenile court judge and therefore cannot conduct the juvenile court's consideration of the petition for disclosure under Welf. & Inst. Code § 827 and Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.552. Nevertheless, in a complex case, that judge may well be in the best position to determine whether any information in the juvenile court records has sufficient relevance to the pending litigation to merit disclosure. In this event, counsel may wish to consult with the presiding judge of the juvenile court and request that he or she appoint the judge in the pending litigation to sit temporarily as a judge of the juvenile court, for the limited purpose of determining the petition for disclosure of the juvenile court records. Such appointments should, of course, be in writing and made a part of the record.

[vi] Records Pertaining to Deceased Child

Juvenile case files pertaining to a deceased child who was within the juvenile court's jurisdiction pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 300 "shall be released to the public pursuant to an order by the juvenile court after a petition has been filed and interested parties have been afforded an opportunity to file an objection" [Welf. & Inst. Code § 827(a)(2)]. This creates a "veritable presumption in favor of release when the child is deceased" due to "considerations favoring public view, government accountability and reform" [Pack v. Kings County Human Services Agency (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 821, 829, 107 Cal. Rptr. 2d 594] . Indeed, effective January 1, 2008, the statute includes a statement that this is a presumption in favor of the release of documents when a child is deceased unless a statutory basis for confidentiality is shown to exist [Welf. & Inst. Code § 827(a)(2)(B)]. The rules provide that if the request is made by a member of the public the court shall proceed under Welf. & Inst. Code § 827(a)(1), and if the request is made by a member of a county board of supervisors the court shall proceed under Welf. & Inst. Code § 16502.5 [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.553].

On its face, it appears the provisions of Welf. & Inst. Code § 827(a)(2) are limited to deceased children who were dependents of the juvenile court. One case, however, has interpreted it to include any child who came within the juvenile court's jurisdiction pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 300, whether dependency proceedings were ever initiated or not [In re Elijah S. (2005) 125 Cal. App. 4th 1532, 1543-1551, 24 Cal. Rptr. 3d 16] . If, however, juvenile court proceedings were never instituted, the party seeking disclosure of juvenile records bears the burden of showing the child came under the juvenile court's jurisdiction [In re Elijah S. (2005) 125 Cal. App. 4th 1532, 1544-1545, 24 Cal. Rptr. 3d 16] . While not likely to occur frequently, in some cases this can turn what should be a straightforward discovery hearing into a contested hearing on the issue of whether the minor came within the juvenile court's jurisdiction. No case law sets forth the burden of proof on the threshold jurisdictional issue in such circumstances [see In re Elijah S. (2005) 125 Cal. App. 4th 1532, 1545, fn. 10, 24 Cal. Rptr. 3d 16] . The proper burden of proof should be preponderance of the evidence [Evid. Code § 115]. This is consistent with the burden for establishing a child comes within the juvenile court's jurisdiction in dependency cases under Welf. & Inst. Code § 300 [Welf. & Inst. Code § 355(a); Cynthia D. v. Superior Court (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 242, 248, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 698, 851 P.2d 1307] .

The procedures and time frames for seeking and releasing the records of a deceased child are found in Welf. & Inst. Code § 827(a)(2). Generally, a petition seeking juvenile case files relating to a deceased child must be served not only on the custodian of records, but also on any interested parties, if the petitioner is in possession of their identity and address. On receipt of the petition, the custodian of records must serve a copy of the request on all interested persons not served by the petitioner, if the custodian of records possesses information enabling it to do so [Welf. & Inst. Code § 827(a)(2)(D)]. Service by the custodian of records must be done within 10 days. If the custodian of records or any interested party objects to the release of the documents, the party must file and serve an objection on the petitioner within 15 calendar days of the service of the petition [Welf. & Inst. Code § 827(a)(2)(E)]. The petitioning party then has 10 calendar days in which to file a reply. The juvenile court must set the matter for hearing no more than 60 calendar days from the date the petition was served on the custodian of records [Welf. & Inst. Code § 827(a)(2)(F)]. The petition shall be heard on the basis of the petition, objection, and reply, together with any supporting documents and declarations, and argument. Witnesses will normally not be allowed, but the court may order the appearance of witnesses on its own motion, which may, of course, be at the suggestion of one or more counsel or interested parties. Any decision by the court is reviewable by petition for extraordinary writ filed with the appellate court [Welf. & Inst. Code § 827(a)(2)(F)].

If there is information in the file relating to another child or which could identify another child, except information about the deceased child, that information "shall be redacted" prior to release of the file, unless the juvenile court makes an order to the contrary. Further, the juvenile court may limit or prohibit access to the juvenile case file of a deceased dependent child on a showing release of the file or any portion of the file is "detrimental to the safety, protection, or physical, or emotional well-being of another child who is directly or indirectly connected to the juvenile case that is the subject of the petition" [Welf. & Inst. Code § 827(a)(2); Pack v. Kings County Human Services Agency (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 821, 829-830, 107 Cal. Rptr. 2d 594] . Effective January 1, 2008, it is clear that when considering a request for records concerning a deceased child under these provisions, "no weighing or balancing of the interests of those other than a child is permitted" [Welf. & Inst. Code § 827(a)(2)(C)]. The statute imposes an "independent duty" on the juvenile court to seek out the views of interested third parties and to protect the interests of any child "directly or indirectly connected to the case," even if that child is not a dependent of the court [Pack v. Kings County Human Services Agency (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 821, 837, 107 Cal. Rptr. 2d 594] .

The standard of review on appeal is not clear [compare In re Elijah S. (2005) 125 Cal. App. 4th 1532, 1541, 24 Cal. Rptr. 3d 16 (standard of review is abuse of discretion) with Pack v. Kings County Human Services Agency (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 821, 838-840, 107 Cal. Rptr. 2d 594 (standard of review is substantial evidence)]. Under either standard, however, the result is likely to be the same.

[vii] Protective Orders

When the juvenile court orders the disclosure of records pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 827 it should make whatever protective orders are necessary and appropriate [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.552(b) ("The court may issue protective orders to accompany authorized disclosure, discovery, or access.")]. This may even include protective orders to the parent or guardian [In re Tiffany G. (1994) 29 Cal. App. 4th 443, 450-452, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 8 (upholding order of juvenile court to parent of minor not to disclose copies of reports)]. Protective orders will vary and must be decided on a case-by-case basis. Protective orders may include, but are not limited to, requiring the records be limited in use to that purpose the court found constituted good cause for the release of the records, that they not be disclosed to anyone other than the person the court orders disclosure to and that person's counsel, including the investigators and experts used by that counsel, that upon conclusion of the litigation or other purpose for which the records are disclosed, all documents either be returned to the juvenile court or destroyed, and that any court file in the proceedings in which the records are used be sealed [see Navajo Express v. Superior Court (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 981, 986-987, 231 Cal. Rptr. 165] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Criminal Law & ProcedureJuvenile OffendersJuvenile ProceedingsRecordsFamily LawDelinquency & DependencyDelinquency ProceedingsFamily LawDelinquency & DependencyDependency Proceedings

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 327 JUVENILE COURTS: JURISDICTION AND GENERAL PROCEDURES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. General Juvenile Court Procedures

28-327 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 327.35

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser and Hon. Kurt Kumli Editorial Consultants Janice M. Brickley Former Contributor

§ 327.35 Other Determinations of Confidentiality

The juvenile court may also be called on to make determinations regarding the confidentiality of other information. In one juvenile dependency case a petition had been filed under Welf. & Inst. Code § 300 alleging the father had caused the death of another child. That child's death was still being investigated regarding the cause of death and possible criminal charges. The father served subpoenas duces tecum on the local law enforcement and coroner agencies, seeking to discover forensic evidence and investigative reports from the ongoing criminal investigation that was not provided him by social services in the discovery he had been provided in the dependency case [Michael P. v. Superior Court (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 1036, 1040-1041, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 11] . The agencies moved to quash the subpoenas. The juvenile court declined to conduct an in camera review and squashed the subpoenas under the authority of County of Orange v. Superior Court (2000) 79 Cal. App. 4th 759, 94 Cal. Rptr. 2d 261 [Michael P. v. Superior Court (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 1036, 1041, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 11] . The Court of Appeal held this was error, distinguishing its own decision in the earlier case. It held the juvenile court must conduct an in camera inspection of the information sought to determine whether the conditional privilege of Evid. Code § 1040 applied. The father's interest in the care and custody of his own child was at risk in the dependency proceedings, making his need for the information great. Despite the ongoing investigation, the juvenile court needed to determine if disclosure of the information was against the public interest and whether the need to prevent disclosure outweighed the necessity for disclosure in the interests of justice. Thus, a balancing of interests needed to be conducted by the juvenile court [Michael P. v. Superior Court (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 1036, 1042-1048, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 11] . The mere fact an investigation was ongoing or the evidence incriminated the father was not enough to prevent disclosure. Instead, the father needed to assert why he needed the information and the government needed to show there was a real possibility that disclosure of the information would allow the father to avoid apprehension or otherwise jeopardize the investigation. The in camera review process would ensure the competing interests were carefully balanced [Michael P. v. Superior Court (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 1036, 1046-1048, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 11] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Criminal Law & ProcedureJuvenile OffendersJuvenile ProceedingsGeneral OverviewFamily LawDelinquency & DependencyDelinquency ProceedingsFamily LawDelinquency & DependencyDependency Proceedings

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 327 JUVENILE COURTS: JURISDICTION AND GENERAL PROCEDURES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. General Juvenile Court Procedures

28-327 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 327.36-327.39

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser and Hon. Kurt Kumli Editorial Consultants Janice M. Brickley Former Contributor

[Reserved]

§§ 327.36[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329

CHAPTER 327 JUVENILE COURTS: JURISDICTION AND GENERAL PROCEDURES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. General Policies Regarding Placement and Support

28-327 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 327.40

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser and Hon. Kurt Kumli Editorial Consultants Janice M. Brickley Former Contributor

§ 327.40 Commitment or Placement of Dependents and Wards

[1] Separate Facilities Required Generally for Dependents and Wards

Minors who are alleged or found to be dependent children of the court pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 300 must be kept in separated facilities from minors either alleged or adjudged to come within the delinquency provisions of Welf. & Inst. Code § 601 or 602, unless the social worker or probation officer has determined that the group home or licensed foster family home meets the specific needs of the minor being placed or detained, and there is a commonality of needs with the other minors in the home [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 206, 16514(c)]. Nevertheless, if necessary, a minor alleged or found to be a dependent child of the court may be housed in an emergency shelter with minors adjudged wards of the court pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 601, even without such a determination [Welf. & Inst. Code § 16514(a)].

If a minor is alleged to come within Welf. & Inst. Code § 602, the minor must not be placed in a facility that houses dependent children. This statutory mandate applies even if the child has already been adjudicated a dependent. By "acting in a criminal manner," a dependent minor "converts" himself or herself into a minor who is alleged to come within Welf. & Inst. Code § 602 and thus becomes a person the "Legislature deems inappropriate for detention alongside section 300 dependents. A segregated facility must be found for the minor" [In re Jaime M. (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 320, 324, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 425] . This does not require a dependent minor be placed in a secure facility once the allegation is made the minor falls within Welf. & Inst. Code § 602. It simply means the minor cannot be housed with other dependents. In an appropriate case, the juvenile court can release the dependent child to social services for a placement separate from other dependents while the determination under Welf. & Inst. § 241.1 is made regarding the status of the minor [In re Jaime M. (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 320, 324, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 425] .

For a complete discussion of "dual jurisdiction" issues, see § 327.11[3].

[2] Preference for Institutions or Family Homes of Same Religious Belief

All commitments to institutions or for placement in family homes by the juvenile court must be, so far as practicable, either to institutions or for placement in family homes of the same religious belief as that of the person so committed or of his or her parents or to institutions affording opportunity for instruction in that religious belief [Welf. & Inst. Code § 205].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawDelinquency & DependencyDependency ProceedingsFamily LawDelinquency & DependencyFoster CareFamily LawDelinquency & DependencyWards of Court

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 327 JUVENILE COURTS: JURISDICTION AND GENERAL PROCEDURES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. General Policies Regarding Placement and Support

28-327 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 327.41

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser and Hon. Kurt Kumli Editorial Consultants Janice M. Brickley Former Contributor

§ 327.41 Parent Liability for Costs Incurred on Behalf of Minor

Any person liable for the support of a minor, including the minor's father, mother, or spouse, the minor's estate, and the estate of any person liable for the support of a minor, are liable for the reasonable costs of the support of the minor while the minor is placed or detained in, or committed to, any institution or other place pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 625 (temporary custody without a warrant) or a juvenile court order [Welf. & Inst. Code § 903]. The liability of these persons and estates is joint and several [Welf. & Inst. Code § 903; but see In re Jason V. (1991) 229 Cal. App. 3d 1168, 1170, 280 Cal. Rptr. 562 (legal guardians not liable for child's out-of-home placement costs under Welf. & Inst. Code § 903)].

However, a county may not levy charges for the costs of support of a minor detained under Welf. & Inst. Code § 625, unless, at the detention hearing, the juvenile court determines that detention of the minor should be continued, the petition for the offense for which the minor is detained is subsequently sustained, or the minor agrees to a program of supervision pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 654, which allows programs for care, counseling, and educational services in lieu of filing a petition [Welf. & Inst. Code § 654].

For further discussion relating to a parent's liability under Welf. & Inst. Code § 903, see Ch. 394, Parent and Child ; see also Kirkland, Lurvey, Richmond, and Wagner, California Family Law Practice and Procedure, 2d ed., Ch. 30 (Matthew Bender).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Criminal Law & ProcedureJuvenile OffendersJuvenile ProceedingsGeneral OverviewFamily LawDelinquency & DependencyDelinquency ProceedingsFamily LawDelinquency & DependencyDependency ProceedingsFamily LawParental Duties & RightsDutiesSupport of Children

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 327 JUVENILE COURTS: JURISDICTION AND GENERAL PROCEDURES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. General Policies Regarding Placement and Support

28-327 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 327.42

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser and Hon. Kurt Kumli Editorial Consultants Janice M. Brickley Former Contributor

§ 327.42 Procedure for Order Requiring Reimbursement for Support

In any case in which a child is or has been declared a dependent child or a ward of the court pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 300, 601, or 602, the juvenile court must order any agency that has expended money or incurred costs on behalf of the child pursuant to a juvenile court order to submit to the district attorney a statement of costs and expenses for the benefit of the child [Welf. & Inst. Code § 903.4(b)]. The district attorney may then petition the superior court to issue an order to show cause why an order should not be entered for continuing support and reimbursement of the costs of the support of the minor. The district attorney is not required to petition the court for an order for continuing support and reimbursement if, in the opinion of the district attorney, it would not be appropriate to do so. Any order entered by the court as a result of the order to show cause is enforceable in the same manner as any other support order entered by the courts at the time it becomes due and payable [Welf. & Inst. Code § 903.4(c)].

For discussion and forms relating to the enforcement of such support orders, see Ch. 258, Family Law Enforcement , and Kirkland, Lurvey, Richmond, and Wagner, California Family Law Practice and Procedure, 2nd ed., Ch. 141 (Matthew Bender).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawDelinquency & DependencyDependency ProceedingsFamily LawDelinquency & DependencyWards of Court

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 327 JUVENILE COURTS: JURISDICTION AND GENERAL PROCEDURES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. General Policies Regarding Placement and Support

28-327 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 327.43-327.49

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser and Hon. Kurt Kumli Editorial Consultants Janice M. Brickley Former Contributor

[Reserved]

§§ 327.43[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 327 JUVENILE COURTS: JURISDICTION AND GENERAL PROCEDURES
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
A. Related Secondary References

28-327 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 327.50

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser and Hon. Kurt Kumli Editorial Consultants Janice M. Brickley Former Contributor

§ 327.50 Matthew Bender Publications

Detailed treatment of delinquency proceedings in juvenile courts. Erwin, Millman, Monroe, Sevilla, Tarlow, California Criminal Defense Practice, Chs. 120-125 (Matthew Bender)

Practical guidance and techniques in representing neglected or abused children. Peters, Representing Children in Child Protective Proceedings (Matthew Bender 2001)

Discussion and forms relating to enforcement of support orders. Kirkland, Lurvey & Richmond, California Family Law Practice and Procedure, 2nd ed. (Matthew Bender)

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Criminal Law & ProcedureJuvenile OffendersJuvenile ProceedingsGeneral OverviewFamily LawChild SupportObligationsEnforcementGeneral OverviewFamily LawDelinquency & DependencyDelinquency ProceedingsFamily LawFamily Protection & WelfareChildrenAbuse, Endangerment & Neglect

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 327 JUVENILE COURTS: JURISDICTION AND GENERAL PROCEDURES
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
A. Related Secondary References

28-327 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 327.51

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser and Hon. Kurt Kumli Editorial Consultants Janice M. Brickley Former Contributor

§ 327.51 Other Text References

Myers, Evidence in Child Abuse And Neglect Cases (John Wiley 3d ed. 1997)

Myers, The Backlash: Child Protection Under Fire (Sage 1994)

Patton, Legal Ethics in Child Custody and Dependency Proceedings: A Guide for Judges and Lawyers (Cambridge 2006)

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawDelinquency & DependencyDependency ProceedingsFamily LawFamily Protection & WelfareChildrenAbuse, Endangerment & NeglectLegal EthicsGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

28 of 52 DOCUMENTS

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 327 JUVENILE COURTS: JURISDICTION AND GENERAL PROCEDURES
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
A. Related Secondary References

28-327 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 327.52

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser and Hon. Kurt Kumli Editorial Consultants Janice M. Brickley Former Contributor

§ 327.52 Law Reviews

Arredondo, et al., Juvenile Mental Health Court: Rationale and Protocols, 52(4) Juv. & Fam. Ct. J. (Fall 2001)

Boland, The Los Angeles County Children's Court: A Model Facility for Child Abuse and Neglect Proceedings, 18 Pepperdine L. Rev. 247 (1991)

Edwards, The Juvenile Court and the Role of the Juvenile Court Judge, 43(2) Juv. & Fam. Ct. J., 1 (1992)

Edwards, The Relationship of Family and Juvenile Courts in Child Abuse Cases, 27 Santa Clara L. Rev. 201 (1987)

Note, Mental Hospitalization of Troublesome Youth: An Analysis of Skyrocketing Admission Rates, 40 Stan. L. Rev. 773 (1988)

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Criminal Law & ProcedureJuvenile OffendersJuvenile ProceedingsGeneral OverviewFamily LawDelinquency & DependencyDelinquency ProceedingsFamily LawDelinquency & DependencyDependency ProceedingsFamily LawFamily Protection & WelfareChildrenProceedingsPublic Health & Welfare LawHealthcareMental Health ServicesCommitmentChildren

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 327 JUVENILE COURTS: JURISDICTION AND GENERAL PROCEDURES
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
A. Related Secondary References

28-327 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 327.53-327.59

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser and Hon. Kurt Kumli Editorial Consultants Janice M. Brickley Former Contributor

[Reserved]

§§ 327.53[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 327 JUVENILE COURTS: JURISDICTION AND GENERAL PROCEDURES
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
B. Statutes, Decisions, and Other Primary Authority
1. Purpose, Jurisdiction, and Powers of Juvenile Courts

28-327 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 327.60

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser and Hon. Kurt Kumli Editorial Consultants Janice M. Brickley Former Contributor

§ 327.60 Purpose and Nature of Juvenile Courts

[1] State Statutes

Purposes of juvenile court system. Welf. & Inst. Code § 202

Characterization of juvenile court proceedings as not criminal in nature. Welf. & Inst. Code § 203

Recommendations of probation and welfare departments over whether minor should be declared dependent or ward of court. Welf. & Inst. Code § 241.1

Protocol for allowing designation of minor as "dual status," being both a dependent and a ward. Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 241.1(e), 241.2

[2] Decisions

Children alleged to fall within the provisions of Welf. & Inst. Code § 602 are statutorily required to be segregated from children taken into custody under Welf. & Inst. Code § 300 Los Angeles County Dep't of Children & Fam. Servs. v. Superior Court (Jaime M.) (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 320, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 425

Cal. Const., art. I, § 28(f), providing that prior felony conviction, juvenile or adult, may be used without limitation in any subsequent proceeding for purposes of impeachment or enhancement as not applying if previous offense is juvenile adjudication; juvenile adjudications as not equivalent of criminal convictions. In re Anthony R. (1984) 154 Cal. App. 3d 772, 776-777, 201 Cal. Rptr. 299 (juvenile proceeding); see People v. West (1984) 154 Cal. App. 3d 100, 106-110,

201 Cal. Rptr. 63 (adult proceeding)

Juvenile court law as liberally construed to secure for each minor such care and guidance, preferably in his or her own home, as will serve welfare of minor and best interests of state; and when minor is removed from his or her own family, to secure for him or her custody, care, and discipline as nearly as possible equivalent to that which should have been given by parents. In re Aline D. (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 557, 562, 121 Cal. Rptr. 816, 536 P.2d 65

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawDelinquency & DependencyDelinquency ProceedingsFamily LawDelinquency & DependencyDependency ProceedingsFamily LawDelinquency & DependencyWards of Court

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 327 JUVENILE COURTS: JURISDICTION AND GENERAL PROCEDURES
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
B. Statutes, Decisions, and Other Primary Authority
1. Purpose, Jurisdiction, and Powers of Juvenile Courts

28-327 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 327.61

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser and Hon. Kurt Kumli Editorial Consultants Janice M. Brickley Former Contributor

§ 327.61 Jurisdiction and Venue of Juvenile Courts

[1] State Statutes

Determining residency of minor. Welf. & Inst. Code § 17.1

Superior court jurisdiction over juvenile court proceedings. Welf. & Inst. Code § 245

Dependency proceedings. Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 290.1-399

Exclusive jurisdiction of juvenile court over custody of minor when he or she has been declared dependent; power of juvenile court to issue protective orders under Fam. Code § 6218. Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 304, 340.5, 362.4

Transfer of juveniles between counties. Welf. & Inst. Code § 324

Venue provisions. Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 1, 327, 651

Termination of juvenile court jurisdiction over dependent child when other actions, such as dissolution, legal separation, nullity, or paternity, are pending; court's power to issue protective orders and orders governing custody and visitation at termination of jurisdiction. Welf. & Inst. Code § 362.4 Wardship proceedings. Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 601-800

[2] California Rules of Court

Proper court; determination of minor's residence. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.510

[3] Decisions

The piecemeal adjudication of dependency jurisdiction undermines the statutory goal of protecting children at risk. The juvenile court should consider all relevant information on jurisdiction, including events that occur outside of the county. In re Hadley B. (2007) 148 Cal. App. 4th 1041, 1048, 56 Cal. Rptr. 3d 234

Case cannot be transferred between counties absent determination the transfer is in the child's best interest. In re J.C. (2002) 104 Cal. App. 4th 984, 128 Cal. Rptr. 2d 671

Once a case has been lawfully transferred to a county pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 750, the juvenile court in that county has jurisdiction over the minor for all purposes and may not transfer the case back to the original court. In re Brandon H. (2002) 99 Cal. App. 4th 1153, 1156, 121 Cal. Rptr. 2d 530

Transfer of case to county of residence of minor's legal guardian permitted, despite fact parent with prior custody order had not changed county of residence. In re Christopher T. (1998) 60 Cal. App. 4th 1282, 1288-1292, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 116

Welf. & Inst. Code § 750 and former Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1381 (now see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.610) as both providing that residence of minor is residence of person who has legal custody of minor or who would have legal custody in absence of juvenile court order; trial court as erroneously transferring case from county in which father resided to county in which mother resided, because father still had legal custody, even though minor no longer lived with father and had last lived with mother before running away. In re Judson W. (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 838, 844, 230 Cal. Rptr. 92

Juvenile court is a superior court that exercises limited jurisdiction arising under juvenile law. In re Chantal S. (1996) 13 Cal. 4th 196, 200, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 866, 913 P.2d 1075

Superior court convened as and exercising special powers of juvenile court as vested with jurisdiction to make only those limited determinations authorized by legislative grant of those special powers. In re R. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 636, 643, 119 Cal. Rptr. 475, 532 P.2d 123

Notwithstanding absence of specific authorization to make particular determinations, juvenile court as nevertheless vested with authority to make such determinations which are incidentally necessary to performance of those functions demanded of it by Legislature pursuant to juvenile court law. In re R. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 636, 643, 119 Cal. Rptr. 475, 532 P.2d 123

Juvenile court as vested with jurisdiction to determine parentage of minor when finding is necessary to any ultimate determination with which it is charged. In re R. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 636, 643, 119 Cal. Rptr. 475, 532 P.2d 123

While juvenile court, on adequate facts, retains jurisdiction and stays within bounds of its legal power, no other court as having right to interfere with its supervision, for state, of children involved. In re Syson (1960) 184 Cal. App. 2d 111, 117, 7 Cal. Rptr. 298

[4] Attorney General Opinions

"Homeless" minors as defined by San Francisco Mayor's Criminal Justice Council who are from different counties and states as subject to continuing jurisdiction of court making initial dependency determination. 69 Ops. Cal. Atty. Gen.

241, 246 (1986)

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionJurisdiction Over ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureVenueIndividual DefendantsCivil ProcedureVenueMotions to TransferGeneral OverviewFamily LawDelinquency & DependencyDelinquency ProceedingsFamily LawDelinquency & DependencyDependency Proceedings

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 327 JUVENILE COURTS: JURISDICTION AND GENERAL PROCEDURES
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
B. Statutes, Decisions, and Other Primary Authority
1. Purpose, Jurisdiction, and Powers of Juvenile Courts

28-327 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 327.62

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser and Hon. Kurt Kumli Editorial Consultants Janice M. Brickley Former Contributor

§ 327.62 Powers of Juvenile Courts

[1] State Statutes

Enforcement of orders of juvenile court. Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 213, 214

Authority of probation department to engage in activities designed to prevent juvenile delinquency. Welf. & Inst. Code § 236

Citation, subpoena, and warrant powers of juvenile court. Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 338, 339, 341, 661-663

[2] California Rules of Court

Citations to appear, warrants for arrest, and subpoenas. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.526

[3] Decisions

The juvenile court has the inherent authority to issue declaratory relief in dependency proceedings. In re Claudia E. (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 627, 637, 77 Cal. Rptr. 3d 722

Authority of juvenile court, including referees, to impose sanctions pursuant to Code of Civ. Proc. § 128.7. In re Mark B. (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 61, 64-65, 56 Cal. Rptr. 3d 697

The juvenile court is vested with jurisdiction to determine parentage of a minor when that finding is necessary to any ultimate determination with which it is charged. In re R. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 636, 643-644, 119 Cal. Rptr. 475, 532 P.2d 123

The juvenile court has inherent authority to entertain a prehearing challenge to the petition's sufficiency by a motion akin to a demurrer. In re Fred J. (1979) 89 Cal. App. 3d 168, 176, 152 Cal. Rptr. 327

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePretrial MattersSubpoenasCriminal Law & ProcedureJuvenile OffendersJuvenile ProceedingsGeneral OverviewCriminal Law & ProcedureArrestsWarrantsFamily LawDelinquency & DependencyDelinquency ProceedingsFamily LawDelinquency & DependencyDependency Proceedings

33 of 52 DOCUMENTS

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 327 JUVENILE COURTS: JURISDICTION AND GENERAL PROCEDURES
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
B. Statutes, Decisions, and Other Primary Authority
1. Purpose, Jurisdiction, and Powers of Juvenile Courts

28-327 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 327.63-327.69

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser and Hon. Kurt Kumli Editorial Consultants Janice M. Brickley Former Contributor

[Reserved]

§§ 327.63[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 327 JUVENILE COURTS: JURISDICTION AND GENERAL PROCEDURES
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
B. Statutes, Decisions, and Other Primary Authority
2. Juvenile Court Judges and Other Key Personnel

28-327 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 327.70

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser and Hon. Kurt Kumli Editorial Consultants Janice M. Brickley Former Contributor

§ 327.70 Judges and Referees

[1] State Statutes

Appointment of juvenile court judge. Welf. & Inst. Code § 246

Appointment of subordinate judicial officers, including juvenile court referees. Gov. Code §§ 71601(i), Gov. Code §§ 71622(a), Gov. Code §§ 71622(f)

Powers and duties of referees. Welf. & Inst. Code § 248

No order of referee removing minor from his or her home as becoming effective until expressly approved by judge of juvenile court. Welf. & Inst. Code § 249

Effect and finality of referee's order. Welf. & Inst. Code § 250

Judge of juvenile court, or in counties having more than one judge of juvenile court, presiding judge of juvenile court, as authorized to establish requirement that any and all orders of referees must be expressly approved by judge before becoming effective. Welf. & Inst. Code § 251

Review of order of referee on rehearing before juvenile court judge. Welf. & Inst. Code § 252

Judge of juvenile court as permitted on own motion made within 20 judicial days of hearing before referee to order rehearing of any matter heard before referee. Welf. & Inst. Code § 253

Rehearing of matter heard originally by referee before juvenile court judge as conducted de novo. Welf. & Inst. Code § 254

Juvenile court judge as empowered at any time to require, and on request of board of supervisors must require, probation officer to examine and report to court on qualifications and management of any society, association, or corporation, other than state institution, that applies for or receives custody of any ward or dependent child of juvenile court; no probation officer as having authority to enter any institution without its consent. Welf. & Inst. Code § 282

Training and education for judicial officers hearing dependency proceedings. Welf. & Inst. Code § 304.7

[2] California Rules of Court

Appointment and powers of referees. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.536(a)

Referee as temporary judge. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.536(b)

Conduct of proceedings before referee. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.538(a)

Requirement that referee furnish written findings and orders and explanation of right of review. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.538(b)

Effective date and finality of orders of referee. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.540

Application for rehearing. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.542(a)

Rehearing as granted as matter of right when no court reporter was present in proceeding before referee. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.542(b)

Rehearing as either granted or denied by juvenile court judge after reading transcript of proceedings at which court reporter was present. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.542(c)

Rehearing on motion of judge. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.542(d)

Rehearing de novo. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.542(e)

Advice as to rights of appeal from rehearing. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.542(e)

[3] Decisions

When a rehearing of a referee's findings and orders is granted, the better rule is that the referee's findings and orders are entitled to full force and effect until the matter is actually reheard. Ricardo V. v. Superior Court (2007) 147 Cal. App. 4th 419, 422, 54 Cal. Rptr. 3d 223

Whenever the approval of a juvenile court judge is required for a referee's order to become effective, the referee's order becomes final 10 calendar days after service of a written copy of the referee's findings and orders or 20 judicial days after the hearing at which the findings and orders are made, whichever comes later. In re Clifford C. (1997) 15 Cal. 4th 1085, 1093, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 873, 938 P.2d 932 (harmonizing Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 250 and 253)

Where the order of the referee does not require the approval of a judge to become effective, a judge of the juvenile court may order a rehearing on his or her own motion made within 20 judicial days of the order but not more than 10 days after the service of the written copy of the findings and orders. In re Clifford C. (1997) 15 Cal. 4th 1085, 1093, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 873, 938 P.2d 932

Cal. Rules of Ct., former Rule 244, requirement of a written stipulation to a referee sitting as a temporary judge is deemed waived if the parties imply consent by their actions. In re Richard S. (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 857, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 819 P.2d 843

Transcript of arguments of minor's attorney as integral part of right to be represented by counsel at jurisdictional hearing, so that denial of application for rehearing made without that portion of transcript constitutes reversible error when judge is not informed from any source of counsel's theory of defense. In re C. (1976) 16 Cal. 3d 493, 497, 128 Cal. Rptr. 172, 546 P.2d 676

When portion of reported proceedings have not been transcribed when juvenile court denies application for rehearing, court's denial as reversible error. In re C. (1976) 16 Cal. 3d 493, 497, 128 Cal. Rptr. 172, 546 P.2d 676

Actual review of action on application for hearing de novo from order by referee within time prescribed by statute as necessary to prevent referee's acts from exceeding constitutional limitations restricting such acts to subordinate judicial duties and to effectuate legislative intent to limit period during which application for rehearing can remain pending and unresolved. In re M. (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 727, 730, 122 Cal. Rptr. 574, 537 P.2d 406

Juvenile court judge as required to read transcript of all challenged proceedings and to act on application for rehearing within time limits or rehearing granted as matter of right. In re M. (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 727, 738-739, 122 Cal. Rptr. 574, 537 P.2d 406

When transcript of proceedings before referee is available to juvenile court judge, failure to read transcript in ruling on application for rehearing de novo as constituting insufficient judicial review to make referee's order that of judge rather than of referee alone. In re M. (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 727, 738, 122 Cal. Rptr. 574, 537 P.2d 406

Juvenile court as required to postpone ruling on rehearing until transcript received or else grant rehearing, if proceedings before referee are recorded but not yet transcribed. In re Larissa W. (1991) 227 Cal. App. 3d 124, 131, 277 Cal. Rptr. 802

Oral stipulation to referee as temporary judge was sufficient. In re Aontae D. (1994) 25 Cal. App. 4th 167, 171-172, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 176

A minor charged with a technical violation of probation (as opposed to a new law violation) may not make a challenge under CCP 170.6 to the judge who presided over the prior hearing in the matter since the supplemental hearing is a continuation of the prior proceeding. Antonio G. v. Superior Court (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 422, 427-428

Superior court sitting as juvenile court as properly ordering rehearing on its own motion without first obtaining and reviewing transcript of testimony heard by referee, unless minor requests that court review transcript. In re Darrell P. (1981) 121 Cal. App. 3d 916, 921-924, 175 Cal. Rptr. 682

District attorney as properly making informal request for rehearing after referee's decision, when juvenile is given notice of request before court orders rehearing. In re V. (1980) 28 Cal. 3d 587, 590-593, 169 Cal. Rptr. 713, 620 P.2d 163

Statutory provision requiring courts to conduct rehearings de novo as construed not to restrict right of judge to grant or deny application for rehearing after reading transcript of proceedings before referee. In re Anthony H. (1980) 108 Cal.

App. 3d 494, 500, 166 Cal. Rptr. 607

Juvenile court as required to articulate its reasons for good cause shown in order extending time under Welf. & Inst. Code § 252. In re Freddie R. (1979) 96 Cal. App. 3d 829, 831, 158 Cal. Rptr. 260

California juvenile court law that allows juvenile full trial before judge as matter of right only when proceedings before referee are not reported and transcribed as not denying juvenile due process and equal protection of law in situations when credibility of witnesses is significant. In re Jay J. (1977) 66 Cal. App. 3d 631, 633, 136 Cal. Rptr. 125

In rehearing from proceeding before referee, juvenile court judge as properly imposing more grave or serious dispositional order than that entered by referee. In re Anthony M. (1976) 64 Cal. App. 3d 464, 469, 134 Cal. Rptr. 540

Failure of juvenile court referee to give juvenile or his or her attorney or parents written explanation of right to seek review of jurisdictional and dispositional orders of referee as reversible error. In re Drexel F. (1976) 58 Cal. App. 3d 801, 805, 130 Cal. Rptr. 253

Even though juvenile court judge ordered transcript of proceedings before referee in order to review disposition within statutory period allowed for order for rehearing, failure of judge to actually order such rehearing within statutory period as depriving juvenile court judge of jurisdiction to order rehearing on his or her own motion and rendering disposition of referee final. In re W. R. W. (1971) 17 Cal. App. 3d 1029, 1033, 95 Cal. Rptr. 354

Statutory provision rendering order of referee final after specified number of days after service of copies of order as depriving juvenile court of jurisdiction to order rehearing on its own motion following end of period. In re Henley (1970) 9 Cal. App. 3d 924, 928, 88 Cal. Rptr. 458

Statutory limitation providing that application for rehearing by minor or parent not granted within 20 days is deemed denied as construed to mean 20 days from date juvenile court judge receives any available copy of transcript of proceedings before referee. In re J. R. (1970) 5 Cal. App. 3d 597, 601, 85 Cal. Rptr. 396

Any order of referee, approved or not by juvenile court judge prior to setting of rehearing, as conditional until time for granting of rehearing has elapsed so that when rehearing is subsequently granted, referee's order becomes nullity and there is no double jeopardy. In re Dale S. (1970) 10 Cal. App. 3d 952, 957, 89 Cal. Rptr. 499

Statutory limitation providing that application for rehearing by minor or parent not granted within 20 days is deemed denied as construed to mean 20 days from date juvenile court judge receives any available copy of transcript of proceedings before referee. In re J. R. (1970) 5 Cal. App. 3d 597, 601, 85 Cal. Rptr. 396

[4] Attorney General Opinions

Superior court commissioner appointed to act as juvenile court referee as allowed to preside over any hearing assigned by presiding judge of juvenile court and related to juvenile delinquency proceedings (except jurisdictional hearing), in absence of stipulation and subject to hearing de novo by juvenile court judge. 76 Ops. Cal. Atty. Gen. 25, 31 (1993)

Juvenile traffic hearing officer as not permitted to establish bail schedule and accept forfeiture of bail in lieu of appearance by juvenile. 63 Ops. Cal. Atty. Gen. 232 (1980)

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersJudgesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudicial OfficersRefereesGeneral OverviewCriminal Law & ProcedureJuvenile OffendersJuvenile ProceedingsGeneral OverviewFamily LawDelinquency & DependencyDelinquency ProceedingsFamily LawDelinquency & DependencyDependency Proceedings

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 327 JUVENILE COURTS: JURISDICTION AND GENERAL PROCEDURES
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
B. Statutes, Decisions, and Other Primary Authority
2. Juvenile Court Judges and Other Key Personnel

28-327 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 327.71

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser and Hon. Kurt Kumli Editorial Consultants Janice M. Brickley Former Contributor

§ 327.71 Probation Officers

[1] State Statutes

"Probation officer" or "social worker" as used in juvenile court law may also refer to any social worker of Indian tribe which has entered into an agreement with State Department of Social Services pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 10553.1 concerning child welfare services or foster care payments when that Indian social worker is supervising dependent children. Welf. & Inst. Code § 215

Appointment of probation officers. Welf. & Inst. Code § 270

Effect of county charter provisions for method of appointment and tenure of office for probation officers and other juvenile court personnel. Welf. & Inst. Code § 271

Bonding requirements for probation officers. Welf. & Inst. Code § 274

Designation of probation officer or other county officer to keep suitable books and accounts and give and keep suitable vouchers for purpose of handling reimbursement and other payments provided for by juvenile court law. Welf. & Inst. Code § 275

Powers of probation officer to receive, deposit, and disburse money. Welf. & Inst. Code § 276

Probation officer as empowered to authorize sale of handiwork made by wards under jurisdiction of probation office. Welf. & Inst. Code § 277

Board of supervisors as authorized to delegate powers of probation officer to receive, deposit, and disburse to auditor or other county officer authorized by Welf. & Inst. Code § 276 and required by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1685-1687. Welf. & Inst. Code § 278

Board of supervisors as authorized to impose service charge at uniform rate sufficient to defray costs of services of probation officer or other officer designated to act as trustee. Welf. & Inst. Code § 279

Powers and duties of probation officers; preparation of social study. Welf. & Inst. Code § 280

Investigation by probation officer involving custody, status, or welfare of minor. Welf. & Inst. Code § 281

Every probation officer, assistant probation officer, and deputy probation officer as having the powers and authority conferred by law upon peace officers listed in Penal Code § 830.5. Welf. & Inst. Code § 283

All probation officers as required to make such special and periodic reports to Department of Youth Authority as authority may require and upon forms furnished by authority. Welf. & Inst. Code § 284

All probation officers as required to make periodic reports to Bureau of Criminal Statistics on forms as bureau may require, provided that no names or social security numbers are transmitted regarding Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 300 and 601 proceedings. Welf. & Inst. Code § 285

[2] Attorney General Opinions

County probation officer as under no duty to make child abuse report when he or she knows or reasonably suspects that juvenile suffered nonaccidental physical injury at hands of police in course of arrest, unless probation officer knows or reasonably suspects that force used by police was not reasonably necessary to effect arrest, prevent escape, or overcome juvenile's resistance. 70 Ops. Cal. Atty. Gen. 38 (1987)

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Criminal Law & ProcedureJuvenile OffendersJuvenile ProceedingsGeneral OverviewFamily LawDelinquency & DependencyDelinquency ProceedingsFamily LawDelinquency & DependencyDependency ProceedingsFamily LawFamily Protection & WelfareChildrenServicesPublic Health & Welfare LawSocial ServicesNative Americans

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 327 JUVENILE COURTS: JURISDICTION AND GENERAL PROCEDURES
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
B. Statutes, Decisions, and Other Primary Authority
2. Juvenile Court Judges and Other Key Personnel

28-327 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 327.72

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser and Hon. Kurt Kumli Editorial Consultants Janice M. Brickley Former Contributor

§ 327.72 Child Welfare Workers

[1] State Statutes

Board of supervisors as authorized to delegate to county welfare department all or part of duties of probation officer. Welf. & Inst. Code § 272(a)

Board as delegating to county welfare department probation officer's right of access to state summary criminal history information, when necessary to carry out duties concerning children reasonably believed to be dependents. Welf. & Inst. Code § 272(b).

Social workers as authorized to take child into temporary custody pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 306, whether or not county has delegated duties of probation officers to county welfare department. Welf. & Inst. Code § 272(c).

Indian social workers of tribe which has entered into agreement with State Department of Social Services pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 10553.1 concerning child welfare services or foster care payments as being able to be delegated probation officer's right of access to state summary criminal history information when necessary to carry out duties concerning children reasonably believed to be dependents. Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 215, 272(a)(2)

Indian social workers of tribe which has entered into agreement with State Department of Social Services pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 10553.1 concerning child welfare services or foster care payments as being able to be take child into temporary custody pursuant to Welf & Inst. Code § 306, whether or not county has delegated duties of probation officers to county welfare department. Welf. & Inst. Code § 272(c)

[2] Decisions

Social worker in dependency proceedings serves a hybrid role, exercising both judicial and executive functions. In re Ashley M. (2003) 114 Cal. App. 4th 1, 7, 7 Cal. Rptr. 3d 237

Social worker in dependency proceedings is both a party and more than a party. San Diego County Dep't of Social Servs. v. Superior Court (1996) 13 Cal. 4th 882, 891, fn. 4, 55 Cal. Rptr. 2d 396, 919 P.2d 1329

Social worker in dependency proceedings serves as an arm of the court in the writing of reports. In re Malinda S. (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 368, 376-377, 272 Cal. Rptr. 787, 795 P.2d 1244

Social worker in dependency proceedings serves as an arm of the court in the supervision of visitation. In re Danielle W. (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 1227, 1235, 255 Cal. Rptr. 344

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawDelinquency & DependencyDependency ProceedingsFamily LawDelinquency & DependencyFoster CareFamily LawFamily Protection & WelfareChildrenServicesPublic Health & Welfare LawSocial ServicesNative Americans

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 327 JUVENILE COURTS: JURISDICTION AND GENERAL PROCEDURES
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
B. Statutes, Decisions, and Other Primary Authority
2. Juvenile Court Judges and Other Key Personnel

28-327 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 327.73

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser and Hon. Kurt Kumli Editorial Consultants Janice M. Brickley Former Contributor

§ 327.73 Appointed Counsel

[1] State Statutes

Compensation for private appointed counsel. Welf. & Inst. Code § 218

Appointment of counsel for parents, guardians and children in dependency cases. Welf. & Inst. Code § 317

Parties in dependency proceedings who are represented by counsel are entitled to competent counsel. Welf. & Inst. Code § 317.5

[2] Decisions

"Necessary expenses" allowed to appointed counsel under Welf. & Inst. Code § 218 as including reasonable sums for investigative services. Johnny S. v. Superior Court (1979) 90 Cal. App. 3d 826, 828, 153 Cal. Rptr. 550

In those counties in which there is public defender, appointment and compensation of private counsel for persons financially unable to employ counsel only after public defender has refused to represent them. In re J. G. L. (1974) 43 Cal. App. 3d 447, 452-453, 117 Cal. Rptr. 799

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureCounselAppointmentsCriminal Law & ProcedureJuvenile OffendersJuvenile ProceedingsGeneral

OverviewCriminal Law & ProcedureCounselAssignmentFamily LawDelinquency & DependencyDelinquency ProceedingsFamily LawDelinquency & DependencyDependency Proceedings

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 327 JUVENILE COURTS: JURISDICTION AND GENERAL PROCEDURES
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
B. Statutes, Decisions, and Other Primary Authority
2. Juvenile Court Judges and Other Key Personnel

28-327 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 327.74

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser and Hon. Kurt Kumli Editorial Consultants Janice M. Brickley Former Contributor

§ 327.74 Psychotherapeutic Professionals

Employment by probation officer of such psychiatrists, psychologists, and other clinical experts as are required to assist in determining appropriate treatment of minors within jurisdiction of juvenile court and in implementation of such treatment. Welf. & Inst. Code § 273

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawDelinquency & DependencyDelinquency ProceedingsFamily LawDelinquency & DependencyDependency Proceedings

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 327 JUVENILE COURTS: JURISDICTION AND GENERAL PROCEDURES
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
B. Statutes, Decisions, and Other Primary Authority
2. Juvenile Court Judges and Other Key Personnel

28-327 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 327.75

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser and Hon. Kurt Kumli Editorial Consultants Janice M. Brickley Former Contributor

§ 327.75 Juvenile Court System Commissions and Committees

Establishment of county juvenile justice commission. Welf. & Inst. Code § 225

Establishment of regional juvenile justice commission. Welf. & Inst. Code § 226

Qualifications of county or regional juvenile justice commission members. Welf. & Inst. Code § 227

Duties of juvenile justice commission as including inquiry into the administration of juvenile court law in county or region in which commission serves. Welf. & Inst. Code § 229

Juvenile justice commission as inquiring into nonconfidential aspects of administration of group homes receiving placements by juvenile court order, and as reporting thereon to State Department of Social Service, presiding judge of juvenile court, and chief probation officer. Welf. & Inst. Code § 229.5

Board of supervisors as able by ordinance to provide for establishment support and maintenance of one or more agencies or departments to cooperate with and assist in coordinating on countywide basis work of community agencies engaged in activities designed to prevent juvenile and adult delinquency. Welf. & Inst. Code § 232

Establishment of delinquency prevention commission. Welf. & Inst. Code § 233

Establishment of delinquency prevention agency or department. Welf. & Inst. Code § 234

Establishment of public councils or committees on prevention of juvenile delinquency. Welf. & Inst. Code § 235

Establishment of probation commission in counties having population in excess of 6 million in lieu of county juvenile justice commission to function in advisory capacity to probation officer. Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 240-243

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Criminal Law & ProcedureJuvenile OffendersJuvenile ProceedingsGeneral OverviewFamily LawDelinquency & DependencyDelinquency ProceedingsFamily LawDelinquency & DependencyDependency ProceedingsGovernmentsLocal GovernmentsAdministrative Boards

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 327 JUVENILE COURTS: JURISDICTION AND GENERAL PROCEDURES
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
B. Statutes, Decisions, and Other Primary Authority
2. Juvenile Court Judges and Other Key Personnel

28-327 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 327.76-327.79

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser and Hon. Kurt Kumli Editorial Consultants Janice M. Brickley Former Contributor

[Reserved]

§§ 327.76[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 327 JUVENILE COURTS: JURISDICTION AND GENERAL PROCEDURES
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
B. Statutes, Decisions, and Other Primary Authority
3. General Juvenile Court Procedures

28-327 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 327.80

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser and Hon. Kurt Kumli Editorial Consultants Janice M. Brickley Former Contributor

§ 327.80 State Statutes

Prosecuting witness as entitled, for support, to attendance of up to two family members of own choosing at any juvenile court proceeding involving violation of certain offenses. Penal Code § 868.5(a); Welf. & Inst. Code § 676(a)

Transmittal by Department of Justice of information relating to arrest or custody of minor. Welf. & Inst. Code § 204

Costs and fees for filing and serving papers in juvenile court. Welf. & Inst. Code § 212

Participation of prosecuting attorney. Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 318.5, 681

Requirement that all juvenile court proceedings be heard at special or separate session of court. Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 345, 675

Persons entitled to be present at proceedings. Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 345, 679

Exclusion of general public from proceedings. Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 346, 676

Role of court reporter in proceedings. Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 347, 677

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Criminal Law & ProcedureJuvenile OffendersJuvenile ProceedingsGeneral OverviewFamily LawDelinquency &

DependencyDelinquency ProceedingsFamily LawDelinquency & DependencyDependency Proceedings

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 327 JUVENILE COURTS: JURISDICTION AND GENERAL PROCEDURES
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
B. Statutes, Decisions, and Other Primary Authority
3. General Juvenile Court Procedures

28-327 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 327.81

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser and Hon. Kurt Kumli Editorial Consultants Janice M. Brickley Former Contributor

§ 327.81 California Rules of Court

Applicability of juvenile court rules. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.501(a)

Authority and purpose of rules. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.501(b)

Rules of construction governing rules. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.501(c)

Definitions and construction of terms included in rules. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.502

Contents of notice of hearings. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.524

Persons entitled to notice of hearing. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.524(e)

Service of notice. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.524(f)

Waiver of service. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.524(g)

Service on minor's attorney as constituting service on minor's parent or guardian in proceedings under Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 601 and 602. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.524(f)

Notice as permitted to be oral and as required to be oral if parent does not read. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.524(h)

Persons entitled to be present at juvenile court proceedings. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.530

Use of court reporter; cost and preparation of transcripts. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.532

Conduct of proceedings. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.534

Discovery policies and procedures. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.546

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProceduresPleading & PracticeService of ProcessGeneral OverviewCriminal Law & ProcedureJuvenile OffendersJuvenile ProceedingsGeneral OverviewFamily LawDelinquency & DependencyDelinquency ProceedingsFamily LawDelinquency & DependencyDependency ProceedingsGovernmentsCourtsRule Application & Interpretation

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 327 JUVENILE COURTS: JURISDICTION AND GENERAL PROCEDURES
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
B. Statutes, Decisions, and Other Primary Authority
3. General Juvenile Court Procedures

28-327 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 327.82-327.89

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser and Hon. Kurt Kumli Editorial Consultants Janice M. Brickley Former Contributor

[Reserved]

§§ 327.82[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 327 JUVENILE COURTS: JURISDICTION AND GENERAL PROCEDURES
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
B. Statutes, Decisions, and Other Primary Authority
4. General Policies Regarding Placement and Support

28-327 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 327.90

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser and Hon. Kurt Kumli Editorial Consultants Janice M. Brickley Former Contributor

§ 327.90 State Statutes

Liability of parent, parent's estate, and minor's estate to county for costs of care of minor in county institution. Welf. & Inst. Code § 903

Court-ordered parental reimbursement for support of juveniles in out-of-home placement. Welf. & Inst. Code § 903.4

Designation of county officer to make financial evaluations of parental liability for costs. Welf. & Inst. Code § 903.45

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawDelinquency & DependencyDelinquency ProceedingsFamily LawDelinquency & DependencyDependency ProceedingsFamily LawDelinquency & DependencyFoster CareFamily LawParental Duties & RightsDutiesSupport of Children

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 327 JUVENILE COURTS: JURISDICTION AND GENERAL PROCEDURES
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
B. Statutes, Decisions, and Other Primary Authority
4. General Policies Regarding Placement and Support

28-327 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 327.91

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser and Hon. Kurt Kumli Editorial Consultants Janice M. Brickley Former Contributor

§ 327.91 Attorney General Opinions

Person with felony conviction as disqualified from holding job that requires having custody of ward in institution operated by probation department in general law county pursuant to Penal Code § 830.5. 65 Ops. Cal. Atty. Gen. 95 (1982)

Each California county as required to operate its own juvenile hall, either solely or jointly with another county, but county may not contract with another county for use of its county jail to secure detention of minors; county as not permitted to place minors described in Welf. & Inst. Code § 602 in out-of-state juvenile halls pending adjudication and disposition hearing in California. 63 Ops. Cal. Atty. Gen. 361 (1980)

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Criminal Law & ProcedureJuvenile OffendersJuvenile ProceedingsGeneral OverviewFamily LawDelinquency & DependencyDelinquency ProceedingsFamily LawDelinquency & DependencyDependency ProceedingsFamily LawDelinquency & DependencyWards of Court

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 327 JUVENILE COURTS: JURISDICTION AND GENERAL PROCEDURES
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
B. Statutes, Decisions, and Other Primary Authority
4. General Policies Regarding Placement and Support

28-327 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 327.92-327.149

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser and Hon. Kurt Kumli Editorial Consultants Janice M. Brickley Former Contributor

[Reserved]

§§ 327.92[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 327 JUVENILE COURTS: JURISDICTION AND GENERAL PROCEDURES
PART IV. FORMS

28-327 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 327.150

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser and Hon. Kurt Kumli Editorial Consultants Janice M. Brickley Former Contributor

§ 327.150 Application to Commence Proceedings by Affidavit and Decision by Social Worker [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 329, 653, 653.5]--Judicial Council Form JV-210

[1] FORM Application to Commence Proceedings by Affidavit and Decision by Social Worker [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 329, 653, 653.5]--Judicial Council Form JV-210

Click here to view image.

[2] Use of Form

This form is the Judicial Council form used to commence juvenile court proceedings generally, including either dependency proceedings discussed in Ch. 328, Juvenile Courts: Dependency Proceedings, § 328.40 et seq., or delinquency proceedings discussed in Ch. 329, Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings, § 329.30 et seq.

Whenever any person applies to the social worker, probation officer, or district attorney to commence proceedings in the juvenile court, the application must be in the form of an affidavit (or declaration under Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5) alleging that there was or is within the county, or residing within the county, a minor within the jurisdiction of the juvenile court to declare such minor a dependent child or ward of the court and setting forth facts in support of such allegations [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 329, 653, 653.5; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.520(c); see Welf. & Inst. Code § 601.3 (initiation of wardship proceedings by district attorney for truancy)].

This form is available in an interactive, electronic format in LexisNexis[(R)] Automated California Judicial Council Forms, which may be accessed at www.lexisone.com for an individual or monthly charge. A noninteractive version in PDF format also is available at www.lexisone.com at no charge.

[3] Obligations of Social Worker or Probation Officer in Response to Declaration

On receipt of an application for the commencement of juvenile proceedings, the social worker, probation officer, or district attorney in consultation with the probation officer must immediately make such investigation as is necessary to determine whether proceedings should be instituted [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 329, 653].

In the case of an allegation that the minor falls within the jurisdiction of the juvenile court under Welf. & Inst. Code § 300 as a dependent child, if the social worker or probation officer does not institute a program of supervision under Welf. & Inst. Code § 301 and does not file a petition in juvenile court to commence proceedings within three weeks after the application, the social worker or probation officer must endorse the declaration of the applicant with his or her decision not to proceed further and the reasons therefor. The probation officer must also immediately notify the applicant of the action taken or the decision rendered [Welf. & Inst. Code § 329; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.520(c)]. The probation officer must retain the declaration and the endorsement thereon for a period of 30 days after notice to the applicant [Welf. & Inst. Code § 329]. See also discussion in Ch. 328, Juvenile Courts: Dependency Proceedings, §§ 328.44, 328.45.

If the probation officer determines that a petition to commence a delinquency proceedings should be filed, to declare the minor a ward under Welf. & Inst. Code § 602, he or she must forward the declaration to the prosecuting attorney who must then institute proceedings within his or her discretionary power [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 653.1, 653.5; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.520(c)].

If a statutorily specified serious offense is alleged, the probation officer must take the affidavit (or declaration under Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5) to the prosecuting attorney within 48 hours [see Welf. & Inst. Code § 653.5(a)]. In other cases, the probation officer has discretion to forward the affidavit (or declaration), or to instead place the minor on informal supervision [see Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 654-654.4]. See generally discussion in Ch. 328, Juvenile Courts: Dependency Proceedings, § 328.40 et seq.

[4] Situations in Which Minor May Be Both Dependent and Ward

Both statutory and decisional law make it clear a minor cannot be adjudicated both a delinquent and a dependent child of the juvenile court at the same time Welf. & Inst. Code § 241.1; In re Marcus G. (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 1008, 1012, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 84] . If it appears that the minor falls within juvenile court jurisdiction as both a dependent child and as a ward of the court, before any petition is filed, the probation department and the welfare department are required to determine initially whether the petition that is filed should allege jurisdiction under Welf. & Inst. Code § 300 (dependency) or under Welf. & Inst. Code § 601 or 602 (wardship).

The departments must follow the guidelines of a jointly developed written protocol specifying the various factors to be considered. Recommendations of both departments will be presented to the juvenile court with the petition that is filed on behalf of the minor, and the court will determine which status is appropriate for the minor [Welf. & Inst. Code § 241.1(a); see In re Marcus G. (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 1008, 1012-1015, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 84 ; In re Donald S. (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 134, 138, 253 Cal. Rptr. 274 ; see also discussion in § 327.11[3]].

Effective January 1, 2005, some counties may choose to develop a protocol that will allow a child to be designated a dual jurisdiction minor [Welf. & Inst. Code § 241.1(e); see also discussion in § 327.11[3][f].

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 327 JUVENILE COURTS: JURISDICTION AND GENERAL PROCEDURES
PART IV. FORMS

28-327 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 327.151

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser and Hon. Kurt Kumli Editorial Consultants Janice M. Brickley Former Contributor

§ 327.151 Application to Review Decision by Social Worker Not to Commence Proceedings [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 331, 655]--Judicial Council Form JV-215

[1] FORM Application to Review Decision by Social Worker Not to Commence Proceedings [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 331, 655]--Judicial Council Form JV-215

Click here to view image.

[2] Use of Form

This form is the Judicial Council form used to seek review by the juvenile court of a decision by the social worker, probation officer, or district attorney not to file an application to commence juvenile court proceedings, following the filing of a declaration seeking such application (see form and discussion in § 327.150). It may be used either in the context of an application to commence a dependency proceeding discussed in Ch. 328, Juvenile Courts: Dependency Proceedings, § 328.40 et seq., or a delinquency proceedings discussed in Ch. 329, Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings, § 329.30 et seq.

This form is available in an interactive, electronic format in LexisNexis[(R)] Automated California Judicial Council Forms, which may be accessed at www.lexisone.com for an individual or monthly charge. A noninteractive version in PDF format also is available at www.lexisone.com at no charge.

[3] Review of Decision Not to Commence Juvenile Court Proceedings

If any person has applied to the probation officer or social services department to commence dependency proceedings under Welf. & Inst. Code § 300, and the social worker or probation officer fails to file a petition within three weeks after the application, that person may, within one month after making the application, apply to the juvenile court to review the decision of the social services department. The court may then either affirm the decision of the social services department or order the department to commence juvenile court proceedings [Welf. & Inst. Code § 331; see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.520(c)].

If any person has applied to the probation officer or the district attorney, to commence juvenile court delinquency proceedings under Welf. & Inst. Code § 601 or 602, and the probation officer or the district attorney fails to file a petition within 21 court days after the application is made, that person may, within 10 court days of receiving notice of the probation officer's or the district attorney's decision not to file a petition, apply to the juvenile court to review the decision of the probation officer or the district attorney. The court may then either affirm the decision or order the probation officer or district attorney to commence juvenile court proceedings [Welf. & Inst. Code § 655; see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.520(c)].

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 327 JUVENILE COURTS: JURISDICTION AND GENERAL PROCEDURES
PART IV. FORMS

28-327 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 327.152-327.159

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser and Hon. Kurt Kumli Editorial Consultants Janice M. Brickley Former Contributor

[Reserved]

§§ 327.152[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 327 JUVENILE COURTS: JURISDICTION AND GENERAL PROCEDURES
PART IV. FORMS

28-327 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 327.160

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser and Hon. Kurt Kumli Editorial Consultants Janice M. Brickley Former Contributor

§ 327.160 Order to Transfer Juvenile Court Proceedings [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 375, 750; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.610]--Judicial Council Form JV-550

[1] FORM Order to Transfer Juvenile Court Proceedings [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 375, 750; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1425]--Judicial Council Form JV-550

Click here to view image.

[2] Use of Form

This form is the Judicial Council order to transfer juvenile court proceedings to the county of a minor's residence [see Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 375, 750; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.610]. The Spanish version of the form is JV-550S.

Use of the form is mandatory [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1.31]. This form is available in an interactive, electronic format in LexisNexis[(R)] Automated California Judicial Council Forms, which may be accessed at www.lexisone.com for an individual or monthly charge. A noninteractive version in PDF format also is available at www.lexisone.com at no charge.

[3] Transfer-Out Hearing

If a juvenile court petition is filed in a county other than that of the minor's residence or if the minor changes his or her residence after the petition was filed, the juvenile court may, after making its jurisdictional findings, transfer the case to the county in which the minor actually resides [see Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 375, 750; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.610(c)].

The minor's "residence" is the residence of the person who has the legal right to custody of the minor according to prior court order, including (1) a juvenile court order under Welf. & Inst. Code § 361.2 (authority for juvenile court to make a juvenile court custody order awarding custody to previously noncustodial parent) and (2) an order appointing a guardian of the person of the minor [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.610(a)]. The court may transfer the case either before or after the disposition hearing in a dependency proceeding [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.610(c)]. In a delinquency proceeding, if the court determines to transfer the case it must do so before the disposition hearing [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.610]. However, the court must not order the transfer in either type of case unless it first determines the transfer will protect or further the best interests of the child [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.610(e)].

[4] Contents of Order

The order of transfer must be entered on the Judicial Council form, which must include all required information and findings [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.610(f)].

[5] Transport of Child in Custody

The court may order the child, while in custody, to be transported to the receiving county. In that event, the child must be delivered to the receiving county within seven court days [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.610(h)].

[6] Transmittal of Papers

Generally, all papers contained in the file must be transferred to the receiving court [see Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 377, 752]. If the minor is ordered transported to the receiving county in custody, the clerk of the court of the transferring county must prepare all papers contained in the files so that they may be transported with the minor to the court of the receiving county. If the minor is not ordered to be transported in custody, the clerk of the court of the transferring county must transmit to the clerk of the court of the receiving county within 10 days all papers contained in the files. Certified copies are deemed to be originals [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.610(h)]. The transferring county must keep in its file copies of the transfer order and the court's jurisdictional findings of fact [see Welf. & Inst. Code § 377].

[7] Cross References

For further discussion relating to the transfer of juvenile court proceedings, see § 327.12[3]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 327 JUVENILE COURTS: JURISDICTION AND GENERAL PROCEDURES
PART IV. FORMS

28-327 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 327.161

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser and Hon. Kurt Kumli Editorial Consultants Janice M. Brickley Former Contributor

[Reserved]

§ 327.161[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 327 JUVENILE COURTS: JURISDICTION AND GENERAL PROCEDURES
PART IV. FORMS

28-327 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 327.162

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser and Hon. Kurt Kumli Editorial Consultants Janice M. Brickley Former Contributor

§ 327.162 Petition for Disclosure of Juvenile Court Records [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 827, 828; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 5.504, 5.552]--Judicial Council Form JV-570

[1] FORM Petition for Disclosure of Juvenile Court Records [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 827, 828; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 1402, 1423]--Judicial Council Form JV-570

Click here to view image.

[2] Use of Form

This Judicial Council form is the petition for disclosure of juvenile court records. This form has been adopted for mandatory use [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 1.31, 5.504(a)]. It may be produced by a word-processor printer or similar process, or may be produced by the Child Welfare Services Case Management System [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.504(b)].

This form is available in an interactive, electronic format in LexisNexis[(R)] Automated California Judicial Council Forms, which may be accessed at www.lexisone.com for an individual or monthly charge. A noninteractive version in PDF format also is available at www.lexisone.com at no charge.

The form must be filed by any person who desires access to the records but who is not authorized by statute to such access [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.552(c); see Welf. & Inst. Code § 827 et seq.]. The petition must identify the specific records sought to be inspected or obtained, based on knowledge, information, and belief that the requested records exist and are relevant to the purpose for which they are sought. In addition, the petition must "describe in detail" the reasons the records are being sought and the relevance to the proceeding or purpose for which they are sought [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.552(c)]. The sample here does not include the attached pages on which the details supporting the request would be set forth.

Juvenile court records, police reports, and detention records are confidential, and access to them is available only to the following [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.552(b)]:

- Court personnel [Welf. & Inst. Code § 827(a)(1)(A)].

- The district attorney, a city attorney or city prosecutor authorized to prosecute criminal or juvenile cases under state law [Welf. & Inst. Code § 827(a)(1)(B)].

- The minor who is the subject of the proceeding [Welf. & Inst. Code § 827(a)(1)(C)].

- The minor's parents or guardian [Welf. & Inst. Code § 827(a)(1)(D)].

- Attorneys for the foregoing parties in the juvenile court proceeding, including appellate attorneys for appeals of the juvenile court proceedings [Welf. & Inst. Code § 827(a)(1)(E); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.552(b)(1)(A); see Lorenza P. v. Superior Court (1988) 197 Cal. App. 3d 607, 611, 242 Cal. Rptr. 877]
.

