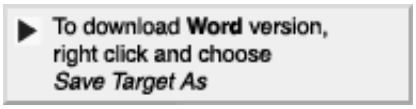
Under CC §§884.010-884.030, the effect of the recorded Memorandum of Option expires 6 months after the option expires according to its terms or, if the memorandum does not specify the expiration date of the option, 6 months after the memorandum is recorded. On the issue of whether the recorded memorandum of option should describe any extension rights, see comment in §8.81. Even with that protection, the optionor wants the ability to require the optionee to deliver a quitclaim deed immediately on the option's expiration so that the property is not encumbered for any period before the statutory expiration date.



The optionee will usually not risk giving a quitclaim deed to the optionor to hold until the option terminates. If the optionor wants the security of an already executed quitclaim deed, it should be held in escrow by a title company or other acceptable escrow holder, with appropriate instructions.

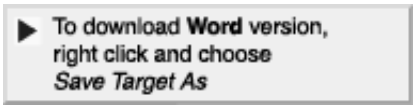
8.74-1 Broker's commission

13. Broker's Commission. The parties acknowledge that _ _[Optionor/Optionee]_ _ has used the services of _ _[name]_ _ (Broker) in obtaining this option. On execution and delivery of this Option Agreement, _ _[Optionor/Optionee]_ _ shall pay to Broker the sum of _ _[dollar amount]_ _ as a commission for the Broker's services in connection with this Option Agreement. Except as expressly set forth in this section or in the Purchase Agreement, neither party has dealt with any real estate agent or broker in connection with this Option Agreement in any manner that creates or may give rise to any right or claim for payment of a commission or other amount on account of this option. Each party shall indemnify, defend, and hold harmless the other from and against all loss, cost, and expense (including, without limitation, attorney fees and defense costs) incurred or suffered because of the breach of the foregoing representation and warranty arising from any claim for compensation founded on or as a result of acts asserted to have been performed on behalf of that party.



Comment: If a broker is involved in obtaining the option, he or she would not normally be entitled to a commission unless the option is exercised and the property is purchased. If a broker is entitled to a commission on execution of the option agreement regardless of whether the option is exercised, the option agreement should separately address the broker's commission rights for the option portion of the transaction. On broker's commission, see also §§2.91-2.121, 4.135.

14. Time of Essence; Failure to Exercise. Time is of the essence of this Option Agreement and is a material term of this Option Agreement. If the option is not exercised as required by this Option Agreement before expiration of the term of the option that is set forth here, the option and all rights of Optionee shall automatically and immediately terminate without notice, and Optionee shall have no interest whatever in the Property. Once it has terminated, the option may not be revived by any subsequent payment or further action by Optionee.

Comment: If the parties agree to an attorney fee clause, it should be included in the option contract as well as in the purchase and sale agreement so that it applies to all aspects of the transaction. See also §4.153 on attorney fees provisions.

MEMORANDUM OF OPTION

This Memorandum of Option is made on _ _[date]_ _, between _ _[name]_ _ (Optionor) and _ _[name]_ _ (Optionee), who agree as follows:

1. Optionor grants to Optionee the option to purchase the real property described _ _[in Exhibit _ _ _/as follows:]_ _ (Option Property).

2. The term of the option is for a period of _ _[e.g., 1 year]_ _ beginning on _ _[date]_ _, and terminating on _ _[date]_ _. _ _[Describe any extension options.]_ _

3. The option that is the subject of this Memorandum of Option is granted in accordance with an option agreement between optionor and optionee concerning the option property and dated _ _[date]_ _ (Option Agreement). This Memorandum of Option is prepared for the purpose of recordation and shall not alter or affect in any way the rights and obligations of optionor and optionee under the Option Agreement. In the event of any inconsistency between this Memorandum of Option and the Option Agreement, the terms of the Option Agreement shall control.

Comment: For discussion of a Memorandum of Option, see §§8.22, 8.73. The form includes a statement of when the option terminates because of the effect of CC §§884.010-884.030, as discussed in §8.73. If the optionee has the right to extend the option for multiple terms, the optionor probably will not want the recorded Memorandum of Option to describe the extensions. The optionee can ensure that a recorded Memorandum of Option will remain in effect in such circumstances by requiring the optionor to deposit with a title company, at the time the Option Agreement is executed, a Memorandum of Option for each extension period with appropriate instructions to permit the title company to record it automatically if the option term extension becomes effective.

The recorded Memorandum of Option must be executed and acknowledged by all parties identified as optionors in the Memorandum of Option. Govt C §27288.

§8.82 X. Form: Right of First Offer Agreement

The form text in this section is part of a larger form. For your convenience, downloading any one of the sections included in the form will download the entire form. The inclusive section numbers are §§8.59-8.83.

8.82-1 Right of first offer agreement

_.1. This Right of First Offer Agreement (Agreement) is made between _ _[name]_ _ (Optionor) and _ _[name]_ _ (Optionee). This Agreement is dated _ _[date]_ _, for reference purposes only.

_.2. Right of First Offer. Subject to the terms and conditions specified in this Agreement, in the event the Optionor proposes to offer or sell the Property described in more detail on Exhibit _ _[e.g., A]_ _ attached hereto (Property), the Offeror shall first offer to sell the Property to Offeree in accordance with the following provisions of this Agreement:

_.2.1. Offeror shall deliver a notice (Offer Notice) to Offeree stating (i) its good faith intention to sell the Property, and (ii) the price, terms, and conditions on which it proposes to sell the Property.

_.2.2. By written notification given by Offeree (Acceptance Notice), within _ _[e.g., 30]_ _ calendar days after the giving of the Offer Notice, Offeree may elect to purchase the Property on the terms and conditions specified in the Offer Notice.

_.2.3. If the Acceptance Notice is not given, or not given in a timely manner, then Offeror may, during the _ _[e.g., 90]_ _-day period (Permitted Sale Period) following the expiration of the period provided in section _ _[e.g., _.2.2]_ _ above, offer to sell the Property to any person or persons at a price not less than, and on terms and conditions no more favorable than, those specified in the Offer Notice. If Offeror does not complete the sale of the Property before the end of the Permitted Sale Period, the right of first offer provided hereunder shall be deemed to be revived and the Property shall not be offered for sale or sold unless first reoffered to Offeree in accordance with this section.

_.2.4. The right of first offer in this section shall not be applicable to sales or transfers of the Property on account of: _ _[e.g., intrafamily transfers]_ _.

_.2.5. The right of first offer set forth in this section may not be assigned or transferred by Offeree except to _ _[name]_ _.

_.2.6. This Right of First Offer shall terminate on _ _[date]_ _.

Comment: See §8.58 for a discussion of the right of first offer. Additional sections should be added to complete the terms and conditions applicable to the agreement. Consider including forms set forth in §§8.73-8.80.

Exceptions to the right of first offer may be required for transactions such as intrafamily transfers, transfers when there is no change of control of the offeror or its successor, transfers by operation of law, and involuntary transfers. Consideration should be given for automatic extensions of the time limit to close the sale of the property when the sale is delayed through circumstances beyond the reasonable control of offeror.

8.83-1 Right of first refusal agreement

_.1. This Right of First Refusal Agreement (Agreement) is made between _ _[name]_ _ (Offeror) and _ _[name]_ _ (Offeree). This Agreement is dated _ _[date]_ _, for reference purposes only.

_.2. Right of First Refusal. Offeror shall not sell the property described on Exhibit _ _[e.g., A]_ _ attached hereto (Property) except in accordance with the provisions of this Agreement. Any such sale shall be pursuant to a written offer (Offer) from Qualified Purchaser, defined below, setting forth the terms and conditions for such proposed purchase, provided that such terms and conditions must provide for an all-cash purchase price and a closing date of not less than _ _[e.g., 30]_ _ days after acceptance of the Offer. A Qualified Purchaser shall be an independent third party that is not directly or indirectly owned or controlled by or under common control with Offeree and that intends to purchase the Property for its own account.

_.2.1. If Offeror receives an Offer that Offeror is willing to accept, Offeror shall give Offeree a copy of the Offer and certify to Offeree that the proposed purchaser is a Qualified Purchaser (Offer Notice).

_.2.2. Offeree shall have _ _[e.g., 30]_ _ days from the delivery of the Offer Notice (Acceptance Period) within which to notify the Offeror of its election to purchase the Property under the terms and conditions specified in the Offer, by giving written notice to the Offeror (Acceptance Notice) of such election.

_.2.3. On delivery of the Acceptance Notice, the Offeror and Offeree shall forthwith proceed to consummate the sale and purchase of the Property on the terms and conditions set forth in the Offer.

_.2.4. If the Acceptance Notice is not given in a timely manner, then the Offeror may thereafter proceed to sell the Property any time within _ _[e.g., 90]_ _ days after the expiration of the Acceptance Period, on the terms and conditions set forth in the Offer, free and clear of any rights of Offeree under this Right of First Refusal with respect to that sale only.

_.2.5. Any sale or proposed sale on any other terms and conditions or after expiration of said _ _[e.g., 90]_ _ days shall be a new sale subject to all of the terms of this Right of First Refusal.

_.2.6. The right of first refusal set forth in this section shall not be applicable to sales or transfers of the Property on account of: _ _[e.g., intrafamily transfers]_ _.

_.2.7. The right of first refusal set forth in this section may not be assigned or transferred by Offeree except to _ _[name]_ _.

_.2.8. This Right of First Refusal shall terminate on _ _[date]_ _.

Comment: See §8.58 for a discussion of the right of first refusal. Because an adequate property description is an essential element of an option contract (see §8.9), it is good practice to make a legally sufficient description a part of the option contract. Additional sections should be added to complete the terms and conditions applicable to the agreement. Consider including forms set forth in §§8.73-8.80.

Exceptions to the right of first refusal may be required for transactions such as intrafamily transfers, transfers when there is no change of control of the offeror or its successor, transfers by operation of law, and involuntary transfers. Consideration should be given for automatic extensions of the time limit to close the sale of the property when the sale is delayed through circumstances beyond the reasonable control of offeror.

this Agreement, except to the extent Buyer has received a credit therefor against the Purchase Price under this Agreement.

_.8.2. Buyer agrees to defend, indemnify, and hold harmless Seller from and against any and all loss, damage, cost, claim, liability, or expense (including court costs and reasonable attorney fees) suffered or incurred by Seller arising out of any events relating to the period following the Cutoff Time, excluding any loss, damage, cost, claim liability, or expense (including court costs and reasonable attorney fees) resulting from the gross negligence or willful misconduct of Seller, or any liability or obligation assumed by Buyer under this Agreement or in any agreement executed and/or delivered at the Closing, or resulting from Buyer's failure to pay any item for which it received a credit against the Purchase Price under this Agreement.

Comment: Sales tax will be payable on the sale of the hotel's tangible personal property, because the seller will hold a resale certificate and there will probably be no exemption from the requirement to pay sales tax. This form provides that the seller will pay the sales taxes. Other agreements provide for an equal division of the sales taxes between the seller and the buyer. See Sales and Mergers of California Businesses §§3.42-3.44 (Cal CEB 2002).

I. INTRODUCTION

§9.1 A. Why Seller Financing?

Few buyers of real property pay the purchase price entirely from their own funds. Most finance the purchase by borrowing from an institutional, governmental, or individual lender; by acquiring the property subject to existing encumbrances; by having the seller defer payment of at least a portion of the price; or by a combination of these devices. The indebtedness resulting from financing is usually secured by withholding title to the property until payment has been made, by encumbering title to the property, or by encumbering some other property. In addition, the seller has a "vendor's lien" on the property for as much of the price as remains unpaid, to the extent that the property is otherwise unsecured. CC §3046.

Although most funds for real property financing come from institutional lenders, such as savings and loan associations and banks, seller financing often plays an important role. Both parties to a sale may wish to defer payment of all or part of the purchase price. The seller may want the tax advantages of installment reporting (see §9.24) or may want to negotiate a higher purchase price in exchange for deferring payment. For the buyer, seller financing generally provides the protections of antideficiency legislation and the avoidance of various lender costs such as points and appraisal fees (CCP §580b; but see Spangler v Memel (1972) 7 C3d 603, 102 CR 807, discussed in §§9.71-9.72, 9.95). Frequently, sellers are willing to give more favorable loan terms and to lend a greater amount of the purchase price than are outside lenders.

If the seller defers part of the price and encumbers the property, the seller may also be asked to participate in the buyer's financing by subordinating the priority of the lien to liens for financing obtained by the buyer from third parties or by agreeing to release the lien from portions of the property as the property is developed or sold. On subordination, see §§9.66-9.99. On release, see §§9.100-9.110.

B. Lawyer's Role

§9.2 1. Financing

The lawyer's role in the financing aspects of the transaction may be crucial. He or she may be called on to perform a wide range of functions, beginning with negotiating the purchase price and the extent to which the seller will participate in financing the buyer's development of the property. Counsel, either alone or together with the seller's accountant, may be required to structure the financing to minimize adverse tax consequences to the seller or to satisfy the requirements of title insurance companies and lenders. The lawyer must either draft the purchase and sale agreement or evaluate one that someone else has drawn. If the buyer needs time to arrange third party financing, the lawyer must make sure that the agreement allows the necessary time. The seller's lawyer must make certain that the buyer is not allowed to postpone the sale unreasonably and that, if the delay is to be substantial, the seller will be protected against possible fluctuations in value and lost opportunities.

If the seller is to provide financing, the type of financing and the security arrangement must be considered carefully because they may have significantly different tax consequences and different remedies available in the event of breach or default.

§9.3 2. Structuring the Buyer

The buyer's attorney must determine the most appropriate legal structure for the buyer. Would title to the property best be taken in the name of the individuals involved, or in a partnership, corporation, or limited liability company? There are serious issues of liability, control, management, and tax implications that the buyer must consider. For a discussion of issues to consider in taking title, see §§4.22-4.28.

It is increasingly common for buyers to take title to property in the form of a single purpose entity (SPE) that is formed solely to hold title to the property and to conduct no other business. Moreover, the lender may require that the SPE be structured as a bankruptcy-remote entity, separate from any other entities owned by the individuals forming the SPE. In this manner, the SPE would be unaffected by a bankruptcy of any related entities. For a discussion of single-purpose entities, see California Real Estate Finance Practice: Strategies and Forms §§1.96, 10.14-10.17 (Cal CEB 2000). The formation of such entities is a complex process and should be handled with care.

Finally, the lawyer for the buyer will have an additional important task. He or she will often be required to issue a legal opinion to the lender regarding the formation of the buyer; and, if a bankruptcy-remote entity was formed, to issue a nonconsolidation opinion (i.e., an opinion that the SPE will not be consolidated with any related entities if there should be a bankruptcy of any of the related entities). See §§1.121-1.130 for a discussion of legal opinions.

3. Standard of Care

§9.4 a. To Clients

The need for the attorney to demonstrate a high degree of care, skill, and diligence in advising clients and drafting documents relating to real property financing cannot be overemphasized. Different financing methods present different drafting problems and possibly different enforcement problems.

EXAMPLE: A purchase agreement with an improperly drafted subordination or partial release clause may be unenforceable or may subject the sale to rescission. See §§9.75, 9.101-9.102. It may also subject the drafting attorney to liability.

Of particular interest is Starr v Mooslin (1971) 14 CA3d 988, 92 CR 583, which involved a transaction in which the seller agreed to take back a promissory note for the balance of the purchase price and to subordinate her lien to a construction loan. The seller recovered a substantial damage award against her attorney for his negligence in drafting escrow instructions that failed to provide adequate protection against the possibility of the buyer's default on the construction loan, despite the attorney's reliance on custom and practice of local escrow holders. See also §1.14 on the attorney's duty of care.

© The Regents of the University of California

§9.5 b. To Third Parties

An attorney's duty to the client in a real property sales transaction generally does not extend to third parties involved in the transaction. See St. Paul Title Co. v Meier (1986) 181 CA3d 948, 226 CR 538, in which an escrow agent, sued by a buyer for failure to properly implement escrow instructions, cross-complained against the buyer's attorney on the theory that the attorney created confusing escrow instructions. The court of appeal affirmed a summary judgment in favor of the attorney, holding that he owed no professional duty to an escrow agent whom he did not represent. The attorney may be liable to the third party, however, if the third party is a third party beneficiary of the transaction or there is foreseeable harm to the third party as a result of professional negligence. See Shawmut Bank, N.A. v Kress Assoc. (9th Cir 1994) 33 F3d 1477, 1505, in which a trustee of bonds was permitted to go to trial on a claim against a law firm hired by the bond issuer to draft the bond indenture. In denying a summary judgment against the trustee, the Ninth Circuit held that the trustee may have been a third party beneficiary of the law firm's drafting, who as such would be entitled to sue for negligent preparation of the trust documents.

C. Usury Considerations

§9.6 1. Seller Financing

There are several exceptions to usury that could protect a lender involved in real estate purchase financing. First, if the seller either provides a note secured by a deed of trust or takes back an all-inclusive note and wraparound deed of trust, the transaction should be exempt from the usury law under the time-price differential doctrine, which distinguishes a credit sale of property from a loan or forbearance, freeing the credit sale from the restrictions of Cal Const art XV, §1. Ghirardo v Antonioli (1994) 8 C4th 791, 35 CR2d 418; Southwest Concrete Prods. v Gosh Constr. Corp. (1990) 51 C3d 701, 274 CR 404; Boerner v Colwell Co. (1978) 21 C3d 37, 145 CR 380; Verbeck v Clymer (1927) 202 C 557, 261 P 1017. See Brown, The Current Status of the Time-Price Differential Doctrine in California, 2 CEB Real Prop L Rep 93, 109 (Aug., Oct. 1979). For a further discussion of seller financing, see California Mortgage and Deed of Trust Practice §9.130 (3d ed Cal CEB 2000). Second, if the loan is structured with the good faith participation of a licensed real estate broker, it is exempt from usury under Cal Const art XV, §1. See §2.9.

If the lender is able to demonstrate that its loan transaction comes within a specific constitutional or statutory exception to the usury law, the lender's actual intent is irrelevant. The transaction is excluded from usury even if the lender's intent is to violate the spirit of the usury law. Jones v Wells Fargo Bank (2003) 112 CA4th 1527, 5 CR3d 835. See California Mortgages, Deeds of Trust, and Foreclosure Litigation, chap 3 (4th ed Cal CEB 2009) for other usury exemptions.

© The Regents of the University of California

§9.7 2. Third Party Wraparound Financing

If a third party provides wraparound financing, usury may be a problem. If the borrower remains personally liable on the underlying indebtedness, then the new lender (the payee on the wraparound note) has lent only the amount of the payee's equity in the note, not its full face amount, and only this equity would be used in deciding whether the interest rate is usurious. However, if the payee of the wraparound note becomes personally liable for the underlying debt, it can be argued that the full principal amount of the wrapped indebtedness, not just the payee's equity in the wrap, should be used to calculate the true interest rate for usury purposes. The suggested rationale is that the payee is then lending credit to the buyer and should be entitled to interest on the full amount of the credit extended, not just the equity. See 4 Miller & Starr, California Real Estate §§10:22-10:23 (3d ed 2000); Comment, The Wrap-Around Mortgage: A Critical Inquiry, 21 UCLA L Rev 1529 (1974); Comment, The Wrap-Around Deed of Trust: An Answer to the Allegations of Usury, 10 Pac LJ 923 (1979). See also California Mortgages, Deeds of Trust, and Foreclosure Litigation, chap 9 (4th ed Cal CEB 2009).

NOTE: Any lender who is considering taking advantage of the wraparound loan should take into account CC §2923.5, which imposes limitations on the lender's right to conduct a nonjudicial foreclosure sale in connection with owner-occupied real property if the underlying loan was made between January 1, 2003, and December 31, 2007. If a lender proposes to wrap around an underlying loan that is subject to these limitations, it is likely that the same limitations will apply to the wraparound loan.

D. Antideficiency Laws

§9.8 1. Applicability of Antideficiency Protections

Under CCP §580b, no deficiency judgment is available after the foreclosure of seller financing, regardless of the size of the property or the amount borrowed. The protection of §580b extends not only to the borrower but also to any party who is the legal equivalent of the borrower, such as the settlor-trustee of an inter vivos trust in which the trust is the borrower under a loan. See Cadle Co. II v Harvey (2000) 83 CA4th 927, 100 CR2d 150.

Protection against deficiency judgments afforded to purchase money borrowers by §580b may not be waived either at the time of or after sale of the property (DeBerard Props. v Lim (1999) 20 C4th 659, 85 CR2d 292) nor may antideficiency protection be waived indirectly. Lawler v Jacobs (2000) 83 CA4th 723, 100 CR2d 52 (CCP §580b precluded seller-lender's fraud claim against purchase money borrowers based on borrowers' written promise to remain liable for deficiency following foreclosure). Moreover, the protection of §580b applies only to the monetary obligations created as consideration for the purchase of the real property interest; it does not apply to liability for "waste" on the property (Nippon Credit Bank v 1333 N. Cal. Blvd. (2001) 86 CA4th 486, 103 CR2d 421) or any other tort obligations that might have arisen in connection with the transaction. See Kolodge v Boyd (2001) 88 CA4th 349, 105 CR2d 749. See also discussion of Lawler in Comment, 23 CEB Real Prop L Rep 313 (Nov. 2000).

§9.9 2. Exceptions to Antideficiency Protections

A sizable body of case law has created an exception to the rule discussed in §9.8 for a seller whose financing was subordinated to a new loan secured by a first deed of trust on the property. This exception to CCP §580b has almost always been limited to situations in which the seller subordinates to a significant construction loan. Moreover, such protections will apply to protect the borrower even when a note is given as security for the purchase of both personal and real property (mixed collateral). Sherwood-Trimble Med. Group v 1001 Venice Blvd. Partnership (1999) 75 CA4th 872, 89 CR2d 533.

NOTE: The exception will not apply if the lender agrees merely to subordinate to future construction, but fails in fact to subordinate. Crookall v Davis, Punelli, Keathley & Willard (1998) 65 CA4th 1048, 77 CR2d 250. See §§9.95-9.97.

Generally, the protections of CCP §580b do not apply when the seller secures its purchase price with a lien on property other than that being sold (Kurtz v Calvo (1999) 75 CA4th 191, 89 CR2d 99), unless the court determines that the property being sold and the property being encumbered were both transferred as a "package" that happened to close at different times (Conley v Matthes (1997) 56 CA4th 1453, 66 CR2d 518). See discussion in Bernhardt, Death Knell for the "Other Security" Deficiency Exception? Coney v Matthes, 20 CEB Real Prop L Rep 260 (Nov. 1997).

For further discussion of antideficiency laws, see California Mortgages, Deeds of Trust, and Foreclosure Litigation chap 5 (4th ed Cal CEB 2009).

II. DISCLOSURE REQUIREMENTS

A. Seller's Disclosures

§9.10 1. Arranger of Credit

Under CC §§2956-2967, when a one-to-four-unit dwelling is involved, specified written disclosures must be made to both the buyer and the seller if financing is provided by an arranger of credit. An "arranger of credit" is broadly defined in CC §2957(a) as any party to the transaction who is a real estate licensee or attorney if neither party is represented by a licensed real estate agent, or any nonparty who is involved in developing or negotiating credit terms, who participates in completion of credit documents, or who directly or indirectly receives compensation for arranging the financing or from the transaction that the financing facilitates. Exceptions to the definition of "arranger of credit" are the escrow agent and any attorney who represents one of the parties. A violation of §§2956-2967 does not invalidate the credit or security document, but it creates a cause of action for actual damages incurred by the seller or the buyer as a result of the violation. CC §2965.

© The Regents of the University of California

§9.11 2. Balloon Payment

To the extent that seller financing under CC §§2956-2967 involves a balloon payment on the note, CC §2966 requires the seller to give at least 90 and no more than 150 days' prior notice of the upcoming payment, including the amount due and any refinancing rights that may exist. For further discussion of CC §§2956-2967, see Fishkin, Disclosures in Creative Financing: Disclosures I, II, and III, 6 CEB Real Prop L Rep 133 (Oct. 1983). See also §6.69.

© The Regents of the University of California

§9.12 3. Appraisals

Business and Professions Code §11423(b) requires that borrowers be notified of their right to receive a copy of any appraisal report for which they have paid. Business and Professions Code §11423(g) seems to create an exception from the notification requirement when the lender obtains an appraisal on property owned by the lender, whether or not the borrower paid for the appraisal. Thus, sellers may not need to comply with this requirement. Federal law provides a similar right to obtain a copy of the appraisal. 12 CFR §202.14.

23. CAUTION:

A. If the Seller financing requires a balloon payment, Seller shall give Buyer written notice, according to the terms of Civil Code §2966, at least 90 and not more than 150 days before the balloon payment is due if the transaction is for the purchase of a dwelling for not more than four families.

B. There are no assurances that new financing or a loan extension will be available when the balloon prepayment, or any prepayment, is due.

C. If any of the existing or proposed loans or extensions of credit would require refinancing as a result of a lack of full amortization, such refinancing might be difficult or impossible in the conventional mortgage marketplace.

D. In the event of default by Buyer: (1) Seller may have to reinstate and/or make monthly payments on any and all senior encumbrances (including real property taxes) in order to protect Seller's secured interest; (2) Seller's rights are generally limited to foreclosure on the Property, pursuant to California Code of Civil Procedure §580b; and (3) the Property may lack sufficient equity to protect Seller's interests if the Property decreases in value.

If this three-page Addendum and Disclosure is used in a transaction for the purchase of a dwelling for not more than four families, it shall be prepared by an Arranger of Credit as defined in California Civil Code §2957(a). (The Arranger of Credit is usually the agent who obtained the offer.)

In addition to the information listed in this form, CC §2963 requires either a statement that a request for a notice of delinquency under CC §2924b has been made or, if no request has been made, a statement that the seller should consider making a request for a notice of delinquency.

The required disclosures (set forth in CC §2963(a)-(p)) must be given to the buyer by both the arranger of credit and the seller (information within the seller's knowledge), and to the seller by both the arranger of credit and the buyer (information within the buyer's knowledge). CC §2956.

No disclosure need be given to the buyer or the seller, however, when he or she is entitled to receive a disclosure under other disclosure laws set forth in CC §2958, such as the Federal Truth in Lending Act (see 15 USC §1604).

NOTE: The Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System may exempt transactions and grant waivers from the Federal Truth in Lending Act. This raises a question of whether, if an exemption or waiver is granted and a party is no longer "entitled to receive" a federal truth in lending disclosure statement, the party then must receive a seller financing disclosure statement under CC §§2956-2957.

III. SELLER-FINANCING DEVICES

§9.14 A. Installment Land Contract

Rather than securing the unpaid portion of the purchase price by a conventional security instrument such as a deed of trust (see §9.22), the parties may agree that the seller will retain legal title to the property until the buyer pays the balance of the purchase price. Under such an agreement, commonly known as an "installment land contract," the buyer holds equitable title and has the right to acquire legal title on completion of the contract. The contract affects the seller's legal title. Usually, possession of the property is transferred to the buyer on delivery of the contract, as are the risks of ownership. Although the seller does not receive a security interest in the property, retention of title operates in effect as security, and the installment land contract is therefore treated as a security device. Venable v Harmon (1965) 233 CA2d 297, 43 CR 490.

© The Regents of the University of California

§9.15 1. Distinguished From Purchase and Sale Agreement

Because the installment land contract is used as a security device, it must be distinguished from the purchase and sale agreement (see chap 4), under which legal title and possession are transferred to the buyer concurrently with payment of the purchase price. Under a purchase and sale agreement, any portion of the purchase price under the agreement not paid at close of escrow is typically represented by a promissory note, which is secured by a deed of trust, mortgage, or other security instrument. Further compounding the confusion over terminology, an installment land contract is called a "real property sales contract" in the Civil Code and is defined as an agreement to convey title on satisfaction of specified conditions, "which does not require conveyance of title within one year from the date of formation of the contract." CC §2985. This definition could include a purchase and sale agreement that does not require closing within 1 year, even though the parties do not intend the agreement to function as a security device.

© The Regents of the University of California

§9.16 2. Decline in Popularity; Disadvantages

The installment land contract was widely used in the early 1960s as an inexpensive and expedient financing vehicle. It also enjoyed some popularity in the 1970s as a device for circumventing due-on-sale clauses, based on the decision in Tucker v Lassen Sav. & Loan Ass'n (1974) 12 C3d 629, 116 CR 633. When the California Supreme Court extended Tucker to sales of property in which financing was evidenced by notes secured by deeds of trust in Wellenkamp v Bank of America (1978) 21 C3d 943, 148 CR 379, this rationale for using installment land contracts disappeared. The virtual overruling of Wellenkamp by the Garn-St. Germain Depository Institutions Act of 1982 (12 USC §1701j-3) has not led to a resurrection of the installment land contract, because the Garn Act probably supersedes Tucker v Lassen as well. See §§9.49-9.53 for discussion of due-on-sale clauses.

Before its brief resurgence in the 1970s, the installment land contract had gradually fallen into disfavor because of a series of court decisions that eliminated any legal advantage the contract offered sellers over a note secured by a deed of trust. See California Mortgages, Deeds of Trust, and Foreclosure Litigation, chap 1 (4th ed Cal CEB 2009) for a discussion of the judicial erosion of the seller's rights under installment land contracts. See also Graham, The Installment Land Contract in California: Is It Really a Mortgage?, 4 CEB Real Prop L Rep 117 (Oct. 1981).

Disadvantages of the installment land contract include the following:

- The applicability of CCP §580b, barring deficiency judgments (Venable v Harmon (1965) 233 CA2d 297, 43 CR 490);
- The existence of an equitable right of redemption under the contract, even for a willfully defaulting buyer (Peterson v Hartell (1985) 40 C3d 102, 219 CR 170; MacFadden v Walker (1971) 5 C3d 809, 97 CR 537; Barkis v Scott (1949) 34 C2d 116, 208 P2d 367; Newhouse v Upchurch (1971) 22 CA3d 204, 99 CR 436);
- The defaulting buyer's right to recover, as restitution, any amounts paid to the seller in excess of the seller's actual damages (Freedman v The Rector (1951) 37 C2d 16, 230 P2d 629); and
- The seller's inability to use an unlawful detainer action to evict a defaulting buyer who refuses to vacate the premises (Greene v Municipal Court (1975) 51 CA3d 446, 124 CR 139; CCP §1161).

Largely because of these disadvantages, the installment land contract is essentially obsolete as a security device in California in most financing transactions and should not be recommended as a financing method. However, the installment land contract is still used to some extent by developers of residential real estate lots.

§9.17 3. Protective Statutory and Regulatory Provisions

A real property sales contract is defined in CC §2985 as an agreement to convey title, on satisfaction of specific conditions, that does not require conveyance within 1 year after the agreement's formation. See §§9.14-9.15. Under CC §2920(b), a real property sales contract is also considered a "mortgage" for purposes of CC §§2924-2924/ (nonjudicial foreclosure sales). Civil Code §§2985.1-2985.6 regulate these contracts and prohibit certain acts that might prejudice the seller's ability to convey unencumbered legal title to the buyer on completion of the contract. For example:

- CC §2985.4 restricts the seller's use of impound payments for insurance and taxes.
- CC §2985.5 requires that the contract contain certain information on tax payments and the contract term.
- CC §2985.6 permits the buyer to prepay the balance due under a contract for sale of land subdivided into a residential lot or lots containing a dwelling for no more than four families, except that the seller may prohibit prepayment for up to 12 months after the sale.

Regulations of the California Department of Real Estate applicable to the use of real property sales contracts in subdivision offerings require the seller to deposit the buyer's payments in an impound account until various conditions for the buyer's protection have been met. 10 Cal Code Regs §2791.9.

B. Lease With Option to Purchase

§9.18 1. Reasons to Use

A prospective buyer can acquire possession but defer payment of the purchase price by using a lease with an option to purchase (known as a "lease-option"). This form of transaction is often used in the following circumstances:

- A home buyer is unable to meet a lending institution's standards for a loan (usually because the buyer lacks the 10- to 20-percent cash downpayment typically required by institutional lenders);
- A commercial lessee (including a ground lessee who has substantially improved the leased property) wants the right to purchase the property during the tenancy or at its end; or
- Market interest rates currently charged by institutional lenders are high and are expected to decline during the term of the lease-option.

In a typical lease-option, the option to purchase can be exercised at any time during the lease term. Because the market value of the property on the sale date may be higher than at the beginning of the lease term, the value of the option increases as its duration lengthens. To take account of inflation, the option price may sometimes be determined by an appraisal or by a formula using the consumer price index. Because the option is likely to become valuable over time and because the buyer-tenant is building "equity" through payment of the option consideration and rent (a portion of which is sometimes applied to the purchase price on exercise of the option), the courts may decline to strictly enforce landlord-tenant remedies that might lead to forfeiture of the option or may be lenient in granting relief from forfeiture under CCP §1179 or CC §3275.

PRACTICE TIP: To protect the interests of the tenant-optionee, the lease and the option agreement (or a memorandum of lease or option) should be recorded with the county recorder.

For more on lease-options, see Office Leasing: Drafting and Negotiating the Lease §§1.75, 23.8 (Cal CEB 1996).

§9.19 2. Hidden Security Device

A lease-option may actually be intended as a security device for the lessor-optionor for a sale in which the seller retains title, rather than as a true lease with an option to purchase. Buyers and sellers have used the lease-option as a hidden security device to

- avoid exercise of a due-on-sale clause in an existing loan at a favorable interest rate (see §§9.49-9.53);
- avoid subordinating the seller's interest to the buyer's construction financing (see §§9.66-9.99);
- obtain favorable tax treatment (see Treas Reg §1.1234-1(a)-(b));
- avoid the effects of government regulations (Frank Lyon Co. v U.S. (1978) 435 US 561, 55 L Ed 2d 550, 98 S Ct 1291); or
- avoid statutory foreclosure requirements (see CC §§2924-2924*l*).

NOTE: A lease-option can also be used wrongfully. In Garcia v Roberts (2009) 173 CA4th 900, 93 CR3d 286, the buyer, who sought a loan to purchase the house he rented, was duped into allowing his purported lender to buy the property and then signed a lease-option document. The jury found fraud. Although, the substance of the case has to do with a procedural issue, the facts are illustrative of the misuse of the device.

3. Distinguishing Lease-Option From Hidden Security Device

§9.20 a. How Courts Distinguish

In determining whether a lease-option is a hidden security device, a court will look to the parties' intent as evidenced by the agreement and the economic realities of the transaction. An important factor in determining whether a lease-option is a security device is a disparity between the purchase price when the option is exercised and the property's value. In re San Francisco Indus. Park (ND Cal 1969) 307 F Supp 271.

A lease-option will also constitute a security device if

- the rent payments are too high to be economically realistic; or
- the payments plus the option price closely approximate the fair market value of the property at the time of the agreement.

See Robinson v Elliot (9th Cir 1958) 262 F2d 383; Haggard v Commissioner (9th Cir 1956) 241 F2d 288; Oesterreich v Commissioner (9th Cir 1955) 226 F2d 798; Frank, Lease With Purchase Option May Be Deemed Disguised Purchase If Caution Not Used, 21 J Tax 66 (1964).

Apparently, the court will accept the parties' characterization of the transaction as a lease-option if the format is compelled by business or regulatory realities and not solely by tax-avoidance considerations. Frank Lyon Co. v U.S. (1978) 435 US 561, 55 L Ed 2d 550, 98 S Ct 1291.

© The Regents of the University of California

§9.21 b. How Tax Treatment Differs

If the transaction is treated as a true lease, the lessor is entitled to deduct depreciation, interest on mortgage loans, and other ordinary and necessary expenses of leasing the property (Frank Lyon Co. v U.S. (1978) 435 US 561, 55 L Ed 2d 550, 98 S Ct 1291), and rent payments are treated as ordinary income to the lessor, even though they may be applied to the purchase price on exercise of the option (Joseph A. Harrah (1958) 30 TC 1236).

If the property is commercial property used in the lessee's business, the lessee may deduct the rent payments as ordinary and necessary business expenses. See IRC §162. If the transaction is treated as a sale, the owner may be able to defer gain until the payments exceed basis (Truman Bowen (1949) 12 TC 446, acq 1951-2 Cum Bull 1) when the price is not ascertainable (see §9.38). The owner would not then be entitled to deduct depreciation and other amounts deductible by a lessor. Frank Lyon Co. v U.S., supra. Nor would a commercial lessee be entitled to deduct rent, but the lessee may be able to take depreciation deductions. On treatment of synthetic leases in which a lease is treated as a lease for financial accounting purposes but as a loan for federal income tax purposes, see Office Leasing: Drafting and Negotiating the Lease §§1.37A-1.37B (Cal CEB 1996).

If a lease-option is found to be a hidden security device, the rights and remedies of the parties on a breach of the agreement (for, e.g., nonpayment of rent) are likely governed by the rules applicable to equitable mortgages (see California Mortgages, Deeds of Trust, and Foreclosure Litigation, chaps 3-5 (4th ed Cal CEB 2009)) and will not be terminable by a summary unlawful detainer proceeding.

© The Regents of the University of California

§9.22 C. Promissory Note Secured by Mortgage or Deed of Trust

The most common seller financing device is a promissory note for the unpaid portion of the purchase price, executed by the buyer in favor of the seller and secured by a lien that enables the seller to foreclose on the property if the buyer defaults. In many jurisdictions, the instrument securing the note is a mortgage, but in California the security instrument is usually a deed of trust. See generally California Mortgages, Deeds of Trust, and Foreclosure Litigation, chap 1 (4th ed Cal CEB 2009); California Real Estate Finance Practice: Strategies and Forms, chaps 3-4 (Cal CEB 2000).

All financing devices have the primary purpose of protecting the lender (in this instance, the seller) if the buyer fails to pay the purchase price. An installment land contract (see §§9.14-9.17) and a lease-option (see §§9.18-9.21) protect the seller by having the seller retain title to the property until the purchase price is paid. In contrast, under the note and security instrument method, the buyer receives title but gives the seller a recordable instrument, which encumbers the property and enables the seller to foreclose in case of default.

A transaction in which a seller "carries back" a note and deed of trust can be structured in many different ways. The seller may accept the entire purchase price in the form of a note. More often, the seller will require a partial cash downpayment. The seller may finance the balance of the purchase price or the buyer may pay a portion of the price with a new third party loan (or assumption of an existing encumbrance), and the seller will receive from the buyer a note secured by a second deed of trust for the balance of the purchase price. On institutional financing, see generally Real Estate Finance §§1.17-1.24. On seller financing with existing encumbrances, see §§9.41, 9.48-9.54. Important federal income tax benefits may inure to a seller who defers payment of the purchase price to later years. See §§9.24-9.39. If the property is to be developed, the buyer may need the seller to participate in financing the development by subordinating its interest to that of construction lenders (see §§9.66-9.99), by releasing portions of the property from the seller's lien as development progresses (see §§9.100-9.109), or both.

California regulates mortgages and deeds of trust extensively. On creation and form of security instruments, see CC §§2920-2944, 2947-2955.5. On foreclosure of security instruments, see CCP §§580a-580d, 725a-730.5; CC §§2924a-2924l.

§9.23 D. Buyer's Obligation to Comply With FIRPTA

Under the Foreign Investment in Real Property Tax Act of 1980 (FIRPTA) (IRC §§897, 1445) (see §§15.80-15.84), the buyer is required to withhold a portion of the purchase price equal to 10 percent of the full amount realized by a foreign seller, including subsequent payments made under a promissory note or any other security instrument carried back by the transferor. IRC §1445(a); Treas Reg §1.1445-1(g)(5). When the initial cash paid by a buyer of a real property interest in the United States is not high enough to cover the withholding liability arising from the sale of the interest (e.g., an installment sale), the buyer and the seller can request a "qualifying statement" from the Internal Revenue Service. A qualifying statement authorizes the buyer to withhold a lesser amount. IRC §1445(b)(4)(B). For a more extensive discussion of FIRPTA, see §§15.80-15.84.

California imposes a similar withholding requirement on sales by nonresidents of California. Rev & T C §§18649, 26131

IV. POSTPONING SELLER'S INCOME TAX LIABILITY

§9.24 A. Installment Method of Reporting Gain

When payment of all or part of the purchase price will be received after the close of the tax year in which the sale occurs, IRC §453 requires that the transaction be treated as an installment sale, unless the seller elects not to use the installment method. For purposes of state taxation, California's treatment of installment sales for individuals conforms generally to federal law. Under the installment method, the seller pays taxes on the realized gain in the tax years that principal payments are received. Dealers in property, real or personal, are barred from reporting on the installment method (with limited exceptions). IRC §453(b)(2)(A). See §9.32. Installment sales under §453 must be distinguished from open transactions (those with a contingent sales price in which the fair market value of the buyer's obligation cannot be ascertained), under which no gain is reported until the property's basis has been recovered, at which point all future payments are reported as gain. See §9.38.

Although IRC §453 ordinarily requires that a qualifying sale be reported as an installment sale, a seller may elect out of the installment method of reporting and instead report the entire gain in the year of sale. IRC §453(d)(1). Except as otherwise provided, an election not to have the installment method apply to a particular disposition must be made on or before the due date (including extensions) for filing the income tax return for the year in which the sale occurs. IRC §453(d)(2); Temp Treas Reg §15A.453-1(d)(3)(i). The election, once made, can be revoked only with IRS consent. IRC §453(d)(3).

§9.25 1. Statutory Requirements; Definitions

The installment method is used to report gains only, not losses. Installment Sales Revision Act of 1980 (Pub L 96-471, §2, 94 Stat 2247). At least one payment must be received in a tax year other than the year of sale. IRC §453(b)(1). The following definitions are important in calculation of gain:

- "Taxable income" is computed for any tax year by multiplying the payments received from the sale by the "gross profit ratio" for the sale:

  Amount Received in Tax Year × Gross Profit Ratio = Taxable Income

- "Gross profit ratio" equals the "gross profit" divided by the "total contract price":

- "Gross profit" equals the "selling price" minus the adjusted tax basis (to which commissions and selling expenses are added) of the property sold.
- "Selling price" equals the gross selling price without reduction for existing loans or expenses of sale.
- "Total contract price," which is the denominator of the gross profit ratio, is computed by reducing the "selling price" by the amount of any loan encumbering the property that the buyer either assumes or takes subject to, or any loan that, if not secured by the property, is incurred or assumed by the buyer incident to the purchase of the property. (The limit of such indebtedness, however, is the seller's adjusted tax basis in the property. See example in §9.28 for situations in which the encumbrance is in excess of basis.)

In addition to cash payments in any given year, the computation of tax on any installment sale includes the following (Temp Treas Reg §15A.453-1(b)(3)):

- Evidence of indebtedness either from persons other than the purchaser or secured directly or indirectly by cash or a cash equivalent;
- Cancellation of any indebtedness of the seller to the buyer;
- Qualifying indebtedness assumed or taken "subject to" by the buyer in excess of the seller's basis in the property (but adjusted for selling expenses); or
- Evidence of indebtedness encumbering the property sold but for which the seller is not liable.

2. Computation Examples

§9.26 a. Typical Installment Sale

The following are examples of typical installment sales:

EXAMPLE 1: An individual taxpayer sells an apartment building for $200,000, receiving a $50,000 downpayment and a $150,000 note secured by deed of trust, payable in 15 equal annual installments of $10,000 plus interest (interest is separately taxed at ordinary income rates) beginning January 1 of the year after the year of the sale. The adjusted basis in the property is $120,000. The current encumbrance, which will be paid at closing, is $30,000. The expenses of sale are $10,000. The tax consequences of the sale are computed as follows:

Gross Profit:	$200,000 − ($120,000 + $10,000) = $70,000
Total Contract Price:	$200,000 (face value of note plus downpayment)
Gross Profit Ratio:	$70,000 ÷ $200,000 = 35%
Taxable Income in Year of Sale:	$50,000 downpayment × 35% = $17,500

YEAR 2 and following
Taxable Income:	$10,000 × 35% = $3500

The $30,000 encumbrance had no effect on the computation because it was paid off at closing.

EXAMPLE 2: If the $30,000 encumbrance had been assumed or taken subject to, the total contract price would have been reduced by $30,000 (as would, of course, the note given to the seller), and the computation would have been as follows:

Gross Profit:	$200,000 − ($120,000 + $10,000) = $70,000
Total Contract Price:	$200,000 (selling price) − $30,000 (encumbrance assumed) = $170,000 (face value of note plus downpayment)
Gross Profit Ratio:	$70,000 ÷ $170,000 = 41.18%
Taxable Income in Year of Sale:	$50,000 downpayment × 41.18% = $20,590

YEAR 2 and following
Taxable Income:	$8000 × 41.18% = $3294 ($8000 is the annual installment on $120,000 installment note payable in 15 equal annual installments plus interest.)

© The Regents of the University of California

Source: Real Property/California Real Property Sales Transactions/9 Seller Financing/§9.27 b. Effect of Recapture

§9.27 b. Effect of Recapture

If the installment method is applied to a sale of real property involving recapture of all depreciation on "Section 1245 property" (generally depreciable personal property and property used in manufacturing, elevators, and escalators) and depreciation in excess of straight-line depreciation on "Section 1250 property" (generally buildings and leases), all "recapture income" must be reported in the year of disposition, whether or not any payment is received in that year. IRC §453(i). This additional increment of taxation is computed at ordinary income rates.

EXAMPLE: Use the same facts as in the first example in §9.26, but assume that $15,000 of depreciation is subject to recapture under IRC §1245 or §1250. This amount will be included in income in the year of the sale, but it will also be added back to the adjusted basis to find the gross profit on the remaining taxable gain.

Gross Profit:	$200,000 − ($120,000 + $10,000 + $15,000) = $55,000
Total Contract Price:	$200,000 (face value of note plus downpayment)
Gross Profit Ratio:	$55,000 ÷ $200,000 = 27.5%
Taxable Income in Year of Sale:
(1) From downpayment:	$50,000 downpayment × 27.5% = $13,750
(2) Ordinary income from recapture:	$15,000

YEAR 2 and following
Taxable Income:	$10,000 × 27.5% = $2750

§9.28 c. Mortgage in Excess of Basis

Although significant economic benefits may be gained by refinancing, a seller whose encumbrances exceed adjusted basis at the time of sale will have to "pay the piper." Payments in the year of sale, therefore, equal the cash received plus the excess of the mortgage over the taxpayer's adjusted basis (when the encumbrance is assumed or taken subject to by the buyer). Temp Treas Reg §15A.453-1(b)(3)(i). The following example illustrates this:

EXAMPLE: Assume that the taxpayer has sold property for $100,000 with an adjusted basis of $30,000. The buyer assumes a $40,000 encumbrance, gives the seller a $10,000 downpayment and a note calling for principal payments (plus interest taxed as ordinary income) of $10,000 in each of the succeeding 5 years. The seller's expenses of sale are $4000.

Gross Selling Price	$100,000
Adjusted Basis	(30,000)
Selling Expenses	(4,000)
Gross Profit	$ 66,000
Selling Price	$100,000
Assumed Encumbrance ($40,000) less excess of Assumed Encumbrance over Adjusted Basis ($40,000 − $30,000) plus Selling Expenses ($4,000)	(34,000)
Total Contract Price	$66,000
Gross Profit Ratio	1:1

Thus, in the year of the sale, 100 percent of the $10,000 downpayment is taxable, plus the excess ($6000) of the encumbrance assumed over the sum of the taxpayer's adjusted basis and the selling expenses, i.e., $34,000. This computation is in accord with Kirschenmann v Commissioner (9th Cir 1973) 488 F2d 270. In subsequent years, 100 percent of the principal payments are taxable.

§9.29 3. Wraparound Financing

The "mortgage in excess of basis" problem may be avoided if the seller makes a sufficient principal payment before sale to eliminate the excess of debt over basis (or, of course, pays the loan off at closing). It has also been held that, if the mortgage is neither taken subject to nor assumed by the buyer, the excess of mortgage liabilities over basis is not a year-of-sale payment.

A common way to structure a transaction so that the buyer neither assumes, nor takes subject to, an existing encumbrance that is left on the property is through the use of wraparound financing. See §§9.56-9.65. With wraparound financing, the seller continues to pay on the underlying debt. Such an agreement is evidence that the buyer has neither assumed the mortgage nor taken the property subject to the mortgage, and therefore no payment in the amount of the excess mortgage has occurred within the meaning of Treas Reg §1.453-4(c). Stonecrest Corp. (1955) 24 TC 659, 667, nonacq 1956-1 Cum Bull 6. Any underlying debt that the seller continues to pay is disregarded for tax purposes.

The IRS took exception to this manner of reporting gain. In 1981, the IRS issued temporary regulations (Temp Treas Reg §15A.453-1(b)(3)(ii)) purporting to nullify the gain, and thus defeating the effect of the Stonecrest technique. In Professional Equities, Inc. (1987) 89 TC 165, the temporary regulations were invalidated by the unanimous ruling of the Tax Court in a case involving the use of an installment land sale contract. This result was followed in Vincent E. Webb (1987) TC Memo 1987-451, involving a wraparound mortgage.

4. Seller's Ability to Limit Prepayments

§9.30 a. Restrictions on Limitations on Prepayment

Frequently, a seller will want to limit the amount received in the year of sale and in future years, either as part of the seller's tax planning or as part of an overall financial plan. The seller's ability to limit the buyer's payments is subject to restrictions, however, which must be carefully considered when structuring an installment sale. There is no right to prepay a note unless it is expressly permitted by either the note itself or a statute (see California Real Estate Finance Practice: Strategies and Forms §1.86 (Cal CEB 2000)), and California statutes do create this right in many real property sales. Civil Code §2954.9 permits prepayment at any time of a loan for residential property of four units or fewer when the loan is secured by a deed of trust, mortgage, or other lien on real property. Even if the property is unimproved when a note is executed, CC §2954.9 applies if both parties agree that the buyers will construct a principal residence on the property within 1 year of purchase and the buyers do so before payment of the prepayment fee. Garver v Brace (1996) 47 CA4th 995, 55 CR2d 220. Civil Code §2985.6 also expressly permits prepayment of real property sales contracts under certain circumstances.

A seller who takes back a security interest can restrict payments in the calendar year of sale under CC §2954.9(a)(3) if the seller does not take back four or more security instruments during the same calendar year. Thus, although the restrictions of §2954.9 may defeat income from being spread over several years, they should still permit a seller to limit payments during the year of the sale.

Civil Code §2954.11, containing provisions similar to CC §2954.9, applies to any installment loan secured by a deed of trust or mortgage or any other lien on residential property of four units or fewer to which CC §2954.9 does not apply. Section 2954.11 does not apply, however, to any loan that is subject to Bus & P C §10242.6 (prepayment penalty provisions applicable to single-family, owner-occupied dwellings).

A taxpayer using an accounting year other than the calendar year should note that §2954.9(a)(3) allows the seller to restrict prepayments only in the calendar year of sale.

EXAMPLE: If a seller on a July 1 to June 30 taxable year sells property in December, prepayments can be restricted only until the end of that calendar year, but the seller's taxable year extends another 6 months. Timing the sale to close in January would enable the seller to restrict prepayments for the remainder of the taxable year.

NOTE: Although legitimate prepayment penalties are enforceable, prepayment penalties that are intended as a delinquency (late-payment) penalty are not enforceable. Ridgley v Topa Thrift & Loan Ass'n (1998) 17 C4th 970, 73 CR2d 378.

© The Regents of the University of California

§9.31 b. Monetary Penalty on Prepayments

An alternative to barring prepayments altogether is imposing a monetary penalty on prepayments. Prepayment charges are permitted for loans for residential property of four or fewer units (CC §2954.9(a)(1)-(2)) but are limited in amount (CC §2954.9(b)). If the property is not residential property of four or fewer units, the only limitation on the prepayment charge is that it not be exorbitant or unconscionable. The seller can calculate the additional tax liability that a prepayment would entail and impose a penalty adequate to cover it. Williams v Fassler (1980) 110 CA3d 7, 167 CR 545 (penalty of 50 percent of any prepayment upheld on showing that additional tax amounted to 41 percent of prepayment).

§9.32 5. Treatment of Dealers

"Dealer" property is that which is held primarily for sale to customers in the ordinary course of a trade or business (see IRC §1221(1)), in contrast with property that is held for use in a trade or business, for investment purposes, or as a principal residence. Gain on the sale of "dealer" property is not entitled to be taxed using the capital gains rates of taxation, which are generally lower than the rates for ordinary income. Currently the maximum rate at which ordinary income is taxed is 39.6 percent (IRC §1(a)-(e)), which is more than the current maximum capital gains rate. Dealers are also prohibited from using the installment method of reporting gain on the sale of "dealer" property, with limited exceptions, for sales made after January 1, 1988. IRC §453(l)(1)(B).

© The Regents of the University of California

§9.33 6. Disposition of Installment Obligations

A seller who contemplates selling an installment note must be aware that disposition of the note normally results in recognition of gain in the year of sale of the note. Unless exempted by statute or regulation, every sale or other "disposition" of an installment obligation results in recognition of gain to the holder of the obligation equal to the amount realized on disposition less the basis of the installment obligation. IRC §453B(a)(1). Because of the breadth of the term "disposition," careful analysis of the proposed transaction must be made if recognition of gain is to be avoided. Transfers such as outright sales, gifts, transfers in trust, cancellations, and so forth will generally be considered dispositions. If the installment obligation arising from a sale in which the price exceeded $150,000 is pledged, the net proceeds of the loan will be considered an installment sale payment as of the later of the time that either the debt is secured directly by any interest in the loan obligation or the loan proceeds are received by the taxpayer. IRC §453A(d). However, neither the seller's death nor various categories of liquidations and corporate reorganizations are considered dispositions.

§9.34 7. Original Issue Discount and Imputed Interest

Buyers and sellers try to exploit the "time value of money," and this economic reality is reflected in the tax treatment of loans carried back in sales transactions. These laws are designed to prevent the distortions that occurred when sellers artificially increased the sales price of a property and reduced the interest rate on the indebtedness carried back by the seller, thus transmuting ordinary interest income into capital gain, which is taxed at a lower rate.

Both the Tax Reform Act of 1984 (Pub L 98-369, 98 Stat 494) and the Simplification Act of 1985 (Pub L 99-121, 99 Stat 505) address the issue of unstated interest (i.e., the stated interest is lower than the minimum amount prescribed by statute). This problem is addressed by the Original Issue Discount (OID) rules of IRC §§1271-1275 and the imputed interest rules of IRC §483.

© The Regents of the University of California

§9.35 a. Original Issue Discount

Original Issue Discount (OID) is defined as the excess of an obligation's redemption price payable at maturity over its issue price. IRC §1273(a)(1). That is, OID is additional interest that has not been specifically provided for in the debt instrument.

In addition, the stated interest element in OID obligations should be compared with a safe harbor rate based on the applicable federal rate. See IRC §1274(c)(2)-(3). If interest is not stated at least at the safe harbor rate, interest is imputed at a higher rate based on the cost of federal funds. See IRC §1274(b).

The OID rules apply to a debt instrument with a maturity of more than 1 year given in consideration for the sale or exchange of property if some or all of the payments due under the debt instrument are due more than 6 months after the date of the sale or exchange and the redemption price payable at maturity exceeds either (1) the stated principal amount of the debt, if there is adequate stated interest, or (2) the sum of the present values of all payments due under the debt, using a discount rate based on the applicable federal rate. See IRC §§1272(a)(2)(C), 1274(c)(1), (3).

§9.36 b. Imputed Interest Rules

The unstated interest rules of IRC §483 generally apply only to payments due more than 6 months after a sale or an exchange under a contract in which some or all of the payments are due more than 1 year after the sale or exchange. IRC §483(c)(1). Section 483 rules do not apply when the sale price is $3000 or less. IRC §483(d)(2).

The imputed interest rules of IRC §483 provide for a self-adjusting rate of interest tied to the cost of federal borrowing on obligations of similar maturities. The imputed interest rules apply only to the extent that the OID rules of IRC §1274 do not. IRC §483(d)(1). Section 1274 does not apply to the following:

- Any real property sale of $250,000 or less;
- The sale of one's principal residence;
- The sale of a farm by an individual, estate, testamentary trust, or defined small business corporation or similar partnership for a sales price of $1,000,000 or less;
- Intrafamily land sales to which IRC §483(e) applies;
- Obligations with a maturity of 1 year or less; or
- Certain other situations.

See IRC §§1272(a)(2)(C), 1274(c)(3). Internal Revenue Code §483(e) limits the discount rate used to determine total unstated interest in certain land transfers of $500,000 or less between family members. Neither §1274 nor §483 applies when a buyer assumes or takes subject to existing debt, unless the terms of that debt are modified. IRC §1274(c)(4).

§9.37 c. Applicable Federal Rate

The test for imputing unstated interest or OID involves a comparison of the agreed rate of interest, based on the maturity date of the instrument, with federally designated short-, mid-, or long-term rates of interest called the Applicable Federal Rate (AFR). Debt instruments not over 3 years in length apply the short-term rate, those over 3 years but not over 9 years apply the mid-term rate, and those over 9 years apply the long-term rate. AFRs are recalculated monthly. If the test is not met, the interest rate will be held to be equal to the AFR and the terms of sale will be recharacterized accordingly. A simplified rule applies for sales involving a debt instrument of not more than $2,800,000 (indexed beginning in 1989), in which the imputed interest is limited to the greater of 9 percent compounded semiannually, or the AFR. See IRC §1274A(a)-(b).

§9.38 B. Open-Ended or Contingent Sales Price

Occasionally, a sales price is not specified but is determined on the basis of future events. For instance, a subdivider may acquire land subject to a pricing formula that will ultimately fix the price based on the number of lots approved by a public agency. Such contingent-price sales must be reported under the installment method unless the seller elects out. Temp Treas Reg §15A.453-1(c)(1). Internal Revenue Code §453(g)(1)(B)(ii) and the implementing regulations prescribe several different ways of reporting gain in these cases.

When the maximum selling price can be ascertained, that price is treated as the "selling price" for purposes of applying normal installment sale calculations. If the maximum amount is later reduced, the gross profit ratio is recomputed in future years to achieve the correct result. Temp Treas Reg §15A.453-1(c)(2)(i)(A).

When the maximum selling price cannot be ascertained but the period of time over which the sale price is paid is known, the adjusted tax basis of the property is allocated in equal annual increments. Temp Treas Reg §15A.453-1(c)(3)(i). For the years in which no payment is received or the amount received exclusive of interest is less than the basis allocated for that year, no loss is allowed unless the taxable year is the final payment year under the agreement. Temp Treas Reg §15A.453-1(c)(3)(i). For those years, the unrecovered portion of the basis is carried forward to the next year. Temp Treas Reg §15A.453-1(c)(3)(i).

If neither the maximum selling price nor the payment period is known, the IRS may question whether the arrangement is a lease or a license rather than a sale (Temp Treas Reg §15A.453-1(c)(4)), but ultimately the taxpayer's basis will be held to be recovered in equal annual increments over a 15-year period if a sale is established to the satisfaction of the IRS. Temp Treas Reg §15A.453-1(c)(2)-(4).

The open-ended or contingent sales rules discussed above substantially reduce the justification for treating transactions as "open." Open transactions are accounted for by using the cost recovery method, under which no gain is realized until the basis is recovered. Its use should be limited to rare and extraordinary cases involving sales for a contingent price in which the fair market value of the purchaser's obligation cannot be reasonably ascertained. Installment Sales Revision Act of 1980 (Pub L 96-471, 94 Stat 2247). If the sale remains open, the payments are applied as received to reduce basis, and only when cumulative payments exceed basis is gain realized. Loss is recognized only when there is no likelihood of further recovery. Burnet v Logan (1931) 283 US 404, 75 L Ed 1143, 51 S Ct 550.

§9.39 C. Relationship to Buyer's Financing Needs

The seller's desire to limit payments in the year of sale and spread the tax benefits over a number of years may conflict with the buyer's need to have land released from the seller's lien as development progresses (see §9.100). Negotiations on deferring payment must take into account factors such as subordination, financing and development needs, partial reconveyances, and release. The forms in §§9.45-9.46 offer suggestions for resolving these competing needs. See also §9.109 on substitution of security.

9.40-1 Cash downpayment

[If appropriate, add to section 3.6 of the purchase and sale agreement (form 4.171-6)]

Buyer shall make a cash downpayment of _ _[dollar amount]_ _ and shall deposit the downpayment into escrow in immediately available funds at least one business day before close of escrow.

[Continue with provision in §9.41, §9.45, or §9.46]

Comment: If all payments are to be made at close of escrow, this form should be used. If there are deferred payments, this form may be used with that in §9.45 or §9.46. If existing financing is to be retained (see §9.41), the precise balance of the financing retained may not be determined until closing, and the precise amount of the buyer's downpayment may similarly not be determined until the loan balance is established. In this case, the amount of the buyer's downpayment may need to be identified as an "approximate" amount to ensure that the downpayment, existing encumbrances, and seller financing (if any) total the exact purchase price.

9.41-1 Credit for existing encumbrances

[Insert after form 9.40-1, if appropriate]

Buyer shall assume _ _[or take title "subject to"]_ _ the existing promissory note in favor of _ _[name of lender]_ _ secured by _ _[e.g., a first]_ _ deed of trust against the property dated and recorded on _ _[date]_ _, as Instrument No. _ _ _, Official Records of _ _[name]_ _ County, and receive a credit toward the purchase price equal to the outstanding principal balance due. As of the execution of this agreement, the approximate outstanding balance of the existing encumbrance is _ _[dollar amount]_ _. _ _[Buyer/Seller]_ _ shall pay all assumption fees and costs incurred in Buyer's assumption of the existing encumbrance.

Comment: When the buyer assumes or acquires title "subject to" existing encumbrance(s), the provision in §9.40 should be followed with this provision, which gives the buyer credit for principal still due on the retained encumbrance(s). See also §4.38 on retained encumbrances.

The parties should ascertain before close of escrow the balance due on prior encumbrances as well as other terms of the notes and security instruments. The buyer should not overlook accrued interest on prior encumbrances and should receive a credit for any accrued interest that is added to principal. Otherwise, interest on any existing financing should be prorated. The agreement should allocate liability for any other charges of the encumbrance, such as accrued late charges, foreclosure costs, assumption fees, impound accounts, and so forth. The parties should also look for prepayment penalties in the existing encumbrances. If the buyer is to assume responsibility for any prepayment penalty in the future (thus allowing the seller to avoid the penalty), the buyer may desire compensation for taking on this liability.

For rights of parties on assumption of encumbrances or taking property subject to them, see §§9.48-9.65. For sales in which the existing encumbrance is government financed or insured (i.e., by the VA or the FHA), see §9.54.

C. Promissory Note for Balance Due

§9.42 1. Form of Loan Documents

Forms of the note and deed of trust to be used should be attached to the purchase and sale agreement to avoid later disputes about their terms. Unless the exact form of the note is attached, the note submitted at close of escrow may or may not provide for attorney fees, grace periods, late charges, allocation of payments between principal and interest, an acceleration clause (see §9.47), or other terms not contemplated by the parties and not discussed during negotiations. If the deed of trust is not attached, the instrument actually submitted might contain restrictions on the buyer's use of the property, or other uncontemplated provisions, although this is unlikely if a standard title company form is used.

Forms for notes and deeds of trust are usually available from title companies, although it is often better for the attorney to draft the note because many of its provisions will be unique to that transaction. A title company deed of trust form will often need some modification and require an addendum. The note and deed of trust must be modified to include the special provisions that the parties have negotiated, such as acceleration of principal (see §9.47), subordination (see §§9.66-9.99), and release and reconveyance of land (see §§9.100-9.110). These provisions can be duplicated from the agreement itself as addendums to the deed of trust. All-inclusive notes and deeds of trust are discussed in §§9.56-9.65.

PRACTICE TIP: From the seller's perspective, caution should be exercised in using standard title company deeds of trust for substantial transactions because these forms often contain inadequate lender protections, especially on the lender's rights to collect rents, liens on personal property, and due-on-sale language.

© The Regents of the University of California

§9.43 2. Security; Title Insurance

When the security for the buyer's note is property other than that conveyed, the nature of the security (e.g., a first deed of trust) should be stated and an exact list of all prior encumbrances given by reference either to an exhibit or to a preliminary report. The seller should obtain a lender's title insurance policy covering the stated priority of the security, together with a statement from the holder or the beneficiary of each itemized encumbrance having priority, as provided in CC §2943. If the security instrument encumbers all or part of the property sold, for clarity its priority should be stated, even though priority can be ascertained from other provisions in the agreement. Title insurance should likewise be obtained by the seller, and the agreement should specify who pays the title insurance premium. On title insurance for lenders, see generally California Title Insurance Practice, chap 8 (2d ed Cal CEB 1997).

© The Regents of the University of California

§9.44 3. Computation of Payments

Payments under the seller's note may be computed in different ways. The payment amounts may remain constant, with the amounts applied to principal and interest varying according to an amortization schedule. This method is the one usually adopted for purchases of residential property. Another method provides for payment of principal in equal installments plus interest either on the unpaid balance or on the payment due. Seller carryback notes also commonly require interest-only payments, with the principal balance due on maturity. Finally, seller financing will sometimes provide for all or part of the interest to be deferred until a specified date or until maturity. When interest is deferred, the agreement and note must specify whether the deferred interest is compounded (i.e., whether it bears interest) and, if so, how frequently (e.g., monthly), and once periodic payments are commenced whether they are calculated on the original principal balance of the note or the balance increased by the deferred interest. Most (but by no means all) seller-carryback notes, even those calling for payments based on a 15- or 30-year amortization schedule, will require a balloon payment.

9.45-1 Note for balance (first-year payments limited)

[Precede with form 9.40-1; see alternative provision, note for balance, in form 9.46-1]

The balance of the purchase price of _ _[approximately/exactly]_ _ _ _[dollar amount]_ _ shall be evidenced by a promissory note executed by buyer in favor of seller, in the form attached hereto as Exhibit _ _, bearing interest at _ _ percent per annum, _ _[principal and]_ _ interest payable in _ _[annual/monthly]_ _ installments, beginning on _ _[or before]_ _ _ _[date]_ _, and continuing on _ _[or before]_ _ the _ _[e.g., tenth]_ _ day of each _ _[e.g., month]_ _ thereafter until paid with the balance of the note payable _ _[e.g., 5 years]_ _ after close of escrow; as long as payments of principal within 1 year after close of escrow do not exceed _ _[dollar amount]_ _.

Buyer's note is to be secured by _ _[e.g., a first deed of trust]_ _ in the form _ _[used by _ _[name of title company or lender]_ _ _ _[as modified]_ _]_ _ in the form attached as Exhibit _ _, _ _[encumbering the property/(describe other security property)]_ _.

Comment: The note may permit the buyer to make larger payments than those provided for in the note by

- specifying periodic payments of a stated amount "or more"; or
- requiring payments to be made "on or before" specified dates.

When the first method is used, payments in excess of the stated amount may not be applied to the next succeeding installment when due but must be applied to reduce either previously accrued interest or the outstanding principal balance. Smith v Renz (1954) 122 CA2d 535, 265 P2d 160. If the second method is used, as suggested in the form, excess payments may be directed by the buyers to satisfy succeeding installments. See CC §1479 on specifying application of payments made by a debtor who is under several obligations to the same creditor. If no right to prepay is specified, the note may not be prepaid (Smiddy v Grafton (1912) 163 C 16, 124 P 433) unless a statutory right of prepayment exists (see, e.g., CC §§2954.9, 2954.11 (residential loans); CC §1916.5(a)(5) (variable rate loans); Bus & P C §10246.6 (broker-arranged loans); 12 CFR §590.4(5) (residential manufactured housing loans regulated by Office of Thrift Supervision); 24 CFR §200.87 (FHA loans); 38 CFR §36.4310 (VA loans); and Mil & V C §987 (Cal-Vet loans)).

The form limits prepayment during the first year after sale in order to preserve installment sale treatment. The purchase price must be paid in more than 1 year to qualify for installment sale treatment. There is no longer a rule restricting the percentage that can be paid in the first year after the sale. An alternative to limiting the amount that can be prepaid in the year following the sale is to prohibit any prepayment in the year of the sale. See §§9.30-9.31. Deletion of the last clause of the first paragraph will result in a fully prepayable note.

Civil Code §2954.9 permits prepayment of a loan secured by owner-occupied residential property of four units or fewer, and the agreement cannot prevent prepayment for sales of such property. Prepayment charges are permitted, but CC §2954.9(b) restricts their amount on loans secured by a mortgage or deed of trust on owner-occupied residential property containing four or fewer units. Civil Code §2954.11 contains similar provisions applicable to any installment loan secured by a deed of trust or mortgage or any other lien on residential property of four residential units or fewer to which CC §2954.9 does not apply. Civil Code §2954.11 does not, however, apply to any loan that is subject to Bus & P C §10242.6 (prepayment penalty provisions applicable to single-family, owner-occupied dwellings). See §§9.30-9.31. Prepayment must be allowed for residential transactions (and first loans of $20,000 or less and second loans of $10,000 or less (Bus & P C §10242.6)), and penalties may be imposed only on prepayments exceeding 20 percent of the original balance in any year during the first 5 years.

In nonresidential situations, absolute prohibitions on prepayment (known as "lock-in" provisions) are enforceable (CC §2954.9), as are reasonable prepayment penalties. See French v Mortgage Guar. Co. (1940) 16 C2d 26, 104 P2d 655; Sacramento Sav. & Loan Ass'n v Superior Court (1982) 137 CA3d 142, 186 CR 823; Williams v Fassler (1980) 110 CA3d 7, 167 CR 545; Stark, Enforcing Prepayment Charges: Case Law and Drafting Suggestions, 22 ABA Real Prop Prob & Trust J 549 (Fall 1987); California Mortgages, Deeds of Trust, and Foreclosure Litigation, chap 8 (4th ed Cal CEB 2009) (on prepayment). In development situations, the buyer often expects land to be released as payments are made, making the release provisions of the agreement closely related to installment payment provisions. For release provisions, see §§9.100-9.110. For another form for seller financing, see section 2.4 of the purchase and sale agreement (form 4.170-4).

9.46-1 Note for balance (annual payments limited)

[May be substituted for form 9.45-1 for balance owed to seller]

The balance of the purchase price of _ _[approximately/exactly]_ _ _ _[dollar amount]_ _ shall be evidenced by a promissory note executed by Buyer in favor of Seller, in the form attached as Exhibit _ _, bearing interest at _ _ percent per annum, due _ _[number]_ _ years after the date of close of escrow. Comment: The seller may want payments spread over as long a period as possible for reporting gain (see §9.24), while the buyer may desire flexibility to pay the seller's note early. This form is a compromise, with a minimum and a maximum prepayable for each year. After reaching the annual maximum, the buyer may wish to have land released or to be permitted to substitute other security for the land after the maximum is reached and still receive the benefit of additional partial reconveyances of land. For a form permitting substitution of security, see §9.109. For variations in the method of paying interest and limitations on prepayment prohibitions and penalties, see §9.44.

9.47-1 Acceleration on default

[If appropriate, add to section 3.6 of the purchase and sale agreement (form 4.171-6)]

The note shall contain the following provision:

If the maker defaults on the payment of principal, interest, or any other sum required under this note when due, or in the performance of any of the agreements in the deed of trust securing this note, or if an involuntary bankruptcy petition is filed against the maker under the United States Bankruptcy Code that is not dismissed within 60 days or if the maker files a voluntary bankruptcy petition under the United States Bankruptcy Code, or if the maker fails to make payments required by any encumbrance having a priority of record to the deed of trust securing this note or to perform any obligation under such encumbrance or otherwise allows any such encumbrance to be in default, the entire principal balance plus accrued interest, if any, shall immediately become due and payable, without notice, at the option of the holder of this note.

[Add if there is a prior encumbrance]

[Continue]

Comment: All installment note forms provide for acceleration of the unpaid balance on default in payment of any installment of principal or interest or performance of any covenant in the deed of trust. If the installment note is attached to the purchase and sale agreement, acceleration provisions should be incorporated in the note and need not be repeated in the agreement. Any changes in a printed form note should be initialed by both parties. The acceleration clause should also appear in the security instrument, which if recorded gives constructive notice to all subsequent purchasers and lien holders. See CC §1214. The definition of actions constituting a default under the security instrument is often broader than that in the note. See California Real Estate Finance Practice: Strategies and Forms, chap 4 (Cal CEB 2000).

Other actions giving the payee the right to accelerate may include selling or further encumbering the property. The latter will be enforceable only in commercial transactions. See §§9.49-9.53 on due-on-sale clauses. This form provides that the seller may declare a default and accelerate the note if the buyer files a voluntary bankruptcy case or is the subject of an involuntary bankruptcy case. The commencement of a bankruptcy case gives rise to an "automatic stay" under 11 USC §362 that prohibits a creditor from taking any action to enforce a debt against the bankrupt party or from enforcing any lien against property of the bankrupt party. However, the "automatic stay" does not apply to protect any guarantor or co-obligor on the note. See In re Chugach Forest Prods., Inc. (9th Cir 1994) 23 F3d 241. Thus, the default-on-bankruptcy language is included to permit action against any guarantor or endorser or co-maker in the event of a bankruptcy of one of the makers.

A defaulting trustor or his or her successor may reinstate the obligation by curing most monetary defaults up until 5 business days before a trustee's sale held under a power of sale, or before entry of judgment of foreclosure. CC §§2924c, 2924e. See California Mortgages, Deeds of Trust, and Foreclosure Litigation, chaps 2-3 (4th ed Cal CEB 2009). The beneficiary under a subordinate deed of trust or a person holding a subordinate lien may also reinstate under CC §2924c by paying the amount in default plus costs and expenses at any time during the period commencing with the date of recordation of the notice of default until 5 business days before the date of a trustee's sale set forth in the initial recorded notice of trustee's sale or, if the sale is postponed for more than 5 business days, until 5 business days before the date of the postponed sale.

VI. RETAINING EXISTING ENCUMBRANCES

§9.48 A. Buyer's Assumption of, or Sale Subject to, Existing Encumbrances

Assuming or taking title subject to an existing encumbrance may permit the buyer and the seller to avoid prepayment penalties and refinancing costs and to retain an existing encumbrance with a favorable interest rate. The terms of the existing financing (including the interest rate, payment terms, and prepayment rights) should be examined by the buyer and compared with those available with new financing. The all-inclusive note and deed of trust is yet another approach to retaining existing encumbrances (see §§9.56-9.65).

A buyer who merely takes title subject to an existing encumbrance is a "nonassuming grantee" and does not become personally liable for the underlying obligation. Cornelison v Kornbluth (1975) 15 C3d 590, 125 CR 557. The lender retains the property as security for payment of the obligation and may hold the original borrower personally liable for a deficiency judgment only if a deficiency judgment is available to the lender. (If the obligation is a purchase-money obligation under CCP §580b, the lender may not hold the borrower liable for any deficiency even if the borrower waived the protection of §580b (DeBerard Props. v Lim (1999) 20 C4th 659, 85 CR2d 292) or if the borrower otherwise promised to remain liable on the loan (Lawler v Jacobs (2000) 83 CA4th 723, 100 CR2d 52; see also Cadle Co. II v Harvey (2000) 83 CA4th 927, 100 CR2d 150).

A nonassuming buyer will, however, be personally liable for waste resulting from intentional or reckless conduct and, in the absence of a CCP §580b defense, may also be liable for waste resulting from negligent conduct. Cornelison v Kornbluth, supra; Leipziger, The Mortgagee's Remedies for Waste, 64 Cal L Rev 1086, 1129 (1976). (However, if the creditor submits a full credit bid at a foreclosure sale on the subject property, it would not be able to recover damages for waste. Michelson v Camp (1999) 72 CA4th 955, 85 CR2d 539.)

The buyer may also assume an existing loan by written agreement with either the lender or the seller. In the latter case, a specific recital of assumption in the deed constitutes a sufficient writing (CC §1624(a)(6)), and the assuming buyer becomes personally liable to the beneficiary for repayment of the loan under a theory of equitable subrogation (Braun v Crew (1920) 183 C 728, 192 P 531). On assumption generally, see also California Mortgages, Deeds of Trust, and Foreclosure Litigation, chap 9 (4th ed Cal CEB 2009); on CCP §580b and exceptions to it, see Mortgage Deed of Trust Foreclosure, chap 5.

Without any express provisions, the seller remains liable under the original obligation. However, the seller's liability is that of a guarantor and will be subject to defenses that are available to a guarantor. See §§4.38-4.43. If the seller desires to be released from liability on the encumbrance being assumed, an assumption agreement in which the lender specifically releases the seller is necessary.

For a more detailed description of assumption of and sale subject to existing encumbrances and their interaction with California antideficiency legislation, see Mortgage Deed of Trust Foreclosure, chap 9.

§9.49 1. Due-on-Sale and Due-on-Encumbrance Clauses

A due-on-sale clause in the existing note and deed of trust may limit the new buyer's ability to take subject to or to assume the obligation. A due-on-sale clause permits the secured lender to accelerate the loan in the event of a sale or other specified transfer or transaction affecting the property. See California Mortgages, Deeds of Trust, and Foreclosure Litigation, chap 8 (4th ed Cal CEB 2009).

a. Enforceability of Clauses

§9.50 (1) Due-on-Sale Clauses

Although California law previously restricted the lenders' rights to enforce due-on-sale (Wellenkamp v Bank of America (1978) 21 C3d 943, 148 CR 379) and due-on-encumbrance clauses (La Sala v American Sav. & Loan Ass'n (1971) 5 C3d 864, 97 CR 849), the enactment of the Garn-St. Germain Depository Institutions Act of 1982 (the Garn Act) (Pub L 97-320, 96 Stat 1469) made such clauses generally enforceable. Section 341 of the Garn Act (12 USC §1701j-3) preempts all state law, including judicial decisions limiting or restricting enforcement of due-on-sale clauses in real property loans, and provides that enforcement of those clauses be governed exclusively by the terms of the loan contract secured by the real property. 12 USC §1701j-3(b)(1)-(2).

The Federal Home Loan Bank Board issued regulations (12 CFR §§591.1-591.6) on May 13, 1983, implementing Garn Act §341. For a discussion of these regulations and their impact on due-on-sale clauses in California, see Rader, The Federal Home Loan Bank Board Issues Final Regulations to Implement the Due-on-Sale Provision of the Garn-St. Germain Act, 6 CEB Real Prop L Rep 93 (July 1983).

§9.51 (2) Due-on-Encumbrance Clauses

In addition to validating the enforceability of due-on-sale clauses, the Garn-St. Germain Depository Institutions Act of 1982 (12 USC §1701j-3) and the implementing regulations (12 CFR §§591.1-591.6; see §9.50) have validated due-on-encumbrance clauses except in certain residential transactions that are expressly exempt from enforcement. However, the original Garn Act contained an exception to enforceability of a due-on-encumbrance clause in the case of junior financing. The Federal Home Loan Bank Board's implementing regulations limited this exception to owner-occupied residential dwellings. The validity of these regulations was initially questioned because the Garn Act's exception was not so limited. Congress later accepted the FHLBB's limitation, however, and amended the Garn Act to provide that personal residences—and only personal residences—are exempt from enforcement of due-on-encumbrance clauses in the event junior financing was placed against the security property. 12 USC §1701j-3(d). This limitation apparently authorized the enforcement of due-on-encumbrance clauses in commercial loans.

§9.52 b. Prohibition on Prepayment Penalties

Under the Garn-St. Germain Depository Institutions Act of 1982 §341 (12 USC §1701j-3), a lender may not impose a prepayment penalty or equivalent fee for, or in connection with, loan acceleration by exercise of a due-on-sale clause when the real property security is an owner-occupied residence. 12 CFR §591.5(b)(2). Depending on the wording of the prepayment penalty clause, the imposition of a prepayment penalty may also be prohibited following a due-on-sale acceleration of a loan entered into before Garn Act §341 was enacted. See Tan v California Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n (1983) 140 CA3d 800, 189 CR 775.

After the decision in Tan, CC §2954.10 was enacted to prohibit a lender from charging a prepayment fee following acceleration of any loan secured by real property, by the exercise of a due-on-sale clause, unless the parties have waived the provisions of §2954.10. The borrower and the lender may agree to waive §2954.10 if the property is nonresidential real property or residential real property containing more than four units, and the borrower may agree to pay a prepayment penalty on acceleration under a due-on-sale clause. The waiver must be separately signed or initialed by the borrower and "its enforcement shall be supported by evidence of a course of conduct by the obligee of individual weight to the consideration in that transaction for the waiver or agreement." CC §2954.10. The Federal Home Loan Bank Board issued similar regulations under the Garn Act in 1985, prohibiting the collection of a prepayment charge on acceleration of a due-on-sale clause in a mortgage or deed of trust encumbering an owner-occupied dwelling. 12 CFR §591.5(b)(2). There are no reported cases addressing whether CC §2954.10 is preempted by the Garn Act.

Civil Code §2954.11 permits a borrower, at any time, to wholly or partially prepay with interest an "installment loan" as defined, secured by a deed of trust or mortgage or any other lien on residential property of four or fewer units. It also provides that a borrower may be obligated to pay a prepayment charge, with stated limitations, when prepaying within 5 years of the date the loan was made.

§9.53 c. Impact on Buyer

Because due-on-sale (and, in most cases, due-on-encumbrance) clauses are fully enforceable, the buyer who wishes to retain an existing loan must pay close attention to the provision in the existing loan documents. Many institutional loans have due-on-sale clauses but provide for assumption by a creditworthy purchaser. Usually, an assumption fee is charged. If the buyer and the seller elect to proceed with a sale "subject to" the existing loan without applying for formal assumption despite the existence of due-on-sale clause, the seller should insist on a provision in the sale contract that indemnifies the seller for liability to either the buyer or the lender in the event the due-on-sale clause is enforced. The seller should also insist on a provision that the indemnification shall survive the close of escrow and remain in effect for the number of years remaining on the loan. The all-inclusive note and deed of trust are sometimes used in an attempt to camouflage a transaction that entitles the lender to accelerate under the due-on-sale clause, although this attempt may not succeed, because lenders tend to rely on notices concerning insurance coverage, rather than noting who actually makes the payments, in order to ascertain a change of ownership.

In a transaction in which the existing loan is retained and the seller takes a junior note and deed of trust for a portion of the purchase price, the buyer and the seller will need to pay close attention to the prohibitions on further encumbrances in the underlying loan documents. If the buyer applies for a formal assumption and the loan contains a due-on-encumbrance clause, the assumption documents should specifically address and consent to the junior loan from the seller, as well as consent for the sale to the buyer.

Even if a deed of trust authorizes a lender to accelerate a loan under a due-on-sale clause, that right may have been waived. Rubin v Los Angeles Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n (1984) 159 CA3d 292, 205 CR 455 (lender accepted payments from new buyer for 2 years with full knowledge of transfer and without any reservation of rights).

If the parties propose to use an option in connection with the transaction, it should be recognized that a true option by itself should not be deemed to violate a due-on-sale provision in any deed of trust. Despite the recent claims of certain large financial institutions, case law makes it clear that an option is merely an offer. See Beakins Moving & Storage Co. v Prudential Ins. (1985) 176 CA3d 245, 253, 221 CR 738. An option creates a contract right in the offeree. Hudson Props. Co. v Governing Bd. (1985) 168 CA3d 63, 72, 213 CR 909. That right is in personam for the option holder. Pacific S.W. Dev. Corp. v Western Pac. R.R. (1956) 47 C2d 62, 66, 301 P2d 825. An option is not an interest in real property. Warner Bros. Pictures v Brodel (1948) 31 C2d 766, 772, 192 P2d 949; Anthony v Enzler (1976) 61 CA3d 872, 876, 132 CR 553. It does not give the optionee any estate in real property. Leslie v Federal Fin. Co (1939) 14 C2d 73, 80, 92 P2d 906; Southern Christian Leadership Conf. v Al Malaikah Auditorium Co. (1991) 230 CA3d 207, 222, 281 CR 216. An option by itself does not result in any change in interest, title, or possession of real property. Vierneisel v Rhode Island Ins. Co. (1946) 77 CA2d 229, 232, 175 P2d 63.

§9.54 2. Transferability of Government Financing

Existing encumbrances may include loans guaranteed by the Veterans Administration (VA) (38 USC §§3701-3714), loans insured by the Federal Housing Administration (FHA) under the National Housing Act (12 USC §§1701-1750g), or loans made by the State of California through the Department of Veterans Affairs (Mil & V C §§985-989.9) (Cal-Vet loans provide for lower interest rates and downpayments than do conventional loans). Loans guaranteed by the VA, for which commitments were made before March 1, 1988, are transferable, although the original borrower remains liable unless released by the VA. 38 USC §3713. VA-guaranteed loans for which commitments were issued on or after March 1, 1988, and loans closed on or after January 2, 1989, may be assumed, although such assumptions require credit approval of the purchaser. 38 USC §3714(f). Loans insured by the FHA that originated before December 15, 1989, are transferable. FHA loans that originated on or after December 15, 1989, are subject to credit approval of the purchaser and the payment of authorized assumption fees. 12 USC §1709(g), (r), as amended by Pub L 101-235, 103 Stat 1987, 2026. Written consent of the Department of Veterans Affairs is required to transfer Cal-Vet loans (Mil & V C §987.1), but assumption is rare because a purchaser who is acceptable to the Department of Veterans Affairs can usually obtain a larger loan in his or her own right, and on assumption the seller loses the right to a second Cal-Vet loan (Mil & V C §987.16).

§9.55 3. Impact of Antideficiency Laws

The practitioner must be aware of the continuing protection of CCP §580b in any situation involving a transfer of the real property or of the debt. A purchaser who acquires property subject to a purchase-money loan or who assumes a purchase-money loan is entitled to the protection of §580b. See Frangipani v Boecker (1998) 64 CA4th 860, 75 CR2d 407. This protection cannot be circumvented by having the parties sign new documents if there are no material changes to the original loan documents. DMC, Inc. v Downey Sav. & Loan Ass'n (2002) 99 CA4th 190, 120 CR2d 761. Moreover, if a purchase-money loan is assigned to a third party, §580b continues to protect the maker despite the assignment. See Costanzo v Ganguly (1993) 12 CA4th 1085, 16 CR2d 55; California Mortgages, Deeds of Trust, and Foreclosure Litigation, chap 5 (4th ed Cal CEB 2009).

Source: Real Property/California Real Property Sales Transactions/9 Seller Financing/§9.55A 4. Restrictions on Foreclosure

§9.55A 4. Restrictions on Foreclosure

In 2008 and 2009 the California Legislature enacted CC §§2923.5-2923.52, which imposed certain restrictions on foreclosure on owner-occupied residential property securing loans made during 2003-2007. Civil Code §2923.5 prohibits recording a notice of default until the lender has satisfied certain notice and restructure requirements. Civil Code §2923.52 imposes an additional 90-day period before the lender may record a notice of sale unless the lender has qualified for an exemption under CC §2923.53. However, both of these statutes apply only to first-priority liens. As a result, a seller who takes a junior secured lien on residential property will have greater foreclosure rights than a first-priority lien holder which made its loan during the designated period.

B. All-Inclusive Note and Deed of Trust

§9.56 1. Definition

The all-inclusive deed of trust, sometimes referred to as "wraparound," or "overriding," is a real property security device used for secondary financing. The terms "all-inclusive deed of trust" and "all-inclusive note" will be used in this text to refer to the deed of trust and promissory note used in an all-inclusive loan.

When used in seller financing, an all-inclusive deed of trust is similar to a conventional second deed of trust, except that the indebtedness represented by the all-inclusive note includes both the deferred portion of the purchase price and the unpaid balance of a promissory note secured by a prior encumbrance. With conventional secondary seller financing, the buyer would assume or take subject to the prior encumbrance.

EXAMPLE: If property encumbered by a first deed of trust securing a promissory note with an unpaid balance of $40,000 is to be sold for $60,000, with a downpayment of $10,000, the seller could take back a note for $10,000 secured by a second deed of trust, or an all-inclusive note for $50,000. The all-inclusive deed of trust will contain the seller's covenant to pay the principal and interest installments accruing on the senior note.

Although the all-inclusive deed of trust may be used for third party as well as seller financing, the discussion in §§9.57-9.65 is limited to seller financing. For discussion of the wraparound deed of trust in third party financing, see Lane, The "Wrap-Around" Mortgage: Tax Problems Related to its Use in Connection with the Refinancing or Sale of Real Estate, 33 NYU Inst Fed Tax 1235 (1975). See also California Mortgages, Deeds of Trust, and Foreclosure Litigation, chap 9 (4th ed Cal CEB 2009). Unless otherwise indicated, the discussion in §§9.57-9.65 assumes the existence of only one prior encumbrance, although an all-inclusive deed of trust and all-inclusive note may wrap around and include any number of prior encumbrances and the obligations they secure.

© The Regents of the University of California

2. Purposes and Uses

§9.57 a. Higher Effective Interest Rate

The primary reason for using all-inclusive instruments is to allow both the buyer and the seller to take advantage of a lower interest rate on the existing loan.

EXAMPLE: If the interest rate on the existing first deed of trust is 6 percent, an all-inclusive second deed of trust at 8 percent will often (depending on the amount of the seller's equity in the wrapped note) generate far more interest for the seller than would a conventional second deed of trust, even at 10 percent, because the wraparound generates interest on the entire principal balance, not merely the additional funds.

Although a seller generally demands a purchase price in excess of the property's cash value as consideration for taking back a conventional second deed of trust, the buyer frequently gets a lower purchase price with wraparound financing because of the higher effective yield received by the seller. The wraparound arrangement may also result in smaller monthly payments than would be required for independent notes covering two unconsolidated loans. See California Mortgages, Deeds of Trust, and Foreclosure Litigation, chap 9 (4th ed Cal CEB 2009). On usury considerations, see §§9.6-9.7 and Mortgage Deed of Trust Foreclosure, chap 9.

© The Regents of the University of California

§9.58 b. Reporting Interest for Tax Purposes

It is unclear whether a seller should report the gross interest received under an all-inclusive note or the net after excluding interest on the underlying first deed of trust for income tax purposes. Some authority exists for reporting the gross amount of the interest received. Lane, The "Wrap-Around" Mortgage: Tax Problems Related to its Use in Connection with the Refinancing or Sale of Real Estate, 33 NYU Inst on Fed Tax 1235, 1243 (1975). The manner in which interest income is reported may affect an individual seller's basis for charitable contributions and a corporate seller's status as a subchapter S corporation or a personal holding company. 33 NYU Inst on Fed Tax at 1243. Whether the interest received is reported on a gross or a net basis will not affect the seller's taxable income.

© The Regents of the University of California

§9.59 c. Seller's Control Over Security

A seller who remains liable for making the payments on the existing senior lien retains greater control over the security and is assured that payments are made as due. See 4 Miller & Starr, California Real Estate §§10:22-10:23 (3d ed 2000). The buyer incurs a corresponding loss of control unless the all-inclusive note provides for payments to be made by the buyer to a third party disbursing agent. Use of such a third party collection agent, however, may cause the seller to realize taxable gain in a sale in which the encumbrances exceed the seller's adjusted basis in the property, because the transaction might be treated as including an assumption of the existing encumbrance by the buyer (see §9.60). See Floyd J. Voight (1977) 68 TC 99, aff'd (5th Cir 1980) 614 F2d 94; Paul Trans Dang, TC Memo 1999-233; Comment, The Wrap-Around Mortgage: A Critical Inquiry, 21 UCLA L Rev 1529, 1551 (1974). In any event, the buyer can obtain some protection by requiring the seller to furnish proof of payment of the underlying note each month and by recording a request for notice of default on the underlying note.

Sometimes buyers and sellers mistakenly believe that an all-inclusive note can be used to avoid a due-on-sale clause in the senior note. While the seller continues to make the payments on the senior note, theoretically the lender would never discover a transfer of the property. This is not a safe assumption, however, because lenders often discover sales by changes in insurance (showing the new buyer as a named insured) or tax records. Some lenders even employ services that check for property transfers. If the parties insist on using an all-inclusive note when the underlying note is due on sale, the buyer and the seller should allocate responsibility for the cost of refinancing if it becomes necessary, and the seller should also agree to subordinate its deed of trust to any such new financing.

© The Regents of the University of California

§9.60 d. Tax Considerations; Installment Reporting

The Installment Sales Revision Act of 1980 (Pub L 96-471, 94 Stat 2247) eliminated the requirement that payments in the year of sale be limited to 30 percent of the total sale price. See §9.25. Therefore, any encumbrance on the property, whether or not in excess of basis, will not affect the seller's ability to qualify for installment reporting, and this particular rationale for wraparound financing no longer applies. However, the excess of encumbrances over the seller's adjusted basis will be treated as a cash payment to the seller in the year of sale unless the seller uses wraparound instruments to be able to defer reporting that excess. See Stonecrest Corp. (1955) 24 TC 659, nonacq 1956-1 Cum Bull 6; Professional Equities, Inc. (1987) 89 TC 165, invalidating Temp Treas Reg §15A.453-1(b)(3)(ii). For further discussion of the tax consequences of all-inclusive instruments, see §9.29.

© The Regents of the University of California

§9.61 3. Drafting All-Inclusive Instruments

The all-inclusive deed of trust and the all-inclusive note must be drafted carefully, not only to achieve the benefits discussed in §§9.57-9.60 but to conform to the terms of the underlying first deed of trust and the note it secures. In addition, the all-inclusive deed of trust and the note must contain provisions satisfactory to the institutional trustee and to the title company that may be asked to conduct the trustee's sale and to insure title following delivery of a trustee's deed. Standard form deeds of trust customarily used in California are inadequate for this purpose and must be modified and supplemented. Some title companies have their own forms of the all-inclusive note and all-inclusive deed of trust. These forms should only be used after careful review and, if needed, modification. For an extensive discussion of drafting considerations, see Caplan, The Wrap-Around Merry-go-round, 1 Real Prop News 1 (Summer 1980).

The note and deed of trust must be drafted with the needs of the parties to the specific transaction in mind. Because these needs vary so greatly, it is difficult to draft all-purpose wraparound forms. It is possible, however, to pinpoint issues that must be addressed in drafting any wraparound instrument.

© The Regents of the University of California

§9.62 a. Consistency With Underlying Obligations and Encumbrances; Prepayments; Amortization

The most important point in drafting all-inclusive instruments is that they be consistent with the terms and provisions of the underlying note and deed of trust to ensure that the buyer's obligations and the seller's rights are not less than those of the maker and the payee under the underlying note.

EXAMPLES: Any event that constitutes a default or that permits acceleration of the first note should also be a default or permit acceleration under the all-inclusive note. If the underlying note contains a late charge provision, a similar provision should be added to the all-inclusive note and the wraparound deed of trust.

The seller may wish to schedule payments on the all-inclusive note enough in advance that the seller need not suffer out-of-pocket costs to make the payments on the underlying note and will also have time to pursue collection if the buyer does not pay on time.

Prepayment restrictions are a separate issue to be negotiated. If the underlying debt is locked in, with prepayments prohibited, the all-inclusive note and deed of trust should either prohibit prepayment or specify that prepayment is limited to the seller's equity in excess of the underlying debt. The buyer who has the right to prepay under the all-inclusive note may want to include a requirement that the seller execute a reconveyance when the unpaid balance of the all-inclusive note equals the balance on the senior note. The seller, however, may want the note to provide that the seller will continue to realize the interest differential even though his or her equity has been reduced to zero. If prepayment is to be permitted, the parties must decide how any prepayment is to be allocated between the wraparound and the underlying obligations. They must also decide who is to pay any prepayment charges incurred under the underlying note.

Payments on the all-inclusive note must be established after consideration of amortization schedules for both the note and the underlying debt, to ensure that the balance on the all-inclusive note will, throughout its life, exceed the balance on the underlying note. If the all-inclusive note is amortized faster than the underlying note, the principal balance of the underlying obligation could eventually exceed the balance on the all-inclusive note. When the underlying note is amortizing and the all-inclusive note is interest-only or is amortizing more slowly, the parties must allocate the benefit of the principal reduction on the underlying note to either the lender or the borrower.

© The Regents of the University of California

§9.63 b. Rights in Case of Default

The rights of each party if the other party defaults should be clearly spelled out. For example, most all-inclusive notes make the seller's covenant to make payments on the underlying note conditional on the buyer's performance of his or her obligations under the all-inclusive instruments. This condition seems an essential protection for the seller, who otherwise might be contractually obligated to continue paying on the underlying obligation despite the buyer's default on the wraparound. The buyer, however, needs protection against the seller's failure to make payments on the underlying note. This is frequently accomplished by providing that the buyer may make payments directly to the holder of the first deed of trust when the seller fails to do so, and that those payments will be credited against the next installments due under the all-inclusive note. The buyer might also require the seller to submit proof of payment within a specified time after the due date of each installment on the underlying obligation, or simply secure an agreement from the holder of the underlying encumbrance to send notice of a default. In any event, the buyer should include in the wraparound deed of trust, or separately record, a request for notice of default and notice of sale under CC §2924b. With the use of an installment land contract, it is a criminal offense for the seller to fail to properly apply the installment payments to the existing encumbrance. CC §2985.3. No similar provision exists, however, to compel the seller who takes back an all-inclusive note to pay on the underlying indebtedness.

© The Regents of the University of California

Source: Real Property/California Real Property Sales Transactions/9 Seller Financing/§9.64 c. Foreclosure

§9.64 c. Foreclosure

Provisions regarding foreclosure under wraparound instruments are extremely important because many title companies will neither act as trustee nor insure title unless foreclosure provisions are clearly set forth. Questions arise because the trustor's payments on the all-inclusive note include amounts due on the underlying obligation:

- Does the holder of the wraparound deed of trust declare a default on both obligations or only on the installments due on the all-inclusive note?
- Does the holder bid the amount of the holder's equity or the full amount due on the wraparound at the trustee's sale?

Because the holder of the wraparound is obligated to pay on the included encumbrance, the wraparound instruments should provide that failure to pay on the wraparound is a default on that obligation only. The documents should provide that the purchaser at the trustee's sale acquires only the seller's equity, and therefore takes title subject to the senior lien.

9.65-1 Provision in purchase and sale agreement for all-inclusive financing

[Precede with form 9.40-1]

The balance of the purchase price shall be evidenced by an all-inclusive promissory note executed by Buyer in the form attached, secured by an all-inclusive deed of trust in the form attached, and bearing interest at _ _[number]_ _ percent per year, principal payable in _ _[e.g., 12]_ _ equal _ _[annual/monthly]_ _ installments, beginning on _ _[date]_ _, and continuing until the principal and interest due have been paid.

The total principal amount of the all-inclusive note shall include the unpaid principal balance of the following underlying promissory note(s) secured by deed(s) of trust:

(1) (a) Promissory note:

Maker:_____

Payee:_____

Date:_____

Original amount:_____

Unpaid balance:

(b) Deed of trust:_____

Beneficiary:_____

Original amount:_____

Recordation date:_____

Place of recordation: _ _ _ _ _ _ County, California

[Repeat as necessary for each note and deed of trust]

Comment: Drafting a provision for the purchase agreement is obviously simplified if the forms for the wraparound instruments have been agreed on and can be attached. If they are not available, key provisions to be included in the all-inclusive instruments should be specified in the purchase agreement itself. On drafting considerations, see §§9.61-9.64.

VII. SELLER'S PARTICIPATION IN BUYER'S FINANCING

§9.66 A. Subordination

In addition to deferring a portion of the purchase price, the seller may be asked to assist in financing the buyer's development of the property either by subordinating the seller's purchase money deed of trust to liens for construction or permanent financing or by releasing portions of the property from the purchase money deed of trust as payments are made on it.

By subordinating his or her lien, the seller agrees that it will become junior in priority to the encumbrance to which it is subordinated, generally a lien for construction financing. Because the seller's security is at risk for successful completion and operation of the project, the seller will often require additional protection such as a lien on other property owned by the buyer or an increased purchase price. If the buyer intends to subdivide the security property or the property consists of multiple lots, it may be important to negotiate releases in addition to the subordination to enable the buyer to sell lots free of encumbrances as they are developed. See §§9.100-9.110.

1. Subordinating to Construction Loans

§9.67 a. Competing Factors

When a developer buys land for subdivision or construction, the problem arises of financing both the land purchase and the construction. Two factors create a problem:

- A deed of trust securing a note for the purchase price of the land is given statutory priority over other liens, subject to the provisions of the recording acts (CC §2898; see DMC, Inc. v Downey Sav. & Loan Ass'n (2002) 99 CA4th 190, 199, 120 CR2d 761 (purchase money lien has priority over all other liens, even liens prior in time, because purchase money financing enables buyer to acquire subject property)); and
- Institutional lenders that normally furnish construction loans usually insist that they be secured by a first lien on the property.

Some institutional lenders may even be required to obtain a first lien. See, e.g., Fin C §§1227 (state-licensed commercial banks), 1560 (trust companies). National banks are regulated by the Comptroller of the Currency and have more latitude than state banks. See 12 USC §371(a). Savings and loan associations, both federally chartered and state licensed, generally have more latitude in their lending activities. See, e.g., 12 USC §1464(c)(1)(B). For discussion of the real estate lending regulations pertaining to state and federal banks and savings and loan associations, see California Real Estate Finance Practice: Strategies and Forms §1.19 (Cal CEB 2000).

§9.68 b. Methods of Providing First Lien

The buyer-developer can provide the institutional construction lender a first lien by doing either of the following:

- Recording the construction loan deed of trust at the close of escrow before recording the seller's purchase money deed of trust (see §9.69); or
- Obtaining the seller's consent to subordinate the seller's lien to the lien securing construction financing when obtained (see §9.70).

The effect of subordination is to change the order of priority of the liens, which is created by the recording acts. Although an agreement on the order of recording security instruments at close of escrow is not truly a subordination agreement, both types of agreements may be treated by the courts as subordination agreements, and the rights and obligations of the construction lender and the seller may be treated similarly regardless of how their respective loan priorities are achieved. Middlebrook-Anderson Co. v Southwest Sav. & Loan Ass'n (1971) 18 CA3d 1023, 96 CR 338; see California Mortgages, Deeds of Trust, and Foreclosure Litigation, chap 9 (4th ed Cal CEB 2009); 5 Miller & Starr, California Real Estate §§11:193-11:194, 11:197 (3d ed 2000).

§9.69 (1) Order of Recordation

Because a construction loan is not usually obtained until all development approvals are received and building permits are issued, the construction deed of trust is often recorded after recordation of the seller's deed of trust, and sometimes a significant time period elapses before the construction deed of trust is recorded. Similarly, permanent (or "take out") loans typically replace the construction financing after completion of the project and long after the seller's deed of trust was recorded (although it is not unusual for the permanent financing to pay the seller's note in full).

© The Regents of the University of California

§9.70 (2) Automatic Subordination; Subordination Agreement

Subordination may be accomplished automatically if the seller's deed of trust includes a provision that subordinates the lien of the deed of trust to those of the construction loan, the permanent loan, or both. Subordination may also be achieved by using a separate, recorded subordination agreement. Institutional lenders and title companies almost universally require that a change in order of priority be obtained by a separate subordination agreement, rather than by an automatic subordination provision in a deed of trust. See 5 Miller & Starr, California Real Estate §11:187 (3d ed 2000).

© The Regents of the University of California

§9.71 c. Risks to Seller

Following subordination to a construction loan, the property will generally be over-encumbered during the construction period because the total amount of the liens will exceed the value of the property until the improvements are completed. The seller receives some protection from the fact that most construction loans are disbursed by the lender in the form of progress payments as improvements are built and the value of the property theoretically increases correspondingly. See 5 Miller & Starr, California Real Estate §11:186 (3d ed 2000). However, these protections are not expressly for the benefit of the seller, and the seller cannot rely on the lender's enforcement.

A seller's interests may also be protected by making sure that the subordination agreement restricts the terms of the construction loan so that the proceeds may only be used to pay for improvements on the property. See §9.78. But see Swiss Prop. Mgmt. Co. v Southern Cal. IBEW-NECA Pension Plan (1997) 60 CA4th 839, 70 CR2d 587 (under terms of subordination agreement, lender not obligated to supervise disbursement of loan proceeds on behalf of subordinated seller). See §9.85.

When buyers default, few sellers are able either to take over and complete an unsuccessful real property development or to meet the payment obligations on the construction loan in order to prevent foreclosure of the senior lien. Some institutional lenders require that the contractor obtain a completion bond, giving additional protection for completion of construction for both the construction lender and the seller who holds a junior lien. The seller may want to condition subordination on the contractor posting such a bond even if the construction lender does not require it. If the construction loan is foreclosed, the buyer may be insolvent despite being personally liable for repayment of the seller's note. See Spangler v Memel (1972) 7 C3d 603, 102 CR 807; §9.95. Many practitioners recommend against subordination by a seller who is not a sophisticated real estate developer because of the many pitfalls for sellers (and their attorneys). See Starr v Mooslin (1971) 14 CA3d 988, 92 CR 583.

§9.72 d. Seller's Benefits

In deciding whether to subordinate, the seller must consider (in addition to the purchase price) these factors:

- The developer's financial strength and ability;
- The economic potential of the proposed development;
- The availability of reserves to cover cost overruns and periods of high vacancies; and
- The state of the real property market.

Sellers will normally agree to accept the risks of subordination only in exchange for some benefit, such as a higher purchase price. In Spangler v Memel (1972) 7 C3d 603, 613, 102 CR 807, the court noted that the seller's agreement to subordinate made it possible to obtain the financing required to realize the commercial potential of the property, which in turn justified the higher purchase price (and, in a subordinating construction loan, the elimination of the buyer's purchase money antideficiency protection under CCP §580b). See also Jack Erickson & Assocs. v Hesselgesser (1996) 50 CA4th 182, 57 CR2d 591. In DeBerard Props. v Lim (1999) 20 C4th 659, 85 CR2d 292, however, the supreme court held that agreement to subordinate must in fact be acted on, i.e., there must be an actual subordination to a construction loan that reduces the property's value at the time of sale. Moreover, the amount of the construction loan must be significant relative to the purchase price of the property. See Lawler v Jacobs (2000) 83 CA4th 723, 100 CR2d 52.

§9.73 2. Types of Subordination Agreements

Subordination agreements are frequently classified as either executory or executed. An executory agreement (see §§9.74-9.82) is a mere promise by the seller to execute a subsequent subordination instrument. An executed subordination agreement may be either an automatic subordination agreement, as discussed in §9.86, or an executory agreement that became executed by the seller's actions in signing and recording a subordination instrument. Executed subordination agreements are discussed in §§9.83-9.87.

© The Regents of the University of California

§9.74 a. Executory Subordination Agreement

An executory subordination agreement is a promise by the seller to execute a subsequent instrument subordinating the seller's lien to the lien of a later loan. See Handy v Gordon (1967) 65 C2d 578, 55 CR 769; Magna Dev. Co. v Reed (1964) 228 CA2d 230, 39 CR 284. An executory agreement may be contained in a purchase and sale agreement, may be part of the seller's deed of trust, or may be a separate agreement.

PRACTICE TIP: The best practice (from the buyer's perspective) is to make the subordination agreement a part of or an addendum to the deed of trust so that any subsequent transferee of the note and deed of trust will clearly have notice of and be bound by the agreement. For further discussion and forms, see §§9.75-9.82. In addition, if the buyer has identified the prospective construction lender, that lender should review and approve the form of the subordination agreement.

§9.75 (1) Enforceable: Certain and Reasonable

When the seller has made an executory agreement to subordinate the purchase money lien, the most important legal concern to the buyer is whether the buyer will be entitled to specific performance to compel the seller to carry out the seller's promise to subordinate. To be enforceable, an executory subordination agreement must be both certain and reasonable. Handy v Gordon (1967) 65 C2d 578, 55 CR 769. Often, the seller's subordination covenants are set forth in the purchase and sale agreement in addition to being made a part of the seller's deed of trust. If the subordination provision is unenforceable, the entire purchase and sale agreement is unenforceable (absent a severability clause), even if the buyer attempts to waive the subordination provisions. Handy v Gordon, supra; Magna Dev. Co. v Reed (1964) 228 CA2d 230, 39 CR 284.

The detailed terms of the subordinating loan must be stated if the agreement is to be sufficiently certain to be enforced specifically (Handy v Gordon, supra), and the terms of the subordination agreement must be just and reasonable to the seller (CC §3391(2)). In Handy, the California Supreme Court held that the agreement must define and minimize the risk that the subordinating liens will impair or destroy the seller's security. The court criticized several aspects of the purchase and sale agreement:

- The failure to limit the size and number of lots into which the property was to be subdivided;
- The lack of restrictions on the use of loan funds (leaving the possibility that funds might be used for purposes other than improvements, thus depleting the buyer's equity);
- The low downpayment ($100, which was insufficient to cushion the seller's position); and
- The deferral of any payment of principal to the seller until 3 years after close of escrow.

Decisions after Handy demonstrate the courts' willingness to deny both specific performance and damages under executory subordination agreements, particularly when enforcement is sought against unsophisticated sellers. See Butcher v Dauz (1967) 257 CA2d 524, 65 CR 166; Spellman v Dixon (1967) 256 CA2d 1, 63 CR 668; Loeb v Wilson (1967) 253 CA2d 383, 61 CR 377.

Compare Woodworth v Redwood Empire Sav. & Loan Ass'n (1971) 22 CA3d 347, 99 CR 373, in which specific performance was granted even though the loan terms were not specified in the subordination provisions, because the seller was an active participant in the financing and development, with Ray Thomas Enters. v Fox (1982) 128 CA3d 361, 180 CR 253, in which the court upheld a subordination provision in an agreement for purchase of a mobilehome park even though it did not state the terms of the institutional loan to be taken out by the purchaser. The court distinguished Handy on these grounds:

- The loan to be obtained was a purchase money loan rather than a construction loan; and
- There was sufficient equity to protect the holder of the note.

See also Schneider v Ampliflo Corp. (1983) 148 CA3d 637, 196 CR 172, in which the court distinguished Handy and held that foreclosure was an available remedy even though specific performance was not.

§9.76 (2) Required Terms

To meet the test of certainty (see §9.75), the subordination agreement must specify the maximum principal of the new loan, maximum interest rate, maximum term, and mode of payment. Cummins v Gates (1965) 235 CA2d 532, 45 CR 417. To meet the additional test of fairness and reasonableness to the seller (Handy v Gordon (1967) 65 C2d 578, 55 CR 769), the agreement should include provisions that limit the terms of the new loan and the disbursement of its proceeds, including the following:

- The minimum repayment term, as well as the maximum, to avoid a burdensome balloon payment that the buyer might be unable to meet (see 5 Miller & Starr, California Real Estate §11:190 (3d ed 2000)).
- The purpose of the loan, what costs are to be paid from the loan proceeds, and the requirement that the loan funds be used only to construct improvements on the property or other specified uses (Weiss v Brentwood Sav. & Loan Ass'n (1970) 4 CA3d 738, 84 CR 736; Ruth v Lytton Sav. & Loan Ass'n (1968) 266 CA2d 831, 72 CR 521).
- The amount of loan fees and other charges, such as prepayment penalties, and other material provisions of the note and deed of trust to be delivered to the lender (charges amounting to 13.5 percent of the total loan have been held excessive in the absence of a provision for them (Collins v Home Sav. & Loan Ass'n (1962) 205 CA2d 86, 22 CR 817)). One solution is to specify permitted charges (e.g., all costs of obtaining the loan or discounts, including loan fees, appraisers' charges, and escrow and title insurance fees) and set a maximum for them. Interest payments during the construction loan period and other indirect construction costs such as construction bond and insurance premiums, real property taxes during the construction loan period, leasing commissions, and legal expenses are sometimes also specified with appropriate limitations as to amount.
- If applicable, a description of the improvements to be constructed on the property (Handy v Gordon, supra).

When subordinating to a construction loan, the seller might also insist on assurances that the buyer has a firm commitment for take-out or permanent financing. Jones v Sacramento Sav. & Loan Ass'n (1967) 248 CA2d 522, 56 CR 741. Often, agreements will provide for subordination to take-out financing, as well as construction financing. The terms of the permanent financing should also be specified. See §9.81.

Other terms of the subordinating loan that might be specified are the following:

Land improvement costs. The following is an example of a provision detailing the permitted charges for construction of a residential subdivision:

9.77-1 Optional terms: land improvement costs

(a) Actual construction costs of the dwelling with the usual appurtenances, including garage, patio, driveway, and fencing, but including expenditures only for labor and materials by Buyer or by an entity owned in whole or in part by Buyer;

(b) A prorata share of aggregate costs of general subdivision improvements, which shall consist of engineering fees, architectural fees, drafting fees, permit and inspection fees, map recording charges, subdivision bond premiums, on-site and off-site grading and excavation costs, and all costs for improvements required by the City of _ _[name]_ _ for approval of a subdivision map. The prorata share for each lot in the subdivision shall be determined by dividing each of the foregoing costs by the number of lots for which each cost is incurred.

Developer's fee. If the subordinating construction loan includes a distribution to the buyer-developer for a development or construction supervision fee, the subordination agreement should state this. See Collins v Home Sav. & Loan Ass'n (1962) 205 CA2d 86, 22 CR 817. Similarly, if the buyer will act as the general contractor, a specific provision for payment of a fee to the borrower as the general contractor should be included.

Purchase price of land. The subordination agreement should state whether loan proceeds may be applied to the purchase price of the land. Radunich v Basso (1965) 235 CA2d 826, 45 CR 824.

Other charges. The subordination agreement should describe any other charges that may be payable. In Ruth v Lytton Sav. & Loan Ass'n (1968) 266 CA2d 831, 72 CR 521, the interest rate of the construction loan was subject to increase from 6.75 percent to 8.75 percent on default. The court held that the loan did not comply with the conditions of the subordination agreement, which limited the interest rate to 7.2 percent.