- Judicial officers, law enforcement officers, and probation officers involved in criminal or juvenile proceedings involving the minor [Welf. & Inst. Code § 827(a)(1)(E)].

- The county counsel, city attorney or any other attorney representing the social services agency filing the petition in the dependency action [Welf. & Inst. Code § 827(a)(1)(F)].

- The superintendent or a designee of the school district where the minor is enrolled or attending school [Welf. & Inst. Code § 827(a)(1)(G)].

- Child protective agencies [Welf. & Inst. Code § 827(a)(1)(H)].

- The State Department of Social Services to carry out its duty to oversee county social services agencies, children in foster care or receiving foster care assistance, and children in out-of-state placements [Welf. & Inst. Code § 827(a)(1)(I)].

- Legal staff or special investigators who are peace officers employed by or serving as an authorized representative of the State Department of Social Services as necessary to inspect, license, and investigate community care facilities [Welf. & Inst. Code § 827(a)(1)(J)].

- Members of children's multidisciplinary teams [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 827(a)(1)(K), 830].

- Persons or agencies providing treatment or supervision of the minor [Welf. & Inst. Code § 827(a)(1)(K)].

- A judge, family court mediator, court-appointed evaluator or person conducting a count connected child custody evaluation, investigation, or assessment pursuant to Fam. Code §§ 3111, 3118, and counsel appointed for the child in the family law case [Welf. & Inst. Code § 827(a)(1)(L)].

- A court-appointed investigator who is actively participating in a guardianship case involving a minor pursuant to Prob. Code § 1500 and acting within the scope of the investigator's duties in that case [Welf. & Inst. Code § 827(a)(1)(M)].

- A local child support agency for the purpose of establishing paternity and establishing and enforcing child support orders [Welf. & Inst. Code § 827(a)(1)(N)].

- Juvenile justice commissions [Welf. & Inst. Code § 827(a)(1)(O)].

- Other law enforcement agencies and other persons and agencies that have a "legitimate need for the information for purposes of official disposition of a case" [Welf. & Inst. Code § 828].

- Board of Prison terms if the records have not been sealed, concern the person before the board, and relate to a case in which the person was found to come under the juvenile court's jurisdiction pursuant as a delinquent [Welf. & Inst. Code § 829].

- Any other persons who may be designated by order of the judge of the juvenile court on filing a petition for inspection [Welf. & Inst. Code § 827(a)(1)(P)].

- Individuals listed in Welf. & Inst. Code § 827(a)(1)(A), (B), (C), (D), (E), (F), (H), and (I) may also receive copies of the case file, but the confidentiality requirements of Welf. & Inst. Code § 827(a)(4) still apply [Welf. & Inst. Code § 827(a)(5)].

Juvenile court records that must be sought through this petition include the following [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.552(a)]:

- All documents filed in a juvenile court case.

- Reports to, and documents made available to, the court by probation officers, social workers of child welfare services programs, and court-appointed special advocates.

- Documents that relate to a child for whom a petition has been filed in juvenile court and that are maintained in the office files of these officers, workers, or advocates.

- Transcripts, records, or reports that relate to matters prepared or released by the court, probation department, or child welfare services program.

- Documents, video or audio tapes, photographs, and exhibits admitted into evidence at juvenile court hearings.

- Documents made available to probation officers, social workers of child welfare service programs and court-appointed special advocates in preparation of reports to the court.

[3] Service of Petition

Before the petition is submitted to the juvenile court, the petitioner must serve or attempt to serve a copy of it personally or by first-class mail using Judicial Council form JV-571, Notice of Request for Disclosure of Juvenile Case File. Service must be made at least five days before filing with the court. A copy of the petition must be served on county counsel, the district attorney, the child, the attorney of record for a child who remains a ward or dependent of the court, the parent or guardian for a child who is under age 18 or was the subject of a dependency petition, and either, or both if applicable, the probation department or child welfare services agency [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.552(d)]. An objection may be filed by any of these persons using Judicial Council form JV-572, Objection to Release of Juvenile Case File.

[4] Hearing on Petition

The court will review the petition and will summarily grant or deny it or will set a hearing. The clerk must give all parties notice of the hearing. At the hearing, if the court determines that the petitioner may be entitled to disclosure of any information or documents, the court must review the records in camera, with the assumption that all legal claims of privilege are asserted. Thereafter, if the court determines that all or part of the records may be disclosed, the court must make appropriate orders that specify the information to be disclosed and the procedure for providing access to it [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.552(e)].

For further discussion of the hearing procedure, including grounds that must be asserted, notice, and the in camera procedure, see § 327.34[2][b].

[5] Cross References

For further discussion relating to disclosure of juvenile court records, see § 327.64

For discussion relating to disclosure and sealing of juvenile court records of dependency proceedings, see Ch. 328, Juvenile Courts: Dependency Proceedings, §§ 328.109[14], 328.182

For discussion relating to sealing of juvenile court records of delinquency or wardship proceedings, see Ch. 329, Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings, § 329.117

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329

CHAPTER 328 JUVENILE COURTS: DEPENDENCY PROCEEDINGS

28-328 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated 328.syn

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser Editorial Consultant John P. Passalacqua Contributing Author Jennifer Kaye Williams Contributing Author

§ 328.syn Synopsis to Chapter 328: JUVENILE COURTS: DEPENDENCY PROCEEDINGS

§ 328.01 Scope

§ 328.02 Cross References

§ 328.03 Terminology: "Probation Officer," "Social Worker," and "Indian Social Worker" Distinguished

§§ 328.04-328.09 [Reserved]

§ 328.10 Governing Law and Nature of Proceedings

[1] Governing Law

[2] Nature of Dependency Proceedings

[3] Informal and Nonadversary Atmosphere

§ 328.11 Goals of Dependency Proceedings

[1] To Protect the Child

[2] To Preserve the Family

[3] To Provide a Stable, Permanent Home in a Timely Manner

[4] The Best Interest of the Child

[5] The Future Goal of the Dependency System

§ 328.12 Development of Dependency Proceedings

[1] 1980 Federal Standards: Public Law 96-272

[2] 1982 California Compliance: Senate Bill 14

[3] 1986 California Task Force: SB 1195

[4] 1987 California Reform: Senate Bill 243

[5] Evolutionary Change

[6] Eliminating Delays and Denials of Placements for Cultural and Racial Reasons

[7] Confidentiality of Addresses as Means of Protection

[8] Family Violence

[9] Concurrent Services Planning and Related Changes

§ 328.13 Summary of Initiation of Dependency Proceedings

[1] Removal of Child

[2] Summary of the Initial or Detention Hearing

§ 328.14 Summary of the Jurisdiction Hearing

§ 328.15 Summary of Disposition Hearing

§ 328.16 Summary of Review and Permanency Hearings

§ 328.17 Summary of Supplemental, Subsequent, and Modification Petitions

§ 328.18 Non-Statutory Hearings

§ 328.19 Summary of Procedure for Determining an Alternative Permanent Plan

§ 328.20 Summary of Appeal of Findings and Order

§§ 328.21-328.29 [Reserved]

§ 328.30 Temporary Custody by Peace Officer

[1] Grounds

[2] Alternative Courses of Action

[3] Notice to Parents

[a] Regarding Procedural Rights and Custody of Child

[b] Regarding Location of Child

[4] Referral to Community Service Agency

[5] Release of Child by Day-Care Facility

[6] Confinement Limits on Detention in Facility for Dependent Children

§ 328.31 Initial Investigation by Social Worker

[1] When Duty to Investigate Arises

[2] Temporary Custody of Child

[a] Social Worker's Authority

[b] Factors to be Considered

[c] Notice to Parents

[d] Placement with Siblings and Half-Siblings

[3] Requirement That Child Over Three Be Interviewed

[4] Requirements for Continued Custody

[5] Temporary Custody for Medical Care

[6] Physical Examination by Medical Specialist

[7] Written Promise to Appear as Condition of Release

[8] Assessment of Available Relatives and "Nonrelative Extended Family Members"

§ 328.32 Search Warrants in Child Welfare Investigations

§ 328.33 Right of Older Children to Communicate With Parents or Guardians and Attorney

§ 328.34 Time Limits on Temporary Custody

[1] Requirement to File Petition or Release

[2] Relief by Writ of Habeas Corpus

[3] Written Explanation of Detention Over Six Hours

[4] Effect on Time Limits When Child Misrepresents Own Age

§ 328.35 Application to Commence Juvenile Court Proceeding

[1] Contents and Forms of Application

[2] Social Worker's Duty to Investigate Application

[3] Social Worker's Refusal to Take Action

[a] Explanation by Social Worker Required

[b] Review of Social Worker's Refusal

§ 328.36 Alternative to Filing Petition

[1] Informal Supervision

[2] Required Factors

§ 328.37 Petition for Dependency Filed by Social Worker

[1] When Child Detained

[2] When Child Not Detained

[3] Contents of Petition

[4] Use of Judicial Council Forms

[5] Verification of Petition

[6] Setting the Petition for Hearing

[7] Variance and Amendment of Pleadings

§ 328.38-328.39 [Reserved]

§ 328.40 Initial or Detention Hearing

[1] Purpose

[2] Time Limits on Detention

[3] Service and Notice Requirements

[a] In General

[b] Notice as Jurisdictional Requirement

[4] Time Limitations on Hearing

[a] In General

[b] Continuance of Hearing

§ 328.41 Explanation, Inquiry, and Action Required by Court

[1] Concerning the Nature of the Proceedings

[2] Concerning the Right to Counsel

[3] Concerning Parent or Guardian's Permanent Mailing Address

[4] Concerning Parentage of the Child

[5] Concerning Child's Health and Education

[6] Concerning Possible Indian Heritage

§ 328.42 Response by Parent or Guardian

[1] Motion of Objection Akin to Demurrer

[2] Admission, No Contest Plea, or Submission

§ 328.43 Conduct of Initial or Detention Hearing

[1] Attention to Rights of Child and Parent or Guardian

[2] Examination of Parties and Evidence

[3] Social Worker's Detention Report

[4] Evidence Presented at Hearing

[5] Grounds for Continued Detention

[6] Order to Release or Detain Child

[7] Required Finding of Reasonable Efforts to Avoid Removal

§ 328.44 Orders Concerning Reunification Services and Visitation

§ 328.45 Rehearing of Detention Hearing

[1] When Report Preparers Are Available

[2] When Parent or Guardian Was Not Notified of Hearing

[3] On Request for Further Evidence (Prima Facie Rehearing)

§ 328.46 Meeting Mental Health Needs of Dependent Child

[1] Appointment of Psychotherapist

[2] Specialized Treatment

[3] Placement in Psychopathic Ward

[4] Orders for Psychotropic Medications

§ 328.47 Restraining Orders

[1] During Dependency Proceedings

[2] On Termination of Dependency Jurisdiction

[3] To Restrain Threats to a Social Worker

§ 328.48 Order to Appear Before Court or Social Worker

§§ 328.49-328.59 [Reserved]

§ 328.60 Rights of Parents and Guardians

[1] Fundamental Right of Parent

[2] "Parent" Defined

[a] In General

[b] Presumed Parents

[c] The Non-Biological Presumed Father

[d] The Non-Biological Presumed Mother

[e] Parentage in Same Sex Cases

[3] Biological Fathers

[a] In General

[b] "Kelsey" Fathers

[c] "Mere Biological Fathers"

[4] Alleged Fathers

[5] Declarations of Paternity

[a] In General

[b] Requirements for a Valid Voluntary Declaration of Paternity

[c] Effect of Voluntary Declaration of Paternity

[d] Challenging a Voluntary Declaration of Paternity

[i] Methods of Challenge

[ii] Rescission of a Voluntary Declaration of Paternity

[iii] Setting Aside a Voluntary Declaration of Paternity Through Genetic Testing

[iv] Setting Aside a Voluntary Declaration of Paternity under Code of Civil Proc. § 473

[v] Courts acting as Courts of Equity in Determining Paternity Issues

[6] Parentage Proceedings in Dependency Cases

[7] Under What Circumstances is a Finding of "Unfitness" Required to Terminate Parental Rights?

[8] Right of Incarcerated Parents to Be Present

[9] Legal Guardians

§ 328.60A Rights of De Facto Parents

[1] "De Facto Parent" Defined

[2] De Facto Parent Status

[a] Burden of Proof and Standard of Review

[b] Factors Considered

[c] When the Applicant for De Facto Parent Status Has Abused or Endangered Child

[d] Terminating De Facto Parent Status

[3] Limited Rights of De Facto Parents

§ 328.61 Appointment of Counsel and Guardian ad Litem

[1] Counsel for Parent or Guardian

[2] Counsel for "De Facto Parent"

[3] Guardian ad Litem (GAL) for Parent or Guardian

[4] Guardian ad Litem (GAL) for Minor Parent

§ 328.62 Rights of Child

[1] Child as Party to Dependency Action

[2] Constitutional Right to Safe and Stable Life

[3] Appointment of Counsel for Child

[a] When Counsel Should Be Appointed

[b] Who Should Be Appointed and the Need for Separate Counsel

[i] Conflict of Interest May Bar Joint Representation

[ii] Conflicts Between Siblings

[A] In General

[B] Rule for Sibling Conflicts

[iii] Standing to Raise Conflict Issues

[iv] When District Attorney Represents Child

[c] Rights and Duties of Appointed Counsel for Child

[i] Overview

[ii] Representing Best Interest Versus Stated Interest

[A] The Best Interest Versus Stated Interest Controversy

[B] Guidance for Children's Counsel

[iii] Investigating Other Interests of the Child

[iv] Concerning the Child's Privileged Communications

[v] Serving as the Child's Guardian Ad Litem

[d] Relieving Children's Counsel

[e] Appointing Appellate Counsel for Children

[4] Rights of Children in Foster Care

[5] Children's Right to Be Present at Hearings

[6] Education for Children in the Dependency System

[a] Education Issues in General

[b] Educational Rights and Limitations

[c] Transfer and Enrollment (McKinney-Vento, A.B. 490, and California Rules of Court, Rule 5.651)

[d] Special Education

[i] In General

[ii] Individuals with Disabilities Education Improvement Act (IDEA)

[iii] Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973

[e] School Discipline

[i] In General

[ii] School Discipline for Children Eligible for Service Under IDEA

[iii] School Discipline for Children under Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973

[7] Extracurricular, Enrichment, and Social Activities

§ 328.63 The Social Worker and Social Services Agency

[1] Overview

[2] Counsel for the Social Services Agency

[3] Assignment and Removal of Social Workers

§ 328.64 Court-Appointed Special Advocate (CASA)

§ 328.65 Continued Representation by Appointed Counsel

§ 328.66 Guardian Ad Litem for the Child

§ 328.67 Caregivers

§§ 328.68-328.79 [Reserved]

§ 328.80 Scope of Dependency Jurisdiction

§ 328.81 Termination of Dependency Jurisdiction

§ 328.82 UCCJEA and Notice Under the Hague Convention

[1] Application of the UCCJEA to Juvenile Dependency Proceedings

[2] Prerequisites for UCCJEA Jurisdiction

[3] Temporary Emergency Jurisdiction to Issue Custody Orders

[4] Authority to Decline UCCJEA Jurisdiction

[5] Notice Under the Hague Convention

§ 328.83 Servicemembers' Civil Relief Act

§ 328.84 Grounds for Dependency Jurisdiction

[1] Welf. & Inst. Code § 300 in General

[2] Serious Physical Harm by Parent or Guardian [Section 300(a)]

[3] Failure to Adequately Supervise, Protect, or Provide for Child [Section 300(b)]

[4] Serious Emotional Damage [Section 300(c)]

[5] Sexual Abuse [Section 300(d)]

[6] Severe Physical Abuse of Young Child [Section 300(e)]

[7] Causing the Death of Another Child by Neglect or Abuse [Section 300(f)]

[8] Child Left Without Provision for Support or Voluntarily Surrendered [Section 300(g)]

[9] Child Freed for Adoption or Without Adoption Petition [Section 300(h)]

[10] Acts of Cruelty [Section 300(i)]

[11] Abuse or Neglect of Sibling [Section 300(j)]

[12] Independence of Each Jurisdictional Allegation

[13] Protection From Negative Effects of Substance Abuse

[14] Family Violence as Basis for Jurisdiction

§§ 328.85-328.99 [Reserved]

§ 328.100 Purpose of Hearing

§ 328.101 Time and Notice

[1] Nondetention Cases

[2] Detention Cases

[3] Calendar Preference

[4] Notice of Jurisdiction Hearing

§ 328.102 Effect of Failure to Commence Hearing Within Time Limits § 328.103 When Hearing May Be Continued

[1] In General

[2] Good Cause Requirement and Duration Limitation

[3] When Consent to Continuance Is Implied

[4] Continuance for Appointment of Counsel

§ 328.104 Commencement of Hearing

[1] Explanation of Petition

[2] Explanation of Right to Counsel

[3] Explanation Concerning Parent or Guardian's Mailing Address

[4] Advice by Court of Trial Rights

[5] If the Parent or Guardian Fails to Appear

§ 328.105 Admission, Plea of No Contest, and Submission

[1] Prerequisites to Acceptance of Admission or Plea of No Contest

[2] Required Findings on Acceptance of Admission, Plea of No Contest, or Submission

[3] Effect of Admission or Plea of No Contest

[4] Alternative to Admission or No Contest Plea: Submitting to Court's Jurisdictional Determination

§ 328.106 Contested Hearing on Petition

[1] Required When Allegations Are Denied

[2] Burden of Proof

[3] Allegations When Child in Custody of Only One Parent

§ 328.107 Findings Required by Court

[1] Findings Required When Petition Is Not True and When Dismissing Petition

[2] When Sustaining Petition

[3] Specificity Required

[4] No True Finding Until All Parents Addressed

§ 328.108 Continuance Pending Disposition

§ 328.109 Discovery

[1] Civil Discovery Rules Do Not Apply

[2] Prehearing Discovery Rules to Be Liberally Construed

[3] Petitioner's Affirmative Duty to Disclose

[4] Social Services Department's Required Disclosures on Request

[5] Parent's or Guardian's Required Disclosures on Request

[6] Motion for Prehearing Discovery

[7] Protective Orders

[8] Partial Disclosure

[9] Conditions of Discovery

[10] Sanctions for Failure to Comply With Discovery Order

[11] Continuing Duty to Disclose

[12] Access to Records

[13] Witness Lists

[14] Attorney Work Product Doctrine

[15] Discovery Under Welf. & Inst. Code § 827

§ 328.110 Evidentiary and Contested Hearing Issues

[1] In General

[2] Standard of Proof

[3] Admissibility of Social Worker's Report

[4] Inapplicability of Exclusionary Rule

[5] Evidence of Detriment as Distinguished From Parental "Unfitness"

[6] Certain Types of Injuries to Child as Prima Facie Evidence of Jurisdictional Grounds

[7] Admissibility of Proof of Abuse of Another Child

[8] Admissibility of Evidence of Past Events

[9] Inadmissibility of Testimony in Other Proceedings

[10] Inapplicability of Certain Privileges

[11] Objections Presumed on Behalf of Unrepresented Parent, Guardian, or Child

[12] Admissibility at Jurisdiction Hearing of Hearsay Statements in Social Study

[a] Background

[b] Current Law

[c] Children's Hearsay Statements in Social Studies

[d] Inapplicability of Crawford v. Washington

[13] Child Dependency Hearsay Exception

[14] Testimony of a Child

[a] No Corroboration Required

[b] Testimony by Child Outside the Parents' Presence

[c] Child Not Testifying

[d] Competency and the Requirement of an Oath

[e] Court's Inherent Authority to Fashion Safeguards

[f] Child's Preliminary Hearing Testimony

[15] Admissibility of Polygraph Evidence

[16] Relationship Study as Not Privileged

[17] Relitigation of Jurisdictional Allegations

[18] Failure to Object as Waiver or Forfeiture

[19] Offers of Proof

[20] Disentitlement Doctrine

[21] Social Workers as Experts

§ 328.111 Immunities and Protections Against Disclosure

[1] Immunity for Parents and Guardians

[2] Privilege Against Self-Incrimination

[3] Authority of Judge to Grant Immunity

[4] Request for Immunity in Dependency Proceeding

[5] No Immunity From Perjury or Contempt

[6] Order for Social Services Agency to File Report With Law Enforcement

[7] Immunity in State Court Civil Proceedings

§§ 328.112-328.119 [Reserved]

§ 328.120 Purpose and Time of Disposition Hearing

§ 328.121 Preparation and Contents of Social Study

[1] In General

[2] Child Welfare Services Case Plan

§ 328.122 Evidence and Standard of Proof

§ 328.123 Alternative Judgments of Court

[1] In General

[2] Informal Supervision

[3] Voluntary Guardianship

[4] Relinquishment

§ 328.124 Orders After Declaration of Dependency

[1] In General

[2] Orders Relating to Service Providers--Joinder

[3] Placement Issues Relating to Race, Color, or National Origin

§ 328.125 Indian Children

[1] In General

[2] Required Notice to Tribe and BIA

[a] Federal Law Regarding Notice

[b] California Law Regarding Notice

[3] Possible Overriding Principles

[a] Existing Indian Family Doctrine

[b] Child's Constitutional Rights

[4] Tribal Jurisdiction, Intervention, and Transfer

[a] In General

[i] Federally Recognized Tribes

[ii] Non-Federally Recognized Tribes

[b] Effect of Public Law 280

[i] In General

[ii] Indian Children Not Domiciled on the Reservation

[iii] Indian Children Residing or Domiciled on the Reservation

[5] Finding That Continued Custody Is Likely to Cause Serious Damage

[a] The Finding and When It Must Be Made

[b] Qualified Expert Witness

[i] Federal Law

[ii] California Law

[6] Finding of "Active Efforts"

[7] Denial of Services in ICWA Cases

[8] Placement Preferences

[9] Waiver of Right to Raise ICWA on Appeal

[10] Postadoption Contact for Tribes

[11] Tribal Customary Adoptions

§ 328.126 Order Limiting Control or Removing Custody From Parent

[1] Family Maintenance Cases

[a] Limiting Parental Control

[b] Orders to Parents Regarding Services and Counseling

[2] Removing Child From Parent's Custody

[a] Grounds for Removal

[b] Removal in Family Violence Cases

[c] No Immediate Detention or Trial Placement With Parent

[3] Subsequent Action Under Welf. & Inst. Code § 300(a), (d), or (e)

[4] Additional Findings

[5] Reasonable Efforts Finding

§ 328.127 Disposition on Removal of Child From Parental Custody

[1] Placement or Nonplacement With Noncustodial Parent

[a] Juvenile Court Custody Orders

[b] Ongoing Dependency Jurisdiction

[i] Custody With Three-Month Home Visit

[ii] Custody Subject to Court Supervision

[2] Placement With Someone Other Than Parent

[3] Relative Placement

[4] Placement with "Nonrelative Extended Family Member"

[5] Placement Within the County

[6] Child Under Six Years

[7] Placement for Concurrent Permanency Planning

[8] Educational Decisions

§ 328.128 Interstate Compact on the Placement of Children

[1] In General

[2] Visitation Versus Placement

[3] Applicability to Out-of-State Placements With Parents

[4] Priority Placements

[5] Placement in Out-of-State Group Homes

[6] Review of Out-of-State Placement

[7] Automatic Stay of Order Placing Child Out-of-State

§ 328.129 Services on Removal

[1] General Requirements and Limitations

[2] When Reunification Services Are Not to Be Ordered

[a] Federal Law Regarding Not Providing Services

[b] California's Statutory Exceptions to Providing Services

[i] Whereabouts Unknown

[ii] Mental Disability

[iii] Previous Removal

[iv] Death of Another Child

[v] Severe Physical Abuse of Young Child

[vi] Severe Sexual Abuse or Physical Harm

[vii] No Services in Siblings' Case

[viii] Child Is the Product of Rape

[ix] Abandonment Constituting Serious Danger or Voluntary Surrender of Infant

[x] Previous Termination of Services

[xi] Previous Termination of Parental Rights

[xii] Parent Convicted of Violent Felony

[xiii] Chronic Substance Abuse

[xiv] Waiver of Services

[xv] Abduction of Child

[xvi] Incarcerated or Institutionalized Parent

[xvii] Deciding to Order or Deny Services

[c] Setting a Selection and Implementation Hearing When Reunification Services Are Not Ordered

[3] Concurrent Reunification Plans and Services

[4] Reunification Services for Incarcerated or Institutionalized Parents

[5] Visitation for Parents

[a] Terms and Conditions of Visitation

[b] Denial of Visitation

[c] Standard of Review

[6] Visitation With Grandparents

[7] Sibling Placement, Contact, and Visitation

[8] Other People Important to the Child

[9] Concurrent Permanency Planning Services

[10] Americans With Disabilities Act

[11] Visitation for Teen Parent

§ 328.130 Selecting Therapist or Evaluator

§ 328.131 Detention Pending Execution of Disposition Order

§ 328.132 Reduction of Public Assistance

§ 328.133 Setting a Six-Month Review

§§ 328.134-328.139 [Reserved]

§ 328.140 Petitions for Modification of Orders

[1] Availability

[2] General Requirements

[3] When Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26 Hearing Has Been Set

[4] Required Notice

[5] Required Showing

§ 328.141 Supplemental Petitions

[1] In General

[2] Filing and Notice of Hearing

[3] Procedures for Conduct of Hearing

§ 328.142 Subsequent Petitions

§§ 328.143-328.149 [Reserved]

§ 328.150 Family Maintenance Review Hearings

[1] In General

[2] Review Report for Family Maintenance Review Hearing

[3] Conduct of the Hearing

§ 328.151 General Requirements for Out-of-Home Review and Permanency Hearings

[1] Notice

[2] Social Workers' Reports

[3] Report by Child's Caregiver

[4] If Child Placed Out-of-State

[5] Evaluating "Detriment to Return"

[6] Determination of Sibling Issues

[7] If Parent Has Absconded With Child

§ 328.152 Six-Month Out-of-Home Review Hearing

[1] Whether Child Should Return to Custody of Parent or Guardian

[2] Placement With Previously Noncustodial Parent

[3] Concurrent Reunification and Permanency Planning Services

[4] Termination of Services and Setting of a Selection and Implementation Hearing

[a] Child Under Three Years of Age at Initial Removal or Member of Sibling Group in Which One Child Was Under Three Years of Age at Initial Removal

[b] Parents' Whereabouts Are Still Unknown

[c] Parent Has Failed to Contact and Visit the Child

[d] Parent Convicted of Felony Indicating Parental Unfitness

[e] Parent Is Deceased

[5] Educational Decisions

§ 328.153 Twelve-Month Permanency Hearing

[1] To Determine Whether Child Should Return to Custody of Parent or Guardian

[2] Placement With Previously Noncustodial Parent

[3] Determining a Permanent Plan for the Child

[4] Concurrent Reunification and Permanency Planning Services

[5] Setting a Selection and Implementation Hearing

[6] Educational Decisions

§ 328.154 Eighteen-Month Permanency Review Hearing

[1] To Determine Whether Child Should Return to Custody of Parent or Guardian

[2] Concurrent Reunification and Permanency Planning Services

[a] Findings and Orders

[b] Limited Circumstances for Services Beyond 18 Months

[c] Continuing the Case for a 24-Month Hearing

[3] Determining a Permanent Plan for the Child

[4] Educational Decisions

§ 328.155 Twenty-Four-Month Subsequent Permanency Review Hearing

[1] To Determine Whether Child Should Return to Custody of Parent or Guardian

[2] Determining a Permanent Plan for the Child

[3] Educational Decisions

§ 328.156 Subsequent Periodic Review Reports by Social Worker

§ 328.157 Issuance of Custody Orders on Termination of Jurisdiction

§ 328.158 Post-Permanency Planning Review Hearings

§§ 328.159-328.169 [Reserved]

§ 328.170 Children in Parental Custody

§ 328.171 Selecting and Implementing an Alternative Permanency Plan

[1] Assessment Reports

[2] Notice

[3] Scope of Hearing Under Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26

[a] In General

[b] Return to Parent Is Not an Option

[c] Limited Context for Consideration of Changed Circumstances

[4] Appointment of Counsel

[5] Decision Process for the Adoptable Child

[a] Relative Guardianship Cutout

[b] The Likelihood of Adoption

[i] Beneficial Relationship Exception

[A] Autumn H. Line of Cases

[B] S.B. Decision

[C] Proving the Beneficial Relationship Exception Applies

[ii] Child 12 Years or Older Objecting

[iii] Child in a Residential Facility

[iv] Limited Exceptional Circumstances Exception

[v] Substantial Interference with Sibling Relationship Exception

[vi] California Exception for Indian Child

[vii] Findings Not Required

[b] No "Best Interest" Exception

[d] Consideration of Child's Wishes

[e] Constitutionality of Procedures

[f] Requirement for Previous Findings

[i] Requirement for Previous Reasonable Efforts Finding

[ii] Requirement for Previous Detriment Finding

[g] Adoption as Goal for Difficult-to-Place Child

[i] In General

[ii] Finality of Findings and Appealability

[h] Finality of Termination of Parental Rights Order

[i] In General

[ii] Reinstating Parental Rights

[i] Visitation and Placement of Freed Child

[i] In General

[ii] Court Designated Prospective Adoptive Parents

[6] Decision Process for Non-Relative Guardianship or Another Planned Permanent Living Arrangement as the Alternative Permanent Plan

[a] In General

[b] Guardianship Pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26

[c] Long-Term Foster Care With Foster Family Agency

§ 328.172 Retention of Jurisdiction After Permanency Plan

§ 328.173 Permanency Planning for Children Adjudged Dependents Prior to January 1, 1989

§§ 328.174-328.179 [Reserved]

§ 328.180 Periodic Review Process

[1] In General

[2] Review Where Plan Is Adoption or Guardianship

[3] Review Where Plan Is Another Planned Permanent Living Arrangement

[4] Changing the Permanent Plan

[5] Terminating Jurisdiction When Child Reaches Age of Majority

§ 328.181 Setting Aside or Modifying Legal Guardianships

§§ 328.182-328.188 [Reserved]

§ 328.189 Standing

[1] General requirements

[2] First Party Standing--Do the Rights Interweave?

[3] Standing to Appeal the Dismissal of a Dependency Petition

[4] Standing in De facto Parent Cases

§ 328.190 Appeal in Dependency Cases

[1] Right of Appeal

[2] Appeal or Writ Must Be Approved by Party Appealing

[3] Stay Pending Appeal

[4] Time for Filing a Dependency Appeal

[5] Appeal From Orders Made by Referees

[6] Indigents

[7] Precedence of the Appeal

[8] Wende Briefs Not Permitted

[9] Order Denying or Terminating Services

[10] Orders Related to the Referral Order

[11] Notice to the Parties

[12] Confidentiality of Juvenile Dependency Appeal

[13] Post-Judgment Evidence

[14] Standards of Appellate Review

[a] De Novo Review

[b] Substantial Evidence Test

[c] Abuse of Discretion

[15] Briefing Guidelines

§ 328.191 Review by Rule 8.452 Extraordinary Writ Petition

[1] In General

[a] Notice of Intent to File Writ Petition

[b] Preparation of the Record

[c] Augmentation or Correction of Record by Petitioner

[d] Petition Requirements

[e] Augmentation Request and Response

[f] Oral Argument

[g] Decision on the Merits

[h] Notice of Decision

[2] No Stay of Dependency Proceedings

[3] Trial Counsel Is Responsible for Writ Petition

[4] Failure to File Writ Precludes Later Appellate Review

[5] Time Lines for Writ Are Generally Mandatory

[6] Confidentiality of Dependency Writ Proceedings

§ 328.192 Traditional Writ Petitions

[1] In General

[2] Writ of Supersedeas

[3] Writ of Mandamus

[4] Writ of Prohibition

[5] Writ of Habeas Corpus

§ 328.193 Claims of Ineffective Assistance of Counsel

[1] Statutory Right

[2] Federal Constitutional Right

[a] Factors to Consider

[b] Nature of the Proceedings

[c] Case-by-Case Analysis

[3] Determining Claim Where Right Exists

[a] Determining Whether Counsel Was Ineffective

[b] Prejudice Arising From Ineffective Representation

[4] Manner and Time for Raising Claim of Ineffective Counsel

§ 328.194 Harmless Error

[1] When Error Claimed Is Statutory

[2] When Error Claimed Is of a Federal Constitutional Dimension

[3] Structural Error

§ 328.195 Review by Writ Petition of Court Orders Designating the Specific Placement of a Freed Child

[1] Notice of Intent to File Writ Petition

[2] Rule 8.456 Writ Petition

§ 328.196 Waiver or Forfeiture of Right to Raise Issue on Appeal or by Writ

§ 328.197 [Reserved]

§ 328.198 Adoption and Related Issues

[1] Adoption in the Juvenile Court

[2] Caretaker Preference for Adoption

[3] Adoptive Placement Decisions

[4] Same Social Worker for Adoption of Sibling Groups

[5] No Court-Mandated Postadoption Visitation

[6] Facilitating Postadoptive Sibling Contact

[7] Postadoption Contact Agreements

§ 328.199 Sealing Record

[1] Availability of Procedure

[2] Time for Filing Petition to Seal Records

[3] Determination of Petition to Seal Records

[4] Effect of Order Sealing Records

[5] Reopening of Sealed Records

[6] Destruction of Sealed Records

§ 328.200 Matthew Bender Publications

§ 328.201 Other Text References

§ 328.202 Law Reviews

§§ 328.203-328.209 [Reserved]

§ 328.210 Federal Statutes

§ 328.211 State Statutes

§ 328.212 California Rules of Court

§ 328.213 Decisions

§ 328.214 Attorney General Opinions

§§ 328.215-328.219 [Reserved]

§ 328.220 State Statutes

[1] In General

[2] Places and Conditions of Detention

[3] Temporary Custody of Child

[4] Child of Dependent Minor

§ 328.221 California Rules of Court

§§ 328.222-328.229 [Reserved]

§ 328.230 State Statutes

§ 328.231 California Rules of Court

§ 328.232 Decisions

[1] Biological and Presumed Fathers and Mothers

[2] Guardian Ad Litem

[3] De Facto Parents

[4] Relatives

[5] Guardians

[6] Right to Counsel

§§ 328.233-328.239 [Reserved]

§ 328.240 State Statutes

§ 328.241 California Rules of Court

§ 328.242 Decisions

§§ 328.243-328.249 [Reserved]

§ 328.250 State Statutes

§ 328.251 California Rules of Court

[1] Time Limitations

[2] No Contest or Submission

[3] Admission of Allegations of Petition

[4] Conduct of Hearing

[5] Continuance of Hearing

[6] Discovery and Evidentiary Rules

[7] Posthearing Findings and Procedures

§ 328.252 Decisions

[1] Petition

[2] Presumptions

[3] Due Process Rights of Parents

[4] No Contest Plea or Submission on Reports

[5] Discovery and Evidentiary Issues

[a] Discovery Policies and Procedures

[b] Privileges

[c] Children as Witnesses

[d] Hearsay

[i] Child's Conduct or Statements

[ii] Third Party's Statements

[e] Criminal Proceedings and Related Issues

[f] Expert Testimony

[g] Siblings, Evidence Concerning

[h] Social Study of Child

[6] Statement of Decision

[7] Jurisdictional Findings

[8] Grounds for Jurisdiction

[a] Inadequate Parental Care and Control

[b] Malnutrition

[c] Physical Abuse

[d] Refusal to Provide Medical Care

[9] Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction and Enforcement Act (UCCJEA)

[10] Indian Child Welfare Act (ICWA)

§ 328.253 Attorney General Opinions

§§ 328.254-328.259 [Reserved]

§ 328.260 State Statutes

§ 328.261 California Rules of Court

§ 328.262 Decisions

[1] Standard of Proof

[2] Alternative Dispositions

[3] Reunification Plan and Services

[4] Visitation

[5] Denial of Reunification Services

[6] Liability in Foster Care

§§ 328.263-328.269 [Reserved]

§ 328.270 State Statutes

§ 328.271 California Rules of Court

[1] In General

[2] Subsequent and Supplemental Petitions

[3] Petitions for Modification of Orders

§ 328.272 Decisions

§§ 328.273-328.279 [Reserved]

§ 328.280 State Statutes

§ 328.281 California Rules of Court

[1] Six-Month Review Hearing

[2] Twelve-Month Permanency Hearing

[3] Eighteen-Month Permanency Review Hearing

§ 328.282 Decisions

§§ 328.283-328.289 [Reserved]

§ 328.290 State Statutes

§ 328.291 California Rules of Court

§ 328.292 Decisions

[1] Standard of Proof

[2] Assessment Report

[3] Scope of Hearing

[4] Lack of Jurisdiction to Change Order

[5] Guardianship

§§ 328.293-328.299 [Reserved]

§ 328.300 State Statutes

§ 328.301 California Rules of Court

§ 328.302 Decisions

§§ 328.303-328.309 [Reserved]

§ 328.310 State Statutes

§ 328.311 Rules of Court

§ 328.312 Decisions

[1] Appealable Orders

[2] Filing

[3] Consent of the Client

[4] Mootness and Harmless Error

[5] Review by Writ of Habeas Corpus

[6] Waiver and Forfeiture

§§ 328.313-328.349 [Reserved]

§ 328.350 Juvenile Dependency Petition (Version Two) [Welf. & Inst. Code § 300 et seq.] With Attachment Alleging Serious Physical Harm [Welf. & Inst. Code § 300(a)]--Judicial Council Forms JV-110 and JV-120

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

§ 328.351 Proof of Service of Dependency Petition [Code Civ. Proc. § 1013a; Welf. & Inst. Code § 311]--Judicial Council Form JV-510

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

§ 328.352 Notification of Mailing Address [Welf. & Inst. Code § 316.1]--Judicial Council Form JV-140

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

§§ 328.353-328.359 [Reserved]

§ 328.360 Restraining Orders--Juvenile (CLETS) (Dependency) [Welf. & Inst. Code § 213.5]--Judicial Council Form JV-250

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Restraining Orders

[a] Ex Parte Orders

[b] Orders After Notice and Hearing

[c] Expiration Date Must Be Stated on Restraining Order

[d] Residence Exclusion Order

[e] Execution of Restraining Order

[4] Restraining Orders in Conjunction With Custody Order

[5] Cross References

§ 328.361 Custody--Juvenile (Dependency) [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 304, 361.2, 362.4]--Judicial Council Form JV-200

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Filing Order in Existing Proceeding

[4] Preparation and Transmittal of Order

[5] Filing of Order

[6] Certificate of Mailing

[7] Cross References

§ 328.361A Visitation--Juvenile (Dependency) Attachment [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 304, 361.2, 362.4]--Judicial Council Form JV-205

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Cross References

§ 328.362 Waiver of Reunification Services [Welf. & Inst. Code § 361.5]--Judicial Council Form JV-195

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Cross References

§ 328.363 ICPC Priority--Findings and Orders [Fam. Code § 7900 et seq.; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1428]--Judicial Council Form JV-567

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Cross References

§ 328.364 Findings and Request for Assistance Under Interstate Compact on the Placement of Children (ICPC) [Fam. Code § 7900 et seq.; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.616]--Judicial Council Form JV-565

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Cross References

§§ 328.365-328.369 [Reserved]

§ 328.370 Petition to Modify Juvenile Court Order [Welf. & Inst. Code § 388; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 5.560, 5.570]--Judicial Council Form JV-180

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Contents of Petition

[4] Authority of Court to Modify Order

[5] Notice of Petition and Hearing

[6] Hearing and Disposition on Petition

[7] Cross References

§ 328.371 Supplemental Petition for More Restrictive Court-Ordered Placement [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 387, 727.3; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.565]--Judicial Council Form JV-150

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Levels of Restrictive Custody

[4] Contents of Petition

[5] Filing of Petition

[6] Setting and Notice of Hearing on Petition

[7] Detention Hearing

[8] Hearing on Supplemental Petition

[9] Cross References

§§ 328.372-328.379 [Reserved]

§ 328.380 Notice of Review Hearing [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 366.2, 366.21, 366.22; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 5.710-5.720]--Judicial Council Form JV-280

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Cross References

§§ 328.381-328.389 [Reserved]

§ 328.390 Notice of Hearing on Selection and Implementation of Permanent Plan [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 294, 366.26; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.725]--Judicial Council Form JV-300

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Cross References

§ 328.391 Proof of Service of Notice of Hearing Regarding Permanent Plan [Code Civ. Proc. § 1013a; Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 294, 366.26; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.725]--Judicial Council Form JV-310

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Cross References

§ 328.392 Orders Under Sections 366.24, 366.26, 727.3, 727.31 of the Welfare and Institutions Code [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 366.24, 366.26, 727.3, 727.31; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.725]--Judicial Council Form JV-320

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Cross References

§ 328.393 Letters of Guardianship (Juvenile) [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 360, 366.26, 366.4, 728]-Judicial Council Form JV-330

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Cross References

§§ 328.394-328.399 [Reserved]

§ 328.400 Notice of Intent to File Writ Petition and Request for Record [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.450]--Judicial Council Form JV-820

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Cross References

§ 328.401 Petition for Extraordinary Writ (Dependency) [Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26(l); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.600]--Judicial Council Form JV-825

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Cross References

§ 328.402 Notice of Appeal [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 395, 800(a); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.400(c)]--Judicial Council Form JV-800

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Cross References

Gary C. Seiser
Editorial Consultant n*

John P. Passalacqua
Contributing Author n

Jennifer Kaye Williams
Contributing Author n

FOOTNOTES:

(n67)Footnote *. Gary C. Seiser is one of California's leading authorities on juvenile dependency law and practice, and is certified as a Child Welfare Law Specialist by the National Association of Counsel for Children, which is accredited by the State Bar of California, Board of Legal Specialization. He is a supervising deputy with the Juvenile Dependency Division of the San Diego County Office of County Counsel. Mr. Seiser also serves as a consultant on the Judicial Benchguides for dependency hearings published by the California Center for Judicial Education and Research (CJER), and has served as faculty for CJER, the California Judges Association, and the National Council of Juvenile and Family Court Judges. His published works include articles for the American Bar Association Child Law Practice and a chapter in the Handbook of Juvenile Forensic Psychology (2002). Mr. Seiser's writing has been cited by the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals, the California Supreme Court, and numerous California appellate courts. He was a member of the California Blue Ribbon Commission on Children in Foster Care (2006-2009), and has more than 60 published decisions including 10 at the California Supreme Court. A former Commissioner of the Riverside County Superior Court assigned to the Juvenile Court and a former prosecutor, Mr. Seiser also served as a member of the SB 1195 Task Force that rewrote much of California's dependency law through Senate Bill 243 [Stats. 1987, ch. 1485]. He is a frequent public speaker throughout California on juvenile dependency law and practice.

(n68)Footnote . John P. Passalacqua is an attorney in private practice in Mendocino and Lake Counties where he is appointed counsel for children and parents in juvenile dependency proceedings. He has been representing children, parents, and de facto parents in dependency cases for over 16 years and was responsible for the formation and management of firms in Sacramento and Stanislaus that represented parents in dependency cases. Mr. Passalacqua has also served on numerous committees that developed policy and procedures in dependency matters for the Counties of Sacramento, Stanislaus, and Mendocino. He is a frequent presenter on juvenile dependency law throughout the state including serving as faculty at the Beyond the Bench conference and for the Dependency Representation, Administration, Funding & Training (DRAFT) program. Mr. Passalacqua is also a contributing author and editor for the Dependency Quick Guide, which is published by the California Administrative Office of the Courts, Center for Children, Families, and the Courts, as a reference manual for attorneys representing parents and children in dependency proceedings. He is a graduate of McGeorge School of Law and the State University of New York, College at Buffalo.

(n69)Footnote . Jennifer Kaye Williams is a Deputy City Attorney for the San Francisco City Attorney's Office, and General Counsel to the San Francisco Human Services Agency. Previously assigned as trial counsel for the agency in dependency matters, she now handles all appeals and writs generated from the City Attorney's juvenile dependency unit. As General Counsel, Ms. Williams provides legal advice regarding administration of the dependency division and all public assistance programs, including General Assistance, CalWORKS, and Food Stamps. She also works with the San Francisco Board of Supervisors on legislation impacting the populations served under these programs. She has practiced juvenile law since 1994 when she started her career in the Riverside County Counsel's office handling dependency matters at both the trial and appellate levels. She then worked for the Administrative Office of the Courts under a federal grant to improve statewide compliance with Title IV-E of the Social Security Act. In that capacity, she spent time in multiple California counties, working with social services agencies, probation departments, and juvenile courts, improving compliance with federal requirements in juvenile matters. She has argued before the California Supreme Court and on numerous occasions before California Courts of Appeal, and has provided training statewide for agency attorneys handling juvenile dependency matters.

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329

CHAPTER 328 JUVENILE COURTS: DEPENDENCY PROCEEDINGS
PART I. SCOPE

28-328 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 328.01

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser Editorial Consultant John P. Passalacqua Contributing Author Jennifer Kaye Williams Contributing Author

§ 328.01 Scope

This chapter discusses issues and includes selected forms relating to juvenile court dependency proceedings, that is, proceedings instituted for the protection of abused, neglected, and abandoned children under Welf. & Inst. Code § 300.

It includes:

- An overview of the dependency system, including its general purpose, jurisdiction, and processes [see § 328.10 et seq.].
- Intake, investigation, and commencement procedures [see § 328.30 et seq.].
- Initial hearing procedures [see § 328.40 et seq.].
- Parties, standing and right to counsel [see § 328.60 et seq.].
- Detailed discussion of subject matter and juvenile court jurisdiction in dependency proceeding [see § 328.80 et seq.].
- Jurisdiction hearings [see § 328.100 et seq.].
- Disposition hearings [see § 328.120 et seq.].
- Supplemental and Subsequent Petitions [see § 328.140 et seq.].
- Periodic review proceedings [see § 328.150 et seq.].

- Permanency planning proceedings [see § 328.170 et seq.].
- Post-permanency planning proceedings [see § 328.180 et seq.].
- Appeals and review by extraordinary writ [see § 328.190 et seq.].
- Adoption of dependent children [see § 328.198].
- Sealing juvenile court records [see § 328.199].

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 328 JUVENILE COURTS: DEPENDENCY PROCEEDINGS
PART I. SCOPE

28-328 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 328.02

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser Editorial Consultant John P. Passalacqua Contributing Author Jennifer Kaye Williams Contributing Author

§ 328.02 Cross References

A discussion of general juvenile court jurisdiction and procedures can be found in Ch. 327, Juvenile Courts: Jurisdiction and General Procedures .

For a discussion relating specifically to juvenile court proceedings for delinquency or wardship, refer to Ch. 329, Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings.

To evaluate specific child-related civil actions, and review related pleading forms, see the following chapters:

- Ch. 5, Abuse of Minors and Elderly (includes discussion and forms relating to civil actions based on sexual abuse of minors).

- Ch. 12, Adoptions: Nature and Effect through Ch. 12E, Adoptions: Attack on Decree (discussion and forms relating to termination of parental rights).

- Ch. 258, Family Law Enforcement: General Enforcement: General Enforcement Principles and Remedies; Ch. 259, Family Law Enforcement: Special Remedies for Support Enforcement; and Ch. 260, Family Law Enforcement: Foreign Judgments (discussion and forms relating to the enforcement of child support orders).

- Ch. 280, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Appointment of Guardians through Ch. 290H, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Termination of Guardianships and Conservatorships (discussion and forms relating to the appointment of guardians of minors).

- Ch. 293, Harassment and Domestic Violence (discussion and forms relating to protective orders against domestic violence, including abuse of minors).

- Ch. 364, Minors: Claims and Property of Minors; Ch. 365, Minors: Contract Actions; Ch. 366, Minors: Court Consent for Medical Care or Enlistment; Ch. 367, Minors: Disaffirmation of Judgments; Ch. 367A, Minors: Tort Actions (discussion and forms relating to tort and contract actions by and against minors).

- Ch. 394, Parent and Child (additional discussion and forms relating to parental rights and duties, together with coverage of child custody issues arising outside the context of dissolution of marriage proceedings).

- Ch. 412, Paternity (discussion and forms relating to establishment of a parent-child relationship).

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329

CHAPTER 328 JUVENILE COURTS: DEPENDENCY PROCEEDINGS
PART I. SCOPE

28-328 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 328.03

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser Editorial Consultant John P. Passalacqua Contributing Author Jennifer Kaye Williams Contributing Author

§ 328.03 Terminology: "Probation Officer," "Social Worker," and "Indian Social Worker" Distinguished

Almost all California counties have delegated the duties of the county probation officer concerning dependent children to the county welfare department pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 272. This chapter therefore generally uses the term "social worker" rather than "probation officer" and "social services department" rather than "probation department" whenever describing the authority and duties of the county in respect to dependency cases. It should be understood that such usage can refer to either the social worker or the probation officer and either the county social services department or the county probation department [see Welf. & Inst. Code § 215]. It can also refer to any social worker of an Indian tribe which has entered into an agreement with the State Department of Social Services pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 10553.1 concerning child welfare services or foster care payments [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 215, 272(a)(2), 306(a)].

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 328 JUVENILE COURTS: DEPENDENCY PROCEEDINGS
PART I. SCOPE

28-328 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 328.04-328.09

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser Editorial Consultant John P. Passalacqua Contributing Author Jennifer Kaye Williams Contributing Author

[Reserved]

§§ 328.04[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329

CHAPTER 328 JUVENILE COURTS: DEPENDENCY PROCEEDINGS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Overview of Dependency Proceedings

28-328 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 328.10

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser Editorial Consultant John P. Passalacqua Contributing Author Jennifer Kaye Williams Contributing Author

§ 328.10 Governing Law and Nature of Proceedings

[1] Governing Law

State statutes governing dependency proceedings are set out generally in Welf. & Inst. Code § 300 et seq., while state rules of court governing these procedures are set out in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.500 et seq.

Dependency proceedings are special proceedings traditionally viewed as being governed by their own set of rules and statutes [In re Shelley J. (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 322, 328, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 922 ; In re Chantal S. (1996) 13 Cal. 4th 196, 200, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 866, 913 P.2d 1075 ; In re Jennifer R. (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 704, 711, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 759] . As such, the traditional view is that neither the Civil Code nor the Code of Civil Procedure apply to dependency proceedings unless expressly applicable [see, e.g., Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 213 (contempt), 213.5 (restraining orders), 341 (subpoenas), 348 (variance and amendment of pleadings); Code of Civ. Proc § 917.7 (stay of order for out-of-state placement in dependency cases)].

Several cases have now departed from the traditional view and have held the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure that apply to special proceedings are applicable to dependency proceedings if they are consistent with the overall goal of the dependency system [In re David H. (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 1626, 1638-1639, 82 Cal. Rptr. 3d 81 ; In re Claudia E. (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 627, 636, 77 Cal. Rptr. 3d 722 ; In re Mark B. (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 61, 78-79, 56 Cal. Rptr. 3d 697] . There are two fundamental problems with these holdings.

The first is that they fail to recognize the importance that should be given to the fact case law has long held the Civil Code and Code of Civil Procedure do not apply to dependency cases unless made expressly applicable [see, e.g., In re Shelley J. (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 322, 328, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 922 (the requirements of the Civil Code and the Code of Civ. Proc. do not apply to dependency proceedings unless otherwise specified); In re Chantal S. (1996) 13 Cal. 4th 196, 205-208, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 866, 913 P.2d 1075 (legislature knows how to make provisions of other codes applicable to dependency proceedings if it chooses to and failure to do so can infer an intent the other statutory provision was intended not to apply)]. Indeed, while this principle was not the sole basis on which the Supreme Court ruled in Chantal S., it was one of the express legal reasons the Court cited for its ruling that Fam. Code § 3190 did not apply to juvenile court custody orders [In re Chantal S. (1996) 13 Cal. 4th 196, 208, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 866, 913 P.2d 1075] . Such long recognized authority should not be abruptly discarded without good reason [Sara M. v. Superior Court (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 998, 1011-1015, 32 Cal. Rptr. 3d 89, 116 P.3d 550].

Here there was no such good reason, since none of the cases marking the recent departure on the inapplicability of other codes to dependency proceedings required that departure to reach their holdings on the merits [In re David H. (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 1626, 1640, 82 Cal. Rptr. 3d 81 (Code of Civ. Proc. § 430.80, appears in part 2 of that code, which applies to civil actions, not in part 3, which applies to special proceedings); Welf. & Inst. Code expressly incorporates one chapter of part 2 of the Code of Civil Procedure and does not expressly incorporate the section at issue or the chapter in which it appears, thereby supporting the conclusion it does not apply to dependency proceedings); In re Claudia E. (2008) (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 627, 637, 77 Cal. Rptr. 3d 722 ("the juvenile court has the inherent power to issue declaratory relief in such proceedings"); In re Mark B. (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 61, 78, 56 Cal. Rptr. 3d 697 (the statutes in part 1 of the Code of Civ. Proc. "provide for the fundamental empowerment of the courts, including the juvenile court" and thus apply to dependency proceedings).

Second, the Mark B. and Claudia E. line of cases fails to recognize the Pandora's Box of litigation at both the trial and appellate levels that will occur as parties challenge whether each individual provision of the Code of Civil Procedure that applies to special proceedings is consistent with the overall purpose of the dependency system. As noted by the court in David H., the Fourth District has cited practical reasons for following the Shelley J. decision and enforcing forfeiture [In re David H. (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 1626, 1638 , citing In re S. O. (2002) 103 Cal. App. 4th 453, 459-460, 126 Cal. Rptr. 2d 554 ; In re Jessica C. (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 1027, 1038 n.8, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 597] . How many years will it take to resolve the many questions that will need to be litigated to determine which provisions of which codes outside the Welfare & Institutions Code are consistent with the overall purpose of the dependency system and thus applicable to dependency proceedings? How many trial and appellate courts will disagree on these issues? Such needless litigation is itself an unnecessary delay inconsistent with the overall purpose of the dependency statutes.

Thus, the change suggested by recent case law is not the better view. If practical reasons are a basis for appellate decision-making, the better view on this issue is the traditional view that provisions of other codes are not applicable to dependency proceedings unless specifically made applicable. Courts can, of course, look to other codes by analogy for guidance when necessary, and in doing so can recognize the inherent authority of the juvenile court to do that which is necessary to carry out its mandate [see, e.g., In re Claudia E. (2008) (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 627, 637, 77 Cal. Rptr. 3d 722 ("the juvenile court has the inherent power to issue declaratory relief in such proceedings"); In re Lisa R. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 636, 643-644, 119 Cal. Rptr. 475, 532 P.2d 123 ("a juvenile court is vested with jurisdiction to determine parentage of a minor when that finding is necessary to any ultimate determination with which it is charged"); In re Fred J. (1979) 89 Cal. App. 3d 168, 176, 152 Cal. Rptr. 327 ("the juvenile court has inherent power to entertain a prehearing challenge to the petition's sufficiency by a motion akin to a demurrer")]. Nevertheless, practitioners and juvenile courts should be prepared to argue or rule under both alternative approaches until the law in this area settles.

PRACTICE TIP:

Be Aware of Local Rules and Practices. Practitioners should be aware that some juvenile courts have established local rules for dependency proceedings [see Los Angeles County Dep't of Children & Family Servs. v. Superior Court (1996) 51 Cal. App. 4th 1257, 1267, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 613 ; Code of Civ. Proc. § 575.1; Gov. Code §§ 68070, 68071]. Further, they may also have local practices, policies, or procedures that are not formalized into rules but nonetheless affect the practice of dependency law in a particular county. For instance, many courts have informal non-statutory procedures for the setting of matters on calendar to address issues such as visitation or services without the necessity of a formal petition pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 388. The practitioner should familiarize himself or herself with any local rules and practices.

Dependency proceedings are, when applicable, subject also to the Indian Child Welfare Act (ICWA) [25 U.S.C. § 1901 et seq.], the Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction and Enforcement Act (UCCJEA) [Fam. Code § 3400 et seq.], the Interstate Compact On The Placement of Children (ICPC) [Fam. Code § 7900 et seq.], the Uniform Parentage Act (UPA) [Fam. Code § 7600 et seq.], and other federal and state acts and regulations.

[2] Nature of Dependency Proceedings

For many years, the courts characterized the nature of the dependency system inconsistently. Some viewed it as civil in nature [see In re Robinson (1970) 8 Cal. App. 3d 783, 786, 87 Cal. Rptr. 678] . Others viewed it as quasi-criminal in nature [see Lois R. V. Superior Court (1971) 19 Cal. App. 3d 895, 901, 97 Cal. Rptr. 158] . In 1990, however, the California Supreme Court described dependency proceedings as civil in nature, designed not to punish the parent but to protect the child [see In re Malinda S. (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 368, 384, 272 Cal. Rptr. 787, 795 P.2d 1244 , citing In re Mary S. (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 414, 418-419, 230 Cal. Rptr. 726 ; see also In re Kerry O. (1989) 210 Cal. App. 3d 326, 333] . This does not mean dependency proceedings are civil proceedings. The characterization "civil in nature" is essentially a statement that dependency proceedings are non-criminal proceedings. More accurately, they are unique special proceedings of their own juvenile dependency nature, non-criminal, but also not specifically civil. Regardless, these proceedings are significantly different from ordinary civil actions by reason of the way they affect the fundamental rights of parents and children [In re Kristin H. (1996) 46 Cal. App. 4th 1635, 1661-1662, 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 722] .

[3] Informal and Nonadversary Atmosphere

The law requires dependency proceedings to be conducted in as informal and nonadversary an atmosphere as possible, except where there is a contested issue of law or fact [Welf. & Inst. Code § 350(a)(1)]. The goal of conducting dependency proceedings in such a manner is to maximize the cooperation of all persons interested in the child's welfare, including the child, in working with the court in any orders it may make in the case, especially in those orders for the care of the child [Welf. & Inst. Code § 350(a)(1)]. Attorneys are still required to represent their clients zealously. But zealous advocacy does not require rudeness or unreasonableness. Further, zealous advocacy in the dependency context includes helping the client to fully understand options, what is realistic, and what is best for the child and family both short term and long term. To this end, mediation programs are encouraged [Welf. & Inst. Code § 350(a)(2)]. Thus, while dependency proceedings often become "adversarial in nature" [In re Kristin H. (1996) 46 Cal. App. 4th 1635, 1662, 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 722] , such is neither the goal of, nor the intention for the system. Even when matters go to a contested hearing, everyone benefits from a professional and balanced demeanor by all participants.

PRACTICE TIP:

The Need To Work Together. Although the law is clear that dependency proceedings are to be nonadversary proceedings to the maximum degree possible, the way in which the law is practiced by social services agencies, attorneys and the courts is often much different. In some counties, these various participants merely dislike each other or fail to work well together. In other counties, they appear to be in a constant state of "war." Where such animosities exist everybody suffers, including the children and families the dependency system is designed to serve. While contested hearings are inevitable, they often signify the parties and the court have failed to work together to resolve the matter, consistent with the evidence, in a manner which protects the child while also respecting the needs and desires of the family where appropriate. Resolution rarely requires formal mediation if the participants are reasonable and truly desire to resolve the matter.

The most effective litigants in dependency proceedings, be they on the side of the agency, the child or the parent, are rarely those who consistently draw the hardest line or take the most cases to contested hearings. Instead, they are usually those who work with knowledge, insight, and a spirit of cooperation to achieve realistic and reasonable goals for their clients both inside and outside the courtroom. Litigants who achieve the best result regardless of their role in the proceedings strive to protect the child and to maximize the involvement of the family in decision making and services. Those litigants who focus on problem solving enjoy the greatest likelihood of success and the least degree of hostility. All agencies, attorneys and courts should evaluate their own approach to dependency proceedings in light of these guiding principles.

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329

CHAPTER 328 JUVENILE COURTS: DEPENDENCY PROCEEDINGS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Overview of Dependency Proceedings

28-328 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 328.11

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser Editorial Consultant John P. Passalacqua Contributing Author Jennifer Kaye Williams Contributing Author

§ 328.11 Goals of Dependency Proceedings

[1] To Protect the Child

The dependency system has traditionally be viewed as having three primary goals for each child made a dependent of the juvenile court: (1) the safety and protection of the child; (2) the preservation of the family, if it can be done safely and in a timely manner; and (3) the timely provision of a stable, permanent home for the child. Underlying these three is the fundamental goal of serving the child's best interests.

The first and foremost goal of the dependency system is to protect children who have been seriously abused, neglected or abandoned or who are at substantial risk of being so abused or neglected [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 202, 300.2]. To this end, the legislature has declared that in providing for a statewide system of child welfare services it believes all children "are entitled to be safe and free from abuse and neglect" [Welf. & Inst. Code § 16500; see also Welf. & Inst. Code § 396 ("children have a right to a normal home life free from abuse")]. Thus, the safety, protection, physical and emotional well-being of dependent children is the primary goal of the dependency system [see, e.g., Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 202, 300.2, 361(c)(1), 361.2(a), 361.3(a)(8), 366.21(e)].

[2] To Preserve the Family

Second and equal in importance so long as it can be done safely, is the public commitment to preserve families and safeguard parents' fundamental right to raise their children [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 202, 300.2, 361.5(a); see also Cynthia D. v. Superior Court (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 242, 255, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 698, 851 P.2d 1307 ; In re Marilyn H. (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 295, 308-310, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 544, 851 P.2d 826] . So important is this goal of family maintenance and reunification that the California Supreme Court has noted, "up until the time the section 366.26 hearing is set, the parent's interest in reunification is given precedence over the child's need for stability and permanency" [In re Marilyn H. (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 295, 310, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 544, 851 P.2d 826] . This is not to say that family preservation and reunification is not also in the child's interest. Children have a right to and an interest in remaining part of their family of origin, when it can be done safely. Thus, family preservation and reunification can serve both the interest of the parents and the child.

[3] To Provide a Stable, Permanent Home in a Timely Manner

The third goal of the dependency system is to provide a stable, permanent home for the child in a timely manner. Foster care is meant to be temporary care. California has long recognized that children are better served by being reunified with parents or being in an alternative permanent placement such as adoption or guardianship than in foster care [Welf. & Inst. Code § 396]. But in the past, it was not until family reunification efforts were unsuccessful that the dependency system shifted its focus from preserving the family to providing the child with a safe and stable permanent home [Cynthia D. v. Superior Court (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 242, 254-256, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 698, 851 P.2d 1307 ; Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26]. The California Supreme Court had even noted the state legislature's determination to provide stable, permanent homes for dependent children once reunification efforts had been unsuccessful. Indeed, the interest of providing children a permanent home upon the failure of reunification efforts has been viewed by the courts as a compelling one [In re Marilyn H. (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 295, 307, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 544, 851 P.2d 826 , citing In re Heather P. (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 886, 892, 257 Cal. Rptr. 545] . But this form of "sequential planning" often delayed permanency for children, since efforts to find a permanent home usually did not begin until reunification efforts had failed.

With the implementation of concurrent services planning that is now authorized by federal law and mandated by California law, planning for a permanent home for a dependent child does not wait to begin until after reunification efforts are terminated. Instead, when a child is removed from parents and reunification services are ordered, permanency planning services are concurrently implemented. If the family is successful in reuniting, the family home is the permanent home that fulfills this goal. If the family is not successful in reuniting, however, another permanent home will have already been planned for. Thus, the goal of providing dependent children with stable, permanent homes is no longer one that does not come into effect until later in the case. Now it is a goal that is present from the very beginning, concurrent with the goals of protecting the child and preserving the family.

[4] The Best Interest of the Child

Underlying the goals of protecting the child, preserving the family, and providing the child with a permanent home is the fundamental goal of serving the best interest of the child [Welf. & Inst. Code § 202(a)-(b); In re William B. (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 1220, 1227, 78 Cal. Rptr. 3d 91 , citing Seiser & Kumli, California Juvenile Courts Practice and Procedure § 2.11 (Matthew Bender)]. Thus, when an abused or neglected child is provided with safety and protection, the child's best interest is served. When a dependent child's family is preserved with the child safely remaining a member of that household, the best interest of the child is served. And when a child is provided a stable and permanent home, whether with a parent or some other caretaker, the child's best interest is served.

It has been said that the best interest of the child is an " 'elusive guideline that belies rigid definition' " [In re Ethan N. (2004) 122 Cal. App. 4th 55, 66, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 504 , quoting Adoption of Michelle T. (1975) 44 Cal. App. 3d 699, 704, 117 Cal. Rptr. 856] . This is no doubt true, since reasonable minds can differ on what is best for a specific child. Nevertheless, the dependency system strives to achieve it. It has been argued, however, that the best interest of the child is difficult, if not impossible to achieve in the adversary atmosphere the dependency system all too often provides [Weinstein, And Never the Twain Shall Meet: The Best Interests of Children and the Adversary System, 52 Univ. of Miami L. Rev. 79 (1997)]. It can be difficult. It is not impossible. There are, however, many problems inherent in the vagueness and subjectivity of a best interest of the child standard for decision making [Wald, State Intervention on Behalf of "Neglected" Children: Standards for Removal of Children from Their Homes, Monitoring the Status of Children in Foster Care, and Termination of Parental Rights]. Thus, although the best interest of the child is one of the fundamental goals of the dependency system, it is rarely used in the California dependency system as the standard for decision making [see, e.g., Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 361.3(a)(1), 362.1(a), 388 (sections where best interest is used as one of the standards or criteria for decision making)]. Instead, recognizing the need for more definitive standards for decision making [Wald, State Intervention on Behalf of "Neglected" Children: Standards for Removal of Children from Their Homes, Monitoring the Status of Children in Foster Care, and Termination of Parental Rights, 28 Stan. L. Rev. 623, 639-641 (1976)], California's dependency statutes usually set forth specific standards for decision making at the various hearings [see, e.g., Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 319, 361(c), 366.21(e), 366.26(c)(1) (sections where specific standards for decision making are set forth)]. When such specific standards are followed, the interest of the child is inherently served in the manner the legislature has determined is best [see, e.g., In re Zeth S. (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 396, 410, 2 Cal. Rptr. 3d 683, 73 P.3d 541 ("The Legislature, however, has determined that what is in the child's best interests is best realized through implementation of the procedures, presumptions, and timelines written into the dependency statutes"); In re Jessica G. (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 1, 8, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 811 (best interest is "implied throughout dependency law"); In re Tabatha G. (1996) 45 Cal. App. 4th 1159, 1165, 53 Cal. Rptr. 2d 93 (best interest is "inherent in the legislative procedure")].

[5] The Future Goal of the Dependency System

Although the statutory scheme has not yet been revised to recognize it, the implementation of concurrent services planning as a mandatory part of California's dependency system was moving this system toward a single goal for dependent children. That one goal was to provide all children who are declared dependents with a safe, stable, permanent home in a timely fashion. This single goal can be seen to incorporate all three of the goals of the system that had been applied sequentially under prior law, as well as the underlying purpose of serving the child's best interest. If the child is safely maintained with or returned to the parent in a timely fashion as a permanent placement, this one goal is accomplished. If the child is safely placed with the previously noncustodial parent in a timely fashion as a permanent placement, this one goal is accomplished. If reunification efforts are denied or terminated and the child receives the safety and stability of an adoptive home or a legal guardianship in a timely fashion as an alternative permanent placement, this one goal is accomplished. For years many within the dependency system have defined "success" as achieving family maintenance or reunification. Adoption or legal guardianship were viewed as signals the system had failed. With the recognition of a single goal for the dependency system, that of providing dependent children with a safe, stable, permanent home in a timely fashion, "success" is redefined and can be achieved in a variety of ways. This change is one that is long overdue, serves the best interest of children and families, and should be the future of California's dependency system.

Nevertheless, several gradual shifts are placing this single future goal in question. First, while it has often been said that the importance of reunification in the dependency system is difficult, if not impossible, to exaggerate [In re Luke L. (1996) 44 Cal. App. 4th 670, 678, 52 Cal. Rptr. 2d 53] , the number of reasons for denying services to parents continues to grow. Indeed, over a decade ago one appellate court noted regarding the Luke L. statement as to the importance of reunification in the dependency system that "In light of the steady multiplication of the section 361.5, subdivision (b) exceptions, it may be questionable how long this comment will hold up" [Riverside County Dept. of Public Social Services v. Superior Court (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 483, 488, n.9, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 777] . In the decade since that decision the list of reasons to deny reunification services has continued to grow [42 U.S.C. § 671(a)(15)(D)(i); Welf. & Inst. Code § 361.5(b)(1)-(15), (e)]. Thus, the emphasis on reunification as a means of accomplishing the single goal of the dependency system is suffering from erosion. Second, the goal of timely permanency decisions is eroding as well. This can be seen clearly in two recent shifts, that of mandating minimum periods of reunification services rather than maximum [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 361.5(a)(1), 366.21(e)], and the provision of services to certain parents for up to 24 months from removal rather than the previous maximum of 18 months [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 361.5(a)(4), 366.22(b), 366.25]. Finally, for many years it has been said the legislature has been clear that when reunification is not possible, adoption is the preferred permanent plan [see, e.g., In re Dakota H. (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 212, 228, 33 Cal. Rptr. 3d 337 ; In re Tabatha G. (1996) 45 Cal. App. 4th 1159, 1164, 53 Cal.Rptr.2d 93] . In recent years, however, the number of exceptions to the termination of parental rights has continued to grow [Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26(c)(1)(A), (B)(i)-(vi)]. Thus the idea that adoption is the preferred permanent plan is also eroding. The effect these three policy shifts on the future of the dependency system and on providing children with a safe, stable, permanent home in a timely fashion remains to be seen. This is an area to be watched for future developments.

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329

CHAPTER 328 JUVENILE COURTS: DEPENDENCY PROCEEDINGS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Overview of Dependency Proceedings

28-328 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 328.12

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser Editorial Consultant John P. Passalacqua Contributing Author Jennifer Kaye Williams Contributing Author

§ 328.12 Development of Dependency Proceedings

[1] 1980 Federal Standards: Public Law 96-272

Following several years of hearings, studies and reports, the United States Congress in 1979 proposed a major revision of the federal funding of child welfare services [see 1980 U.S. Code Cong. & Admin. News 1448]. Congress recognized that children placed in foster care often suffered what was characterized as "foster care drift." As such, the legislation sought to provide an incentive to the states to modify their existing laws so as "to lessen the emphasis on foster care placement and to encourage greater efforts to find permanent homes for children by making it possible for them to return to their own families or by placing them in adoptive homes" [see 1980 U.S. Code Cong. & Admin. News 1448, 1450].

This proposal was enacted as the Adoption Assistance and Child Welfare Act of 1980 and is commonly referred to as Public Law 96-272 [see 42 U.S.C. § 670 et seq.; see also 1980 U.S. Code Cong. & Admin. News 1448]. To receive federal funding states must enact legislation requiring active efforts to keep children in their own homes if possible, to reunify their families if removal proved necessary, and to select permanent plans in a timely fashion, including adoption, if the families could not be reunified [see 42 U.S.C. §§ 671(a)(14), 672, 675; Cynthia D. v. Superior Court (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 242, 246, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 698, 851 P.2d 1307] .

[2] 1982 California Compliance: Senate Bill 14

Senate Bill 14 [Stats. 1982, ch. 978] was passed by the California Legislature in 1982 so as to bring California into compliance with Public Law 96-272. It created a more structured framework for the protection of abused, neglected and abandoned children and for services for their families. It mandated a clear and convincing standard for removal of children from their parents [Welf. & Inst. Code § 361], provision of reunification services for families where children are removed [see former Welf. & Inst. Code § 361(e); now see Welf. & Inst. Code § 361.5], and court review hearings every six months [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 364, 366, 366.2]. If a child was removed from parental custody it placed the burden on the county welfare department to prove at each of the review hearings the necessity for the child continuing to remain out of the home [Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.2(e)].

If the child could not be returned through the provision of reunification services within 12 to 18 months of removal, Senate Bill 14 mandated that a permanency planning hearing be held at which the juvenile court would select adoption, guardianship or long-term foster care as a permanent plan for the child [former Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.25]. If the plan ordered was adoption, a separate proceeding had to be filed in the superior court pursuant to former Civ. Code § 232 [now see Fam. Code § 7800 et seq.] to implement that plan [Cynthia D. v. Superior Court (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 242, 246, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 698, 851 P.2d 1307] .

While the juvenile dependency system established by Senate Bill 14 was a vast improvement, in practice it did not accomplish all that it had been intended to do toward solving the dilemma of foster care drift. Often permanency planning hearings were not held within 18 months of the initial removal of dependent children. Further, once a permanent plan of adoption was selected it sometimes took many months, or even years, before the separate superior court action to terminate parental rights was filed or completed [Cynthia D. v. Superior Court (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 242, 246-247, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 698, 851 P.2d 1307 , citing In re Micah S. (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 557, 564, 243 Cal. Rptr. 756 (conc. opn. of Brauer, J.)].

[3] 1986 California Task Force: SB 1195

The California Legislature recognized that Senate Bill 14 was not always being implemented so as to eliminate foster care drift. Further, other potential problems were brought to its attention. In 1986 the Legislature enacted Senate Bill 1195 [Stats. 1986, ch. 1122]. It directed the Senate Select Committee on Children and Youth to convene a task force to examine the then existing statutes and practices for the protection of children. The task force was to make recommendations on how to bring greater coordination between the child abuse reporting laws, child welfare services and juvenile dependency proceedings. Further, the task force was to make recommendations for any changes it saw necessary to ensure maximum protection for children at risk of abuse, neglect and exploitation [see Sen. Sel. Comm. on Children & Youth/SB 1195 Task Force Rep. on Child Abuse Reporting Laws, Juvenile Court Dependency Statutes, and Child Welfare Services (Jan. 1988) p. i)].

The SB 1195 Task Force that was subsequently convened was a broad-based group of experts appointed by the Senate Select Committee on Children & Youth [Cynthia D. v. Superior Court (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 242, 247, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 698, 851 P.2d 1307] . Its members included representatives from state and county social service agencies, the Attorney General's Office, the American Civil Liberties Union, parents' and children's advocates from both the legal and social policy fields, a law professor, a dependency court judicial officer, and a mental health practitioner [see Senate Sel. Comm. on Children & Youth/SB 1195 Task Force Rep. on Child Abuse Reporting Laws, Juvenile Court Dependency Statutes, and Child Welfare Services (Jan. 1988)].

The SB 1195 Task Force wrote three bills. The one that is best known and of the greatest importance to dependency practitioners is Senate Bill 243 [Stats. 1987, ch. 1485], which dealt directly with the statutory scheme for dependency cases. The task force also wrote Senate Bill 834 [Stats. 1987, ch. 1310] dealing with statewide training and establishing the Child Welfare Training Advisory Board, and Senate Bill 1219 [Stats. 1987, ch. 1459], which amended California's child abuse reporting laws [see Senate Sel. Comm. on Children & Youth/SB 1195 Task Force Rep. on Child Abuse Reporting Laws, Juvenile Court Dependency Statutes, and Child Welfare Services (Jan. 1988) pp. 1-2, 12-16].

[4] 1987 California Reform: Senate Bill 243

Senate Bill 243 [Stats. 1987, ch. 1485] was a comprehensive and substantial revision of California's juvenile dependency law. Among the more significant changes was the redefinition of the statutory grounds for jurisdiction under Welf. & Inst. Code § 300 to provide more specific language as to what kinds of children are described by that section. It also made significant changes to the appointment of counsel statutes making appointed counsel mandatory for indigent parents if the child is recommended to be or has been placed outside of the home, mandating "vertical representation" by appointed counsel throughout the dependency case, requiring the court to be more involved in the decision to appoint or not appoint counsel for the child, and setting forth specific duties for child's counsel where appointed. Further, it took steps to help focus the court and parties on the need to provide reasonable services to maintain or reunify the family [see Senate Sel. Comm. on Children & Youth/SB 1195 Task Force Rep. on Child Abuse Reporting Laws, Juvenile Court Dependency Statutes, and Child Welfare Services (Jan. 1988) pp. 3-10].

Senate Bill 243 also substantially changed the procedures for the termination of parental rights for dependent children for whom reunification efforts had failed. It did this by bringing the termination process within the dependency case itself at a hearing pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26 at which the court would both select and implement a permanent plan for the child. The purpose of this change was to ensure that "minors who are adoptable will no longer have to wait months and often years for the opportunity to be placed with an appropriate family on a permanent basis" [see Cynthia D. v. Superior Court (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 242, 247, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 698, 851 P.2d 1307 , citing Sen. Sel. Comm. on Children & Youth/SB 1195 Task Force Rep. on Child Abuse Reporting Laws, Juvenile Court Dependency Statutes, and Child Welfare Services (Jan. 1988) p. 10].

[5] Evolutionary Change

The "broad-based group of experts" which comprised the SB 1195 Task Force [Cynthia D. v. Superior Court (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 242, 247, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 698, 851 P.2d 1307] and wrote the comprehensive 1987 reform of the dependency system intended to remain in place to oversee the implementation of its work [Senate Sel. Comm. on Children & Youth/SB 1195 Task Force Rep. on Child Abuse Reporting Laws, Juvenile Court Dependency Statutes, and Child Welfare Services (Jan. 1988) pp. 1, 20]. This did not happen, however, and no similar group of experts from all sides of the issues has stepped forward or been appointed to help monitor and guide legislative developments in this area. The absence of such a group has been noticeable in recent years as many pieces of special interest legislation, some arguably lacking in the balance that such a group affords, have been enacted affecting children and their families in the dependency system, sometimes in well meaning but questionable ways. Such change has at times appeared to be brought about more by dissatisfaction with the outcome in a single case than with a demonstrated need within the dependency system. At other times the change has simply evidenced the ever-present swinging of the child protection pendulum and helped to identify where on the arc of that pendulum the prevalent mood of legislators and those seeking legislation is currently located.

Many of these recent changes have yet to be tested in the appellate courts, but no doubt will be in coming years. The need for balance in legislation and appellate decision making in a system as important as the dependency system is obvious, yet not always achieved. What is clear, however, is that each year this area of the law will continue to see a multitude of legislative changes and published appellate decisions. Practitioners and judicial officers who are involved in dependency proceedings at every level must actively seek to remain current in the ever-evolving area of juvenile dependency law and should, where possible and appropriate, help it to achieve and maintain the balance that it will always need.

For a historical perspective on where the dependency system was and where it needed to go see Wald, State Intervention on Behalf of "Neglected" Children: Standards for Removal of Children from Their Homes, Monitoring the Status of Children in Foster Care, and Termination of Parental Rights, 28 Stan. L. Rev. 623 (1976). This visionary article by Professor Michael S. Wald is easily recognized as a foreteller of what was to come in the form of Public Law 96-272, Senate Bill 14, and Senate Bill 243. This should be no surprise since Professor Wald played a major role in the drafting and development of all three pieces of legislation. Although over two decades old, his 1976 article remains valuable reading for dependency practitioners.

[6] Eliminating Delays and Denials of Placements for Cultural and Racial Reasons

The federal Multiethnic Placement Act of 1994 (MEPA) was enacted as part of the Improving America's Schools Act of 1994 [Public Law 103-382]. The act had several purposes. Recognizing too many children, particularly minorities, were staying in foster care for long periods of time while awaiting adoptive placement, the act sought to decrease the length of time children wait to be adopted. It sought to prevent discrimination in the placement of children based on race, color, or national origin. Finally, it sought to facilitate the identification and recruitment of foster and adoptive parents who can meet the needs of children. The language of that act was a compromise, however, and two years later even stricter language was enacted [Public Law 104-188]. Federal law in this regard is now found in 42 U.S.C. § 671(a)(18). The parallel provisions relevant to the care of dependent children in California are found in the California Family Code. No social services agency or other entity which receives any state assistance and is involved in foster care placements may do either of the following [Fam. Code § 7950(a)(2)]:

- Deny to any person the opportunity to become a foster or adoptive parent, on the basis of the race, color, or national origin of the person or the child involved [Fam. Code §§ 7950(a)(2)(A), 8708(a)(1)].

- Delay or deny the placement of a child in foster care or for adoption on the basis of the race, color, or national origin of the foster or adoptive parent or the child involved [Fam. Code §§ 7950(a)(2)(B), 8708(a)(2)].

Nevertheless, although race, color, and national origin cannot be used to deny a person the opportunity to become a foster or adoptive placement, and cannot be used to deny or delay foster or adoptive placement, a child's religious background may be considered in determining an appropriate adoptive placement for a child who has been freed for adoption through either relinquishment or the termination of parental rights [Fam. Code § 8709(a)]. None of these provisions of law, however, are not to be construed to affect the application of the Indian Child Welfare Act [Fam. Code §§ 7950(b), 8708(b), 8709(b)].

[7] Confidentiality of Addresses as Means of Protection

One recent and valuable development is the recognition that there are situations where it is not appropriate to disclose the actual address of an individual, be that person the child, a parent who is the victim of family violence, or a foster parent. While the juvenile court has always had the inherent authority and discretion to make orders in this regard, the recent changes in the law codify this authority and in some situations extend the responsibility for confidentiality to the social services department. For instance, the law now provides that the location of the specific foster home in which a child has been placed following removal from a parent will in most instances not be disclosed prior to the disposition hearing; by that time, more will be known about the parents and whether disclosure will place the child or foster family in danger [Welf. & Inst. Code § 308]. Also, if the social services agency is filing a petition and knows that one of the parents is a victim of domestic violence, the agency is to keep the address of that parent confidential [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 302(b), 332(e)]. Further, the court may keep the child's placement address confidential to protect the safety of the child, specifically including when making visitation orders [Welf. & Inst. Code § 362.1(a)]. Protecting individuals by keeping their address and location confidential under appropriate circumstances is a welcome development in the law.

[8] Family Violence

The law's recognition of and response to violence in the family is not a new development in California [see Welf. & Inst. Code § 18290 et seq. (The Domestic Violence Centers Act, added by Stats. 1977, ch. 892)]. Nor is it new to dependency cases [see, e.g., In re Benjamin D. (1991) 227 Cal. App. 3d 1464, 1470, n.5, 278 Cal. Rptr. 468 ; In re Jon N. (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 156, 161, 224 Cal. Rptr. 319] . In recent years, however, it has finally received the statewide and national attention it has long deserved [see, e.g., National Council of Juv. And Fam. Ct. Judges, Fam. Violence Dept., Effective Intervention In Domestic Violence & Child Maltreatment Cases: Guidelines for Policy and Practice (1999);

Edleson, Children's Witnessing of Adult Domestic Violence, 14 J. Interpersonal Violence 839 (1999)]. The result in California has been a variety of statutes addressing the problem in specific legal settings [see, e.g., Evid. Code § 1370 (hearsay exception for threats of infliction of injury); Fam. Code §§ 3011(b) (history of domestic abuse by parent is factor in determining child's best interest), 3020(a) ("domestic violence in a household where a child resides is detrimental to the child"); Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 302(b), 332(e) (keeping address of parent who is domestic violence victim confidential), 16507(d) (authorization for social services agency to request Board of Prison Terms inform it when a parent imprisoned for domestic violence is scheduled to be released; applicable in cases in which reunification services are being provided to the other parent)].

The effects of violence in the family on its victims, both young and old, are great. The Legislature has wisely mandated that all attorneys in dependency cases, including attorneys for the social services agency, court-appointed counsel, and counsel who volunteer their services, participate in domestic violence training if available through existing programs at no cost to the county [Welf. & Inst. Code § 218.5]. All professionals who work in the dependency system should receive such training. Family violence is an area that will be receiving continued attention in the future and should be watched by all concerned for further developments in both the law and our knowledge of the area.

For further discussion of family violence as dealt with in the dependency system, see §§ 328.33[14], 328.126[2][b].

[9] Concurrent Services Planning and Related Changes

Effective January 1, 1998, concurrent services planning for legal permanence is required for all dependent children in out-of-home placement where reunification services are being provided. Concurrent planning provides for reunification services for the parents and family while simultaneously developing an alternative plan, such as adoption, in case reunification efforts fail [see Katz, Spoonemore, & Robinson, Concurrent Planning: From Permanency Planning to Permanency Action, Lutheran Social Services of Washington and Idaho, p. 9 (1994)]. This new requirement was brought about in California by the federal Adoption and Safe Families Act of 1997 [Public Law 105-89] and the enactment of Assembly Bill 1544 [Cal. Stats. 1997, ch. 793]. It was further implemented by Assembly Bill 2773 [Cal. Stats. 1998, ch. 1056]. The changes in California law are intended to conform state statutes to the Adoption and Safe Families Act of 1997 [Welf. & Inst. Code § 16131]. In actuality, it does more, since under federal law concurrent planning is authorized, but discretionary [42 U.S.C. § 671(a)(15)(F)]. Under California law it is mandatory for all dependent children in out of home placement for whom reunification services have been ordered.

Concurrent services planning is only one of many changes being brought to California's dependency system. Some of these are specifically intended to facilitate concurrent services planning and to bring California into compliance with the federal Adoption and Safe Families Act of 1997. Others are simply intended to improve the system and the way it serves children and families, but are consistent with the underlying goal of concurrent services planning, which is providing children with stability and permanence in a timely fashion. Such changes include the fact the 12-month review hearing is no longer a 12-month review hearing. It is now the 12-month "permanency hearing." Further, instead of being held 12 months from the date of the disposition hearing, the 12-month permanency hearing is held 12 months from the date the child entered foster care, which is the date of the jurisdiction finding or 60 days from the date the child was initially removed from the physical custody of the parent or guardian whichever occurred first [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 361.49, 361.5(a), 366.21(f)]. The 18-month review hearing is now the "permanency review hearing." It is still held not more than 18 months after the date the child was originally removed from the physical custody of the parent or guardian, however [Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.22(a)].

Although court-mandated open adoptions are prohibited in California, there is now authorization for postadoption contact agreements, which allow adopting parents to enter formal agreements with the child's birth relatives, including the birth parents and even the child's Indian tribe, for postadoption visitation, contact, and sharing of information. These agreements are not part of the actual dependency process, but are available to dependent children at the time they are adopted [Fam. Code § 8616.5; Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26(a)]. There is also now authorization for postadoption sibling visitation if the adoptive parents agree [Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.29]. For foster parents who have had the child for an extended period of time or relatives with a significant relationship with the child there is an expedited adoption home study process [Fam. Code § 8730 et seq.]. There is also a specialized program for the training of prospective parents for HIV and alcohol and drug exposed infants [Welf. & Inst. Code § 16135 et seq.]. For relatives being appointed as guardians there is a kinship guardianship assistance program to help rectify some of the financial inequities that have previously kept some relatives from accepting guardianship or some courts from terminating dependency jurisdiction once relatives were appointed guardians [Welf. & Inst. Code § 11360 et seq.]. Thus, there are many changes now being made to the California dependency system. Judicial officers, attorneys, social workers, court-appointed special advocates and others working in and around the dependency system need to take steps to become familiar with these many changes so as to enable them to better fulfill their roles and responsibilities.

For further discussion of concurrent reunification and alternative permanency services, see § 328.129[3], [4], and [7].

For further discussion of postadoption visitation, postadoption contact agreements and postadoptive sibling contact agreements, see § 328.198[4] -[6].

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 328 JUVENILE COURTS: DEPENDENCY PROCEEDINGS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Overview of Dependency Proceedings

28-328 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 328.13

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser Editorial Consultant John P. Passalacqua Contributing Author Jennifer Kaye Williams Contributing Author

§ 328.13 Summary of Initiation of Dependency Proceedings

[1] Removal of Child

Although removal of the child is not a requirement for the initiation of a dependency proceeding, the majority of court cases do involve the removal of a child, at least initially. This is largely because if the child does not have to be removed from the home in order to protect the child, the social services agency will attempt to work with the family informally rather than bringing the matter to court. If a peace officer or social worker has reason to believe that a child is described by Welf. & Inst. Code § 300 and also has reason to believe that the child is in immediate danger as a result thereof, the child may be taken into temporary custody [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 305, 306, 307]. Removal of the child may be done by a social worker or a probation officer acting alone, but is usually done either by a peace officer or by law enforcement and the social services department working together.

Where the child believed to be described by Welf. & Inst. Code § 300 is under medical care, release to a parent poses an immediate danger to the child, and the child cannot be immediately moved, the child shall be "deemed" to have been taken into temporary custody for purposes of juvenile court law while the child remains at the office of the doctor or medical facility [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 305(b), 309(b)]. This is commonly called a "hospital hold." Temporary custody and the time for filing a petition with the juvenile court begins when the hospital hold is placed on the child by the law enforcement officer or social worker.

Before removing a child a social worker must consider whether there are services or referrals to public assistance that could be provided to eliminate the need to remove the child. The social worker must also consider whether there is a nonoffending caretaker who could protect the child and whether the alleged perpetrator will voluntarily agree to withdraw from the residence as possible alternatives to removal [Welf. & Inst. Code § 306]. If the child is removed the social worker must file a dependency petition in the juvenile court within 48 hours excluding non-judicial days [Welf. &

Inst. Code § 313].

[2] Summary of the Initial or Detention Hearing

The initial hearing on a dependency petition is commonly and historically referred to as a "detention hearing" even if one or more of the children involved have not been removed from the home. To avoid confusion, it should only be referred to as a detention hearing, however, if the child has been removed from the custody of the parent or guardian. Otherwise, it should be referred to as the initial hearing. Both, however, are initial hearings. If a child has been removed and a petition filed, the detention hearing must be held by the juvenile court not later than the next judicial day following the filing of that petition [Welf. & Inst. Code § 315; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.670(b)]. If the child has not been taken into custody, the clerk of the court must set the matter for an initial hearing within 15 judicial days of the filing of the petition [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.670(a)].

At the initial hearing the court first considers the appointment of counsel. If the parents or guardians desire counsel and cannot afford counsel the court must appoint counsel for them if the child has been removed from the home or the recommendation of the social services department is for such removal. Any appointed counsel is required to represent the parents at the initial hearing and all subsequent proceedings [Welf. & Inst. Code § 317(b), (d)].

The court must also appoint counsel for the child unless the court finds the child would not benefit from such appointment [Welf. & Inst. Code § 317(c)].

At the initial or detention hearing the court is also required to inquire of the parents present at the hearing and any other appropriate person as to the identity and address of all presumed or alleged parents. The fact that a person who claims to be the parent is at the hearing does not relieve the court of its obligation to make a parentage inquiry [Welf. & Inst. Code § 316.2(a)]. Where necessary, the court must take additional steps to ensure each alleged parent is noticed of the proceedings and to determine parentage [Welf. & Inst. Code § 316.2(b), (d)].

The social services department bears the burden to make a prima facie showing at the detention hearing that the child comes within Welf. & Inst. Code § 300, that continuation of the child in the parent or guardian's home is contrary to the welfare of the child, and that there is a need for detention under one of the criteria set forth in Welf. & Inst. Code § 319(b)(1)-(4). The court may rely upon the reports provided by the social worker, including copies of written police reports, to make its decision [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.674(b)]. The parent has the right to present evidence also and, if the preparers of the reports relied upon by the social services department are not present, the right to a prima facie rehearing [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 319, 321].

In addition to making findings regarding detention of the child, the court must also determine whether reasonable efforts were made to prevent or eliminate the need for removal of the child from his or her home [Welf. & Inst. Code § 319; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.678(c)].

If the court detains the child it also must order visitation and services to be provided as soon as possible to reunify the child and his or her family, if appropriate [Welf. & Inst. Code § 319]. This is significant since the initial removal of the child marks the beginning of the maximum 18 months of reunification services that a parent may receive in a dependency case [Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.21(g)(1)].

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 328 JUVENILE COURTS: DEPENDENCY PROCEEDINGS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Overview of Dependency Proceedings

28-328 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 328.14

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser Editorial Consultant John P. Passalacqua Contributing Author Jennifer Kaye Williams Contributing Author

§ 328.14 Summary of the Jurisdiction Hearing

Welf. & Inst. Code § 300 is the basic, jurisdictional section that describes the abused, neglected and abandoned children who fall within the juvenile court's dependency jurisdiction. It provides in pertinent part that any minor who comes within any of the descriptive subdivisions of that section is within the jurisdiction of the juvenile court. The section then goes on to describe in ten different subdivisions the kinds of children who fall within the juvenile court's jurisdiction [Welf. & Inst. Code § 300(a)-(j)].

Generally speaking, Section 300 defines jurisdiction in terms of serious harm suffered by a child or the substantial risk of such serious harm to a child. Although the harm or risk of harm to the child still must generally be the result of an act, omission or inability of one of the parents or guardians, the central focus of dependency jurisdiction is now clearly on the child rather than the parent. If the juvenile court finds the dependency petition to be true, it is not sustained against one or the other of the parents. It is simply "sustained" or "found true" [see Welf. & Inst. Code § 300; see also California Ctr. for Jud. Educ. and Research, Cal. Judges Benchguides, Benchguide 101: Juvenile Dependency Jurisdiction Hearing (Jan. 2009) § 101.5, p. 101-9].

Jurisdictional findings in dependency cases must be made by at least a preponderance of the evidence [Cynthia D. v. Superior Court (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 242, 248, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 698, 851 P.2d 1307 , citing Welf. & Inst. Code § 355 and Cal. Rules of Ct., former Rule 1450(f)]. The social services department bears the burden of proof at the jurisdictional hearing. It can meet this burden through the submission of a report, usually called a social study, which is received into evidence by the juvenile court. So long as the preparer of the report is available for cross-examination and the parent or guardian has the opportunity to subpoena and cross-examine witnesses whose statements are contained in the report or its attachments this procedure meets the requirements of constitutional due process [In re Malinda S. (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 368, 382-385, 272 Cal. Rptr. 787, 795 P.2d 1244] . If any party to a jurisdictional hearing makes a timely objection to specific hearsay statements contained in the report, the petitioner must then satisfy additional statutory requirements regarding the statements to which an objection was made if those statements are to be the sole basis on which jurisdiction is to be found [Welf. & Inst. Code § 355].

At the jurisdiction hearing, as is generally true throughout the dependency case, parents and guardians have the continuing right to counsel, the right to utilize the subpoena power of the court, the right to present evidence, and the right to cross-examine the preparers of any reports submitted by the social services department [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 341, 353]. If the parent or guardian is present at the hearing and not represented by counsel, any objection that could have been made to evidence received by the court will be deemed to have been made unless the court has found that the parent or guardian has knowingly and intelligently waived his or her right to counsel [Welf. & Inst. Code § 355(a)]. The parent does not have the right, however, to claim the privilege not to testify against a spouse or the confidential marital communication privilege [Evid. Code §§ 972, 986].

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 328 JUVENILE COURTS: DEPENDENCY PROCEEDINGS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Overview of Dependency Proceedings

28-328 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 328.15

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser Editorial Consultant John P. Passalacqua Contributing Author Jennifer Kaye Williams Contributing Author

§ 328.15 Summary of Disposition Hearing

If the juvenile court makes a jurisdictional finding by at least a preponderance of the evidence that a child comes within Welf. & Inst. Code § 300, the court then conducts a disposition hearing [Welf. & Inst. Code § 358]. The social services department bears the burden of proof at a disposition hearing that it can meet through the submission of a report.

The parents and guardians have the same continuing rights including the right to counsel, the right to utilize the court's subpoena power, and the right to present evidence [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 317, 341, 358].

The first decision the court must make after hearing evidence at the dispositional hearing is whether to:

- Dismiss the case despite the fact that it has jurisdiction [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.695(a)(1)].
- Order informal services without declaring dependency [Welf. & Inst. Code § 360(b)].
- Appoint a guardian if all parties are in agreement [Welf. & Inst. Code § 360(a)].
- Declare the child to be a dependent child of the juvenile court [Welf. & Inst. Code § 360(d)].

If the child is declared to be a dependent child of the juvenile court, the court then considers whether the child may remain with the custodial parent or whether the child must be removed from the parent pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 361(c).

The child must remain with the parent unless the social services department can prove by clear and convincing evidence that even with the provision of services there is no reasonable means by which the child can be protected without removal from the home. Dispositional findings for removal from a custodial parent must be made by clear and convincing evidence [Cynthia D. v. Superior Court (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 242, 248, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 698, 851 P.2d 1307 , citing Welf. & Inst. Code former § 361(b) (now see Welf. & Inst. Code § 361(c)) and Cal. Rules of Ct., former Rule 1456(c) (now see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.695)].

If the child is not removed from the custodial parent the case becomes a "family maintenance" case. In such cases the court must order the parent to participate in child welfare services under a family maintenance plan that may include a parenting course, counseling, attendance at substance abuse meetings or classes, or such other programs as the court determines necessary [see Welf. & Inst. Code § 362]. The court may also place limitations on the parents' control over the child to include limitations on medical and educational decisions, visitation with others, or such other limitations as are necessary for the protection of the child [Welf. & Inst. Code § 361(a)].

If the child is removed from the custodial parent or legal guardian and a previously noncustodial parent desires custody of the child the court must place the child with that noncustodial parent unless to do so would be detrimental to the child [Welf. & Inst. Code § 361.2(a)]. This includes the court's removal of the child from the custody of a legal guardian previously appointed under the Probate Code [In re Catherine H. (2002) 102 Cal. App. 4th 1284, 1288-1291, 126 Cal. Rptr. 2d 342] . Only mothers and presumed fathers [Fam. Code § 7611] have the right to such placement [In re Zacharia D. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 435, 454, 24 Cal. Rptr. 2d 751, 862 P.2d 751] . The burden of proof for a finding that it would be detrimental to the child to place him or her with the previously noncustodial parent is clear and convincing evidence [In re Marquis D. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 1813, 1827-1829, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 198] .

A biological father who has not achieved presumed father status but has established paternity may be considered for placement of the child, however, particularly if the biological father has sought at the earliest opportunity to take an active paternal role in the child's life [see In re Zacharia D. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 435, 451, 24 Cal. Rptr. 2d 751, 862 P.2d 751 , discussing Adoption of Kelsey S. (1992) 1 Cal. 4th 816, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 615, 823 P.2d 1216] .

If the child cannot remain or be placed with either parent the juvenile court and the social services department must give full consideration to placing the child in proximity to the parents so as to facilitate visitation and reunification [Fam. Code § 7950(a)]. In so doing, they must first consider the home of any relative seeking placement of the child [Welf. & Inst. Code § 361.3(a); Fam. Code § 7950(a)(1)]. An adult who is a grandparent, aunt, uncle, or sibling, who seeks placement of the child is given preferential consideration for such placement. Other adult relatives may also be considered, but are not entitled to preferential consideration [Welf. & Inst. Code § 361.3(c)(2)]. Preferential consideration does not mean the relative seeking placement will actually have the child placed in their home. It only means the placement shall be the first placement to be considered and investigated [Welf. & Inst. Code § 361.3(c)(1)]. Such factors as the wishes of the parent and child, the good moral character of the relative and any adult living in the home of the relative, placement of siblings and half-siblings in the same home, the relative's willingness to protect the child, to facilitate visitation and reunification efforts, the safety of the relative's home, the ability and desire of the relative to provide legal permanence for the child if reunification efforts fail, and the child's best interests are taken into account in making the actual placement decision [Welf. & Inst. Code § 361.3(a)]. Since a relative caretaker will be considered for adoption or legal guardianship if reunification efforts fail [Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26(c)(4), (k)], the ability and desire of the relative to provide a safe and stable home for the child on a long-term basis is an important part of any relative placement decision, although it cannot be the sole basis for precluding a preferential relative placement [Welf. & Inst. Code § 361.3(a)(6), (a)(7)(H)]. If the court does not place the child with a relative who has been considered for placement under Welf. & Inst. Code § 361.3 the court must state on the record the reasons for denying placement with the relative [Welf. & Inst. Code § 361.3(e)].

If the child is not placed with a relative, consideration should also be given to placing the child with a "nonrelative extended family member" [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 309(d), 362.7]. A "nonrelative extended family member" is defined as an adult caregiver who has an established familial or mentoring relationship with the child that has been verified by the social services agency [Welf. & Inst. Code § 36328.7]. The home of a "nonrelative extended family member" must be evaluated and approved in the same way that relative homes are evaluated and approved [Welf. & Inst. Code § 309(d)].

If placement of the child with a relative is not in the child's best interest or cannot be accomplished the child is usually placed in a foster home. As with relative placements, foster care placements should be selected very carefully; ultimately, the home in which the child is placed may receive preferential consideration for adoption if parental rights are eventually terminated [Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26(k)] or receive legal guardianship if parental rights are not terminated [Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26(c)(4)].

The court must give the parents notice that if they do not reunify with their child within 12 months from the date the child entered foster care for a child three years of age or older at the time of removal, or six months from disposition hearing as set forth in Welf. & Inst. Code § 361.5(a) for a child under the age of 3 years at the time of removal or who is a member of a sibling group that was removed at the same time and one of the siblings was under the age of 3 years at the time of initial removal, a permanent plan will be selected that may include terminating their parental rights [Welf. & Inst. Code § 361.5(a)].

If the child is removed from the custodial parent and placed with a previously noncustodial parent the court may choose to provide family maintenance services to the parent assuming custody, family reunification services to the parent from whom the child was removed, or both [see Welf. & Inst. Code § 361.2(b)(3)].

If the child is removed from the custodial parent or parents and is not placed with a previously noncustodial parent, the juvenile court must consider ordering reunification services. In most cases reunification services must be provided to parents if their child has been removed from their custody [Welf. & Inst. Code § 361.5(a)].

Significantly, the child shall be involved in developing the case plan to the extent appropriate due to the child's age and development [Welf. & Inst. Code § 16501.1(f)(1)]. Further, in addition to being given a meaningful opportunity to participate in the development of the case plan, the child shall be allowed to state his or her preference for foster care placement. If the child is 12 years of age or older, and in a permanent placement, the child shall also be given the opportunity to review, sign, and have a copy of the case plan [Welf. & Inst. Code § 16501.1(f)(13)]. If the case plan's goal is for adoption or placement in another permanent home, a statement of the child's wishes regarding their permanent placement plan and an assessment of those wishes shall also be included [Welf. & Inst. Code § 16501.1(f)(15)].

The specific plan and services ordered must be designed to serve the particular needs of the individual family related to the reasons the child came into the system [Welf. & Inst. Code § 300], the reasons the child had to be removed from the custodial parent [Welf. & Inst. Code § 361(c)], and the reasons for non-placement with the non-custodial parent if that parent is seeking custody [Welf. & Inst. Code § 361.2(a); In re Terry H. (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 1847, 1857, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 271] . These plans must be case limited, case specific, and tailored to the needs of the family; the social services department must make a good faith effort to develop and implement these plans [see In re Christina L. (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 404, 414, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 680 ; see also California Ctr. for Jud. Educ. and Research, Cal. Judges Benchguides, Benchguide 102: Juvenile Dependency Disposition Hearing (Jan. 2009) §§ 102.64 to 102.66, pp. 102-61 to 102-64]. The specific statutory provisions for the requirements of the child welfare services case plan are found in Welf. & Inst. Code § 16501.1.

Reunification services are not required in all cases. Pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 361.5(b) reunification services must be denied if the court finds, by clear and convincing evidence, any one of 15 different statutory exceptions to the provision of services [Welf. & Inst. Code § 361.5(b)(1)-(15)]. The court may also order that no reunification services be provided to an incarcerated parent or guardian if it finds by clear and convincing evidence that to provide such services would be detrimental to the child [Welf. & Inst. Code § 361.5(e)(1)].

If the social services department is recommending that services not be provided under Welf. & Inst. Code § 361.5(b), the parent has a separate right to notice of that recommendation [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.686(b)] and the right to present evidence to show that such services should be provided [Welf. & Inst. Code § 361.5(c); see Riverside County Dep't of Pub. Soc. Servs. v. Superior Court (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 483, 492, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 777] .

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329

CHAPTER 328 JUVENILE COURTS: DEPENDENCY PROCEEDINGS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Overview of Dependency Proceedings

28-328 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 328.16

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser Editorial Consultant John P. Passalacqua Contributing Author Jennifer Kaye Williams Contributing Author

§ 328.16 Summary of Review and Permanency Hearings

Cases in which the child is declared a dependent of the juvenile court but is not removed from the custody of the parent or guardian or where the child has been returned to the custody of the parent or guardian as a dependent of the court are called family maintenance cases. Each family maintenance case must be reviewed by the court at least every six months [Welf. & Inst. Code § 364(a), (d)]. At least ten calendar days prior to the review hearing the social worker must provide to the court, the parties and their counsel a report that describes the services offered to the family, details the progress the family has made in addressing the conditions that caused the need for juvenile court supervision, and makes a recommendation regarding the need for continued dependency supervision [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 364(b), 364.05 (service of report in Los Angeles County); see also discussion in § 328.150 et seq.].

At the review hearing the court must terminate its jurisdiction unless it determines by a preponderance of the evidence that the conditions still exist within the family that would justify the initial assumption of jurisdiction or that if supervision is withdrawn that such conditions are likely to exist. The social worker bears the burden of proving the existence of such circumstances. If, however, the parent or guardian has failed to participate on a regular basis in any court ordered treatment program, such failure shall constitute prima facie evidence of the need for continued supervision [Welf. & Inst. Code § 364(c)].

If the child has been placed with a previously non-custodial parent and had dependency jurisdiction continued, the court shall determine at the in-home review hearing whether continued supervision is still necessary. The court may make juvenile custody orders awarding custody to that parent, make visitation and protective orders, and terminate its jurisdiction if appropriate [Welf. & Inst. Code § 362.4].

If the juvenile court does not terminate its jurisdiction at a family maintenance review hearing, it must set the matter for another review hearing to be held not more than six months later. At that future review hearing the court will repeat the process of review pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 364(c) [Welf. & Inst. Code § 364(d)]. There is no limit to the length of time during which the court can maintain its jurisdiction other than the child's twenty-first birthday [see Welf. & Inst. Code § 303], as long as the social services department can continue to prove the need for continuing supervision pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 364(c).

The juvenile court also must review the case of all children placed in foster or relative care no less frequently than once every six months. At least ten calendar days prior to the review hearing the social worker must file a report that describes the services provided or offered to the family, details the progress the family has made in addressing the conditions that caused the need for out of home placement, addresses the prognosis for possible return of the child to the custody of the parent or guardian, and makes a recommendation regarding the appropriate further disposition of the case. The report must also address the efforts that have been made to achieve legal permanence for the child if reunification efforts fail, including, but not limited to, efforts to maintain relationships between the child and individuals who are important to the child. If the recommendation is that the child not be returned to the parent, the report must specify why the return of the child to the parent would be detrimental [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 366.21(c), 366.05 (service of report in Los Angeles County)].

Prior to permanency planning, there is a statutory presumption at each status review and permanency hearing that the child will be returned to the custody of the parent or guardian. If the social services department is recommending that the child not be returned home it bears the burden of proof by a preponderance of the evidence to establish that return of the child to the custody of the parent or guardian will create a substantial risk of detriment to the child's safety, protection, or physical or emotional well-being. Failure of the parent or guardian to regularly participate in any court ordered treatment programs, however, will constitute a prima facie showing that return of the child would be detrimental [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 366.21(e), (f), 366.22(a), 366.25(a)]. If the child is not returned to the custody of the parent or guardian and reunification services are continued, the court must again advise the parent or guardian of the possibility of permanency planning and that parental rights may be terminated if reunification is not achieved by the date of the next review and permanency hearing [Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.21(e), (g)(1), 366.22(b)].

In addition to making findings and orders regarding whether or not to return the child to the custody of the parent or guardian, the court must also make findings regarding whether reasonable reunification services have been offered or provided to the parents. Unless terminating reunification services and setting a hearing under Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26, the court must also order that such services be initiated or continued. In making that order it can change or modify the terms of the reunification and service plan as appropriate [Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.21(e), (f); see also general discussion in § 328.151 et seq.]. The court should also review the concurrent permanency planning services that have been provided in the case and make such findings and orders as it deems appropriate.

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329

CHAPTER 328 JUVENILE COURTS: DEPENDENCY PROCEEDINGS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Overview of Dependency Proceedings

28-328 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 328.17

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser Editorial Consultant John P. Passalacqua Contributing Author Jennifer Kaye Williams Contributing Author

§ 328.17 Summary of Supplemental, Subsequent, and Modification Petitions

A subsequent petition pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 342 is filed by the social services department within an ongoing dependency case when it is alleged that additional grounds for juvenile court jurisdiction exist for a child who has already been declared a dependent child of the court. This petition must state the new grounds under Welf. & Inst. Code § 300 that are alleged. A subsequent petition is adjudicated following the same procedures and hearing process that is required for an original dependency petition [Welf. & Inst. Code § 342].

For detailed discussion of subsequent petitions, see § 328.142.

A supplemental petition pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 387 is filed by the social services department when there is a request for the court to order a change in placement that removes a dependent child from the custody of a parent, guardian, or relative and seeks to place the child in foster care or in a licensed facility. A common example is a move from court-ordered relative placement to foster care. The petition must state facts sufficient to support the conclusion that the court's previous orders have not been effective in the protection of the child or, in the case of a requested move from a court-ordered relative placement, that the placement with the relative is no longer appropriate in light of the criteria set forth in Welf. & Inst. Code § 361.3 [Welf. & Inst. Code § 387(a)-(b)]. Although the process is a post-dispositional proceeding and there is no new jurisdictional finding required, the hearing on the petition is to follow the general procedures required for a jurisdiction and disposition hearing. In this way the court first determines whether the allegations in the petition are true and then, if true, proceeds to a further dispositional hearing [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.565].

For detailed discussion of supplemental petitions, see § 328.141.

Throughout the dependency process any interested person, including the social worker, parent, guardian, CASA, or child, may petition the court for a modification of any of its previous orders based upon a change of circumstances or new evidence that makes a change of orders in the child's best interest [Welf. & Inst. Code § 388]. Petitions under this section must be liberally construed in favor of granting a hearing to consider the request [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.570; In re Marilyn H. (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 295, 309-310, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 544, 851 P.2d 826 ; see also In re Heather P. (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 886, 891, 257 Cal. Rptr. 545] . The burden of proof at a hearing on a supplemental petition under Welf. & Inst. Code § 388 is on the party who filed the petition [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.570].

For detailed discussion of petitions for modification of orders, see § 328.140.

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329

CHAPTER 328 JUVENILE COURTS: DEPENDENCY PROCEEDINGS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Overview of Dependency Proceedings

28-328 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 328.18

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser Editorial Consultant John P. Passalacqua Contributing Author Jennifer Kaye Williams Contributing Author

§ 328.18 Non-Statutory Hearings

Many courts regularly conduct non-statutory hearings. Such non-statutory hearings may be called visitation hearings, placement hearings, special hearings, 90-day review hearings, or a variety of other names dependent upon the county and the purpose of the hearing. In some instances the use of such hearings may appear to obviate the need for petitions being filed under Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 342 and 387, and particularly those under § 388. It shouldn't [In re Lance V. (2001) 90 Cal. App. 4th 668, 675-677, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 847 (change in visitation without filing of a Welf. & Inst. Code § 388 petition was error)]. Further, as a general rule a non-statutory hearing process should not be used when the type of order sought is specifically covered by express provisions of the statutory scheme, such as the many provisions that deal with placement of the child.

While the court may have the authority to conduct such non-statutory hearings, they are problematic for several reasons. In a time of limited courts and resources, if non-statutory hearings are too readily granted, as is frequently the case, they can contribute greatly to the congestion of calendars the juvenile courts already suffer. Further, to the extent that such hearings reduce the need for attorneys to monitor their cases and bring them back to the court under Welf. & Inst. Code § 388 if a change of orders is needed, the non-statutory hearings may contribute to a blurring of roles and may slow the development of effective counsel [Welf. & Inst. Code § 317.5(a)]. The greatest problem incurred with these non-statutory hearings, however, is the frequent lack of any clear notice requirements and standards for the conduct of the hearing [In re Lance V. (2001) 90 Cal. App. 4th 668, 676-677, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 847] . Unlike a hearing under Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 342, 387, and 388 or a regular review hearing under Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 364, 366.21, and 366.22, local practice often provides little in the way of formalized procedures and standards for such non-statutory hearings. This can make it difficult for the practitioner to know what the issues are, who has the burden of proof, what the burden is, and the like. This also can make it difficult for appellate review should an appeal or writ be taken from an adverse decision. As such, even if calendar congestion was not an issue, the advisability of conducting such non-statutory hearings would be open to substantial question. Nevertheless, practitioners need to be aware that many juvenile courts conduct such hearings and should take steps to familiarize themselves with local practice in this regard.

PRACTICE TIP:

Requesting Clarification. Since non-statutory hearings generally have no formal guidelines as to the conduct of the proceedings, counsel would be wise at the beginning of such hearings to ask for clarification on the record as to what the issue to be determined at the hearing is, which party bears the burden of proof on that issue, and what the burden is both in regard to the level of proof and what must be proven. If counsel has any objection to the clarification of the issues and burdens as stated by the court, such objection should be made both at this time and at closing argument. In this way counsel will be preserving the issues for any subsequent appellate proceedings as well as ensuring that counsel has an adequate understanding of the proceedings so as to allow the provision of effective assistance of counsel.

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 328 JUVENILE COURTS: DEPENDENCY PROCEEDINGS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Overview of Dependency Proceedings

28-328 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 328.19

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser Editorial Consultant John P. Passalacqua Contributing Author Jennifer Kaye Williams Contributing Author

§ 328.19 Summary of Procedure for Determining an Alternative Permanent Plan

If the permanent plan of return to parent cannot be safely accomplished within the statutory time limits, a court may order a hearing pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26 to select and implement a alternative permanent plan for the child. This hearing is sometimes formally called a "selection and implementation hearing" since it is at this hearing that the court both selects and implements the alternative permanent plan [see, e.g., Cynthia D. v. Superior Court (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 242, 247, 249, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 698, 851 P.2d 1307] . More commonly, however, such hearings are simply referred to as ".26" (pronounced "two six") hearings, taking the name from Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26 which governs the hearing itself [see, e.g., Guillermo G. v. Superior Court (1995) 33 Cal. App. 4th 1168, 1173, 39 Cal. Rptr. 2d 748] . This hearing should not be called a permanency planning hearing, since that name referred to the hearing held under former Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.25. Further, it should not be referred to as a permanency hearing, since the permanency hearing is the hearing held 12 months after the date the child entered foster care, the permanency review hearing is the hearing held 18 months after the original removal of the child from the physical custody of the parent or guardian, and the "subsequent permanency review hearing" (commonly called the "24-month hearing") is held 24 months after the date of the original removal [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 361.5(a), 366.21(f), 366.22(a), 366.25(a)].

A juvenile court's order that a hearing under Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26 be held to select and implement a permanent plan may be made at the disposition hearing, six-month review hearing, 12-month permanency hearing, 18-month permanency review hearing, or 24-month permanency review hearing. The criteria for setting a selection and implementation hearing depends on the hearing at which the order is sought.

PRACTICE TIP:

Most Likely Time for Order. In previous years these orders were most frequently made at 12-month and 18-month review hearings due to the very restrictive circumstances for ordering such a hearing from the disposition or six-month review hearings. As the number of grounds for the denial of services at disposition increases, however, this order is now often made at the disposition hearing [see Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 361.5(b) and (e)(1)]. Moreover, for children who are under the age of 3 at the time of removal, the presumptive time limit for reunification services is now six months from the date of the disposition hearing. This limitation on services may also apply to part or all of a sibling group if one of the group was under the age of 3 years on the date of the initial removal and the children were removed at the same time [Welf. & Inst. Code § 361.5(a)(3)]. As such, for those children the setting of a hearing pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26 is now often done at the six-month review [see Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 361.5(a)(2), 366.21(e)].

A hearing under Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26 may only be ordered when reunification services have been denied or terminated for all parents or guardians [see Welf. & Inst. Code § 361.5(b)(2)-(15), (e)(1)], since permanency planning is done for children, not for adults [see Welf. & Inst. Code § 361.5(f)]. However, a court may not order a selection and implementation hearing from the disposition hearing if services are denied under Welf. & Inst. Code § 361.5(b)(1) due to the whereabouts of the parent or guardian being unknown.

At the six-month review hearing the court may order a selection and implementation hearing if it finds by clear and convincing evidence that the parent has been convicted of a felony indicating parental unfitness, that the parent has failed to contact and visit the child during the previous six months, that the parent is deceased, or that the child was declared a dependent of the court under Welf. & Inst. Code § 300(g) due to the whereabouts of the parent being unknown and the whereabouts of the parent is still unknown [Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.21(e); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.710(f)(1); see also In re Monique S. (1993) 21 Cal. App. 4th 677, 682, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 863] . The court may also set the matter for a hearing pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26 if the child was under three years of age when initially removed from the parent or guardian, or is a member of a sibling group whose members were removed at the same time and one of the children was under the age of 3 years at the time of the initial removal, and the parent or guardian has failed to regularly participate and make "substantive progress" in the court-ordered treatment program [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 361.5(a)(2)-(3), 366.21(e)].

At the permanency hearing held 12 months after the child entered foster care the court must order a selection and implementation hearing if it does not return the child to the custody of a parent or guardian, finds that there is no substantial probability of return to the parent within 18 months of the original removal of the child and finds by clear and convincing evidence reasonable reunification services have been offered or provided to the parent or guardian [Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.21(g)(3)]. For purposes of conducting this hearing, the date the child entered foster care is the date of the jurisdiction finding or 60 days from the date of the original removal of the child from the physical custody of the parent or guardian, whichever occurs first [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 361.49, 361.5(a), 366.21(e)-(f)].

At the permanency review hearing held within 18 months of the date the child was originally removed from the physical custody of the parent or guardian the court must order a Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26 hearing if it does not order the return of the child to the custody of the parent or guardian [Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.22(a)]. The court has discretion, however, to order additional services instead of setting a selection and implementation hearing if it determines that reasonable services have not been provided [In re Dino E. (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 1768, 1779, 8 Cal. Rptr. 2d 416] . Effective January 1, 2009, in limited circumstances involving a parent in a substance abuse treatment program or a parent recently released from incarceration or institutionalization, the juvenile court may also continue the matter for a 24-month hearing [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 366.22(b), 366.25].

At any of the five points where the court can order a hearing pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26 the court can instead order that a permanent plan of long-term foster care be implemented if it finds by clear and convincing evidence based upon the evidence already before it that the child is not a proper subject for adoption and that there is no one willing to accept a legal guardianship [see Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 366.21(g)(2), 366.22(a), 366.25(a)(3); see also discussion in § 328.153[3]]. The court may not avoid the setting of a hearing under Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26, however, on the grounds that it believes that one of the exceptions to the termination of parental rights found in that section exist or upon the belief that long-term foster care is in the child's best interest [see In re John F. (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 1365, 1374-1379, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 225] .

For detailed discussion regarding permanency planning procedures, see § 328.170 et seq.

A hearing pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26 must be heard within 120 days of the hearing from which it was set [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 361.5(f), 366.21(e), (g)(3); 366.22(a)].

The social services department must prepare a full report for the court regarding the child, the relationship of the child to the parent or guardian, and any prospective adoptive parent or legal guardian [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 361.5(g), 366.21(i), 366.22(b)]. The parent or guardian, all counsel of record, and any court appointed special advocate are to receive a copy of the assessment at least 10 calendar days prior to the hearing and the child's custodian and the tribe of any Indian child are to receive a summary of the recommendations [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.725(c); cf. Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.21(c)].

The parent or guardian including any alleged fathers, the child if ten years of age or older, any court-appointed special advocate, and all counsel of record are to be notified of the hearing at least 45 days before it except in those cases where the social services department is recommending termination of parental rights and the whereabouts of the parent are unknown despite a diligent search [Welf. & Inst. Code § 294]. If the child has any siblings in the dependency system, or if the court knows or has reason to know the child is an Indian child, additional notice is also required [Welf. & Inst. Code § 294]. No notice need be given, however, to a parent or alleged father who has relinquished the child for adoption or to an alleged father who has executed a denial of paternity and waiver of rights form [Welf. & Inst. Code § 294(b)]. Further, if the identity of one or both parents is unknown or uncertain, the court may issue an order dispensing with notice under certain circumstances [Welf. & Inst. Code § 294(g)].

Prior to the hearing pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26 the parent or guardian continues to have the right to work on his or her own toward reunification. The parent or guardian also has the right to file a petition pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 388 to seek a modification of the orders setting the selection and implementation hearing and to vacate that hearing if the parent or guardian can show a change of circumstances or new evidence that would make a change of order in the child's best interest [Welf. & Inst. Code § 388; In re Marilyn H. (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 295, 309-310, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 544, 851 P.2d 826 ; see also discussion in § 328.18 and general discussion in § 328.140 et seq.].

The first question of fact for the court to consider at a selection and implementation hearing is whether the child is adoptable. The social services department bears the burden of proving by clear and convincing evidence that if parental rights are terminated it is likely the child will be adopted. In so doing it is not required that the child actually be in an approved adoptive home, but that the social services department proves that the child is likely to be adopted [In re Amelia S. (1991) 229 Cal. App. 3d 1060, 1065, 280 Cal. Rptr. 503] .

If the court finds by clear and convincing evidence that it is likely the child would be adopted if parental rights are terminated, and the court does not utilize the relative guardianship cutout found in Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26(c)(1)(A), it must terminate parental rights unless it is demonstrated that termination of parental rights would be detrimental to the child pursuant to one of the six circumstances in Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26(c)(1)(B). These circumstances are as follows:

- The parent or guardian has maintained regular visitation and contact with the child and the child would benefit from continuing that relationship [Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26(c)(1)(B)(i)].

- The child is 12 years of age or older and objects to the termination of parental rights [Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26(c)(1)(B)(ii)].

- The child is in a residential treatment facility, adoption is unlikely or undesirable, and continuing parental rights will not prevent finding a permanent placement for the child if the parents cannot resume custody of the child when residential care is no longer necessary [Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26(c)(1)(B)(iii)].

- The child is living with a foster parent or Indian custodian who is unable or unwilling to adopt the child due to exceptional circumstances, but who is willing to accept legal responsibility for the child and is willing and capable of providing the child with a stable and permanent home, and removal of the child from that home would be detrimental to the child's emotional well-being [Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26(c)(1)(B)(iv)]. This exception does not apply, however, to a child who is either under 6 years of age or a member of a sibling group, with a sibling under age 6, which is or should be permanently placed together.

- The termination of parental rights would create substantial interference with a child's sibling relationship, taking into consideration the nature and extent of the relationship, including, but not limited to, whether the child and the sibling were raised in the same home, whether they shared significant common experiences or have existing close and strong bonds with each other, and whether ongoing contact is in the child's best interest, including the child's long-term emotional interest, as compared with the benefit of legal permanence through adoption [Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26(c)(1)(B)(v)].

- The child is an Indian child as defined by the Indian Child Welfare Act and the court determines termination of parental rights would not be in the Indian child's best interest for a reason directly related to that status, including but not limited to: (i) the termination of parental rights would substantially interfere with the child's connection with his or her tribal community, or with the child's tribal membership rights; or (ii) the child's tribe has identified a permanent plan other than adoption, such as guardianship, long-term foster care with a fit and willing relative, or another planned permanent living arrangement [Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26(c)(1)(B)(vi)]. Effective July 1, 2010, this exception will also include the possibility of a tribal adoption without the termination of parental rights.

There is no requirement that the court find termination is in the best interest of the child and no exception to termination of parental rights based upon the child's best interest [In re Tabatha G. (1996) 45 Cal. App. 4th 1159, 1164-1165, 53 Cal. Rptr. 2d 93 ; In re Jennifer J. (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 1080, 1089-1091, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 813] .

The person seeking to prove that adoption is detrimental to the child pursuant to one of these six circumstances bears the burden of proof [In re Lorenzo C. (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 1330, 1345, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 562 ; In re Cristella C. (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 1363, 1373, 8 Cal. Rptr. 2d 342] . This would include the social services agency if it seeks to have the court order a plan other than adoption for a child who is an adoptable child. The court also shall not terminate parental rights if it finds that at each and every hearing at which the court was required to consider the issue of reasonable services, it found that reasonable reunification efforts were not offered or provided [Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26(c)(2)]. If the court terminates parental rights it maintains jurisdiction and reviews the case every six months until the child is adopted [Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.3(a)].

For a complete discussion of the statutory exceptions to the termination of parental rights for an adoptable child, see § 328.171[5][a].

If the court does not terminate parental rights either because the child is not adoptable or because adoption would be detrimental to the child under one of the six statutory exceptions, the court then must consider the permanent plans of legal guardianship or another planned permanent living arrangement, such as permanent placement with a foster or relative caregiver committed to caring for the child on a permanent basis. Legal guardianship is to be considered before long-term foster care consistent with the best interests of the child and if a suitable guardian can be found [Welf. & Inst.

Code § 366.26(c)(4)]. This is consistent with the state's policy that foster care is to be temporary [Welf. & Inst. Code § 396] and that children who cannot be reunified should be provided with stable permanent homes [In re Marilyn H. (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 295, 307, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 544, 851 P.2d 826] .

If the court determines that legal guardianship is appropriate it appoints the guardian and issues letters of guardianship. No separate guardianship proceeding is required [Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26(d)]. The court must also make visitation orders as part of its guardianship orders unless it finds that visitation with the parent would be detrimental to the child [Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26(c)(4)(C)]. Thereafter it will normally terminate dependency jurisdiction and retain jurisdiction over the child as a ward of the guardianship [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 5.735, 5.740; see also Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.4].

If the court does not terminate parental rights or appoint a legal guardian it will order another planned permanent living arrangement, such as permanent placement with a foster or relative caregiver committed to caring for the child on a permanent basis [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 366(a)(2), 366.26(c)(4)]. The parents continue to have a right of visitation unless visitation would be detrimental to the child [Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26(c)(4)(C)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Another Planned Permanent Living Arrangement. California is in a transition from having "long term foster or relative care" as an alternative permanent plan to having the plan be for "another planned permanent living arrangement." This new language is based on a change in the federal law and emphasizes that even for children who can't have adoption or guardianship as alternative plans, another plan that is more stable than long-term foster care is preferred, rather than the "foster care drift" so common with long-term foster care orders. Everyone should be aware of this need to find foster and relative caregivers who will commit to the long-term stability and care of the child even though they are not receiving adoption or legal guardianship.

Review hearings must continue to be heard every six months but may be heard by either the court or by a local review board unless the parents, guardians or the child request review by the court. At the review there is a presumption for continued out of home care unless the parent or guardian prove that further efforts at reunification are in the child's best interest [Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.3(d)-(e)].

At any post-permanency planning review conducted by the court where the permanent plan is long-term foster or relative care, and at least every 12 months, the court must review the continuing appropriateness of the permanent plan. The court must consider all permanency planning options for the child including adoption, legal guardianship, and even return to the home of the parent. Only if the court finds by clear and convincing evidence that the child is not a proper subject for adoption and that no one is willing to accept legal guardianship can it order that the child remain in another planned permanent living arrangement, such as permanent placement with a foster or relative caregiver committed to caring for the child on a permanent basis. In all other cases it must order that a hearing be held pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26 [Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.3(g)].

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 328 JUVENILE COURTS: DEPENDENCY PROCEEDINGS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Overview of Dependency Proceedings

28-328 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 328.20

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser Editorial Consultant John P. Passalacqua Contributing Author Jennifer Kaye Williams Contributing Author

§ 328.20 Summary of Appeal of Findings and Order

A parent or guardian normally has the right to appeal a juvenile court's findings and orders from each of the various hearings throughout the dependency process beginning with the disposition hearing [Welf. & Inst. Code § 395].

Nevertheless, if the court sets a selection and implementation hearing pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26 and the parent or guardian desires to challenge the juvenile court's findings upon which that order is based, a petition for extraordinary writ relief must be filed in the court of appeal [Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26(l)]. If a timely filed writ petition that is supported by an adequate record is summarily denied or otherwise not decided on the merits, the specific issues raised therein may again be raised on appeal from the Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26 hearing. Failure to file such a petition for extraordinary writ, however, precludes challenging the setting of a selection and implementation hearing on appeal from that hearing [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 8.450, 8.452].

For detailed discussion of appeals and writs, see § 328.189 et seq.

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 328 JUVENILE COURTS: DEPENDENCY PROCEEDINGS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Overview of Dependency Proceedings

28-328 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 328.21-328.29

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser Editorial Consultant John P. Passalacqua Contributing Author Jennifer Kaye Williams Contributing Author

[Reserved]

§§ 328.21[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 328 JUVENILE COURTS: DEPENDENCY PROCEEDINGS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Intake, Investigation, and Petition Procedures

28-328 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 328.30

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser Editorial Consultant John P. Passalacqua Contributing Author Jennifer Kaye Williams Contributing Author

§ 328.30 Temporary Custody by Peace Officer

[1] Grounds

Any peace officer may, without a warrant, take into temporary custody a child in the following circumstances [Welf. & Inst. Code § 305]:

- When the officer has reasonable cause for believing that the child is a person described in Welf. & Inst. Code § 300 and, in addition, that the child has an immediate need for medical care, or the child is in immediate danger of physical or sexual abuse, or the physical environment or the fact that the child is left unattended poses an immediate threat to the child's health or safety [Welf. & Inst. Code § 305(a)]. In cases in which the child is left unattended, the peace officer must first attempt to contact the child's parent or guardian to determine if the parent or guardian is able to assume custody of the child. If the parent or guardian cannot be contacted, the peace officer must notify a social worker in the county welfare department to assume custody of the child [Welf. & Inst. Code § 305(a)].

- When the child is in a hospital, and release of the child to a parent poses an immediate danger to the child's health or safety [Welf. & Inst. Code § 305(b)].