9.78-1 Executory subordination provision in purchase agreement

[Precede with form 9.45-1 or 9.46-1]

4. Seller agrees to subordinate the lien of the deed of trust described in paragraph 3, above _ _[one time/from time to time]_ _ to the liens of one _ _[or more]_ _ subsequent deed(s) of trust in accordance with the terms, covenants, and conditions set forth below. Buyer and Seller shall execute a subordination addendum in the form attached as Exhibit _ _[see §§9.80-9.82 for Subordination Addendum]_ _ to be attached to the deed of trust described in paragraph 3. Seller's obligation to subordinate to subsequent deed(s) of trust securing loan(s) obtained by Buyer (the Subordinating Loans) is subject to the following terms and conditions:

(a) The proceeds of the Subordinating Loans shall be used only to _ _[specify, e.g., construct improvements, pay or reimburse Buyer, reimburse trustor for construction or development costs, repay other liens that are senior to Seller's deed of trust]_ _;

(b) The total amount of the Subordinating Loans shall not exceed _ _[specify dollar amount or percentage of appraised value and describe appraiser's qualifications and procedure for obtaining appraisal]_ _;

(c) The Subordinating Loans shall have the following additional terms and conditions:

(1) The interest rate shall not exceed _ _[specify fixed percentage or floating index, e.g., the prime rate charged by _ _[name]_ _ Bank plus _ _ percent]_ _, exclusive of late charges, penalties, or fees payable in case of default;

(2) The Subordinating Loans shall require _ _[specify frequency, e.g., monthly]_ _ payments of _ _[specify, e.g., interest only, amortizing principal and interest payments]_ _;

(3) The Subordinating Loans shall have a term of not less than _ _[number]_ _ _ _[months/years]_ _ or more than _ _[number]_ _ _ _[months/years]_ _;

(4) The maximum loan fees payable on the Subordinating Loans shall not exceed _ _[dollar amount]_ _; and

(5) _ _[Specify other material terms such as prepayment rights or penalties, amount of interest reserve, etc.]_ _

Comment: This provision is to be included in the purchase and sale agreement. It should specify the terms of the subordinating loans in as much detail as possible to protect the seller and to enable the buyer to enforce it if necessary. If the subordinating lien will secure a construction loan, the improvements to be constructed should be described in as much detail as possible. The seller may wish to reduce the risk further by imposing additional conditions on subordination to a construction loan. These conditions will depend on the circumstances of the transaction, but they might include the following requirements:

- The buyer must obtain a firm commitment for a permanent loan;
- The buyer must enter into a satisfactory commercial lease with major tenants for a specified number of square feet of building improvements;
- The buyer must obtain bonding for off-site improvements; or
- The construction lender must agree that (1) the seller will be provided with notice and an opportunity to cure defaults and (2) noncurable defaults will not be grounds for foreclosure if the seller promptly performs all other provisions of the subordinating note and deed of trust.

(5) Subordination Addendum

§9.79 (a) Information to Include in Subordination Addendum

The form in §9.80 contains the basic information that should be included in the subordination addendum, which should be attached to and recorded with the seller's deed of trust. The subordination addendum should also address the mechanism for accomplishing the subordination. At a minimum, the addendum should provide for the buyer to notify the seller in writing when a subordination is necessary. The addendum should specify the documents to be given to the seller in connection with the request for subordination and should specify which party is to bear the costs of subordination. The addendum should contain a covenant to execute a standard title company subordination agreement within a given time period and any and all further documents reasonably necessary to effect the subordination. In some circumstances, a buyer may seek a power of attorney to execute the subordination documents on the seller's behalf. The attorney for the seller should recommend against granting a power of attorney so that the seller will retain control over the subordination. The addendum should also specify that it is part of the seller's deed of trust.

9.80-1 Subordination addendum

This Subordination Addendum is attached to and forms a part of that certain deed of trust (the Deed of Trust) dated _ _[date]_ _, executed by _ _[name]_ _ as the trustor in favor of _ _[name]_ _ as a beneficiary and naming _ _[name]_ _ as the trustee.

In consideration of the trustor's execution and delivery of the Deed of Trust, as long as the trustor is not in default, the beneficiary hereby agrees to subordinate the lien of the Deed of Trust _ _[one time/from time to time]_ _ to the lien(s) of one _ _[or more]_ _ subsequent deed(s) of trust covering any lot or group or groups of lots described in this agreement, covering the described property, in accordance with the terms, covenants, and conditions set forth in this addendum. Any subordination under this addendum shall be effected through the following procedure:

(a) The trustor shall request the subordination in writing. The written request shall be delivered to the beneficiary together with a sample of the proposed promissory note, deed of trust, assignment of rents, and construction loan agreement for the subordinating loan, the proposed subordination agreement, and other loan documents or information as the beneficiary may reasonably request. The request and loan documents shall specify the lender's identity; the purpose for which borrowed funds may be used; the loan amount, interest rate, and maturity date; and _ _[specify any other items defined in the subordination agreement; see §§9.76-9.77]_ _.

(b) The beneficiary shall be entitled to review and approve the loan documents, as long as the beneficiary's approval is not unreasonably withheld or delayed. The beneficiary's approval shall in no event be withheld or delayed if the loan documents contain only the provisions described in this addendum and such other provisions as institutional lenders customarily require for construction loans of the type described in this addendum.

(c) Within _ _[number]_ _ days after receipt of the trustor's written request for subordination and the materials provided for above, the beneficiary shall either

(1) deliver to the escrow holder an original subordination agreement duly executed and acknowledged by the beneficiary (in form and substance satisfactory to the beneficiary in the standard form prepared by _ _[name]_ _ Title Company) or

(2) deliver to the escrow holder and to the trustor written notice of the beneficiary's specific reasons for not approving the proposed loan and subordination documents.

(d) All subordination costs shall be borne by the _ _[trustor/beneficiary]_ _.

(e) The loan shall be evidenced by a promissory note not in excess of an amount arrived at by multiplying the number of lots described in the deed of trust securing the note by _ _[_ _[dollar amount]_ _/_ _ percent of the property's value as appraised by _ _[specify identity or qualifications of appraiser]_ _]_ _.

[Alternative 2: If land to be subdivided; individual loans only]

(f) The loan shall be used for _ _[specify]_ _. The loan proceeds shall be disbursed in payment, or in reimbursement for payment, of only the following:

[Specify uses permitted; see Comment below]

(g) The subordinating loan documents shall authorize the trustor to receive loan disbursements from the lender by a voucher payment plan based on inspection for work completed and submission by the trustor of an invoice or a voucher for payment of, or for reimbursement for payment of, and release of the lien in connection with the items designated in paragraph _ _[e.g., (f)]_ _. The beneficiary's lien priority shall not be reduced as a result of the trustor's misuse of disbursements or the falsity of vouchers or invoices certified and lien releases submitted by the trustor.

Comment: The forms in §§9.81-9.82 provide additional provisions that should, depending on the circumstances, be included in a recorded executory subordination agreement. As recommended above, the agreement should be structured as an addendum to the seller's deed of trust. It may also be necessary to insert certain cautionary language in 10-point or 8-point boldface type at the beginning of the document. See §§9.89-9.94.

The subordination agreement should state clearly what payments may properly be made from the subordinating loan. Disbursements that do not enhance the value of the property increase the encumbrance to which the seller is subordinated without increasing the seller's security. Because this use of funds is unfair to the seller, such an agreement cannot be specifically enforced. Handy v Gordon (1967) 65 C2d 578, 55 CR 769. The statement of permitted disbursements in the recorded security instrument is constructive notice to later encumbrancers. The lender's priority under an automatic subordination clause in a deed of trust will require the loan's provisions to meet the conditions under which the seller agreed to subordinate. Middlebrook-Anderson Co. v Southwest Sav. & Loan Ass'n (1971) 18 CA3d 1023, 96 CR 338. However, see Swiss Prop. Mgmt. Co. v Southern Cal. IBEW-NECA Pension Plan (1997) 60 CA4th 839, 70 CR2d 587, in which riders to deeds of trust that required a lender to disburse loans only for construction purposes were superseded by a CLTA form subordination agreement. See §9.84. For this reason, the seller may be required to execute an additional subordination agreement specifically describing the subordinating loan. See §9.82.

PRACTICE TIP: Institutional lenders require title insurance insuring the priority of their deed of trust. If the lender's priority is to be insured, the agreement must provide that its lien will retain priority under terms acceptable to the lender. These are matters for negotiation among the buyer, seller, and lender. On endorsements available for lenders regarding subordinations, see California Title Insurance Practice §§8.95-8.96 (2d ed Cal CEB 1997).

This form should be used to ensure that proper controls are retained for disbursements under the senior construction loan. The suggested provision calls for the voucher system frequently adopted by lenders and retains the lender's lien priority when that system is used. The voucher system is discussed in California Mechanics' Liens and Related Construction Remedies §§8.48, 8.75 (3d ed Cal CEB 1998). A developer who is unaccustomed to working under a voucher system might refuse to accept this provision. In that case, the seller might consider requiring that the buyer furnish a surety bond under which the seller would be an obligee. Opinions differ about the efficacy of a bond in this situation. The method used and the extent to which each party's interests will be protected are matters for negotiation. Other methods include requiring the seller's approval and execution of voucher requests, and employing an independent third party (such as Builders Control Escrow) to disburse the construction loan proceeds.

Whatever method is used, the buyer will incur additional costs in the form of loan fees, insurance premiums, and other charges. These costs may be accounted for in the subordination agreement by fixing a maximum for them and allowing them to be paid from the proceeds of the construction loan.

9.81-1 Subordination to permanent loan

After completion of the construction of improvements on the property as described in paragraph _ _[number]_ _, the Deed of Trust shall be subordinated to a deed of trust securing a permanent loan on _ _[the property/the lot/each lot]_ _ from a bank, a savings and loan association, or an insurance company (or other institutional lender), as long as the total amount of indebtedness secured by liens on the property that are senior to this Deed of Trust do not exceed _ _[_ _[dollar amount]_ _/_ _ percent of the appraised value]_ _, including all costs of obtaining the loan or discounts not in excess of _ _[dollar amount]_ _, and containing the following additional terms: _ _[Specify interest rate, term, etc.; see form 9.78-1]_ _.

Comment: The construction loan is frequently based on a commitment for a permanent loan after construction is completed, and the seller will want assurance that a commitment for permanent financing has been obtained. See §9.76. If the seller intends to retain the deed of trust after the permanent financing is obtained, the subordination agreement should provide for further subordination to the permanent loan, requiring that the permanent loan be used to pay the construction loan in full. Often, the seller will require that the note be paid when the construction loan matures, especially if the amount of the permanent loan will exceed the amount necessary to pay off the construction loan. The same need for certainty about lender, maximum amount, interest rate, maturity date, and amortization applies for permanent loans as for construction loans. See §9.75.

With developments built for resale, subordination to a permanent loan should permit payment to the seller when the property is sold to the ultimate purchaser. This result might be accomplished by either

- accelerating the buyer's note on resale to the extent of the release price per lot (see §§9.100-9.110 on release clauses); or
- leaving this aspect of subordination to future negotiations and omitting the provision from the purchase and sale agreement or subordination addendum. If this issue is left to future negotiations, any new agreement must be supported by new consideration. CC §1698.

9.82-1 Execution of additional subordination agreement

Seller agrees, on request, to execute and deliver to Buyer for recordation a subordination agreement or agreements in the form attached as Exhibit _ _, in favor of any lender's loan to which Seller's lien is to be subordinated under the terms of this Deed of Trust. The terms of any such subordination agreement executed by Seller shall prevail over the subordination terms provided for in this Deed of Trust.

Comment: Title companies generally require that a specific subordination agreement be executed by the seller and recorded concurrently with the subordinating loan. See §9.80. The form of the subordination agreement to be attached must be acceptable to the title company insuring the subordinating loan. See Swiss Prop. Mgmt. Co. v Southern Cal. IBEW-NECA Pension Plan (1997) 60 CA4th 839, 70 CR2d 587. Subordination agreements satisfactory to title companies have been prepared by the California Land Title Association and are available from most title companies. Any variation from these forms should be approved in advance by the title company that will insure the priority of the subordinating loan. In addition, using a title company's proprietary form leaves the title company with less room to dispute coverage if priority issues arise out of a challenge to the adequacy of the form.

The clause above is an expansion of the requirement in form 9.80-1 at (c)(1).

§9.83 b. Executed Subordination Agreement

There are two types of executed subordination agreements: an agreement that was previously executory and an automatic subordination agreement. An automatic subordination occurs when the seller's lien is recorded together with an executed agreement that provides that the lien of the subsequent construction or take-out loan will automatically be senior to the seller's lien. Carpenson v Najarian (1967) 254 CA2d 856, 62 CR 687; Joanaco Projects, Inc. v Nixon & Tierney Constr. Co. (1967) 248 CA2d 821, 57 CR 48. To insure the lien of the later, subordinating deed of trust as senior to the subordinated deed of trust, title companies usually require execution of an additional agreement subordinating the seller's lien to the particular construction loan obtained. 5 Miller & Starr, California Real Estate §11:187 (3d ed 2000). For this reason, automatic subordination is particularly disfavored or is combined with an obligation to execute a formal subordination agreement at the time the subordinating lien is recorded. If there is any variation between the new agreement and the original subordination agreements, the new agreement will be unenforceable unless it is supported by new consideration. Miller v Citizens Sav. & Loan Ass'n (1967) 248 CA2d 655, 56 CR 844. For further discussion of automatic subordination and form, see §§9.86-9.87.

When a subordinating loan is made in reliance on an automatic subordination agreement, or when a subordination is made under a previously executory agreement, the legal problems that may arise will differ from those encountered in executory agreements (see §§9.75-9.78). If the new loan complies precisely with the subordination agreement, and if the funds are not misapplied, an agreement that when still executory might have been too uncertain to be enforceable becomes a valid executed agreement, and the new loan achieves priority over the seller's lien. If, however, the new loan does not conform with the subordination agreement, either because of a discrepancy in the loan terms or because loan funds are misapplied, the new lender may not be able to attain the priority sought despite the subordination agreement.

© The Regents of the University of California

§9.84 (1) Discrepancy Between Agreement and Loan

A discrepancy between the loan described in the subordination agreement and that actually entered into may entitle the seller's deed of trust to retain priority. A change in the interest rate or term, or inclusion of other clauses adversely affecting the seller's interests, might be sufficient to invalidate the subordination. In Collins v Home Sav. & Loan Ass'n (1962) 205 CA2d 86, 22 CR 817, the interest rate charged complied with the subordination agreement, but a 13.5-percent loan placement fee did not, and the seller's lien retained its priority.

© The Regents of the University of California

§9.85 (2) Misapplication of Funds

If the construction lender knows or should know of the buyer's application of loan funds to uses or purposes not permitted by the subordination agreement, the construction lien may lose its priority. United States Bldg. & Loan Ass'n v Salisbury (1932) 217 C 35, 17 P2d 140; Radunich v Basso (1965) 235 CA2d 826, 45 CR 824. In one decision, the court allowed the construction lender priority to the extent that funds were disbursed in accordance with the subordination agreement but held that the lender's lien was junior to the seller's lien to the extent that funds were misapplied. Miller v Citizens Sav. & Loan Ass'n (1967) 248 CA2d 655, 56 CR 844. Note that this holding created three encumbrances rather than two: a lien for the amount of the properly used funds, the seller's subordinated lien, and the lien for the misapplied funds.

Some buyers have attempted to avoid this rule by including in the subordination agreement a conclusive presumption that the construction loan funds have been properly applied. In Joanaco Projects, Inc. v Nixon & Tierney Constr. Co. (1967) 248 CA2d 821, 57 CR 48, the court held such a purported presumption ineffective to shelter the buyer from immunity for its own misconduct.

Sellers have had less success in recovering damages for lenders' misfeasance in failing to ensure the buyers' compliance with the subordination agreement than in retaining the priority of the sellers' liens, as in the cases cited above. Courts have held that the lender owes no duty of care to the seller, because there is no privity of contract between lender and seller. Weiss v Brentwood Sav. & Loan Ass'n (1970) 4 CA3d 738, 84 CR 736; Fries v Broadway Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n (1968) 258 CA2d 119, 65 CR 460; Gill v Mission Sav. & Loan Ass'n (1965) 236 CA2d 753, 46 CR 456; Matthews v Hinton (1965) 234 CA2d 736, 44 CR 692.

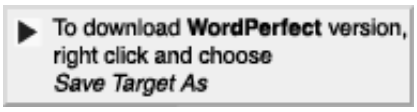
§9.86 (3) Automatic Subordination Agreement



An automatic subordination clause differs from the executory subordination agreement only in the way the subordination becomes effective. In other words, the automatic subordination agreement provides that the deed of trust is subordinated when the later deed of trust meeting the terms of the clause is recorded. The subordination agreement in §§9.80-9.82 contemplates that additional acts will be necessary to effect the subordination.

§9.87 (4) Form: Automatic Subordination Agreement

9.87-1 Automatic subordination agreement

As long as no unrescinded notice of default under its terms then appears of record, this Deed of Trust shall be subordinate to deed(s) of trust thereafter executed by the trustor

[Continue by specifying terms of subordinating loan; see forms in §§9.80-9.82]

Comment: This clause is used together with the specific description of the loan terms, as in form 9.80-1. It provides for automatic subordination if no default appears of record. The seller may prefer permitting subordination only if no default exists under the deed of trust. For similar language on reconveyance, see §9.105. Title companies will almost universally not insure the priority of the subordinating loan based on an automatic subordination clause. Instead, a subordination agreement executed by the seller expressly subordinating the purchase money deed of trust to the new loan must usually be recorded concurrently with the new loan instruments. See §9.82. Thus, little reliance should be placed on an automatic subordination clause, and a formal subordination agreement should be executed concurrently with the recordation of the subordinating lien.

§9.88 c. De Facto Subordination Agreement

A de facto subordination is created when the seller and the buyer agree that, at close of escrow, the construction deed of trust will be recorded first and the purchase money deed of trust recorded second and subordinated to the construction lender's lien. Some commentators contend that such an agreement does not result in reordering the priority of the liens and is thus not a true subordination situation. See 5 Miller & Starr, California Real Estate §§11:193-11:195 (3d ed 2000). For all practical purposes, however, courts have treated this situation as raising the same issues that exist under subordination agreements (see §§9.75-9.76), regardless of the mechanics used. Thus, whether the lender's lien retains priority still depends on whether the construction loan complies with the conditions under which the seller agreed to modify the order of recording (Middlebrook-Anderson Co. v Southwest Sav. & Loan Ass'n (1971) 18 CA3d 1023, 96 CR 338), and the construction lender faces the same risk of loss of priority when funds are misused as under any other form of subordination (Gluskin v Atlantic Sav. & Loan Ass'n (1973) 32 CA3d 307, 108 CR 318).

The case of Friery v Sutter Buttes Sav. Bank (1998) 61 CA4th 869, 72 CR2d 32, restricted Gluskin v Atlantic Sav. & Loan Ass'n, supra, to situations in which a seller, having taken back a lien on the property, subordinated its position to the buyer's lender. However, when the seller voluntarily acquires a position junior to a preexisting lienholder, absent special circumstances the senior lienholder owes the junior no duty to refrain from modifying the senior indebtedness that would substantially impair the junior note or increase the likelihood of default. 61 CA4th at 871.

The lender must also comply with subordination conditions of which it has actual or constructive knowledge. Plastino v Eureka Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n (In re Sunset Bay Assocs.) (9th Cir 1991) 944 F2d 1503.

§9.89 3. Cautionary Language Required

The Civil Code requires that specific warnings be given in subordination provisions to advise the holder of the lien being made junior of that fact and its implications. Warnings must be included in certain instruments containing subordination clauses (CC §2953.2) and subordination agreements (CC §2953.3), but they need not appear in a purchase agreement that provides for the seller to carry back a second deed of trust. The statutes do not apply when the subordination provisions expressly state that the subordinating loan is to exceed $25,000 (CC §2953.5(a)) or when the subordinated loan exceeds $25,000 (CC §2953.5(b)). Although these statutes thus apply to very few real property transactions, many title companies insist that the statutory language be inserted in any deed of trust with subordination provisions.

§9.90 a. Automatic Subordination

If, under the terms of the instrument creating it, a security interest becomes subordinate to another lien when certain conditions occur, the instrument containing the subordination provision must have the word "subordinated" at its top in at least 10-point bold type if printed or in capital letters and underlined if typewritten. CC §2953.2. The following provision must appear immediately below in at least 8-point bold type if printed or in capital letters if typewritten (CC §2953.2(b)):

NOTICE: This _ _[insert description of real property security instrument]_ _ contains a subordination clause which may result in your security interest in the property becoming subject to and of lower priority than the lien of some other or later security instrument.

© The Regents of the University of California

§9.91 b. Security Instrument Permits Proceeds to be Used for Nonimprovement Purposes

If the security instrument permits the proceeds of the new senior loan to be used for purposes other than paying for improvement of the land, CC §2953.2 requires that the following provision appear immediately above the space for the signature of the subordinated lienor in at least 8-point bold type if printed or in capital letters if typewritten (CC §2953.2(c)):

NOTICE: This _ _[insert description of real property security instrument]_ _ contains a subordination clause that allows the person obligated on your real property security instrument to obtain a loan a portion of which may be expended for other purposes than improvement of the land.

For situations in which the lender's subordinating lien achieves priority by being recorded earlier than the seller's subordinated lien, the California Attorney General has declared that the notice provisions of CC §2953.2 do not apply. 43 Ops Cal Atty Gen 19, 22 (1964). If the subordinating or subordinated lien is less than $25,000, however, the statutory notice must be included in deeds of trust on subordination agreements if the forms in §§9.78, 9.80-9.82 are used.

§9.92 c. Agreement Causes Security Interest to Become Junior

An agreement that causes a security interest to become junior to a new loan, either conditionally or otherwise, must have the words "subordination agreement" at the top in at least 10-point bold type if printed or in underlined capital letters if typewritten. CC §2953.3. The following language must appear immediately below in at least 8-point bold type if printed or in capital letters if typewritten (CC §2953.3(b)):

NOTICE: This subordination agreement _ _[may result/will result]_ _ in your security interest in the property becoming subject to and of lower priority than the lien of some other or later security instrument.

© The Regents of the University of California

§9.93 d. Agreement Permits Proceeds to be Used for Nonimprovement Purposes

If the agreement permits the proceeds of the new senior loan to be used for purposes other than actual contract costs for improving the property, the following statement must appear immediately above the space for the signature of the subordinated lienor in at least 8-point bold type if printed or in capital letters if typewritten (CC §2953.3(c)):

NOTICE: This subordination agreement contains a provision that _ _[allows/may allow]_ _ the person obligated on your real property security to obtain a loan a portion of which may be expended for other purposes than improvement of the land.

© The Regents of the University of California

§9.94 e. Right to Waive

These statutory provisions may be waived by the person whose lien is being subordinated. CC §2953.4(c). However, because the Attorney General has declared that the subordinated lien must be signed and delivered before any steps are taken to sign the waiver (43 Ops Cal Atty Gen 19 (1964)), including the statutory language is preferable to relying on the seller's willingness to waive his or her rights after the event.

4. Effect of Subordination on Antideficiency Rules

§9.95 a. Exemption From Antideficiency Protection

A buyer who executes a note and deed of trust in favor of the seller receives the antideficiency protection of CCP §580b. However, the later subordination of the seller's deed of trust may entitle the seller to recover a deficiency judgment despite §580b.

When the seller agrees to an actual subordination of the purchase money deed of trust to a construction loan, the purchase money antideficiency protection of CCP §580b no longer applies. The change in use of the property renders the present security value of the property irrelevant. Spangler v Memel (1972) 7 C3d 603, 102 CR 807. The supreme court reasoned in Spangler that the intended purpose of §580b—to place the risk of overvaluation on the seller—would not be furthered by applying it in this situation. The purpose of §580b is not served by having the subordinating seller bear the risk of the ultimate success of the construction project. Thus, a sold-out-seller junior lienholder whose deed of trust is subordinated to construction financing may sue on the promissory note representing the unpaid balance of the purchase price.

© The Regents of the University of California

§9.96 b. Express Waiver Not Required

The buyer in Spangler v Memel (1972) 7 C3d 603, 102 CR 807 (see §9.95) had specifically agreed to waive CCP §580b and personally guaranteed the seller's carryback note. However, a subordinating seller appears to benefit from the Spangler court's ruling even without this explicit waiver. In Jack Erickson & Assocs. v Hesselgesser (1996) 50 CA4th 182, 57 CR2d 591, the court held that the buyer waived §580b protection by having the seller subordinate his security to a construction loan and by later inducing the seller to reconvey the deed of trust so that the buyer could complete a sale to a third party. In Ziegler v Barnes (1988) 200 CA3d 224, 246 CR 69, and Boyle v Sweeney (1989) 207 CA3d 998, 255 CR 153, subordinating sellers were not barred from recovery by §580b even though no written agreement waiving §580b was executed by the buyer.

Source: Real Property/California Real Property Sales Transactions/9 Seller Financing/§9.97 c. Mere Promise to Subordinate Not Sufficient

§9.97 c. Mere Promise to Subordinate Not Sufficient

The antideficiency exception specified in Spangler v Memel (1972) 7 C3d 603, 102 CR 807 (see §§9.95-9.96) will not apply if the lender agrees to subordinate to future improvement loans, but fails in fact to subordinate. Crookall v Davis, Punelli, Keathley & Willard (1998) 65 CA4th 1048, 77 CR2d 250.

Moreover, the courts have questioned the validity of a contractual waiver of CCP §580b that does not involve actual subordination of the loan, as contrasted with an agreement to subordinate, which is not implemented. See DeBerard Props. v Lim (1999) 20 C4th 659, 85 CR2d 292; Webber v Inland Empire Invs., Inc. (1999) 74 CA4th 884, 88 CR2d 594; Budget Realty, Inc. v Hunter (1984) 157 CA3d 511, 204 CR 48.

§9.98 d. Nonconstruction Loan

The cases following Spangler v Memel (1972) 7 C3d 603, 102 CR 807, all arose when the seller's lien was subordinated to a construction deed of trust. The Spangler rationale does not defeat the buyer's protections under CCP §580b when the seller subordinates to a loan that is not a construction loan (as when, e.g., a buyer desires to refinance a first loan that was taken subject to or assumed). In Thompson v Allert (1991) 233 CA3d 1462, 285 CR 367, the court specifically stated that the Spangler rationale is limited to situations in which the seller's loan is subordinated to another loan, such as a construction loan, that signals a profound change in the use to which the property is devoted. Further, a mere agreement to subordinate will not defeat §580b if no subordination occurs.

§9.99 e. Relevance of Loan Amount

Code of Civil Procedure §580b does not to apply if the amount of the construction loan is significantly disproportionate to the property's value at the time of sale, resulting in a "pronounced intensification" in the postsale use of the property. See Lawler v Jacobs (2000) 83 CA4th 723, 735, 100 CR2d 52.

Source: Real Property/California Real Property Sales Transactions/9 Seller Financing/§9.100 B. Release and Partial Reconveyance

§9.100 B. Release and Partial Reconveyance

A buyer who intends to develop real property in increments, or to subdivide and sell the lots separately, may need to release portions of the real property from the lien either when the construction loan is recorded for each phase of the development (in the absence of a subordination agreement) or when the subdivided lots are sold. Subordination agreements are discussed in §§9.66-9.99. The proceeds from the construction loan or sale will normally provide the consideration for partial releases.

At the time the purchase and sale agreement is executed, a developer may not have sufficient information to know exactly how the property will be improved. Many factors, including financing, governmental requirements, the cost and method of providing utilities and road access, soil conditions and drainage, and market demand will affect the type, design, and schedule of development. Therefore, specific legal descriptions of the parcels or lots to be partially released may not be available when the purchase agreement or option is prepared, and the buyer will need a release clause with a great deal of flexibility in selecting what parcels are to be released, and in what order.

The seller must be assured that the security for the deed of trust will not be impaired by releases made to the buyer. To protect the seller, restrictions must be placed on the buyer's release of parcels to ensure that the value of the property remaining subject to the seller's lien after each release will be adequate security for the balance of the seller's purchase money note. One device for achieving this protection is to require that releases be made in a stated order, with the less valuable first. Another method is to fix the release price higher than the prorata portion of the purchase price allocable to the released parcel.

A purchase and sale agreement allowing for partial releases without adequate protection for the seller will be unenforceable because the agreement either lacks the necessary certainty (White Point Co. v Herrington (1968) 268 CA2d 458, 73 CR 885) or is unfair to the seller (Eldridge v Burns (1982) 136 CA3d 907, 186 CR 784). The requirements of certainty and fairness are discussed in §§9.101-9.102. The seller may also use release provisions to discourage delinquency by conditioning the right to a release on the absence of a default or of a recorded notice of default. These protections are provided in forms 9.105-1—9.106-1.

PRACTICE TIP: Counsel for buyer and seller must often reconcile the buyer's need for flexibility in releasing parcels with the seller's need for certainty and fairness to protect his or her security and to ensure the legal enforceability of the agreement. Resolving these competing needs calls for skilled negotiating and careful drafting. Usually, the buyer's and the seller's requirements are met by giving the buyer some discretion to define the boundaries of the release parcels, but limiting this discretion to ensure that its exercise will not impair the seller's security. A form limiting the buyer's discretion to set the boundaries of release parcels is in §9.106; an alternative form, protecting the seller's security by adjusting release prices, is in §9.107.

The buyer and the seller can agree that portions of the property will be released from the lien of the deed of trust on the entire property on payment of specified consideration. The release is accomplished by a partial reconveyance, executed by the trustee, that describes the released portion. Civil Code §2941 requires reconveyance on full satisfaction of the indebtedness, but there are no statutes requiring partial reconveyance or release on partial payment. Without an enforceable agreement between the trustor and the beneficiary, the trustor is not entitled to a partial release in exchange for partial satisfaction. See CC §2912; Bradbury v Thomas (1933) 135 CA 435, 27 P2d 402. A trustee who wrongfully releases and reconveys is liable in damages to the beneficiary. Doyle v Surety Title & Guar. Co. (1968) 261 CA2d 525, 68 CR 177.

PRACTICE TIP: The preferred practice is to include release clauses in both the purchase and sale agreement and the purchase money deed of trust, although a separately recorded release agreement is enforceable (Woodward v Brown (1897) 119 C 283, 51 P 542). The property to be released may be described by lot, by metes and bounds, or by any other means that is sufficiently specific. See §§9.101-9.102. Compliance with the Subdivision Map Act is required at all times to ensure legality of the lot release. Govt C §§66410-66499.37. See §9.103.

Effective January 1, 2001, amendments to CC §2941 set a deadline within which a secured party must act to release its lien, and limit a secured party's ability to charge a fee in connection with filing the release. That section further requires that a request for reconveyance be executed and delivered within 30 calendar days after (1) a mortgage has been satisfied, or (2) the obligation secured by a deed of trust has been satisfied. It also requires that the secured party deliver the original note marked "paid in full" to the trustee or borrower. Further, the amendments prohibit recovery of any fee not expressly provided for in the statute.

Title companies customarily handle the mechanics of partial releases and reconveyances, and their guidance in any given instance may be very useful. On endorsements available for partial reconveyances, see California Title Insurance Practice §§8.91-8.92 (2d ed Cal CEB 1997).

1. Requirement of Certainty and Fairness

§9.101 a. Impact on Specific Performance

To be enforceable by the buyer, a release clause must be both certain and fair to the seller. If the transaction itself is still executory, an uncertain release clause will deny the buyer specific performance of the entire purchase agreement. If the sale has been consummated and only the release provisions remain executory, the seller cannot rescind the conveyance but the buyer will be denied specific performance of the release clause.

In White Point Co. v Herrington (1968) 268 CA2d 458, 73 CR 885, the entire sale was still executory, and the escrow instructions provided that the note would contain a release clause for partial releases at $3000 per acre. The court held this provision to be uncertain and denied the buyer specific performance of the entire agreement, stating that, when only the broadest guidelines for releases are given, the contract is unfair to the seller because of the possibility that the best parcels could be released, leaving the seller with land of less value than the balance due on the note.

In Lawrence v Shutt (1969) 269 CA2d 749, 75 CR 533, the buyer sued for specific performance of the release clause after the property had been conveyed, and the seller cross-complained for rescission of the entire transaction. Although the release clause was quite detailed, the court found it uncertain because it provided that each parcel to be released had to be contiguous to the portion previously released, without specifying the precise area to be released. Although the uncertainty of the release clause precluded specific performance, it was not a reason to invalidate the otherwise complete conveyance, and the seller was denied rescission.

The decisions in both White Point Co. v Herrington, supra, and Lawrence v Shutt, supra, relied on Handy v Gordon (1967) 65 C2d 578, 55 CR 769, a case concerning subordination (see §9.75), for the proposition that enforcement of subordination and release clauses requires certainty and fairness to the seller. The underlying rationale of all three cases seems to be that a seller is not adequately protected unless the subordination and release clauses are sufficiently certain to ensure that the seller's security is not impaired. The test contains an element of subjectivity, which calls for extremely careful drafting to make release clauses enforceable.

© The Regents of the University of California

§9.102 b. Impact on Damages

When a seller has accepted substantial payments on an obligation secured by a deed of trust that permits partial releases for such payments, the buyer may be entitled to equitable relief or damages even though the buyer may not otherwise be entitled to enforce the release provisions because of their uncertainty or unfairness. Eldridge v Burns (1982) 136 CA3d 907, 186 CR 784. The trial court in Eldridge rescinded the sales contract, retroactive to the date of the buyer's original demand for release under the release clause, and awarded the buyer restitution of the principal paid less the taxes, assessments, accrued interest, and legal expenses the seller incurred in evicting tenants from the property. The seller was not allowed any offset for the 3 years of the buyer's possession after the original demand for release.

An uncertain release clause in a purchase agreement will thwart a buyer's demand for specific performance; furthermore, its unfairness is not a defense in an action by the seller for damages for breach of the purchase agreement. Yackey v Pacifica Dev. Co. (1979) 99 CA3d 776, 160 CR 430. The release clause in Yackey was similar to that in White Point Co. v Herrington (1968) 268 CA2d 458, 73 CR 885, but its uncertainty, which the buyer could abuse by selecting the best parcels for release, could not be used defensively by the buyer, who had drafted it.

2. Subdivision Requirements

§9.103 a. Subdivision Map Act

If the property to be sold is currently undivided, partial releases will probably constitute division of the property, requiring compliance with the Subdivision Map Act (Govt C §§66410-66499.37). The release clause should provide that the buyer's entitlement to a partial release is conditioned on compliance with the Act. See form 9.106-1.

Under the Subdivision Map Act, local jurisdictions must adopt ordinances regulating and controlling subdivisions and providing for recording of an approved map when land is divided (see §§1.73-1.90). Govt C §§66411-66411.1; see Friends of Lake Arrowhead v Board of Supervisors (1974) 38 CA3d 497, 113 CR 539. The Act is intended to encourage orderly community development by providing for control of the design and improvement of subdivisions (Newport Bldg. Corp. v City of Santa Ana (1962) 210 CA2d 771, 26 CR 797; 56 Ops Cal Atty Gen 496 (1973)) and to permit the imposition of conditions on subdivision approval to prevent the subdivision from becoming an undue burden on the community's taxpayers (Bright v Board of Supervisors (1977) 66 CA3d 191, 135 CR 758).

An approved subdivision map must be recorded for any subdivision as defined in the Act. Subdivision is defined as the division of improved or unimproved land shown on the latest county assessment roll as a unit or contiguous units, for the purpose of sale, lease, or financing, whether immediate or future. Govt C §66424. Both tentative and final maps must be approved for a subdivision creating five or more parcels unless the subdivision comes within one of the exceptions listed in Govt C §66426. Subdivisions of fewer than five parcels are exempt from §66426 but must obtain a parcel map. Govt C §66428. Procedures for preparing and obtaining approval of tentative, final, and parcel maps are set forth in Govt C §§66433-66463.5. See Lenny v Board of Supervisors (1974) 41 CA3d 902, 116 CR 500.

The California Attorney General has interpreted Govt C §66424 to include within its definition of subdivision the placing of two separate deeds of trust on different portions of a single lot or parcel. 58 Ops Cal Atty Gen 408 (1975). The opinion cites legislative history to show that the term "financing" was added to former Bus & P C §11535 (the predecessor to Govt C §66424) to prevent circumvention of the Subdivision Map Act through subdivision by financing. This reasoning would seem to apply to partial releases from a blanket encumbrance of portions of currently undivided land.

§9.104 b. Subdivided Lands Act

Under the Subdivided Lands Act (Bus & P C §§11000-11200), an owner or a subdivider is prohibited from selling a lot or a parcel subject to a blanket encumbrance unless certain conditions are met. Bus & P C §11013.1. The prohibition can be avoided if the blanket encumbrance contains an unconditional release clause. Bus & P C §11013.1. The provisions set forth in §§9.105-9.107 are not unconditional release clauses and thus do not meet the exception of §11013.1. The subdivider can still sell lots subject to a blanket encumbrance by complying with one of three methods for protecting the purchaser's deposit (Bus & P C §11013.2):

- Placing the purchaser's funds in an escrow account;
- Conveying the subdivision property in trust; or
- Posting a bond.

The subdivider would have to meet one of these exceptions to qualify to sell lots under the release clauses in §§9.105-9.107.

9.105-1 Partial release of determined lots

[If appropriate, add to section 3.6 of the purchase and sale agreement (form 4.176-6)]

The Deed of Trust shall contain the following provisions:

The beneficiary shall cause the trustee to release and execute partial reconveyances of any one or more of the parcels of real property described in the schedule set forth below from the lien of this Deed of Trust on satisfaction of each of the following conditions:

(a) No release will be given if a notice of default then appears of record, or if any condition exists under the Deed of Trust that, with the passage of time, would entitle the beneficiary to record a notice of default.

(b) No portion of the real property will be released unless all other portions of the real property subject to this Deed of Trust identified with a lower number than the number identifying the portion sought to be released have been reconveyed.

(c) No release will be given unless the trustee holds and is authorized to deliver to the beneficiary, concurrently with the partial reconveyance, the release price for the property to be released as set forth in the schedule of release parcels and release prices below.

(d) No release will be given unless the trustee holds and is authorized to deliver to the beneficiary, in addition to the sum computed under (c) above, an amount equal to the accrued interest and any late charges on the promissory note secured by this Deed of Trust through the date of reconveyance.

The portions of the real property described above that are subject to partial release, the price to be paid for the release of each such portion (under (c) above), and the order of release, are as follows:

Schedule of Release Parcels and Release Prices

Property to be released	Release price
1. _ _[Legal description of lot or parcel]_ _	_ _[dollar amount]_ _
2. _ _[Legal description of lot or parcel]_ _	_ _[dollar amount]_ _

[Continue as needed]

Payments for releases under (c) above, except periodic payments required by the note, shall be applied to the _ _[next/final]_ _ payment on the note secured by this Deed of Trust. Payments under (d) above shall be applied to accrued interest on the note. Principal payments made on the note for which no releases are obtained by the trustor shall constitute a credit fund to apply against subsequent releases from the lien of this Deed of Trust.

Comment: This form is to be used when the lots to be released have already been identified. Forms 9.106-1 and 9.107-1 suggest two methods of permitting partial release when the agreement is drafted before the property is subdivided.

The release clause must fit the particular features of a given transaction to ensure that any discretion of the buyer regarding the lots to be released cannot be exercised in a way that might be unfair to the seller. This form provides one method for limiting the buyer's discretion.

The agreement must specify the extent and manner of application of release payments to the contract balance. Lack of clarity or inaccuracy may bring about unintended results. San Diego Constr. Co. v Mannix (1917) 175 C 548, 166 P 325; Vilkin v Sommer (1968) 260 CA2d 687, 67 CR 837. The buyer usually prefers to have payments apply to the next payment due under the note, and to apply all payments, including the downpayment, to the release price. The seller may prefer to credit payments to the last payment due. The manner of crediting payments must be tailored to fit the needs of the parties to the transaction.

Usually, the buyer does not lose the right to partially reconvey by failing to request the release of land when payments are made. Absent a contrary provision in the agreement, the trustor's subsequent default does not extinguish the right to partial reconveyances of land already paid for. Eldridge v Burns (1982) 136 CA3d 907, 186 CR 784; Conley v Poway Land & Inv. Co. (1965) 232 CA2d 22, 42 CR 636.

For provisions allowing releases even when the buyer's annual payments are limited, as in form 9.46-1, see form 9.109-1.

9.106-1 Partial release (lots not determined); limiting buyer's discretion

[If appropriate, add to section 3.6 of the purchase and sale agreement (form 4.171-6)]

The Deed of Trust shall contain the following provisions:

The beneficiary shall cause the trustee to release and execute partial reconveyances of portions of the real property described above from the lien of this Deed of Trust on satisfaction of each of the following conditions:

(a) _ _[Describe order of reconveyance and any other limitations necessary to prevent impairment of the seller's security; see Comment for examples.]_ _

(b) No release will be given if _ _[a notice of default then appears of record/the trustor is then in default under this Deed of Trust]_ _.

(c) The trustee holds and is authorized to deliver to the beneficiary the sum of _ _[dollar amount]_ _ for each acre for which release is sought by the trustor.

(d) The trustee holds and is authorized to deliver concurrently with the partial reconveyance to the beneficiary, in addition to the sum required by (c) above, an amount equal to the accrued interest on the promissory note secured by this Deed of Trust through the date of reconveyance.

(e) Each portion of the real property released from the lien of this Deed of Trust shall consist of one or more legal lots or parcels as shown on a recorded parcel or final map. Despite the description of the release parcels in paragraph (a) above, the trustor reserves the right, in satisfying this condition, to have the beneficiary cause the trustee to release less than the entire portion of the real property that the trustor would otherwise be entitled to have released because of the payment made. Portions of the real property not included in a partial release under this provision, but included in computing the principal payment required to obtain a partial release, shall not be included in computing the principal payment required to obtain any subsequent release that includes that portion, or any part of it.

Comment: This form gives the buyer credit on releases for payments previously made for which reconveyances were not received. On balancing the needs of the buyer and the seller in drafting release clauses, see §9.100; on the requirements of certainty and fairness, see §§9.101-9.102; for provisions for the release of determined lots, see §9.105.

The order of reconveyance in the agreement (see paragraph (a)) might be stated in a manner such as the following when, e.g., the southerly portion of the property is the most valuable, and the property is approximately square:

The first parcel to be reconveyed shall have as its northerly, westerly, and southerly boundaries the northerly, westerly, and southerly boundaries, respectively of the property, and the easterly boundary shall be parallel to the westerly boundary. Subsequent releases shall each have as a westerly boundary the easterly boundary of the previously released parcel, an easterly boundary parallel to the westerly boundary, and as its northerly and southerly boundaries the northerly and southerly boundaries, respectively, of the property. In no event shall any reconveyance be permitted if the property remaining subject to the lien of this deed of trust would contain fewer than _ _[number]_ _ square feet as a result.

Another way of providing for the order or reconveyance when, e.g., the property is rectangular in shape with greater depth than frontage and the southerly portion of the property is most valuable, might be:

The first parcel to be reconveyed shall have as its northerly and westerly boundaries the northerly and westerly boundaries of the property; the length of the westerly boundary shall not exceed the length of the northerly boundary of the land released; the southerly and easterly boundaries shall be parallel respectively to the southerly and easterly boundaries of the property. Subsequent releases shall have as a westerly boundary the easterly boundary of the parcel previously released, the northerly, easterly, and southerly boundaries shall be parallel to the northerly, easterly, and southerly boundaries of the property until the easterly boundary of the property is reached and subsequent releases shall be subject to the above conditions as if the southerly boundary of the land then released is the northerly boundary of the property. In no event shall any such release, other than a release having as its easterly boundary the easterly boundary of the property, have its easterly boundary closer than _ _[number]_ _ feet from the easterly boundary of the property, as measured at right angles from the easterly boundary. In no event shall any such release, other than a release having as its southerly boundary the southerly boundary of the property, have its southerly boundary closer than _ _[number]_ _ feet from the southerly boundary of the property, as measured at right angles.

When frontage or other preferred land is to be released only after the remainder of the property has been released, and, e.g., the southern portion is frontage, the provision might read as follows:

No partial reconveyance shall be given of any portion of the southerly 150 feet measured at right angles to the southerly boundary until all of the remainder of the property has been partially reconveyed to buyer.

Particular attention should be given to other limitations that may be needed. For instance, releases might need to be made in parcels of at least a certain size, or land not reconveyed and still subject to the seller's lien might have a specified type of access to a dedicated street or highway. Also, care should be taken that access to utilities is preserved. Each parcel has its own unique demands, and the release clause must be shaped to take them into account.

The release provision above conditions the trustor's right to obtain reconveyance on meeting the requirements of the Subdivision Map Act (Govt C §§66410-66499.37). In general, this will require the recordation of a parcel or final map. See §9.103. Because government requirements or the topography may entail irregular lot or parcel boundaries, this form permits the trustor to obtain the release of any legal lot or parcel on payment of the release price for the larger permissible release parcel within which the lot or parcel to be released is situated.

9.107-1 Partial release (lots not determined); adjustment of release price

[If appropriate, add to section 3.6 of the purchase and sale agreement (form 4.171-6)]

Before the close of escrow, Buyer may, at Buyer's option, submit to Seller, for Seller's approval, a proposed division of the property into _ _[specify number, give maximum or minimum if desired]_ _ parcels, to be released from the lien of the Deed of Trust. Buyer's proposed division shall include (a) certification of the total number of gross acres, to the nearest 1/1000th of an acre, within each of the proposed release parcels, addressed to seller and executed by a licensed civil engineer or land surveyor; (b) a legal description of each such parcel; (c) the order of release of such parcels; and (d) a proposed release price for each such parcel. Seller agrees to approve the division proposed by Buyer, as long as the ratio that the fair market value of the land remaining subject to the Deed of Trust after each release bears to the maximum unpaid principal balance of the promissory note is equal to or greater than _ _[state a fraction, or specify, e.g., the ratio of the total purchase price to the principal balance of Seller's purchase money note]_ _.

If Seller disapproves of Buyer's proposed division, Seller shall give written notice of disapproval to Buyer within _ _[number]_ _ days after receipt of the proposed division. Seller's notice shall include a proposed new schedule of release prices for each of Buyer's proposed release parcels, which in Seller's opinion result in a ratio that the fair market value of the land to be subject to the Deed of Trust after each such release bears to the maximum unpaid principal balance of the promissory note equal to _ _[specify ratio of value of land remaining to balance on note]_ _. Seller's failure to give written notice of disapproval to Buyer within _ _[number]_ _ days shall constitute Seller's approval of Buyer's proposed division of the property and proposed schedule of release prices. If Buyer believes that any of the release prices proposed by Seller are greater than necessary to cause the ratio to be equal to or greater than _ _[number]_ _, Buyer shall notify Seller of the disagreement, and, if Buyer and Seller cannot resolve their disagreement within _ _[number]_ _ days after receipt of Buyer's notice, the matter shall be conclusively determined by submitting the dispute to _ _[arbitration/appraisal]_ _ as follows:

[Insert provisions for arbitration or appraisal]

Fair market value for purposes of this paragraph shall be determined as of _ _[specify, e.g., the date of this agreement]_ _.

The release parcels and release prices determined under this paragraph shall be inserted into the schedule of release parcels and release prices in the following provision for partial releases, which shall be set forth in the Deed of Trust:

[Insert last paragraph from form 9.105-1; if appropriate, add paragraph (e) from form 9.106-1 as additional condition to partial releases]

Comment: In the absence of unfairness, the parties to a contract may agree that the consideration will be determined by disinterested third parties. CC §1610. An option to purchase at a price to be agreed on by the parties was held sufficiently certain to give rise to an enforceable contract in Bewick v Mecham (1945) 26 C2d 92, 156 P2d 757, when the agreement also provided that, if the parties could not agree on the purchase price, the price would be fixed by three arbitrators, one to be appointed by each party and the third by the two previously appointed arbitrators. An agreement to surrender shares of stock in a settlement agreement in exchange for payment of an amount equal to the "fair evaluation as agreed by the attorneys" for the parties was held sufficiently certain for specific enforcement in Forde v Vernbro Corp. (1963) 218 CA2d 405, 407, 32 CR 577. For a discussion related to the submission of a dispute to arbitration, see §4.150.

If the buyer and the seller cannot agree on the principal payment required for each partial release and if the seller refuses to permit, or otherwise frustrates, resolution of the dispute by an appraisal or arbitration, the buyer should be able to have the release prices established by the court in an action for specific performance or declaratory relief, particularly if the buyer has changed position in relying on the enforceability of the partial release provision. In Bewick v Mecham, supra, the tenant had made building improvements worth $13,500 on leased property in reliance on an option to purchase, and the court determined the purchase price when the defendant-seller refused to appoint an arbitrator. In this situation, if equitable considerations support the position of the party seeking specific performance, the courts tend, as stated in Bewick, "to consider these stipulations for a determination of the price by third persons, rather as matters of form than of substance; to construe them in such a manner that they become incidental only to the main object of the agreement. (Pomeroy, Specific Performance of Contracts (3d ed.) §151.)" 26 C2d at 100.

The form provides for the parties to reach an agreement on the release parcels and release prices before the close of escrow. It would also be appropriate to provide that escrow will close despite any dispute over the release prices, or to extend the time to close. The first might be accomplished by including a provision for determination of the release prices by appraisal or arbitration in the deed of trust. The primary disadvantage of this form is the possibility of substantial delay in determining the principal payment required for reconveyance of the release parcels.

Alternative methods of setting the release prices might be used.

EXAMPLE: The release prices might be established by providing that the fair market value of the property to remain subject to the deed of trust must be equal to the maximum unpaid principal balance of the promissory note secured by the deed of trust plus a fixed dollar amount.

Normally, the property should be appraised as of the date the purchase and sale agreement is executed. If, however, subdivision and development will affect the value of different portions of the property, and if the right to obtain releases will be conditioned on subdivision and development, the buyer may want the appraisal to take the different values into account by appraising the property as of a specified later date. In a common interest subdivision, common interest lots will have no independent value; in other subdivisions, property subject to open space restrictions or required to be dedicated for parks or other public purposes may require different treatment.

9.108-1 Unencumbered conveyance at close of escrow

At close of escrow and on payment by Buyer to Seller of the sum of _ _[dollar amount]_ _, Seller shall convey free of any lien of Seller that property known as _ _[describe land]_ _.

Comment: Often, and particularly when the seller is not subordinating the purchase money deed of trust to liens for construction of other loans (see §§9.66-9.99), the buyer requires the release of some land from the seller's lien. Consideration for acreage released at closing is a matter to be negotiated by the parties. The seller must keep in mind the risk in releasing part of his or her margin of security at this point.

When lots already subdivided are sold, describing the property to be conveyed free of the seller's lien is relatively simple. When undivided acreage is sold, however, describing the property to be released at closing is difficult because the exact acreage of the entire parcel may not be known until a survey is completed (see §§9.106-9.107), and the exact location of those portions the buyer wishes to be conveyed free of any seller's lien cannot be known until preliminary subdivision maps have been prepared. See §9.103. The land to be conveyed free of any seller's lien should be described in language similar to that employed for partial releases after close of escrow (see §§9.105-9.107), and closing should be conditioned on recordation of a parcel or final map that divides the property in such a way that the portion to be conveyed free of the lien of the purchase money deed of trust is a separate lot or parcel.

9.109-1 Substituted security for releases

[If appropriate, add to section 3.6 of the purchase and sale agreement (form 4.171-6)]

The Deed of Trust shall contain the following provision:

After _ _[insert date of end of seller's tax year of sale]_ _, and if no notice of default under this Deed of Trust then appears of record, and after the trustor has paid the maximum payment for the year in which the following arrangement is made, the trustor may obtain partial reconveyances otherwise permissible only in subsequent years by providing security for release payments for the land reconveyed by either (a) delivering to the trustee security for the payment, of a value not less than the security it replaces and of a nature and on terms reasonably approved by the beneficiary; or (b) depositing with the trustee under the Deed of Trust as a pledge and as security for the payment personal property of the following kind of a face value not less than the balance then due the beneficiary, including interest accrued to date of the deposit, plus _ _[specify additional amount]_ _:

(1) United States or State of California bonds, legal for use as collateral, as long as they are then currently selling at not less than face value;

(2) Deposit books or time deposits of any _ _[name]_ _ County branch of a bank or savings and loan association whose deposits are insured by an agency of the federal government, as long as the limit of deposit insurance shall not be exceeded for any bank or savings and loan association without Seller's consent, in its sole and absolute discretion;

(3) Other stocks or bonds that are readily marketable on a national exchange and hold not less than the following credit rating _ _[specify]_ _, as long as Buyer shall at all times maintain a value ratio compared to the dollar amount of the obligation to be replaced of at least the following: _ _[number]_ _ to 1; or

(4) Any combination of the above.

The deposit shall be made and held subject to the terms of a pledge agreement executed by the trustor, the trustee, and the beneficiary before recordation of this Deed of Trust. Subject to the lien of the pledge, the trustor shall retain ownership of the pledged property, and any increment of interest on it, and shall not permit or cause the substituted security to be subjected to any impairment, levy, or claim.

Comment: Although the seller may want to limit annual payments in order to spread his or her tax deferral over as long a period as possible (see §9.24), the buyer may require reconveyances sooner than the payment schedule permits, especially when the development is successful. If other security is substituted for the land reconveyed, the buyer's purpose is achieved. If the security is of sufficient value, the seller's right to ultimate payment is not jeopardized. Substitution of a cash equivalent as security under a pledge agreement may reduce the seller's risk that he or she will have received reportable income. In J. Earl Oden (1971) 56 TC 569, however, installment reporting was held unavailable when the buyer merely deposited certificates of deposit into escrow at the time of sale and the parties intended that the certificates constitute payment rather than security. See also Rev Rul 77-294, 1977-2 Cum Bull 173, amplified by Rev Rul 79-91, 1979-1 Cum Bull 179. For further discussion of constructive receipt problems with cash equivalents held as substituted security, see Greene & Share, Starker and Beyond: Including the Uncertain Life of Secured Deferred Exchange, 58 Taxes 724, 732 (1980).

A title company may act as a pledge holder, as long as it approves the form of the pledge agreement. The terms of the pledge agreement should be agreed on before the purchase agreement is executed, and a copy of the pledge agreement should be attached to the purchase agreement. The pledge agreement should provide that the pledged property is held as security for payment of the unpaid portion of the release price and that the pledgor is personally liable for payment.

In David Dobrich (1997) TC Memo 1997-477, sellers were not entitled to use installment reporting of gains recognized from the disposition of real property due to failure to comply with the tax-deferred exchange requirements of IRC §1031.

9.110-1 Release on condemnation award

[If appropriate, add to section 3.6 of the purchase and sale agreement (form 4.171-6)]

The Deed of Trust shall contain the following provision:

If any award of damages is made for condemnation affecting any part of the property subject to this Deed of Trust and if at the time of the award the trustor has the right to demand reconveyance on payment of a specific sum, the trustor shall pay that sum to the beneficiary and shall then be entitled to receive the award. If any damages award is made for any other portion of the property subject to this Deed of Trust, the beneficiary shall receive the proportion of the award that the balance then due the beneficiary bears to the market value of the entire parcel subject to the Deed of Trust at the date of the award. If the market value of the entire parcel cannot be agreed on by the trustor and the beneficiary, it shall be determined by appraisal as provided in paragraph _ _ _.

Comment: Complications may arise if the property is condemned after close of escrow when the seller's rights in the property are those of an encumbrancer. The agreement and the security instrument should provide for these rights.

If the entire parcel is condemned, there is usually no problem, because the lienholder receives the amount due on the lien from the award, which is generally sufficient for this purpose. See Condemnation Practice in California §10.16 (3d ed Cal CEB 2005). The problem is also minimized if a partial taking affects a portion of the property that may itself be reconveyed under other provisions of the instrument (a specific lot, e.g., under provisions as in §9.105). In a partial taking under CCP §1265.225, the lienholder shares in the award only to the extent that the security is impaired. See Condemnation Prac §12.23. However, the taking under condemnation may include property not yet subject to release because other property must first be released (see Comment in §9.106), or the taking may impair the value of the remaining land because of severance damages, the irregularity of the taking, or other factors. Most standard deed of trust forms permit the beneficiary to receive all proceeds of any award, although such a provision might be held to be subject to an implied covenant of good faith on the part of the beneficiary. See Milstein v Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1972) 27 CA3d 482, 103 CR 16. The form divides the award in proportion to the parties' financial interests. As between buyer and seller, such a provision is subject to variations in allocation to suit the particular situation.

I. REQUISITES OF DEEDS

§10.1 A. Legal Definitions

An estate in real property, other than an estate at will or for a term not exceeding 1 year, can be transferred only by operation of law, or by an instrument in writing, signed by the party disposing of the property or that party's agent duly authorized by writing. CC §1091. Leases for longer than 1 year must also be in writing under the Statute of Frauds. CC §1624(a)(3).

A transfer in writing of an estate in real property is called a grant or a conveyance. CC §§1039, 1053. The grant takes effect between the parties when delivered. CC §1054. A grant that has been duly executed is presumed delivered at its date of execution. CC §1055. See also §10.53. Delivery of the deed is absolute, except that delivery can be on performance of a condition, in which event it is termed an escrow. CC §1057. A mere possibility, not coupled with an interest, cannot be transferred. CC §1045. The term "conveyance" includes every instrument in writing by which any estate or interest in real property is created, alienated, mortgaged, encumbered, or affected, except wills. CC §1215.

A conveyance, when duly acknowledged and recorded, imparts constructive notice under the Recording Act. CC §1213. Unrecorded instruments are valid only between the parties to the instrument and those who have notice of it. CC §1217.

B. Types of Deeds

1. Grant Deed

§10.2 a. Features and Incidentals of the Grant

A grant deed is characterized by use of the word "grant" as the operative word of conveyance. CC §1092. The word "grant" in the deed implies covenants that (CC §1113)

- the grantor has not conveyed the same estate to anyone other than the grantee; and
- the property is free of encumbrances placed on the property or suffered by the grantor (see §§12.5-12.7).

If the grantor acquires title to the property after executing a grant deed conveying the property to another, such after-acquired title passes to the grantee by operation of law (CC §1106) and inures to the benefit of a mortgagee (CC §2930).

NOTE: Transfers of one to four dwelling units or residential condominiums require disclosures under CC §§1102-1102.17, 1103-1103.4, 1134. See §§5.7, 5.24.

With deeds, as in any contract, the primary object of interpretation is to ascertain and carry out the intention of the parties. City of Manhattan Beach v Superior Court (1996) 13 C4th 232, 238, 52 CR2d 82. The deed may be construed in light of extrinsic evidence that may prove a meaning to which the language of the instrument is reasonably susceptible. 13 C4th at 238; City & County of San Francisco v Union Pac. R.R. Co. (1996) 50 CA4th 987, 994, 58 CR2d 1.

References to land in a deed, particularly those containing precise technical descriptions, are generally interpreted as an intent to transfer the entire estate. City of Manhattan Beach, 13 C4th at 244; Severns v Union Pac. R.R. Co. (2002) 101 CA4th 1209, 1215, 125 CR2d 100. It will be presumed that a grant was intended to pass a fee simple title unless it appears from the grant that a lesser estate was intended. Union Pac. R.R. Co., 50 CA4th at 995. A quitclaim deed transfers whatever present right or interest the grantor has in the property. City of Manhattan Beach v Superior Court, supra.

A transfer of real property passes all easements attached to it, even if not expressly included in the grant, and creates an easement to use other real property of the transferor to the same extent as such other property was obviously and permanently used at the time of the transfer. CC §1104; Kytasty v Godwin (1980) 102 CA3d 762, 771, 162 CR 556. An implied easement must be reasonably necessary to the use and benefit of the quasi-dominant tenement and will not be found absent clear evidence that it was intended by the parties. Tusher v Gabrielsen (1998) 68 CA4th 131, 80 CR2d 126. A deed conveying a parcel by reference to a recorded parcel map is deemed to incorporate any prior properly recorded amendment to the map not expressly recited. Christian v Flora (2008) 164 CA4th 539, 554, 78 CR3d 892. Water rights are considered appurtenant and are presumed transferred with the land absent express reservation. Nicoll v Rudnick (2008) 160 CA4th 550, 558, 72 CR3d 879. On easements generally and those relating to water rights, see California Easements and Boundaries: Law and Litigation (Cal CEB 2008).

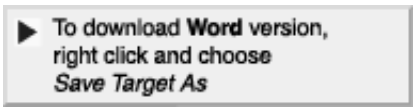
When property is acquired by a public entity through private dedication, the deed is strictly construed and a public trust—distinct from the public trust applicable to tidelands—is applicable to enjoin use of the property contrary to the dedicated purpose set forth in the grant. County of Solano v Handlery (2007) 155 CA4th 566, 576, 66 CR3d 201. On public trust tideland issues, see Easements, chap 3; California Land Use Practice, chap 14 (Cal CEB 2006).

As noted above, fee simple title is presumed to pass by a grant unless it appears from the grant that a lesser estate was intended. CC §1105. The description in a deed as to the form of title is presumed to reflect the actual ownership interest in the property, which may be rebutted only by clear and convincing proof. Marriage of Brooks & Robinson (2008) 169 CA4th 176, 184, 86 CR3d 624; Evid C §662. The grant is conclusive on the grantor and against everyone subsequently claiming under the grantors except a purchaser or mortgagee in good faith and for a valuable consideration who acquires a title or lien by a conveyance that is first duly recorded. CC §1214. Triple A Mgmt. Co. v

Frisone (1999) 69 CA4th 520, 81 CR2d 669; First Fid. Thrift & Loan Ass'n v Alliance Bank (1998) 60 CA4th 1433, 71 CR2d 295. A good faith purchaser and encumbrancer must act without knowledge or notice of facts sufficient to raise a duty of inquiry by a reasonable and prudent person. Triple A Mgmt. Co., 69 CA4th at 530.

A grant by the owner of a life estate or term of years in excess of the estate that he or she could lawfully transfer does not work a forfeiture, but passes all the estate he or she could lawfully transfer. CC §1108.

A grant made on a condition subsequent is defeated by nonperformance of the condition, and the person entitled to hold under the grant must reconvey the property to the grantor or his or her successors. CC §1109. If the grant is made to take effect on performance of a condition precedent, it passes the estate on performance of the condition (CC §1110; but note effect of recording statute, CC §§1213-1220).



Note that a conveyance subject to restrictions on use imposed as part of a common interest subdivision is presumed reasonable under CC §1354(a). Nahrstedt v Lakeside Village Condominium Ass'n (1994) 8 C4th 361, 372, 33 CR2d 63, 87. Harvey v The Landing Homeowners Ass'n (2008) 162 CA4th 809, 817, 76 CR3d 41; Fourth La Costa Condominium Owners Ass'n v Seith (2008) 159 CA4th 563, 576, 71 CR3d 299. The person attacking the restriction bears the burden of proving that it is unreasonable. Colony Hill v Ghamaty (2006) 143 CA4th 1156, 1165, 50 CR3d 247.

10.3-1 Statutory grant deed form

I, A B, grant to C D all that real property situated in _ _[name]_ _ County, State of California, bounded (or described) as follows: _ _[describe]_ _.

Comment: This grant deed form is prescribed by CC §1092. This statutory form need not be used; even a badly worded instrument can operate to convey property if the intention to make a present transfer of real property is evident from it. See Olson v Cornwell (1933) 134 CA 419, 25 P2d 879. However, for the writing to be given effect as a deed, it must satisfy the requisites listed in §10.6.

§10.4 2. Quitclaim Deed

A quitclaim deed, commonly used in California, is derived from the common law release and is characterized by the operative words "remise, release, and quitclaim" or merely "quitclaim." It transfers only whatever interest, legal or equitable, the grantor has at the time of its execution, without any implied covenants concerning title or encumbrances. Marriage of Goia (2004) 119 CA4th 272, 280, 14 CR3d 362; Klamath Land & Cattle Co. v Roemer (1970) 12 CA3d 613, 91 CR 112.

A quitclaim deed, unlike a grant deed conveying the fee interest, does not pass after-acquired title to the grantee by operation of law. See Johnson v E-Z Ins. Brokerage, Inc. (2009) 175 CA4th 86, 94, 95 CR3d 782; Klamath Land & Cattle Co. v Roemer, supra; Taylor v Coachella Valley County Water Dist. (1952) 108 CA2d 743, 239 P2d 454. The grantee of a quitclaim deed can be a bona fide purchaser and is protected from unrecorded instruments affecting title, including grant deeds. Beach v Faust (1935) 2 C2d 290, 40 P2d 822.

§10.5 3. Warranty Deed

Warranty deeds contain express covenants, such as covenants against encumbrances and of quiet enjoyment. They are rarely used in California because a grant deed, combined with a title insurance policy, is generally considered sufficient protection for buyers. See 3 Miller & Starr, California Real Estate §8:11 (3d ed 2000). For a form of warranty deed covenants, see §12.12.

© The Regents of the University of California

§10.6 C. Necessary Elements of Deeds

To be valid, a deed of any type must contain each of the following requisites:

- A sufficient writing (CC §§1053, 1091) bearing the names of the grantor and grantee (see §§10.14-10.22, 10.24-10.34), operative words of conveyance (see §10.23), and a sufficient description of the property (see §10.35);
- Competent parties (see §§10.14, 10.24);
- Property interests that may be legally transferred (see §10.1);
- Proper execution (see §§10.59-10.66); and
- Delivery and acceptance (see §§10.71-10.75).

Generally, consideration is not essential to the validity of a deed (see §10.13). Recording is not essential to a deed's validity as between grantor and grantee and against those with notice of its existence. CC §1217; Chaffee v Sorensen (1951) 107 CA2d 284, 236 P2d 851. Acknowledgment is necessary if the deed is to be recorded, but it is not essential to the deed's validity except in the case of a conveyance of a married person's homestead. Instruments defectively acknowledged or executed but nonetheless recorded impart constructive notice 1 year after recordation. CC §1207. See §§10.67-10.70 for discussion of acknowledgments.

The form clauses in §§10.15-10.52 are set out and discussed to assist the drafter in meeting specific problems. They may be included either in a separately drafted deed or by amending a form deed if space permits.

B. Recording Information

§10.8 1. "Recording Requested By"

Under Govt C §27320, the name of the person at whose request the document is recorded must be noted. "Grantee," "beneficiary," and "vendee," in place of the name of a person, are not sufficient. "Recording requested by" or its equivalent, and the name of the requesting person, must appear on the face of the document. The space in the upper left-hand corner of the document, measuring at least 2½ inches vertically by 3½ inches horizontally, must be reserved to show the name of the person requesting recordation and the return name and address discussed in §10.9. Govt C §27361.6.

© The Regents of the University of California

§10.9 2. Return Name and Address

The recorder must mail (or deliver if specified) the instrument to the person named in the instrument for return mail and, if no one is named, to the person leaving it for recording. Govt C §27321. To enable the recorder to comply, a return name and address should appear on each instrument to be recorded. On the location of this information, see §10.8.

If the instrument effects a change of ownership, a change of ownership statement (Rev & T C §480) should accompany the recorded document. Govt C §27321.

NOTE: The return name and address is used for notices in nonjudicial foreclosure proceedings (CC §2924b(c)(1)), judicial foreclosure proceedings (CCP §726(c)), and enforcement of judgments (CCP §701.540(h)).

© The Regents of the University of California

§10.10 3. Tax Statements

Before it will be accepted for recording, every deed or instrument executed to convey fee title to real property must have written across the bottom of the first page the name and address to which future tax statements may be mailed. Govt C §27321.5.

There are four acceptable ways to comply with §27321.5:

(1) The bottom of the first page may be worded as follows:

Mail tax statements to _ _[name]_ _, _ _[address]_ _.

(2) The tax name and address may be located below the recording address, with the wording across the bottom of the first page as follows:

Mail tax statements as directed above.

(3) When the return name and address (see §10.9) are the same as that to which future tax statements are to be mailed, the following wording may be used across the bottom of the first page:

Mail tax statements to the return address above.

(4) If the deed does not convey fee title to real property, tax information is not required. Govt C §27321.5. In this event, "does not convey fee title" must appear in either the heading or the body of the deed.

If a life estate, an estate for years, or an estate at will is conveyed, the deed must recite "does not convey fee title," because these are not estates of inheritance (CC §761) and thus are not fee estates under CC §762.

4. Documentary Transfer Tax

§10.11 a. Statutory Requirements

Under the Documentary Transfer Tax Act (Rev & T C §§11901-11934), cities and counties may by ordinance impose a tax on each deed or other instrument transferring real property. Subject to certain exemptions (Rev & T C §§11921-11930), the tax is imposed on deeds when the purchase price or the value of the interest or property conveyed, less the value of any liens or encumbrances remaining on it at the time of sale, exceeds $100. Rev & T C §11911(b). Although the statutory language is not entirely clear, this provision is generally construed to impose the tax on the amount of the transferee's equity in the real property, i.e., the cash consideration. The maximum allowable tax rate is $.55 per $500 of the property's value, less the value of any remaining liens and encumbrances. If the land is within a city that has enacted a tax, one-half of that amount goes to the city and the remainder goes to the county, if it has imposed a tax. Rev & T C §11911. Charter cities can charge an additional transfer tax over and above the tax charged by the county. Cohn v City of Oakland (1990) 223 CA3d 261, 272, 272 CR 714. The tax is collected by the county recorder; the county auditor allocates it between the county and the city. Rev & T C §11931. The tax must be paid before the instrument will be recorded, although constructive notice is not affected if, in fact, collection of the tax fails. Rev & T C §11933. The face of a deed submitted for recordation must show the amount of the tax due and the location of the real property, except that the party submitting the document may provide that information on a separate document to be attached to the deed after recording and before return to the party. Rev & T C §11932. See §10.12 for a form for a separate document providing the documentary transfer tax information.

10.12-1 Separate statement of documentary transfer tax

_ _[Name]_ _, County Recorder
_ _[Name of county]_ _
_ _[Address]_ _

Dear _ _[name]_ _:

In accordance with Revenue and Taxation Code §11932, it is requested that this statement of documentary transfer tax due not be recorded with the attached deed but be affixed to the deed after recordation and before return as directed on the deed.

The deed names _ _[name]_ _ as grantor and _ _[name]_ _ as grantee. The property being transferred is located in _ _[name of city; specify if in unincorporated area of county]_ _.

The amount of documentary transfer tax due on the attached deed is _ _[dollar amount]_ _, computed on the full value of the property _ _[less any encumbrances remaining on the property]_ _.

Comment: Because the documentary transfer tax varies with the value of the property, its disclosure on the deed enables third parties to calculate the amount paid for the property. If the buyer wishes to avoid disclosing the price paid, this procedure may be followed. When this form is used, the deed should contain a statement that the amount of tax due is shown on a separate writing and is not for public record.

C. Body of Deed

§10.13 1. Consideration

Consideration is not necessary for a voluntary transfer. CC §1040. A written instrument is presumptive evidence of consideration. CC §1614. "For a valuable consideration" is superfluous language. Goad v Moulton (1885) 67 C 536, 8 P 63. In deeds made by administrators, executors, guardians, trustees, and receivers who are conveying property under court order, title insurers sometimes require that the deeds recite the exact amount of consideration received. Some title insurers require consideration to be recited in deeds made by trustees not acting under court order, attorneys-in-fact, municipal corporations, or other public agencies.

Whether there was consideration for a conveyance may, however, have important consequences for the parties:

- Primarily, valuable consideration is necessary to give a recorded deed priority over an earlier unrecorded deed. CC §1214.
- A conveyance without a fair consideration that is made at a time when the grantor is insolvent, or that leaves the grantor insolvent, may be fraudulent toward creditors. If there is no purchaser, encumbrancer, or successor in interest for a fair consideration and without knowledge of the fraud, the creditors can have the deed set aside. See Kirkland v Risso (1979) 98 CA3d 971, 159 CR 798; Stearns v Los Angeles Sch. Dist. (1966) 244 CA2d 696, 53 CR 482. California has adopted the Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act (UFTA) (CC §§3439-3449), effective January 1, 1987, for transfers made or obligations incurred on or after that date only, and repealed the former Uniform Fraudulent Conveyance Act. However, the former Act (former CC §§3439-3439.12) still applies to transfers made or obligations incurred during the former Act's existence. In addition to the UFTA, fraudulent conveyances and transfers may also be challenged on common law grounds. See Macedo v Bosio (2001) 86 CA4th 1044, 104 CR2d 1. The UFTA applies to property transfers between spouses pursuant to dissolution judgments or marital settlement agreements. Mejia v Reed (2003) 31 C4th 657, 669, 3 CR3d 390.
- A deed without consideration may be considered a gift deed and may be subject to federal gift taxes (IRC §2512(b)) or federal estate taxes (IRC §2035).
- The law will not imply a covenant against encumbrances from a gift deed. Estate of Porter (1903) 138 C 618, 72 P 173.
- Both valuable consideration and lack of notice are necessary for a purchaser to take good title free of any claim that an earlier transaction, although absolute on its face, was a mortgage. CC §2925.
- A nominal amount of consideration may be extrinsic evidence affecting interpretation of the grant. See Warren v Atchison, T. & S.F. Ry. (1971) 19 CA3d 24, 35, 96 CR 317 (easement instead of a fee); Munger v Moore (1970) 11 CA3d 1, 89 CR 323 (deed absolute interpreted as a mortgage); Rickless v Temple (1970) 4 CA3d 869, 84 CR 828 (deed absolute interpreted as a mortgage).
- Lack of consideration may result in a trust in favor of the grantor. Lehmann v Kamp (1969) 273 CA2d 701, 77 CR 910.
- A paper transfer without consideration is one indicator of ownership to be considered when a local government wishes to merge contiguous substandard parcels pursuant to Govt C §66451.11. Kalway v City of Berkeley (2007) 151 CA4th 827, 60 CR3d 477 ("paper transfer" was not authorized by Subdivision Map Act, but Act does not authorize setting aside deed; nevertheless, grantee has no right to further transfer deed).

§10.14 2. Grantor Recitals

The body of the deed must contain the grantor's name or such other description to sufficiently identify the grantor. "I, the undersigned," is permissible; the style in the 19th and early 20th century was to establish the grantor as the "party of the first part." See Childs v Newfield (1934) 136 CA 217, 28 P2d 924.

See §§4.14-4.18 on the capacity of grantors. For discussion of discrepancy between the grantor name in the body of the deed and the execution name, see §§10.15, 10.55-10.56.

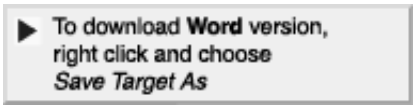
Comment: If a person has record title to real property in one name and later changes his or her name, whether by court action (CCP §§1275-1279.6) or otherwise, the name in which he or she derived title to the property must be stated. If this is not done, the conveyance, though recorded, does not impart constructive notice under CC §1096; it is valid, however, between the parties. See CC §§1096, 1217. Unless the name of the grantor in the deed is substantially identical to the name of the record owner (creating presumption of identity of person), the title is not marketable. Benson v Shotwell (1890) 87 C 49, 25 P 249.

A longer statement is sometimes used:

EXAMPLE: "AB, being the person formerly known as CD, her name having been changed by a final judgment of the Superior Court of the State of California, County of Los Angeles, in Case No. 00000…."



This version is preferable in that it aids third parties and title insurers in establishing a valid chain of title. Care should be taken to verify that the case name and number are stated correctly; if they are not, a certified copy of the decree could be recorded concurrently with the deed.

10.16-1 Unincorporated association

_ _[Name of organization]_ _, _ _[e.g., a lodge/a branch]_ _ of _ _[name]_ _, an unincorporated _ _[e.g., society, association, labor organization]_ _,

Comment: Traditionally, in California, the property of an unincorporated association belonged to its members. CC §1362; Grand Grove of United Ancient Order of Druids v Garibaldi Grove No. 71 (1900) 130 C 116, 62 P 486; County of Trinity v Rourke (1969) 275 CA2d 628, 79 CR 902. Because the property of an unincorporated association was considered to belong to its members, the association itself could not hold title to or convey real property. This rule has been ameliorated by statutes that now provide that an unincorporated society, association, or labor organization (Corp C §18105), and certain medical associations (Corp C §21200), may acquire title to real property. A conveyance of real property by an unincorporated benevolent or fraternal association or labor organization must be executed by its presiding officer and recording secretary under its seal after a resolution has been duly adopted by the association authorizing the conveyance. Corp C §18120. In the case of other unincorporated associations, the conveyance must be executed by its president and secretary, by other comparable officers, or by other officers specifically designated by a duly adopted resolution.

If an unincorporated association does not fall within the purview of Corp C §§18105 and 18120, its trustees can convey title for it if title is recorded in their names. See §10.20. Otherwise, the individual members should be named as grantors. Therefore, reference in the deed to the association is unnecessary and is useful only for identification.

10.17-1 General partnership

_ _[Name of partnership]_ _, a partnership,

Comment: In September 1996, California enacted the Uniform Partnership Act of 1994 (UPA), which governs all general partnerships as of January 1, 1999. UPA is located in Corp C §§16100-16962.

An estate in real property, acquired in the partnership name, can be conveyed only in the partnership name. Corp C §§16203-16204, 16501. Title companies usually require recordation under Corp C §16303 of a statement of a general partnership authority. Conveyance of an estate of real property owned by a partnership but held in the names of the partners is governed by Corp C §§16301-16302.

A grant of authority to transfer real property held in the name of a partnership contained in a certified copy of a filed statement of partnership authority recorded in the office for recording transfers of that real property is conclusive in favor of a person who gives value without knowledge to the contrary, as long as a certified copy of a filed statement containing a limitation on that authority is not then of record. Corp C §§16105, 16303(d)(2). See Federal Deposit Ins. Corp. v Superior Court (1997) 54 CA4th 337, 62 CR2d 713.

10.18-1 Limited partnership

_ _[Name of limited partnership]_ _, a limited partnership

Comment: Limited partnerships formed on or after July 1, 1984, are governed by the California Revised Limited Partnership Act (Revised Act) (Corp C §§15611-15724) (repealed operative 1/1/10). Limited partnerships formed before that date are governed by the California Uniform Limited Partnership Act (ULPA) (Corp C §§15501-15533) unless the partnership elects to be governed by the Revised Act. Corp C §15712(b)(1). Limited partnerships formed after January 1, 2008, are governed by the Uniform Limited Partnership Act of 2008 (ULPA) (Corp C §§15900-15912.07); limited partnerships in existence before that date may elect to be governed by its provisions as of January 1, 2007. Corp C §15912.06(a)(2). Note that the "old" ULPA will no longer govern pre-1984 limited partnerships after December 31, 2009; as of January 1, 2010, all California limited partnerships will be subject to the 2008 ULPA regardless of formation date. See §4.25; Advising California Partnerships §§5.7-5.8 (3d ed Cal CEB 1999).

Title companies usually require that a certificate of limited partnership (Corp C §§15621 (Corp C §15902.01, operative Jan. 1, 2008, for new or electing limited partnerships)) be recorded before the title company will insure title of a limited partnership.

On limited partnerships and limited liability partnerships taking title, see §§4.25-4.26.

Comment: This form is suitable for naming a trustee, under a will or by inter vivos trust, as grantor.

To the extent an estate fiduciary uses the court-supervised confirmation of sale procedures to sell real property, Prob C §7263 provides that a certified copy of the order confirming the sale be recorded in the office of the county recorder of each county in which the land, or any part of it, lies.

Signatures of trustees who signed only as individuals—and not as trustees—are not sufficient to convey good title from a revocable inter vivos trust when all the trustees signed the deed and the trustees were also the beneficiaries with the power to direct the sale of the property. Galdjie v Darwish (2003) 113 CA4th 1331, 7 CR3d 178.

PRACTICE TIP: The recital of the date of the trust agreement and of the names of the trustors of an inter vivos trust is unnecessary if the transfer to the trustee is of record. It is common practice, however, to make these recitals because trustees feel more comfortable if the source of their authority is stated.

A constructive trust may be imposed notwithstanding the form of a deed if title was obtained by actual fraud, mistake, or constructive fraud through violation of a fiduciary or confidential relationship. Warren v Merrill (2006) 143 CA4th 96, 49 CR3d 122.

Comment: California corporations have the power to acquire and convey real property (see §4.28). Corp C §207. Foreign corporations can also acquire and convey California real property. Corp C §208. Naming the place of incorporation is customary practice in identifying the grantor corporation, although it is unnecessary if the property is of record in the grantor's name.

If the corporation changed its name after acquiring title to real property, it will be subject to CC §1096 when it conveys the property. See Puccetti v Girola (1942) 20 C2d 574, 128 P2d 13. In that event, the grantor should be further identified by inserting the optional language provided in the form. Although there is no statute prohibiting or invalidating acquisitions or conveyances of real property made by an unqualified foreign corporation, such a corporation may be penalized for transacting intrastate business. Corp C §§2203(c), 2258.

Under Snukal v Flightways Mfg., Inc. (2000) 23 C4th 754, 98 CR2d 1, a conveyance signed by any two of the chairpersons of the board, the president or any vice president and the secretary, any assistant secretary, the chief financial officer, or any assistant treasurer of a corporation will not be invalidated for the corporation by lack of authority of the signing officers, as long as no third party dealing with those officers had actual knowledge that they had no authority to execute the conveyance. (See Corp C §313, the statute that the court was interpreting.) A conveyance executed by one person who holds two of the requisite capacities is binding. 23 C4th at 784.

10.21-1 Joint venture

_ _[Names of joint venturers]_ _, constituting all the joint venturers in _ _[name of joint venture]_ _, a joint venture,

Comment: For the most part, the designation "joint venture" should simply be avoided because of uncertainties surrounding the legal consequences of the designation. Both partnerships (see §§4.24, 10.17) and unincorporated associations (see §10.16) can hold and convey real property in their own names, and most joint ventures can be characterized as one of those entities.

If the joint venture format is used, conveyances to the joint venture should be in the names of the joint venturers, not in that of the joint venture, and the joint venture name should be used only for identification.

§10.22 h. Other Grantor Clauses

For discussion of sales by administrators and executors, and a form for executor's deed, see 1 California Decedent Estate Practice §§13.14-13.60 (Cal CEB 1986). On legal requirements for deeds executed by guardians and conservators, see Prob C §§2109, 2111.

The name and official capacity of an officer acting under court order or authority (e.g., sheriff, marshal, constable, court commissioner, receiver, or referee in partition) should be stated in a deed from that person. This type of deed often contains a reference to the proceedings authorizing the conveyance, but the recital is not essential.

In describing cities, some lawyers add "a municipal corporation of the State of California" or similar language; in describing counties, "a body corporate and politic" is sometimes seen. Nevertheless, it is sufficient to say "the City of Los Angeles, California" or "Contra Costa County, California."

© The Regents of the University of California

§10.23 3. Words of Conveyance

The operative words of conveyance used will generally establish the type of deed with all the legal consequences that flow from the characterization. For example, using the word "grant" will make the deed a grant deed (CC §1092) and will invoke the implied covenants that the grantor has not conveyed the same estate to anyone other than the grantee and that the property is free of encumbrances placed on it by the grantor (CC §1113). See §10.2. Using the words "assign," "remise, release, and quitclaim," or merely "quitclaim," will characterize the instrument as a quitclaim deed without any implied covenants concerning title or encumbrances. See §10.4.

If the buyer intends that warranties and covenants stated in the purchase and sale agreement (other than those implied in the deed as covenants) are to survive delivery of the deed, the agreement should provide for their survival or the deed should recite the covenants. See §4.109.

To "waive" or "renounce" title, or to say that it "shall go to" the buyer, does not pass title. Davis v McGrew (1889) 82 C 135, 23 P 41; see also Litten v Warren (1936) 11 CA2d 635, 54 P2d 39.

4. Grantee

§10.24 a. Requirement of Capacity

To take title, a grantee must be one of the following:

- A natural person (see CC §671);
- A general partnership, a limited partnership, or a corporation (see §§10.17-10.18, 10.20); or
- An unincorporated association authorized by law to take title to real property (see §10.16).

See §§4.7, 4.14-4.18 on capacity to hold title to real property. See §4.18 and Pen C §§2600-2601 on prisoners' rights.

Infants and incompetent or insane persons are capable of taking title because the law presumes their acceptance of a beneficial conveyance (see §§4.15-4.16). Estate of Yano (1922) 188 C 645, 206 P 995; see Estate of Kalt (1940) 16 C2d 807, 813, 108 P2d 401. See §4.17 for a discussion of guardianship as a prerequisite for conveying property for persons under disability.

© The Regents of the University of California

§10.25 b. Requirement of Certainty

The grantee must be so named or designated that his or her identity is absolutely certain. This requirement can be met without naming the grantee if a means of identification can be inferred from the language of the deed.

EXAMPLE 1: A quitclaim of an easement to "the record owners of all lots in the tract described below, in severalty, on the same tenures as their respective interests appear of record at the time of recording this deed" might be sufficient. See CC §§681 (severalty), 761 (tenures of estates).

EXAMPLE 2: Identification of the grantees as the "heirs or devisees of A, deceased, subject to the administration of his estate" was upheld as sufficient in Schade v Stewart (1928) 205 C 658, 272 P 567.

Examples of deeds void for uncertainty are deeds to the following:

- "A or B." See Schade v Stewart, supra (dictum). See also §4.157 for discussion of the problems presented when the purchase and sale agreement requires the deed to recite the grantee as "A or nominee."
- "The inhabitants of the City of Los Angeles" (except for dedicating an easement for public use). See Comment, 14 Cal L Rev 135 (1926).
- A fictitious person (Copeland v Fairview Land & Water Co. (1913) 165 C 148, 162, 131 P 119); but a deed to an actual person under an assumed name is valid (Wilson v White (1890) 84 C 239, 24 P 114).

© The Regents of the University of California

§10.26 c. Status of Grantee

It is customary to show the marital status of a grantee and the marital relationship of grantees who are husband and wife. See Fam C §§700, 760, 803 on the community property presumption when a husband and wife are so described in a deed. Title insurers require that deeds describe the status of grantees to increase certainty of identification. See also §4.21.

Common status designations are: an unmarried man (or woman); husband and wife; a married woman (or man); his (or her) spouse; a minor; an incompetent person; and an administrator, trustee, or executor. A deed to a minor or incompetent person should run directly to that person rather than to the guardian or conservator, but deeds often name the guardian as grantee and add a recital of guardianship. A conveyance to heirs or devisees of the decedent can run either to the heirs or devisees or to the administrator or executor. However designated, it is customary to include a recital that the conveyance is subject to administration of the estate.

Source: Real Property/California Real Property Sales Transactions/10 Deeds/§10.27 d. Other Required Elements

§10.27 d. Other Required Elements

In addition to the name and status of the grantee or grantees, three other elements of the grant are necessary, if applicable:

- The nature of the estate (see §10.28);
- The nature of ownership (see §10.29); and
- The proportion of interest (see §10.30).

A single grant may entail questions concerning each of these elements. For example, "to the following as tenants in common: A and B, husband and wife, as joint tenants, an undivided one-half; C and D, husband and wife, as community property, an undivided one-third; and E, a married woman, as her separate property, an undivided one-sixth."

© The Regents of the University of California

§10.28 (1) Nature of Estate

If the nature of the estate is not otherwise stated, the deed is presumed to pass an estate in fee. CC §1105. Other kinds are estates for life, estates for years, and estates at will. See CC §761. The intent to pass an estate other than fee title must be expressed in the deed.

The grant should make clear whether the estate passed is one of full ownership (a fee) or one of more limited interest (such as an easement). See Johnson v Ocean Shore R.R. (1971) 16 CA3d 429, 94 CR 68. See also Warren v Atchison, T. & S.F. Ry. (1971) 19 CA3d 24, 96 CR 317. Estates may be divided into present and future interests.

© The Regents of the University of California

§10.29 (2) Nature of Ownership

Multiple ownership may be in joint tenancy, tenancy in common, community property, or partnership interests. CC §§682-687. All real property in California, and all personal property wherever located that is acquired during marriage, is community property (Fam C §§700, 760, 803), with some exceptions (Fam C §770). However, real or personal property acquired by a married woman by written instrument before January 1, 1975, is presumed to be her separate property. Fam C §803. The deed should express the buyers' wishes about the nature of ownership. On multiple ownership generally, see §§4.21-4.23.

© The Regents of the University of California

§10.30 (3) Proportion of Interest

A grant, for example, "to A and B as tenants in common" gives the grantees undivided equal shares. If two or more persons take as tenants in common under an instrument that is silent on their respective shares, a presumption arises that their shares are equal. Caito v United Cal. Bank (1978) 20 C3d 694, 705, 144 CR 751. The shares may be made unequal by an express provision in the deed or may be shown to be unequal by parol evidence. Anderson v Broadwell (1931) 119 CA 150, 6 P2d 267. To avoid litigation, the proportions should be expressed in the deed, even when equal, e.g., by specifying "undivided equal shares."

10.31-1 Joint tenancy

_ _[Names of grantors]_ _ _ _[state words of conveyance]_ _ to _ _[names of grantees]_ _ as joint tenants.

Comment: Because a joint tenancy conveyance is made to two or more people in equal shares (CC §683), the proportions of the respective interests need not be specified. See §10.30. The salient characteristic of joint tenancies, of course, is the right of survivorship in remaining joint tenants, which removes the property from the decedent's estate. CC §683; Prob C §223. Features of joint tenancies are discussed in §4.22.

A joint interest in property can be created by any of the following as grantor (CC §683):

- A sole owner to himself or herself and others (see Estate of Bibb (2001) 87 CA4th 461, 104 CR2d 415, regarding transmutation of a grantor's separate property interest into joint tenancy held by grantor and another);
- From tenants in common or joint tenants to (a) themselves or some of them and (b) themselves or any of them and others; or
- From husband and wife, when holding title as community property or otherwise, to (a) themselves, (b) themselves and others, or (c) one of them and to another or others.

_ _[Names of grantors]_ _ _ _[state words of conveyance]_ _ to _ _[names]_ _, husband and wife, as their community property.

Comment: A deed to grantees as husband and wife without a specification of the form of ownership is presumed to convey title as community property (Fam C §§760, 2580-2581), but this presumption may be overcome by clear written evidence of an agreement to the contrary. In cases not involving divorce or separation, tracing contributions to the purchase of the property back to separate property sources may also be admissible evidence to rebut the presumption. See Fam C §2640; Marriage of Weaver (2005) 127 CA4th 858, 865, 26 CR3d 121; Marriage of Haines (1995) 33 CA4th 277, 39 CR2d 673. See §4.21 on community property.

_ _[Names of husband and wife; see Comment below]_ _ _ _[words of conveyance]_ _ to _ _[names of husband and wife]_ _, husband and wife, as their community property,

Comment: Although it is common practice for brokers and title companies to suggest that married couples who acquire real property take title as joint tenants, ownership in community property is preferable to joint tenancy for federal tax purposes. On the death of a joint tenant, one-half of the basis of the property is stepped up to the time of death (IRC §1014(b)(9)), but the entire basis is stepped up on the death of a spouse if the property is held as community property (IRC §1014(b)(6)). The parties could also execute an independent agreement that the property will be treated as community property if they do not wish to execute a new conveyance. See §10.33. A conveyance from husband and wife as joint tenants to themselves as their community property will not trigger a reappraisal of the property for property tax purposes under Cal Const art XIIIA. Rev & T C §63.

If the person recording this form claims an exemption from the documentary transfer tax, the county recorder's office will require that the document include a statement of authority for the exemption. The names used by husband and wife in filling in the grantor portion of the deed must be the same as they appear in the joint tenancy deed by which they took title.

§10.35 5. Description

Real property can be transferred only by a writing that describes the property (Craig v Zelian (1902) 137 C 105, 69 P 853) with sufficient clarity that it can be identified and located (Best v Wohlford (1904) 144 C 733, 78 P 293; Podd v Anderson (1963) 215 CA2d 660, 30 CR 345). No particular form of description is required (see, e.g., CC §1092) as long as the description permits identification of the property. If the description is omitted or not sufficiently certain, however, the conveyance is void. Edwards v City of Santa Paula (1956) 138 CA2d 375, 292 P2d 31.

The description generally follows directly the designation of the grantee. See, e.g., the grant deed in §10.7. On descriptions generally, see chap 11.

"Subject to" clauses (see §10.37) and special recitals (see §§10.38-10.52) follow the description and may be inserted in the space for description if there is enough room. If not, it is generally better to type the entire deed than to attach an exhibit to a printed form.

© The Regents of the University of California

§10.36 6. Exhibits and Riders

If, for any reason, an exhibit is to be attached to the deed, recorders prefer that it be attached as a second page rather than pasted to the front of the deed and folded.

Some recorders take the position that a rider covering provisions other than the description is not "legible" and may require the person presenting it for record to prepare a substitute for the "illegible" original. Govt C §27361.7.

© The Regents of the University of California

§10.37 7. "Subject to" Clauses

Grant deeds are often restrained by conditions or qualifications, agreed on by grantor and grantee, that negate the grantor's liability under implied covenants. See CC §1113. These conditions or qualifications are the "subject to" clauses of grant deeds. For discussion of the restrained grant deed and for examples of "subject to" clauses, see §12.23. These clauses are not to be confused with contractual conditions commonly introduced by similar words.

§10.38 8. Special Recitals

When appropriate, various special recitals should be incorporated in a deed to explain its purpose, show the interest and intent of the parties, and incorporate by reference other recorded documents. Some common recitals are presented as illustrations and discussed individually in §§10.39-10.52. Special recitals should be used liberally because they clarify the parties' intent and eliminate the effect of legal presumptions that may operate contrary to the parties' intentions (see, e.g., CC §686 (presumption of tenancy in common); Fam C §§700, 760, 803 (presumption of community property)). On the conclusive presumption of recitals in written instruments, other than recitals of consideration, see Evid C §622.

10.39-1 Spouse-to-spouse recital of separate property

This deed is given to carry out the mutual desire and agreement of the parties that the property shall become vested in the grantee as _ _[his/her]_ _ sole and separate property.

Comment: Either spouse may enter into any property transaction with the other that either might if unmarried. Fam C §721. However, they should state their intentions explicitly. In a deed from one to the other, when the intent is to vest title in the grantee as his or her separate property, this form is a useful recital.

Despite the recital of vesting as separate property, either spouse can show against the other that there was no intention to change the property from community to separate. Compare Salveter v Salveter (1929) 206 C 657, 275 P 801, with Donze v Donze (1928) 88 CA 769, 264 P 294. If the wife is the grantee of an interest acquired before January 1, 1975, the presumption of separate property is conclusive in favor of a third party who deals with her in good faith and for value. Fam C §803. When the husband is the grantee and a third party deals with him in good faith and for value, the wife is estopped from denying the separate property recital in the deed. MacKay v Darusmont (1941) 46 CA2d 21, 115 P2d 221.

Some title companies require this recital in deeds between husband and wife as a condition to insuring title as separate property or to insuring a subsequent conveyance from the grantee spouse.

10.40-1 Consent to joint tenancy between one spouse and another person

_ _[Name of grantee spouse]_ _, named above as a grantee, and _ _[name of consenting spouse]_ _, _ _[his wife/her husband]_ _, consent to the creation in the grantees of a joint tenancy in the property described in this deed.

[Execution and acknowledgment by consenting spouse]

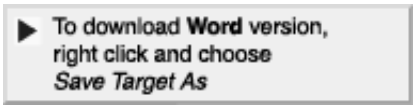
Comment: In Yeoman v Sawyer (1950) 99 CA2d 43, 221 P2d 225, a husband contributed half the purchase price of property from community funds and took title, without his wife's consent, under a joint tenancy deed with a single woman who contributed the other half of the purchase price. The court regarded the interests under the deed as being one-quarter vested in the husband, one-quarter in the wife (giving her half of the community property), and the other one-half in the single woman. Because the interests were unequal, the joint tenancy was defeated, and a tenancy in common was held to have been created.



Before insuring title in grantees as joint tenants when one of the grantees is married, title companies, to remove doubt about the status of title to the property, require (1) a recital in the deed similar to the one presented above, (2) the consenting spouse's signature on the deed, and (3) acknowledgment of the recital. As an alternative, title insurers will accept as evidence of consent escrow instructions, signed by the consenting spouse, authorizing the joint tenancy. Having the consent in the deed is preferable, however, because off-record evidence may be unavailable, lost, or destroyed. On execution, see §§10.53-10.66. On acknowledgments, see §§10.67-10.70.

§10.41 c. Form: Deed in Lieu of Foreclosure

The form text in this section is part of a larger form. For your convenience, downloading any one of the sections included in the form will download the entire form. The inclusive section numbers are §§10.39-10.52.

10.41-1 Deed in lieu of foreclosure

This deed is an absolute conveyance, grantor(s) having sold the property to grantee(s) for a fair and adequate consideration. The consideration is _ _[the sum of _ _[dollar amount]_ _ and]_ _ full satisfaction of all obligations secured by the _ _[mortgage/deed of trust]_ _ securing the obligation of _ _[name]_ _ in favor of _ _[name]_ _ recorded on _ _[date]_ _, as Instrument _ _ in book _ _, page _ _ of _ _[official book]_ _, in the Office of the County Recorder of _ _[name]_ _ County. This conveyance is freely and fairly made, and no agreements other than this deed have been made between grantor(s) and grantee(s) with respect to the property.

Comment: Civil Code §2889 declares that all contracts for the forfeiture of property subject to a lien in satisfaction of the obligation secured, as well as contracts in restraint of the right of redemption, are void. There are two major problems associated with a mortgagee's acceptance of a deed in lieu of foreclosure. The first problem is that there is no foreclosure sale to extinguish any junior liens or interests that have attached. On delivery of the deed in lieu of foreclosure, the mortgagee's security interest will merge with the deed and the mortgagee will receive title subject to undesired liens or clouds on the title. For this reason a current preliminary report on the title is essential and an endorsement to the mortgagee's title policy is recommended. At least one court has allowed a lender to reject a deed in lieu of foreclosure on the discovery of an undesired junior lien. Brereton v Burton (1938) 27 CA2d 464, 81 P2d 238.

The second problem involves the waiver of the debtor's well-established right to the notice, reinstatement, and redemption protections available under CC §§2924-2924*l* and CCP §726. Civil Code §2889 declares that all contracts for the forfeiture of property subject to a lien in satisfaction of the obligation secured by that property, as well as contracts in restraint of the right of redemption, are void.

It has long been the law in California that the right of redemption may not be waived in advance, at the time of origination of the loan. Bradbury v Davenport (1896) 114 C 593, 46 P 1062; CC §2953. A later deeding of the property by the mortgagor to the mortgagee and waiver of the right of redemption can be treated as an exception to this rule, but only under the following conditions (Hamud v Hawthorne (1959) 52 C2d 78, 83, 338 P2d 387):

- The original loan was documented in proper form by a note secured by a deed of trust;
- Default has occurred in payment;
- The parties enter into a separate, distinct, and subsequent contract with separate consideration; and
- The transaction is fair and honest.

Waivers of the equity of redemption are strictly scrutinized. Bradbury v Davenport, supra.

Use of a deed in lieu of foreclosure must therefore satisfy, at a minimum, the above criteria. In addition, it is essential that a title insurer be consulted in advance to determine whether the instrument will be insurable. Requirements of title insurers vary greatly, depending on the circumstances of the transaction. In instances involving individual debtors and single-family residences serving as security, a deed in lieu of foreclosure may be difficult to insure. In an arm's-length transaction involving sophisticated parties and commercial property, a title insurer may be able to satisfy itself that the risk can be safely underwritten. See also Stillman, The Treatment in Bankruptcy of Deed in Lieu of Foreclosure Agreements, 9 Cal Real Prop J 19 (Spring 1991).

In addition to the recitals in form 10.41-1, it may be appropriate to include recitals to the effect that the borrower desires to avoid the stigma of foreclosure, that the debt equals or exceeds the value of the security, that the parties have consulted with counsel of their choice, and that the waiver of the right of redemption is knowingly made on an informed basis. If the borrower is to remain liable for a portion of the debt exceeding the value of the security, the circumstances should be clearly specified. Some title insurers will require a carefully drafted estoppel certificate; in certain circumstances, recitals may be placed in the deed, and some title insurers will require both.

See California Mortgages, Deeds of Trust, and Foreclosure Litigation, chap 7 (4th ed Cal CEB 2009) for discussion of deeds in lieu of foreclosure and title company practices in handling them.

The form text in this section is part of a larger form. For your convenience, downloading any one of the sections included in the form will download the entire form. The inclusive section numbers are §§10.39-10.52.

10.42-1 Correcting or clarifying description of property

This deed is given to _ _[correct the erroneous/clarify the indefinite]_ _ description of the property contained in the deed recorded on _ _[date]_ _, as Instrument _ _ in book _ _, page _ _ of _ _[official book]_ _, in the Office of the County Recorder of _ _[name]_ _ County, and is in lieu of that deed.

Comment: Erroneous descriptions in deeds fall into one of two categories:

- The description is sufficient despite the errors and will not void the deed, because the property intended to be conveyed can be ascertained (Leonard v Osburn (1915) 169 C 157, 146 P 530; Rogers v McCartney (1906) 3 CA 34, 84 P 215).
- The description is not sufficient, because the property intended to be conveyed cannot be ascertained. In this event, the deed can be voided. Morehart v County of Santa Barbara (1994) 7 C4th 725, 29 CR2d 804; Davis v Ward (1895) 109 C 186, 41 P 1010; Saterstrom v Glick Bros. Sash Co. (1931) 118 CA 379, 5 P2d 21.

A grant, subject to certain exceptions, is interpreted in favor of the grantee. CC §1069. To interpret the description in the grantee's favor, the court will reject what is apparently false in the description and uphold the deed if the remainder of the description is applicable to the property intended to be conveyed. See Podd v Anderson (1963) 215 CA2d 660, 30 CR 345. See §§11.89-11.93 on erroneous and indefinite descriptions. Despite the new deed, intervening interests may have priority unless the erroneous or unclear description can be upheld as sufficient.

The directive of CC §1069 that a grant by a public agency is to be interpreted in favor of the grantor applies only if the grant is ambiguous. Red Mountain LLC v Fallbrook Pub. Util. Dist. (2006) 143 CA4th 333, 344, 48 CR3d 875.

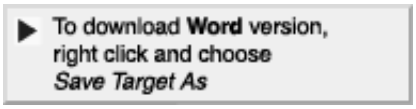
10.43-1 Removing cloud on title

This deed is given to clear the records of any interest grantor may have in the property described in this deed because of any statement of any purported interest of grantor included by error in the deed recorded on _ _[date]_ _, as Instrument _ _ in book _ _, page _ _ of _ _[official book]_ _, in the Office of the County Recorder of _ _[name]_ _ County.

Comment: An erroneous conveyance of property not owned by the grantor creates a cloud on the title to that land. The title company will discover the cloud when the true owner orders a title search in connection with a contemplated sale or encumbrance. To obtain title insurance, the owner must remove the cloud.

The cloud can be eliminated by having the grantee execute a deed to the true owner. This document could be in the form of a quitclaim. The owner, however, may prefer a grant deed with its implied covenants (see §§12.5-12.7) that the grantee has not encumbered the property. If a grant deed is given, it should negate any implied covenants of title by including a recital like the one above.



If the grantee is unwilling to execute and deliver a deed removing the cloud, the true owner should promptly commence an action to quiet title to remove the cloud, and file a lis pendens to cut off the rights of intervening third parties. See California Real Property Remedies and Damages, chap 7 (2d ed Cal CEB 2002).

This deed is given to relinquish and release all interest that the grantor may have in the property described in this deed because of any exceptions or reservations in the deed recorded on _ _[date]_ _, as Instrument _ _ in book _ _, page _ _ of _ _[official book]_ _, in the Office of the County Recorder of _ _[name]_ _ County.

Comment: A grant of real property passes a fee "unless it appears from the grant that a lesser estate was intended." CC §1105. The grant carries with it the following incidents and appurtenances unless they have been clearly excepted:

- A permanent building and its fixtures (Fratt v Whittier (1881) 58 C 126);
- Deposits, i.e., minerals and other substances of the land (Moore v Smaw (1861) 17 C 199);
- Water rights necessary for the use of the land (Stanislaus Water Co. v Bachman (1908) 152 C 716, 93 P 858; for a discussion of appropriative water rights that are appurtenant and run with the land, see Nicoll v Rudnick (2008) 160 CA4th 550, 558, 72 CR3d 879);
- Rents not yet due from an existing lease on the land (Fahrenbaker v E. Clemens Horst Co. (1930) 209 C 7, 284 P 905);
- Award money from a pending condemnation proceeding (Security Co. v Rice (1932) 215 C 263, 9 P2d 817);
- Landowner's royalty from oil produced on the land (Tanner v Title Ins. & Trust Co. (1942) 20 C2d 814, 129 P2d 383);
- An easement for a road over adjoining lands that benefits the land conveyed (Elliott v McCombs (1941) 17 C2d 23, 109 P2d 329); and
- Title up to the center of an adjoining highway (CC §1112).

For general principles of law on the passing of incidents and appurtenances, see CC §§1084, 1104, 3522.

This form is commonly used to release incidents and appurtenances excepted from the original conveyance. It may also be used to eliminate problems created by thoughtless reiteration of reservations or exceptions in copying prior deeds. See §11.73 for discussion of reservations and exceptions; see §11.92 on reservations and exceptions in successive deeds.

10.46-1 Conveyance on exercise of option

This deed is given and accepted in compliance with an option to purchase contained in a lease recorded on _ _[date]_ _, as Instrument _ _ in book _ _, page _ _ of _ _[official book]_ _, in the Office of the County Recorder of _ _[name]_ _ County, and as a cancellation of the lease and full release of all parties to the lease and their respective successors in interest, from all other obligations under the lease.

[Execution and acknowledgment by grantee]

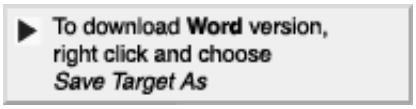
Comment: Many leases include a provision permitting the tenant to purchase the property on the exercise of an option. Good practice requires that a lease containing an option be recorded. The lease must be acknowledged by the landlord as a condition to recordation. Govt C §27287. If the lease is not recorded, however, the tenant's possession of the property may be sufficient to put a buyer on notice of the tenant's option rights.



When the option is exercised, this provision should be used in the deed to evidence the intention of canceling the recorded lease. This form contemplates both an acceptance by the grantee and a general release between the parties. The grantee's signature must be acknowledged. For a detailed discussion of options, see chap 8.

The grantee having attained the age of majority, this deed is executed and delivered under the trust contained in the deed to the grantor recorded on _ _[date]_ _, as Instrument _ _ in book _ _, page _ _ of _ _[official book]_ _, in the Office of the County Recorder of _ _[name]_ _ County.

Comment: Probate Code §18100 protects a third person dealing with a trustee by, in effect, giving a third person who acts in good faith for valuable consideration, and without actual knowledge that the trustee is exceeding the trustee's powers or improperly exercising them, the status of a bona fide purchaser. Such third person is not bound to inquire whether the trustee has power to act or is properly exercising a power, and he or she may assume without inquiry the existence of a trust power and its proper exercise. Under §18100, if a good faith purchaser for value has no actual notice that the trustee was transferring the property in contravention of the terms of the trust, the purchaser would retain title to the property. This is apparently true even if the trustee converts the funds paid for the property by the good faith purchaser to his or her own use, because Prob C §18101 states that a third person who acts in good faith is not responsible for the trustee's proper application of trust property paid or delivered to the trustee.

Comment: A lease creates both contractual and property rights in the tenant. City of Pasadena v Porter (1927) 201 C 381, 257 P 526. The lease may be terminated by surrender of the premises and unconditional acceptance by the landlord. Flynn v Mikelian (1962) 208 CA2d 305, 25 CR 138.

PRACTICE TIP: It is good practice to evidence the termination of a recorded lease—even if the lease itself reveals the termination—by a deed from the tenant to the landlord, containing this recital.

10.50-1 Removal of power of termination

This deed is given to convey all rights and powers to terminate the estate described in this deed, whether vested, conditional, or contingent, that grantor has now, or may acquire later because of the conditions, restrictions, or reservations in the deed recorded on _ _[date]_ _, as Instrument _ _ in book _ _, page _ _ of _ _[official book]_ _, in the Office of the County Recorder of _ _[name]_ _ County, but only to the extent _ _[state rights relinquished, e.g., that they purport to establish setback lines from the front lines of the lots described in the recorded deed]_ _. Except as above released, the conditions, restrictions, and reservations in the deed described above are to remain in full force and effect.

Comment: A grantor can impose a condition subsequent in a conveyance, which is a power to terminate the estate by appropriate action if there is a breach of the condition. Boughton v Socony Mobil Oil Co. (1964) 231 CA2d 188, 41 CR 714. The breach must be proved in an action to compel a reconveyance or quiet title. See Parsons v Smilie (1893) 97 C 647, 32 P 702.

The deed should be executed by the grantor who imposed the restrictions, or by his or her heirs, and it should be recorded.

10.52-1 Life estate

Grantor reserves the exclusive possession and the use and enjoyment in _ _[his/her]_ _ own right of the rents, issues, and profits of the property described in this deed for the term of _ _[his/her]_ _ lifetime.

Comment: For discussion of reservations and exceptions, see §§11.73, 11.92. Elderly grantors often convey their property, reserving for their support a life estate in the rents, issues, and profits of the property. The recital in this section was upheld in Tennant v John Tennant Memorial Home (1914) 167 C 570, 140 P 242. The deed conveys to the grantee a future estate that, at the grantor's death, becomes an estate in possession. The conveyance is valid notwithstanding powers of revocation. Belshe v Hope (1995) 33 CA4th 161, 168, 38 CR2d 917. Reservation of a life estate can be coupled with a power of disposal. See Estate of Wood (1973) 32 CA3d 862, 875, 108 CR 522. Compliance with the requirements of any governing trust or instrument may be required under Prob C §§630-631.

Even though the owner of a life estate has the right to all rents, issues, and profits of the property during his or her lifetime (CC §818), when the life estate is created by a reservation in a conveyance of the fee, the right to the rents, issues, and profits should be expressly recited.

The owner of a life estate must keep the buildings and fences in repair and must pay taxes and other annual charges, an equitable proportion of special assessments (CC §840), and the interest on encumbrances (see Boggs v Boggs (1944) 63 CA2d 576, 147 P2d 116).

D. Execution

§10.53 1. Date of Execution

A deed's validity is not affected by the lack of a date of execution or by an erroneous date. However, the date of execution may be evidence in determining priority among conflicting deeds, because a duly executed grant is presumed to have been delivered when executed. CC §1055. The presumption applies only to the time and not to the fact of delivery. Blackburn v Drake (1963) 211 CA2d 806, 27 CR 651. The date in the body of the deed gives rise to the presumption of §1055, although the presumption can be overcome by extrinsic evidence. Gordon v City of San Diego (1895) 108 C 264, 41 P 301. The presumption arises from the deed's date even if the date of acknowledgment is later. Gordon v City of San Diego, supra. An earlier acknowledgment date was held sufficient to overcome the presumption arising from the later date in Merle v Meagher (1870) 1 CU 644.

© The Regents of the University of California

§10.54 2. Definition

In a strict sense, execution consists of both the signing and delivery of an instrument. CCP §1933. The term "execution," however, is often used to mean only the signing of the instrument, as in CC §§1185, 1189-1190 (acknowledgment). See Le Mesnager v Hamilton (1894) 101 C 532, 35 P 1054. On delivery, see §§10.71-10.74.

§10.55 a. Who Signs

The deed must be signed by the grantor or the grantor's authorized agent. CC §1091. A deed not signed by the grantor is sufficiently executed if it is signed by a person in the grantor's presence, at the grantor's request, and with his or her authorization. Knaugh v Baender (1927) 84 CA 142, 257 P 606. The grantor may adopt and ratify his or her signature made by another without previous authority. Blaisdell v Leach (1894) 101 C 405, 35 P 1019. A deed signed by an interested person is subject to a rebuttable presumption that it is invalid. Estate of Stephens (2002) 28 C4th 665, 678, 122 CR2d 358.

The signature on the deed should conform exactly to the name shown as grantor. A deed signed and acknowledged by persons not named in the body of the deed as grantors does not pass their title. Cordano v Wright (1911) 159 C 610, 115 P 227. The rule in Cordano originated in the fact that common law deeds were not signed, but sealed, and identification of the grantor was therefore required in the body of the deed, but it is no longer given a mechanical application. Strong v Strong (1943) 22 C2d 540, 544, 140 P2d 386. If the name signed on the deed differs from the grantor's name, the conveyance is valid if the name in the acknowledgment conforms to the grantor's name in the body of the deed. Middleton v Findla (1864) 25 C 76.

For conveyances executed by corporations, see §10.20; for partnerships, see §10.17.

§10.56 b. Spouse's Signature

Grantees and title insurers may require a spouse to join in the conveyance of the other spouse's separate property if they lack knowledge of the true character of the property. This can usually be accomplished through a quitclaim deed. Without a quitclaim deed, the accommodating spouse is exposed to potential personal liability for breach of covenants in the deed of conveyance. See Evans v Faught (1965) 231 CA2d 698, 711, 42 CR 133. See App M for suggested form of waiver to avoid the personal liability of the nonowning spouse. On implied covenants, see §§12.5-12.7.

Nevertheless, to avoid disputes and possible litigation, the parties must make sure that the signatures conform to the grantors named in the deed. On title company's requirements for establishing authority to act, see California Title Insurance Practice §2.34 (2d ed Cal CEB 1997).

§10.57 c. Homestead Declaration

A homestead declaration under CCP §§704.910-704.995 does not restrict or limit any right of a spouse to convey or encumber the declared homestead. CCP §704.940. Each spouse, however, remains subject to the restrictions of Fam C §§752-754, 1102-1103, and 6321.

Spouses holding homesteaded property can unilaterally alter the form of ownership from joint tenancy to tenancy in common without affecting the homestead. Estate of Grigsby (1982) 134 CA3d 611, 618, 184 CR 886 (spouse severed joint tenancy by transfer to straw man, who then transferred property back).

§10.58 d. Termination of Joint Tenancy

One joint tenant may sever a joint tenancy regarding his or her joint tenant interest, without consent of the other joint tenants, by doing the following (CC §683.2(a)):

- Deeding his or her joint tenant interest to a third person;
- Executing a written instrument with intent to sever (which includes a deed to transfer his or her joint tenant interest to himself or herself); or
- Declaring the severance in writing.

For more on the severance of a joint tenant interest, see CC §683.2.

Comment: Civil Code §1095 authorizes an attorney-in-fact to execute an instrument transferring an estate in real property if he or she subscribes the name of the principal to it and his or her own name as attorney-in-fact. "A, attorney-in-fact of B," does not satisfy §1095.

The importance of compliance with CC §1095 was discussed in Hodge v Hodge (1967) 257 CA2d 31, 64 CR 587, in which a deed executed by an authorized agent, who signed her principal's name and typed in her own name (as agent) but then failed to sign her own name, was declared invalid. The case contains a helpful review of previous California decisions on execution of deeds by an agent.

Civil Code §1091 requires that the power of attorney be in writing. Government Code §27322 permits the power of attorney to be recorded; most title insurance companies require its recordation. A recorded power of attorney affecting real property can be revoked only by recording the revocation in the same office in which the power of attorney was recorded. CC §1216. On revocation by death or incapacity, see CC §2356. For provisions of the Power of Attorney Law, see Prob C §§4000-4805. Comment: Failure to indicate the representative capacity of the execution may be overcome by recitals in the deed or other record evidence indicating that the execution is actually in a representative capacity. For a form of recital for a trustee as grantor, see §10.19. Even when there is a representative capacity recital in the deed, failure to indicate that execution is made in that capacity can create problems. In Estate of Conroy (1907) 6 CA 741, 93 P 205, the deed named the grantor as "A (Administrator of the Estate of B)," and the deed was signed and acknowledged by A. The court disregarded the words in parentheses and held the deed to be that of A, individually.