- When the child is a dependent child of the juvenile court, or concerning whom an order was made under Welf. & Inst. Code § 319 (detention of child not released from custody), and the officer has reasonable cause for believing that the child violated an order of the juvenile court or left any placement ordered by the juvenile court [Welf. & Inst. Code § 305(c)].

- When the child is found in any street or public place suffering from any sickness or injury that requires care, medical treatment, hospitalization, or other remedial care [Welf. & Inst. Code § 305(d)].

Any peace officer may also, without a warrant, take into temporary custody a child who is in a hospital if the release of the child to a prospective adoptive parent poses an immediate danger to the child's health or safety [Welf. & Inst. Code § 305.6(a)].

Notwithstanding the provisions of Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 305, and 305.6(a), a peace officer may not, without a warrant, take a child who is in a hospital into temporary custody if all of the following exist [Welf. & Inst. Code § 305.6(b)]:

- The child is a newborn who tested positive for illegal drugs or whose birth mother tested positive for illegal drugs [Welf. & Inst. Code § 305.6(b)(1)(A)].

- The child is the subject of a petition for adoption and a "Health Facility Minor Release Report," as prescribed by the California State DSS, has been completed by the hospital, including marking the boxes that apply to an independent or agency adoption, and signed by the placing birth parent or parents and the prospective adoptive parent or parents, prior to the discharge of the birth parent or the child from the hospital. Prior to signing the "Health Facility Minor Release Report" the birth parent or parents must be given and sign a written notice the release report does not constitute a consent to adoption or a relinquishment, and the child may be reclaimed at any time until an adoption placement agreement or relinquishment is signed by the birth parent or parents. The signed notice must be attached to the "Health Facility Minor Release Report [Welf. & Inst. Code § 305.6(b)(1)(B)].

- The release of the child to the prospective adoptive parent or parents does not pose an immediate danger to the child [Welf. & Inst. Code § 305.6(b)(1)(C)].

- An attorney or adoption agency has provided documentation stating he or she is representing the prospective adoptive parents in the adoption. If the adoption is an independent adoption, documentation must also be provided that shows the prospective adoptive parent or parents have been informed the child may be eligible for benefits under the Adoption Assistance Program (AAP) [Welf. & Inst. Code § 305.6(b)(1)(D)].

- A signed copy of the "Health Facility Minor Release Report" with the signed notice to the birth parent or parents and a copy of the petition for adoption is provided to the peace officer or representative of the local child protective services agency who is at the hospital to take the child into temporary custody [Welf. & Inst. Code § 305.6(b)(1)(E)]. A copy of an adoption placement agreement signed by the placing birth parent or parents and the prospective adoptive parent or parents may be used in lieu of the "Health Facility Minor Release Report" and notice to the birth parent or parents [Welf. & Inst. Code § 305.6(b)(4)].

A newborn child at a hospital who tested positive for illegal drugs or whose birth mother tested positive for illegal drugs may not be taken into temporary custody by a police officer without a warrant--again, despite the provisions of Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 305 and 305.6(a)--if all of the following are true:

- The child is the subject of a petition for adoption;

- The prospective adoptive parent or parents have been licensed to act as a foster parent or parents pending finalization of the adoption;

- The release of the child to the prospective adoptive parent or parents does not pose an immediate danger to the child; and

- The prospective adoptive parents or their representative provides a copy of the petition for adoption and of the licensure as a foster parent to the local child protective services agency or to the peace officer (who is at the hospital to take the child) [Welf. & Inst. Code § 305.6(b)(2)].

If the petition for adoption has not been filed with the court by the time the child is released to the custody of the prospective adoptive parent or parents, it must be filed within 15 calendar days of the date the birth parent is released from the hospital [Welf. & Inst. Code § 305.6(b)(3)].

Nothing in Welf. & Inst. Code § 305.6 is intended to create a duty requiring law enforcement to investigate the prospective adoptive parent or parents [Welf. & Inst. Code § 305.6(c)].

[2] Alternative Courses of Action

A peace officer who takes a child into temporary custody has several alternative courses of action. Under the provisions of Welf. & Inst. Code § 307, he or she may:

- Release the child [Welf. & Inst. Code § 307(a)].

- Prepare in duplicate a written notice for the parent or parents of the child to appear with the child before the social worker of the county in which the child was taken into custody at a time and place specified in the notice.

- The notice must also contain a concise statement of the reasons the child was taken into custody. The officer must deliver one copy of the notice to the child and a parent, guardian, or responsible relative of the child and may require the child and the parent, guardian, or relative to sign a written promise that he or she appear at the time and place designated in the notice. On execution of the promise to appear, the officer must immediately release the child. The officer must, as soon as practicable, file one copy of the notice with the social worker [Welf. & Inst. Code § 307(b)]. See further discussion of requirements regarding notice to parent in [3], below.

- The peace officer may take the child without unnecessary delay before the social worker of the county in which the child was taken into custody, or in which the child resides, or in which the acts take place or the circumstances exist that are alleged to bring the child within the provisions of Welf. & Inst. Code § 300, and deliver the child into the custody of the social worker [Welf. & Inst. Code § 307(c)].

In addition to the alternatives set forth in Welf. & Inst. Code § 307, an officer who takes a child into temporary custody may, if he or she deems that it is in the best interests of the child and the public, take the child to a community service program for abused and neglected children [Welf. & Inst. Code § 307.5].

In determining which disposition of the child will be made, the officer must give preference to the alternative that least interferes with the parents' or guardians' custody of the child if this alternative is compatible with the safety of the child. The officer must also consider the needs of the child for the least restrictive environment, and the protective needs of the community [Welf. & Inst. Code § 307(c)].

[3] Notice to Parents

[a] Regarding Procedural Rights and Custody of Child

A peace officer who takes a child into temporary custody under Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 305-307 must inform the parent, guardian, or relative that the child has been taken into custody and that a written statement is available explaining the parent's or guardian's procedural rights and the preliminary stages of the dependency hearing [see Welf. & Inst. Code § 307.4(a)].

[b] Regarding Location of Child

A peace officer or social worker who takes a child into custody pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 305-324, must also take immediate steps to notify the child's parent, guardian, or a responsible relative of the fact that the child has been placed in a facility that the law authorizes for the care of the child and must provide a telephone number to be used to contact the child. If the child has been placed with a licensed foster family, the address of that family shall remain confidential until the disposition hearing, unless the foster parent authorizes the release of the address. If the disposition hearing is delayed beyond the 60-day period from the detention of the child as set forth in Welf. & Inst. Code § 352(b), the court may in its discretion order release of the address to the parent, guardian, or responsible relative upon notification to the foster family [Welf. & Inst. Code § 308(a)].

[4] Referral to Community Service Agency

When a peace officer takes a child to a community service program pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 305, the receiving organization must take immediate steps to notify the child's parent, guardian, or a responsible relative of the place to which the child was taken [Welf. & Inst. Code § 307.5]. An agency receiving a child pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 307.5 must make an immediate investigation to determine what disposition should be made. If the agency does not initiate a service program within 20 days of a referral or 10 days of a delivery of a child, the agency must immediately notify the referring officer in writing [Welf. & Inst. Code § 328.3]. When the agency has not initiated a service program for the child within these time periods, the referring agency may, within 10 court days following receipt of the notice from the referral agency, apply to the social worker for a review of that decision [Welf. & Inst. Code § 331.5].

[5] Release of Child by Day-Care Facility

If a child day-care facility releases a child to a peace officer pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 305, the official in charge of the facility must provide the officer with the address and telephone number of the child's parent or guardian to enable the officer to make the notification required by Welf. & Inst. Code § 308 [Health & Safety Code § 1596.876].

[6] Confinement Limits on Detention in Facility for Dependent Children

Facilities for children alleged or adjudged to come within Welf. & Inst. Code § 300 (dependency) must be nonsecure. A "nonsecure facility" is one that is not characterized by the use of physically restricting construction, hardware, and procedures. It provides its residents access to the surrounding community with minimal supervision [Welf. & Inst. Code § 206].

A "nonsecure facility" may contain a small room for the protection of individual residents from themselves or others. It may also adopt regulations establishing reasonable hours for residents to come and go from the facility. These regulations must be based on a sensible and fair balance between allowing residents free access to the community, and providing the staff with sufficient authority to maintain order, limit unreasonable actions by residents, and insure that children placed in their care do not come and go at all hours of the day and night, or absent themselves at will for days at a time. The staff may control ingress and egress to the extent that a prudent parent would [Welf. & Inst. Code § 206; see Welf. & Inst. Code § 636.2 (operation and maintenance of nonsecure detention facilities); see also discussion in Ch. 327, Juvenile Courts: Jurisdiction and General Procedures, § 327.40].

No child alleged or adjudged to come within Welf. & Inst. Code § 300 may be held in temporary custody in any building that contains a jail or lockup for the confinement of adults, unless, while in the building, the child is under continuous supervision and is not permitted to come into or remain in contact with adults in custody in the building.

There must be direct and continuous supervision by a peace officer or other child protective agency worker until temporary custody of the child is assumed pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 309. Trained volunteers may assume these supervisory duties for up to three hours under some circumstances [see Welf. & Inst. Code § 206].

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329

CHAPTER 328 JUVENILE COURTS: DEPENDENCY PROCEEDINGS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Intake, Investigation, and Petition Procedures

28-328 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 328.31

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser Editorial Consultant John P. Passalacqua Contributing Author Jennifer Kaye Williams Contributing Author

§ 328.31 Initial Investigation by Social Worker

[1] When Duty to Investigate Arises

On delivery to the social worker of a child who has been taken into temporary custody, the social worker must immediately investigate the circumstances of the child and the facts surrounding his or her being taken into custody [Welf. & Inst. Code § 309(a)].

Additionally, if the social worker has cause to believe that there was or is within the county, or residing therein, a person falling within the definition of a dependent child, the social worker must immediately make any investigation as he or she deems necessary to determine if child welfare services should be offered or if proceedings in the juvenile court should be commenced [Welf. & Inst. Code § 328]. However, a social worker is not required to undertake an investigation with respect to a child delivered or referred to any agency pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 307.5 [Welf. & Inst. Code § 328; see discussion in § 328.40[2]].

The social worker must immediately make such investigation as he or she deems necessary to determine whether proceedings in the juvenile court should be commenced [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 328, 329].

[2] Temporary Custody of Child

[a] Social Worker's Authority

Regardless of whether the county board of supervisors has delegated the duties of the probation officer to the social services department pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 272(a), a social worker may take a child into custody pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 306 [Welf. & Inst. Code § 272(c)]. Pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 306, the social worker may:

- Receive and maintain, pending investigation, temporary custody of a child who is described in Welf. & Inst. Code § 300 (specifying children who may be adjudged dependents of the juvenile court) and who has been delivered by a peace officer [Welf. & Inst. Code § 306(a)(1)].

- Take into and maintain temporary custody of, without a warrant, a child who has been declared a dependent child of the juvenile court under Welf. & Inst. Code § 300, or who the social worker has reasonable cause to believe is a person described in Welf. & Inst. Code § 300(b) (serious physical harm or illness as a result of lack of adequate supervision, protection, or provision) or (g) (lack of care and support), and the social worker has reasonable cause to believe that the child has an immediate need for medical care or is in immediate danger of physical or sexual abuse, or the physical environment poses an immediate threat to the child's health or safety [Welf. & Inst. Code § 306(a)(2)].

[b] Factors to be Considered

Before taking a child into custody, a social worker must consider whether there are any reasonable services available to the worker that, if provided to the child's parent, guardian, caretaker, or to the child, would eliminate the need to remove the child from the custody of those persons. The social worker must also consider whether a referral to public assistance under Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 11200 et seq. (California Work Opportunity and Responsibility to Kids Act), 14000 et seq. (Basic Health Care), 17000 et seq. (County Aid and Relief to Indigents), and 18900 et seq. (Food Stamps) would eliminate the need to take temporary custody of the child. If those public assistance services are available, they must be utilized. The social worker must also consider whether a "nonoffending" caretaker can provide for and protect the child from abuse and neglect. Finally, the social worker must consider whether the alleged perpetrator voluntarily agrees to leave the residence, does leave the residence, and is likely to remain away from the residence [Welf. & Inst. Code § 306(b)]. In this way the law requires the social worker to consider whether there is any way to remove the risk from the child, rather than removing the child from the risk.

[c] Notice to Parents

A social worker who takes a child into temporary custody under Welf. & Inst. Code § 306 must inform the parent, guardian, or relative that the child has been taken into custody and that a written statement is available explaining the parent's or guardian's procedural rights and the preliminary stages of the dependency investigation and hearing [see Welf. & Inst. Code § 307.4(a)].

[d] Placement with Siblings and Half-Siblings

When a child is brought into custody under Welf. & Inst. Code § 306, the social worker is to place the child with any other siblings or half-siblings who are also detained, if that is practical and appropriate. If the child is not placed with the other siblings or half-siblings who are also detained, the report prepared pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 319 is to include a statement of the social worker's continuing efforts to place the siblings together or why such efforts are not appropriate [Welf. & Inst. Code § 306.5].

[3] Requirement That Child Over Three Be Interviewed

The social worker must interview any child four years of age or older who is a subject of an investigation, and who is in juvenile hall or another custodial facility, or has been removed to a foster home, to ascertain the child's view of the home environment. If proceedings are commenced, the social worker must include the substance of the interview in any written report submitted at an adjudicatory hearing, or, if no report is then received in evidence, the social worker must include the substance of the interview in the social study required by Welf. & Inst. Code § 358 [Welf. & Inst. Code § 328].

[4] Requirements for Continued Custody

The social worker is required to release the child immediately unless one of the following conditions exist [Welf. & Inst. Code § 309(a)]:

- The child has no parent, guardian, or responsible relative; or the child's parent, guardian, or responsible relative is not willing to provide care for the child.

- Continued detention of the child is a matter of immediate and urgent necessity for the protection of the child, and there are no reasonable means by which the child can be protected in his or her home or the home of a responsible relative.

- There is substantial evidence that a parent, guardian, or custodian of the child is likely to flee the jurisdiction of the court.

- The child has left a placement made by the juvenile court.

- The parent or other person having lawful custody of a child that is 72 hours old or younger has voluntarily surrendered the child pursuant to Health & Safety Code § 1255.7 and has not reclaimed the child within the 14-day period specified in that section.

If the child is not released to his or her parent or guardian, he or she is deemed detained for the purposes of Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 305-324 [Welf. & Inst. Code § 309(c)].

[5] Temporary Custody for Medical Care

In any case in which there is reasonable cause for believing that a child who is under the care of a physician or surgeon or a hospital, clinic, or other medical facility and cannot be immediately moved is a person subject to the jurisdiction of the juvenile court as a dependent child under Welf. & Inst. Code § 300, a "hospital hold" may be placed on the child and the child is deemed to have been taken into temporary custody and delivered to the social worker while he or she is at the office of the physician or surgeon or such medical facility [Welf. & Inst. Code § 309(b)]. Once a "hospital hold" is placed on the child, the time for the filing of a petition in the juvenile court begins [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 309(b), 311(a), 313(a)]. In this way the parent has a forum in which to challenge the "hospital hold" and detention of the child, just as if the child had actually been removed from the parent and placed in shelter care.

[6] Physical Examination by Medical Specialist

California statutory law provides that when a child is brought into protective custody and allegations of physical or sexual abuse come to the attention of law enforcement or social services, the local law enforcement agency or social services department may consult with a medical practitioner with "specialized training in detecting and treating child abuse injuries and neglect" to determine if it would be appropriate to have a physical examination of the child. If appropriate, the child shall be examined by a medical practitioner with such specialized training. Whenever possible, that examination shall be done within 72 hours of the child being brought into custody or, if the allegations are made when the child is already in protective custody, within 72 hours of the allegations being made. The results of any such physical examination are to be provide to the court and all counsel. The failure to have such an examination is not grounds to deny a dependency petition [Welf. & Inst. Code § 324.5(a)].

California statutory law also provides that in cases of known or suspected sexual abuse of children, "the consent of the parents or legal guardian is not required" for examination and treatment of the child [Penal Code § 13823.11(c)(5)]. A federal decision, however, provides different guidance. The majority in the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals case held that absent a "reasonable concern that material physical evidence might dissipate" or that "some urgent medical problem exists requiring immediate attention, the state is required to notify parents and to obtain judicial approval before children are subjected to investigatory physical examinations" without parental consent [Wallis v. Spencer (9th Cir. 1999) 202 F.3d 1126, 1141] . In a footnote, the majority observed on rehearing that there was "no apparent conflict" between its decision and Welf. & Inst. Code § 324.5 [Wallis v. Spencer (9th Cir. 1999) 202 F.3d 1126, 1141, fn. 12]. The decision does not mention or address, however, the provisions of Penal Code § 13823.11(c)(5) which specifically provide the consent of the parent is not required. Further, the dissent noted the issue of a city policy regarding medical examinations in the case was never alleged or argued, and there was no evidence addressing it. Thus, the dissent observed the possibility of a city policy regarding medical examinations of children "was invented here; the discussion with respect to it is dicta, as it clearly is not necessary to the decision to reverse; and we have no business inventing an issue and a constitutional right or two to resolve it" [Wallis v. Spencer (9th Cir. 1999) 202 F.3d 1126, 1145-1146 , dis. opn. of Rymer, J, emphasis in original]. Additionally, the Wallis decision was not a case where there were any allegations of sexual abuse, making the medical examination particularly inappropriate and distinguishable. A more balanced approach is that found in the case of Darryl H. v. Coler (7th Cir. Ill. 1986) 801 F. 2d 893 , which the Ninth Circuit distinguished in Calabretta [Calabretta v. Floyd (9th Cir. Cal. 1999) 189 F. 3d 808, 818-819] . The Seventh Circuit's decision held there was no requirement for a search warrant or probable cause for a strip search of a young child, only reasonable cause [Darryl H. v. Coler (7th Cir. Ill. 1986) 801 F. 2d 893, 895-896, 899-904] . Under this approach only reasonable cause would be required before a medical examination for possible evidence of sexual abuse is conducted, something wholly consistent with Welf. & Inst. Code § 324.5 and Penal Code § 13823.11(c)(5). Nevertheless, the Wallis decision is a disturbing one, and one that may be found to be controlling. Pending further clarification of the law, government agencies should seek the advice of counsel and tread carefully in this regard. When in doubt, the better practice will be to adhere to the majority's requirements in Wallis while watching the area for further development.

Should the child need additional medical examinations for abuse or neglect at a later point in time, the social services agency shall, whenever possible, request the additional examinations be conducted by the same medical practitioner who performed the earlier examination. Moreover, if the child is referred to a different medical practitioner for ongoing diagnosis and treatment, the social services agency shall ensure the child is treated by a medical practitioner with "specialized training in detecting and treating child abuse injuries and neglect" and that the child's medical records of current and previous incidents of abuse are made available to that practitioner [Welf. & Inst. Code § 324.5(b)].

[7] Written Promise to Appear as Condition of Release

As a condition for the release of a child, the social worker may require the child or his or her parent, guardian, or relative, or both, to sign a written promise that either or both of them will appear before the social worker at the juvenile hall or other suitable place designated by the social worker at a specified time [Welf. & Inst. Code § 310].

[8] Assessment of Available Relatives and "Nonrelative Extended Family Members"

If the child is not returned to the parent or guardian, the social worker must also initiate an assessment of the suitability of any able and willing relative who is available and requests temporary placement of the child pending the detention hearing. The assessment must include an in-home visit to assess the safety and suitability of the home, as well as a consideration of the results of a criminal records check of the relative and other adults living in the home. The criminal records check may be conducted by an appropriate government agency through the California Law Enforcement Telecommunications System (CLETS) pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 16504.5. For purposes of this assessment "relative" is defined as set forth in Welf. & Inst. Code § 319 [Welf. & Inst. Code § 309(d)(1)]. The social worker may also consider temporary placement of the child pending the detention hearing in the home of a "nonrelative extended family member" as defined in Welf. & Inst. Code § 362.7 [Welf. & Inst. Code § 309(d)(1)]. These initial efforts for possible temporary placement of the child should be viewed as a first step in the more complete process for notifying relatives now required by Welf. & Inst. Code § 309(e).

For purposes of temporary placement in the assessed home of a relative or nonrelative extended family member, the standards used to determine the home's suitability for placement shall be the same as those set forth in the regulations for the licensing of foster family homes, except for the criminal records check conducted under Welf. & Inst. Code § 16504.5 [Welf. & Inst. Code § 309(d)(1)].

PRACTICE TIP (PARENT'S P.O.V.):

The Role of Parent's Counsel Regarding Concurrent Planning. It is common for parents to want to keep the existence of dependency proceedings confidential from family members and non-related extended family members. Parents should be counseled early and often about the requirements of Welf. & Inst. Code § 309(e), and the potential benefits of keeping children connected with family and friends. These connections reduce trauma, create placement options, and increase visitation and the potential for continued contact in the event of an adoption. Parent's counsel must also take an active role in making sure relatives and non-related extended family members come forward, cooperate with the agency, and get assessed timely and fairly.

Immediately after temporary placement of a child in the home of a relative or nonrelative extended family member, the county welfare agency must evaluate the home for purposes of AFDC-FC eligibility pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 11402. The agency must approve or deny approval of the home. The standards used to evaluate and to grant or deny approval of the home of a relative or "nonrelative extended family member" for temporary placement pending the detention hearing is to be the same as those standards used for the licensing of foster homes regarding the standards of safety and sanitation for the home, supervision of the child, and services provided by the caregiver [Welf. & Code § 309(d)(2)].

To the extent allowed by federal funding laws, if the social worker has not received the Federal Bureau of Investigation's criminal history of the relative or "nonrelative extended family member," but that relative or "nonrelative extended family member" meets all other conditions for approval, the county welfare department may approve the home if the relative or "nonrelative extended family member," and any other adult living in the home, has signed and submitted a statement that he or she has never been convicted of a crime in the United States other than a traffic infraction. If the county welfare department later determines the relative, "nonrelative extended family member," or any other adult living in the home has a criminal record, the approval may be terminated [Welf. & Inst. Code § 309(d)(3)].

If the criminal records check indicates the relative, nonrelative extended family member, or other adult living in the home has been convicted of a crime for which the social services agency cannot grant an exemption under Health & Safety Code § 1522, the child shall not be placed in the home. If the criminal records check indicates the person has been convicted of a crime for which the social services agency may grant an exemption under Health & Safety Code § 1522, the child shall not be placed in the home unless a criminal records exemption has been granted based on "substantial and convincing evidence to support a reasonable belief" the person with the criminal conviction is of such good character as to justify the placement and not present a danger to the child [Welf. & Inst. Code § 309(d)(4)].

To avoid having to move the child multiple times, the social worker should be cautious regarding temporary placements with relatives and "nonrelative extended family members" pending the detention hearing if there is any ground for concern the relative or "nonrelative extended family member" will not be approved for ongoing placement. Further, it is important to recognize that the requirements set forth in statute and regulations regarding the standards for approving the homes of relatives, nonrelative extended family members, and foster family homes are not just funding requirements. Instead, they are conditions that have been deemed generally necessary to ensure the safety and well-being of children.

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329

CHAPTER 328 JUVENILE COURTS: DEPENDENCY PROCEEDINGS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Intake, Investigation, and Petition Procedures

28-328 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 328.32

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser Editorial Consultant John P. Passalacqua Contributing Author Jennifer Kaye Williams Contributing Author

§ 328.32 Search Warrants in Child Welfare Investigations

In August 1999 the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals handed down its decision in the case of Calabretta v. Floyd (9th Cir. 1999) 189 F.3d 808 . The Calabretta case dealt with the question of whether law enforcement and social services could enter a home without a search warrant to investigate the welfare of a child in the absence of either consent or exigent circumstances. Two issues clearly presented themselves: whether a search warrant was required in such circumstances and, if it was, whether the law on that issue was clearly established such that the county and its officers and workers in the case were properly denied qualified immunity by the trial court. The court ruled against the government on both issues, pointing primarily to dicta in its decision in the case of White by White v. Pierce County (9th Cir. 1986) 797 F.2d 812 as controlling, holding that a search warrant was required in the absence of consent or exigent circumstances and that no reasonable government official would have believed otherwise [Calabretta v. Floyd (9th Cir. 1999) 189 F.3d 808, 813-818] .

The holding in Calabretta that the law requiring a search warrant in child welfare investigations to enter a home in the absence of consent or exigent circumstances was clearly established prior to its decision is questionable, if not erroneous. As most practitioners in California's dependency system are well aware, law enforcement officers and social workers in this state have been taught for years that search warrants are not required in child welfare investigations. This is not surprising for a number of reasons. First, California's search warrant statute does not address the issuance of search warrants for child welfare investigations that do not rise to the level of criminal conduct [Penal Code § 1524]. Second, California law is clear the exclusionary rule applied to Fourth Amendment violations in criminal cases does not apply in dependency cases, since the protection of the child is paramount [In re Malinda S. (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 368, 384, 272 Cal. Rptr. 787, 795 P.2d 1244 , citing In re Mary S. (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 414, 418-419, 230 Cal. Rptr. 726 ; In re Christopher B. (1978) 82 Cal. App. 3d 608, 615, 147 Cal. Rptr. 390 ; In re Robert P. (1976) 61 Cal. App. 3d 310, 321, 132 Cal. Rptr. 5] . Further, for those who may have read White, the dicta contained in that case is a generic transitional statement; it appears the question of whether a search warrant was required in child welfare investigations was not actually considered. Instead, that case was determined on whether the law enforcement officers had probable cause to believe the child had been abused and would be injured or could not be taken into custody if a court order were required, as set forth in the law of the State of Washington at that time; the court finding that if the state law were complied with, constitutional requirements had also been met [White by White v. Pierce County (9th Cir. 1986) 797 F.2d 812, 815] . The state statutory scheme in White was also very different from that in California, which does not require a prior order of the court for removal [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 305, 306]. Finally, even legal commentators favoring a search warrant requirement for child welfare investigations in the absence of consent or exigent circumstances have noted the law on this issue is unclear, with it being recognized such searches are sometimes considered to be more in the nature of "administrative searches" than criminal investigations. Further, articles on this issue have for the most part not even mentioned the decision in White or the dicta contained therein [see, e.g., Note, Time for Direction: The Need for a Clear, Uniform Rule Regarding Searches During Child Abuse Investigations, 83 Ky. L.J. 529, 542 (1994-1995); Hardin, Legal Barriers In Child Abuse Investigations: State Powers and Individual Rights, 63 Wash. L. Rev. 493, 519-548 (1988); Note, Investigating Child Abuse: The Fourth Amendment and Investigatory Home Visits, 89 Columbia L. Rev. 1034, 1034-1035 (1989)]. It is therefore understandable that law enforcement officers and social workers throughout California have largely been taught in the past that search warrants were not required in child welfare investigations, even in the absence of consent or exigent circumstances. Thus, the denial of qualified immunity to the government defendants in Calabretta was questionable, if not erroneous.

Equally troubling is the Calabretta decision's failure to consider the child's statutory and constitutional right to be safe. California has very clearly stated that in this state children have a right to be safe in their homes [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 396, 16500]. California courts have also recognized the right of children to be protected from abuse can rise to a constitutional dimension [see, e.g., In re Jasmon O. (1994) 8 Cal. 4th 398, 419, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 85, 878 P.2d 1297 ; In re Marilyn H. (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 295, 306, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 544, 851 P.2d 826] . But the decision in Calabretta does not mention these rights and apparently did not consider the impact they should have on the issue before the court.

California law is now clear that search warrants are required for the entry of a home in child welfare investigations in the absence of consent or exigent circumstances. In most cases either consent is given or exigent circumstances exist, so this new requirement will not be an issue. Counties are scrambling, however, to develop new practices and procedures for search warrants in child welfare investigations for those cases in which a search warrant is required. Numerous issues are arising in this regard, including but not limited to:

- Whether a social worker can draft the warrant and supporting declaration. California law does not require the affidavit supporting a search warrant to have been made by a law enforcement officer; other individuals can be the affiant [People v. Bell (1996) 45 Cal. App. 4th 1030, 1054-1055, 53 Cal. Rptr. 2d 156] . Thus, social workers can draft the warrant and be the affiant in support of that warrant.

- Whether probable cause or only reasonable cause is required for the issuance of a child welfare investigation search warrant. California only requires reasonable suspicion for the reporting of suspected child abuse and neglect and reasonable cause for the taking of a child into protective custody [Penal Code § 11166; Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 305, 306]. Thus, a strong argument can be made that only "reasonable cause" should be required for the issuance of a search warrant in child welfare investigations [see also Hardin, Legal Barriers In Child Abuse Investigations: State Powers and Individual Rights, 63 Wash. L. Rev. 493, 530-536 (1988) (concluding the standard for entry by social workers should be less than probable cause)]. Nevertheless, the safer approach from a liability viewpoint is to utilize the "probable cause" standard since that standard is known to satisfy constitutional requirements.

- Whether a search warrant can be issued for a child welfare investigation that does not appear to arise to the level of criminal conduct, but for which cause exists to believe the child is described by Welf. & Inst. Code § 300. Penal Code § 1524, which sets forth the statutory grounds for the issuance of a search warrant, does not provide for the issuance of search warrants in child welfare investigations that do not rise to the level of criminal conduct. Nevertheless, there are many such investigations and following Calabretta search warrants may be required in some of them. California law recognizes the law of this state is not only set forth in statutes, however, it is also set forth in case law [In re Malinda S. (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 368, 376, 272 Cal. Rptr. 787, 795 P.2d 1244] . Thus, it appears that in those cases in which the basis for the issuance of a search warrant does not rise to the level of criminal conduct as set forth in Penal Code § 1524, but does rise to the level of cause to believe a child comes within the dependency court's jurisdiction and may be in danger, the search warrant should simply issue under the law as set forth in Calabretta v. Floyd (9th Cir. 1999) 189 F.3d 808 .

- Whether a social worker can serve the search warrant. California law requires that search warrants be served by law enforcement officers [Penal Code §§ 1528, 1529, 1530]. Law enforcement officers can use experts and other individuals as necessary and appropriate to assist in the execution of search warrants [People v. Superior Court (Meyers) (1979) 25 Cal. 3d 67, 70, 74-76, 157 Cal. Rptr. 716, 598 P.2d 877 ; People v. Superior Court (Moore) (1980) 104 Cal. App. 3d 1001, 1005, 163 Cal. Rptr. 906] . Thus, while the warrant must be served by a law enforcement officer, social workers can, and in most instances probably should, assist in the execution of the warrant.

Many other issues are also arising, such as the protection of the identity of anonymous informants, including mandatory reporters of child abuse, the use of telephonic search warrants, the requirements for nighttime service, and the possible need for special masters and on-call deputy county counsels. All of these issues are receiving considerable attention at the local and state level as government agencies prepare to respond to the new mandate of Calabretta. The need for communication and cooperation between the juvenile and superior courts, social services, law enforcement, prosecutors, and county counsels in the development of effective and legally sufficient programs for search warrants in child welfare investigations is obvious. The need for training is substantial. How this mandate will be implemented in each county remains to be seen.

What is clear, however, is that challenges regarding the need for and sufficiency of search warrants, their issuance and their execution, are not relevant to the dependency case itself, since any evidence of child abuse or neglect is to be admitted regardless [In re Malinda S. (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 368, 384, 272 Cal. Rptr. 787, 795 P.2d 1244 , citing In re Mary S. (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 414, 418-419, 230 Cal. Rptr. 726 ; In re Christopher B. (1978) 82 Cal. App. 3d 608, 615, 147 Cal. Rptr. 390 ; In re Robert P. (1976) 61 Cal. App. 3d 310, 321, 132 Cal. Rptr. 5] . Such challenges are only relevant to questions of civil liability. Thus, it is not anticipated that social workers will include detailed information about the issuance of the search warrant or a copy of the warrant as part of the normal report process within the dependency case itself. Further, unless the search warrant issue attempted to be raised in a dependency case directly affects the credibility of the individuals involved or the reliability of the evidence presented, such challenges should be summarily denied by the juvenile court as irrelevant to the dependency proceedings [Evid. Code § 350].

As one would expect, the entire area of search warrants in child welfare investigations should be watched for further developments.

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 328 JUVENILE COURTS: DEPENDENCY PROCEEDINGS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Intake, Investigation, and Petition Procedures

28-328 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 328.33

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser Editorial Consultant John P. Passalacqua Contributing Author Jennifer Kaye Williams Contributing Author

§ 328.33 Right of Older Children to Communicate With Parents or Guardians and Attorney

Immediately after being taken to a place of confinement pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 305-324 and, except when physically impossible, no later than one hour after he or she has been taken into custody, a child 10 years of age or older shall be advised that he or she has the right to make at least two telephone calls from the place where he or she is being held, one call completed to his or her parent, guardian, or a responsible relative, and one call to an attorney. The calls are at public expense if completed to telephone numbers within the local calling area and must be made in the presence of a public officer or employee. Any public officer or employee who willfully deprives a child taken into custody of his or her right to make the telephone calls is guilty of a misdemeanor [Welf. & Inst. Code § 308(b)].

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329

CHAPTER 328 JUVENILE COURTS: DEPENDENCY PROCEEDINGS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Intake, Investigation, and Petition Procedures

28-328 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 328.34

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser Editorial Consultant John P. Passalacqua Contributing Author Jennifer Kaye Williams Contributing Author

§ 328.34 Time Limits on Temporary Custody

[1] Requirement to File Petition or Release

Whenever a child is taken into custody by a peace officer or social worker, unless the child willfully misrepresents his or her age as 18 years or more, that child must be released within 48 hours after having been taken into custody, excluding nonjudicial days, unless, within that period of time, a petition to declare him or her a dependent child has been filed [Welf. & Inst. Code § 313(a)].

[2] Relief by Writ of Habeas Corpus

The remedy for a failure to file or release within 48 hours is a habeas corpus proceeding directed at the social service agency. The agency is not precluded from filing a petition after the 48-hour period and retaining custody of the child until there is a judicial determination of the appropriateness of detention [Los Angeles County Dep't of Children & Family Servs. v. Superior Court (1988) 200 Cal. App. 3d 505, 508, 246 Cal. Rptr. 150 ; see Welf. & Inst. Code § 315].

[3] Written Explanation of Detention Over Six Hours

Moreover, whenever a child who has been held in custody for more than 6 hours by the social worker is subsequently released and no petition is filed, the social worker is required to prepare a written explanation of the incident. The explanation must be prepared within 72 hours after the child is released from custody and filed in the record of the case. A copy of the written explanation must be sent to the parents, guardians, or other person having care or custody of the child [Welf. & Inst. Code § 313(b)].

[4] Effect on Time Limits When Child Misrepresents Own Age

When a child willfully misrepresents himself or herself to be 18 years of age or more when taken into custody by a peace officer or social worker, and this misrepresentation effects a material delay in the investigation that prevents the filing of a petition, the petition or complaint must be filed within 48 hours from the time the child's true age is determined, excluding court judicial days. If a petition of this type is not timely filed, the child must be immediately release from custody [Welf. & Inst. Code § 314].

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 328 JUVENILE COURTS: DEPENDENCY PROCEEDINGS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Intake, Investigation, and Petition Procedures

28-328 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 328.35

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser Editorial Consultant John P. Passalacqua Contributing Author Jennifer Kaye Williams Contributing Author

§ 328.35 Application to Commence Juvenile Court Proceeding

[1] Contents and Forms of Application

In addition to being brought to the attention of the juvenile authorities by a peace officer or social worker, a child may become the subject of juvenile court action through the application of any person to the social worker to commence such proceedings. Whenever any person applies to the social worker to commence proceedings in the juvenile court, the application must be in the form of an affidavit alleging that there was or is within the county, or residing therein, a child who falls within the definition of a dependent child and setting forth facts in support of that allegation [Welf. & Inst. Code § 329]. Judicial Council form JV-210 (Application to Commence Proceedings by Affidavit and Decision by Social Worker) has been approved for making the application under this section.

[2] Social Worker's Duty to Investigate Application

The social worker must immediately make such investigation as he or she deems necessary to determine whether proceedings in the juvenile court should be commenced [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 328, 329].

[3] Social Worker's Refusal to Take Action

[a] Explanation by Social Worker Required

If the social worker does not take action in the case, either by placing the child under informal supervision or by filing a petition in the juvenile court within three weeks after the application is made, the social worker must endorse on the affidavit of the applicant his or her decision not to proceed further and the reasons for such determination. The social worker must immediately notify the applicant of the action taken or the decision rendered and must retain the affidavit and endorsement for a period of 30 days after such notice to the applicant [Welf. & Inst. Code § 329]. Judicial Council form JV-210 (Application to Commence Proceedings by Affidavit and Decision by Social Worker), if used for the making of the application, can be used for to inform the applicant of the "Decision of Social Worker or Social Services Agency."

[b] Review of Social Worker's Refusal

When any person has applied to the social worker, pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 329, to commence juvenile court proceedings and the social worker fails to file a petition within three weeks after the application, that person may, within one month of making the application, apply to the juvenile court to review the decision of the social worker. Judicial Council form JV-215 (Application to Review Decision by Social Worker Not to Commence Proceedings) is approved for the making of this application. The court may then either affirm the decision of the social worker or order him or her to commence juvenile proceedings [Welf. & Inst. Code § 331].

If directed to file a petition, the social worker must carry out his or her duty to the court to further investigate the matter and to submit such reports as the court may direct [Welf. & Inst. Code § 281]. The social worker must present a balanced investigation and recitation of the facts in the report. Despite having been directed to file the petition, however, after further investigation the social worker may still conclude in such a report that jurisdiction is not justified or recommend that it not be exercised. Based upon the evidence the juvenile court will thereafter make its own independent determination of whether jurisdiction exists.

PRACTICE TIP:

Attempt to Bypass Requirements Improper. In some counties defense attorneys for delinquent children attempt to bypass the requirements of Welf. & Inst. Code § 329 (investigation by social worker) and of Welf. & Inst. Code § 241.1 (joint protocol and assessment procedure for investigation by both probation and social services), and instead go directly to the juvenile court with their request that a dependency petition be filed. Such a request is not a proper Welf. & Inst. Code § 331 request and should be summarily denied since to consider such a request would deprive the court of the investigation and assessment necessary to wisely make such a decision. A child's attorney would better serve his or her client's needs by ensuring that a full and complete assessment is done to help the court make this important decision.

For a complete discussion of the issue of dual jurisdiction cases in which the child may be considered for both dependency and delinquency status, and the need for a joint assessment, see Ch. 327, Juvenile Procedures: Jurisdiction and General Procedures, § 327.11[3].

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329

CHAPTER 328 JUVENILE COURTS: DEPENDENCY PROCEEDINGS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Intake, Investigation, and Petition Procedures

28-328 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 328.36

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser Editorial Consultant John P. Passalacqua Contributing Author Jennifer Kaye Williams Contributing Author

§ 328.36 Alternative to Filing Petition

[1] Informal Supervision

If the social worker, after investigating a case, concludes that a child is or soon will be within the jurisdiction of the juvenile court, the social worker may, in lieu of filing a dependency petition, and with consent of the child's parent or guardian, undertake a program of supervision in an attempt to adjust the situation that brings the child within, or increases the probability that the child will soon be within, the court's jurisdiction. This program may not exceed six months, and institution of a program does not prevent the social worker from filing a dependency petition at any time within that period [Welf. & Inst. Code § 301(a)]. The voluntary supervision program may call for the child to obtain care and treatment for the abuse of or addiction to controlled substances [Welf. & Inst. Code § 301(b)]. If the parent of the child that is the subject of the intended informal supervision agreement is a dependent of the juvenile court at the time the social worker seeks to undertake the voluntary supervision agreement, the informal supervision program shall not be undertaken until the minor parent has consulted with his or her dependency attorney [Welf. & Inst. Code § 301(c)].

If the objective has not been achieved within six months, the social worker may extend the period of a service plan in six-month increments, if the objectives can be achieved within that time and if the parent or guardian consents [Welf. & Inst. Code § 16506].

[2] Required Factors

In determining whether to undertake a program of informal supervision of the child, the social worker must consider the following [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.516(b)]:

- If the alleged condition or conduct is not considered serious, whether the child has had a problem in the home, school, or community that indicates that some supervision would be desirable.

- Whether the child and the parents seem able to resolve the matter with the assistance of the social worker or social worker and without formal juvenile court action.

- Whether further observation or evaluation by the social worker or social worker is needed before a decision can be reached.

- The attitude of the child and the parent or guardian.

- The age, maturity, and capabilities of the child.

- The prior dependency or delinquency history, if any, of the child.

- The recommendation, if any, of the referring party or agency.

- The attitudes of any affected persons.

- Any other circumstances that indicate that a program of informal supervision would be consistent with the welfare of the child and the protection of the public.

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329

CHAPTER 328 JUVENILE COURTS: DEPENDENCY PROCEEDINGS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Intake, Investigation, and Petition Procedures

28-328 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 328.37

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser Editorial Consultant John P. Passalacqua Contributing Author Jennifer Kaye Williams Contributing Author

§ 328.37 Petition for Dependency Filed by Social Worker

[1] When Child Detained

If the social worker determines that the child should be detained in custody, he or she must immediately file a petition to have the child declared a dependent child of the court with the clerk of the juvenile court who must set the matter for hearing on the detention hearing calendar [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 311(a), 325]. The petition may be filed by a facsimile transmission if the local juvenile court has provided for fax filing by local rule or other written instruction [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.522; see Ch. 327, Juvenile Courts: Jurisdiction and General Procedures, § 327.30[2]]. The requirements for facsimile filing are set forth in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.522.

[2] When Child Not Detained

Regardless of whether the child is detained in custody, a proceeding in the juvenile court to declare a child a dependent child of the court must be commenced by the social worker who must file a petition with the juvenile court [Welf. & Inst. Code § 325]. As with a petition being filed on behalf of a child who has been detained, a petition filed on a child who has not been detained can also be filed by facsimile filing if authorized by the local juvenile court [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.522; see Ch. 327, Juvenile Courts: Jurisdiction and General Procedures, § 327.30[2]].

[3] Contents of Petition

A petition to commence proceedings in the juvenile court to declare a child a dependent child of the court must be verified and must contain the following [Welf. & Inst. Code § 332]:

- The name of the court to which the petition is addressed.

- The title of the proceeding.

- The code section and subdivisions under which the petition is filed; if it is alleged that the child comes within Welf. & Inst. Code § 300(e) (under age five and having suffered severe physical abuse), the petition must contain an allegation pursuant to that section.

- The name, age, and address, if any, of the child on whose behalf the petition is brought.

- The names and residence addresses, if known to petitioner, of both parents and any guardians of the child; if there is no parent or guardian residing within the state, or if his or her place of residence is not known to petitioner, the petition must also contain the name and residence address, if known, of any adult relative residing within the county, or if there is none, the adult relative residing nearest to the court. However, if the social services agency knows that one of the parents is a victim of domestic violence and that the victim-parent is living separately from the "batterer-parent," the address of the victim-parent shall be kept confidential.

- A concise statement of facts, separately stated, to support the conclusion that the child on whose behalf the petition is being brought is a person within the definition of each of the sections and subdivisions under which the proceedings are being instituted [In re Nicholas B. (2001) 88 Cal. App. 4th 1126, 1134, 106 Cal. Rptr. 2d 465] .

- The fact that the child on whose behalf the petition is brought is detained in custody or is not detained in custody, and if he or she is detained in custody, the date and precise time the child was taken into custody.

- A notice to the father, mother, spouse, or other person liable for support of the child stating the following:

- Welf. & Inst. Code § 903 makes that person, the estate of that person, and the estate of the child liable for the cost of the care, support, and maintenance of the child in any county institution or any other place in which the child is placed, detained, or committed pursuant to an order of the juvenile court.

- Welf. & Inst. Code § 903.1 makes that person, the estate of that person, and the estate of the child liable for the cost to the county of legal services rendered to the child or the parent by a private attorney or a public defender appointed pursuant to the order of the juvenile court.

- Welf. & Inst. Code § 903.2 makes that person, the estate of that person, and the estate of the child liable for the cost to the county of the probation supervision of the child by the social worker pursuant to the order of the juvenile court.

- The liabilities established by these sections are joint and several.

[4] Use of Judicial Council Forms

The Judicial Council has promulgated forms for use in filing a petition to declare a child a dependent of the juvenile court. The forms are mandatory [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.524(c)].

[5] Verification of Petition

The petition must be verified [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.524(b)]. Any petition filed in juvenile court to commence proceedings that is not verified may be dismissed without prejudice by the court [Welf. & Inst. Code § 333; Cal. Rules of Ct. Rule 5.524(b)]. If the petition is filed with the court by a facsimile transmission as provided in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.522 the signature produced by fax transmission is considered an original signature [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.522].

[6] Setting the Petition for Hearing

If the child is detained in custody at the time for filing the petition, the hearing must be set within 15 judicial days from the date of the order of the court directing the detention pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 319 [Welf. & Inst. Code § 334]. For a child who has not been taken into custody, the clerk of the juvenile court must by statute set the petition for hearing within 30 days of the filing of the petition [Welf. & Inst. Code § 334]. The rules of court, however, provide that for a child who has not been taken into custody, the clerk must set an initial hearing within 15 judicial days of the filing of the petition [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.670(a)].

[7] Variance and Amendment of Pleadings

The rules of the Code of Civil Procedure relating to variance and amendment of pleadings in civil actions apply to petitions and pleadings in the juvenile court to the same extent and with the same effect as if the proceedings were a civil action [Welf. & Inst. Code § 348].

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 328 JUVENILE COURTS: DEPENDENCY PROCEEDINGS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Intake, Investigation, and Petition Procedures

28-328 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 328.38-328.39

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser Editorial Consultant John P. Passalacqua Contributing Author Jennifer Kaye Williams Contributing Author

[Reserved]

§ 328.38[Reserved]

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 328 JUVENILE COURTS: DEPENDENCY PROCEEDINGS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Initial or Detention Hearing

28-328 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 328.40

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser Editorial Consultant John P. Passalacqua Contributing Author Jennifer Kaye Williams Contributing Author

§ 328.40 Initial or Detention Hearing

[1] Purpose

The first hearing that is held is called an initial hearing, unless the child has been removed from the custody of the parent, in which case it is called a detention hearing. The purpose of the detention hearing is to afford the court an opportunity to make an initial determination regarding the necessity of continued detention of the child. The court is required to order the release of the child from custody unless it finds that a prima facie showing has been made that the child comes within the court's jurisdiction under Welf. & Inst. Code § 300, continuation of the child in the home of the parent or guardian is contrary to the welfare of the child, and that continued detention is necessary due to one or more of four grounds [Welf. & Inst. Code § 319]. For a discussion of these four grounds, see § 328.82[5]. The purpose of this initial hearing is also to provide notice to the parent or guardian of the allegations and nature of the proceedings, consider the question of the appointment of counsel, and involve the court in the supervision of the case, including the ordering of services. This is true regardless of whether the child has been detained or not.

If a child is detained pending court proceedings, a detention hearing must be held by the next judicial day after the petition is filed [Welf. & Inst. Code § 315].

PRACTICE TIP:

Local Terminology. Some juvenile courts mistakenly refer to initial or detention hearings as "arraignment hearings." They are not. Arraignment hearings are conducted in criminal cases, not dependency cases. Nevertheless, it is important to know what the local juvenile court calls its hearings so the practitioner can avoid confusion and looking inexperienced. This is true not only of detention hearings, but all local procedures and terminology.

[2] Time Limits on Detention

A child taken into custody must be released from custody within 48 hours, excluding nonjudicial days, after first being taken into custody by a peace officer or social worker, unless within that time, a petition is filed with the clerk of the juvenile court [Welf. & Inst. Code § 313(a), Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.670(b)].

The fact that the child may have been over-detained as a result of a petition not being filed in a timely manner does not, however, deprive the juvenile court of the ability to conduct a detention hearing once the petition is filed [Los Angeles County Dep't of Children's Servs. v. Superior Court (1988) 200 Cal. App. 3d 505, 508-509, 246 Cal. Rptr. 150] .

The child, unless sooner released, must also be brought before the juvenile court for a detention hearing as soon as possible, but in any event within 48 hours, excluding noncourt days, after arriving at a facility within the county, in the event of any of the following [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.670(e)]:

- The child was taken into custody in another county and transported in custody to the requesting county under a warrant issued by the juvenile court.

- The child was taken into custody in the county in which a protective custody warrant was issued by the juvenile court.

- The child was ordered transferred in custody by the juvenile court of another county under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.610 (transfer-out hearing).

At the hearing, the court must determine whether the child is to be further detained. If the hearing is not begun within that time, the child must be immediately released from custody [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.670(e)].

[3] Service and Notice Requirements

[a] In General

Immediately on filing the petition for a child detained in custody, the social worker must give notice to the mother, the father or fathers, presumed and alleged, any legal guardian of the child, and the child, if the child is 10 years of age or older [Welf. & Inst. Code § 290.1; see Welf. & Inst. Code § 302(b) (general requirement of notice to both parents of all juvenile court proceedings involving their child)]. If it appears that the parent or guardian does not read English, notice must be given in the language believed to be spoken by the parent or guardian [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.667(b)].

Notice must also be given to any known sibling of the child who is the subject of the dependency petition, if that sibling is either a dependent of the court or is the subject of a dependency proceeding. If the sibling is 10 years of age or older, the notice is to be provided to the sibling, the sibling's caregiver, and the sibling's attorney. If the sibling is under 10 years of age, the notice is to be given to the sibling's caregiver and attorney. Separate notice is not required, however, if the sibling's matter is calendared in the same court on the same day [Welf. & Inst. Code § 290.1(a)(5)].

If there is no parent or guardian residing within the state, or if their place of residence is unknown, the social worker must serve and notify an adult relative residing within the county, or if none, the adult relative residing nearest the court [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 290.1(a)(6)]. The social worker must also notify all counsel of record [Welf. & Inst. Code § 290.1(a)(7)]. Additionally, the social worker must also give notice to the district attorney, if the district attorney has notified the clerk that he or she wishes to receive such notice, and the probate department of the superior court that appointed the guardian, if the child is the ward of a guardian appointed by a probate court [Welf. & Inst. Code § 290.1(a)(8)-(9)]. Finally, if the social worker knows or has reason to know that an Indian child is involved, notice must also be given to the Indian custodian, if any, and the tribe of the child. If the identity or location of the parent or Indian custodian and the tribe cannot be determined, notice shall be given to the Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA) [Welf. & Inst.

Code § 290.1(a)(10)]. Notice to the BIA, if any, shall be by registered mail, return receipt requested [Welf. & Inst. Code § 290.1(e)]. No notice is required for a parent whose parental rights have been terminated [Welf. & Inst. Code § 290.1(b)].

Notice may be oral or in writing. Notice of the initial petition hearing shall include the date, time, and place of the hearing, the name of the child, and a copy of the petition [Welf. & Inst. Code § 290.1(d)-(e)].

The same or similar notice must be given by the clerk of the court [Welf. & Inst. Code § 290.2]. If a petition is filed for a child who has not been detained, the notice shall be given at least 10 days prior to the date of the hearing [Welf. & Inst. Code § 290.2(c)(2)].

In addition to the general notice provisions in Welf. & Inst. Code § 290.1 and 290.2, the court may also issue a citation to the parent or guardian directing that he or she appear or that he or she appear with the child [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 296, 338]. If such a citation cannot be served, or if the person served fails to obey it, or in any case where it appears that the citation will probably be ineffective, the court may issue a warrant of arrest for the parent, guardian or other person having custody of the child [Welf. & Inst. Code § 339]. In such circumstances the court may also issue a protective custody warrant for the child [Welf. & Inst. Code § 340].

[b] Notice as Jurisdictional Requirement

Parents, guardians, or other person with custody of the child who is the subject of a dependency proceeding have a right to notice of hearings instituted for the purpose of separating children from such individuals. This notice is a jurisdictional requirement [In re B.G. (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 679, 688-689, 114 Cal. Rptr. 444, 523 P.2d 244 , citing In re Moilanen (1951) 104 Cal. App. 2d 835, 842, 233 P.2d 91 ; In re Spiers (1936) 15 Cal. App. 2d 487, 491, 59 P.2d 838] .

The notice statutes merely require a diligent effort to notify the parent. If a parent cannot be located despite reasonable search efforts, due process notice requirements will be deemed to have been met and failure to give actual notice will not render the proceedings invalid [In re Melinda J. (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 1413, 1418-1419, 286 Cal. Rptr. 239] . If reasonable efforts are not made to locate and notice a parent, a finding of dependency jurisdiction must be reversed [In re Arlyne A. (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 591, 598-600, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 109 ("The Department failed to take the simple and most direct step of calling directory assistance to find the parents' number"); see also David B. v. Superior Court (1994) 21 Cal. App. 4th 1010, 1016, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 586 (social services failed to contact the military organization the father was serving in to locate the father; search efforts found "woefully deficient" and the finding of reasonable diligence was "wholly unsupportable")].

[4] Time Limitations on Hearing

[a] In General

If a child is taken into custody under Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 305-307 and not released to a parent or guardian, the juvenile court must hold a detention hearing to determine whether the child must be further detained. The hearing must be held as soon as possible, but before the expiration of the next court day after a petition to declare the child a dependent child is filed. If the hearing is not begun within this period, the child must be released from custody [Welf. & Inst. Code § 315].

[b] Continuance of Hearing

On the motion of the child, parent, or guardian, the court must continue the detention hearing for one court day. This one-day continuance is not discretionary, the request must be granted [Welf. & Inst. Code § 322; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.550(c), 5.672(a)]. Unless otherwise ordered by the court, the child must remain in custody pending completion of the detention hearing or any rehearing [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 5.550(c), 5.672(a)]. If the court grants the motion to continue the hearing, the court still must make a finding that continuation in the home of the parent or guardian would be contrary to the welfare of the child, or release the child [Welf. & Inst. Code § 319(c)]. This is because the "contrary to the welfare" finding must be made at the first court ruling pertaining to removal from the home or the child will not be eligible for title IV-E foster care maintenance payments for the duration of that stay in foster care [45 C.F.R. 1356.21(c)]. Thus, even if the court continues the case for just one day or sets the case for rehearing, it still must make the finding that continued custody of the child in the home of the parent's or guardian's is contrary to the child's welfare. The finding may be made without prejudice to any party, however, and may be reevaluated at the time of the continued detention hearing [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 5.550(c), 5.672(a)]. Where the child is not detained prior to the initial hearing, on motion of the child, parent or guardian the court must continue the initial hearing for one court day and may continue it for "a reasonable period" to allow the moving party time to prepare to address the issue of detention [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 5.550(c), 5.672(a)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Good Reasons to Ask for One-Day Continuance. The practitioner should note that the court must grant a request by the parent or child for a one day continuance under Welf. & Inst. Code § 322. It is not a discretionary decision for the court [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 5.550(c), 5.672(a)]. Many times attorneys meet their clients only minutes before a scheduled detention hearing. In an appropriate case a one-day continuance may allow counsel to meet further with the parent, guardian, or child and to gather evidence, including the testimony of witnesses, to present at the detention hearing that would not otherwise be available to counsel at the originally scheduled detention hearing. Parents' counsel may wish to do this in an effort to prevent continued detention. The child's counsel may wish to do this to try to ensure either continued detention or release. Both may wish to do this to have time to find an appropriate relative placement for the court to consider. Thus, the one day continuance can be a very helpful request in an appropriate case.

If counsel makes a request for a one-day continuance and agrees with the court making the temporary finding that continued custody in the home of the parent or guardian would be contrary to the child's welfare, counsel should remember to request the court to reevaluate that finding at the continued hearing, if appropriate [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 5.550(c)(2), 5.672(a)].

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329

CHAPTER 328 JUVENILE COURTS: DEPENDENCY PROCEEDINGS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Initial or Detention Hearing

28-328 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 328.41

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser Editorial Consultant John P. Passalacqua Contributing Author Jennifer Kaye Williams Contributing Author

§ 328.41 Explanation, Inquiry, and Action Required by Court

[1] Concerning the Nature of the Proceedings

At the beginning of the detention hearing, the court must inform the child and the parent or guardian, if present, of the contents and meaning of the petition, the reasons why the child was taken into custody, the nature and possible consequences of juvenile court proceedings, and the purpose and scope of the detention hearing [Welf. & Inst. Code § 316].

[2] Concerning the Right to Counsel

The court must also inform the parties of the right of each parent or guardian and any child to be represented at every stage of the proceedings by counsel [Welf. & Inst. Code § 316]. The court must appoint counsel for the parent, guardian and child where appropriate [Welf. & Inst. Code § 317; see discussion in § 328.60 et seq.].

If the child has arranged for his or her own counsel and any party objects to the selection of counsel by the child in proceedings growing out of his or her status as a dependent child, the counsel selected may not be barred from representing the child without first determining that the child is incapable of choosing or has not chosen competent counsel [Akkiko M. v. Superior Court (1985) 163 Cal. App. 3d 525, 527, 530-531, 209 Cal. Rptr. 568 (nonprofit law firm specializing in representing children had previously represented the 10-year-old child in conservatorship proceedings and child wanted their representation in dependency proceedings)].

[3] Concerning Parent or Guardian's Permanent Mailing Address

At the first appearance by a parent or guardian, the court must order the parent or guardian to provide a mailing address [Welf. & Inst. Code § 316.1]. The court must also advise the parent or guardian that the address provided will be used by the court, the clerk, and the social services agency to provide notice of hearings and for mailing all documents related to the proceedings. The court must advise the parent or guardian that, unless the parent or guardian, or the attorney of record for the parent or guardian, provides a written notification of a change of address, use of the address first provided will satisfy notice requirements [Welf. & Inst. Code § 316.1]. Failure to do this may result in a later reversal for lack of notice if the parent's whereabouts is unknown and reasonable search efforts have not been made [In re Rashad B. (1999) 76 Cal. App. 4th 442, 448-450, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 462] . As noted by the court in Rashad B., "it is in cases of homeless parents that compliance with section 316.1 is arguably most important" [In re Rashad B. (1999) 76 Cal. App. 4th 442, 450, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 462] .

[4] Concerning Parentage of the Child

At the detention hearing, or as soon thereafter as reasonably possible, the court must inquire of the parents present and any other appropriate person as to the parentage of the child. The identity and address of all possible parents, presumed and alleged, is to be part of that inquiry. Even the presence at the hearing of a person who claims to be the parent of the child will not relieve the court of its responsibility to make this inquiry [Welf. & Inst. Code § 316.2(a)].

For further discussion regarding the parentage inquiry, parentage proceedings, and the rights of parents in dependency cases see § 328.60.

[5] Concerning Child's Health and Education

At the initial hearing the court must direct each parent to provide the social services agency "complete medical, dental, mental health, and educational information, and medical background," of the child, the mother, and the child's biological father if known [Welf. & Inst. Code § 16010(f)]. The Judicial Council has created Judicial Council Form JV-225, Health and Education Questionnaire, which is to be used for this purpose. The court must order each parent or guardian present to complete the form or to provide the information necessary for the social worker, court staff, or local child welfare agency to complete the form [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.668(c)]. The court will be required at the disposition hearing to determine whether the child's health and education information has been provided to the social services agency [Welf. & Inst. Code § 16010(f)]. As soon as possible, but not more than 30 days following the initial hearing, the child's caregiver is to be provided a copy of the child's health and education summary [Welf. & Inst. Code § 16010(c)]. A copy of the completed form is also to be provided to the child's dependency attorney [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.668(c)]. Notwithstanding Welf. & Inst. Code § 827 or any other provision of law, this information may be provided to prospective caregivers prior to placement of the child if the social services agency intends to place the child with the prospective caregivers, the prospective caregivers are willing to become the adoptive parents of the child, and the prospective caregivers have an approved adoption assessment or home study, a foster family home license, certification by a licensed foster family agency, or approval pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 361.3, and 361.4 [Welf. & Inst. Code § 16010(d)].

The court should also inquire whether there is a need to temporarily limit the right of the parent or guardian to make educational decisions for the child. If there is, and all the requirements of Welf. & Inst. Code § 319(g)(1) are met, the court may temporarily limit the parent's or guardian's right to make such decisions and appoint a responsible adult to make educational decisions for the child [Welf. & Inst. Code § 319(g)(1)]. If the court cannot identify a responsible adult to make educational decisions for the child and the appointment of a surrogate parent to make such decisions is not warranted under Educ. Code § 56050(a), the court may make educational decisions for the child. If the court makes such decisions, it should do so with the input of any interested person and also issue appropriate orders to ensure efforts are made to identify a responsible adult to make future educational decisions for the child [Welf. & Inst. Code § 319(g)(2)]. The temporary limitations, appointments, and orders made pursuant to this section shall expire at the end of the disposition hearing or the dismissal of the dependency petition [Welf. & Inst. Code § 319(g)(3)].

[6] Concerning Possible Indian Heritage

Both the juvenile court and the social services agency have an affirmative and continuing duty under California law to inquire whether a child for whom a dependency petition has been filed is or may be an Indian child [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.481(a)]. At the parent's first appearance in juvenile court, the court must inquire regarding any possible Indian heritage and order the parent to complete for ICWA-020, Parental Notification of Indian Status [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.481(a)(2)]. The continuing duty to inquire as to whether the child is or may be an Indian child as defined by the ICWA is a state imposed duty, not part of the ICWA itself. For further discussion of the duty of inquiry, see § 328.125[2].

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 328 JUVENILE COURTS: DEPENDENCY PROCEEDINGS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Initial or Detention Hearing

28-328 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 328.42

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser Editorial Consultant John P. Passalacqua Contributing Author Jennifer Kaye Williams Contributing Author

§ 328.42 Response by Parent or Guardian

[1] Motion of Objection Akin to Demurrer

If the parent or guardian believes that the petition on its face fails to state a cause of action under Welf. & Inst. Code § 300, or fails to give adequate notice of the claimed basis for jurisdiction, the parent or guardian may raise a motion "akin to a demurrer" [In re Fred J. (1979) 89 Cal. App. 3d 168, 176, 152 Cal. Rptr. 327] . If a motion akin to a demurrer is to be filed, it should be done at the detention hearing prior to entering a plea since the general rule is that once a plea is entered, a demurrer for vagueness or lack of notice will no longer lie unless the court allows the previously entered plea to be withdrawn. This may also be a reason for requesting a one-day continuance of the detention hearing [see discussion in § 328.80[4]].

The purpose of the petition is to give notice to the parties, particularly the parents or guardians, as to what social services believes brings the child within the juvenile court's jurisdiction [Welf. & Inst. Code § 300]. Because petitions are generally written by social workers, not lawyers, precision in the actual pleading of the petition is not required or expected [In re S.O. (2002) 103 Cal. App. 4th 453, 459, 126 Cal. Rptr. 2d 554 ; In re Jessica C. (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 1027, 1038, n.8, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 597] . What is required is notice. The better practice is to read the petition together with the reports filed with it at the initial hearing in a form of notice pleading [cf. SEC Corp v. Superior Court (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 673, 677, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 372 ; Pedro v. County of Humboldt (1933) 217 Cal. 493, 497-498, 19 P.2d 776] . In some counties this is especially appropriate since reports may include the jurisdictional allegations themselves as well as facts to support them. Thus, when a motion akin to a demurrer is made, the juvenile court should look not only to the petition, but also to the documents filed in support of the petition, to determine if a cause of action is truly stated and the parents are given adequate notice of the allegations made in the case. All parties should be made aware the court will do this, however, so the issue of whether to grant or deny the motion can be adequately argued.

Only rarely should a motion akin to a demurrer be granted without leave to amend. This is for two reasons. The first is that dependency petitions are routinely amended, so it is not unexpected. Sometimes petitions are amended because new information has been gathered during the social worker's ongoing investigation, or new circumstances have developed. Sometimes it is to conform to the proof at trial. Most often petitions are amended as the result of settlement negotiations in which the social services agency agrees to strike or amend by inter-lineation various terms following which the parent or guardian agrees to admit, submit or enter a plea of no contest. Regardless, amending petitions is a common practice. The second and overwhelming reason for allowing petitions to be amended, particularly in a situation involving a motion akin to a demurrer, is the need to view the totality of the circumstances so as to protect the child.

One case has held that a challenge to the sufficiency of a dependency petition can even be made for the first time on appeal if the error asserted is that the petition fails to state a cause of action. Significantly, it held this even though the language of the petition had been amended by agreement of the parties [In re Alysha S. (1996) 51 Cal. App. 4th 393, 397, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 494] . This is inconsistent with the general rule that one cannot complain on appeal regarding things agreed on in settlement [see In re Brandon M. (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 1387, 1391, 1400-1401, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 671] .

Further, the analysis of the Alysha S. decision is incorrect. First, it analyzed the issue by considering the law regarding civil appeals without recognizing that Code of Civ. Pro. 430.80, which it relied on, is not applicable to dependency cases [see Welf. & Inst. Code § 348; see also In re Chantal S. (1996) 13 Cal. 4th 196, 200, 205-206, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 866, 913 P.2d 1075 (dependency proceedings are special proceedings with their own set of rules and statutes)]. Instead, on this issue it is the law governing criminal cases that is most analogous [In re Troy Z. (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 1170, 1180-1182, 13 Cal. Rptr. 2d 724, 840 P.2d 266 (looking to law regarding pleas in criminal cases to analyze effect of plea in dependency case)]. Under criminal law if a demurrer is not made at the trial court level alleging the facts of the accusatory pleading do not constitute a public offense, the failure to make the demurrer is considered a waiver [Penal Code §§ 1004(4), 1012]. The same would apply to dependency cases regarding a challenge the petition does not state a cause of action. Moreover, consistent with criminal law, when considering a properly raised demurrer in a dependency case the court should consider not only the petition itself, but also any supporting documents, discovery and evidence provided the parent [cf. People v. Paul (1978) 78 Cal. App. 3d 32, 42-43, 144 Cal. Rptr. 431] . The Alysha S. court did not consider or utilize either of these applicable doctrines from criminal law.

Even were civil rules to apply, the holding of the Alysha S. court that a demurrer for failure to state a cause of action can be raised for the first time on appeal is subject to question. Its reliance on the Walton case is of little assistance, since Walton's statement of the rule was merely dictum [see In re Alysha S. (1996) 51 Cal. App 4th 393, 397, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 494 , citing Walton v. City of Red Bluff (1991) 2 Cal. App. 4th 117, 130, 3 Cal. Rptr. 2d 275] . And Walton's citation to Buford is of little assistance since Buford dealt with whether there was a lack of jurisdiction, not a failure to state a cause of action [see Walton v. City of Red Bluff (1991) 2 Cal. App. 4th 117, 130, 3 Cal. Rptr. 2d 275 , citing Buford v. State of California (1980) 104 Cal. App. 3d 811, 826, 164 Cal. Rptr. 264] . Finally, although Walton correctly cited Witkin's treatise for California Procedure [see Walton v. City of Red Bluff (1991) 2 Cal. App. 4th 117, 130, 3 Cal. Rptr. 2d 275] , that portion of Witkin is only part of the story. Although Witkin's California Procedure provides authority for the proposition that a failure to state a cause of action can be raised for the first time on appeal where the defect is of substance [see 5 Witkin, Cal. Procedure (4th ed. 1997), Pleading, § 911, pp. 370-371], it also notes that defects of form rising to a failure to state a cause of action cannot be raised for the first time on appeal if the matter went to trial and resulted in a judgment after the failure to demur [see 5 Witkin, Cal. Procedure (4th ed. 1997), Pleading, § 913, pp. 371-372, and cases cited there]. Because this latter situation is the more likely situation in dependency cases, the Alysha S. holding is questionable even if civil rules were to apply. Since they do not, Alysha S. is simply incorrect.

Many courts have disagreed with the Alysha S. holding. The leading case is the Shelley J. case in which the court stated, "We agree with county counsel that Alysha S. was wrongly decided on that point" [In re Shelley J. (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 322, 328, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 922] . Other courts have agreed with the Shelley J. analysis, rejecting the Alysha S. holding [see, e.g., In re S.O. (2002) 103 Cal. App. 4th 453, 459-460, 126 Cal. Rptr. 2d 554 ; In re James C. (2002)

104 Cal. App. 4th 470, 481, 128 Cal. Rptr. 2d 270] . One court not only noted the criticism of Alysha S. regarding looking to civil rather than criminal law, but added its own additional criticism. This court noted the Alysha S. decision also ignored normal principles of harmless error. If there was no prejudice resulting from the way in which the dependency petition was written, it does not matter if the issue was waived or not [In re Athena P. (2002) 103 Cal. App. 4th 617, 627-628, 127 Cal. Rptr. 2d 46] . Regardless, the Shelley J. and S.O. approach has now been updated to take into consideration changes in the law [In re David H. (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 1626, 1637-1640, 82 Cal. Rptr. 3d 81] . This new analysis is even more compelling than Shelley J. and S.O. regarding why the Civil Code and the Code of Civil Procedure do not apply in dependency proceedings unless expressly made applicable. Thus, although the Athena P. court was correct that the issue will usually be moot by the time the case gets to the appellate court, it remains that the David H. decision is both the better and the dominant view on this issue. If the adequacy of the allegations in the dependency petition is not timely raised at the trial court level, claiming the petition does not state a cause of action, the right to raise the issue at the appellate level has been waived [In re David H. (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 1626, 1637-1640, 82 Cal. Rptr. 3d 81] .

PRACTICE TIP:

Stipulated Cause of Action. It is a common practice for the parties to agree to amend the petition to soften the language and make it more acceptable to the parent. In return, the parent usually admits or submits the matter. Common sense suggests that this should preclude challenging the sufficiency of the petition for the first time on appeal. In light of the Alysha S. decision, however, attorneys representing social services agencies and children should be very careful before agreeing to amend the language of a dependency petition. It would be wise to require that as part of any agreement to amend the petition the parties also stipulate on the record that the amended language states a cause of action. This will preclude this issue being raised for the first time on appeal should Alysha S. rather than Shelley J. be followed in the local appellate district.

If the motion akin to a demurrer is made at the trial court level preserving the issue for appeal, the proper standard of review is not the substantial evidence standard. The challenge is a claim of a failure to state a cause of action. Hence, the appellate court is to construe the pleaded facts in favor of the petition to determine whether the social services agency pleaded sufficient grounds to bring the child within Welf. & Inst. Code § 300 [In re Nicholas B. (2001) 88 Cal. App. 4th 1126, 1133, 106 Cal. Rptr. 2d 465] .

For discussion of why neither the Civil Code nor the Code of Civil Procedure should apply to dependency cases unless expressly made applicable and the controversy now surrounding that traditional view, see § 328.10[1].

[2] Admission, No Contest Plea, or Submission

At the initial or detention hearing, the parent or guardian may admit the allegations of the petition, plead no contest, or submit the jurisdictional determination to the court based on the information provided to the court, and may waive further jurisdictional hearing [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.674(a)]. When accepting an admission, plea of no contest, or submission, the court must proceed according to Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 5.682 and 5.686 (admission, no contest plea, or submission procedures in jurisdiction hearing) [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.674(a); see discussion in § 328.105].

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329

CHAPTER 328 JUVENILE COURTS: DEPENDENCY PROCEEDINGS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Initial or Detention Hearing

28-328 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 328.43

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser Editorial Consultant John P. Passalacqua Contributing Author Jennifer Kaye Williams Contributing Author

§ 328.43 Conduct of Initial or Detention Hearing

[1] Attention to Rights of Child and Parent or Guardian

At any detention hearing, the child, and each parent or guardian, may assert his or her privilege against self-incrimination, and the right to confront and to cross examine the preparer of any police, probation, or social work report or other document submitted to the court and any person examined by the court. Further, the child, parents, or guardians, and the attorneys for such persons must be permitted to inspect the police, probation officer, or social worker reports, and all other documents that are filed with the court or that were made available to the probation officer or social worker in preparing the report [Welf. & Inst. Code § 311(b)].

[2] Examination of Parties and Evidence

Subject to the rights of the child, parent, or guardian to cross examine witnesses and assert the privilege against self-incrimination, the court must examine the parents, guardian, or other person having knowledge relevant to the ground for detention and must hear any relevant evidence the child, parents, or guardian or their counsel desires to present. The court may examine the child in chambers and outside the presence of his or her parents or guardian under circumstances specified in Welf. & Inst. Code § 350(b) [Welf. & Inst. Code § 319; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.674(c); see discussion in § 328.111].

[3] Social Worker's Detention Report

At the hearing, the social worker must report to the court on the following [Welf. & Inst. Code § 319; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.676(b)]:

- The reasons why the child has been removed from the parent's custody.

- A description of the services that have been provided to the family and whether there are available services or safety plans that would prevent the need for further detention.

- The need, if any, for continued detention.

- If continued detention is recommended, whether there is a parent with whom the child was not residing at the time of detention or a relative who is able and willing to take temporary custody of the child.

The social worker shall provide the parents and guardians or their counsel with a copy of the social worker's report without cost [Welf. & Inst. Code § 302(b)].

[4] Evidence Presented at Hearing

At the detention hearing the court must read, consider, and reference any reports submitted by the social worker [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.674(b)]. In making the findings prerequisite to an order of detention at the detention hearing, the court may rely solely on written police, probation, or social worker reports or other documents [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.676(b)]. The parties may also present testimony or introduce such other relevant and admissible evidence as they desire, which evidence must be considered by the court [Welf. & Inst. Code § 319; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.674(b)-(c)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Evidence at Detention Hearing. Many practitioners in juvenile court mistakenly believe that they cannot present testimony on the issue of detention except at a prima facie rehearing under Welf. & Inst. Code § 321. This is not the case. Testimony is permitted at the initial detention hearing and can be presented by any of the parties. Since it may be persuasive on the issue of detention in a close case, practitioners should consider it where appropriate. Most juvenile courts do not anticipate testimony in detention hearings, however, and therefore cases for this practice should be chosen wisely and the court should be given as much notice as possible.

[5] Grounds for Continued Detention

The court must order the child's release from custody unless a prima facie showing is made that the child comes within Welf. & Inst. Code § 300 (grounds for dependency), the court finds that continuation of residence in the home would be contrary to the welfare of the child, and any of the following circumstances exist [Welf. & Inst. Code § 319; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 5.678(a)]:

- There is a substantial danger to the physical health of the child or the child is suffering severe emotional damage, and there are no reasonable means by which the child's emotional or physical health can be protected without removing the child from the custody of the parents or guardians.

- The child is already a dependent and has left a placement in which he or she was placed by the juvenile court.

- There is substantial evidence that a parent, guardian, or custodian of the child is likely to flee the jurisdiction of the court.

- The child indicates an unwillingness to return home and has been physically or sexually abused by a person residing in the home.

In determining whether to release or detain the child, the court must consider whether the child can be returned home if the court orders services to be provided [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.678(b); see Welf. & Inst. Code § 319]. Services to be considered for purposes of making this determination include consideration of the option of referral to public assistance services pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 11200 et seq. (California Work Opportunity and Responsibility to Kids Act), 14000 et seq. (Medi-Cal), 17000 et seq. (County Aid to Indigents) or 18900 et seq. (Food Stamps). If those public assistance services would prevent the need for further detention they are to be used [Welf. & Inst. Code § 319].

PRACTICE TIP (PARENT'S P.OV.):

The Forgotten Prong; Reasonable Means to Protect Without Removal. Before the detention hearing, all counsel should actively explore whether there are reasonable means by which the child can safely remain home. Examples could include provision of in-home supportive services, child care, a restraining order against a perpetrator, intensive supervision by the agency, or allowing a parent and child to stay at a safe place.

The finding that continuation in the home of the parent or guardian would be contrary to the welfare of the child must be made at the first court ruling pertaining to removal from the home or the child will not be eligible for title IV-E foster care maintenance payments for the duration of that stay in foster care [45 C.F.R. 1356.21(c)].

[6] Order to Release or Detain Child

If the social services agency fails to meet its burden to make a prima facie showing of jurisdiction, the child must be returned to the parent or guardian. The petition is not dismissed, however, since the detention hearing is not a jurisdiction hearing. The fact that the agency fails to meet its burden at a detention hearing held only a few days after it becomes involved in the case does not mean the agency will not be able to prove jurisdictional grounds at a full jurisdiction hearing held weeks later after it has had time to conduct a more complete investigation. As such, unless all parties, including the agency, agree to a dismissal of the matter at the detention hearing, the court lacks the authority to dismiss the petition and a jurisdiction hearing must be set [Los Angeles County Dept. of Children Family Services v. Superior Court (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 1408, 1418, 77 Cal. Rptr. 3d 52 , citing Seiser & Kumli, California Juvenile Courts Practice and Procedure, former § 2.83[6] (Matthew Bender); see also California Ctr. for Jud. Educ. and Research, Cal. Judges Benchguides, Benchguide 100: Juvenile Dependency Initial or Detention Hearing (Jan. 2009) § 100.36, pp. 100.41 to 100.42]. Further, although theoretically applicable, the legislature did not intend Welf. & Inst. Code § 390, the general dismissal section, to allow summary dismissal of the petition at the initial or detention hearing due to the requirement for notice and specific findings [Los Angeles County Dept. of Children Family Services v. Superior Court (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 1408, 14171418, 77 Cal. Rptr. 3d 52] . Thus, even if the court fails to make a prima facie finding on the petition, it must set the matter for a jurisdiction hearing unless all parties agree to a dismissal.

If the child can be returned to the custody of his or her parent or guardian through the provision of services, the court is required to place the child with his or her parents or guardian and order that the services be provided [Welf. & Inst. Code § 319]. If the child cannot be returned to the custody of his or her parent or guardian, the court must determine if there is a relative who is able, willing, and assessed pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 309(d)(1) to care for the child [Welf. & Inst. Code § 319(d)(2)].

Whenever a court orders a child detained, the court must state the facts on which the decision is based, must specify why the initial removal was necessary, and must order services to be provided as soon as possible to reunify the child and his or her family if appropriate [Welf. & Inst. Code § 319].

If the court orders the child detained, it must find that a prima facie showing has been made that the child is a child described by Welf. & Inst. Code § 300, continuance in the home of the parent or guardian is contrary to the welfare of the child, and that one or more of the grounds for detention exist [Welf. & Inst. Code § 319, Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.678(a)]. It must also order temporary care and custody of the child be vested with the county social services agency pending disposition or further order of the court [Welf. & Inst. Code § 319(e)]. These findings and orders are necessary both on the record and in the court's written orders to ensure federal funding.

If the detention hearing is continued pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 322, or is continued for any other reason, the court must still find that continuation of residence in the home of the parent or guardian would be contrary to the welfare of the child, or order the child released from custody [Welf. & Inst. Code § 319(c)]. This determination must be made at the first court ruling pertaining to removal from the home or the child will not be eligible for title IV-E foster care maintenance payments for the duration of that stay in foster care [45 C.F.R. 1356.21(c)]. It may be made on a temporary basis pending the continued detention hearing, however, and reevaluated at that continued hearing [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 5.672(a)].

In making its findings and orders on the issue of reasonable efforts, the court must read and consider any reports that are submitted by the social services department and any relevant evidence submitted by the other parties or their counsel [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 5.674(b)-(c)]. The court may not order the child detained unless it finds that there are no reasonable services that would prevent the need for detaining the child or that would allow the child to return to the home safely [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.678(c)(2)].

PRACTICE TIP (PARENT'S P.OV.):

Post Detention Hearing; What Just Happened? The detention hearing represents a time of intense emotion and confusion for parents. After the hearing it is critical that parent's counsel take the time to explain to the client what happened in court, what will happen next, and what they need to do in the interim. If criminal prosecution is a possibility, the client needs to be properly advised of the possible ramifications of making statements [see § 328.111]. Whenever possible, clients should also be strongly encouraged to participate in services, especially visitation. Often, information in the detention report reveals potential bypass issues. If so, parents will have a relatively short time to prove, by engaging in services, that they are likely to benefit from these services under Welf. & Inst. Code § 361.5(c).

If the child is not released from custody, the court may order that he or she be placed in the assessed home of a relative, in an emergency shelter or other suitable licensed place or a place exempt from licensure designated by the juvenile court, or in the assessed home of a "nonrelative extended family member" as defined in Welf. & Inst. Code § 362.7, for a period not to exceed 15 judicial days [Welf. & Inst. Code § 319(f)(1)]. The court must consider the social worker's recommendations for relative placement based on the assessment of the relative's home, including the criminal records check and any prior child abuse allegations prior to ordering the child placed with a relative [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 309(d), 319(f)]. In addition, the social worker must initiate the more complete assessment required by Welf. & Inst. Code § 361.3 for any relative to be considered for continuing placement of the child [Welf. & Inst. Code § 319(f)(3)]. This would include the requirements of Welf. & Inst. Code § 361.4 regarding criminal records checks for all adults living in the home, known to have a familial or intimate relationship with someone living in the home, and all adults who may have significant contact with the child if placed in that home other than the professionals providing professional services to the child [Welf. & Inst. Code § 361.4(b)]. It would also include a Child Abuse Index check on all adults living in the home [Welf. & Inst. Code § 361.4(c)].

As used in this context, the term "relative" means an adult who is related to the child by blood, adoption, or affinity within the fifth degree of kinship, including stepparents, stepsiblings, and all relatives whose status is preceded by the words "great," "great-great," or "grand." The adult spouse of any of these persons is also considered a relative, even if the marriage has been terminated by dissolution or death [Welf. & Inst. Code § 319(f)(2)]. In defining a relative in this way, "affinity" refers to the "connection existing between one spouse or domestic partner and the blood or adoptive relatives of the other spouse" [Cal. Rules of Ct., 5.502(1)]. Only the following relatives, however, shall be given preferential treatment for placement of the child: an adult who is the grandparent, aunt, uncle, or sibling of the child [Welf. & Inst. Code § 319(f)(2)].

A "nonrelative extended family member" is defined as an adult caregiver who has an established familial or mentoring relationship with the child that has been verified by the social services agency [Welf. & Inst. Code § 362.7].

PRACTICE TIP:

Careful Selection and Review of Relative and "Nonrelative Extended Family Member" (NREFM) Placements. The assessment of potential temporary relative and "nonrelative extended family member" placements required by Welf. & Inst. Code § 309(d) is far less complete than the assessment required by Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 361.3 and 361.4 for ongoing placement. Once a child is placed with assessed relative, or even an assessed "nonrelative extended family member," however, there is a natural reluctance to remove the child from that placement except for return to a parent. In light of that natural reluctance and with recognition that concurrent planning considerations for permanent placement of the child with any ongoing caretaker must be considered [see Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 361.3(a)(7)(G)-(H), 366.26(k)], social services agencies and courts should not rush into temporary relative or "nonrelative extended family member" placements, but instead should select such placements with great care.

[7] Required Finding of Reasonable Efforts to Avoid Removal

Whether the court decides to release or detain the child, it must determine, on the record, whether reasonable efforts to prevent or eliminate the need for removal were made, and must make one of the following findings [Cal. Rules of Ct., 5.678(c); see Welf. & Inst. Code § 319]:

- Reasonable efforts have been made to prevent or eliminate the need for removal.
- Reasonable efforts have not been made to prevent or eliminate the need for removal.

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 328 JUVENILE COURTS: DEPENDENCY PROCEEDINGS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Initial or Detention Hearing

28-328 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 328.44

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser Editorial Consultant John P. Passalacqua Contributing Author Jennifer Kaye Williams Contributing Author

§ 328.44 Orders Concerning Reunification Services and Visitation

If the court orders the child detained it must order reunification services to begin as soon as possible to reunify the child and his or her family if appropriate [Welf. & Inst. Code § 319; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.678(c)(3)(C)].

When services are ordered for a parent or guardian, the parent or guardian must be advised that the acceptance of such services does not constitute an admission of guilt and cannot be used as evidence against them [Evid. Code § 1228.1(a); Welf. & Inst. Code § 16501.1(f)(12)(B)]. They must also be advised, however, that their failure to cooperate with such services, except for good cause, can be used later as evidence in a review hearing or a hearing on a petition filed pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 300, 342, 387, or 388 [Evid. Code § 1228.1(b); Welf. & Inst. Code § 16501.1(f)(12)(B)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Hearing Begins Reunification Period. The detention hearing essentially marks the beginning of the maximum 18-month reunification period that starts at the time the child is originally removed from the physical custody of his or her parent or guardian [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 361.5(a), 366.21(g)(1), 366.22(a)]. As such, it is important that counsel ensure the court makes the necessary order for such services at the detention hearing. Counsel should advise their clients to immediately involve themselves in these services since such involvement can be extremely relevant on the issue of "substantial risk" at both jurisdiction and disposition. Even if the parent is denying wrongdoing, there are many services that can be started that do not require any admission on the part of the parent. Counsel can advise their clients as necessary and appropriate in this regard.

If the child is to be detained, the court must consider the issue of visitation with the parent or guardian, and with any others with whom contact would benefit the child, including siblings, and must make appropriate orders [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.670(g)].

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329

CHAPTER 328 JUVENILE COURTS: DEPENDENCY PROCEEDINGS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Initial or Detention Hearing

28-328 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 328.45

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser Editorial Consultant John P. Passalacqua Contributing Author Jennifer Kaye Williams Contributing Author

§ 328.45 Rehearing of Detention Hearing

[1] When Report Preparers Are Available

If the preparers of all reports or documents relied on by the court in making its detention decision are present in court or are otherwise made available for purposes of confrontation and cross examination at the detention hearing, and if the parent had notice of the detention hearing, there is no right to a detention rehearing under Welf. & Inst. Code § 321 [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.680(c)]. This is because the parent or guardian has the right to call the preparers of the reports and documents to testify and be cross-examined at the original detention hearing if they are present for that hearing.

[2] When Parent or Guardian Was Not Notified of Hearing

If no parent or guardian of the child was present at the detention hearing and did not have actual notice of the hearing, the parent or guardian may file an affidavit setting forth the facts with the clerk of the juvenile court, and the clerk must immediately set the matter for rehearing within 24 hours, excluding Sundays and nonjudicial days, of the filing of the affidavit. At the rehearing, the court must proceed in the same manner as on the original hearing [Welf. & Inst. Code § 321; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.680(a)].

[3] On Request for Further Evidence (Prima Facie Rehearing)

After a decision of detention has been made, the child, the parent or guardian, or the child's attorney may request further evidence of the prima facie case or the ground for detention by invoking the right to confront and to cross examine the preparers of reports or documents relied on by the court in its initial decision. If that request is made, a detention rehearing shall be held within three court days [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.680(d); see Welf. & Inst. Code § 321]. If the preparer of any report or document is not made available for purposes of confrontation and cross examination, the report or document may not be considered by the court in making its detention decision. If a prima facie case is not established, the child must be released from detention [Welf. & Inst. Code § 321; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.680(d)].

In lieu of a requested rehearing, the court may set the jurisdiction hearing to commence within 10 court days of the detention hearing [Welf. & Inst. Code § 321; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.680(d)].

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 328 JUVENILE COURTS: DEPENDENCY PROCEEDINGS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Initial or Detention Hearing

28-328 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 328.46

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser Editorial Consultant John P. Passalacqua Contributing Author Jennifer Kaye Williams Contributing Author

§ 328.46 Meeting Mental Health Needs of Dependent Child

[1] Appointment of Psychotherapist

When a petition is filed in a dependency case, the juvenile court may order the probation officer to obtain the services of any psychiatrists, psychologists, or other clinical experts as may be required to assist in determining the appropriate treatment of the child and as may be required in the conduct or implementation of that treatment. Payment for the services are charged against the county [Welf. & Inst. Code § 370].

[2] Specialized Treatment

When the court finds a child to be a person described by Welf. & Inst. Code § 300, and believes that the child may need specialized mental health treatment while the child is unable to reside in his or her natural home, the court must notify the director of the county mental health department in the county where the child resides. The county mental health department must perform the duties required under Welf. & Inst. Code § 5694.7. This section does not restrict the provision of emergency psychiatric services to those children who are involved in dependency cases and have not yet reached the point of adjudication or disposition, nor does it operate to restrict evaluations at an earlier stage of the proceedings or to restrict orders removing the child from a detention facility for psychiatric treatment [Welf. & Inst. Code § 319.1].

[3] Placement in Psychopathic Ward

Whenever the court, before or during a hearing on the petition, is of the opinion that the child is mentally ill or if the court is in doubt concerning the mental health of the child, the court may order the child to be held temporarily in the psychopathic ward of the county hospital or of any hospital that has been approved and/or contracted with by the county department of health, for observation and recommendation concerning the future care, supervision, and treatment of the child [Welf. & Inst. Code § 357; see Welf. & Inst. Code § 6550 et seq.].

[4] Orders for Psychotropic Medications

Once a child has been adjudicated a dependent child of the juvenile court and removed from the physical custody of a parent pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 361, only a juvenile court judicial officer can make orders regarding the administration of psychotropic medications for that child [Welf. & Inst. Code § 369.5(a); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.640]. If the court finds the parent poses no danger to the child and has the capacity to authorize psychotropic medications, it may make an order delegating its authority in this regard to the parent. Such an order is discretionary and must take into consideration the child's best interests [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 202(d), 369.5(a)].

Social services agencies that complete requests for authorization of psychotropic medication are encouraged to complete the request and submit it to the court within three business days of receipt from the physician of the information needed to fully complete the request [Welf. & Inst. Code § 369.5(b)]. Within seven court days of the receipt of a completed request, the juvenile court must either approve or deny the request in writing, or set the matter for a hearing [Welf. & Inst. Code § 369.5(c)].

Psychotropic medication or drugs are those medications administered for the purpose of treating psychiatric disorders or illnesses by affecting the central nervous system. Such medications include, but are not limited to, anxiolytic agents, antidepressants, mood stabilizers, antipsychotic medications, anti-Parkinson agents, hypnotics, medications for dementia, and psychostimulants [Welf. & Inst. Code § 369.5(d)].

Court authorization for psychotropic medications for a dependent child in out-of-home care must be based on a request from a physician that indicates the reasons for the request, a description of the child's behavior and diagnosis, the anticipated results of the medication, and a description of any side effects of the medication [Welf. & Inst. Code § 369.5(a)]. The provisions of Welf. & Inst. Code § 369.5 are not intended to supersede local court rules regarding a child's right to participate in mental health decisions [Welf. & Inst. Code § 369.5(e)]. The Judicial Council has adopted Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.640, and Judicial Council Forms JV-220 (Application Regarding Psychotropic Medication), JV-220(A) (Prescribing Physician's Statement--Attachment), JV-221 (Proof of Notice: Application Regarding Psychotropic Medication), JV-222 (Opposition to Application Regarding Psychotropic Medication), and JV-223 (Order Regarding Application for Psychotropic Medication) for implementation of Welf. & Inst. Code § 369.5. The forms are mandatory and must be filed with the court. Additional information may be provided to the court through local forms that are consistent with the requirements of Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.640 [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.640(c)(2)].

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329

CHAPTER 328 JUVENILE COURTS: DEPENDENCY PROCEEDINGS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Initial or Detention Hearing

28-328 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 328.47

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser Editorial Consultant John P. Passalacqua Contributing Author Jennifer Kaye Williams Contributing Author

§ 328.47 Restraining Orders

[1] During Dependency Proceedings

After a petition has been filed in the juvenile court to declare a child to be a dependent, and until such time as that petition is dismissed or dependency is ordered terminated, the court may issue ex parte [see Welf. & Inst. Code § 213.5(a)], or on notice [see Welf. & Inst. Code § 213.5(d)], restraining orders requiring any of the following [Welf. & Inst. Code § 213.5(a); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 5.620(b), 5.630; see Code Civ. Proc. § 527 (procedure to obtain restraining orders)]:

- Enjoining any person from molesting, attacking, striking, sexually assaulting, stalking, or battering the child or any other child in the household.

- Excluding any person from the dwelling of the person who has care, custody, and control of the child.

- Enjoining any person from behavior the court determines is necessary to enjoin to effectuate either of the two foregoing orders, including contacting, threatening, or disturbing the peace of the child.

On application completed in the manner provided by Code of Civ. Proc. § 527, a juvenile court issuing an restraining order pursuant to this section may simultaneously issue an order enjoining any person from "contacting, threatening, molesting, attacking, striking, sexually assaulting, stalking, battering, or disturbing the peace" of any parent, guardian, or current caregiver of the child. This restraining order may be issued regardless of whether the child currently resides with that parent, legal guardian, or current caregiver [Welf. & Inst. Code § 213.5(a)].

The application for a restraining order may be made orally at any hearing of the juvenile court regarding the child or in writing. The juvenile court may also issue restraining orders on its own motion [Welf. & Inst. Code § 304]. If made in writing, it shall be made on the Judicial Council forms Juvenile Dependency Petition (JV-100) and Application and Declaration for Restraining Order (JV-245) [Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 5.630(b)]. The restraining order must be prepared on Judicial Council form Restraining Order--Juvenile (JV-250) [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.630]. If the juvenile court restraining order is made due to domestic violence, the Judicial Council form used must be approved by the Department of Justice pursuant to Fam. Code § 6380(i), although the failure to use such a form does not make the order unenforceable [Welf. & Inst. Code § 213.5(i)].

If a temporary restraining order is made without notice, an order to show cause why the order should not be granted shall be made returnable to the court on the earliest day the business of the court will permit, but not later than 15 days following the issuance of the order, or not later than 20 days from the date of the issuance of the temporary restraining order if good cause is shown [Welf. & Inst. Code § 213.5(c)]. The time for service on the person to be restrained of the order to show cause may be shortened on motion of the person seeking the restraining order or on the court's own motion [Welf. & Inst. Code § 213.5(c)]. If the temporary restraining order has been dissolved by the court for failure to serve the person to be restrained, the court may on its own motion or on the filing of an affidavit by the person seeking the restraining order, find the person to be restrained could not be served within the required time and reissue the temporary restraining order and order to show cause. The reissued order must state on its face the date of the expiration of the order [Welf. & Inst. Code § 213.5(c)].

If the person named in the temporary restraining order or emergency protective order has been personally served with the order and notice of a hearing on the order, and the person does not appear at the hearing either in person or through counsel, the court may issue the order, so long as the terms and conditions are identical to the temporary order, except for the duration of the order. Thereafter, the order may be served on the person by first class mail at the most current address known to the court [Welf. & Inst. Code § 213.6(a)]. The Judicial Council forms for temporary restraining orders or emergency protective orders are to include notice of these provisions [Welf. & Inst. Code § 213.6(b)].

A residence-exclusion order may be issued "regardless of which party holds legal or equitable title or is the lessee of the residence or dwelling" [Welf. & Inst. Code § 213.5(e)]. The court may make a residence-exclusion order only on a showing of all of the following [Welf. & Inst. Code § 213.5(e)(2)]:

- Facts sufficient for the juvenile court to determine the person who will remain in the dwelling has a right to possession of the premises under color of law.

- That the excluded person has assaulted or threatens to assault the other person, any person under the care, custody and control of the other person, or any minor child of the parties or of the other person.

- That the other person, any person under the care, custody or control of the other person, or any minor child of the parties or of the other person, would suffer physical or emotional harm if the order were not issued.

Any hearing pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 213.5 regarding a restraining order may be held simultaneously with any of the regularly scheduled dependency hearings [Welf. & Inst. Code § 213.5(c)].

Prior to deciding to issue or deny a restraining order, a search must be conducted as described in Fam. Code § 6306(a) [Welf. & Inst. Code § 213.5(k)(1)]. The court must consider the results of that search, including any conviction for a violent or serious felony, any misdemeanor conviction involving domestic violence, weapons, or other violence, any outstanding warrant, parole or probation status, any prior restraining order, and any violation of a prior restraining order [Welf. & Inst. Code § 213.5(k)(2)]. If the person who is the subject of the search is found to have an outstanding arrest warrant, the court shall order the clerk to immediately notify appropriate law enforcement officials who shall take all necessary and appropriate actions to execute the outstanding warrants as soon as practicable [Welf. & Inst. Code § 213.5(k)(3)(A)]. If the person who is the subject of the search is on probation or parole, the court shall order the clerk of the court to immediately notify the parole or probation officer of any information obtained through the search the court determines appropriate [Welf. & Inst. Code § 213.5(k)(3)(B)].

If the juvenile court issues a restraining order pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 213.5, 304, 362.4, or 726.5, the court shall also order the party being enjoined from taking any action to obtain the address or location of a protected party or the protected party's caregivers, family members, or guardian [Welf. & Inst. Code § 213.7(a)]. The court need not make this order, however, if it finds good cause not to make the order [Welf. & Inst. Code § 213.7(a)]. The Judicial Council is to promulgate the forms needed to put this section into effect [Welf. & Inst. Code § 213.7(b)].

Any restraining orders issued upon notice and a hearing shall remain in effect for a period not exceeding three years, unless the order is otherwise terminated by the court, extended by mutual consent of all parties, or extended by further order of the court. The date of expiration of the order must be stated on the face of the order [Welf. & Inst. Code § 213.5(d)].

Any willful and knowing violation of a restraining order is a misdemeanor punishable under Penal Code § 273.65 [Welf. & Inst. Code § 213.5(h)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Notifying Law Enforcement. Getting the court to issue a restraining order is only the first step in protecting the child and the home where the child is staying. Law enforcement must also be aware of the restraining order so that it can be enforced should that prove to be necessary. Practitioners sometimes forget this second step. Welf. & Inst. Code § 213.5(g) mandates the court to "order any designated person or attorney" to mail a copy of the restraining order to each local law enforcement agency that has jurisdiction over the residence of the person who is caring for the child. Law enforcement agencies having jurisdiction over "other locations where the court determines that acts of domestic violence or abuse against the child or children are likely to occur" are also to be noticed pursuant to the court's order. These agencies are not only to be mailed the restraining order. They are also to be mailed copies of any extension, modification, or termination thereof, and any subsequent proof of service. These are to be mailed "by the close of the business day" on which the order is made. The juvenile court and attorneys representing agencies, children, and caretakers should take steps to ensure this requirement is met in every case in which a restraining order is issued.

[2] On Termination of Dependency Jurisdiction

At any time the court terminates its dependency jurisdiction prior to the child reaching 18 years of age, and there is a proceeding pending in the superior court of any county for dissolution of marriage, for nullity of marriage, for legal separation of the child's parents, or for establishment of paternity, or where an order has been made with regard to the custody of the child, the court may issue a restraining or protective order as defined in Fam. Code § 6218 or provided for in Welf. & Inst. Code § 213.5 and issue an order determining custody of, or visitation with, the child [Welf. & Inst. Code § 362.4]. Such an order may include enjoining certain specific actions [Fam. Code § 6320 and Welf. & Inst. Code § 213.5(a)(1)], excluding a person from a dwelling [Fam. Code § 6321; Welf. & Inst. Code § 213.5(a)(2)], and enjoining other specified behavior [Fam. Code § 6322 and Welf. & Inst. Code § 213.5(a)(3)], as the court deems necessary [Fam. Code § 6318 and Welf. & Inst. Code § 362.4]. The order must be prepared on Judicial Council form Custody Order--Juvenile--Final Judgment (JV-200) [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.700(a)(2)].

[3] To Restrain Threats to a Social Worker

The juvenile court has authority to issue a restraining order to parents of a dependent child restraining them "from threatening the social worker, or any member of the social worker's family, with physical harm" [Welf. & Inst. Code § 340.5(a)]. Such orders may only be issued for "good cause," which means the parent to be the subject of the restraining order must have made at least one threat of physical harm to the social worker or a member of the social worker's family, "with the apparent ability to carry out the threat" [Welf. & Inst. Code § 340.5(b)]. The statute is silent as to whether that threat must be express, or may be implied from other nonverbal conduct. The better view, consistent with the underlying purpose of the statute, would be to include nonverbal conduct that communicates a danger of physical harm. Thus, following, stalking, or otherwise watching a social worker may in an appropriate case constitute a threat within the meaning of this statute.

The social worker protected need not be the one actually assigned to the case at the time the order is written. It can include the previous social worker, social work supervisors, visitation supervisors, the department head, and others who provide services directly or indirectly on the case [In re Matthew F. (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 883, 888, 33 Cal. Rptr. 3d 909] . In this way the social services agency can even reassign the case to defuse a parent's anger toward a particular social worker, yet still protect the social worker by seeking a restraining order under Welf. & Inst. Code § 340.5. Thus, the connection between the threat and the statutory language for issuance of a restraining order under this section is a causal, not a temporal one [In re Matthew F. (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 883, 887, 33 Cal. Rptr. 3d 909] .

Like restraining orders issued under other provisions, a restraining order issued under this section may be issued for up to three years [In re Matthew F. (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 883, 887, 33 Cal. Rptr. 3d 909] . A parent's violation of a restraining order issued pursuant to this code section is punishable as contempt [Welf. & Inst. Code § 340.5(c); see Welf. & Inst. Code § 213 (contempt)]. Further, although not yet required under Welf. & Inst. Code § 213.7, apparently through a legislative oversight, the juvenile court should also order that any party enjoined under this section be prohibited from taking any action to obtain the address or location of the social worker protected by the order, unless it finds good cause not to make such an order.

PRACTICE TIP:

Additional Orders May Be Required. The powers of the juvenile court to issue restraining orders for the protection of social workers pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 340.5 is limited. The juvenile court may only issue such orders to the parents of dependent children. Thus, in cases in which the stepparent, the parent's significant other, grandparent, or other adult threatens the social worker, additional restraining orders may need to be sought from the superior court. All participants in the dependency process, including all counsel and the court, should be alert for the possible need to protect social workers and should take whatever steps are appropriate to do so.

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 328 JUVENILE COURTS: DEPENDENCY PROCEEDINGS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Initial or Detention Hearing

28-328 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 328.48

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser Editorial Consultant John P. Passalacqua Contributing Author Jennifer Kaye Williams Contributing Author

§ 328.48 Order to Appear Before Court or Social Worker

At any hearing or rehearing, the court may order the child or any parent or guardian of the child who is present in court to appear again before the court, social worker, or county financial evaluation officer at a time and place specified in the order [Welf. & Inst. Code § 323].

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 328 JUVENILE COURTS: DEPENDENCY PROCEEDINGS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Initial or Detention Hearing

28-328 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated §§ 328.49-328.59

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser Editorial Consultant John P. Passalacqua Contributing Author Jennifer Kaye Williams Contributing Author

[Reserved]

§§ 328.49[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 328 JUVENILE COURTS: DEPENDENCY PROCEEDINGS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Parties and Participants--Standing, Rights, and Appointment of Counsel and GAL

28-328 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 328.60

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser Editorial Consultant John P. Passalacqua Contributing Author Jennifer Kaye Williams Contributing Author

§ 328.60 Rights of Parents and Guardians

[1] Fundamental Right of Parent

Parenting is a fundamental right that should only be disturbed in extreme cases of persons acting in a way that is incompatible with parenthood [In re Angelia P. (1981) 28 Cal. 3d 908, 916, 623 P.2d 198 , citing In re Carmaleta B. (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 482, 489, 146 Cal. Rptr. 623, 579 P.2d 514 ; In re B.G. (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 679, 688-689, 114 Cal. Rptr. 444, 523 P.2d 244] . Thus, our society has recognized that a parent has an "essential" and "basic" presumptive right to the care, custody, management and companionship of his or her own child [In re Kieshia E. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 68, 76, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 775, 859 P.2d 1290 , citing Stanley v. Illinois (1972) 405 U.S. 645, 651, 92 S. Ct. 1208, 31 L. Ed. 2d 551 ; Lassiter v. Department of Soc. Servs. (1981) 452 U.S. 18, 27, 101 S. Ct. 2153, 68 L. Ed. 2d 640] .

[2] "Parent" Defined

[a] In General

For purposes of California dependency law, only mothers and presumed parents are considered parents within the meaning of the statutes. Therefore only mothers and presumed parents are entitled to all the rights afforded to parents in dependency proceedings, including standing, the appointment of counsel, and reunification services [In re Zacharia D. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 435, 448, 451, 24 Cal. Rptr. 2d 751, 862 P.2d 751 ; In re Emily R. (2000) 80 Cal. App. 4th 1344, 1354, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 285 ; In re Sarah C. (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 964, 971-972, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 414 ; but see also discussion in § 328.60[3] and § 328.60[4]].

This used to be relatively straightforward, since only mothers and men presumed to be the natural fathers were entitled to the rights of parents in dependency cases. Now, however, men who are known not to be the biological father can still be the presumed father [In re Jesusa V. (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 588, 606, 10 Cal. Rptr. 3d 205, 85 P.3d 2 ; In re Nicholas

H. (2002) 28 Cal. 4th 56, 58-59, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 146, 46 P.3d 932]. The California Supreme Court has also held a woman can be a presumed parent under Fam. Code § 7611(d) [Elisa B. v. Superior Court (2005) 37 Cal. 4th 108, 119-120, 33 Cal. Rptr. 3d 46, 117 P.3d 660] . Further, domestic partners legislation has taken effect, which may apply [Fam. Code § 297 et seq.; see § 328.60[2][b]]. Thus, the area of parentage in dependency cases is one that is undergoing tremendous upheaval and uncertainty due to courts trying to reconcile dependency law to the many non-traditional family structures children are being raised in, and due to a number of California appellate decisions that have held that presumed parentage is not always rebutted by evidence the presumed parent is not the biological parent. Parentage in dependency cases continues to be an ever more frequently contested issue at both the trial and appellate levels. The National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform Laws has recently approved an expanded and updated Uniform Parentage Act that many states, including California, are now considering. The need for a comprehensive statutory scheme in the area of parentage law that addresses the areas of non-traditional families, surrogate mothers, artificial insemination and assisted reproduction, and many of the other parentage issues facing our courts is great. This is an area to be watched for further developments.

[b] Presumed Parents

A man is presumed to be the biological father of the child if he meets any of the following criteria [Fam. Code § 7611]:

- He is the husband of the mother, cohabiting with the mother, and is not impotent or sterile. Under such circumstances the child is "conclusively presumed to be a child of the marriage" [Fam. Code § 7540].

- He and the mother have signed a voluntary declaration of paternity pursuant to Fam. Code § 7574 that was filed with the proper state office on or before December 31, 1996, and that declaration has not been rescinded or set aside [Fam. Code §§ 7570, 7575, 7576 et seq.]. The presumption of paternity has also been found to apply to a voluntary declaration filed on or after January 1, 1997 [In re Liam L. (2000) 84 Cal. App. 4th 739, 743-747, 101 Cal. Rptr. 2d 13] .

- He and the mother are or have been married to each other and either the child is born during the marriage or the child is born within 300 days after the marriage is terminated or a judgment of separation is entered by a court [Fam. Code § 7611(a)].

- He and the mother attempted to marry each other in a marriage carried out in apparent compliance with the law prior to the birth of the child, the attempted marriage is or could be declared invalid, and either: (1) the attempted marriage could only be declared invalid by a court and the child is born during the attempted marriage or within 300 days of the termination of the attempted marriage; or (2) the attempted marriage is invalid without a court order but the child is born within 300 days following the termination of the cohabitation [Fam. Code § 7611(b)].

- He and the mother married or attempted to marry each other in a marriage carried out in apparent compliance with the law after the birth of the child, and either: (1) he is named on the child's birth certificate as the child's father with his consent; or (2) he is obligated to support the child under a court order or written voluntary promise of support [Fam. Code § 7611(c)].

- He receives the child into his home and openly holds the child out as his natural child [Fam. Code § 7611(d)]. If, however, he has acted in a manner inconsistent with the parental role, such as abusing or molesting the child, the presumption may not apply [In re T.R. (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 1202, 1212, 34 Cal. Rptr. 3d 215] .

- He acknowledges he is the child's father in a declaration under penalty of perjury as specified in

Code of Civ. Proc. § 2015.5 and the child was born and resides in a country with which the United States has an Orderly Departure Program or successor program [Fam. Code § 7611(e)].

With regard to same sex couples, either a man or a woman may be considered a presumed parent if a registered domestic partnership is involved [see § 328.60[2][e]].

A woman can be a presumed mother if she receives the child into her home and openly holds the child out as her natural child under Fam. Code § 7611(d) [Elisa B. v. Superior Court (2005) 37 Cal. 4th 108, 119-120, 33 Cal. Rptr. 3d 46, 117 P.3d 660] . It can be assumed that women may also now be recognized as presumed parents in the same ways as men [Elisa B. v. Superior Court (2005) 37 Cal. 4th 108, 119-120, 33 Cal. Rptr. 3d 46, 117 P.3d 660] .

If a parent is seeking to establish presumed parent status, he or she bears the burden of proof by a preponderance of the evidence [Glen C. v. Superior Court (2000) 78 Cal. App. 4th 570, 585, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 103 ; In re Spencer W. (1996) 48 Cal. App. 4th 1647, 1652, 56 Cal. Rptr. 2d 524] .

Many have argued that the social services agency lacks standing to challenge the marital presumptions found in Fam. Code §§ 7540, and 7611(a), since under the limitations set forth in the Family Code only the mother, the mother's husband, the presumed father, or the child can attack those presumptions [see Fam. Code §§ 7541, 7630(a)]. Courts have been very strict in applying these limitations when the issues are raised in family law and paternity cases [see, e.g., Dawn D. v. Superior Court (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 932, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 871, 952 P.2d 1139 ; Rodney F. v. Karen M. (1998) 61 Cal. App. 4th 233, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 399] .

The better view, however, is that these limitations do not preclude the social services agency from challenging a marital presumption in an appropriate dependency case. The social worker is charged with serving the best interests of the child, and in most cases the care, custody and control of the child is placed with social services [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 280, 361.2(e)]. Since the juvenile court's determination of any paternity issues is done within the dependency action, the social worker should have standing to challenge the marital presumptions [Fam. Code §§ 7541(b), 7630(a)]. A strong argument can also be made that the limitations on who can challenge the marital presumptions that are found in the Family Code do not apply to dependency cases since dependency proceedings are special proceedings governed by their own rules and procedures. The restrictions and mandates of other codes do not apply to dependency proceedings unless expressly made applicable [In re Chantal S. (1996) 13 Cal. 4th 196, 200, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 866, 913 P.2d 1075 ; In re Jennifer R. (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 704, 711, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 759] . Thus, the definitions of the Uniform Parentage Act apply to dependency proceedings [In re Zacharia D. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 435, 451, 24 Cal. Rptr. 2d 751, 862 P.2d 751] , but its limitations do not [cf. In re Chantal S. (1996) 13 Cal. 4th 196, 200, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 866, 913 P.2d 1075] .

Holding the social services agency, which is charged with protecting the child and serving the child's best interest, has standing in an appropriate case to challenge a marital presumption is consistent with the overall purpose and goals of the dependency system. Nevertheless, the prevailing view is that since the social worker is no longer the child's guardian ad litem, the social services agency will not have standing in cases in which the statutes allow challenges to parentage by only the mother, any other presumed parent, or the child. This area of law appears to be one in which future litigation and disagreement is all but ensured. As such, this is an area to watch for further developments.

[c] The Non-Biological Presumed Father

Historically, the presumptions in Fam. Code § 7611(a)-(e) meant that a man was presumed to be the natural or biological father. The presumptions have been considered rebuttable presumptions that affect the burden of proof. They may be rebutted only by clear and convincing evidence in an appropriate action [Fam. Code § 7612(a)]. Where two or more of the presumptions under Fam. Code § 7611 arise and conflict with one another, the presumption which on the facts of the particular case is "founded on the weightier considerations of policy and logic controls" [Fam. Code § 7612(b)]. If a man was found not to be the biological father of the child, however, this evidence rebutted any presumption and resulted in the man no longer being considered the presumed father. In such circumstances, the man could still receive de facto parent status and even placement, if appropriate, but he was not considered the father of the child.

Beginning in 2001, however, a series of decisions have been handed down that make biology a far less significant factor. Under this line of cases, presumptions of paternity should only be rebutted "in an appropriate action." But whether the individual case is an appropriate one for allowing a presumption to be rebutted is not dependent on the type of action the issue is raised in, it depends on the facts of the case. For instance, if the man is not the biological father but is the person the child thinks of as his or her father, or if there is no other man identified or stepping forward as the possible father, it may not be an "appropriate action" in which to rebut a presumption of paternity [see, e.g., In re Jesusa V. (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 588, 606, 10 Cal. Rptr. 3d 205, 85 P.3d 2 ; In re Nicholas H. (2002) 28 Cal. 4th 56, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 146 ; In re Jerry P. (2002) 95 Cal. App. 4th 793, 116 Cal. Rptr. 2d 123 ; In re Raphael P. (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 716, 118 Cal. Rptr. 2d 610 ; In re Kiana A. (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 1109, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 669] . Actual biological paternity is thus a factor to be considered in deciding whether a presumption of paternity should be rebutted, but it is no longer the determining factor. Instead, there are many factors to consider, including whether someone else is stepping forward to assert a parental relationship, the length of any such adult-child relationship, and the nature of the current adult-child relationship, if any, including whether the child knows the adult is not his or her father. Additionally, if the nonbiological person seeking presumed parent status has acted inconsistent with the parental role, such as abusing or molesting the child, it may be an appropriate action in which to rebut any presumption of paternity [In re T.R. (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 1202, 1212, 34 Cal. Rptr. 3d 215] . All of these are factors, but none alone are determinative.

A strong argument can be made that these cases are incorrect and the words "in an appropriate action" found in Fam. Code § 7612(a) mean the type of action, such as paternity, family support, and dependency, and not the type of case factually. Had the legislature meant "in an appropriate case" it could have said "in an appropriate case." It did not. It said "in an appropriate action" [Fam. Code § 7612(a)]. This interpretation would provide the structure and degree of certainty that many feel important both generally and specifically in deciding such issues in the lives of children. Knowing who a child's biological father is can be very important in knowing a child's medical background and the possible problems the child may develop later. Further, as those who deal with adoptions know, many children grow up and want to know who their "real" parents are. Those who adhere to this line of reasoning see the Nicholas H. and Jesusa V. line of cases as result-driven decisions that may have helped the individual children involved, but that have the potential to harm many other children and to create chaos in the dependency system. Thus, both the analysis and the wisdom of this new line of cases is subject to question. Nevertheless, they are now the law.

A question that has surfaced as a result of the Jesusa V. decision is whether the dependency system must recognize a child having three parents. In Jesusa V. a majority of the Supreme Court recognized a child can only have one presumed father [In re Jesusa V. (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 588, 603, 10 Cal. Rptr. 3d 205, 85 P.3d 2] . Nevertheless, the majority held that recognizing one man as the child's presumed father did not terminate another man's biological relationship with the child [In re Jesusa V. (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 588, 610, 10 Cal. Rptr. 3d 205, 85 P.3d 2] . Thus, in Jesusa V. the Supreme Court majority necessarily left the child with a mother, a presumed father, and a biological father--three legally recognized parents. If California law only recognizes a child having two parents [see Sharon S. v. Superior Court (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 417, 440, 2 Cal. Rptr. 3d 699, 73 P.3d 554 ; see also Sharon S. v. Superior Court (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 417, 447, 2 Cal. Rptr. 3d 699, 73 P.3d 554 , Baxter, J., conc. & dis. opn.], what is the juvenile court to do with the left over biological father in Jesusa V.? Can the court enter a judgement of nonpaternity for a biological parent? Apparently so.

PRACTICE TIP (PARENT'S P.O.V.):

The Significance of Parentage at the Initial Hearing. Often, courts appoint counsel for a parent who is not present because they are incarcerated or out of state. Counsel must always learn their client's position before taking a stand on any issue. However, if the client is present and understands the > ramifications of a finding of presumed father status, efforts should be made to secure that status as soon as possible. Since only presumed fathers have the right to such things as visitation, services, and placement with their relatives, a finding of presumed father status may be necessary to posture the case favorably for the individual who wants to play a significant role in the case.

What does all this mean in dependency proceedings? Increased litigation, delayed parentage determinations, and ongoing uncertainty in some cases as to whether a person should be considered a presumed parent or not. This is an area of law that will now need years of defining decisions to clear the muddied waters created by these recent decisions. All practitioners should read these cases carefully, raise the issues whenever appropriate, try to minimize the harm to and delay for children, and watch for further developments in the law.

[d] The Non-Biological Presumed Mother

Proceedings regarding adults who are not the child's biological parent, yet in which a presumption of parentage is not rebutted, are not limited to fathers. Cases involving mothers are now also occurring in the Nicholas H. aftermath. In one case the appellate court held the principle espoused in Nicholas H. that a man does not automatically lose a presumption of paternity based solely on the fact the man is not the child's biological father applies to women. The appellate court did not determine whether the case was an appropriate action in which to allow a presumption of maternity to apply, it merely remanded the matter for a hearing on the matter [In re Karen C. (2002) 101 Cal. App. 4th 932, 939, 124 Cal. Rptr. 2d 677] . In another case, though, the appellate court actually found the child's half-sister qualified for presumed mother status and it was not an appropriate action in which to rebut the presumption [In re Salvador M. (2003) 111 Cal. App. 4th 1353, 1358-1359, 4 Cal. Rptr. 3d 705] . The California Supreme Court cited both of these case with approval in holding that a woman can be a presumed parent under Fam. Code § 7611(d) [Elisa B. v. Superior Court (2005) 37 Cal. 4th 108, 119-120, 33 Cal. Rptr. 3d 46, 117 P.3d 660] . Thus, non-biological presumed mothers can exist under the law. This is a new area of the law and should be watched for further developments.

[e] Parentage in Same Sex Cases

Pursuant to the California Domestic Partner Rights and Responsibilities Act, two adults who have chosen to share one another's lives in an intimate and committed relationship of mutual caring and have a common residence can file a "Declaration of Domestic Partnership" with the Secretary of State [Fam. Code § 297, et seq.]. The rights and obligations of registered domestic partners with respect to a child of either of them are the same as those of spouses [Fam. Code § 297.5(d)]. Consequently, registered domestic partners who have a child born after the effective date of this statute, January 1, 2005 have rights and responsibilities regardless of their biological connection to the child [see Elisa B. v. Superior Court (2005) 37 Cal. 4th 108, 119, 33 Cal. Rptr. 3d 46, 117 P.3d 660 (stating in dicta that since the domestic partnership act became effective in California, a child can have two parents, both of whom are women, irrespective of whether the woman is the biological mother)]. This is why it is wise for any parentage inquiry to include questions regarding the existence of a registered domestic partnership [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.635(b)(2), (3)].

There are several recent cases involving same sex couples who have children together outside the context of an adoption or registered domestic partnership. In August 2005, the California Supreme Court decided three companion cases that addressed parentage involving same sex couples. One of these cases, Elisa B., involved a child support action against a non-biological, same sex partner. In Elisa B., the court held that the presumption that a woman was a presumed parent was not rebutted where (1) she actively consented to, and participated in the artificial insemination of her partner with the understanding that she would raise the child as her own with the first parent, (2) she voluntarily accepted the rights and responsibilities of parenthood after the child was born, and (3) there were no competing claims to being the child's second parent [Elisa B. v. Superior Court (2005) 37 Cal. 4th 108, 123-125, 33 Cal. Rptr. 3d 46, 117 P.3d 660 . See also Charisma R. v. Kristina S. (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 361, 379-81, 96 Cal. Rptr. 3d 26 (applying the Elisa B. factors and finding the presumption of parenthood was not rebutted even where the biological mother's partner only cohabitated with the child for a short duration)].

In Kristine H., after the couple decided to have a child together, Kristine was inseminated [Kristine H. v. Lisa R. (2005) 37 Cal. 4th 156, 33 Cal. Rptr. 3d 81, 117 P.3d 690] . In the eighth month of Kristine's pregnancy, the couple presented a signed stipulation that both women agreed to be the parents and accepted all the rights and responsibilities involved. This stipulation was filed as part of a parentage action in which a judgment was entered recognizing both women as parents. After a separation, Kristine filed a motion to set aside the judgment recognizing parentage, arguing that the judgment was void as the court did not have jurisdiction to determine the custody of an unborn child. The court held that Kristine was estopped from challenging the court judgment as she enjoyed its benefits for over two years [Kristine H. v. Lisa R. (2005) 37 Cal. 4th 156, 166, 33 Cal. Rptr. 3d 81, 117 P.3d 690] .

Finally, the third Supreme Court decision involved a maternity claim by a woman who donated her ova to her lesbian partner [K.M. v. E.G. (2005) 37 Cal. 4th 130, 33 Cal. Rptr. 3d 61, 117 P.3d 673] . In K.M., at the time of the ova donation, the donor signed a form waiving all rights to claim legal parentage. Some time after the birth of twins, the couple separated and the ova donor, K.M., filed a parentage action. E.G. argued that in donating her ova, K.M. was akin to a sperm donor under Fam. Code § 7613 and therefore had no parentage rights. The Court disagreed, finding that Fam. Code § 7613 was not applicable under the facts of this case where K.M. supplied ova to her partner in order to produce children who would be raised in their joint home [K.M. v. E.G. (2005) 37 Cal. 4th 130, 139, 33 Cal. Rptr. 3d 61, 117 P.3d 673] . The Court found that K.M. was a parent (together with E.G.), based on her genetic relationship to the twins, and therefore, did not address the issue of whether she was a presumed parent under Fam. Code § 7611(d) [K.M. v. E.G. (2005) 37 Cal. 4th 130, 144, 33 Cal. Rptr. 3d 61, 117 P.3d 673] . Important to the court's analysis was recognition of the fact that a child could have two mothers. The court indicated that the intentions of the parties would be more important if this were a case in which there was a competing claim of parentage, as opposed to the facts of this case, where K.M. was asserting her joint right to parentage [K.M. v. E.G. (2005) 37 Cal. 4th 130, 142-143, 33 Cal. Rptr. 3d 61, 117 P.3d 673] .

All three cases reflect recognition of a child's right to preservation of an existing parent-child relationship for emotional and financial support regardless of the sex of the child's parents. While these cases all dealt with lesbian partners, the rationale of these decisions should apply equally to male partners. It would seem, then, that courts are more willing to interpret the definition of "parent" in accordance with the rising numbers of same-sex couples and the needs of the children involved [Roach, Parent-Child Relationship Trumps Biology: California's Definition of Parent in the Context of Same-Sex Relationships, 43 Cal. W. L. Rev. 235, 265 (2006)]. The same should apply in dependency cases.

[3] Biological Fathers

[a] In General

A biological father is one whose biological paternity has been established, but who has not achieved presumed father status pursuant to Fam. Code § 7611 [In re Zacharia D. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 435, 449 n.15, 24 Cal. Rptr. 2d 751, 862 P.2d 751 , citing Adoption of Kelsey S. (1992) 1 Cal. 4th 816, 823 n.3, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 615, 823 P.2d 1216 , and former Civ. Code § 7004]. A legal determination of biological paternity may be accomplished in many ways, including through a voluntary declaration of paternity as described in Fam. Code § 7574 that is filed with the State Department of Social Services on or after January 1, 1997, and has not been rescinded or set aside [Fam. Code §§ 7573 (voluntary declaration having same force and effect as judgment of paternity), 7575 (rescission or setting aside of declaration), 7576 (effect of voluntary declaration made on or before December 31, 1996); but see In re Liam L. (2000) 84 Cal. App. 4th 739, 743-747, 101 Cal. Rptr. 2d 13 (holding voluntary declaration is equivalent to a presumption of paternity)].

The area of the rights of biological fathers in dependency cases is one that is still undergoing development in the law. A recent change in statutory law provides that following a finding of paternity by a juvenile court or of proof of a prior declaration of paternity by a court of competent jurisdiction, the juvenile court may order services for a biological father if the court finds that such services will benefit the child [Welf. & Inst. Code § 361.5(a)]. What additional rights biological fathers may be given in the future by statutory and decisional law is uncertain. Nevertheless, it is clear that the law now recognizes a significant distinction between those biological fathers who have stepped forward at an early stage in their child's life to take an active role as a father [Adoption of Kelsey S. (1992) 1 Cal. 4th 816, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 615, 823 P.2d 1216] and those biological fathers who have done little or nothing in their child's life [In re Zacharia D. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 435, 24 Cal. Rptr. 2d 751, 862 P.2d 751 ; In re Sarah C. (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 964, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 414] .

[b] "Kelsey" Fathers

The term "Kelsey father" is sometimes given to an unwed biological father who "promptly comes forward and demonstrates a full commitment to his parental responsibilities--emotional, financial, and otherwise," but his attempt to achieve presumed father status under Fam. Code § 7611(d) was thwarted by a third party [Adoption of Kelsey S. (1992) 1 Cal. 4th 816, 849, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 615, 823 P.2d 1216 ; In re Elijah V. (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 576, 582, 25 Cal. Rptr. 3d 774] . Among other things, to demonstrate a full commitment to parental responsibilities an unwed biological father must take prompt legal action to seek custody of the child [In re Elijah V. (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 576, 583, 25 Cal. Rptr. 3d 774] . If the person seeking Kelsey S. status has not made that full commitment to parental responsibilities, the actions of any third party are irrelevant to the determination [In re Elijah V. (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 576, 584, 25 Cal. Rptr. 3d 774] .

One court, in dicta, has suggested that a Kelsey S. father "will be declared the minor's presumed father unless the court finds him unfit" [In re Ariel H. (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 70, 72, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 125] . This is not correct. While the rights of such a father cannot be terminated without a showing of unfitness, he is not equated with a presumed father under the Kelsey S. decision [In re Vincent M. (2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 943, 947, 955-960, 74 Cal. Rptr. 3d 755 ; Adoption of Kelsey S. (1992) 1 Cal. 4th 816, 849, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 615, 823 P.2d 1216] . As noted by the Vincent M. court in a very well-reasoned opinion, in Kelsey S. the California Supreme Court did not "hold under any theory that such a father had presumed father status" [In re Vincent M. (2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 943, 957, 74 Cal. Rptr. 3d 755] . Such a biological father has a right to notice and to consideration for custody and reunification services, but he does not have an absolute right to placement or services under current law in the way that a presumed father would [see Adoption of Kelsey S. (1992) 1 Cal. 4th 816, 842, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 615, 823 P.2d 1216 ; In re Zacharia D. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 435, 451-454, 24 Cal. Rptr. 2d 751, 862 P.2d 751 ; In re Sarah C. (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 964, 974-975, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 414] . Nevertheless, the more the Kelsey father has been involved in the child's life, the more consideration he should be given by the social services agency, the juvenile court, and the law.

While this area is still under development, it appears that parental rights for a Kelsey father can be terminated under Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26 with a finding of detriment to the child as to the biological father having been made at some time in the dependency proceeding. Alternatively, the rights of a Kelsey father may be terminated by an action under Fam. Code § 7660 et seq. [see former Civ. Code § 7017] with a finding of detriment or unfitness [see Adoption of Kelsey S. (1992) 1 Cal. 4th 816, 849-850, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 615, 823 P.2d 1216] .

If the man seeking Kelsey S. status does not expressly raise that issue at the trial court level, the issue is waived or forfeited for review at the appellate court level, even if other parentage issues have been preserved [In re Elijah V. (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 576, 582, 25 Cal. Rptr. 3d 774] .

[c] "Mere Biological Fathers"

The term "mere biological father" was used by the court of appeal in the case of In re Sarah C. (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 964, 977, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 414 , to describe a "biological father who had done almost nothing to develop a relationship with his daughter either before or during the dependency" and who had only vague plans as to how he would care for his daughter [see also In re Zacharia D. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 435, 451, 24 Cal. Rptr. 2d 751, 862 P.2d 751 (referring to such a man as a "strictly biological father")].

Although the interests of a mere biological father are obviously less than those of a Kelsey father, it would appear from the cases that a mere biological father has the same right to seek custody and services based upon the child's best interest that a Kelsey father has, but that, as with the Kelsey father, he has no absolute right to receive them [see Adoption of Kelsey S. (1992) 1 Cal. 4th 816, 842, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 615, 823 P.2d 1216 ; In re Zacharia D. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 435, 451-454, 24 Cal. Rptr. 2d 751, 862 P.2d 751 ; In re Sarah C. (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 964, 974-975, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 414] .

In the termination of parental rights area, however, the mere biological father does not fare as well as the Kelsey father since it appears clear that his parental rights may be terminated based solely upon the child's best interest and without any requirement for a finding of detriment or unfitness [see Adoption of Kelsey S. (1992) 1 Cal. 4th 816, 849-850, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 615, 823 P.2d 1216 ; In re Sarah C. (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 964, 981, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 414] .

[4] Alleged Fathers

An alleged father is a man who may be the father of a child, but whose biological paternity has not yet been established or who has not, in the alternative, achieved presumed father status [In re Zacharia D. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 435, 449 n.15, 24 Cal. Rptr. 2d 751, 862 P.2d 751 , citing In re Shereece B. (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 613, 620-621, 282 Cal. Rptr. 430] . An alleged father has no rights in a dependency case other than the right to step forward and to seek to establish his paternity of the child pursuant to In re R. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 636, 644, 119 Cal. Rptr. 475, 532 P.2d 123 , and Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.635 [In re Emily R. (2000) 80 Cal. App. 4th 1344, 1352, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 285] . An alleged father is, however, to be given notice of most hearings throughout the dependency process proceedings [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 290.1(a)(2), 290.2(a)(2), 291(a)(2), 294(a)(2), 316.2(b)]. If he has relinquished the child or signed a denial of paternity and waiver of rights form, no notice need be given to the alleged father of the hearing under Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26 [Welf. & Inst. Code § 294(b)].