_ _[Name of partnership]_ _,
a _ _[state of organization]_ _ partnership

By: __[Signatures]__
Name: _ _[Typed names]_ _
Its: _ _[Titles]_ _

Comment: In September 1996, California enacted the Uniform Partnership Act of 1994 (UPA) (Corp C §§16100-16962), which governs all general partnerships as of January 1, 1999. Corp C §16111. Corporations Code §16302 permits any partner to convey title to real property held in the partnership name. Under UPA, the Revised Limited Partnership Act (Corp C §§15611-15724), and the Uniform Limited Partnership Act of 2008 (Corp C §§15900-15912.07), any general partner (i.e., any partner of a general partnership and only general partners—not limited partners—of a limited partnership) may convey title to real property that is held in the name of the partnership. Corp C §§16302(a)(1), 15643(a) (Corp C §15904.06(b)(2), operative Jan. 1, 2008, for new or electing limited partnerships).

The partnership is bound if the act of the general partner is apparently taken in the ordinary course of the partnership business, unless the general partner had no authority to act and the person with whom the general partner is dealing knew or had received notice that the general partner was not authorized to act. If an act is performed that is not apparently in the ordinary course of business, it binds the partnership only if the general partner was authorized to act. Corp C §§16301, 15643 (Corp C §15904.03, operative Jan. 1, 2008, for new or electing limited partnerships).

Corporations Code §16302(b) provides that the partnership may recover partnership property only if it proves that it was not bound under Corp C §16301 and can prove either of the following:

- The purchaser for value who acquired property held in the partnership name or in the name of partners, as partners, knew or had received notification that the person signing the transfer document was not authorized to bind the partnership; or
- The purchaser for value who acquired property held in the name of persons, without indication that the property was partnership property, knew or had received notification that the property was partnership property and that the person signing the transfer document lacked authority to bind the partnership.

Rather than subjecting the deed to the risk of attack, the grantee should insist that the deed be executed by all the partners. Alternatively, the partnership might authorize one or more partners to execute the deed under a resolution by all the partners or under the partnership agreement. Title insurers require that the statement of partnership authority (Corp C §16303) or a certificate of limited partnership (Corp C §15621 (Corp C §15902.01, operative Jan. 1, 2008, for new or electing limited partnerships)) be recorded.

A grant of authority to transfer real property held in the name of a partnership contained in a certified copy of a filed statement of partnership authority recorded in the office for recording transfers of that real property is conclusive in favor of a person who gives value without knowledge to the contrary, so long as a certified copy of a filed statement containing a limitation on that authority is not then of record. Corp C §§16105, 16303(d)(2). See Federal Deposit Ins. Corp. v Superior Court (1997) 54 CA4th 337, 346, 62 CR2d 713.

Comment: The name of the corporation should appear in the signature, but corporate misnomers are not detrimental if the intended corporation's identity is clear. See Sixth Dist. Agric. Ass'n v Wright (1908) 154 C 119, 97 P 144.

Unless execution is acknowledged in accordance with CC §1189, title insurers require a certified copy of a resolution authorizing the conveyance. Some title insurers may waive the certified copy of the resolution in the following situations:

- A bank or a financial institution with a responsible reputation executes the instrument and the corporate act is routine and does not affect its own property; or
- The president or vice-president and secretary or assistant secretary execute the instrument on behalf of the corporation, the transaction is clearly within the ordinary scope of the business of the corporation, and the possible loss if execution is unauthorized would not exceed an amount the insurer feels is reasonable.

Comment: For discussion of joint ventures, see §10.21. Consistent with the practice recommended in §10.21 (i.e., that conveyances to joint ventures be avoided but, if made, be in the names of the joint venturers, not in the name of the joint venture, and that the joint venture name need not be used except for identification), the execution form provides for the individual joint venturers to execute the deed. Although the joint venture is referred to, it is only for identification and is not required.

If the deed to the joint venture is in the form "to X, a joint venture, composed of A, B, and C," or "to X, a joint venture, and ABC," title insurers may require a deed from the joint venture executed by all the joint venturers and the joint venture, even though it may not be a legal entity capable of taking title.

The provision in §10.64 (partnership) or §10.65 (corporation) must be included in the provision in this section if any of the joint venturers is a partnership or a corporation.

The title company should be consulted on whether the spouses of the joint venturers must sign.

E. Acknowledgment

§10.67 1. Legal Requirements

Unless excepted by statute, a document's execution must be either acknowledged or proved, and the acknowledgment or proof certified, before it can be recorded. Govt C §§27287-27288. On procedures for proving unacknowledged documents, see §10.70. An acknowledgment is a statement that the person who appears to have signed the document did in fact sign it (see, e.g., CC §1189); it must be distinguished from a verification, which is a sworn statement that a document's contents are true (see CCP §446).

PRACTICE TIP: Blank acknowledgment forms can readily be obtained from most title companies and stationery stores. These forms (sometimes called wafers) need only be filled out and stapled to the document to be recorded. Acknowledgments can be made before a number of specified public officials (CC §§1181-1182), but the most common practice is to have a notary public execute the acknowledgment.

Civil Code §§1189-1190 specify a single statutory form of acknowledgment to be used in all situations.

PRACTICE TIP: The California Legislature amended laws relating to notaries and notarization of documents, which take effect January 1, 2008. One change, which affects everyone who uses a notary or seeks to record a document with a recorder's office in California, alters the required wording of the statutory form of acknowledgement. County recorders are likely to reject any document submitted for recording that does not have the new wording. See CC §1189.

§10.68 2. Documents That Need Not Be Acknowledged

The following documents may be recorded without being acknowledged or proved:

- Judgments affecting real property (Govt C §27282(a)(1));
- Certain certificates, extensions, and releases related to taxes (Govt C §27282(a)(4));
- Certain documents relating to mining claims and leases (Govt C §§27282(a)(3), 27283-27285; CC §1219);
- Letters patent, certain documents related to letters patent, mineral leases in which the United States is the lessor, certain copies of interdepartmental communications of the Department of the Interior, and certain copies of documents filed with the General Land Office (Govt C §§27285-27286);
- Fictitious mortgages or deeds of trust (CC §2952; Com C §9401);
- Lis pendens (no requirement in CCP §405.21, the enabling statute);
- Duplicate certificates of sale of real property sold under execution or under a court order (Foorman v Wallace (1888) 75 C 552, 17 P 680);
- Federal tax liens (Govt C §27330); and
- Notices of lien for postponed property taxes (Govt C §27282(a)(5)).

§10.69 3. Effect of Acknowledgment

A certificate of acknowledgment is prima facie evidence of the execution of the document to which it is attached. Evid C §1451. A person who properly acknowledges that he or she has executed an instrument cannot deny execution against subsequent innocent parties after the certificate of acknowledgment is attached to the instrument. This is true even if he or she did not freely execute the document. Bryan v Ramirez (1857) 8 C 461. But see Mentry v Broadway Bank & Trust Co. (1912) 20 CA 388, 129 P 470 (rule inapplicable to encumbrance such as a mortgage).

§10.70 4. Proof of Unacknowledged Documents

An unacknowledged document that does not come under any of the exceptions listed in §10.68 may still be recorded if it is proved by one of the following:

- A party executing the document or a subscribing witness (CC §1195(a));
- Proof of handwriting under certain circumstances (CC §§1195, 1198); or
- Court action (CC §§1203-1204).

NOTE: Constructive notice of a defectively acknowledged instrument is imparted 1 year after recordation under CC §1207.

§10.71 F. Delivery

A basic requirement for validity of a deed is its delivery. CC §1054; Hudemann v Dodson (1932) 215 C 3, 7 P2d 997. It is delivery that passes title. Pellissier v Title Guar. & Trust Co. (1929) 208 C 172, 280 P 947. Besides physical transfer of the deed and acceptance by the grantee, the grantor must intend to pass title for delivery to be complete. Henneberry v Henneberry (1958) 164 CA2d 125, 330 P2d 250. The grantor's intent is a question of fact to be determined from all the circumstances surrounding the transaction. Blackburn v Drake (1963) 211 CA2d 806, 27 CR 651.

On the right to waive ineffective delivery, see Kish v Bay Counties Title Guar. Co. (1967) 254 CA2d 725, 729, 62 CR 494.

© The Regents of the University of California

§10.72 1. Unconditional Delivery Is Required

Delivery to the grantee or the grantee's agent cannot be conditional if the grantor intended to pass title. CC §1056.

EXAMPLE 1: If the grantor intended to pass title but delivers the deed to the grantee on the condition that the grantee execute an agreement to pay money, or that the conveyance take effect only in the event of the grantor's death, delivery is absolute, and title passes immediately to the grantee. Bias v Reed (1914) 169 C 33, 44, 145 P 516; Estate of Pieper (1964) 224 CA2d 670, 687, 37 CR 46.

EXAMPLE 2: If the grantor believes, even though erroneously, that the condition is necessary for the deed to be effective, the delivery may fail for lack of the required intention, i.e., there may be no delivery despite the physical transfer of the documents. Hotaling v Hotaling (1924) 193 C 368, 224 P 455.

To convey property subject to a condition effectively, the grantor should deliver the deed to a third party (e.g., an escrow holder) who is not solely the grantee's agent. See CC §1057. On the use of an escrow to convey property subject to conditions, see chap 15.

© The Regents of the University of California

Source: Real Property/California Real Property Sales Transactions/10 Deeds/§10.73 2. Rebuttable Presumptions on Delivery

§10.73 2. Rebuttable Presumptions on Delivery

There are a few rebuttable presumptions affecting the burden of producing evidence on the issue of delivery. The following are three of them:

- When the deed is in the grantee's possession, delivery is presumed. See Podd v Anderson (1963) 215 CA2d 660, 30 CR 345.
- When the deed is in the grantor's possession, nondelivery is presumed. Miller v Jansen (1943) 21 C2d 473, 132 P2d 801.
- Recordation of a deed at the grantor's request is prima facie proof of delivery with the grantor's intention to convey title. Osterberg v Osterberg (1945) 68 CA2d 254, 156 P2d 46.

If a recorded deed is found in the grantor's possession, however, there is a conflict of presumptions. Hill v Donnelly (1941) 43 CA2d 47, 110 P2d 135 (presumption of delivery created by recordation versus presumption of nondelivery by grantor's continued possession of deed).

© The Regents of the University of California

§10.74 3. Constructive Delivery

Delivery can be constructive if

- by agreement of the parties at the time of execution, it is understood that the deed is to be delivered, and the grantee is entitled to immediate delivery; or
- the deed is delivered to a stranger for the benefit of the grantee, and the grantee's assent is shown or may be presumed. CC §1059.

© The Regents of the University of California

§10.75 G. Acceptance

For a deed to be effective, it must be accepted by the grantee. See Green v Skinner (1921) 185 C 435, 197 P 60. If the grantee has knowledge of the beneficial grant, acceptance is presumed (see Boye v Boerner (1940) 38 CA2d 567, 101 P2d 757); if the grant is beneficial, the grantee's acceptance is presumed (Kropp v Sterling Sav. & Loan Ass'n (1970) 9 CA3d 1033, 88 CR 878). Knowledge as well as acceptance is presumed unless lack of knowledge is clearly proved. See Marshall v Marshall (1956) 140 CA2d 475, 479, 295 P2d 131; Steitz v Irwin (1949) 94 CA2d 871, 211 P2d 919; Herman v Mortensen (1945) 72 CA2d 413, 164 P2d 551. On the presumption of acceptance by minors and incompetent or insane persons, see §10.24. When the grantee is a corporation, its intention to accept can be shown by its acts or words (e.g., acts of ownership generally, retention of the deed, execution of a mortgage). See Canal Oil Co. v National Oil Co. (1937) 19 CA2d 524, 66 P2d 197.

III. VALIDITY OF DEEDS

§10.76 A. Void Deeds

A deed is void in the following cases:

- The grantor is a person judicially declared incompetent. CC §40. See §4.16.
- The grantor is a minor. Fam C §6701. See §4.15.
- The deed is executed in blank with the grantee's name later inserted without the grantor's authorization. Trout v Taylor (1934) 220 C 652, 32 P2d 968.
- The deed is undelivered, such as one stolen from the grantor or delivered by an escrow holder in violation of the grantor's instructions. Hildebrand v Beck (1925) 196 C 141, 236 P 301; Gould v Wise (1893) 97 C 532, 32 P 576.
- The deed contains uncertain language, e.g., "A or B" (see §10.25). See Schade v Stewart (1928) 205 C 658, 272 P 567. On the use of "A or nominee" language, see §4.157.
- The deed is testamentary (i.e., one expressly intended to operate on the death of the grantor or in contemplation of death) unless it is either executed with the formalities required of wills (Van Core v Bodner (1947) 77 CA2d 842, 176 P2d 784) or delivered on a condition to a third party (CC §1057).
- The deed is materially altered. Jay v Dollarhide (1970) 3 CA3d 1001, 84 CR 538.

Examples of voidable deeds include the following:

- A fraudulently procured deed (Seeger v Odell (1941) 18 C2d 409, 115 P2d 977);
- A deed containing a mistake about the quantity of land conveyed (see Danielson v Neal (1913) 164 C 748, 130 P 716);
- A deed procured by undue influence (Cox v Schnerr (1916) 172 C 371, 156 P 509);
- A deed procured by duress or menace (Campbell v Genshlea (1919) 180 C 213, 180 P 336); and
- A deed from a grantor of unsound mind whose incapacity has not been judicially determined (Hughes v Grandy (1947) 78 CA2d 555, 177 P2d 939).

If the deed is voidable, a bona fide purchaser from the grantee obtains good title as against the grantor. Duff v Randall (1897) 116 C 226, 48 P 66.

I. INTRODUCTION

§11.1 A. Historical Background

Real estate practitioners in California encounter a broad variety of legal descriptions of real property, both in origin and in the quality and precision of the description. Historically, chains of title generally originate from these sources:

- Rancho grants and existing titles from the Spanish government and Mexican governors in the years before 1846, to the extent recognized by the United States Land Commissions of the 1850s and the federal courts; and
- Grants from the public domain by federal patent, including mining and homestead claims, Indian lands, and railroad grants.

Lawyers often encounter later-generation descriptions that derive from these original sources. Land subdivision companies operated briskly in California from the 1870s onward, and legal descriptions containing or based on these original descriptions are commonly encountered. For a readable history of the initial division of California, see Robinson, Land in California (1979). The practices of the early subdividers of Los Angeles County, for example, are described in Jackson, The Crabgrass Frontier: The Suburbanization of the United States (1985).

The quality of the early descriptions and first-generation subdivisions varied enormously. Early measurement techniques lacked precision, and, in any event, many of the described monuments are now gone. Early surveyors of townships and subdivisions in the late 1800s typically drew maps lacking some or all courses and monuments, even in urban areas. Many grants by federal patents used distant monumentation from the base line system. See §§11.17-11.18. Varying degrees of attention were paid to access easements and other necessary appurtenances.

PRACTICE TIP: Precision in land descriptions is relative. Even today, although parcel maps and legal descriptions that are derived from permanent monuments and prepared with modern techniques eliminate many problems, discrepancies in measurement or interpretation can still occur.

In light of this background, a number of corrective doctrines apply to the interpretation and use of legal descriptions:

- Unmentioned appurtenances (CC §§1084, 1104; see §§11.54-11.55);
- The doctrines of agreed boundaries and practical location (see §§11.78-11.79);
- Way of necessity (see §11.56);
- Adverse possession (CCP §§321-325; see §11.77); and
- Other off-record modifications of recorded descriptions.

These factors should always be kept in mind by parties considering the acquisition, transfer, or subdivision of land, or the acquisition and interpretation of title insurance products.

§11.2 B. Nature and Purpose of Descriptions

The purpose of a description depends on the objective of the legal document involved. For example, purchase and sale agreements—even those involving large-scale commercial property—commonly refer to a street address, an assessor's parcel number, or other common reference, with additional provisions subjecting the property's full legal description and its insurability to the buyer's review and approval. For purposes of an instrument transferring title, such as a deed or a deed of trust, common descriptions are inadequate, and most title insurers will insure only the legal descriptions, as described in §§11.24-11.26. Using and accepting a legal description usually means accepting a small risk that the actual lines of possession differ from the metes and bounds of record, or that other doctrines or remedies may apply (see §§11.54-11.57, 11.77-11.79).

PRACTICE TIP: The best descriptions are produced or confirmed by modern survey techniques and insured by American Land Title Association (ALTA) policies of insurance for owners or lenders. On ALTA surveys, see California Title Insurance Practice §4.32 (2d ed Cal CEB 1997).

Regardless of the instrument or use involved, a description is intended to specifically delineate the property with a sufficient degree of precision that it can be located and distinguished from all other parcels, and that buyers, lenders, and title insurers will accept it as marketable. Lack of precision may result in expense, litigation, or disruption of commercial real estate transactions. On descriptions generally, see 12 Witkin, Summary of California Law, Real Property §271 (10th ed 2005); 3 Miller & Starr, California Real Estate §§8:45-8:51 (3d ed 2000).

On describing personal property incidental to transfers of real property, see §11.118.

C. The Lawyer's Function

§11.3 1. Review of Legal Description

It is important for the attorney to review the legal description in any transaction to ascertain the type of description involved, its degree of precision, any issues that may arise when title insurance is requested, and whether it completely describes all property interests contemplated in the transaction. Counsel may also find it appropriate to refer the client to a surveyor or to explain the different types of title insurance that may be available to match the client's objectives, and the potential exceptions to coverage. Many circumstances may require a different description from the one by which the transferor acquired title:

- The original description may be erroneous (see §11.9);
- Subsequent events may have either deprived the record owner of all or part of the land or enlarged the transferor's holdings (see §§11.77-11.79);
- The record itself may reveal changes in the client's ownership (see §11.7); or
- The transferor may wish to part with only a portion of the land described in the documents (see §11.40).

To meet these situations, the lawyer—whether counsel for buyer or seller—must know how to find correct descriptions (see §§11.9-11.13), read them (see §§11.14-11.41), verify their accuracy (see §§11.42-11.88), correct them if necessary, and draft descriptions that will carry out the parties' intentions (see §§11.89-11.108), or refer the client to specialists, such as licensed surveyors or title companies, who will perform these functions.

In addition, the lawyer must know how to describe any personal property that is to be transferred as part of the transaction. On descriptions of personal property, see §11.118.

§11.4 2. Zoning and Subdivision Considerations

An immediate concern in an acquisition may be a client's plans for future use, development, or subdivision of the property. If a client has calculated an economic return on the basis of development or subdivision of the property, it is important to point out that an inaccurate description may result in a shortfall in land, affecting densities or setbacks under local zoning ordinances.

If easements will be needed for access to a development, the client must be cautioned that public works and zoning considerations may apply to easement widths and designs. On development easements, see California Easements and Boundaries: Law and Litigation, chap 2 (Cal CEB 2008).

EXAMPLE: If a client has created a tentative map with minimum lot sizes and issues arise concerning boundary inaccuracies, the client's plans could be seriously disrupted. The lawyer should therefore counsel the client to condition the acquisition of property on careful inspection, a survey, and issuance of the appropriate form of title insurance.

© The Regents of the University of California

§11.5 3. Forms of Ownership

Many aspects of the transaction involving descriptions are exclusively the province of the lawyer. Foremost is the nature of the estate and form of ownership, such as a fee title, life estate, estate for years, leasehold, or separate versus community property or other form of cotenancy. The form of conveyancing and ownership, and use of a grant with covenants of title under CC §1113, are also the province of the lawyer. Title insurers will examine the description and form of title to determine whether they will insure the title as requested; however, the determination of the type of ownership or estate is a matter of counseling between the lawyer and the client. The lawyer should review the form of documents, even if prepared by an escrow holder or a title insurer, to make sure that they are consistent with the form of recommended ownership and that the form of title insurance used is consistent with these objectives.

© The Regents of the University of California

§11.6 4. Creation of Easements

The lawyer responsible for drafting an easement must make sure that the conveyance is properly drafted and consistent with record ownership, that it appropriately states the parcel to which it is appurtenant, and that issues of common use, ownership, maintenance (see CC §845), and compliance with applicable zoning codes are addressed. If an easement in gross is intended (see §11.67), the status and transferability of the easement must be properly created. For the description itself, the lawyer will refer the client to a surveyor for the metes and bounds or other description to be included in the conveyance, but the other aspects of the transaction require legal skills. On creation of easements, see California Easements and Boundaries: Law and Litigation, chap 1 (Cal CEB 2008).

Source: Real Property/California Real Property Sales Transactions/11 Descriptions of Property/§11.7 5. Common Interest Developments

§11.7 5. Common Interest Developments

Common interest developments are sophisticated combinations of privately and commonly held interests, for which the attorney must request and use descriptions of various types, but the structure of ownership, the creation of common areas, the duties of maintenance, and compliance with applicable laws and regulations are legal functions.

Descriptions will be employed in the drafting of restrictions on use or equitable servitudes for the creation of common interest developments. To be enforceable, restrictions require the following (CC §1468):

- A statement that successive owners in the land are bound by the restrictions;
- A proper definition of the acts related to the use of the land;
- A description of the land to be burdened by the covenants;
- A description of the land to be benefited; and
- Proper recording of the instrument containing the covenants (the declaration of restrictions, commonly called "covenants, conditions, and restrictions" or "CC&Rs") in the office of the recorder of each county in which such land or some part of it is situated.

Prior recorded CC&Rs bind the lots encumbered by the CC&Rs, even though the deeds to the encumbered lots do not reference the CC&Rs, see Citizens for Covenant Compliance v Anderson (1995) 12 C4th 345, 47 CR2d 898, and even though sellers failed to disclose the deed restrictions, see Alfaro v Community Housing Improvement Sys. & Planning Ass'n (2009) 171 CA4th 1356, 1372, 89 CR3d 659.

Counsel must make sure that the conveyances and the CC&Rs are appropriately drafted and indexed at the recorder's office so that subsequent parties dealing with the property will be on constructive notice of the conveyance. The lawyer cannot merely assume that these steps will be checked by a title insurer, even when title insurance is requested and issued.

See Forming California Common Interest Developments, chap 7 (Cal CEB 2004); Advising California Common Interest Communities §§7.44-7.53 (Cal CEB 2003).

§11.8 D. Limitations on Lawyer's Function

The lawyer's responsibilities regarding descriptions will usually be discharged by recommending and using appropriate experts. Sections 11.12-11.13 examine several situations in which surveyors, engineers, and title insurers should be employed.

The lawyer should not be held to a standard of care in which responsibility for an error of a different professional will be attributed to the lawyer, unless the error is so obvious that it should be uncovered during the lawyer's examination.

Once the lawyer has employed the proper assistance, he or she should:

- Help furnish the proper information on which the reports of surveyors and others are to be based;
- Insist that the reports be rendered promptly; and
- Examine the reports critically to the extent possible, because errors can always occur.

Surveyors or engineers should be retained to ascertain whether metes and bounds are correct and whether the property is subject to unrecorded defects such as encroachments, shifting water boundaries, subsidence, or structural defects. (Licensed engineers are authorized to perform surveys as long as they pass the examination required by Bus & P C §§8731 and 8741(b). They are referred to in this chapter as surveyors.)

An attorney whose responsibilities have been carried out properly will not be responsible for errors in the surveyor's report. When appropriate, however, the lawyer should:

- Counsel clients on the need for a surveyor;
- State the problem correctly to the surveyor;
- Check the complete report; and
- Question the surveyor about any aspects of the report that appear incorrect.

In drafting subdivision and survey maps, the law requires employment of a licensed surveyor. See §11.12. In using the California Coordinate System (explained in §§11.22-11.23), the difficulty of understanding and interpreting courses makes a surveyor indispensable. In describing the effects of off-record matters affecting descriptions (see §§11.53-11.57, 11.77-11.79), prudence often dictates hiring a professional surveyor.

II. FINDING CORRECT DESCRIPTIONS

§11.9 A. Deeds

Ordinarily, the seller should be able to produce the deed, judgment, or other document by which he or she acquired title to the property. If not, either a title company or the recorder's office can readily produce a copy. This document cannot always, however, be relied on to describe the property accurately: The seller may be parting with only a fraction of the property described in his or her documents of title, or the description may have been changed by subsequent matters of record, such as condemnation or partial conveyances, or by events that do not show on the record, such as easements, adverse possession, prescription, or implied dedication. See §§11.53-11.57, 11.77-11.79; see also California Easements and Boundaries: Law and Litigation (Cal CEB 2008).

It should also not be assumed that the previous description does not contain survey errors or does not misdescribe all or a portion of the property.

© The Regents of the University of California

§11.10 B. Preliminary Report or Title Insurance Policy

The seller's lawyer should ask to see the client's title insurance policy (Ins C §12340.2) before the seller enters into a sale transaction and should view it in the proper context. Title insurance is a contract of indemnity against loss through defects in the title or liens or encumbrances that affect the title; unlike an abstract of title or a survey, it is not a representation of the property description or status of title. Lawrence v Chicago Title Ins. Co. (1987) 192 CA3d 70, 74, 237 CR 264. See California Title Insurance Practice §§5.25-5.29 (2d ed Cal CEB 1997). There is no coverage for physical conditions of property that merely affect land value (Hocking v Title Ins. & Trust Co. (1951) 37 C2d 644, 651, 234 P2d 625) or restrictions created by generally applicable ordinances (Elysian Inv. Group v Stewart Title Guar. Co. (2002) 105 CA4th 315, 323, 129 CR2d 372). The policy reflects the status of the title of the property and is effective as of the date it was issued, and it will not reflect subsequent events, which may have altered or affected the description. Quelimane Co. v Stewart Title Guar. Co. (1998) 19 C4th 26, 41, 77 CR2d 709. Some of these matters are discussed in §§11.77-11.79. To discover possible changes in the description, both parties should obtain the additional information enumerated from inspections, surveys, and title services (see §§11.11-11.13).

As part of this information, it is customary and prudent to order a preliminary report. Ins C §12340.11. On preliminary reports generally, see Title Ins, chap 5. The report may include a copy of a parcel map, but more often a copy of an assessor's parcel map is attached for information only and usually bears a stamp or legend to that effect. Assessor's maps can be convenient, but they should be used with great care. They are not legal descriptions and do not impart constructive notice under the recording laws (CC §§1213-1215). They are nothing more than compilations from various sources deemed accurate by the staff at the assessor's office, and their quality varies widely. Inaccuracies in descriptions are not always detectable, and the information is not necessarily complete. In addition, lot lines may have been eliminated for convenience or, because of common ownership, to simplify tax collection records. If recorded parcel maps or surveys are available, it is prudent to request a copy of one.

PRACTICE TIP: Because the preliminary report does not insure the description, buyers should protect themselves by acquiring a binder or conditioning the purchase and sale agreement on review and approval of the description and any acceptable exceptions to title, and receipt of a title insurance policy insuring title as approved by the buyer. For a discussion of title insurance, see §§4.50-4.55. See also Title Ins §§5.25-5.28, 11.38-11.44.

In reviewing title insurance policies for information on descriptions and the status of title, the type of policy and any endorsements to it must be considered. Commonly issued California Land Title Association (CLTA) forms are generally underwritten, based on matters of record at the recorder's office only. American Land Title Association (ALTA) forms insure against a number of off-record risks; a survey can be prepared and incorporated by a CLTA 116.1 endorsement that insures that the property described in the title policy is the same as is shown on the survey attached to the policy, subject to any noted exceptions. The usefulness of a given title insurance policy in reviewing descriptions will depend on the type of policy, its issuance date, and the client's objectives. On structure and coverage of title insurance policies, see Title Ins, chap 6. On owner's policies and endorsements, see Title Ins, chap 7.

§11.11 C. Inspection of Premises

A bona fide purchaser is charged with notice of matters inconsistent with record title discoverable by inspection of the property. CC §19; Caito v United Cal. Bank (1978) 20 C3d 694, 702, 144 CR 751; Scheerer v Cuddy (1890) 85 C 270, 273, 24 P 713; Melendez v D & I Inv., Inc. (2005) 127 CA4th 1238, 1251, 26 CR3d 413; Gates Rubber Co. v Ulman (1989) 214 CA3d 356, 262 CR 630.

Possession of land is notice of whatever right, title, or interest the occupant may have in the property, and puts all persons on inquiry to determine how and under what right the occupant holds possession. See Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. v Minnette (1953) 115 CA2d 698, 252 P 2d 642. Nevertheless, according to the "form of title" presumption, the description in a deed as to how title is held is presumed to reflect the actual ownership interests in the property, as codified in Evid C §662, and this presumption may be rebutted only by clear and convincing proof. Marriage of Brooks (2008) 169 CA4th 176, 185, 86 CR3d 624.

A description from a deed or title insurance policy should in most circumstances be checked by inspecting the land, which can occur through one or more inspections by the following:

- The client or its staff;
- Real estate brokers;
- Attorneys;
- Licensed surveyors; and
- Title officers.

The buyer may be charged with notice of information that he or she could have obtained by questioning a party whose possession of the property is inconsistent with record title. In In re Weisman (9th Cir 1993) 5 F3d 417, 420, a bankruptcy trustee trying to qualify as a bona fide purchaser would have learned from the ex-husband in possession that the former wife had conveyed the property to him by unrecorded quitclaim. See also In re Whiting (2004) 311 BR 539, 543. A purchaser is charged with knowledge of the following:

- The nature of the property;
- Its current use;
- The identities of the persons occupying it;
- The relationships among them; and
- The relationship between those in possession and the purported seller.

Real estate brokers, although charged with limited duties of inspection and disclosure of facts materially affecting the value or desirability of the property (Easton v Strassburger (1984) 152 CA3d 90, 199 CR 383), cannot realistically be expected to possess the expertise to notice much more than obvious discrepancies in record title. The attorney's inspection can be a great advantage to the client, but his or her expertise may not exceed the ability to confirm that a surveyor should be employed. Licensed surveyors, because of their unique technical expertise, are the most qualified persons to check descriptions and monuments. Use of a surveyor will depend on the type of transaction and the client's objectives. Title officers seldom perform inspections unless an American Land Title Association (ALTA) owner's policy with survey endorsement is requested. In any large transaction, a field inspection will almost certainly occur, although the title insurer may also rely on the surveyor's reputation in issuing its ALTA survey endorsement. On inspections and survey requirements for extended coverage insurance policies, see California Title Insurance Practice §§2.13, 4.31 (2d ed Cal CEB 1997).

An inspection may also disclose survey monumentation, along with other monuments such as street rights-of-way or markers. Aerial photographs can also be useful for large tracts, particularly in evidencing easements or encroaching fences.

Third party rights should be ascertainable on an inspection, as evidenced by fences, driveways, easements, power lines, pipeline signs, or persons in possession of part or all of the property.

§11.12 D. Surveys and Engineering Studies

Some problems are discoverable only by engineers and surveyors. If the seller has conducted a recent survey, he or she may make it available to the buyer. If not, the attorney's failure to advise the hiring of an engineer or a surveyor in a proper case may be a disservice to the client. Ideally, qualified surveyors should draft all new descriptions. They are required by law to do so in drafting subdivision and survey maps. Govt C §§66495-66496. Their services should also be used when there is any question of encroachment, uncertain boundaries, possible landslides, or similar defects.

Sometimes, however, surveyors assume without question that a fence or a line between adjacent buildings correctly marks a boundary. When the assumption is open to question, the lawyer may have to insist that the line be accurately measured.

Issuance of some title insurance policies may be based on approval by the title insurer of an American Land Title Association (ALTA) survey or similar service by a surveyor. Use of surveyors should be coordinated with the requirements of the title insurers involved in the transaction. On ALTA surveys, see California Title Insurance Practice §4.32 (2d ed Cal CEB 1997).

For articles discussing surveys, see York, Surveys in Real Property Transactions—Parts I-II, 5 CEB Real Prop L Rep 121, 145 (Oct., Nov. 1982), and additional comments in Cummins, Comment on Surveys in Real Property Transactions, 6 CEB Real Prop L Rep 57 (Apr. 1983).

§11.13 E. Title Services

The client's ultimate protection regarding the legal description is often a title insurance policy in proper form and with proper policy limits. It is important that the policy limits reflect not only the purchase price but any potential improvements and expenditures that a client may make to the property. In addition to advising the client on the proper form of policy, the attorney should also discuss the availability of standard or specialized endorsements. On advising clients on title insurance, see California Title Insurance Practice, chap 2 (2d ed Cal CEB 1997).

Title officers can also be used for informal assistance. In such discussions, it is important to bear in mind that title insurance is a contract of indemnity and that the title company will view the provision of information as preliminary to the issuance of its policy, and that it is assuming no greater obligation than that ultimately reflected in the policy itself. Unless a specific abstract of title is requested under Ins C §12340.10, a title insurer may not be liable for any negligent errors or misrepresentations made in giving informal advice. On liability under preliminary reports, see Title Ins §§5.25-5.28, 11.38-11.44. In this context, title officers can often help clients or lawyers with the following tasks:

- Read complicated descriptions and indicate or identify property as described on a plat (which, however, may yield to survey marks "on the ground" if the two conflict);
- Approve legal descriptions acceptable for title insurance purposes from record information, an approved survey, or both, the source of information depending on the title service rendered;
- Verify that the bearings and distances shown in a metes and bounds description (see §§11.26, 11.90) are mathematically correct and that the complete description is sufficient to enclose and identify the particular parcel; and
- In conjunction with extended coverage title insurance, verify and correlate survey and record information to learn whether discrepancies exist that will require remedial action. On surveys, see Title Ins §§4.30-4.34.

California title companies do not, however, offer surveying services as such.

III. READING DESCRIPTIONS

§11.14 A. Certainty Requirement

The cardinal rule in construing descriptions is to discover and carry out the parties' intentions. City of Manhattan Beach v Superior Court (1996) 13 C4th 232, 238, 52 CR2d 82. A description of real property is generally sufficient if it identifies the land or furnishes the means of designating the property sought to be conveyed. It has been held that, if a competent surveyor can take the description and locate the land with or without the aid of extrinsic evidence, the description is sufficient. Daluiso v Boone (1969) 269 CA2d 253, 262, 75 CR 287. If the description is not sufficiently certain, the conveyance can be voided. Morehart v County of Santa Barbara (1994) 7 C4th 725, 766, 29 CR2d 804; Saterstrom v Glick Bros. Sash Co. (1931) 118 CA 379, 5 P2d 21.

In the purchase and sale agreement, the description must be certain enough to satisfy the statute of frauds (CC §1624(a)(3); CCP §1971) and be specifically enforceable (CC §3390). Although less certainty is required in a contract to convey land than in the conveyance document itself, the description must be sufficient, without parol evidence, to locate the property. Calvi v Bittner (1961) 198 CA2d 312, 17 CR 850. But see §11.15.

§11.15 B. Ambiguity

Mere ambiguity is not fatal if it can be cured by parol or extrinsic evidence. Fudickar v East Riverside Irrig. Dist. (1895) 109 C 29, 41 P 1024. Extrinsic evidence is inadmissible to add to, detract from, or vary the terms of the deed, but it is admissible to ascertain the issue involved when an ambiguity appears on the face of the deed. Severns v Union Pac. R.R. Co. (2002) 101 CA4th 1209, 1214, 125 CR2d 100; Concord & Bay Point Land Co. v City of Concord (1991) 229 CA3d 289, 294, 280 CR 623; Baker v Ramirez (1987) 190 CA3d 1123, 1132, 235 CR 857. The intent must be discovered according to statutory and judicial rules of construction. See CCP §§1857, 1866, 2077; CC §§830-831, 1069, 1112; Govt C §§23071-23076; White v State (1971) 21 CA3d 738, 766, 99 CR 58. The directive of CC §1069 that a grant by a public agency is to be interpreted in favor of the grantor applies only if the grant is ambiguous. Red Mountain LLC v Fallbrook Pub. Util. Dist. (2006) 143 CA4th 333, 344, 48 CR3d 875.

Although parol evidence is admissible to allow the description to be identified with its location on the ground (Calvi v Bittner (1961) 198 CA2d 312, 17 CR 850), it is not admissible to supply a description when the writing does not furnish the means to make it certain (Alameda Belt Line v City of Alameda (2003) 113 CA4th 15, 21, 5 CR3d 879; Vezaldenos v Keller (1967) 254 CA2d 816, 823, 62 CR 808). See Finn v Goldstein (1927) 201 C 605, 258 P 85 (description by address sufficient when it includes entire property); Kapner v Meadowlark Ranch Ass'n (2004) 116 CA4th 1182, 1187, 11 CR3d 138 (reference to previously recorded CC&Rs that contained metes and bounds description of property); Brudvig v Renner (1959) 172 CA2d 522, 342 P2d 276 (description by address insufficient when undescribed portion excluded); Roberts v Lebrain (1952) 113 CA2d 712, 248 P2d 810 (description by street alone insufficient when seller owned two residential properties on same street).

If the parties' intentions are ascertainable from the instrument itself, parol evidence is inadmissible. Joerger v PG&E (1929) 207 C 8, 276 P 1017; Severns v Union Pac. R.R. Co. (2002) 101 CA4th 1209, 1214, 125 CR2d 100. However, without evidence that the parties intended a completely integrated writing, parol evidence is admissible to prove a meaning to which a deed is reasonably susceptible. Masterson v Sine (1968) 68 C2d 222, 65 CR 545. As in any contract, the primary object of interpretation of a deed is to ascertain and carry out the intention of the parties. Applicable rules of interpretation must be considered, given their proper weight, and construed in light of extrinsic evidence that may prove a meaning to which the instrument's language is reasonably susceptible. City of Manhattan Beach v Superior Court (1996) 13 C4th 232, 52 CR2d 82; City & County of San Francisco v Union Pac. R.R. Co. (1996) 50 CA4th 987, 58 CR2d 1. In PG&E v G.W. Thomas Drayage & Rigging Co. (1968) 69 C2d 33, 69 CR 561, the court held that extrinsic evidence is admissible to prove a meaning to which the language of a written agreement is reasonably susceptible, even though on its "four corners" the instrument appears to the court to be clear and unambiguous.

An agreement may be sufficiently certain to permit damages for breach but insufficiently certain for specific performance. See Brudvig v Renner, supra. On damages for seller's breach, see California Real Property Remedies and Damages, chap 4 (2d ed Cal CEB 2002).

§11.16 C. Acreage Problems

A statement of acreage as part of a description is not common and could either create an ambiguity or resolve one. For example, since a government survey section may not be exactly one mile square (see §11.17), the addition of the language "consisting of 640 acres" may create an ambiguity. Thus the words "more or less" are generally added if acreage is given. On a plat, "more or less" may be expressed by the symbol ± (as in Figure 1, §11.18). An erroneous statement of acreage adds nothing to a description if it is otherwise clear that the grantor intended or was obligated to transfer title to an entire parcel. As discussed in §11.11, buyers are charged with constructive notice of all facts that an inquiry could reveal. CC §19. Typically, this inquiry includes the area of the property and, in the absence of fraud by the seller, the buyer is generally charged with notice of the acreage involved. It is the author's view that including the acreage may be appropriate in purchase and sale agreements in reference to price and other aspects of the transaction, but it is not appropriate in the legal description itself. Also, references to acreage can be relative. Parties may or may not deduct easements or rights-of-way, and it may be unclear whether calculations are made to the edge of adjacent rights-of-way, the physical placement of a road surface (which may or may not be on the edge of the right-of-way of record), or to the centerline presumed under CC §1112.

PRACTICE TIP: In transactional documents, it is best to refer specifically in the description to each potential ambiguity revealed by the record or an inspection. If the entire fee is to be conveyed, but the price is to be computed on less than the gross area, two different descriptions will be used in the same transaction.

§11.17 D. Reference to Government Surveys

The rectangular system of surveying was adopted by the federal government in 1785. This system generally provides for townships six miles square, containing 36 sections, each approximately one mile square.

Lawyers commonly encounter descriptions based on United States government surveys, particularly in large parcels of rural land or in reviewing chains of title of subdivided properties. These surveys have been applied generally to public lands in all states north of the Ohio River and all states west of the Mississippi River except Texas. They have also been used in Alabama, Mississippi, and Florida. The surveys divide the land into rectangular units as outlined in Bureau of Land Management, Manual of Instructions for the Survey of the Public Lands of the United States (1973). For information on the next edition of this manual, see Directory. For assistance in reading these descriptions, see Wattles, Writing Legal Descriptions in Conjunction With Survey Boundary Control (4th ed 1981).

A typical description based on these rectangular surveys is, e.g., "southwest ¼ of southwest ¼ of southwest ¼, section 36, township 2 north, range 4 east, Mount Diablo base and meridian." The land described by this formula is the smallest shaded plot in Figure 1, §11.18. Sometimes the description is abbreviated. Thus, the above description may appear as "SW ¼ of SW ¼ of SW ¼ S 36 T2N R4E MDB&M" or as "SW ¼ of SW ¼ of SW ¼, Sec 36, Twp 2N, Range 4E, Mount Diablo B&M."

NOTE: Generally, although abbreviations are desirable on maps, authorities recommend that descriptions be spelled out in conveyances and agreements in order to avoid inadvertent errors. See Brown, Robillard, & Wilson, Evidence and Procedures for Boundary Location (3d ed 1994). Potential ambiguity results from the omission of "of" or "and" in a description containing a series of quarter sections. For example, does "SE ¼ SW ¼" mean both the southeast quarter and the southwest quarter or only the southeast quarter of the southwest quarter?

In reading a description based on a government rectangular survey, the best way to locate the land on a map is to read the description backwards; this method is explained in §11.21.

The survey of public lands creates the boundary lines, and a description of land granted by U.S. patent is final; however, extrinsic evidence can be admissible to explain uncertainties of the grant and to determine original intent. Claudino v Pereira (2008) 165 CA4th 1282, 1288, 82 CR3d 464.

§11.18 1. Base and Meridian

After California became a state in 1850, federal surveyors divided the state into townships. Three base and meridian landmarks were designated. In Northern California, the surveys were based on the Humboldt base and meridian, in Central California on the Mt. Diablo base and meridian, and in Southern California on the San Bernardino base and meridian. The surveyors then projected north-south lines through the base points and named them principal meridians, and projected east-west lines through the base points and named them base lines. The initials "MDB&M" in the description refer to the Mt. Diablo base and meridian system, defined by the intersection of the Mt. Diablo base and the Mt. Diablo meridian. All three base and meridian systems are shown on the map of California in Figure 1 below.

CALIFORNIA COORDINATE SYSTEM

Divides state into 7 zones and prescribes a point of control (PC) for each (Pub Res C §§8801–8816). A point of control is the intersection of a meridian (for Zone 3, 120° 30' W) given the value X (East) = 2,000,000 feet, and a parallel (for Zone 3, 36° 30' N) at which Y (North) = 0 feet. Adjustment factor commonly shown converts sea level distances of system to ground level. Coordinates of this point ★ are X = 1,675,000, Y = 525,000, CCS, Zone 3, Factor 1.0000546.

§11.19 2. Range and Township

In the description "southwest ¼ of southwest ¼ of southwest ¼, section 36, township 2 north, range 4 east, Mt. Diablo base and meridian," the element "range 4 east" refers to the fourth range east of the Mt. Diablo meridian. Each range is approximately six miles wide (subject to variations due to the convergence of meridians as they go northward); the ranges are numbered consecutively, east or west from the applicable meridian. For example, the first range to the west of the meridian would be "range 1 west."

Township lines occur at six-mile intervals north and south of bases. Thus, the designation "township 2 north" in the description above refers to a township in the second tier north of the Mt. Diablo base in the specified range (range 4 east) and describes an area of approximately 36 square miles. As a matter of convention, the township always precedes the range in descriptions.

© The Regents of the University of California

§11.20 3. Section

The element preceding the designation of township and range is usually a section number. In the example given in §11.19, the section described is section 36. A township ordinarily consists of 36 sections, each approximately one mile square, i.e., approximately 640 acres. In the same way that meridians and range boundaries converge as they approach the North Pole, the north-south boundaries of sections also converge. As a result, sections rarely measure a perfect square mile. For this reason, the words "more or less" should be used if the area or acreage of a section is given at all. On the question of whether to add acreage to the description, see §11.16.

© The Regents of the University of California

§11.21 4. Quarters

Sections are commonly subdivided into quarters or halves, and this quartering or halving may be carried down into further quarters or halves. In the description "southwest ¼ of southwest ¼ of southwest ¼, section 36," the quarter reference preceding the section number refers to the southwest quarter of section 36. In Figure 1, §11.18, that is the quarter consisting of four approximately 40-acre squares (three notated "40±", one shaded); a total of 160 acres, more or less. The middle "southwest ¼" refers to the southwest quarter of the 160-acre quarter. And the first "southwest ¼" describes the shaded 10-acre parcel in the diagram of section 36 in Figure 1. As shown in the illustration, that parcel may be further subdivided (e.g., into lots, quarters, halves, or parcels described by metes and bounds; see §11.18).

E. California Surveying Systems

§11.22 1. California Coordinate System of 1927

An optional system of describing land is the California Coordinate System of 1927 (CCS). See Pub Res C §§8801-8819. The CCS is based on the "system of plane coordinates which has been established by the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey for defining and stating the positions or locations of points on the surface of the earth within the State of California." Pub Res C §8801(a). The system is based on the fact that the earth is an oblate spheroid rather than a perfect sphere; seven spheroids of reference or zones are created. Pub Res C §§8803-8809. The rectangular system discussed in §11.17 is not based on the Coast and Geodetic Survey, but on Bureau of Land Management surveys.

In drafting a description, CCS coordinates are superfluous in most instances: To constitute constructive notice—which is at the very heart of the recording laws (see §§15.85-15.92)—the description must contain sufficient data to identify the property without recourse to the coordinates; in a conflict between the two descriptions, the coordinates yield to the other description. Pub Res C §8814; see MacEllven, Coordinate Surveying System, California Land Title Association Proceedings 32 (1958).

In reading a CCS description, lawyers concerned with accuracy and potential liability will not rely on their own skill alone. The location of a point consists of a measurement in feet, east or west from a north-south axis parallel to a stated meridian and north or south from an axis at right angles to that meridian. An example of this kind of description is shown below the map of California in Figure 1, §11.18. The system is primarily an aid to surveyors but is of limited effect in describing land for conveyances.

© The Regents of the University of California

§11.23 2. Alternative Surveying and Mapping Systems

In addition to the California Coordinate System of 1927, newer systems of surveying and mapping have been adopted in California: the California Coordinate System of 1983, based on the National Geodetic Survey known as the North American Datum of 1983 (Pub Res C §8801(b)); and a California Spatial Reference System-Horizontal, based on Global Positioning System survey methods using satellites (Pub Res C §8801(e)).

§11.24 F. Subdivision or Parcel Maps

In the modern context, subdivision or parcel maps are the most common and most desirable method of describing parcels, but the method is not immune from survey errors or other mistakes.

Property may be described by reference to a recorded map. McCullough v Olds (1895) 108 C 529, 41 P 420. The advantage of this method is that the property's relationship to surrounding properties and appurtenances such as easements is readily demonstrated. The filing of a map is deemed a declaration of the right to use streets and passageways abutting a lot as well as the streets and ways leading to public places on highways, all of which pass in subsequent conveyances that refer to the description on the map. Danielson v Sykes (1910) 157 C 686, 109 P 87. The two requirements for the validity of this type of description are the following:

- The document can be produced and identified and the land located from the descriptive data (see §§11.14-11.16); and
- The map must be properly recorded, usually in a special map book maintained by the County Recorder.

The requirements for recordation of maps are set out in Govt C §§66410-66499.37 (Subdivision Map Act; see also 10 Cal Code Regs §§2790-2804); Govt C §§66499.50-66499.58 (official maps of cities, towns, and counties); Bus & P C §§8762-8771.5 (record of survey maps; see also 16 Cal Code Regs §465); Rev & T C §327 (assessors' maps); Health & S C §§8550-8557 (cemeteries); and CC §§1350-1359 (condominiums). Contracts for the sale, lease, or financing of real property for which a final map is pending must be expressly conditioned on the approval and filing of a final subdivision map. Govt C §66499.30(e). See Sixells, LLC v Cannery Bus. Park (2008) 170 CA4th 648, 652, 88 CR3d 235 (purchase conditioned on waiver of recordation of final subdivision map violates statute); Black Hills Invs., Inc. v Albertson's, Inc. (2007) 146 CA4th 883, 892, 53 CR3d 263. A transfer in violation of the Subdivision Map Act is voidable at the option of the grantee or the grantee's successor in interest within 1 year after discovery of the irregularity. Govt C §66499.32. See generally California Subdivision Map Act and the Development Process §§8.1-8.2 (2d ed Cal CEB 2001). Descriptions should not be drafted with reference to assessors' maps, because the distances and courses on these maps are not always accurate. See §11.10. For forms showing how to draft descriptions referring to recorded maps and other proper documents, see §§11.99-11.103.

For validity of ancient (pre-1893) maps, refer to the discussion in Gardner v County of Sonoma (2003) 29 C4th 990, 129 CR2d 869, and Morehart v County of Santa Barbara (1994) 7 C4th 725, 29 CR2d 804.

§11.25 G. Reference to Other Recorded Instruments

As long as the necessary elements for constructive notice are present, usually through recordation under the recording laws (CC §§1169-1172, 1213-1218), property can also be described by reference to earlier deeds or instruments. Central Pac. R.R. v Beal (1873) 47 C 151. This is a somewhat cumbersome method because the earlier instrument must be both located and plotted. This method was in common use before the rise of parcel maps, but it is particularly susceptible to ambiguity or error when monuments have disappeared or are inconsistent. A reference to unclear language in an old deed in specifying a boundary or a point of beginning may be a good indication of the need for a survey.

A reference to public rights-of-way (i.e., "bounded by that certain public highway") is also common and may also lead to ambiguities. A public right-of-way of record may differ from the physical existence of the street or paving; it is not unusual for municipalities to construct a street within but not necessarily up to the edge of the right-of-way grant, and detecting the difference may require a surveyor's expertise. Likewise, public rights-of-way are often easements instead of fee title (see People v Thompson (1954) 43 C2d 13, 19, 271 P2d 507; City of Los Angeles v Pacific Elec. Ry. Co. (1959) 168 CA2d 224, 228, 335 P2d 1042; CC §§831, 1112), and it may not be clear whether a reference to a street meant the edge or the centerline, even though certain presumptions may apply. On rights of way, see California Easements and Boundaries: Law and Litigation, chap 7 (Cal CEB 2008).

§11.26 H. Metes and Bounds Descriptions

Metes and bounds descriptions are perhaps the most common type of description and are often confusing to those who are unfamiliar with the basic principles of this kind of description. The system is generally based on an established point of beginning, with a series of courses containing compass bearings and distances, until a tract of land is described and the courses return or "close" at the point of beginning. Courses containing curves are based on radius definitions, which are particularly confusing to laymen. The bearings themselves are based on lines of direction from the points of the compass, north or south, or east or west.

A description by metes and bounds may combine two or more of the kinds of references described in §§11.27-11.39, and it may be combined with descriptions other than metes and bounds, as in the second example in §11.38.

© The Regents of the University of California

§11.27 1. Natural Monuments

Natural monuments include rivers, trees, and rocks. Mammoth Gold Dredging Co. v Forbes (1940) 39 CA2d 739, 751, 104 P2d 131. Generally, a reference to natural monuments is less desirable than surveyors' calls: the course of a river may change, the point of a hill may be eroded, a tree may die, or a rock may give way to natural forces or construction. Maginnis v Hurlbutt (1917) 34 CA 504, 510, 168 P 368.

© The Regents of the University of California

§11.28 2. Artificial Monuments

Artificial monuments placed by surveyors, particularly as a reference point for beginning a metes and bounds description, are common. The monument may consist of little more than a metal plate bearing the surveyor's license number and job number, and it may be set it in the ground with a sledgehammer or cast in concrete. Although widely used, these monuments are also subject to loss through erosion, soil subsidence, vandalism, later improvements, and even earthquakes.

Artificial monuments also include references to existing walks, fences, buildings, railroads, stakes, streets, and so forth. Because such structures may be removed or destroyed, they are considered less desirable as reference points.

© The Regents of the University of California

§11.29 3. Adjoining Lands

Another method of describing property is by reference to adjoining lands.

EXAMPLE: This is a description of property by adjoining lands:

> [B]ounded on the north and west by the lands of A.R. Smith per deed recorded at book 9, page 2, Misc. Records, and on the south and east by the Gonzalez Ranch per decree of distribution recorded at book 14, page 112 of Judgments, office of County Recorder, County of Nevada, State of California.

Well-drafted descriptions of this type consist of more than just the names of the properties or their owners. In this example, the description refers to recorded instruments. The requirements of descriptions by reference to recorded instruments are discussed in §11.25. For an example of a description by reference to names only, see McKeon v Millard (1874) 47 C 581.

§11.30 4. Streets and Public Rights-of-Way

Streets and public rights-of-way are also commonly used as points of beginning. Care must be taken to state whether the parties intend to refer to the edge of the right-of-way of record or to the pavement as physically placed, as the case may be. A grant will normally be construed to the center of a highway unless a different intent appears from the grant. CC §1112; Neff v Ernst (1957) 48 C2d 628, 635, 311 P2d 849.

§11.31 5. Railroad Rights-of-Way

Several cases have made it clear that land can be described by reference to railroad right-of-way easements as borders. These descriptions imply ownership to the center of the easement. See Millyard v Faus (1968) 268 CA2d 76, 73 CR 697; Freeman v Affiliated Prop. Craftsmen (1968) 266 CA2d 723, 72 CR 357; Faus v Nelson (1966) 241 CA2d 320, 50 CR 483. These cases applied the long-established monument doctrine, which presumes an intent to grant to the middle of the monument when it is used to describe a property boundary. Freeman v Bellegarde (1895) 108 C 179, 41 P 289. The same rule applies when land is sold with reference to a recorded map that shows a street or railroad right-of-way easement as bounding the property. Freeman v Affiliated Prop. Craftsmen, supra.

NOTE: Issues may arise about whether the railroad right-of-way was originally acquired as an easement or in fee. See City of Manhattan Beach v Superior Court (1996) 13 C4th 232, 52 CR2d 82 (original grantor's intent could not be determined from original deed, which contained conflicting quitclaim and right-of-way provisions, but extrinsic evidence of conduct subsequent to original conveyance indicated that title had been transferred); Severns v Union Pac. R.R. Co. (2002) 101 CA4th 1209, 125 CR2d 100 (fee simple, stipulated to by both parties; but because plaintiff did not timely record intent to preserve future interest following abandonment, power to terminate expired).

In Millyard v Faus, supra, the rule of Faus v Nelson, supra, was carefully limited to easements for railroad rights-of-way and was not extended to include an easement for a railroad depot. On railroad easements, see California Easements and Boundaries: Law and Litigation, chap 7 (Cal CEB 2008).

6. Courses and Distances

§11.32 a. Bearings and Degrees

The directions or courses of metes and bounds descriptions are computed on a quadrant system of direction. Angular measurements are made with respect to a line due north and south (the cardinal line of the true meridian) either easterly or westerly to a maximum of 89°, 59', 59". A course of 90° would be either due east or due west.

Bearings due north, south, east, or west require no numbers (but see §11.39 on identifying north bearings). Bearings that deviate from those four directions require numbers to indicate the angle of deviation. Between, e.g., north and west, the difference in angle is ninety degrees (90°). One-ninetieth of that angle is one degree. Each degree is divided into sixty minutes (60') and each minute into sixty seconds (60"). Thus, the angle between north and west is divisible into 324,000 angles of one second each. (At a distance of ten miles from the point of angle, a deviation of one second results in a difference of about three inches; a deviation of one minute makes a difference of about 14 feet.)

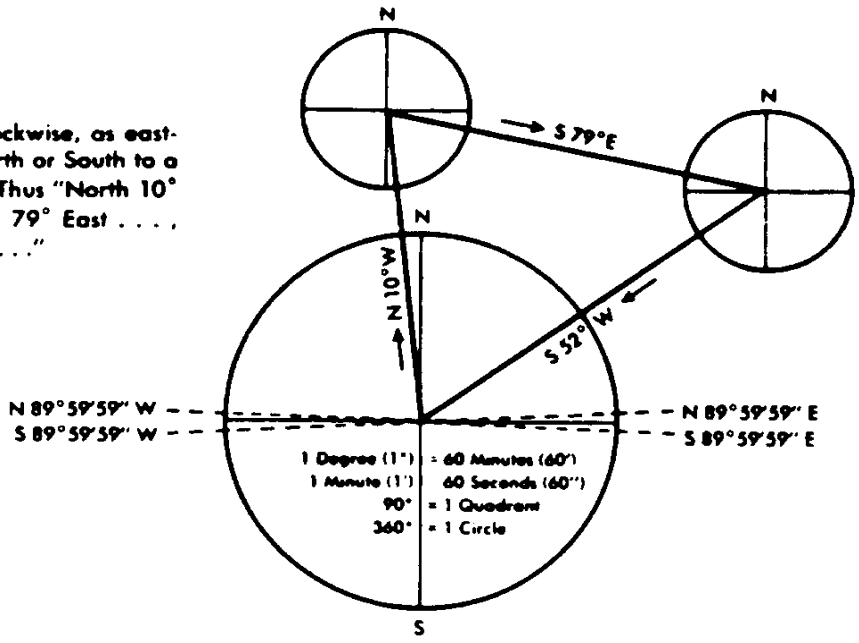

Figure 2 illustrates the meaning of descriptions by surveyors' courses. The bearing S 79° E indicates an angle 79 degrees to the east of due south; S 52° W indicates an angle 52 degrees to the west of due south; N 10° W indicates an angle 10 degrees west of due north. With this principle in mind, metes and bounds descriptions become understandable to many laymen. Computer programs are now available that will plot metes and bounds descriptions graphically, which is particularly useful to make sure that a description "closes" at the point of beginning.

Metes and Bounds

BEARINGS

Are given, commonly clockwise, as easterly or westerly from North or South to a maximum of 89°59'59". Thus "North 10° West . . . , thence South 79° East . . . , thence South 52° West . . . ."

CURVES

Simple, compound, or reverse, are analyzed and described as arcs of specified circles. Thus ". . . thence along a tangent curve to the right having a radius of 50 feet, through an angle of 120 degrees, an arc length of 104.72 feet" or R = 50', Δ = 120°, L = 104.72'.

§11.33 b. General Courses

Occasionally, instead of presenting bearings and degrees, general courses, usually to a known point or monument, may be used. These are general compass directions that are typically used to refer to any line that lies within 20 degrees on either side of the direction used; i.e., "easterly" would refer to anything between 20° north and 20° south of true east (or north 70° east and south 70° east). In the absence of a known point, however, this method is too vague for use.

§11.34 c. Curves

Curves can be more complex and are described by three elements: radius, angle, and arc length. A short radius indicates a tight curve, while a long radius indicates a shallow curve. The angle indicates the amount of change in direction (a full circle being 360°); thus, an angle of 90° means that the direction at the end of the curve will be at right angles to the direction at the beginning of the curve. The arc length supplies the actual distance traveled by the curve. The symbols R = 50', D = 120°, L = 104.72' indicate a curve with a radius of 50 feet, turning 120 degrees in direction, through an arc 104.72 feet long. (A curve is sometimes described in terms of the angle that equates to 100 feet of arc length. The larger the radius of the arc, the smaller the required angle; thus, a 1° curve has a radius of almost 5730 feet, a 2° curve has a radius of 5730 ÷ 2 = 2865 feet, and so on.)

In describing curves, certain terms are used. The distance is the linear measurement of the portion of the curve that makes up that course of the description. Concave or convex refers to the inside or outside of a curve. General direction will occasionally be inserted on references to curves to establish the direction of travel. A tangent is the point at which the radius of the curve makes an angle of 90° with the course. Curves can be complex, and qualified title officers or surveyors should be consulted if the description is crucial.

§11.35 d. Use of Symbols and Written Descriptions

Although symbols for feet (′), inches (″), and degrees (°) are conventionally used on maps, title companies prefer written descriptions because symbols are easily misread or mistranscribed and their meaning is too easily lost if the document is damaged or poorly copied. For the same reasons, it is better to spell out minutes (′), seconds (″), and angle (D) in written descriptions. Spelling out directions instead of abbreviating them also avoids error; for example, copying machines sometimes make an N look like a W.

© The Regents of the University of California

§11.36 e. Monuments

The most important aspects of metes and bounds descriptions are (1) that the courses be accurate and precise and (2) that the description close. It is typical in many metes and bounds descriptions to see a phrase to the effect that, on the last course, a distance "more or less, to the point of beginning" is used. In such an event, the monument controls over the course itself and as a matter of law and practice the last course is subordinate to the correct distance to reach the monument and make the description close. CCP §2077. With respect to the monuments used to mark properties, coterminous owners are bound to maintain them under CC §841.

© The Regents of the University of California

§11.37 f. Measurements

The following measurements are commonly encountered in descriptions:

- 1 chain = 66 feet = 4 rods
- 1 rod = 16.5 feet = 1 pole
- 1 mile = 80 chains = 5280 feet
- 1 acre = 10 square chains = (1/640 of a square mile) = 43,560 square feet = 160 square rods
- 1 acre in square form = 208.71 feet on each side
- 1 vara (Spanish unit) = 2.781 feet

Distances are measured horizontally and without regard to height variations in the earth's surface. Thus, the distance in Figure 3 is measured as four feet.

§11.38 7. Quasi Metes and Bounds

The following two examples illustrate a description by quasi metes and bounds.

EXAMPLE 1: This is a "strip" description:

> [A] strip of land extending easterly from Baker Road measuring 50 feet in width, the boundary lines of which are perpendicularly distant northerly 20 feet and southerly 30 feet, respectively, from the following described line….

EXAMPLE 2: This is a recital of boundaries by reference to matters of record, dimensions, or both:

> [B]eginning at the southeast corner of lot 6 in the map described above, then
> (a) Northeasterly to the West corner of land of Charles Abel per deed recorded at book 4, page 5, Official Records, office of County Recorder, Tulare County; then
> (b) Northeasterly along the northwest line of Charles Abel's land to the south line of Doe Lane as shown on subdivision map recorded at book 7, page 6 of Maps, Office of County Recorder of that county; then
> (c) 50 feet in a westerly direction along that south line; then
> (d) Southwesterly, parallel to the northwest line of Charles Abel's land to the south line of lot 6; then > (e) Easterly to the point of beginning.

In each of these quasi metes and bounds descriptions, courses and distances are given, but the reference points are located by reference to deeds or maps rather than to physical monuments or surveyors' points.

In the strip description, the distance of the boundary lines is measured perpendicularly to the controlling line. This method prevents ambiguity that would result if the controlling line did not run due east and west. (In that situation, measuring 20 and 30 feet respectively due north and south would result in a strip less than 50 feet wide, as shown in Figure 4.)

Similar problems arise from descriptions referring to, e.g., the "north half" of an irregularly shaped lot. See §11.40.

§11.39 8. Designation of North

The most commonly used designations of "north" are the following:

- Grid. The direction of grid north lies along a straight line between the two geographic poles. The north-south lines of the United States rectangular survey system indicate grid north.
- Magnetic. Magnetic north shifts about the geographic pole and is only intermittently in line with grid or astronomic north. Because of this shift, plats based on it should bear a date. See Brown, Robillard, & Wilson, Evidence and Procedures for Boundary Location (3d ed 1994).
- Astronomic. Astronomic north also shifts, but much more slowly (see Brown, Robillard, & Wilson). It is common in survey-located descriptions.

If plats or maps indicate which designation of north is used and is included in the recorded document containing the description, north need not be further identified in the description itself. The same is true of descriptions that refer to other recorded maps. Otherwise, the description should clearly state which designation of north is used.

§11.40 I. Lot Division Description

Lot division description (so called because it is a means of dividing a lot or other parcel shown on a recorded map) is an apparently simple method of description, but the simplicity may be illusory. "The east half of Lot 7," may seem clear until it is discovered that Lot 7 is not a perfect rectangle. See example in Figure 5. Then the question arises whether "the east half" means half of the area or half of the width.

Print

Similarly, "the south 50 acres of Lot 8" is ambiguous unless the original parcel is a rectangle whose boundaries run due north, south, east, and west. If not (see Figure 6), the question arises whether the fraction transferred was intended to be a rectangle occupying the more or less southerly 50 acres or an irregular parcel of 50 acres with its northern line running due east and west. See Figure 4 in §11.38 for a discussion of the problem.

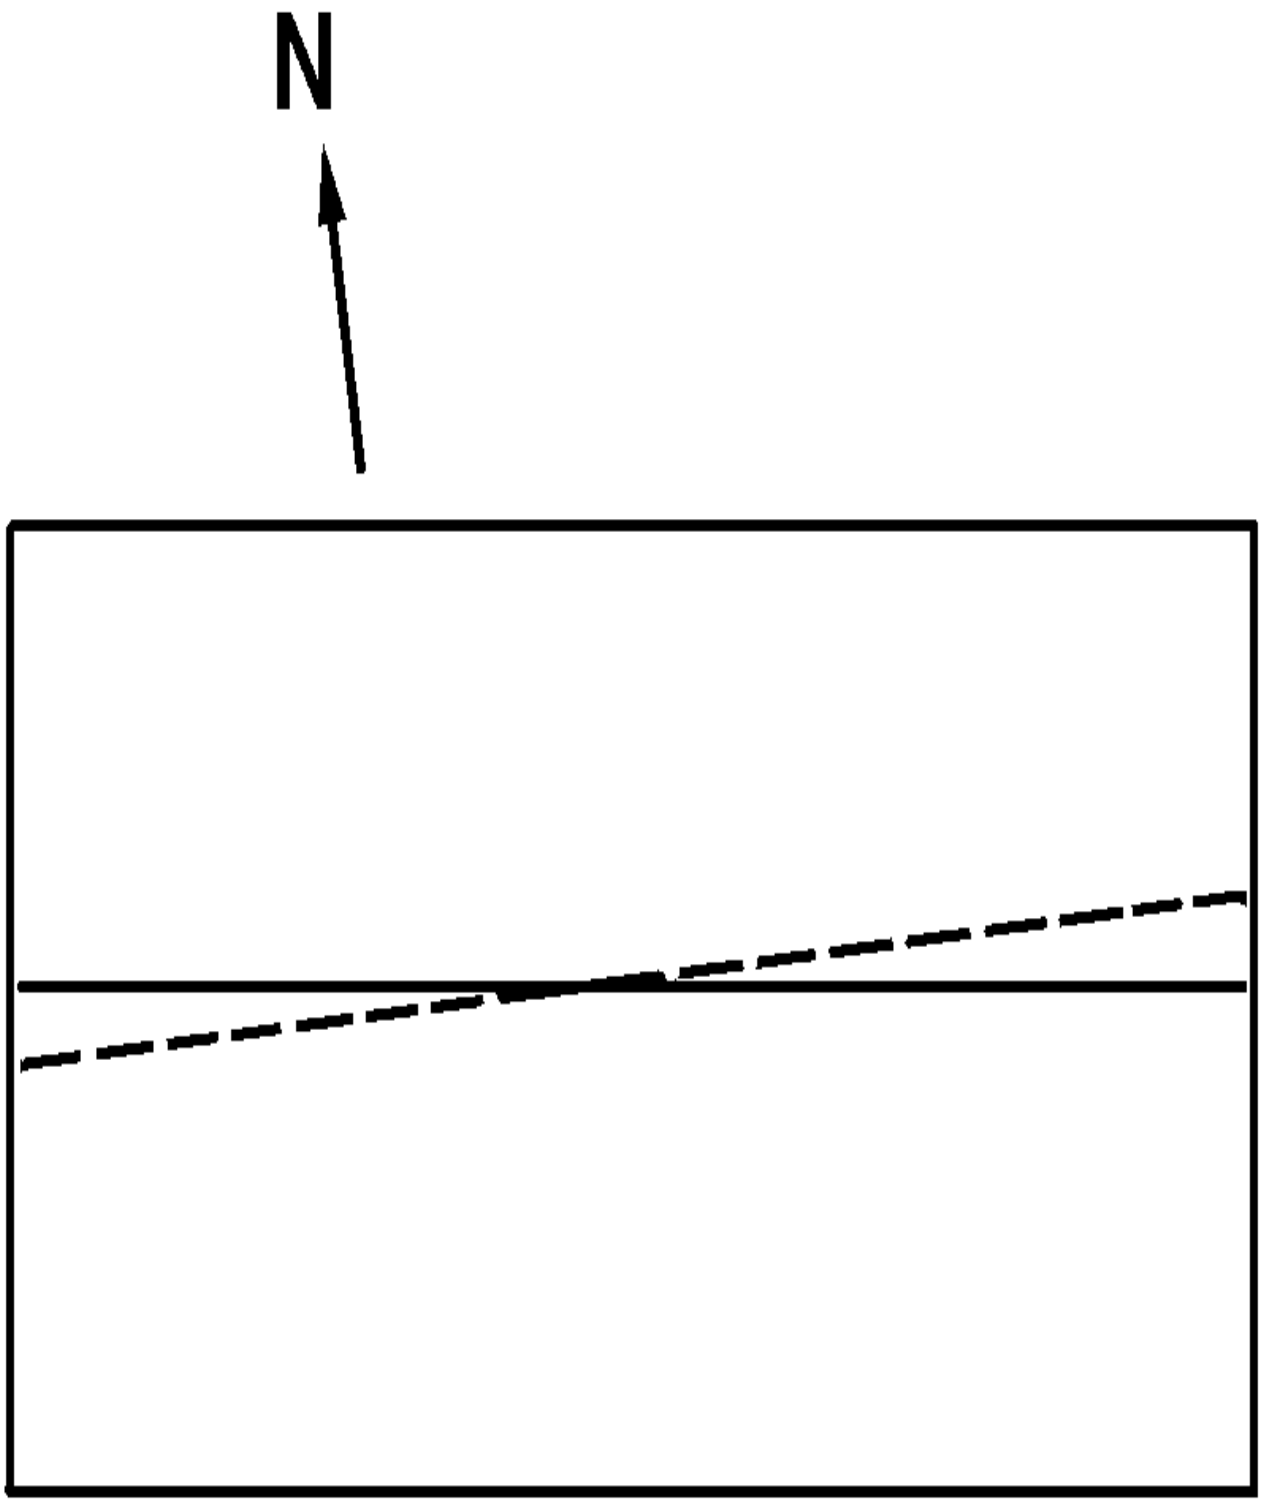

FIGURE 6

In the example shown in Figure 7, is the "northerly 50 feet of Lot 9" to be measured along the 100-foot frontage on the street or across the 90-foot width?

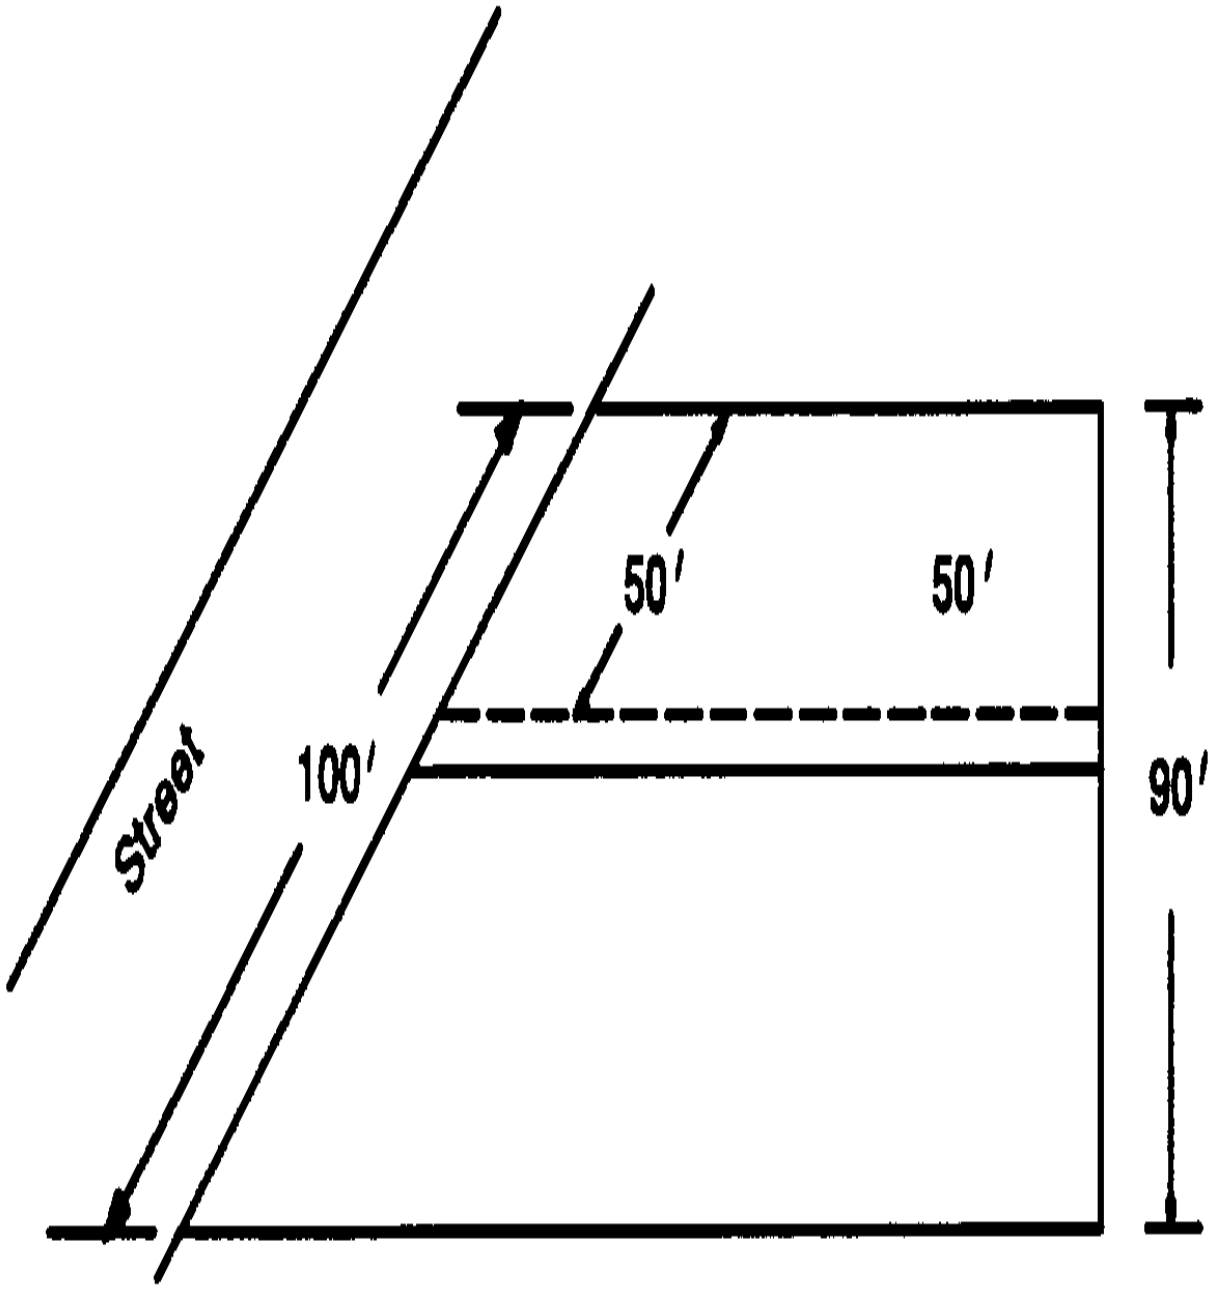

FIGURE 7

To avoid litigation and the frustration of intent that may result from these ambiguities, lawyers for sellers as well as for buyers should insist on absolute clarity in the description. Here are some guidelines:

- Avoid fractional descriptions unless they are clarified by metes and bounds or by a clear statement of how to measure the fractional parts.
- Specify the directions of all measurements, bearing in mind the discussion in §11.39 on indicating direction.
- Supplement all descriptions of area with clear descriptions of boundaries and location.
- If the parcel adjoins a street or a road (particularly if any measurement is from or along the street or road), declare whether the grantor's interest, if any, in the road is included, and whether the measurement is from or along the center or the edge of the road. See §11.30. See Figure 8 for an example of the difference this could make. On counseling the seller on lot splits, see §1.31.

Source: Real Property/California Real Property Sales Transactions/11 Descriptions of Property/§11.41 J. General or Common Description

§11.41 J. General or Common Description

General descriptions are divided into five types:

- A blanket description ("all the lands belonging to the grantor in Black County");
- A description of all "unsold" or "unconveyed" lots of the grantor;
- A description by name ("all of Blackacre");
- A description by street number ("159 South Lincoln Street"); and
- A description by ownership ("my lot in Shasta County").

Each of these descriptions presents problems of proof. On proper evidence, many of them have been sustained but none can be supported as examples of acceptable drafting because more precise descriptions are possible.

IV. MATTERS ALTERING OR AFFECTING DESCRIPTIONS

§11.42 A. Effect on Record Title

Matters outside the record may substantially affect title and may either augment or diminish the estate. Examples are in §§11.54-11.67, 11.71, and 11.77-11.79 and may not appear in preliminary reports unless they have previously been established by judgments.

A lawyer reading a description in order to advise a client on its effect cannot give an adequate opinion without investigating the existence and effect of any off-record elements.

B. Easements

§11.43 1. Benefit and Burden

Property subject to or burdened by an easement is called the "servient tenement"; the property benefited by or to which the easement is attached is the dominant tenement. CC §803. An easement is a nonpossessory interest in the land of another, which entitles the owner of the easement to a limited use or enjoyment of the other's land. Kazi v State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. (2000) 24 C4th 871, 880, 103 CR2d 1; Reichardt v Hoffman (1997) 52 CA4th 754, 767, 60 CR2d 770. Restatement (Third) of Property: Servitudes §1.2 (2000); 12 Witkin, Summary of California Law, Real Property §§382-428 (10th ed 2005). Because an easement is a nonpossessory interest in real property, it is never an "estate in land." Hubbard v Brown (1990) 50 C3d 189, 194, 266 CR 491; Darr v Lone Star Indus., Inc. (1979) 94 CA3d 895, 901, 157 CR 90 (superseded by statute on other grounds).

When an easement is nonexclusive, the common users must accommodate each other. Reichardt v Hoffman, supra; Scruby v Vintage Grapevine, Inc. (1995) 37 CA4th 697, 43 CR2d 810. The owner of the dominant tenement must use his or her easements and rights in such a way as to impose as slight a burden as possible on the servient tenement. Locklin v City of Lafayette (1994) 7 C4th 327, 356 n17, 27 CR2d 613; Reichardt v Hoffman, supra. The owner of the servient tenement may use the burdened land in any way that does not interfere unreasonably with the use of the easement. Camp Meeker Water Sys., Inc. v Public Util. Comm'n (1990) 51 C3d 845, 274 CR 678; Scruby v Vintage Grapevine, Inc., supra.

When an easement is nonexclusive, the common owners must accommodate each other. Reichardt v Hoffman, supra; Scruby v Vintage Grapevine, Inc., supra.

Easements must be used in accordance with applicable zoning restrictions, notwithstanding any private agreement to the contrary. Teachers Ins. & Annuity Ass'n v Furlotti (1999) 70 CA4th 1487, 83 CR2d 455. On easements generally, see California Easements and Boundaries: Law and Litigation (Cal CEB 2008).

§11.44 2. Rules of Construction and Interpretation

Descriptions of easements are subject to a number of rules of construction and interpretation. The rules can be particularly important in ascertaining (1) what easements a parcel of land may be subject to and (2) whether a parcel is adequately supported by easements necessary for the use contemplated by the owner or developer. It is important, as part of due diligence, to review the width and set-back requirements applicable to the use of easements or placement of improvements under local land use controls. On rules of construction, see California Easements and Boundaries: Law and Litigation, chap 1 (Cal CEB 2008).

© The Regents of the University of California

§11.45 a. Limitation to Use of Specified Width

A grant of an easement is usually construed literally. In Ballard v Titus (1910) 157 C 673, 680, 110 P 118, the grant of a 30-foot wide easement limited the grantee strictly to the strip for all purposes, including embankments for a road. The court determined that when the width of a right-of-way is expressly specified, there is no authority for the appropriation of land lying beyond the specified width even though the appropriation may be necessary or desirable for appurtenant structures.

© The Regents of the University of California

§11.46 b. Right to the Use of Streets and Alleys Reflected on Subdivision Map

Conveyance of a lot by a deed that refers to a map makes the map part of the deed. If the map shows streets and alleys, a reference to the map is considered equivalent to a declaration that a right to use these passageways is attached to each lot as an appurtenance. Danielson v Sykes (1910) 157 C 686, 689, 109 P 87; Tract Dev. Servs., Inc. v Kepler (1988) 199 CA3d 1374, 1382, 246 CR 469. The rule applies regardless of whether a city or county has ever accepted a dedication of the rights-of-way laid out on the map or whether the rights-of-way have ever been opened or used. These rights cannot be divested except by due process of law. Danielson v Sykes, supra.

§11.47 c. Inclusion of Rights for Utilities

A grant of an easement for ingress and egress does not grant a right for utilities. See San Rafael Ranch Co. v Ralph Rogers Co. (1908) 154 C 76, 96 P 1092.

NOTE: Easements for utilities can be acquired under CC §1001.

§11.48 d. Doctrine of Practical Location and Amendment of Written Descriptions by Actual Location

Some cases have recognized a doctrine of "practical location," which provides that delineation of parcels on the ground by fixed monuments, relied on by the parties, will control over any differing description in the deed. French v Brinkman (1963) 60 C2d 547, 1551, 35 CR 289. In PG&E v Minnette (1953) 115 CA2d 698, 704, 252 P2d 642, it was held that set monument stakes, fixing the location on the ground and acquiesced in by the parties, would control any technical construction of the description in the deeds. The court reached this result under the rule that the acts of the parties afford the most reliable evidence of their actual intention.

NOTE: A buyer may be charged with constructive notice of any lack of conformity between the written description and the actual location of the easement by inspection of the land. CC §19.

© The Regents of the University of California

§11.49 e. Interpretation by Language of the Document and Extrinsic Evidence

Grants are to be interpreted in the same way as contracts in general. CC §1066; Continental Baking Co. v Katz (1968) 68 C2d 512, 521, 67 CR 761. The primary object of interpretation is to ascertain and carry out the intention of the parties. All rules of interpretation must be considered and each given its proper weight to arrive at the true effect of the instrument. City of Manhattan Beach v Superior Court (1996) 13 C4th 232, 238, 52 CR2d 82; Machado v Southern Pac. Transp. Co. (1991) 233 CA3d 347, 352, 284 CR 560. This is accomplished by resorting first to the language of the document. If the deed is susceptible to only one interpretation, a court will decline to consider extrinsic evidence. Severns v Union Pac. R.R. Co. (2002) 101 CA4th 1209, 1214, 125 CR2d 100; City & County of San Francisco v Union Pac. R.R. Co. (1996) 50 CA4th 987, 994, 58 CR2d 1; Concord & Bay Point Land Co. v City of Concord (1991) 229 CA3d 289, 294, 280 CR 623. Extrinsic evidence is admissible to interpret the instrument, but not to give it a meaning to which it is not susceptible. It is the instrument itself that must be given effect. See Claudino v Pereira (2008) 165 CA4th 1282, 1288, 82 CR3d 464 (aggregate legal description, which included townsite map and surveyor's field notes, was ambiguous; extrinsic evidence admitted to resolve ambiguity in field notes); City of Manhattan Beach v Superior Court, supra, citing Parsons v Bristol Dev. Co. (1965) 62 C2d 861, 865, 44 CR 767; Buehler v Oregon-Washington Plywood Corp. (1976) 17 C3d 520, 528, 131 CR 394 (extrinsic evidence was admitted to clarify scope of dominant tenement).

§11.50 f. Accommodation of Future Needs

Because the operation of an easement must necessarily be prospective, in the case of easements created by express conveyance it can be assumed that the parties intended to accommodate future needs. Changes in use through modernization of facilities, such as from street railways to modern buses and roadways, have been upheld. Faus v City of Los Angeles (1967) 67 C2d 350, 355, 62 CR 193. See also Anderson v TimeWarner Telecom (2005) 129 CA4th 411, 415, 28 CR3d 289 (fiber optic facilities held consistent with telegraph and telephone provisions of Pub Util C §7901 applicable to county right-of-way); Bello v ABA Energy Corp. (2004) 121 CA4th 301, 16 CR3d 818 (gas pipeline held permissible in public right-of-way). The doctrine is strictly limited to use of the original right-of-way in the same, but not a different, location. Faus, 67 C2d at 359. Changes in use inconsistent with the purpose of the grant are not permitted. Toews v U.S. (2004) 376 F3d 1371, 1379 (rejecting conversion of railroad easement to pedestrian use under Rails to Trails Act).

© The Regents of the University of California

§11.51 g. Exercise of General Grant of Easement in a Particular Course or Manner

The rule is well settled that when a grant of easement is general concerning the extent of the burden to be imposed on the servient tenement, an exercise of the right with the acquiescence and consent of the parties in a particular course and manner fixes the easement and limits it to the particular location and scope in which it is enjoyed. Winslow v City of Vallejo (1906) 148 C 723, 725, 84 P 191. Once fixed, it cannot be changed without consent.

© The Regents of the University of California

§11.52 h. Exclusivity of Easements

An exclusive easement is an unusual interest in land and has been said to amount almost to conveyance of a fee. Pasadena v California-Michigan (1941) 17 C2d 576, 578, 110 P2d 983. No intention to convey an exclusive easement will be imputed in the absence of clear evidence of such an intention. Pasadena v California-Michigan, supra; Mehdizadeh v Mincer (1996) 46 CA4th 1296, 1308, 54 CR2d 284. In Blackmore v Powell (2007) 150 CA4th 1593, 1600, 59 CR3d 527, an easement for parking and garage purposes was upheld notwithstanding the exclusivity of the use. See Gray v McCormick (2009) 167 CA4th 1019, 84 CR3d 777 (exclusive easement language contained in subdivision CC&Rs held enforceable as to surface of land).

© The Regents of the University of California

§11.53 3. Off-Record Easements

Examination of the record alone is insufficient for discovering an easement, because easements may be created by means not shown on the record. This possibility emphasizes the need to inspect the parcel to ascertain whether any easements exist or may come into being. Some of the off-record easements that may arise are discussed in §§11.54-11.57 and 11.77-11.79.

© The Regents of the University of California

§11.54 a. Easements by Implication

Civil Code §1104 provides that a transfer of real property passes all easements attached to the property and creates an easement to use other real property of the person whose estate is transferred in the same manner and in the same extent as such property was obviously and permanently used. Kytasty v Godwin (1980) 102 CA3d 762, 771, 162 CR 556. An implied easement must be reasonably necessary to the use and benefit of the quasi-dominant tenement and will not be found absent clear evidence that it was intended by the parties. Tusher v Gabrielsen (1998) 68 CA4th 131, 141, 80 CR2d 126. The limiting factor is the obvious and permanent use at the time of the conveyance. The factors listed in §1104, however, are not exclusive of other common law factors applicable in certain situations.

If the parties to a transaction intend a greater extent of the grantee's rights, that intent will be recognized by the court. Fristoe v Drapeau (1950) 35 C2d 5, 9, 215 P2d 729; Sierra Screw Prods. v Azusa Greens, Inc. (1979) 88 CA3d 358, 368, 151 CR 799; Horowitz v Noble (1978) 79 CA3d 120, 133, 144 CR 710. The distinction in this group of cases is that the courts will enforce the intent of the parties to a particular transaction, whereas implications by code depend on obvious and permanent use—in effect, equivalent to notice imparted by possession or a duty of inquiry. In the absence of obvious and permanent use or facts triggering a duty of inquiry, a bona fide third party grantee is entitled to the protection of the recording laws. CC §§1169-1172, 1206-1218. On easements by implication, see California Easements and Boundaries: Law and Litigation, chap 1 (Cal CEB 2008).

© The Regents of the University of California

§11.55 b. Easements by Implied Reservation

Just as an easement may arise by implication for the buyer's benefit, it may arise to the buyer's detriment. Horowitz v Noble (1978) 79 CA3d 120, 133, 144 CR 710. Although an easement is less readily implied in favor of a grantor (Jordan v Henck (1958) 166 CA2d 321, 325, 333 P2d 117), a sale of a portion of land with irrigation ditches on it imposes a burden on the buyer to permit the water to flow through the ditches to the land retained by the seller (Palvutzian v Terkanian (1920) 47 CA 47, 190 P 503). The preexisting use by the grantor must be open, visible, and continuous at the time of the conveyance. People v Bowers (1964) 226 CA2d 463, 38 CR 238. See also California Easements and Boundaries: Law and Litigation, chaps 1, 8 (Cal CEB 2008).

© The Regents of the University of California

§11.56 c. Easement of Necessity

Unlike an implied easement under CC §1104, an easement of necessity does not depend on prior use but arises by operation of law. If at the time of the conveyance the dominant and servient tenements are owned by the same person and there is an absolute necessity for the easement because it is the only access (e.g., when the land sold is otherwise landlocked), an easement of necessity is created. See Murphy v Burch (2009) 46 C4th 157, 162, 92 CR3d 381; Kellogg v Garcia (2002) 102 CA4th 796, 803, 125 CR2d 817. Availability of other access at the time of the conveyance bars an easement of necessity over more convenient access (Reese v Borghi (1963) 216 CA2d 324, 30 CR 868), and if other access later becomes available so that the necessity disappears, the easement ceases (Irvin v Petitfils (1941) 44 CA2d 496, 112 P2d 688). The "strict necessity" element must continue to exist at the time of the action. In Moores v Walsh (1995) 38 CA4th 1046, 45 CR2d 389, an owner of the dominant tenement was denied an easement by necessity because the dominant tenement had been sold to the tenant by the state after the original division of the dominant and servient tenements. The state thus could have acquired the easement by eminent domain, but had not; therefore, the necessity for the easement had not continually existed until the time of the plaintiff's purchase.

The doctrine has been applied to an implied reservation of an easement for the benefit of landlocked property conveyed by the federal government. Kellogg v Garcia (2002) 102 CA4th 796, 804, 125 CR2d 817. However, the easement claimant bears the burden of producing evidence to overcome the inference caused by omission of an express reservation of a right of access to property initially retained by the government. See Murphy v Burch (2009) 46 C4th 157, 167, 92 CR3d 381 (government sold parcel without reserving access rights, leaving its remaining parcel, landlocked).

The easement's use is limited by the necessity for the easement itself. The common-ownership requirement for creation of an easement of necessity can be met even if the ownership of one parcel is only an equitable title at the time of the conveyance. Roemer v Pappas (1988) 203 CA3d 201, 249 CR 743 (equitable title acquired under an installment land sale contract). In Noronha v Stewart (1988) 199 CA3d 485, 245 CR 94, the court held that an agreement to grant the equivalent of an easement was binding even though the owner of property on which a wall was built held only equitable title at the time the license was granted, although the owner did acquire legal title later. The court held that the doctrine of "after-acquired title" applied to overcome the technicality that the original owner did not have a sufficient interest in the property to grant the easement at the time it was granted. On easements by necessity, see California Easements and Boundaries: Law and Litigation, chap 1 (Cal CEB 2008).

§11.57 d. Easement by Prescription

California law recognizes two types of prescription, that under claim of title (CCP §§322-323) and that under claim of right (CCP §§324-325). Gilardi v Hallam (1981) 30 C3d 317, 321, 178 CR 624. The elements necessary to establish a prescriptive easement under either claim of title or claim of right are open and notorious use or possession that is continuous and uninterrupted, and that is hostile to the true owner under a claim of title or right, for at least 5 years. Taxes are an element of the acquisition of a prescriptive easement only if the easement was separately assessed. Gilardi v Hallam, supra.

A prescriptive easement cannot arise if the use occurs with the owner's permission or if it is an easement of necessity (see §11.56), flowing from the grant and the circumstances then existing.

A prescriptive easement may not be granted if doing so would result in depriving the owner of essentially all rights in the property; in that case, the claimant must proceed under the adverse possession doctrine and show payment of taxes on the disputed property. Kapner v Meadowlark Ranch Ass'n (2004) 116 CA4th 1182, 1186, 11 CR3d 138; Harrison v Welch (2004) 116 CA4th 1084, 11 CR3d 92; Bustillos v Murphy (2002) 96 CA4th 1277, 117 CR2d 895; Silacci v Abrahamson (1996) 45 CA4th 558, 53 CR2d 37.

The rule that the use of a prescriptive easement is fixed and determined by the manner of use in which it originated, and that it cannot be extended or increased, has been modified to allow such increased use if the change is one of degree, not kind. In deciding whether a particular use is permissible under such an easement, the courts may consider the needs that result from the normal development in the use of the dominant tenement as well as the increased burden on the servient tenement. Applegate v Ota (1983) 146 CA3d 702, 711, 194 CR 331; Cushman v Davis (1978) 80 CA3d 731, 145 CR 791. Any claim for the expansion of easement rights must be exercised openly, notoriously, continuously, and adversely during the period of prescription. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank v City of San Diego (1971) 19 CA3d 421, 97 CR 61. For the fee owner's authority to post notice of permission, which precludes prescriptive easements, see CC §1008. See §11.77 on adverse possession, prescription, and implied dedication.

Easements may not be acquired by prescription over property dedicated to a public utility or a public entity. CC §1007. In Hays v Vanek (1989) 217 CA3d 271, 266 CR 856, a road offered but not accepted for dedication to the county was nonetheless held to be quasi-public to a degree sufficient to prevent adverse possession under §1007. Within narrow guidelines, a court has the equitable power to allow a continuing encroachment that may be limited in scope and duration. Hirshfield v Schwartz (2001) 91 CA4th 749, 110 CR2d 861; see also Linthicum v Butterfield (2009) 175 CA4th 259, 265, 95 CR3d 538 (court recognized historic road, but limited width of right of way to that reasonably necessary). On easements by prescription, see California Easements and Boundaries: Law and Litigation, chap 1 (Cal CEB 2008).

§11.58 4. Termination of Easements

Easements may exist on or off the record; they may also be terminated by means that may or may not appear on the record. CC §811. Easements may be terminated by the following events:

- Merger (see §11.59);
- Destruction of the servient tenement (see §11.60);
- Incompatible use or misuse (see §11.61);
- Abandonment (see §11.62);
- Nonuse of prescriptive easements (see §11.63); and
- Adverse possession (see §11.64).

© The Regents of the University of California

§11.59 a. Termination by Merger

If the dominant and servient parcels come into the same ownership, the easement is extinguished by merger. CC §811(1). The doctrine of merger requires that the two estates be coextensive in validity, quality, and all other circumstances of right. Zanelli v McGrath (2008) 166 CA4th 615, 628, 82 CR3d 835. For an easement to be extinguished, the ownership must be of the entire dominant and servient tenements and not merely a fractional share. 166 CA4th at 629. However, equity will intervene to prevent or permit a merger of interests, as will best serve the purposes of justice, and the actual and just intent of the parties. Ito v Schiller (1931) 213 C 632, 635, 3 P2d 1. On termination by merger, see California Easements and Boundaries: Law and Litigation, chap 1 (Cal CEB 2008).

§11.60 b. Termination by Destruction of Servient Tenement

An easement, typically one on or through improvements such as buildings, is terminated when the servient tenement is destroyed (CC §811(2)) either involuntarily by fire (Cohen v Adolph Kutner Co. (1918) 177 C 592, 171 P 424), or through demolition after obsolescence (Walner v City of Turlock (1964) 230 CA2d 399, 41 CR 29). In Fletcher v Stapleton (1932) 123 CA 133, 10 P2d 1019, this doctrine also applied to a graded property where an original right-of-way no longer had practical utility, and another more convenient way had been acquired. On termination by destruction or other changed conditions, see California Easements and Boundaries: Law and Litigation, chap 1 (Cal CEB 2008).

© The Regents of the University of California

§11.61 c. Termination by Incompatible Use or Misuse

An easement may be extinguished by its owner's acts, or assent to acts, that are incompatible with the nature or exercise of the easement. CC §811(3). See, e.g., Crimmins v Gould (1957) 149 CA2d 383, 308 P2d 786 (extinguishment by greatly increasing burden and opening private easement to public).

NOTE: If the holder of a nonexclusive easement prevents the burdened property owner from using the easement, the owner's remedy is not extinguishment of the easement but an injunction requiring the holder to permit the burdened property owner's use of the easement. Reichardt v Hoffman (1997) 52 CA4th 754, 60 CR2d 770.

On termination by misuse, see California Easements and Boundaries: Law and Litigation, chap 1 (Cal CEB 2008).

§11.62 d. Termination by Abandonment

When an easement has been acquired by grant, the mere nonuse, neglect, or failure to maintain the easement does not result in abandonment. An intention to abandon by the holder of an easement must be clearly established by unequivocal and decisive acts on the part of the dominant tenement clearly showing an intention to abandon. Gerhard v Stephens (1968) 68 C2d 864, 882, 69 CR 612; Tract Dev. Servs., Inc. v Kepler (1988) 199 CA3d 1374, 1384, 246 CR 469; Buechner v Jonas (1964) 228 CA2d 127, 39 CR 298.

A servitude is extinguished by performance of an act by the servitude's owner, or with the owner's assent, that is incompatible with the servitude's nature or exercise. CC §811. To constitute an extinguishment, the act should be of a nature that would permanently prevent the easement's use, and be of a character to indicate a clear intent to abandon. Reichardt v Hoffman (1997) 52 CA4th 754, 60 CR2d 770.

An easement acquired by a utility for a public purpose is terminated by abandonment of that purpose. People v Ocean Shore R.R. (1948) 32 C2d 406, 417, 196 P2d 570; Slater v Shell Oil Co. (1940) 39 CA2d 535, 549, 3 CR 697. An easement is also terminated by nonuse coupled with acts by the owner that are inconsistent with further enjoyment of the right. Ocean Shore R.R. Co. v Doelger (1960) 179 CA2d 222, 231, 3 CR 706; Flanagan v San Marco Silt Co. (1951) 106 CA2d 458, 464, 235 P2d 107. On termination by abandonment, see California Easements and Boundaries: Law and Litigation, chap 1 (Cal CEB 2008).

§11.63 e. Termination by Nonuse of Easements Acquired by Prescription

An easement by prescription (see §11.57) is extinguished by nonuse for the prescriptive 5-year period. CC §811(4); People v Ocean Shore R.R. (1948) 32 C2d 406, 419, 196 P2d 570; Zimmer v Dykstra (1974) 39 CA3d 422, 434, 114 CR 380.

© The Regents of the University of California

§11.64 f. Termination by Adverse Possession

Just as an easement may be acquired by prescription (see §11.57), it may likewise be terminated by the adverse possession of the owner of the servient tenement. In Glatts v Henson (1948) 31 C2d 368, 188 P2d 745, the owner of the servient tenement erected a building on the part of his lot that had an easement on it for road purposes; the buildings remained undisturbed for more than 5 years. The part of the easement on which the building stood was held extinguished. See also Masin v La Marche (1982) 136 CA3d 687, 186 CR 619. On termination by prescription, see California Easements and Boundaries: Law and Litigation, chap 1 (Cal CEB 2008).

§11.65 5. Identification of Dominant Tenement

Though an easement may be of record, it may not show on its face the dominant tenement other than by reference to the grantee because the easement encumbers the servient property of record, not the dominant property. A search of the chain of title of nearby parcels may be needed to identify the dominant tenement(s). If the dominant tenement has since been subdivided, there may be many parcels with a claim to use of the easement, each of which could be a cloud on the title of the servient tenement.

Parol evidence is admissible to show what land composes the dominant tenement. In Continental Baking Co. v Katz (1968) 68 C2d 512, 67 CR 761, the supreme court rejected the servient owner's contention that, because a deed conveyed one parcel plus an easement over an adjacent parcel, the benefit of the easement was limited to the parcel conveyed. Instead, the court permitted the dominant tenant to offer parol proof that other adjacent land owned by him was also intended to share the benefit of the easement. See also Welch v Kai (1970) 4 CA3d 374, 84 CR 619.

A common law rule that no easement could be reserved in a stranger was abolished by the decision in Willard v First Church of Christ, Scientist (1972) 7 C3d 473, 102 CR 739. The court held that, because there had been no reliance on the old rule, the doctrine could not be used to defeat the grantor's intent. Thus, the dominant tenement of an easement created by reservation need no longer be land held by the grantor. On dominant tenements, see California Easements and Boundaries: Law and Litigation, chap 1 (Cal CEB 2008).

§11.66 6. Change in Burden on Servient Tenement

Traditionally, once an easement has been established by prescription, the scope of that easement is fixed. Bartholomew v Staheli (1948) 86 CA2d 844, 195 P2d 824. The dominant owner cannot thereafter materially increase the burden on the servient tenement, impose new kinds of uses on the easement, or do anything that interferes with the servient owners' use of the property. Durfee v Garvey (1889) 78 C 546, 551, 21 P 302; Baker v Pierce (1950) 100 CA2d 224, 226, 223 P2d 286; Joseph v Ager (1895) 108 C 517, 41 P 422. More recent cases, however, have adopted the Restatement of Property position that a limited reasonable expansion in the normal evolution of the use can be considered if the burden on the servient tenement is not unreasonably increased. Cushman v Davis (1978) 80 CA3d 731, 736, 145 CR 791; Gaither v Gaither (1958) 165 CA2d 782, 332 P2d 436. If the increased burden is reasonably foreseeable, then the court must consider whether it constitutes normal development "consistent with the pattern formed by the adverse use by which the prescriptive easement was created." Hill v Allan (1968) 259 CA2d 470, 484, 66 CR 676.

Gates or other restrictions may be allowable if necessary for use of the servient tenement, provided there is no unreasonable interference with passage and they are not otherwise inconsistent with the terms of the grant. Van Klompenburg v Berghold (2005) 126 CA4th 345, 350, 23 CR3d 799. On changes in burden of servient tenement, see California Easements and Boundaries: Law and Litigation, chap 1 (Cal CEB 2008).

§11.67 7. Appurtenant or in Gross

One difficulty in advising clients on easements is the difference between "appurtenant" easements (which pass, to the extent they are obviously and permanently in use, with the fee to the dominant tenement, even if not mentioned in the conveyance) and easements "in gross" (which exist without a dominant tenement and cannot pass unless expressly transferred). If the easement was created to benefit the easement holder in using particular land, it is appurtenant. See Restatement (Third) of Property: Servitudes §1.5(1) (2000). If the easement was created independently of the holder's ownership or possession of any specific land, it is in gross. See Restatement §1.5(2). The types of easements that are appurtenant to land and those that are not are listed in CC §§801 and 802, respectively. On drafting to eliminate ambiguity in easements, see §§11.15, 11.89-11.103; Kratovil, Easement Draftsmanship and Conveyancing, 38 Calif L Rev 426, 437 (1950). On easements in gross, see California Easements and Boundaries: Law and Litigation, chap 1 (Cal CEB 2008).

§11.68 a. Distinguishing Characteristics

The following considerations distinguish appurtenant easements from easements in gross:

- The nature of the right and the intention of the parties creating it are determinative of the kind of easement created. Schofield v Bany (1959) 175 CA2d 534, 346 P2d 891; Eastman v Piper (1924) 68 CA 554, 568, 229 P 1002.
- The right is not personal (in gross) if it can fairly be construed to be appurtenant to land. Eastman v Piper, supra. For examples, see 12 Witkin, Summary of California Law, Real Property §384 (10th ed 2005).
- An intended easement will never be construed as personal when it may fairly be construed as appurtenant. St. Louis v DeBon (1962) 204 CA2d 464, 22 CR 443.

© The Regents of the University of California

§11.69 b. Transferability

Although easements in gross have been said to be personal and not transferable, they can be transferred if they are expressly referred to in the grant (Collier v Oelke (1962) 202 CA2d 843, 846, 21 CR 140) and if they are assignable and inheritable (Le Deit v Ehlert (1962) 205 CA2d 154, 166, 22 CR 747). An appurtenant easement may be transferred to a person receiving only a very limited interest in the dominant estate. See Franceschi v Kuntz (1967) 253 CA2d 1041, 61 CR 810, in which the court held that the easement holder who had timber and access rights could contract with other persons to do logging and use the access roads.

§11.70 8. Ambiguous Description

In general, the land subject to an easement must be described with sufficient certainty to locate it. PG&E v Crockett Land & Cattle Co. (1924) 70 CA 283, 233 P 370. However, a right-of-way for road purposes has been upheld even though its location was not fixed in the reservation; the grantee of the right may locate it reasonably, and the grantor may do so if the grantee does not. Ballard v Titus (1910) 157 C 673, 683, 110 P 118; Collier v Oelke (1962) 202 CA2d 843, 21 CR 140. Acquiescence in a particular use may fix not only the location of the easement but also the nature of its use. Snodgrass v Crane (1943) 57 CA2d 565, 134 P2d 862.

The great virtue of a precise description of land location is that it prohibits future variations based on arguments of reasonableness. See Wilson v Abrams (1969) 1 CA3d 1030, 82 CR 272, in which the easement holder tried unsuccessfully to have a parking lot agreement construed to permit construction of a service station. See also Keith v Superior Court (1972) 26 CA3d 521, 103 CR 314, in which great inconvenience to the servient tenant was held insufficient to permit him to unilaterally relocate a described right-of-way over the dominant tenant's objection. On interpretation of easements, see California Easements and Boundaries: Law and Litigation, chap 1 (Cal CEB 2008).

© The Regents of the University of California

§11.71 9. Uncertain Duration

If an easement is terminated in a manner authorized under CC §811 (see §§11.59-11.64), its extinction may not appear of record. Equally troublesome are ambiguous termination provisions in the document creating the easement.

EXAMPLE: "To A, an easement 12 feet wide as long as he needs it for a wagon road." When does A's need terminate? How is his need determined?

Duration should be stated without ambiguity, and if that cannot be done, it is generally better to simply state the purpose, as in §§11.105-11.107.

Railroad rights-of-way create special problems. Railroad rights-of-way created by statute or condemnation are easements, and most privately granted railroad rights-of-way are also construed to be easements (Great Northern Ry. v U.S. (1942) 315 US 262, 271, 86 L Ed 836, 845, 62 S Ct 529; Johnson v Ocean Shore R.R. (1971) 16 CA3d 429, 433, 94 CR 68). However, the language of each railroad grant is unique and must be considered on a case-by-case basis in determining whether a particular grant is a fee or an easement. Machado v Southern Pac. Transp. Co. (1991) 233 CA3d 347, 284 CR 560. On duration of easements, see California Easements and Boundaries: Law and Litigation, chaps 1-2 (Cal CEB 2008).

© The Regents of the University of California

§11.72 10. Failure to Designate as Easement

Another problem with easements arises from the failure to describe them as easements. A grant or reservation of a strip of land, if not expressly qualified as an easement, may result in ownership in fee. City & County of San Francisco v Union Pac. R.R. Co. (1996) 50 CA4th 987, 995, 58 CR2d 1. In Murphy Slough Ass'n v Avila (1972) 27 CA3d 649, 104 CR 136, a document conveying "a strip of land" along a river was held, in the circumstances, to grant an easement rather than a fee, and the grantor retained his riparian rights.

A conveyance of "all of the mains, pipelines, and all water production, transmission and distribution facilities" was construed to grant an easement even though the word "easement" did not expressly appear. Maywood Mut. Water Co. No. 2 v City of Maywood (1972) 23 CA3d 266, 100 CR 174. On interpretation of easements, see California Easements and Boundaries: Law and Litigation, chap 1 (Cal CEB 2008).

© The Regents of the University of California

§11.73 11. Exception or Reservation

In transferring property, a grantor will sometimes wish to withhold an estate, a use less than a fee (e.g., a life estate or an easement), or a portion of the property in fee. The words generally used for these purposes are "excepting" and "reserving." "The difference between the two terms is so slight and shadowy that in common parlance they are used interchangeably." Van Slyke v Arrowhead Reservoir & Power Co. (1909) 155 C 675, 680, 102 P 816. Historically, in this country, a reservation amounted to a grant back to the grantor by the grantee. The question of whether a particular provision in a deed is an exception or a reservation is not conclusively determined by the use of the terms alone but depends on the real intention of the parties as ascertained from the whole conveyance. Main v Legnitto (1964) 230 CA2d 667, 41 CR 223. To avoid any implication that matters affecting the grantee might impair the grantor's easement rights, the word "exception" seems preferable. For further discussion, see §11.92.

On abolition of the common law rule prohibiting reservation of easements in a stranger, see §11.65. On interpretation of easements, see California Easements and Boundaries: Law and Litigation, chap 1 (Cal CEB 2008).

© The Regents of the University of California

§11.74 12. Failure to State All Purposes and Limitations

Whether the easement is to be exclusive or nonexclusive should be stated expressly in the instrument creating it. If the easement is nonexclusive, it is important to fix responsibility for its maintenance.

Sometimes the statement of purpose is not sufficiently explicit. For example, the phrase "for utility purposes" gives no guidance on whether the utilities are to be underground or aboveground. Similarly, a statement that an easement is "for driveway purposes" does not resolve disputes about whether the driveway may be raised, fenced, or improved with planting. See Faus v City of Los Angeles (1967) 67 C2d 350, 62 CR 193, in which the court held that the holder of a municipal electric railway easement could convert from streetcars to buses without forfeiting its easement. On interpretation of easements, see California Easements and Boundaries: Law and Litigation, chap 1 (Cal CEB 2008).

§11.75 13. Precautions for Buyers

A purchaser with notice, in the absence of duress or fraud, is deemed to have bargained for the property with the restriction in mind and shown themselves willing to abide by it. Alfaro v Community Housing Improvement Sys. & Planning Ass'n (2009) 171 CA4th 1356, 1385, 89 CR3d 659 (restriction on resale price). To protect against claims of easements or other title defects clouding the title of the land, buyers can and should do several things:

- The purchase agreement should provide that the seller represents and warrants that no such clouds exist, or at least that seller has no knowledge of any such clouds.
- The buyer can inspect the property, which will also buttress a defense of bona fide purchaser without notice if a claim later arises.
- A preliminary report should be requested in a timely manner, and copies of the documents referred to as exceptions should be requested from the title company and read. On preliminary reports generally, see California Title Insurance Practice, chap 5 (2d ed Cal CEB 1997).
- The buyer should consider a survey. On surveys, see Title Ins §§4.30-4.34.
- The buyer should request an American Land Title Association (ALTA) owner's policy of title insurance with survey endorsement, if the expense seems warranted. The usual form of protection is title insurance in the proper amount (although title insurance does not eliminate valid claims that may exist). Again, buyers should be advised about the different forms of coverage and informed that standard-coverage policies often insure only matters of record; matters that would be revealed only by inspection of the land are covered only under the more expensive ALTA form of owner's policy. Contini v Western Title Ins. Co. (1974) 40 CA3d 536, 543, 115 CR 257. On ALTA policies, see Title Ins, chaps 6-8, Apps F-H.

The purchase agreement can be drafted to provide that, if a cloud on the title is discovered that the title insurer cannot insure against, the buyer has the choice of demanding correction or waiving the defect and acquiring the property with an appropriate deduction, to be held in escrow or credited to the purchase price.

NOTE: A buyer's current willingness to accept a cloud on title may still result in an impairment when that buyer, in turn, attempts to sell or encumber the property.

Exceptions to title policies can often be negotiated, and title insurers will occasionally accept indemnities or otherwise assume the risk of insurance as part of their underwriting process. It is also possible that title insurers will eliminate exceptions under a lender's policy, but retain the exception as to the owner's coverage if the title defect is minor and unlikely to impair the lender's security. See Lawrence v Chicago Title Ins. Co. (1987) 192 CA3d 70, 75, 237 CR 264. On title insurance and easements, see California Easements and Boundaries: Law and Litigation, chap 9 (Cal CEB 2008).

§11.76 14. Precautions for Sellers

If the seller elects to make warranties or representations of title as part of the transaction, the seller's lawyer must underscore the difference between warranties and statements that are made only of the seller's knowledge. The safest course for the seller is to convince the buyer to rely on the buyer's inspection of a preliminary report and receipt of the appropriate title policy through escrow at closing.

If a seller makes a representation of title based on its own knowledge, care should be taken as to the state of knowledge of the seller's employees or as to matters that may be in the seller's files. If warranties are issued, care should be taken to structure them to be consistent with the seller's existing title insurance.

Sellers of residential property should be aware that the required forms of disclosure statements provide for encroachments, easements, and similar matters affecting the property. CC §1102.6. When the seller knows of facts materially affecting the value or desirability of the property, which are known or accessible only to the seller, and when the seller also knows that such facts are not known to, or within the reach of, the diligent attention and observation of the buyer, the seller has a duty to disclose those facts to the buyer. Lingsch v Savage (1963) 213 CA2d 729, 735, 29 CR 201.

§11.77 15. Adverse Possession, Prescription, and Implied Dedication

Adverse possession, prescription, and implied dedication may affect all or part of the record owner's title. Prescription refers to the creation of easements by adverse use over a period of time. See California Easements and Boundaries: Law and Litigation, chap 1 (Cal CEB 2008); Benz & Merritt, Fences, Boundaries, and Prescriptive Easements, 23 CEB Real Prop L Rep 122 (Apr. 2000). Adverse possession refers to the acquisition and extinguishment of possessory interests. Implied dedication refers to the owner's intent to dedicate property to public use.

The elements of adverse possession and prescription are set forth in CC §1007 and CCP §§321-325. See also Gilardi v Hallam (1981) 30 C3d 317, 321, 178 CR 624; Mehdizadeh v Mincer (1996) 46 CA4th 1296, 54 CR2d 284. The elements of establishing title by adverse possession are tax payment and open and notorious use or possession that is continuous and uninterrupted, hostile to the true owner, and under a claim of title. To constitute adverse possession by someone claiming under color of title, land is deemed to have been possessed when it has been cultivated or improved, protected by a substantial enclosure or, if not enclosed, when it has been used to supply fuel or timber, for husbandry or pasturage, or for the occupant's ordinary use. CCP §323. When a known farm or single lot has been partly improved, the unimproved portion is deemed occupied for the same length of time. CCP §323(4). When color of title is not present, land is deemed to have been possessed when it is protected by a substantial enclosure or is cultivated or improved. CCP §325.

NOTE: Land dedicated to public entities and public utilities is not subject to title by prescription. CC §1007. Under Hays v Vanek (1989) 217 CA3d 271, 266 CR 856, land dedicated to quasi-public use, even if not accepted for such dedication, is not subject to adverse possession.

Acquisition of title by adverse possession between tenants in common requires, in addition to exclusive possession, open, notorious, and unequivocal evidence of intent to oust the nonoccupying tenant of its interest in the common property. Preciado v Wilde (2006) 139 CA4th 321, 325, 42 CR3d 792.

There is no policy favoring prescriptive easements; a claimant has the burden of proof by clear and convincing evidence. Grant v Ratliff (2008) 164 CA4th 1304, 1310, 79 CR3d 902; Brewer v Murphy (2008) 161 CA4th 928, 938, 74 CR3d 436.

A claimant who cannot claim adverse possession for failure to pay taxes on the disputed property may not obtain a prescriptive easement that extends so far that it becomes the equivalent of a fee interest and dispossesses the record title owners of part of their property. Kapner v Meadowlark Ranch Ass'n (2004) 116 CA4th 1182, 1186, 11 CR3d 138; Harrison v Welch (2004) 116 CA4th 1084, 1092, 11 CR3d 92; Mehdizadeh v Mincer (1996) 46 CA4th 1296, 1303, 54 CR2d 284.

In Gion v City of Santa Cruz (1970) 2 C3d 29, 84 CR 162, the California Supreme Court held that to negate a finding of implied intent to dedicate a right-of-way to the public, based on uninterrupted public use for more than 5 years, an owner must affirmatively show that he or she either granted the public a license or made a bona fide attempt to prevent public use. In response to Gion, the legislature in 1971 amended CC §813 and added CC §1009, which state that, except for land within 1000 yards of the ocean and harbors, estuaries, bays, and inlets, no such implied intent to dedicate would be found, and no public use would ripen into an easement, without that owner's written irrevocable offer to dedicate. The legislation has been held to be effective from March 4, 1972, the date of its enactment. Friends of the Trail v Blasius (2000) 78 CA4th 810, 93 CR2d 193. See also County of Los Angeles v Berk (1980) 26 C3d 201, 161 CR 742; Bess v County of Humboldt (1992) 3 CA4th 1544, 1550, 5 CR2d 399; City of Long Beach v Daugherty (1977) 75 CA3d 972, 142 CR 593; County of Orange v Chandler-Sherman Corp. (1976) 54 CA3d 561, 126 CR 765; Richmond Ramblers Motorcycle Club v Western Title Guar. Co. (1975) 47 CA3d 747, 121 CR 308.

NOTE: The scope of pre-March 1972 public recreational uses of private property that give rise to an implied dedication defines the scope of contemporary uses. Burch v Gombos (2000) 82 CA4th 352, 98 CR2d 119. See Comment in 23 CEB Real Prop L Rep 280 (Oct. 2000).

For many years in California an implied dedication to the public was possible under the former Act of July 26, 1866 (43 USC §932 (repealed effective Oct. 21, 1976)) and former California Political Code §§2618-2622 (in effect from 1872 to 1935). Such dedication could occur through establishment of a route as a highway by a public authority or by use by the public deemed sufficient in law to constitute an acceptance of the implied offer of dedication. Union Transp. Co. v Sacramento County (1954) 42 C2d 235, 244, 267 P2d 10; City of Venice v Short Line Beach Land Co. (1919) 180 C 447; Hanshaw v Long Valley Road Ass'n (2004) 116 CA4th 471, 477, 11 CR3d 357; Western Aggregates, Inc. v County of Yuba (2002) 101 CA4th 278, 292, 130 CR2d 436; Ball v Stephens (1945) 68 CA2d 843, 845, 158 P2d 207. These provisions are relevant to roads created in the 1930s and before. Use of express private easements by adjacent property owners and their invitees is not sufficient evidence for an implied dedication. Biagini v Beckham (2008) 163 CA4th 1000, 1013, 78 CR3d 171. On implied dedications, see Easements, chaps 1, 9.

Posting signs in the manner prescribed in CC §1008 prevents a use from ripening into a prescriptive easement. If an owner's efforts to exclude the public or discourage public use have effectively put the public on notice that its use of the property is unauthorized, the owner can defeat the accrual of a public easement. In County of Los Angeles v Berk (1980) 26 C3d 201, 216, 161 CR 742, the court held that defendants and the former property owners had not fulfilled the burden of putting the public on notice.

EXAMPLE: An implied dedication was found in Brumbaugh v County of Imperial (1982) 134 CA3d 556, 562, 184 CR 11, in which the court differentiated between dedication implied in fact ("by the affirmative acts or acquiescence of the property owner") and dedication implied in law ("by the continuous adverse public use of the property throughout the prescriptive period without substantial interference by the owner").

C. Doctrines of Agreed Boundaries and of Practical Location

§11.78 1. Doctrine of Agreed Boundaries

When the true boundary line between properties of coterminous owners is uncertain, a new boundary line will become for all purposes the boundary between the properties if the owners enter into an express or implied agreement fixing the boundary line and accept and acquiesce in the line either (1) for a period equal to the statute of limitations or (2) under such circumstances that substantial loss would be caused by a change of position. Bryant v Blevins (1994) 9 C4th 47, 36 CR2d 86. See also French v Brinkman (1963) 60 C2d 547, 551, 35 CR 289; Ernie v Trinity Lutheran Church (1959) 51 C2d 702, 707, 336 P2d 525. Agreed boundary lines were traditionally favored because early surveys in the state could be most uncertain, and in later years the monuments and landmarks they described could often not be found. Kraemer v Superior Oil Co. (1966) 240 CA2d 642, 650, 49 CR 869. Legal uncertainty about an original map need be shown only by circumstantial evidence. Vella v Ratto (1971) 17 CA3d 737, 741, 95 CR 72. Long-standing walls, fences, or similar monuments have been recognized as evidence of agreement by earlier owners. Kunza v Gaskell (1979) 91 CA3d 201, 154 CR 101; Vella v Ratto, supra.

However, the mere presence of a fence is not sufficient; the doctrine still requires (1) uncertainty about the location of the true boundary when the fence was erected and (2) an agreement between the neighboring property owners to use the fence's location as the means of establishing the boundary. In addition, courts recognize that barriers are built for many reasons, only one of which is to act as a visible barrier between parcels. Bryant v Blevins (1994) 9 C4th 47, 36 CR2d 86.

The doctrine is particularly powerful because it does not depend on record title, and the authorities concur that the agreed-on line becomes in effect the true line and attaches itself to the deeds. Ernie v Trinity Lutheran Church (1959) 51 C2d 702, 708, 336 P2d 525; Young v Blakeman (1908) 153 C 477, 482, 95 P 888. The issue of payment of taxes is also immaterial to the doctrine. Ernie, 51 C2d at 709. It is presumed that taxes were assessed by the assessor and that value was placed on the land and improvements of each party as disclosed by visible possession, rather than as would be disclosed by a survey. Price v DeReyes (1911) 161 C 484, 489, 119 P 893; Caballero v Balamotis (1956) 144 CA2d 58, 61, 300 P2d 363; Carr v Schomberg (1951) 104 CA2d 850, 860, 232 P2d 597.

Case law has not been consistent on how to establish, for purposes of this doctrine, the required uncertainty as to the true boundary. Several recent cases have rejected application of the doctrine of agreed boundaries when surveyors' monuments and reliable legal descriptions are present, events are recent, and witnesses are still living. Armitage v Decker (1990) 218 CA3d 887, 903, 267 CR 399; Mesnick v Caton (1986) 183 CA3d 1248, 1257, 228 CR 779. Armitage indicates that this doctrine will not be applied, and the boundary will not be considered uncertain, if it can be made certain by a survey.

The doctrine does not apply when there is no evidence that a fence was built to resolve a disagreement between the owners about the true boundary line. Bryant v Blevins, supra; Mehdizadeh v Mincer (1996) 46 CA4th 1296, 54 CR2d 284.

On doctrine of agreed boundaries, see California Easements and Boundaries: Law and Litigation, chaps 8, 10 (Cal CEB 2008).

§11.79 2. Doctrine of Practical Location

A close corollary to the doctrine of agreed boundaries is the doctrine of practical location. Under this doctrine, if an owner conveys a parcel of a large tract that is delineated on the ground by fixed monuments, these monuments will prevail over any differing description in the deed if the parties rely on them as established in the intended boundaries—even if the monuments differ from those that a survey would reveal. French v Brinkman (1963) 60 C2d 547, 551, 35 CR 289.

§11.80 D. Abandonment and Vacation

Except for titles held in fee, lawyers should not assume that interests appearing of record or revealed by inspection are as they appear to be. They may have been abandoned or vacated. Abandonment of a right in land requires that the owner of the right

- intended to abandon it; and
- gave evidence of this intent by acts or failures to act that are clear, unequivocal, and decisive.

See 12 Witkin, Summary of California Law, Real Property §§422-424 (10th ed 2005).

The doctrine of abandonment does not apply to a fee simple interest in real property. However, certain fee interests such as perpetual easements and perpetual profits derived from land, including oil and gas interests, can be abandoned. Gerhard v Stephens (1968) 68 C2d 864, 69 CR 612.

If an interest has been abandoned, the description of the property may be affected. Thus, if an appurtenant easement has been abandoned, its description as part of the transfer will not pass the right to the buyer (except to the extent the rights of a bona fide purchaser apply as discussed in §§15.85-15.87). Generally, the abandonment should be established by agreement, deed, or judgment.

On vacation of street easements and the closing of streets and highways to public use, see Str & H C §§8300-8363. On abandonment, see California Easements and Boundaries: Law and Litigation, chaps 1, 9 (Cal CEB 2008).

§11.81 E. Effect of Water on Land

Physical changes resulting from the action of water on real property raise many questions. Other problems arise from the imprecise use of water monuments as points or boundaries in descriptions. Some of these problems may be eliminated by careful drafting (see §11.103), but others may arise even after the most careful drafting. Such problems most commonly arise regarding the following issues:

- High-water mark, low-water mark (see §11.82);
- Thread or middle of lake or stream (see §11.83);
- Islands (see §11.84);
- Formerly navigable waters (see §11.85); and
- Avulsion (see §11.86).

On easements relating to water, see California Easements and Boundaries: Law and Litigation, chap 3 (Cal CEB 2008).

§11.82 1. High-Water Mark, Low-Water Mark

In the absence of contrary evidence of intent in the grant, land bordering tidewaters extends to the high-water mark. On inland waters (including Monterey Bay), see U.S. v California (1965) 381 US 139, 14 L Ed 2d 296, 85 S Ct 1401. Land on a navigable lake or stream extends to the low-water mark. CC §830; CCP §2077. These marks may shift as the water deposits sand or soil (alluvion), thus augmenting the land on the bank (accretion), or as it recedes (reliction) or encroaches on the land. If the change is gradual and of natural causes, the owner's land is augmented or diminished by the shifting of the water boundary. CC §1014; Raglan v Johnston Rock Co. (1942) 50 CA2d 705, 123 P2d 883. The shifting of tides, however, makes ascertaining high-water marks extremely difficult. See discussion in People v William Kent Estate Co. (1966) 242 CA2d 156, 51 CR 215, and its use of the expression "neap" tides. See also Lechusa Villas W. v California Coastal Comm'n (1997) 60 CA4th 218, 235, 70 CR2d 399, for an elaboration on the boundary line standard articulated in People v William Kent Estate Co., supra. The State owns all tidelands below the ordinary high water mark, and holds such lands in trust for the public. CC §670; State of Cal. ex rel State Lands Comm'n v Superior Court (1995) 11 C4th 50, 63, 44 CR2d 399; Burke v California Coastal Comm'n (2008) 168 CA4th 1098, 1103, 85 CR3d 909 (ambulatory boundary settlement). For discussion of the history of California sea boundary disputes and engineering methods for determining those boundaries, see Shalowitz, Shore and Sea Boundaries (1962, 1964). A complete procedure for establishing boundaries on tidal and submerged lands by agreement and by quiet title is set forth in Pub Res C §§6357-6360.

§11.83 2. Thread or Middle of Lake or Stream

The owner of land bordering on a nonnavigable lake or stream is presumed to take to the thread or middle of the lake or stream (CC §830; CCP §2077) unless otherwise stated in the instrument. Accretion, reliction, erosion, or encroachment may change the location of the thread.

© The Regents of the University of California

§11.84 3. Islands

Islands may be formed by accretion, by the recession of the water, or by a new watercourse isolating land that was formerly part of the mainland. Islands in navigable streams belong to the state if there is no title to the contrary (CC §1016), even if the water between the island and the bank is not navigable. Packer v Bird (1886) 71 C 134, 11 P 873. An island in a nonnavigable stream belongs to the owner of the shore. If the island lies entirely on one side of the thread, it belongs to the owner of the shore on that side; if it bestrides the thread, the owners on the opposite banks own it up to the midstream dividing line. CC §1017. If a new channel forms an island by separating a portion of the land from the property to which it was attached, it continues to belong to the owner of that land. CC §1018.

© The Regents of the University of California

Source: Real Property/California Real Property Sales Transactions/11 Descriptions of Property/§11.85 4. Formerly Navigable Waters

§11.85 4. Formerly Navigable Waters

If waters cease to be navigable, two important rights arise:

- The state may sell to abutting owners the underlying land thus made available or may exchange an abandoned navigable river or slough for lands having equal or greater value (Pub Res C §6210.8); and
- Persons claiming an interest in property lying in the former bed may bring quiet title actions against the state to determine ownership (Pub Res C §6461).

© The Regents of the University of California

§11.86 5. Avulsion

As distinguished from the gradual processes of accretion, reliction, or erosion, avulsion is the sudden removal of land from the estate of one owner of the shore or bank to that of another as a result of the action of the water. The owner of a distinguishable part of a bank that is suddenly carried away and deposited elsewhere may reclaim it within 1 year. CC §1015; 12 Witkin, Summary of California Law, Real Property §237 (10th ed 2005).

Avulsion can also be caused by the deposit of artificial fill. In this case, the newly created property belongs to the owner of the submerged land on which the fill is deposited—not the owner of the dry land adjacent to the fill. See New Jersey v New York (1998) 523 US 767, 140 L Ed 2d 993, 1013, 118 S Ct 1726.

§11.87 F. Eminent Domain

Actions by the state or an authority with the power of eminent domain to acquire portions of real property, typically for acquisition of rights-of-way for streets and highways, can affect land descriptions and should be ascertainable by inspections of record title and the land. CCP §§1240.010-1273.050. See also CC §1009(d) (regarding implied dedication) and §1001 (relating to acquisition of private easements for necessary utilities through a private power of eminent domain). For a thorough discussion of the eminent domain power, see Condemnation Practice in California (3d ed Cal CEB 2005).

§11.87A G. Merger of Parcels

Contiguous parcels under common ownership are subject to merger under the Subdivision Map Act (Govt C §§66410-66499.37) if (1) any one of the parcels does not conform to the standards for minimum parcel size of the local zoning ordinance (Govt C §66451.11); and (2) at least one parcel is undeveloped by any structure for which a building permit was issued or for which a building permit was not required at the time of construction, or is developed only with an accessory structure or structures or with a structure other than an accessory structure that is partially sited on a contiguous parcel (Govt C §66451.11(a)). In addition, each parcel to be merged must meet at least one of the following conditions (Govt C §66451.11(b)):

- It is less than 5000 square feet;
- It was not created in compliance with applicable laws and ordinances;
- It does not meet current standards for sewage disposal or domestic water supply;
- It does not meet current standards for slope stability;
- It lacks adequate legal access for vehicles or safety equipment;
- Its development would create health or safety hazards; or
- It is inconsistent with the applicable general plan. Govt C §§66451.11, 66451.30.

The process requires a local ordinance that conforms to and implements the Government Code provisions, notice and a public hearing, and filing of notice of merger of record. Govt C §§66451.10-66451.32.

§11.88 H. Estoppel

A boundary may be changed by estoppel. Helm v Wilson (1888) 76 C 476, 18 P 604. Estoppel occurs when adjoining owners recognize a dividing line and one owner then makes such valuable improvements on the basis of the line that it would be inequitable to require that owner to remove or abandon them if the other owner later disagrees on the location of the boundary.

V. ELIMINATING DEFECTS IN DESCRIPTIONS

A. Solutions to Typical Problems

§11.89 1. Overlapping Descriptions

If a seller owns a rectangular lot that is less than 100 feet wide but conveys "to B the easterly 50 feet measured perpendicularly to the easterly boundary" and "to C the westerly 50 feet measured perpendicularly to the westerly boundary," an overlapping description is created, because the total width conveyed is 100 feet although the lot is not that wide.

If the deed to B is the first recorded, C must take a grant with constructive notice that the easterly 50 feet have already been conveyed to B. In addition, the seller can convey no greater title to C than the seller already possesses. Nevertheless, B's title may be clouded by the conveyance to C, even though the deed to C would be out of B's chain of title. If C makes any claim on the record title of B, then B would generally be entitled to defense under a title insurance policy.

To eliminate the cloud on B's title, B and C could execute and record a boundary line agreement or C could quitclaim the legal description conveyed to B. As a last resort, a quiet title action could be brought to obtain a recordable decree quieting title.

© The Regents of the University of California

§11.90 2. Failure to Close Metes and Bounds Description

The requirements of a metes and bounds description are set forth in §§11.26-11.39. One requirement is that it close, i.e., that no gap be left in the boundaries. If a description of record is found to leave a gap, an engineer or a surveyor should be retained to draft a proper description unless the missing element is obvious from the face of the document. Often, the grantor in whose instrument the gap first appeared can be found and induced to execute a new deed. If there are intervening owners, the deed from the first grantor should, if possible, conform to the requirements of after-acquired title (see §12.10).

The rules construing descriptions of CCP §2077 or the doctrines of agreed boundary line, practical location, or adverse possession may often resolve a defective legal description. See §§11.77-11.79.

The two judicial solutions are quiet title or reformation. In this context, declaratory relief is treated as a variant of quiet title. On quiet title actions, see California Real Property Remedies and Damages, chap 7 (2d ed Cal CEB 2002); 8 Grossman & Van Alstyne, Pleading—Civil Actions §§1053-1056 (2d ed 1981); 5 Witkin, California Procedure, Pleading §§613-629 (5th ed 2008).

On reformation, see Real Property Remedies, chap 2; 5 Witkin, California Procedure*, Pleading* §§762-774.

© The Regents of the University of California

§11.91 3. Incomplete, Confusing, or Erroneous Descriptions

A description may be incomplete in itself (e.g., it fails to state county or tract number) or become incomplete as a result of an event (e.g., a monument has disappeared). Similarly, although a description may seem to be complete, it may be contradictory, e.g., an incorrect legal description followed by correct street address.

As long as the instrument is properly recorded and indexed, the description may still impart constructive notice. Rogers v McCartney (1906) 3 CA 34, 35, 84 P 215. If it is possible from the whole description to ascertain and identify the land intended to be conveyed, it will not be void and will retain its priority. Leonard v Osburn (1915) 169 C 157, 161, 146 P 530; Bond v Aickley (1914) 168 C 161, 164, 141 P 1188 (deed sufficient even though word "feet" omitted); Crouse-Prouty v Rogers (1917) 33 CA 246, 248, 164 P 901 (deed valid despite misdescription on tract map); Black Eagle Oil Co. v Belcher (1913) 22 CA 258, 261, 133 P 1153 (deed valid despite misdescription of base and meridian).

In some instances, the lawyer must first obtain a valid description from a competent engineer or surveyor and then seek relief by agreement with the property owner's predecessors in interest. If relief cannot be agreed on for any reason, the solution lies in an action for reformation or quiet title. See §11.90 for references to works on quiet title and reformation actions.

© The Regents of the University of California

§11.92 4. Reservation or Exception in Successive Descriptions

If B is the grantee under a deed that excepted (or reserved) an estate less than a fee or a described strip of land or subsurface mineral rights, use of the same exception in the next conveyance may create ambiguities about the ownership of the excepted interest.

EXAMPLE: A grants to B, reserving an easement in favor of A's adjacent land; B grants to C, "reserving" the same easement. Has B clouded A's title to the easement by ostensibly reserving it for himself? Or has B attempted to indicate that he, too, expects to use the easement for the benefit of another parcel of adjacent property, rather than merely excluding A's reserved interest? To eliminate this ambiguity, B's deed should state clearly the property for the benefit of which he makes the exception if it is a parcel other than A's, or should make the deed "subject to the easement reserved in deed from A to B recorded at…."

© The Regents of the University of California

§11.93 5. Fraudulent or Erroneous Surveys

In the early days of California, some surveys made under government contract misplaced such markers as rivers, mountains, and section corners. For instance, in Schwartz v Dibblee (1921) 51 CA 451, 197 P 125, the question turned on the fact that the surveyor of section 30 had discovered that the south line of adjacent section 19 was ten chains too far north.

Even when official surveys are erroneous, they benefit from the presumption that official duties were properly performed. Southern Pac. Land Co. v Meserve (1921) 186 C 157, 198 P 1055. However, public lands may be resurveyed if the resurvey would not impair the bona fide rights or claims of any owner or claimant. 43 USC §772; Bureau of Land Management, Manual of Instructions for the Survey of the Public Lands of the United States §§387, 409, 428 (1973). For information on the next edition of this manual, see Directory. See also Official Maps in Govt C §§66499.50-66499.58.

In a private, unofficial survey, the presumption that an official duty has been properly performed does not apply; a correct survey is admissible to show the error of a prior survey. The remedy is then by agreement, reformation, or quiet title.

B. Drafting to Eliminate Defects

§11.94 1. Drafting Principles

The following principles of good drafting apply to descriptions generally:

- Avoid nonessential language (see §11.95);
- Avoid ambiguity (see §11.96);
- Use precise language (see §11.97); and
- Know the statutory rules of construction (see §11.98).

© The Regents of the University of California

§11.95 a. Avoid Nonessential Language

Language that is not essential to the description should be avoided.

EXAMPLE: If the southwest quarter is assumed to consist of 160 acres but the exact area is not a substantial factor in the transaction, the addition of the information "consisting of 160 acres" opens possibilities for conflict and litigation.

For a comparison of merits and hazards in adding acreage to descriptions, see §11.16.

© The Regents of the University of California

§11.96 b. Avoid Ambiguity

Occasionally, poor descriptions are supplemented in later deeds with an additional description that redescribes the area believed to be encompassed by the earlier language. Unfortunately, this supplementation adds ambiguity to the instrument. The correct remedy is a survey, agreement with contiguous owners, a quiet title decree, or another appropriate solution. If more than one description is helpful, specify which is to control. If the two prove to be inconsistent, the rules of CCP §2077 on interpreting property descriptions may control.

© The Regents of the University of California

§11.97 c. Use Precise Language

Appurtenances (i.e., augmenting easements, additional rights, personal property, and similar elements transferred in addition to the principal property) should be described with the same care as the property itself. Easements, for example, being interests in real property, bring into play all the principles discussed in this chapter. Easements are more fully discussed in §§11.43-11.77, and forms are presented in §§11.105-11.107. When personal property is being transferred with real property, it should be identified with particularity in the agreement and in a bill of sale separate from the deed. A vague description, such as "all the living room furniture," may lead to later disputes and even to attempted circumvention of the parties' intent. Generally, an agreed and initialed inventory, describing the goods precisely, is the most satisfactory method. On occasion, equipment may be photographed and the photographs made part of the agreement.

§11.98 d. Know Statutory Rules of Construction

As noted in §§11.14-11.15, parol evidence can be introduced to interpret deeds. Code of Civil Procedure §2077 supplies a number of rules of construction that control if other, sufficient information is unavailable, including the following rules:

- Definite and ascertained particulars in the description control over information that is indefinite, unknown, or false;
- Permanent and visible or ascertained boundaries or monuments control over inconsistent lines, angles, or surfaces;
- Between different measurements that are inconsistent, lines control over angles, and angles control over surfaces;
- The grantor's rights are usually construed to the middle of roads and nonnavigable streams, to high-water marks of tidewater, or to low-water marks of navigable waters that have no tide; and
- When a description refers to a map, the map controls if it appears that the parties act with reference to the map; otherwise, the map is subordinate to any definite and ascertained particulars.

§11.99 2. Drafting Particular Descriptions

Many principles discussed under reading descriptions (see §§11.14-11.41) apply equally to drafting descriptions. For instance, the drafter must know about off-record matters (see §§11.53-11.57, 11.77-11.79) so that they may be either confirmed (by including necessary provisions in the agreement or deed) or removed (by clearing the record before the transaction is consummated).

Forms for the kinds of descriptions most commonly encountered in California are set out in §§11.100-11.102. The elements in the forms apply whether the description is part of a deposit receipt, escrow instructions forming a bilateral contract, or a more formal purchase and sale agreement. See Beverage v Canton Placer Mining Co. (1955) 43 C2d 769, 278 P2d 694; Alameda Belt Line v City of Alameda (2003) 113 CA4th 15, 21, 5 CR3d 879. The drafting principles discussed in §§11.94-11.98 apply in drafting the particular descriptions that follow.

11.100-1 Description by reference to subdivision map

The real property in the _ _[City of _ _[name]_ _*,/City and*]_ _ County of _ _[name]_ _, State of California, described as _ _[lot, block, tract, or other designation used on map]_ _ per map recorded in book _ _, page(s) _ _, of Maps, Office of County Recorder of _ _[name]_ _ County.

Comment: This provision describes property by referring to a recorded subdivision map. The recorder may record in a book of subdivision maps, a book of parcel maps, or a book of cities and towns. Govt C §66466.

Statutory authority for description by reference to a subdivision map is given in §11.24, which also cites code sections that permit the recording of maps and warns of consequences flowing from improperly recorded maps.

For marketing purposes, subdivisions sometimes bear names (e.g., Northbrae, Hiawatha Park) instead of or in addition to numbers. If the name is shown on the recorded map, it is a proper part of the description. If it is the only designation of the subdivision (i.e., there is no tract number), the name becomes a necessary part of the description.

On descriptions for transfers of fewer than all the parcels shown on the map, see forms and Comments in §§11.101-11.102.

11.101-1 Description by reference to rectangular survey map

The real property in the _ _[City of _ _[name]_ _*,/City and*]_ _ County of _ _[name]_ _, State of California, described as _ _[e.g., SW quarter]_ _, section _ _, township _ _, range _ _, _ _[Humboldt/Mt. Diablo/San Bernardino]_ _ base and meridian, _ _[per survey of _ _[date]_ _]_ _.

Comment: This provision describes property by reference to a United States government rectangular survey, discussed in §§11.17-11.21. If there has been more than one survey or plat (see §11.93), the date of the one referred to must be given; if it is not known whether there was more than one, inserting the date is a simple precaution.

If an oddly shaped parcel is being transferred (e.g., Lot 1, section 1, as shown in Figure 1, §11.18), or if the property cannot be described as a quarter or a half, the form should be modified to read:

described as _ _[that/those]_ _ portion(s) of _ _[specify, e.g., quarters or section]_ _ _ _[state other qualifications]_ _: _ _[Describe]_ _.

An example of a description of an oddly shaped parcel:

described as that portion of section 30, township 2 north, range 4 east, San Bernardino base and meridian lying southerly of the lands described in deed from R. Quinn to B. Quinn recorded in book….

If, instead, a transfer is to be described in terms of lands excluded, the following should be added:

EXCEPT _ _[that/those]_ _ portion(s) _ _[specify parts not included in transfer]_ _.

"Except" has a precise legal meaning and is defined in §11.73. It is capitalized in this form because it is customary to do so in descriptions. For additional elements in descriptions, see §§11.94-11.98.

11.102-1 Description by reference to deed or other instrument

The real property in the _ _[City of _ _[name]_ _*,/City and*]_ _ County of _ _[name]_ _, State of California, described as _ _[that/those]_ _ portion(s) of the property described in _ _[specify document, e.g., deed, judgment, or other]_ _ of _ _[date]_ _, in which _ _[name(s)]_ _ _ _[is/are]_ _ _ _[specify designation in document, e.g., grantor, plaintiff, or other designation]_ _ and _ _[name(s)]_ _ _ _[is/are]_ _ _ _[specify designation, e.g., grantee, defendant, or other designation]_ _, recorded on _ _[date]_ _, as Instrument _ _ _ in book _ _ _, page _ _ _ of _ _[official book]_ _, of the Office of the County Recorder of _ _[name]_ _ County.

Comment: Land may be described by reference to another instrument. See §11.25. However, the description will be improper if (1) the description in the previously recorded instrument is faulty or (2) the reference to that instrument in the present document is faulty. To protect against both pitfalls, the attorney should examine the map or other instrument or obtain adequate assurance from the title company, and carefully compare that information with the reference in the new instrument. Copies of maps can usually be obtained from title companies, assessors' offices, city or county engineers, or zoning offices, although title company maps are generally preferable.

Descriptions by reference to an instrument that is not of public record should be avoided. The validity of the new conveyance does not depend on whether the instrument referred to is of record (Saunders v Schmaelzle (1874) 49 C 59, 66), but serious problems of proof and constructive notice may arise if it is not.

The document to which reference is made should be described by date, parties, designation of the parties in the document, and any recording data. For other elements in descriptions, see §§11.94-11.98. If any part of the property described in the other document is to be excluded from the present transfer, the exclusion or exception should be clearly shown. See §11.73.

§11.103 6. Description by Metes and Bounds

Descriptions by metes and bounds are so diverse that they do not lend themselves to a single form. In general, the rules for reading these descriptions (see §§11.26-11.39) are also the rules for drafting them. For rules of construction, see CCP §2077. As experience in drafting descriptions is acquired, other rules will become apparent.

EXAMPLE: Parallel lines in a single description use the same numbers but opposite directions (e.g., S 79° 12' 10" E is parallel to N 79° 12' 10" W).

If the metes and bounds consist of bearings, angles, arcs, and distances, the drafter should use only those measurements that have been certified by a qualified surveyor or engineer. These experts may not be necessary for metes and bounds descriptions based entirely on physical monuments, but, because of difficulty in identifying both natural and artificial physical monuments, a description by surveyors' courses is generally preferable.

Only the most recent survey should be used. All surveys should be read critically to make certain that the area is closed and should be compared with other pertinent data (including record title to prevent record gaps or overlaps). If inconsistencies with prior deeds in the chain of title appear, the remedies discussed in §11.90 may become necessary to avoid a cloud on the title. For an example of discrepancies to be avoided, see Schwartz v Dibblee (1921) 51 CA 451, 197 P 125. If water, streets, or mountains are boundaries, it is wise not to rely on the rules of construction in CC §§830-831, 1112, CCP §2077(4), or Govt C §§23073-23076. It is best to specify thread of river, center of road, middle of lake, ridge of mountain, and so forth, if that is what is meant. On waters, see §§11.81-11.86. For additional drafting principles, see §§11.94-11.98. On railroad easements, see Faus v Nelson (1966) 241 CA2d 320, 50 CR 483.

Successive numbering of the calls (see Example 2 in §11.38) contributes to easy reading and to the drafter's accuracy.

§11.104 C. Easements

Easement problems are discussed in §§11.43-11.77, and precautions for buyers and sellers are listed in §§11.75-11.76. Many of the problems discussed in those sections can be eliminated by proper drafting. Forms for that purpose are set out in §§11.105-11.107.

11.105-1 Reservation of easement in grantor

_ _[Describe parcel conveyed]_ _ excepting from that property _ _[describe property covered by easement]_ _ as an easement _ _[personal and in gross to grantor/appurtenant to _ _[describe dominant tenement]_ _]_ _ _ _[describe purpose, e.g., providing ingress to and egress from the dominant tenement]_ _ for _ _[specify duration, e.g., such time as the dominant tenement shall abut on a public road or street]_ _.

Comment: This provision creates an easement in favor of the grantor out of land conveyed by the grantor in the same instrument. Provisions for the separate creation and transfer of easements are set out in §§11.106-11.107.

Instead of "excepting," as used in this provision, many lawyers use "reserving." The two words are discussed in §11.73.

The exception in this provision is expressly referred to as an easement to negate its construction as an estate in fee. On the difference between easements that are personal (in gross) and those that are appurtenant, see §§11.67-11.69. On problems with easements generally, see §§11.43-11.77.

_ _[Describe property conveyed]_ _, together with an easement appurtenant to that property _ _[described as/as described in]_ _ _ _[specify property covered by easement or instrument in which it is described]_ _.

Comment: This provision transfers an appurtenant easement together with the land that it serves. Matters to consider with easements are discussed in §§11.67-11.69. It is by far the best practice to expressly recite all appurtenant easements with a transfer of the dominant tenement. A transfer of the dominant tenement absent an expression of an intent to transfer the easement will pass the easement by implication (CC §1084) but subject to the limitations of obvious and permanent use of CC §1104. See Kytasty v Godwin (1980) 102 CA3d 762, 771, 162 CR 556. See also §§11.54-11.55. The physical boundaries of easements may be described in as many ways as are possible for interests in fee. See §§11.14-11.41.

Comment: As distinguished from the provisions in §11.105 (reservation of easement in favor of grantor) and §11.106 (transfer of easement with property to which it is appurtenant), this provision is used to create a new easement.

On matters affecting the description of easements, see §§11.43-11.77.

§11.108 4. Release of Easement

An easement may be extinguished by a written release or quitclaim given by the owner of the easement to the owner of the servient tenement. Westlake v Silva (1942) 49 CA2d 476, 121 P2d 872. However, release by one beneficiary does not affect the interests of the other beneficiaries of the servitude. See Restatement (Third) of Property: Servitudes §7.3, Comment b (2000). In its bilateral aspect, a release is distinct from abandonment, which is unilateral. See Restatement §7.4, Comment a. See also §11.62. The owner of the servient tenement should not concur in the release without first making certain that he or she is fully protected, e.g., that unwanted structures erected by the easement owner are first removed or that the releasing owner will indemnify against claims that the easement continues in force. The owner's attorney should advise the owner to examine a current preliminary report and inspection of the premises.

§11.109 D. Describing Multiple Parcels

Multiple parcels should be described individually. Blanket conveyances of all of a grantor's property in a county or in an area are disfavored. The specific legal descriptions should always be used so that no doubt about the grantor's intent could be inferred. It is conceivable that blanket descriptions could be used in quitclaim deeds intended to clear large tracts of land or clouds on the title, but the specific legal descriptions are still preferable.

§11.110 E. Eliminating Water Problems

Problems in describing lands bordered by water (lakes, streams, tidewaters, sloughs) are difficult to recognize, and once recognized are difficult to solve. (The effect of water on land is discussed in §§11.81-11.86. This section covers drafting problems.) Generally, the descriptions should be the joint product of the lawyer, engineer, and title officer. The seller should not purport to grant more than he or she has. The buyer should make certain that the description gives him or her all that the seller can convey, if that is the parties' intention.

The most common kinds of water are discussed below. Different kinds of water present various drafting problems, but two basic cautions always apply: Before drafting the description, investigate to ascertain whether any changes have occurred since the previous transfer, and draft the description to secure for the appropriate party the benefits that may flow from these changes.

- Tidewaters. To eliminate doubt, the conveyance to the buyer should specify to what line the grant is made, even if the intent coincides with the statutory rule discussed in §11.82. Usually, however, there should be no attempt to substitute surveyors' or other measurements for the intended water boundary. Such a description could deprive the buyer of accretions that occurred before close of escrow and create ambiguity about later accretions. For definition of "accretion," see CC §1014.
- Navigable lake. In the absence of other circumstances, the rights of the grantor to the low-water mark are considered to be included in the conveyance. CCP §2077. To negate "other circumstances," the low-water mark should be specified in the description if that is what is intended. As with tidewaters, however, an attempt to define the low-water mark by substituting surveyors' courses may deprive the buyer of accretions or compel the buyer to go to court to establish a right to them.
- Nonnavigable stream or lake. Unless the grant indicates a different intent, the abutting owner takes to the middle or thread of the lake or stream. See §11.83. As with tidewaters and navigable waters, it is better to express the parties' intent than to leave the description to statutory interpretation. However, the expressed intent should leave open to the buyer the benefit of the statutory provisions discussed in §11.82.

§11.111 F. Contract Provision for Expressing Covenants in Deed

Certain covenants, although expressed in the purchase and sale agreement, are merged in the deed and become unenforceable when the deed is recorded unless they are stated in the deed itself. See §4.109. To avoid this problem, it is possible to expressly require in both the agreement and the escrow instructions that the covenants be included in the deed. The best place for this clause is directly following the description, where it serves as a flag to the drafter when the description is copied in preparing the deed.

G. Statutory Remedies

§11.112 1. Quiet Title

Code of Civil Procedure §§760.010-764.080 in their modern (post-1980) form provide a broad and practical remedy for title issues, including matters related to legal descriptions, land title, easements, encroachments, boundaries, and other matters involving legal or equitable rights, title, estates, liens, or other interests in real property.

The statute of limitations on an action to quiet title accrues on presentation of the adverse claim (Crest Mar Owners Ass'n v Stapakis (2007) 157 CA4th 1223, 69 CR3d 231), but does not run against a plaintiff in possession of the property (Muktarian v Barmby (1965) 63 C2d 558, 560, 47 CR 483).

§11.118 VI. DESCRIBING PERSONAL PROPERTY

Transfers of real property commonly include personal property on the premises. For instance, residences are often sold with carpets, drapes, and appliances. Sales of furnished apartment houses or other commercial properties may include elaborate inventories of furniture, fixtures, merchandise, and accounts receivable. Farm properties may be sold with livestock, harvested crops, or stock in mutual water companies.

If there are only a few items of personal property, they may be listed in the purchase and sale agreement. Longer lists are usually attached as exhibits. If the inventories are so extensive that they cannot be readily ascertained or valued by a visual inspection, the parties often agree that an inventory will be taken in the future by their representatives. In this situation, the total price is left open, but a method of computing the price (such as book value) must be agreed on. For a discussion of describing personal property in the purchase and sale agreement, see §4.33. For a form of agreement transferring the assets of a going business, see Sales and Mergers of California Businesses, chap 11 (Cal CEB 2002).

In any event, the need for certainty in describing personal property is as great as it is in describing the real property. On uncertainty rendering a contract illusory, see California Real Property Remedies and Damages §4.19 (2d ed Cal CEB 2002). If the property itself is not described in the agreement, the method by which it can be ascertained and located must be clear. For examples of descriptions of specific goods, see Secured Transactions in California Commercial Law Practice §1.9 (2d ed Cal CEB 2001).

PRACTICE TIP: Some kinds of personal property present special problems. For example, the seller's interest in a neon sign may be no more than a leasehold interest. The buyer should check with the manufacturer or lessor whose name is on the sign. Vehicles may be subject to encumbrances, as shown on registration slips. On public notice of other security instruments, see Secured Transactions §§3.76-3.115. To prevent substitution of goods after taking inventory, some buyers insist on possession of the goods as soon as inventory is completed; others place an indelible mark (e.g., by means of a steel die) on each item. This is generally unnecessary for equipment that can be described by serial number. On bulk transfers without change of possession, see CC §3440.

§12.1 I. INTRODUCTION

The subject of covenants of title is a traditional one, arising from common law and statute in California. The covenants of title that are addressed in this chapter arose before title guaranties first appeared in the late 1800s—and long before modern forms of title insurance became widespread in the 1940s. Nevertheless, attorneys must understand this area of real property law to properly draft and review purchase and sale documentation, leases, and other instruments. The remedies for breach of these covenants, found in CC §§3304-3306, are sometimes available to complement other remedies for breach of contract, breach of warranty, and misrepresentation.

A covenant of title is "a covenant that binds the grantor to insure the completeness, security, and continuance of the title transferred. This covenant usually includes the covenants for seisin, against encumbrances, for the right to convey, for quiet enjoyment, and of warranty." Black's Law Dictionary 393 (8th ed 2004). Covenants of title can be placed in two groups:

- The covenants of seisin and good title (see §12.6), against encumbrances (see §12.7), and of the right to convey (see §12.8), which lie between parties in privity and do not run with the land; and
- The covenants of quiet enjoyment and warranty (see §12.9) and for further assurance (see §12.10), which do run with the land.

The law of covenants of title is codified in CC §§1113 and 1460-1468 and in case law. Certain special covenants of a lessor concerning contiguous property are in CC §§1469-1470.

Covenants of title are different from certain covenants of use that attach to title, run with the land, and are specially created under CC §1468. Section 1468 is the provision under which declarations of covenants, conditions, and restrictions are made binding on successive owners of the land and are of substantial modern interest. See §11.7.

Covenants of title should also not be confused with other contractual covenants that may be present in the real property contract, or with the express or implied warranties that may arise. The implied warranty of merchantability in new construction (Pollard v Saxe & Yolles Dev. Co. (1974) 12 C3d 374, 115 CR 648) is also distinct. Modern environmental liability under the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act of 1980 (CERCLA) (42 USC §§9601-9675), the Carpenter-Presley-Tanner Hazardous Substance Account Act (HSA) (Health & S C §§25300-25395.15), and other environmental statutes can follow the chain of title but is unrelated to any covenant of title, although special covenants of indemnity in environmental matters can be made to run with the land as long as the formalities of CC §1468 or §1471 are observed. Restrictions created by ordinance are distinct from privately created covenants. Elysian Inv. Group v Stewart Title Guar. Co. (2002) 105 CA4th 315, 323, 129 CR2d 372.

For further discussion of covenants, conditions, and restrictions, see Advising California Common Interest Communities, chap 7 (Cal CEB 2003).

§12.2 A. The Recording Act

Although a grantor or trustor may have granted an interest in property that would constitute a breach of the covenants in CC §1113 (see §§12.5-12.7), a bona fide purchaser for value without notice or a bona fide encumbrancer without notice will not be charged with the effect of such an interest unless constructive notice of the interest has been imparted within the meaning of the Recording Act (CC §§1213-1220) or unless the grantee of the prior interest was in possession at the time the subsequent grantee or mortgagee acquired title, thus imparting constructive notice of the prior conveyance. CC §19; Scheerer v Cuddy (1890) 85 C 270, 273, 24 P 713; Marriage of Cloney (2001) 91 CA4th 429, 437, 110 CR2d 615; Triple A Mgmt. Co. v Frisone (1999) 69 CA4th 520, 81 CR2d 669.

Civil Code §1214 provides that every conveyance of real property (see definition in CC §1215) is void as against any subsequent purchaser or mortgagee of the same property or any part of it in good faith and for valuable consideration, whose conveyance is first duly recorded. Recordation must be as prescribed by CC §1213, which requires that the document be acknowledged, certified, and recorded, appropriately subscribed by the party whose real property is thereby affected or alienated, and properly indexed. Govt C §§27288-27290. If it is improperly indexed or otherwise not entitled to recordation, even if it is accepted by a recorder, the document is deemed unlocatable and is treated as though it was never recorded. Rice v Taylor (1934) 220 C 629, 633, 32 P2d 381; Cady v Purser (1901) 131 C 552, 558, 63 P 844; Hochstein v Romero (1990) 219 CA3d 447, 452, 268 CR 202; 5 Miller & Starr, California Real Estate §§11:18-11:19, 11:21 (3d ed 2000). §12.3 B. Modern Use of Title Insurance

In recent decades, it has become nearly universal practice to obtain title insurance in all lending and acquisitions secured by real property. Virtually every institutional lender and all federally created mortgage corporations require title insurance loan policies in proper form, and modern lenders' policies are specifically tailored to meet their requirements. In California, it is also nearly universal for purchasers of real property to ultimately rely on issuance of a title insurance policy insuring their title, subject to acceptable exceptions.

Nevertheless, the availability of title insurance neither alters the existence and enforceability of covenants of title nor reduces the need for the transactional real property attorney to understand the effect and use of such covenants in purchase and sale or loan documents. Moreover, not all interests in land fall within title insurance coverage. The CLTA standard-coverage policies do not offer protection against most unrecorded interests. Even ALTA policies exclude from coverage certain unrecorded interests known to an insured but not known to or reported in writing to the title insurer. See §4.53. On CLTA and ALTA policies generally, see California Title Insurance Practice, chaps 6-8 (2d ed Cal CEB 1997). In such instances, the buyer may possess an enforceable claim for damages against the grantor for breach of a covenant of title even though the title insurer would decline coverage.

II. COVENANTS OF TITLE

§12.4 A. Contractual Covenants

Once having accepted a deed to property covered by a purchase agreement, a buyer may not generally rely on covenants of title contained in the agreement unless they are also contained in the deed. This general rule does not apply if mistake, fraud, or invalidity affects the deed, nor does it affect matters collateral to the deed. Palos Verdes Corp. v Housing Auth. (1962) 202 CA2d 827, 21 CR 225. Otherwise, contractual covenants are merged in the deed (i.e., lost unless expressed in the deed). See Szabo v Superior Court (1978) 84 CA3d 839, 148 CR 837.

This chapter assumes, therefore, that the title covenants under discussion are contained in deeds. The fact that title covenants are in the deed does not negate the utility of covenants in the agreement. On the contrary, the agreement should contain all the title covenants that the parties expect the deed to contain. In addition, because covenants are merged in the deed unless a clear intent to the contrary is shown, the covenants should be specifically expressed in the deed unless the law implies them without express provision. Alternatively, the agreement may provide that a cause of action for breach of a covenant shall survive close of escrow and the conveyance of title and shall be enforceable in contract. See Szabo v Superior Court, supra. On covenants implied by the word "grant," see §§12.5-12.7; on contractual provisions for covenants and warranties to survive the deed, see §4.96.

§12.5 B. Implied Covenants in California Statutory Grant Deed (CC §1113)

Civil Code §1113 provides:

> From the use of the word "grant" in any conveyance by which an estate of inheritance or fee simple is to be passed, the following covenants, and none other, on the part of the grantor for himself and his heirs to the grantee, his heirs, and assigns, are implied, unless restrained by express terms contained in such conveyance:
> 1. That previous to the time of the execution of such conveyance, the grantor has not conveyed the same estate, or any right, title, or interest therein, to any person other than the grantee;
> 2. That such estate is at the time of the execution of such conveyance free from encumbrances done, made, or suffered by the grantor, or any person claiming under him.
> Such covenants may be sued upon in the same manner as if they had been expressly inserted in the conveyance.

The covenants implied by CC §1113 are discussed in §§12.6-12.7. These covenants are implied only if the conveyance (1) contains the word "grant," (2) passes an estate of inheritance or fee simple, and (3) contains no express terms of "restraint" (i.e., a limitation or qualification of the covenant that would otherwise be implied). For further discussion of restraints, see §12.23.

The word "grant" is not sufficient to raise the implication if the deed is a gift deed (Estate of Porter (1903) 138 C 618, 72 P 173) or a quitclaim deed (i.e., a deed passing whatever interest the grantor has, even a fee, but without any representation that he has any interest). Southern Pac. Co. v Dore (1917) 34 CA 521, 168 P 147. See §12.22 on quitclaim deeds. On actions for breach of covenant, see §§12.13-12.21.

§12.6 C. Covenant of Seisin and Good Title

The covenant of seisin is that the grantor is the owner of the premises granted, and seized of a good and indefeasible estate of inheritance free and clear of all encumbrances. McCormick v Marcy (1913) 165 C 386, 388, 132 P 449. It is to be emphasized that the statutory covenant of CC §1113 (see §12.5) is somewhat narrower—namely, that the grantor has previously not conveyed the same estate or any right, title, or interest to anyone else, and that the estate is free from encumbrances done, made, or suffered by the grantor or anyone claiming under the grantor.

The covenant is personal and is broken at the moment it is made if the grantor in fact lacks ownership. Salmon v Vallejo (1871) 41 C 481, 484. The cause of action does not run with the land and may be brought only by the covenantee. Lawrence v Montgomery (1869) 37 C 183, 188. The covenant is broken either by failure of the title or by an error in the acreage conveyed. Salmon v Vallejo, supra.

A buyer who wants the benefit of a covenant of seisin, either special or general, must make sure it is inserted in the deed. A provision for this covenant appears in §12.12. On negating the covenant, see §§12.22-12.23.

The covenant is not breached if the grantor conveys only the "right, title and interest" in the property (in modern terms, a quitclaim deed); in such a conveyance, nothing more passes than whatever estate the grantor had, subject to all present defects and equities. Southern Pac. Co. v Dore (1917) 34 CA 521, 523, 168 P 147.

The statute of limitations begins to run on a covenant of seisin, whether general or special, when the instrument is executed and the covenant broken. Hotaling v Hotaling (1924) 193 C 368, 379, 224 P 455; McCormick v Marcy, supra.

Covenants of seisin are sometimes used in the warranties and representations sections of purchase and sale agreements, but they are rarely expressed in the grant deed except through the word "grant." It is prudent to provide in the purchase and sale agreement that all representations, warranties, and covenants survive close of escrow and conveyance of title to the property. The buyer's primary reliance is usually on the following:

- The condition precedent that title insurance will be issued in a prescribed form subject only to the permitted exceptions; and
- The buyer's instructions to the escrow holder that escrow will not close until title insurance in the prescribed form is issued.

Usually, the title company issuing the policy is assumed to have greater financial responsibility than the grantor has in the event of a defect of title. Occasionally, however, it may be advisable for the buyer to obtain the grantor's covenant in addition to the title policy. On remedies for breach of covenant of seisin, see §§12.13, 12.18-12.20.

Source: Real Property/California Real Property Sales Transactions/12 Covenants of Title/§12.7 D. Covenant Against Encumbrances

§12.7 D. Covenant Against Encumbrances

The covenant against encumbrances, expressed in CC §1113(2) by the word "grant" in the conveyance of an estate of inheritance or fee simple, is "that such estate is at the time of the execution of such conveyance free from encumbrances done, made, or suffered by the grantor, or any person claiming under him."

Like the covenant of seisin (see §12.6), this covenant is personal and does not run with the land. Salmon v Vallejo (1871) 41 C 481; Lawrence v Montgomery (1869) 37 C 183; Babb v Weemer (1964) 225 CA2d 546, 37 CR 533. It is a special covenant, assuring only that the grantor has not encumbered the property or suffered it to be encumbered. It is not a covenant that the property is absolutely free of encumbrances unless contractually so expressed. The covenant does not depend on the grantor's actual knowledge; the grantor's prior knowledge or notice of an encumbrance is immaterial. Evans v Faught (1965) 231 CA2d 698, 709, 42 CR 133. The covenant is limited to encumbrances made by privately created covenant, not restrictions created by ordinance. Elysian Inv. Group v Stewart Title Guar. Co. (2002) 105 CA4th 315, 323, 129 CR2d 372.

An important distinction concerns encumbrances that involve physical character and that are open and notorious. Without an express agreement, the grantee is presumed to have contracted to accept the land subject to physical encumbrances of an open and notorious nature. The implied covenant against encumbrances under CC §1113 does not include visible easements or physical burdens on the land, even though they may also be of record. It does include matters that affect title, such as unrecorded leases, despite the grantee's knowledge of the tenant's interest. Evans v Faught, supra; Sisk v Caswell (1910) 14 CA 377, 112 P 185.

Modern usage of estoppel certificates from existing tenants and occupants arises from this rule. The rule is limited to situations that are inconsistent with record title. Possession by a tenant, consistent with recorded documents and without circumstances indicating that the tenant has additional rights, relieves the prospective buyer of a duty to inquire. Caito v United Cal. Bank (1978) 20 C3d 694, 702, 144 CR 751 (unrecorded lien of joint owner); Gates Rubber Co. v Ulman (1989) 214 CA3d 356, 262 CR 630 (unrecorded option to purchase, contained in lease, could not be enforced against grantee who took without notice of option).

The term "encumbrances" includes the following:

- Taxes, assessments, and liens on real property (CC §1114);
- Leases (Evans v Faught, supra; Mann v Montgomery (1907) 6 CA 646, 92 P 875);
- Mortgages, deeds of trust, judgment liens, attachments, water rights, easements, restrictions on use, or any right in a third party that diminishes the value or limits the use of the property, but is consistent with the passing of the fee (Elysian Inv. Group v Stewart Title Guar. Co. (2002) 105 CA4th 315, 320, 129 CR2d 372; see 3 Casner, American Law of Property §12.128 (1952); Hill, Grant and the Obvious Encumbrance, 41 LA B Bull 231 (1966)); and
- Nonpossessory interests such as a lien for unpaid taxes or even unpaid installments on an existing encumbrance (Mains v City Title Ins. Co. (1949) 34 C2d 580, 585, 212 P2d 873).

Under CC §1114, the term "encumbrances" is not limited to the definitions specifically furnished in the statute. 1119 Delaware v Continental Land Title Co. (1993) 16 CA4th 992, 20 CR2d 438.

When a sale is made subject to a certain encumbrance, the purchaser may rely on a similar condition that it is free from any other one. Mains v City Title Ins. Co., supra; Smiddy v Grafton (1912) 163 C 16, 18, 124 P 433. The preferred practice is to insert words of restraint in both the agreement and the deed unless the escrow holder is instructed to pay all taxes that would otherwise be a lien. "Subject to" clauses are appropriate words of restraint if they appear in the deed. See the provision in §12.23.

The covenant is a promise to indemnify the grantee against loss; hence the grantee cannot recover until he or she has sustained a loss. Wright v Boggess (1914) 24 CA 533, 141 P 1082. The statute of limitations, however, begins to run when the covenant is made (i.e., on delivery of the deed) and may well run before any loss has occurred. See McPike v Heaton (1900) 131 C 109, 63 P 179.

§12.8 E. Covenant of Right to Convey

The covenant of the right to convey, although often held to be the equivalent of the covenant of seisin (see Comment in §12.12), is nevertheless a separate covenant. It may be used when the grantor does not own the property but has the right to convey it (e.g., as attorney-in-fact for the owner). See Comment, Covenants of Title Running With the Land in California, 49 Cal L Rev 931, 934 (1961).

This covenant is not among those implied in the word "grant" under CC §1113. See §12.5. It is included in the provision in §12.12. It does not run with the land. See 49 Cal L Rev at 934. If the covenant is false, it is broken when made. California follows the rule that the chose in action is not assignable. Salmon v Vallejo (1871) 41 C 481.

§12.9 F. Covenants of Quiet Enjoyment and Warranty

The covenant for quiet enjoyment is that the grantee will not be disturbed in possession because of a defective title. It is breached when the true owner evicts the buyer or asserts a paramount right such that the grantee, or the holder through the grantee, is compelled to yield possession or buy the outstanding title.

The statute of limitations accrues at the time of the eviction. McCormick v Marcy (1913) 165 C 386, 132 P 449. The covenants "of warranty" and "for quiet enjoyment" or for "further assurance" by the grantor run with the land by statute. CC §§1462-1463.

A warranty deed contains a covenant of warranty (Black's Law Dictionary 393 (8th ed 2004)), which is a promise that the covenantor will compensate the covenantee if the title to any part of the estate fails because of an outstanding paramount title in a third party. See Tropico Land & Improvement Co. v Lambourn (1915) 170 C 33, 38, 148 P 206. It is sometimes called a covenant of "non-claim." Gee v Moore (1859) 14 C 472, 473. As distinguished from covenants of seisin (see §12.6) and against encumbrances (see §12.7), covenants of warranty run with the land, but only when (CC §§1462-1463)

- contained in a deed; and
- made for the direct benefit of the property or some part of it then in existence.

The covenant for quiet enjoyment is essentially the same as the covenant of warranty. Both are intended to secure compensation to the buyer for a disturbance of quiet and peaceable possession if the buyer is evicted from the premises. See 3 Casner, American Law of Property §12.129 (1952). In contrast with the covenants of seisin, right to convey, and against encumbrances, which refer to the state of title and are broken if the defects exist, the covenants of warranty and for quiet enjoyment deal with the enjoyment of possession and are broken only when that enjoyment is disturbed. See 3 American Law of Property §12.129.

Warranty deeds are rarely used in California, although they are common in other parts of the country. There is no provision of law in California for a covenant of warranty except by express provision in the instrument. See §12.12 for such a provision.

PRACTICE TIP: From a buyer's point of view, it is usually better to rely on a secure title insurance company than on the seller's ability to respond in damages. A buyer can, however, have the benefit of both by negotiating for that protection as part of the purchase transaction. From a seller's point of view, a covenant of warranty should explicitly set forth the encumbrances to which the title is subject, in much the same manner as a title policy. For this purpose, the seller's attorney should be guided by a reliable and current preliminary report, but should add all unrecorded encumbrances of which the attorney or the client is aware. See Freshman, The Warranty Deed: Where and When to Use It, 51 LA BJ 186 (1975).

§12.10 G. Covenant for Further Assurance

A covenant for further assurance is an undertaking by the seller to do any further acts to perfect the buyer's title that the buyer may reasonably require. Wholey v Cavanaugh (1891) 88 C 132, 135, 25 P 1112. This covenant carries with it a covenant against encumbrances, but it is substantially a covenant that the vendor will perform all acts necessary to confirm the buyer's title. Comment, Covenants of Title Running With the Land in California, 49 Cal L Rev 931, 936 (1961). Under CC §1463, it runs with the land in California if it otherwise complies with CC §§1462-1463.

The covenant for further assurance generally requires the grantor to convey after-acquired title to the grantee in order to give the grantee what he or she bargained for, but an express covenant for further assurance is not always necessary to protect the grantee. Thus, a grant in fee simple without an express covenant is sufficient to pass, by operation of law, the grantor's after-acquired title. CC §1106. A quitclaim deed transfers only the interest that the transferor has in the land at the date of its execution and thus does not carry an after-acquired title. Johnson v E-Z Ins. Brokerage, Inc. (2009) 175 CA4th 86, 94, 95 CR3d 782; Taylor v Coachella Valley County Water Dist. (1952) 108 CA2d 743, 239 P2d 454. Even though the doctrine of after-acquired title may apply to a given quitclaim deed (such as when the deed, expressly or impliedly, affirms the existence of a particular estate that the parties intended should pass by the conveyance), the covenant itself does not apply and would not be broken. Estate of Wilson (1940) 40 CA2d 229, 233, 104 P2d 716.

§12.11 H. Lineal and Collateral Warranties

Although CC §1115 abolished "lineal and collateral warranties," it also provides that the heirs and devisees of someone who has made a covenant or an agreement in reference of, in, or to the title of any real property are answerable to the extent of the land descended or devised to them. Lineal warranties are rooted in early common law, and their modern effect, if any, is obscure. The abolition of the two principles by §1115 makes further consideration unnecessary.

12.12-1 Warranty deed covenants

Grantor, for _ _[himself/herself]_ _ and _ _[his/her]_ _ heirs, representatives, and assigns, covenants with the grantee and _ _[his/her]_ _ heirs, representatives, and assigns, as follows:

[Covenant of seisin]

1. That grantor is lawfully seised _ _[specify, e.g., in fee simple]_ _ of the described property;

[Covenant of right to convey]

2. That grantor has the right to convey it;

[Covenant of warranty and quiet enjoyment]

3. That grantor warrants and will defend the title and quiet enjoyment of the property against the lawful claims and demands of all persons;

[Covenant of further assurance]

4. That grantor will do any further acts for the purpose of perfecting the title that the covenantees may reasonably require; and

[Covenant against encumbrances]

5. That the estate is free from all liens and encumbrances except _ _[state exceptions]_ _.

Comment: This provision contains all the title covenants designated in §12.5 and defined in §§12.6-12.10:

- Paragraph 1 is a covenant of seisin, which is used when the special covenant of seisin implied in CC §1113 is considered insufficient. The differences are explained in §12.6. This covenant will state, in effect, that the grantor is lawfully seised or has good and sufficient seisin. See 3 Casner, American Law of Property §12.127 (1952). However, because the rule in some states is that the simple covenant of seisin is not a representation or guaranty of the grantor's right or title (3 American Law of Property §12.127), the form makes the assurance explicit by stating that the grantor owns what he or she purports to convey.
- Paragraph 2 is a covenant of the right to convey, which is generally held to be the exact equivalent of a covenant of seisin, but it is used for a different purpose. However, because they are sometimes distinguished, both are expressed in this provision. The difference is explained in §12.8.
- Paragraph 3 combines the covenants of warranty and quiet enjoyment. These covenants are discussed in §12.9.
- Paragraph 4 is a covenant for further assurance, which is discussed in §12.10.
- Paragraph 5 is the covenant against encumbrances, discussed in §12.7. If the parties are satisfied with the special covenant provided by CC §1113, no broader covenant is required and this provision is unnecessary. If a general covenant is desired, a form like this may be used. In either case, liens or encumbrances to which the property will remain subject at the close should be expressly excluded from operation of the covenant. Unrecorded leases that an inspection would reveal limit the buyer's title, but, despite the buyer's knowledge, they breach the seller's implied covenant against encumbrances under §1113. Evans v Faught (1965) 231 CA2d 698, 710, 42 CR 133. The need to make the transfer subject to the lien of taxes or assessments is discussed in §12.7. Other exclusions frequently required are the following:
- Mortgages or deeds of trust to which the property remains subject;

- Utility easements;
- Leases; and
- Deed restrictions (CC&Rs).

Other exclusions (e.g., impairment of marketable title, discussed in §4.51) may be required in a particular situation. An example of how to list these exceptions is provided in §12.23. It may be prudent to address restrictions created by ordinance if the grantor knows that the grantee's plans for the property may be affected. See Elysian Inv. Group v Stewart Title Guar. Co. (2002) 105 CA4th 315, 323, 129 CR2d 372.

Covenants in the purchase and sale agreement that are to survive the deed should also be in the deed. The agreement's provision against merger (see discussion in §4.109) preserves the buyer's rights, and including the covenants in the deed permits subsequent purchasers to enforce them in an appropriate case, either as covenants running with the land or as equitable servitudes.

III. REMEDIES FOR BREACH OF TITLE COVENANTS

A. What Constitutes Breach

§12.13 1. Of Covenant of Seisin and Right to Convey

Breach of the covenant of seisin depends on breach of either the broader contractual covenant of seisin (see §12.6) or the narrower statutory covenant of CC §1113 (see §12.5). The statutory covenant against prior conveyance is breached only if the failure of title is due to an act of the grantor, not someone else. Gaffey v Welk (1920) 46 CA 385, 189 P 300.

The covenant of seisin refers only to prior transfers of estates in the land. A license does not breach the covenant, because it is not an estate in land; rather, it is a right to occupy under the previous owner only. Shaw v Caldwell (1911) 16 CA 1, 115 P 941. A conveyance of a water right, however, is an interest in land. Lyles v Perrin (1901) 134 C 417, 66 P 472. The covenant refers not only to the land itself but also to all property appurtenant to it. 3 Casner, American Law of Property §12.127 (1952). The covenant is broken at the time of transfer.

© The Regents of the University of California

Source: Real Property/California Real Property Sales Transactions/12 Covenants of Title/§12.14 2. Of Covenant Against Encumbrances

§12.14 2. Of Covenant Against Encumbrances

If the encumbrance is one affecting title, the covenant against encumbrances is broken at the time of transfer; the grantee's prior knowledge or notice of the encumbrance is immaterial. The rule enunciated in Evans v Faught (1965) 231 CA2d 698, 42 CR 133, applies to this covenant against encumbrances, and thus the covenant applies only to encumbrances affecting title. It does not apply if the alleged encumbrance consists of a physical burden on the land, permanent in character and of an open and notorious nature, which affects only the physical condition of the property. 231 CA2d at 709.

The issue of breach also turns on whether the broad contractual covenant or the narrow statutory covenant of CC §1113(2) applies. Section 1113(2), unlike the contractual covenant against encumbrances, does not apply to encumbrances that were on the property at the time the grantor acquired title. Crist v Fife (1919) 41 CA 509, 183 P 197.

Some encumbrances, if made or suffered by the grantor or if an express contractual covenant was breached, give rise to a claim for damages in the same way as a mortgage or lien. The following are examples:

- Judgment liens (Waggle v Worthy (1887) 74 C 266, 15 P 831);
- Restrictions on use (Fraser v Bentel (1911) 161 C 390, 119 P 509);

§12.15 3. Of Covenant of Quiet Enjoyment

Breach of the covenant for quiet and peaceable possession does not occur unless the true owner has evicted the buyer or asserted a paramount right. McCormick v Marcy (1913) 165 C 386, 389, 132 P 449. Because damages include attorney fees incurred in defending the title, the cause of action is normally deemed to accrue no later than the incurring of attorney fees for the true owner's assertion of a paramount right.

§12.16 4. Of Covenant for Further Assurance

The covenant for further assurance requires the covenantor to take any further action to perfect the buyer's title that the buyer may reasonably require. See §12.10. Failure to do so within a reasonable time constitutes a breach. Vance v Pena (1871) 41 C 686. In contrast with covenants of warranty and of quiet enjoyment, which require only that the seller compensate the buyer if a third party has a superior title (see §12.9), this covenant requires the seller to take affirmative action against any third party. Wholey v Cavanaugh (1891) 88 C 132, 135, 25 P 1112.

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.17 5. Of Covenant of Warranty

The covenant of warranty is not breached until the buyer is evicted under paramount title. Blackwell v Atkinson (1859) 14 C 470. This occurs when there is actual eviction by process of law (Norton v Jackson (1855) 5 C 262, aff'd sub nom Jackson v Norton (1856) 6 C 187; Fowler v Smith (1852) 2 C 39, appeal at 2 C 568) or when the buyer or the buyer's successor is compelled to yield possession or buy the superior title (McCormick v Marcy (1913) 165 C 386, 389, 132 P 449).

§12.18 B. Damages

Civil Code §3304 provides:

> The detriment caused by breach of a covenant of "seizin," of "right to convey," of "warranty," or of "quiet enjoyment," in a grant of an estate in real property, is deemed to be:
> 1. The price paid to the grantor; or, if the breach is partial only, such proportion of the price as the value of the property affected by the breach bore at the time of the grant to the value of the whole property;
> 2. Interest thereon for the time during which the grantee derived no benefit from the property, not exceeding five years;
> 3. Any expenses properly incurred by the covenantee in defending his possession.

Additional damages may be awarded to cover costs and attorney fees paid by the buyer in a prior action to recover the possession of which he or she was deprived by the seller's breach. Levitzky v Canning (1867) 33 C 299.

Civil Code §3305 provides:

> The detriment caused by the breach of a covenant against encumbrances in a grant of an estate in real property is deemed to be the amount which has been actually expended by the covenantee in extinguishing either the principal or interest thereof, not exceeding in the former case a proportion of the price paid to the grantor equivalent to the relative value at the time of the grant of the property affected by the breach, as compared with the whole, or, in the latter case, interest on a like amount.

Without alleging that he or she actually paid the encumbrance, the buyer may recover only nominal damages. CC §3305. See Woods v Bennett (1919) 40 CA 34, 180 P 25. See also Wright v Boggess (1914) 24 CA 533, 141 P 1082 (no cause of action arises until grantee pays encumbrance).

Section 3305 applies only to encumbrances that may be satisfied by money payments. The damages recoverable for other encumbrances (e.g., restrictions or leases) are determined under breach of contract rules and are measured by the reduction in market value resulting naturally and proximately from the existence and the continuance of the encumbrance. CC §3300; Fraser v Bentel (1911) 161 C 390, 119 P 509; Evans v Faught (1964) 225 CA2d 546, 37 CR 533. But see Babb v Weemer (1965) 231 CA2d 698, 42 CR 133, indicating in dictum that no damages were recoverable when the grantee knew of the encumbrance, which was taken into account in setting the price.

C. Parties

§12.19 1. Who May Claim

Who may recover for breach of a title covenant depends in part on whether the covenant runs with the land.

Covenants of seisin and good title, of the right to convey, and against encumbrances do not run with the land; only the buyer may bring action for their breach. See Comment, Covenants of Title Running With the Land in California, 49 Cal L Rev 931 (1961). Some judicial attempts have been made to extend the benefits of covenants of seisin and against encumbrances beyond the immediate buyer. See 49 Cal L Rev at 943.

Covenants of warranty, for quiet enjoyment, and for further assurance run with the land. The buyer as well as the buyer's successors may bring an action. CC §§1462-1463. Moreover, CC §1463 states that the buyer's covenant for the payment of taxes or assessments runs with the land, although it is likely that the framers of the statute had in mind only covenants made by lessees. The remote grantee's damages appear to be determined under CC §3304 and are limited to the price paid the original grantor, plus interest and expenses. McCormick v Marcy (1913) 165 C 386, 390, 132 P 449.

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.20 2. Parties Liable

The covenantor is liable to the covenantee on the title covenant whether or not the covenant runs with the land. Barrows v Jackson (1952) 112 CA2d 534, 247 P2d 99, aff'd (1953) 346 US 249, 97 L Ed 1586, 73 S Ct 1031. The covenantor is also liable to anyone to whom the buyer expressly assigns the benefits of the covenant (CC §§954, 1458) and is liable to remote grantees if the covenant runs with the land, even without an express assignment (CC §1460).

Aside from the covenantor, the only persons who are liable on the covenant are those who acquire the covenantor's whole estate in all or part of the property (CC §1465), if the covenant runs with the land (see CC §1460), and the covenantor's heirs and devisees to the extent of the land descended or devised to them (CC §1115).

§12.21 D. Table: Statutes of Limitations

Actions for breach of title covenants are contract actions subject to the 4-year statute of limitations of CCP §337. The time when the statute begins to run depends on the nature of the covenant. The times for the respective covenants discussed in §§12.6-12.10 are summarized here:

Covenant	Time Begins When
Against encumbrances	Covenant is made
Of right to convey	Covenant is made
Of quiet enjoyment	Buyer or successor is evicted or compelled to buy the superior title, whichever occurs first
Of warranty	Buyer or successor is evicted or compelled to buy the superior title, whichever occurs first
For further assurance	Buyer or successor is evicted or covenantor or his or her successor fails to comply with a reasonable demand, whichever occurs first

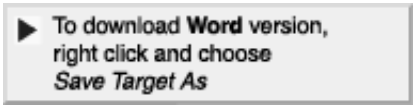
IV. AVOIDING EFFECT OF TITLE COVENANTS

§12.22 A. Quitclaim Deed



A seller wishing to avoid liability under title covenants may deliver a quitclaim deed to the buyer. This deed contains no express or implied warranties about the seller's title. It simply passes whatever interest, legal or equitable, the seller has at the time of conveyance. Graff v Middleton (1872) 43 C 341; Klamath Land & Cattle Co. v Roemer (1970) 12 CA3d 613, 618, 91 CR 112. However, a seller remains obligated to disclose to the buyer all facts materially affecting the value or desirability of the property that are known or accessible only to him or her and that are not known to or within the buyer's diligent attention and observation. Lingsch v Savage (1963) 213 CA2d 729, 735, 29 CR 201. The current residential disclosure form, codified in CC §1102.6, requires disclosure of "encroachments, easements or similar matters" and "CC&R's or other deed restrictions or obligations." See §6.36. Buyers sometimes do not want to accept a quitclaim, even when a title policy gives virtually every assurance needed. A quitclaim deed does not operate to transfer an after-acquired title. Klamath Land & Cattle Co. v Roemer, supra.

The deed obtained on a judicial sale is similar to a quitclaim deed and does not carry the covenants implied under CC §1113. See Mains v City Title Ins. Co. (1949) 34 C2d 580, 212 P2d 873. A probate sale, however, is not a judicial sale; the order is merely a confirmation, not an order for a judicial sale, and the buyer may rely on the implied covenants. Mains v City Title Ins. Co., supra.

Source: Real Property/California Real Property Sales Transactions/12 Covenants of Title/§12.23 B. 'Restrained' Grant Deed

§12.23 B. "Restrained" Grant Deed

A grant deed without express covenants carries with it no covenants other than the two implied in the word "grant." CC §1113; see §12.5. Even recognizing that the implied covenants are of scant protection to the buyer in most situations, the seller may nonetheless want to negate even that much liability. The seller can do so by giving a "restrained" grant deed. The most common way to accomplish this restraint is to set out in the grant deed the matters to which the title is subject, as in the example below.

A* grants to B the following described property subject to the following:

1. The lien of general and special city and county taxes for the fiscal year of July 1, 1998, to June 30, 1999;

2. Covenants, conditions, and restrictions of record;

3. Easement granted to Pacific Bell by deed recorded at _ _[specify]_ _;

4. Deed of trust to XYZ Title Company as Trustee, in which Charles White is beneficiary, recorded at _ _[specify]_ _; and

5. Unrecorded lease to National Stores, dated January 1, 1993, for a term from January 1, 1998, to December 31, 2010, containing an option for renewal for a term ending December 31, 2020, to be exercised before January 1, 2010, and an option to purchase the leased premises to be exercised before January 1, 2009.

A somewhat less common method incorporates a general disclaimer of covenants into the grant deed:

A* grants to B, but without warranty or covenant of any kind, express or implied, the following described property: _ _[List]_ _.

If the restraints consist of enumerating matters to which the title is subject, only items need be listed that would otherwise constitute breach under the implied covenants of CC §1113. These implied covenants are discussed in §§12.5-12.7.

EXAMPLE: Covenants, conditions, and restrictions of record need not be listed unless the seller personally, or anyone claiming under the seller, subjected the property or suffered it to be subjected to those restrictions. This omission is permitted because §1113 implies only a limited or special covenant.

Delinquent taxes or taxes for periods before close of escrow are usually prorated and charged to the seller, as discussed in §15.44 and the Comment to form 15.57-1.

Making a deed subject to a lease that contains an option to purchase may cloud the title for at least the period prescribed in the instrument, or the periods prescribed in CC §§715-719. The option may be shown as an exception in all preliminary reports and policies unless the title company is satisfied that §§715-719 protect it or unless the tenant releases the option or is barred by judgment from exercising it. See §8.16. For a recital to be used in removing a cloud created by inadvertence, see §10.43.

§13.1 I. SCOPE OF CHAPTER; ATTORNEY'S ROLE

This chapter provides an overview of the common types of property insurance available to the buyer or the seller in a real property transfer. It is beyond the scope of this chapter to discuss these coverages in detail.

Knowledge of available types of insurance may be essential in successfully closing a real property transfer. For example, if the deal is jeopardized by the buyer's fear that the property might be contaminated, property transfer insurance or cleanup cost cap insurance (see §13.49) may make the risk acceptable and rescue the deal. In any event, even if a party's lawyer is sufficiently knowledgeable about insurance to recognize those issues in which it may play a role, the lawyer should delegate primary responsibility for selection of coverages to an experienced insurance agent or broker.

For a more detailed discussion of property insurance, see Insurance Claims for Property Loss: Determining Coverage and Presenting Claims (Cal CEB Action Guide Winter 2004).

§13.2 II. LOSS BEFORE TRANSFER OF TITLE: IS THE BUYER OR THE SELLER "ON THE RISK"?

Once the parties enter into a contract to sell real property, the seller holds legal title as security for the unpaid purchase price, and the buyer has an equitable right to compel specific performance upon paying the purchase price. CC §1662. However, if property is damaged or destroyed before the sale is complete, issues can arise regarding whether the buyer must go through with the purchase, and who must bear the loss. The answers depend on whether the purchase agreement contains any express provisions addressing these issues.

§13.3 A. Liability Absent an Agreement: Uniform Vendor and Purchaser Risk Act (CC §1662)

The Uniform Vendor and Purchaser Risk Act (CC §1662), adopted in California in 1947, was meant to eliminate doubt about when the risk of loss shifted from the seller to the buyer. See Comment, Uniform Vendor and Purchaser Risk Act: Effect on California Law, 36 Cal L Rev 476, 477 (1948). See also Fineberg, Risk of Loss in Executory Contracts for the Sale of Real Property, 14 Colum J L & Soc Probs 453, 464 (1979). California is one of 13 states that have adopted the Act. If the purchase and sale agreement does not address the risk of loss during the executory period, the Act controls. In general, when all or a material part of the subject property is destroyed without fault of either party after execution of the sales contract but before title has passed to the buyer, the seller's performance is excused and the buyer is entitled to the return of any consideration paid. The buyer is not entitled to specific performance with a reduction of the purchase price. Dixon v Salvation Army (1983) 142 CA3d 463, 191 CR 111.

Civil Code §1662 provides:

> Any contract hereafter made in this State for the purchase and sale of real property shall be interpreted as including an agreement that the parties shall have the following rights and duties, unless the contract expressly provides otherwise:
> (a) If, when neither the legal title nor the possession of the subject matter of the contract has been transferred, all or a material part thereof is destroyed without fault of the purchaser or is taken by eminent domain, the vendor cannot enforce the contract, and the purchaser is entitled to recover any portion of the price that he has paid;
> (b) If, when either the legal title or the possession of the subject matter of the contract has been transferred, all or any part thereof is destroyed without fault of the vendor or is taken by eminent domain, the purchaser is not thereby relieved from a duty to pay the price, nor is he entitled to recover any portion thereof that he has paid.
> This section shall be so interpreted and construed as to effectuate its general purpose to make uniform the law of those states which enact it.

The Act specifies when the buyer can recover what has been paid (§1662(a)) and when the seller can enforce the purchase and sale agreement against the buyer (§1662(b)). However, the Act does not specifically address insurance, or use the terms "risk" or "risk of loss." Nevertheless, if the seller cannot enforce the agreement, the seller cannot expect the buyer to pay for a material loss. Under §1662, unless the agreement provides otherwise, the party in possession bears the risk of loss before the transfer of legal title. Long v Keller (1980) 104 CA3d 312, 163 CR 532. Thus, an unexpected problem can arise for the buyer who is in possession as a tenant and then signs a purchase agreement or exercises an option in the lease. On execution of the agreement or exercise of the option, unless the documents provide otherwise, the risk of loss falls on the buyer (the tenant in possession), who frequently does not obtain property insurance until the close of escrow.

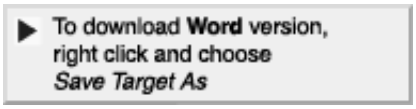
B. Material Loss Under CC §1662(a)

§13.4 1. Law in Absence of Agreement

The risk of loss related to the property may be allocated between the parties in the purchase and sale agreement. See §§4.137-4.139 for a discussion of risk allocation in a purchase and sale agreement. The agreement, however, may be silent about which party bears the risk of loss, in which case CC §1662 (the Uniform Vendor and Purchaser Risk Act; see §13.3) will apply. The parties can also specifically state in the agreement that the Act will apply.

Civil Code §1662(a) states that the seller cannot enforce the purchase agreement if all or a material part of the property is destroyed when neither title nor possession has been transferred. The Act fails, however, to define "material." To avoid the uncertainties and expense of litigation over what constitutes a material loss, a purchase and sale agreement that apportions risk on the basis of the statute should include a definition as set forth in §13.5.

PRACTICE TIP: The amount of damage that will make the loss material is best expressed in a dollar amount rather than as a percentage of loss or destruction. The amount of damage from destruction should be stated as the cost of repair or replacement. Because the damage amount may vary if depreciation is considered, the agreement should specify whether depreciation will be used in making the calculation.



NOTE: In evaluating whether a loss by eminent domain is material, it is impractical to use the cost of repair or replacement. Reduction in market value is a better measure because it takes into account inverse condemnation and other factors affecting the value of the remaining parcel.

§13.5 2. Form: Definition of "Material Loss"

The form text in this section is part of a larger form. For your convenience, downloading any one of the sections included in the form will download the entire form. The inclusive section numbers are §§13.5-13.13.

13.5-1 Definition of "material loss"

For purposes of this agreement and for the application of California Civil Code §1662(a) to the extent that it applies, a destruction is material if the cost of repairing or replacing it, without deduction for depreciation, exceeds the sum of _ _[dollar amount]_ _, provided that if the applicable building codes or other laws or regulations require work exceeding the repair or replacement of the actual damage, the cost shall be considered to include all the work. A taking by eminent domain is material if the diminution in market value exceeds the sum stated above.

Comment: The purposes and effects of this provision are discussed in §13.4. For an example of a clause that is based on the intention of the parties and not on CC §1662, see §4.176 of the form purchase and sale agreement.

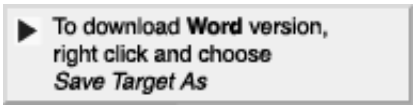
C. Who Bears Risk of Nonmaterial Loss Under CC §1662(a)

§13.6 1. Law in Absence of Agreement

Civil Code §1662(a) applies only to situations in which all or a material part of the property is destroyed or taken by eminent domain (see §4.138). What happens if a nonmaterial loss occurs? Subsection (a) implies that the seller can still enforce the contract. If the seller does so, however, who pays for the damage?

Under CC §1662(a), the seller bears the risk of a material loss. Arguably, therefore, the seller should also bear the risk of a nonmaterial loss as long as he or she is in possession and presumably controls the property. See Fineberg, Risk of Loss in Executory Contracts for the Sale of Real Property, 14 Colum J L & Soc Probs 453, 470 (1979). This approach has been adopted in the New York version of the Uniform Vendor and Purchaser Risk Act, in which, if the loss is nonmaterial, the buyer, although compelled to perform the contract, is entitled to a reduction of the purchase price to the extent of the loss. New York General Obligations Law §5-1311.



PRACTICE TIP: Because interpretation of the Uniform Vendor and Purchaser Risk Act is intended to be uniform, the courts might interpret CC §1662(a) to achieve the same result as provided expressly by the New York law. See 17 Williston on Contracts §50.50 (4th ed 1990). However, it is best to insert in the purchase and sale agreement a clause expressly providing that the seller bears the risk of a nonmaterial loss and that the purchase price is to be reduced to the extent of any loss. See §13.7.

13.7-1 Risk of nonmaterial loss

If, when neither legal title nor possession of the subject matter of this contract has been transferred, a nonmaterial part of the subject matter is destroyed or is taken by eminent domain, neither Seller nor Buyer is thereby deprived of the right to enforce the contract; but, if the nonmaterial part is destroyed without the fault of the Buyer or is taken by eminent domain, the Buyer is entitled to a reduction of the purchase price to the extent of the cost of repairing or replacing the damage from destruction or the diminution in value resulting from eminent domain.

Comment: The need for this provision is explained in §13.6. See the saving clause in §13.13.

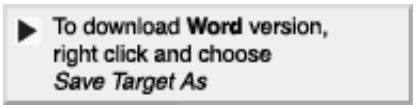
D. Buyer's Assumption of Risk or Agreement to Insure

§13.8 1. Buyer's Possession Before Transfer of Title

The transfer of either title or possession shifts the risk of loss to the buyer. CC §1662(b); see §13.3. The point at which the risk shifts can, however, be altered in the purchase and sale agreement. See §§13.4-13.5. In most transactions, the buyer's insurance coverage, whether obtained by assuming the seller's insurance or by acquiring new insurance, does not take effect until close of escrow. In this situation, a buyer who takes possession before title passes is unprotected against the risk of loss unless the agreement places the risk on the seller until close of escrow. See Long v Keller (1980) 104 CA3d 312, 163 CR 532. A buyer who plans to take possession before title passes should make certain that coverage becomes effective on the date of possession rather than at the close of escrow, or should provide in the purchase and sale agreement that the seller retains the risk until title passes. See form 13.10-1. If the risk shifts to the buyer as a result of a provision in the agreement, the insurance should be made effective when the agreement is executed. For a provision assigning the risk to the buyer, see form 13.9-1.

If the buyer is to take over the seller's insurance, the buyer should require the seller to name the buyer as an additional insured in the seller's existing policy and to furnish a certificate of insurance within a specified time. The certificate should show the extent of the coverage and the fact that the buyer has been named as an additional insured. If the insurer resists adding the buyer or if the coverage is inadequate, the buyer should obtain new coverage. In most situations, the buyer is better advised to obtain a new policy so that coverage can be tailored to the buyer's specific needs.

NOTE: A certificate of insurance is not a contract with the insurer, and, if executed by a broker without authority, it will not bind the insurer. See Practice Tip in §13.23.



Even when the risk shifts to the buyer before the close of escrow, insurance protection is still a concern for the seller. Many policies provide that a change in interest or possession of the insured property will suspend the coverage. See Ins C §300; Mackintosh v Agricultural Fire Ins. Co. (1907) 150 C 440, 89 P 102; Finkbohner v Glens Falls Ins. Co. (1907) 6 CA 379, 92 P 318. To address this concern, agreements sometimes require the buyer to insure if the buyer is to take possession before title passes. See §13.11.

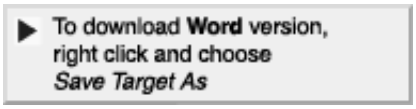
13.9-1 Buyer's assumption of risk

Buyer shall not, through eminent domain or the destruction of all or any part of the property without Seller's fault, be relieved of the obligation to complete the purchase. Buyer shall bear the risk of all losses by destruction without fault of Seller or by eminent domain.



Comment: This provision shifts the risk of loss to the buyer on execution of the agreement and requires the buyer to purchase, despite any loss covered by CC §1662(a). Its utility is discussed in §13.8; for an additional caveat, see §13.12. See also form 4.176-1 on condemnation, in which the buyer has the option of proceeding with the purchase, and form 4.176-2 on damage and destruction.

13.10-1 Seller's assumption of risk

If improvements on the property are destroyed or materially damaged before the close of escrow, Buyer shall be relieved of the obligation to complete the purchase. On demand of Buyer, any deposit made by Buyer shall be returned to Buyer.

Comment: This provision alters the risk of loss under the Uniform Vendor and Purchaser Risk Act (CC §1662) by delaying the shift of risk to the buyer until title passes to the buyer. This provision should be considered if the buyer is a tenant in possession or otherwise may take possession before close of escrow.

§13.11 4. Effect of Buyer's Agreement to Insure

Does a requirement that the buyer maintain insurance constitute an "express" provision under CC §1662 (see §13.8) and therefore shift the risk to the buyer? The California courts have not yet addressed this question.

Cases decided before the enactment of CC §1662 indicate that an agreement to insure is evidence of an intent to assume the risk of loss. See Ware v Security-First Nat'l Bank (1936) 7 C2d 604, 61 P2d 936; Kelly v Smith (1933) 218 C 543, 24 P2d 471. In both cases, the buyer had the right of possession, but the court placed equal emphasis on the existence of the agreement to insure as evidence of an intent to assume the risk of loss. See 13 Witkin, Summary of California Law, Equity §§175-176 (10th ed 2005).

If the courts decide that an insurance clause is an express provision shifting the risk of loss under CC §1662, the following issues should be considered by a buyer who agrees to maintain insurance:

- If the loss exceeds the coverage, the buyer may have to pay the difference between the proceeds received from the insurance and the agreed price of the property. See Comment, Uniform Vendor and Purchaser Risk Act: Effect on California Law, 36 Cal L Rev 476, 478 (1948).
- The cost of insuring some risks (e.g., earthquake and flood) is prohibitive.
- The insurer may resist the buyer's claim on the ground that the buyer lacks an insurable interest. See Ins C §286.
- The agreement should expressly state whether or not the risk of loss is intended to be shifted to the buyer.

On negotiating agreements to insure, see §13.12.

§13.12 5. Negotiating Buyer's Agreement to Insure

In addition to the problems arising from an interpretation of the buyer's agreement to insure discussed in §13.11, a provision requiring the buyer to insure is extremely difficult to draft. The advice of a competent insurance broker or counselor may be helpful, and the requirements of the lender or prospective lender should be ascertained.

Several issues arise in deciding which perils are to be covered: It is seldom possible to anticipate every risk; the premiums for some risks may be considered prohibitive; and the descriptive names given to various policies or risks may be confusing to persons outside the field.

The amount of coverage is another problem. A fixed dollar amount may be appropriate in some situations; in others, it may be better to require coverage "for the full undepreciated value of the improvements" (or a variation of that language). See §13.100.

Because some insurance companies have had their financial ratings downgraded because of large losses and poor investment returns, lawyers should specify that the insurance must be carried by companies with certain ratings, such as those in A.M. Best's Insurance Reports.

Best has two ratings: One shows assets (from Class I, with assets of less than $250,000, to Class XV, with assets of $100 million or more). The other gives evaluations based on comparisons with peers and industry standards; evaluation of a company's balance sheet strength, operating performance, and business profile; and assessment of an insurer's operating plans, philosophy, and management. On the latter scale are the following gradings: A++/A+ (superior financial strength and ability to meet obligations to policyholders), A/A− (excellent), B++/B+ (very good), B/B− (fair), C++/C+ (marginal), and C/C− (weak).

Disposition of the proceeds in the event of loss may also be difficult to negotiate or draft. If title has not yet passed, the seller may be reluctant to see the proceeds go outright to the buyer. The buyer, on the other hand, may be eager to commence restoration before escrow closes. If the parties agree to entrust the funds to a trustee or an escrow holder, the agent's requirements must be ascertained and all contingencies must be anticipated (e.g., disposition of the proceeds if the buyer defaults or exercises a permitted disapproval in the agreement).

13.13-1 Code governs except as expressly agreed

Except as expressly provided in _ _[designate provisions relating to risk of loss or right to enforce after destruction or condemnation]_ _, this agreement shall be governed by California Civil Code §1662 in effect at the date of this agreement.

Comment: At least one court has held that any provision on risk of loss makes the entire Uniform Vendor and Purchaser Risk Act inapplicable because the parties had provided otherwise. World Exhibit Corp. v City Bank Farmers Trust Co. (App Div 1946) 61 NYS2d 889, 893, aff'd (1946) 296 NY 586, 68 NE2d 876 (construing statute similar to CC §1662). To meet this problem, it is desirable to state that the Act will apply to the extent it does not conflict with the contract. For discussion of a clause that replaces the Act and states the parties' intentions, see §§4.137-4.139.

§13.14 F. Effect of Material Loss After Breach by Buyer

Civil Code §1662(a) does not specify the effect of a material loss during a period when the buyer is in default. The decision in Tinker v McLellan (1958) 165 CA2d 291, 331 P2d 464, although not directly based on §1662(a), indicates that a buyer in default may not be able to avoid his or her obligation when the property is destroyed.

§13.15 III. PERSONS WHO CAN INSURE THEIR INTEREST IN PROPERTY

The saying goes that if you pay enough, you can get insurance for anything. Golf tournaments offer a prize for hitting a hole-in-one, then buy insurance in case someone does. Jimmy Durante insured his nose for $50,000. Insurance coverage is available for cancellation of a wedding, for loss of a stallion's virility, or for alien abduction.

However, prospective insureds must risk losing something before they can insure that risk. If the insured has nothing to lose, the insurance contract is considered purely a wager that the risk will not occur. Riley v Mid-Century Ins. Exch. (1981) 118 CA3d 195, 199, 173 CR 257. For example, despite the risk of earthquake or other disaster, a person with no ownership or other pecuniary interest in the Bay Bridge could not purchase a valid insurance policy covering the Bridge. This is the concept of "insurable interest." See §13.16.

© The Regents of the University of California

§13.16 A. Insurable Interest

Although we commonly speak of a property as being insured, in reality property insurance does not insure the property itself, but insures the insured's interest in the property. Davis v Phoenix Ins. Co. (1896) 111 C 409, 414, 43 P 1115; Burns v California Fair Plan (2007) 152 CA4th 646, 651, 61 CR3d 809; Royal Ins. Co. v Sisters of Presentation (9th Cir 1970) 430 F2d 759, 761 (applying California law). To place a contract of insurance on an improvement and recover in the event of loss, one must have an "insurable interest" in the property. Ins C §280.

"Insurable interest" is a term of art that is defined broadly to include "every interest in property, or any relation thereto, or liability in respect thereof, if such in nature that a contemplated peril might directly damnify the insured." Ins C §281; Davis v Phoenix Ins. Co. (1896) 111 C 409, 414, 43 P 1115.

An insurable interest can be an "existing interest," an "inchoate interest founded on an existing interest," or an "expectancy, coupled with an existing interest… out of which the expectancy arises." Ins C §282. Thus, in certain circumstances, a future interest could be insurable. See, e.g., Burns, 152 CA4th at 652 (both life tenant and remainderman have insurable interest in property). However, a mere contingent or expected interest in anything, if not founded on an actual right to the thing or on any valid contract for it, is not insurable. Ins C §283.

NOTE: No cases have interpreted a "mere contingent" or "expected interest" within the meaning of these statutes. However, CC §700 distinguishes between future interests and "possibilities." Under CC §700, "[a] mere possibility, such as the expectancy of an heir apparent, is not to be deemed an interest of any kind." This distinction may be relevant in interpreting Ins C §283.

§13.17 B. Legal Title Is Not Required for an "Insurable Interest"

Legal title to property is not controlling for purposes of having an insurable interest (see §13.16); the existence of an insurable interest hinges on economic interests rather than naked legal title. Royal Ins. Co. v Sisters of Presentation (9th Cir 1970) 430 F2d 759, 762. A direct pecuniary interest in the preservation of the property, and a pecuniary loss as a result of its destruction, is both a sufficient condition (Davis v Phoenix Ins. Co. (1896) 111 C 409, 414, 43 P 1115) and a necessary one: Legal title in itself will not confer an "insurable interest" unless the title holder will suffer a pecuniary loss if the property is destroyed. For example, in Royal Ins. v Sisters of Presentation, supra, a convent of an order of nuns became so dilapidated that the city declared it to be uninhabitable. The nuns exchanged the convent parcel for an adjacent parcel on which their new convent was to be built. Under the exchange agreement, the old convent would be demolished and the land would be used by a high school. Before the old convent was demolished, it burned. The district court held the nuns had an insurable interest because they might have used the old convent if some calamity destroyed the new convent. Applying California law, the Ninth Circuit reversed, concluding that, despite holding title to the convent, the nuns suffered no pecuniary loss as a result of its destruction, and thus had no insurable interest at the time of the loss. Likewise, in Smith v Jim Dandy Markets, Inc. (9th Cir 1949) 172 F2d 616, the legal owner of a building sold all the equipment and supplies related to the building and leased the building itself. The Ninth Circuit, applying California law, held that the holder of the legal title had lost his insurable interest by operation of the contractual arrangements.

§13.18 1. Buyer

The buyer has an equitable right to compel specific performance upon paying the purchase price. CC §1662. Although title has not yet passed, the buyer may be at risk in case of loss, depending on the risk-of-loss provisions of the contract and whether the Uniform Vendor and Purchaser Risk Act (CC §1662) applies. See §13.8. A buyer in possession under a contract who has paid part of the purchase price, and who will be entitled to conveyance of legal title upon completion of the contract, has an insurable interest equal to the amount of payments made. Davis v Phoenix Ins. Co. (1896) 111 C 409, 414, 43 P 1115.

© The Regents of the University of California

§13.19 2. Seller

Under an executory sales contract, the seller holds legal title as security for the unpaid purchase price. CC §1662. However, once property is sold, the seller retains no insurable interest absent a security interest. Warner v Fire Ins. Exch. (1991) 230 CA3d 1029, 281 CR 635; Hoffman v State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. (1993) 16 CA4th 184, 19 CR2d 809.

§13.20 3. Lessee

A binding contract to assume obligations under a lease can create an insurable interest. See California Food Serv. Corp. v Great Am. Ins. Co. (1982) 130 CA3d 892, 897, 182 CR 67. Similarly, liability for property owned by another can create an insurable interest. Shade Foods, Inc. v Innovative Prods. Sales & Mktg., Inc. (2000) 78 CA4th 847, 875, 93 CR2d 364.

© The Regents of the University of California

§13.21 4. Mortgagee

The interest created by a mortgage or deed of trust is an insurable interest distinct from that of the mortgagor or grantor. Alexander v Security-First Nat'l Bank (1936) 7 C2d 718, 62 P2d 735; Martin v World Sav. & Loan Ass'n (2001) 92 CA4th 803, 806, 112 CR2d 225; Mosee v Firemen's Fund Ins. Co. (1927) 87 CA 473, 475, 262 P 436; Davis v Phoenix Ins. Co. (1896) 111 C 409, 43 P 1115.

Both a life tenant and a remainderman have an insurable interest in property in which a life interest and a future interest have been created. Burns v California Fair Plan (2007) 152 CA4th 646, 61 CR3d 809.

§13.22 C. Insurable Interest Must Exist Both When the Policy Is Purchased and When the Loss Occurs

The insurable interest must exist when the policy takes effect and when the loss occurs. Between those two points, however, the interest need not exist. Ins C §286; Banerian v O'Malley (1974) 42 CA3d 604, 614, 116 CR 919.

In Hoffman v State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. (1993) 16 CA4th 184, 19 CR2d 809, the insureds' home was located within a landslide area. After they sold their home, they made a claim under their homeowner's insurance. Although the insureds alleged that no damage to their home manifested itself before the sale, they claimed they received a lower price because damage to homes on the other side of the landslide area depressed the value of their home. They further alleged that damage to their home manifested itself over a year after they sold it. The appellate court held that the insureds had no insurable interest in the property at the time of the manifestation of the loss, and thus could not state a claim against the insurer.

© The Regents of the University of California

§13.23 D. Separate Interests Must Be Insured Separately

Several persons or entities may have insurable interests in property at the same time, such as a seller and buyer (Long v Keller (1980) 104 CA3d 312, 316, 163 CR 532); joint owners (Russell v Williams (1962) 58 C2d 487, 490, 24 CR 859); a mortgagor and mortgagee (Foothill Village Homeowners Ass'n v Bishop (1999) 68 CA4th 1364, 1373, 81 CR2d 195); a condominium owner and a homeowners association, who both have interests in the condominium's common areas (Chateau Chamberay Homeowners Ass'n v Associated Int'l Ins. Co. (2001) 90 CA4th 335, 340, 108 CR2d 776); or a life tenant and a remainderman (Burns v California Fair Plan (2007) 152 CA4th 646, 652, 61 CR3d 809). However, even if multiple parties have insurable interests, no party has an interest in insurance obtained by the others. Long, 104 CA3d at 316.

Regardless of policy limits, an insured can recover only up to the amount of his or her insurable interest in the property. Ins C §284; Whitney Estate Co. v Northern Assur. Co. (1909) 155 C 521, 101 P 911; Burns v California Fair Plan, supra. Thus, in cases of multiple ownership, all parties should be named.

The persons or entities listed on the declarations page of the policy are the named insureds. Other persons or entities with insurable interests in the property may be listed as additional insureds. Typically, lenders require that the borrower obtain insurance and that they be named as additional insureds.

PRACTICE TIP: Lenders often require the owner to provide them with a certificate of insurance indicating that the lender has been added as an additional insured on the policy purchased by the owner. However, while a certificate of insurance is evidence of insurance, it is not a contract between the insurer and the certificate holder. Pardee Constr. Co. v Insurance Co. of the W. (2000) 77 CA4th 1340, 1347 n2, 92 CR2d 443. The certificate is issued by a broker or agent, not by the insurer. This poses the risk that the broker or agent will fail to confirm that the policy is amended to name the additional insured, or that the insurer will refuse to do so. An insurer will be obligated, however, to afford coverage for the certificate holder even if the policy has not been amended, if the certificate was issued by an authorized agent or an agent with ostensible authority. American Cas. Co. v Krieger (9th Cir 1999) 181 F3d 1113, 1121. Rather than risk a dispute regarding the agent's authority, the more prudent approach is for the additional insured to obtain a copy of the actual policy endorsement adding it as an additional insured.

§13.24 E. Transfer of Seller's Insurance to the Buyer

In addition to protection against loss pending the transfer of title (see §§13.2-13.13), the buyer needs protection against loss from destruction of the property after title passes. The buyer may obtain protection by purchasing new insurance or by taking an assignment of the seller's insurance. Generally, it is better for the buyer to obtain new insurance.

If the buyer expects to take over the seller's insurance, an express transfer of the policy is necessary because insurance policies on real property do not pass with the title on the sale of the property insured. Alexander v Security-First Nat'l Bank (1936) 7 C2d 718, 62 P2d 735. Under Ins C §305, the "mere transfer of subject matter insured does not transfer the insurance, but suspends it until the same person becomes the owner of both the insurance and the subject matter insured."

This rule follows from the principle that the property contract does not insure the property itself but rather the named insured's interest in that property. See §13.16. However, a transfer of interest between jointly insured joint owners, such as partners, joint tenants, or tenants in common, does not void the insurance, even if the policy states that the insurance shall cease on alienation of the property. Ins C §304.

A change of ownership without a corresponding change in the named insureds on the contract suspends coverage until the change in the named insureds is made. Ins C §§300, 305. When the change is not made and a loss occurs, however, courts of equity may provide relief. See §13.25.

Even when the insurance policy does not expressly limit its assignability, the courts have held that the insurer's consent must be obtained for an express assignment of the policy. Bergson v Builders Ins. Co. (1869) 38 C 541, 543.

The courts will not invalidate a hazard insurance policy, despite its assignment without the insurer's consent before the loss, as long as the insurer suffered no prejudice from lack of notice and would have consented if notice had been given, and if invalidation of the policy would result in forfeiture. University of Judaism v Transamerica Ins. Co. (1976) 61 CA3d 937, 132 CR 907.

Under the California Standard Form Fire Insurance Policy as set forth in Ins C §2071, assignment of the policy is invalid without the insurance company's written consent. Although fire insurance policies on California property need not be written on the standard form policy if the coverage against fire loss is substantially equal or more favorable to the insured than that of the standard form policy (Ins C §2070), most policies contain most of the provisions of the standard form. Despite the requirement of written consent to assignment in the standard form, however, the insurer may waive consent (Limsky v Scottish Union & Nat'l Ins. Co. (1924) 68 CA 688, 229 P 1017; Lewis v Reed (1920) 48 CA 742, 192 P 335) or estop itself to deny that consent was given (Tucker v American Ins. Co. (1932) 123 CA 316, 11 P2d 55). Express consent is, of course, better assurance to the buyer.

PRACTICE TIP: Ordinarily, the details of obtaining consent from the insurance company are handled through the real estate broker or the insurance broker. Insurance companies use a standard form providing for the assignment.

The requirement of the insurer's consent to an assignment does not apply to assignments after a loss. Any right of the insured to insurance proceeds resulting from loss may be assigned without the consent of the insurer. Ins C §520; Greco v Oregon Mut. Fire Ins. Co. (1961) 191 CA2d 674, 12 CR 802; Vierneisel v Rhode Island Ins. Co. (1946) 77 CA2d 229, 175 P2d 63.

§13.25 F. Reformation

If an insurance policy does not reflect the correct name of the owner of the property as a result of fraud or mistake, the policy may be reformed to reflect the correct name. Gillis v Sun Ins. Office, Ltd. (1965) 238 CA2d 408, 47 CR 868. However, a policy will not be reformed based on the insured's unilateral mistake if the insurer did not know about or suspect that the insured had made a mistake. Bonaparte v Allstate Ins. Co. (9th Cir 1994) 49 F3d 486, 488; CC §3399.

IV. INSURING LENDERS AND MORTGAGORS

§13.26 A. Protecting Secured Lenders

The interest of the secured lender should be protected by insurance on the property that secures the debt. It was once common for lenders to require insureds to purchase insurance in an amount equal to the loan balance, even when it substantially exceeded the replacement cost of the structure. However, CC §2955.5(a) now prohibits lenders from imposing such a requirement. Lending institutions do require that the insurance proceeds be payable to the lender to the extent of its interest. See Martin v World Sav. & Loan Ass'n (2001) 92 CA4th 803, 112 CR2d 225. This protection is especially important in a California purchase money deed of trust given to the seller (or, in the case of an owner-occupied, one-to-four-unit dwelling, given to a third party lender), because the value of the property represents the lender's sole security and source of repayment in a default. CCP §580b; Krone v Goff (1975) 53 CA3d 191, 127 CR 390; 4 Witkin, Summary of California Law, Security Transactions in Real Property §§182-184, 187 (10th ed 2005); California Mortgages, Deeds of Trust, and Foreclosure Litigation, chap 5 (4th ed Cal CEB 2009).

Although a lender may obtain its own policy covering its separate insurable interest in the property, a single policy is usually written covering the owner and containing a clause in favor of the lender. In this way, the interests of both parties are protected under one policy at a lower cost, because no additional charge is made for the lender's coverage. Lenders customarily require the borrower to insure the property as a condition of the loan, and failure to maintain the insurance in force places the borrower in default under the deed of trust. Most deeds of trust provide that insurance proceeds either be used to repair the property or be applied to the unpaid loan balance, at the lender's option. See JEM Enters. v Washington Mut. Bank (2002) 99 CA4th 638, 121 CR2d 458.

In Schoolcraft v Ross (1978) 81 CA3d 75, 146 CR 57, the court held that the lender must exercise its option in good faith, and, to the extent the security has not been impaired, the proceeds must be used to repair the property. Civil Code §2924.7(b) and Fin C §1227.3 allow a lender to enforce its rights under a deed of trust to control the insurance proceeds following a casualty, but they are expressly subject to the borrower's right ultimately to obtain disbursement of the proceeds for restoration to the extent required by Schoolcraft v Ross, supra.

§13.27 B. Loss Payable Clauses

A mortgagee or other lienholder has no right to the insurance benefits unless named as an additional insured or as a "loss payee." Foothill Village Homeowners Ass'n v Bishop (1999) 68 CA4th 1364, 1373, 81 CR2d 195. There are two general types of loss payable clauses: the simple loss payable clause (see §13.28) and the standard loss payable clause (see §13.29).

© The Regents of the University of California

§13.28 1. Simple Loss Payable Clause

A "simple" or "open" loss payable clause directs the insurer to pay the proceeds to the lienholder "as its interests may appear" before the insured receives payment under the policy. Under the simple loss payable clause, the lienholder is simply an appointee to receive the insurance proceeds to the extent of its interest, and its right of recovery is no greater than the right of the insured. Under the simple loss payable clause (Home Sav. v Continental Ins. Co. (2001) 87 CA4th 835, 841, 104 CR2d 790):

- No separate contract exists between the insurer and lienholder;
- The lienholder pays no consideration; and
- The lienholder's claim is subject to any defenses that the insurer could raise against the insured, i.e., the insured's breach of conditions may bar the lienholder's claim.

© The Regents of the University of California

§13.29 2. Standard Loss Payable Clause

A typical "standard" or "union" or "New York" loss payable clause, such as that in the ISO Homeowners 3 Special Form (HO 00 03 10 90), provides:

> If a mortgagee is named in the policy, any loss payable… will be paid to the mortgagee and you, as interests appear….
> If we deny your claim, that denial will not apply to a valid claim of the mortgagee, if the mortgagee: (a) Notifies us of any change in ownership, occupancy or substantial change in risk of which the mortgagee is aware; (b) Pays any premium due under this policy on demand if you have neglected to pay the premium; (c) Submits a signed, sworn statement of loss within 60 days after receiving notice from us of your failure to do so.

Although the language of standard loss payable clauses may differ, the hallmarks of such a clause are provisions requiring notice to the mortgagee before cancellation and payment of premiums by the mortgagee on demand. Home Sav. v Continental Ins. Co. (2001) 87 CA4th 835, 848, 104 CR2d 790. In case of doubt, a loss payable clause calling for payment of proceeds is construed to be a standard loss payable clause. Under a standard loss payable clause (Home Sav. v Continental Ins. Co., supra):

- A separate contract is deemed to exist between the insurer and the lienholder;
- The lienholder's promise to pay premiums if the insured fails to do so is the consideration for the separate contract; and
- The lienholder's claim is not subject to any defenses the insurer might raise against the insured.

Thus, an insured's arson or other intentional destruction of the insured property will not defeat the claim of an innocent lienholder. 87 CA4th at 849.

§13.30 C. Effect of Insured's Fraud

When one insured commits arson or fraud, an issue may arise regarding coverage for a coinsured's claim. In the past, insurers have argued that if property is held jointly, and one insured was guilty of arson or other fraud, all other coinsureds will be subject to the same defenses. The answer to this question appears to depend on the language of the policy.

The California Standard Form Fire Insurance Policy found in Ins C §2071 precludes coverage if the insured has willfully concealed or misrepresented any material fact or circumstance concerning the insurance or the subject of it, or the interest of the insured in it, or in case of any fraud or false swearing by the insured relating to it. In Watts v Farmers Ins. Exch. (2002) 98 CA4th 1246, 120 CR2d 694, the court held that, because the language adopted by the legislature does not specifically state that the act of any insured will be attributed to all insureds, the intent is that coverage be severable and that an innocent coinsured be able to recover for his or her proportionate share of the damaged property. 98 CA4th at 1260. Thus, when a policy precludes recovery as a result of fraud on the part of "the insured," the recovery is precluded only for the insured who committed the fraud, and the innocent coinsured is allowed to recover. 98 CA4th at 1261. However, when a policy precludes recovery as a result of fraud on the part of "any insured," the effect of one insured's fraudulent acts precludes recovery for all insureds, and an innocent coinsured is thus precluded from recovery. 98 CA4th at 1258.

D. Credit Bids and Full Credit Bids

§13.31 1. Full Credit Bid Rule

In a nonjudicial foreclosure or trustee sale, the lender may make a "full credit bid," which is an amount equal to the unpaid principal and interest of the debt being foreclosed on, plus the costs, fees, and other expenses of foreclosure. If the lender buys the property through a full credit bid, the lien on the property is extinguished and the lender may not collect any damages for waste from the debtor or the debtor's successors even if the market value of the property is actually less than the amount of the bid. Cornelison v Kornbluth (1975) 15 C3d 590, 606, 125 CR 557. A full credit bid, in essence, fixes the value of the property between the lender and the borrower. Such a bid also prevents a foreclosing lender from collecting property insurance proceeds for damage to the property that occurred before purchase. The lender's only interest in the property is the repayment of the debt. The lender's interest having been satisfied, any other payment would result in a double recovery. Track Mortgage Group, Inc. v Crusader Ins. Co. (2002) 98 CA4th 857, 864, 120 CR2d 228; Alliance Mortgage Co. v Rothwell (1995) 10 C4th 1226, 1238, 44 CR2d 352. On the credit bid rule in general, see §13.32; California Mortgages, Deeds of Trust, and Foreclosure Litigation, chap 2 (4th ed Cal CEB 2009).

© The Regents of the University of California

§13.32 2. Credit Bid Rule

In the case of an insurer's bad faith failure to pay a foreclosing lender's claim for prepurchase damage to insured property, if the lender purchases the property for less than a full credit bid, the lender's contract damages are limited to the difference between the amount secured by the deed of trust and the lender's credit bid at the foreclosure sale. This is referred to as the "credit bid rule." Track Mortgage Group, Inc. v Crusader Ins. Co. (2002) 98 CA4th 857, 866, 120 CR2d 228. The Track Mortgage court further held that the lender's tort damages for bad faith are also limited by the credit bid rule absent a showing that the insurer's conduct caused the lender to make the credit bid. In other words, unless the insurer's conduct caused the lender's bid to be higher than the actual value of the property, the lender's damages will be reduced by its credit bid. On the full credit bid rule in general, see California Mortgages, Deeds of Trust, and Foreclosure Litigation, chap 2 (4th ed Cal CEB 2009).

V. COMMON TYPES OF PROPERTY INSURANCE

§13.33 A. Noncommercial Property

There are too many different types of policies to discuss them all in this chapter. The Insurance Services Office (ISO) issues standard forms of policies that are used by many insurers. For information about the ISO, see the ISO website listed in the Directory. This chapter refers to ISO forms for typical language and form designations and numbers. The letters at the beginning of the ISO designation refer to the respective policy type, such as "CP" for commercial property, "BP" for business property, "FP" for farm property, and so on. The last two sets of digits indicate the month and year the form was first released for use, i.e., "10 01" refers to October 2001. This is a convenient way to determine whether a policy contains the most recent policy forms. A typical policy will contain one or more basic forms, plus additional forms for declarations, conditions, optional coverages, and exclusions.

Often insurers draft their own forms, using parts of the ISO policy language and revising other parts. Insurers' policy forms use different designations and numbers.

PRACTICE TIP: Practitioners should not assume that all forms are the same, or even similar. In each transaction, the insurance policy should be reviewed carefully to determine which risks are covered and which are not. Although this lack of uniformity makes it difficult to draft contract provisions specifically, because not all insurers will use the same policy form designation and number, the difference in policies means some policies may afford broader coverage. Moreover, caution should be used in referring to specific policy forms in real estate contracts, because that may limit the pool of insurers that can provide the coverage. In addition, reference to specific policy forms may create problems if a form is changed or a specific edition is no longer available.

§13.34 1. Fire

Insurance Code §2071 adopted the California Standard Form Fire Insurance Policy. The only losses covered by this policy are fire, lightning, and losses caused by removal of property from the premises when endangered by fire or lightning. Coverage is limited to the "actual cash value of the property at the time of loss," not exceeding the cost to repair or replace the property with material of like kind and quality, and without any allowance for increased cost of repair or reconstruction arising from any ordinance or law. No coverage is afforded for business interruption, extra expense, or rental value.

§13.35 2. Homeowners

As in the building and personal property coverage forms (see §13.38), there are three principal variations of the homeowner's coverage forms offered by the ISO: Contents Broad Form (HO 00 04 10 90); Broad Form (HO 00 02 10 90); and Special Form (HO 00 03 10 90). In each form, the property coverages are divided into parts:

- Coverage A—Dwelling;
- Coverage B—Other Structures;
- Coverage C—Personal Property; and
- Coverage D—Loss of Use.

Coverage may also be available for:

- Debris removal;
- Reasonable repairs;
- Trees, shrubs, and other plants;
- Fire Department service charge;
- Property removed;
- Credit card, forgery, and counterfeit money;
- Loss assessment;
- Collapse;
- Glass or safety glazing material;
- Landlord's furnishings;
- Ordinance or law; and
- Grave markers.

The Contents Broad Form (often called the HO-4) affords coverage for contents for the same perils as covered in the Broad Form (see below), but does not afford coverage for the dwelling or other structures.

The Broad Form (often called the HO-2) covers fire or lightning, windstorm or hail, theft, explosion, smoke, damage from vehicles and aircraft, glass breakage, removal of property endangered by peril, vandalism and malicious mischief, and riot or civil commotion. The HO-2 also covers building collapse; freezing of or accidental discharge of water or steam from within plumbing, heating, or air-conditioning systems and domestic appliances; falling objects; weight of ice, snow, or sleet; and rupture or bursting of steam or hot water heating systems.

The Special Form (often called the HO-3) provides comprehensive coverage for "all risks" except certain named perils, such as earthquake and flood, and provides coverage for damage to personal property caused by any of the perils covered by the HO-2. For an additional premium, a special personal property coverage endorsement can usually be added to extend the HO-3 to provide "all-risks" coverage on unscheduled personal property.

§13.36 3. Dwellings

A dwelling policy provides more limited coverage than a homeowner's policy. A dwelling policy provides property coverage only, while a homeowner's policy offers a combination of property and liability coverages. Like homeowner policies, dwelling policies are divided into parts:

- Coverage A—Dwelling;
- Coverage B—Other Structures;
- Coverage C—Personal Property;
- Coverage D—Fair Rental Value; and
- Coverage E—Additional Living Expense.