The notice to an alleged father is of the dependency proceedings in general, including notice that the child is the subject of the proceedings and that termination of parental rights and adoption could result. The notice provided to an alleged father does not give the alleged father any rights in the dependency case, nor any ability to contest the agency's recommendations. The general notice to the alleged father merely advises him of the existence of the proceeding so that he can step forward and seek to establish his paternity, should he desire to do so. Only after he establishes paternity and is found to be the child's father does he become a party and have a right to participate in the proceedings [In re Emily R. (2000) 80 Cal. App. 4th 1344, 1358, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 285] .

In addition, notice to alleged fathers must include a Statement Regarding Paternity, Judicial Council form JV-505. This form must be available in the courtroom [Welf. & Inst. Code § 316.2, Cal. Rules of Ct., rule 5.635(e)(1), (g)]. The form provides the alleged father with an opportunity to deny paternity or ask the court to make appropriate paternity determinations. If an alleged father appears in juvenile court and asks the court to make a finding of paternity through this form, "the court shall determine whether or not he is the biological father of the child" and if "that person is the presumed parent of the child, if that finding is requested" [Cal. Rules of Ct., rule 5.635(h)(1), (2)]. The court may order genetic testing to aid in this determination [Cal. Rules of Ct., rule 5.635(e)(2)]. The procedures set forth in Welf. & Inst. Code § 316.2(b) and Cal. Rules of Ct., rule 5.635 give alleged fathers notice to the dependency proceedings and the avenue to establish his paternity status. Failure to comply with these provisions may result in a due process violation [see In re Paul H. (2003) 111 Cal. App. 4th 753, 761-762, 5 Cal. Rptr. 3d 1] . Counsel for all parties should ensure that the JV-505 is provided to all alleged fathers named in a dependency case.

[5] Declarations of Paternity

[a] In General

In 1993, the California Legislature added Chapter 3 to Division 12 of the Family Code, entitled "Establishment of Paternity by Voluntary Declaration" [Fam. Code §§ 7570-7577]. The goal of these statutes was to provide a "simple system" for unwed mothers and fathers to establish paternity, resulting in a "a significant increase in paternity establishment, an increase in the number of children who have greater access to child support and other benefits, and a significant decrease in the time and money required to establish paternity due to the removal of the need for a lengthy and expensive court process to determine paternity" [Fam. Code § 7570(b); In re Liam L. (2004) 84 Cal. App. 4th 739, 743, 101 Cal. Rptr. 2d 13] . The Legislature also found that "knowing one's father is important to a child's development," and that knowing "family medical history is often necessary for correct medical diagnosis and treatment" [Fam. Code § 7570(a)].

Beginning January 1, 1995, prior to an unmarried mother leaving the hospital, hospitals are required to secure a voluntary declaration of paternity from the mother and the man "identified by the natural mother as the natural father" [Fam. Code § 7571(a)]. On January 1, 1997, Health & Safety Code § 102425 required hospitals to include an unwed father's name on a child's birth certificate only if "the father and the mother sign a voluntary declaration of paternity at the hospital before the birth certificate is prepared" [Health & Safety Code § 102425(a)(4)]. That code section further allows a birth certificate to be amended after the child's birth only when paternity has been established by court judgment or by the filing of a voluntary declaration of paternity.

[b] Requirements for a Valid Voluntary Declaration of Paternity

Fam. Code § 7574 sets forth the requirements for a valid declaration of paternity. The declaration must be executed on a form created by the Department of Child Support Services. In addition, the form must include a statement by the mother that the man who signed the form is "... the only possible father" of the child, and a statement by the father that "... he is the biological father" of the child [Fam. Code § 7574(b)(5), (6)]. Hospital staff are required to witness the parties signing the declaration and shall forward the signed declaration to the Department of Child Support Services within 20 days of the date the declaration was signed [Fam. Code § 7571(a)]. In addition, voluntary declarations of paternity shall be made available at prenatal clinics, local child support agency offices, offices of local registrars of births and deaths, courts, and county welfare departments. Staff at all of these locations are required to witness the execution of these forms and file the completed declarations with the Department of Child Support Services within 20 days of the date the declarations were signed [Fam. Code § 7571(e), (f)].

Only unwed mothers may sign voluntary declarations of paternity [Fam. Code §§ 7571(a), 7572(b)]. he husband of a married mother is presumed to be the father of the child under Fam. Code § 7611(a). If a married mother executes a voluntary declaration of paternity, this may rebut the presumption of paternity found in Fam. Code § 7611(a) and violate the husband's due process rights [Fam. Code § 7612(c)].

Voluntary declarations of paternity must be filed with the Department of Child Support Services in order to be valid [Fam. Code §§ 7571, 7573]. Once a man signs a voluntary declaration of paternity, he may rely on the presumption that the document was properly filed with the Department of Child Support Services [In re Raphael P. (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 716, 738, 118 Cal. Rptr. 2d 610] .

In addition, voluntary declarations of paternity executed in other states are valid declarations of paternity and must be given the same full faith and credit as voluntary declarations of paternity executed in California consistent with Fam. Code § 7570 et seq. [In re Mary G. (2007) 151 Cal. App. 4th 184, 198, 204-205, 59 Cal. Rptr. 3d 703] .

The Family Code places no time limits on the execution of voluntary declarations of paternity. Indeed, Fam. Code section 7571(d) states that if the declaration is not completed at the hospital at the time of the child's birth, "... it may be completed by the attesting parents, notarized, and mailed to the Department of Child Support Services at any time after the child's birth." Fam. Code section 7571(f) allows social workers to act as a witness to the parents' signing the declaration and then requires child welfare department staff to mail the declaration to the Department of Child Support Services within 20 days of execution. One court has reasoned that it is up to the Legislature to determine if the statute should be amended to include a deadline, but that the "open-ended opportunity" to execute a voluntary declaration of paternity is similarly available to a man who attempts to establish paternity under Fam. Code section 7611(d). "In this respect, the statutory scheme rewards the father who is the first to obtain a judgment establishing his parental rights and responsibilities" [Kevin Q. v. Lauren W. (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 1119, 1133 n.8, 95 Cal. Rptr. 3d 477] .

PRACTICE TIP (PARENTS COUNSEL P.O.V.):

Use of the Declaration of Paternity to Establish Presumed Father Status. If the mother and the man claiming to be the father sign the declaration of paternity, this is a simple way for a man to obtain presumed father status. Depending on the circumstances of the case, a mother might be highly motivated to sign such a declaration since a presumed father, who is eligible for reunification services, can decrease the chances of adoption in a case or at least delay the setting of a hearing to consider a permanent plan. But both unmarried mothers and the men considering signing such declarations of paternity should be cautioned that their signature is made under penalty of perjury and they should not sign the declaration unless they truly believe the man is the only possible biological father. The man who signs the declaration of paternity must also be advised that doing so will provide him with parental rights as well as obligations such as child support.

[c] Effect of Voluntary Declaration of Paternity

A voluntary declaration of paternity executed on or after January 1, 1997, that has been filed with the Department of Child Support Services "shall establish the paternity of a child and shall have the same force and effect as a judgment for paternity issued by a court of competent jurisdiction." The declaration forms the basis of an order for custody, visitation, and child support [Fam. Code §§ 7573, 7576; but see Fam. Code § 7577 (if declaration signed by minor parent, paternity not established until 60 days after both parents reach 18 or emancipate, whichever first occurs)]. A voluntary declaration of paternity executed after January 1, 1997, entitles the male signatory to presumed father status in dependency matters [Fam. Code § 7611; In re Liam L. (2000) 84 Cal. App. 4th 739, 743-747, 101 Cal. Rptr. 2d 13] . Presumptions arising under section 7611 are rebutted "by a judgment establishing paternity of the child by another man" [Fam. Code § 7612(c)].

For example, in Kevin Q. v. Lauren W. (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 1119, 95 Cal. Rptr. 3d 477 , a biological father executed a voluntary declaration of paternity but failed to take meaningful steps to develop a father/child relationship with his son. After the child was born, the mother and child moved in with her boyfriend. After the mother and child moved out, the ex-boyfriend petitioned the court to establish a parental relationship with the child under Fam. Code § 7611(d), which the trial court granted. The mother appealed, and the court of appeal reversed, holding that the biological father's properly executed voluntary declaration of paternity--which was never rescinded or set aside--rebutted the presumption under Fam. Code § 7611(d). The court relied on the clear language in the applicable statutes to reverse the lower court's decision. It found that under Fam. Code § 7573, a voluntary declaration of paternity carries the same force and effect as a judgment of paternity. In addition, under Fam. Code § 7612(c), a presumption under Fam. Code § 7611(d) is rebutted by a judgment of paternity in another man. Finally, the court noted that Fam. Code § 7612(a) expressly excludes presumed father status from a voluntary declaration of paternity as a rebuttable presumption. "Until the voluntary declaration of paternity is set aside, it has the 'force and effect' of a judgment (§ 7573). It is not a mere presumption to be weighed against competing section 7611 presumptions under section 7612, subdivision (b)" [Kevin Q. v. Lauren W. (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 1119, 1137-1141, 95 Cal. Rptr. 3d 477] .

PRACTICE TIP:

Competing Judgments of Paternity. What should the juvenile court do when a valid judgment of paternity exists but the mother and another man subsequently sign and execute a valid declaration of paternity? The result under these circumstances is not clear. Fam. Code § 7636 says that a judgment or court order that determines the existence or nonexistence of a parent/child relationship "is determinative for all purposes" except for actions brought under Penal Code § 270. However, at least one case holds that a judgment of paternity is not the same as a finding of presumed father status [In re Margarita D. (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 1288, 1296, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 713] . Therefore, an argument could be made that because a valid declaration of paternity carries the same weight as a finding of presumed father status [see In re Liam L. (2000) 84 Cal. App. 4th 739, 101 Cal. Rptr. 2d 13] , the declaration of paternity trumps the prior judgment. However, one could also argue that the declaration of paternity was void when signed in light of the prior court judgment. This is an area of law that is quickly changing and should be watched for future developments.

A voluntary declaration of paternity executed on or before December 31, 1996, however, creates a presumption of paternity that can be rebutted in certain circumstances by genetic testing requested by the mother or father that signed the declaration. Testing must be requested within three years from the date of the execution of the voluntary declaration of paternity, consistent with Fam. Code § 7576. But even a pre-1997 voluntary declaration of paternity trumps the rebuttable presumptions created by Fam. Code § 7611 [Fam. Code § 7576(e); Kevin Q. v. Lauren W. (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 1119, 1138, 95 Cal. Rptr. 3d 477] .

[d] Challenging a Voluntary Declaration of Paternity

[i] Methods of Challenge

A voluntary declaration may be challenged in four ways: (a) either parent may rescind the declaration; (b) genetic testing; (c) under California Code of Civil Proc. § 473 based on mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect; and (d) the court may sit as a court of equity to determine paternity issues.

[ii] Rescission of a Voluntary Declaration of Paternity

Fam. Code § 7575 allows either the mother or the man who signed a voluntary declaration of paternity to file a rescission form with the Department of Child Support Services within 60 days of executing the declaration, "unless a court order for custody, visitation, or child support has been entered in an action in which the signatory seeking to rescind was a party" [Fam. Code § 7575(a)].

[iii] Setting Aside a Voluntary Declaration of Paternity Through Genetic Testing

In addition, genetic testing establishing biological paternity in a man other than the man who signed the voluntary declaration of paternity may provide the basis for a court to set aside the declaration. A motion for genetic testing must be filed within two years from the date of the child's birth and may be filed by the local support agency, the mother, the man who signed the voluntary declaration of paternity, "or in an action to determine the existence of nonexistence of the father and child relationship pursuant to Fam. Code § 7630 or in any action to establish an order for child custody, visitation, or child support based upon the voluntary declaration of paternity" [Fam. Code § 7575(b)(1), (3); see also Fam. Code § 7646(a)]. At least two courts have held this statute does not allow a claimed biological father's request for genetic testing to challenge a voluntary declaration of paternity signed by another man [In re Christopher M. (2003) 113 Cal. App. 4th 155, 6 Cal. Rptr. 3d 197 ; In re William K. (2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 1, 9, 73 Cal. Rptr. 3d 737 (court could order genetic testing, however, at request of claimed biological father in a "proceeding in which paternity is a relevant fact" under Fam. Code § 7551)].

But other courts have held that where a Kelsey S. father seeks to challenge a voluntary declaration of paternity, his constitutional right to establish his paternity trumps the restrictive language in Fam. Code § 7575(b)(3). In the case of In re J.L. (2008) 159 Cal. App. 4th 1010, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 27 , the unwed mother and Adrian signed a voluntary declaration of paternity at J.L.'s birth. The mother and Adrian subsequently disappeared, and a petition under Welf. & Inst. Code § 300 was filed on J.L.'s behalf. A man who suspected that he was the biological father of J.L. (Christopher) appeared in the dependency matter and sought genetic testing, which showed that he was the biological father. Unaware of the prior voluntary declaration of paternity, the juvenile court found Christopher to be J.L.'s presumed father and entered a judgment of paternity accordingly [In re J.L. (2008) 159 Cal. App. 4th 1010, 1016-1017, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 27] . When the court later discovered that the mother and Adrian executed a voluntary declaration of paternity, it granted Christopher's request to set it aside and placed J.L. with Christopher [In re J.L. (2008) 159 Cal. App. 4th 1010, 1017, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 27] . Adrian appealed, claiming that Christopher had no standing to challenge his voluntary declaration of paternity, relying on In re Christopher M. (2003) 113 Cal. App. 4th 155, 6 Cal. Rptr. 3d 197 .

The First District Court of Appeal, Division One disagreed with the Christopher M. decision. It held that Christopher had standing to challenge Adrian's declaration of paternity based on the plain language of Fam. Code § 7575(b)(3)(A). That code section allows one of the three listed parties to file a motion to set aside a voluntary declaration of paternity, "... or by a participant in a section 7630 paternity action, or by a participant in 'any action to establish an order for child custody, visitation, or child support based upon the voluntary declaration of paternity' " [In re J.L. (2008) 159 Cal. App. 4th 1010, 1020-1022, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 27] . The court also found that Christopher qualified as a Kelsey S. father and therefore had a constitutional right to challenge Adrian's voluntary declaration of paternity [In re J.L. (2008) 159 Cal. App. 4th 1010, 1022-1023, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 27 ; see also Gabriel P. v. Suedi D. (2006) 141 Cal. App. 4th 850, 858-861, 46 Cal. Rptr. 3d 437] .

PRACTICE TIP:

Standing and Notice Issues. Under Fam. Code § 7575(b)(3)(A) and In re J.L. (2008) 159 Cal. App. 4th 1010, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 27 , a social services agency would also have standing to challenge a voluntary declaration of paternity in a dependency case that sought to determine the existence or non-existence of the father/child relationship or to secure an order for custody, visitation, or support based upon the voluntary declaration of paternity. Furthermore, in any action to set aside a voluntary declaration of paternity, the moving party must provide notice to the man who signed the voluntary declaration so that he can appear and protect his interest [County of Los Angeles v. Sheldon P. (2002) 102 Cal. App. 4th 1337, 1344-1345, 126 Cal. Rptr. 2d 350] .

Genetic testing that conclusively determines the man that signed the voluntary declaration of paternity is not the biological father of the child does not automatically set aside the declaration of paternity. If a court finds that genetic testing establishes that the man that signed the declaration is not the child's biological father, it may set aside the voluntary declaration of paternity unless it determines that it would be in the child's best interest to do so, based on a number of factors, including the age of the child, the length of time the declaration has existed, the "nature, duration, and quality of any relationship" between the man who signed the declaration and the child, and the "benefit or detriment to the child" in establishing biological parentage [Fam. Code § 7575(b)(1)(A)-(H); see also Fam. Code § 7648; In re Jesusa V. (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 588, 605, 85 P.3d 2 ; and In re William K. (2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 1, 7, 9, 73 Cal. Rptr. 3d 737 (court did not abuse its discretion when it denied biological father's motion to set aside voluntary declaration of paternity; biological father was registered sex offender who failed to promptly assert parental rights; man who executed voluntary declaration of paternity held child out as his own and intended to marry mother)].

[iv] Setting Aside a Voluntary Declaration of Paternity under Code of Civil Proc. § 473

The Family Code allows a court to set aside a voluntary declaration of paternity under Code of Civil Proc. § 473 because of mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect. The motion may be filed by either parent and must be filed consistent with the timeframes set forth in Code of Civil Proc. § 473. If a court sets aside a voluntary declaration of paternity under that section, the court shall order that the mother, the child, and the alleged father undergo genetic testing, and shall resolve the question of paternity accordingly [Fam. Code § 7575(c)(1), (5)].

[v] Courts acting as Courts of Equity in Determining Paternity Issues

Finally, Family Code § 7575(c)(4) allows a superior court to act as a court of equity in determining paternity issues.

Indeed, an equitable collateral attack on a voluntary declaration of paternity could be made under the theory of extrinsic fraud [In re Marriage of Stevenot (1984) 154 Cal. App. 3d 1051, 1068, 202 Cal. Rptr. 116] .

[6] Parentage Proceedings in Dependency Cases

It has long been recognized that the juvenile court has the inherent jurisdiction to make determinations of parentage where necessary and appropriate in dependency cases [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.635; In re R. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 636, 644, 119 Cal. Rptr. 475, 532 P.2d 123] . Nevertheless, all too often the question of parentage was left until late in the case when permanency planning was being considered--or was not determined at all [see Krug, Who Is My Father? The Case For Early Determination Of Paternity In California Juvenile Dependency Proceedings, 18 Thomas Jefferson L. Rev. 143 (1996)]. Since 1998, however, the court has the duty to conduct paternity inquiries at the detention hearing or as soon thereafter as practicable. Even the presence at the hearing of a man claiming to be the father of the child does not relieve the court of this responsibility [Welf. & Inst. Code § 316.2(a)]. This is a very positive step which should help social workers, attorneys and courts statewide to recognize that parentage is an "up front" issue that must be dealt with at the earliest possible opportunity. This inquiry is more than just as to fathers; it is as to mother's too. Thus, it is now a "parentage inquiry" [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.635].

The inquiry "shall include at least all of the following, as the court deems appropriate [Welf. & Inst. Code § 316.2(a)(1)-(7); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.635(b)]:

- Whether there has been a judgment of parentage from another court.
- Whether the mother was married or had a registered domestic partner at or after the time of conception.
- Whether the mother believed she was married or believed she had a registered domestic partner at or after the time of conception.
- Whether the mother was cohabiting with another adult at the time of conception.
- Whether the mother received support payments or promises of support for the child or for herself during her pregnancy or after the birth of the child.
- Whether a man formally or informally acknowledged paternity, including the execution and filing of a voluntary declaration of paternity under Family Code Section 7570 et seq., and agreed to have his name placed on the child's birth certificate.
- Whether genetic tests have been administered, and, if so, what the results demonstrated.
- Whether the child has been raised jointly with another adult or in any other co-parenting arrangement.

After making these inquiries, the court must note its findings in the minutes of the court, as it must following any proceeding or finding under this section [Welf. & Inst. Code § 316.2(f)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Inquiries Must Be Sensitive But Thorough. The questions listed in the statute obviously are just the beginning of a thorough paternity inquiry. Questions regarding the possibility of other sexual partners, including outside a marriage, may at times be necessary. To help ensure truthfulness, it may be necessary to question parties separately. Many courts and parents may find such questions and procedures > embarrassing. To minimize such embarrassment, some courts have the attorneys conduct the inquiry of their clients in the courtroom. Others have developed local forms to assist in this process. Such forms can be completed by the parent or other interested person with the assistance of counsel or the social worker and then brought into court and acknowledged in a manner similar to that used with waiver of rights forms. Although the responsibility is the court's, all parties should ensure that the inquiry is as complete as necessary regardless of the method used. And while not required by the statute, it is suggested that parents and other interested parties be sworn before such inquiries or should complete any paternity questionnaire under penalty of perjury.

If one or more men are identified as alleged parents as a result of the inquiry, each alleged parent must be noticed that it has been alleged that he or she is or could be the parent of the child, that the child is the subject of dependency proceedings, and that the proceedings could result in the termination of parental rights and adoption. The notice must be sent by certified mail, return receipt requested, to the man's last known address [Welf. & Inst. Code § 316.2(b)].

In addition to this duty to conduct a parentage inquiry at the detention hearing, or as soon thereafter as practicable, whenever the issue of the parentage of a child is raised in a dependency proceeding the court must first inquire of the parties if any finding of parentage has been made by another court and, if so, by what court [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.635(d)]. The court must also direct its clerk to prepare and transmit to the local child support agency a request that it inquire as to whether or not parentage has been established through any judgment or superior court order. The local child support agency must respond within 25 judicial days and shall provide certified copies of any such order or judgment [Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 5.635(d) (directing that Judicial Council form Parentage Inquiry--Juvenile (JV-500) be used for this purpose)]. The juvenile court must take judicial notice of any such prior determination of parentage [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.635(d); Evid. Code § 452(c)-(d)]. Determinations of parentage in the juvenile court always require the involvement of the local child support agency in the overall process and such agencies should be involved in the planning process for paternity determinations in the juvenile court [Welf. & Inst. Code § 903.41].

If the Office of Child Support Enforcement indicates that there has been no prior determination of parentage with regards to the child, the juvenile court may proceed to make its own determination of paternity or nonpaternity [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.635(e)]. Once a dependency petition has been filed, the juvenile court hearing the dependency case has exclusive jurisdiction to hear an action filed under Fam. Code § 7630 or 7631. Such exclusive jurisdiction continues until such time as the petition is dismissed, dependency is terminated, parental rights are terminated pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26, or proceedings are commenced to free the child pursuant to Fam. Code § 7800 et seq. [Welf. & Inst. Code § 316.2(e)].

The court may order the child and the alleged parent to submit to genetic tests. It may then proceed pursuant to Fam. Code § 7550 et seq. (Uniform Act on Blood Tests to Determine Paternity) [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.635(e)(2)]. One case has held the court is not required to order genetic testing if it finds the test results would not be relevant to the proceedings [In re Joshua R. (2002) 104 Cal. App. 4th 1020, 1025-1029, 128 Cal. Rptr. 2d 241] , but courts should be careful before denying parentage testing on relevancy grounds. Even if the alleged parent might not be deserving of services or custody if he or she established paternity, by proving he or she is the child's biological parent his or her relatives qualify for possible relative placement pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 361.3.

Generally, however, the juvenile court does not have the authority to order genetic testing in cases where a judgment of paternity exists. Under Fam. Code § 7636, a judgment of paternity is "determinative for all purposes" regarding the existence or nonexistence of a father/child relationship. Many courts have held that a valid judgment of paternity is res judicata and bars the use of genetic testing in a later proceeding to overturn a paternity determination [see, e.g., City and County of San Francisco v. Stanley (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 1724, 1729, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 106 ; City and County of San Francisco v. Cartagena (1995) 35 Cal. App. 4th 1061, 1065-1069, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 797 ; In re Margarita D. (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 1288, 1296, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 713] . This is true even where the judgment was not based on a genetic test establishing a biological connection [see, e.g., De Weese v. Unick (1980) 102 Cal. App. 3d 100, 162 Cal.

Rptr. 259 ; City and County of San Francisco v. Stanley (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 1724, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 106 ; City and County of San Francisco v. Cartagena (1995) 35 Cal. App. 4th 1061, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 797 ; In re Margarita D. (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 1288, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 713] . But remember, a judgment of paternity is not the same thing as a finding of presumed father status [In re Margarita D. (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 1288, 1296, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 713 ; see also discussion in § 328.60[5]].

The limited exception to this general rule exists when a party appeals to the equitable powers of the court and asks to set aside the judgment based on extrinsic fraud, mistake or accident. For a good discussion of what a showing of extrinsic fraud requires, see City and County of San Francisco v. Cartagena (1995) 35 Cal. App. 4th 1061, 1065-1069, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 797 .

In the alternative, the court can make its determination based on the testimony, declarations or statements of the alleged parents. If any alleged father indicates he wishes to be declared the father of the child, the court must advise him of his financial obligation for the support of the child if he is declared the father and that if the child receives welfare benefits, the father may be subject to an action for support payments [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.635(e)(3)]. If the court makes a finding of paternity, it must direct that its clerk prepare and transmit Judicial Council Form Parentage--Finding and Judgment [Juvenile] (JV-501) to the Office of Child Support Enforcement [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.635(f)].

When an alleged or biological parent desires to establish that he or she is the presumed parent of a child, he or she bears the burden of proving by a preponderance of the evidence all elements of the presumption on which he or she relies [In re Spencer W. (1996) 48 Cal. App. 4th 1647, 1652-1653, 56 Cal. Rptr. 2d 524] . If this person asserts the applicability of Fam. Code § 7611(d) based on receiving the child into his or her own home and holding the child out as his or her natural child, he or she must show more than just "some familial relationship." In Spencer W., for example, it was not enough that the man had lived with the mother and the child in the mother's home where the mother provided all the financial support [In re Spencer W. (1996) 48 Cal. App. 4th 1647, 1653, 56 Cal. Rptr. 2d 524] . Nor was it sufficient that the man told some friends and family members that the child was his, because he had failed to take steps to establish paternity by legal action, failed to acknowledge paternity when it would have resulted in reduced AFDC, and failed to take steps to assert his rights when he was denied access to the child by the maternal grandparents [In re Spencer W. (1996) 48 Cal. App. 4th 1647, 1654, 56 Cal. Rptr. 2d 524] . It is also not sufficient that a man lived with the mother while she was pregnant, since that does not constitute physically receiving the child into his home within the meaning of the presumption [In re Tanis H. (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th 1218, 1229-1230, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 380] .

When a parentage finding is adjudicated by a juvenile court, that judgment is often based on evidence of biological parentage and hence is only an adjudication that the person is the biological parent of the child. In such cases the person who was found by the court to be the child's parent is not a presumed parent and is not entitled to the rights of a presumed parent. Sometimes a "finding" of parentage is a recognition by the court that the person satisfies one of the presumptions found in Fam. Code § 7611 and not a finding that the man is the child's biological parent. A person may, of course, be both a presumed and biological parent of a child. When the court is entering a judgment of parentage, the court should be clear as to exactly what the court is finding.

PRACTICE TIP:

Don't Be Too Eager to Find Just Anyone the Parent. Just as it is important to not delay the effort to determine the identity of the father, it is also important to not be so eager to find someone to be the parent that parentage is found too quickly and the true parent of the child is overlooked. This sometimes happens when testimony, rather than testing, is used to determine parentage. Testimony is at times sufficient. In other cases testing should be required. If parentage findings in dependency cases are to be meaningful and not subject to later dispute when another possible parent emerges, all parties must ensure that the process used by the court to determine parentage in each case is as thorough as the circumstances of the case dictate, and as accurate as reasonably possible.

Once judgment is entered by the court determining a person to be the biological parent of the child any previous presumption that a different person was the parent is rebutted [Fam. Code § 7612(c)]. Thus, a person previously presumed to be the parent loses all rights and standing in a dependency case once another person is found by the court to be the biological parent. The same is true for all other presumed and alleged parents. This judgment cannot be set aside except on a showing of extrinsic fraud [In re Margarita D. (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 1288, 1294-1296, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 713] . It is for this reason that it is important to notice all possible parents for parentage proceedings [Fam. Code § 7635(b)]. A man who was formerly thought to be the father of the child, including a man previously presumed to be the father, may still have limited standing, however, if he qualifies for and receives de facto parent status [In re B.G. (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 679, 692-693, 114 Cal. Rptr. 444, 523 P.2d 244] .

PRACTICE TIP:

Make Sure the Court Enters a Judgment of Parentage. Many practitioners and courts assume that once genetic testing is done and every knows who is and is not the parent, any previous presumption is rebutted. This is not the case. The court cannot merely acknowledge the genetic testing or make a "finding" of parentage and automatically exclude all other potential or presumed parents. Instead, as set forth in Fam. Code 7612(c), it is a "judgment" establishing the parentage of a child that rebuts the presumption that another person is the parent. Further, while a "finding" of parentage or nonparentage is the functional equivalent of a "judgment" of parentage or nonparentage, courts do not always recognize it as such. Thus, all parties and the court need to ensure the court takes the steps necessary to formalize its determinations as a "judgment" so there will be no question as to who the law recognizes as the child's parent.

Finally, many dependency practitioners erroneously use the term "adjudicated father" or "judicially determined father," but neither term is recognized by statute and neither term adequately explains what the full nature of the man's status. Most practitioners use these terms interchangeably to mean that a court of competent jurisdiction has entered a judgment of paternity for a particular man. But that meaning is not universally accepted. Was he adjudicated to be a biological father, a conclusively presumed father, a rebuttably presumed father, or a father by way of declaration? At the detention hearing, the juvenile court is required to conduct a parentage inquiry that includes a determination as to whether or not a judgment of paternity exists [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.635(b)(1)]. In addition, pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 903.41, the juvenile court and family court must exchange information to determine if a judgment of paternity already exists in a particular case. As noted above, a judgment of paternity determining the existence or nonexistence of a parent/child relationship "is determinative for all purposes" but for actions under Pen. al Code § 270 [Fam. Code § 7636]. But a man with a judgment of paternity must still establish presumed father status in the juvenile court [In re Margarita D. (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 1288, 1296, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 713] . He must additionally demonstrate that he meets a presumption of paternity to attain full standing and status in the dependency proceeding [In re Zacharia D. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 435, 451-452, 24 Cal. Rptr. 2d 751] . The record must be clear and hence the terms "adjudicated father" and "judicially determined father" should not be used because they are not clear and can lead to confusion.

For a detailed discussion of parentage actions in general, including discussions of paternity presumptions and blood and genetic testing for paternity, see Vitek, et al., Disputed Paternity Proceedings (5th ed. Matthew Bender), and Kirkland, Lurvey, Richmond and Wagner, California Family Law Practice and Procedure, 2d ed., Ch. 31 (Matthew Bender).

PRACTICE TIP:

Raising a Father's Level of Standing. In any dependency case a man may move along a rising continuum of standing. He may begin as an alleged father and then establish his paternity and become a mere biological father. If he involves himself in his child's life he may then become a Kelsey father and if he seeks and receives custody he may become a presumed father. The lack of noticed hearings and express findings on paternity issues is one of the most common failures of the juvenile court. In any case where the paternity or standing of a father is not clear, all parties should take steps to ensure that the juvenile court addresses the issue on its merits through a noticed hearing and the introduction of evidence. Then, should the father's standing later change as he elevates his relationship to his child, steps should be taken to ensure that the juvenile court conducts a further hearing on the issue and makes an express finding of the elevated status. In this way there will be no question as to the status of the father and he will be sure to receive the rights and standing to which he is entitled.

[7] Under What Circumstances is a Finding of "Unfitness" Required to Terminate Parental Rights?

Parentage has important ramifications early in the case as it will directly impact whether the individual has standing and rights to such things as counsel, notice, placement, reunification services and visitation [see discussion § 328.60[1][a]]. However, parentage also has important implications at a later point in the case if the child will be freed for adoption. Where the parent is a mere biological parent, his or her parental rights can be terminated based on a finding that adoption is in the child's best interest [Adoption of Kelsey S. (1992) 1 Cal. 4th 816, 824-825, 831, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 615, 823 P. 2d 1216 ; In re Jason J. (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 922, 937-938, 96 Cal. Rptr. 3d 625] . If the parent is a biological parent who stepped forward at the earliest time, fully accepted the role and responsibilities of a parent, and qualifies as a Kelsey S. father, a finding of detriment or unfitness by clear and convincing evidence would need to be made at some time during the case before parental rights may be terminated [Adoption of Kelsey S., 1 Cal. 4th 816, 849, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 615, 823 P. 2d 1216 ; for further discussion, see § 2.60[3][b]]. The same rule applies to presumed parents [In re. G.S.R. (2008) 141 Cal. App. 4th 845, 848, 46 Cal. Rptr. 3d 434] .

In most instances, one or more findings of detriment or unfitness will already have been made regarding each parent before the case ever gets to a Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26 hearing. This prior finding forms part of the basis for termination of parental rights [Cynthia D. v. Superior Court (1983) 5 Cal. 4th 242, 253, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 698, 851 P.2d 1307] . But that will not always be the case. Sometimes parents have not sought custody of their child during the dependency proceedings, and hence the court has never found that placement with the parent would be detrimental to the child [see, e.g., Robert L. v. Superior Court (1996) 45 Cal. App. 4th 619, 628, 53 Cal. Rptr. 2d 41 ; In re Terry H. (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 1847, 1857, 34 Cal. Rptr 2d 271] . An interesting issue is whether, is cases such as these, due process requires a finding of detriment where the non-custodial parent qualifies as a Kelsey S. parent or a presumed parent. The answer appears to depend on the particular facts of the case.

In the Gladys L. case, the presumed father appeared at the detention hearing, was represented by counsel, and submitted to the court's jurisdiction. He then disappeared for three years. He never requested custody and did not visit the child. He reappeared at the Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26 hearing and requested visits. The court found it was not in the child's best interest to have contact with the father and denied the request. It subsequently terminated parental rights. The father appealed, and the Court of Appeal reversed [In re Gladys L. (2006) 141 Cal. App. 4th 845, 847, 46 Cal. Rptr. 3d 434] .

In its analysis, the Gladys L. court noted the California Supreme Court had found the dependency system met the due process requirements of Santosky v. Kramer (1982) 455 U.S. 745, 747-48, 758, 760 because by the time of the section 366.26 hearing there had been one or more findings of parental unfitness [In re Gladys L (2006) 141 Cal. App. 4th 845, 848, 46 Cal. Rptr. 3d 434 , citing Cynthia D. v. Superior Court (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 242, 254, 246 , and Santosky v. Kramer (1982) 455 U.S. 745, 747-48, 758, 760] . However, under the facts of the case, there had never been a finding of unfitness as to the non-custodial father. The court in Gladys L. reasoned: "Here, the requirements of Santosky and the safeguards embedded in the California dependency scheme were ignored. DCFS never alleged that Alex was unfit and the trial court never made that finding. Due process therefore prohibits the termination of Alex's parental rights" [In re Gladys L (2006) 141 Cal. App. 4th 845, 848, 46 Cal. Rptr. 3d 434] .

Consequently, according to Gladys L., a court must make a finding of unfitness or detriment before terminating parental rights for a presumed father--even where he is a non-custodial parent and never sought custody or services. However, the analysis of Gladys L. is potentially flawed. In reaching its conclusion, the Gladys L. court relied on Santosky and Cynthia D., two cases which dealt with termination of parental rights of presumed parents from whom the children had been removed, not parents who never had or requested custody [In re Gladys L. (2006) 141 Cal. App. 4th 845, 848, 46 Cal. Rptr. 3d 434 , citing Santosky v. Kramer (1982) 455 U.S. 745, 751 and Cynthia D. v. Superior Court (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 242, 245-246] . Therefore, the holding in Gladys L.--that a finding of detriment or unfitness is required in all cases involved presumed or Kelsey S. fathers--is based on factually distinguishable cases.

Furthermore, there is a lack of statutory authority to support the Gladys L. holding that there must be a detriment or unfitness finding for all presumed or Kelsey S. fathers even if they are noncustodial fathers and never requested custody. Dependency can be declared under Welf. & Inst. Code § 300 without any jurisdictional allegations regarding the noncustodial parent, and without any finding of detriment or unfitness as to the noncustodial parent [In re Joshua G. (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 189, 202, 28 Cal. Rptr. 3d 213] . Further, at disposition a finding of detriment need only be made when the court removes the child from the custodial parent or denies placement with a noncustodial parent who requests custody [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 361(c), 361.2(a)]. Likewise, at the out-of-home placement review hearings there is a presumption children are to be returned to their custodial parent unless the court finds return would create a substantial risk of detriment to the child [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 366.21(e), (f), 366.22(a), 366.25(a)]. No such finding of detriment is required for a previously noncustodial parent who did not seek custody at the disposition hearing. Nor does the Welf. & Inst. Code explicitly require a finding of detriment or unfitness for a noncustodial parent at the Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26 hearing, except for the parent of an Indian child [Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26(c)(2)(B)(ii)].

Recent case law provides further support for the argument that a finding of unfitness is not required for presumed parents or Kelsey S. fathers regardless of the circumstances. Two 2009 decisions from the California Supreme Court hold that in the context of termination of parental rights in Probate Court proceedings, due process is satisfied even without a finding of parental unfitness when the court terminates parental rights and determines that adoption is in the child's best interest [In re Charlotte D. (2009) 45 Cal. 4th 1140, 1147, 90 Cal. Rptr. 3d 724, 202 P.3d 1109 ; Guardianship of Ann S. (2009) 45 Cal. 4th 1110, 1135, 90 Cal. Rptr. 3d 701, 202 P.3d 1089] . Although not dependency cases, an argument can be made that the due process analysis in these cases applies equally to dependency matters.

In Guardianship of Ann S., the parents challenged the constitutionality of Prob. Code § 1516.5, which authorizes the termination of parental rights when the guardianship has continued for at least two years. In upholding the statute as facially constitutional, the California Supreme Court recognized that children who have spent considerable time in out-of-home care have protected interests in a stable, permanent placement with a committed caregiver, and that these interests need to be balanced with the constitutional rights of parents [Guardianship of Ann S. (2009) 45 Cal. 4th 1110, 1136, 90 Cal. Rptr. 3d 701, 202 P.3d 1089] . The Court went on to explain: "A termination proceeding under this statute occurs only when the parent has failed to exercise any custodial responsibility for a two-year period, with the possible exception of visitation. In this context, it would make little sense to require a showing that the parent is currently unfit. As guardianship continues for an extended period, the child develops an interest in a stable, continuing placement, and the guardian acquires a recognized interest in the care and custody of the child. [Probate Code] Section 1516.5 appropriately requires a court to balance all the familial interests in deciding what is best for the child" [Guardianship of Ann S. (2009) 45 Cal. 4th 1110, 1118, 90 Cal. Rptr. 3d 701, 202 P.3d 1089] . This is much like the factual situation in Gladys L. where the presumed father had appeared at the detention hearing and then disappeared for three years. When he returned, he requested but was denied visitation [In re Gladys L. (2006) 141 Cal. App. 4th 845, 847, 46 Cal. Rptr. 3d 434] .

In the Charlotte D. case, the California Supreme Court reiterated that a presumed father's parental rights may be terminated based on a finding of best interest [In re Charlotte D. (2009) 45 Cal. 4th 1140, 1147, 90 Cal. Rptr. 3d 724, 202 P.3d 1109] . However, the Court added the caveat that there might be situations where due process does require a finding of parental unfitness [In re Charlotte D. (2009) 45 Cal. 4th 1140, 1148-49, 90 Cal. Rptr. 3d 724, 202 P.3d 1109] . The Court observed that one such situation might exist where the parent is a Kelsey S. father, who has been involved in the child's life by demonstrating a full commitment to parental responsibilities but voluntarily placed their child in guardianship, and later faces termination of parental rights after two years [In re Charlotte D. (2009) 45 Cal.

4th 1140, 1143, 90 Cal. Rptr. 3d 724, 202 P.3d 1109] . Therefore, under the analysis of the Charlotte D. case, it is not the mere status as a presumed or Kelsey S. father that requires a detriment finding to comply with due process. More importantly, it is the relationship that exists between the man and the child that dictates whether a finding of unfitness or detriment is required before terminating parental rights.

Like Charlotte D. and Guardianship of Ann S., Gladys L. dealt with a statutory scheme that does not require a finding of detriment or unfitness before parental rights of a noncustodial parent who had not been denied custody by the state can be terminated. Another similarity shared by all three cases is that the appellants failed to demonstrate a full commitment to their parental responsibilities. The Gladys L. court did not consider a child's protected liberty interest in permanent placement with a committed caregiver as the Court did in Guardianship of Ann S. and Charlotte D. Indeed, the Gladys L. decision is silent on whether the child was in an adoptive placement and had developed a protected interest in remaining in that placement. The Gladys L. court thus omitted an important aspect of the due process analysis.

Given the inconsistency between Gladys L. on the one hand and Charlotte D. and Guardianship of Ann S. on the other, different arguments can be made regarding the extent to which a finding of parental unfitness is constitutionally required.

An argument can be made that under Charlotte D. and Guardianship of Ann S., a finding of unfitness is not constitutionally required at the trial court level before the rights of the parent can be terminated where the parent has not demonstrated a full responsibility to the child and the child has developed a protected interest in remaining with the prospective adoptive parents by living in that home for an extended period of time. In such cases, the only required finding should be that adoption is in the best interest of the child. This argument must acknowledge that the Supreme Court has noted differences between termination of parental rights in a probate guardianship versus a dependency case [Guardianship of Ann S. (2009) 45 Cal. 4th 1110, 1122, 90 Cal. Rptr. 3d 701, 202 P.3d 1089] . Those differences, however, can be argued to make the Charlotte D. and Guardianship of Ann S. analyses even more appropriate for application in dependency cases, since the noncustodial parent in a dependency case has normally had the assistance of appointed counsel to seek custody and services, and has had a court overseeing the dependency to facilitate such requests where appropriate.

However, for the previously noncustodial parent who never sought custody, several arguments still can be made in support of the position that a finding of parental unfitness is constitutionally required before parental rights can be terminated. Counsel can do this by distinguishing Charlotte D. and Guardianship of Ann S. on the grounds that Probate Code § 1516.5, which was the focus of those cases, required the probate guardianship to be in place for two years before termination of parental rights could be contemplated. The statutory scheme in dependency cases, however, allows for the termination of parental rights to occur much sooner through the denial of reunification services and the setting of a Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26 hearing as early as disposition. This shortened time frame is a significant distinction between the dependency and guardianship systems. In addition, Charlotte D. and Guardianship of Ann S. can be distinguished on the grounds that they addressed voluntary guardianship proceedings and not the involuntary removal of the child by the government in dependency cases, a distinction the Supreme Court pointed out. Further, even when the dependency case has a period of reunification services for the previously custodial parent, in many dependency cases the child has not been in a prospective adoptive home for an extended period at time of the Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26 hearing. In such situations, while the previously noncustodial parent may not have demonstrated a clear commitment and connection to the child, the child has also not developed a protected interest in remaining in a particular adoptive home. Thus, it can be argued that even if Charlotte D. and Guardianship of Ann S. apply in dependency cases, Gladys L. should still apply where the child has not yet developed the requisite protected interest in a particular stable home.

PRACTICE TIP:

Pay Attention to Detriment Findings. Regardless of what side of the issue one is on, all practitioners and the juvenile court should pay close attention to detriment findings. Assuming the evidence exists, agency attorneys and children's counsel should be sure to ask for a detriment finding by clear and > convincing evidence for a noncustodial parent at the earliest opportunity. This should be done even if the noncustodial parent is not seeking custody. If no detriment finding has been made previously, parent's counsel should be sure to indicate at the Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26 hearing that parental rights cannot be terminated without a finding of detriment and argue that the evidence does not support such a finding.

Whatever position one takes on this issue, this is an area to be watched for future developments. See § 328.171[5][f] for further discussion of when and how detriment findings can be made and whether the requirement for such a finding can be forfeited.

[8] Right of Incarcerated Parents to Be Present

Parents who are incarcerated in city, county, or state institutions within the State of California have certain rights to be transported and be present for some dependency proceedings [Penal Code § 2625]. In any action to adjudicate a child as a dependent of the juvenile court under Welf. & Inst. Code § 300 or to terminate parental rights under Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26 the juvenile court shall order notice of any court proceeding regarding the child to be transmitted to the incarcerated parent [Penal Code § 2625(b)]. While notice must be given in any such case as required by Penal Code § 2625(b), the provisions of Penal Code § 2625 for the temporary removal and production of an incarcerated parent only apply when the incarcerated parent is institutionalized in a California institution, since any other institution, such as a federal or an out-of-state facility, would not be subject to the mandate of Penal Code § 2625 or the jurisdiction of the California court requesting the prisoner's presence [In re Maria S. (1998) 60 Cal. App. 4th 1309, 1312-1313, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 30 (federal prison); In re Gary U. (1982) 136 Cal. App. 3d 494, 498-499, 186 Cal. Rptr. 316 (out-of-state prison)].

Upon receipt of a statement from the incarcerated parent or his or her attorney indicating the parent's desire to be present during the court proceedings, the court shall issue an order for the temporary removal of the prisoner from the institution at which he or she is incarcerated and the production of the incarcerated parent before the court [Penal Code § 2625(b)]. No proceeding to adjudge a child a dependent of the court and no hearing under Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26 to terminate parental rights may be adjudicated without the physical presence of the incarcerated parent or the parent's attorney, unless the court has before it a knowing waiver of the right of physical presence signed by the incarcerated parent, or an affidavit signed by the warden, superintendent, or other designated representative stating that the incarcerated parent has indicated, either by an express statement or by his or her actions, an intent not to appear at the proceeding [Penal Code § 2625(d)]. There was a split of authority as to whether Penal Code § 2625(d) required the proceeding not proceed, in the absence of a waiver, without the parent's presence or the presence of counsel [In re Axsana S. (2000) 78 Cal. App. 4th 262, 267, 92 Cal. Rptr. 2d 701 ; In re Rikki D. (1991) 227 Cal. App. 3d 1624, 1629, 278 Cal. Rptr. 565] or that the proceeding not proceed without the parent's presence and the presence of counsel [In re Alexander B. (2002) 99 Cal. App. 4th 1030, 1036-1037, 121 Cal. Rptr. 2d 512] . The California Supreme Court has resolved that conflict, determining that in the absence of a waiver the proceeding must not go forward without the incarcerated parent's presence and the presence of counsel in cases involving the assumption of jurisdiction under Welf. & Inst. Code § 300 or to terminate parental rights [In re Jesusa V. (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 588, 621-624, 10 Cal. Rptr. 3d 205, 85 P.3d 2] . Regardless, the authority for the temporary removal and production of an parent incarcerated in a California institution is statutory and thus subject to a simple harmless error analysis should the statute be violated [In re Jesusa V. (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 588, 624-626, 10 Cal. Rptr. 3d 205, 85 P.3d 2]. The responsibility for preparing an order to produce the incarcerated parent should not be placed solely on the parent's attorney. In light of the significant interests at stake, the juvenile court should take steps to ensure the production of an incarcerated parent who manifests a desire to attend a jurisdiction hearing or a hearing at which parental rights may be terminated.

For any other hearing in a dependency case other than a hearing to adjudicate the child a dependent or select and implement a permanent plan through the termination of parental rights, the juvenile court may order an incarcerated parent's temporary removal from the institution and production before the juvenile court for the dependency hearing. A copy of the order must be transmitted to the warden, superintendent, or other person in charge of the institution not less than 15 days before the order is executed [Penal Code § 2625(e)]. The provisions of Penal Code § 2625(d) do not apply when the dependency hearing is for something other than adjudicating the child a dependent or terminating parental rights. Instead, Penal Code § 2625(e) provides the court with the discretionary authority to order the incarcerated parent's presence for the dependency hearing [In re Barry W. (1993) 21 Cal. App. 4th 358, 368-370, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 161 (hearing under Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26 for guardianship)].

PRACTICE TIP (PARENT'S P.O.V.):

Producing the Incarcerated Parent for the Hearing. In selecting the next hearing date, counsel for the incarcerated parent should request a date at least three weeks out. This will allow enough time for the immediate preparation of the order to produce [JV-450], its filing, signature by the judicial officer, notification to the prison and transportation of the prisoner. For hearings where the production of the prisoner is in the discretion of the court, counsel should consider filing a motion setting forth why production of the prisoner is necessary to protect his or her rights.

It should be noted, however, that Penal Code § 2625 deals with the statutory authority to have parents incarcerated in California state or local institutions transported for dependency proceedings. In some cases an argument can be made for a due process right to be transported from California state or local institutions to dependency proceedings, regardless of whether it is for a jurisdiction hearing, a hearing at which parental rights may be terminated, or some other dependency hearing. For instance, in the Jesusa V. case, the California Supreme Court dealt with whether an incarcerated presumed, biological father had a right to be present at a parentage hearing at which the juvenile court determined another man who qualified as a presumed, nonbiological father was to be recognized as the child's presumed father. The majority opinion found there was no statutory right to be present for that hearing [In re Jesusa V. (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 588, 599-601, 10 Cal. Rptr. 3d 205, 85 P.3d 2]. But although the juvenile court did not take the additional steps at that hearing to enter a judgment of nonpaternity for the incarcerated presumed, biological father, as it should have so the child would have only one legally recognized father, the practical effect of finding the presumed, nonbiological father would be recognized as the child's presumed father was to effectively terminate the incarcerated biological father's rights. Thus, a compelling argument can be made that he did have a statutory right to be present for the parentage hearing under Penal Code § 2625. This was the view taken by the dissenting justices. Regardless, incarcerated, presumed, biological father also claimed a due process right to be present. Although the majority found no violation of that due process right, it impliedly recognized that right might exist in different factual setting in which the incarcerated parent was denied an opportunity to present his testimony in some form or to cross-examine witnesses [In re Jesusa V. (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 588, 601-602, 10 Cal. Rptr. 3d 205, 85 P.3d 2 (plurality opn., Baxter, J.)]. Thus, courts and practitioners should be careful to ensure the due process rights of incarcerated parents are protected.

Notwithstanding any other law, however, in any proceeding in which an incarcerated parent's rights are subject to adjudication, the court may not order the removal and production of an incarcerated parent who has been sentenced to death, regardless of whether that sentence is being appealed [Penal Code § 2625(g)].

[9] Legal Guardians

A person who is a child's legal guardian through appointment under Prob. Code § 1500 et seq. generally has the same rights as a parent in a dependency proceeding [In re Merrick V. (2004) 122 Cal. App. 4th 235, 250, 19 Cal. Rptr. 3d 490 ; In re Carrie W. (2003) 110 Cal. App. 4th 746, 758, 2 Cal. Rptr. 3d 38] . Thus, unless the guardianship is terminated, the probate guardian is entitled to receive copies of social worker's reports before hearings, have counsel appointed if the guardian is unable to afford counsel, object to evidence at the jurisdiction hearing, and to receive reunification services [In re Merrick V. (2004) 122 Cal. App. 4th 235, 250, 19 Cal. Rptr. 3d 490 , citing Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 302, 317, 355, and 361.5].

Once dependency proceedings have been initiated, however, a motion to terminate a probate guardianship can be filed in the juvenile court pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 728. This can be done as early as the detention hearing [In re

Merrick V. (2004) 122 Cal. App. 4th 235, 253, 19 Cal. Rptr. 3d 490] . Notice is to be given as set forth in the Probate Code § 1511 [Welf. & Inst. Code § 728(a)]. If the motion to terminate the probate guardianship is granted prior to the court making its orders under Welf. & Inst. Code § 361(c), the guardian will no longer be the guardian and no finding for removal will be necessary. Likewise, if the motion is granted before the court makes its orders under Welf. & Inst. Code § 361.5(a) for services, the guardian will no longer be a guardian and will not be entitled to services [In re Merrick V. (2004) 122 Cal. App. 4th 235, 253, 19 Cal. Rptr. 3d 490] . A petition under Welf. & Inst. Code § 388 is not an appropriate vehicle for such a motion, since it can only be filed after the child is declared a dependent, while a motion to terminate a probate guardianship can be filed at any time after dependency proceedings have been initiated [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 388, 728]. It is also not appropriate because in addition to a finding of the child's best interest, the standard for granting a Welf. & Inst. Code § 388 petition requires a showing of new evidence or a change in circumstance, which is not required in terminating a probate guardianship under Welf. & Inst. Code § 728 [In re Angel S. (2007) 156 Cal. App. 4th 1202, 1207-1208, 67 Cal. Rptr. 3d 792] . The motion to terminate a probate guardianship can, of course, be filed later in the dependency process at well.

The process for bringing about a hearing to terminate a probate guardianship in the juvenile court involves two steps. First, the social worker or other party makes a recommendation to the juvenile court to terminate the probate guardianship. This step can be done by filing a Welf. & Inst. Code § 388 petition if the child is a dependent, but need not be [Welf. & Inst. Code § 728(a); Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 5.620(e); In re Angel S. (2007) 156 Cal. App. 4th 1202, 1207, 67 Cal. Rptr. 3d 792] . Upon receiving the recommendation, the court must order the appropriate agency or counsel to file a motion pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § section 728 [Welf. & Inst. Code § 728(a); Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 5.620(e); In re Angel S. (2007) 156 Cal. App. 4th 1202, 1207, 67 Cal. Rptr. 3d 792] . This motion is not done pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 388. In preparing the motion, the social services agency or counsel will be able to contact the probate department of the appropriate county to determine to whom notice should be given. Once the motion, with proper proofs of service, is before the juvenile court, the juvenile court then conducts a hearing to determine whether to enter an order terminating the probate guardianship. "The two-step process ensures that all interested parties have an opportunity to appear in the juvenile court and be heard on the matter" [In re Angel S. (2007) 156 Cal. App. 4th 1202, 1207, 67 Cal. Rptr. 3d 792] .

A person who is a child's legal guardian through appointment by the juvenile court pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26 may also generally have some of the same rights as a parent in a dependency proceeding. This occurs when a petition under Welf. & Inst. Code § 300 is filed to initiate dependency proceedings and remove a child from a dependency guardian [see, e.g., In re Alicia O. (1995) 33 Cal. App. 4th 176, 178, 39 Cal. Rptr. 2d 119] . This is not the norm, however. Normally, if the social services agency believes a child needs to be removed from a dependency guardian or that the dependency guardianship needs to be modified or terminated, a petition under Welf. & Inst. Code § 388 is filed [Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.3(c); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.740(c)]. Notice is then provided as appropriate for a modification petition. One court has held that dependency guardians are not entitled to treatment like a parent, reunification services if the matter comes back into the dependency system, or to a finding that reunification services were adequate [In re Carlos E. (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 1408, 1417-1421, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 317] . This is contrary to common practice, and whether other courts will follow the lead of the Carlos E. court remains to be seen.

Although the form of the notice or petition and the applicable provisions regarding notice are somewhat different [In re Merrick V. (2004) 122 Cal. App. 4th 235, 249-254, 19 Cal. Rptr. 3d 490] , the general steps and standards for terminating a guardianship in the juvenile court are the same for either a probate or a dependency guardianship. Both require notice and an opportunity to be heard, including a right to the appointment of counsel if necessary. The due process requirements are therefore essentially the same for terminating either kind of guardianship in the juvenile court [In re Alicia O. (1995) 33 Cal. App. 4th 176, 183, fn. 5, 39 Cal. Rptr. 2d 119] .

If the social services agency is seeking to terminate a guardianship in the juvenile court, it must establish by clear and convincing evidence that termination of the legal guardianship is best for the child [In re Merrick V. (2004) 122 Cal. App. 4th 235, 254, 19 Cal. Rptr. 3d 490 (terminating probate guardianship); In re Alicia O. (1995) 33 Cal. App. 4th 176, 183, 39 Cal. Rptr. 2d 119 (terminating dependency guardianship)]. This is a higher burden than the preponderance of the evidence standard used if a parent is seeking to terminate a probate guardianship in the superior court or a dependency guardianship in the juvenile court [Guardianship of Simpson (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 914, 930-933, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 389 (parent seeking to terminate probate guardianship); In re Michael D. (1996) 51 Cal. App. 4th 1074, 1086-1087, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 575 (parent seeking to terminate dependency guardianship)]. This is understandable, since if a parent seeks to set aside a guardianship it is normally so the child may be returned to the parent's custody, while if a social services agency is seeking to terminate a guardianship, placement with someone other than a parent is likely to occur.

In deciding whether terminating either kind of guardianship is best for the child, one of the factors the court should consider is the effect on the child of removing the child from the guardian with whom the child has been living, often for an extended period of time [cf. Guardianship of Kassandra H. (1998) 64 Cal. App. 4th 1228, 1238-1240, 75 Cal. Rptr. 2d 668] . This is also consistent with the continuing goal of providing children with stable, permanent placements. In some cases it will be best to terminate the probate guardianship. In others it will be best to maintain the guardianship and offer reunification or family maintenance services.

If the juvenile court terminates a probate guardianship, it must provide notice to the court in which the guardianship was originally established [Welf. & Inst. Code § 728(a)].

For a further discussion of terminating a dependency guardianship, see § 328.181.

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 328 JUVENILE COURTS: DEPENDENCY PROCEEDINGS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Parties and Participants--Standing, Rights, and Appointment of Counsel and GAL

28-328 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 328.60A

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser Editorial Consultant John P. Passalacqua Contributing Author Jennifer Kaye Williams Contributing Author

§ 328.60A Rights of De Facto Parents

[1] "De Facto Parent" Defined

The concept of the de facto parent in dependency proceedings is one that is judicially created and maintained [In re Leticia S. (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 378, 383, fn. 5, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 810 ; In re Brandon M. (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 1387, 1393, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 671] . It has been a part of California's dependency law since the 1974 decision of the California Supreme Court in the case of In re B.G. (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 679, 114 Cal. Rptr. 444, 523 P.2d 244 . But the California Legislature has not recognized the de facto parent as a participant in dependency proceedings. Thus, the practitioner must look not to statutes, but to the rules of court and decisional law for authority and information regarding de facto parent status. A "de facto parent" is defined as a person who is the current or recent caretaker of a child and who has been found by the court to have assumed, on a day-to-day basis, the role of a parent to the child, fulfilling both the child's physical and psychological needs for care and affection and who has assumed that role for a substantial period of time [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.502(10); see also In re B.G. (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 679, 692 n.18, 114 Cal. Rptr. 444, 523 P.2d 244] . This concept has received such recognition in decisional law that it has even been held not to be inconsistent with or preempted by the Indian Child Welfare Act [In re Brandon M. (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 1387, 1396-1400, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 671] .

[2] De Facto Parent Status

[a] Burden of Proof and Standard of Review

The person seeking de facto parent status bears the burden of proving by at least a preponderance of the evidence that they meet the criteria for receiving de facto parent status [In re Patricia L. (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 61, 67, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 631 ; In re Joshuia S. (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 119, 125, 252 Cal. Rptr. 106] . When making a request for de facto parent status, the applicant must submit Judicial Council forms JV-295--De Facto Parent Request and JV-296--De Facto

Parent Statement.

Appellate courts reviewing the grant or denial of de facto parent status "have not, by and large, clearly articulated a standard of appellate review" [In re Michael R. (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 150, 156, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 842] . One court treated the denial of de facto parent status as akin to a demurrer without leave to amend, and essentially reviewed the decision de novo [In re Hirenia C. (1993) 18 Cal. App. 4th 504, 512, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 443] . Another court disagreed with that approach, noting it gave too little regard for the function of the juvenile court in its ruling on the request for de facto parent status. That court determined the appropriate standard was the abuse of discretion standard of review [In re Michael R. (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 150, 156, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 842] . In so doing, however, the Michael R. court noted the decision to grant or deny de facto parent status depended on factual determinations, including the resolution of disputed facts and credibility [In re Michael R. (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 150, 156, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 842] . Such factual determinations are normally reviewed using the substantial evidence standard, not the abuse of discretion standard. The Michael R. court noted that other appellate courts have reviewed the evidence to see if it supported the court's order denying de facto parent status, thus utilizing the substantial evidence standard without articulating it [In re Michael R. (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 150, 156, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 842 , citing In re Ashley P. (1998) 62 Cal. App. 4th 23, 26-30, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 383 , and In re Vincent C. (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 1347, 1356-1359, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 224] . It then muddied the issue, however, by stating "the lower court does not abuse its discretion if substantial evidence supports its determination to grant or deny de facto parent status" [In re Michael R. (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 150, 156, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 842] . Some courts have followed the Michael R. approach and utilized the abuse of discretion standard without analysis as to why that standard should be used [see, e.g., In re Merrick V. (2004) 122 Cal. App. 4th 235, 257, 19 Cal. Rptr. 3d 490 ; In re Jacob E. (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 909, 919, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 15 ; In re Leticia S. (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 378, 381, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 810] . The practical difference between the substantial evidence and abuse of discretion standards of review is, of course, not that significant [In re Jasmine D. (2000) 78 Cal. App. 4th 1339, 1351, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 644] . Nevertheless, the issue bears clarification.

The grant of de facto parent status to a person may or may not serve the child's best interest. That is not the question before the court when it considers an application for de facto parent status, however [In re Leticia S. (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 378, 383, fn. 5, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 810] . The question the court considers is whether the individual facts of the case show the person applying for de facto parent status has assumed the role of a parent and cared for the child, developing a substantial interest in the companionship, care, and management of the child that merits legal recognition. If the person has such an interest, de facto parent status should be granted so the person can participate in the proceedings to assert and protect his or her own interest in the companionship, care, custody and management of the child [In re B.G. (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 679, 692-693, 114 Cal. Rptr. 444, 523 P.2d 244 ; In re Kieshia E. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 68, 75-76, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 775, 859 P.2d 1290 ; In re Leticia S. (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 378, 383, fn. 5, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 810] . As the Supreme Court has held, "the key to the privileged status of de facto parenthood is adherence to 'the role of parent,' both physical and psychological" [In re Kieshia E. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 68, 78, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 775, 859 P.2d 1290] . Thus, granting or denying an application for de facto parent status is more a factual determination than a discretionary one. As a result, the better approach is to utilize the substantial evidence standard of review, as many courts have done [see, e.g., In re Ashley P. (1998) 62 Cal. App. 4th 23, 26-30, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 383 ; In re Vincent C. (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 1347, 1356-1359, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 224 ; In re Krystle D. (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 1778, 1808, 37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 132] . This approach is also appropriate in reviewing the factual determination that a person applying for de facto parent status has acted inconsistently with the role of a parent by abusing or endangering the child and hence has forfeited the right to receive de facto parent status [In re Kieshia E. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 68, 79-80, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 775, 859 P.2d 1290] . Although the result will invariably be the same regardless of which of the two standards is used, the substantial evidence standard of review is the more appropriate standard for the review of the grant or denial of de facto parent status.

[b] Factors Considered

Whether the person seeking de facto parent status is entitled to receive such status "depends strongly on the particular individual seeking such status and the unique circumstances of the case." Among the various factors that courts have used to determine whether to grant de facto parent status are the following [In re Patricia L. (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 61, 66-67, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 631] :

- The child is "psychologically bonded" to the adult.
- The adult has assumed the role of a parent on a day-to-day basis for a substantial period of time.
- The adult possesses information about the child unique from the other participants in the process.
- The adult has regularly attended juvenile court hearings.
- A future proceeding may result in an order permanently foreclosing any future contact with the adult.

In awarding de facto parent status, there are two general approaches. The traditional approach focuses on the nature of the relationship of the child to the person seeking de facto parent status. Where there currently exists a positive psychological parent-child relationship that has developed in a wholesome and stable environment, de facto parent status is warranted [see, e.g., In re B.G. (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 679, 692-693, 114 Cal. Rptr. 444, 523 P.2d 244 , citing Goldstein, Freud, & Solnit, Beyond the Best Interests of the Child (1973) (psychological parent-child relationship), and former Civ. Code § 4600 (now see Fam. Code § 3040 (if custody is not awarded a parent it should go to person with whom the child has been living in a wholesome and stable environment); Guardianship of Phillip B. (1983) 139 Cal. App. 3d 407, 419-423, 188 Cal. Rptr. 781 (psychological parents as having a relationship which has "long been recognized in the fields of law and psychology"); see also In re Patricia L. (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 61, 67, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 631 (subsequent lack of psychological bond between child and de facto parent justifies termination of that status)]. This view holds that it is the special nature of the positive psychological parent-child relationship which creates the legally recognizable interest of the adult in the child so as to merit an award of de facto parent status. This is the better approach.

Many courts, however, have taken a far more liberal view toward the granting of de facto parent status, believing that the juvenile court can only benefit from all possible information [see, e.g., In re Rachael C. (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1445, 1452, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 473 , disapproved on other grounds to the extent inconsistent in In re Kieshia E. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 68, 79-80, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 775, 859 P.2d 1290 ; Christina K. v. Superior Court (1986) 184 Cal. App. 3d 1463, 1467-1469, 229 Cal. Rptr. 564] . This trend has in some cases led to extreme outcomes. In Kieshia E., the appellate court affirmed an award of de facto parent status to a man with whom the child did not want any further contact; although he had helped raise this four-and-a-half-year-old girl, he had molested her and threatened to cut her head off if she told [In re Kieshia E. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 68, 72-74, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 775, 859 P.2d 1290 (reversing the court of appeal's judgment)]. In Vanessa P., the court held that the mere nomination by a parent of a person for legal guardianship justified the granting of de facto parent status [In re Vanessa P. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 1763, 1770, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 760] . Vanessa P. must be viewed as an anomaly even under the more liberal approach to the granting of such status, since it would allow the awarding of de facto parent status without any showing of a psychological parent-child relationship or finding that the person seeking such status has any information for the court. Nevertheless, the Vanessa P. decision and the lower courts' rulings in the Kieshia E. case are further evidence of the trend toward liberalizing the granting of de facto parent status.