Coverage may also be available for:

- Debris removal;
- Improvements, additions, and alterations;
- World-Wide coverage;
- Reasonable repairs;
- Property removed;

As with homeowners' policies (see §13.35), insureds may choose a form offering "Broad" coverage (DP 00 02 12 02, often called the DP2 policy), or a form offering "Special" coverage (DP 00 03 12 02, often called the DP3 policy). Dwelling policies may be used to insure homes that do not qualify for homeowners' insurance. For example, dwelling policies are commonly used to insure seasonal homes that are unoccupied for portions of the year. To qualify for dwelling insurance, a building does not have to be occupied by the owner, and it may even be under construction. Some types of stationary mobilehomes qualify, as well as homes with up to five boarders and four-unit apartment complexes. (Although some mobilehomes may qualify for the broader coverage of a homeowners' policy.)

§13.37 4. Condominium Owners

Because condominiums present unique issues regarding common walls or common areas, specialized policies have been developed for them, such as the ISO Unit Owners Form (HO 00 06 05 01). This policy covers alterations, appliances, fixtures, and improvements that are contained within the "residence premises," and personal property.

Covenants, conditions, and restrictions (CC&Rs) may divide responsibility for maintaining insurance between the homeowners association and the individual unit owners. This can complicate the analysis of the coverage available for a loss, and may require the court to examine both the policy and the CC&Rs.

For example, in Palacin v Allstate Ins. Co. (2004) 119 CA4th 855, 14 CR3d 731, the CC&Rs required the homeowners association to obtain a master "blanket" property insurance policy for the development, including the external and internal structure of the condominium units, naming each unit owner as an insured. The CC&Rs stated that no owner could separately insure his or her unit or any part of it against loss by fire or other casualty, with two exceptions. First, owners could insure their personal property against loss. Second, any improvements made by unit owners within their unit could be separately insured by the owner, but the insurance had to be limited to the type and nature of coverage commonly known as tenant improvements. 119 CA4th at 863. These provisions were intended to avoid double coverage. 119 CA4th at 864. The unit owner purchased a "Condominium Owners" policy that provided coverage for the following (119 CA4th at 859):

> items of real property pertaining directly to your residence premises which are your insurance responsibility as expressed or implied under the governing rules of the condominium. This includes fixtures, construction materials and supplies, installations or additions comprising a part of the residence premises, only when situated within that portion of the premises used exclusively by you and made or acquired at your expense.

The unit owners made a claim for water damage to the interior of their unit caused by a water leak from a neighboring unit. The insurer denied coverage, contending that the homeowners association was responsible for obtaining insurance for such a loss, and that the unit owner's policy did not cover the loss. The court noted that it had to engage in a double-layered analysis, examining both the CC&Rs and the policy that incorporated the CC&Rs. 119 CA4th at 864. The court held that the provision in the CC&Rs permitting the unit owner to obtain separate insurance constituted "implied responsibility" to obtain insurance, if the unit owner elected to do so. 119 CA4th at 865. The court also held that paint and carpet pad (and carpet) could constitute "tenant improvements." 119 CA4th at 867.

B. Commercial Property

§13.38 1. Building and Personal Property

The ISO Building and Personal Property Coverage Form (CP 00 10 04 02) is a commonly used form. See §13.100. This form does not identify the covered causes of loss; rather the insured must decide which losses will be covered by electing to purchase one of the following:

- Basic Form (CP 10 10 04 02), which covers fire, lightning, explosion, windstorm or hail, smoke, aircraft or vehicles, riot or civil commotion, vandalism, sprinkler leakage, sinkhole collapse, and volcanic action;
- Broad Form (CP 10 20 04 02), which covers the causes of loss in the Basic Form, plus falling objects; weight of snow, ice or sleet; and water damage;
- Special Form (CP 10 30 04 02), which covers all risks of direct physical loss that are not excluded or limited by the policy.

§13.39 2. Businessowners Special Property

The ISO Businessowners Special Property Coverage Form is BP 00 02 12 99. Under this form, all risks of direct physical loss are covered, unless excluded or limited by the policy.

§13.40 3. Boiler and Machinery

As the name implies, boiler and machinery coverage was originally developed for the risk of a steam boiler explosion when many businesses generated power for machinery and equipment by using steam boilers. As currently used, this coverage may more accurately be thought of as equipment breakdown coverage. A typical form is the ISO Boiler and Machinery Coverage Form (BM 00 25 06 95). Coverage is afforded for costs of repairing or replacing the equipment, loss of income or extra expense incurred during repairs, and damage to other people's property in the care, custody, and control of the insured. In addition, refrigeration interruption coverage may be included.

© The Regents of the University of California

§13.41 4. Theft, Disappearance, and Dishonesty

Theft, disappearance, and dishonesty coverage applies to theft, disappearance, or destruction of "money" and "securities" that are typically excluded in other coverages. Coverage may be afforded for loss while money or securities are in the custody of an armored car company. Losses due to employee dishonesty are not covered. The current edition of the ISO form is CR 00 04 10 90.

§13.42 5. Robbery and Safe Burglary

The current edition of the ISO Robbery and Safe Burglary Coverage Form is CR 00 05 10 90. This coverage typically excludes loss of money or securities. Safe burglary coverage typically requires that the safe be locked and there be visible marks of forced entry of the safe. Losses due to employee dishonesty are not covered.

© The Regents of the University of California

§13.43 6. Premises Burglary

The current edition of the ISO Premises Burglary Coverage Form (CR 00 06 10 90) excludes loss of money or securities. The burglary coverage typically requires evidence of forcible entry or exit. The robbery coverage is typically limited to robbery of a watchperson, i.e., someone who has no duties other than having care and custody of the property inside the premises. Losses due to employee dishonesty are not covered.

§13.44 C. Builders' Risk

Builders' risk policies indemnify for loss of or damage to a building under construction. They are normally written for a specified dollar amount on the building and apply only during the course of construction. The coverage customarily includes fire, extended coverage, and vandalism and malicious mischief. Builders' risk coverage can be extended to a "special" form as well. The builders' risk policy also may include coverage for items in transit to the construction site (up to a certain percentage of value) and items stored at the site. For further discussion of builders' risk insurance, see California Construction Contracts, Defects, and Litigation, chap 10 (Cal CEB 2008).

§13.45 D. Pollution

From 1973 to 1986, most Comprehensive General Liability policies (now referred to as Commercial General Liability (CGL) policies) excluded losses caused by pollution unless the release, dispersal, or discharge was "sudden and accidental." In 1986, virtually all CGL policies were amended to add an "absolute pollution exclusion" to eliminate coverage for pollution losses no matter how they were caused. See discussion of the "qualified pollution exclusion" and the "absolute pollution exclusion" in McKinnon v Truck Ins. Exch. (2003) 31 C4th 635, 644, 3 CR3d 228.

As a result, a new market emerged for liability insurance for pollution-related losses. There are now many different types of policies, for both first party and third party risks. However, there are no standardized forms for these types of policies, which makes discussion of specific coverages and exclusions difficult. The common types of provisions in these kinds of policies are discussed in §§13.46-13.51. For further discussion of hazardous waste, see chap 7.

NOTE: In McKinnon, the supreme court's interpretation of the term "pollutant" applied to an exclusion, which required that the term be interpreted narrowly. The terms "pollutant" or "pollution conditions" in the policies discussed in §§13.46-13.51 appear in the insuring language, which requires a broad interpretation to afford the greatest possible protection to the insured. McKinnon, 31 C4th at 648. It remains to be seen how broadly courts will interpret the terms "pollutant" or "pollution conditions" in these types of policies, and whether they will be applied to any liabilities other than "conventional environmental pollution." For a further discussion of McKinnon, see §13.86.

§13.46 1. Pollution Legal Liability

Generally, Pollution Legal Liability (PLL) policies provide coverage for on-site cleanup of the insured premises triggered by first party discovery, as well as third party claims for bodily injury, property damage, and cleanup costs (both on-site and off-site). Both coverages apply to "pollution conditions," which may be defined as the discharge, dispersal, release, or escape of any solid, liquid, gaseous, or thermal irritant or contaminant, including, but not limited to, smoke, vapors, soot, fumes, acids, alkalis, toxic chemicals, medical waste, and waste materials into or upon land, or any structure on land, the atmosphere, or any watercourse or body of water, including groundwater, provided such conditions are not naturally present in the environment in the amounts or concentrations discovered.

Even after selling a property, the former owner may still face liability for cleanup costs. See §§7.11-7.12. PLL policies provide coverage for unknown pollution at covered locations specified in the policy and may cover off-site pollution resulting from conditions on the insured location. Costs of current cleanup efforts and costs related to known contamination are not covered. PLL policies usually cover liability for bodily injury, property damage, and cleanup costs. They may also include business interruption coverage.

© The Regents of the University of California

§13.47 2. Elements of Liability Defined

Because there are no standardized pollution policies, there may be a disparity in how different carriers define similar terms, and as a result, the scope of coverage afforded may differ. However, the coverages afforded by a Pollution Legal Liability policy generally include the following:

Cleanup costs. This generally refers to reasonable and necessary expenses for the investigation, removal, remediation, monitoring, or disposal of soil, surface water, groundwater, or other contamination. Such costs must be either required by environmental laws or actually incurred by a governmental entity. Carriers may require that no such expenses be incurred by the insured without the insurer's written consent, which may not be unreasonably withheld or delayed.

Restoration costs. These may be included as part of cleanup costs. Restoration costs refer to costs incurred to repair, replace, or restore real or personal property damaged during cleanup operations. Such costs may be limited to no more than the present value of the property before cleanup operations.

Natural resource damage. This may include physical injury to or destruction of land, fish, wildlife, biota, air, water, groundwater, drinking water supplies, and other similar resources belonging to, managed, or controlled by a governmental entity or Indian tribe. Natural resource damage may also include loss of the value of such resources.

Property damage and bodily injury. These may be defined similarly to the same terms used in commercial general liability policies (see §13.45). Property damage may be defined as physical injury to or destruction of tangible property of others, and may include the loss of use and diminution in value of such property. In addition, property damage may include loss of use of, but not diminution in value of, tangible property of parties other than the insured that has not been physically injured or destroyed. Bodily injury may be defined as physical injury, sickness, disease, mental anguish or emotional distress, or death resulting from any of these.

Typically, defense costs will be included in the definition of "loss," so that defense costs will be applied against any deductible and will also reduce any applicable policy limit.

© The Regents of the University of California

§13.48 3. Exclusions From Liability

Pollution legal liability coverage is usually written on a claims-made basis. This means the coverage applies to loss arising before the inception of the policy, as long as the claim is made during the policy period. As a result, the insurance application will require the prospective insured to verify that there are no known pollution conditions at the premises. The policy will also undoubtedly contain exclusions for the following pollution conditions:

- Those caused by the insured's intentional conduct;
- Those caused by the insured's willful or deliberate noncompliance with any statute, regulation, ordinance, administrative complaint, notice of violation, notice letter, executive order, or instruction of any governmental agency or body; and
- Those arising from pollution conditions existing before the inception date and known by a responsible insured and not disclosed in the application.

§13.49 4. Cleanup Cost Cap

Cleanup cost cap (CCC) coverage is a first party coverage designed to protect against the risk entailed in beginning or continuing an environmental remediation project at a specific location. It covers cost overruns when the remediation project exceeds the anticipated costs of the remediation plan. The coverage may include both known pollutants and unknown pollutants discovered during the cleanup operation. The details of a remedial plan and the anticipated costs of the remediation must be set forth in an endorsement defining the remedial plan.

EXAMPLE: If the remedial action plan indicates the site can be cleaned up for $1 million, and the policy has a $100,000 deductible with a $5 million limit, the policy would apply to cost overruns between $1.1 million (the estimated cost plus the $100,000 deductible) and the $5 million policy limit.

These policies commonly exclude costs of legal defense, negotiations with governmental agencies, regulatory fines and penalties, radioactive contamination, asbestos contamination, and contractual liability. See Certain Underwriters at Lloyd's of London v Superior Court (2001) 24 C4th 945, 103 CR2d 672 (in standard commercial general liability policy, insurer had no duty to indemnify insured for environmental cleanup costs ordered by administrative agency, because such costs are not damages); see also County of San Diego v Ace Prop. & Cas. Ins. Co. (2005) 37 C4th 406, 33 CR3d 583 (in nonstandard third party liability insurance policy, expenses incurred by county (1) incident to agency cleanup order for environmental contamination and (2) in settling related third party property damage claims arising from contamination were not covered by policy). However, the insuring language of the policy in Powerine Oil Co., Inc. v Superior Court (2005) 37 C4th 377, 382, 33 CR3d 562, extended the insurer's indemnification obligation to administratively imposed environmental response costs.

Cleanup costs are generally defined as reasonable and necessary costs and expenses incurred solely for cleanup. Cleanup costs generally do not include legal expenses or costs; nor do they include costs or expenses incurred in preparing the remedial plan, but may include costs or expenses incurred in preparing a supplementary remedial plan to address previously unknown pollutants discovered during the remediation. The policy usually excludes any cleanup costs arising from or connected with the following:

- Bodily injury or property damage or third party liability to any party for any reason;
- The insured's intentional, willful, or deliberate noncompliance with any statute, regulation, ordinance, administrative complaint, notice of violation, notice letter, executive order, instruction of any governmental agency or body, or any criminal acts of any insured; or
- Pollutants that existed before the inception date and known by any manager or supervisor responsible for environmental affairs or any officer, director, or partner of the named insured and that were not disclosed in the application.

The coverage generally applies in excess of a self-insured retention or deductible, which is generally the amount of the expected cost of cleanup as specified in the remedial plan, plus an additional buffer amount, often called a coinsurance participation, which is a percentage of the anticipated cleanup costs.

§13.50 5. Property Transfer

Property transfer policies are specifically tailored for real estate transactions. These policies usually provide coverage for pollution legal liability (PLL) (see §13.46) and cleanup cost cap (see §13.49). Like PLL policies, property transfer policies provide coverage for preexisting, unknown contamination. Some may also provide coverage for known contamination below reportable levels, or even levels above regulatory limits but permitted by a governmental agency.

§13.51 6. Secured Lender or Secured Creditor

Secured creditor coverage provides first party coverage and pays the outstanding loan balance when a default occurs and an environmental condition exists at the location. Some policies pay either the outstanding loan balance or cleanup costs, whichever is less. In addition, these policies may also provide third party coverage and protect the lender from claims for bodily injury, property damage, and cleanup costs. Further, the policy may afford coverage for the lender for cleanup costs incurred by the lender after foreclosure.

The default and pollution conditions coverage may state:

> The Company will indemnify the Insured for Loss, if during the Policy Period and prior to Foreclosure, there is a Default by a Borrower on a Commercial Real Estate Loan secured by an Insured Property, Leasehold or Fixed Assets, and there are Pollution Conditions on, under or emanating from the same Insured Property prior to or while the Commercial Real Estate Loan is in default.

The coverage for third party claims may state:

> The Company agrees to pay Loss on behalf of the Insured that the Insured becomes legally obligated to pay as a result of Claims first made against the Insured and reported to the Company, in writing, during the Policy Period, for Bodily Injury, Property Damage or Cleanup Costs resulting from Pollution Conditions on, under or emanating from an Insured Property.

The coverage for cleanup of pollution conditions may state:

> The Company agrees to pay Loss on behalf of an Insured, after Foreclosure, if Cleanup Costs are sustained because there are Pollution Conditions on, under or emanating from the Insured Property during the Policy Period provided that where required, such Pollution Conditions have been reported by the Insured to the appropriate governmental agency in compliance with applicable Environmental Laws, in effect on the date of discovery.

Loss may be defined differently for each type of coverage. For default and pollution conditions, "loss" may be defined as the outstanding balance on the date of default, including principal and accrued interest. For the third party claims coverage, "loss" may be defined as monetary awards or settlements of compensatory damages for bodily injury, property damage, or cleanup costs, and costs and expenses incurred in the defense, investigation, and adjustment of such claims. With respect to cleanup cost coverage, "loss" may be defined as "cleanup costs."

All three coverages will likely exclude coverage for any loss:

- Arising from pollution conditions resulting from or attributable to the insured's intentional, willful, or deliberate noncompliance with any statute, regulation, ordinance, administrative complaint, notice of violation, notice letter, executive order, or instruction of any governmental agency or body;
- Arising from pollution conditions resulting from an intentionally illegal act or omission of the insured, if the insured knew that the pollution conditions would result; or
- Arising from pollution conditions existing before the effective date of coverage for an insured property, and not otherwise specifically excluded by endorsement to the policy, if as of such date the insured knew that such pollution conditions could give rise to a loss under the policy and failed to disclose those pollution conditions to the insurer, or the insurer did not otherwise learn of the pollution conditions from engineering reports, environmental spreadsheets, the secured creditor impaired-property questionnaire, or from other technical reports the insurer obtains independently.

§13.52 E. Earthquake Coverage

In 1994, the Northridge earthquake, registering 6.7 on the Richter scale, caused $12.5 billion in damage to residential property. As a result, many insurers severely restricted or refused to write new homeowners' policies because of the state mandate that they offer earthquake insurance. In response, in 1996, the legislature established the California Earthquake Authority (CEA). See Ins C §§10089.5-10089.54. The CEA is a privately financed, publicly managed entity that issues policies through participating insurers. The CEA is now the world's largest residential earthquake insurer. The CEA website (listed in the Directory) has a program to calculate the estimated annual earthquake premium. Californians can also buy earthquake policies outside the CEA.

The CEA sells earthquake policies to homeowners, mobilehome owners, condominium owners, and renters. The Base Limits Policy offers structure coverage equal to the structure coverage limit of the homeowners' or mobilehome owners' policy. The structure policy limit for the condominium owners' policy is $25,000 to repair or replace structural components of the condominium for which the owner is legally responsible. There is no structure coverage under the Renters policy. Each Base Limit policy offers a $5000 limit for contents coverage and a $1500 limit for the insured's additional living expenses if the premises are uninhabitable after an earthquake. The homeowners', mobilehome owners', and condominium owners' Base Limits Policies provide up to $10,000 for additional costs of repair incurred solely to comply with local residential building codes in effect on the date of the damaging earthquake. The homeowners', mobilehome owners', and condominium owners' Base Limits Policies are subject to a deductible of 15 percent of the structure coverage limit. Only losses to the structure count toward meeting this deductible. The condominium owners' policy also offers a limit of $25,000 to $50,000, depending on the market value of the unit, for loss assessments imposed by a homeowners association.

Coverage for earthquake damage to commercial property may be difficult to obtain. Such coverage may be afforded through a stand-alone policy, or by endorsements adding earthquake as a covered cause of loss.

§13.53 F. Flood Insurance

In 1968, because of the rising cost of taxpayer-funded disaster relief for flood victims, Congress created the National Flood Insurance Program (NFIP), enacted by the National Flood Insurance Act (42 USC §§4001-4129). Policies are issued by private insurers participating in the NFIP. The NFIP offers three standard flood insurance policy (SFIP) forms (44 CFR pt 61, App A):

- Dwelling Policy Form (44 CFR pt 61, App A(1)), used to insure the structure and contents of single-family structures, one-to-four-family structures, townhouse or rowhouse structures, condominium units, manufactured or mobilehomes, residential cooperatives, and timeshares. See Pecarovich v Allstate Ins. Co. (9th Cir 2002) 309 F3d 652 (holding for homeowner by narrowly construing NFIP policy provision that excluded flood coverage when flood was confined to homeowner's premises).
- General Property Policy Form (44 CFR pt 61, App A(2)), used to insure other residential and nonresidential structures and their contents.
- Residential Condominium Building Association Policy Form (44 CFR pt 61, App A(3)), used for residential condominium building associations to cover the entire building under one policy, as well as improvements and personal property owned in common. It does not provide coverage for personal property owned exclusively by a unit owner.

All flood claim benefits paid under the NFIP are U.S. Treasury funds. Van Holt v Liberty Mut. Ins. Co. (3rd Cir 1998) 163 F3d 161, 165. Although "Write Your Own" carriers issue the insurance policies and process claims, they do so as fiscal agents of the United States. 42 USC §4071(a). The terms of the standard flood insurance program policies are set by the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA), and carriers are not permitted to deviate from those terms. Van Holt, 163 F3d 161, 165. A suit against a carrier that issued a SFIP is essentially a suit against FEMA; Flick v Liberty Mut. Fire Ins. Co. (9th Cir 2000) 205 F3d 386, 393 n10. All claims under policies issued through the NFIP, including state law tort claims, must be brought in federal court. McCormick v Travelers Ins. Co. (2001) 86 CA4th 404, 103 CR2d 258. The statute that governs judicial review of SFIP claims does not grant the right to a jury trial. 42 USC §4072. In addition, extra-contractual claims asserted in SFIP disputes are preempted by federal law. Pecarovich v Allstate Ins. Co. (CD Cal 2003) 272 F Supp 2d 981, 987 (claims for bad faith, punitive damages, and interest preempted in SFIP dispute); Scherz v S.C. Ins. Co. (CD Cal 2000) 112 F Supp 2d 1000, 1007 (same); Bianchi v State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. (ND Cal 2000) 120 F Supp 2d 837-840 (dismissing bad faith claim and striking requests for emotional distress, punitive damages, and attorney fees).

§13.54 G. Ancillary Coverages for Commercial Risks

In evaluating the overall worth of a business for purposes of sale or purchase, the building and fixtures may be only a fraction of the business's value. If a fire or other disaster causes the business to close, even for a short time, the loss of income, cost to replace computer equipment, cost to recover business records, possible loss of accounts receivables, and the expense of getting the business going again may be higher than the cost to restore the building.

§13.55 1. Business Interruption Coverage

Coverage for business income and extra expenses (sometimes called "business interruption" coverage) applies to a necessary interruption of business that directly results from a covered loss. Pacific Coast Eng'g Co. v St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. (1970) 9 CA3d 270, 88 CR 122. Recovery may include lost profits, loss of earnings, and continuing expenses during the period of repair or restoration of property damaged or destroyed by reason of a covered peril (Buxbaum v Aetna Life & Cas. Co. (2002) 103 CA4th 434, 443, 126 CR2d 682) and is intended to return to the insured's business the amount of profit it would have earned had there been no interruption of the business. 103 CA4th at 443. However, items such as interest on loans, expenses resulting from delay in receiving final installment payments, late delivery damages, and overtime expenses in expediting completion and delivery of goods have been held to be indirect, consequential, or remote losses that do not constitute "business income." Pacific Coast Eng'g Co., 9 CA3d at 273.

Moreover, business income insurance provides coverage only for losses resulting directly from interruption of the business, i.e., operation of the plant, and not merely from interruption of work being done on the construction of a particular project at the time a covered loss occurred. Pacific Coast Eng'g Co., 9 CA3d at 275.

Business income looks to the future and is not dependent on past profits. Coverage may be afforded on the basis of profit expectancies, although this will present proof problems. General Ins. Co. v Pathfinder Petroleum Co. (9th Cir 1944) 145 F2d 368, 369.

The ISO Business Income and Extra Expense Coverage Form (CP 00 30 04 02) provides coverage for "business income" and "extra expense." It may also provide optional coverage for "rental value" and "interruption of computer operations." The insuring language states:

> We will pay for the actual loss of Business Income you sustain due to the necessary "suspension" of your "operations" during the "period of restoration." The "suspension" must be caused by direct physical loss of or damage to property at premises which are described in the Declarations and for which a Business Income Limit of Insurance is shown in the Declarations. The loss or damage must be caused by or result from a Covered Cause of Loss. With respect to loss of or damage to personal property in the open or personal property in a vehicle, the described premises include the area within 100 feet of the site at which the described premises are located.

§13.56 a. Covered Causes of Loss

In the same way as the property form (see §13.70), the ISO Business Income (and Extra Expense) Coverage Form (CP 00 30 04 02) requires the insured to select the risks that will be "covered causes of loss" by choosing a Covered Cause of Loss Form—Basic or Special. See discussion at §13.38.

© The Regents of the University of California

§13.57 b. Optional Coverage for Interruption of Computer Operations

The ISO Business Income (and Extra Expense) Coverage Form (CP 00 30 04 02) contains what is in effect an exclusion called an "additional limitation" that pertains to interruption of computer operations (Coverage A.4, "Additional Limitations—Interruption of Computer Operations," p 2). This limitation states that the coverage for business income does not apply to a suspension of operations caused by destruction or corruption of electronic data, or any loss or damage to electronic data, unless the insured purchases extended coverage for that risk.

This same form allows the insured to purchase additional coverage for this risk (Coverage A.5.d, "Interruption of Computer Operations"). If purchased, the additional coverage would apply to losses caused by a virus, harmful code, or similar instruction introduced into or enacted on a computer system (including electronic data) or a network to which it is connected, that is designed to damage or destroy any part of the system or disrupt its normal operation. The coverage does not apply to interruptions related to manipulation of a computer system (including electronic data) by any employee, including a temporary or leased employee, or by an entity retained by or for the insured to inspect, design, install, maintain, repair, or replace that system. The limit of coverage for interruption of computer operations is $2500 for all loss sustained or incurred in one policy year.

© The Regents of the University of California

§13.58 c. Described Premises

The insuring language of ISO Business Income (and Extra Expense) Coverage Form (CP 00 30 04 02) states that the suspension of operations must be caused by direct physical loss of or damage to property located at premises that are described in the declarations page of the policy and for which a business income limit of insurance is shown in the declarations. This precludes an insured with multiple business locations or even multiple businesses from attempting to insure them all without paying a separate premium for each. It also means that suspension of operations caused by a loss at another location will not be covered. For example, if a fire at a factory that is not a described premises causes the suspension of operations at the described premises because, e.g., parts are not available, the loss will not be covered.

NOTE: Contingent business interruption coverage and contingent extra expense coverage is available from some insurers. It provides coverage for lost profits and extra expenses resulting from interruption of business at the premises of a customer or supplier. This coverage may be necessary if the insured depends on a single or a few suppliers or manufacturers for materials or merchandise, or one or a few customers to purchase the bulk of the insured's products, or a neighboring "anchor tenant" to attract customers.

© The Regents of the University of California

§13.59 d. Total Suspension Versus Partial Interruption

In the ISO Business Income (and Extra Expense) Coverage Form (CP 00 30 04 02) the term "suspension of operations" is defined as follows:

> a. The slowdown or cessation of your business activities; or > b. That a part or all of the described premises is rendered untenantable, if coverage for Business Income including "Rental Value" or "Rental Value" applies.

Some cases have held that when the term "suspension" was not defined in the policy, a "suspension" required the complete cessation of business, and that a partial shutdown or slowdown would not constitute a "suspension" of operations. Buxbaum v Aetna Life & Cas. Co. (2002) 103 CA4th 434, 451, 126 CR2d 682; see also Pacific Coast Eng'g Co. v St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. (1970) 9 CA3d 270, 275, 88 CR 122. The definition in this ISO form defining "suspension" to include a "slowdown" should preclude such a result.

§13.60 e. Period of Restoration

Generally, the period of restoration begins to run on the date of occurrence of a covered loss and ends on the date the property should be rebuilt, repaired, or replaced with reasonable speed and similar quality. Older policy forms stated that the insured must act with "due diligence and dispatch" to rebuild, repair, or replace. Notably, this may run beyond the date of policy expiration. See the ISO Business Income (and Extra Expense) Coverage Form (CP 00 30 04 02). If disputed, when the "period of restoration" ends may be a question of fact. See, e.g., R&R Sails, Inc. v Insurance Co. of the State of Pennsylvania (SD Cal 2009) 610 F Supp 2d 1222, 1230; See also Shaw Mortgage Corp. v Peerless Ins. Co. (SD Cal 2009) 615 F Supp 2d 1172 (period of restoration ended at earlier of (1) expiration of extended period provided by special endorsement after date of direct physical loss, or (2) when either property should have been repaired or rebuilt with reasonable speed and similar quality or when business was resumed at new permanent location, whichever came first).

NOTE: The insured in Shaw Mortgage could have purchased optional extended business income coverage, which would have provided business income coverage until the earlier of either the date that the store resumed its pre-loss level of business or 30 days after the store was repaired, rebuilt, or replaced. Shaw Mortgage, 615 F Supp 2d at 1175; ISO Business Income (and Extra Expense) Coverage Form CP 00 30 04 02.

© The Regents of the University of California

§13.61 f. Burden of Proof

If there are concurrent causes of loss, the insured has the burden of proof to establish the total amount of claimed loss resulting from covered causes. See General Ins. Co. v Pathfinder Petroleum Co. (9th Cir 1944) 145 F2d 368 (applying California law); Russ, 15A Couch on Insurance §57.32 (3d 1995). An insured claiming a business income loss for manufacturing typically must prove loss of sales, not just loss of production. The rationale for that requirement is that if no one wants to buy the product, reimbursing the insured for loss of production would put the insured in a better position than if no suspension had occurred, i.e., the insured would have had to shut down the manufacturing plant because of lack of sales anyway.

© The Regents of the University of California

§13.62 g. Duty to Mitigate

The "period of restoration" ends when the insured could have rebuilt, repaired, or replaced the property with reasonable speed and similar quality. See §13.60. Some policies state that the insured must act with "due diligence and dispatch," which is a recognition of the general duty of an insured to mitigate damages when an insured loss occurs.

© The Regents of the University of California

§13.63 h. Extra Expense

Extra expense coverage is designed to reimburse the insured for reasonable amounts paid, over and above normal operating expenses, to return to normal operations as quickly as possible to help decrease the business income losses. The current edition of the ISO form (CP 00 30 04 02) combines business income coverage with extra expense coverage.

© The Regents of the University of California

§13.64 i. Rental Value

Rental value coverage protects against loss of rents that would have been earned from tenant occupancy of the premises, and fair rental value of any portion of the premises that would have been occupied by the insured. There is no separate ISO coverage form for rental value; this coverage is afforded as optional coverage under the Business Income (and Extra Expense) Coverage Form (CP 00 30 04 02). As with the business income coverage, (1) the loss of rental value must be caused by direct physical loss or damage at the described premises caused by or resulting from a covered cause of loss; and (2) rental value coverage applies for a limited time.

© The Regents of the University of California

2. Other Ancillary Coverages

§13.65 a. Computers and Electronic Equipment

Most property policies have specific limits for computers or other electronic equipment that will be insufficient for most businesses. The ISO has developed an Electronic Data Processing Coverage Form (AAIS IM 72 02 05 01), which permits the insured to select higher limits for various types of equipment, and certain types of data records and software programs. Unfortunately, no coverage is afforded for losses caused by computer viruses or hackers.

© The Regents of the University of California

§13.66 b. Computer Fraud

The proliferation of computers has increased the ways in which crime can occur. Computer fraud does not fall within the definition of "robbery" or "safe burglary" in a robbery and safe burglary policy, or within the definition of "burglary" in a premises burglary policy. The ISO has developed a specific form for computer fraud, CR 00 07 10 90. The coverage applies to "computer fraud," defined as > theft of property following and directly related to the use of any computer to fraudulently cause a transfer of that property from inside the "premises" or "banking premises" to a person (other than a "messenger") outside those "premises" or to a place outside those "premises."

© The Regents of the University of California

§13.67 c. Valuable Papers

Valuable papers include proprietary information, books of account, deeds, manuscripts, abstracts, drawings, and card index systems; similar information may also be stored electronically. Most business property policies either exclude coverage for "valuable papers," or provide coverage at significantly reduced limits. For example, the ISO Building and Personal Property Coverage Form (CP 00 10 04 02) excludes coverage for "valuable papers" by listing them as "Property Not Covered." This form allows the insured to purchase extended coverage for valuable papers other than electronic data. The limit, shown on the declarations page of the policy, is $2500 unless the insured pays an additional premium for a higher limit.

Some companies offer separate coverages for valuable papers and records. The ISO Valuable Papers and Records Coverage Form (CM 00 67 05 01) defines "valuable papers and records" as follows:

> "Valuable papers and records" means inscribed, printed or written documents, manuscripts or records, including abstracts, books, deeds, drawings, films, maps or mortgages.
> But "Valuable papers and records" does not mean "money" or "securities," converted data, programs or instructions used in your data processing operations, including the materials on which the data is recorded.

Under this definition, it appears that data stored electronically would not be covered. The "Valuable Papers and Records" coverage is written on an "all-risk" basis. That is, all risks of direct physical loss not expressly excluded (such as fire, flood, etc.) are covered. The coverage contains several exclusions, however, including losses caused by or resulting from any dishonest or criminal act committed by the insured, or any partners, employees, directors, trustees, or authorized representatives of the insured, or anyone else to whom the property is entrusted for any purpose. Thus, if any records are lost, stolen, or vandalized by an employee, there will be no coverage for that loss.

© The Regents of the University of California

§13.68 d. Accounts Receivable

After a catastrophic loss, an insured may also lose records of accounts receivables. The inability to collect accounts receivable may create an even greater strain while the insured attempts to recover from the loss. The ISO Accounts Receivable Coverage Form (CM 00 66 09 04) affords coverage for (1) amounts due from customers that the insured is unable to collect; (2) interest charges on any loan required to offset amounts the insured is unable to collect pending payment of those amounts; (3) collection expenses in excess of normal collection expenses that are made necessary by the loss or damage; and (4) other reasonable expenses incurred to re-establish records of accounts receivable.

VI. HOW DO PROPERTY COVERAGES WORK?

§13.69 A. "Covered Property" Versus "Property Not Covered"

Most property policies contain sections listing the property that is covered (often with a heading such as "Covered Property") and a separate section listing property that is not covered (often with the heading such as "Property Not Covered"). See, e.g., ISO Building and Personal Property Coverage Form (CP 00 10 04 02) or ISO Homeowners 3 Special Form (HO 00 03 10 90).

Typically, covered property lists improvements at the identified location, including an identified structure, foundations, outbuildings, drives, walks, landscaping, and other improvements. Fixtures, personal property, business interruption, and loss of use may also be insured.

WARNING: Not all covered property is insured equally. Some policies limit coverage for outbuildings, drives, walks, detached garages, terraces, swimming pools, and similar structures. Serious underinsurance problems can result if attention is not paid to the monetary limits on the various types of property insured under the contract. This is also true for personal property and for business interruption or loss of use, which almost always occurs in a serious property loss.

In the past, a series of decisions held either that the term "dwelling" included the land on which the house sat, or that when earth movement is an insured peril, the insurer is liable for the cost of stabilizing the soil under the insured dwelling, up to the policy limit. See Strickland v Federal Ins. Co. (1988) 200 CA3d 792, 799, 246 CR 345 (earth movement was insured peril under homeowner's insurance policy; insurer liable for cost of stabilizing soil underlying insured's dwelling, up to policy limits); Snapp v State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. (1962) 206 CA2d 827, 833, 24 CR 44 (owners covered by and up to policy limit of $25,000, despite fact that landslide continued after expiration of policy); Hughes v Potomac Ins. Co. (1962) 199 CA2d 239, 248, 18 CR 650 (landslide caused loss of support essential to stability of insured's creekside home; measure of damages was market value loss to insured's home); Pfeiffer v General Ins. Corp. (ND Cal 1960) 185 F Supp 605, 608 (term "dwelling" included land underlying it). Under the "Property Not Covered" section of the Building and Personal Property Coverage Form (CP 00 10 04 02), however, "land (including land on which the property is located)" is not "covered property." Moreover, earth movement is now excluded as a covered peril under Exclusion B in all three ISO Causes of Loss forms (Basic Form (CP 10 10 04 02); Broad Form (CP 10 20 04 02); and Special Form (CP 10 30 04 02)). In Fire Ins. Exch. v Superior Court (2004) 116 CA4th 446, 454, 10 CR3d 617, the appellate court distinguished Strickland and Snapp and held that, because the policy specifically stated that land on which the dwelling is located was not covered, the court would give effect to the "clear and explicit" policy provision; the court rejected the argument that the term "dwelling" included the land underlying the structure.

§13.70 B. Covered Causes of Loss

Commercial property and homeowners' policies are usually one of two types: (1) named risk (also known as "named perils" or "specified perils"), or (2) all risks (or "all perils"). Under a named-risk policy, such as the ISO Causes of Loss—Basic Form (CP 10 10 04 02), the coverage applies only to losses caused by "covered causes of loss" that are specifically listed in the policy.

For further discussion, see California Construction Contracts, Defects, and Litigation, chap 10 (Cal CEB 2008).

© The Regents of the University of California

§13.71 1. All Risks or All Perils

Under an all-risk policy, such as the ISO Causes of Loss—Special Form (CP 10 30 04 02), all risks of "direct physical loss" are covered unless they are specifically excluded. In other words, the scope of coverage is defined by the exclusions. Julian v Hartford Underwriters Ins. Co. (2005) 35 C4th 747, 751 n2, 27 CR3d 648; Garvey v State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. (1989) 48 C3d 395, 257 CR 292; Freedman v State Farm Ins. Co. (2009) 173 CA4th 957, 959 n1, 93 CR3d 296; Fire Ins. Exch. v Superior Court (2004) 116 CA4th 446, 464 n13, 10 CR3d 617. Under an all-risk policy, the insurer bears the burden of proving that the loss was caused by an excluded peril.

© The Regents of the University of California

§13.72 2. Named Risks or Named Perils

Under a named-risk or named-peril or named-peril policy, the initial focus is on whether the cause of loss is a named risk or named peril; only then do the exclusions become relevant. See Garvey v State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. (1989) 48 C3d 395, 406, 257 CR 292; see also Freedman v State Farm Ins. Co. (2009) 173 CA4th 957, 959 n1, 93 CR3d 296. The insured bears the burden of proving that the loss was caused by one (or more) of the specifically enumerated risks. See Stubble v United Servs. Auto. Ass'n (1973) 35 CA3d 498, 504, 110 CR 828.

NOTE: Some policies may afford "all risk" coverage for some types of property and "named risk" coverage for others. See, e.g., Freedman, 173 CA4th 957 at 959 (policy afforded "all risk" coverage for the insured dwelling, but "named risk" coverage for personal property).

© The Regents of the University of California

§13.73 C. Direct Physical Loss

Generally, insured property must suffer "direct physical loss" before an insurer will respond. Normally, a property policy insures against "fortuitous, active, physical forces such as lightning, wind, and explosion, which bring about the loss." Ins C §§22, 250; Garvey v State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. (1989) 48 C3d 395, 406, 257 CR 292; Fire Ins. Exch. v Superior Court (2004) 116 CA4th 446, 464 n13, 10 CR3d 617.

State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. v Superior Court (1989) 215 CA3d 1435, 1445, 264 CR 269, illustrates the limitations of the property contract. In State Farm, a condominium homeowners association alleged that building code violations, faulty workmanship, and fraud by the builder had sharply lowered the condominiums' value. In addition to repair costs, it sought coverage for "diminution in value" under its policy. The court of appeal held that diminution in value was not covered, because it did not involve direct physical loss to property: "The policy here states it insures against 'direct physical loss' except when due to certain enumerated causes; diminution of market value is not specifically excluded because it is not a 'cause' of loss; it is the measure of the loss caused by someone else." 215 CA3d at 1445.

In Hughes v Potomac Ins. Co. (1962) 199 CA2d 239, 18 CR 650, a covered peril caused a hillside to erode up to and beneath the footings of a building. However, there was no discernible direct physical loss to the structure. The court held that, if a rational person would not see fit to occupy the structure, that perception was enough to trigger a carrier's duty to respond. 199 CA2d at 248.

In Western Fire Ins. Co. v First Presbyterian Church (Colo 1968) 437 P2d 52, the court found "direct physical loss" to property where gasoline had entered the soil underneath a church. Gasoline vapors infiltrated the foundation, halls, and rooms, making the church unusable. The church had sought coverage for the expense of removing the gasoline vapors, but its carrier denied the claim. The Colorado Supreme Court found direct physical loss to property and coverage. 437 P2d at 55. Although the court recited the rule that the insured could not establish direct physical loss to property merely by alleging loss of use, the facts satisfied the court that there was physical injury or damage to the property. 437 P2d at 55.

In Ward Gen. Ins. Servs., Inc. v Employers Fire Ins. Co. (2003) 114 CA4th 548, 7 CR3d 844, however, a computer operator inadvertently hit the "delete" key, deleting the insured's database of client information. Although the insured incurred extra expenses in restoring its data and loss of business income because of the disruption, there was no mechanical or electrical failure, and no loss of or destruction of the storage medium on which the data had been maintained. The insured sought coverage for its extra expense and loss of income under the following forms: Business and Personal Property Coverage; Valuable Papers and Records Coverage; Electronic Equipment and Software Coverage; and Business Income Coverage (And Extra Expense). Each form required a "direct physical loss of or damage to" property. The appellate court held the adjectives "direct physical" modified both "loss of" and "damage to." 114 CA4th at 554. Further, the court held that the information itself, as information, was intangible. The court held that the loss of the database, with its consequent economic loss but with no loss of or damage to tangible property, was not a "direct physical loss of or damage to" covered property, and thus the loss was not covered under any of the forms. 114 CA4th at 556.

§13.74 D. Exclusions

In most circumstances, an insurer is free to select the character of the risk it will assume, and it is liable only for a loss within the terms of the policy. Fresno Economy Import Used Cars, Inc. v United States Fid. & Guar. Co. (1977) 76 CA3d 272, 280, 142 CR 681. An insurer has the right to limit the coverage of a policy issued by it, and when it has done so, the plain language of the limitation must be respected. Julian v Hartford Underwriters Ins. Co. (2005) 35 C4th 747, 759, 27 CR3d 648; Continental Cas. Co. v Phoenix Constr. Co. (1956) 46 C2d 423, 296 P2d 801; Fresno Economy Import Used Cars, Inc. v United States Fid. & Guar. Co., supra. Words of an exclusion must be part of the working vocabulary of the average person, and must be phrased in a logical manner. Blasiar, Inc. v Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. (1999) 76 CA4th 748, 754, 90 CR2d 374. The insurer bears the burden to draft the exclusion in clear language comprehensible to a layperson. Cal-Farm Ins. Co. v TAC Exterminators, Inc. (1985) 172 CA3d 564, 578, 218 CR 407. Exclusionary clauses are subjected to heightened scrutiny by courts, and if the exclusion is not conspicuous, plain, and clear, it will be invalidated. Thompson v Mercury Cas. Co. (2000) 84 CA4th 90, 94, 100 CR2d 596.

Under settled rules for insurance policy interpretation, the court must accept a tenable construction of an exclusion most favorable to the insured. Freedman v Queen Ins. Co. (1961) 56 C2d 454, 15 CR 69.

See §13.84 for further discussion of exclusions.

§13.75 1. Exceptions

Some exclusions contain exceptions that restore some of the coverage taken away by the exclusion. Thus, because an exception is somewhat analogous to insuring language, exceptions are construed broadly. Old Republic Ins. Co. v Superior Court (1998) 66 CA4th 128, 145, 77 CR2d 642, overruled on other grounds in Vandenberg v Superior Court (1999) 21 C4th 815, 841 n13, 88 CR2d 366. However, an exception to an exclusion cannot create coverage for a loss not otherwise covered under the insuring language. Old Republic Ins. Co. v Superior Court, supra.

§13.76 2. Who Has the Burden of Proof?

The insurer has the burden of proof to establish the exclusion that bars coverage for the loss. Garvey v State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. (1989) 48 C3d 395, 405, 257 CR 292; Roberts v Assurance Co. of Am. (2008) 163 CA4th 1398, 1406, 78 CR3d 361 (insurer seeking summary judgment on ground claim is excluded has burden to prove claim falls within exclusion and once proven, burden shifts to insured to show existence of triable issue of material fact). Most cases place the burden of proof on the insured to establish that an exception to the exclusion applies. Travelers Cas. & Sur. Co. v Superior Court (1998) 63 CA4th 1440, 1454, 75 CR2d 54.

§13.77 E. When Does a Loss Occur?

Property policies, like most insurance policies, are written to cover a specific period of time called the policy term or policy period. Whether the policy will cover damage that occurs before the inception of the policy period depends on whether the damage is episodic (see §13.78) or continuous (see §13.79).

© The Regents of the University of California

§13.78 1. Episodic Loss

Episodic loss or damage refers to damage that occurs at a specific point in time. For example, a fire, a tornado, or a fallen tree branch can be pinpointed to a specific date. Such damage must occur during the policy period for it to be covered under a property policy. See Armstrong World Indus., Inc. v Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co. (1996) 45 CA4th 1, 95, 52 CR2d 690 (releases of asbestos fibers occur sporadically, because of "episodic disturbances such as accidental striking, vandalism, water damage, and the like").

© The Regents of the University of California

§13.79 2. Continuous or Progressive Loss

Some types of losses or damage cannot be pinpointed to a specific date. For example, damage caused by a leaking swimming pool may occur gradually over a long period of time before it is discovered. Likewise, subsidence damage and cracking due to faulty construction may occur over several years before the insured becomes concerned. California courts have developed the manifestation rule (see §13.80) to determine which of several successive property insurance policies apply to continuous or progressive damage.

© The Regents of the University of California

§13.80 a. Manifestation Rule

Under the manifestation rule, the insurer on the risk at the time of appreciable damage that is or should be known to the insured is liable for the entire progressive loss (see §13.79) discovered or undiscovered during the policy period. Insurers that issue policies after "initial manifestation" of a loss bear no responsibility for claims related to that loss. Larkspur Isle Condominium Owners' Ass'n, Inc. v Farmers Ins. Group (1994) 31 CA4th 106, 110, 37 CR2d 3; Sapiro v Encompass Ins. (ND Cal 2004) 221 FRD 513, 518. Preexisting defects that do not manifest themselves before commencement of the policy term, but manifest during the policy term, are covered under a first party property policy unless otherwise excluded by the terms of the policy. Prudential-LMI Commercial Ins. v Superior Court (1990) 51 C3d 674, 699, 274 CR 387. "Manifestation" refers to when the damage first becomes apparent, i.e., when a reasonable insured would be on notice of a potential insured loss. 51 C3d at 688; Home Ins. Co. v Landmark Ins. Co. (1988) 205 CA3d 1388, 1392, 253 CR 277. See §13.94. The presence of cracking, separations, or other problems such as stucco cracks or sticking doors may not establish the presence of "appreciable damage" such that a reasonable insured would be on notice of a potentially insured loss as a matter of law. The insured's testimony that he did not understand the significance of the signs, that he thought them to be ordinary wear and tear, will support a finding of the absence of the requisite "appreciable knowledge." Tomaselli v Transamerica Ins. Co. (1994) 25 CA4th 1269, 1279, 31 CR2d 433. However, if the insured retains an expert who discovers "appreciable damage," knowledge of the manifestation of the loss is imputed to the insured. Sapiro v Encompass Ins. (ND Cal 2004) 221 FRD 513, 519.

§13.81 b. Fortuity

For a risk of loss to be the subject of insurance, it must have been a contingent or unknown event at the time the policy was issued. Insurance Code §22 states that "[i]nsurance is a contract whereby one undertakes to indemnify another against loss, damage, or liability arising from a contingent or unknown event."

Section 22 is included in every insurance policy issued in California as a matter of law. See Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v State Bd. of Equalization (1982) 32 C3d 649, 654, 186 CR 578; Truta v Avis Rent-A-Car Sys. (1987) 193 CA3d 802, 812, 238 CR 806. The court in Compagnie de Bauxites de Guinee v Insurance Co. of N. Am. (3d Cir 1983) 724 F2d 369, 372 (quoting Restatement of Contracts §291, Comment a (1932)), stated that a fortuitous event is > [a]n event which so far as the parties to the contract are aware is dependent on chance. It may be beyond the power of any human being to bring the event to pass; it may be within the control of third persons, it may even be a past event, such as the loss of vessel, provided that the fact is unknown to the parties.

The key to a fortuitous event is the insured's knowledge. Fortuity is determined by the subjective view of the insured. Chadwick v Fire Ins. Exch. (1993) 17 CA4th 1112, 1119, 21 CR2d 871. A loss may be inevitable at the time the policy is issued, but coverage for that loss is proper as long as the insured does not know at the time of applying for the policy that the loss will occur. Snapp v State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. (1962) 206 CA2d 827, 24 CR 44. Conversely, a party cannot purchase insurance at a time when he or she knows that forces have been set in motion that will inevitably lead to a later loss, because it is not fortuitous. Insurance Co. of N. Am. v United States Gypsum Co. (4th Cir 1989) 870 F2d 148, 153. In short, "it is against public policy to allow insurance coverage on a certainty." InterMetal Mexicana v Insurance Co. of N. Am. (3d Cir 1989) 866 F2d 71, 77.

In Sabella v Wisler (1963) 59 C2d 21, 27 CR 689, the carrier contended that a homeowner's policy did not cover a loss, because at the time the policy was issued, subsidence damage to the home was inevitable. The supreme court rejected the idea that inevitability was the sole test of fortuity. Any contingent or unknown event, including a past event, may be insured against. Ins C §250. See also Snapp v State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. (1962) 206 CA2d 827, 830, 24 CR 44 ("[After] any movement of land has occurred it might be said to have been 'inevitable' with semantic correctness, but such 'inevitability' does not alter the fact that at the time the contract of insurance was entered into, the event was only a contingency or risk that might or might not occur within the term of the policy").

Source: Real Property/California Real Property Sales Transactions/13 Property Insurance/§13.82 c. 'Loss in Progress' Doctrine

§13.82 c. "Loss in Progress" Doctrine

The concept of a risk or peril that is the proper subject of insurance is codified in Ins C §250, which states:

> Except as provided in this article any contingent or unknown event, whether past or future, which may damnify a person having an insurable interest, or create a liability against him, may be insured against, subject to the provisions of this code.

For coverage to be found, however, a loss must generally be the result of the occurrence of a covered peril during the policy period. For most claims, this issue presents no problem. But for certain losses, such as losses involving earth movement, pollution, dry rot, or in which physical damage is suffered over time, this issue can be difficult.

In Prudential-LMI Commercial Ins. v Superior Court (1990) 51 C3d 674, 699, 274 CR 387, the court held that the "inception" of a progressive loss occurs when the damage is "manifested," i.e., when appreciable damage occurs such that a reasonable person would be on notice of a potentially insured loss. See §13.80 on manifestation and §13.94 on inception of loss. Because it had earlier adopted a "reasonable insured" standard for the notice test (see §13.94), the court implied that the same standard should be applied to the manifestation of a "loss in progress." 51 C3d at 699.

However, the interpretation of when the loss is "manifested" depends on whether the policy is an "all-risk" or a "named-perils" policy. For example, in Larkspur Isle Condominium Owners' Ass'n, Inc. v Farmers Ins. Group (1994) 31 CA4th 106, 111, 37 CR2d 3, the court held that under an all-risk policy, the date of manifestation does not depend on the insured's knowledge that the damage may constitute a covered loss. In contrast, in Central Nat'l Ins. Co. v Superior Court (1992) 2 CA4th 926, 3 CR2d 622, the court applied the definition of "inception of the loss" set out in Prudential-LMI to a case involving a named-peril policy. In denying the insurer's petition for a writ, the court held that under a named-peril policy (in contrast to the all-risk policy in Prudential-LMI), the insured has no duty to make a claim under the policy until he or she has reason to know (1) that appreciable damage has occurred, and (2) that the damage was caused by a peril specified in the policy. The court held that it was an issue of fact whether the Prudential-LMI rule should apply, because the loss in Prudential-LMI was continuing and progressive and the loss in Central Nat'l Ins., by the insured's own declaration, was not. Rather, it was the result of a series of discrete events, some of which occurred when the insurer was on the risk. If the damage was not continuous, but caused by a series of separate events, each successive insurer is liable only for the damage that occurred during the years it was on the risk. 2 CA4th at 933.

The ruling in Prudential-LMI that continuous property damage occurs on a single date of loss, the date of "manifestation," is limited to first party cases and is inapposite in the context of third party liability policies. Addressing the question left open in Prudential-LMI, the supreme court held in Montrose Chem. Corp. v Admiral Ins. Co. (1995) 10 C4th 645, 42 CR2d 324, that the "continuous injury trigger" was the appropriate standard to apply to continuous or progressively deteriorating losses covered by third party commercial general liability policies. Thus, third party losses continuing over more than one policy period are potentially covered by all policies in effect during those periods.

When progressive but undiscovered damage occurs during successive policy periods, Prudential-LMI appears to stand for the proposition that the carrier on the risk on the date of manifestation is solely responsible for the loss, including damages suffered after the policy period expires. Conversely, insurers whose policy period commences after initial manifestation of the loss are not responsible for any claim relating to the previously discovered and manifested loss. Prudential-LMI Commercial Ins. v Superior Court (1990) 51 C3d 674, 699, 274 CR 387. The "loss in progress" rule codifies a fundamental principle of insurance law, i.e., that an insurer cannot insure against a loss that is known or apparent to the insured. "[S]ince an insurer may only insure against contingent or unknown risks of loss, a policy issued after the 'loss in progress' has begun does not cover such loss." Pines of La Jolla Homeowners Ass'n v Industrial Indem. (1992) 5 CA4th 714, 721, 7 CR2d 53. For a further discussion of the manifestation and the continuous injury theories, see California Liability Insurance Practice: Claims & Litigation §§3.38-3.39 (Cal CEB 1991).

§13.83 3. Concurrent Causation and Efficient Proximate Cause

In Garvey v State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. (1989) 48 C3d 395, 403, 257 CR 292, the supreme court adopted the efficient proximate cause doctrine as the proper rule to apply when a loss is caused by the interaction of covered and excluded perils. Under the efficient proximate cause doctrine, "[w]hen a loss is caused by a combination of a covered and specifically excluded risks, the loss is covered if the covered risk was the efficient proximate cause of the loss," but "the loss is not covered if the covered risk was only a remote cause of the loss, or the excluded risk was the efficient proximate, or predominate cause." State Farm Fire & Casualty Co. v Von Der Lieth (1991) 54 C3d 1123, 1131, 2 CR2d 183. The efficient proximate cause of a loss is the "predominating cause" or "most important" cause of the loss. See also Julian v Hartford Underwriters Ins. Co. (2005) 35 C4th 747, 754, 27 CR3d 648; Freedman v State Farm Ins. Co. (2009) 173 CA4th 957, 961, 93 CR3d 296.

If more than one peril contributes to a loss, the question of the efficient proximate cause is generally a factual matter for the jury to resolve. Garvey, 48 C3d at 413. However, when all of the perils contributing to the loss are excluded under the policy, judgment can be entered for the insurer as a matter of law. Brodkin v State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. (1989) 217 CA3d 210, 217, 265 CR 710.

For the "efficient proximate cause" theory to apply, there must be two separate and distinct perils that "could each, under some circumstance, have occurred independently of the other and caused damage." When the evidence shows the loss was in fact occasioned by only a single cause, albeit one susceptible to various characterizations, the "efficient proximate cause" analysis has no application. Roberts v Assurance Co. of Am. (2008) 163 CA4th 1398, 1410, 78 CR3d 361 (policy excluded coverage for earth movement; concealment of ancient landslide was not conceptually distinct peril from ancient landslide itself); Chadwick v Fire Ins. Exch. (1993) 17 CA4th 1112, 1117, 21 CR2d 871 (policy excluded coverage for latent defects in construction; negligent construction just separate characterization, not distinct peril).

Several appellate courts have faced the issue of whether a property insurer may contractually exclude coverage when a covered peril is the efficient proximate cause of the loss but an excluded peril has contributed to or was necessary to the loss. In Julian v Hartford Underwriters Ins. Co. (2005) 35 C4th 747, 27 CR3d 648, a policy exclusion sought to preclude coverage for losses caused by weather conditions that "contribute in any way with" an excluded cause or event, such as a landslide. 35 C4th at 750. The California Supreme Court noted that the phrase "contributed in any way with" seemed "particularly designed to circumvent the efficient proximate cause doctrine." 35 C4th at 760. The court indicated that such a provision would not be enforceable if 99 percent of the loss was caused by weather conditions and 1 percent by earth movement. 35 C4th at 760. However, the court expressly limited its holding to the application of the weather conditions clause to a loss caused by a rain-induced landslide, and held that the exclusion was enforceable to the extent weather conditions were the efficient proximate cause of the loss. 35 C4th at 760. The court held that the exclusion, as so interpreted, did not violate Ins C §530 or the "efficient proximate cause" doctrine. 35 C4th at 761. The court stated that the efficient proximate cause doctrine does not preclude an insurer from providing coverage for some, but not all, of the manifestations of a peril, as long as the policy makes clear which perils are and are not covered. 35 C4th at 759.

In DeBruyn v Superior Court (2008) 158 CA4th 1213, 1216, 70 CR3d 652, the appellate court applied Julian and held that an "all risk" policy that "plainly and precisely communicated" that mold damage is not covered even when it results from a covered peril did not violate Ins C §530 or the efficient proximate cause doctrine. See §13.130. In Freedman v State Farm Ins. Co. (2009) 173 CA4th 957, 962, 93 CR3d 296 the appellate court applied Julian to hold that an "all risk" policy that excludes coverage for damage caused by "third party negligence," "corrosion," and "continuous seepage or leakage of water" from a plumbing system, excludes "contractor-negligence-induced" corrosion and "continuous or repeated seepage or leakage of water."

Distinct from the issue of concurrent causation is the situation in which a covered peril (such as fire) results from an excluded peril (such as earthquake). The policy language often provides coverage to the extent the loss is caused by the resulting, and covered, peril. See §13.84.

VII. COMMON EXCLUSIONS

§13.84 A. Exclusions, Ensuing Losses, and Efficient Proximate Cause

The term "ensuing loss" refers to a situation in which two perils, one excluded and one not excluded, combine to cause damage. If a subsequent peril causes a loss or injury separate and independent but resulting from the original excluded peril, and this new peril is not excluded under the policy, the loss or injury caused by the subsequent, unexcluded peril is an "ensuing loss." See, e.g., Sapiro v Encompass Ins. (ND Cal 2004) 221 FRD 513, 522. Thus, a determination that damage was caused by an excluded peril does not mean all loss resulting from it is excluded. Further analysis is necessary to determine whether the loss, or part of the loss, was caused by an "ensuing loss."

Commercial property policies that provide "all risk" coverage formerly used the term "ensuing loss," and stated that "any ensuing loss to property described in Coverages A and B not excluded or excepted in this policy is covered." This led courts to hold that damage caused by an "ensuing loss" was not excluded. For example, in Pacific Heating & Ventilating Co. v Williamsburg City Fire Ins. Co. (1910) 158 C 367, 111 P 4, the court held that even though the fire policy excluded damage caused by earthquake, when a fire started after the earthquake, damage caused by the fire was covered.

In response to the ensuing loss rule, insurers have removed the ensuing loss language from most policies. The ISO Causes of Loss—Special Form (CP 10 30 04 02) does not use the term "ensuing loss." Rather, it uses somewhat similar language in regard to only three exclusions: weather conditions; governmental decisions; and faulty planning, design, materials, or maintenance. See §13.86. The form states (here, items 3.a-3.c refer to the preceding excluded perils):

> We will not pay for loss or damage caused by or resulting from any of the following: 3.a. through 3.c. But if an excluded cause of loss that is listed in 3.a. through 3.c. results in a Covered Cause of Loss, we will pay for the loss or damage caused by that Covered Cause of Loss.

Under the efficient-proximate-cause doctrine, when there is a concurrence of two different causes, the efficient cause —the one that sets the others in motion—is the cause to which the loss is to be attributed, although other causes may follow it and operate more immediately in producing the disaster. Garvey v State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. (1989) 48 C3d 395, 402, 257 CR 292. If the efficient proximate cause is one or more covered perils in combination with specifically excluded risks, the coverage will apply. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. v Von Der Lieth (1991) 54 C3d 1123, 1133, 2 CR2d 183. See discussion in §13.83.

Some carriers have argued that language in an exclusion barring coverage for loss "resulting from, contributed to or aggravated by" the excluded cause manifests an intent to void the application of the efficient-proximate-cause analysis and eliminates coverage. This theory has been rejected. Howell v State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. (1990) 218 CA3d 1446, 1457, 267 CR 708; Mission Nat'l Ins. Co. v Coachella Valley Water Dist. (1989) 210 CA3d 484, 496, 258 CR 639.

§13.85 B. List of Common Exclusions

The most important exclusions from coverage are contained in the ISO Covered Causes of Loss—Special Form (CP 10 30 04 02) and the ISO Covered Causes of Loss—Broad Form (CP 10 20 04 02), with some overlap. See §13.86 (Special Form exclusions) and §13.87 (Special and Broad Form exclusions).

§13.86 1. Exclusions From Special Form (CP 10 30 04 02)

The ISO Covered Causes of Loss—Special Form (CP 10 30 04 02) excludes loss from the following perils:

- Weather Conditions. This exclusion applies only if weather conditions, in conjunction with another cause or event, contribute to produce the loss or damage. See discussion of Julian v Hartford Underwriters Ins. Co. (2005) 35 C4th 747, 27 CR3d 648, in §13.83.
- Governmental Decisions. The form excludes coverage for "governmental acts or decisions," including the failure to act or decide, of any person, group, organization, or governmental body. See Waldsmith v State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. (1991) 232 CA3d 693, 283 CR 607 (damage caused by landslide caused by saturated soil caused by broken water main was not covered, because earth movement and city's negligence were both excluded perils).
- Faulty Planning, Design, Materials, or Maintenance. The Special Form (CP 10 30 04 02) states this exclusion as follows:

  c. Faulty, inadequate or defective:
  (1) Planning, zoning, development, surveying, siting;
  (2) Design, specifications, workmanship, repair, construction, renovation, remodeling, grading, compaction;
  (3) Materials used in repair, construction, renovation or remodeling; or
  (4) Maintenance; of part or all of any property on or off the described premises.

EXAMPLE: See Wilson v Farmers Ins. Exch. (2002) 102 CA4th 1171, 126 CR2d 305, in which the court denied the mortgagor's claim for the decrease in the value of a home acquired through foreclosure when the named-insured mortgagee abandoned a renovation and defaulted on the loan. The court held that the unfinished renovation fell within the scope of the "inadequate renovation" exclusion of an all-risk homeowner's insurance policy. See also Freedman v State Farm Ins. Co. (2009) 173 CA4th 957, 93 CR3d 296 (similar exclusion precluded coverage for damage resulting from contractor negligence in driving nail through wall into water pipe, which corroded, then leaked, causing damage and mold); Davis v United Servs. Auto. Ass'n (1990) 223 CA3d 1322, 273 CR 224 (exclusion applies to contractor negligence); Mission Nat'l Ins. Co. v Coachella Valley Water Dist. (1989) 210 CA3d 484, 258 CR 639 (jury issue about which of two causes is efficient cause); Sapiro v Encompass Ins. (ND Cal 2004) 221 FRD 513, 521 (exclusion precluded coverage for damage caused by moisture, water damage, and fungi resulting from gap between flashing and stucco of home; water damage and fungal growth were not ensuing losses because they were not separate and independent from the original peril).

- Delay, Loss of Use, or Loss of Market. The form excludes loss or damage caused by or resulting from delay, loss of use, or loss of market.
- Smoke, Vapor, or Gas. The form excludes loss or damage caused by or resulting from smoke, vapor, or gas from agricultural smudging or industrial operations.
- Wear and Tear. The form excludes loss or damage caused by or resulting from (1) wear and tear; (2) rust or other corrosion, decay, deterioration, hidden or latent defect, or any quality in property that causes it to damage or destroy itself; (3) smog; (4) settling, cracking, shrinking, or expanding; and (5) nesting or infestation, or discharge or release of waste products or secretions, by insects, birds, rodents, or other animals. However, if an excluded cause of loss results in a "specified cause of loss" or building glass breakage, the exclusion will not apply to loss or damage caused by that "specified cause of loss" or building glass breakage. See Scott v Continental Ins. Co. (1996) 44 CA4th 24, 35, 51 CR2d 566 (latent defect must be not readily observable and also difficult to discover; latent defect and inherent vice exclusions apply to faults, flaws, and irregularities in design, faulty construction, or weakness of materials); Chadwick v Fire Ins. Exch. (1993) 17 CA4th 1112, 1126, 21 CR2d 871 (latent defect means not apparent by reasonable inspection); Murray v State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. (1990) 219 CA3d 58, 268 CR 33 (deterioration of copper water pipe caused by electrolysis over 17-year period, when expected to last 50 years, excluded as wear and tear); Brodkin v State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. (1989) 217

CA3d 210, 217, 265 CR 710 (slow disintegration of concrete foundation because of corrosive soil conditions is excluded deterioration).

- Dampness, Dryness, Changes or Extremes in Temperature. The form excludes loss or damage to personal property caused by or resulting from dampness or dryness of atmosphere, or changes in or extremes of temperature. However, if an excluded cause of loss results in a "specified cause of loss" or building glass breakage, the exclusion will not apply to loss or damage caused by that "specified cause of loss" or building glass breakage.
- Continuous or Repeated Seepage or Leakage of Water. The form excludes loss or damage caused by or resulting from continuous or repeated seepage or leakage of water, or the presence or condensation of humidity, moisture, or vapor, that occurs over a period of 14 days or more. See Freedman v State Farm Ins. Co. (2009) 173 CA4th 957, 93 CR3d 296 (exclusion for continuous or repeated seepage or leakage of water from plumbing system whether it arises from natural or external causes precluded coverage for damage resulting from contractor negligence, causing damage and mold); Finn v Continental Ins. Co. (1990) 218 CA3d 69, 72, 267 CR 22 (exclusion applies to gradual disintegration over time, not sudden and accidental rupture or leak).
- Freezing. The form excludes loss or damage caused by or resulting from water, other liquids, powder, or molten material that leaks or flows from plumbing, heating, air-conditioning, or other equipment (except fire protection systems) caused by or resulting from freezing, unless (1) the insured does its best to maintain heat in the building or structure; or (2) the insured drains the equipment and shuts off the supply if the heat is not maintained. See Waldsmith v State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. (1991) 232 CA3d 693, 697, 283 CR 607 (exclusion refers to plumbing, heating, air-conditioning, or other equipment within or part of the building, not city water main).
- Dishonest or Criminal Acts. The form excludes loss or damage caused by or resulting from dishonest or criminal acts by the insured, any of the insured's partners, members, officers, managers, employees (including lease employees), directors, trustees, authorized representatives, or anyone to whom the insured entrusts the property for any purpose, whether acting alone or in collusion with others, or whether or not occurring during the hours of employment. See Safeco Ins. Co. v Robert S. (2001) 26 C4th 758, 110 CR2d 844 (exclusion for "illegal acts" overbroad and unenforceable in wrongful death action for accidental shooting (interpreting liability policy)); 20th Century Ins. Co. v Schurtz (2001) 92 CA4th 1188, 112 CR2d 547 (criminal act exclusion applies regardless of insured's intent (interpreting liability policy); 20th Century Ins. Co. v Stewart (1998) 63 CA4th 1333, 74 CR2d 492 (pointing gun and pulling trigger, despite belief that gun will not fire, shows disregard for human life and establishes implied malice (interpreting liability policy)). This exclusion does not apply to acts of destruction by the insured's employees (including leased employees), but it does apply to theft by employees (including leased employees).
- Voluntary Parting. The form excludes loss or damage caused by or resulting from voluntary parting with any property by the insured, or anyone else to whom the insured has entrusted the property, if induced to do so by any fraudulent scheme, trick, device, or false pretense. See EOTT Energy Corp. v Storebrand Int'l Ins. Co. (1996) 45 CA4th 565, 573, 52 CR2d 894 (exclusion does not apply when theft was accomplished by physically disabling fuel meters, rather than "voluntary parting").
- Rain, Snow, Ice, or Sleet. The form excludes loss or damage caused by or resulting from rain, snow, ice, or sleet to personal property in the open. See Palub v Hartford Underwriters Ins. Co. (2001) 92 CA4th 645, 648, 112 CR2d 270 (to extent all-risk policy excludes loss proximately caused by weather conditions (e.g., rain), it violates Ins C §530 regarding efficient proximate cause and is unenforceable).
- Collapse. The form excludes loss or damage caused by or resulting from collapse, except as provided in the Additional Coverage for Collapse. However, if collapse results in a covered cause of loss at the described premises, the exclusion does not apply to loss or damage caused by that covered cause of loss. Collapse is not a cause of loss under an all-risk policy, but is the damage itself. See Palub v Hartford Underwriters Ins. Co. (2001) 92 CA4th 645, 648, 112 CR2d 270; see also Stamm Theatres, Inc. v Hartford Cas. Ins. Co. (2001) 93 CA4th 531, 113 CR2d 300 (coverage for collapse resulting from "hidden decay" applied to unexpected failure of roof trusses having no apparent evidence of deterioration); Doheny W. Homeowners' Ass'n v American Guar. & Liab. Ins. Co. (1997) 60 CA4th 400, 70 CR2d 260 (policy that covered loss or damage "involving collapse" afforded coverage for actual or imminent collapse); but see Rosen v State Farm Gen. Ins. Co. (2003) 30 C4th 1070, 135 CR2d 361 (policy defining "collapse" as "actually fallen down or fallen into pieces" required actual collapse and could not be interpreted as affording coverage for imminent collapse on public policy grounds); Jordan v Allstate Ins. Co. (2004) 116 CA4th 1206, 11 CR3d 169 (Jordan I) (exclusion for "wet or dry rot" was ambiguous under provisions regarding additional coverage for collapse caused by "hidden decay," but court held that policy required actual collapse, not danger of collapse or "imminent collapse"); and Jordan v Allstate Ins. Co. (2007) 148 CA4th 1062, 56 CR3d 312 (Jordan II) (insurer failed to conduct a "full, fair, thorough and timely" investigation of the alleged collapse).

- Pollutants. The form excludes loss or damage caused by or resulting from the discharge, dispersal, seepage, migration, release, or escape of "pollutants" unless the discharge, dispersal, seepage, migration, release, or escape is itself caused by any of the "specified causes of loss." However, if the discharge, dispersal, seepage, migration, release, or escape of "pollutants" results in a "specified cause of loss," the coverage will apply to loss or damage caused by that "specified cause of loss." See Brian Chuchua's Jeep, Inc. v Farmers Ins. Group (1992) 10 CA4th 1579, 13 CR2d 444 (cleanup expenses from underground gas tank leak caused by earthquake covered under earthquake coverage, notwithstanding pollution exclusion). Further, this exclusion does not apply to damage to glass caused by chemicals applied to that glass. In McKinnon v Truck Ins. Exch. (2003) 31 C4th 635, 653, 3 CR3d 228, the California Supreme Court held that the term "pollutant" in the absolute pollution exclusion in a CGL policy is limited to "conventional environmental pollution," and did not encompass "ordinary acts of negligence involving harmful substances," such as the negligent application of pesticides. See also Garamendi v Golden Eagle Ins. Co. (2005) 127 CA4th 480, 485, 25 CR3d 642 (widespread dissemination of silica dust as incidental by-product of industrial sandblasting is "environmental pollution"). For further discussion of pollution coverage, see §§13.45-13.51.

§13.87 2. Exclusions From Special Form (CP 10 30 04 02) and Broad Form (CP 10 20 04 02)

Both the ISO Special Form (CP 10 30 04 02) and the ISO Broad Form (CP 10 20 04 02) exclude loss from the following perils:

- Ordinance or Law Exclusion. The forms exclude coverage for loss or damage caused directly or indirectly by the enforcement of any ordinance or law (1) regulating the construction, use, or repair of any property, or (2) requiring the tearing down of any property, including the cost of removing its debris. This exclusion applies whether the loss results from (a) an ordinance or law that is enforced even if the property has not been damaged, or (b) the increased costs incurred to comply with an ordinance or law in the course of construction, repair, renovation, remodeling, or demolition of property following a physical loss to that property. See Bischel v Fire Ins. Exch. (1991) 1 CA4th 1168, 2 CR2d 575 (cost of construction upgrades required by ordinances or law must be borne by insured); McCorkle v State Farm Ins. Co. (1990) 221 CA3d 610, 270 CR 492; Breshears v Indiana Lumbermens Mut. Ins. Co. (1967) 256 CA2d 245, 63 CR 879. An exclusion that does not substantially comply with the "ordinance or law" exclusionary language in Ins C §2071, however, may be found to be ambiguous and not given effect. Fire Ins. Exch. v Superior Court (2004) 116 CA4th 446, 10 CR3d 617.
- Earth Movement. The forms exclude coverage for loss or damage caused directly or indirectly by earthquake, landslide, mine subsidence, and earth sinking, other than sinkhole collapse. However, if these perils result in fire or explosion, the insurance will cover damage caused by that fire or explosion. Both forms also exclude loss or damage caused directly or indirectly by volcanic eruption, even if it results in fire damage. See also Roberts v Assurance Co. of Am. (2008) 163 CA4th 1398, 1406, 78 CR3d 361 (exclusion for "earth movement" in course of construction from builder's risk policy precluded coverage for landslide damage to insured's house resulting from movement of ancient landslide below property, activated by placement of fill soil on adjoining lot and insured's lot during grading before construction, in combination with heavy rains).
- Governmental Action. The forms exclude coverage for loss or damage caused directly or indirectly by seizure or destruction of property by order of governmental authority. The policy will apply, however, to loss or damage caused by or resulting from acts of destruction ordered by governmental authority and taken at the time of a fire to prevent its spread, if the fire damage would otherwise be covered.
- Nuclear Hazard. The forms exclude coverage for loss or damage caused directly or indirectly by nuclear reaction or radiation, or radioactive contamination, however caused. If nuclear reaction or radiation or radioactive contamination results in fire, the exclusion does not apply to loss or damage caused by such fire.
- Utility Services. The forms exclude coverage for loss or damage caused directly or indirectly by the failure of power or other utility service supplied to the destroyed premises, however caused, if the failure occurs away from the described premises. If the failure of power or other utility service results in a covered cause of loss, the exclusion will not apply to damage or loss caused by that covered cause of loss. This exclusion does not apply to business income coverage or extra expense coverage.
- War and Military Action. The forms exclude coverage for loss or damage caused directly or indirectly by (1) war, including undeclared or civil war; (2) warlike action by a military force; and (3) insurrection, rebellion, revolution, usurped power, or action taken by governmental authority in hindering or defending against any of these.
- Water. The forms exclude coverage for loss or damage caused directly or indirectly by (1) flood, surface water, waves, tides, tidal waves, or overflow of any body of water; (2) mudslide or mudflow; (3) water that backs up or overflows from a sewer, drain, or sump; or (4) water under the ground surface pressing on or flowing or seeping through foundations, walls, floors or paved surfaces, basements, or doors, windows, or other openings. However, if such water results in fire, explosion, or sprinkler leakage, the exclusion will not apply to damage caused by such fire, explosion, or sprinkler leakage.

NOTE: A 2004 report by the California Department of Insurance found that 41 percent of multi-peril homeowners insurers use water-loss exclusions or special limits for losses caused by water.

In Penn-America Ins. Co. v Mike's Tailoring (2005) 125 CA4th 884, 22 CR3d 918, the court held that the sewer backup exclusion is not facially ambiguous and that it precluded coverage for damage caused when a clogged sewer line caused water and sewage to flow into the basement of the insured property. The court rejected the insured's argument that the loss was covered because it was caused by a pollutant (sewage), holding that a reasonable layperson would assume water backing up from a sewer would contain both water and contaminants. 125 CA4th at 890.

Damage caused by water intrusion in a gap between the flashing and stucco of a home falls within the water damage exclusion. Sapiro v Encompass Ins. (ND Cal 2004) 221 FRD 513, 522.

Damage to an insured shipyard from coverage with ten feet of water from Hurricane Katrina was held to be within the flood exclusion of an excess policy in Northrup Grumman Corp. v Factory Mut. Ins. Co. (9th Cir 2009) 563 F3d 777, 783. In addition to the definition of "flood" in the policy, the court considered dictionary definitions, which characterize "flood" as an overflowing or inundation of water over usually dry land. Northrup at 783.

- Fungus, Wet Rot, Dry Rot, and Bacteria. The forms exclude coverage for loss or damage caused directly or indirectly by the presence, growth, proliferation, spread, or any activity of fungus, wet or dry rot, or bacteria. However, if fungus, wet or dry rot, or bacteria result in a covered cause of loss, damage caused by that covered cause of loss will be covered. Further, this exclusion does not apply when fungus, wet or dry rot, or bacteria results from fire or lightning. With respect to loss or damage caused by a covered cause of loss other than fire or lightning, the exclusion does not apply to the extent that coverage is provided in the Additional Coverage—Limited Coverage for "Fungus," Wet Rot, Dry Rot, and Bacteria (CP 10 30 04 02, §E, p 7; CP 10 20 04 02, §D, p 6). See also §13.130. The exclusion precludes coverage for decay caused by fungus. Sapiro v Encompass Ins. (ND Cal 2004) 221 FRD 513, 522. The exclusion for "wet or dry rot" precludes coverage for decay caused by a fungus. But see Jordan v Allstate Ins. Co. (2004) 116 CA4th 1206, 1218, 11 CR3d 169 (Jordan I) (finding ambiguity between that exclusion and additional coverage for collapse caused by hidden decay).
- Artificially Generated Electrical Current. The forms exclude coverage for loss or damage caused by or resulting from artificially generated electrical current.
- Explosion of Steam Boilers, Pipes, or Turbines. The forms exclude coverage for loss or damage caused directly or indirectly by explosion of steam boilers, steam pipes, steam engines, or steam turbines owned or leased by the insured, or operated under the insured's control.
- Mechanical Breakdown. The forms exclude coverage for loss or damage caused directly or indirectly by mechanical breakdown, including rupture or bursting caused by centrifugal force. However, if mechanical breakdown results in a covered cause of loss, this exclusion does not apply to damage caused by that covered cause of loss.
- Insured's Neglect. The forms exclude coverage for loss or damage caused directly or indirectly by an insured's neglect to use all reasonable means to save and preserve property from further damage at and after the time of loss.

VIII. WHAT TO DO WHEN A LOSS OCCURS: CONDITIONS

§13.88 A. Notice to Insurance Company

Most property insurance policies contain fairly detailed instructions on the insured's duties after a loss. The instructions are based on Ins C §2071, which sets forth a Standard Form Fire Policy. The substance of that form is found in nearly every property insurance policy, whether residential or commercial, issued in California. The loss-adjustment provisions of §2071 provide two important requirements on notice:

- The insured must give written notice to the insurer of any loss without unnecessary delay.
- The insured must file, within 60 days after the loss unless the time is extended in writing by the insurer, a proof of loss, signed and sworn to by the insured, stating the insured's knowledge and belief about certain matters set forth in Ins C §2071 (see §13.89).

These time limits normally run from the inception of the loss. See §13.94 for further discussion of "inception of the loss."

Although it is prudent for the insured to provide prompt notice of loss, a delay in providing notice will not, in the absence of substantial prejudice to the insurer, support a refusal to pay. See Northwestern Title Sec. Co. v Flack (1970) 6 CA3d 134, 85 CR 693 (claim on professional errors and omissions policy).

NOTE: After the insured incurs a covered loss, the insurer must provide a free copy of the policy within 30 days after receipt of a request from the insured. Ins C §2071(a).

© The Regents of the University of California

§13.89 B. Proof of Loss

Generally, insurance policies impose a duty on the insured to provide proof of the loss. The Standard Form Fire Policy states that the insured must file, within 60 days after the loss unless the time is extended in writing by the insurer, a proof of loss, signed and sworn to by the insured, stating the insured's knowledge and belief about certain matters set forth in Ins C §2071, including the following:

- The time and origin of the loss;
- The interest of the insured and all others in the property;
- The actual cash value of each item and amount of loss thereto;
- All encumbrances on the property;
- All other contracts of insurance on the property, whether valid or not;
- Any changes in the title, use, occupation, location, possession, or exposures of the property since the policy was issued;
- By whom and for what purpose any building was occupied at the time of loss; and
- Whether or not the building stood on leased ground.

The insured must also provide a copy of all descriptions and schedules in all policies and, if required and obtainable, verified plans and specifications of any building, fixtures, or machinery destroyed or damaged.

The insured is not required to provide the type or quality of proof that might be required in court; it is sufficient for the insured to give "the best evidence in his power at the time." Ins C §552. If the insurer fails to promptly notify the insured of any defects in the proof of loss that the insured might remedy, the defect will be waived. Ins C §553.

§13.90 C. Insured's Duty of Cooperation

Most policies require the insured to cooperate with the insurer's investigation of a claim. For example, the Standard Form Fire Policy states (Ins C §2071(a)):

> The insured, as often as may be reasonably required…, shall exhibit to any person designated by this company all that remains of any property herein described, and submit to examinations under oath by any person named by this company, and subscribe the same; and, as often as may be reasonably required, shall produce for examination all books of account, bills, invoices, and other vouchers….

An insured's refusal to cooperate will be a defense to coverage only if the insurer is prejudiced as a result. Pruyn v Agricultural Ins. Co. (1995) 36 CA4th 500, 516, 42 CR2d 295. Moreover, the insurer has the burden of proving that it was prejudiced by the insured's refusal to cooperate. 36 CA4th at 516.

§13.91 D. Insurer's Duty to Produce "Claim-Related Documents"

The Standard Form Fire Policy, codified in Ins C §2071, requires the insurer, on request from an insured, to produce "claim-related documents" within 15 days. This requirement also applies to any other "residential property insurance policies." "Claim-related documents" include:

- Repair and replacement estimates and bids;
- Appraisals and "scope of loss" documents;
- Drawings, plans, and reports;
- Third party findings on the amount of loss; and
- "All other valuation, measurement and loss adjustment calculations of the amount of loss, covered damage, and costs of repairs."

§13.92 E. Examination Under Oath

Many property policies impose a duty on the insured to submit to an examination under oath (EUO). The Standard Form Fire Policy (Ins C §2071(a)) states:

> The insured, as often as may be reasonably required…, shall… submit to examinations under oath by any person named by this company, and subscribe the same….

Once requested, an EUO becomes a condition precedent to payment of the claim. California Fair Plan Ass'n v Superior Court (2004) 115 CA4th 158, 161, 8 CR3d 746. The insured cannot refuse to submit to an EUO on the ground that the insurer's purpose is to gather information to defeat the claim. Hickman v London Assur. Corp. (1920) 184 C 524, 530, 195 P 45; Globe Indem. Co. v Superior Court (1992) 6 CA4th 725, 731, 8 CR2d 251. The requirement that the insured "subscribe" the EUO indicates that it must be given under oath and taken down and transcribed by a court reporter; a previously recorded statement, or verbal assurances that the insured answered questions truthfully at an earlier interview, will not excuse the insured's duty to submit to an EUO. West v State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. (9th Cir 1988) 868 F2d 348, 351.

The insurer's right to conduct an EUO and to require the insured to produce documents is so significant that the insured's compliance is a prerequisite to the right to receive policy benefits. Brizuela v Calfarm Ins. Co. (2004) 116 CA4th 578, 587, 10 CR3d 661. In Brizuela, the court held that the insured's failure to attend the EUO as scheduled by the insurer, and failure to propose any alternative dates for the EUO for 6 months, legally constituted a refusal to submit to an EUO. Moreover, the court held that the insurer had no obligation to provide the insured with a copy of the insured's previously recorded statements before the EUO. The court held the insurer was not required to show prejudice before denying policy benefits to an insured who violated a policy provision requiring submission to an EUO. The court further held that the availability of a deposition in the bad faith litigation did not excuse the insured's breach of the policy regarding an EUO.

The EUO may be conducted only to obtain information that is "relevant and reasonably necessary to process or investigate the claim." Ins C §2071.1(a)(2). Moreover, the insurer may conduct the EUO only on reasonable notice, at a convenient place and for a reasonable length of time. Ins C §2071.1(a)(3). The insured has a right to be represented by counsel at the examination (Ins C §2071.1(a)(4)) and to receive a free copy of the transcript (Ins C §2071.1(a)(5)). Although the insured or his or her counsel may object to questions, if a refusal to answer a material question prevents the insurer from determining the extent of loss and validity of the claim, the insured's right to recover under the policy may be affected. Ins C §2071.1(a)(6) The insurer must provide a copy of Ins C §2071.1 along with its request to take the EUO. Ins C §2071.1(a)(1).

F. Statute of Limitations

§13.93 1. 1-Year Limitations Period

A 1-year contractual statute of limitations period is permitted in property policies by Ins C §2071(a), which provides that > [n]o suit or action on this policy for the recovery of any claim shall be sustainable in any court of law or equity unless all the requirements of this policy shall have been complied with, and unless commenced within 12 months next after inception of the loss.

Although this language is not mandatory (see Ins C §2079), it is included in virtually every property insurance policy issued in California. The 1-year statute of limitations has been held valid and enforceable. See Prudential-LMI Commercial Ins. Co. v Superior Court (1990) 51 C3d 674, 683, 274 CR 387 (recognizing reasonable delay in discovery and equitable tolling until insurer's formal denial of claim); Shugerman v Allstate Ins. Co. (CD Cal 2009) 594 F Supp 2d 1131, 1135. Some policies vary the language to require that suit be brought within 12 months after the "happening" or the "occurrence" of the loss, rather than the "inception" of the loss. See §13.94. However, the courts generally find that this language conforms to that in the standard form.

In accordance with the requirements of the Unfair Insurance Practices Act (Ins C §§790-790.15), the Fair Claims Practices Regulations (10 Cal Code Regs §§2695.1-2695.14) impose a mandatory duty on an insurer to disclose to a first party claimant any time limit that may apply to the claim. 10 Cal Code Regs §2695.4(a). If the insurer fails to do so, it will be estopped from relying on that time limit. Neufeld v Balboa Ins. Co. (2000) 84 CA4th 759, 764, 101 CR2d 151; Spray, Gould & Bowers v Associated Int'l Ins. Co. (1999) 71 CA4th 1260, 1264, 84 CR2d 552. An insurer may also be estopped from relying on the time limit if the insured can show that he or she reasonably relied on misrepresentations by the insurer that led to the insured's failure to file a timely claim. Vu v Prudential Prop. & Cas. Ins. Co. (2001) 26 C4th 1142, 1152, 113 CR2d 70; Cordova v 21st Century Ins. Co. (2005) 129 CA4th 89, 95, 28 CR3d 170; Shugerman v Allstate Ins. Co. (CD Cal 2009) 594 F Supp 2d 1131, 1140 (stating rule, but holding that communications after the limitations period expired may not form the basis for estoppel). Under 10 Cal Code Regs §2695.7(f), however, once the insurer accepts coverage, the insurer need not notify the insured of the applicable limitations period. See SEMX Corp. v Federal Ins. Co. (SD Cal 2005) 398 F Supp 2d 1103 (after insurer settled insured's initial first party claim, insurer was no longer bound to provide notice of policy's 2-year limitations period).

In Hellinger v Farmers Ins. Exch. (2001) 91 CA4th 1049, 1055, 111 CR2d 268, the court held that Ins C §2071 does not apply to stand-alone policies covering earthquake damage only. See also Bialo v Western Mut. Ins. Co. (2002) 95 CA4th 68, 75, 115 CR2d 3.

WARNING: Code of Civil Procedure §340.9 revives insurance claims resulting from the 1994 Northridge earthquake that were formerly time-barred by Ins C §2071, but does not apply to claims for damage caused by the earthquake's aftershocks. See Migliore v Mid-Century Ins. Co. (2002) 97 CA4th 592, 118 CR2d 548. However, the statute does not preclude the victims of the Northridge earthquake from asserting that the insurer is equitably estopped from relying on the statute of limitations. Cordova v 21st Century Ins. Co. (2005) 129 CA4th 89, 95, 28 CR3d 170. This statute does not revive claims compromised by a written settlement agreement if the insured was represented by counsel admitted to practice in California. Israel-Curley v California Fair Plan (2005) 126 CA4th 123, 128, 24 CR3d 1. Moreover, the statute does not affect any other defenses the insurer might have. Rosenblum v Safeco Ins. Co. (2005) 126 CA4th 847, 858, 24 CR3d 427.

§13.94 2. Inception of the Loss

Before the litigation in Prudential-LMI Commercial Ins. v Superior Court (1990) 51 C3d 674, 274 CR 387, cases on the statute of limitations in property policies focused on two issues:

- In the context of the discovery of concealed damages, when was the inception of the loss?
- In the event of a protracted adjustment, could the statute be tolled by the insurer's actions?

Prudential-LMI addressed both issues. The supreme court held that a "reasonable person" standard must be applied to determine when a loss begins or occurs. The limitations period begins to run when a reasonable insured presumably has facts sufficient to require notifying the carrier of a claim (51 C3d at 687):

> We agree that "inception of the loss" should be determined by reference to reasonable discovery of the loss and not necessarily turn on the occurrence of the physical event causing the loss. Accordingly, we find that California law supports the application of the following delayed discovery rule for purposes of the accrual of a cause of action under [Ins C §] 2071: the insured's suit on the policy will be deemed timely if it is filed within one year after "inception of a loss," defined as that point in time when appreciable damage occurs and is or should be known to the insured, such that a reasonable insured would be aware that his notification duty under the policy has been triggered. To take advantage of the benefits of a delayed discovery rule, however, the insured is required to be diligent in the face of discovered facts. The more substantial or unusual the nature of the damage discovered by the insured (e.g., the greater its deviation from what a reasonable person would consider normal wear and tear), the greater the insured's duty to notify his insurer of the loss promptly and diligently.

Further, the time when a reasonable insured "would be on notice of a potentially insured loss" is usually an issue of fact, which cannot always be determined on a motion for summary judgment. 51 C3d at 687. Finally, the 1-year statute of limitations is a defense that the insurer must raise, and the insurer alone has the burden of proof. 51 C3d at 687. See also Kapsimallis v Allstate Ins. Co. (2002) 104 CA4th 667, 128 CR2d 358 ("inception of loss" determined not solely by date of physical event causing damage, but also by reference to reasonable discovery of loss).

If the insured has a named-peril policy, rather than an all-risk policy, the principles of inception of the loss set out in Prudential-LMI Commercial Ins. v Superior Court, supra, must be applied more broadly. See Central Nat'l Ins. Co. v Superior Court (1992) 2 CA4th 926, 3 CR2d 622. In Central, the appellate court held that insureds holding a named-peril policy rather than an all-risk policy cannot be deemed to have been on notice of a potentially insured loss unless they had reason to know not only that appreciable damage had occurred but also that the damage was caused by a peril specified in the policy. See also §13.72.

§13.95 3. Tolling

If a claim is made and the carrier leads the insured to believe that the claim will be settled, inducing the insured to delay filing suit, the carrier may be estopped from asserting the statute of limitations. Prudential-LMI Commercial Ins. v Superior Court (1990) 51 C3d 674, 690, 274 CR 387; Benner v Industrial Acc. Comm'n (1945) 26 C2d 346, 350, 159 P2d 24. Under Prudential-LMI, the limitations period is tolled while a claim is pending. It ceases to run from the moment the insured gives the carrier formal notice of the claim until the carrier, in writing, denies the claim. See also Shugerman v Allstate Ins. Co. (CD Cal 2009) 594 F Supp 2d 1131, 1135 (communication after limitations period expired is not basis for estoppel).

Oral statements denying a claim will not end the tolling period; the carrier must "formally and unequivocally den[y the] claim in writing." Aliberti v Allstate Ins. Co. (1999) 74 CA4th 138, 149, 87 CR2d 645.

In Marselis v Allstate Ins. Co. (2004) 121 CA4th 122, 16 CR3d 668, the court held that full payment of the claim ends the tolling period, even if the insurer does not provide written notice that the statute of limitations will begin to run on such payment.

Although Prudential-LMI ruled on a homeowner's policy, its test for the "inception of the loss" and for tolling the limitations period also applies to commercial property policies. San Jose Crane & Rigging, Inc. v Lexington Ins. Co. (1991) 227 CA3d 1314, 1319, 278 CR 301. Finally, Prudential-LMI does not operate only prospectively but applies to all claims made before the case was decided. 227 CA3d at 1321.

§13.96 4. Action "on the Policy"

If the contractual limitation has run before the insured brings suit, an issue arises whether this fact bars all possible remedies arising from the denial. Insurance Code §2071 applies only to a "suit or action on th[e] policy for the recovery of any claim." Ins C §2071(a). The key phrase is "on the policy." If the suit is not on the policy, the statute of limitations does not bar the action. Murphy v Allstate Ins. Co. (1978) 83 CA3d 38, 147 CR 565. Conversely, if the action is on the policy, then all causes of action are apparently barred by the limitation. Prieto v State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. (1990) 225 CA3d 1188, 1193, 275 CR 362; Abari v State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. (1988) 205 CA3d 530, 536, 252 CR 565. These causes of action can include an action for breach of contract to recover policy benefits, and they may also reach an action for breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing (see §13.112). Prieto, 225 CA3d at 1195.

An action is on the policy if it seeks recovery of policy benefits. Although there is conflict among the cases and the supreme court has yet to address this issue, it appears that if the thrust of the plaintiff's bad faith complaint is to recover policy benefits, the action is "on the policy" and is barred by the contractual limitation, even if phrased in terms of "bad faith." Prieto v State Farm Fire & Cas. Co., supra; Abari v State Farm Fire & Cas. Co., supra. See also Jang v State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. (2000) 80 CA4th 1291, 95 CR2d 917 (action seeking damages under policy framed as bad faith tort claim is subject to contractual limitations period).

Few cases describe what is not an action on the policy. The leading case, Murphy v Allstate Ins. Co. (1978) 83 CA3d 38, 147 CR 565, was not merely an action to recover policy benefits. The insureds argued that the carrier had acted wrongfully not only in not paying policy benefits but also by hiring incompetent contractors to repair the insured's home. The court of appeal held that the bad faith cause of action, because it was based on the carrier's responsibility for the contractors' actions, did not come within the statute, because it was not an action on the policy. 83 CA3d at 49. However, Murphy also states that the duty of good faith and fair dealing is imposed by law rather than by the policy, and thus an action for its breach is not "on the policy." 83 CA3d at 48. This statement appeared to leave open the possibility that an insured could sue for the unfair denial of contract benefits while being precluded from pursuing a straight contractual claim and suffering a defense verdict if unreasonable conduct was not proved.

Under one court's analysis, an action will not be on the policy if "the damages [are] not attributable to a risk covered by the policy," even though "the claims arose out of the contractual relationship." Prieto v State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. (1990) 225 CA3d 1188, 1193, 275 CR 362. If the insured's damages are not "attributable to a risk covered by the policy," the internal limitation period will not bar the action from compensatory damages for bad faith, a claim for punitive damages, or a claim for emotional distress. Prieto v State Farm Fire & Cas. Co., supra; Murphy v Allstate Ins. Co., supra.

PRACTICE TIP: Although there is still some uncertainty because the supreme court has not resolved the issue, the court in Jang v State Farm Fire & Cas. Co., supra, explained that Abari v State Farm Fire & Cas. Co., supra, evinces a trend by the appellate courts to restrict the exemption from the limitations clause set forth in Murphy v Allstate Ins. Co., supra, to the facts of that case. The Jang court explained that that exemption applies only when the events constituting bad faith occur after initial policy coverage. If denial of the claim in the first instance is the alleged bad faith and the insured seeks policy benefits, the bad faith action is "on the policy" and the limitations provision applies. Jang v State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. (2000) 80 CA4th 1291, 1299, 95 CR2d 917. In Shugerman v Allstate Ins. Co. (CD Cal 2009) 594 F Supp 2d 1131, 1137 n5, the court recognized the split of authority, and stated that the "more current view is that the one-year statute of limitations applies to bad faith claims where the claim is 'on the policy.'"

§13.97 G. Arbitration or Appraisal

The remedy of appraisal to resolve valuation disputes appears to be on the rise. An appraisal constitutes an arbitration (see CCP §§1280-1294.2) and is governed by the same rules that apply to arbitrations. Devonwood Condominium Owners Ass'n v Farmers Ins. Exch. (2008) 162 CA4th 1498, 1505, 77 CR3d 88; Appalachian Ins. Co. v Rivcom Corp. (1982) 130 CA3d 818, 824, 182 CR 11. If the insured and the carrier cannot agree on the value of a loss, each selects an appraiser to determine that value. Disagreements between the appraisers are resolved by an umpire they select. A majority vote of the three-member appraisal panel fixes the amount of the loss. Jefferson Ins. Co. v Superior Court (1970) 3 C3d 398, 400 n2, 90 CR 608.

The appraisal procedure is narrower than conventional arbitrations. Appraisals are designed to fix the amount of a loss, and appraisers cannot, for example, answer questions of policy interpretation or determine whether the insured made any misrepresentations in applying for the policy. See, e.g., Safeco Ins. Co. v Sharma (1984) 160 CA3d 1060, 1063, 207 CR 104, which defined the scope of fire appraisal as follows:

> We note, however, one significant difference between the two proceedings. Generally an arbitration proceeding encompasses questions both of fact and of law; hence, "merits of the award, either on questions of law or fact, are generally not subject to review." In contrast, appraisers have the power only to determine a specific question of fact, "namely, the actual cash value of the insured [item]."
> As stated in Hughes v Potomac Ins. Co. (1962) 199 CA2d 239, 253, 18 CR 650: "The function of appraisers is to determine the amount of damage resulting to various items submitted for their consideration."

See also Devonwood Condominium Owners Ass'n, 162 CA4th at 1505.

Although appraisers might also be precluded from determining causation issues, such as whether a covered or an excluded cause is the "predominating" cause of loss, in practice such distinctions are difficult to maintain. When significant causation issues exist, the parties should agree on whether these questions will also be submitted to the panel.

Appraisers selected by the insured and the insurer must be competent and disinterested. Ins C §2071(a). Once an appraisal award is made, it can be confirmed in court as in any arbitration award. Jefferson Ins. Co. v Superior Court, supra. However, the appraisers merely determine the loss, i.e., the applicable actual cash value or the replacement cost value, not any liability issues. Therefore, an appraisal award cannot be confirmed as a money judgment in favor of the insured. Devonwood Condominium Owners Ass'n, 162 CA4th at 1506.

PRACTICE TIP: Normally, fire appraisal proceedings are quite informal. However, given the finality of this procedure on the question of value, no effort should be spared to carefully define and explain the scope of the appraisers' tasks and to see to it that the issues are fully developed. When necessary, discovery can be obtained through this procedure. See CCP §§1282-1284.3. In appropriate cases, hearings should be stenographically recorded.

§13.98 H. California Residential Property Insurance Bill of Rights

As discussed in §13.109, a homeowners' insurer must provide the insured with a California Residential Property Insurance Disclosure form when the policy is issued and each year thereafter. Along with that disclosure form, the insurer must provide the insured with a copy of the California Residential Property Insurance Bill of Rights. Ins C §10103.5(a). This bill of rights begins with a warning that the insured's home and related property is the largest single investment most consumers make. Ins C §10103.5(b). It then sets forth a list of suggestions, including (Ins C §10103.5(b)):

- Read your policy carefully;
- Keep accurate records of improvements to your home;
- Maintain a list of all personal property, pictures, and video equipment, and keep it away from the home;
- Comparison shop for insurance; and
- Determine the cost to rebuild or replace the home.

This bill of rights then sets forth several types of information the insured is entitled to receive from the insurer (Ins C §10103.5(b)):

- The California Residential Property Insurance Disclosure;
- An explanation of how the policy limits were established;
- The insurer's customer service telephone number for underwriting, rating, and claims inquiries;
- An explanation for any cancellation or nonrenewal of the policy;
- A copy of the policy;
- The toll-free telephone number and Internet address for reporting complaints to the Department of Insurance consumer services unit;
- In the event of a claim, an itemized, written scope of loss report prepared by the insurer or its adjuster within a reasonable time period;
- In the event of a claim, notification of a consumer's rights with respect to the appraisal process for resolving claim disputes; and
- In the event of a claim, a copy of the Unfair Practices Act (Bus & P C §§17000-17101) and a copy of the Fair Claims Practices Regulations (10 Cal Code Regs §§2695.1-2695.14).

An insurer of residential property that reports "claims history or loss experience" of insureds to an insurance-supported information database must disclose that fact to the insured. Ins C §10103.5(c)(2).

§13.99 IX. HOW IS THE LIABILITY CALCULATED: MEASURE OF INDEMNITY

"Indemnity" in the insurance context means the promise of an insurer to compensate the insured if the insured suffers a loss or damage. Davis v Phoenix Ins. Co. (1896) 111 C 409, 43 P 1115. There are two traditional methods of valuing property under property coverages: property that is not repaired or replaced is valued at "actual cash value" (see §13.102); property that is repaired or replaced is valued at "replacement cost value" (see §13.103).

A. Policy Limits

§13.100 1. Amount of Coverage

The declarations page for a commercial policy sets forth the policy limits for various types of losses. Different policy limits may be set for structures, personal property, and other coverages. The policy limit will set the maximum that will be paid for that loss. For example, the Building and Personal Property Coverage Form (ISO CP 00 10 04 02) (see §13.38) states: "The most we will pay for loss or damage in any one occurrence is the applicable Limit of Insurance shown in the Declarations." The declarations may not show all the various policy limits, however. For example, the Business and Personal Property Coverage Form (ISO CP 00 10 04 02) contains sections on Additional Coverages and Coverage Extensions, which set forth additional coverages (e.g., debris removal, fire department service charge, pollutant cleanup and removal, increased cost of construction, electronic data, valuable papers and records). These coverages are subject to separate, and relatively low, policy limits (usually ranging from $1000 to $10,000).

NOTE: These additional or extended coverages are often very beneficial to the insured in case of a catastrophic loss. For example, assume the insured's place of business, including the insured's data processing and other computer equipment, was destroyed in a fire. Because there is a separate limit for electronic data processing equipment, the insured does not have to use the business personal property limit to pay for the computer equipment. However, the relatively low limit (usually around $2500) for this equipment will likely be woefully inadequate. Moreover, most insurers contend that the existence of these "additional" or "extended" coverages for electronic data processing equipment precludes recovery of any additional sums for such equipment under the separate business personal property limit. This means that the "additional" and "extended" coverages should be examined closely to make sure the insured is adequately protected.

§13.101 2. "Open" Versus "Valued" Policies

An insurance policy is either "open" or "valued." Ins C §410. An open policy is one in which the value of the subject matter is not agreed on, but left open to be ascertained in case of loss. Ins C §411. A valued policy is one that expresses on its face an agreement that the thing insured shall be valued at a specified sum. Ins C §412. Valued policies for property insurance are not common.

Under Ins C §2058, when a valued policy affording fire coverage is issued and a fire loss occurs, if the insured repairs or replaces the property the insured receives full payment for the loss up to the face amount of the policy; if the property is not repaired or replaced, the insured receives either the replacement value of the loss or the face amount of the policy, whichever is less.

© The Regents of the University of California

§13.102 B. Actual Cash Value

Actual cash value (ACV) is defined in Ins C §2051(b) as follows:

> (1) In case of total loss to the structure, the policy limit or the fair market value of the structure, whichever is less;
> (2) In case of a partial loss to the structure, or loss to its contents, the amount it would cost the insured to repair, rebuild or replace the thing lost or injured less a fair and reasonable deduction for physical depreciation based upon its condition at the time of the injury or the policy limit, whichever is less. In case of partial loss to the structure, a deduction for physical depreciation shall apply only to components of a structure that are normally subject to repair and replacement during the useful life of that structure.

Before the codification of this definition, courts enforced different definitions of ACV. For example, in Cheeks v California Fair Plan Ass'n (1998) 61 CA4th 423, 429 n5, 71 CR2d 568, the policy defined ACV to mean "actual cash value, with proper deduction for depreciation." In Community Assisting Recovery, Inc. v Aegis Sec. Ins. Co. (2001) 92 CA4th 886, 893, 112 CR2d 304, the court held that ACV was not the exclusive standard, and insurers could use market value, replacement cost, cost of repair, or replacement cost less depreciation.

NOTE: Now that the legislature has defined ACV, it remains to be seen whether different standards or different definitions of ACV will be enforceable.

In Everett v State Farm Gen. Ins. Co. (2008) 162 CA4th 649, 658, 75 CR3d 812, the court noted that ACV "oftentimes is insufficient to repair or replace the property," and that replacement cost coverage "is intended to compensate the insured for the shortfall in coverage that results from rebuilding under a policy that pays only for actual cash value."

© The Regents of the University of California

§13.103 C. Replacement Cost Value

Replacement cost value (RCV) means the cost to repair or replace the damaged or destroyed property, with like or equivalent construction, without deduction for depreciation. See Ins C §§2051.5, 10102. Replacement cost value is intended to compensate the insured for the shortfall in coverage that may result from rebuilding if the policy only provided for actual cash value (ACV) (see §13.102). Everett v State Farm Gen. Ins. Co. (2008) 162 CA4th 649, 658, 75 CR3d 812; Fire Ins. Exch. v Superior Court (2004) 116 CA4th 446, 462, 10 CR3d 617. Replacement cost value necessarily places the insured in a better position than actual cash value would provide. 116 CA4th at 464.

In the replacement of a structure, replacement cost value must be the cost to replace it at the same site. However, case law has established that the insured can purchase an existing, comparable structure, or build at a different site, as long as the cost does not exceed what it would have cost to rebuild at the original site. Conway v Farmers Home Mut. Ins. Co. (1994) 26 CA4th 1185, 1188, 31 CR2d 883. If the insured finds a bargain property, the insured cannot recover a windfall; the maximum the insured can recover is the amount actually expended. 26 CA4th at 1190. This case law is now codified in Ins C §2051.5(c), which states that no homeowners' policy may limit or deny payment of RCV in the event the insured decides to rebuild or replace the property at a location other than the insured premises. The replacement cost, however, shall be calculated on the basis of the cost to rebuild at the original site.

Some commercial property policies impose a time limit within which the property must be repaired or replaced in order for the insured to recover RCV. For example, the ISO Businessowners Special Property Coverage Form (BP 00 02 12 99) and the ISO Homeowners 3 Coverage Form (HO 00 03 10 90) (see §13.35) contain such a provision, although the ISO Building and Personal Property Coverage Form (CP 00 10 04 02) does not. Such a provision typically gives the insurer the right to pay the ACV and withhold the difference between the ACV and the RCV until completion of repairs. Completion of repairs, or purchase of a substitute property, is considered a condition precedent to receiving RCV. See Fraley v Allstate Ins. Co. (2000) 81 CA4th 1282, 1287, 97 CR2d 386. However, some insurers will agree to make progress payments as the repairs reach certain degrees of completion.

A homeowners' insurer must pay the actual cash value, until the damaged property is repaired, rebuilt, or replaced. Ins C §2051.5(a). A homeowners' policy must allow the insured at least 12 months from the date the first ACV payment is made to collect the full RCV. An insured may obtain an extension of 6 months for "good cause."

In City of Hollister v Monterey Ins. Co. (2008) 165 CA4th 455, 81 CR3d 72, after a fire damaged a building insured under a commercial property policy, the insured city sought to recover the building's "functional replacement value." To recover such benefits, the policy required the city to enter into a contract to repair or replace the building within 180 days after the fire. The court held that, even though the 180-day replacement provision was a condition precedent, the insurer was equitably estopped to assert the provision because it failed to cooperate with and assist the city in determining the extent of the insured's additional liability and actively interfered with performance of the city's contracting condition by obstructing, delaying, and interfering with the city's efforts to determine its rights under the policy. 165 CA4th at 491.

§13.104 D. Guaranteed Replacement Cost

Guaranteed replacement cost coverage requires the insurer, in the event of a loss, to pay the full amount needed to repair or replace the damaged or destroyed property with like or equivalent construction regardless of the stated policy limit. See Ins C §10102. In addition, an insured can elect to purchase this coverage with full building code upgrade coverage or with limited building code upgrade coverage, under which the insurer pays the additional costs of repairing or replacing the damaged structure to comply with any new building standards, such as building codes or zoning laws required by government agencies and in effect at the time of rebuilding.

NOTE: The policy must specify whether the insured must "actually repair or replace the damaged or destroyed dwelling in order to recover guaranteed replacement cost." Ins C §10102(a).

See Ins C §10102 regarding the California Residential Property Insurance Disclosure. See §13.109.

© The Regents of the University of California

§13.105 E. Extended Replacement Cost

Extended replacement cost coverage requires the insurer, in the event of a loss, to pay to repair or replace the damaged or destroyed structure with like or equivalent construction up to a specified percentage over the stated policy limit. This percentage is often 125 percent.

In Major v Western Home Ins. Co. (2009) 169 CA4th 1197, 87 CR3d 556, the policy (1) provided extended replacement cost benefits up to 25 percent over the stated policy limit for the dwelling and (2) required that the dwelling coverage limit be equal to the cost to replace the home to be determined by a home inspection. The inspection revealed that the dwelling coverage limit was lower than the cost to replace the home. Raising the dwelling limit would have resulted in an increase in the limit applicable to personal property, which was a percentage of the dwelling limit. The insurer failed to raise the coverage limits until after a fire destroyed the home, and then argued it was done as a "courtesy." The appellate court rejected the argument, held the insurer had been contractually bound to increase the personal property limits, and affirmed the jury's finding that the insurer acted in bad faith.

§13.106 F. Inflation Guard

Some policies offer additional protection against increases in repair or replacement costs that reflect increased costs of building materials or labor. This feature may have different names, but often is called "inflation guard." When this option is selected, the insurer will automatically increase the policy limit on renewal. However, the insured should still make sure that the limit is adequate and should notify the agent or broker of any additions or modifications to the structure that would increase its value faster than the general inflation rate.

In Everett v State Farm Gen. Ins. Co. (2008) 162 CA4th 649, 661, 75 CR3d 812, the insured received a California Residential Property Insurance Disclosure statement, which provided that, to be eligible for extended replacement cost coverage, the insured must insure the property to its full replacement cost at the time the policy is issued with possible periodic adjustments for inflation. The insurer sent annual renewal certificates reminding the insured that the stated replacement cost figure was merely an estimate, and it was the insured's responsibility to determine whether the property was adequately insured. The court held that it was the insured's duty to determine whether the coverage was sufficient and that an inflation coverage provision did not lead the insured to believe that the policy provided for 100-percent replacement cost. 162 CA4th at 661.

§13.107 G. Code-Mandated Repairs

Although the concept of "replacement cost" (i.e., new for old) is now universally accepted (see §13.103), a significant but perhaps not completely resolved issue is coverage for code-mandated techniques or materials that increase the cost of repair or replacement of a damaged structure.

Courts have held that an insurer is not obligated to pay for code-mandated changes in construction (see McCorkle v State Farm Ins. Co. (1990) 221 CA3d 610, 270 CR 492), even when the insured's policy states that the carrier will pay the full cost to repair or replace without regard to policy limits (see Bischel v Fire Ins. Exch. (1991) 1 CA4th 1168, 2 CR2d 575). In both of these cases, the courts looked to Ins C §§2070-2071, but did not address the fact that the basic fire insurance policy set forth in §2071 is a traditional indemnity contract; superior levels of coverage can be provided (Ins C §2070), and an insurer is free to enhance benefits or delete clauses that impose duties or limitations on an insured. Ins C §2079.

Given the importance of this issue, it should be expected that insureds will challenge this limitation on the following bases:

- Representations in brochures, advertising, or at the point of sale (Dobosz v State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. (Ill Ct App 1983) 458 NE2d 611; Jones v Crown Life Ins. Co. (1978) 86 CA3d 630, 150 CR 375 (obligation to inform insured of policy exclusions); Bass v John Hancock Mut. Life Ins. Co. (1974) 10 C3d 792, 112 CR 195 (insurer could not rely on employee's prior rejection of employer's group plan after terms were changed); Laing v Occidental Life Ins. Co. (1966) 244 CA2d 811, 53 CR 681 (insured entitled to rely on insurer's representations even though insured failed to read policy); but see Brown v Royal Maccabees Life Ins. Co. (10th Cir 1998) 137 F3d 1236 (insured could not rely on insurer's computer-generated false illustration of insured's actuarial situation, resulting from programming error, that was at variance with policy terms));
- Waiver or estoppel theories (Ivey v United Nat'l Indem. Co. (9th Cir 1958) 259 F2d 205 (estoppel based on insurer's representations)); or
- The theory that the limitation was not brought to the insured's attention (see generally State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v Jacober (1973) 10 C3d 193, 110 CR 1; Logan v John Hancock Mut. Life Ins. Co. (1974) 41 CA3d 988, 116 CR 528).

In an apparent attempt to clarify whether a policy covers code-mandated changes, the legislature enacted Ins C §§10101-10107. Section 10101 requires the insurer to give a copy of the California Residential Property Insurance Disclosure Statement (set forth in Ins C §10102; see §13.109) to the named insured on the application, or the initial renewal, of any residential property insurance policy. The disclosure statement describes the principal forms of residential insurance coverage available in California. The insurer must identify on the disclosure form the type of coverage purchased or selected. The form indicates, among other matters, whether the coverage includes building code upgrades.

The issue of code-mandated repairs overlaps with the law and ordinance exclusion found in most policies. In Bischel v Fire Ins. Exch., supra, the court held in favor of the insurer, not only because the insured was entitled under the policy to have his dock restored only to its former condition, but also because the extra expense was mandated by government regulation, bringing the claim within the law and ordinance exclusion. Bischel, 1 CA4th at 1173. See §13.87 on law and ordinance exclusions.

§13.108 H. Deductibles

A "deductible" is the amount of loss the insured absorbs before the carrier's duty to indemnify is triggered. Deductibles vary widely by line and product. The greater the amount of risk an insured can accept in deductibles, the lower the insured's premium. Because modest increases in the deductible often result in surprisingly large reductions in the premium, insurance purchasers should always obtain quotes for a wide variety of deductibles.

§13.109 I. Additional Requirements for Homeowners' Policies

The declarations page for a homeowners' policy must set forth the limit of coverage for the structure and state that the limit is based on an estimate of the cost to rebuild the home, including an approximate cost for labor and materials. Ins C §10103(a)(2). If the policy does not provide coverage for building code upgrades (see below), the declarations page must contain a statement to that effect. Ins C §10103(a)(5).

In addition, a homeowners' insurer must provide a California Residential Property Insurance Disclosure form when a homeowners' policy is issued and each year thereafter while the policy remains in force. Ins C §10101. The disclosure statement must indicate which of the following categories of insurance the insured has selected (Ins C §10102):

- Guaranteed Replacement Cost Coverage With Full Building Code Upgrade, which pays replacement costs without regard to policy limits, and includes costs resulting from code changes;
- Guaranteed Replacement Cost Coverage With Limited or No Building Code Upgrade, which pays replacement costs without regard to policy limits, but limits or excludes costs resulting from code changes;
- Extended Replacement Cost, which pays replacement costs up to a specified percentage above the policy limit;
- Replacement Cost, which pays replacement costs up to the stated policy limit;
- Actual Cash Value, which pays the fair market value of the structure at the time of the loss, up to the stated policy limit; or
- Building Code Upgrade—Ordinance or Law Coverage, which pays, up to limits specified in the policy, additional costs required to bring the dwelling up to code.

Homeowners' insurance may not be labeled as "Guaranteed Replacement Cost Coverage" if it specifies maximum coverage amounts in terms of set dollar limits, percentage amounts, construction cost limits, indexing, or any other preset maximum for covered damage to the insured dwelling. Ins C §10102(e).

§13.110 J. Coinsurance Clauses

Coinsurance encourages a client to carry adequate coverage and to pay adequate premiums to the insurer. Typically, an insured is required to carry an amount of insurance equal to a certain percentage of the replacement cost of the insured property, usually 80 to 90 percent. In exchange, the carrier agrees to pay 100 percent of all partial losses up to the value of the policy, less the deductible. An insured who fails to maintain an adequate insurance-to-value ratio may face a "coinsurance penalty" after a partial loss and receive less than the full replacement cost of the damaged property. Los Angeles Mut. Ins. Co. v Cawog (1973) 30 CA3d 378, 385, 106 CR 307.

§13.111 K. Value Reporting Clauses Regarding Inventory

Business property policies often require the insured to report inventories and property values on some type of periodic basis. The value of the inventory or property listed in the report may cause the insurer to assess an additional premium.

Under the ISO Value Reporting Form (CP 13 10 04 02), the insurer may require reports on a daily, weekly, monthly, or quarterly basis. This form adds a coinsurance condition that provides that if the insured's most recent report of values before the loss shows less than the full value of the covered property at that location on the report date, the insurer will pay only a proportion of the loss payable. The proportion is the ratio of value reported to the actual value of the covered property on the report date.

In addition, this form contains a "Failure to Submit Reports" condition that also limits the amounts the insurer will pay. This condition states:

> If at the time of loss or damage you have failed to submit the following:
> a. The first required report of values:
> (1) We will not pay more than 75 percent of the amount we would otherwise have paid; and > (2) We will pay only for loss or damage at locations shown in the declarations.
> b. Any required report of values after the first required report:
> (1) We will not pay more for loss or damage at any location than the values you last reported for that location; and
> (2) We will pay only for loss or damage at locations reported in your last report filed before the loss.

X. WHEN THINGS GO WRONG: CLAIMS AGAINST THE INSURER

§13.112 A. Common Law Bad Faith

The duty of good faith and fair dealing requires that neither party to the contract do anything to deprive the other of benefits due under the contract. Egan v Mutual of Omaha Ins. Co. (1979) 24 C3d 809, 818, 169 CR 691. The covenant of good faith is a supplement to the express contractual agreements and does not exist separately from its contractual underpinnings. McMillin Scripps North v Royal Ins. Co. (1993) 19 CA4th 1215, 1222, 23 CR2d 243.Thus, if no breach of contract can be shown, there is no basis for finding a breach of the covenant of good faith. Kransco v American Empire Surplus Lines Ins. Co. (2000) 23 C4th 390, 408, 97 CR2d 151; Waller v Truck Ins. Exch. (1995) 11 C4th 1, 35, 44 CR2d 370; San Diego Housing Comm'n v Industrial Indem. Co. (1998) 68 CA4th 526, 544, 80 CR2d 393.

The gravamen of a claim for first party bad faith is the insurer's refusal, without proper cause, to compensate the insured for a loss covered by the policy, or the insurer's unreasonable delay in paying benefits due under the policy. Gruenberg v Aetna Ins. Co. (1973) 9 C3d 566, 574, 108 CR 480; Waters v United Servs. Auto. Ass'n (1996) 41 CA4th 1063, 1070, 48 CR2d 910; Austero v National Cas. Co. (1978) 84 CA3d 1, 29, 148 CR 653, disapproved on other grounds in Egan v Mutual of Omaha Ins. Co. (1979) 24 C3d 809, 169 CR 691. Mere denial of benefits is not bad faith by itself. Dalrymple v United Servs. Auto. Ass'n (1995) 40 CA4th 497, 523, 46 CR2d 845; Opsal v United Servs. Auto. Ass'n (1991) 2 CA4th 1197, 1205, 10 CR2d 352; Safeco Ins. Co. v Guyton (9th Cir 1982) 692 F2d 551, 557. A denial of coverage based on a reasonable, but incorrect, interpretation of the insurance policy will ordinarily not support a bad faith action. Dalrymple v United Servs. Auto. Ass'n, supra; Opsal v United Servs. Auto. Ass'n, supra; Hanson v Prudential Ins. Co. (9th Cir 1985) 772 F2d 580.

Two recent cases disagree whether subjective bad faith plays a part if an insurer defends against a bad faith claim under the genuine dispute doctrine. In Brehm v 21st Century Ins. Co. (2008) 166 CA4th 1225, 83 CR3d 410, the insured sued the insurer for bad faith failure to settle prior to arbitration. The insurer demurred, arguing the dispute presented "a classic 'genuine dispute' as to the value of the insured's claim," because the insurer relied on an expert to evaluate the insured's claim. The trial court sustained the insurer's demurrer without leave to amend. The appellate court reversed, holding that the insurer could not prevail without showing both objectively reasonable conduct and good faith subjective intent.

In contrast, in Bosetti v U.S. Life Ins. Co. in City of New York (2009) 175 CA4th 1208, 1236, 96 CR3d 744, the appellate court held that "good faith" is an objective standard. "Not only is subjective bad faith unnecessary to establish a bad faith cause of action, it is also insufficient to do so." 175 CA4th at 1236. To support this conclusion, the Bosetti court relied on Carma Developers (Cal.), Inc. v Marathon Dev. Cal., Inc. (1992) 2 C4th 342, 373, 6 CR2d 467, in which the supreme court held that "the covenant of good faith can be breached for objectively unreasonable conduct, regardless of the actor's motive." See Bosetti, 175 CA4th at 1236. The Bosetti court expressly disagreed with Brehm to the extent Brehm held there is a distinct subjective good faith requirement. Bosetti, 175 CA4th at 1238.

Generally, bad faith cannot exist in the absence of coverage. In certain circumstances, however, California courts have held that even a claim that does not come within a policy's coverage may trigger a bad faith claim if unreasonable failure to investigate the claim, or unreasonable delay in providing a coverage decision, harms an insured. Further, if the carrier provides a defense in liability litigation, it can incur bad faith liability by mishandling that defense, even if a court later finds that it owed no duty to defend. See Travelers Ins. Co. v Lesher (1986) 187 CA3d 169, 186, 231 CR 791, disapproved on other grounds in Buss v Superior Court (1997) 16 C4th 35, 50 n12, 65 CR2d 366. But see Shade Foods, Inc. v Innovative Prods. Sales & Mktg., Inc. (2000) 78 CA4th 847, 886, 93 CR2d 364 (court affirmed insurer's bad faith failure "to conduct a meaningful investigation before denying coverage," but reversed large punitive damages award because insurer's conduct was not proved "despicable" by clear and convincing evidence as required by CC §3294).

In sum, the reasonableness of the carrier's conduct in adjusting and paying, or in denying, a claim rests on three considerations:

- Was its decision to deny the claim based on an adequate and thorough investigation? See Egan v Mutual of Omaha Ins. Co. (1979) 24 C3d 809, 819, 169 CR 691. But see Jordan v Allstate Ins. Co. (2007) 148 CA4th 1062, 56 CR3d 312 (Jordan II) (insurer failed to conduct a "full, fair, thorough and timely" investigation of the alleged collapse, but bad faith claim requires insured to prove coverage); Benavides v State Farm Gen. Ins. Co. (2006) 136 CA4th 1241, 1250, 39 CR3d 650 (if insurer's investigation, adequate or not, results in correct conclusion of no coverage, no tort liability arises for breach of covenant of good faith).
- Did the carrier delay unreasonably in deciding either to pay or to deny the claim? See McCormick v Sentinel Life Ins. Co. (1984) 153 CA3d 1030, 1049, 200 CR 732.
- Was the carrier's decision to withhold coverage a reasonable interpretation of the policy in light of the facts the carrier knew or should have known? See Hanson v Prudential Ins. Co., supra.

§13.113 B. Damages

Breach of the insurance contract, without bad faith, will support an award of contract benefits. Prejudgment interest may be recoverable if the amount due was certain or capable of being made certain by calculation. CC §3287(a); Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. v Allstate Ins. Co. (1991) 234 CA3d 1154, 1173, 286 CR 146.

An insured who establishes bad faith may recover a full array of tort remedies, including those described in §§13.114-117.

§13.114 1. Emotional Distress

Proximate cause is required for recovery of emotional distress damages in bad faith cases. Major v Western Home Ins. Co. (2009) 169 CA4th 1197, 1215, 87 CR3d 556. Claims of emotional distress must be incidental to "a substantial invasion of property interests." Gourley v State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. (1991) 53 C3d 121, 128, 3 CR2d 666; Major, 169 CA4th at 1214. Therefore, emotional distress damages must be tied to actual, not merely potential, economic loss. Continental Ins. Co. v Superior Court (1995) 37 CA4th 69, 85, 43 CR2d 374; Major, 169 CA4th at 1214.

Although unreasonable delay in paying benefits is actionable as bad faith, "a delay in paying policy benefits, even if in an unreasonable manner, does not in itself establish economic loss to the plaintiff" so as to justify emotional distress damages. Maxwell v Fire Ins. Exch. (1998) 60 CA4th 1446, 1450; 70 CR2d 866; Major, 169 CA4th at 1214. On the other hand, the requirement of economic loss for recovery of emotional distress damages may be satisfied by the insured's payment of legal fees and court costs to enforce the claim under the policy. Delos v Farmers Group, Inc., (1979) 93 CA3d 642, 659, 155 CR 843; Major, 169 CA4th at 1214.

§13.115 2. Attorney Fees and Costs

The insured may obtain attorney fees and costs incurred for recovery of wrongfully withheld policy benefits (known as Brandt fees), but not fees or costs incurred in proving tort claims. See Brandt v Superior Court (1985) 37 C3d 813, 817, 210 CR 211; Slottow v American Cas. Co. (9th Cir 1993) 10 F3d 1355, 1362 (applying California law, holding it is insured's burden to allocate fees and costs incurred to recover policy benefits). See also Essex Ins. Co. v Five Star Dye House, Inc. (2006) 38 C4th 1252, 45 CR3d 362 (assignee of bad faith claim for insurer's wrongful withholding of policy benefits may recover Brandt fees); CACI 2350 (plaintiff "may recover attorney fees… incurred to obtain policy benefits but not attorney fees… incurred for other purposes"). Courts have reached conflicting results on whether attorney fees incurred in defending against an insurer's unsuccessful appeal are recoverable. See Baron v Fire Ins. Exchange (2007) 154 CA4th 1184, 1198, 65 CR3d 502 (allowing recovery of fees on appeal); Track Mortgage Group, Inc. v Crusader Ins. Co. (2002) 98 CA4th 857, 120 CR2d 228 (allowing recovery of fees on appeal); Shade Foods, Inc. v Innovative Prods. Sales & Mktg., Inc. (2000) 78 CA4th 847, 93 CR2d 364 (fees on appeal not recoverable); Burnaby v Standard Fire Ins. Co. (1995) 40 CA4th 787, 47 CR2d 326 (fees on appeal not recoverable); McGregor v Paul Revere Life Ins. Co. (9th Cir 2004) 369 F3d 1099, 1101 (predicting the California Supreme Court will allow recovery of fees on appeal). See also Textron Fin. Corp. v National Union Fire Ins. Co. (2004) 118 CA4th 1061, 1075, 13 CR3d 586 (when insured had contingency fee agreement, insured's attorney fee recovery was limited to amount specified by contract; insured cannot seek "reasonable value" of fees in excess of amount set by contract).

If the insured has a contingency fee agreement with its attorneys, the trier of fact must determine the percentage of the legal fees paid to the attorney that reflects the work attributable to obtaining the contract recovery. In Cassim v Allstate Ins. Co. (2004) 33 C4th 780, 16 CR3d 374, the California Supreme Court set out the following method of calculation (33 C4th at 812):

> To determine the percentage of the legal fees attributable to the contract recovery, the trial court should determine the total number of hours an attorney spent on the case and then determine how many hours were spent working exclusively on the contract recovery. Hours spent working on issues jointly related to both the tort and contract should be apportioned, with some hours assigned to the contract and some to the tort. This latter figure, added to the hours spent on the contract alone, when divided by the total number of hours worked, should provide the appropriate percentage.

The court further held that no portion of legal fees attributable to the punitive damage award can be recovered as Brandt fees and that Brandt fees can never exceed the legal fees for the combined tort and contract recovery (in most cases, the court noted, the amount will be far less). 33 C4th at 812.

The court also held that the insured bears the burden of proof to demonstrate how fees for work attributable to both the tort and contract recoveries should be apportioned. Trial courts have discretion to disregard fee arrangements that appear to be designed to manipulate the calculation of Brandt fees for the insured's benefit. 33 C4th at 813. In Major v Western Home Ins. Co. (2009) 169 CA4th 1197, 1218, 87 CR3d 556, the court described the type of testimony that supported plaintiffs' claim for Brandt fees:

> [C]ounsel for the Majors testified in detail about the amount of fees the Majors incurred. He testified that he reviewed the entire file, carefully allocated the time devoted to the prosecution of the complaint against Western, broke out the time devoted to the contract portion of the complaint, and the time that could not be segregated. He identified and requested hourly billing rates lower than the rates a court had awarded in a recent insurance bad faith case, and stated he had not billed for at least 200 hours in trial preparation and for the trial itself. He also described the costs incurred in connection with the action and reduced that amount by nearly half to account for those costs attributable to the prosecution of the contract action only.

§13.116 3. Consequential Economic Loss

The insured may also recover consequential economic losses, such as loss of property in a foreclosure or forced sale (Little v Stuyvesant Life Ins. Co. (1977) 67 CA3d 451, 465 n3, 136 CR 653; Merlo v Standard Life & Acc. Ins. Co. (1976) 59 CA3d 5, 16, 130 CR 416); loss of future earnings and profits (*Gruenberg v Aetna Ins. 4. Punitive Damages

§13.117 a. Clear and Convincing Evidentiary Standard

If the jury finds, by clear and convincing evidence, that the insurer acted with "oppression, fraud, or malice," the insured may recover punitive damages. See CC §3294; Jordan v Allstate Ins. Co. (2007) 148 CA4th 1062, 1080, 56 CR3d 312 (Jordan II); Hangarter v Provident Life & Acc. Ins. Co. (9th Cir 2004) 373 F3d 998. For example, in Diamond Woodworks, Inc. v Argonaut Ins. Co. (2003) 109 CA4th 1020, 1050, 135 CR2d 736, the court held that punitive damages were supported by the insurer's > near reflexive denial of the severely maimed [employee's] employment status and entitlement to workers' compensation benefits, not to mention their subsequent long-term refusal to budge from that position, [and the fact that] the evidence was consistent with intentional fraud, and not consistent with mistake, honest error, negligence….

Although the same evidence used to establish bad faith may be used to establish oppression, fraud, or malice, the higher standard of clear and convincing evidence is required to impose punitive damages. Thus, a "marginally sufficient case of bad faith is not likely to prove malice or oppression by clear and convincing evidence." Shade Foods, Inc. v Innovative Prods. Sales & Mktg., Inc. (2000) 78 CA4th 847, 909, 93 CR2d 364. Punitive damages are appropriate "when tortious conduct rises to levels of extreme indifference to the plaintiff's rights, a level which decent citizens should not have to tolerate." Food Pro Int'l, Inc. v Farmers Ins. Exchange (2008) 169 CA4th 976, 994, 89 CR3d 1, quoting American Airlines, Inc. v Sheppard, Mullin, Richter & Hampton (2002) 96 CA4th 1017, 1051, 117 CR2d 685. However, punitive damages should not be allowed when the offending conduct is consistent with "a mistake of law or fact, honest error of judgment, overzealousness, mere negligence or other such noniniquitous human failing." Food Pro, 169 CA4th at 994, quoting Tomaselli v Transamerica Ins. Co. (1994) 25 CA4th 1269, 1288 n14, 31 CR2d 433. See also Patrick v Maryland Cas. Co. (1990) 217 CA3d 1566, 1576, 267 CR 24 (claims handling that is "witless and infected with symptoms of bureaucratic inertia and inefficiency" does not add up to malice or oppression).

NOTE: An insured's egregious misconduct may justify punitive damages, but that liability may not be shifted to the insurer; only an insurance company's own egregious misconduct may justify an award of punitive damages. See PPG Indus., Inc. v Transamerica Ins. Co. (1999) 20 C4th 310, 84 CR2d 455.

© The Regents of the University of California

§13.117A b. "Clear and Convincing" Evidence Is Required for Punitive Damages

The "clear and convincing" evidentiary standard also applies to summary judgment or summary adjudication motions (see Food Pro Int'l, Inc. v Farmers Ins. Exchange (2008) 169 CA4th 976, 994, 89 CR3d 1; Basich v Allstate Ins. Co. (2001) 87 CA4th 1112, 1118, 105 CR2d 153), and to motions for nonsuit, challenging punitive damage claims (see Stewart v Truck Ins. Exch. (1993) 17 CA4th 468, 21 CR2d 338). The judge must "view the evidence presented through the prism of the substantive [clear and convincing] evidentiary burden." Anderson v Liberty Lobby, Inc. (1986) 477 US 242, 254, 106 SC 2505, 91 L Ed 2d 202, as quoted in Food Pro Int'l, 169 CA4th at 994.

§13.117B c. Corporate Entities May Be Held Liable for Punitive Damages Based on the Acts or Omissions of a "Managing Agent"

California follows the rule of Restatement (Second) of Torts §909 (Tent. Draft No. 19, 1973) that a corporation may be held liable for punitive damages for the acts of an agent employed in a "managerial capacity." Egan v Mutual of Omaha Ins. Co. (1979) 24 C3d 809, 822, 169 CR 691. The determination whether employees act in a managerial capacity does not hinge on their "level" in the corporate hierarchy, but rather on the degree of discretion the employee possesses in making corporate policy. In the context of insurance claims, the Court held (24 C3d at 823):

> When employees dispose of insureds' claims with little if any supervision, they possess sufficient discretion for the law to impute their actions concerning those claims to the corporation.

The employees were "managerial employees" because they exercised broad discretion in disposing of the plaintiff's claim.

The year after Egan was decided, the Legislature amended CC §3294(b) to require a plaintiff to prove that an officer, director, or managing agent of the defendant authorized or ratified the wrongful conduct for which the damages are awarded in order to obtain punitive damages against a corporate defendant. Such authorization or ratification must be proved by clear and convincing evidence. Barton v Alexander Hamilton Life Ins. Co. (2003) 110 CA4th 1640, 1644, 3 CR3d 258; CACI 3943.

Insurers have argued that use of the term "managing agent" rather than "managerial employee" in amended CC §3294(b) eliminated Egan's holding that punitive damages could be imposed on an insurer for the acts of claims personnel, even though White v Ultramar, Inc. (1999) 21 C4th 563, 88 CR2d 19 established that the 1980 amendments to §3294 did not alter Egan's definition of "managing agent." In Major v Western Home Ins. Co. (2009) 169 CA4th 1197, 87 CR3d 556, the appellate court held that a claims person who managed an office without day-to-day oversight, supervised lower ranking employees, supervised the handling of claims, and authorized payment of benefits was a "managing agent" of the insurer, even though employed by a separate company. 169 CA4th at 1221. See Textron Financial Corp. v National Union Fire Ins. Co. (2004) 118 CA4th 1061, 1080, 13 CR3d 586 (third party insurance agency was "managing agent" of insurer, because agency could independently solicit, bind, write, and administer liability policies; participated in issuing, canceling, and reinstating policies; and advised and participated in ultimate decision to deny claim); Hergenroeder v Travelers Prop. & Cas. Co. (ED Cal 2008) 249 FRD 595, 620 (claims person with only $60,000 in claims handling authority was not "managing agent" as to claim for over $300,000 in policy benefits).

Source: Real Property/California Real Property Sales Transactions/13 Property Insurance/§13.118 d. Constitutionality of Punitive Damages

§13.118 d. Constitutionality of Punitive Damages

Under California law, a punitive damage award must be based on three factors: (1) the reprehensibility of the defendant's conduct; (2) the amount of compensatory damages awarded to or actual harm suffered by the plaintiff; and (3) the defendant's financial condition. Adams v Murakami (1991) 54 C3d 105, 110, 284 CR 318, 320; Neal v Farmers Ins. Exchange (1978) 21 C3d 910, 928, 148 CR 389, 399. Federal cases have shifted the focus to the constitutionality of punitive damage awards under federal due process standards. In State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v Campbell (2003) 538 US 408, 155 L Ed 2d 585, 123 S Ct 1513, the United States Supreme Court held that the due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment prohibits grossly excessive or arbitrary punishment of a tortfeasor, and therefore limits the amount of punitive damages that a state court may award. The State Farm Court required courts reviewing a punitive damages award to evaluate whether the award of punitive damages was excessive in light of the following "guideposts":

- The degree of reprehensibility of the defendant's conduct (see §13.118A);
- The disparity between the actual or potential harm suffered by the plaintiff and the punitive damages awarded (see §13.118B); and
- The difference between the punitive damages awarded by the jury and the penalties authorized or imposed in comparable cases (see §13.118C).

The first two guideposts are appropriate for a jury to consider in determining the amount of a punitive damages award; the third guidepost is an appropriate consideration only for a reviewing court. Bullock v Philip Morris USA, Inc. (2008) 159 CA4th 655, 689, 71 CR3d 775; Century Sur. Co. v Polisso (2006) 139 CA4th 922, 959, 43 CR3d 468.

§13.118A (1) First Guidepost: Reprehensibility of Defendant's Conduct

State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v Campbell (2003) 538 US 408, 419; 155 L Ed 2d 585, 602; 123 S Ct 1513 explained that reprehensibility of the defendant's conduct is the "most important indicium of the reasonableness of a punitive damage award." See also BMW of N. Am. v Gore (1996) 517 US 559, 575; 116 S Ct 1589, 1599, 134 L Ed 2d 809. The issue of reprehensibility requires the court to examine whether:

- The harm caused was physical as opposed to economic;
- The tortious conduct evinced an indifference to or a reckless disregard of the health or safety of others;
- The target of the conduct had financial vulnerability;
- The conduct involved repeated actions or was an isolated incident; and
- The harm was the result of intentional malice, trickery, deceit, or mere accident.

Repeated misconduct is more reprehensible than an individual act of malfeasance. State Farm, 538 US at 423; Johnson v Ford Motor Co. (2005) 35 C4th 1191, 1202, 29 CR3d 401. Similar conduct need not be identical, but courts must ensure that it constitutes replication of the prior transgressions. Johnson, 35 C4th at 1204. Evidence of wide-ranging, dissimilar business practices may not be used to show reprehensibility, because a "defendant should be punished for the conduct that harmed the plaintiff, not for being an unsavory individual or business." State Farm, 538 US 408, 421. However, a refusal to defend an insured may be considered more than a single event, if it consists of a series of acts or course of conduct committed over a period of time. Century Sur. Co. v Polisso (2006) 139 CA4th 922, 965, 43 CR3d 468.

A jury may consider evidence of harm to others in determining the degree of reprehensibility of the defendant's conduct, but may not award punitive damages for the purpose of punishing a defendant for harm caused to nonparties to the litigation. Philip Morris USA v Williams (2007) 549 US 346, 355, 166 L Ed 2d 940, 949, 127 S Ct 1057. Evidence of harm to nonparties may be admitted for the limited purpose of determining reprehensibility, but may not be used for the purpose of determining the amount of punitive damages. For this reason, in Bullock v Philip Morris USA, Inc. (2008) 159 CA4th 655, 693, 71 CR3d 775, the court held that it was error to refuse to give the following instruction, requested by defendant: "You are not to impose punishment for harms suffered by persons other than the plaintiff before you." Further, a defendant may not be punished for its lawful conduct in other states that does not affect the plaintiff. BMW of N. Am. v Gore (1996) 517 US 559, 572, 134 L Ed 2d 809, 824, 116 S Ct 1589. Nevertheless, evidence describing out-of-state transactions may be relevant to determining the degree of reprehensibility of the defendant's conduct. 517 US at 574 n21.

§13.118B (2) Second Guidepost: Disparity Between Harm Suffered by Plaintiff and Punitives Awarded

The Supreme Court has declined to establish a bright-line, mathematical formula or ratio of punitive to compensatory damages, explaining that, a punitive damage award generally will be less than ten times the amount of compensatory damages. That ratio may be higher if there is a particularly egregious act that results in a small amount of economic damages. Conversely, if compensatory damages are substantial, a lesser ratio—perhaps only 1:1—could reach the outermost limit of the constitutional guarantee. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v Campbell (2003) 538 US 426, 419; 155 L Ed 2d 585, 602; 123 S Ct 1513.

California courts have not rigidly followed the numerical ratio discussed in State Farm. For example, in Simon v San Paolo U.S. Holding Co., Inc. (2005) 35 C4th 1159, 29 CR3d 379, the California Supreme Court disagreed with the statement in Diamond Woodworks, Inc. v Argonaut Ins. Co. (2003) 109 CA4th 1020, 1057, 135 CR2d 736, that, "in the usual case" the U.S. Supreme Court's decisions establish an "outer constitutional limit" of approximately four times the compensatory damages. The Simon court stated (35 C4th at 1182):

> We understand the court's statement in State Farm that "few awards" significantly exceeding a single-digit ratio will satisfy due process to establish a type of presumption: ratios between the punitive damages award and the plaintiff's actual or potential compensatory damages significantly greater than nine or 10 to one are suspect and, absent special justification (by, for example, extreme reprehensibility or unusually small, hard-to-detect or hard-to-measure compensatory damages), cannot survive appellate scrutiny under the due process clause.

The Simon court also held that a punitive damage award of 340 times the compensatory damage award qualified as a "breathtaking" multiplier far outside the "single-digit neighborhood" suggested by State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v Campbell, supra; Simon, 35 C4th at 1183. The Simon court ruled that if an award of punitive damages is constitutionally excessive, the appropriate order is for an absolute reduction, rather than a conditional reduction with the alternative of a new trial. 35 C4th at 1187. In Simon, the court reduced the punitive damages to $50,000, just exceeding the largest single-digit ratio amount, which the court stated was "not extraordinary for fraudulent conduct," but not so minor that it could be "completely ignored by the defendant" because even a prosperous company would ordinarily take measures to prevent the recurrence of a $50,000 net loss. 35 C4th at 1189. See also Walker v Farmers Ins. Exch. (2007) 153 CA4th 965, 974, 63 CR3d 507 (less reprehensible conduct warrants 1:1 ratio when "handsome" award of emotional distress damages indicated punitive element in compensatory damage award); Century Sur. Co. v Polisso (2006) 139 CA4th 922, 966, 43 CR3d 468 (punitive/compensatory ratio of 3.2:1 reflected defendant's reprehensible conduct); Planned Parenthood, Inc. v American Coalition of Life Activists (9th Cir 2005) 422 F3d 949, 960 (discussion of punitive/compensatory damage ratios).

In Exxon Shipping Co. v Baker (2008) __ US __, 171 L Ed 2d 570, 128 S Ct 2605, the Supreme Court, addressing the award of punitive damages, held that federal maritime law should contain "more rigorous standards than the constitutional limit on punitive damages" (__ US __, 171 L Ed 2d at 594) and concluded that "a 1:1 ratio, which is above the median award, is a fair upper limit" (__ US __, 171 L Ed 2d at 598). The Court emphasized that its inquiry involved "reviewing a jury award for conformity with maritime law, rather than the outer limit allowed by due process." __ US __, 171 L Ed 2d at 591. The Court did not conclude that the Constitution prohibits a punitive damage award greater than the amount awarded for compensatory damages, and cited with approval its prior holdings in State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v Campbell, supra and BMW of N. Am. v Gore (1996) 517 US 559, 134 L Ed 2d 809, 824, 116 S Ct 1589.

Under CC §3295(d), after the defendant's liability for punitive damages is established, evidence of defendant's financial condition, e.g., net worth, may be adduced to the trier of fact to assess the amount of punitive damages. "[T]he defendant's financial condition is an essential factor in setting the amount of a punitive damage award… to serve the goals of retribution and deterrence without exceeding the necessary level of punishment." Century Sur. Co., 139 CA4th at 960.

In Textron Fin. Corp. v National Union Fire Ins. Co. (2004) 118 CA4th 1061, 1083, 13 CR3d 586, the appellate court held that the second Campbell "guidepost"—consideration of the disparity between the plaintiff's actual harm and the punitive damage award—must be limited to the amount awarded for the tort claim(s) supporting the punitive damage, and must exclude any sum the plaintiff received for breach of contract.

§13.118C (3)Third Guidepost: Court Review of Difference Between Punitives Awarded and Authorized Penalties

The "third guidepost" requires a court review of the difference between the punitive damages awarded by the jury and penalties authorized or imposed in comparable cases. The comparison is not a matter for jury consideration. See Century Sur. Co. v Polisso (2006) 139 CA4th 922, 959, 43 CR3d 468. In Century, the court, found no error in the trial court's use of BAJI 14.72.2, which does not address comparable civil sanctions, nor in the trial court's rejection of a special jury instruction on that issue. Evidence of civil sanctions was properly excluded as irrelevant to the jury's consideration. 139 CA4th at 958. In any event, the appellate court found that the maximum fine imposed by Ins C §790.035 for each willful act of insurer misconduct was not particularly useful information, because the insurer had engaged in a course of conduct involving many prohibited acts over a 5-year period. 139 CA4th at 967.

§13.118D (4) Aggregate Disgorgement of Profits Theory Prohibited

An award of punitive damages may not be based on an aggregate disgorgement of profits theory. Johnson v Ford Motor Co. (2005) 35 C4th 1191, 29 CR3d 401. Although repeated acts of similar misconduct and the profitability of that conduct is relevant to the issue of reprehensibility and though disgorgement of profits earned from the wrongful act committed against the plaintiff is permissible, calculating punitive damages in an individual tort case based on the profits from similar torts against other individuals "creates possibilities for unfairness—to the defendant and other possible claimants both—which may be of constitutional dimension." 35 C4th at 1208.

© The Regents of the University of California

§13.118E (5) Evidence of Defendant's Net Worth Required

To serve the goals of punishment and deterrence, a punitive damage award must be large enough to deter future bad conduct, without exceeding the amount necessary for punishment. Century Sur. Co. v Polisso (2006) 139 CA4th 922, 967, 43 CR3d 468; Simon v San Paolo U.S. Holding Co., Inc. (2005) 35 C4th 1159, 1185, 29 CR3d 379. In Century Sur. Co., the court held that evidence of the defendant's net worth was an essential factor in the punitive damage phase of the trial. 139 CA4th at 960. See Adams v Murakami (1991) 54 C3d 105, 110, 284 CR 318; see also CC §3295(d). Specifically, the court found that a punitive damage award of 3.2 percent of the defendant's net worth was appropriate, because a smaller award "would not amount to much more than a slap on the wrist." 139 CA4th at 967. See also Bardis v Oates (2004) 119 CA4th 1, 26, 14 CR3d 89 (punitive damage award of less than 1 percent of defendant's net worth "tantamount to a slap on the wrist").

§13.119 C. Duty of Good Faith Is Mutual; No Cause of Action for "Reverse Bad Faith"

The duty of good faith between insurer and insured is mutual. Counsel for the insured, as the insured's agent, is bound by the duty of good faith in all matters concerning resolution of the underlying claim. Although the insured may not be held liable for damages for "reverse bad faith" (Kransco v American Empire Surplus Lines Ins. Co. (2000) 23 C4th 390, 402, 97 CR2d 151), the insured's "bad faith" may be asserted as a defense to contract claims against the insurer. Agricultural Ins. Co. v Superior Court (1999) 70 CA4th 385, 82 CR2d 594. In addition, the insurer may file suit or cross-complain against the insured for fraud and may seek damages, including punitive damages. 70 CA4th at 404.

PRACTICE TIP: Whether counsel represents the claimant or the insurer, the attorney's letters, conversations, and other interactions, even after a suit has been filed, may become evidence in litigation over the duty of good faith. White v Western Title Ins. Co. (1985) 40 C3d 870, 885, 221 CR 509. As a potential witness, counsel should take care not to say or write anything that he or she would not wish to see enlarged as a trial exhibit.

Source: Real Property/California Real Property Sales Transactions/13 Property Insurance/§13.120 D. Genuine Dispute Doctrine

§13.120 D. Genuine Dispute Doctrine

The "genuine dispute" doctrine, also called the "genuine issue" doctrine, is a rapidly evolving area of bad faith law. Bad faith liability may not be imposed if there is a genuine dispute over the insurer's liability under the policy. If an insurer denies or delays payment of policy benefits because it has a genuine dispute with its insured about the existence of coverage or the amount of the insured's claim, the insurer is not liable for bad faith, even though it may be liable for breach of contract. McCoy v Progressive W. Ins. Co. (2009) 171 CA4th 785, 793, 90 CR3d 74; Chateau Chamberay Homeowners Ass'n v Associated Int'l Ins. Co. (2001) 90 CA4th 335, 347, 108 CR2d 776; R&R Sails, Inc. v Insurance Co. of the State of Pennsylvania (SD Cal 2009) 610 F Supp 2d 1222, 1230. The doctrine may be applied whether the genuine dispute is based on legal or factual issues. Fraley v Allstate Ins. Co. 81 CA4th 1282, 1292, 97 CR2d 386; Chateau Chamberay Homeowners Ass'n, 90 CA4th at 348. However, if the dispute is based on a conflict of expert opinions, the doctrine does not apply if any of the following are true (90 CA4th at 348):

- The insurer misrepresented the nature of the investigation;
- The insurer's employees lied during depositions or to the insured;
- The insurer dishonestly selected its experts;
- The insurer's experts were unreasonable; or
- The insurer failed to conduct a thorough investigation.

In McCoy v Progressive West Ins. Co. (2009) 171 CA4th 785, 792, 90 CR3d 74 the insurer proposed jury instructions which were based on the foregoing factors and which stated that a genuine dispute does not constitute bad faith. The appellate court affirmed the trial court's refusal to give the instructions, because the genuine dispute doctrine is subsumed within the concept of what is reasonable and unreasonable, as set forth in CACI 2331 and 2332. Therefore, no further instruction was necessary.

NOTE: Counsel could argue that the applicable elements of the "genuine issue doctrine" deserve a special instruction to the jury, just like the "advice of counsel" defense. Case law recognizes that the "advice of counsel defense" is not a true affirmative defense, but rather negates an essential element of the insured's cause of action for bad faith. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v Superior Court (1991) 228 CA3d 721, 725, 279 CR 116. Nevertheless, there is a specific CACI instruction, 2335, on that issue.

A mistaken withholding of policy benefits, such as an inadvertent failure to indemnify, may qualify under the genuine dispute doctrine, but the doctrine does not encompass the insurer's duty to defend, which is a much broader duty. Century Sur. Co. v Polisso (2006) 139 CA4th 922, 950, 43 CR3d 468.

§13.121 E. No Cause of Action for Breach of Fiduciary Duty

Insureds cannot base claims on an alleged breach of fiduciary duty. See, e.g., Vu v Prudential Prop. & Cas. Ins. Co. (2001) 26 C4th 1142, 1150, 113 CR2d 70 ("[B]ut while these 'special' duties [characteristic of an insurer-insured relationship] are akin to, and often resemble, duties which are also owed by fiduciaries, the fiduciary-like duties arise because of the unique nature of the insurance contract, not because the insurer is a fiduciary."); Tran v Farmers Group, Inc. (2002) 104 CA4th 1202, 1212, 128 CR2d 728 ("[A]n insurer's breach of its 'fiduciary-like duties' is adequately redressed by a claim for breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing implied in the insurance contract"); Love v Fire Ins. Exch. (1990) 221 CA3d 1136, 1147, 271 CR 246; Henry v Associated Indem. Corp. (1990) 217 CA3d 1405, 1418, 266 CR 578.

§13.122 F. Unfair Competition Claims Under Bus & P C §17200

The Unfair Competition Law (UCL) (Bus & P C §§17200-17210), provides equitable relief for unlawful, unfair, or fraudulent business practices. Remedies include injunctive relief, civil penalties, and restitution of property or money obtained as a result of the alleged unfair business practice. Bus & P C §§17203, 17206. However, compensatory damages or attorney fees are not available to private litigants under the UCL. See Korea Supply Co. v Lockheed Martin Corp. (2003) 29 C4th 1134, 1144, 131 CR2d 29; Cortez v Purolator Air Filtration Prods., Co. (2000) 23 C4th 163, 173, 96 CR2d 518; Cel-Tech Communications, Inc. v Los Angeles Cellular Tel. Co. (1999) 20 C4th 163, 179, 83 CR2d 548. Moreover, a court cannot order disgorgement into a fluid recovery fund (i.e., any residue remaining after payment of individual claims) under Bus & P C §17200. See Kraus v Trinity Mgmt. Servs., Inc. (2000) 23 C4th 116, 137, 96 CR2d 485 (fluid recovery fund, consisting of defendants' illegal profits, "organized and administered for the purpose of providing financial assistance for the advancement of legal rights and interests of residential tenants in the City and County of San Francisco," held to be unavailable under UCL).

Insureds suing for bad faith often include a §17200 cause of action because the UCL will not support a private right of action against an insurer based solely on a violation of the Unfair Insurance Practices Act (Ins C §790.03(h)). Manufacturers Life Ins. Co. v Superior Court (Weil Ins. Agency) (1995) 10 C4th 257, 283, 41 CR2d 220; R&R Sails, Inc. v Insurance Co. of the State of Pennsylvania (SD Cal 2009) 610 F Supp 2d 1222, 1233. See also California Title Insurance Practice §§11.29-11.54 (2d ed Cal CEB 1997). In State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. v Superior Court (1996) 45 CA4th 1093, 53 CR2d 229, however, the Second District Court of Appeal held that while an insured may not base a §17200 claim on violations of Ins C §790.03, an insured may base a §17200 claim on allegations of common law fraud and bad faith. 45 CA4th at 1108. However, in Textron Fin. Corp. v National Union Fire Ins. Co. (2004) 118 CA4th 1061, 1070, 13 CR3d 586, the Fourth District Court of Appeal held that the insurer's alleged use of misleading documents and misrepresentation of both the terms of the insurance policies and the insurer's obligations under them "are the type of activities covered by the [Unfair Insurance Practices Act (Ins C §790.03(h))]," and could not form the basis for a §17200 claim.

In Hangarter v Provident Life & Acc. Ins. Co. (9th Cir 2004) 373 F3d 998, the Ninth Circuit held an insured who no longer had a contractual relationship with the insurer and could not demonstrate a "real or immediate threat of an irreparable injury" did not have standing under U.S. Const art III to pursue an action for injunctive relief under §17200, even if the insured would have been able to pursue the claim in state court. 373 F3d at 1021. See also California Liability Insurance Practice: Claims & Litigation §28.29 (Cal CEB 1991).

NOTE: In Cel-Tech Communications, Inc. v Los Angeles Cellular Tel. Co. (1999) 20 C4th 163, 179, 83 CR2d 548, the supreme court disapproved as overbroad the definition of "unfair" used in State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. v Superior Court, supra, but the court did not disapprove of its holding that common law fraud and bad faith can support a §17200 claim. Nevertheless, the State Farm case and the Textron case do not appear to be reconcilable. It appears the supreme court will ultimately have to decide this issue.

§13.123 G. Other Statutory Violations

Insureds no longer have standing to assert a violation of the Unfair Insurance Practices Act (Ins C §790.03(h)). See Moradi-Shalal v Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. (1988) 46 C3d 287, 250 CR 116 (insured cannot base private cause of action solely on violation of §790.03); see also Manufacturers Life Ins. Co. v Superior Court (Weil Ins. Agency) (1995) 10 C4th 257, 41 CR2d 220 (insureds cannot use Bus & P C §17200 to plead cause of action based on violation of §790.03(h), because to do so would undermine Moradi-Shalal).

NOTE: Although Ins C §1861.03(a) has made insurers subject to all of California's antitrust, unfair competition, and unfair business practices statutes, it does not itself create a private remedy for damages. Maler v Superior Court (1990) 220 CA3d 1592, 1597, 270 CR 222.

In Fairbanks v Superior Court (2009) 46 C4th 56, 61, 92 CR3d 279, the supreme court held that the Consumer Legal Remedies Act (CLRA) (CC §§1750-1784), which does allow a private right of action for unfair or deceptive practices, does not apply to life insurance because it is not a "good" or a "service" within the meaning of the Act. See also Broberg v The Guardian Life Ins. Co. of Am. (2009) 171 CA4th 912, 925, 90 CR3d 225 (life insurance is not a "good" or a "service" within the meaning of the CLRA).

NOTE: In contrast to life insurance, liability insurance typically includes a contractual promise to "defend" the insured against specified claims. The supreme court has characterized such a duty to defend as a promise to render a service, distinguishable from the promise to indemnify after defense costs have been incurred. Crawford v Weather Shield Mfg., Inc. (2008) 44 C4th 541, 553, 79 CR3d 721. Whether Fairbanks and Broberg will be limited to life insurance or extended to other types of insurance remains to be seen.

XI. EMERGING ISSUES REGARDING PROPERTY INSURANCE

§13.124 A. Terrorism

The Terrorism Risk Insurance Act of 2002 (TRIA) (Pub L 107-297, §101(b), 116 Stat 2322) created a temporary federal program to establish a "transparent system of shared public and private compensation for insured losses resulting from acts of terrorism." TRIA has twice been extended, most recently on December 26, 2007. See the Terrorism Risk Insurance Program Reauthorization Act of 2007 (Pub L 110-160, 121 Stat 1839). Under the extension, the Treasury Department requires that all insurers participate in the federal program through December 31, 2014. See §§13.125-13.129 for discussion of the risk insurance program.

The ISO and the American Association of Insurance Services (AAIS), an insurance industry technical support organization, have filed four types of endorsements to bring policies into compliance with the Act. The Act exempts such endorsements from any state's requirement that its insurance department has the right to approve the policy forms. TRIA §106(a)(2)(B).

The ISO has also filed a fifth type of endorsement that excludes certified acts of terrorism losses, with an exception for certain fire losses. In addition, the AAIS has filed endorsements to exclude noncertified acts of terrorism losses. For information about the AAIS, see the AAIS website listed in the Directory.

§13.130 B. Mold

Litigation involving mold claims has become commonplace. Although mold existed long before mankind, many experts blame current building techniques—e.g., airtight construction of commercial buildings and residences to conserve energy and increase comfort—for increasing indoor moisture levels and creating other conditions that facilitate the growth of mold. Although scientists apparently still disagree about causation, toxic molds have been blamed for a variety of physical ailments, ranging from flu-like symptoms to death.

NOTE: California adopted the Toxic Mold Protection Act of 2001 (Health & S C §§26100-26157), which imposes certain disclosure and remediation requirements on owners and transferors regarding the presence of mold in their buildings. See §4.82.

The insurance industry considers mold caused by excessive humidity, condensation, or flooding to be a maintenance issue. For that reason, mold is not covered under standard homeowners' or commercial property policies unless the mold is the result of a covered peril. Mold may be a distinct peril under an insurance policy, if it is not caused by a sudden discharge of water. See DeBruyn v Superior Court (2008) 158 CA4th 1213, 1223, 70 CR3d 652.

NOTE: In some policies, mold may be a covered cause of loss. In Freedman v State Farm Ins. Co. (2009) 173 CA4th 957, 964, 93 CR3d 296, an endorsement to the policy provided limited coverage for losses caused by "fungus," which was defined to included "any type of fungi, including mold or mildew." However, the court held there was no coverage for the mold damage, because the mold was caused by exclusions for contractor negligence, corrosion, or seepage or leakage of water from a plumbing system. 173 CA4th at 965.

A 2004 report by the California Department of Insurance found that 70 percent of multi-peril homeowners' insurers use mold exclusions or special limits for losses due to mold. Even the National Flood Insurance Program's Dwelling Policy (under the National Flood Insurance Act (42 USC §§4001-4129); see §13.53) excludes coverage for "water, moisture, mildew, or mold damage caused by the policyholder's failure to inspect and maintain the insured property after the flood waters recede." Dwelling Policy ¶12, §5, Exclusion D.4.b.(3). (The Dwelling Policy can be viewed at the FEMA website, which can be found in the Directory.)

§13.133 C. Sick-Building Syndrome

Increasingly, people claim they are being made sick by the buildings in which they live or work. Many products, including carpet fibers, flooring adhesives, wall coverings, or air circulation systems, either alone or in combination, are being blamed. Unfortunately, most of the insurance issues related to "sick-building syndrome" claims are still unresolved.

The first coverage issue regarding sick-building syndrome claims under a property policy will be whether there is a covered cause of loss. A named-perils policy will likely not list a peril that applies to sick-building claims. The author is not aware of any reported California case that has decided whether a "sick building" loss is a "direct physical loss."

In "sick-building" claims, there will undoubtedly not only be a dispute over when the loss was "manifest," but also which trigger should be applied, and whether the loss was known and thus not covered by the policy. The author is not aware of any reported California case that has addressed these issues. On direct physical loss and triggers applied to losses, see §§13.73-13.83; on the manifestation rule, see §13.80.

Several exclusions may bar coverage for "sick-building" claims. For example, the pollution exclusion (Exclusion 2.l in the ISO Causes of Loss—Special Form (CP 10 30 04 02)) may apply if the injury-causing product is found to be an "irritant," a "contaminant," or a "chemical" within the definition of "pollutants." The exclusions for "fungus, decay, deterioration, hidden or latent defect or any quality in property that causes it to damage or destroy itself" (Exclusion 2.d in the ISO Causes of Loss—Special Form (CP 10 30 04 02)) may apply to certain claims. The author is not aware of any reported California cases on these issues.

§13.137 D. Chinese Drywall

Numerous unresolved insurance issues are raised by complaints of property damage and illness allegedly caused by chemical compounds emitted from drywall imported from China. According to a press release issued in support of S 739, the Drywall Safety Act of 2009, more than 550 million pounds of drywall have been imported to the U.S. from China since 2006. The Consumer Product Safety Commission (CPSC) has determined that over 5.5 million sheets of drywall were imported to the U.S. from China during 2006 alone. More than 800 complaints from at least 23 states have been filed with the CPSC regarding Chinese drywall. See Directory for the internet address of CPSC's website for information regarding Chinese drywall.

According to the CPSC, in addition to human symptoms, complaints regarding property damage related to Chinese drywall include obnoxious odors emanating from the drywall; intermittent operation or premature failure of electric and electronic appliances and devices; corrosion of electrical components; and corrosion and premature failure of gas service and fire safety components.

Unfortunately, almost all the insurance issues related to Chinese drywall claims are unresolved.

© The Regents of the University of California

§13.138 1. Direct Physical Loss

The first coverage issue regarding Chinese drywall claims under a property policy will be whether there is a covered cause of loss. A named-perils policy will likely not list a peril that applies to Chinese drywall. For example, neither the ISO Causes of Loss—Basic Form (CP 10 10 04 02) nor the ISO Causes of Loss—Broad Form (CP 10 20 04 02) lists any "covered cause of loss" that would extend to such a claim. An all-risk policy, such as the ISO Causes of Loss—Special Form (CP 10 30 04 02) or the ISO Homeowners 3 - Special Form (HO 00 03 10 00), extends coverage to all nonexcluded perils but requires that the loss be a "direct physical loss."

A key issue, then, is whether there has been a "direct physical loss" See §13.73. Despite existing case law (e.g., State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. v Superior Court (1989) 215 CA3d 1435, 1445, 264 CR 269 (poor workmanship merely diminishes the value of property and is not "direct physical loss")), creative arguments based on simple facts could be tried. The Chinese drywall contaminates the home with odors and noxious chemicals (see §13.139); causes "direct physical damage" to metal components and all types of electrical and electronic components; and creates an intolerable safety risk and renders the property uninhabitable (see §13.140).

© The Regents of the University of California

§13.139 a. Odor; Release of Harmful Compounds

Although there have been no reported cases involving insurance coverage for odors caused by Chinese drywall, cases from other jurisdictions have held that foul odors that permeate the property may constitute physical damage. See Farmers Ins. Co. v Trutanich (Or App 1993) 123 Or App 6, 858 P2d 1332, 1335 (odors caused by meth lab); Essex Ins. Co. v BloomSouth Flooring Corp. (1st Cir 2009) 562 F3d 399 (applying Massachusetts law, to defective carpet under CGL policy).

An insured might also argue that Chinese drywall releases harmful compounds into the home, much in the same way that asbestos fibers may be released. Several cases have held that an asbestos release constitutes "direct physical loss." See, e.g., Sentinel Management Co. v New Hampshire Ins. Co. (Minn App 1997) 563 NW2d 296, 300; Yale Univ. v CIGNA Ins. Co. (D Conn 2002) 224 F Supp 2d 402, 4121; BellSouth Telecommunications, Inc. v W.R. Grace & Co. (2d Cir 1996) 77 F3d 603; Port Auth. of New York & New Jersey v Affiliated FM Ins. Co. (3rd Cir 2002) 311 F3d 226, 235-236.

© The Regents of the University of California

§13.140 b. Safety and Habitability

Significantly some California cases have held there is coverage for potential damage rendering a dwelling uninhabitable. See Strickland v Federal Ins. Co. (1988) 200 CA3d 792, 800, 246 CR 345 (risk of damage from landslide with policy that extended coverage to all risk of physical loss) and cases cited in Strickland. However, these cases involved policies that extended coverage to all risk of physical loss; none of them discussed any provision regarding "direct physical loss."

An insured might argue that Chinese drywall poses a risk to electrical components, including deterioration of connections. A degraded connection could develop hot spots resulting in overheating and possibly fire. Other concerns involve erosion of copper conductors over time. If the corrosion progressively eats away at a wire, the wire would eventually lose its capacity to carry current and start to overheat or become physically weak and break. In addition, contamination from Chinese drywall may cause damage to electronic components on printed circuit boards causing failure of protective devices like ground fault circuit interrupters, arc-fault circuit interrupters, and smoke alarms, which can present shock and fire hazards from the loss of protection provided by these devices. Contamination from Chinese drywall may also cause corrosion of gas service components, causing a potential gas leak due to corrosive pitting of piping could present a fire or explosion hazard. For further discussion of "direct physical loss," see §13.73.

§13.141 2. Possible Applicable Exclusions

Insurers will likely raise a number of exclusions to claims involving Chinese drywall. These may include:

- Pollutants. Many policies exclude pollutants. But see McKinnon v Truck Ins. Exch. (2003) 31 C4th 635, 653, 3 CR3d 228 (term "pollutant" in absolute pollution exclusion in CGL policy limited to "conventional environmental pollution," and did not encompass "ordinary acts of negligence involving harmful substances"). No reported case has decided whether the chemical compounds released by Chinese drywall are pollutants. For further discussion of the pollution exclusion, see §13.86.
- Wear and Tear, Decay, Latent Defects. Homeowners and business owners policies typically contain exclusions for damage caused by "wear and tear," "deterioration," and "latent defect [or] inherent vice." See, e.g., Scott v Continental Ins. Co. (1996) 44 CA4th 24, 35, 51 CR2d 566 (faults, flaws, and irregularities in design, faulty construction, or weakness of materials); Chadwick v Fire Ins. Exch. (1993) 17 CA4th 1112, 1126, 21 CR2d 871 (substandard design and construction of house's wall and floor framing); Murray v State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. (1990) 219 CA3d 58, 268 CR 33 (deterioration of copper water pipe caused by electrolysis over 17-year period, though expected to last 50 years, excluded as wear and tear); Brodkin v State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. (1989) 217 CA3d 210, 217, 265 CR 710 (slow disintegration of concrete foundation from corrosive soil conditions).
- Faulty Design, Workmanship, Materials. There are exclusions for loss caused by faulty, inadequate or defective design, specifications, workmanship, repair, construction, renovation, remodeling, or materials used in repair, construction, renovation or remodeling, or maintenance of all or part of any property. See, e.g., Freedman v State Farm Ins. Co. (2009) 173 CA4th 957, 93 CR3d 296 (precluded damage caused by contractor leading to corrosion, leakage, and mold); Davis v United Servs. Auto. Ass'n (1990) 223 CA3d 1322, 273 CR 224 (contractor negligence); Sapiro v Encompass Ins. (ND Cal 2004) 221 FRD 513, 521 (exclusion precluded coverage for damage caused by moisture, water damage, and fungi resulting from gap between flashing and stucco of home).

I. INTRODUCTION

§14.1 A. Chapter Scope; Selecting Insurance Products

This chapter provides an overview of the common types of liability insurance related to real property transfers and common insurance issues that may arise from these transfers. It is beyond the scope of this chapter to discuss in detail all the available policies or all the insurance issues that may arise.

In drafting transactional documents, attorneys often add requirements that a particular party be indemnified by the other party and included as an additional named insured on the other party's insurance policy. As part of this process, the attorney may review available insurance products offered by an agent or broker to formulate a list of potential risks for which coverage might be needed. More attorneys are participating in the risk-analysis phase of transactions and assisting clients in a general way with insurance selection. Much of this chapter is dedicated to the history of policy drafting and coverage analysis derived from case law, because it is essential for attorneys engaged in risk management to understand the evolution of policy language and interpretations given to insurance policies by the courts.

WARNING: Even when a lawyer has enough knowledge of available types of insurance to recognize those transactions and issues in which insurance may play a role, the lawyer should delegate primary responsibility for the ultimate selection and purchase of insurance to an experienced insurance agent or broker.

For a detailed discussion of liability insurance enforcement, including claims process, duty to defend, and related litigation, see California Liability Insurance Practice: Claims & Litigation (Cal CEB 1991).

§14.2 B. ISO Forms Versus Manuscript Policies

The Insurance Services Office (ISO) is a nonprofit trade association that provides rating, statistical, and actuarial policy forms and related drafting services to approximately 3000 nationwide property or casualty insurers. As discussed in chap 13 in reference to property insurance, the ISO publishes standard forms of liability policies that are used by many insurers. Policy forms developed by the ISO are approved by its constituent insurance carriers and then submitted to state agencies for review. Most carriers use the basic ISO forms, at least as the starting point for their general liability policies. Montrose Chem. Corp. v Admiral Ins. Co. (1995) 10 C4th 645, 671 n13, 42 CR2d 324. For information about the ISO, see the ISO website listed in the Directory.

There are too many different types of liability policies to discuss them all in this chapter. This chapter refers to ISO forms for typical language and form designations and numbers. The letters at the beginning of the ISO designation refer to the respective policy type: "CG" for Commercial General Liability, "BP" for Businessowners Coverage Form (liability), "HO" for Homeowners, and so on. The last two sets of digits indicate the month and year the form was first released for use, i.e., "12 04" refers to December 2004. Thus, CG 00 01 12 04 is the December 2004 version of the Commercial General Liability policy; note that some of the references in the following sections may be in truncated form, e.g., CG 00 01. This is a convenient way to determine whether the policy contains the most recent policy forms. A typical policy will contain one or more basic forms, plus additional forms for declarations, conditions, optional coverages, and exclusions.

NOTE: Throughout this chapter, many types of policies and endorsements are described. The quoted material in this chapter (pertaining to covered claims, occurrences, exclusions, or definitions) is common to or typical of most policies of that type being discussed, whether it is an ISO policy or another version.

Often insurers draft their own forms, using parts of the ISO policy language and revising other parts. Insurers' policy forms use different designations and numbers.

PRACTICE TIP: Practitioners should not assume that all forms are the same, or even similar. In each transaction, the insurance policy should be reviewed carefully to determine which risks are covered and which are not. Although this lack of uniformity makes it difficult to draft contract provisions specifically, because not all insurers will use the same policy form designation and number, the difference in policies means some policies may offer broader coverage. Moreover, caution should be used in referring to specific policy forms in real estate contracts, because that may limit the insurer's ability to provide the most appropriate coverage. In addition, reference to specific policy forms may create problems if a form is changed or a specific edition is no longer available.

C. Types of Liability Insurance Pertinent to Real Property Sales

§14.3 1. Commercial General Liability

The ISO Commercial General Liability Form (CG 00 01) is a very widely used form. Liability Coverage is divided into two sections. Coverage A affords coverage for "bodily injury" (see §14.28) and "property damage" (see §14.25) caused by an "occurrence" (see §14.18). Coverage B provides coverage for "advertising injury" and "personal injury" (see §§14.69-14.70).

The CG 00 01 version is an "occurrence-based" form, but CG 00 02 is a "claims made" form. See §§14.12-14.13.

© The Regents of the University of California

Source: Real Property/California Real Property Sales Transactions/14 Liability Insurance: Selected Issues Pertinent to Sales/§14.4 2. Businessowners Liability

§14.4 2. Businessowners Liability

The ISO Businessowners Coverage Form (BP 00 03 07 02) is another commonly used form. Unlike the CGL policy, the Businessowners policy (referred to in the industry as BOP) provides both property coverage and liability coverage. However, like the CGL form, the Businessowners form provides liability coverage for "bodily injury" (see §14.28) and "property damage" (see §14.25) caused by an "occurrence" (see §14.18), as well as for "advertising injury" and "personal injury" (see §§14.69-14.70). The insuring language, exclusions, and definitions of the Businessowners policy are, for the most part, identical to the comparable provisions of the CGL policy. For that reason, the issues that arise under the Businessowners policy in connection with a real estate transaction will be substantially similar to those under a CGL policy.

© The Regents of the University of California

§14.5 3. Owners and Contractors Protective

The ISO Owners and Contractors Protective (OCP) policy (CG 00 09 12 04) is a stand-alone policy that may be obtained in conjunction with a CGL policy; it is usually purchased to comply with contract provisions that require one party to indemnify and purchase insurance coverage for another. A general contractor may purchase OCP coverage that names the owner or developer as the named insured, or a subcontractor may purchase OCP coverage that names the general contractor as the named insured. In either case, the party purchasing the policy obtains no coverage under the OCP policy. The alternative would be for the subcontractor to make the general contractor an additional insured on the subcontractor's policy, or for the general contractor to make the owner an additional insured on the general contractor's policy. The definitions of "bodily injury" (see §14.28), "property damage" (see §14.25), and "occurrence" (see §14.18) are the same as those found in the 2004 ISO CGL policy.

© The Regents of the University of California

§14.6 4. Architects and Engineers Professional Liability

To obtain coverage for professional liability, architects and engineers typically buy a separate malpractice insurance policy in conjunction with a CGL policy. Often, this is called an Architects and Engineers Professional Liability (AEPL) policy. There is no standard-language form for such a policy. Unlike CGL or BOP policies, AEPL policies typically do not limit coverage to "bodily injury," "property damage," or "personal and advertising injury." They typically insure against claims arising from "professional services." See, e.g., ISO CG 22 43. They are written on a "claims made" basis (see §14.13; see also "extended reporting period," discussed in §14.15).

© The Regents of the University of California

§14.7 5. Contractors Professional Liability

There is no standard-language ISO form for a Contractors Professional Liability policy. However, most have common features. Most (if not all) impose a duty to defend on the insurer (see §§14.52-14.56). Most (if not all) are written on a "claims made" basis (see §14.13). They are frequently obtained in conjunction with CGL and other policies. Unlike CGL or BOP policies, a Contractors Professional Liability policy typically does not limit coverage to "bodily injury," "property damage," or "personal and advertising injury." Coverage is provided for "wrongful acts," typically defined as a negligent act, error, or omission in the performance of professional services for others, such as construction management. Most Contractors Professional Liability policies condition the insurer's right to settlement on the insured's consent, but impose a penalty if the insured withholds consent.

© The Regents of the University of California

§14.8 6. Real Estate Agent's Errors and Omissions

Like other errors and omissions policies, coverage for real estate agents and brokers is almost always written on a "claims made" basis. See §14.13; see also "extended reporting period," discussed in §14.15. Liability coverage extends to claims arising out of any act, error, omission, or "personal injury" in the rendering of or failure to render "professional services." It is a stand-alone policy and is usually obtained in conjunction with a CGL policy.

© The Regents of the University of California

Source: Real Property/California Real Property Sales Transactions/14 Liability Insurance: Selected Issues Pertinent to Sales/§14.9 7. Representations and Warranties Insurance

§14.9 7. Representations and Warranties Insurance

Several companies now offer representations and warranties (R&W) insurance in connection with real estate transactions outside the mergers and acquisitions context. Like an errors and omissions policy, it is a stand-alone policy and is usually obtained in conjunction with a CGL policy. There is no standard-language R&W policy. The contract or agreement containing the subject representations and warranties is identified as the "R&W Contract." "R&W Loss" is defined as "a loss incurred by Insured that arises out of breach of the Reps & Warranties." Thus, R&W insurance is not limited to "property damage" or "bodily injury" or "personal and advertising injury" as are CGL and BOP policies. R&W insurance extends to the resulting financial losses if specifically identified representations and warranties are untrue. See §§14.76-14.79.

Source: Real Property/California Real Property Sales Transactions/14 Liability Insurance: Selected Issues Pertinent to Sales/§14.10 8. Homeowners

§14.10 8. Homeowners

There are several commonly used versions of the ISO Homeowners policy: the Homeowners 3 Special Form (HO 00 03); the Broad Form (HO 00 02); and the Unit Owners Form (HO 00 06), which is used for condominiums. These forms differ principally in the property coverage each provides in Section I (see chap 13). Section II, which provides liability coverage, is virtually identical in each form. The Homeowners policies provide coverage for "bodily injury" (see §14.28) and "property damage" (see §14.25) caused by an "occurrence" (see §14.18). They do not provide "advertising injury" or "personal injury" (see §§14.69-14.70) coverage, as these are usually associated with commercial risks.

§14.11 D. Issues Arising Under Various Policies

Just as there are too many types of policies to discuss in detail in one chapter, there are far too many issues that may arise under liability policies in connection with real estate transactions. The remaining sections in this chapter discuss how various insurance policy provisions may affect the availability of coverage for occurrences and claims commonly arising in real estate transactions.

II. SPECIAL ISSUES: OCCURRENCE; CLAIMS MADE; AND CLAIMS MADE AND REPORTED POLICIES

§14.12 A. Occurrence Policies

Commercial General Liability policies, Businessowners policies, Owners and Contractors Protective Liability policies, and Homeowners policies typically require that "bodily injury" and "property damage" be caused by an "occurrence" during the policy period. This limitation is the chief distinction between an "occurrence-based" policy versus a "claims made" policy.

A typical "occurrence" policy, such as the standard form CGL policy, provides liability coverage for damage or injury occurring during the policy period that results from an accident, or from continuous or repeated exposure to injurious conditions. However, the sudden, accidental damage-causing act or event, or the conditions giving rise to the damage or injury, need not actually occur within the policy period in order for potential liability coverage to arise. Montrose Chem. Corp. v Admiral Ins. Co. (1995) 10 C4th 645, 675, 686, 42 CR2d 324. The occurrence of bodily injury or property damage during the policy period is the operative event that triggers coverage. 10 C4th at 668. Thus, the standard occurrence-based CGL policy provides coverage for injury or damage that may not be discovered or manifested until after the policy period expires (10 C4th at 689) and even if the claim is not made until long after the policy has expired. Homestead Ins. Co. v American Empire Surplus Lines Ins. Co. (1996) 44 CA4th 1297, 1303, 52 CR2d 268; Pacific Employers Ins. Co. v Superior Court (1990) 221 CA3d 1348, 1356, 270 CR 779. See the discussion of continuous or progressive loss in §14.48.

© The Regents of the University of California

§14.13 B. "Claims Made" Policies

In a "claims made" policy, "the carrier agrees to assume liability for any errors, including those made prior to the inception of the policy, as long as a claim is made during the policy period." Homestead Ins. Co. v American Empire Surplus Lines Ins. Co. (1996) 44 CA4th 1297, 1303, 52 CR2d 268. See also World Health & Education Foundation v Carolina Cas. Ins. Co. (ND Cal 2009) 612 F Supp 2d 1089, 1094 n1; Westrec Marina Mgmt., Inc. v Arrowood Indem. Co. (2008) 163 CA4th 1387, 1395, 78 CR3d 264; Pacific Employers Ins. Co. v Superior Court (1990) 221 CA3d 1348, 1356, 270 CR 779.

"Claims made" or "claims made and reported" coverage is typically found in professional liability policies (although the ISO Commercial General Liability Form (CG 00 02) is a "claims made" policy). For example, the Architects and Engineers Professional Liability policy (see §14.6), the Contractors Professional Liability policy (see §14.7), and the Representations and Warranties policy (see §§14.9, 14.76) are all "claims made" policies.

Under a "claims made" policy (Homestead Ins. Co., 44 CA4th at 1304),

> [c]overage does not depend on when the actual or alleged negligent act, error or omission occurred, but on when the claim is made against the insured.… [T]he insurer generally is responsible for loss resulting from claims made during the policy period no matter when the liability-generating event took place.

§14.14 C. "Claims Made and Reported" Policies

A third variation, the "claims made and reported" policy, requires that the claim be made and be reported to the insurer during the policy period. A "claims made" policy does not impose such a reporting requirement. See Pension Trust Fund v Federal Ins. Co. (9th Cir 2002) 307 F3d 944, 956.

§14.14A D. What Is a "Claim"?

Although a "claim" is required to trigger coverage under either a "claims made" or a "claims made and reported" policy, there are surprisingly few reported appellate decisions defining what is and what is not a "claim."

A "claim," both in its ordinary meaning and in the interpretation given to it by the courts, is a demand for something as a right, or as due. Westrec Marina Mgmt., Inc. v Arrowood Indem. Co. (2008) 163 CA4th 1387, 1392, 78 CR3d 264; Safeco Surplus Lines Co. v Employers' Reinsurance Corp. (1992) 11 CA4th 1403, 1407, 15 CR2d 58; Phoenix Ins. Co. v Sukut Constr. Co. (1982) 136 CA3d 673, 677, 186 CR 513. Other cases define a "claim" as money demanded for a debt due the claimant (Williamson & Vollmer Eng'g, Inc. v Sequoia Ins. Co. (1976) 64 CA3d 261, 269, 134 CR 427) or the assertion of a liability of the party, demanding that the party perform some service or pay money. Abifadel v Cigna Ins. Co. (1992) 8 CA4th 145, 160, 9 CR2d 910; Hill v Physicians & Surgeons Exch. (1990) 225 CA3d 1, 6, 274 CR 702.

It seems accepted that a formal lawsuit is not required to constitute a "claim." Abifadel, 8 CA4th at 160; Hill, 225 CA3d at 6; Phoenix Ins. Co., 136 CA3d at 677; Williamson & Vollmer Eng'g, Inc., 64 CA3d at 270.

A request for an explanation is not a claim. Abifadel, 8 CA4th at 160; Hill, 225 CA3d at 5; Mt. Hawley Ins. Co. v Federal Sav. & Loan Ins. Co. (CD Cal 1987) 695 F Supp 469, 479. Further, an expression of dissatisfaction or disappointment, "mere complaining," or the lodging of a grievance without a demand for compensation is not a claim. Westrec Marina Mgm't, Inc., 163 CA4th at 1392; Abifadel, 8 CA4th at 160; Hill, 225 CA3d at 5. At least one reported case held that threatened action, or a statement of intent to hold the insured responsible, is not a "claim." Abifadel, 8 CA4th at 161.

PRACTICE TIP: This seemingly simple definition has proven difficult to apply. When a threat of legal action or a statement of intent to hold the insured responsible crosses the line to become a demand for compensation is not clear. The court's decision as to whether a communication constitutes a "claim" will depend on the relationship of the parties and all the circumstances of the case.

§14.15 E. Extended Reporting Period

An "extended reporting period" may be available under many "claims made" policies. An extended reporting period allows additional time, after the end of the policy period, for the insured to report a claim. See Root v American Equity Specialty Ins. Co. (2005) 130 CA4th 926, 933, 30 CR3d 631.

WARNING: An "extended reporting period" does not necessarily simply lengthen the policy period to a later date. The extended time to report a claim may not apply to a claim made during the original policy period, but rather is interpreted literally to claims made and reported, within the time specified by the policy, in the distinct extended reporting period. See World Health & Education Foundation v Carolina Cas. Ins. Co. (ND Cal 2009) 612 F Supp 2d 1089 (extended reporting period applicable to "any claim first made and reported during a period of 60 days after the date upon which the Policy Period ends," did not extend time to report claim made before policy period ended).

The extended reporting period may take effect automatically, as occurs when the policy is canceled or not renewed; this automatic extension is for a short term, often 60 days. 130 CA4th at 933. A longer extended reporting period, of 1 year or several years, may be available on payment of an additional premium.

§14.16 F. Retroactive Date

"Claims made" policies typically contain a "retroactive date." The policy provides that the error or omission that gives rise to the claim must take place on or after the retroactive date. The application typically requires the insured to state, under oath, that they are not aware of any events that could give rise to a claim that occurred on or after the retroactive date.

§14.17 III. SPECIAL ISSUES: COMMERCIAL GENERAL LIABILITY

The purpose of CGL policies is "to provide the insured with the broadest spectrum of protection against liability for unintentional and unexpected personal injury or property damage arising out of the conduct of the insured's business." MacKinnon v Truck Ins. Exch. (2003) 31 C4th 635, 654, 3 CR3d 228.

Under standard CGL policies, the insurer has a duty to indemnify the insured for sums that the insured becomes legally obligated to pay as damages for a covered claim. Aerojet-General Corp. v Transport Indem. Co. (1997) 17 C4th 38, 56, 70 CR2d 118; Buss v Superior Court (1997) 16 C4th 35, 45, 65 CR2d 366. By definition, this duty entails the payment of money, which is expressly limited in amount, in order to resolve liability. Aerojet-General, 17 C4th at 56; Buss, 16 C4th at 46. It is not narrowly confined to money that the insured must give under law as compensation to third parties, but may also include money that the insured must itself expend in equity in order to provide relief of the same sort. Aerojet-General, 17 C4th at 56; AIU Ins. Co. v Superior Court (1990) 51 C3d 807, 819, 274 CR 820. The duty to indemnify runs to claims that are actually covered, in light of the facts proved. See, e.g., Aerojet-General, 17 C4th at 56; Buss, 16 C4th at 46.

The insurer's duty to indemnify the insured arises only after liability is established and as a result of the liability. See, e.g., Aerojet-General, 17 C4th at 56; Buss, 16 C4th at 46; Montrose Chem. Corp. v Admiral Ins. Co. (1995) 10 C4th 645, 659 n9, 42 CR2d 324. The duty is triggered if specified harm is caused by an included occurrence, as long as at least some of the harm results within the policy period (Aerojet-General, 17 C4th at 56; Montrose, 10 C4th at 669), and extends to all specified harm caused by an included occurrence, even if some of the harm results beyond the policy period (see Aerojet-General, 17 C4th at 57). In other words, "an insurer on the risk when continuous or progressively deteriorating damage or injury first manifests itself remains obligated to indemnify the insured for the entirety of the ensuing damage or injury." Montrose, 10 C4th at 686.

Standard comprehensive or commercial general liability insurance policies also provide that the insurer has a duty to defend the insured in any action brought against the insured seeking damages for a covered claim. Aerojet-General, 17 C4th at 57; Buss, 16 C4th at 45. By definition, the duty entails the rendering of a service, i.e., the mounting and funding of a defense (Buss, 16 C4th at 46), which is not limited, expressly or otherwise, in order to avoid or at least minimize liability. See Aerojet-General, 17 C4th at 58; Gray v Zurich Ins. Co. (1966) 65 C2d 263, 279, 54 CR 104. As such, it requires the undertaking of reasonable and necessary efforts for that purpose, including investigation. See Aerojet-General, 17 C4th at 58; Pacific Indem. Co. v Universal Underwriters Ins. Co. (1965) 232 CA2d 541, 543, 43 CR 26. The duty also requires the insurer to incur reasonable and necessary costs to that end, including investigative expenses. See Aerojet-General, 17 C4th at 58; Pacific Indem. Co., 232 CA2d at 543. It runs to claims that are merely potentially covered, in light of facts alleged or otherwise disclosed, and arises as soon as tender is made (Aerojet-General, 17 C4th at 58; Buss, 16 C4th at 46), before liability is established and apart from it (Aerojet-General, 17 C4th at 58; Montrose, 10 C4th at 659 n9). It is discharged when the action is concluded and may be extinguished earlier if it is shown that no claim can in fact be covered. Aerojet-General, 17 C4th at 58; Buss, 16 C4th at 46. If it is so extinguished, however, it is extinguished only prospectively and not retroactively: Before, the insurer had a duty to defend; after, it does not have a duty to defend further. Aerojet-General, 17 C4th at 58; Buss, 16 C4th at 46. The duty to defend is triggered if specified harm may possibly have been caused by an included occurrence, so long as at least some such harm may possibly have resulted within the policy period, and extends to all specified harm that may possibly have been caused by an included occurrence, even if some such harm may possibly have resulted beyond the policy period. Aerojet-General, 17 C4th at 58. That is, if specified harm may possibly have been caused by an included occurrence and may possibly have resulted, at least in part, within the policy period, the duty to defend applies to all points in time at which any such harm may possibly have resulted after the policy period. Aerojet-General, 17 C4th at 58

§14.18 A. "Occurrence" or "Accident"

An "occurrence" is typically defined as "an accident, including continuous or repeated exposure to substantially the same general harmful conditions." ISO Form CG 00 01 12 04 (§V, ¶13), p 14.

Standard CGL policy language was revised by insurance industry drafters in several important respects starting in 1966. Before that year, third party general liability policies covered bodily injuries and damages caused by "accidents." In 1966, the National Bureau of Casualty Underwriters and the Mutual Insurance Rating Board, the predecessor organizations to the Insurance Services Office (ISO), changed the standard form policy from an "accident-based" to an "occurrence-based" format. See Montrose Chem. Corp. v Admiral Ins. Co. (1995) 10 C4th 645, 671, 42 CR2d 324 (Montrose II). Note that the terms "accident" and "occurrence" are not synonymous, because "occurrence" also includes "continuous or repeated exposure to substantially the same general harmful conditions." The change was made in order to clarify the insurer's intent with respect to time of coverage and application of policy limits, particularly in situations involving a related series of events attributable to the same factor. Under such circumstances, only one accident or occurrence is intended insofar as the application of policy limits is concerned.

EXAMPLE: If multiple freight cars are derailed in a collision with a contractor's equipment, the occurrence limit of the policy is intended to be applied only once for purposes of the contractor's liability. 10 C4th at 672.

There is little doubt that the definition of "occurrence" in the newly drafted standard form CGL policy was intended to provide coverage when damage or injury resulting from an accident or "injurious exposure to conditions" occurs during the policy period. The term "accident" was left in the definition of occurrence for the purpose of circumscribing the policy limits applicable to each occurrence. The drafters did not intend that an "accident" in the literal sense, e.g., a sudden precipitating event, must occur during the policy period in order to trigger potential coverage for ensuing damage or injury.

> "The reference to 'injurious exposure to conditions [resulting in]… bodily injury [or property damage]' eliminates any requirement that the injury result from a sudden event. Although it is most common that an injury takes place simultaneously with the exposure, there are many instances of injuries taking place over an extended period of time before they become evident [for example, the slow ingestion of foreign substances or the inhalation of noxious fumes]. In these and similar cases, the definition of 'occurrence' identifies the time of loss for purposes of applying coverage—the injury must take place during the policy period."

Montrose Chem. Corp., 10 C4th at 672, quoting 3 Cal Insurance Law & Practice, Property and Liability Insurance §49.12, p 49-20 (1986). See also the discussion of continuous or progressive loss in §14.48.

The term "accident" is not defined in either the ISO Businessowners Coverage Form (BP 00 03 07 02) or the ISO CGL Policy (CG 00 01 12 04). There is no all-inclusive definition of "accident." Nevertheless, in the context of liability insurance coverage, the California Supreme Court has defined an "accident" as "an unexpected, unforeseen, or undesigned happening or consequence from either a known or an unknown cause.… This common law construction of the term 'accident' becomes part of the policy and precludes any assertion that the term is ambiguous." Delgado v Interins. Exch. of the Auto. Club of S. Cal. (2009) 47 C4th 302, 308, 97 CR3d 298 (citations omitted).

In Delgado, the Supreme Court held that, "an insured's unreasonable belief in the need for self-defense does not turn the resulting purposeful and intentional act of assault and battery into 'an accident.'" 47 C4th 302 at 317. The word "accident" in the coverage clause of a liability policy refers to the conduct of the insured for which liability is sought to be imposed on the insured. In other words, "a purposeful and intentional act remains purposeful and intentional regardless of the insured's reason or motivation for it." 47 C4th at 314. An injury-producing event is not an "accident" within a liability policy's coverage language if all of the acts, the manner in which they were done, and the objective accomplished occurred as the actor intended. Delgado, at 311 (citing authorities).

§14.19 1. "Accidental" and "Negligent" Not Synonymous

It is commonly argued that if the underlying complaint alleges negligence, there must be a duty to defend. This is not necessarily true: "Negligent" and "accidental" are not synonymous. Quan v Truck Ins. Exch. (1998) 67 CA4th 583, 596, 79 CR2d 134; American Int'l Bank v Fidelity & Deposit Co. (1996) 49 CA4th 1558, 1573, 57 CR2d 567. The argument that an allegation of negligence gives rise to a duty to defend misconstrues the "accident" requirement in standard general liability policies. Under California law, the term "accident" refers to "the nature of the insured's conduct, not his state of mind." Collin v American Empire Ins. Co. (1994) 21 CA4th 787, 804, 26 CR2d 391. Even when conduct is alleged to be "negligent" because the insured did not intend any harm, no duty to defend will arise if the conduct could not be engaged in "by accident." Quan v Truck Ins. Exch., 67 CA4th at 595 (insured's allegedly negligent conduct in serving alcohol to minor, or belief that victim consented, not "accidental" because there was no potential under circumstances for accidental sexual assault); Ulrich v State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. (2003) 109 CA4th 598, 611, 135 CR2d 131 (extrinsic facts demonstrated alleged assault, wrongful detention, and defamation, which could not have been committed "by accident").

§14.20 a. Examples of "Accidental" Conduct

The following cases illustrate conduct held to be "accidental":

- Negligent design or construction: Baugh Constr. Co. v Mission Ins. Co. (9th Cir 1988) 836 F2d 1164, 1169; Pepperell v Scottsdale Ins. Co. (1998) 62 CA4th 1045, 73 CR2d 164.
- Negligent design and maintenance: Stonewall Ins. Co. v City of Palos Verdes Estates (1996) 46 CA4th 1810, 54 CR2d 176.
- Architect's approval of inferior materials that cause construction of a defective building: Gogerty v General Acc., Fire & Life Assur. Corp. (1965) 238 CA2d 574, 48 CR 37.
- Default on contractual obligations: Business to Business Markets, Inc. v Zurich Specialties London Ltd. (2005) 135 CA4th 165, 37 CR3d 295.
- Self defense: Jafari v EMC Ins. Cos. (review granted Dec. 12, 2007, S157924; superseded opinion at 155 CA4th 885, 66 CR3d 359. Further action on the matter deferred pending consideration and disposition of related issues in Delgado v Interins. Exch. of the Auto. Club of S. Cal. (2009) 47 C4th 302, 308, 97 CR3d 298. Injuries inflicted by insured's employee defending against customer may be "accidental" conduct requiring coverage.

§14.21 b. Examples of Non-"Accidental" Conduct

The following cases illustrate conduct held to be not "accidental":

- Bad professional advice rendered by a roofing contractor: Ray v Valley Forge Ins. Co. (1999) 77 CA4th 1039, 92 CR2d 473.
- Property destroyed by intentional acts of the insured, such as arson or demolition for renovation: See Home Sav. v Continental Ins. Co. (2001) 87 CA4th 835, 848, 104 CR2d 790.
- Incomplete renovation work approved by the mortgagee: Wilson v Farmers Ins. Exch. (2002) 102 CA4th 1171, 126 CR2d 305.
- Negligent or intentional misrepresentation and failure to disclose defects in home sold by insured: Miller v Western General Agency, Inc. (1996) 41 CA4th 1144, 49 CR2d 55.

§14.22 2. Failure to Disclose; Misrepresentations Upon Sale

Claims for negligent or intentional misrepresentation or concealment that do not include property damage or damage to tangible property are not covered by a liability policy. In Miller v Western General Agency, Inc. (1996) 41 CA4th 1144, 49 CR2d 55, for example, the insureds sold their home without disclosing that the foundation was settling, that the home had various leaks, or that the home had inadequate or defective electrical wiring. The buyer sued, alleging negligent and intentional misrepresentation or concealment of the condition of the home. The court held that their claims did not allege "accidental conduct," did not seek "property damage" or damage to tangible property, and fell within the exclusion for damages that may be expected or intended from the standpoint of the insured.

Similarly, in Devin v United Servs. Auto. Ass'n (1992) 6 CA4th 1149, 1158, 8 CR2d 263, the court held that the allegation that the insureds failed to disclose that a house was "sliding, slipping, settling, sinking, fracturing and buckling" was an allegation that the plaintiff caused a "pecuniary loss"—the loss of the fair market value of the home—that did not constitute "property damage."

© The Regents of the University of California

§14.23 3. Latent Defects

Concealed or "latent" defects are those that are not apparent during a reasonable inspection of the property. If they are caused by the insured's negligent design or construction, they may cause covered "property damage" during a CGL policy term. This may be true even when the policies extending coverage to the insured have expired before a third party purchaser discovers the damage. Century Indem. Co. v Hearrean (2002) 98 CA4th 734, 740, 120 CR2d 66 (concealed defects consisted of negligent design and construction, causing leaking windows, roofs, and cracked exterior stucco). See the discussion of continuous or progressive loss in §14.48.

© The Regents of the University of California

§14.24 4. Negligent Construction; Negligent Design

Standard CGL policies contain an exclusion stating that the policy does not apply "to that particular part of any property, not on premises owned by or rented to the insured… the restoration, repair or replacement of which has been made or is necessary by reason of faulty workmanship thereon by or on behalf of the insured." See George F. Hillenbrand, Inc. v Insurance Co. of N. Am. (2002) 104 CA4th 784, 793, 128 CR2d 586. By implication, CGL policies therefore cover (1) damage to the building if it resulted from some cause other than the contractor's own faulty workmanship, e.g., improper maintenance by others, defective materials, or design; or (2) damage to property (other than the insured's work) caused by the insured's faulty workmanship. 104 CA4th at 794. The courts do not look to see whether noncovered acts predominate in the third party's action, but rather to whether there is any potential for liability under the policy. 104 CA4th at 801.

In Marquez Knolls Prop. Owners Ass'n v Executive Risk Mgmt., Inc. (2007) 153 CA4th 228, 62 CR3d 510, a homeowners association ruled that a member's enclosed patio structure violated its covenants, conditions, and restrictions (CC&Rs). The homeowner sued the association. The association's insurer denied coverage, relying on an exclusion for claims in any way involving "the design, construction, renovation or rehabilitation of any building, structure, or other improvement on any real property." The court held the exclusion did not apply because it relates only to the insured association's design, construction, renovation, or rehabilitation of improvements, and not to those of the individual homeowner.

Source: Real Property/California Real Property Sales Transactions/14 Liability Insurance: Selected Issues Pertinent to Sales/§14.25 B. Property Damage; Defective or Faulty Materials

§14.25 B. Property Damage; Defective or Faulty Materials

Commercial general liability policies were formerly called "comprehensive general liability" policies and both are known as "CGL" policies. CGL and homeowner liability insurance policies were amended in the 1970s to eliminate coverage for economic damages.

> Prior to 1973, the standard CGL policy defined "property damage" as "injury to or destruction of tangible property." Applying that definition, a number of courts held that coverage for "property damage" included the diminution in the value of the building resulting from incorporation of a defective component. Beginning in 1973, the definition of "property damage" in the standard CGL policy was changed to "physical injury to or destruction of tangible property." Giving this new definition its plain and ordinary meaning, the majority of courts hold that [the addition of the word "physical" eliminates coverage for] economic damages.

F & H Constr. v ITT Hartford Ins. Co. (2004) 118 CA4th 364, 374, 12 CR3d 896. See the discussion of defective or faulty materials in §§14.26-14.27.

The 2004 CGL form defines "property damage" as "[p]hysical injury to tangible property, including all resulting loss of use of that property" and "[l]oss of use of tangible property that is not physically injured." CG 00 01 12 04 (§V, ¶17), p 14.

"Tangible property" is not ambiguous, and coverage therefore does not turn on alternative meanings. Consistent with an insured's reasonable expectations, "'tangible property' refers to things that can be touched, seen, and smelled." Kazi v State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. (2000) 24 C4th 871, 880, 103 CR2d 1; Warner v Fire Ins. Exch. (1991) 230 CA3d 1029, 1034, 281 CR 635.

The property loss section of the standard liability policy provides coverage for "physical injury or destruction of tangible property" that occurs during the policy term. The focus of coverage for property damage is therefore the property itself, and does not include intangible economic losses, violation of antitrust laws, or nonperformance of contractual obligations. Strictly economic losses—like lost profits, loss of goodwill, loss of the anticipated benefit of a bargain, and loss of an investment—do not constitute damage or injury to tangible property covered by a CGL policy. Waller v Truck Ins. Exch. (1995) 11 C4th 1, 17, 44 CR2d 370. See also Golden Eagle Ins. Corp. v Cen-Fed, Ltd. (2007) 148 CA4th 976, 987, 56 CR3d 279. Additional examples include:

- Contractor's welding of subcontractor's inadequate pile caps to its driven steel piles did not constitute property damage under CGL policy, which had been issued to subcontractor; damages alleged by contractor arising from subcontractor's provision of inadequate caps only listed costs of modifying pile caps to conform to contractual specifications and lost bonus for early completion of construction project, which damages were intangible economic damages rather than damages to tangible property. F&H Constr. v ITT Hartford Ins. Co., supra.
- Landlord's alleged failure to timely deliver the real property to the tenant for use as an automobile dealership did not cause a loss of use of the vehicles and, therefore, did not cause "property damage" within the meaning of landlord's CGL insurance policy; the landlord at most caused economic damage. Cunningham v Universal Underwriters (2002) 98 CA4th 1141, 120 CR2d 162.
- Investors' physical and emotional distress deriving from their investment loss, which was negligently inflicted upon them by directors and officers of insured, did not come within property damage coverage under CGL policy; damage for lost profits, loss of investment, or other harm to one's economic interest constituted injuries to intangible property that by definition fell outside scope of policy. McLaughlin v National Union Fire Ins. Co. (1994) 23 CA4th 1132, 29 CR2d 559.
- Economic damages resulting to buyers from sellers' negligent misrepresentation about size of lot was not damage to "tangible property" within coverage for third party claims under sellers' all-risk homeowner's policy. Warner v Fire Ins. Exch. (1991) 230 CA3d 1029, 281 CR 635.
- Diminution in value of a lease due to the landlord's failure to maintain the premises as required in the lease did not constitute "physical injury to tangible property" under landlord's liability policy. Golden Eagle Ins. Corp. v Cen-Fed, Ltd. (2007) 148 CA4th 976, 987, 56 CR3d 279.

§14.25A 1. Damages

In Certain Underwriters at Lloyd's of London v Superior Court (2001) 24 C4th 945, 961, 103 CR2d 672 (Powerine I), the supreme court held that the insurer's duty to indemnify was limited to "damages, i.e., money ordered by a court." The court held that administrative orders directing a defunct oil company to clean up contaminated sites were not "damages."

In Powerine Oil Co., Inc. v Superior Court (2005) 37 C4th 377, 33 CR3d 562 (Powerine II), the excess insurer's policy required it to indemnify for damages and expenses, "all as more fully defined by the term 'ultimate net loss'." "Ultimate net loss" was defined as the total sum the insured became obligated to pay "either through adjudication or compromise, and shall also include… expenses… for litigation, settlement, adjustment and investigation of claims and suits." 37 C4th at 395. The court held that this broader language obligated the insurer to indemnify the insured's costs arising from an administrative clean-up order.

In contrast, in County of San Diego v Ace Prop. & Cas. Ins. Co. (2005) 37 C4th 406, 416, 33 CR3d 583, the excess policy required the insurer to indemnify the insured "'for all sums which the insured is obligated to pay by reason of liability imposed by law or assumed under contract or agreement,' arising from 'damages' caused by personal injuries or the destruction or loss of use of tangible property." 37 C4th at 411. The court held that this language in the excess policy, like the insuring language in the standard ISO CGL policy, does not apply to settlement costs agreed to with third parties outside the context of a court suit.

In Aerojet-General Corp. v Commercial Union Ins. Co. (2007) 155 CA4th 132, 65 CR3d 803, the excess policies required the insurers to pay "all sums which the assured shall become legally obligated to pay, or by any final judgment be adjudged to pay, to any person or persons as damages." 155 CA4th at 143. The appellate court held that costs incurred to remediate polluted property under a settlement in a separate legal action were not "damages" because the settlement agreement was negotiated by the insured and did not involve a court order or judgment.

PRACTICE TIP: The Aerojet-General court rejected the insured's argument that the insurer was equitably estopped from refusing to pay the settlement because the insured kept the insurer apprised of its settlement strategies and negotiations and reasonably relied on the insurer to voice any concerns or objections. The court noted that the insurer refused to participate in any settlement negotiations and had reserved the right to contest coverage. Perhaps even more important, the insured's counsel wrote a letter proposing that the settlement agreement be entered as a stipulated judgment, in order to "protect against their insurers in light of" Powerine I. Counsel for insureds whose policies contain language such as that found in Powerine I or Aerojet-General should be sure to get the insurer to waive, in writing, any defense based on the definition of "damages," or have any settlement reduced to a judgment.

§14.26 2. Physical Injury to Other Property

Standard CGL policies define "property damage" as "[p]hysical injury to tangible property, including all resulting loss of use of that property" and "[l]oss of use of tangible property that is not physically injured." F & H Constr. v ITT Hartford Ins. Co. (2004) 118 CA4th 364, 371, 12 CR3d 896. Courts applying standard CGL policy language generally agree that the incorporation of a defective component or product into a larger structure or system does not constitute physical injury to tangible property, unless and until the defective component physically injures some other tangible part of the larger system or the system as a whole. 118 CA4th at 372. In other words, the mere presence of a defective part causing no immediate harm does not produce physical injury. 118 CA4th at 372. See, e.g., Hogan v Midland Nat'l Ins. Co. (1970) 3 C3d 553, 91 CR 153 (defective saw leading to improperly cut lumber); Geddes & Smith, Inc. v St. Paul Mercury Indem. Co. (1959) 51 C2d 558, 563, 334 P2d 881 (defective doors sent to contractor; installation caused damage to third parties); Economy Lumber Co. v Insurance Co. of N. Am. (1984) 157 CA3d 641, 204 CR 135 (defective siding sent to contractor and caused damage). A contractor's removal of the defective items, which unavoidably caused additional damage, was covered under the supplier's liability policy. Economy Lumber Co., 157 CA3d at 651.

Further, when products or work containing hazardous materials have been incorporated into other products or structures, courts have found immediate harm and physical injury to other property at the moment the incorporation occurred. Watts Indus., Inc. v Zurich Am. Ins. Co. (2004) 121 CA4th 1029, 1044, 18 CR3d 61 (metallurgically substandard parts incorporated into water system, causing contamination of water and damage to water system, was alleged to be "property damage," and insurer had duty to defend because parts could not easily be removed); Shade Foods, Inc. v Innovative Prods. Sales & Mktg., Inc. (2000) 78 CA4th 847, 865, 93 CR2d 364 (ingredient containing wood splinters incorporated into food product); World Indus., Inc. v Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co. (1996) 45 CA4th 1, 90, 52 CR2d 690.

§14.27 3. No Physical Injury to Other Property

Incorporation of a defective component or product into a larger structure does not constitute property damage unless and until the defective component causes physical injury to tangible property in at least some other part of the system. F & H Constr. v ITT Hartford Ins. Co. (2004) 118 CA4th 364, 372, 12 CR3d 896; St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v Coss (1978) 80 CA3d 888, 892, 145 CR 836 (defective materials and workmanship in construction of home not physical injury); New Hampshire Ins. Co. v Vieira (9th Cir 1991) 930 F2d 696 (faulty installation of drywall into building not physical injury); Esicorp, Inc. v Liberty Mut. Ins. Co. (8th Cir 2001) 266 F3d 859, 863 (defective steel pipe sections welded into pipe system not physical injury).

Under these cases, property damage is not established by the mere failure of a defective product to perform as intended; nor is it established by economic losses, such as the diminution in value of the structure (New Hampshire Ins. Co., 930 F2d at 700) or the cost to repair a defective product or structure (F & H Constr., 118 CA4th at 372; New Hampshire Ins. Co., 930 F2d at 700).

§14.28 C. Bodily Injury

Current ISO forms define "bodily injury" as "bodily injury, sickness or disease sustained by a person, including death resulting from any of these at any time" (CG 00 01 12 04 (§V, ¶3), p 12; BP 00 03 07 02 (§II.F, ¶3), p 37), or "bodily harm, sickness or disease, including required care, loss of services and death that results" (HO 00 03 10 90 (Definitions, ¶B.2), p 1).

© The Regents of the University of California

§14.29 1. Emotional Distress Without Physical Injury

"Pure" emotional distress, unaccompanied by any physical injury or manifestations, is not "bodily injury." For example, in Aim Ins. Co. v Culcasi (1991) 229 CA3d 209, 219, 280 CR 766, the court held that the "critical word in the term 'bodily injury' is 'bodily.'" After citing several dictionary definitions of the word "bodily," which drew a distinction between the physical, corporeal body versus mental or spiritual condition, the court concluded that "the ordinary and popular meaning of the word 'bodily' does not reasonably encompass, and in fact suggests a contrast with, the purely mental, emotional, and spiritual." 229 CA4th at 219. The court held that claims for emotional distress, without physical injury or manifestation, did not constitute "bodily injury." 229 CA4th at 227; see also Chatton v National Union Fire Ins. Co. (1992) 10 CA4th 846, 854, 13 CR2d 318 ("the phrase 'bodily injury, sickness or disease' is plain and unambiguous and coverage under the bodily injury clause is limited to physical injury to the body and does not include nonphysical, emotional or mental harm."); Mercury Ins. Co. v Ayala (2004) 116 CA4th 1198, 1204, 11 CR3d 158 (same).

The supreme court held that CGL policies do not provide coverage for economic losses that cause emotional distress. Waller v Truck Ins. Exch. (1995) 11 C4th 1, 44 CR2d 370. The court stated that the policies "were never intended to cover emotional distress damages that flow from an uncovered 'occurrence,' and the parties could not reasonably have expected that coverage would be expanded merely because a claim of emotional or physical distress is alleged as a result of the economic loss." 11 C4th at 23; see also Miller v Western General Agency, Inc. (1996) 41 CA4th 1144, 1151, 49 CR2d 55 (emotional distress caused by misrepresentation and concealment of defective plumbing when insureds sold their home did not constitute "bodily injury").

© The Regents of the University of California

§14.30 2. Emotional Distress With Physical Injury

A more difficult issue involves whether physical manifestations of emotional distress, or emotional distress caused by physical injury, constitutes "bodily injury." In Waller v Truck Ins. Exch. (1995) 11 C4th 1, 40, 44 CR2d 370, in a concurring and dissenting opinion, Justice Kennard noted that

> [m]ost of the courts that have addressed the issue have held that any physical manifestations accompanying emotional distress are "bodily injuries" as that term is used in insurance policies. [Citations.] On its face, the policy's definitional language, "bodily injury, sickness, or disease," broadly covers any somatic condition, and does not exclude those that are caused or accompanied by mental distress.

§14.31 D. Insured Parties

Most policies contain a separate section on, or at least a definition of, who qualifies as an insured under the policy. This may include "named insureds" (see §§14.32-14.35), "additional named insureds" (see §14.36), and "additional insureds" (sometimes called "omnibus insureds"; see §§14.37-14.46).

§14.32 1. Named Insured; Additional Insured Distinguished

The person indemnified under an insurance policy is the "insured." Ins C §23. The party purchasing the insurance is typically listed in the declarations for the policy as the "named insured." For definition of "who is the insured," see policy language quoted in §14.37. However, most liability policies extend coverage not only to the person or entity expressly listed on the policy, but also to other classes of additional insureds. See §14.37. The "named insured" is the person(s) or entity(ies) listed on the declarations page for the policy. Fidelity & Deposit Co. v Charter Oak Fire Ins. Co. (1998) 66 CA4th 1080, 1086, 78 CR2d 429.

> In contrast to a "named insured," an "additional insured" or "omnibus insured" is one who falls within the policy's omnibus definition of insureds, which typically includes employees, real estate managers, and third party beneficiaries. [Citation.] The names of "additional insureds" do not appear in the policy and the insurer typically does not even know who these persons are until a claim is filed.… "Additional named insureds" generally are persons who are added as insureds after the policy issues.

Kotlar v Hartford Fire Ins. Co. (2000) 83 CA4th 1116, 1121 n3, 100 CR2d 246. An additional named insured may be added in the policy declarations or by endorsement. See §14.36. See also §14.37 on additional insureds.

NOTE: Whether a party is an "additional insured" or an "additional named insured" should not affect the scope of the coverage afforded. However, an "additional insured" is not entitled to notice of cancellation under Ins C §677.2, but all named insureds, including all "additional named insureds," are entitled to notice of cancellation. Kotlar, 83 CA4th at 1121 n3.

§14.33 a. Fictitious Names

Sole proprietors doing business under a fictitious name often, unfortunately, obtain policies listing their "dba" as the named insured. However, an insured must be a legal person, such as an individual, partnership, or corporation. Ins C §151; Providence Washington Ins. Co. v Valley Forge Ins. Co. (1996) 42 CA4th 1194, 1200, 50 CR2d 192. "The designation 'd/b/a' means 'doing business as' but is merely descriptive of the person or corporation who does business under some other name. Doing business under another name does not create an entity distinct from the person operating the business." 42 CA4th at 1200; see also Bus & P C §§17900-17930 (regulating fictitious business names). If the policy lists a "dba" as the named insured because of a mistake by the insured and the insurer, the policy may be reformed, or interpreted as if the individual sole proprietor was the named insured. 42 CA4th at 1200.

© The Regents of the University of California

§14.34 b. Partnerships

If a CGL or BOP policy is issued to a partnership, the individual partners and their spouses will be additional insureds, "but only with respect to the conduct of your business." See, e.g., policy language quoted in §14.37. Many times, individual partners will be named as defendants in a lawsuit against the partnership. To avoid any dispute about whether the individual partners are sued "with respect to the conduct" of the business, partnerships will often list each individual partner as an additional named insured.

However, in Milazo v Gulf Ins. Co. (1990) 224 CA3d 1528, 274 CR 632, the CGL policy listed the named insured as each partner "dba" the partnership. The court held that the policy insured the partnership and the individual partners only with respect to their liability as partners, and not as individuals. 224 CA3d at 1536.

PRACTICE TIP: In the opening sentence of the Milazo opinion, the court described the party seeking coverage as "a duplicitous partner [who] seeks to obtain indemnification under a partnership liability policy for the damages caused to his innocent copartners by his misappropriation of a partnership opportunity." 224 CA3d at 1531. When partners are sued along with a partnership, the distinction between the partners' individual capacities and their liability as partners will seldom be an issue. However, the "belt and suspenders" approach is to seek a policy that names the partnership and each individual partner as named insureds, without any qualification as to their capacity or whether they are "dba" the partnership.

§14.35 c. "The Insured," "An Insured," or "Any Insured"

Exclusions may refer to "the insured," "an insured," or "any insured." Typically, "the insured" is interpreted to refer to the named insured, but "an insured" or "any insured" means any insured or additional insured. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v Jacober (1973) 10 C3d 193, 207, 110 CR 1 (exclusion regarding bodily injury to "the insured" held ambiguous). For example, an exclusion for intentional acts of "the insured" excludes coverage only for the intentional acts of the named insured, but an exclusion for intentional acts of "an insured" excludes coverage for the intentional acts of any insured. Western Mut. Ins. Co. v Yamamoto (1994) 29 CA4th 1474, 35 CR2d 698; Fire Ins. Exch. v Altieri (1991) 235 CA3d 1352, 1360, 1 CR2d 360.

§14.36 2. Additional Named Insureds

"Additional named insureds" generally are persons who are added as insureds after the policy issues. Kotlar v Hartford Fire Ins. Co. (2000) 83 CA4th 1116, 1121 n3, 100 CR2d 246. An additional named insured may be added in the policy declarations or by endorsement. See §§14.31-14.32.

Source: Real Property/California Real Property Sales Transactions/14 Liability Insurance: Selected Issues Pertinent to Sales/§14.37 3. Additional Insureds

§14.37 3. Additional Insureds

Construction contracts and agreements collateral to real property sales in the due diligence phases often require one party to obtain liability insurance naming the other party as an "additional insured." In contrast to a "named insured," an "additional insured" or "omnibus insured" is one who falls within the policy's omnibus definition of insureds, which typically includes employees, real estate managers, and third party beneficiaries. The names of "additional insureds" do not appear in the policy and the insurer typically does not even know who these persons are until a claim is filed.

PRACTICE TIP: Consequently, under some agreements, the party who must procure the insurance is required to obtain an "additional insured endorsement" (see forms described in §14.42) or have the other party listed as an "additional named insured" (see §14.36). See Note in §14.32.

Most CGL policy forms generally define additional insureds (omnibus insureds) through the following language (ISO Form CG 00 01 12 04 (§II), p 8):

> SECTION II—WHO IS AN INSURED
> 1. If you are designated in the Declarations as:
> a. An individual, you and your spouse are insureds, but only with respect to the conduct of a business of which you are the sole owner.
> b. A partnership or joint venture, you are an insured. Your members, your partners, and their spouses are also insureds, but only with respect to the conduct of your business.
> c. A limited liability company, you are an insured. Your members are also insureds, but only with respect to the conduct of your business. Your managers are insureds, but only with respect to their duties as your managers.
> d. An organization other than a partnership, joint venture or limited liability company, you are an insured. Your "executive officers" and directors are insureds, but only with respect to their duties as your officers or directors. Your stockholders are also insureds, but only with respect to their liability as stockholders.
> e. A trust, you are an insured. Your trustees are also insureds, but only with respect to their duties as trustees.
> 2. Each of the following is also an insured:
> a. Your "volunteer workers" only while performing duties related to the conduct of your business, or your employees", other than either your "executive officers" (if you are an organization other than a partnership, joint venture or limited liability company) or your managers (if you are a limited liability company), but only for acts within the scope of their employment by you or while performing duties related to the conduct of your business. However, none of these "employees" or "volunteer workers" are insureds for:
> ….
> (2) "Property damage" to property:
> (a) Owned, occupied or used by,
> (b) Rented to, in the care, custody or control of, or over which physical control is being exercised for any purpose by you, any of your "employees", "volunteer workers", any partner or member (if you are a partnership or joint venture), or any member (if you are a limited liability company).
> b. Any person (other than your "employee" or "volunteer worker"), or any organization while acting as your real estate manager.

The 2002 Businessowners Coverage Form (BP 00 03 07 02 (§II.C), p 34) contains nearly identical language. However, unlike the Businessowners form, the CGL form includes as an additional insured newly acquired organizations, through the following language (ISO CG 00 01 12 04 (§II, ¶3), p 9):

> 3. Any organization you newly acquire or form, other than a partnership, joint venture or limited liability company, and over which you maintain ownership or majority interest, will qualify as a Named Insured if there is no other similar insurance available to that organization. However:
> a. Coverage under this provision is afforded only until the 90th day after you acquire or form the organization or the end of the policy period, whichever is earlier;
> b. Coverage A does not apply to "bodily injury" or "property damage" that occurred before you acquired or formed the organization; and > c. Coverage B does not apply to "personal and advertising injury" arising out of an offense committed before you acquired or formed the organization.

No person or organization is an insured with respect to the conduct of any current or past partnership, joint venture or limited liability company that is not shown as a Named Insured in the Declarations.

The rights of a named insured under an insurance policy "inure to all additional insureds under that policy." National Auto. & Cas. Ins. Co. v California Cas. Ins. Co. (1983) 139 CA3d 336, 341, 188 CR 670. Although many statutory provisions, such as those governing cancellation and notice of cancellation of auto or commercial policies, limit that general proposition (an "additional insured" is not entitled to notice of cancellation under Ins C §677.2, but all named insureds, including all "additional named insureds," are entitled to notice of cancellation; see Kotlar v Hartford Fire Ins. Co. (2000) 83 CA4th 1116, 1121 n3, 100 CR2d 246), an additional insured is entitled to defense and indemnity like a named insured.

To establish that it has no duty to defend, an insurer has the burden to either negate an element of the cause of action or show that the additional insured could not establish the duty to defend. Frontier Oil Corp. v RLI Ins. Co. (2007) 153 CA4th 1436, 63 CR3d 816 (involving a joint venturer additional insured and liability alleged not to have arisen from joint venture activities).

§14.38 a. Sole Negligence

All additional insured endorsements cover claims against the additional insured based on vicarious liability for the named insured's negligence. Whether the endorsement also covers claims against the additional insured for its own negligence depends on the language of the endorsement.

With some exceptions, CC §2782(a) invalidates provisions in construction contracts that indemnify against liability for death, bodily injury, or injury to property "arising from the sole negligence or willful misconduct of the promisee…." However, §2782(a) expressly "does not affect the validity of any insurance contract…." Thus, a construction contract can require a contractor or subcontractor to obtain an additional insured endorsement that covers damages caused by the "sole negligence" of the additional insured. American Cas. Co. v General Star Indem. Co. (2005) 125 CA4th 1510, 1524, 24 CR3d 34. This is true even though (1) §2782 would preclude enforcement of the contractual indemnity promise made by the indemnitor, or (2) under the facts of the case and the terms of the contract of indemnity, the indemnitor had no obligation to provide indemnity to the indemnitee. 125 CA4th at 1525. Indeed, unless the insurance policy or the additional insured endorsement provides otherwise, the additional insured is covered for liability resulting from its own negligence as well as vicarious liability for the named insured's negligence. 125 CA4th at 1524.

Insurance companies are free to, and commonly do, issue additional insured endorsements that specifically limit coverage to situations in which the additional insured is faced with vicarious liability for negligent conduct by the named insured. Examples of such endorsement language include:

- Additional insured covered "only with respect to acts or omissions of the named insured" (Consolidation Coal Co. v Liberty Mut. Ins. (WD Pa 1976) 406 F Supp 1292, 1294 n2); Monticello Ins. Co. v Essex Ins. Co. (2008) 162 CA4th 1376, 1379, 76 CR3d 848;
- Additional insureds covered "only to the extent of liability resulting from occurrences arising out of negligence" of the named insured (Harbor Ins. Co. v Lewis (ED Pa 1983) 562 F Supp 800, 802);
- Additional insured covered "only to the extent [the additional insured] is held liable for [the named insured's] acts or omissions arising out of and in the course of operations" (Maryland Cas. Co. v Nationwide Ins. Co. (1998) 65 CA4th 21, 28, 76 CR2d 113);
- "This insurance does not apply to 'bodily injury' or 'property damage' arising out of the sole negligence or willful misconduct of, or for defects in design furnished by, [the additional insured]" (Presley Homes, Inc. v American States Ins. Co. (2001) 90 CA4th 571, 573, 108 CR2d 686).

© The Regents of the University of California

§14.39 b. Does Duty to Defend Extend to Entire Action?

Although the insurer may restrict its duty to indemnify an additional insured to claims against the additional insured based on vicarious liability for the named insured's negligence, these restrictions do not narrow the insurer's duty to defend. This is because in a "mixed action," if some claims are covered and some are not, the duty to defend extends to the entire action. Buss v Superior Court (1997) 16 C4th 35, 48, 65 CR2d 366. For further discussion of the duty to defend, see §§14.52-14.56.

For example, in Presley Homes, Inc. v American States Ins. Co. (2001) 90 CA4th 571, 108 CR2d 686, the policy issued to a subcontractor as the named insured included an endorsement that amended the definition of "insured" to specifically include the plaintiff, a real estate developer, subject to the following provisions (90 CA4th at 573):

> 1. This insurance applies only with respect to liability: [¶] a. Arising out of 'your work' for that insured by or for you; or [¶] b. Arising from the general supervision of 'your work' by [the additional insured]. [¶] 2. This insurance does not apply to 'bodily injury' or 'property damage' arising out of the sole negligence or willful misconduct of, or for defects in design furnished by, [the additional insured].

The insurer argued that this language meant its defense of the developer could be limited to defense regarding claims attributable to the subcontractor's work. The court held that although the endorsements limited the coverage for the developer to liability arising from the subcontractor's work, nothing in either the policies or the endorsements limited the insurer's obligation to provide the developer with a defense. 90 CA4th at 575.

However, in Monticello Ins. Co. v Essex Ins. Co. (2008) 162 CA4th 1376, 76 CR3d 848, the named insured was a drywall subcontractor. An endorsement made the general contractor an additional insured, "but only as respects negligent acts or omissions of the Named Insured." The policy also stated that "[i]t is further agreed that where no coverage shall apply herein for the Named Insured, no coverage nor defense shall be afforded to the above-identified additional insured." 162 CA4th at 1386 n4. Because the underlying complaint did not allege any defects in the drywall, the court held that there was no potential coverage for the named insured and, thus, no duty to defend the additional insured. 162 CA4th at 1387.

NOTE: It is difficult to reconcile the holdings in Presley Homes and Monticello. Notably, the Monticello court did not cite any cases dealing with the scope of the duty to defend an additional insured. It may be that courts will follow Monticello if the policy's additional insured provision expressly and unambiguously states that the duty to defend does not extend "where no coverage applies to the named insured." However, it appears that further case law, and perhaps a decision from the California Supreme Court, is needed to clarify this issue.

§14.40 c. Statutory Limit on Indemnity Provisions

A 2005 amendment to CC §2782(c) provides that an indemnification provision, including cost to defend, in a residential construction contract or an amendment entered into after January 1, 2006, by which a subcontractor must indemnify a builder for construction defects is unenforceable > to the extent the claims arise out of, pertain to, or relate to the negligence of the builder or the builder's other agents, other servants, or other independent contractors who are directly responsible to the builder, or for defects in design furnished by those persons, or to the extent the claims do not arise out of, pertain to, or relate to the scope of work in the written agreement between the parties.

This appears to preclude a builder from requiring indemnification from a subcontractor for the builder's sole negligence. However, CC §2782(d) permits the parties to agree that the subcontractor will defend the builder for all claims, so long as the agreement provides for reimbursement of defense fees and costs to the extent of the indemnitee's proportional liability, i.e., on a comparative fault basis.

§14.41 d. Certificate of Insurance

Subcontractors are often required contractually to name the project owner or the general contractor, or both, as additional insureds under their CGL policies. Compliance is confirmed by issuing policy endorsements to the additional insured parties. They often do not receive the actual endorsement, but rather are notified by way of a certificate of insurance. A certificate of insurance is merely evidence that a policy has been issued. Ins C §384. It is not a contract between the insurer and the certificate holder, and does not by itself convey additional-insured status on the holder. Empire Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v Bell (1997) 55 CA4th 1410, 1423, 64 CR2d 749. A certificate must state that it "does not amend, extend or alter" the coverage provided by the policy. Ins C §384(a).

A certificate of insurance issued by an authorized agent obligates the insurer to provide coverage for the certificate holder, even if the policy has not been amended to that effect. Notably, however, the certificate of insurance most commonly used in the construction industry is the Acord certificate, a single-page standardized form, which states that it "does not amend, extend or alter the coverage afforded by the referenced policies." Diamond Woodworks, Inc. v Argonaut Ins. Co. (2003) 109 CA4th 1020, 1032, 135 CR2d 736. Unfortunately, too often insurance brokers will issue a certificate of insurance on such a form even though they lack actual authority from the insurer to do so. In the event of a loss, the purported additional insured may have to prove that the broker had ostensible authority to issue the certificate of insurance in order for the additional insured to establish the insurer's liability. See Preis v American Indem. Co. (1990) 220 CA3d 752, 269 CR 617 (broker's sub-agent issued certificate without authority from insurer); Roger H. Proulx & Co. v Crest-Liners, Inc. (2002) 98 CA4th 182, 119 CR2d 442 (broker's employee erroneously believed issuance of certificate automatically extended coverage, but insurer required prior express approval); American Cas. Co. v Krieger (9th Cir 1999) 181 F3d 1113, 1122 (broker issued certificate without authority from insurer).

PRACTICE TIP: If you represent a party who is to be named as an additional insured, obtaining a Certificate of Insurance is usually sufficient. However, the "belt and suspenders" approach is to confirm your client's additional-insured status directly with the insurer.

§14.42 e. ISO Additional Insured Endorsements; Exclusions

Although many different forms of additional insured endorsements exist (see, e.g., §14.46), the most commonly used is the ISO "20 10" endorsement. The "20 10" endorsement lists the additional insured by name (i.e., as an additional named insured), and such coverage must be procured on an individual basis. Another commonly used form is the "20 30" endorsement. The "20 30" endorsement applies on a "blanket" or omnibus basis to each person or entity for whom the named insured is obligated to obtain additional insured coverage.

There are several different editions of the "20 10" endorsement, and older forms may be available through some insurers, but not others. Examples of "who is an insured" are shown in the following variations of the "20 10" endorsement:

- CG 20 10 11 85: WHO IS AN INSURED (Section II) is amended to include as an insured the person or persons shown in the Schedule, but only with respect to liability arising out of "your work" for that insured by or for you.
- CG 20 10 10 93: WHO IS AN INSURED (Section II) is amended to include as an insured the person or organization shown in the Schedule, but only with respect to liability arising out of your ongoing operations performed for that insured.
- CG 20 10 03 97: WHO IS AN INSURED (Section II) is amended to include as an insured the person or organization shown in the Schedule, but only with respect to liability arising out of your ongoing operations performed for that insured.
- CG 20 10 10 01 (Beginning with this endorsement edition, bodily injury and property damage occurring after completion of work are not covered.):

  A. Section II—Who Is an Insured is amended to include as an insured the person or organization shown in the Schedule, but only with respect to liability arising out of your ongoing operations performed for that insured.
  B. With respect to the insurance afforded to these additional insureds, the following exclusion is added:
  2. Exclusions
  This insurance does not apply to "bodily injury" or "property damage" occurring after:
  1. All work, including materials, parts or equipment furnished in connection with such work on the project (other than service, maintenance or repairs) to be performed by or on behalf of the additional insured(s) at the site of the covered operations has been completed; or
  2. That portion of "your work" out of which the injury or damage arises has been put to its intended use by any person or organization other than another contractor or subcontractor engaged in performing operations for a principal as a part of the same project.