Decisions following the more liberal approach often overlook or discount the fact that the juvenile court can allow persons with a legitimate interest in a case to be present during hearings [Welf. & Inst. Code § 346] and receive information if appropriate [Welf. & Inst. Code § 827(a)], that any person can ask the court pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 388 to modify or vacate any order if they have evidence the court did not have at the time the order was made and the best interests of the child would be served, and that relatives and caretakers of dependent children have the right to make their views known to the juvenile court and to provide the court with information [Welf. & Inst. Code §

366.2(d); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.534(f)]. This is not to say that the fact that persons seeking de facto parent status have information should be discounted by the court in its determination of de facto parent status. Where, however, such persons do not have a present and positive psychological parent-child relationship with the child, they should be allowed to present their views and information by means other than the granting of the special standing of de facto parent status with the additional rights that it affords.

Regardless of the approach taken, the law is clear that the decision to award de facto parent status hinges on the person's own interest in and relationship with the child, if any, and not in his or her interest in preserving the child's relationship with the parent [In re Daniel D. (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 1823, 1835-1836, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 245 ; In re Vanessa Z. (1994) 23 Cal. App. 4th 258, 261, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 313] . When ruling on a request for de facto parent status, the court must use Judicial Council form JV-297--De Facto Parent Order.

[c] When the Applicant for De Facto Parent Status Has Abused or Endangered Child

When an individual meets some of the criteria set out in [b], above, but has committed a substantial harm to the child, such as sexual or other serious physical abuse that is fundamentally at odds with "the role of parent," the perpetrator's "protectible interest" in dispositional decisions is extinguished and that person is not entitled to receive de facto parent status [In re Kieshia E. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 68, 78, 79-80, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 775, 859 P.2d 1290 (disapproving In re Rachael C. (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1445, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 473 to the extent inconsistent)]. In Kieshia E. the individual seeking de facto parent status had molested the child, which the Supreme Court found was a basis for denying de facto parent status [In re Kieshia E. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 68, 71-73, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 775, 859 P.2d 1290] . The Kieshia E. holding is not limited to cases of physical or sexual abuse, however [In re Merrick V. (2004) 122 Cal. App. 4th 235, 257, 19 Cal. Rptr. 3d 490 ; In re Leticia S. (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 378, 382, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 810] . If the person's conduct contributed to grounds for dependency jurisdiction, such as when a man used drugs with the mother and left them out where the child could reach it, that person's conduct falls within the Kieshia E. holding and prohibits the individual from receiving the legal status of de facto parent [In re Leticia S. (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 378, 382, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 810] . As another specific example, "Kidnapping the children, keeping them in hiding from the DPSS, and removing them without authority from the juvenile court's jurisdiction, purposely to allow free access by the abusing parent, is tantamount to aiding and encouraging the abuse" and has been held to be sufficient to deny de facto parent status to a grandmother even though she had not personally abused the children [In re Michael R. (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 150, 156-158, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 842] . An individual can also be denied de facto parent status where, despite a loving relationship with the child and a long period of caring for the child, the person neglects parental responsibilities by failing to enroll the child in school, failing to schedule medical and dental appointments, hitting the child with a stick, and allowing the child to witness domestic violence [In re Jacob E. (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 909, 920, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 15] . Thus, if the person's misconduct was a significant factor in causing the child's dependency, that misconduct will generally be considered inconsistent with the role of a parent and grounds for the denial of de facto parent status [In re Merrick V. (2004) 122 Cal. App. 4th 235, 257, 19 Cal. Rptr. 3d 490 (grandmother's conduct "at least indirectly" caused the children to be at risk, leading to their dependency); In re Leticia S. (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 378, 382-383, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 810] . Care should be taken not to attempt to stretch the Kieshia E. decision too far. For example, that an applicant can no longer care for a child or is incapable of caring for the child's special needs, is aggressive and outspoken, and can be difficult for the social worker and the child's school to deal with, and the grant of de facto parent status may prolong the dependency proceedings is not grounds for denying de facto parent status [In re Vincent C. (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 1347, 1356-1359, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 224] .

[d] Terminating De Facto Parent Status

As noted by one court of appeal, "To terminate de facto parent status, the department has the burden of establishing a change of circumstances that no longer support the status, such as when a psychological bond no longer exists between the adult and the child. In this regard, we emphasize that de facto parent status does not terminate by operation of law or by any other automatic mechanism except where the dependency itself is terminated. During the dependency if the department believes such status is no longer warranted, it must file a noticed motion to that effect allowing the court to hold a hearing. Where there are disputed factual issues, the court should permit the parties to present evidence" [In re Patricia L. (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 61, 67, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 631] . One case has disagreed with the Patricia L. decision to the extent it states that de facto parent status terminates when dependency jurisdiction has been terminated. As noted by that court, "Dependency proceedings do not operate as some sort of toggle switch which turns de facto parent status off and on. Whether a person is a de facto parent is a question of fact regarding the fulfillment of a youngster's physical needs and psychological need for affection and care by a nonparent" [In re Joel H. (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 1185, 1196, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 878] . In this regard, Joel H. confuses the concept of a "psychological parent" with the legal status afforded in dependency proceedings of "de facto parent." Whether a person is a child's "psychological parent" is a question of fact that exists completely independent of any dependency or other court proceedings. Whether a person is a child's "de facto parent" is a legal determination that has meaning only within the dependency proceeding itself. As such, Patricia L. is correct on this issue and de facto parent status terminates if the dependency proceedings are terminated [see also In re Leticia S. (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 378, 383, fn. 5, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 810] . When finding there is a change of circumstances that no longer support de facto parent status and ordering the status terminated, the juvenile court must use Judicial Council form JV-298--Order Ending De Facto Parent Status.

[3] Limited Rights of De Facto Parents

The status of de facto parents does not entitle them to the same rights and responsibilities of parents or guardians. A de facto parent is not the same as a parent and the de facto parent is not given all the rights and preferences of a parent or guardian [In re Kieshia E. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 68, 77, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 775, 859 P.2d 1290] . Instead, the concept of de facto parent status recognizes "limited rights" for the de facto parent in dependency cases [In re Leticia S. (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 378, 381, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 810] . De facto parents have the right to be present at dependency proceedings, to be represented by counsel, and to present evidence. They do not have the right to reunification services, custody, or visitation [In re Kieshia E. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 68, 77, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 775, 859 P.2d 1290 ; In re Jody R. (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 1615, 1628, 267 Cal. Rptr. 746 ; In re Jamie G. (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 675, 684, 241 Cal. Rptr. 869]. Since de facto parents do not have a right to such services, even if they are given services they cannot appeal a juvenile court's findings regarding such services [Clifford S. v. Superior Court (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 747, 752, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 333] .

One case has held that de facto parents are entitled to "the same procedural rights as natural parent[s]," since they are entitled to participate as "parties" [In re Matthew P. (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 841, 850, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 269] . But this statement is misleading. De facto parents are parties and entitled to procedural due process to the extent necessary and appropriate for them to assert they recognizable interest in the child [see, e.g., In re Cynthia C. (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 1479, 1490-1491, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1 ; In re Jonique W. (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 685, 693, 31 Cal. Rptr. 2d 601] . They are not, however, entitled to the same procedural due process rights as natural parents throughout the entire course of the dependency process. Thus, while the ultimate holding of the Matthew P. decision that the de facto parents had a right to a contested hearing on their petition pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 388 was, under the facts of that case, correct, its determination that de facto parents have the same procedural rights as natural parents was not.

PRACTICE TIP (PARENT'S P.O.V.):

Change of Placement Issues. Often, caretakers seek de facto parent status because of concern that the agency is planning on moving a child from the de facto parent's home. If they are the current caregiver at the time of the termination of parental rights, they will receive preferential consideration for adoption [Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26(k)]. After termination of parental rights, if the caretaker qualifies as a "prospective adoptive parent" [Welf & Inst. Code § 366.26(n)(1)] they are entitled to notice of a planned removal, and a hearing regarding whether this removal is in the best interest of the child. The qualifications for these different types of status vary and the terms are not interchangeable. Nevertheless, each may have a significant impact on future placement of the child, and hence parents should carefully consider their relationship with the caregiver in deciding whether to support or oppose a request to receive de facto parent status, or to remove the child from a de facto parent.

Matthew P. also states in dicta that de facto parent status entitles the holder to a copy of the social worker's report [In re Matthew P. (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 841, 847, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 269] . This too is incorrect. De facto parents are not automatically entitled to copies of social worker's reports or other documents. Instead, to the extent necessary and appropriate, de facto parents receive their discovery through Welf. & Inst. Code § 827 [see California Ctr. for Jud. Educ. and Research, Cal. Judges Benchguides, Benchguide 102: Juvenile Dependency Disposition Hearing (Jan. 2009) §§ 1.2.15, 102.20, pp. 102-23 to 102-24, 102-27 (suggesting discovery to a de facto parent under Welf. & Inst. Code § 827 be limited to that which is relevant to the issues the de facto parent is involved in); see also discussion in § 328.109[15]]. Thus, de facto parents do have a right to discovery, but they do not have an automatic right to receive copies of the social worker's reports. When granting de facto parent status, juvenile courts should also make an order for such continuing discovery pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 827 as it deems appropriate.

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 328 JUVENILE COURTS: DEPENDENCY PROCEEDINGS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Parties and Participants--Standing, Rights, and Appointment of Counsel and GAL

28-328 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 328.61

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser Editorial Consultant John P. Passalacqua Contributing Author Jennifer Kaye Williams Contributing Author

§ 328.61 Appointment of Counsel and Guardian ad Litem

[1] Counsel for Parent or Guardian

The court may appoint counsel when it appears to the court that a parent or guardian of the child desires counsel but is unable to afford one and, for that reason, cannot employ counsel [Welf. & Inst. Code § 317(a)].

The court must appoint counsel, unless it finds that the parent or guardian has made a knowing and intelligent waiver of counsel, when it appears to the court that a parent or guardian of the child is unable to afford and for that reason cannot employ counsel, and the child has been placed in out-of-home care, or the petitioning agency is recommending that the child be placed in out-of-home care [Welf. & Inst. Code § 317(b)]. Counsel is not to be appointed for a parent or guardian, however, unless that parent or guardian appears and requests such appointment or otherwise communicates to the court such a desire [In re Ebony W. (1996) 47 Cal. App. 4th 1643, 1646-1648, 55 Cal. Rptr. 2d 337] .

For a discussion of the role and duties of counsel for parents or guardians, see Rauber, et. al., Representing Parents: The Role And Duties Of Respondent's Counsel, in Child Welfare Law and Practice: Representing Children, Parents, and State Agencies in Abuse, Neglect, and Dependency Cases (Bradford Pub. 2005) ch. 20, pp. 443-492.

For a discussion regarding the right to effective assistance of counsel and the raising of claims of ineffective assistance of counsel, see § 328.193.

[2] Counsel for "De Facto Parent"

De facto parents (discussed in § 328.60A) may be represented by retained counsel in dependency proceedings [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.534(e)(2)]. There is, however, no statutory right to the appointment of counsel for de facto parents in dependency cases. This is not surprising since de facto parent status is a judicially created and maintained concept that has never been recognized by the Legislature for inclusion in the dependency statutory scheme.

Nevertheless, Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.534(e)(2), allows the juvenile court to appoint counsel for a de facto parent at the court's discretion. Absent statutory authority, however, such appointments must be pro bono appointments unless other arrangements are made [California Ctr. for Jud. Educ. and Research, Cal. Judges Benchguide, Benchguide 102: Juvenile Dependency Disposition Hearing, (Sept. 2007) § 102.15, p. 102-24, citing J.W. v. Superior Court (1993) 17 Cal. App. 4th 958, 970, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 527 , and Payne v. Superior Court (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 908, 920, 924, 132 Cal. Rptr. 405, 553 P.2d 565 ; see also In re Joel H. (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 1185, 1196, 1199, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 878 (de facto parent has no right to court-appointed counsel on appeal)]. Further, it should be noted the rule of court that provides for the discretionary appointment of counsel for de facto parents does so after de facto parent status has been granted. The rule does not provide for the discretionary appointment of counsel by the juvenile court for the bringing of the de facto parent application [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.534(e)(2)].

[3] Guardian ad Litem (GAL) for Parent or Guardian

In some dependency cases the parent or guardian is someone who has a conservator [In re Lee G. (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 17, 21, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 375 ; see Welf. & Inst. Code § 5000 et seq.; Prob. Code § 1800 et seq.]. More frequently, however, the question of whether the parent or guardian is mentally competent enough to participate in the dependency proceedings comes up during the proceedings themselves. In either case the question arises as to what the standard is for the appointment of a guardian ad litem (GAL) for the parent or guardian in dependency proceedings [see Code Civ. Proc. § 372].

This question was initially answered in the case of Christina B. [In re Christina B. (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 1441, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 918] . In that case the court of appeal held the correct standard is that set forth in Penal Code § 1367 requiring the person either be unable to understand the nature of the proceedings or to assist counsel in a rational manner in the conduct of a defense [In re Christina B. (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 1441, 1449-1451, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 918 (rejecting the proposition that the standard in Prob. Code § 1801 should apply); see also In re R.S. (1985) 167 Cal. App. 3d 946, 980, 213 Cal. Rptr. 690 (impliedly applying the standard set forth in the Penal Code)]. More recently, however, the issue was considered by another court. That court agreed that in most dependency cases in which this question is raised the standard in Penal Code § 1367 will be the appropriate one to consider. But it concluded a guardian ad litem should be appointed for the parent or guardian if the standard in either Penal Code § 1367 or Prob. Code § 1801 is met [In re Sara D. (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 661, 667, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 909] . The level of proof required for the appointment of a guardian ad litem is a preponderance of the evidence [In re Sara D. (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 661, 667, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 909 ; In re Christina B. (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 1441, 1450, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 918] .

If the parent or guardian consents to the appointment of a GAL there is no due process problem involved in the appointment. If a parent or guardian does not consent to the appointment of a GAL, however, either the court or counsel must explain to the parent or guardian the purpose of a GAL, what authority the GAL will have, and the reason it is believed one should be appointed. The parent or guardian must be granted at least an informal hearing and an opportunity to be heard on the issue [In re Daniel S. (2004) 115 Cal. App. 4th 903, 912, 9 Cal. Rptr. 3d 646 ; In re Joann E. (2002) 104 Cal. App. 4th 347, 354-361, 128 Cal. Rptr. 2d 189 ; In re Jessica G. (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 1180, 1187-1188, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 714 ; In re Sara D. (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 661, 671-672, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 909] . Application of this procedure is not retroactive, however, and the fact a GAL may have been appointed prior to these procedures being recognized cannot be used to set aside juvenile court findings and orders that are already final [Contra Costa County Children and Family Services Bureau v. Superior Court (2004) 117 Cal. App. 4th 111, 118-119, 11 Cal. Rptr. 3d 459] .

At one point there was a conflict of decision as to whether error in the appointment process for a guardian ad litem was structural error requiring automatic reversal or was subject to a harmless error analysis. One line of cases said it was structural error [see, e.g., In re C. G. (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 27, 34, 27 Cal. Rptr. 3d 872] . The other line applied a harmless error analysis [see, e.g., In re Enrique G. (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 676, 685-687, 44 Cal. Rptr. 3d 724] . The California Supreme Court has resolved that controversy finding it is subject to harmless error analysis [In re James F. (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 901, 905, 918-919, 70 Cal. Rptr. 3d 358, 174 P.3d 180] . The Supreme Court expressly did not determine exactly what due process required in the appointment process for a guardian ad litem in a dependency case, because the violation had been conceded in that case, but noted "the use of flawed procedures in the appointment of a guardian ad litem for a parent does not inevitably and necessarily render dependency proceedings unfair in any fundamental sense," and held it was trial error subject to harmless error analysis [In re James F. (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 901, 918-919, 70 Cal. Rptr. 3d 358, 174 P.3d 180] . The Court disapproved the C.G. case to the extent inconsistent [In re James F. (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 901, 919 n.2, 70 Cal. Rptr. 3d 358, 174 P. 3d 180] . Under the facts of the James F. case, the Court found the parent had suffered no actual prejudice and thus the error was harmless [In re James F. (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 901, 918-919, 70 Cal. Rptr. 3d 358, 174 P.3d 180] .

For discussion of harmless error of a federal constitutional dimension, see § 328.194[2].

For discussion of structural error in dependency cases, see § 328.194[3].

[4] Guardian ad Litem (GAL) for Minor Parent

Must the juvenile dependency court automatically appoint a guardian ad litem for a parent who is a minor? One case holds it must, even when the minor presumed parent does not appear [In re D.D. (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 646, 648, 50 Cal. Rptr. 3d 578]. In that case the unmarried minor parent was a presumed father, apparently under Fam. Code § 7611(d), and was listed on the dependency petition as the presumed father. The mother was also a minor. At the detention hearing the court appointed an attorney and a guardian ad litem for the mother, with the GAL being appointed to make legal decisions for her [In re D.D. (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 646, 650, 50 Cal. Rptr. 3d 578]. The social study for the jurisdictional hearing indicated the minor presumed father received SSI due to being developmentally disabled. Reunification services were ordered for both minor parents [In re D.D. (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 646, 651, 50 Cal. Rptr. 3d 578]. Although the social worker had telephonic contact with the minor presumed father and had sent a letter and notice to him, he did not appear in the dependency case until the six-month review hearing. At that time an attorney and a guardian ad litem were appointed for him. The juvenile court continued services for the mother, but terminated them for the minor presumed father. He appealed, contending the court erred at the outset of the case by not appointing an attorney and a GAL for him [In re D.D. (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 646, 652, 50 Cal. Rptr. 3d 578].

The court of appeal in D.D. agreed, holding that a guardian ad litem was required under Code of Civ. Proc. § 372(a), as a matter of law [In re D.D. (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 646, 652, 50 Cal. Rptr. 3d 578 , citing Code of Civ. Proc. § 372(a), and In re Sara D. (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 661, 667, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 909]. The court distinguished the case of Emily R., because in that case the failure to appoint a GAL was not error because the minor who did not appear after notice was only an alleged father, not a presumed father as in D.D. [In re D.D. (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 646, 653-654, 50 Cal. Rptr. 3d 578 , citing In re Emily R. (2000) 80 Cal. App. 4th 1344, 1347, 1358, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 285]. The court of appeal reversed all findings and orders after the detention hearing, holding that because the presumed father "was a minor and had neither a guardian ad litem nor an attorney to represent him, ... the proceedings were fundamentally unfair" [In re D.D. (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 646, 654, 50 Cal. Rptr. 3d 578]. One appellate court agreed with the D.D. holding [In re M.F. (2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 673, 678-679, 74 Cal. Rptr. 3d 383] .

Most juvenile courts and practitioners disagreed with the D.D. decision for a number of reasons. First, dependency proceedings are special proceedings and generally neither the Civil Code nor the Code of Civil Procedure apply to dependency cases unless expressly made applicable [In re Josiah Z. (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 664, 678-679, 31 Cal. Rptr. 3d 472, 115 P.3d 1133 ; In re Shelley J. (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 322, 328, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 922]. Indeed, the guardian ad litem principles that apply in civil cases "do not automatically extend to the dependency context," which has rules that are "slightly different" for dependency guardians ad litem [In re Josiah Z. (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 664, 678-679, 31 Cal. Rptr. 3d 472, 115 P.3d 1133]. Second, automatically appointing a guardian ad litem for a minor parent denies the minor parent the right to an informal hearing and to object to the appointment of a GAL that is afforded adult parents [see, e.g., In re Daniel S. (2004) 115 Cal. App. 4th 903, 912, 9 Cal. Rptr. 3d 646 ; In re Sara D. (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 661, 671-672, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 909]. It also gives the minor parent less control of his or her own case than an adult parent would have, which is inconsistent with the trend to afford adolescent children a greater voice in their dependency case [see, e.g., Appell, Children's Voice and Justice: Lawyering for Children in the Twenty-First Century, 6 Nev. L.J. 692 (2006); Haralambie, Humility and Child Autonomy in Child Welfare and Custody Representation of Children, 28 Hamline J. Pub. L. & Pol'y 177, 189 (2006)]. Further, case law holds that "under California law, minors have the absolute authority to make decisions concerning their parental rights ... without any requirement of approval by the minor's parent, guardian, or the court" [In re Steven H. (2001) 86 Cal. App. 4th 1023, 1030, 103 Cal. Rptr. 2d 649 ; see also American Academy of Pediatrics v. Lungren (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 307, 313-314, 66 Cal. Rptr. 2d 210, 940 P.2d 797 (minors have right to obtain abortions without parental consent or court authorization)]. To that end, minor parents have been held to the same standards as adult parents [In re Ariel H. (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 70, 74, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 125]. These points were not considered by the appellate court in D.D., and thus many viewed the decision as incorrect.

Further, the D.D. case was distinguishable in two ways. One, in that case the minor presumed parent had neither an attorney nor a GAL in the early stages of the proceeding [In re D.D. (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 646, 654, 50 Cal. Rptr. 3d 578]. Indeed, this distinction was recognized at least in part by a different panel of the same appellate district that decided the D.D. case [In re A. C. (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 146, 157-158, 82 Cal. Rptr. 3d 542] . And two, in that case the minor presumed parent also had a developmental disability that warranted consideration in the question of appointing a GAL whether the presumed parent was a minor or an adult [In re D.D. (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 646, 655, 50 Cal. Rptr. 3d 578].

In response to the D.D. decision, the legislature has amended Code Civ. Proc. § 372 and added Welf. & Inst. Code § 326.7 to override that decision. Thus, although always questionable, the D.D. and M.F. decisions are no longer controlling on this issue. Now the general rule is that a minor parent may appear without a guardian ad litem in a family, dependency, guardianship or other child custody, visitation, or support proceeding regarding the minor parent's child [Code Civ. Proc. § 372(c)(1)]. If the court determines the minor parent is unable to understand the nature of the proceedings or to assist counsel in the preparation of the case, the court shall appoint a guardian ad litem either on its own motion or on the motion of the minor parent or the minor parent's counsel [Code Civ. Proc. § 372(c)(2)]. Likewise, the specific rule for dependency proceedings is that appointment of a guardian ad litem is not required for a minor parent of a child who is the subject of a dependency petition unless the court finds the minor parent is unable to understand the nature of the proceedings or to assist counsel in the preparation of the case [Welf. & Inst. Code § 326.7]. Nevertheless, two questions remain.

First, must a guardian ad litem be appointed for a minor parent who is not present? In light of the statutory changes [Code Civ. Proc. § 372(c); Welf. & Inst. Code § 326.7] and in recognition that failure to appoint a guardian ad litem is not by itself a denial of due process even where one should be appointed [In re A. C. (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 146, 158, 82 Cal. Rptr. 3d 542] , the answer is no. Nevertheless, the better approach in such cases is to appoint counsel for a minor presumed parent at the outset of the dependency case, regardless of whether the minor presumed parent is present and requests counsel or not. This is contrary to the normal requirement that a parent express the desire for court appointed counsel [In re Ebony W. (1996) 47 Cal. App. 4th 1643, 1646-1648, 55 Cal. Rptr. 2d 337] , but in this limited situation the practice is appropriate and avoids due process problems. The appointed attorney can ensure adequate steps are taken to notice the minor parent, and can argue for appropriate findings and orders if the minor parent cannot be found or does not appear, which may include orders for further search efforts, services, visitation, or even a guardian ad litem.

Second, when the minor parent does appear, must the court automatically conduct an inquiry of the minor parent as to the need and desire for a guardian ad litem, in much the way it is done for adult parents for whom the question of a guardian ad litem has been raised [see, e.g., In re Daniel S. (2004) 115 Cal. App. 4th 903, 912, 9 Cal. Rptr. 3d 646 ; In re Sara D. (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 661, 671-672, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 909] ? No. Nothing in the law requires such an inquiry. Indeed, the presumption is a guardian ad litem shall not be appointed. Thus, the inquiry need only be made if the issue is raised by the minor parent or the minor parent's counsel, or if the circumstances of the case or the minor parent's participation cause the court to believe an inquiry is appropriate.

LexisNexis®

California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 28: Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances thru Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings-Chs. 323-329
CHAPTER 328 JUVENILE COURTS: DEPENDENCY PROCEEDINGS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Parties and Participants--Standing, Rights, and Appointment of Counsel and GAL

28-328 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 328.62

AUTHOR: Gary C. Seiser Editorial Consultant John P. Passalacqua Contributing Author Jennifer Kaye Williams Contributing Author

§ 328.62 Rights of Child

[1] Child as Party to Dependency Action

Children have historically been considered as the subject of a dependency proceeding and have been afforded many rights and considerations as a result [see, e.g., Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 317(c) (appointment of counsel), former 335(a) (notice if 10 or more years of age), 399 (right to make a statement regarding placement decisions)]. Effective January 1, 1995, however, the child is also now a party to the dependency proceeding [Welf. & Inst. Code § 317.5(b)].

[2] Constitutional Right to Safe and Stable Life

The purpose of the dependency process is to protect abused or neglected children and those who are at risk of such abuse and neglect and to provide stable, permanent homes to those children if they cannot be returned to their home within a limited period of time. In this regard it has been recognized that the welfare of a child is a compelling state interest that the state has not only a right, but a duty, to serve and protect [In re Marilyn H. (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 295, 307, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 544, 851 P.2d 826] . The California Legislature has recognized that the state has an interest in providing stable, permanent homes for dependent children who cannot be returned home. This interest has been found to be compelling [In re Heather P. (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 886, 892, 257 Cal. Rptr. 545] .

The question arises, however, as to whether this interest in a safe and stable, permanent home is not only a compelling state interest, but also a constitutional right of the child. This question was considered in the case of In re Arturo A. (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 229, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 131 . That court noted the case of Adoption of Kay C. (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 741, 749, 278 Cal. Rptr. 907 , which had held that "natural children have a fundamental, independent right in belonging to a family unit" [In re Arturo A. (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 229, 241 n.6, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 131] . It pointed out, however, that while it adopted the idea that a child has a "constitutional right to a reasonably directed early life, unmarred by unnecessary and excessive shifts in custody," it had difficulty finding any specific authority for such a proposition [In re Arturo A. (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 229, 241 n.6, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 131] .

While recognizing there "can be no question that a some point the child acquires a fundamental right," the Arturo A. court determined that "when and in what circumstances the child acquires a constitutional right to a settled life" was an issue it did not need to decide [In re Arturo A. (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 229, 241, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 131] . It noted, however, that it felt in an appropriate case "it will be decided that at some point in the administrative process of terminating parental rights and creating new lives for dependent children, the due process rights of the delinquent parent may be neutralized by the competing liberty interests of the child in finalizing the child's permanent life planning" [In re Arturo A. (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 229, 241-242 n.6, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 131] .

Other courts have also recognized a child's constitutional right to a safe and stable home without actually analyzing where that right comes from. Two California Supreme Court decisions illustrate this. In the case of In re Marilyn H. (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 295, 306, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 544, 851 P.2d 826 , the Supreme Court noted that "natural children have a fundamental independent interest in belonging to a family unit [citation], and they have compelling rights to be protected from abuse and neglect and to have a placement that is stable, permanent, and that allows the caretaker to make a full emotional commitment to the child." The court in In re Jasmon O. (1994) 8 Cal. 4th 398, 419, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 85, 878 P.2d 1297 , observed that "Children, too, have fundamental rights--including the fundamental right to be protected from neglect and to "have a placement that is stable [and] permanent."

Despite these cases, one appellate court has found that while children have an interest in a safe, stable, permanent home, they do not have a constitutional right to one [In re Vincent M. (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 1247, 1265-1266, 59 Cal. Rptr. 3d 321]. That court, however, appeared to seek authority for the proposition that all dependent children have a constitutional right to a safe, stable, permanent home, rather than seeking a source for such a right when reunification efforts have either been denied or terminated. At that point, particularly when the child has been in a particular home for an extended period of time and has come to view the caregivers as his or her psychological parents, the child's natural interest in a safe, stable, permanent home may transform into a familial or liberty interest right [In re Arturo A. (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 229, 241-242, n.6, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 131]. That transformation as the child's dependency case proceeds along its continuum toward permanency is something the Vincent M. case did not consider, and hence does not address.

The better view is that once reunification efforts have been either denied or terminated, a constitutional right to familial association and a liberty interest in a safe, stable, permanent home may develop, particularly when the dependent child has resided in particular home for an extended period of time and has come to view his or her caregivers as psychological parents [In re Arturo A. (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 229, 241-242, fn. 6, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 131]. When that transformation is fully analyzed, it is likely the dependent child's "interest" in a safe, stable, permanent home will be found to have grown into a constitutionally protected "right," since the right of a child to a safe and stable home is clearly part of the basic values implicit in the concept of ordered liberty and of the basic civil rights of individuals [see City of Carmel-by-the-Sea v. Young (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 259, 266-267, 85 Cal. Rptr. 1, 466 P.2d 225 (listing many of the recognized liberty interests); In re Roger S. (1977) 19 Cal. 3d 921, 927-928, 141 Cal. Rptr. 298, 569 P.2d 1286 (finding a 14-year-old child has a protected liberty interest in proceedings to involuntarily place the child in a state mental hospital)].

[3] Appointment of Counsel for Child

[a] When Counsel Should Be Appointed

In the past, in any case in which it appeared to the court that the child would benefit from the appointment of counsel the court was required to appoint counsel for the child. That counsel for the child could be a county counsel, district attorney, public defender, or other member of the bar, provided the counsel did not represent another party or county agency whose interests conflicted with those of the child [Welf. & Inst. Code former § 317(c)]. This law recognized that while it was essential that every child have a voice in the dependency proceedings, the child's voice need not always be that of an attorney. The court had a duty to examine the facts of the case, including the child's desires and situation, to determine if the child would benefit from the appointment of counsel. If no specific benefit was found, appointment of counsel was not necessary [see Welf & Inst. Code former § 317(c); In re Jesse C. (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 1481, 1490-1491, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 609 ; cf., In re Juan H. (1992) 11 Cal. App. 4th 169, 173, 13 Cal. Rptr. 2d 716] . In those cases, the child's interests were served solely by his or her guardian ad litem (GAL) [see Welf & Inst. Code § 326 (repealed eff. 7/1/01, Stats. 2000, ch. 450, §§ 2, 4)] and Court-Appointed Special Advocate (CASA), if any [see Welf & Inst. Code § 356.5].

Effective January 1, 2001, California law changed significantly. Now the court "shall appoint counsel for the child unless the court finds that the child would not benefit from the appointment of counsel." If the court makes a finding the child would not benefit from the appointment of counsel, the court must state on the record the reasons for its finding [Welf. & Inst. Code § 317(c) (Stats. 2000, ch. 450, § 1)]. The statute does not say how the court should determine whether the child would benefit from the appointment of counsel [Welf. & Inst. Code § 317(c)]. The rule of court on this issue does not help matters.

The rule does not address factors that may impact the determination of whether the child would benefit from the appointment of counsel, such as the nature of the allegations, the child's level of placement, whether the child has siblings in other placements, the complexity of the issues, and whether the matter is hotly contested. Instead, for the court to find the child would not benefit from the appointment of counsel, the rule requires the court to first find the child understands the nature of the proceedings and is able to communicate and advocate effectively with the court, counsel, the social worker, and other parties and professionals involved in the case [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.660(b)(1)]. This is highly relevant to a determination of whether the child can knowingly and intelligently waive counsel, a requirement not imposed by the statute, but is significantly less relevant or even not relevant to a determination of whether the appointment of counsel would or would not benefit the child. Thus, this requirement appears inconsistent with the statute and may be invalid [Welf. & Inst. Code § 265].

The rule also requires the court to find the child would not receive "any benefit" from representation by counsel before the court can find the child would not benefit from the appointment of counsel [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.660(b)(1)(C)]. This goes beyond the requirement of the statute; too far beyond. The fact the child may gain some incidental benefit from the representation of counsel does not mean the child would or would not benefit from the appointment of counsel within the meaning of the statute [see In re Autumn H. (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 567, 575, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 535 (observation in context of the beneficial relationship exception to adoption that interaction between a child and birth parent will always confer some "incidental benefit," but that this is not enough in terms of that exception)]. If incidental benefit was enough to preclude a finding the child would not benefit from the appointment of counsel, the statute's requirement that the court determine the issue would be meaningless, since the court could always find some incidental or imagined benefit from the appointment of counsel for the child. This portion of the rule may also be invalid as inconsistent with the law [Welf. & Inst. Code § 265]. Thus, the rule of court hinders, rather than helps the juvenile court make the determination required by Welf. & Inst. Code § 317(c).

Legitimate argument can be made that in many dependency cases the benefit a child receives from the appointment of counsel is not significant, particularly with regard to infants, since in the majority of cases social services agencies do their jobs well and the child's interests are indeed served. This argument may be strengthened if children's counsel in a particular county are often ineffective due to incompetence, high caseloads, or role confusion [see Green & Dohrn, Foreword: Children and the Ethical Practice of Law, 64 Fordham L. Rev. 1281, 1286-1287 (1996), discussing how the quality of legal representation for children varies widely and is often inadequate]. But to find the child will not gain at least some cognizable benefit from the appointment of counsel will be difficult. Thus, the change in the statute creates a presumption for the appointment of counsel for all children brought into the dependency system that is unlikely to be challenged. Indeed, the California Supreme Court has recognized the law now presumes the child will benefit from the appointment of counsel and hence courts must be "very cautious" in finding there would be no benefit [In re Celine R. (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 45, 61, fn. 3, 1 Cal. Rptr. 3d 432, 71 P.3d 787] .

For discussion of court-appointed special advocates (CASA), see § 328.64.

For discussion of the change in the law effective July 1, 2001, regarding the appointment of guardians ad litem for children in dependency proceedings, see § 328.66.

[b] Who Should Be Appointed and the Need for Separate Counsel

[i] Conflict of Interest May Bar Joint Representation

There is substantial controversy both within California and nationwide as to who should be appointed as the attorney for the child in those cases where counsel is appointed and what the role of that attorney should be, and reasonable, experienced, competent minds can differ. In regards to the appointment of counsel, the most controversial question often is whether the attorney for the social services agency may also be the attorney for the child. At a special conference conducted in 1995 at the Fordham University School of Law on the legal representation of children, a consensus was reached by the participants--lawyers "should not jointly represent a child and a government agency in any case" [Special Issue: Ethical Issues in the Legal Representation of Children, 64 Fordham L. Rev. 1295, 1384 (1996)]. But the lack of participation by agency attorneys in this forum places its conclusions regarding this issue in question [see Special Issue: Ethical Issues in the Legal Representation of Children, 64 Fordham L. Rev. 1395-1397 (1996) (listing participants)]. Nevertheless, many of the reasons expressed for the belief that a child and a social services agency should not be represented by the same attorney have at least some validity [see also Walter, Averting Revictimization of Children: State Funding Needed for Independent Counsel Representing Children in Juvenile Court, 1 J. Center Children & Cts. 45 (1999)].

The joint representation issue is far from settled. Both practitioners and policy makers often disagree on this very important yet emotional topic. California, however, has taken a significant step in eliminating this controversy through a statutory amendment. Former Welf. & Inst. Code § 317(c) provided that counsel for the child could be a "county counsel, district attorney, public defender, or other member of the bar." The only absolute limitation on the juvenile court's discretion on the appointment of counsel was that appointed counsel for the child could not also represent another party or county agency whose interests conflicted with the child. A court could even adopt a local policy which provided that all or most representation for children in dependency proceedings come from one of the four eligible categories [Los Angeles County Dep't of Children & Family Servs. v. Superior Court (1996) 51 Cal. App. 4th 1257, 1267, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 613] . Effective January 1, 2001, however, the statute changed.

The statute now provides counsel for the child "may be a district attorney, public defender, or other member of the bar, provided that the counsel does not represent another party or county agency whose interests conflict with the child's" [Welf. & Inst. Code § 317(c) (Stats. 2000, ch. 450, § 1)]. County counsels are, of course, members of the bar. Further, while opinions differ widely as to actual percentages, in most dependency cases the interests of the social services agency do not conflict with those of the child. Thus, on its face, the plain language of the statute still provides the juvenile court with discretion in an appropriate case to appoint the same county attorney for the child as for the social services agency. But the Legislature's act of deleting "county counsel" from the list of specifically delineated possible attorneys for the child cannot be seen to be an idle act. Many would argue the intent of the amendment was to eliminate the ability of the juvenile court to appoint county counsel on behalf of the child entirely, and the legislative history may support that argument. But if the Legislature had intended to completely eliminate that possibility it knows how to do that [In re Chantal S. (1996) 13 Cal. 4th 196, 206-207, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 866, 913 P.2d 1075 (if legislature wanted to include a specific term or requirement, it knows how to do that)]. The plain language of the statutory amendment suggests a different interpretation. That interpretation is that while the court may retain discretion to appoint county counsel on behalf of both the child and the social services agency in an appropriate case in which the agency's interests do not conflict with those of the child, that should not be the norm. Instead, in most instances the attorney for the child should not be county counsel, but should instead be the district attorney, public defender, or some member of the bar other than county counsel. This gives meaning to the Legislature's act of deleting the specification of "county counsel" from the statute. It also gives meaning to the decision of the Legislature to leave in the language the child's counsel may not represent another county agency whose interests conflict with the child's, since such counsel could normally only be county counsel. This interpretation is consistent with the practice in most California counties and with the growing national trend toward the use of separate counsel for children. It also leaves the juvenile court some limited discretion to use county counsel for this purpose in an appropriate case. How counties and courts will interpret and implement the statutory change in the law remains to be seen. Nevertheless, this is a significant step in the representation of children in California dependency cases and should be viewed positively.

Case law indicates that an actual rather than a potential conflict of interest is required before the court must appoint separate counsel [In re Richard H. (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 1351, 1367-1369, 285 Cal. Rptr. 917 (county counsel permitted to represent both the social services department and the child absent actual conflict); see also In re Candida S. (1992) 7 Cal. App. 4th 1240, 1251-1254, 9 Cal. Rptr. 2d 521 (separate counsel for each child not required absent actual conflict); Castro v. Los Angeles County Bd. of Supervisors (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 1432, 1439-1445, 284 Cal. Rptr. 154 (no conflict of interest between attorneys operating within separate groups in single nonprofit corporation, even though they could represent up to three parties in one dependency proceeding) but see In re Elizabeth M. (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 553, 565-566, 283 Cal. Rptr. 483 (using the fact that there was a potential conflict of interest among the children in the case as the starting point for its discussion)]. While one court characterized these decisions as interpreting former Welf. & Inst. Code § 317 to "permit" appointment of separate counsel at the trial court level only if an actual conflict existed between the agency and the child [In re Mary C. (1995) 41 Cal. App. 4th 71, 75, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 346] , a more accurate description would be that these decisions and former Welf. & Inst. Code § 317 only required the appointment of separate counsel for the child where there was an actual conflict of interest. This was not the same as saying the court did not have discretion to appoint separate counsel where it deemed such appointment appropriate either due to a potential conflict of interest or a determination the child's best interest so required [Los Angeles County Dep't of Children & Family Servs. v. Superior Court (1996) 51 Cal. App. 4th 1257, 1262-1264, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 613 (court has discretion to appoint private counsel for child despite absence of conflict); cf. In re Mary C. (1995) 41 Cal. App. 4th 71, 79, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 346 (child entitled to separate counsel on appeal when best interest of the child requires such appointment)]. The amendments to Welf. & Inst. Code § 317(c) effective January 1, 2001, make it clear the court not only has discretion to appoint separate counsel for the child, in most cases that is what it should do [Welf. & Inst. Code § 317(c) (Stats. 2000, ch. 450, § 1)].

The law is clear that where there is an actual conflict of interest between the child and the agency, the same attorney cannot represent both. The court also has discretion to appoint separate counsel for the child, and will in most cases do so. The legal issue remains, however, whether a potential conflict of interest is sufficient to mandate the appointment of separate counsel. Since 1995 children who are the subject of dependency proceedings are also parties to the action [Welf. & Inst. Code § 317.5(b)], a significant change in the law. Some already considered the child a party, but many others correctly recognized the child was the subject of the proceedings and was afforded many special rights and protections while not an actual party to the action. The enactment of Welf. & Inst. Code § 317.5(b) made it clear the child is now both the subject of the proceedings and a party to it. The majority of those cases which held there needed to be an actual, rather than just a potential, conflict of interest between the agency and the child before the court was required to appoint separate counsel were decided prior to this change in the law. The impact of this change in the child's status should not be underestimated. The fact the child is now a party to the action triggers the requirements of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310(C). That rule, amended in 1992 to deal with potential conflicts of interest, now provides in pertinent part that: "A member shall not, without the informed written consent of each client: (1) Accept representation of more than one client in a matter in which the interests of the clients potentially conflict? ... " [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310(C)]. A potential conflict of interest has been defined by one court as a "reasonable likelihood an actual conflict will arise" [Carroll v. Superior Court (2002) 101 Cal. App. 4th 1423, 1430, 124 Cal. Rptr. 2d 891] . The California Supreme Court has agreed with this interpretation in dependency proceedings [In re Celine R. (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 45, 58, fn. 3, 1 Cal. Rptr. 3d 432, 71 P.3d 787] . Obviously, an informed written consent cannot be obtained from a young child [In re Mary C. (1995) 41 Cal. App. 4th 71, 76, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 346] , and is unlikely to be obtained from most dependent children or accepted by a juvenile court. Thus, when the court appoints counsel for the child, that counsel must be separate counsel if the court determines based on the facts of the case there is a reasonable likelihood an actual conflict will arise [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310(C)(1); Carroll v. Superior Court (2002) 101 Cal. App. 4th 1423, 1430, 124 Cal. Rptr. 2d 891 ; In re Celine R. (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 45, 58, fn. 3, 1 Cal. Rptr. 3d 432, 71 P.3d 787] .

Nevertheless, under current law and practice in California, it will be the rare case in which the court even considers having counsel for the agency also represent the child. Thus, it is unlikely the court will ever need to consider whether there is a reasonable likelihood of an actual conflict in such representation.

[ii] Conflicts Between Siblings

[A] In General

Courts have not been consistent regarding when to provide different counsel for children within sibling groups. While conflicts do arise between siblings, it is not reasonable to argue there is always the potential for a conflict of interest if each individual child does not have separate and independent counsel. As noted by one respected author, "Representing siblings does not per se create a conflict of interest" [Haralambie, The Child's Attorney: A Guide to Representing Children in Custody, Adoption, and Protection Cases (ABA 1993) p. 37]. Indeed, it has been noted that in the representation of siblings in dependency cases, "More often than not, the attorney will not encounter an actual conflict of interest during the course of the representation" [Wu, Conflicts of Interest in the Representation of Children in Dependency Cases, 64 Fordham L. Rev. 1857, 1862 (1996)].

The "appointment of separate counsel for each sibling at the commencement of the dependency proceeding would in most cases result in an unnecessary duplication of effort and resources" [Carroll v. Superior Court (2002) 101 Cal. App. 4th 1423, 1429, 124 Cal. Rptr. 2d 891] . As noted by the California Supreme Court, "If each child had separate counsel, matters could become unwieldy, especially when there are several children; so many attorneys could interfere with the need to resolve dependency questions expeditiously as well as fairly" [In re Celine R. (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 45, 55, 1 Cal. Rptr. 3d 432, 71 P.3d 787] . The Supreme Court went on to note that having separate counsel for every child could create scheduling difficulties, drain scarce public resources, and "unnecessarily make siblings feel they are adversaries, which could harm their ability to provide mutual emotional support" [In re Celine R. (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 45, 56, 1 Cal. Rptr. 3d 432, 71 P.3d 787] . The Court pointed out that having a single attorney for a sibling group can allow the children to meet with their attorney together rather than separately, which can also be beneficial to the children. "Children's interests are not always adversarial, and they should not always be treated as such" [In re Celine R. (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 45, 56, 1 Cal. Rptr. 3d 432, 71 P.3d 787] . Nevertheless, "it is essential for counsel to continually assess conflicts questions" [Patton, Legal Ethics in Child Custody and Dependency Proceedings: A Guide for Judges and Lawyers (Cambridge 2006) p. 7]. When actual conflicts between siblings arise, separate counsel must be appointed for each child unless the conflict can be resolved through other measures [Haralambie, The Child's Attorney: A Guide to Representing Children in Custody, Adoption, and Protection Cases (ABA 1993) p. 38].

While conflicts between siblings may arise at any time during the dependency process, it is at the Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26 hearing that most sibling conflict issues are being raised. This is especially true where significant age differences exist between the siblings, since "the greater the age gap between the siblings, the higher the risk for a conflict of interest" [Patton, Legal Ethics in Child Custody and Dependency Proceedings: A Guide for Judges and Lawyers (Cambridge 2006) p. 10]. This is because of the substantial interference with a sibling relationship exception to adoption found in Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26(c)(1)(B)(v). In one case, seven siblings were before the juvenile court for a hearing to select and implement a permanent plan. Social services was recommending the termination of parental rights and adoption for the three youngest children who were not yet in an adoptive home, legal guardianship for three oldest children who were in a home willing to accept legal guardianship, and a continuance to determine the likelihood of adoption of the seventh child if parental rights were terminated. Some of the children had expressed a desire to maintain sibling relationships. Their counsel asked to be relieved due to the conflicts presented, but the juvenile court denied that request [Carroll v. Superior Court (2002) 101 Cal. App. 4th 1423, 1425-1427, 124 Cal. Rptr. 2d 891] . The children's counsel filed a traditional petition for extraordinary writ relief, which the Court of Appeal granted, finding there was an actual conflict of interest that mandated counsel be relieved [Carroll v. Superior Court (2002) 101 Cal. App. 4th 1423, 1427-1428, 124 Cal. Rptr. 2d 891] . In reaching this decision, the Court of Appeal took no position as to whether a sibling had standing to seek to prevent the termination of parental rights to other siblings, but recognized counsel needed to be free of conflicting loyalties so the argument for standing could be raised [Carroll v. Superior Court (2002) 101 Cal. App. 4th 1423, 1428, fn. 5, 124 Cal. Rptr. 2d 891] . It should be noted the Supreme Court has pointed out that counsel who believe the juvenile court has erred legally in requiring the representation of more than one child should not seek extraordinary writ or appellate relief unless the attorney believes doing so is in the children's best interest. As is clear throughout the dependency process, any delay in dependency proceedings and the finality of decisions can cause harm to children [In re Celine R. (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 45, 60, 1 Cal. Rptr. 3d 432, 71 P.3d 787] .

In Carroll the court found an actual conflict of interest existed mandating counsel be relieved. Thus, the questions of whether the juvenile court could have or should have relieved existing counsel based on a potential conflict of interest between some of the children or based on the children's best interest was not reached [cf. Los Angeles County Dep't of Children & Family Servs. v. Superior Court (1996) 51 Cal. App. 4th 1257, 1262-1264, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 613 ; In re Mary C. (1995) 41 Cal. App. 4th 71, 79, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 346] . These are questions that will need to be addressed in future decisions on this topic.

The Carroll case did address, however, the question of whether new counsel could accept representation of a sibling group if there exists a potential conflict of interest. The court recognized that Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310(C) does not permit counsel to accept new representation of multiple clients when there is a potential conflict of interest without the informed written consent of each client. It noted a "degree of tension" between that prohibition and Welf. & Inst. Code § 317(c), which "seems to contemplate an actual conflict" before separate counsel must be appointed [Carroll v. Superior Court (2002) 101 Cal. App. 4th 1423, 1429, 124 Cal. Rptr. 2d 891] . It resolved that conflict by creating a new interpretation of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310. It determined that in the dependency context a "potential conflict" means there is "a reasonable likelihood an actual conflict will arise." In this way it sought to "reconcile the importance of independent representation with the practicality of not overburdening the dependency system when unnecessary" [Carroll v. Superior Court (2002) 101 Cal. App. 4th 1423, 1430, 124 Cal. Rptr. 2d 891] . How juvenile courts should go about determining whether there is a reasonable likelihood an actual conflict will arise in the future representation of siblings "is not an easy or simple task" [Carroll v. Superior Court (2002) 101 Cal. App. 4th 1423, 1430, 124 Cal. Rptr. 2d 891] .

The Carroll decision and its new interpretation of "potential conflict" for counsel being appointed in dependency proceedings received quick approval from the California Supreme Court. In the case of In re Celine R. (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 45, 1 Cal. Rptr. 3d 432, 71 P.3d 787 , the Supreme Court examined the Carroll analysis and held "the Carroll court appropriately reconciled section 317 and rule 3-310, as well as the sometimes contradictory needs to assure that everyone is properly represented but not to overburden the dependency system or unnecessarily suggest that siblings are adversaries" [In re Celine R. (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 45, 58, 1 Cal. Rptr. 3d 432, 71 P.3d 787] . It held the juvenile court may generally appoint a single attorney to represent a sibling group, despite the potential for conflict that exists in all multisibling dependency cases. The juvenile court would only have to appoint separate attorneys at the outset of a case if there is an actual conflict among the siblings or if circumstances specific to the case present a reasonable likelihood an actual conflict will arise later in the case. If such likelihood exists, "the court should appoint separate counsel at the outset rather than await an actual conflict and the possible disruption a later reappointment may cause" [In re Celine R. (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 45, 58, 1 Cal. Rptr. 3d 432, 71 P.3d 787] . If a single counsel is appointed for siblings, the juvenile court "will have to relieve counsel from multiple representation if, but only if, an actual conflict arises" [In re Celine R. (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 45, 58, 1 Cal. Rptr. 3d 432, 71 P.3d 787] .

[B] Rule for Sibling Conflicts

Effective January 1, 2006, the Rules of Court have incorporated much of what was determined by the courts in the cases of In re Celine R. (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 45, 1 Cal. Rptr. 3d 432, 71 P.3d 787 , and Carroll v. Superior Court (2002) 101 Cal. App. 4th 1423, 1430, 124 Cal. Rptr. 2d 891 [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.660(c)]. The rule specifically provides the court may appoint a single attorney to represent a sibling group, but the attorney must decline appointment for one or more of the siblings and the court must appoint separate counsel to represent the sibling or siblings, if at the time of appointment an actual conflict of interest exists among the siblings or circumstances specific to the case indicate a reasonable likelihood an actual conflict will develop [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.660(c)(1)]. Significantly, the rule provides the fact the siblings are different ages, have different parents, there is a theoretical or abstract conflict among the siblings, some of the siblings are more likely to be adopted than others, or that the siblings may have different permanent plans, does not, standing alone, necessarily demonstrate an actual conflict of interest or a reasonable likelihood that an actual conflict will arise [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.660(c)(1)(C)]. The rule also deals with when and how an attorney should withdraw from the representation of a sibling group [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.660(c)(2)]. In all cases involving siblings and sibling representation, the court, the children's attorney or attorneys, and all parties and their counsel should look to the provisions of this rule for guidance in deciding legal representation for the children. [see also Patton, Legal Ethics in Child Custody and Dependency Proceedings: A Guide for Judges and Lawyers (Cambridge 2006)].

[iii] Standing to Raise Conflict Issues

The courts have not been consistent regarding who has standing to raise the question of whether children need separate counsel from each other. This issue will occur more frequently as courts and agencies begin to implement the many new provisions regarding sibling togetherness and visitation, and face the increasing potential for conflict between siblings [see Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 306.5, 361.2(i), 362.1, 388(b), 366.26(c)(1)(B)(v), 16002(b)]. At the trial court level the question of standing is less significant, since the court has the duty to examine whether children need separate counsel regardless of who raises the issue, or even if no one raises the issue [Welf. & Inst. Code § 317(c)]. On appeal, however, a person must have standing to raise the question of whether children represented by the same counsel at the trial level should have had separate counsel. As noted in one case on the issue, "Standing to appeal is jurisdictional" [In re Frank L. (2000) 81 Cal. App. 4th 700, 703, 97 Cal. Rptr. 2d 88] .

The Frank L. decision is instructive, since it does not assume standing exists for a parent to raise this issue on appeal, but instead looks to prior decisions for both the law and distinguishing facts. It notes the interests of siblings or other relatives in their relationship with a child is separate from that of the parent, and thus the parent lacks standing to raise such issues because the parent is not an "aggrieved party" [In re Frank L. (2000) 81 Cal. App. 4th 700, 703, 97 Cal. Rptr. 2d 88 , citing In re Devin M. (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 1538, 1541, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 666 , In re Nachelle S. (1996) 41 Cal. App. 4th 1557, 1561, 49 Cal. Rptr. 2d 200 , and In re Gary P. (1995) 40 Cal. App. 4th 875, 877, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 929] . It also distinguishes several of the cases frequently relied on to allow parents to raise issues regarding their children's counsel on appeal [In re Frank L. (2000) 81 Cal. App. 4th 700, 703, 97 Cal. Rptr. 2d 88 , distinguishing In re Patricia E. (1985) 174 Cal. App. 3d 1, 219 Cal. Rptr. 783 , In re Elizabeth M. (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 553, 283 Cal. Rptr. 483 , In re James S. (1991) 227 Cal. App. 3d 930, 278 Cal. Rptr. 295 , and In re Ann S. (1982) 137 Cal. App. 3d 148, 188 Cal. Rptr. 1] .

The Frank L. court held the mother lacked standing on appeal to assert the issue that Frank's counsel at the trial court level was ineffective due to a conflict between the siblings [In re Frank L. (2000) 81 Cal. App. 4th 700, 702-704, 97 Cal. Rptr. 2d 88 ; but see In re Cliffton B. (2000) 81 Cal. App. 4th 415, 427, fn. 6, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 778 , citing In re Elizabeth M. (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 553, 565, 283 Cal. Rptr. 483 without analysis for proposition parent has standing to raise this issue]. In this and related areas, the interests of the parent and the dependent child do not always intertwine. Instead, as our law has progressed it has recognized that children have separate rights and interests that may differ from those of the parent, particularly once reunification efforts have been denied or terminated.

For discussion of children's right to a safe, stable, permanent home, see § 328.62[2].

For discussion of sibling placement and visitation issues, see § 328.129[7].

For discussion of ineffective assistance of counsel claims, see § 328.193.

[iv] When District Attorney Represents Child

The involvement of district attorneys in dependency cases is not common in California. In other states prosecuting attorneys are often involved in dependency proceedings, "prosecuting" the action on behalf of the state or the social services agency [see Scahill, Prosecuting Attorneys in Dependency Proceedings in Juvenile Court: Defining and Assessing a Critical Role in Child Abuse and Neglect Cases, 1 J. Center Children & Cts. 73 (1999)]. In the few California counties in which the district attorney is involved in dependency proceedings, it is usually to represent the child [Welf. & Inst. Code § 317(c)]. The fact that the district attorney represents the child in a proceeding pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 300, as well as conducts a criminal investigation or files a criminal complaint or information arising from the same or reasonably related set of facts as the proceeding pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 300, is not in and of itself a conflict of interest [Welf. & Inst. Code § 317(c)].

If criminal charges related to a dependency petition under Welf. & Inst. Code § 300(a), (b), or (d), are pending against the parent, guardian, or person in whose care or custody the child resides, or against a member of the household, for unlawful acts committed against the child, the district attorney must, with the consent or at the request of the juvenile court judge, represent the child in the interest of the state at the juvenile court proceeding, according to the terms and conditions set forth by the judge of the juvenile court [Welf. & Inst. Code § 681].

A district attorney who represents a child in a dependency proceeding must not appear on behalf of the state in any juvenile court hearing based on a petition that alleges that the same child is a person within the delinquency statute [Welf. & Inst. Code § 318; see Welf. & Inst. Code § 602 (delinquent children)]. Moreover, the district attorney's records kept in the course of representing the child are confidential. They must be held separately and must not be inspected by members of the district attorney's office not directly involved in representing the child. A district attorney who represents or who has represented a child in a dependency proceeding must not discuss the substance of the case with a district attorney representing the people in a delinquency proceeding for the same child [Welf. & Inst. Code § 318].

[c] Rights and Duties of Appointed Counsel for Child

[i] Overview

As stated in one respected treatise, "Lawyers have represented children in child-protective proceedings for almost twenty-five years without a consensus in either the law, the ethical rules, or the scholarly literature about their role for children" [Peters, Representing Children in Child Protective Proceedings: Ethical and Practical Dimensions, 2d ed. Section 2-3(a) (LexisNexis 2001)]. Nevertheless, in California some things are clear. The counsel for the child is charged in general with the representation of the child's legal interests. To that end, counsel must make such further investigations as he or she deems necessary to ascertain the facts, including the interviewing of witnesses, and he or she must examine and cross examine witnesses in both the adjudicatory and dispositional hearings. Counsel may also introduce and examine his or her own witnesses, make recommendations to the court concerning the child's welfare, and participate further in the proceedings to the degree necessary to adequately represent the child's legal interests. In any case in which the child is four years of age or older, counsel must interview the child to determine the child's wishes and to assess the child's well-being [Welf. & Inst. Code § 317(e); In re Robert A. (1992) 4 Cal. App. 4th 174, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 438] . A primary responsibility of any counsel appointed to represent a child in dependency proceedings "shall be to advocate for the protection, safety, and physical and emotional well-being of the child" [Welf. & Inst. Code § 317(c)].

Counsel for the child "shall not" advocate for return of the child to a parent if, to the best of the attorney's knowledge, "that return conflicts with the protection and safety of the child" [Welf. & Inst. Code § 317(e)].

Effective January 1, 1999, Welf. & Inst. Code § 317(e) was amended to provide the following clarification: "The attorney representing a child in a dependency proceeding is not required to assume the responsibilities of a social worker and is not expected to provide nonlegal services to the child" [Welf. & Inst. Code § 317(e)]. Some may view this as a restriction on the role of the child's attorney. It is not. It has never been the role of the child's attorney to assume the responsibilities of a social worker. Indeed, it is the rare attorney for children who is qualified to do social work. Further, although the nature of representing children virtually ensures the attorney will do some things with his or her client outside the normal realm of legal representation, such as coloring or playing games to build rapport, it has never been the role of the child's attorney to provide nonlegal services to the child. Thus, this clarification in the law merely recognizes that although many children's attorneys have received additional training or experience, counsel for children are rarely experts in the wide variety of social, psychological and developmental issues that concern their child clients or are skilled in the delivery of nonlegal services. Instead, their expertise is in representing a child's legal interests in the proceedings brought in the juvenile court. To that end, counsel for the child should also consult and work with the experts and professionals, including social workers, who are assessing the child's needs and providing services to the child outside of the courtroom. By focusing his or her efforts on the legal representation of the child, the child's attorney is fulfilling the role of counsel the law envisions and the child needs.

For additional discussion on the role and duties of counsel appointed to represent the child in dependency proceedings, see Michael J. Dale, Representing Children in Dependency Proceedings, in Dale et al., Representing The Child Client, Ch. 4 (Matthew Bender); Patton, Legal Ethics in Child Custody and Dependency Proceedings: A Guide for Judges and Lawyers (Cambridge 2006) pp. 28-35; Duquette, et. al., Representing Children And Youth, in Child Welfare Law and Practice: Representing Children, Parents, and State Agencies in Abuse, Neglect, and Dependency Cases (Bradford Pub. 2005) ch. 21, pp. 493-544. See also Standards of Practice for Lawyers Who Represent Children in Abuse and Neglect Cases (ABA [NACC Revised] 1999).

In representing a child for whom a dependency petition has been filed it is important the attorney have contact with the child and the child's caregivers. As soon as possible after receiving information from the social services agency regarding where the child is placed, the child's counsel must provide the caregiver with the attorney's contact information. If the child is 10 years of age or older, the attorney must also provide the child with his or her contact information. The attorney may also provide a child under the age of 10 years with the attorney's contact information [Welf. & Inst. Code § 16010.6(b); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.660(d)(5)].

[ii] Representing Best Interest Versus Stated Interest

[A] The Best Interest Versus Stated Interest Controversy

Substantial controversy extends beyond the question of who should represent the child to the question of how an attorney should represent the child if he or she is appointed to that role. Regardless of whether the child's appointed counsel is a government or private attorney, the question is whether the attorney should represent the child's best interest, the child's stated interest, or something in between. Alternatively, the question is whether the child's attorney should serve in the traditional role of an attorney, as a guardian ad litem, or as a hybrid of both [see, e.g., Buss, "You're My What?" The Problem of Children's Misperceptions of Their Lawyers' Roles, 64 Fordham L. Rev. 1699, 1700-1706 (1996); see also Patton, Searching for the Proper Role of Children's Counsel in California Dependency Cases, 1 J. Center Children & Cts. 21 (1999)]. Some question whether examining the issue as one of "best interest versus stated interest" continues to be a valid and constructive method of examination [see Peters, Representing Children in Child Protective Proceedings: Ethical and Practical Dimensions 2d ed. § 2-3(e)(2) (LexisNexis 2001)]. But most still consider the issue in this way.

Philosophically, the national trend appears to be that the attorney for the child should represent the child much as he or she would any other client, and to that end the child's attorney should advocate for the position stated by the child if the child is mature enough to voice one. This view recognizes that lawyers for children are often given too much discretion in determining what is in a child's best interests and that attorneys are not well suited to the role of determining what this is. If children are to have rights, then under this view their right to an attorney should include the right to have that attorney assert their stated position [see, e.g., Recommendations of the Conference on Ethical Issues in the Legal Representation of Children, 64 Fordham L. Rev. 1301 (1996); Elrod, An Analysis of the Proposed Standards of Practice for Lawyers Representing Children in Abuse and Neglect Cases, 64 Fordham L. Rev. 1999 (1996); Haralambie, Response to the Working Group on Determining the Best Interest of the Child, 64 Fordham L. Rev. 2013 (1996)].

This is the position taken by the American Bar Association. In its Standards of Practice for Lawyers Who Represent Children in Abuse and Neglect Cases, adopted in February 1996, the ABA defines a child's attorney as "a lawyer who provides legal services for a child and who owes the same duties of undivided loyalty, confidentiality, and competent representation to the child as is due an adult client." In commenting on this definition, the ABA states that "These Standards explicitly recognize the child is a separate individual with potentially discrete and independent views. To ensure the child's independent voice is heard, the child's attorney must advocate the child's articulated position" [Proposed Standards of Practice for Lawyers Who Represent Children in Abuse and Neglect Cases, 29 Fam. L.Q. 375, 376 (1995); see also Elrod, An Analysis of the Proposed Standards of Practice for Lawyers Representing Children in Abuse and Neglect Cases, 64 Fordham L. Rev. 1999, 2000-2004 (1996)]. The ABA recognized there may be cases where the attorney for the child believes the stated desire of the child would be "seriously injurious" to the child and provided in its standards that in such circumstances the attorney should ask the court for the appointment of a guardian ad litem. Thereafter the guardian ad litem should advocate for what is best for the child and the attorney should continue to advocate for what the child desires [Proposed Standards of Practice for Lawyers Who Represent Children in Abuse and Neglect Cases, 29 Fam. L.Q. 375, 382 (1995)].

The ABA position is consistent with the idea under California law that in a dependency case a child should have someone representing his or her best interest [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 280 (social worker required to be present in court to represent the interests of the child), 326.5 (requirement for a guardian ad litem)] and someone representing his or her legal interest [In re Robert A. (1992) 4 Cal. App. 4th 174, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 438 (role of child's attorney)]. But California has also held that a child's attorney is not bound by a child's desires and may advocate for a position different from what the child wants if the attorney determines that it is best for the child to do so [In re Mary M. (1986) 180 Cal. App. 3d 1058, 1066, 226 Cal. Rptr. 5 ; In re David C. (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 1189, 1207-1208, 200 Cal. Rptr. 115] . Further, since July 1, 2001, many California counties have started using the child's attorney in the additional and sometimes conflicting role of the child's guardian ad litem [see Welf. & Inst. Code § 326.5]. Thus California, like the rest of the nation, has struggled with this issue and is not yet clear regarding the role of the child's attorney.

Recent California legislation attempted to resolve this issue in a manner very different from that adopted by the American Bar Association. Effective January 1, 1997, the child's attorney in a dependency action has as a "primary responsibility" the obligation to "advocate for the protection, safety, and physical and emotional well-being" of the child [Welf. & Inst. Code § 317(c)]. While appointed counsel is required to advise the court of the child's wishes, he or she "shall not" advocate for return of the child to the parents if, "to the best of his or her knowledge, that return conflicts with the protection and safety" of the child [Welf. & Inst. Code § 317(e)]. Other recent California legislation has made it likely some counties will use the child's attorney to also serve as the child's guardian ad litem [see Welf. & Inst. Code § 326.5]. Indeed, the rule of court finally adopted to address this issue indicates the child's attorney "will serve" as the child's guardian ad litem under Welf. & Inst. Code § 326.5 [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.662(c)]. Clearly placing the attorney for the child in a role that is far more guardian ad litem or hybrid than strictly attorney, California's recent changes are philosophically contrary to a growing national consensus.