- CG 20 10 07 04:

  A. Section II—Who Is an Insured is amended to include as an additional insured the person(s) or organization(s) shown in the Schedule, but only with respect to liability for "bodily injury," "property damage," or "personal and advertising injury" caused, in whole or in part, by:
  1. Your acts or omissions; or
  2. The acts or omissions of those acting on your behalf; in the performance of your ongoing operations for the additional insured(s) at the location(s) designated above.
  B. With respect to the insurance afforded to these additional insureds, the following additional exclusions apply:
  This insurance does not apply to "bodily injury" or "property damage" occurring after:
  1. All work, including materials, parts or equipment furnished in connection with such work on the project (other than service, maintenance or repairs) to be performed by or on behalf of the additional insured(s) at the location of the covered operations has been completed; or
  2. That portion of "your work" out of which the injury or damage arises has been put to its intended use by any person or organization other than another contractor or subcontractor engaged in performing operations for a principal as a part of the same project. [Emphasis added.]

There are three key differences in the various editions of this form, discussed in §§14.43-14.45.

§14.43 (1) "Arising Out of" Versus "Caused, in Whole or in Part, by"

In the pre-2004 versions of the ISO additional insured endorsement form, coverage for an additional insured was limited to liability arising out of the named insured's work or ongoing operations. In contrast, the 2004 version (CG 20 10 07 04) extends coverage for an additional insured to liability caused, in whole or in part, by acts or omissions of the named insured or those acting on behalf of the named insured.

Case law before 2004 established that the phrase "arising out of" must be given a broad meaning. Acceptance Ins. Co. v Syufy Enters. (1999) 69 CA4th 321, 330, 81 CR2d 557. This "minimal causal connection" is something less than proximate cause. Vitton Constr. Co. v Pacific Ins. Co. (2003) 110 CA4th 762, 767, 2 CR3d 1. The phrase "arising out of" has a much broader significance than "caused by." Fibreboard Corp. v Hartford Acc. & Indem. Co. (1993) 16 CA4th 492, 504, 20 CR2d 376. When an insurer grants coverage for liability "arising out of" the named insured's work, the additional insured is covered without regard to whether the injury was caused by the named insured or the additional insured. Acceptance Ins. Co., 69 CA4th at 330; Vitton Constr. Co., 110 CA4th at 768. For example, this "minimal causal connection" was held to exist when the accident occurred while the named insured was performing work for the additional insured at the worksite (Fireman's Fund Ins. Cos. v Atlantic Richfield Co. (2001) 94 CA4th 842, 851, 115 CR2d 26), and when the named insured cut a hole in a roof through which a worker fell, even though another subcontractor was responsible for covering the opening (Vitton Constr. Co., 110 CA4th at 767).

In contrast to pre-2004 versions, the 2004 form eliminates the phrase "arising out of." The 2004 form requires that the liability be caused, in whole or in part, by acts or omissions of the named insured.

PRACTICE TIP: No cases as yet have interpreted the distinction between "arising out of" and "caused, in whole or in part, by." However, it appears that the new form will provide coverage for the additional insured's own liability, even if that liability is the major (but not sole) cause of the injury or damage, provided that the named insured's acts or omissions (or another's action on the named insured's behalf) played a part in causing the injury or damage.

§14.44 (2) "Ongoing Operations"

The post-1985 versions of the additional insured endorsement form limit the coverage for an additional insured to liability either arising out of or caused, in whole or in part, by the named insured's ongoing operations performed for that additional insured, depending on the form date. See §§14.42-14.43. Construction defect claims typically arise after completion of the project. This reference to "ongoing operations" eliminates coverage for "completed operations." Pardee Constr. Co. v Insurance Co. of the W. (2000) 77 CA4th 1340, 1359, 92 CR2d 443. On completed operations, see §§14.57, 14.67.

Source: Real Property/California Real Property Sales Transactions/14 Liability Insurance: Selected Issues Pertinent to Sales/§14.45 (3) 'Acts or Omissions'

§14.45 (3) "Acts or Omissions"

The 2004 version of the additional insured endorsement form no longer refers to "your work" or "your ongoing operations." Instead, the 2004 version refers to the "acts or omissions" of the named insured or those acting on behalf of the named insured. No reported California cases have interpreted this provision. It remains to be seen whether courts will find that the change in language affects the scope of coverage afforded to the additional insured.

§14.46 f. Manuscript Additional Insured Endorsements

The ISO Form CG 20 10 07 04 additional insured endorsement (see §§14.42-14.45) has not been universally adopted. Several insurers have elected to use their own additional insured endorsements, especially for insureds connected with the construction industry. These endorsements vary, and an analysis of all of them is beyond the scope of this chapter.

However, at least one major insurer uses an additional insured endorsement that provides coverage for the additional insured only if the injury or damage results from the negligence of the named insured. The 2004 ISO endorsement is not restricted on the basis of theories of liability. The only requirement in the 2004 ISO endorsement is that the named insured must have caused the injury, at least in part, by its acts or omissions. See §§14.43, 14.45. In contrast, an additional insured endorsement that restricts coverage for the additional insured to liability for the negligence of the named insured may leave the additional insured without coverage if the named insured is sued only for strict liability.

NOTE: The American Institute of Architects (AIA), Document A 201 (1997)—General Conditions of Contract for Construction, has removed entirely the requirement that the contractor name the owner as an additional insured on the contractor's liability insurance. In their 1997 commentary, the AIA observed, "while some additional protection may be gained in this way [i.e., adding the owner as additional insured], it ultimately increases the cost of insurance to the contractor without measurably reducing the risk of disputes on the project." (The full AIA commentary is published on the website of the International Risk Management Institute, listed in the Directory.) The proliferation of manuscript additional insured endorsements will only increase the disputes over the rights of additional insureds.

§14.47 E. Effect of Stated Policy Period on Coverage

A key inquiry under an occurrence-based policy (see §§14.12, 14.18) concerns what fact or event triggers an insurer's duty to defend or indemnify its insured. "Trigger" describes what must happen during the policy period to activate the insurer's duties to defend and indemnify. Montrose Chem. Corp. v Admiral Ins. Co. (1995) 10 C4th 645, 655 n2, 42 CR2d 324. The trigger of coverage usually determines which insurance policy may provide coverage. Stonelight Tile, Inc. v California Ins. Guarantee Ass'n (2007) 150 CA4th 19, 35, 58 CR3d 74; Safeco Ins. Co. v Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. (2007) 148 CA4th 620, 629, 55 CR3d 844. As defined in a standard CGL policy, an "occurrence" of "property damage" depends on when the damage took place, not when the wrongful act was committed. Montrose Chem. Corp., 10 C4th at 667; Safeco Ins. Co., 148 CA4th at 632. On the other hand, under the definition of "occurrence" for "personal injury" (such as wrongful eviction), it is the insured's wrongful act, not the injury to the third party claimant, that triggers coverage. Safeco Ins. Co. v Fireman's Fund Ins. Co., supra; North Am. Bldg. Maintenance, Inc. v Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. (2006) 137 CA4th 627, 633 n4, 40 CR3d 468. Put another way, the definition of "occurrence" means that property damage claims trigger policies in effect at the time of the damage; personal injury claims trigger policies in effect when the wrongful act took place. Montrose, 10 C4th at 669; Safeco Ins. Co., 148 CA4th at 633; North Am. Bldg. Maintenance v Fireman's Fund Ins. Co., supra.

Under an "occurrence" policy, if an accident may have caused "bodily injury" or "property damage," at least in part, within the policy period, coverage extends to all specified harm caused by the occurrence, even if some of the harm results beyond the policy period. Aerojet-General Corp. v Transport Indem. Co. (1997) 17 C4th 38, 57, 70 CR2d 118. This principle of policy interpretation emphasizes the distinction between the trigger of coverage and the scope of coverage. Once coverage has been triggered, it will extend to all of the insured's liability for damages attributable to the same occurrence during and after the policy period. FMC Corp. v Plaisted & Cos. (1998) 61 CA4th 1132, 1184, 72 CR2d 467.

For a discussion of continuous or progressive loss, see §14.48.

© The Regents of the University of California

§14.48 1. Continuous or Progressive Loss

Under a "standard language" ISO policy, which requires that the "property damage" "occur during the policy period," if property damage is continuous and progressive through several policy periods (see §14.47), the damage is potentially covered under all policies in effect during those periods. Montrose Chem. Corp. v Admiral Ins. Co. (1995) 10 C4th 645, 677, 42 CR2d 324 (Montrose II); Stonelight Tile, Inc. v California Ins. Guarantee Ass'n (2007) 150 CA4th 19, 36, 58 CR3d 74; County of San Bernardino v Pacific Indem. Co. (1997) 56 CA4th 666, 682, 65 CR2d 657. Each insurer "on the risk when continuous or progressively deteriorating damage or injury first manifests itself remains obligated to indemnify the insured for the entirety of the ensuing damage or injury." Montrose, 10 C4th at 686. Each insurer has a duty separate and independent from the others to defend all the parts of the claim. Aerojet-General Corp. v Transport Indem. Co. (1997) 17 C4th 38, 71, 70 CR2d 118.

Successive insurers on a risk involving continuous or progressively deteriorating property damage are separately and independently obligated to indemnify the insured; each insurer is liable "in full," up to its policy limits. Aerojet-General, 17 C4th at 57; Stonelight Tile, Inc. v California Ins. Guarantee Ass'n, supra. Allocation of indemnification costs among the insurers is determined by the terms of their respective policies (Montrose II, 10 C4th at 681 n19):

> Allocation of the cost of indemnification once several insurers have been found liable to indemnify the insured for all or some portion of a continuing injury or progressively deteriorating property damage requires application of principles of contract law to the express terms and limitations of the various policies of insurance on the risk.

When a construction project suffers from several distinct forms of damage as a result of different construction defects, the trigger of coverage must be analyzed on a defect-by-defect basis. In other words, the fact that one defect is known will not preclude coverage for other, still latent, defects. Chu v Canadian Indem. Co. (1990) 224 CA3d 86, 98, 274 CR 20.

§14.49 2. Examples of Continuous and Progressive Damage

The following cases illustrate examples of continuous and progressive damage:

- "Extensive list of alleged design and construction defects" that caused water intrusion, mold, contamination of property, loss of use: Standard Fire Ins. Co. v Spectrum Community Ass'n (2006) 141 CA4th 1117, 1121, 46 CR3d 804;
- Construction defects that caused leaks, splitting and cracking of walls, floors, and ceilings, and undermining of foundation: Pepperell v Scottsdale Ins. Co. (1998) 62 CA4th 1045, 73 CR2d 164;
- Construction defects that caused water intrusion and dry rot: Magnolia Square Homeowners Ass'n v Safeco Ins. Co. (1990) 221 CA3d 1049, 271 CR 1;
- Incorporation of metallurgically substandard components that caused injury to water systems and lead contamination of water: Watts Indus., Inc. v Zurich Am. Ins. Co. (2004) 121 CA4th 1029, 18 CR3d 61;
- Gradual leak of water from swimming pool: California Union Ins. Co. v Landmark Ins. Co. (1983) 145 CA3d 462, 193 CR 461;
- Structural encroachment: Borg v Transamerica Ins. Co. (1996) 47 CA4th 448, 54 CR2d 811.

§14.49A 3. "Known Injury or Damage" Provisions in Post-1998 ISO CGL Policies

In Montrose Chemical Corp. v Admiral Ins. Co. (1995) 10 C4th 645, 685, 42 CR2d 324, 913 P2d 878 (Montrose II), the California Supreme Court adopted the continuous trigger of coverage theory (with the result that bodily injury or property damage that is continuous or progressively deteriorating throughout successive policy periods is potentially covered by all CGL policies in effect during those periods). The Supreme Court rejected the insurer's argument that the "known loss" rule precluded coverage for continuous damage that began before the policy period. 10 C4th at 693. However, the court recognized that the continuous trigger of coverage theory did not automatically apply to policies not then under its consideration. Ultimately, coverage depends on many factors, "including the existence of express conditions or exclusions in the particular contract of insurance." 10 C4th at 655 n2.

§14.49B a. ISO Policy Changes After Montrose II

Insurance companies are not required to use the standard ISO policy forms; they are free to modify the standard language or adopt their own nonstandard policy. See Dart Industries, Inc. v Commercial Union Ins. Co. (2002) 28 C4th 1059, 1074 n5, 124 CR2d 142, 52 P3d 79; USF Ins. Co. v Clarendon America Ins. Co. (CD Cal 2006) 452 F Supp 2d 972, 989. In response to the Montrose decision, the ISO added an endorsement to its CGL policies that took effect in most states in 1999. See USF v Clarendon, 452 F Supp 2d at 989. The provisions of the so-called "Known Injury or Damage" endorsement, form CG 00 57 09 99, were incorporated into the Insuring Agreement in the 2001, 2004, and 2007 ISO CGL policy forms, CG 00 01 10 01, CG 00 01 12 04, and CG 00 01 12 07.

NOTE: In the first party property insurance context, under the manifestation trigger, the insurer that insured the property at the time that appreciable property damage first becomes manifest is solely responsible for indemnification to the insured. Prudential-LMI Commercial Ins. Co. v Superior Court (1990) 51 C3d 674, 699, 274 CR 387, 798 P2d 1230. The "known injury or damage" policy provisions appear to incorporate this "manifestation" trigger of coverage, thus converting the occurrence form into a hybrid claims-made form.

The ISO policy revisions have given rise to decisions resulting in partial or complete denial of coverage, but have not always obviated the duty to defend. See, e.g., Westfield Ins. Co. v Sheehan Constr. Co., Inc. (SD Ind 2008) 580 F Supp 2d 701, 716, aff'd (7th Cir 2009) 564 F3d 817 (because insured general contractor had knowledge of defective work that allegedly damaged plaintiffs' homes prior to policy period, if "property damage" was caused by "occurrence," that damage would not be covered). In Great American Ins. Co. of New York v North American Specialty Ins. Co. (D Nev 2008) 542 F Supp 2d 1203, homeowners, alleging various construction defects, sued a partnership that built the homes. The court held the partnership's insurer had a duty to defend, despite conflicting evidence about whether certain damage during the policy period was a continuation, change, or resumption of property damage that existed before the policy period because, under Nevada law, any doubt about whether the duty to defend arises must be resolved in favor of the insured. See also, IDC Construction, LLC v Admiral Ins. Co. (SD Fla 2004) 339 F Supp 2d 1342 (interpreting similar exclusion, and holding that because complaint did not specify date when damages first occurred, insurer had duty to defend).

§14.49C b. Other Anti-Montrose II Provisions

Although the ISO has adopted "known injury or damage" provisions to circumvent Montrose II's application of the known loss doctrine, other insurers have changed the ISO CGL insuring language to require that the "bodily injury" or "property damage" be caused by an occurrence that happens during the policy period. See USF Ins. Co. v Clarendon America Ins. Co. (CD Cal 2006) 452 F Supp 2d 972; Lockheed Corp. v Continental Ins. Co. (2005) 134 CA4th 187, 35 CR3d 799, disapproved on other grounds in State of Cal. v Allstate Ins. Co. (2009) 45 C4th 1008, 1036 n11, 90 CR3d 1; Westoil Terminals Co. v Industrial Indem. Co. (2003) 110 CA4th 139, 1 CR3d 516. The USF v Clarendon court refused to apply the Montrose II "continuous injury trigger" to continuous property damage caused by construction defects, because as USF conceded, the Clarendon policies had been revised in 1996 to avoid the Montrose II continuous injury trigger of coverage rule (452 F Supp 2d at 989 (citations omitted)):

> The Clarendon Policies, by contrast [to Montrose II], require that both the occurrence and the first instance of property damage take place during the policy period. Additionally, they explicitly deem that all property damage caused contributed to by an occurrence takes place "at the time of the first such damage." This is so "even though the nature and extent of such damage or injury may change and even though the damage may be continuous, progressive, cumulative, changing or evolving, and even though the occurrence causing such bodily injury or property damage may be continuous or repeated exposure to substantially the same general harm."

The Clarendon policy provisions are explicit that progressive property damage that began before the insurers' policy period does not trigger coverage even if the damage continues into the policy period. Such property damage is outside the scope of the insuring agreement. The Clarendon Policies are not susceptible to the interpretation given to the older policy language in Montrose II. See USF v Clarendon at 989. As a result, Clarendon had no legal duty or equitable obligation to indemnify the insured. The policy provision "plainly" required the property damage to first take place during the policy period. 452 F Supp 2d at 990. Nevertheless, Clarendon did have a duty to defend the insured, with defense costs apportioned on a "time on the risk" basis. 452 F Supp 2d at 1004.

PRACTICE TIP: The foregoing cases, each involving nonstandard policy language, demonstrate the importance of carefully reviewing the language of each policy, which might apply to the loss, instead of relying on general doctrines or rules.

§14.49D 4. Number of Occurrences

The definition of "occurrence" determines whether a particular policy provides coverage, but not the amount. Safeco Ins. Co. v Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. (2007) 148 CA4th 620, 633, 55 CR3d 844. Most CGL policies provide a larger dollar aggregate limit, and a smaller "per occurrence" dollar limit. In determining which policy limit applies, the term "occurrence" has generally been held to mean the underlying cause of the injury, rather than the injury or claim itself. When multiple injuries emanate from a common source, there is only a single "occurrence" for purposes of policy coverage. Safeco Ins. Co. v Fireman's Fund Ins. Co., supra. If there is only one cause, there is only one "occurrence," even if the damages extend beyond the end of the policy term. 148 CA4th at 634. Conversely, where a cause is interrupted, or when there are several autonomous causes, there are multiple "occurrences" for purposes of determining policy limits and assessing deductibles. 148 CA4th at 633.

§14.50 5. After-Acquired Property

A liability insurer has no duty to indemnify or defend an insured for claims described in a third party complaint when the claims relate to property acquired by the insured after the policy period stated in the policy. Tosco Corp. v General Ins. Co. (2000) 85 CA4th 1016, 102 CR2d 657. This rule applies if the insured purchases new and different property after its liability policy terminated. Tosco Corp. v General Ins. Co., supra; A.C. Label Co. v Transamerica Ins. Co. (1996) 48 CA4th 1188, 56 CR2d 207, rejected in K F Dairies, Inc. & Affiliates v Fireman's Ins. Fund, Inc. (In re K F Dairies, Inc. & Affiliates) (9th Cir 2000) 224 F3d 922, 925. This rule also applies if the insured purchased a subsidiary company after the policy expired. Cooper Cos., Inc. v Transcontinental Ins. Co. (1995) 31 CA4th 1094, 37 CR2d 508.

© The Regents of the University of California

Source: Real Property/California Real Property Sales Transactions/14 Liability Insurance: Selected Issues Pertinent to Sales/§14.51 F. Liability Assumed by the Insured

§14.51 F. Liability Assumed by the Insured

The commercial general liability (CGL) policy does not normally cover indemnity obligations assumed by the insured by contract. Indemnity obligations are the reason for the special contractual liability coverage endorsement extending coverage to incidental contracts assumed by the insured. See Shell Oil Co. v National Union Fire Ins. Co. (1996) 44 CA4th 1633, 1642, 52 CR2d 580.

Business liability policies may extend coverage in favor of the insured by insuring contracts assumed by the insured. If a policy contains such a provision, it affords coverage not only to the insured's own conduct, but also to the acts of others for which the insured has contractually agreed to assume liability. Old Republic Ins. Co. v Superior Court (1998) 66 CA4th 128, 146, 77 CR2d 642, overruled on other grounds in Vandenberg v Superior Court (1999) 21 C4th 815, 841 n13, 88 CR2d 366. Liability "assumed under an incidental contract" that is not defined in the policy may extend coverage to any contract entered into by the insured. Cal-Farm Ins. Co. v TAC Exterminators, Inc. (1985) 172 CA3d 564, 578, 218 CR 407. However, nearly all policies now define the term "insured contract" or "assumed contract," and if so, the definition in the policy controls.

A contractual liability provision or coverage endorsement does not make a person an insured when that person's liability is assumed by the party insured under the policy. Rather, it extends the insurance afforded under the policy to include coverage for liability assumed by contract by the party insured. Alex Robertson Co. v Imperial Cas. & Indem. Co. (1992) 8 CA4th 338, 343, 10 CR2d 165. Courts should construe "insured contract" provisions broadly, in favor of coverage. Golden Eagle Ins. Co. v Insurance Co. of the W. (2002) 99 CA4th 837, 851, 121 CR2d 682.

The "contractual liability" provision of the 2004 CGL policy states (CG 00 01 12 04 (§I, ¶2.b), p 2):

> This insurance does not apply to:
> ….
> b. Contractual Liability
> "Bodily injury" or "property damage" for which the insured is obligated to pay damages by reason of the assumption of liability in a contract or agreement. This exclusion does not apply to liability for damages:
> (1) That the insured would have in the absence of the contract or agreement; or > (2) Assumed in a contract or agreement that is an "insured contract", provided the "bodily injury" or "property damage" occurs subsequent to the execution of the contract or agreement. Solely for the purposes of liability assumed in an "insured contract", reasonable attorney fees and necessary litigation expenses incurred by or for a party other than an insured are deemed to be > damages because of "bodily injury" or "property damage", provided:
> (a) Liability to such party for, or for the cost of, that party's defense has also been assumed in the same "insured contract";
> and
> (b) Such attorney fees and litigation expenses are for defense of that party against a civil or alternative dispute resolution proceeding in which damages to which this insurance applies are alleged.

"Insured contract" means (G 00 01 12 04 (§V, ¶9), p 13):

> a. A contract for a lease of premises. However, that portion of the contract for a lease of premises that indemnifies any person or organization for damage by fire to premises while rented to you or temporarily occupied by you with permission of the owner is not an "insured contract";
> b. A sidetrack agreement;
> c. Any easement or license agreement, except in connection with construction or demolition operations on or within 50 feet of a railroad;
> d. An obligation, as required by ordinance, to indemnify a municipality, except in connection with work for a municipality;
> e. An elevator maintenance agreement;
> f. That part of any other contract or agreement pertaining to your business (including an indemnification of a municipality in connection with work performed for a municipality) under which you assume the tort liability of another party to pay for "bodily injury" or "property damage" to a third person or organization. Tort liability means a liability that would be imposed by law in the absence of any contract or agreement.
> Paragraph f. does not include that part of any contract or agreement:

(1) That indemnifies a railroad for "bodily injury" or "property damage" arising out of construction or demolition operations, within 50 feet of any railroad property and affecting any railroad bridge or trestle, tracks, roadbeds, tunnel, underpass or crossing;

(2) That indemnifies an architect, engineer or surveyor for injury or damage arising out of:

(a) Preparing, approving, or failing to prepare or approve, maps, shop drawings, opinions, reports, surveys, field orders, change orders or drawings and specifications; or

(b) Giving directions or instructions, or failing to give them, if that is the primary cause of the injury or damage; or

(3) Under which the insured, if an architect, engineer or surveyor, assumes liability for an injury or damage arising out of the insured's rendering or failure to render professional services, including those listed in (2) above and supervisory, inspection, architectural or engineering activities.

The August 1996 Fire Casualty & Surety Bulletin (FC&S Bulletin), quoted in Golden Eagle Ins. Co. v Insurance Co. of the W. (2002) 99 CA4th 837, 847, 121 CR2d 682, clarifies that under the "current" CGL policy (now included in the 2004 CGL form), attorney fees and costs incurred by the indemnitee are included in "damages" covered under the "insured contract":

> There has been a question in some circles over whether the contractual coverage offered under the CGL form extends defense cost coverage to the entity whose liability has been assumed by the insured through an insured contract.... The current CGL form, in discussing liability for damages assumed under an insured contract, states that 'reasonable attorney fees and necessary litigation expenses incurred by or for a party other than an insured are deemed to be damages'. This would seem to answer the question in the affirmative since the word 'damages' is the key word. The exception to the contractual liability exclusion states that the exclusion does not apply to liability for 'damages' assumed under an insured contract; therefore, if the defense costs for the entity other than the insured are 'damages', the CGL form will cover them. There are some conditions to be met before the defense costs are deemed to be damages, namely, liability for the defense costs has to be assumed in the insured contract (just as the liability has to be assumed), and the defense costs have to be for defense against alleged damages that are covered by the insured's policy." §14.52 G. Duty to Defend

Construction defect cases are notoriously expensive to defend. Plaintiffs often name as defendants everyone involved in the project: owners, developers, general contractors, and subcontractors. The sheer number of defendants adds to the difficulty in managing the case, not to mention the expense. Thus, establishing the client's right to a defense under one or more policies may be critical.

§14.53 1. Broader Than Duty to Indemnify

The insurer's duty to indemnify runs to claims that are actually covered, in light of the facts proved. Montrose Chem. Corp. v Admiral Ins. Co. (1995) 10 C4th 645, 659 n9, 42 CR2d 324 (Montrose II); Buss v Superior Court (1997) 16 C4th 35, 45, 65 CR2d 366; State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. v Superior Court (2008) 164 CA4th 317, 324, 78 CR3d 828. By definition, it entails the payment of money in order to resolve liability. Buss, 16 C4th at 46. It arises only after liability is established. Montrose II, 10 C4th at 659 n9.

By contrast, the insurer's duty to defend runs to claims that are merely potentially covered, in light of facts alleged or otherwise disclosed. Buss, 16 C4th at 46; Delgado v Interins. Exch. of the Auto. Club of S. Cal. (2009) 47 C4th 302, 308, 97 CR3d 298; Montrose Chem. Corp. v Superior Court (1993) 6 C4th 287, 295, 24 CR2d 467 (Montrose I); Gray v Zurich Ins. Co. (1966) 65 C2d 263, 276, 54 CR 104; Griffin Dewatering Corp. v Northern Ins. Co. of New York (2009) 176 CA4th 172, 97 CR3d 568; State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. v Superior Court (2008) 164 CA4th 317, 324, 78 CR3d 828; Frontier Oil Corp. v RLI Ins. Co. (2007) 153 CA4th 1436, 1464, 63 CR3d 816; Essex Ins. Co. v City of Bakersfield (2007) 154 CA4th 696, 704, 65 CR3d 1; Safeco Ins. Co. v Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. (2007) 148 CA4th 620, 629, 55 CR3d 844. It entails the rendering of a service, i.e., the mounting and funding of a defense in order to avoid or at least minimize liability; it arises as soon as tender is made and is discharged when the action is concluded. Buss, 16 C4th at 46; Montrose I, 6 C4th at 295; Frontier Oil Corp., 153 CA4th at 1466; OneBeacon America Ins. Co. v Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. (2009) 175 CA4th 183, 95 CR3d 808; Padilla Constr. Co., Inc. v Transportation Ins. Co. (2007) 150 CA4th 984, 996, 58 CR3d 807. It may be extinguished earlier, if it is shown that no claim can in fact be covered. Buss, 16 C4th at 46; Montrose I, 6 C4th at 295; Frontier Oil Corp., supra. If it is so extinguished, however, it is extinguished only prospectively and not retroactively: Before, the insurer had a duty to defend; after, it does not have a duty to defend further. Buss, 16 C4th at 46; Scottsdale Ins. Co. v MV Transp. (2005) 36 C4th 643, 655, 31 CR3d 147.

Therefore, it is frequently said that the insurer's duty to defend is broader than its duty to indemnify. Delgado, 47 C4th at 308 n1; Buss, 16 C4th at 46; Montrose I, 6 C4th at 295; Scottsdale Ins. Co., 36 C4th 654; Frontier Oil Corp., 153 CA4th at 1464. However, it is not unlimited; it extends beyond claims that are actually covered to those that are merely potentially so—but no further. Buss, 16 C4th at 46; Waller v Truck Ins. Exch. (1995) 11 C4th 1, 19, 44 CR2d 370; State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. v Superior Court (2008) 164 CA4th 317, 324, 78 CR3d 828.

The mere existence of a legal dispute does not create a potential for coverage. Scottsdale Ins. Co., 36 C4th 643 at 657; Griffin Dewatering Corp., 176 CA4th 172.

Standard language CGL policies once stated that the insurer would defend even if the allegations of the suit are groundless, false, or fraudulent. Some nonstandard language policies still contain this false claims provision. In Gray v Zurich Ins. Co., the Supreme Court determined that such a false claims provision was qualified. "The 'groundless, false or fraudulent' clause however, does not extend the obligation to defend without limitation; it includes only defense to those actions of the nature and kind covered by the policy." Gray v Zurich Ins. Co. (1966) 65 C2d 263, 274, 54 CR 104; Venoco, Inc. v Gulf Underwriters Ins. Co. (2009) 175 CA4th 750, 765, 96 CR3d 409.

Some courts have held that under a contractual indemnity clause the duty to defend does not exist without a determination that the indemnitor was negligent in performing its work. Regan Roofing Co. v Superior Court (1994) 24 CA4th 425, 436, 29 CR2d 413. However, in Crawford v Weather Shield Mfg., Inc. (2008) 44 C4th 541, 565, 79 CR3d 721, the California Supreme Court disapproved the holding in Regan Roofing Co., and held that the indemnitor's duty to defend arises immediately, when a claim is made against the indemnitee, regardless of any finding of fault to be made in the course of the litigation for which a defense is owed.

§14.54 2. Extends to Entire Claim

Read in context, language in certain decisions stating or implying that the duty to defend is "independent" of the duty to indemnify (Gray v Zurich Ins. Co. (1966) 65 C2d 263, 274, 54 CR 104) means nothing more than that the former is broader than the latter. Buss v Superior Court (1997) 16 C4th 35, 46, 65 CR2d 366. Both the duty to indemnify and the duty to defend are in fact dependent on coverage—the former on actual coverage, the latter on at least potential coverage. Buss, 16 C4th at 47 n10.

Thus, in an action in which all the claims are at least potentially covered, the insurer has a duty to defend. Buss, 16 C4th at 47; Hogan v Midland Nat'l Ins. Co. (1970) 3 C3d 553, 563, 91 CR 153. See also Horace Mann Ins. Co. v Barbara B. (1993) 4 C4th 1076, 1081, 17 CR2d 210 (insurer has duty to defend when only one of several claims is at least potentially covered). This obligation is express in the policy's language. It rests on the fact that the insurer has been paid premiums by the insured for a defense. "The rule is grounded in basic principles of contract law." Buss, 16 C4th at 47.

Conversely, in an action in which none of the claims is even potentially covered, the insurer does not have a duty to defend. Buss, 16 C4th at 47; Waller v Truck Ins. Exch. (1995) 11 C4th 1, 29, 44 CR2d 370; State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. v Superior Court (2008) 164 CA4th 317, 324, 78 CR3d 828. This freedom is implied in the policy's language. It rests on the fact that the insurer has not been paid premiums by the insured for a defense. This "rule," too, "is grounded in basic principles of contract law." Buss, 16 C4th at 47.

It follows that in a "mixed" action, in which some of the claims are at least potentially covered and the others are not, the insurer has a duty to defend as to the claims that are at least potentially covered, but does not have a duty to defend as to those that are not. Buss, 16 C4th at 48. This conclusion is in line with the general rule that when a complaint states different causes of action against the insured, one of which is within coverage and others of which may not be, "the insurer is bound to defend with respect to those which, if proved, would be within coverage." Buss, 16 C4th at 48. "The duty to defend, although broad, is not unlimited; it is measured by the nature and kinds of risks covered." Buss, 16 C4th at 48; Waller, 11 C4th at 19.

Despite the foregoing, in a "mixed" action the insurer has a duty to defend the action in its entirety. Buss, 16 C4th at 48; Horace Mann, 4 C4th at 1081; Padilla Constr. Co., Inc. v Transportation Ins. Co. (2007) 150 CA4th 984, 996, 58 CR3d 807. The California Supreme Court "justified" the insurer's duty to defend the entire "mixed" action prophylactically, as an obligation imposed by law in support of the policy. Buss, 16 C4th at 49. To defend meaningfully, the insurer must defend immediately and entirely. Buss, 16 C4th at 49; Montrose Chem. Corp. v Superior Court (1993) 6 C4th 287, 295, 24 CR2d 467 (Montrose I); Padilla Constr. Co., supra. It cannot parse the claims, dividing those that are at least potentially covered from those that are not. To do so would be time consuming. It might also be futile: The "plasticity of modern pleading" (Buss, 16 C4th at 49; Gray, 65 C2d at 276) allows the transformation of claims that are at least potentially covered into claims that are not, and vice versa. The fact remains: As to the claims that are at least potentially covered, the insurer gives, and the insured gets, just what they bargained for, namely, the mounting and funding of a defense. But as to the claims that are not, the insurer may give, and the insured may get, more than they agreed, depending on whether defense of these claims necessitates any additional costs. Buss, 16 C4th at 49.

§14.55 3. Extrinsic Evidence May Support Duty to Defend Determination of the duty to defend depends, in the first instance, on a comparison between the allegations of the complaint and the terms of the policy. Delgado v Interins. Exch. of the Auto. Club of S. Cal. (2009) 47 C4th 302, 97 CR3d 298; Montrose Chem. Corp. v Superior Court (1993) 6 C4th 287, 295, 24 CR2d 467 (Montrose I); Scottsdale Ins. Co. v MV Transp. (2005) 36 C4th 643, 654, 31 CR3d 147. However, the duty also exists if extrinsic facts known to the insurer suggest that the claim may be covered. Delgado, 47 C4th at 308; Montrose I, 6 C4th at 295; Scottsdale Ins. Co., 36 C4th at 654; Frontier Oil Corp. v RLI Ins. Co. (2007) 153 CA4th 1436, 1464, 63 CR3d 816. See also Monticello Ins. Co. v Essex Ins. Co. (2008) 162 CA4th 1376, 76 CR3d 848 (general contractor's insurer, as plaintiff seeking summary judgment, had burden to establish extrinsic fact that subcontractor's insurer had defect list at time when it could have decided to participate in defense).

Moreover, if, under the facts alleged, reasonably inferable, or otherwise known, the complaint could fairly be amended to allege a covered liability, the insurer still has a duty to defend even if the precise causes of action pled by the third party complaint fall outside policy coverage. Gray v Zurich Ins. Co. (1966) 65 C2d 263, 275, 54 CR 104; Buss v Superior Court (1997) 16 C4th 35, 46, 65 CR2d 366; Scottsdale Ins. Co., 36 C4th at 654; Griffin Dewatering Corp. v Northern Ins. Co. of New York (2009) 176 CA4th 172, 97 CR3d 568; Frontier Oil Corp., 153 CA4th at 1465 n21. The facts which bear on whether a claim is potentially covered include extrinsic facts known to the insurer at the inception of the suit and facts in the complaint, but do not include made-up facts, just because those facts might naturally be supposed to exist along with the known facts. Griffin Dewatering, 176 CA4th at 198, 97 CR3d 568; Friedman Prof. Mgmt. Co., Inc. v Norcal Mut. Ins. Co. (2004) 120 CA4th 17, 34-35, 15 CR3d 359; Westoil Terminals Co., Inc. v Industrial Indemnity Co. (2003) 110 CA4th 139, 154, 1 CR3d 516 (refusing to consider scenario not in facts of complaint); Low v Golden Eagle Ins. Co. (2002) 99 CA4th 109, 114, 120 CR2d 827 (refusing to consider possibility of amendment of third party's complaint against policyholder because it would speculate about unpled causes of action).

§14.56 4. Reimbursement of Defense Costs

On the claims that are at least potentially covered, the insurer may not seek reimbursement for defense costs. Buss v Superior Court (1997) 16 C4th 35, 49, 65 CR2d 366. On the claims that are not even potentially covered, however, the insurer may indeed seek reimbursement for defense costs. 16 C4th at 50; Scottsdale Ins. Co. v MV Transp. (2005) 36 C4th 643, 656, 31 CR3d 147.

§14.57 H. Products or Completed Operations Hazard

The standard form ISO CGL policy defines the "products or completed operations hazard" as follows (CG 00 01 12 04 (V, ¶16.a), p 14):

> a. Includes all "bodily injury" and "property damage" occurring away from premises you own or rent and arising out of "your product" or "your work" except:
> (1) Products that are still in your physical possession; or
> (2) Work that has not yet been completed or abandoned. However, "your work" will be deemed completed at the earliest of the following times:
> (a) When all of the work called for in your contract has been completed.
> (b) When all of the work to be done at the job site has been completed if your contract calls for work at more than one job site.
> (c) When that part of the work done at a job site has been put to its intended use by any person or organization other than another contractor or subcontractor working on the same project.
> Work that may need service, maintenance, correction, repair or replacement, but which is otherwise complete, will be treated as completed. [Emphasis added.]

The "products or completed operation hazard" clause does not extend the insurer's obligations beyond the policy period. (See general rules on the effect of the stated policy period in §14.47.) Thus, the "bodily injury" or "property damage" must occur after the insured has completed its "operations" on the property and during the term of the insurance policy. Baroco W., Inc. v Scottsdale Ins. Co. (2003) 110 CA4th 96, 103, 1 CR3d 464; Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co. v Merritt (9th Cir 1992) 974 F2d 1196, 1199.

§14.58 I. Property Damage Exclusions

Property damage exclusions make up a large part of CGL policies. It is beyond the scope of this chapter to discuss all the exclusions under CGL policies that might apply in a construction defect case. See, e.g., California Construction Contracts, Defects, and Litigation, chaps 12, 10 (Cal CEB 2008). The exclusions discussed in §§14.59-14.68 most commonly arise in claims following real property sales transactions; some of these (see §§14.63-14.68) might apply, for example, when a property owner acts as an owner-contractor or owner-builder and before selling the property makes improvements that, after the transfer, the buyer discovers are defective.

§14.59 1. Property the Insured Owns, Rents, or Occupies

The exclusion for "property damage" to real estate the insured owns, rents, or occupies occurs in the CGL policy (CG 00 01 12 04 (§I, ¶2.j(1)), p 4), in the Businessowners Coverage Form (BP 00 03 07 02 (§II.B, ¶1.k(1)), p 31), and in the Owners and Contractors Protective Liability policy (CG 00 09 12 04 (§I, ¶1.g(1)), p 3).

In Old Republic Ins. Co. v Superior Court (1998) 66 CA4th 128, 150, 77 CR2d 642, overruled on other grounds in Vandenberg v Superior Court (1999) 21 C4th 815, 841 n13, 88 CR2d 366, the court considered a virtually identical exclusion, which provided that the insurance would not apply to property damage to "property owned or occupied by or rented to the insured." 66 CA4th at 138. The insureds had leased commercial property for 10 years. The lessor then sued them for breach of the lease agreement and waste, alleging the insureds breached the lease by (66 CA4th at 135) > failing and refusing to keep and maintain the leased premises… in good order, condition and repair and, upon the surrender of the leased premises…, to return them to the lessor in the same condition as when received, ordinary wear and tear excepted, clean and free of debris with all damages repaired….

Specifically, the lessor alleged that the insureds (66 CA4th at 136 n5) > caused extensive damage to the Property including, but not limited to, damage to the ceilings, floors, fixtures and carpets, caused by, among other things, deterioration of the roof and the failure and/or refusal to maintain the premises….

The insureds carried liability insurance with different insurers during the leasehold period. All denied coverage and all refused a defense except for one, which later sued the other three insurers for contribution, equitable indemnity, and declaratory relief. The insurers unsuccessfully moved for summary judgment, but the appellate court granted their petition for writ of mandate. In addition, the court held that, even assuming the underlying action was covered under the policies' insuring clause, there would still be no coverage because of the "owned, occupied or rented" exclusion in each of the insurers' policies. The court held that (66 CA4th at 150)

> [o]n its face, this exclusion unambiguously precludes coverage for any claim for property damage to property occupied or rented to the [insureds]. Since that is precisely what the underlying action was about, this exclusion would preclude coverage in any event.

§14.60 2. Alienated Premises

The "alienated premises" exclusion precludes coverage for property damage to premises the insured sells, gives away, or abandons. It occurs in the CGL policy (CG 00 01 12 04 (§I, ¶2.j(2)), p 4) and the Businessowners Coverage Form (BP 00 03 07 02 (§II.B, ¶1.k(2)), p 31). There is no comparable exclusion in the Owners and Contractors Protective Liability policy (CG 00 09 12 04).

The Alienated Premises exclusion is stated as follows:

> "Property damage" to:
> ….
> (2) Premises you sell, give away or abandon, if the "property damage" arises out of any part of those premises.

Other variations of the exclusion state that there is no coverage for "property damage to premises alienated by the named insured arising out of such premises or any part thereof." Maryland Cas. Co. v Reeder (1990) 221 CA3d 961, 976, 270 CR 719. On exclusions for injury or damage arising out of the sale, see §14.85.

In Maryland Cas. Co. v Reeder, supra, the court held that the "alienated premises" exclusion did not apply to an insured who had owned the premises before the policy took effect. Pearlman had owned the land, but conveyed it to a partnership in which he was a partner. The partnership formed a joint venture with a corporation, and the joint venture retained a contractor to build condominiums. Ownership of the premises was transferred to the joint venture. At various times, Pearlman, the partnership, the joint venture, and the contractor were named insureds under a series of CGL policies. Despite Pearlman's interest in the condo as a partner and joint venturer, the court held the alienated premises exclusions did not apply to Pearlman's liability, because he did not own the premises at any time during the policy period. 221 CA3d at 978. However, the alienated premises exclusion did preclude coverage for the joint venture; although the joint venture would be covered for claims for injury or damage during construction, the exclusion barred coverage for any claims against the joint venture arising after conveyance of the property. 221 CA3d at 978.

The August 1982 Fire Casualty & Surety Bulletin warns that when, in addition to the comprehensive general liability coverage, an insured has purchased a broad form endorsement (221 CA3d at 976 (quoting Bulletin):

> "It is important to alert insureds—particularly those who buy land, build on it, and then sell the improved property—that the Broad Form Property Damage endorsement has no effect on the so-called Alienated Premises exclusion common to Premises and Operations and Completed Operations Liability insurance. That exclusion eliminates coverage for property damage to premises alienated (e.g., sold) by the named insured, if the damage arises out of such premises or any part thereof. Say, for example, that the named insured buys a lot and then, acting as general contractor, builds a house on the lot. If, after the house is completed and sold, a subcontractor's faulty wiring causes the house to burn and the buyer sues the named insured for the costs of repairing the house, the named insured will have no coverage under Broad Form Property Damage (including Completed Operations) endorsement, due to the Alienated Premises exclusion. By the same token, if the same named insured had not been the owner of the property but only the general contractor, he would presumably have had coverage under his Broad Form endorsement for all property damage to the house other than, perhaps, the faulty work of the subcontractor or the 'particular part' of the subcontractors' work in which the fire originated."

This exclusion does not apply, however, if the insured is not an owner when the work was completed, or if the damage was caused by a subcontractor who was not an insured. 221 CA3d at 977.

Another reported case interpreting the alienated premises exclusion summarized it this way: Although the exclusion is intended to "deny coverage to an insured who has failed to repair property prior to its sale or who has failed to disclose the existence of a defect in the premises at the time of sale," it was not intended to prevent coverage "to the completed operations of a contractor" who has constructed residential units for resale. Nevertheless, the exclusion has been used "in conjunction with other 1973 CGL policy provisions to preclude coverage for construction-related property damage claims that probably should have fallen within the coverage intent of the policy." See Prudential-LMI Commercial Ins. Co. v Reliance Ins. Co. (1994) 22 CA4th 1508, 1512, 27 CR2d 841, quoting Wielinski & Gibson, Broad Form Property Damage Coverage, p 99 (3d ed 1992).

© The Regents of the University of California

§14.61 3. Property Loaned to Insured

This exclusion, which eliminates coverage for property damage to property loaned to the insured, occurs in the CGL policy (CG 00 01 12 04 (§I, ¶2.j(3), p 4), the Businessowners Coverage Form (BP 00 03 07 02 (§II.B, ¶1.k(3)), p 31), and the Owners and Contractors Protective Liability policy (CG 00 09 12 04 (§I, ¶1.g(2)), p 3).

There are apparently no reported decisions interpreting this exclusion. In regard to real property, it is difficult to conceive of a scenario in which it could be "loaned." In regard to personal property, it would appear that this exclusion seldom applies. If personal property is valuable enough to support a lawsuit, it seems unlikely that it would be "loaned" without some contractual indemnity provision. If valuable personal property were loaned, it would likely also fall within the exclusion for personal property in the "care, custody or control" of the insured (see §14.62), thus avoiding any dispute over the meaning of the term "loaned."

§14.62 4. Property Damage to Personal Property in Care, Custody, or Control of the Insured

This exclusion, which eliminates coverage for property damage to personal property in the care, custody, or control of the insured, occurs in the CGL policy (CG 00 01 12 04 (§II.B, ¶1.j(4)), p 4), the Businessowners Coverage Form (BP 00 03 07 02 (§II.B, ¶1.k(4)), p 31), and the Owners and Contractors Protective Liability policy (CG 00 09 12 04 (§I, ¶1.g(3)), p 3). Each of these exclusions is currently expressly limited to personal property. Other versions of this exclusion in other policies may extend the exclusion to real property.

For example, in Allstate Ins. Co. v Chaney (ND Cal 1992) 804 F Supp 1219, Matson bought a house from the Chaneys. Later, Matson sued the Chaneys, alleging that they intentionally or negligently misrepresented the condition of the property and concealed numerous defects, including a structurally unsound garage, plumbing defects, defective sewer lines that were not connected to the municipal sewer, drainage problems, and electrical wiring problems. 804 F Supp at 1220 n3. The Chaneys' homeowners policy contained an exclusion that excluded coverage for "property damage to property rented to, occupied by or in the care of an insured…." 804 F Supp at 1223. The court noted the undisputed fact that the Chaneys owned the property until the close of escrow on May 21, 1991. The property was "occupied, used by or in the care of" the Chaneys until they vacated the property on May 24, 1990—the day before Matson took possession. Because at least some of the "property damage" alleged by Matson necessarily had to have occurred before the date Matson came into possession of the premises, the court held that the policy excluded coverage for such damage. 804 F Supp at 1223.

In Volf v Ocean Acc. & Guar. Corp. (1958) 50 C2d 373, 325 P2d 987, Volf, a general contractor, constructed a house for Hoover. A stucco exterior finish applied by Volf cracked. Hoover filed a claim with the State Contracting Board, and the board ordered Volf to apply a new stucco exterior. Volf then sued his CGL carrier for the cost of the repair. Exclusion "g" in the CGL policy excluded coverage for injury to or destruction of "(3)… property in the care, custody or control of the insured." 50 C2d at 374. The appellate court held that the damage was excluded under Exclusion "g" of the policy. 50 C2d at 375. Since the defective cement was used and the cracks appeared in the stucco while Volf was constructing the house and before Hoover took possession, the loss was occasioned by "injury to… property in the care, custody or control of the insured" and was therefore excluded under Exclusion "g". 50 C2d at 375.

In Employers Ins. of Wausau v California Water Serv. Co. (ND Cal, Aug. 25, 2008, No. C-06-03002 RMW) 2008 US Dist Lexis 65433, the California Department of Toxic Substance Control (DTSC) filed lawsuits against the insured, alleging that the insured and others contaminated a groundwater aquifer. The insurer began an action to resolve a coverage dispute. The policy excluded coverage for damage to "any property" (not just personal property) in the "care, custody or control of the insured held for sale or storage." The insurer argued that this exclusion barred coverage because the insured is a purveyor of water, and water from the contaminated aquifer would eventually pass through the insured's system to be sold to consumers; thus, any property damage must be to water "in the care, custody or control" of the insured. The district court held the argument to be "without merit," noting that the DTSC brought the actions for damages for contamination of the aquifer, not of the water in the insured's system.

§14.63 5. Work Performed

A significant exclusion relating to construction defect claims eliminates coverage for property damage to that particular part of real property on which the insured, or any contractor or subcontractor working directly or indirectly on behalf of the insured, is performing operations, if the "property damage" arises out of those operations; it is called the "Work Performed" Exclusion. This provision occurs in the CGL policy (CG 00 01 12 04 (§II.B, ¶1.j(5)), p 5) and the Businessowners Coverage Form (BP 00 03 07 02 (§II.B, ¶1.k(5)), p 31). The provision in the Owners and Contractors Protective Liability policy (CG 00 09 12 04 (§I, ¶1.g(4)), p 3) excludes coverage for "'Property damage' to 'work' performed for you by the 'contractor.'"

This exclusion, and CGL exclusion (j)(6) (see §14.64), reflect the purpose of liability insurance policies for contractors:

> The risk intended to be insured is the possibility that the… work of the insured, once relinquished or completed, will cause bodily injury or damage to property other than to the product or completed work itself. [Citation.]… [T]he effect of the policy is to make the contractor stand its own replacement and repair losses while the insurer takes the risk of injury to the property of others.

Western Employers Ins. Co. v Arciero & Sons, Inc. (1983) 146 CA3d 1027, 1031, 194 CR 688; see also CalFarm Ins. Co. v Krusiewicz (2005) 131 CA4th 273, 31 CR3d 619*; Maryland Cas. Co. v Imperial Contracting Co.* (1989) 212 CA3d 712, 723, 260 CR 797.

The exclusion represents the principle that the risk of replacing or repairing the insured's defective work or product is a commercial risk that is not passed on to the liability insurer. CalFarm Ins. Co., 131 CA4th at 287; F & H Constr. v ITT Hartford Ins. Co. (2004) 118 CA4th 364, 373, 12 CR3d 896 (liability insurance policy not designed to serve as performance bond or warranty of contractor's product); Maryland Cas. Co. v Reeder (1990) 221 CA3d 961, 967, 270 CR 719 (liability policies not designed to provide contractors and developers with coverage against claims that their work is inferior or defective). Thus, the exclusion "precludes coverage for liability for damage to and deficiencies of the insured contractor's work product," and it "applies to the insured's defective work as well as to the insured's satisfactory work that is damaged by the insured's defective work." Diamond Heights Homeowners Ass'n v National Am. Ins. Co. (1991) 227 CA3d 563, 571, 277 CR 906; CalFarm Ins. Co., 131 CA4th at 287.

The August 1982 Fire Casualty & Surety Bulletin (FC & S Bulletin), published by the National Underwriters Association, explains that the usual Completed Operations coverage (with no Broad Form Property Damage endorsement attached) flatly excludes property damage to work performed by or on behalf of the named insured arising out of the work. Under the usual coverage, then, the insured has no insurance whatsoever for damage to a subcontractor's work, or for damage to the insured's own work resulting from a subcontractor's work.

However, under an endorsement affording Broad Form Property Damage coverage including Completed Operations, the phrase "on behalf of" the named insured is eliminated. Thus, the "work performed" exclusion in the broad form endorsement > eliminates coverage for property damage to work performed by the named insured if the property damage arises out of the named insured's work or any portion of it. Thus, an insured has coverage for his completed work when the damage arises out of work performed by someone other than the named insured, such as a subcontractor….

6. Faulty Workmanship

§14.64 a. No Coverage for Defective Building Parts Caused by Work Incorrectly Performed

Another significant exclusion relating to construction defect claims eliminates coverage for property damage to that particular part of any property that must be restored, repaired, or replaced because the "work" of the insured (as defined) was incorrectly performed on it. This exclusion occurs in the CGL policy (CG 00 01 12 04 (§II.B, ¶1.j(6)), p 5) and the Businessowners policy (BP 00 03 07 02 (§II.B, ¶1.k(6)), p 31). The exclusion in the Owners and Contractors Protective Liability policy (CG 00 09 12 04 (§I, ¶1.g(4)), p 3) excludes coverage for "'Property damage' to 'work' performed for you by the 'contractor.'"

This is generally referred to as the "faulty workmanship" exclusion. This exclusion does not preclude coverage for faulty workmanship that is covered by virtue of the products-completed operations hazard clause (see §14.57).

Third party owners' complaints generally fall into two classifications: (1) alleged defective materials and (2) faulty workmanship. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v Coss (1978) 80 CA3d 888, 892, 145 CR 836. With regard to faulty workmanship, an insurer of a contractor does not undertake to insure the "cost of repair" or damage to roofs, heaters, hot water heaters, flooring, or windows if there is no property damage to the building structure itself. Rafeiro v American Employers' Ins. Co. (1970) 5 CA3d 799, 809, 85 CR 701 (third party judgment did not set forth the existence of any property damage).

© The Regents of the University of California

§14.65 b. Damage to Building Caused by Removal of Defective Materials and Faulty Workmanship Distinguished

Under the faulty workmanship exclusion, installation of defective materials into a building (e.g., stucco that cracked before and after completion of the structure) is excluded. Volf v Ocean Acc. & Guar. Corp. (1958) 50 C2d 373, 325 P2d 987. Similarly, installation of defective doors is excluded, but damage to other property (i.e., other parts of the structure) caused by removal of defective doors in order to replace them, is covered. Geddes & Smith, Inc. v St. Paul Mercury Indem. Co. (1959) 51 C2d 558, 564, 334 P2d 881; see also Maryland Cas. Co. v Reeder (1990) 221 CA3d 961, 971, 270 CR 719; Rafeiro v American Employers' Ins. Co. (1970) 5 CA3d 799, 807, 85 CR 701.

In the case of a general contractor, all the work at the project is considered its work product. In the case of a subcontractor, only the subcontractor's portion of the work is the work product. Damage to other parts of the project is considered damage to other property. George F. Hillenbrand, Inc. v Insurance Co. of N. Am. (2002) 104 CA4th 784, 805, 128 CR2d 586.

The faulty workmanship exclusion eliminates coverage for the cost of repair to "other property" incidental to repairing the defective workmanship. Golden Eagle Ins. Co. v Travelers Cos. (9th Cir 1996) 103 F3d 750, 757. The court in Hillenbrand opined that Golden Eagle does not address the pertinent issue of whether damage to "other property" caused by a subcontractor's work is covered. George F. Hillenbrand, Inc., 104 CA4th at 805.

§14.66 7. Product Exclusion: Damage to Your Product

The exclusion in the 2004 CGL policy (CG 00 01 12 04 (§I, ¶2.k), p 5) and the Businessowners policy (BP 00 03 07 02 (§II.B, ¶1.l), p 31) excludes coverage for:

> "Property damage" to "your product" arising out of it or any part of it and included in the "products-completed operations hazard".

See §14.57. Both policies define "your product" as follows (CG 00 01 12 04 (§V, ¶21), p 15; BP 00 03 07 02 (§II.F, ¶21), p 40):

> "Your product":
> a. Means:
> (1) Any goods or products, other than real property, manufactured, sold, handled, distributed or disposed of by:
> (a) You;
> (b) Others trading under your name; or
> (c) A person or organization whose business or assets you have acquired; and > (2) Containers (other than vehicles), materials, parts or equipment furnished in connection with such goods or products.
> b. Includes
> (1) Warranties or representations made at any time with respect to the fitness, quality, durability, performance or use of "your product"; and
> (2) The providing of or failure to provide warnings or instructions.
> c. Does not include vending machines or other property rented to or located for the use of others but not sold.

In Watts Indus., Inc. v Zurich Am. Ins. Co. (2004) 121 CA4th 1029, 18 CR3d 61, the insured manufactured and sold parts for municipal water systems. These parts contained greater amounts of lead or zinc, and lower amounts of copper, than contract specifications required. 121 CA4th at 1035. The insured was sued for selling substandard parts; the companies knowingly defrauded the municipalities and violated the False Claims Act. Govt C §12651(a)(1)-(2), (8). In particular, the plaintiff alleged that the substandard parts wore out sooner than parts required by the contract; that the municipalities and their water customers had been harmed by increased lead exposure from the substandard parts, which contained 40 percent more lead; and that the substandard parts would have to be dug up and replaced at more than 70,000 sites. 121 CA4th at 1036. Notably, on appeal, the insured conceded that damage to the substandard parts themselves was excluded from the CGL coverage by the "your product" exclusion. 121 CA4th at 1046.

§14.67 8. Work Completed Exclusion: Damage to Your Work

The "damage to your work" exclusions in the CGL (CG 00 01 12 04 (§1, ¶2.l), p 5) and the Businessowners policy (BP 00 03 07 02 (§II.B, ¶1.m), p 31) exclude coverage for:

> "Property damage" to "your work" arising out of it or any part of it and included in the "products-completed operations hazard". [See §14.57.]
> This exclusion does not apply if the damaged work or the work out of which the damage arises was performed on your behalf by a subcontractor.

Both policies define "your work" as follows (CG 00 01 12 04 (§V, ¶22), p 15; BP 00 03 07 02 (§II.F, ¶22), p 40):

> "Your work":
> a. Means:
> (1) Work or operations performed by you or on your behalf; and
> (2) Materials, parts or equipment furnished in connection with such work or operations.
> b. Includes
> (1) Warranties or representations made at any time with respect to the fitness, quality, durability, performance or use of "your work", and
> (2) The providing of or failure to provide warnings or instructions.

The CGL policy defines "products-completed operations hazard" as follows (CG 00 01 12 04 (§V, ¶16), p 14):

> "Products-completed operations hazard":
> a. Includes all "bodily injury" and "property damage" occurring away from premises you own or rent and arising out of "your product" or "your work" except:
> (1) Products that are still in your physical possession; or
> (2) Work that has not yet been completed or abandoned. However, "your work" will be deemed completed at the earliest of the following times:
> (a) When all of the work called for in your contract has been completed.
> (b) When all of the work to be done at the job site has been completed if your contract calls for work at more than one job site.
> (c) When that part of the work done at a job site has been put to its intended use by any person or organization other than another contractor or subcontractor working on the same project.
> Work that may need service, maintenance, correction, repair or replacement, but which is otherwise complete, will be treated as completed.
> b. Does not include "bodily injury" or "property damage" arising out of:
> (1) The transportation of property, unless the injury or damage arises out of a condition in or on a vehicle not owned or operated by you, and that condition was created by the "loading or unloading" of that vehicle by any insured;
> (2) The existence of tools, uninstalled equipment or abandoned or unused materials; or
> (3) Products or operations for which the classification, listed in the Declarations or in a policy schedule, states that products-completed operations are subject to the General Aggregate Limit.

See also BP 00 03 07 02 (§II.F, ¶16), p 39, which has a similar definition.

In Collett v Insurance Co. of the W. (1998) 64 CA4th 338, 75 CR2d 165, Collett, a masonry contractor, built a series of retaining walls for Dividend Development in connection with a residential development. The retaining walls failed, and Collett agreed to remove and rebuild them, up to a cost of $125,000, as a settlement of claims against him by Dividend Development. Collett claimed that its CGL insurer, Insurance Company of the West (ICW), had agreed to indemnify him for these costs under the property damage provisions of his commercial general liability policy. When ICW refused to do so, Collett sued for breach of contract and breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing. 64 CA4th at 339. The exclusion was summarized in the opinion as follows (64 CA4th at 341):

> Under exclusion L [exclusion in CG 00 01 12 04, §1, ¶2.l] (the work completed exclusion), the CGL policy did not cover: "'Property damage' to 'your work' arising out of it or any part of it and included in the 'products-completed operations hazard.'" The products-completed operations hazard includes all property damage arising out of "your product" or "your work" except work that has not yet been completed. Exclusion

L did not apply (i.e., the property damage was covered) "if the damaged work or the work out of which the damage arises was performed on your behalf by a subcontractor."

Collett argued the exclusion for "your work" did not apply because the inspector Collett hired to inspect the retaining walls and make sure they were being built according to specifications negligently failed to do so. Collett argued that the inspector was a "subcontractor" and thus the inspector's negligence fell within the exception to the exclusion. The appellate court disagreed, holding that the exclusion barred coverage for the claim. 64 CA4th at 344. The court noted that, even under a broad interpretation of the term "subcontractor," the inspector was not a subcontractor: "While the inspector may have failed to catch defects in the retaining walls, he did not put them there. Collett did." 64 CA4th at 343.

§14.68 9. Damage to "Impaired Property" {§14.72}

The "damage to impaired property" exclusion in the CGL policy (CG 00 01 12 04 (§1, ¶2.m), p 5) and Businessowners policy (BP 00 03 07 02 (§II.B, ¶1.n), p 32) excludes coverage for:

> "Property damage" to "impaired property"… arising out of:
> (1) A defect, deficiency, inadequacy or dangerous condition in "your product" or "your work."

"Impaired property" is defined as (CG 00 01 12 04 (§V, ¶8), p 12; BP 00 03 07 02 (§II.F, ¶8), p 37):

> [T]angible property, other than "your product" or "your work", that cannot be used or is less useful because:
> a. it incorporates "your product" or "your work" that is known or thought to be defective, deficient, inadequate or dangerous;
> ….
> if such property can be restored to use by:
> a. The repair, replacement, adjustment or removal of "your product" or "your work";
> ….

This exclusion reflects the principle that the risk of replacing or repairing a defective product is considered a commercial risk that is not passed on to a liability insurer. Shade Foods, Inc. v Innovative Prods. Sales & Mktg., Inc. (2000) 78 CA4th 847, 866, 93 CR2d 364. The impaired property exclusion does not apply when the other property (which incorporates the allegedly faulty work or product) has been physically injured. For example, when the complaint alleges explicitly that the mere replacement of a part will not fully restore the damaged property, the exclusion will not apply. Watts Indus., Inc. v Zurich Am. Ins. Co. (2004) 121 CA4th 1029, 1047, 18 CR3d 61.

§14.68A J. The "Pollution Exclusion"

Before 1966, the standard form CGL policy did not contain any specific exclusion for pollution. Many courts construed the policy to cover damages resulting from long-term, gradual exposure to environmental pollution. See MacKinnon v Truck Ins. Exch. (2003) 31 C4th 635, 643, 3 CR3d 228. Beginning in 1970, the standard form CGL policy added the "qualified pollution exclusion." This exclusion permitted coverage of "sudden and accidental" pollution. 31 C4th at 643. Litigants disputed the meaning of the terms "sudden" and "abrupt" and many courts held that gradual pollution was not excluded. 31 C4th at 644.

In 1985, the standard form CGL policy replaced the "qualified pollution exclusion" with what is now referred to as the "absolute pollution exclusion," which (1) eliminated any requirement that the discharge be "sudden and accidental," and (2) eliminated the requirement that pollution be discharged "into or upon land, the atmosphere or any watercourse or body of water." MacKinnon, 31 C4th at 644. Even the "absolute pollution exclusion" is limited to "traditional environmental pollution." MacKinnon, 31 C4th at 653. Examples of "traditional environmental pollution" (not covered) include:

- Dirt and rocks discharged by quarry operator into creek (Ortega Rock Quarry v Golden Eagle Ins. Corp. (2006) 141 CA4th 969, 990, 46 CR 3d 517);
- Widespread dissemination of silica dust as an incidental by-product of the insured's sandblasting operations (Garamendi v Golden Eagle Ins. Co. (2005) 127 CA4th 480, 486, 25 CR3d 642); and
- Persistent, widespread dissemination of offensive odors and dust from insured's normal operation of its composting facility (Cold Creek Compost, Inc. v State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. (2007) 156 CA4th 1469, 1480, 68 CR3d 216).

Examples of releases held not to constitute "traditional environmental pollution" (and which were thus covered) include:

- Negligent use of pesticides by spraying to eradicate yellow jackets around an apartment building (MacKinnon v Truck Ins. Exch. (2003) 31 C4th 635, 654, 3 CR3d 228); and
- Accidental, one-time release of high concentration of ammonia into air surrounding insured's plant, and not part of insured's normal operations (SEMX Corp. v Federal Ins. Co. (SD Cal 2005) 398 F Supp 2d 1103, 1118).

Some insurers now offer a "pollution buy back provision." The court in Venoco, Inc. v Gulf Underwriters Ins. Co. (2009) 175 CA4th 750, 757, 96 CR3d 409 held that such a pollution exclusion will not apply if the insured establishes that (1) the event is an unintended and unexpected accident; (2) the accident can be identified as commencing at a specific time and date; (3) the accident is not the result of an intentional violation of a government statute, rule, or regulation; and (4) the occurrence became known to the insured within 7 days after its commencement and was reported to the insurer within 60 days thereafter. Under this provision, compliance with the reporting requirement is enforceable without proof of prejudice. 175 CA4th at 760.

Some insurers have now adopted the total pollution exclusion endorsement, which supposedly is more favorable to the insurer. See Griffin Dewatering Corp. v Northern Ins. Co. of New York (2009) 176 CA4th 172, 178 n3, 97 CR3d 568 ("To the degree that there may be any difference between the 'total pollution exclusion' and the more common 'absolute pollution exclusion,' it appears that the 'total' one excludes a little more than the 'absolute' one, that is, less favorable to the insured.")

K. Personal and Advertising Injury

§14.69 1. Insuring Language

"Bodily injury" and "property damage" are defined in terms of the injury or damage that results from any type of "accidental" conduct. In contrast, "personal injury" is defined not in terms of the injury or harm that results, but in terms of the conduct that produces it. Personal injury coverage applies to injury that arises out of the commission of certain enumerated acts or offenses. Coverage is triggered by the offense, not the injury or damage that a plaintiff suffers. Fibreboard Corp. v Hartford Acc. & Indem. Co. (1993) 16 CA4th 492, 511, 20 CR2d 376. While these offenses should be construed broadly to encompass all specific torts that could reasonably fall within the general category (16 CA4th at 515), the scope of personal injury liability coverage under standard form CGL policies cannot be expanded beyond the offenses enumerated above (American Guar. & Liab. Ins. Co. v Vista Med. Supply (ND Cal 1988) 699 F Supp 787, 793 (applying California law)). See also Golden Eagle Ins. Corp. v Cen-Fed, Ltd. (2007) 148 CA4th 976, 990, 56 CR3d 279 (definition of "personal injury," which included wrongful eviction or wrongful entry into or invasion of the right of private occupancy of room, dwelling, or premises occupied by "person," referred to "natural person" and did not extend to interference with property leased by corporation).

Like "personal injury," "advertising injury" is a term of art used in many liability policies, and, like "personal injury," is typically defined to mean injury arising from certain enumerated "offenses" in the course of advertising activities. Beginning with the 1996 CGL form, "advertising injury" means injury arising out of one or more of the following offenses:

- Slander, libel, or disparagement of another's goods, products, or services;
- Violation of right of privacy;
- "Misappropriation of advertising ideas or style of doing business"; or
- "Infringement of copyright, title or slogan."

See ISO Form CG 00 01 01 96 (§V, ¶1). This provision eliminates the offenses of "unfair competition" and "piracy" found in earlier forms, but adds the offense of "misappropriation of advertising ideas or style of doing business."

The 1998 and later CGL forms combine "advertising injury" and "personal injury" offenses into "personal and advertising injury," defined as (CG 00 01 12 04(§V, ¶14), p 14):

> injury, including consequential "bodily injury" arising out of one or more of the following offenses:
> a. False arrest, detention or imprisonment;
> b. Malicious prosecution;
> c. Wrongful eviction from, wrongful entry into, or invasion of the right of private occupancy of a room, dwelling or premises that a person occupies, committed by or on behalf of its owner, landlord or lessor;
> d. Oral or written publication, in any manner, of material that slanders or libels a person or organization or disparages a person's or organization's goods, products or services;
> e. Oral or written publication, in any manner, of material that violates a person's right of privacy;
> f. Use of another's advertising idea in your "advertisement"; or > g. Infringing upon another's copyright, trade dress or slogan in your "advertisement".

On the defined term "occurrence" and when it is "triggered" in cases of property damage or personal injury, see §14.47.

§14.70 2. Exclusions

The personal and advertising injury liability coverage contains its own exclusions. Some of these exclusions are for "personal and advertising injury"

- for which the insured has assumed liability in a contract or agreement;
- arising from a breach of contract;
- arising from the failure of goods, products, or services to conform to statements of quality or performance;
- arising from the wrong description of the price of goods, products, and services; or
- arising from the infringement of copyright, patent, trademark, trade secret, or other intellectual property rights.

§14.71 IV. SPECIAL ISSUES: BUSINESSOWNERS LIABILITY

The ISO Businessowners policy (BOP) (BP 00 06), is another commonly used form, but it is an earlier edition and was merged into form BP 00 03 07 02. See §14.4. See also the ISO summary, which is available on the website listed in the Directory. The liability insuring language, exclusions, and definitions of the BOP policy are, for the most part, substantively the same as the comparable provisions of the CGL policy. For that reason, the issues that arise under the BOP policy in regard to a real estate transaction will be substantially similar to those under a CGL policy. Those issues are:

- "Occurrence"; "Accident". The use and definition of the term "occurrence" in the BOP policy is the same as that in the CGL policy. See §§14.18-14.24.
- Property Damage. The insuring language and definition of "property damage" in the BOP policy is the same as that in the CGL policy. See §§14.25-14.27.
- Bodily Injury. The insuring language and definition of "bodily injury" in the BOP policy is the same as that in the CGL policy. See §§14.28-14.30.
- Who Is an Insured. The section in the BOP policy regarding "Who Is An Insured" is substantially similar to the same section in the CGL policy. See §§14.31-14.45.
- Contractual Liability; Liability Assumed by the Insured; Insured Contracts. The principles that govern coverage for liability assumed by the insured or under an "insured contract" under the BOP policy are the same as those under the CGL policy. See §14.51.
- Personal and Advertising Injury Liability. The insuring language and exclusions regarding personal and advertising injury coverage are nearly the same in the BOP policy as in the CGL policy. See §§14.69-14.70.
- Duty to Defend. The principles regarding the duty to defend under the BOP policy are the same as those under the CGL policy. See §§14.52-14.56.
- Products or Completed Operations. The policy language and definition of "products or completed operations" under the BOP policy are the same as those under the CGL policy. See §14.57.
- Exclusions. Most of the exclusions in the BOP policy are identical to those in the CGL policy (see §§14.58-14.68), except for the Professional Services Exclusion.
- Professional Services Exclusion. The BOP policy contains an exclusion that is not in the CGL policy. Instead of a definition of "professional services," the exclusion sets forth a nonexclusive list of professional services. It precludes liability for (CG 00 03 07 02 (§II.B, ¶1.j), p 31):

> "Bodily injury", "property damage", "personal and advertising injury" caused by the rendering or failure to render any professional service. This includes but is not limited to:
> (1) Legal, accounting or advertising services;
> (2) Preparing, approving, or failing to prepare or approve maps, drawings, opinions, reports, surveys, change orders, designs or specifications;
> (3) Supervisory, inspection or engineering services;
> (4) Medical, surgical, dental, x-ray or nursing services treatment, advice or instruction;
> (5) Any health or therapeutic service treatment, advice or instruction;
> (6) Any service, treatment, advice or instruction for the purpose of appearance or skin enhancement, hair removal or replacement or personal grooming;

> (8) Body piercing services; and
> (9) Services in the practice of pharmacy.

In Hollingsworth v Commercial Union Ins. Co. (1989) 208 CA3d 800, 256 CR 357, Hollingsworth was insured as the sole proprietor of a cosmetics store. Her merchants insurance policy excluded coverage for "bodily injury or property damage due to the providing of, or failure to provide, any professional service." At the time Hollingsworth purchased the policy, her store sold earrings, but did not pierce customers' ears. During the policy term, the store began providing ear piercing, for a fee. A customer sued after she was injured when a store employee pierced her ears. The insurer denied coverage, based on the "professional services" exclusion.

Hollingsworth relied on dictionary definitions of the term "professional" as "a calling requiring specialized knowledge and often long and intensive academic preparation." 208 CA3d at 806. She argued that since ear piercing is not regulated by the state, does not require licensing, and consists simply of mechanically operating the ear-piercing tool, it did not qualify as a "professional service." 208 CA3d at 806. The appellate court disagreed. First, the court noted that dictionary definitions of "professional" also included "a broad range of activities beyond those traditionally considered 'professions,' such as medicine, law or engineering" and included "participating for gain or livelihood in an activity or field of endeavor often engaged in by amateurs." 208 CA3d at 806. The court concluded that "the term 'professional services' is not as narrowly circumscribed as Hollingsworth proposes. Rather, it generally signifies an activity done for remuneration as distinguished from a mere pastime." 208 CA3d at 807. Second, the court considered the exclusion in the context of the policy as a whole. 208 CA3d at 807. The court explained that "in determining whether a particular act is of a professional nature or a 'professional service' we must look not to the title or character of the party performing the act, but to the act itself," and cited out-of-state authority holding that a liability policy issued to a beauty parlor clearly was meant to include as "professional services" the technical work performed by the beauticians. 208 CA3d at 807. The court held (208 CA3d at 808):

> [I]n the context of a cosmetics business, ear piercing clearly constitutes a professional service as distinguished from an activity incidentally related to its everyday operations. Such an enterprise is devoted to grooming and the improvement of personal appearance for which jewelry can be a significant enhancement. And, although Hollingsworth did not charge a monetary fee for piercing a customer's ears, neither was it performed gratis. The procedure was offered only with the purchase of a pair of earrings. Undoubtedly, attracting prospective purchasers into the store also provided additional economic incentive to Hollingsworth. Thus, the ear-piercing was a "professional" service both in the sense that it constituted an aspect of the cosmetics sales profession and that it was done for and in anticipation of some form of financial gain.

See also Tradewinds Escrow, Inc. v Truck Ins. Exch. (2002) 97 CA4th 704, 118 CR2d 561 (professional-services exclusion excluded all potential coverage and insurer had no duty to defend claims of misrepresentation, constructive trust, accounting, conversion, unfair business practices, and intentional infliction of emotional distress against insured escrow company arising out of failed sale of home, because alleged wrongful acts were committed during performance of professional services, namely, rendering of escrow services); Stone v Hartford Cas. Co. (CD Cal 2006) 470 F Supp 2d 1088 (professional services exclusion precluded coverage for liability based on insured's professional undertaking to draft plans for room additions, construct and/or supervise construction of the additions, and install a driveway).

NOTE: The exclusion in the ISO BOP policy specifically includes "[p]reparing, approving, or failing to prepare or approve maps, drawings, opinions, reports, surveys, change orders, designs or specifications," along with "supervisory, inspection or engineering services." This appears to eliminate liability coverage under a BOP policy for many potential claims against contractors, architects, engineers, and surveyors. Moreover, even if "professional services" were not excluded, an insured would face an uphill battle obtaining coverage for such claims. BOP and CGL policies limit coverage to "accidental" occurrences, and generally do not provide coverage for professional negligence claims. Ray v Valley Forge Ins. Co. (1999) 77 CA4th 1039, 1047, 92 CR2d 473; for examples of conduct held to not be "accidental," see §14.21. Furthermore, coverage for "bodily injury" and "property damage" does not include economic damages resulting from negligence. Allstate Ins. Co. v Interbank Fin. Servs. (1989) 215 CA3d 825, 830, 264 CR 25. On property damage, see §14.25; on bodily injury, see §14.28.

In Food Pro Int'l v Farmers Ins. Exchange (2008) 169 CA4th 976, 89 CR3d 1, the court held that the insured's services as an engineering consultant for equipment installation, including high-level supervision of the overall plant relocation, were "professional services" within the meaning of a professional services exclusion. 169 CA4th at 987. However, the court further held that a tort action against the insured by a construction worker injured during the relocation when the worker was injured as a result of performing a project ordered by the foreman rather than by the insured, was potentially outside the scope of the exclusion. and consequently, the insurer had a duty to defend.

NOTE: The Food Pro case demonstrates that though an insured may generally provide "professional services," the focus should be on the specific acts giving rise to liability.

§14.72 V. SPECIAL ISSUES: REAL ESTATE AGENTS' ERRORS AND OMISSIONS LIABILITY POLICY

Professional liability policies are written for real estate licensees, both agents and brokers. See §14.8. The liability policies provide for defense of the insured as well as indemnity. Morris v Employers Reinsurance Corp. (2000) 84 CA4th 1026, 1029, 101 CR2d 350.

§14.73 A. Claims Made

Like other errors and omissions policies, coverage for real estate agents and brokers is almost always written on a "claims made" basis. On "claims made" policies, see §14.13; see also §14.15 on extended reporting period.

§14.74 B. Representative Insuring Clause

The following is a representative insuring clause in a real estate agents' and brokers' liability policy:

> The Company will pay on behalf of the Insured all sums which the Insured shall become legally obligated to pay as Damages for Claims first made against the Insured during the Policy Period and first reported to the Company in writing during the Policy Period or within sixty (60) days thereafter, arising out of any act, error, omission or Personal Injury in the rendering of or failure to render Professional Services by an Insured covered under this policy; provided always that such act, error, omission or Personal Injury happens:
> A. During the Policy Period; or
> B. Prior to the Policy Period provided that:
> 1. Such act, error, omission or Personal Injury happened on or after the Prior Acts Date as indicated on the Declarations Page of this policy; and
> 2. At the inception of this policy the Insured had no reasonable basis to believe that any Insured had breached a professional duty and no reasonable basis to believe an act, error or omission might be expected to result in a Claim or Suit.

Source: Real Property/California Real Property Sales Transactions/14 Liability Insurance: Selected Issues Pertinent to Sales/§14.75 C. Exclusions

§14.75 C. Exclusions

A typical real estate agents' and brokers' errors and omissions liability policy excludes coverage for loss arising out of or related to the following:

> Dishonest, fraudulent, criminal, or malicious acts or omissions, or intentional misrepresentations;
> Arising out of any disputes involving any Insured's fees, commissions or charges
> Made by an Insured against any other Insured, unless such Claim arises solely out of Professional Services performed for that party in a broker-client capacity;
> Based on or arising out of the rendering of or failure to render Professional Services by any Insured as employee, owner, partner, stockholder, director or officer of any sole proprietorship, partnership, Limited Liability Partnership/Corporation, corporation or other business enterprise not listed on the Declarations Page.
> Arising out of:
> Bodily Injury, sickness, disease or death of any person; or > Physical injury, damage to or destruction of or loss of use of tangible property;
> However, this exclusion does not apply to the performance of Professional Services by an Insured in the maintenance, operation or use of a lock box on property not owned, occupied by or leased to an Insured.
> Based on or arising out of activities involving property syndication, real estate investment trusts, limited partnerships or similar investments;
> Based on or arising out of the sale or purchase of insurance, or the failure to effect or maintain adequate levels or types of insurance;
> Based on or arising out of liability assumed by an Insured under any oral or written contract or agreement, including any warranty, except that this exclusion shall not apply to liability the Insured would have in the absence of such contract, agreement or warranty;
> Arising out of activities of an Insured as a mortgage banker, mortgage counselor, mortgage broker, business broker, independent third party escrow agent, contractor, construction advisor, property developer, insurance agent or insurance broker;
> Involving real property owned by any Insured.
> This exclusion shall not apply if:
> Title is held by an Insured for less than one year for the purpose of resale, or
> The property is a single-family dwelling owned by an Insured and listed for sale by another Insured who owns no part of it.
> Resulting from:
> Injury, disease or illness (including death at any time resulting therefrom);
> Damage to or reduction in financial value of any property; or
> Other loss or expense arising in whole or in part, out of or in any way related to Asbestos;
> Arising out of any guarantee or promise of future status, performance or valuation in the course of performing Professional Services by the Insured;
> Based on or arising out of the Insured gaining, in fact, any personal profit or advantage to which any Insured is not legally entitled, including misappropriation, conversion, embezzlement, commingling or defalcation of funds or other property.
> Arising out of, based on, alleging or arising out of discrimination of any kind by an Insured, including but not limited to discrimination due to or on the basis of age, sex, race, color, religion, disability, marital status, pregnancy, national origin, HIV or AIDS status, sexual origin, sexual orientation, or sexual preference.

Because professional liability insurance for real estate agents and brokers is designed to cover risks in selling property for others, such policies commonly exclude claims involving property owned by the insured or an entity in which the insured has a financial interest, i.e., situations in which the broker or agent deals with his or her own inventory. See Morris v Employers Reinsurance Corp. (2000) 84 CA4th 1026, 101 CR2d 350. In Morris, the exclusion stated (84 CA4th at 1028):

> This policy does not apply to:… (e) any claim made against the Insured arising out of or in connection with any property, entity or enterprise controlled, managed, operated, or in which there is an ownership interest by: (1) An insured; (2) A member of an insured's immediate family….

This exclusion by its terms would not apply to an agent or broker who attempts to acquire an equitable interest in property from a seller, thereby acting in conflict of interest with the agent/broker's client who made an offer on the property in question. The exclusion does not apply for the simple reason that when the agent/broker attempts to purchase the property, "her very act of attempting to purchase the property from [seller] reveals that she [agent/broker] was not dealing with her own property…." 84 CA4th at 1030. Accordingly, this conduct places the insured's conduct outside the purview of exclusion (e).

§14.76 VI. SPECIAL ISSUES: REPRESENTATIONS AND WARRANTIES INSURANCE

Representations and warranties (R&W) liability insurance has historically been used primarily in connection with corporate mergers and acquisitions, often regarding compliance with applicable tax rules, intellectual property matters, product liability issues, accounting and financial issues, employment practices, and environmental matters. However, several companies now offer R&W insurance in connection with real estate transactions outside the mergers and acquisitions context. See §14.9. Possible uses include insurance coverage for breach of representations and warranties as to:

- Acquisitions of real estate by asset purchase, merger, or purchase of entity interests;
- Allocation provisions in partnership or operating agreements for historic or low income tax credits; or
- The validity of certain permits for use or operations.

There is no standard-language ISO R&W policy. Typically, however, an R&W policy will identify the party to be indemnified (the buyer) as the "Insured." The indemnitor is typically identified as "Seller." "Reps & Warranties" or "R&W" is defined as those representations and warranties of the Seller in favor of the Insured and contained in a specifically identified contract or agreement. The contract or agreement containing the subject representations and warranties is identified as the "R&W Contract." "R&W Loss" is defined as "a loss incurred by Insured which arises out of breach of the Reps & Warranties."

Thus, the R&W insurance is not limited to "property damage" or "bodily injury" or "personal and advertising injury" as are CGL and BOP policies. R&W insurance extends to the resulting financial losses if specifically identified representations and warranties are untrue.

Source: Real Property/California Real Property Sales Transactions/14 Liability Insurance: Selected Issues Pertinent to Sales/§14.77 A. Representative Insuring Language

§14.77 A. Representative Insuring Language

As mentioned above, there is no standardized insuring language. The insuring language typically reads:

> pursuant to this Insuring Clause, and subject to the terms, conditions, deductibles, retentions, exclusions, and Aggregate Policy Limit hereinafter set forth, Insurer will indemnify Insured for R&W Losses sustained directly by Insured to the extent Seller is liable to Insured for R&W Losses under [Section __] of the R&W Contract.

§14.78 B. Claims Made

Nearly all companies that offer R&W Insurance write it on a "claims made" basis. See §14.13.

§14.79 C. Exclusions

There is no standardized form Representations and Warranties policy, so there are no "standard" exclusions. However, many policies will contain exclusions for the following:

- Tax liability;
- Closing or balance sheet adjustments;
- Breaches of which the insured had actual knowledge at closing;
- Projections;
- Liability assumed by the insured under the subject representations and warranties contract, or any loss of which the insured had actual knowledge as of the closing of the transaction; and
- Failure of the insured to fulfill a condition precedent set forth in the transactional documents.

VII. SPECIAL ISSUES: HOMEOWNERS LIABILITY

§14.80 A. Insuring Language

There are several commonly used versions of the ISO Homeowners policy: the Homeowners 3 Special Form (HO 00 03); the Broad Form (HO 00 02); and the Unit Owners Form (HO 00 06), which is used for condominiums. These forms differ principally in the property coverage each provides in Section I (see chap 13). Section II, which provides liability coverage, is virtually identical in each form. Like CGL and BOP policies, most homeowners policies provide coverage for "bodily injury" and "property damage" caused by an "occurrence." However, they do not provide "advertising injury" or "personal injury" coverage, as these are usually associated with commercial risks. The policies are similar to the CGL policies with respect to the following features:

- "Occurrence"; "Accident"; see §§14.18-14.24.
- Property Damage; see §§14.25-14.27.
- Bodily Injury; see §§14.28-14.30.
- Duty to Defend; see §§14.52-14.56.

Although there are several other exclusions in the homeowners policy, the ones most likely to arise in a real estate transaction are discussed in §§14.82-14.85.

§14.82 1. Business

"Bodily injury" or "property damage" arising out of or in connection with a "business" conducted from an "insured location" or engaged in by an "insured" are excluded from a typical homeowners policy.

"Business" is usually defined in a homeowners policy form as follows:

> a. A trade, profession or occupation engaged in on a full-time, part-time or occasional basis; or > b. Any other activity engaged in for money or other compensation, except the following:
> (1) One or more activities, not described in (2) through (4) below, for which no "insured" receives more than $2,000 in total compensation for the 12 months before the beginning of the policy period;
> (2) Volunteer activities for which no money is received other than payment for expenses incurred to perform the activity;
> (3) Providing home day care services for which no compensation is received, other than the mutual exchange of such services; or
> (4) The rendering of home day care services to a relative of an "insured".

Perhaps because homeowners policies are not intended to insure business or commercial activities, courts interpreting the "business pursuits" exclusion have given a broad interpretation to the term "business." For example, in Fire Ins. Exch. v Jiminez (1986) 184 CA3d 437, 229 CR 83, the appellate court cited prior decisions that held that the principal factor in whether some activity is a "business" is the motivation to make money (184 CA4th at 442):

> [A]pplicability of the business pursuit exclusion turns on the motivation for the pursuit[,]… the presence of the profit motive carries considerable weight, and that the business engaged in need not be the sole occupation. Part-time business activities are also included under business pursuits exclusions. [Citation.] [¶] Other jurisdictions have defined a business pursuit as a regular activity engaged in for the purpose of earning a profit. This includes part-time or supplemental income projects.

The court therefore held that an insured's demolition of a lean-to shed, which was considered a nuisance on his commercial property, was a "business" activity because it would enhance the value of the property. 184 CA4th at 442. Further, the court rejected the insured's argument that the demolition was a "one-time decision" not a "regular activity" and thus not a "business" because the argument too narrowly focused on the decision to tear down the shed, rather than the fact that the insured had been engaged in the business of owning the property for profit for several years. 184 CA4th at 443.

However, if an activity has both business and nonbusiness purposes, the "nonbusiness pursuit" exception to the business-pursuits exclusion allows coverage. Crane v State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. (1971) 5 C3d 112, 95 CR 513 (nonbusiness-pursuit exception applies when insured provided child care services to others while taking care of own children).

§14.83 2. Professional Services

Coverage for "bodily injury" or "property damage" arising out of the rendering of or failure to render professional services (see, e.g., policies described in §§14.6-14.7) is excluded from a typical homeowners policy.

§14.85 4. Arising Out of the Sale

Although the ISO Homeowners policy does not contain one, some homeowners policies contain a specific exclusion for bodily injury or property damage:

> arising out of the sale or transfer of real property, including but not limited to the following:
> (a) known or unknown property or structural defects;
> (b) known or hidden defects in the plumbing, heating and electrical systems;
> (c) known or unknown soil conditions or drainage problems;
> (d) concealment or misrepresentation of any known defects.

See, e.g., Davis v Farmers Ins. Group (2005) 134 CA4th 100, 106, 35 CR3d 738.

This type of "sale or transfer" exclusion has been held to exclude coverage following a transfer for bodily injuries (such as sinus and respiratory infections) allegedly caused by mold or fungi. 134 CA4th at 103, 106. See also discussion of the alienated premises exclusion in §14.60.

I. WHAT IS AN ESCROW?

§15.1 A. Definition

An escrow is defined as a "legal document or property delivered by a promisor to a third party to be held by the third party for a given amount of time or until the occurrence of a condition, at which time the third party is to hand over the document or property to the promisee." Black's Law Dictionary (8th ed 2004).

Escrow is statutorily defined as follows (Fin C §17003(a)):

> "Escrow" means any transaction in which one person, for the purpose of effecting the sale, transfer, encumbering, or leasing of real or personal property to another person, delivers any written instrument, money, evidence of title to real or personal property, or other thing of value to a third person to be held by that third person until the happening of a specified event or the performance of a prescribed condition, when it is then to be delivered by that third person to a grantee, grantor, promisee, promisor, obligee, obligor, bailee, bailor, or any agent or employee of any of the latter.

In the real estate context the escrow holder is the third party who receives the deed (conveying title to the buyer), deed of trust (conveying a security interest to the lender), and the funds. The escrow releases the documents and funds when all of the conditions to closing the escrow, as set forth in the escrow instructions, occur. Generally, the deed may be recorded when the escrow holder has received adequate funds to pay for the real property. The deed of trust may be recorded when the funds are in escrow awaiting distribution to the seller and the buyer takes title. The deed of trust is generally recorded concurrently with the deed. The proceeds are released to the seller when the deed and deed of trust are recorded.

© The Regents of the University of California

§15.2 1. Who Can Be an Escrow Holder?

An escrow agent is defined as "any person engaged in the business of receiving escrows for deposit or delivery." Fin C §17004. In the real estate context, the types of companies that engage in the escrow business differ between Northern California and Southern California. See §15.8. In Northern California, escrow holders are generally sister companies or subsidiaries of title insurance companies. In Southern California, many escrows are handled by independent escrow companies that are unaffiliated with title insurance companies.

Attorneys and real estate brokers may also act as escrow holders, subject to certain limitations. See §15.6. Attorneys should be careful not to inadvertently become an escrow holder, thus acquiring a fiduciary duty to a nonclient. If the attorney accepts a document for delivery on the fulfillment of a condition from a client or a nonclient, the attorney may incur liability to either for any damage for failure to follow instructions. Wasmann v Seidenberg (1988) 202 CA3d 752, 248 CR 744. In California real estate transactions, attorneys generally delegate the duties of escrow holder to a separate escrow company.

Source: Real Property/California Real Property Sales Transactions/15 Escrow and Closing the Sale/§15.3 2. Who Regulates Escrow?

§15.3 2. Who Regulates Escrow?

Escrow companies are regulated by two different departments, depending on who owns the escrow company. Independent escrow companies are regulated by the Department of Corporations. Fin C §§17000-17703; see §15.4. Escrow companies that are controlled or owned by a title insurance company (sister company or subsidiary) are regulated by the Department of Insurance and are exempt from the Escrow Law (Fin C §§17000-17703). Ins C §12340.6; see §15.6.

§15.4 a. Independent Escrow Companies

Independent escrow companies are corporations licensed and regulated by the state Department of Corporations under the Escrow Law (Fin C §§17000-17703). The Commissioner of Corporations has adopted numerous regulations covering the activities of independent escrow companies. See 10 Cal Code Regs §§1700-1769. The Escrow Law requires these escrow companies to do the following:

- Maintain records (Fin C §17404);
- Submit an audit report to the commissioner (Fin C §17406);
- Keep escrow funds (includes escrows described in Fin C §17312(c) and other escrows) in a separate trust account (Fin C §17409);
- Transfer funds between escrow accounts by written instruments or, in the case of Internet escrow companies (see §15.5), by wire transfer, evidence of which may be maintained in electronic form (Fin C §17409.1); and
- Obtain fidelity bonds on officers and employees who have access to funds (Fin C §17203.1).

A violation of any of these requirements can result in a fine of up to $10,000, imprisonment in a state prison or up to a year in county jail, or both a fine and imprisonment. Fin C §17700. In addition, a civil penalty not to exceed $2500 may be recovered from a licensed escrow company that violates any statutory requirement or rule. Fin C §17701.

The Escrow Agents' Fidelity Corporation (EAFC), a nonprofit corporation established under the Escrow Law, acts as the fidelity surety for the trust obligations of licensed escrow agents in California. Fin C §§17300-17350. A claim against an independent escrow company is made against the EAFC, which in turn pursues the alleged wrongdoer. See, e.g., Escrow Agents' Fid. Corp. v Superior Court (1992) 4 CA4th 491, 5 CR2d 698.

Required membership in the EAFC is now limited to licensees who engage, in whole or in part, in the business of receiving escrows for deposit or delivery in the following types of transactions (Fin C §17312(c)):

- Real property escrows, including the sale, lease, exchange, or transfer of title, and loans or other obligations to be secured by a lien on real property;
- Bulk sale escrows, including the sale, lease, exchange, or transfer of title to a business entity and the transfer of liquor licenses or other types of business licenses or permits;
- Fund or joint control escrows;
- The sale, transfer of title, or refinance escrows for manufactured homes or mobilehomes;
- Reservation deposits held in escrow accounts as required under the public report section of the Subdivided Lands Act (Bus & P C §§11000-11200) or by regulation of the Department of Real Estate; and
- Escrows for sale, transfer, modification, assignment, or hypothecation of promissory notes secured by deeds of trust.

The Commissioner of Corporations may enforce the Escrow Law by ordering discontinuance of business operations (Fin C §17415), revoking or suspending the escrow company's license (Fin C §17608), taking possession of the property and business of an escrow company (Fin C §17621), bringing an action to enjoin acts or practices or to enforce compliance (Fin C §17607), or seeking a liquidation of the business (Fin C §17635).

§15.5 b. Internet Escrow Agents

An "Internet escrow agent" means anyone engaged in the business of receiving escrows for deposit or delivery over the Internet. Fin C §17004.5. An Internet escrow agent is included within the definition of "escrow agent." Fin C §17005.6. All escrow records may be retained by an Internet escrow agent and provided to the Commissioner in electronic format. Fin C §17403.5.

§15.6 c. Parties Exempt From Escrow Law

Banks, savings and loan associations, insurance companies, title companies, real estate brokers, and attorneys may also act as escrow holders without being licensed or regulated as independent escrow companies because they are exempt from California's Escrow Law. Fin C §17006. The exemption for attorneys applies only to attorneys not actively engaged in the business of an escrow agent, while real estate brokers can act as escrow agents only in the course of, or incidental to, a real estate transaction. Fin C §17006(a). This exemption is "not available for any arrangement entered into for the purpose of performing escrows for more than one business." Fin C §17006(b). See §2.22. This exemption scheme was upheld in Escrow Inst. v Pierno (1972) 24 CA3d 361, 100 CR 880. No other persons or entities can handle escrows for compensation. Fin C §17200.

§15.7 B. How Is an Escrow Created?

An escrow is created when a party gives the escrow holder documents or funds to be held pending the satisfaction of a condition. It is customary for the buyer to choose the escrow holder to be used in the transaction. Generally escrow is opened when the buyer deposits instructions and funds to be held pending satisfaction of the conditions described in the instructions.

Escrow instructions are generally written. If the parties are using the California Association of Realtors® (CAR) residential purchase agreement and joint escrow instructions form (CAR Contract) (see §§6.24, 15.32), the escrow holder usually signs the form contract accepting the escrow and signaling the opening of the escrow. In Northern California, some of the local boards of realtors use a real estate contract that is unique to the particular county (e.g., San Francisco and Marin counties). These unique contracts do not contain escrow instructions. In those counties where the CAR Contract is not in use, the escrow holder commonly receives the deposit of funds with oral instructions—rather than written instructions—to, in essence, hold the funds for the purpose of closing an escrow regarding certain property. Oral instructions are valid and instructions need not be in writing. See Kirk Corp. v First Am. Title Co. (1990) 220 CA3d 785, 270 CR 24; Zang v Northwestern Title Co. (1982) 135 CA3d 159, 185 CR 176.

§15.8 C. Northern California Versus Southern California Distinctions

Northern and Southern California handle escrows differently. As discussed in §15.15, independent escrow companies are common in Southern California, while in Northern California escrow companies are often related to or controlled by title insurance companies.

Historically, the other major distinction between Northern and Southern California is that in Southern California the parties sign escrow instructions at the beginning of the transaction (using amendments to meet the changing conditions of the transaction), while in Northern California escrow instructions are often signed and deposited in escrow only a few days before closing. This practice has created much frustration for everyone because problems are often discovered only when escrow instructions are signed. It is easier to resolve problems without delaying close of escrow if the problems are discovered earlier in the transaction.

This historic difference is mollified—at least for residential transactions—by use of the California Association of Realtors® (CAR) residential purchase agreement and joint escrow instructions form (see §§6.24, 15.32). This contract includes escrow instructions with the purchase agreement; thus, the escrow instructions are signed at the beginning of the transaction. Under the terms of the CAR form, the contract is given to the escrow holder within 3 days of acceptance by the seller. If the CAR contract is used as intended, escrow practice in Northern and Southern California should become more similar.

For further discussion of the differences in escrow procedures between Northern and Southern California, see California Title Insurance Practice §§3.29-3.30, 10.3 (2d ed Cal CEB 1997).

§15.9 II. PARTIES TO ESCROW

Many parties may be involved in an escrow, and each has a distinct role. It is crucial that attorneys understand the roles that the parties play in order to understand the positions that the escrow holder must take in a transaction, and the limitations on the escrow holder's role.

Various individuals and companies interact with the escrow holder. Some are parties to the escrow, while others are not. Whether an individual or company is a party or a nonparty is crucial to the ability of that individual or company to give escrow instructions. The buyer, seller, escrow holder, and buyer's lender are all parties to the escrow. Depending on the broker's contract, the broker may be a limited party to the escrow. See §§15.14, 15.94. The seller's lender and other lien holders are not parties to the escrow without an assignment of proceeds from a party to the escrow. See §15.30. Although the attorney representing a seller, buyer, or lender will definitely interact with the escrow holder, the attorney is not a party to the escrow. See §15.12.

§15.10 A. Escrow Officers

The escrow officer is the independent, neutral third party who is hired to follow the parties' escrow instructions. Escrow officers are usually trained in-house, starting as escrow assistants and handling the more mundane aspects of the transaction. Escrow assistants order payoff demands, draw simple instructions, fill out many of the forms, and monitor the status of the transaction. Escrow officers typically meet with the clients, prepare the escrow instructions, draw the checks, fill out the necessary financial information, and arrange for recording the necessary documents. Many escrow officers specialize in certain types of transactions.

PRACTICE TIP: Counsel for the parties should make certain that the escrow officer is well suited for the transaction. For instance, most companies have a national commercial services unit that works on multistate, large, complex commercial transactions. Some of the national commercial services' escrow officers specialize further by working on closing large franchise transactions. Other escrow officers may specialize in refinancing transactions, mobilehome transactions, or ranch lands and vineyards. Each type of transaction has its unique issues, and a specialist will be knowledgeable about those pertaining to his or her area of expertise.

§15.11 B. Buyers and Sellers

The buyer and the seller are the key figures in a real estate escrow transaction. Only the buyer and the seller may instruct the escrow holder, absent a court order. The buyer and the seller may instruct the escrow holder to allow others to become a party to the escrow (e.g., making the broker a party to the escrow for the purpose of receiving his or her commission). In addition, any party may authorize an attorney to act on his or her behalf in the escrow. See §15.12.

© The Regents of the University of California

§15.12 C. Attorneys

The buyer's and the seller's attorneys are not parties to the escrow and are not entitled to give instructions to the escrow holder or to amend the buyer's or the seller's instructions, unless the attorney's client expressly authorizes it. Moss v Minor Props. (1968) 262 CA2d 847, 69 CR 341. In commercial transactions, the parties typically empower the attorney to prepare escrow instructions, but this is less common in residential transactions.

The attorney acts in concert with the other professionals involved in the transaction but is the only competent adviser on the transaction's legal consequences and, unlike the brokers, escrow holder, title officer, and lender, has no conflicting interest in advising his or her client. The brokers may greatly assist in obtaining details about the property, such as contracts, leases, rent rolls, and tenant estoppel certificates. The escrow holder may provide information on customary escrow procedures and prorations. The title officer will advise on the form of the expected title insurance policy and endorsements. Lenders will sometimes provide loan documents for the attorney's review. The attorney must be part of the team but also act independently to ensure that the interests of the client are protected.

The attorney for a party to an escrow owes a duty of professional care to his client but not to the escrow holder. St. Paul Title Co. v Meier (1986) 181 CA3d 948, 226 CR 538.

§15.13 D. Lenders

The lender may be a party to an escrow if the transaction involves new financing. The conditional deposit of loan funds in connection with escrow instructions creates an escrow, making the lender a party to the escrow. Money Store Inv. Corp. v Southern Cal. Bank (2002) 98 CA4th 722, 120 CR2d 58. In addition to traditional lenders, the seller may be involved in financing the transaction. An escrow may also involve the seller's existing lender, but that lender is not a party to the escrow if its only involvement is receiving the payment of an existing encumbrance and eliminating a lien from the property. Summit Fin. Holdings, Ltd. v Continental Lawyers Title Co. (2002) 27 C4th 705, 117 CR2d 541. Customarily, the escrow holder will request a pay-off demand (CC §2943), in which the lender states the amount required to repay the loan and provides the escrow holder with a reconveyance of the existing lien for use on payment of the demand amount. New financing often results from the activities of a mortgage loan broker, who is also not a party to the escrow. The mortgage loan broker ordinarily arranges for compensation directly with the lender, and not through escrow.

NOTE: Until January 1, 2014, beneficiaries of deeds of trust must prepare and deliver a short-pay demand statement within 21 days of receiving a short-pay request from an entitled person. The short-pay statement must set forth an amount less than the outstanding debt, together with any terms and conditions, under which the beneficiary will execute and deliver a reconveyance of the deed of trust. A beneficiary who elects not to proceed with the proposed transaction may refuse to provide a short-pay demand statement but must provide a written statement within 21 days indicating that it has elected not to proceed with the transaction. CC §2943. For more on short sales, see chap 6.

On title instructions for loan transactions, see also California Title Insurance Practice §§10.16-10.17 (2d ed Cal CEB 1997).

§15.14 E. Brokers

The real estate brokers for the buyer and the seller are not parties to the escrow, and thus are not entitled to give or amend instructions on behalf of the buyer or the seller without the express authority of a party to the escrow.

Brokers routinely submit demands to escrow for payment of their commissions, often in the form of an irrevocable assignment of the seller's proceeds. See §15.94. Such a demand makes the broker a party for the sole purpose of payment of the commission. An assignment of proceeds by a party to the escrow is enforceable by the broker against the escrow holder. See Builders' Control Serv. v North Am. Title Guar. Co. (1962) 205 CA2d 68, 22 CR 712.

Source: Real Property/California Real Property Sales Transactions/15 Escrow and Closing the Sale/§15.15 F. Title Insurer

§15.15 F. Title Insurer

Title insurance companies are regulated by the state of California and licensed by the California Department of Insurance to issue title insurance. Ins C §§12340-12417. Title insurers issue the policies that buyers and lenders customarily obtain during a purchase or refinance of real property. The title insurer may be the same entity as the escrow holder, it may be a sister company, it may be an underwriter for the escrow company, or it may be unrelated to the escrow company. See California Title Insurance Practice (2d ed Cal CEB 1997) for further discussion of title insurance and title insurance companies.

Most title insurers have sister companies that handle escrows. In Northern California, most of the escrow holders handling real property transactions are either sister companies of a title insurer or part of an underwritten title company. Underwritten title companies are agents for the title insurers and are also regulated and licensed by the California Department of Insurance. There is a contract between the title insurer and the underwritten agent that defines the relationship between the two companies. The underwritten agent is authorized under the contract to issue the policies of the underwriter.

In Southern California, independent escrow companies handle many escrows. Those independent escrow companies place orders for title insurance with title insurance companies or their underwritten agents. Independent escrow companies are unrelated to the title insurance company.

The title insurer is involved in each transaction because the parties to the escrow require a policy at closing. The parties will instruct the escrow holder on which items in a preliminary report are acceptable as exceptions in the policy. The escrow holder will then clear the items that the parties are not willing to accept as exceptions in the policy (generally the seller's liens).

III. FUNCTIONS OF ESCROW HOLDER

§15.16 A. Generally

The escrow holder's functions are straightforward: to strictly follow the instructions of the parties to the escrow. Escrow holders incur no liability for failing to do something that is not required by the escrow instructions. Lee v Title Ins. & Trust Co. (1968) 264 CA2d 160, 70 CR 378; Blackburn v McCoy (1934) 1 CA2d 648, 37 P2d 153. For further discussion of escrow holders' liability, see §§15.22-15.25.

Once the escrow is opened (see §15.7), the escrow officer orders a preliminary report from the title department or a title insurer. The escrow officer arranges for the delivery of the preliminary report to the parties, their brokers, and their attorneys. The escrow officer then initiates the actions necessary to effectuate a close of escrow.

§15.17 B. Residential Transactions

In a typical residential escrow the escrow, holder does the following:

- Receives the initial deposit and any additional deposits;
- Prepares escrow instructions explaining the conditions for recording the deed and disbursing funds;
- Gives any notices required by law;
- Handles forms and funds if necessary for California tax withholding (see §§15.75-15.79);
- Handles forms and funds if requested for Foreign Investment in Real Property Tax Act of 1980 (FIRPTA) (see §§15.80-15.84);
- Orders demands from existing lenders and lien holders;
- Prepares the deed;
- If requested, prepares the note and deed of trust;

- Meets with the buyer and the seller to have them sign escrow instructions and any documents necessary to complete the escrow;
- Arranges for the borrower to sign loan documents;
- Arranges for the notarization of documents (usually, the escrow officer is also a notary public; on notary's duties, see CC §§1181-1183.5, 1196-1197);
- Obtains demands from the brokers;
- Obtains lien releases and reconveyances for recording;
- Prepares an estimated settlement statement for approval;
- Orders the funds from the lender;
- Prepares recording instructions for the title department or title company;
- Sends the documents to the designated person in the title department or at the title company for recording;
- Releases funds on confirmation of recording; and
- Notifies the parties that the transaction has closed.

IV. ESCROW HOLDER'S DUTIES

§15.18 A. Limited Agency

An escrow creates a limited agency relationship between the escrow holder and the parties to the escrow. Rianda v San Benito Title Guar. Co. (1950) 35 C2d 170, 217 P2d 25; Kirby v Palos Verdes Escrow Co. (1986) 183 CA3d 57, 64, 227 CR 785, disapproved on other grounds in Summit Fin. Holdings, Ltd. v Continental Lawyers Title Co. (2002) 27 C4th 705, 712, 117 CR2d 541. This dual agency requires the escrow holder to carry out the instructions of all of the parties to the escrow. Vournas v Fidelity Nat'l Title Ins. Co. (1999) 73 CA4th 668, 674, 86 CR2d 490. An escrow holder must comply strictly with the instructions of the parties. Amen v Merced County Title Co. (1962) 58 C2d 528, 25 CR 65; Siegel v Fidelity Nat'l Title Ins. Co. (1996) 46 CA4th 1181, 54 CR2d 84; Claussen v First Am. Title Guar. Co. (1986) 186 CA3d 429, 230 CR 749. An escrow holder incurs no liability either for failing to do something not required by the escrow's terms or for doing something required by the escrow instructions. See Summit Fin. Holdings, Ltd. v Continental Lawyers Title Co. (2002) 27 C4th 705, 117 CR2d 541. For a detailed discussion of Summit, see Bernhardt & Whitman, Summit Financial Holdings Redux, 25 CEB Real Prop L Rep 126 (May 2002). Absent clear evidence of fraud, the escrow holder's obligations are limited to compliance with the instructions of the parties. Lee v Title Ins. & Trust Co. (1968) 264 CA2d 160, 162, 70 CR 378.

The escrow holder is the agent of both parties until the time of closing. Thus, when a deed is deposited by a seller and money is deposited by a buyer, the escrow holder is the agent of both parties until all closing conditions are met. Then the escrow holder becomes the agent of each party—of the buyer regarding the deed and of the seller regarding the money. Shreeves v Pearson (1924) 194 C 699, 230 P 448.

Instructions may be oral, written, or both. Zang v Northwestern Title Co. (1982) 135 CA3d 159, 185 CR 176. Generally, instructions may be modified or revoked until the time of closing. This right to modify or revoke the instructions is not fatal to formation of a contract between a party and the escrow holder. In Money Store Inv. Corp. v Southern Cal. Bank (2002) 98 CA4th 722, 120 CR2d 58, the escrow holder argued that a party's reservation of the right to withdraw or amend rendered any contract illusory. The court disagreed, pointing out that partial performance by a party makes the contract enforceable. If the escrow closes, a reservation of the right to modify instructions does not prevent a suit for breach of the escrow contract. But see Contemporary Invs. v Safeco Title Ins. Co. (1983) 145 CA3d 999, 193 CR 822.

If the parties submit ambiguous, conflicting, or erroneous instructions, the escrow holder has a duty to clarify the questionable instructions before closing the escrow. Kirk Corp. v First Am. Title Co. (1990) 220 CA3d 785, 270 CR 24.

© The Regents of the University of California

Source: Real Property/California Real Property Sales Transactions/15 Escrow and Closing the Sale/§15.19 B. Fiduciary Responsibilities

§15.19 B. Fiduciary Responsibilities

The escrow holder is also a fiduciary of each of the parties. Amen v Merced County Title Co. (1962) 58 C2d 528, 25 CR 65; Common Wealth Ins. Sys., Inc. v Kersten (1974) 40 CA3d 1014, 115 CR 653. Thus, the escrow holder must act in good faith and perform its duties with the ordinary skill of an escrow holder. The fiduciary duty of an escrow holder is usually satisfied by faithful compliance with the instructions of the parties. Hannon v Western Title Ins. Co. (1989) 211 CA3d 1122, 260 CR 21.

© The Regents of the University of California

Source: Real Property/California Real Property Sales Transactions/15 Escrow and Closing the Sale/§15.20 C. Disclosures to Parties

§15.20 C. Disclosures to Parties

Under the general rules of agency, matters learned by an agent are imputed to its principal because the agent has a duty to disclose them to the principal. CC §2332. In other words, imputation is based on the assumption that the agent will do its duty and will communicate to its principal material matters learned in the course of the agency. Early v Owens (1930) 109 CA 489, 293 P 136. However, because the escrow holder is the agent of both the buyer and the seller, this imputation rule is limited in the escrow context. Obviously, this dual agency is fraught with potential for conflicts of interest between or among the parties to the escrow. These potential conflicts are most often avoided because the escrow holder will require mutual and consistent instructions before closing.

As a limited agent (see §15.18), the escrow holder has a duty to disclose material matters that would have a substantial adverse effect on the principal when the escrow holder knows the principal is relying on the agent for protection as to those facts. Marriage of Cloney (2001) 91 CA4th 429, 110 CR2d 615; Kirby v Palos Verdes Escrow Co. (1986) 183 CA3d 57, 227 CR 785, disapproved on other grounds in Summit Fin. Holdings, Ltd. v Continental Lawyers Title Co. (2002) 27 C4th 705, 712, 117 CR2d 541. In Cloney, the escrow officer, acting as the notary, learned while acknowledging the seller's signature on the deed that the seller, "Mike Cloney," was also known as "James Michael Cloney." As a result, a recorded judgment against James Michael Cloney (and properly indexed) became constructive notice to the buyer because of the escrow officer's actual knowledge of the fact that Mike Cloney and James Michael Cloney were one and the same. Ordinarily such a difference in names would mean that a judgment against one name would not attach to the title of property held in the other name. See Orr v Byers (1988) 198 CA3d 666, 244 CR 13 (no constructive notice provided by abstract of judgment incorrectly spelling name of judgment debtor).

Matters actually known by the agent, however, will be imputed to the principal as constructive notice regardless of whether they are actually communicated.

NOTE: This is directly contrary to the rule between the title insurer and its insured. There is no imputation to the insured of knowledge acquired by the title insurer in the course of its underwriting or searching of title. Rice v Taylor (1934) 220 C 629, 32 P2d 381; Mayhew v Burke (1929) 206 C 396, 274 P 517; Lewis v Superior Court (1994) 30 CA4th 1850, 37 CR2d 63.

Knowledge obtained in one of two separate escrows will not be imputed to parties in another escrow who were not also parties to the first. La Mancha Dev. Corp. v Sheegog (1978) 78 CA3d 9, 144 CR 59; Far W. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v McLaughlin (1988) 201 CA3d 67, 246 CR 872. This is true even if the two escrows are not separated by time. The rule against imputation between escrows is not based on whether someone may actually recall the information from one escrow to another or whether the same escrow officer might have handled both. Thus, even simultaneous escrows handled by the same escrow officer are protected from imputation of information between them when the party from whom information is to be imputed is not a party to the same escrow as the party to whom the information is material. Triple A Mgmt. Co. v Frisone (1999) 69 CA4th 520, 81 CR2d 669.

The escrow holder has no duty to give advice about the propriety of the transaction for either principal. Cunningham v Security Title Ins. Co. (1966) 241 CA2d 626, 50 CR 724.

© The Regents of the University of California

§15.21 D. Duty to Disclose Fraud

The dual agency relationship makes disclosure of fraud particularly difficult. The general rule is that the escrow holder has no duty to disclose that one principal is committing a fraud on the other principal; thus, this information will not be imputed to the defrauded principal. Lee v Title Ins. & Trust Co. (1968) 264 CA2d 160, 70 CR 378. However, the escrow holder has a fiduciary duty to the defrauded party and should not participate in a fraud. Moe v Transamerica Title Ins. Co. (1971) 21 CA3d 289, 98 CR 547.

Because an escrow holder is a fiduciary, a party to the escrow has a "relaxed" duty of diligence to discover a fraud that may toll the limitations period, and is entitled to assume the escrow holder is properly following the party's instructions. Lee v Escrow Consultants, Inc. (1989) 210 CA3d 915, 259 CR 117. Although the issue in Lee v Escrow Consultants concerned accrual of a statute of limitations, the court also discussed the nature of an escrow holder's duty. The escrow holder's conduct to which the plaintiff-buyer objected was the disbursement of funds to the seller before the transfer of title to the plaintiff. The escrow holder made the premature disbursement on the receipt of a written amendment to the escrow instructions on which the plaintiff's signature was allegedly forged. The escrow holder argued that, because escrow holders do not have a duty to go beyond the escrow instructions and notify the parties of suspicious facts or circumstances (Lee v Title Ins. & Trust Co., supra), it had no duty to investigate the validity of an amendment that, on its face, seemed proper. The court distinguished Lee v Title Ins. & Trust Co., supra, however, holding that the original escrow instructions required that changes to the escrow instructions be "given in a writing by all parties," and that the escrow holder thus had a duty to verify the signatures on a purported amendment to the instructions. Lee v Escrow Consultants, Inc. (1989) 210 CA3d 915, 924, 259 CR 117. See also Romo v Stewart Title (1995) 35 CA4th 1609, 1619, 42 CR2d 414 (court reversed summary judgment, permitting plaintiff to proceed with suit against escrow agent whose alleged fraud and negligence resulted in plaintiff's losing commissions paid to broker).

PRACTICE TIP: If the escrow holder learns of a potential fraud that should be disclosed, a conflict arises with the escrow holder's duty to the other principal. As a result, escrow should stop without disclosure and the escrow holder should refuse to go forward.

V. LIABILITY OF ESCROW HOLDER

§15.22 A. Liability to Parties to Escrow

If a party to an escrow suffers damages proximately caused by the escrow holder, the escrow holder may be held liable for damages in contract or in tort. A breach of the escrow contract may result in damages. Amen v Merced County Title Co. (1962) 58 C2d 528, 25 CR 65. Likewise, an escrow holder may be responsible for any damages caused by negligence in performing its duties. Common Wealth Ins. Sys., Inc. v Kersten (1974) 40 CA3d 1014, 115 CR 653. The measure of damages and the statute of limitations may differ depending on the theory pursued.

In an action for breach of contract, the measure of damages is generally "the amount which will compensate the party aggrieved for all the detriment proximately caused thereby, or which, in the ordinary course of things, would be likely to result therefrom." CC §3300. In an action for negligent performance, the measure of damages is generally "the amount which will compensate for all the detriment proximately caused thereby, whether it could have been anticipated or not." CC §3333.