Nevertheless, California's hybrid approach has essentially been upheld by one appellate court. In that case the child's attorney had put her teenaged client on the witness stand and questioned her about her recantation of the molest allegations. In closing argument the attorney informed the court what the child's stated desire was, but also pointed out her duty to argue what was best and that the attorney disagreed with the child's recantation and desire to go home. The appellate court found the attorney was not ineffective because she "performed her duties under Welf. & Inst. Code, § 317, zealously and effectively by conducting a factual investigation and advocating a position, supported by the evidence, which served to protect the child's welfare" [In re Kristen B. (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 1535, 1542, 78 Cal. Rptr. 3d 495] . Nor was the attorney's decision to call the child as a witness and to question her about her recantation a violation of the attorney's duty of loyalty. The child was a willing witness and the child's wishes are always relevant. As such, the court found "the decision to allow Kristen to testify was within the wide range of competent representation and entirely consistent with the duty of minor's counsel to carefully balance the wishes of Kristen--an articulate teenager--with her need for safety" [In re Kristen B. (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 1535, 1542, 78 Cal. Rptr. 3d 495] .

Many will argue, as the California Legislature and the Kristen B. court obviously agreed, that these changes are necessary to ensure the safety and protection of dependent children. Several practical realities lend support for this position. The first is that the juvenile court often does not know whether counsel for the child is actually arguing what the attorney believes is in the child's best interest or what the child has indicated is his or her desire. Thus a court can believe a child's attorney is arguing for the child's best interest when the attorney is actually arguing what the child desires. Moreover, the court may believe that the child's attorney is advising the court of the full circumstances of the case when the attorney is actually editing the facts to serve his or her argument [Larsen, Does the Child's Lawyer Owe "The Whole Truth" To the Court in Neglect-Abuse Cases?, 47(2) Juv. & Fam. Ct. J., 49 (1996)]. Also true, the quality of legal representation for children, whether by agency attorneys or separate counsel, varies greatly and in many cases is woefully inadequate [see Green & Dohrn, Foreword: Children and the Ethical Practice of Law, 64 Fordham L. Rev. 1281, 1286-1287 (1996)]. Finally, the juvenile court's decision-making should be an independent determination based on the facts of the case and statutory and case law requirements, not just a deferral to the position of the child's attorney, social worker or therapist [Haralambie, Response to the Working Group on Determining the Best Interest of the Child, 64 Fordham L. Rev. 2013, 2017 (1996)]. Nevertheless, courts tend to give the position argued by the child's attorney great weight, sometimes far more than may be appropriate [see In re Eric H. (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 955, 967, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 230 (in light of responsibilities of child's counsel "it is unlikely that additional evidence from a parent is necessary to promote the welfare of the child"); Green & Dohrn, Foreword: Children and the Ethical Practice of Law, 64 Fordham L. Rev. 1281, 1286 (1996) ("Thus, children's lawyers have a great capacity to influence judges--for good or bad."); Guggenheim, A Paradigm For Determining the Role of Counsel for Children, 64 Fordham L. Rev. 1399, 1430 (1996) ("In the real world, judges rely on the advocacy of a child's lawyer.")]. Every one of these arguments supports the new restrictions of Welf. & Inst. Code § 317 for children's attorneys.

The issue is not one-sided, however. Many rightly contend the requirements of Welf. & Inst. Code § 317 further blur the boundaries between social workers and attorneys. Others validly argue the new requirements place counsel for the child in an ethical and professional dilemma if the child is mature enough to voice a position, the position voiced is that he or she wishes to go home, and the attorney believes that may not be safe for the child. The new statutory limitations on what the child's attorney can advocate necessarily impact the independence of children's counsel in such situations. California's new restrictions also assume, perhaps incorrectly, that children's attorneys can accurately or even reasonably determine when return to a parent conflicts with the protection and safety of the child [see Recommendations of the Conference on Ethical Issues in the Legal Representation of Children, 64 Fordham L. Rev. 1301, 1309 (1996) ("Nothing about legal training or traditional legal roles qualifies lawyers to make decisions on behalf of their clients.")]. Further, the statutory restrictions appear to create at least the potential for conflict between Welf. & Inst. Code § 317(c), (e) and such other provisions of law as Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(e) (attorney shall maintain inviolate the confidences of the client), and the requirement that the attorney not assume a position which is inconsistent with the interest of the client [see, e.g., Zador Corp. v. Kwan (1995) 31 Cal. App. 4th 1285, 1293, 37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 754] . Finally, at a time when the rights of children are being expanded, it denies the child the right to have his or her desires advocated for by legal counsel.

Answers do not come easily in response to the question of what the specific role of the child's attorney in dependency proceedings should be, and reasonable, experienced, competent minds can differ. California's venture into this area may prove to be a wise one--or it may not. What is clear, however, is that the requirement of Welf. & Inst. Code § 317 regarding the responsibility of the child's attorney not to advocate for anything which would endanger the child is certain to generate substantial controversy and to be tested at both the trial and appellate court levels. What is also clear is that if California is going to move in this direction changes must also be made in Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068 and the Rules of Professional Conduct to authorize the representation of children in a manner different from other clients. This area must be watched for future developments.

[B] Guidance for Children's Counsel

There is no one rule or statute that children's counsel can look to for guidance when deciding whether or how to argue for what the attorney believes is in the child's best interest when the child expresses a different stated desire. The following, however, are some general guidelines that should be considered by children's counsel in such situations.

- This is not an easy area for children's attorneys, particularly when the child is an older child. Thus, children's attorneys must approach these cases carefully and creatively, respecting both the child's desires and the child's need for safety [Welf. & Inst. Code § 317(e); Peters, Representing Children in Child Protective Proceedings: Ethical and Practical Dimensions, pp. xx-xxi (LexisNexis, Int'l 3d ed., 2007)].

- Under California's hybrid model of children's representation in dependency cases the duty of loyalty and zealousness the attorney owes the child client is not limited to loyalty to the child's stated interest, even if the child is a teenager, but also includes loyalty to the child's safety and best interest [In re Kristen B. (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 1535, 1542, 78 Cal. Rptr. 3d 495 ; Wu, Conflicts of Interest in the Representation of Children in Dependency Cases (1996) 64 Fordham L. Rev. 1857, 1860-1862 (Attorney-Client Privilege--The Concept of Loyalty)].

- The older a child becomes and the better the child is developmentally able to formulate and express his or her desires, the greater the weight the attorney and guardian ad litem should give the child's stated interest in deciding what is in the child's best interest and whether the requirements of Welf. & Inst. Code § 317(e) mandate the attorney and guardian ad litem to take a position different from the child's stated interest in order to advocate for the child's safety [Haralambie, The Child's Attorney: A Guide to Representing Children in Custody, Adoption, and Protection Cases (ABA 1993) pp. 13-14; Ventrell & Duquette (eds.), Child Welfare Law and Practice: Representing Children, Parents, and State Agencies in Abuse, Neglect, and Dependency Cases (NACC 2005), The Child's Wishes Are Always Relevant, § 21A.7, pp. 511-512].

- Consistent with the duty to communicate with the client, the child's counsel should explain to the child before the hearing what position the attorney and guardian ad litem will take, unless the child is not old enough to understand. If that differs from the child's stated interest, the attorney and guardian ad litem should explain, to the extent appropriate based on the age and development of the child, why a different position must also be advocated, including the requirements of Welf. & Inst. Code § 317(e), and the role of the guardian ad litem. To the extent possible, the child should take part in the attorney's and guardian ad litem's decision-making process as to what is best for the child, separate from the child's own stated interest.

- The child's counsel and guardian ad litem must always ensure the court is informed of the child's stated interest [Welf. & Inst. Code § 317(e); Ventrell & Duquette, (eds.), Child Welfare Law and Practice: Representing Children, Parents, and State Agencies in Abuse, Neglect, and Dependency Cases (NACC 2005), The Child's Wishes Are Always Relevant, § 21A.7, pp. 511-512.)

- The child's counsel and guardian ad litem should always be very clear so that the court is well aware when the attorney and guardian ad litem believe there is a conflict between the child's stated interest and what the attorney and guardian ad litem believes is the child's safety and best interest [Larsen, Does the Child's Lawyer Owe "The Whole Truth" To the Court in Neglect-Abuse Cases? (1996) 47 Juv. & Fam. Ct. J. 49].

- Make a record of your investigation, your communications with your child client and the reasoning behind your determination that a position different from your client's stated interest was necessary to serve the child's safety and best interest. Should it later be alleged you provided ineffective assistance of counsel or otherwise violated your hybrid role as an attorney and guardian ad litem, that record may be important.

- Remember, each case and child is different, and the range of what competent children's counsel would do in a particular case is very broad. Exactly how to handle an individual case must be decided by the attorney and guardian ad litem only after proper investigation, communication with the client when the child is old enough to understand, consideration of relevant statutes, rules, and case law, and consultation with supervisors or other experts on child representation. There is no one right way to represent children.

[iii] Investigating Other Interests of the Child

In addition to their duties regarding the dependency case, counsel for the child must investigate the interests of the child beyond the scope of the juvenile proceeding and report to the court other interests of the child that may need to be protected by instituting other administrative or judicial proceedings. The court must take whatever appropriate action is necessary to fully protect the child's interests [Welf. & Inst. Code § 317(e)]. Some courts have gone so far as to appoint attorneys to pursue other actions on behalf of the child and to appoint guardians ad litem for children in other proceedings. The juvenile court has no jurisdiction to do this, since the juvenile court is a court of limited jurisdiction. The juvenile court also has no authority to pay such attorneys if it does appoint them to pursue matters outside of the dependency proceeding. What it can do is appoint a separate guardian ad litem to seek out counsel willing to take the case on a pro bono or contingency basis. The juvenile court can then arrange for that attorney to represent the child in the other proceedings on a pro bono or contingency fee basis, and recommend or nominate a guardian ad litem to be appointed by the court hearing the other action pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 372(a). Regardless of the practice utilized by the juvenile court, however, the court must take action to ensure the child's interests are protected [Welf. & Inst. Code § 317(e)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Working With the Local Bar Association. Some juvenile courts have worked with local bar associations to arrange for experienced civil litigators to do pro bono or contingency fee work for dependent children whose interests need protection in or through other proceedings. This is an excellent approach, since many dependency attorneys, including those representing children, are not experienced in civil litigation.

[iv] Concerning the Child's Privileged Communications

Many of the communications dependent children have with professionals involved in the investigation and diagnosis of child abuse, medical, developmental, or psychological evaluation of children, or the children's care, are not privileged communications. Some are, particularly those made during ongoing therapy. There has been much confusion as to the holder of the privilege for children's privileged communication with therapists, doctors, and members of the clergy. Effective January 1, 2001, either the child or the child's attorney may invoke the child's psychotherapist-client privilege, physician-patient privilege, and clergyman-penitent privilege [Welf. & Inst. Code § 317(f)]. The attorney for the child shall be the holder of these privileges if the juvenile court finds the child is not of sufficient age and maturity to make informed decisions regarding such privileged communications. If the court finds the child is of sufficient age and maturity to make such decisions, the child can invoke the privilege and the child's attorney cannot thereafter waive it. If counsel invokes the privilege, however, and the court finds the child is of sufficient age and maturity to make decisions in this regard, the child may thereafter waive the privilege [Welf. & Inst. Code § 317(f)].

The statute makes no provision for the child's guardian ad litem to be the holder of the privilege if the child is found by the court to not be of sufficient age and maturity to make decisions in this regard. This is not significant if the child's attorney serves as the child's guardian ad litem. If the child has a different guardian ad litem, however, as should frequently be the case with older children, it creates a situation in which the attorney, not the guardian ad litem, is making best interest determinations on behalf of the child. With young children, attorneys should usually waive privileges, since social workers, juvenile courts, and other professionals will need to know the content and tenor of these communications if children are to be protected and their best interests served. With older children, the issue is far more problematic, since children may be found by the court to be of sufficient age and maturity to make decisions in this area, yet choose to make decisions that do not serve their safety or best interests. How these decisions should be made by counsel and the courts, and what factors should be looked to, are not set forth in the statute. Case law, however, has provided guidance the statute lacks [In re Mark L. (2001) 94 Cal. App. 4th 573, 114 Cal. Rptr. 2d 499 ; In re Kristine W. (2001) 94 Cal. App. 4th 521, 114 Cal. Rptr. 2d 369] .

In the context of juvenile dependency cases, therapy for the child has a "dual purpose." One of those purposes is "treatment of the child to ameliorate the effects of abuse or neglect." The other is "disclosure of information from which reasoned recommendations and decisions regarding the child's welfare can be made" [In re Mark L. (2001) 94 Cal. App. 4th 573, 584, 114 Cal. Rptr. 2d 499 ; In re Kristine W. (2001) 94 Cal. App. 4th 521, 527, 114 Cal. Rptr. 2d 369] . The juvenile court and social services agency require information from children's therapists and doctors if they are to serve the interests of children and families and fulfill their statutory responsibilities to protect children and in most cases to work toward reunification. Most children's attorneys understand this and will work with the court and agency to facilitate that sharing of information. If the child or the child's attorney invoke the privilege, however, there are multiple steps the court may consider to ensure necessary information is provided to the court and the social worker.

- The court may prospectively order the therapist to provide reports on the child's progress and issues needing attention. In this way both the child and the therapist understand information will be provided to the court and thus there is no expectation of privacy or privilege [In re Eduardo A. (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 1038, 1044, 261 Cal. Rptr. 68] . If this kind of order is made, however, it must be limited to requiring the therapist to reveal only that information that would reasonably assist the juvenile court and social services agency in assessing the child's circumstances and in making orders necessary for the child's best interest. It must also preserve the confidentiality of the details of the child's therapy to the extent reasonably possible [In re Kristine W. (2001) 94 Cal. App. 4th 521, 528-529, 114 Cal. Rptr. 2d 369] .

- Retroactively, it can order the child's therapist to provide the information regarding therapy that has already taken place that the court and agency needs to serve the purpose of the therapy, which would include enabling the court and agency to serve the interests of the child and family [In re Pedro M. (2000) 81 Cal. App. 4th 550, 554, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 839 ; Evid. Code § 1012]. Again, however, the order must be limited to that information reasonably needed by the court and the agency, and must preserve the confidentiality of the details of the child's therapy to the extent reasonably possible [In re Mark L. (2001) 94 Cal. App. 4th 573, 584, 114 Cal. Rptr. 2d 499] .

- Alternatively, the court could order a psychological evaluation by a different psychologist, which would not be privileged and which might provide the court and agency with at least some of the same information [Evid. Code §§ 730, 1017; In re Mark L. (2001) 94 Cal. App. 4th 573, 584, fn. 8, 114 Cal. Rptr. 2d 499 ; In re Eduardo A. (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 1038, 1044, 261 Cal. Rptr. 68] .

- If the court finds the child's attorney has a conflict of interest, the court could even appoint a separate guardian ad litem as the holder of the privilege. The separate guardian ad litem might be better able to determine what information should be shared consistent with the child's best interest and need for confidentiality, thereby enabling the guardian ad litem to waive the privilege to the extent appropriate and reasonably necessary.

No one step will be right in every case. But each of these steps should be considered by the juvenile court if the child or the child's attorney asserts the psychotherapist-patient privilege. Where appropriate, the court can order one or more of them.

[v] Serving as the Child's Guardian Ad Litem

Effective July 1, 2001, the Judicial Council was to adopt a rule that would address the appointment of guardians ad litem (GAL) for children brought into the dependency system. The child's attorney may be appointed in this role [Welf. & Inst. Code § 326.5]. Particularly with older children, there is potential for conflicts of interest between the role of the child's attorney and the role of the guardian ad litem. Thus, the decision to accept or to make such a dual appointment should be done on a case-by-case basis. California did not accept a case-by-case approach, however. In the rule that was finally adopted effective January 1, 2003, the child's attorney "will serve" as the child's guardian ad litem for purposes of the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act (CAPTA) requirements [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.662(c)]. Nevertheless, children's counsel may have a conflict in also serving as the child's CAPTA guardian ad litem. The rule is silent as to how to address such issues. This is an area that should be watched for further developments.

For discussion of guardians ad litem (GAL) for children, see § 328.66.

[d] Relieving Children's Counsel

Relieving children's counsel, in the absence of a conflict or the substitution of counsel, such that the child is without an attorney is something many find unacceptable. Nevertheless, California law does not require counsel for children if the court finds the child would not benefit from the appointment of counsel [Welf. & Inst. Code § 317(c)]. One court found under a previous version of the appointments statute if the court later determines the child no longer receives a benefit from that appointment, such a determination constitutes "good cause" within the meaning of Welf. & Inst. Code § 317(d), giving the court has discretion to relieve counsel [In re Jesse C. (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 1481, 1490-1491, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 609] . Despite recent amendments to Welf. & Inst. Code § 317(c), this interpretation appears to continue to be valid. Obviously, such an action is one that should not be done without consideration of all the facts concerning and interests of the child.

When a child is represented by counsel and requests substitution of his or her court-appointed attorney, it is error for the court to order the child to keep the attorney without inquiring into the causes of the child's dissatisfaction. If the child's complaint appears valid, the court should take corrective action in accordance with law [see In re Ann S. (1982) 137 Cal. App. 3d 148, 150, 188 Cal. Rptr. 1] .

[e] Appointing Appellate Counsel for Children

Historically, appellate courts have varied greatly in their practices regarding the appointment of counsel for children in dependency appeals. Some have routinely appointed counsel for children in all dependency appeals, which is understandable since the child is a party, the subject of the appeal, and indigent, and because many dependency appeals involve fundamental rights. Children should have a voice in appeals involving their lives. This is "best practice." Many appellate courts, however, have not routinely appointed counsel for children in dependency appeals, believing that in most appeals the arguments of the parents and the social services agency provide the information and positions needed on most issues. Effective January 1, 2007, Welf. & Inst. Code § 395 has been amended to help bridge that gap. Now it is clear the court of appeal must appoint counsel for the child if the child is the appellant [Welf. & Inst. Code § 395(b)(1)]. The court of appeal must also appoint counsel for the child in a dependency appeal if the court determines, after considering the recommendation of the child's trial counsel or guardian ad litem, that the child would benefit from the appointment of appellate counsel [Welf. & Inst. Code § 395(b)(1)]. Petitions for extraordinary writ relief and responses to such petitions normally must be handled by the child's trial counsel, of course [Rayna R. v. Superior Court (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 1398, 1403-1405, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 259] .

The child's trial counsel or guardian ad litem shall make a recommendation to the court of appeal for the appointment of separate counsel for the child if she determines the child's best interest in the appeal cannot be protected without the appointment of separate appellate counsel [Welf. & Inst. Code § 395(b)(1); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.661]. The Judicial Counsel form Recommendation for Appointment of Appellate Attorney for Child (JV-810) may be used to make the recommendation [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.661(g)]. The child's trial counsel or guardian ad litem is not limited, however, to making a recommendation for appointed appellate counsel to only those cases in which the child's best interest cannot be protected without the appointment of separate appellate counsel. A recommendation can be made any time it is determined the appointment of counsel for the appeal would be in the child's best interest [Welf. & Inst. Code § 395(b)(1)].

A strong argument can, of course, be made that it is in the child's best interest to have separate appellate counsel in all dependency appeals, since this ensures the child a "voice" in the appeal. At the very least, a recommendation for the appointment of separate appellate counsel for the child should be made in all cases in which an older child voices a position different from those of other parties, an actual conflict exists, an apparent conflict exists, or a complex factual situation exists. Cases where siblings, or trial counsel for siblings, have taken different positions should also result in such a recommendation. And, of course, any dependency case in which a new or novel legal issue is involved, or that has been accepted for review by the California Supreme Court, should result in a recommendation for appointed appellate counsel for the child. A further list of factors that may be considered by the child's trial counsel or guardian ad litem in making a recommendation for appellate counsel is set forth in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.661(f). Notably, that list includes "The existence of any other factors relevant to the child's best interests" [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.661(f)(8)].

When the child's trial counsel or guardian ad litem makes a recommendation for the appointment of separate appellate counsel, she must set forward in the recommendation the reasons why the appointment is in the child's best interest, including the factual basis for the recommendation [Welf. & Inst. Code § 395(b)(1); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.661(g)].

PRACTICE TIP:

When in Doubt, Recommend Separate Appellate Counsel. In those appellate districts that have not routinely appointed separate appellate counsel for children in dependency appeals, the courts will have to adjust to this new practice and may have to develop resources for such appointments. Only regular recommendations for the appointment of such counsel will drive that process. Children's trial counsel and guardians ad litem should look at all cases going up on appeal and consider whether making such a recommendation is appropriate. Where separate appellate counsel has not been appointed for the child at the outset, they should also monitor the progress of the appeals, to the extent reasonably possible, and make such a recommendation if the briefing suggests the positions of the parties are such that appointment of separate appellate counsel is in the child's best interest. When in doubt, the recommendation should be made.

[4] Rights of Children in Foster Care

Effective January 1, 2001, the rights of children in foster care were formally codified. Additional rights have since been added. These rights are now set forth in Welf. & Inst. Code § 16001.9. That statute provides that it is the policy of the State of California that all children in foster care have the following rights [Welf. & Inst. Code § 16001.9(a)(1)-(22)]:

- To live in a safe, healthy, and comfortable home in which the child is treated with respect.

- To be free from physical, sexual, emotional, or other abuse, and from corporal punishment.

- To receive adequate and healthy food, adequate clothing, and for children in group home placement, an allowance.

- To receive medical, dental, vision, and mental health services.

- To not have medication or other chemical substances administered to them, unless authorized by a doctor.

- To be able to contact family members, unless prohibited by the court, and to contact social workers, attorneys, foster youth advocates and supporters, court-appointed special advocates, and probation officers.

- To visit and contact brothers and sisters, unless prohibited by the court.

- To contact the State Department of Social Services Community Care Licensing Division or the State Foster Care Ombudsperson regarding violations of rights, to speak with representatives of those offices confidentially, and to be free from threats or punishment for making complaints.

- To make and receive confidential telephone calls and to send and receive unopened mail, unless prohibited by the court.

- To maintain an emancipation bank account and manage the child's personal income, consistent with the child's developmental level and age, unless prohibited by the case plan.

- To not be locked in any room, building, or facility, unless placed in a community treatment facility.

- To attend school and participate in cultural, personal enrichment, and extracurricular activities, consistent with the child's developmental level and age.

- To have social contacts with people outside of the foster care system, such as friends, church members, teachers, and mentors.

- To attend court hearings and speak to the judge.

- To have storage space for the child's private use.

- To review the case plan if the child is over 12 years old, and to receive information about the child's out-of-home placement and case plan, including being told about any changes in the case plan.

- To be free from unreasonable searches of the child's personal belongings.

- To confidentiality of all juvenile court records pertaining to the child, consistent with existing law.

- To have fair and equal access to all available services, placement, care, treatment, and benefits, and to not be subject to harassment or discrimination on the basis of perceived or actual race, ethnic group identification, ancestry, national origin, color, religion, sex, sexual orientation, gender identity, mental or physical disability or HIV status.

- At 16 years of age or older, to have access to existing information regarding educational options available, including, but not limited to, coursework necessary for vocational and postsecondary educational programs, and information about financial aid for postsecondary education.

At least once every six months, the social worker must inform the foster child of these rights. This is to be done in a manner appropriate to the child's developmental level and age, and is to be done at the time of a regularly scheduled contact with the foster child [Welf. & Inst. Code § 16501.1(f)(4)]. These rights of foster children do not require any foster care provider to take action that would impair the health and safety of foster children [Welf. & Inst. Code § 16001.9(b)].

The rights granted foster children by Welf. & Inst. Code § 16001.9 do not directly impact the findings the court must make at the hearings it conducts as part of the normal dependency process, and there is no penalty for failing to afford a foster child of each of these rights. Nevertheless, the rights set forth in Welf. & Inst. Code § 16001.9 are important rights that are consistent with the underlying goal of the dependency system to serve the best interests of dependent children. All parties and the court should make reasonable efforts to ensure these rights are afforded children in foster care. Moreover, although not expressly granted to children in relative care or the care of a "nonrelative extended family member," affording such children these rights whenever possible is logical and consistent with the underlying goal of serving the best interest of dependent children in out-of-home care. Finally, as set forth in the provisions for case plans, everyone should take steps to ensure that "no child leaves foster care without a life-long connection to a committed adult" [Welf. & Inst. Code § 16500.1(b)(11)].

PRACTICE TIP:

The Foster Child's Right to Speak to the Judge. The statute grants foster children the right to attend court hearings and to speak to the judge [Welf. & Inst. Code § 16001.9(a)(17)]. It does not define, however, the actual process to be followed in allowing the foster child to speak to the judge. Some judicial officers have a practice of meeting in chambers privately with dependent children, particularly dependent children who are teenagers. This practice poses a number of potential problems and should not be encouraged. One danger is that a child might make false allegations against a judicial officer who met with the child privately. Thus, any judicial officer following this practice places his or her career and professional standing at risk. Another danger is that the court might consider the child's unsworn statements in chambers as evidence in making its findings and orders, something the court cannot do. Further, even if the court thereafter advises the parties and their counsel of the general nature of the child's statements, the parties and counsel will not know all that was said. This potentially deprives the social worker of information needed to protect and serve the child and the parents of information needed to protect their own interests, including their right to due process. Thus, even if all parties and counsel agree the court can meet with the child privately, the practice has the potential to do more harm than good. The better way to let the child speak to the judicial officer is to have at least one other person present, and to have the meeting either recorded or reported [see, e.g., In re Jamie R. (2001) 90 Cal. App. 4th 766, 770-772, 109 Cal. Rptr. 2d 123 (all counsel stipulated trial court could interview children in camera without counsel or parties present; court met with children and used their statements to deny mother's Welf. & Inst. Code § 388 petition; appellate court was able to review the transcript of the children's testimony to find any error harmless)].

Effective January 1, 2004, state law also provides the state has a duty to care for and protect children placed in foster care, and that public policy provides the state "assumes an obligation of the highest order to ensure the safety of children in foster care" [Welf. & Inst. Code § 16000.1(a)(1)]. This statement of public policy was enacted in response to concerns the case of County of Los Angeles v. Superior Court (Terrell R.) (2002) 102 Cal. App. 4th 627, 125 Cal. Rptr. 2d 637 was inconsistent in some way with existing law. It was not. It was a reasoned analysis that was consistent with existing law, practical, and reasonable. Some may argue, however, that the new policy statement that the state assumes an obligation of the "highest order" for the safety of foster children establishes a mandatory duty to protect children in foster care from all possible harm. Thus, the statute's provision that nothing in that section is intended to change the balance of liability, or to increase or decrease liability of the state and counties as it existed prior to the Terrell R. decision is both questionable and confusing [Welf. & Inst. Code § 16000.1(a)(3), (b)(1)]. A specific, mandatory obligation to keep foster children safe from all possible harm did not exist prior to the Terrell R. decision, and is not reasonably possible to effect. The statute should not be construed to impose such a duty now. The areas of liabilities and immunities is beyond the scope of this text. Nevertheless, this is an area to watch for further developments.

[5] Children's Right to Be Present at Hearings

Reasonable minds differ on the value to the process and the benefit or harm to the child of having children present at dependency hearings. This is to be expected, since these things may vary greatly from one case, hearing, and child to the next. Thus, local practices have varied tremendously in this regard. Nevertheless, the growing motto of children who have aged out of the dependency system and of the California Youth Connection, a nonprofit advocacy organization of current and former foster youth, is "Nothing about us without us." They understand the need for dependent children to feel empowered and involved in the decisions that affect their lives, and recognize the decision as to whether a child should attend court proceedings is often best left to the child, when the child is old enough to make a reasoned decision on the issue.

PRACTICE TIP:

Keeping Children Involved Is Everyone's Responsibility. While it is rarely necessary or appropriate for dependent children to know all the details of their case and the decisions being made, it is always appropriate for them to feel involved and listened to regarding these decisions. The responsibility is not theirs, and shouldn't be [In re Leo M. (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 1583, 1593, 24 Cal. Rptr. 2d 253] . Dependent children need to understand the court will ultimately make the decisions. But adults need to ensure dependent children are consulted and involved in the process. This responsibility is not just the social worker's, the children's attorney, or the juvenile court's. It belongs to everyone.

Children who are 10 years of age or older are to be provided notice of their right to attend hearings. If such a child is not present, the court must determine whether the child was advised of his or her right to attend the hearing and ask why the child is not present [Welf. & Inst. Code § 349; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.532(n)]. However, at a hearing under Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26 a child under the age of 10 years is not required to be present unless the child or the child's counsel so requests, or the court so orders [Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.26(f)].

[6] Education for Children in the Dependency System

[a] Education Issues in General

Children obviously need an education, regardless of whether they are in the dependency system. But children who are abused or neglected and separated from their family face unique and considerable disadvantages in their education. Often, removal from the home means the child is no longer able to attend his or her regular school. Placement changes that result in a change in school can be detrimental to the child's education [Espana & Fried, The Expanding Role of the Juvenile Court in Determining Educational Outcomes for Foster Children, 5 J. Center Children & Cts. 83, 84 (2004)]. Changing schools can result in courses not being completed or credited. Enrollments at new schools may be denied or delayed without records, and records may not be readily available for transfer. Further, children form attachments with teachers and other children in school. The change in school environment can sever these relationships, creating stress and behavioral problems [California Department of Education (CDE), 2008 Report to the Legislature and the Governor for the Foster Youth Services, pp. 1-2 (2008)]. None of this serves the best interest of the child or the child's education. These problems are exacerbated by the fact that children in the dependency system often experience multiple placements over the course of their stay in foster care. In many cases this means time spent out of school or transitioning into a new one.

It is little surprise that studies show children in foster care underperform in school [Pecora, et al., Assessing The Effects Of Foster Care: Early Results From The Casey National Alumni Study, p. 26 (Casey Family Programs, 2003)]. According to a 2008 Report to the Legislature and the Governor for the Foster Youth Services Program, "seventy-five percent of foster youth students are working below grade level, eighty-three percent are being held back by the third grade, and forty-six percent become high school drop outs" [California Department of Education (CDE), 2008 Report to the Legislature and the Governor for the Foster Youth Services Program, p. 2 (2008)]. Children exiting foster care also have higher rates of poverty, homelessness, alcohol or other drug issues, and involvement with the adult criminal court system as adults [Dicker & Gerber, Children Adrift: Addressing the Educational Needs of New York's Foster Children, 69 Albany Law Review 1, 4 (2005)]. Efforts to address these problems are seen in the legislative mandates regarding a foster child's educational rights.

Under Welf. & Inst. Code § 317(e), attorneys representing children have a duty to investigate issues beyond the scope of the juvenile proceeding, such as educational issues, and report to the court when the child's interests need to be protected by the institution or other administrative or judicial proceedings. The court must take any appropriate action that is necessary to fully protect the interests of the child, including joining in the proceedings any agency the court determines has failed to meet its legal obligation to provide services to the child in question [Welf. & Inst. Code § 362(a)]. Clearly, the dependent child has numerous and significant rights and issues related to education. These should be addressed throughout the life of the dependency case. Cooperation of social services agencies, local education agencies, juvenile courts, and other stakeholders is not only important to this effort to promote the well-being of dependent children--it is vital.

PRACTICE TIP:

Questions to Ask. Important questions to ask at all dependency hearings beginning with the initial or detention hearing include, but are not limited to: Is the child in school? What type of school? If the child is enrolled in an alternative school, what is the basis for such a placement? Does the child have appropriate clothing and supplies for school? Is the child enrolled in a non-public school (NPS)? How is the child getting to and from school? How is the child's attendance at school? Is the child able to participate in school-related extracurricular activities? What was the date of the last educational evaluation or assessment? How is the child performing in school? Who holds the child's educational rights? Who is the child's educational advocate? Are there mental, physical, or language issues that impair the child's ability to learn? Does the child have an individualized education program (IEP) or Section 504 Plan? Unless the answers to these questions are known, the child's education needs may not be met.

Two helpful resources regarding educational issues for children in the dependency system are the checklist published by the National Council of Juvenile and Family Court Judges, which lists questions related to educational issues [NCJFCJ, Asking The Right Questions: A Judicial Checklist to Ensure That the Educational Needs of Children and Youth in Foster Care Are Being Addressed (NCJFCJ 2005)] and the California Foster Care Education Law Fact Sheets published by the California Foster Youth Education Task Force [CYETF, California Foster Care Education Law Fact Sheets (CYETF 3d ed. 2008)]. The CYETF fact sheets are available at www.clcla.org/train-educat.htm and cover topics such as Special Education, School Discipline and Non-Public Schools.

For further discussion of educational advocacy on behalf of dependent children, see Espana & Fried, The Expanding Role of the Juvenile Court in Determining Educational Outcomes for Foster Children, 5 J. Center Children & Cts. 83, 84 (2004); McNaught, Educational Advocacy, in Child Welfare Law and Practice: Representing Children, Parents, and State Agencies in Abuse, Neglect, and Dependency Cases (Bradford Pub. 2005) § 12H, pp. 283-297; NCJFCJ, Asking The Right Questions: A Judicial Checklist to Ensure That the Educational Needs of Children and Youth in Foster Care Are Being Addressed (NCJFCJ 2005).

PRACTICE TIP:

Informative Websites Relating to Educational Issues. Practitioners should be aware that many websites provide excellent information relating to education [see, e.g., Youth Law Center, www.ylc.org (as of Dec. 22, 2008); Children's Law Center of Los Angeles, www.clcla.org (as of Dec. 22, 2008); U.S. Department of Education, Office of Special Education, IDEA (Building the Legacy: IDEA 2004), (as of Dec. 22, 2008); Protection & Advocacy, Inc., Publications for Special Education, www.pai-ca.org/issues/specialeducation-pubs.html (as of Oct. 15, 2009)]. Practitioners should look to these websites for additional information and practical advice on meeting the educational needs of children who are in the juvenile dependency system.

[b] Educational Rights and Limitations

It is important to determine who holds educational rights for the child. Educational rights will ordinarily be held by the parent or legal guardian until an order is made otherwise. The juvenile court must determine who holds educational rights as early as the detention hearing [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.651(b)(1)(1)(A)]. At the detention hearing and until the child is adjudged a dependent, the court may temporarily limit the right of the parent or guardian to make educational decisions if all of the following conditions are found to exist [Welf. & Inst. Code § 319(g), Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.650]:

- The parent is unavailable, unable, or unwilling to exercise educational rights.

- The department has made diligent efforts to secure the participation of the parent or guardian regarding educational issues.

- The child's educational needs cannot be met without the temporary appointment of an educational representative.

If the court temporarily limits the rights of the parents or guardians, an educational representative or surrogate parent must be appointed on a temporary basis to make educational decisions. Any ruling limiting educational rights at the detention hearing must be set forth in the order and will expire at the conclusion of the dispositional hearing or if the petition is dismissed or found not true [Welf. & Inst. Code § 319(g)(3)].

If a child is declared a dependent, the juvenile court must consider the child's educational needs, regardless of whether the child is removed from the custody of the parent or guardian. The court may limit the educational rights of a parent or guardian at the dispositional hearing or any subsequent hearing if appropriate [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 361(a), 366.1(e); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.650]. The dispositional report is required to address the inability or unwillingness of the parent or guardian to participate in educational decisions [Welf. & Inst. Code § 358.1(e)]. Any supplemental reports must also discuss this issue [Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.1(e); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.651(b)(2)(E)]. The court will consider this information as well as additional information provided by the parties in determining whether education rights should be limited. Parents may object to the limitation of their educational rights. For example, a recent case has upheld limiting the mother's educational rights over her objection where the mother was actively involved in educational issues but disagreed with the decision to send her child to an out-of-state residential program [In re R.W. (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 1268, 1277-78, 91 Cal. Rptr. 3d 785] . The court focused on the child's special mental health and educational needs, an "urgent need" to meaningfully address those issues in a timely fashion, and the mother's history of poor decision-making regarding her child [In re R.W., 172 Cal. App. 4th 1268, 1270, 91 Cal. Rptr. 3d 785] . Significantly, the mother did not submit any additional information as evidence at the hearing to support her position [

In re R.W., 172 Cal. App. 4th 1268, 1276, 1278, 91 Cal. Rptr. 3d 785] . Upon limiting educational rights of a parent or guardian, the court must appoint an educational representative to make educational decisions for the child. An appropriate person for appointment as an educational representative to make educational decisions may be a relative, a court-appointed special advocate (CASA), or a foster parent absent a conflict of interest [Educ. Code § 56055(c)]. A county social worker cannot be appointed to make educational decisions. Additionally, individuals with conflicts of interests such as employees of agencies providing education or care for a child are excluded from appointment [Gov. Code § 7579.5(i); 20 U.S.C. § 1415(b)(2); 34 C.F.R. § 300.519(d)]. Consequently, anyone employed by a child's group home is precluded from serving as an educational representative or surrogate parent designated to make educational decisions.

If the court is unable to locate an appropriate person, the court will refer the child with special education needs to the local educational agency for appointment of a surrogate parent [Welf. & Inst. Code § 361(a)(5); Gov. Code § 7579.5(b)]. However, the appointment of a surrogate parent is only appropriate when the child is receiving special education services or may be eligible for such services [Gov. Code § 7579.5(a)(1)(A); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.650(d)]. If the court determines that appointment of a surrogate parent is necessary, the local educational agency must be provided with a copy of the order (form JV-535) and response form (JV-536, titled Local Educational Agency Response to JV-535--Appointment of Surrogate Parent). The local educational agency then has 30 days to appoint a surrogate parent [Gov. Code § 7579.5(a), Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.650(d)(3)]. If there is no responsible adult available, and the child does not qualify for a surrogate parent, the court can make educational decisions for the child with the input of any interested person [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 319(g)(2), 361(a)(5)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Educational Representative Versus Surrogate Parent Versus Responsible Adult. Be sure to use appropriate terminology when referring to orders appointing adults to make educational decisions for children. If the juvenile court makes such an appointment, the court appoints an "educational representative" to make educational decisions [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.650]. If the local education agency makes such an appointment, it appoints a "surrogate parent" [Gov. Code § 7579.5(a)]. To further complicate matters, the term formerly used for "educational representative" was "responsible adult." In fact, the code and some practice guides use the term "responsible adult" rather than "educational representative" [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 319(g)(2), 361(a)]. Practitioners should be aware that while both terms refer to the same thing, "educational representative" is now the appropriate terminology.

The parent or guardian's educational rights can be restored when that individual is able to act in the child's best interests regarding educational issues [Welf. & Inst. Code § 361(a)(3)]. Restoring the parent or guardian's educational rights can be sought by a petition pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 388. Additionally, the responsible adult can be changed until the child turns 18. The Judicial Council has approved a form requesting a hearing regarding a child's education for this purpose, among others (JV-539). Otherwise, the appointment of the adult responsible for making educational decisions stays in place until the child turns 18 years of age, with two exceptions: where the child chooses not to make educational decisions him or herself, or where the court deems the child incompetent.

PRACTICE TIP:

Formulating Position on Limiting Educational Rights. For social workers, county counsel, children's counsel, and the court certain circumstances should trigger the discussion of limiting educational rights: the parent's whereabouts are unknown, the parent is the subject of a no-contact order, or a parent's ability to exercise educational rights is impaired. Sometimes, mental illness or severe substance abuse issues may render a parent unable to assist in educational decision-making. For the parent's counsel, limitation of educational rights can be seen as the erosion of parental rights and should be resisted unless grounds clearly exist. Regardless, there should be aggressive efforts to facilitate the parent's involvement in education-related meetings. Counsel for parents should also ensure their clients continue to receive all notices from the school related to educational issues. This participation is relevant to the issue as to whether the parent has the ability to care for the child.

Pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 16500.1(a), it is the intent of the legislature to foster the educational progress of children in out-of-home care. Toward this end, the court may make any and all reasonable orders for the care and maintenance of children who are dependents [Welf. & Inst. Code § 362(a)]. This includes restricting a dependent child's parent in a family maintenance case from home schooling the child if the court finds that a history of abuse or neglect in the family makes "regular contact with mandated reporters necessary to guarantee the child's safety" in the parent's home [Jonathan L. v. Superior Court (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 1074, 1105, 81 Cal. Rptr. 3d 571] . The authority of the juvenile court to ensure that a dependent child's educational needs are met has been held to include the ability to order the agency pay for an appointed surrogate parent's travel expenses to visit a child placed out-of-county [In re Samuel G. (2009) 174 Cal. App. 4th 502, 506, 94 Cal. Rptr. 3d 237] . In the Samuel G. case, a Southern California agency placed the child in a group home in Northern California. The child, with severe educational and behavioral issues, had an individualized education program (IEP) and was assigned an educational representative after his mother's educational rights were suspended. Referencing the juvenile court's authority to appoint an educational representative under California Rule of Court 5.650, and the duties of the representative, the appellate court upheld the lower court's order that the agency pay for the educational representative's travel expenses to participate in IEP meetings and review the child's progress [In re Samuel G., 174 Cal. App. 4th 502, 510-511, 94 Cal. Rptr. 3d 237] . The Samuel G. court reasoned that the trial court acted within its discretion "to ensure continuity ... in the monitoring and advocating for the child's interests in, and rights to, a quality education" [In re Samuel G., 174 Cal. App. 4th 502, 513, 94 Cal. Rptr. 3d 237] . Particularly in hard financial times, the issue of who is responsible for education related costs is the subject of much disagreement. This is an area that is continuing to develop.

[c] Transfer and Enrollment (McKinney-Vento, A.B. 490, and California Rules of Court, Rule 5.651)

Recognizing the critical role education plays in a foster child's life, both federal and California law provide significant rights to children who are brought into the dependency system. The McKinney-Vento Homeless Assistance Act of 1986 (42 U.S.C. § 11431 et seq.) applies to "homeless children and youths." This definition includes children who are "living in emergency or transitional shelters" or are "awaiting foster care placement" [42 U.S.C. § 11434a]. The goal of the Act is to ensure that such children have equal access to the same free, appropriate public education as is provided to other children and youths. Toward this end, McKinney-Vento sets forth several obligations on the part of the local educational agency including:

- Maintaining homeless children in the school they attended prior to becoming homeless (school of origin) to the extent feasible and when it serves the child's best interest to attend the same school until the end of the academic year.

- Immediately enrolling the child at a new school, even where the child lacks the school and medical records necessary for immediate enrollment.

- Requiring the enrolling school to immediately contact the child's prior school to obtain the child's records.

- Providing assistance with immunization issues.

- Providing transportation to and from the school of origin.

The intent of California's statutory provisions is to ensure that all children, including foster children, "have the opportunity to meet the challenging state pupil academic achievement standards to which all pupils are held" [Welf. & Inst. Code § 16000(b)]. To this end, the code requires educators, county placing agencies, care providers, attorneys and juvenile courts to work collaboratively to maintain stable school placements, ensure children are placed in the "least restrictive educational programs," and ensure children have access to academic resources, services, and extracurricular activities that are available to all pupils [Educ. Code §§ 48850(a), 48853(g)]. California Assembly Bill 490 (Stats. 2003, ch. 862, eff. Jan. 1, 2004) followed the requirements of its federal counterpart, the McKinney-Vento Act, and expands on McKinney-Vento substantially. Regarding its scope, for example, Assembly Bill 490 applies to any foster child who: (1) has been removed from his or her home pursuant to section 309 of the Welfare and Institutions Code; (2) is the subject of a petition filed under sections 300 or 602 of the Welfare and Institutions Code; or (3) has been removed from his or her home and is the subject of a petition filed under section 300 or 602 of the Welfare and Institutions Code [Educ. Code § 48853.5(a)]. When coupled with the broad definition of "homeless children and youths" set forth under the McKinney-Vento Act, it is possible to argue the rights accorded under McKinney-Vento and A.B. 490 cover foster children from the detention hearing through the close of the dependency case. The requirements of Assembly Bill 490 include the following:

- Each local educational agency is required to designate a staff person as the educational liaison for foster children who will ensure and facilitate proper educational placement, enrollment in school, and checkout from school. This educational liaison must also assist foster children in transferring schools, ensuring proper transfer of credits, records and grades [Educ. Code § 48853.5(b)(1)-(2)].

- When deciding where to place a child, one of the factors that must be considered is proximity to the child's present school and the impact the placement would have on the child's educational stability [Welf. & Inst. Code § 16501.1(c)(1), (f)(8)].

- Foster children shall be allowed to remain in their school of origin for the duration of the academic school year if it is in their best interests to do so [see Educ. Code § 48853.5(d)(1)].

- The new school must immediately enroll the foster child even if the foster child lacks immunization records, fees, books, required uniform, academic records, medical records, proof of residency or other necessary documentation [Educ. Code § 48853.5(d)(4)(B)].

- The new school must request records from the former school within two business days of the child's request for enrollment and the former school must provide such records within two business days of the request [Educ. Code § 48853.5(d)(4)(C)].

- The foster child's grades may not be lowered due to absences from school which are related to changes in placement, court hearings, or other court-related activities [Educ. Code § 49069.5(g)-(h)].

- Each public school district and county office of education shall accept and provide credit for all full or partial coursework satisfactorily completed by a student while attending a public school, juvenile court school, or nonpublic, nonsectarian school or agency [Educ. Code § 48645.5].

- Foster children are entitled to be placed in the least restrictive educational program and attend a regular comprehensive public school unless the child has an individualized education program (IEP) requiring placement in a nonpublic, nonsectarian school or the person holding educational rights determines that another educational program is best for the child [Educ. Code § 48853(a)(2)-(3)].

The term "least restrictive educational program" is an important one. Many group homes have on-site schools that are non-public schools (NPS) [Educ. Code § 56034]. These schools tend to have restrictive educational programs since they address the needs of children found eligible for special education who cannot function in a regular public school and are in need of specialized programs and services not available at a regular public school [Espana & Fried, The Expanding Role of the Juvenile Court in Determining Educational Outcomes for Foster Children, 5 J. Center Children & Cts. 83, 85 (2004)]. Furthermore, group homes may be motivated to enter a child in their non-public school as it results in additional funding and resolves the need to transport the child to a public school. A group home cannot require, as a condition of placement, that a child be identified as an individual with exceptional needs, that educational authority over the child be designated to the group home or the NPS, or that the child attend the non-public school the group home owns or operates [Educ. Code §§ 56366.9, 56155.7, 48854].

Despite the clear entitlement to be placed in the least restrictive educational program, foster youth are often placed in other more restrictive schools such as continuation high schools, community day schools or independent study. Further, students are sometimes convinced to voluntarily enroll in such programs because they lack sufficient credits and are informed, often incorrectly, that they will graduate sooner or more easily make up credits in such programs. However, other options also exist for foster children. These students should be given meaningful access to appropriate educational programs and all other supplemental services that are funded by money allocated to school districts to address the needs of all academically "at risk" students in the regular school setting.

A key aspect of educational stability is the notion of having a foster child continue to attend his/her "school of origin." There has been much controversy over the preference to keep children in their school of origin primarily because it can impact placement decisions and result in the expense of transporting a child to a school that is not close to the child's placement. California Rules of Court, Rule 5.651, which became effective January 1, 2008 requires the Court to determine whether the child is attending his or her school of origin and, if not, whether this is in the child's best interest. The right to attend the school of origin can be waived in consultation with the child, the child's attorney and the individual holding educational rights. In determining whether to waive this right, there should be careful consideration and balancing of which educational setting is best for the child taking into consideration the available placements and the distance the child will have to travel to get to the school of origin.

To ensure school stability, California Rules of Court, Rule 5.651 gives the social worker a duty to notify the court, the child's attorney, and the educational representative or surrogate parent of any proposed change in placement that will result in the removal from a child's school of origin. That notice must be given within 24 hours, excluding non-judicial days, of the decision to change such a placement [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.651(e)(1)(A)]. The child's attorney is required to discuss the proposed move from the school of origin with the child and the person who holds educational rights. Children's counsel or the educational representative may then request a hearing by filing the JV-539, Request for Hearing Regarding Child's Education form, within two days. The court may also set a hearing on its own motion. If a hearing is requested or set, the child must be allowed to remain in the school of origin until the matter is resolved by the court [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 5.651(e)(3)].

While under McKinney-Vento children who are "awaiting foster care placement" or "living in emergency or transitional shelters" are entitled to transportation, A.B. 490 does not require that transportation to and from the school of origin be provided. Some argue the cost of transportation is the responsibility of the child welfare agency because when a child is placed in foster care, it is understood the child welfare agency is responsible for ensuring the child receives the care to which she or he is entitled. As discussed previously, the recently decided Samuel G. case upheld a juvenile court order that the agency pay for an educational representative's travel expenses "to ensure continuity" in representing the child's educational rights [In re Samuel G., 174 Cal. App. 4th 502, 513, 94 Cal. Rptr. 3d 237] . While Samuel G. did not address the issue of who is responsible for transportation of a child to and from a school of origin under A.B. 490, it is likely practitioners will use this case to argue by analogy that the agency should also bear this transportation expense.

Others may argue the responsibility for travel expenses falls on the school district, as school districts have the discretion to provide home to school transportation for their students and are allocated money from the state for doing so [see Educ. Code § 41850 et seq.]. In any event, Educ. Code § 48850(a) requires stakeholders (educators, county planning agencies, care providers, advocates and juvenile courts) to work together to maintain stable school placements. Furthermore, Educ. Code § 48853.5(d)(6) encourages the local education agency and the county placing agency to collaborate in obtaining funding "to promote the well-being of foster children through educational stability." This can be interpreted to require these agencies to work together to resolve the issue of the cost of transportation.

PRACTICE TIP:

Obligations of Dependency Practitioners. Educational issues should be addressed at every hearing. Section 24 of the California Standards of Judicial administration requires judges take responsibility with the other juvenile court participants at every stage of the child's case, to ensure that the child's educational needs are met. This includes making certain that educational rights are investigated, reported and monitored and that court reports, case plans, assessments and permanency plans address how educational entitlements are being satisfied [Cal. Stds. Jud. Admin. § 24(h)(1)-(3)]. California Rules of Court, Rule 5.651 incorporates the educational rights discussed in this section. It also lists the educational elements that social worker reports and court hearings must address. All dependency courts and practitioners should be familiar with these obligations.

In October 2008, President Bush signed the Fostering Connections to Success and Increasing Adoptions Act of 2008 (HR 6893). As noted by the National Center for State Courts' Government Relations Office, this legislation is aimed at improving outcomes for children in foster care and requires states to develop a plan to ensure educational stability for these children [NCSC, Issue Brief: Fostering Connections to Success and Increasing Adoptions Act, Vol. 9, No. 3 (NCSC 2008)]. HR 6893 requires each state's plan include the following:

- Assurances that the placement of the foster child takes into account the appropriateness of the current education setting and the proximity to the school where the child was enrolled at the time of placement.

- An assurance that state agencies coordinate with the local educational agencies to ensure that the child remains in the school of origin.

- An assurance that when remaining in the school of origin is not in the child's best interests, the child will be immediately enrolled in a new more appropriate school which will be provided with all of the child's educational records.

HR 6893 also allows Title IV-E foster care payments to be used to cover the cost for the child to travel to the school of origin. Hopefully, state guidelines that address the administration of this act will be provided soon. Until then, it remains to be seen what impact the Fostering Connections to Success and Increasing Adoptions Act will have on this controversial issue of paying for such transportation.

California law grants other rights specifically for foster children. These rights include:

- Participation in age-appropriate extracurricular, enrichment, and social activities and Independent Living Skills Programs if eligible [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 362.05, 16001.9(a)(13); 22 C.C.R. §§ 83072(c)(20), (23), 84072(c)(25), (28), 89372(c)(18)(A), (E)].

- To be provided information about available educational options including vocational and postsecondary schooling if over 16 years of age [Welf. & Inst. Code § 16001.9(a)(24); 22 C.C.R. §§ 83072(c)(29), 84072(c)(34)].

- For children over 16, services necessary to transition "from foster care to independent living" [Welf. & Inst. Code § 366.3(e)(10)].

Finally, children who are identified as limited English proficient (LEP) or as an English Language Learner must be given access to appropriate educational programs to address their language needs [see Educ. Code §§ 305, 310]. For foster youth who are identified as LEP, it is extremely important to consider their language needs when determining what educational placement is in their best interest pursuant to AB 490. Whenever possible, there should be continuity in the type of language program made available to such youths when changing placements. A child's school records should indicate whether he or she is LEP; in fact, the newly revised JV-225 form now asks about the languages spoken at home and whether a child has ever been identified as an English Language Learner by a school.

[d] Special Education

[i] In General

According to research, 30 percent to 40 percent of foster children are classified as special education students [Wingerden et al., Improving Special Education for Children with Disabilities in Foster Care (2002) p. 4]. Furthermore, studies show that many foster children in need of these services are unidentified, inappropriately designated as special education, or underserved despite qualifying for special education services [see Wingerden et al., Improving Special Education for Children with Disabilities in Foster Care (2002); McNaught, Education Advocacy in Child Welfare Cases: Key Issues and Role s, 21 Child Law Practice 129, 138 (2002)]. Special education programs in California are governed by both state and federal laws. The applicable federal laws include the Individuals with Disabilities Education Improvement Act of 2004 (IDEA) and Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973. California law, which generally parallels IDEA, is found in Education Code § 56400 et seq. Additional guidance can be found in the federal and state regulations [see 34 C.F.R. § 300; 5 C.C.R. § 3000 et. seq.].

[ii] Individuals with Disabilities Education Improvement Act (IDEA)

IDEA addresses the provision of education and related services to children with qualifying disabilities [20 U.S.C. § 1400 et seq.]. The purpose of IDEA is to ensure that children with disabilities have access to a free appropriate public education (FAPE) [20 U.S.C. § 1400(c); 34 C.F.R. § 300.1-300.818]. This means that a disabled child must be provided with free special education and related services which enable a child with a disability to progress in the general curriculum and conform to an Individual Education Program (IEP) from preschool through secondary education [20 U.S.C. § 1401(8)]. The education and services need not be the best possible arrangement for the child. Rather, it is sufficient if the student is receiving an "educational benefit" [Board of Education v. Rowley (1982) 458 U.S. 176, 204-208, 102 S. Ct. 3034, 3050-3052, 73 L. Ed. 2d 690, 711-713]. Under California law, educational benefit is measured by whether the child is making progress toward achieving the central goals of the IEP [Community Alliance for Special Education and Protection and Advocacy, Inc., Special Education Rights and Responsibilities, ch. 10 (9th ed. 2005)]. Special education is required to be provided in the least restrictive environment. This means that, to the maximum extent possible, special education students must be educated with non-disabled students [Board of Education v. Rowley (1982) 458 U.S. 176, 202, 102 S. Ct. 3034, 3049, 73 L. Ed. 2d 690, 709].

Under the IDEA a disability includes "mental retardation, a hearing impairment (including deafness), a speech or language impairment, a visual impairment (including blindness), serious emotional disturbance, an orthopedic impairments, autism, traumatic brain injury, other health impairment, or specific learning disability [20 U.S.C. § 1401(3)(A)(i)]. Furthermore, as a result of one of these disabilities the student must need special education and related services to benefit from their education [20 U.S.C. § 1401(3)(A)(ii); 34 C.F.R. § 300.8(b)(2)]. Under California law, children with the disabilities set out above are designated "individuals with exceptional needs" and are eligible for special education if they require instruction and services which cannot be provided by merely modifying the regular school program [Educ. Code § 56026(a), (b)].

Children between the ages of 5 and 18 years, inclusive, are eligible for special education services [Educ. Code § 56026(c)(3)]. Also eligible are individuals between 19 and 21 who were eligible for such services prior to their 19th birthday, provided they have not graduated from high school with a "regular diploma" and have not completed their prescribed course of study, or if they have not met proficiency standards in basic skills [Educ. Code §§ 56026(c)(4), 56026.1(b); 34 C.F.R. § 300.102(a)(3)(i), (ii)]. Children under 3 years of age are eligible for special education services if they are identified by the local educational agency as requiring special education and services [Educ. Code § 56026(c)(1)]. Children between 3 and 5 years of age are eligible if they have one of the conditions set forth above or a disabling medical condition or congenital syndrome that has a high likelihood of requiring special education and services [Educ. Code § 56026(c)(2)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Identifying a Child with Special Education Needs. Certain educational difficulties should trigger further inquiry into this issue. Such triggers may include poor grades, delays in academic achievements or developmental milestones, lack of interest in school, or a refusal to attend school and behavioral problems [McNaught, Educational Advocacy, in Child Welfare Law and Practice: Representing Children, Parents, and State Agencies in Abuse, Neglect, and Dependency Cases (Bradford Pub. 2005) p. 284]. Consequently, it is valuable for practitioners to talk with the child and his/her caretakers, review educational records, communicate with the school, and attend any meetings which address the child's progress. The social worker or attorney can also seek medical, psychological and neuropsychological evaluations. Under the Individuals with Disabilities Education Improvement Act "Child Fund" mandate, states are required to assure that children in need of special education services are located, identified, and referred. While identifying special education students is critical, it is also important to question a child's designation as a special education student when appropriate and make sure the child is not placed in an unnecessarily restrictive educational setting [McNaught, Education Advocacy in Child Welfare Cases: Key Issues and Roles, 21 Child Law Practice 129, 138 (2002)]. Inquiry should be made into whether there are any modifications that can be made within the general education classroom which could assist the child with his or her problems such as tutoring or use of a teacher's assistant.

The responsibility for ensuring that a child receives appropriate special education services falls on the local school district. The special education process can be commenced by a written request to the school district special education director, the school principal, and/or the school psychologist for a special education assessment. The request must be made by a "parent" whose educational rights have not been suspended. A "parent" for purposes of special education law is defined as a natural or adoptive parent, a guardian, a person having legal custody of a child, a person acting in the place of a natural or adoptive parent, such as a grandparent, stepparent, or other relative with whom the child lives, an individual who is legally responsible for the child, an adult student who has no conservator, or a surrogate parent [20 U.S.C. § 1401(19); Educ. Code § 56028(a)(2); 34 C.F.R. § 300.30(a)(2)]. Foster parents are also authorized to initiate a referral for special education of their foster child as long as the educational rights of the natural parents have been limited by court order [Educ. Code § 56028(a)(2), 56029(c); 34 C.F.R. § 300.30(a)(2)]. If the dependency court has designated a particular person to make educational decisions, that is the appropriate person to make the request [34 C.F.R. § 300.30(a)(3)].

In response to a request, the local educational agency has 15 days, excluding days between regular school sessions or terms or days of school vacation in excess of five school days from the date of receipt of the referral, to provide a written proposed assessment plan [Educ. Code § 56321(a)]. The student is to be assessed in all areas related to the suspected disability including, where appropriate, health and development, vision (including low vision), hearing, motor abilities, language function, general ability, academic performance, self-help, orientation and mobility skills, career and vocational abilities and interest, and social and emotional status [Educ. Code § 56320(f)]. A "parent" must consent to the proposed assessment.

PRACTICE TIP:

The Student Study Team (SST). Before a student is referred for special education services, the school district must consider and utilize, where appropriate, the resources of the regular education program [Educ. Code § 56303]. Often schools will want to refer the child's case to a student study team (SST) for this purpose. However, the student study team process is not a requirement. The student study team may be used by the school district as a stalling tactic to avoid the cost of the special education assessment. If the study team referral is made, it should not in any way delay the assessment and IEP timelines without consent of the person holding education rights [Community Alliance for Special Education and Protection and Advocacy, Inc., Special Education Rights and Responsibilities, ch. 2 (9th ed. 2005)].

Within 60 calendar days of receipt of the parent's consent, the assessment must be completed and an Individual Education Program (IEP) team meeting held for the purposes of determining if the child qualifies for special education services. The IEP team includes parents, regular and special education teachers, and any individual who performed the assessment or can interpret it. If the child is found to qualify for special education, the IEP the team develops the child's program for the academic year, assessing the child's present level of educational functioning and establishing annual goals and short term objectives. The team also determines what types of services and which educational setting will enable the child to make progress on the identified goals. Also, the IEP must address the extent to which the child can participate in a regular education program. For older children, services designed to transition the child to adulthood are also discussed and made part of the IEP. The IEP must be implemented as soon as possible following the IEP team meeting [34 C.F.R. §§ 300.323(c)(2), 300.347(a)(6); 5 C.C.R. § 3040(a)]. An IEP must be in effect for each eligible child at the beginning of the school year [Educ. Code § 56344(c); 20 U.S.C. § 1414(d)(2)(A); 34 C.F.R. § 300.323(a)]. An IEP must be conducted at least annually to review the child's progress and the program and can be conducted more often if the child demonstrates a lack of anticipated progress or upon the request of a parent or teacher [Educ. Code § 56343(b)-(d)]. Additionally, a student must be reevaluated for special education and related services at least every three years [20 U.S.C. § 1414(a)(2)(B)(ii)]. This is called a triennial IEP. Furthermore, this form of reevaluation is necessary if the school district asserts the child no longer needs special education services [20 U.S.C. § 1414(a)(2)(B)(ii)].

The special education student must also be provided with all "related services" that are required in order for the child to benefit from special education. "Benefit" from special education has generally been interpreted to mean making meaningful progress toward meeting IEP goals and objectives [County of San Diego v. California Special Education Hearing Office (9th Cir. 1996) 93 F.3d 1458, 1466-67 ; Taylor v. Honig (9th Cir. 1990) 910 F.2d 627, 629] . "Related services," as defined by 34 C.F.R. § 300.34(a), means transportation and such developmental, corrective, and other supportive services as are required to assist a handicapped child to benefit from special education, and includes speech language pathology and audiology, psychological services, physical and occupational therapy, orientation and mobility services, recreation, including therapeutic recreation, early identification and assessment of disabilities in children, counseling services, including rehabilitation counseling, and medical services for diagnostic or evaluation purposes. The term also includes school health services, social work services in schools, parent counseling and training and residential placement if necessary for educational purposes [34 C.F.R. § 300.34(a)].

PRACTICE TIP:

School Placement Issues. Any deviation from the appropriate placement identified in the IEP must be documented in a review of the IEP by an IEP team within 30 days of the change in placement pursuant to Educ. Code § 56325.

Generally, the local school district where either parent or guardian resides is responsible for providing these services [Educ. Code §§ 48200, 48204]. However, exceptions exist for children not living with a parent or guardian. For example, there is currently considerable controversy over which agency is required to pay for the costs of a residential treatment center when parental rights are terminated or educational rights are limited. The California Office of Administrative Hearings has rendered several decisions on this subject. These, and other decisions related to special education can be found at www.oah.dgs.ca.gov/default.htm.

Both the child and the local educational agency are entitled to a due process hearing when there is disagreement concerning such issues as eligibility, placement, program needs, or related services. These administrative hearings are held by the Office of Administrative Hearings. The burden of persuasion is on the party seeking relief [Schaffer v. Weast (2005) 546 U.S. 49, 51, 126 S. Ct. 528, 163 L. Ed. 2d 387, 393] . As a result of the hearing, the school maybe ordered to provide a particular service or placement, compensatory education, or award reimbursement to a parent who has paid out of pocket for a service that should have been provided by the school. This reimbursement can include the cost of private school tuition [Forest Grove School District v. T.A. (2009) 557 U.S. --, 129 S. Ct. 2484, 2488, 174 L.

Ed. 2d 168, 175 (parents can be awarded reimbursement for private school tuition even where the child has never received special education services in public school)]. Parents and school districts can also attempt to settle their disputes through mediation. In addition, parents can file compliance complaints if the school district is not providing a service listed in the IEP or for procedural violations of IDEA.

[iii] Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973

Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 is a federal anti-discrimination law [29 U.S.C. § 794]. It is not intended to apply solely to education. Rather, Section 504 applies to any program that receives federal funds including preschool, elementary, and secondary schools [29 U.S.C. § 794(a)]. Schools receiving federal funds may not discriminate against individuals with disabilities, exclude disabled children from participating in their program, or deny disabled children the benefits of the program [29 U.S.C. § 794]. In order for a child to be deemed an "individual with a disability" the child must have a physical or mental impairment that substantially limits one or more major life activities [29 U.S.C. § 705(20)]. Major life activities include learning, seeing, hearing, walking, speaking, reading and working.

PRACTICE TIP:

Eligibility Criteria Under IDEA Differ From Section 504. For a child to qualify for special education and related services under the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), the child must have a certain designated disability that causes them to need special education services in order to benefit from their education. Under Section 504, eligibility is not limited to those disabilities defined in IDEA and there is no requirement the child need special education. For example, a child with Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder (ADHD) is entitled to the same education that is available to a child who does not have ADHD under Section 504. However, because ADHD is not one of the disabilities listed under IDEA, a child with ADHD will not automatically qualify for special educations services, although some will if it constitutes an "other health impairment" that adversely impacts his/her educational performance and requires special education. As a result of the less onerous requirements of Section 504, all students who are eligible for IDEA services are eligible under 504. However, the reverse is not always true. This being the case, practitioners should remember that whenever a referral for a special education assessment is made, the request should include an assessment for eligibility under Section 504 as well.

[e] School Discipline

[i] In General