The statute of limitations for breach of contract is 4 years for a written contract and 2 years for an oral contract. CCP §§337, 339. For negligent performance, the limitations period is 4 years if the escrow instructions were written (Bruckman v Parliament Escrow Corp. (1987) 190 CA3d 1051, 235 CR 813), and 2 years if the instructions were oral (Amen v Merced County Title Co. (1962) 58 C2d 528, 25 CR 65). A tort cause of action accrues on the discovery of the negligence. Iusi v City Title Ins. Co. (1963) 213 CA2d 582, 28 CR 893.

In one case, an escrow holder was held liable on a cross-complaint for implied contractual indemnity for failure to record a declaration of restrictions, contrary to instructions. Bear Creek Planning Comm'n v Title Ins. & Trust Co. (1985) 164 CA3d 1227, 211 CR 172, disapproved on other grounds in Bay Dev., Ltd. v Superior Court (1990) 50 C3d 1012, 1032, 269 CR 720.

The escrow holder will be liable to any injured party for intentional tortious conduct, such as conversion or embezzlement of escrow funds by the escrow holder, or, on proper proof, for slander of title. Stalberg v Western Title Ins. Co. (1994) 27 CA4th 925, 32 CR2d 750; Stalberg v Western Title Ins. Co. (1991) 230 CA3d 1223, 282 CR 43 (escrow holder recorded fictitious easement on behalf of upstream owners, affecting plaintiffs' downstream properties).

An escrow holder may have a relationship with the parties to an escrow that would subject the escrow holder to liability for sexual harassment if the elements of CC §51.9 are present.

§15.23 B. Liability to Nonparties

The escrow holder may also be liable to nonparties affected by an escrow transaction. Such liability may be based on a third party beneficiary theory or a negligence theory. Money Store Inv. Corp. v Southern Cal. Bank (2002) 98 CA4th 722, 120 CR2d 58. For example, an escrow holder may be held liable to an assignor of sales proceeds for failing to follow an instruction by a party to the escrow to remit the proceeds to the assignee on the close of escrow. Builders' Control Serv. v North Am. Title Guar. Co. (1962) 205 CA2d 68, 22 CR 712. By contrast, a third party assignee has no such claim against an escrow holder if the assignor is not a party to the escrow. In Summit Fin. Holdings, Ltd. v Continental Lawyers Title Co. (2002) 27 C4th 705, 712, 117 CR2d 541, the court refused to impose liability on the escrow holder when a nonparty assigned its loan to another nonparty and the escrow holder paid the assignor as instructed by a party. The court distinguished Builders' Control Serv. v North Am. Title Guar. Co., supra, and Contemporary Invs. v Safeco Title Ins. Co. (1983) 145 CA3d 999, 193 CR 822, and disapproved Kirby v Palos Verdes Escrow Co. (1986) 183 CA3d 57, 227 CR 785.

In Southern California, it has become common for the title company to act as a sub-escrow for a lender, receiving funds and documents to pay off an existing deed of trust in the process of recording a new deed of trust from the new lender. The new lender submits instructions and is thus a party to the sub-escrow, but the borrower-owner is not a party, despite some incidental benefit. In Markowitz v Fidelity Nat'l Title Co. (2006) 142 CA4th 508, 48 CR3d 217, the court did not directly address the legality of the sub-escrow practice, and thus did not explicitly resolve the issue of whether a sub-escrow is an escrow independent from the primary escrow being handled by the lender relating to the new loan. In holding that the borrower was not a party to the sub-escrow, however, the court seemed to presume the independent nature of a sub-escrow.

The escrow holder may be liable if a creditor relies on the escrow holder's promise to pay but, because of a party's amended instruction, the escrow holder does not pay the demand. To avoid potential liability based on the creditor's reliance, the escrow holder should notify the creditor of the changed circumstance. Feinberg v Intrastate Escrow Corp. (1963) 216 CA2d 80, 30 CR 781.

Punitive damages may be recovered from an escrow holder, but only on proof of malice, fraud, or oppression by the escrow holder. Flyer's Body Shop Profit Sharing Plan v Ticor Title Ins. Co. (1986) 185 CA3d 1149, 230 CR 276.

§15.24 C. Accommodation Recordings

As a courtesy, escrow holders may agree to record a document (not prepared by the escrow holder) on behalf of a party to an escrow without assuming any liability for the consequences; this is referred to as an "accommodation recording." Brokers, principals, and attorneys all find it convenient to ask escrow for this service, even when there is no pending escrow to which the documents may relate.

Unfortunately, this service can result in liability for the effect of the recorded document. In Seeley v Seymour (1987) 190 CA3d 844, 237 CR 282, an optimistic potential tenant prepared a memorandum of agreement setting forth the essential terms of a lease that had not been signed by the landlord, the owner of the property. The title company agreed to record the memorandum, although it was signed only by the potential tenant. The title company delivered the memorandum to the county recorder for recording along with other documents to be insured by the title company. In the ensuing litigation, the title company was held liable for slander of title. The court held that it was not a defense that the memorandum had been recorded as an accommodation to the potential tenant. The court held that the title company had a duty to the landlord-owner of the property, based partly on the foreseeability of economic harm to the owner that would result from the recording.

Escrow may limit its liability by obtaining accommodation instructions. The party who requests the recording may be asked to indemnify the escrow holder against any harm arising from the recording of the document. Rooz v Kimmel (1997) 55 CA4th 573, 64 CR2d 177.

§15.25 D. Escheat

Escheat is the procedure by which the state takes title to property when the true owner cannot be located. CCP §1300(c). Under the Unclaimed Property Law (CCP §§1500-1582), the escrow holder must comply with the procedures to notify the owners of the lack of activity regarding any unclaimed funds and to eventually deliver those funds to the state. Escrow holders must file an annual report with the State Controller and transfer funds that have escheated. CCP §1530. Once the escrow holder delivers the funds to the State Controller, the escrow holder is relieved of all liability concerning the funds. CCP §1560. A prime source of unclaimed funds is money held after the close of escrow pending further instructions from the parties.

VI. DEPOSIT INTO ESCROW AND ITS CONSEQUENCES

§15.26 A. Conditional Delivery

The delivery to a third party of funds or documents (e.g., a grant deed or a deed of trust) to be delivered to another on the performance of a condition creates an escrow (see §15.7). CC §1057. When the condition is satisfied, the escrow holder delivers the documents or money to the appropriate parties, according to instructions.

Escrow is made necessary because a grant deed takes effect only on its delivery, which cannot be conditional. The seller will not want to deliver the grant deed until payment is received, but cannot avoid the effect of delivery of the grant deed directly to the buyer. Thus, the seller must rely on escrow to deliver the grant deed to the buyer when the buyer deposits the necessary funds. CC §§1054, 1056.

Funds that have been deposited into escrow subject to a condition will be released on satisfaction of the condition in accordance with escrow instructions or the terms of the purchase agreement. Most purchase agreements provide for liquidated damages to the seller if the transaction fails to close because of the buyer's default. See §4.142.

When neither party tenders performance sufficient to close the escrow, so that neither party is in default, the right to cancel the escrow and obtain the deposit will depend on the terms of the purchase agreement and the conduct of the parties. See Galdjie v Darwish (2003) 113 CA4th 1331, 7 CR3d 178 (seller waived a "time of the essence" clause by her conduct and had no right to cancel escrow).

Conflicts among the parties about the release of funds or documents may result in an interpleader of the funds or documents by the escrow holder. See §15.98.

PRACTICE TIP: An attorney who receives documents or funds from an opposing party under conditional authority to use them becomes an escrow holder. Wasmann v Seidenberg (1988) 202 CA3d 752, 248 CR 744. In the event of a conflict between the attorney's client and the opposing party as to the disposition of the documents or funds, the attorney should interplead the documents or funds. Virtanen v O'Connell (2006) 140 CA4th 688, 44 CR3d 702. See §§15.2-15.6.

B. Effect on Title and Possession

§15.27 1. Before Conditions Are Satisfied

Title to items deposited in escrow will depend on whether the conditions of their deposit have been satisfied. Before the conditions are satisfied, title to any item deposited in escrow remains with the party who deposited it. That is, the buyer or lender retains title to funds deposited, and the seller retains title to and possession of the property and any documents the seller deposited into escrow. Love v White (1961) 56 C2d 192, 14 CR 442.

Title is important in determining who bears the risk of loss if property is destroyed. See CC §1662. Similarly, the risk of loss of the funds falls on the party who has title to the funds at the time of the loss. For example, an embezzlement by the escrow holder before closing is the buyer's or lender's loss. Hildebrand v Beck (1925) 196 C 141, 236 P 301. By contrast, if all of the conditions of the escrow have been satisfied, the title to the funds passes to the seller, and any embezzlement after that time is the seller's loss. Greenzweight v Title Guar. & Trust Co. (1934) 1 C2d 577, 36 P2d 186. Embezzlements by escrow holders may entitle the parties to seek recovery under Fin Code §§17310-17315.

Finally, title to deposits determines when a creditor can acquire a lien on money or property a debtor will receive at the close of escrow or when a commission or other demand may be paid from proceeds. Until title passes, the money is still the buyer's and the property is still the seller's. Thus, a creditor of the buyer cannot acquire a lien on the property and a creditor of the seller cannot reach the purchase money until the escrow closes. For a further discussion of risk of loss under the Uniform Vendor and Purchaser Risk Act (CC §1662) and the ability to modify the allocation of risk of loss by contract, see §§4.137, 13.3-13.14.

Any premature delivery by the escrow holder to the other party is a void transfer that does not pass title to the recipient. Greenzweight v Title Guar. & Trust Co. (1934) 1 C2d 577, 36 P2d 186. For example, a seller can quiet title to the property if the grant deed was delivered to the buyer before payment of the purchase price, and a buyer can recover the purchase money from the seller if it was delivered prematurely. Kish v Bay Counties Title Guar. Co. (1967) 254 CA2d 725, 62 CR 494. The escrow holder is liable for any loss caused by such premature delivery or return.

© The Regents of the University of California

§15.28 2. After Conditions Are Satisfied

When the conditions of escrow are satisfied, title to deposits in escrow passes to the other party regardless of whether the escrow holder has actually delivered them. Hagge v Drew (1945) 27 C2d 368, 165 P2d 461; Andover Land Co. v Hoffman (1968) 264 CA2d 87, 70 CR 38. The actual closing of escrow occurs when all of the conditions are satisfied, not when the escrow holder has actually delivered funds or documents.

§15.29 3. Waiver of Conditions

A party may waive an unsatisfied condition and allow the close of escrow. When all conditions have been satisfied or waived, title will be transferred, and escrow will close. Kish v Bay Counties Title Guar. Co. (1967) 254 CA2d 725, 62 CR 494.

§15.30 VII. THIRD PARTY DEMANDS

One of the most difficult situations that can arise in an escrow involves a conflicting instruction between a party to the escrow and a third party. The interrelationship between escrow and title makes it crucial for everyone involved to understand who are the parties to the escrow (see §§15.9-15.15) and how the third party's demand affects closing the transaction.

Third parties who are not parties to the escrow but who make a demand for payment through the escrow may include the following:

- Judgment creditors;
- Judgment lien holders;
- Attorneys for the parties;
- Brokers, for purposes other than collecting commissions;
- The Internal Revenue Service;
- The Franchise Tax Board; and
- The seller's lender.

All of these parties are strangers to the escrow. Generally escrow cannot take instructions from these nonparties unless a party (usually the seller) tells escrow to pay the demand of the nonparty. It is common for the seller to instruct escrow to pay the liens that encumber the property. Payment to the nonparties who have an interest encumbering the real property is usually a buyer's requirement for closing the transaction. The buyer and the buyer's lender are usually unwilling to accept property that remains subject to the seller's liens.

Even though the creditors are not parties to the escrow, once the escrow holder has agreed to pay a third party creditor, the escrow holder must avoid acting in a negligent manner and can be liable to the third party creditor if payment is not properly made. For example, the escrow holder may be liable for paying the wrong party. Warington Lumber Co. v Fullerton Mortgage & Escrow Co. (1963) 222 CA2d 706, 35 CR 423.

A stranger to the escrow can become a party to the escrow through an assignment of proceeds by the seller. This procedure is common for real estate broker commissions. See §15.94. Any creditor can obtain an assignment of proceeds from the seller. Once the escrow holder is notified of the assignment, the assignee becomes a party to the escrow for the purpose of receiving the funds. If the escrow holder then receives amended escrow instructions from the assignor-seller that conflict with the demand of the assignee creditor, the escrow holder would have to hold or interplead the funds. See §15.98. Builders' Control Serv. v North Am. Title Guar. Co. (1962) 205 CA2d 68, 22 CR 712.

VIII. ESCROW INSTRUCTIONS

§15.31 A. General Provisions

Escrow companies draft general provisions to cover the generic issues that arise in every escrow. Often, statutorily required notices are printed as a part of the general provisions, e.g., privacy notice (15 USC §6801; 16 CFR pt 313) and California withholding notice (Rev & T C §18668; see §15.75). In a commercial transaction, parties often negotiate amendments to some of the instructions found in the general provisions. For a sample of general provisions, see App S.

The most common general provisions that are negotiated in a commercial transaction relate to the escrow company's attempt to limit liability (paragraph 7 in App S) and to alternative dispute resolution (paragraph 12 in App S). Attorneys often merely delete those paragraphs completely from the general provisions. In larger commercial transactions the escrow might not include general provisions. Instead, every detail may be drafted to satisfy the requirements of the parties to the transaction.

General provisions often contain an attorney fees provision for specific issues related to payment of escrow fees and costs (paragraph 11 in App S). In Kangarlou v Progressive Title Co. (2005) 128 CA4th 1174, 27 CR3d 754, the court interpreted those limited attorney fees provisions as applying to the entire contract. The plaintiff had purchased property using the defendant's escrow services and then sued the escrow holder for breach of fiduciary duty and attorney fees. The general provisions of the escrow instructions provided for the escrow holder to receive attorney fees and costs incurred in a collection action against a party to the escrow for failure to make payments to the escrow holder. The court determined that although the escrow holder attempted to limit attorney fees under CC §1717(a), the attorney fees provision applied to the entire contract. Plaintiff was able to recover the attorney fees. But see Paul v Schoellkopf (2005) 128 CA4th 147, 26 CR3d 766 (provision limiting attorney fees to those incurred by company in collecting for escrow services did not apply to disputes between buyer and seller over land sale contract).

PRACTICE TIP: Escrow holders often include various exculpatory clauses in the general provisions. Some escrow holders insist that these clauses be incorporated into any individually prepared instructions submitted to them. Each party's attorney must analyze these clauses carefully to see whether any important protections or rights are being waived. Exculpatory clauses that purport to relieve the escrow agent of any liability are often unenforceable. Akin v Business Title Corp. (1968) 264 CA2d 153, 159, 70 CR 287. But see Rooz v Kimmel (1997) 55 CA4th 573, 64 CR2d 177, for an example of a broad escrow exculpatory and indemnity clause that was found to be enforceable when the escrow company agreed to record a deed of trust as an accommodation and without commercial benefit, but negligently failed to do so in a timely fashion. Typical exculpatory provisions are discussed in §15.24.

§15.32 B. California Association of Realtors® Contract

In 2000, the California Association of Realtors® (CAR) adopted a new form, the Residential Purchase Agreement and Joint Escrow Instructions (CAR Contract). The CAR Contract, currently in use in most California counties, has been revised several times since its creation. The most interesting feature of the CAR Contract for escrow purposes is the inclusion of joint escrow instructions in the residential purchase agreement. A copy of the CAR Contract is in §6.24.

Before adoption of the CAR Contract (and currently, in counties where the CAR Contract is not used), the escrow holder would draw escrow instructions—unique to each transaction—on the basis of information provided by the parties or the broker. The escrow holder would generally not receive a copy of the purchase agreement between the buyer and the seller. The instructions would cover all of the conditions for close of escrow, the division of costs and fees, and a list of other tasks to be performed by the escrow holder.

Paragraph 28 of the CAR Contract lists those paragraphs in the CAR Contract that constitute the joint escrow instructions. Paragraph 28 makes it clear that the escrow holder is not to be concerned with paragraphs other than those listed. Paragraph 28 also provides that the escrow holder will send a copy of the general provisions to the parties, and if the general provisions conflict with the provisions of the CAR Contract, the general provisions will control. On the general provisions, see §15.31.

The CAR Contract provides that it is to be given to the escrow holder within 3 days after acceptance by the seller. The escrow holder acknowledges receipt of the CAR Contract and any deposit in writing, and by signing the CAR Contract agrees to act as the escrow holder subject to paragraph 28. If there are any issues that are not addressed in the CAR Contract or if there are any ambiguities in the CAR Contract that relate to the escrow holder's responsibilities, the escrow holder will draft supplemental instructions to address those issues. For a form of buyer's supplemental instructions, see §§15.50-15.61; for a form of seller's supplemental instructions, see §§15.63-15.73. Some escrow officers have not accepted the CAR Contract and continue to draft full escrow instructions for signature by the parties.

Source: Real Property/California Real Property Sales Transactions/15 Escrow and Closing the Sale/§15.33 C. Preparation of Escrow Instructions

§15.33 C. Preparation of Escrow Instructions

Sections 15.34-15.47 discuss certain legal and practical issues that arise in drafting supplemental escrow instructions for the buyer or the seller. Supplemental instructions are seldom used if the California Association of Realtors® Residential Purchase Agreement and Joint Escrow Instructions (CAR Contract) is used. The CAR Contract contains most of the escrow instructions that are customarily needed in a residential transaction. Before drafting any additional instructions, counsel should review the CAR Contract to ascertain whether additional instructions are necessary. Most items that are unique to the specific transaction can be addressed in paragraph 25, "Other Terms and Conditions" (see §6.24 for copy of CAR Contract). Supplemental instructions should clarify any ambiguity found in the CAR Contract. Generally, the escrow officer will draft brief specific instructions that relate to any ambiguities or areas that are not addressed in the CAR Contract.

§15.34 1. Property Description

Early in the transaction the attorney should confirm that the preliminary report accurately describes the property. If the legal description is too complicated for counsel to accurately locate, a surveyor can be hired to verify the legal description and to locate any easements and exceptions on a survey or plat.

© The Regents of the University of California

Source: Real Property/California Real Property Sales Transactions/15 Escrow and Closing the Sale/ 2. Deposit of Funds/§15.35 a. Good Funds Law

2. Deposit of Funds

§15.35 a. Good Funds Law

California's "good funds" laws (see Ins C §12413.1) require advance planning in order to fund escrow in sufficient time to achieve the agreed closing date. Payment in the form of cashier's, certified, or teller (association) checks allows the escrow holder to close and funds to be disbursed on the day after deposit into the escrow account, regardless of the state in which the account is located. Personal checks require significantly more time.

PRACTICE TIP: The parties, wishing to maximize their return on funds, often want to deposit funds on the same day as the funds are to be disbursed. This can happen only if the deposit is cash or a wire transfer to the escrow account of the escrow holder. When planning a same-day transfer, attorneys and parties must be aware of the wire transfer time limits of banks and title companies and differing time zones. Finally, attorneys and parties should consult early with the escrow holder concerning its requirements for funding before releasing documents for recording. Ordinarily, the escrow holder will require that funds arrive earlier than close of business on the day before the date the parties intend the documents to be recorded.

© The Regents of the University of California

§15.36 b. Right of Escrow Holder to Commingle Funds

Escrow holders deposit funds into a common escrow account. They do not maintain individual accounts for each escrow transaction. The general provisions (see §15.31) of the escrow holder's form instructions disclose this practice. Generally, funds are held for such a brief period of time that the cost of setting up an individual account is higher than the amount of interest the party may receive on funds in a separate account. The depositing party should analyze the cost and benefit of segregating funds if funds are to remain with escrow for more than a few days.

PRACTICE TIP: When dealing with an underwritten title company (i.e., an agent of a title insurance company—not an insurer), depositors should consider obtaining a closing protection letter from the prospective title insurer concerning the escrow agent's closing activities. Generally, in the closing protection letter the title insurer protects the parties against the underwritten title company's fraud, defalcation, or improper handling of documents or payments. For further discussion of closing protection letters, see California Title Insurance Practice §3.5 (2d ed Cal CEB 1997). Alternatively, a lender may wish to arrange a sub-escrow by which the title company handles funds but the escrow company handles documents and accounting functions.

© The Regents of the University of California

§15.37 c. Interest on Deposits

An escrow holder has no duty to deposit funds held in escrow in an interest-bearing account. Hannon v Western Title Ins. Co. (1989) 211 CA3d 1122, 260 CR 21. A party who wants funds to earn interest should instruct the escrow holder accordingly.

© The Regents of the University of California

§15.38 3. Drafting Documents

Conveyance and loan documents may be drafted by the parties or their attorneys, by the lender, or, in residential transactions, by the escrow holder. If the escrow holder drafts any documents, the seller must provide the specific terms and approve the form before the buyer executes them. If the seller is represented by counsel, the seller's counsel may draft the loan documents; if the escrow holder drafts them, the seller's counsel should review them.

Title companies will provide a list of the documents that the escrow holder may draft, and may list them on their website. (An escrow holder's responsibilities with respect to obtaining a valid conveyance of title are discussed in Marriage of Cloney (2001) 91 CA4th 429, 110 CR2d 615. For a further discussion of Cloney, see §15.20.)

© The Regents of the University of California

§15.39 4. Leases

If the buyer is purchasing the property subject to leases, the purchase agreement should describe how the seller will transfer the leases to the buyer. On purchase subject to leases, see §4.73. The seller's interest in the leases will be transferred to the buyer, and the buyer will formally assume the lease obligations, by use of an assignment and assumption of leases. The seller should also be required to deliver the original lease to the buyer on or before the closing. The escrow holder will deliver leases deposited by the seller but will want to avoid any responsibility for ensuring the validity or enforceability of the delivery or the assignment. The tenants must be notified of the assignment in order to ensure receipt of rent by the buyer.

Additionally, the purchase agreement generally provides that the buyer will receive and approve tenant estoppel certificates. The original estoppel certificates may be delivered to the buyer directly or through escrow. Also, an institutional lender will normally require a subordination, nondisturbance, and attornment agreement from the tenants. See Retail Leasing: Drafting and Negotiating the Lease, chap 44 (Cal CEB 2007); Office Leasing: Drafting and Negotiating the Lease, chap 28 (Cal CEB 1996).

© The Regents of the University of California

§15.40 5. Title Insurance

Negotiations for the form and contents of a title policy are conducted with the title company or the title department if the escrow holder is affiliated with a title insurance company. See §15.2. During a pending transaction, for example, attorneys may wish to delete certain exceptions listed in the preliminary report, have liens removed, relocate easements, or amend declarations of restrictions. These discussions will usually involve only the title company and not the escrow holder. For an in-depth discussion of preliminary reports, various title policies, and the many endorsements available, see California Title Insurance Practice (2d ed Cal CEB 1997). For form of escrow instructions regarding title insurance requirements, see §15.53.

NOTE: The title insurer will often ask the seller to sign an affidavit providing information an owner of property would know that a title insurer would not. The title insurer uses the information to eliminate certain title insurance risks, such as recent construction at the property, occupants of the property, easements or encroachments, access rights, disputes about use of the land, or supplemental taxes. Normally, the seller is obligated to the buyer by contract to deliver clear title by arranging and paying for a title insurance policy acceptable to the buyer. By completing the affidavit for the title insurer, the seller saves the increased charges a title insurer would incur to inspect the property. Depending on the insurance requested, the seller may choose not to assume liability for answering certain questions on the affidavit. Alternatively, the seller may request the title insurer to make its own inspection, although such a request requires advance notice to the title company.

There is often a delay of days or weeks after closing before the title insurance policy is sent to the insured, or insured's counsel. As a result, it is important that counsel review the issued policy to confirm that it conforms to the policy requested in the escrow instructions. Particular attention should be paid to the vesting, legal description, exceptions listed in Schedule B, and any requested endorsements. Any error of the title company should be promptly corrected. Failure to bring to the insurer's attention errors in the policy issued may bind the insured to the coverage that was issued. See Hallmark Ins. Co. v Superior Court (1988) 201 CA3d 1014, 247 CR 638.

© The Regents of the University of California

§15.41 6. Executing and Delivering Documents

In residential transactions, documents are usually executed at the escrow office. Because the title company will insure the validity and enforceability of deeds, easements, and deeds of trust recorded through escrow, the title company will want to control the signing and attaching of notarial acknowledgements to minimize exposure under the contemplated title policy for fraud, undue influence, capacity, and forgery. On fraud, see §15.21.

Escrow instructions should clearly identify to whom all documents are to be delivered because escrow holders are reluctant to deliver documents that are not clearly identified by both parties. In most cases, the escrow holder will not deliver keys, security passes, or similar items.

© The Regents of the University of California

§15.42 7. Closing; Closing Costs

When selecting a closing date, the parties must be aware that county recorders have special times for recording by title companies, usually first thing in the morning. This allows the title company to review the previous day's recordings to be sure that nothing will adversely affect the transaction being recorded. Some counties allow title companies to record later during the day, as a "special recording." Counsel should not assume that this is an option but should check with the county where the documents are to be recorded to ascertain whether special recordings are allowed. On closing, see §4.132.

The purchase agreement should clearly allocate between the parties all closing costs, including escrow and title fees, loan fees, transfer taxes, attorney fees, and broker's commissions. Each county in California has a "customary" allocation of such costs, and the custom may be determined by reviewing the websites of the major title insurers, or by asking local real estate brokers. On closing costs, see §§4.134-4.135.

© The Regents of the University of California

§15.43 8. Prorations

The allocation of charges between the buyer and the seller as of the closing date is called proration. The purchase agreement usually addresses this division of amounts paid or received by the seller or the buyer that would benefit the other party before or after the closing date. If the seller makes expenditures before closing that benefit the buyer after the closing date (e.g., property taxes for a period that ends after the closing; see §15.44), the seller is entitled to a credit for the amount by which the buyer will benefit, after closing, from the expenditure. Similarly, if the buyer makes expenditures after closing that in retrospect benefited the seller before the closing date, the buyer is entitled to a credit for the amount by which the seller benefited, before closing, from the expenditure.

PRACTICE NOTE: The purchase agreement will often provide that any items that were not readily susceptible to proration or were incorrectly prorated will be balanced by the parties and reimbursed within a short time after the closing date.

The most common types of prorations include real property taxes and assessments (§15.44), insurance premiums (§15.45), and rent (§15.46). For a further discussion of prorations, see §4.133.

§15.44 a. Real Property Taxes and Assessments

Real property taxes are billed in two installments for each tax year (July 1 through June 30). For example, if a sale transaction closes in March, and both installments have been paid, the seller has paid taxes through June 30 of the current tax year that are properly the responsibility of the buyer after the closing date.

PRACTICE TIP: Parties and their attorneys should also be aware of escape and supplemental assessments. If there has been recent construction on the property or if ownership has recently been transferred, the tax assessor may not have completed the task of reassessing the property to reflect such matters. After the close of escrow, the tax assessor may issue an escape assessment (Rev & T C §531) or supplemental assessment (Rev & T C §531.2), and this possibility should be handled in the purchase agreement.

If the property lies within certain special assessment districts, these assessments must also be prorated. These special assessments should be disclosed as exceptions in the preliminary report. Special assessments are collected with real property taxes and should be reflected on the latest tax bill for the property.

§15.45 b. Insurance Premiums

If the seller assigns any insurance policies to the buyer, the premiums must be prorated as of the closing or other date chosen by the parties. If the seller intends to cancel insurance policies, and the buyer will obtain its own insurance, the seller may be entitled to a premium refund for the period after closing. See §§4.106, 13.98 for discussion of hazard insurance. On property insurance in general, see chap 13.

§15.46 c. Rent

The escrow holder should be instructed to transfer to the buyer any rent from the property collected by the seller that is attributable to the period after the closing, including any security deposits paid to the seller by the tenant. CC §§1950.5, 1950.7. Other lease-related charges that may need to be prorated are expenses that the landlord pays but which are periodically reimbursed by a tenant (rather than paid directly by the tenant). Examples include maintenance charges, utilities, taxes, and insurance.

In commercial retail transactions, tenants may be paying percentage rent, based on sales, sometimes in advance, with provisions for periodic adjustments. All of these items should be prorated, and that may be accomplished in escrow.

See §4.133 for discussion of the various methods that buyer and seller can use to manage the issue of delinquent rent. See §4.73 for discussion of tenant estoppel certificates and App K for a form.

Source: Real Property/California Real Property Sales Transactions/15 Escrow and Closing the Sale/§15.47 9. Recordation; Priority

§15.47 9. Recordation; Priority

The buyer's attorney should carefully consider the order of priority for recording documents at the closing. For example, if a new or amended declaration of restrictions is to be recorded, the attorney should make sure that the signer of the declaration holds title when it is recorded. If the declaration is signed by the buyer, the conveyance to the buyer must be recorded before the declaration. The title officer (not the escrow officer) may be able to assist the parties and their attorneys in determining the order of priority.

§15.48 IX. SUPPLEMENTAL ESCROW INSTRUCTIONS TO PURCHASE AGREEMENT AND JOINT ESCROW INSTRUCTIONS

Even when the parties use the California Association of Realtors® (CAR) form Residential Purchase Agreement and Joint Escrow Instructions (see §6.24), the parties need to provide supplemental escrow instructions. Sections 15.50-15.61 contain a form of buyer's supplemental escrow instructions, and §§15.63-15.73 contain a form of seller's supplemental escrow instructions. Section 15.74 discusses the lender's supplemental escrow instructions in a residential transaction.

§15.49 A. Buyer's Supplemental Escrow Instructions

The buyer's objective is to deposit funds in exchange for title to the purchased property. Thus, the buyer's instructions should identify the conditions to the escrow holder's delivery of the buyer's funds to the seller. The form in §§15.50-15.61 identifies the buyer's deposits, conditions to delivery, and the procedure for closing the escrow.

Buyer's Escrow Instructions

_ _[Date]_ _

TO: _ _[name and address of escrow holder]_ _

Your Escrow No. _ _ _ _ _ _ _ _

Our File No. _ _ _ _ _ _ _ _

Transaction: _ _[name of seller]_ _ to _ _[name of buyer]_ _

Property: _ _[s*treet address or APN*]_ _

This letter shall constitute the escrow instructions of _ _[name]_ _ , Buyer, for the purchase from _ _[name]_ _, Seller, of the real property described in _ _[your/name of title company]_ _ _ _[preliminary report/pro forma title policy/title commitment]_ _ dated _ _[date]_ _, Order No. _ _ _ _ _ _ _ _.

Comment: The introduction states the information necessary to identify the transaction and the party providing the escrow instructions. The escrow and order numbers may be the same if escrow and title services are provided by the same company. See §15.15. However, if the buyer works with a national title service office, or if the escrow and title offices are in different counties or states, the numbers will probably differ. All relevant numbers should be referenced to avoid confusion.

In describing the transaction, refer to any exchange parties that will be involved. There may be an accommodator for either the buyer or the seller, or both. In such cases, reference to "Buyer" or "Seller" may be ambiguous. Instead, the drafter should create short names for the parties and accommodators that will minimize confusion. For a detailed discussion of exchanges, see Real Property Exchanges (3d ed Cal CEB 2002).

If no street address has been assigned to the property to be purchased, the correct assessor's parcel number(s) may be used instead of a street address.

15.51-1 Deposits by buyer

A. Buyer deposits the following into escrow:

1. _ _[Funds/Cashier's check, payable to your order/wire transfer, according to your transfer instructions]_ _, in the amount of _ _[dollar amount]_ _;

2. Resolutions by Buyer's _ _[directors/members/managers]_ _;

[If applicable, add one or both of the following options]

[Option 1: Third party financing]

3. Promissory note in the principal amount of _ _[dollar amount]_ _, payable to _ _[name of lender]_ _;

4. Deed of trust and assignment of rents in favor of _ _[name of lender]_ _, as beneficiary;

5. _ _[Add any other primary loan documents]_ _;

[Option 2: Seller financing]

[6.] Promissory note in the principal amount of _ _[dollar amount]_ _, payable to _ _[name of seller]_ _;

[7.] Deed of trust and assignment of rents in favor of _ _[name of seller]_ _, as beneficiary;

[8.]_ _[Add any other primary loan documents]_ _;

[Continue]

[9.] Preliminary change of ownership report.

Any additional funds required to be deposited by Buyer in order to close this escrow will be deposited within _ _[number]_ _ days of receipt of written notice from escrow holder stating the amount due.

Comment: This clause identifies the funds and documents deposited by the buyer. The instructions should also list any additional loan documents or disclosures required by either an institutional lender or by the seller as lender and should clearly state the number of originals and counterparts deposited.

The amount of funds required is derived from the purchase price less any deposits by the buyer, increased or decreased by closing costs and prorations. On prorations, see §4.133; for escrow instructions provision, see §15.57.

15.52-1 Conditions precedent to close of escrow

B. You are hereby authorized to close the above-referenced transaction in accordance with these instructions when, and only when, all of the following conditions have been fully satisfied:

1. You have received the grant deed to Buyer _ _[or Buyer's chosen entity or accommodator]_ _, in a form approved by Buyer, duly executed and acknowledged by Seller, as grantor;

[If appropriate, add one or more of the following]

2. You hold for Buyer the original of the lease, dated _ _[date]_ _, by and between _ _[name]_ _, as landlord, and _ _[name]_ _, as tenant, for the premises located at _ _[address]_ _, reviewed and approved by Buyer. Please obtain an Assignment and Assumption of Lease(s), in the form approved by Buyer, and executed and _ _[add, if to be recorded: notarially acknowledged]_ _ by Seller and Buyer;

[3.] Bill of Sale (for personal property), _ _[executed/to be executed]_ _ by Seller;

[4.] All original books, records, plans, specifications, leases, and other documents of Seller, as identified in section _ _ of the purchase agreement; and

[5.] One (1) original of each of the Federal and State of California Nonforeign Withholding Affidavits, executed by Seller.

[6.] You shall have dated all documents as of the date of closing, unless otherwise dated.

Comment: On transfer of leases, see §15.39.

If the seller is transferring any personal property to the buyer as part of the transaction, a bill of sale should be prepared that identifies the personal property.

On federal and state nonforeign withholding affidavits, see §§15.75-15.84.

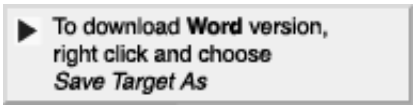
15.53-1 Title insurance requirements

[7.]_ _[*You are unconditionally prepared to issue to Buyer your/*_ _[Name]_ _ Title Company has confirmed to you its willingness to issue to Buyer its]_ _ _ _[California Land Title Association standard /American Land Title Association extended]_ _ coverage owner's policy of title insurance, _ _[in the exact form of the preliminary report/pro forma/title commitment attached to this letter,]_ _ in the amount of _ _[the purchase price]_ _, insuring that _ _[e.g., fee]_ _ title to the real property described in the _ _[preliminary report/pro forma/title commitment]_ _ is vested in _ _[Buyer or Buyer's designated entity and manner of holding title]_ _, including without limitation _ _[list any endorsements requested by Buyer]_ _. All title exceptions, other than exceptions _ _[list by number or describe]_ _ in the _ _[preliminary report/pro forma/title commitment]_ _, must be eliminated before the Closing.

Comment: This instruction obligates the escrow holder to obtain the requested title insurance policy. Ordinarily, the amount of coverage for the title policy will be determined by the purchase price. However, a buyer who intends to construct substantial improvements should consider obtaining endorsements to increase policy limits as improvements are completed, or persuading the title insurer that a higher policy limit, based on the anticipated value of the improvements, is justified.

Standard exceptions to title include taxes, recorded easements, deeds of trust, declarations of restrictions, and other recorded documents affecting title. The exceptions that the buyer will permit in the title policy should be listed by number according to the preliminary report. If a preliminary report is not yet available, the escrow instructions should be amended when it is available. Otherwise, the permitted title exceptions must be clearly described, including recording information. It is also acceptable to attach to the escrow instructions a marked-up version of the preliminary report or commitment. Any documents to be recorded through escrow at the closing should be authorized as exceptions, e.g., any new deed of trust, easement, or declaration of restrictions.

NOTE: A pro forma title insurance policy will show the exact form of the contemplated title policy, including endorsements. A title commitment or preliminary report will show the title exceptions as of the date of the report or commitment but not the endorsements.



If the buyer is obtaining financing to help purchase the property, the lender will submit instructions stating the lender's title insurance requirements. See §15.74.

15.54-1 Estimated closing statement

[8.] You shall have prepared and delivered to Buyer an estimated closing statement for this transaction, reflecting all charges, costs, and fees to be paid by _ _[Buyer/accommodator]_ _ and all other disbursements and the recipients thereof, and after approval of such estimated closing statement, you shall have telephonically advised _ _[Buyer/Buyer's counsel]_ _ of any change in the closing statement and received telephonic approval of any such change.

Comment: The escrow holder will draft an estimated closing statement for review by the parties to the escrow. Each party's statement will show only that party's side of the transaction, but the escrow holder cannot draft the statements until both sides have provided sufficient information. The statement should be carefully reviewed by both counsel and client to be sure the instructions regarding prorations and costs have been followed. 15.55-1 Procedure for closing

C. When you have fulfilled all of the conditions specified under _ _[e.g., section B]_ _ above, you shall close this escrow by performing the following steps in the manner, within the time periods, and in the order specified:

1. Record in the appropriate Official Records the following documents in the following order of priority:

a. The grant deed;

b. The deed of trust;

[If applicable, add one or more of the following options]

[Option 1: Seller financing]

c. The Seller's deed of trust;

[Option 2: Seller is assigning one or more leases to buyer]

[d.] The assignment of leases; and

_ _[if applicable, other loan documents, such as Subordination, Nondisturbance, and Attornment Agreements]_ _.

[Continue]

2. Disburse all funds in accordance with the approved estimated settlement statement and these instructions.

3. Deliver one (1) original of each of the following documents to _ _[Buyer/Buyer's counsel/Buyer and Buyer's counsel]_ _: a certified copy of the grant deed, a certified copy of the deed(s) of trust, assignment of leases, _ _[list other relevant documents]_ _, and copies of each of the loan documents and the nonforeign affidavits.

[If appropriate, add]

4. Deliver to _ _[accommodator]_ _ certified copies of all of the documents described in _ _[e.g., section C1]_ _, in such manner as _ _[accommodator]_ _ may direct.

[Continue]

[5.] Within _ _[number of days/hours]_ _ of closing, deliver to _ _[Buyer/Buyer's counsel/Buyer and Buyer's counsel]_ _ certified copies (including recording information) of the deed of trust, _ _[add any additional recorded documents to go to Buyer, e.g., assignment of rents, subordination, nondisturbance, and attornment agreement/any other recorded documents]_ _, and a copy of the preliminary change of ownership report; and deliver to _ _[Buyer/Buyer's counsel]_ _ the owner's title policy.

[6.] Within _ _[number of days/hours]_ _ of closing, deliver to _ _[Buyer/Buyer's counsel/Buyer and Buyer's counsel]_ _ one (1) certified copy of final closing statements prepared by you and consistent with the approved estimated closing statement.

15.56-1 Time for closing escrow; investment of funds

D. If you are unable to close this escrow immediately on receipt of funds deposited by _ _[Buyer/accommodator]_ _, you are then authorized and instructed to invest the funds _ _[describe choice of investment]_ _ until the escrow closes or these instructions are revoked by Buyer. Such investments shall be made through a national or state banking institution reasonably acceptable to you. All interest earned on invested funds shall accrue solely to the account of Buyer until the escrow closes, when this interest earned shall become the property of Buyer. If either this escrow does not close by _ _[date]_ _ or these instructions are revoked by Buyer, then the funds and all interest earned on the funds shall be promptly returned to the parties from whom such funds were originally received by you.

Comment: The time limit on closing escrow is usually based on the purchase agreement. The parties usually specify the date that the documents should be recorded in the official records. The escrow may close, if all conditions are satisfied, by the close of business the day before the documents are recorded. Thus, in the unfortunate situation that the buyer dies during the night after all conditions were satisfied, escrow has still closed and the documents should be recorded the next day. On closing, see §§4.132-4.136, 15.42.

15.57-1 Prorations

E. You shall prorate the following items between Buyer and Seller on the basis of a 30-day month as of _ _[the close of escrow/specify date]_ _:

1. Real property taxes relating to the property for the fiscal year _ _[year]_ _ through _ _[year]_ _ according to the most recent information available from the taxing authority.

2. Insurance premiums relating to the property.

[If applicable, add one or both of the following options]

[Option 1: Rents prorated]

3. Rents collected relating to the property, as disclosed by the _ _[tenant estoppel certificates/rent roll]_ _ deposited into escrow by Seller, together with the balance of any security deposit paid by each tenant.

[Option 2: Insurance policies assigned]

[4.] The premiums relating to the following insurance policies to be assigned to Buyer by Seller: _ _[identify policies]_ _

[Continue]

Comment: The purchase agreement should address the division between the buyer and the seller of amounts paid or received by the seller or the buyer that would benefit the other party before or after the closing date. The escrow instructions should accurately reflect this agreement. On prorations, see §§4.133, 15.43-15.46.

15.58-1 Authorized disbursements; costs

F. Buyer shall pay one-half of your escrow fees, the excess cost of the premium for the owner's ALTA title insurance policy over the cost of the premium for a CLTA owner's policy (and the lender's CLTA or ALTA title insurance policy, if applicable), the cost of any endorsements Buyer requests to its title policy, and the fees for any notary services provided to Buyer.

[If appropriate, add]

Seller shall pay one-half of your escrow fees, the cost of the premium for the owner's CLTA title insurance policy (or joint protection policy, if Seller financing), any real estate broker's commissions, the cost of clearing and delivering title according to the purchase agreement, and the cost of preparing and delivering the grant deed.

[Continue]

Comment: The allocation of closing costs, including the escrow and title fees, should be negotiated and agreed in the purchase agreement. Often the seller will agree to pay the premium for a California Land Title Association (CLTA) standard coverage policy, as provided in the above form. If the buyer requests an American Land Title Association (ALTA) extended coverage owner's title policy, then the buyer will pay the difference between the premium for the CLTA policy and the premium for the ALTA policy. As borrower, the buyer will also pay for the lender's title policy. The escrow instructions' allocation between the parties of the costs of closing, including escrow and title fees, loan fees, transfer taxes, attorney fees, and broker's commissions, should reflect the allocations made by the purchase agreement. On closing costs, see §§4.134, 15.42.

For clarification, the buyer may add the second paragraph, which confirms the fees and costs payable by the seller, although the buyer may not commit the seller to actually pay them. The seller must submit a matching instruction. For a form, see §15.69.

15.59-1 Right to withdraw documents or funds

G. Buyer reserves the right to withdraw any or all documents or funds from this escrow submitted under these escrow instructions at any time before the close of this escrow.

Comment: Similar language was held not fatal to formation of a contract between a party and the escrow holder in Money Store Inv. Corp. v Southern Cal. Bank (2002) 98 CA4th 722, 120 CR2d 58; see §15.18.

The parties' rights to withdraw documents or funds are not unilateral, but governed by their contract and their conduct during performance. See Galdjie v Darwish (2003) 113 CA4th 1331, 7 CR3d 178 (seller waived "time of the essence" clause by repeated failure to insist on buyer's timely performance and therefore had no right to cancel escrow, even though closing date stated in purchase agreement had passed). Similarly, a party may lose the right to cancel a sale and be forced by a court to close escrow when that party has interfered with the other party's ability to perform a condition to closing. See Peak-Las Positas Partners v Bollag (2009) 172 CA4th 101, 90 CR3d 775 (affirming judgment of specific performance extending escrow); Ninety Nine Invs., Ltd. v Overseas Courier Serv. (Singapore) Private, Ltd. (2003) 113 CA4th 1118, 6 CR3d 891 (seller's conduct prevented buyer from timely obtaining a loan to close escrow). On specific performance with additional discussion of Peak-Las Positas, see §4.149. In the event of a dispute between the parties regarding the funds on deposit in escrow, the escrow holder's general instructions usually provide that the escrow holder may interplead the funds. On interpleader, see §15.98.

15.60-1 Document approval

[Alternative 1: Buyer's silence deemed approval]

H. If these instructions require the approval by Buyer of any report, statement, form, or other document, approval shall be considered given if Buyer has not given written notice of disapproval to you of any such item or items within _ _[number]_ _ days after you notify Buyer of receipt of the item and you furnish Buyer with a copy of that item.

[Alternative 2: Buyer's silence deemed disapproval]

H. If these instructions require the approval by Buyer of any report, statement, form, or other document, approval shall be considered given if Buyer has notified you in writing stating such approval of any such item or items within _ _[number]_ _ days after you notify Buyer of receipt of the item and you furnish Buyer with a copy of that item. If Buyer fails to notify you within such _ _[number]_ _-day period, Buyer shall be deemed to have disapproved such item.

[Continue]

Comment: Alternative 1 provides that the buyer may passively approve items requiring the buyer's approval as a condition to closing. However, counsel should consider whether it is preferable that inaction by the buyer be deemed disapproval. If so, Alternative 2 should be used. Obviously, for the escrow to proceed, the approval method required must be consistent with the other parties' instructions.

[10.] One (1) original of each of the Federal and State of California Nonforeign Withholding Affidavits.

[11.] Owner's affidavit, as requested by title insurer.

Comment: This clause identifies the documents deposited by the seller. Any additional loan documents or disclosures should also be listed. The instructions should clearly state the number of originals and counterparts that are deposited. On drafting documents, see §15.38. See also comments in §§15.51-15.52. On federal and state nonforeign withholding affidavits, see §§15.75-15.84.

15.65-1 Conditions precedent to close of escrow

B. You are authorized to close the above-referenced transaction in accordance with these instructions when, and only when, all of the following conditions have been fully satisfied:

1. You hold for Seller's account cash or other form of available funds (including the _ _[amount]_ _ previously deposited by Buyer into this escrow) sufficient to pay the Purchase Price (as defined in the purchase agreement) and all closing costs, expenses, and prorations for which Buyer is responsible _ _[less the amount of the promissory note referenced in paragraph, e.g., A3 above]_ _.

2. You have received the promissory note and deed of trust in favor of Seller, each executed by Buyer, and acknowledged as appropriate.

3. You have prepared and delivered to Seller a preliminary closing statement for this transaction, reflecting all charges, costs, and fees to be borne by _ _[Seller/accommodator]_ _ and all other disbursements and the recipients thereof, and after approval of such preliminary closing statement, you shall have telephonically advised _ _[Seller/Seller's counsel]_ _ of any change therein and received telephonic approval of any such change.

4. You have obtained an assignment and assumption of lease(s), in the form approved by Seller, and executed and _ _[add, if to be recorded: notarially acknowledged]_ _ by Seller and Buyer.

[If there is seller financing, add the following option]

[Option: Lender's policy]

5. _ _[You are unconditionally prepared to issue your/_ _[Name]_ _ Title Company has confirmed to you its willingness to issue its]_ _ _ _[California Land Title Association standard/American Land Title Association extended]_ _ coverage lender's policy of title insurance, insuring that _ _[e.g., fee]_ _ title to the real property described in the _ _[preliminary report/pro forma/title commitment]_ _ is vested in _ _[Buyer/Buyer's designated entity and manner of holding title]_ _, including without limitation _ _[list any endorsements requested by Seller]_ _. All title exceptions, other than exceptions _ _[list by number or describe]_ _ in the _ _[preliminary report/pro forma/title commitment]*_ _, must be eliminated before the Closing.

[Continue]

Comment: The seller's main condition to the delivery of the grant deed to the buyer is receipt of payment of the purchase price. If the seller is also providing financing, the optional language at the end of paragraph 1 should be used.

On the estimated closing statement, see §15.54. For a form good faith estimate, see App X; on the good faith estimate form, see §15.95.

The purchase agreement will describe how any existing leases are to be transferred to the buyer. An assignment and assumption of lease will be required transferring the seller's interest in the leases to the buyer and providing for the buyer's formal assumption of the lease obligations. The original lease(s) should be delivered to the buyer from the seller. The escrow holder will deliver leases deposited by the seller, but will want to avoid any responsibility for ensuring the validity or enforceability of the delivery or the assignment. On assignment, the tenants must be notified of the assignment to ensure receipt of rent by the buyer.

If the buyer is purchasing property subject to leases, the purchase agreement will usually provide that the buyer will receive and approve tenant estoppel certificates. The original estoppel certificates may be delivered to the buyer through escrow, if desired. Also, an institutional lender will normally require subordination, nondisturbance, and attornment agreements from the tenants. See Office Leasing: Drafting and Negotiating the Lease, chap 28 (Cal CEB 1996).

This provision makes it the escrow holder's obligation to obtain the title insurance policy. Ordinarily, the amount of coverage for the title policy will be determined by the amount of the loan to buyer.

The exceptions that the seller will permit in the title policy should be listed by number according to the preliminary report. If a preliminary report is not yet available, the escrow instructions should be amended when it is available. Otherwise, the permitted title exceptions must be clearly described, including recording information. It is also acceptable to attach to the escrow instructions a marked-up version of the preliminary report or commitment. The seller will normally be required to subordinate to any institutional or individual first lender and the seller's loan policy will reflect the new first deed of trust as an exception.

15.66-1 Procedure for closing

C. When you have fulfilled all of the conditions specified under _ _[e.g., section B]_ _, you shall close this escrow by performing the following steps in the manner, within the time periods, and in the order specified below:

1. Record in the appropriate Official Records the following documents in the following order of priority:

a. The grant deed;

b. The deed of trust;

[If applicable, add one or more of the following options]

[Option 1: Seller financing]

c. The Seller's deed of trust;

[Option 2: Seller is assigning one or more leases to buyer]

[d.] The assignment of leases; and

_ _[if applicable, other loan documents, such as Subordination, Nondisturbance, and Attornment Agreements]_ _.

[Continue]

2. You shall pay the demand of _ _[lienholder]_ _ dated _ _[date]_ _.

3. Disburse all funds in accordance with the approved estimated closing statement and these instructions.

4. Date all undated documents as of the date the Grant Deed is recorded in the Official Records.

5. Deliver one (1) original of each of the following documents to _ _[Seller/Seller's counsel/Seller and Seller's counsel]_ _: a certified copy of the grant deed, a certified copy of the Seller's deed of trust, the original Seller's promissory note, original assignment of leases, _ _[list other relevant documents]_ _, and copies of each of the nonforeign affidavits.

[If appropriate, add]

6. Deliver to _ _[accommodator]_ _ certified copies of all of the documents described in _ _[e.g., section C1]_ _, in such manner as _ _[accommodator]_ _ may direct.

[Continue]

[7.] Within _ _[number of days/hours]_ _ of closing, deliver to _ _[Seller/Seller's counsel/Seller and Seller's counsel]_ _ certified copies (including recording information) of the deed of trust, the assignment of leases, and _ _[add any additional recorded documents to go to Seller]_ _, _ _[the cancelled promissory note and deed of trust, per payoff demand]_ _, and a copy of the preliminary change of ownership report; and deliver to _ _[Seller/Seller's counsel]_ _ the Seller's loan policy.

[8.] Within _ _[number of days/hours]_ _ of closing, deliver to _ _[Seller/Seller's counsel/Seller and Seller's counsel]_ _ one (1) certified copy of final closing statements prepared by you and consistent with the approved estimated closing statement.

Comment: There is often a delay of days or weeks before the title insurance policy is sent to the insured, or insured's counsel. As a result, it is very important for counsel to review the policy actually issued for its conformity with the policy requested in the escrow instructions. Particular attention should be paid to the vesting, legal description, exceptions listed in Schedule B, and any endorsements attached. Any error of the title company should be promptly corrected. Failure to bring to the insurer's attention errors in the policy issued may bind the insured to the coverage that was issued. See Hallmark Ins. Co. v Superior Court (1988) 201 CA3d 1014, 247 CR 638.

An institutional lender who is being paid to release an existing lien may require that it send the canceled loan documents to the seller directly, outside of escrow, and after receipt of payment in full. In that situation, delete the instruction to escrow to provide the canceled loan documents to the seller at closing.

§15.74 C. Lender's Instructions

Most institutional residential lenders submit instructions to escrow that are standard forms, preprinted, and not negotiated with the borrower. These instructions are usually accompanied by the lender's prepared loan documents, including the promissory note and deed of trust, and various lender disclosure forms required by different federal and state laws. See Federal Truth in Lending Act (15 USC §§1601-1693r), Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act of 1974 (RESPA) (12 USC §§2601-2617), and CC §§2956-2967. If the lender requests, the escrow holder will supervise the signing of the loan documents by the borrowers. The escrow officer will then act as notary for the borrower's signature on the mortgage or deed of trust.

Commercial lenders will also submit instructions but will usually coordinate drafting instructions and loan documents with the borrower's counsel.

The lender's instructions will require as a condition to closing that the loan documents be fully executed, recorded as appropriate, and returned to the lender. Also, the lender will require a title insurance policy, either in the form of an American Land Title Association (ALTA) lender's policy, a California Land Title Association (CLTA) lender's policy, or in the case of some individual lenders, a CLTA joint protection policy. (See California Title Insurance Practice, chaps 6, 8 (2d ed Cal CEB 1997) for a discussion of lender's title insurance.) Lenders usually also require proof of hazard insurance covering the borrower's property. See chap 13.

Loan funds are normally deposited into escrow by wire transfer once all the other conditions of the lender's instructions have been satisfied, and 1 day before the deed of trust records. A lender may charge the borrower with interest on loan funds deposited into escrow only for 1 day before recording the deed of trust. CC §2948.5.

NOTE: If the proceeds of a loan secured by a deed of trust are to be disbursed on a Monday or the day after a bank holiday, the lender may charge the additional interest that accrues over the weekend or on the bank holiday only if the borrower signs a form disclosing the amount of the extra interest charges accruing and informing the borrower that the extra interest could be avoided by disbursing on a day other than a Monday or the day after a holiday. CC §2948.5. But see Washington Mut. Bank v Superior Court (2002) 95 CA4th 606, 115 CR2d 765, holding that CC §2948.5 does not apply to a federally chartered savings and loan association because of federal preemption.

X. TAX ISSUES

A. California Withholding

§15.75 1. Withholding Requirements

Revenue and Taxation Code §18662 provides for the withholding of taxes on the disposition of California real estate. The statute requires a prepayment of tax in the amount of 3-1/3 percent of the sales price or the alternative withholding amount unless the seller falls within one of the statutory exemptions from this payment. Rev & T C §18662(e). The buyer is obligated to withhold the amount of tax due at the close of the transaction and send the funds to the Franchise Tax Board. On buyer's obligations, see §15.79. The buyer generally designates the escrow holder to fulfill this obligation to withhold and send the funds.

For many years, only nonindividual sellers were required to document the existence of an exemption or to pay the California withholding tax. Effective January 1, 2003, however, individual sellers who are California residents are also required to either document the existence of an exemption or pay the California withholding tax. Rev & T C §18662(e)(1).

Effective January 1, 2007, sellers who do not qualify for an exemption from California withholding may now choose between two different methods of calculating the amount owed. The standard withholding amount is still 3-1/3 percent of the gross sale price. The alternative withholding amount is based on the maximum tax rate for individuals, banks, and others, as applied to the gain on the sale. The gain on the sale is the difference between the adjusted basis of the property and the amount realized in the sale. Rev & T C §18662(e)(2). The amount realized is the sales price in the current transaction minus the selling expenses. The adjusted basis is determined by starting with the original price that the seller paid for the property. Any points paid by the seller and any depreciation taken are subtracted from the seller's original purchase price. Costs of additions or permanent improvements are added to the seller's original purchase price. That final amount is the adjusted basis.

FTB Form 593-E, Real Estate Withholding—Computation of Estimated Gain or Loss, is used to compute the amount due. See App T. Form 593-E has replaced the former 593-L and is also used to calculate a loss. Form 593-E is signed under penalty of perjury.

© The Regents of the University of California

Source: Real Property/California Real Property Sales Transactions/15 Escrow and Closing the Sale/§15.76 2. Individual Exemptions to Withholding Requirements

§15.76 2. Individual Exemptions to Withholding Requirements

The exemptions for individual sellers include the following (Rev & T C §18662(e)(3)):

- The total gross sales price is less than $100,000;
- Certain foreclosures;
- The property is, or was last used as, the seller's principal residence as defined in IRC §121;
- Exchanges under IRC §1031 (except for boot);
- Involuntary conversions as defined by IRC §1033; and
- The sale of the property results in a taxable loss for California tax purposes (the sellers must complete FTB form 593-E, Real Estate Withholding—Computation of Estimated Gain or Loss; see App T).

NOTE: The most common exemption is that the property is the seller's principal residence. Before January 1, 2005, for purposes of this exemption, "principal residence" was defined as the residence occupied by the seller for 2 of the last 5 years (tracking the federal definition under IRC §121). Effective January 1, 2005, an alternative method of qualifying a personal residence was added. The exemption now applies if the property was last used as the seller's principal residence "within the meaning of IRC §121." Rev & T C §18662(e)(3)(D)(i)(II). The Franchise Tax Board forms and publications clarify the apparent ambiguity of that final clause in §18662(e)(3)(D)(i)(II) by adding "without regard to the 2-year time period."

The individual seller signs a declaration (FTB Form 593-C, Real Estate Withholding Certificate; see App U), under penalty of perjury. The form lists all of the exemptions. The seller checks the box that contains the relevant exemption and signs the form. If the seller does not check off a box on this form showing that an exemption applies, the prepayment is due. On the obligation to make this prepayment, see §15.79. All of the forms and instructions can be found on the Franchise Tax Board's website, listed in the Directory.

© The Regents of the University of California

Source: Real Property/California Real Property Sales Transactions/15 Escrow and Closing the Sale/§15.77 3. Nonindividual Exemptions to Withholding Requirements

§15.77 3. Nonindividual Exemptions to Withholding Requirements

The exemptions for nonindividual sellers include the following:

- Certain corporations and partnerships (Rev & T C §18662(e)(1));
- Partnerships and limited liability companies;
- Tax-exempt entities, insurance companies, IRAs, and qualified pension plans;
- Estates, but only for sale of the decedent's principal residence; and
- Banks.

Before January 1, 2005, nonindividuals could request a waiver from the required withholding or a reduction in the amount of withholding if the gain from the sale was small. However, as of January 1, 2005, nonindividual sellers can no longer request a waiver or a reduction in withholding. Instead, just like individuals, nonindividuals are either exempt from withholding or must prepay 3-1/3 percent of the total sales price (or the alternative withholding amount). Nonindividuals self-certify an exemption using the same Form 593-C that an individual signs (FTB Form 593-C, Real Estate Withholding Certificate; see App U) declaring under penalty of perjury that the entity falls within one of the statutory exemptions. Former Form 593-W has been eliminated.

© The Regents of the University of California

§15.78 4. No Waiver for Individuals

Under current law there is no complete waiver from withholding for individuals. Thus, even if there are not enough funds to cover the withholding at close, withholding is due. Lack of funds is only relevant if there is a taxable loss on the sale of the property (i.e., basis exceeds sale price). If the seller claims a loss, the seller must also fill out an FTB Form 593-E, Real Estate Withholding—Computation of Gain or Loss. See §15.76; for the form, see App T.

© The Regents of the University of California

§15.79 5. Buyer's Obligations; Penalties

To ensure compliance with the withholding requirement, the legislature has delegated responsibility for withholding to the buyer. The buyer has a right to reasonably rely on the 593-C and 597-W Certifications (see §§15.76-15.77) that are signed under penalty of perjury. Rev & T C §18662(e)(3)(D).

PRACTICE TIP: The buyer should review the certifications before close of escrow. If the certifications are not properly filled out or if they do not make sense, the buyer should clarify the certification with the seller. For privacy protection, sellers should insist that their Social Security numbers be deleted from any forms sent to the buyers.

Special procedures are available for installment sales. Rev & T C §18662(e)(3)(E). If the buyer agrees, the initial withholding amount can be based on the initial payment only and, subsequently, withholding is paid each time an installment payment is made. The buyer must sign a special form (FTB Form 593-I, Real Estate Withholding Installment Sale Agreement) signifying the buyer's agreement to withhold over time.

If funds are due, they must be paid to the Franchise Tax Board by the 20th of the month following the month that title is transferred. Unless the party is a nonindividual requesting a waiver, it is general practice for the escrow holder to send the funds at closing to avoid late penalties. The penalty for failure to withhold is the greater of $500 or 10 percent of the amount due. Rev & T C §18668(d). Generally, the penalty is paid by the buyer. If the escrow holder failed to give the statutory notice regarding withholding, the escrow holder is responsible for the penalty. Rev & T C §18668(e)(1). If the seller knowingly signs a false exemption certificate for the purpose of avoiding the withholding requirements, however, the penalty is the greater of $1000 or 20 percent of the amount due. Rev & T C §18668(e)(5).

B. FIRPTA

§15.80 1. Withholding Requirements

The Foreign Investment in Real Property Tax Act of 1980 (FIRPTA) (IRC §§861, 882, 897, 6039C) requires the buyer to withhold 10 percent of the gross sales price paid to a seller who resides in a foreign country unless an exemption applies. See IRC §§897, 1445.

Source: Real Property/California Real Property Sales Transactions/15 Escrow and Closing the Sale/§15.81 2. Exemptions to Withholding Requirements

§15.81 2. Exemptions to Withholding Requirements

The exemptions to withholding are as follows:

- The sales price of the real property is less than $300,000 and the buyers intend to use the property as their residence. IRC §1445(b)(5).
- The sellers provide the buyers with a nonforeign affidavit, signed under penalty of perjury. There is no official form, but for a sample form, see §15.82; the sellers must state that they are not nonresident aliens and provide their taxpayer identification number and their home address. IRC §1445(b)(2). An individual can obtain a taxpayer identification number quickly from the Internal Revenue Service. IRS Form W-7.

NOTE: The Housing and Economic Recovery Act of 2008 (Pub L 110-289, 122 Stat 2654) added an alternative method for furnishing the nonforeign affidavit to address sellers' concerns regarding identity theft. IRC §1445(b)(9). Under the alternative method, instead of going to the buyer, the nonforeign affidavit is deposited into escrow. The escrow holder then certifies to the buyer that (1) the escrow is the settlement service provider in the transaction, (2) the escrow is not the agent of the seller, (3) the seller has given the nonforeign affidavit to escrow, and (4) the nonforeign affidavit indicates that withholding is not required. The escrow holder is stating that it has the form and that the form indicates that no withholding is required. The escrow holder is not certifying the accuracy of the information. The form is kept in the escrow file until the entire escrow file is destroyed.

- The sellers provide the buyers with a notice of nonrecognition of gain or loss. There is no official form; the notice must state the basis for the nonrecognition of gain or loss by reference to an Internal Revenue Code section or treaty, and is signed under penalty of perjury. The buyers send a copy of the notice to the IRS within 20 days after close of escrow. Treas Reg §1.1445-2(d)(2).
- Before the close of escrow, the buyers receive a withholding certificate from the IRS stating that nothing is due. See §15.83.
- The transaction is a gift and the sellers receive no funds. If the sellers are relieved from the liability of a note secured by deed of trust, the sellers have received something of value and withholding is required unless another exemption applies. IRC §1445(b)(5); IRS Form 8288, General Instructions.
- The buyer is the United States or a state of the United States. IRS Form 8288, General Instructions.
- The buyers are acquiring an option. Withholding is required at the time that the option is exercised. IRS Form 8288, General Instructions.

§15.82 3. Form: Certification of Nonforeign Status by Corporation, Partnership, Trust or Estate

CERTIFICATION OF NONFOREIGN STATUS BY CORPORATION, PARTNERSHIP, TRUST OR ESTATE

Section 1445 of the Internal Revenue Code provides that a transferee of a U.S. real property interest must withhold tax if the transferor is a foreign person. For U.S. tax purposes (including section 1445), the owner of a disregarded entity (which has legal title to a U.S. real property interest under local law) will be the transferor of the property and not the disregarded entity. To inform the transferee that withholding of tax is not required upon the disposition of a U.S. real property interest by _____ (hereinafter referred to as "Transferor"), the undersigned hereby certifies the following on behalf of Transferor:

1. Transferor is not a foreign corporation, foreign partnership, foreign trust, or foreign estate (as those terms are defined in the Internal Revenue Code and Income Tax Regulations);

2. Transferor is not a disregarded entity as defined in §1.1445–2(b)(2)(iii);

3. Transferor's U.S. employer identification number is _____; and

4. Transferor's office address is _____
_____.

Transferor understands that this certification may be disclosed to the Internal Revenue Service by transferee and that any false statement contained herein could be punished by fine, imprisonment, or both.

Under penalties of perjury I declare that I have examined this certification and to the best of my knowledge and belief it is true, correct, and complete, and I further declare that I have authority to sign this document on behalf of Transferor.

§15.83 4. Withholding Certificate

Sellers who take the position that they do not owe withholding, or that they owe less than 10 percent, may request that the IRS reduce the required withholding and determine the maximum tax liability. See IRC §1445(c); Treas Reg §1.1445-3; Rev Proc 2000-35, 2000-1 Cum Bull 211. The sellers would submit an IRS Form 8288-B, Application for Withholding Certificate for Disposition by Foreign Persons of U.S. Real Property Interests. If escrow closes before receipt of a response from the IRS, the 10 percent is held (usually by the escrow holder). If funds are due after the IRS responds, the funds are sent to the IRS within 20 days after the IRS mails the withholding certificate to the buyers. See Treas Reg §1.1445-3; Rev Proc 2000-35.

§15.84 5. Buyer's Obligations; Penalties

The buyer is obligated to pay the withholding amounts within 20 days after the close of escrow unless there is a pending application for a withholding certificate. IRS Form 8288, General Instructions. IRS Form 8288, U.S. Withholding Tax Return for Dispositions by Foreign Persons of U.S. Real Property Interests, and IRS Form 8288-A, Statement of Withholding on Dispositions by Foreign Persons of U.S. Real Property Interests, are used to report and send the withholding amount. These forms can be found on the IRS website, which is listed in the Directory. The buyer has a right to reasonably rely on documents submitted by the seller. IRC §1445(b)(7).

PRACTICE TIP: One of the differences between FIRPTA and California withholding (see §§15.75-15.79) is that the escrow holder will not automatically handle all documentation and funds related to FIRPTA unless that is specifically requested by the parties to the escrow. If the seller lives out of the country and FIRPTA withholding may be required, make certain that contingency is clear to all parties who will handle FIRPTA funds and paperwork.

XI. CLOSING THE DEAL

§15.85 A. Why Record?

By recording documentation of real property transfers, the buyers and lenders are protected against unknown prior interests in the same property. The recording statutes (CC §§1169-1220; Govt C §§27201-27399) establish that properly indexed and recorded instruments provide notice to all persons of their contents, whether a person looks at them or not, which constitutes so-called constructive notice. In transfers and encumbrances of real property, recording has several effects, including these:

- If the instrument is "recorded as prescribed by law," constructive notice of the contents of the instrument is conclusively presumed. CC §1213 (notice is more fully discussed in §15.86).
- Recording provides actual notice of the instrument's contents to those performing a search of the public records.
- Recording establishes priority of recorded instruments over conveyances and encumbrances that are recorded later, even when the execution of such conveyances and encumbrances was actually earlier in time, as long as the subsequent conveyance was in good faith (i.e., without notice of the prior conveyance) and for valuable consideration. CC §1214.

NOTE: Civil Code §1214 is termed a "race-notice" type of recording statute, as opposed to the "pure race" or "pure notice" types of statutes. The "race" refers to the race to the recorder's office to record an instrument first in time, to meet the "first duly recorded" provision of §1214. "Notice" refers to the fact that the winner of the race must also have no "notice" of any other claim to the interest being transferred. Only with no such "notice" in addition to winning the "race" may the transferee achieve priority of its interest over other purported transfers. In other words, he or she must take his or her interest "in good faith and for a valuable consideration." CC §1214. Notice may be actual or constructive, including imputed or inquiry notice. See §15.86.

© The Regents of the University of California

§15.86 B. Effect of Recording

A conveyance is void against a subsequent conveyance to a bona fide purchaser or bona fide encumbrancer for value who records a conveyance of the same property first. CC §§1107, 1214. See Hochstein v Romero (1990) 219 CA3d 447, 268 CR 202. The unrecorded conveyance is still valid between the parties to the conveyance, and those with notice of it. CC §1217. Such "notice" may include actual notice (CC §18(1); I. E. Assocs. v Safeco Title Ins. Co. (1985) 39 C3d 281, 216 CR 438) or constructive notice (CC §19), i.e., knowledge of facts that would prompt a reasonable person to inquire further. Thus, a buyer who records the deed and proves its status as a bona fide purchaser for value without notice of any other conveyance has priority over a deed for the same property that was delivered by the same seller but not recorded before the one that was recorded. CC §§1107, 1214. Once properly recorded, a buyer's deed provides constructive notice to all persons, whether they look at the record or not, and has priority over any other transfer. See CC §1214; Triple A Mgmt. Co. v Frisone (1999) 69 CA4th 520, 81 CR2d 669. By contrast, if a buyer fails to record the deed, subsequent bona fide purchasers or encumbrancers who record first will gain priority over the prior unrecorded deed. Wilson v Nichols (1940) 39 CA2d 527, 103 P2d 1007.

§15.87 C. Defects or Exceptions to Constructive Notice

Not every document recorded provides constructive notice. Surveys do not impart constructive notice, because a record of survey is not an instrument or a conveyance under CC §§1213, 1215. Stearns v Title Ins. & Trust Co. (1971) 18 CA3d 162, 95 CR 682. Similarly, recorded notices of default or notices of sale relating to nonjudicial foreclosures do not provide constructive notice. CC §2924b(f); Glavinich v Commonwealth Land Title Ins. Co. (1984) 163 CA3d 263, 209 CR 266.

Certain defects in a recorded document may preclude that document from providing constructive notice. For example, a deed that incorrectly describes the land it is intended to convey does not give constructive notice of the transfer of that land (Davis v Ward (1895) 109 C 186, 41 P 1010), nor would recording a forged instrument give constructive notice of its existence (Hopkins v Fresno County Abstract Co. (1918) 36 CA 699, 173 P 106). With respect to defects in the execution of an instrument, or in the certificate of acknowledgment or lack of a certificate, CC §1207 provides generally that, if otherwise properly recorded, such instruments give constructive notice 1 year after recordation, despite the defect.

Not all defects are caused by the parties. The county recorder may improperly index an instrument, with the result that the instrument provides no constructive notice. See Hochstein v Romero (1990) 219 CA3d 447, 268 CR 202. The recorder may be held liable for damages if the recorder acts willfully or negligently in recording or indexing a document. Govt C §§27203-27203.5.

D. Procedures for Recording

§15.88 1. Form of Instrument

Government Code §27361.6 requires a special format for documents to be recorded. The top 2½ inches of the first page is reserved for recording information. The left 3½ inches of that space is reserved for the name and address of the person requesting recordation and return of the document. (When the document is a deed conveying fee title, the name and address of the person to whom future tax statements are to be mailed must be stated in the left 3½ inches as well, although lack of this statement does not affect constructive notice. Govt C §27321.5.) The entire document must have ½-inch margins on each vertical side. Govt C §27361.6. See also §§10.8-10.12 on recording deeds.

The county recorder copies the original recorded documents and will, therefore, refuse to record illegible documents. Documents must be prepared on a quality of paper that will reproduce legibly. Common reasons that documents are rejected include small font size, already copied legal descriptions, blurred notary seal imprints, and site plans with cross-hatching or overlapping words and lines. Govt C §27361.6.

NOTE: Experimental programs are underway to test recording of digital images. Qualifying title insurers, licensed underwritten title companies, and specified state and federal governmental entities may record digitized images of a recordable instrument in lieu of a written paper document in the counties of Orange and San Bernardino. Effective January 1, 2000, other persons approved by the country recorders of those counties may also record digitized images. Govt C §§27279.1, 27279.3.

The content of a document must be written in English unless a certified translation is attached. Govt C §27293. The real property affected must be sufficiently described, either by a legal description in the document or by reference to another recorded document that contains such a description. If an instrument affects two parcels of real property, such as a deed granting an easement, both the benefited and burdened parcels must be described. CC §1468.

Government Code §27288.1 requires that the names of the owners of interests being transferred be the same as the names the owners used when the interests were acquired.

Source: Real Property/California Real Property Sales Transactions/15 Escrow and Closing the Sale/§15.89 2. Acknowledgments

§15.89 2. Acknowledgments

The recording statutes require that most documents to be recorded must contain an acknowledgment of the signature (Govt C §27287; see also CC §1188) of each person or persons whose real property is affected or alienated (Govt C §27288), i.e., each grantor, lessor, or mortgagor, but not a grantee, lessee, or mortgagee. The acknowledgment is a statement that the person purporting to have signed the document did in fact sign it. See CC §1185 for the requirements of acknowledgments, and see CC §1189 for a statutory form. Documents that are not "instruments" need not be acknowledged to be recorded. U.S. Hertz, Inc. v Niobrara Farms (1974) 41 CA3d 68, 116 CR 44 (notice of default under deed of trust not an "instrument").

Normally, acknowledgments are prepared by a notary public. See CC §1181. The notary may acknowledge the signature of an individual who provides the notary with satisfactory evidence that the person making the acknowledgment is the individual who is described in and who executed the instrument. CC §1185(a). The definition of "satisfactory evidence" includes not only the oath or affirmation of a credible witness personally known to the acknowledging officer or two credible witnesses whose identities are proven to the officer by "satisfactory evidence," but also certain documentary evidence, such as a California identification card or driver's license or a passport. CC §1185(b)(3). As of January 1, 2008, notaries may no longer use "personal knowledge" to establish identity.

PRACTICE TIP: The California Legislature amended laws relating to notaries and notarization of documents, which take effect January 1, 2008. One change, which affects everyone who uses a notary or seeks to record a document with a recorder's office in California, alters the required wording of the statutory form of acknowledgement. County recorders are likely to reject any document submitted for recording that does not contain the new wording. See CC §1189.

There is no constructive notice of the transfer of an interest of nonacknowledging parties. DuRoss v Trainor (1932) 122 CA 732, 10 P2d 763. However, lack of an acknowledgment required for recording purposes does not alter the enforceability of the document between the parties or against one having actual knowledge of its contents. Johndrow v Thomas (1947) 31 C2d 202, 187 P2d 681. Some documents, such as homestead declarations (CCP §§704.910-704.995), must be acknowledged to be valid. See CCP §704.930(b). Under CC §1207, a recorded instrument, otherwise valid, imparts constructive notice 1 year after it has been recorded, regardless of any defect in the acknowledgment.

A statutory form (CC §1189) or a substantially similar form of certificate of acknowledgment must be endorsed on or attached to the instrument. CC §1188. A certificate of acknowledgment taken in another place is sufficient in California if it is taken in accordance with the laws of the place where the acknowledgment is made. CC §1189(b).

PRACTICE TIP: Care must be taken to distinguish between an acknowledgment that complies with CC §1189 and a so-called witness acknowledgment that complies with CC §1195. The witness acknowledgment acknowledges the signature of a witness who observed the signing of the instrument, in which case both the signer and the witness must sign the instrument. A witness acknowledgment is not sufficient to prove the execution of a grant deed, mortgage, deed of trust, quitclaim deed, or security agreement. CC §1195(b).

Source: Real Property/California Real Property Sales Transactions/15 Escrow and Closing the Sale/§15.90 3. Place of Recording

§15.90 3. Place of Recording

Instruments or conveyances are recorded in the office of the county recorder in which the land is located. Govt C §24250.

To impart constructive notice, the instrument or conveyance must be recorded in the county (or counties, if the land is located in more than one) where the affected real property is situated. A certified copy of the recorded document can be recorded in any other counties in which affected property is located. CC §1213.

When the land is located in multiple counties, there is authority for the proposition that recording a document in one county will give constructive notice effective in the county of recordation regardless of the failure to record in other counties where the land is also situated. Votypka v Valentine (1919) 41 CA 74, 182 P 76.

© The Regents of the University of California

Source: Real Property/California Real Property Sales Transactions/15 Escrow and Closing the Sale/§15.91 4. Recorder's Procedure

§15.91 4. Recorder's Procedure

The county recorder collects statutory fees before a document may be recorded. Govt C §27361. County recorders also collect other fees, such as the documentary transfer tax, before recordation. See §10.11 on documentary transfer tax requirements. Certain instruments are exempt from the documentary transfer tax. Rev & T C §§11921-11930.

The county recorder's most important task is organizing each recorded document—called indexing—so that it may be found in a search of the official records. Although recorded documents usually contain a legal description of the property affected, the recorder indexes documents according to the names of the parties affected. The names are indexed and compiled into two lists: the grantor index includes the names of parties conveying, transferring, assigning, or suffering (in the case of an abstract of judgment) an interest in the property, and the grantee index includes the names of parties acquiring or claiming an interest. Because of the complexity of legal descriptions, any index of the property based on legal descriptions would be significantly less accessible than one based on names.

Thousands of instruments are recorded daily in California, so proper indexing is obviously crucial to finding a particular document. Accordingly, California courts have held that the conclusive imputation of constructive notice of the contents of a recorded instrument is only fairly applied when the instrument may actually be located by a search of the proper indexes. Hochstein v Romero (1990) 219 CA3d 447, 268 CR 202.

The grantor/grantee indexes provide constructive notice of documents recorded within the chain of title. For example, a party may record a document too soon. If a deed of trust is recorded before the trustor records its grant deed (as owner), the deed of trust will be outside the chain of title and provide no constructive notice. It would be a "wild" document. Far W. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v McLaughlin (1988) 201 CA3d 67, 246 CR 872. Of course, the deed of trust would still be valid between the parties to the document. For further discussion of wild documents, see California Title Insurance Practice, chap 4 (2d ed Cal CEB 1997).

PRACTICE TIP: Title companies do not search by the grantor/grantee index method. Rather, electronic searches are performed that retrieve documents posted to the property, usually according to assessor's parcel numbers. Thus, a wild document under the grantor/grantee system may be found and included in a preliminary report issued by the title company. Once observed, the wild document provides actual notice of it, even though it might not have provided constructive notice because of improper indexing or a defect in the document. Also, a deed of trust recorded without a legal description may be posted to the property by a street address or assessor's parcel number referenced within the deed of trust. Although arguably a defective document, its inclusion as an exception in a preliminary report would provide actual notice of its existence to those who read the preliminary report.

© The Regents of the University of California

§15.92 5. Timing of Recording

The time at which a document is deemed "recorded" differs for constructive notice purposes and the legal effectiveness of the document. An instrument is considered "recorded" when it is deposited for recordation in the recorder's office with the proper officer. CC §1170. A recorded document provides constructive notice of the conveyance "from the time it is filed with the recorder for record." CC §1213. Nevertheless, courts have held that a document must be physically copied in the proper book and indexed before it is "recorded" and therefore provides constructive notice. See Dougery v Bettencourt (1931) 214 C 455, 6 P2d 499; Cady v Purser (1901) 131 C 552, 63 P 844. On constructive notice, see §§15.86-15.87.

By contrast, recording that is intended to comply with a statutory requirement or that is an essential step in completing some act of the party constitutes a recording as of the date the instrument is filed. See Dougery v Bettencourt, supra; Cady v Purser, supra.

Because the recorder has been interpreted to be the agent of a grantee or mortgagee (see 13 Ops Cal Atty Gen 185, 187 (1949)), such a grantee or mortgagee has a duty to verify that the instrument which reflects the information intended to be recorded is properly recorded.

In one case, a court ordered the retroactive recordation of a claim of lien when a county recorder delayed recording a submitted document by improperly demanding additional fees before recording the document. Carpenters Health & Welfare Trust Fund v Shafer (1983) 146 CA3d 504, 194 CR 266. If the recordation had not been made retroactive to the date the document was submitted, which was the last day to timely file it, the claimant would have lost the right to foreclose on its claim of lien.

§15.93 E. Processing Documents; Disbursing Funds

Another important function of the escrow holder is to process and distribute documents submitted by the parties. As discussed in §15.27, the documents continue to belong to the party who deposited them until the time of closing. The escrow holder often receives complicated instructions about assembling and handling documents. In many transactions, the escrow holder is also asked to obtain signatures on the documents. Because of the contemplated title insurance policy, the escrow holder may insist on witnessing and acknowledging the signatures. All of these functions require that the parties deposit documents into escrow well before the expected closing date. Again because of the contemplated title insurance policy, the escrow holder may have to transfer documents to a title department or title insurer for review and handling before closing. After such review, the title insurer may require additional time to submit the documents to the county recorder for advance approval. If at any point the documents must be revised, the parties will need time to accomplish the revisions and obtain another round of approvals.

The escrow holder will use the funds on deposit to discharge liens, pay demands submitted, and pay the costs of escrow and title fees. This function is governed by the instructions of the parties and their title requirements. See §§4.134-4.135; for forms, see §§15.58, 15.69. If a party instructs the escrow holder to disburse funds to a nonparty on the basis of an assignment of that party's proceeds, and the escrow holder has knowledge of the assignment, the escrow holder will be liable to the nonparty for failure to follow the instructions in accordance with the assignment, even if the party attempts to cancel the instruction to pay. Builders' Control Serv. v North Am. Title Guar. Co. (1962) 205 CA2d 68, 22 CR 712.

Payoff demand statements received by the escrow holder will be paid and liens discharged in accordance with the parties' instructions.

© The Regents of the University of California

Source: Real Property/California Real Property Sales Transactions/15 Escrow and Closing the Sale/§15.94 F. Real Estate Commission

§15.94 F. Real Estate Commission

Real estate commissions are generally paid through escrow, but the escrow holder can only pay them to a broker. See Bus & P C §10138. The broker will then pay directly any agent that is involved.

Brokers often put irrevocable assignment language into their contracts to prevent the sellers from unilaterally instructing the escrow holder to pay lower commissions or no commissions at all. By adding the irrevocable assignment language, brokers are assured that they are parties to the escrow for the purpose of receiving their commission. Builders' Control Serv. v North Am. Title Guar. Co. (1962) 205 CA2d 68, 22 CR 712.

EXAMPLE: The California Association of Realtors® contract states that "Brokers are a party to the escrow for the sole purpose of compensation.... Buyer and Seller irrevocably assign to Brokers compensation specified in paragraphs..., respectively, and irrevocably instruct Escrow Holder to disburse those funds to Brokers at Close of Escrow...." Other real estate contracts contain language that is substantially similar. See §6.24.

Without further authorization from a party to the escrow, the brokers cannot cancel an escrow and the broker cannot amend an instruction unrelated to fees. A broker can only amend an instruction related to fees. The amendment must be approved by the other party to the escrow who has an interest in the broker fees: the seller. If the seller does not agree with the broker's amendment, the escrow holder is faced with conflicting instructions from two parties to the escrow.

If a seller instructs the escrow holder not to pay commissions or to pay reduced commissions when the purchase agreement contains irrevocable assignment language, a conflict exists between two parties to the escrow: the seller and the broker. The escrow holder cannot take sides when there is a conflict between any of the parties to the escrow, and must remain neutral. When a seller instructs the escrow holder not to pay a broker, the escrow holder should hold the funds pending mutual instructions from the parties (broker and seller) or a final court order regarding the funds. The escrow holder can also safely interplead the funds. On interpleader, see §15.98.

§15.95 G. Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act (RESPA)

The Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act (RESPA) (12 USC §§2601-2617) was enacted in 1974 to ensure that borrowers receive adequate and timely information on the costs of obtaining a loan. Its additional purpose is to protect borrowers from unnecessarily high costs associated with borrowing funds to purchase a home. 12 USC §2601. The goal of RESPA is to have effective advance disclosure of settlement costs (12 USC §2601(b)(1)), eliminate kickbacks or referral fees (12 USC §2607(b)(2)), reduce the amount that borrowers are required to place in a lender's escrow account to pay for real estate taxes and insurance (12 USC §2601(b)(3)), and prohibit the seller from forcing the buyer to use a specific title insurance company (12 USC §2608).

RESPA applies to federally related mortgage loans, which are those typically used to finance the purchase of a one-to-four-family structure. 12 USC §2602(1)(A). Business, commercial, and agricultural loans are not subject to RESPA requirements. 12 USC §2606(a)(1). In practice, however, the escrow holder generally provides the same forms in all transactions, including those exempt from RESPA, to provide a consistent and familiar manner of designating the debits and credits in the transaction.

RESPA requires the lender to provide the borrower with an estimated settlement statement, before the close of escrow to review at least 1 day before the closing. At closing, the escrow holder prepares a HUD-1 Uniform Settlement Statement and delivers it to the borrowers after closing. 12 USC §2603. The Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) recently amended the RESPA regulations (Regulation X), 24 CFR §§3500.1-3500.23. The amendments clarify the contents of the basic disclosure forms provided to the borrower and establish specific tolerances for increases in the loan costs that may occur between estimation and closing.

The Good Faith Estimate (GFE) (24 CFR §3500.7) provides a clear summary of loan terms and discloses specific estimates of the origination charges and the cost of settlement services for the borrower. A copy of the GFE is provided in App X. The basic terms of the loan (including amount, term, interest rate, prepayment penalty, balloon payment, negative amortization, and variable interest) are all set out. Any increase in the loan costs at closing must be within a specific tolerance. Under 24 CFR §§3500.7(e)-(f), the amount stated in the GFE for loan origination fees (when an interest rate is locked), credit charges, adjusted origination fees, and transfer taxes may not increase at closing.

Some costs are allowed to increase but, by no more than 10 percent. i.e., lender required settlement services (if the lender selected the provider), title insurance (if the lender selected the provider), and recording fees. For the costs that are allowed to increase by 10 percent, settlement service providers are allowed to use average costs for services that are not based on the value of the property or the loan, e.g., credit reports and courier fees. 24 CFR §§3500.8. If the lender can show that circumstances have changed, the GFE may be revised. If there are violations, the loan originator may cure by reimbursing the borrower within 30 days. 24 CFR §3500.7(i).

The new HUD-1 Settlement Statement form was designed to allow borrowers to easily connect the costs found on the GFE to the charges on the HUD-1 Settlement Statement. For a cost included on the GFE, the HUD-1 Settlement Statement specifically directs the borrower to the lines in the GFE that match the associated cost. A copy of the HUD-1 Settlement Statement is reproduced in App Y. The new forms must be used beginning January 1, 2010.

RESPA also requires the lender to provide the borrower with informational booklets regarding the fees to be charged. The specifics of what the booklet must include are set forth in 12 USC §2604. Lenders are not permitted to charge their borrowers for preparation of the truth-in-lending booklets, Uniform Settlement Statements, or escrow account statements. 12 USC §2610.

§15.96 H. Holdbacks

Sometimes parties to an escrow have issues that remain unresolved at closing. Frequently termite work, minor repairs, or leasebacks create situations that make the parties want the escrow holder to hold funds. The escrow holder may have to hold funds when there is a dispute among parties to the escrow regarding disbursal of proceeds. This frequently arises when there is a dispute regarding real estate commissions.

When there is a dispute about disbursement of funds, the parties may want the escrow holder to hold the funds until the dispute is resolved. Any holdback situation can result in protracted litigation or a hold of funds for an extended period of time. If there is a holdback, the parties have a common goal—to reach an agreement that will allow the escrow holder to pay the funds in a short period of time. For a form of supplemental escrow instructions for funds held, see App Z.

Instead of the escrow holder, the parties may select an arbitrator or mediator to hold the funds. Alternatively, some parties agree to deposit the funds in a joint bank account requiring both signatures for withdrawal. The funds may also go into an attorney's trust account in accordance with an agreement with the parties. The escrow holder will follow mutual instructions from the parties on where to deposit the funds. However, often the parties who are already in a dispute may not agree on escrow instructions regarding the funds. The escrow holder will then interplead the funds. See §15.98.

XII. FAILED TRANSACTIONS

§15.97 A. Cancellation of Escrow

When a transaction fails, the escrow holder will prepare cancellation instructions for the parties to sign that clearly state that the transaction is cancelled and provide for the return of the documents and deposits held by the escrow holder. Sometimes the cancellation instructions provide for the payment of various bills that the parties have incurred in connection with the contemplated transaction (e.g., termite inspections, appraisal fees, escrow fees). For a form of cancellation instructions, see App AA.

For a form provision regarding the effect of cancellation on deposits, see the California Association of Realtors® Residential Purchase Agreement and Joint Escrow Instructions, ¶14.E, in §6.24. Sometimes the general provisions contain terms that can be used to resolve a dispute on cancellation. See, for example, paragraph 10 of the general provisions in App S.

PRACTICE TIP: An attorney preparing a purchase agreement should include a provision specifying what will happen on cancellation. See, for example, §4.177. A clearly drafted contract makes it easier to avoid unresolved conflicts that can result in litigation. Even the best drafting cannot, however, prevent subsequent conduct of the parties that can result in waiver of significant terms. See Galdjie v Darwish (2003) 113 CA4th 1331, 7 CR3d 178, discussed in §15.59. See also Peak-Las Positas Partners v Bollag (2009) 172 CA4th 101, 90 CR3d 775 (affirming judgment of specific performance extending escrow), discussed in §4.149.

When an escrow holder is faced with conflicting instructions or a lack of instructions regarding deposited funds, the escrow holder has the option of interpleading the funds with the court. See §15.98.

Under Fin C §17421.5, licensed escrow holders may charge a fee for administering an escrow that has been postponed for at least 2 months or cancelled if certain requirements are met.

PRACTICE TIP: In Northern California, escrow instructions are often not signed until 3 days prior to close of escrow. If there is a cancellation of an escrow prior to signing the instructions, the cancellation fee may be vulnerable to challenge by the parties. On the differences in Northern and Southern California escrow procedures, see §15.8.

§15.98 B. Interpleader

There are times when the parties cannot reach an agreement to give the escrow holder a matching instruction to resolve a dispute regarding the disposition of funds and/or documents held in an escrow. If the parties cannot resolve their dispute, the escrow holder may file an interpleader. CCP §§386-386.6. The escrow holder's attorney will initiate a lawsuit by filing a complaint in interpleader and depositing the disputed funds and documents with the court.

After the escrow holder serves the interpleader complaint on the parties to the escrow who are disputing the disposition of funds and documents, the escrow holder brings a motion for an order to discharge the escrow holder from liability and to dismiss the escrow holder from the action. CCP §386.5. The escrow holder can be dismissed because the actual dispute is between the buyer and the seller (or other principals). As a neutral third party, the escrow holder is merely a stakeholder and has no interest in who succeeds in the action. By initiating the interpleader action and obtaining a discharge from further liability, the escrow holder avoids tort liability. Cantu v Resolution Trust Corp. (1992) 4 CA4th 857, 6 CR2d 151.

The escrow holder may recover its attorney fees and costs, which are deducted from the funds that have been interpled with the court. CCP §386.6. See, for example, paragraph 11 in App S.

§15.99 XIII. PRELIMINARY CHANGE OF OWNERSHIP REPORT

In 1984 the legislature enacted change-in-ownership reporting to aid the assessor's office in expediting reassessment of real property. In every real estate transaction involving the change in ownership of real property, the buyers must complete and send to the county recorder's office a preliminary change of ownership report (PCOR). Rev & T C §480.3. The PCOR is sent to the recorder's office concurrently with the document that evidences the change in ownership, usually a deed. If the buyer does not send a completed PCOR to the county recorder's office, the buyer is charged an additional recording fee of $20. Rev & T C §480.3(b). The PCOR is set forth in Rev & T C §480.4 and is reprinted in App BB.

This is a comprehensive checklist containing items beyond the normal scope of the attorney's duty. Some of the items will be undertaken by the client or a third-party professional (e.g., accountant or engineer). some items will be required in some transactions (e.g., acquisition of property to be developed, acquisition of tenanted property) but not in others. It is important for the attorney and the client to allocate responsibility among the various parties. Further, the scope of the attorney's due diligence obligations for each transaction should be specifically described in the attorney's retainer agreement. The attorney may wish to share this checklist with the client and to customize it for each transaction. For discussion of buyer's due diligence, see §§1.70-1.93. On seller's due diligence, see §§1.58-1.69.

In connection with the acquisition and contribution of Assignor's interest in the Property, Assignor desires to assign to Assignee and Assignee desires to accept the assignment of all of Assignor's right, title, and interest in and to the Intangible Property, and Assignee desires to assume all of Assignor's obligations, all on the terms and conditions set forth below.

NOW, THEREFORE, in consideration of the foregoing recitals and the mutual covenants and conditions contained in them, the parties agree as follows:

1. Assignment. Effective as of the date of this Intangible Property Assignment, Assignor assigns, transfers, and conveys to Assignee all of Assignor's right, title, and interest in and to the Intangible Property.

2. Acceptance. Assignee accepts the foregoing assignment and assumes all obligations under the Service Contracts and Equipment Leases to the extent these obligations relate to the period on or after the date of this Intangible Property Assignment.

3. Indemnity. Assignor shall indemnify, protect, and defend Assignee against and hold Assignee harmless from any and all losses, costs, damages, liabilities and expenses, including attorney fees, incurred by Assignee as a result of any claim of any third party arising with respect to an event or alleged default, action, omission, or negligence of Assignor or its employees, agents, guests, or invitees, occurring on or before the date of this Assignment in connection with any of the Intangible Property. Assignee shall indemnify, protect, and defend Assignor against and hold Assignor harmless from any and all losses, costs, damages, liabilities, and expenses, including attorney fees, incurred by Assignor as a result of any claim of any third party arising with respect to an event or alleged default, action, omission, or negligence of Assignee or its employees, agents, guests, or invitees, occurring after the date of this Intangible Property Assignment in connection with any of the Intangible Property.

4. Severability. If any term of this Intangible Property Assignment or its application to a person or circumstance shall to any extent be declared invalid or unenforceable, the remainder of this Intangible Property Assignment or the application of the term to persons or circumstances other than those to which it is invalid or unenforceable shall not be affected, and each term of this Intangible Property Assignment shall remain valid and enforceable to the fullest extent permitted by law.

5. Partnership. None of the terms and conditions of this Intangible Property Assignment shall create a partnership between the parties and their respective businesses or otherwise, nor shall it cause them to be considered joint venturers or members of any joint enterprise. This Intangible Property Assignment is not intended, nor shall it be construed, to create any third-party beneficiary rights in any person who is not a party to it, including other parties to the Contracts.

6. Attorney Fees. If a dispute arises concerning the performance of obligations under this Intangible Property Assignment or the meaning or interpretation of any provision of it, the party not prevailing in the dispute shall pay any and all costs and expenses incurred by the other party in establishing its rights under this Intangible Property Assignment, including costs and reasonable attorney and expert witness fees.

7. Successors and Assigns. This Intangible Property Assignment shall be binding on and inure to the benefit of the parties and their successors and assigns.

8. Governing Law. This Intangible Property Assignment shall be governed by and construed in accordance with the laws of the State of California.

9. Joint and Several. The respective representations, warranties, covenants, and obligations of Assignor and Assignee shall be joint and several as to each party comprising Assignor.

10. Exhibits. Exhibits A, B, C, and D attached to this Intangible Property Assignment are incorporated in this document by this reference.

11. Counterparts. This Intangible Property Assignment may be executed in any number of counterparts, all of which taken together shall constitute one and the same instrument. TENANCY-IN-COMMON AGREEMENT

This TENANCY-IN-COMMON AGREEMENT (this Agreement) is made and entered into this _ _[date]_ _ day of _ _[month]_ _, 1997, by and among _ _[name]_ _, _ _[name]_ _, and _ _[name]_ _ (hereafter referred to individually as an Owner and collectively as the Owners).

RECITALS

A. Concurrent with this Agreement the Owners have acquired fee title to that certain real property located in the City of _ _[name of city]_ _, _ _[name of county]_ _ County, State of California, commonly known as _ _[name]_ _ and more particularly described in Exhibit A attached hereto and incorporated herein by this reference (the Property). The Owners intend to and shall own their respective interests in the Property as tenants-in-common.

B. The Owners intend to operate and manage the Property _ _[primarily/exclusively]_ _ as their individual principal residences. This Agreement is the Owners' expression of their intention to establish and impose on the Property mutually beneficial limitations, restrictions, easements, covenants, and conditions, all of which are imposed as equitable servitudes pursuant to a general plan to provide for the proper and orderly ownership, operation, and management of the Property and of their respective ownership interests therein. All of the limitations, restrictions, easements, covenants, and conditions, shall run with the land and shall be binding on the Owners and their successors and assigns, and all parties having or acquiring any right, title, or interest in or to any part of the Property.

THEREFORE, in consideration of the mutual covenants and agreements set forth below, the Owners, collectively and individually, hereby agree as follows:

1. DECLARATION OF INTENTION. The Owners hereby declare that their relationship in and to the Property is that of tenants-in-common, expressly subject, however, to the terms and conditions set forth in this Agreement. Nothing contained in this Agreement shall be deemed to constitute the Owners as partners or joint venturers or to prohibit multiple Owners of a single Interest from holding title as between themselves in any manner they elect. The Owners do not intend by this Agreement to create a "subdivision" under any state or local statutes, ordinances, or regulations or other applicable law.

2. TERM. The effectiveness of this Agreement shall commence upon the execution hereof, and shall continue for a period of forty (40) years unless sooner terminated by the consolidation of the Property's ownership in a single Owner, the mutual agreement of the Owners, or by legal partition of the Property.

3. UNDIVIDED INTERESTS. The Owners' fractional undivided interests (each an Interest) in the Property as of the date of this Agreement are as follows:

Owner(s)	Interest
_____	_____%
_____	_____%
_____	_____%

Each Owner's Interest shall remain as set forth above regardless of any improvements or additions made to the Property.

4. PROPERTY RIGHTS

4.1 Property Division. The Property consists of the underlying land and all improvements located thereon and is divided as follows:

(a) Units. Each unit (Unit) consists of the airspace bounded by and contained within the joists, studs, and beams within the perimeter walls, floors, ceilings, windows, window frames, doors, and door frames and trim of such Unit, and includes the interior surface finishes of such components, including sheetrock, plaster, wallpaper, paint, panels, carpeting, or other finishes. Each Unit includes the utility installations located within its boundaries that exclusively serve the Owner thereof, including, without limitation: any appliances, hot water heaters, space heaters, air conditioning units, furnace, washer, dryer, cabinetry, and lighting fixtures. Bearing walls located within the interior of a Unit are Common Area, as defined below, not part of the Unit, except for the finished surfaces thereof. Fireplaces, chimneys, and flues are Common Area. A Unit does not include those areas and those things that comprise the Common Area. Each Unit includes both the portions of the building so described and the airspace so encompassed.

(b) Common Area. The remainder of the Property constitutes and shall be referred to herein as Common Area, and includes, without limitation: land; lawns, trees, shrubs, and all other landscaping; sidewalks, walkways, driveway areas, parking spaces and garages, fences, chimneys and fireplace flues, patios or decks (if any patio or deck extends out of the Unit boundary); the Property structure(s) (except for the Units); bearing walls, columns, girders, subfloors, roofs, slabs, and foundations; common stairways and hallways; reservoirs, tanks, pumps, motors, ducts, flues and chutes, and other central service equipment; conduits, pipes, plumbing, wires and other utility installations, wherever located, that service more than one Unit (except the outlets thereof when located within and servicing only a single Unit, and utility installations located entirely within a Unit, required to provide power, light, telephone, gas, water, sewerage, and drainage to only a single Unit); exterior sprinklers and sprinkler pipes, if any; and central television antenna or cable television installation, if any, all regardless as to location.

(c) Restricted Common Area. Portions of the Common Area, referred to as Restricted Common Area, are hereby allocated for the exclusive use of the Owner of the Unit to which they are either physically attached or assigned, including (a) the internal and external wiring and plumbing, pipes and conduits and utility installations designed to serve a single Unit; (b) any shutters, awnings, window boxes, doorsteps, porches and stairways connected thereto, exterior doors, door frames and hardware incident thereto, screens and windows, skylights, and other fixtures designed to serve a single Unit, but located outside the boundaries of such Unit; and (c) the yard, parking, storage or other spaces identified on the Property plan, attached hereto as Exhibit B and by this reference incorporated herein, by the number of the corresponding Unit, and all improvements therein, if any. Except as provided in this Agreement no other portion of the Common Area shall be Restricted Use Common Area.

4.2 Property Allocation. So long as an Owner is not in default under this Agreement _ _[she/he/they]_ _ shall have the right to exclusive use and possession for _ _[her/his/their]_ _ personal use of portions of the Property as follows:

Owner	Unit	Restricted Common Area
_____	_____	_____
_____	_____	_____

The Owners shall have joint possession of all other portions of the Property. Each Owner may use the Common Area in accordance with the purposes for which it is intended without hindering the exercise of or encroaching upon the rights of any other Owners, subject to the rights of each Owner in any Restricted Use Common Area. No Owner shall have the right to exclusive possession of the Property or any part thereof except as provided in this section 4.2.

5. GOVERNANCE

5.1 Membership. The Owners shall operate, manage, and govern the Property as an unincorporated association (the association). Every Owner shall automatically be a member of the association. Any transfer of title to an Owner's Interest (except a transfer solely for security for a loan) automatically transfers the membership to the transferee. _ _[Tenants who are delegated rights of use pursuant to section 8.4(b) below do not thereby become members, although the tenant and members of the tenant's family shall, at all times, be subject to the provisions of this Agreement.]_ _

5.2 Voting Rights. Each Unit shall have one (1) vote in the association, regardless if multiple Owners co-own a single Interest. The vote cast by any co-Owner of an Interest shall be conclusively presumed to be the vote cast by all Owners of that Interest.

5.3 Governance. Because the Property contains only three (3) Units, there shall be no requirement for formal meetings to vote on matters before the association, except that the association shall meet annually to adopt the budget described in section 7.3 below. _ _[Except as otherwise provided in this Agreement/All]_ _ powers and duties exercised by the association shall be exercised by the _ _[majority/unanimous]_ _ consent of the voting Owners. The association may, from time to time and subject to the provisions of this Agreement, adopt and amend written rules of general application to the Property (Rules). Such Rules may concern any subject or matter and shall be binding on all Owners, their families, and tenants. Any duly adopted Rule or amendment to the Rules shall become effective either immediately following the date of its adoption or such later date as the Owners may deem appropriate. A copy of the Rules, as they may from time to time be adopted, amended, or repealed, shall be mailed or otherwise delivered to each Owner.

6. MAINTENANCE AND REPAIRS

6.1 Common Area Maintenance. The Owners or their agents shall keep and maintain the Common Area, in good condition and repair, shall provide lighting and landscaping services as needed and shall cause all other acts to be done which may be necessary to assure the maintenance of the Common Area in first class condition and repair. The Owners shall maintain all utility installations, if any, located in the Common Area, except those maintained by utility companies. The Owners shall conduct a "base line" inspection of the Common Area within thirty (30) days after the date of this Agreement and thereafter shall inspect the Property annually in connection with the preparation of the Property's operating budget to determine the need for any such maintenance and repair.

The Owners shall not be responsible for any maintenance, repairs, or replacements of the Common Area caused by the willful or negligent acts or omissions of any Owner, or such Owner's family, guests, or tenants, the cost of which is not covered by any insurance policy. If the repair is covered by any Owners' blanket insurance policy, the association shall be responsible for making the repairs, and the Owner responsible for the damage to the Property shall pay any deductible pursuant to the insurance policy and any increase in the policy premiums resulting therefrom. The maintenance, repair, or replacement of any items excluded from coverage under such blanket policy shall be the responsibility of the Owner responsible for the harm. If the responsible Owner fails to maintain, repair, or replace such excluded items, or pay any costs described in this subsection, the association or any Owner shall do the maintenance, make the repairs or replacements, or pay such costs and be entitled to immediate reimbursement for the cost thereof from the responsible Owner as provided in section 16.2 below.

6.2 Limited Right of Entry. The Owners, their agents, or any Owner may enter any Unit whenever such entry is necessary to perform any maintenance, repairs, or construction for which the Owners are responsible. Such entry shall be made with as little inconvenience to the Owner occupying such Unit as possible, and only upon at least twenty-four (24) hours' prior written notice to the Owner, except in the case of an emergency.

6.3 Maintenance of Units. Each Owner shall maintain and repair his or her Unit at his or her sole expense, including all interior _ _[and exterior]_ _ Unit maintenance, painting, cleaning, and repairing, including that of all interior walls, floors, ceilings, fixtures, appliances, and appurtenances therein or thereto and maintaining all utility lines, plumbing, pipes, and conduits that serve his or her Unit exclusively.

6.4 Restricted Use Common Area Maintenance. Each Owner granted the use of any Restricted Use Common Area shall keep and maintain such area in good repair and in a neat, clean orderly and attractive manner, at his or her sole expense.

6.5 Alterations to Units. An Owner may improve or alter any improvements within the interior boundaries of his or her Unit at his or her sole expense, provided such improvement or alteration (a) does not impair the structural or acoustical integrity of such Unit or any other Unit in the Property, any easement or hereditament on the Property, or the utilities or other systems servicing the Common Area or any other Unit, (b) does not involve altering any Common Area, (c) complies with all applicable laws and regulations governing the alteration or construction of residential property, and (d) obtains the written consent of _ _[a majority of/all voting Owners]_ _. Any Owner that alters _ _[his/her/their]_ _ Unit as provided in this section 6.5 shall be solely responsible for the payment of all property tax increases, and insurance policy premium increases and all other costs for any insurance policy or policies obtained and maintained by the Owners arising from such alteration or improvement of the Owner's Unit. _ _[No Owner who alters or improves _ _[his/her/their]_ _ Unit as provided in this section shall be entitled to an adjustment of his or her Interest, but shall be entitled to reimbursement for all documented expenditures approved by the association for such alteration or improvement in accordance with Article 18 below.]_ _

6.6 Alterations of Common Area. No Owner shall, at his or her expense or otherwise, make any alterations or modifications to any Common Area improvements, or the exterior of _ _[his/her/their]_ _ Unit or any additions to such Unit that encroach into the Common Area, or _ _[his/her/their]_ _ Restricted Common Area without the prior written consent of all voting Owners.

7. OPERATION AND MANAGEMENT

7.1 Separate Expenses. At all times, each Owner shall be solely responsible for paying (a) all maintenance and repair costs, separately metered utilities, including, without limitation, all charges for water, gas, electricity, garbage, and telephone costs that relate exclusively to such Owner's Unit and Restricted Common Area, (b) all indebtedness secured by such Owner's Interest, and (c) all other expenses specifically described in this Agreement.

7.2 Common Expenses

(a) All expenses not separately allocated to individual Owners and their respective Unit and Restricted Common Area, as described in section 6.1 above, including, but not limited to, (a) all fire, liability, or other insurance premiums and charges relating to the Property; (b) all real and personal property taxes, assessments or other charges assessed against the Property; (c) all costs for repairs or replacement of any improvements, personal property, equipment, or fixtures that are part of the Common Area; and (d) except as provided herein, all other costs, charges, or expenses related to or incurred by the Owners with respect to the Property, shall, except as provided in section 6.5 above and unless otherwise agreed upon by all the Owners, be contributed to by each Owner in proportion to _ _[his/her/their]_ _ Interest and collected by the Owners as "Regular Assessments" as described below.

(b) Notwithstanding any provision in this Agreement to the contrary, each Owner shall pay _ _[his/her/their]_ _ share of all payments due and to become due on all indebtedness secured by a deed of trust to the entire Property. Such payment shall be paid and collected as part of the Regular Assessments described below. Each Owner's share of the payments due and to become due on the promissory note in favor of _ _[name]_ _ in the principal amount of _ _[number]_ _ Thousand Dollars ($_ _ _, 000.00) secured by a deed of trust against the Property shall be as follows:

Owner	Owner's Debt Share
_____	_____ %
_____	_____ %

The Owners shall review and, if necessary, revise each Owner's share of such indebtedness not less than semi-annually, to reflect each Owner's then current outstanding liability for such indebtedness.

7.3 Assessments. The Owners shall levy and collect assessments to defray all operating expenses, including all insurance premiums for coverage of the entire Property, payments on indebtedness secured by the entire Property, foreseeable expenses for the maintenance and repair of the Common Area, and reasonable reserves for the replacement of all Common Area improvements (Regular Assessments).

(a) Initial Assessments. Until January 1 of the year immediately following the Owners' execution of this Agreement, the Regular Assessments shall be the amount determined by the Owners. On or before the first business day of the first month immediately following the Owners' execution of this Agreement, the Owners shall prepare and distribute to each Owner a pro forma operating budget, estimating the total expenditures to be paid from the Property's operating account, including a reasonable reserve for contingencies and replacement of Common Area improvements for the remainder of the initial fiscal year.

(b) Subsequent Assessments. At least thirty (30) and not more than sixty (60) days prior to the beginning of the Owners' first complete fiscal year as Owners, and each fiscal year thereafter, the Owners shall estimate the total Regular Assessments for such year (including a reasonable reserve for contingencies and replacement of Common Area improvements, less any expected surplus from the prior year), and distribute a copy of a pro forma operating budget to each Owner. The Association shall assess the total of such charges to all Owners as the Regular Assessments.

(c) Regular Assessment Allocation and Payment. All Regular Assessments shall be allocated among each Unit as provided in section 7.2 above. Each Owner's Regular Assessments share shall be due on the first day of each _ _[month/calendar quarter]_ _. In the event an Owner fails to make his or her proportionate contribution for such Regular Assessments within five (5) days of the date such assessments are respectively due, the nondefaulting Owner(s) shall be entitled to collect a late fee equal to ten percent (10%) of such assessment in addition to invoking any of the remedies set forth in section 16.2 below.

(d) Special Assessments. Any time the Regular Assessments for any fiscal year are insufficient in amount due to extraordinary expenses not contemplated in the budget prepared for such fiscal year, then the Owners shall levy and collect a special assessment, applicable to the remainder of such year only, to defray, in whole or in part, any deficit which the Owners may incur with respect to the operation and management of the Property (Special Assessment). The Special Assessment shall be divided among, assessed against, and charged to each Owner and _ _[his/her/their]_ _ Unit in the same manner prescribed for the allocation of Regular Assessments as provided above. Special Assessments shall be due as a separate debt of each Owner and shall be payable in full to the association within such period as the association shall determine to be appropriate under the circumstances giving rise to the Special Assessment, subject to the subparagraph (c) above.

7.4 Annual Accounting. Within forty-five (45) days after the end of each fiscal year, the Association shall prepare and distribute to each Owner an accounting of Assessment receipts and disbursements for that fiscal year. If such accounting shows that a cash surplus exists in the operating account, the Owners shall vote as to whether to refund all or part of such surplus or as to whether such surplus shall be carried over to any future assessment periods to reduce any future Assessments.

7.5 Bank Accounts. All sums received or collected by the Owners from Assessments, together with any interest or late charges thereon, shall be promptly deposited in one or more insured checking, savings, or money market accounts opened in the names of all the Owners in a bank or savings and loan association selected by the Owners. All funds deposited in such account(s) shall be used solely for the benefit of the Property or distributed to the Owners.

Except for payments of interest on debts secured by the Property, withdrawals from any such account in excess of _ _[amount]_ _ Hundred Dollars ($_00.00) shall require the written consent of all Owners. In the event the Owners give such written consent, the actual withdrawals may then be made upon the designated signature of any one (1) of the Owners or such other representatives as the Owners may subsequently designate in writing. For purposes of determining whether unanimous consent for a withdrawal is required, all costs that relate to a single project must be aggregated. If the total cost of all amounts expended for such project then exceeds _ _[amount]_ _ Hundred Dollars ($_00.00), unanimous consent for the withdrawal shall be required.

7.6 Books of Account. At each annual meeting, the Owners shall designate one Owner among them to supervise the monthly collection of all Assessments, the deposit of such amounts to the Owners' mutual bank accounts, and the payment of Common Expenses, and to maintain the Property books and records.

8. USE GUIDELINES AND RESTRICTIONS

8.1 Plan of Development; Applicability; Effect. The Owners have created the Property as a residential development and, in furtherance of their and every other future Owners' interests, have in this Agreement established a general plan for the Property. The Property is subject to guidelines and restrictions governing land use, individual conduct, and uses of or actions upon the Property as provided in this Article 8. This Agreement and any Rules the Members may adopt in accordance with section 5.3 above, establish affirmative and negative covenants, easements, and restrictions (the Use Guidelines and Restrictions).

The Owners have prepared initial Use Guidelines and Restrictions that contain general provisions applicable to the Property, as set forth below. Based on these initial Use Guidelines and Restrictions, the association shall adopt the initial Rules, if any, at its initial organizational meeting or by the written consent of all Members.

8.2 Association's Power. The association shall implement and manage the Use Guidelines and Restrictions through the Rules that adopt, modify, cancel, limit, create exceptions to, or expand the Use Guidelines and Restrictions.

8.3 Owners' Acknowledgment. All Owners are subject to the Use Guidelines and Restrictions and are given notice that (a) their ability to use the Property or any portion thereof is limited thereby, and (b) the Owners may add, delete, modify, create exceptions to, or amend the Use Guidelines and Restrictions in accordance with section 8.2. By entering into this Agreement, each Owner acknowledges and agrees that the use and enjoyment and marketability of his or her Interest can be affected by these provisions and that the Use Guidelines and Restrictions and Rules may change from time to time.

8.4 Initial Use Guidelines and Restrictions

(a) Permitted Uses and Occupancy. The Property shall be used _ _[exclusively/primarily]_ _ for residential and related purposes in conformity with this Agreement and the requirements imposed by applicable zoning or other applicable laws. No Unit shall serve as the residence for or be occupied by more than _ _[number]_ _ (_ _) adults at any given time. This provision is not intended to prohibit occupancy by children.

(b) Right to Lease. Each Owner shall be entitled to lease _ _[his/her/their]_ _ exclusive occupancy area granted herein, _ _[and to all the income derived therefrom]_ _ provided: (i) _ _[a majority/all]_ _ of the nonleasing Owners shall approve a prospective tenant upon their review of and satisfaction with such tenant's standard form rental application, credit report, tax returns, and other information as the nonleasing Owners may reasonably request from the prospective tenant or leasing Owner, such approval not to be unreasonably withheld. Prior to executing a lease with such prospective tenant, the leasing-Owner shall provide the other Owners with written notice of the proposed rental or lease and the identity of the proposed tenant(s). Upon receipt of such notice, the other Owners shall have no more than 10 days to object in writing to such prospective tenant. If the nonleasing Owners fail to inform the leasing Owner of their objection to a prospective lessee and the reason for it in writing within the time provided, they shall be deemed to have consented to such lease; (ii) the lease (A) is in writing, (B) is for the leasing Owner's entire exclusive occupancy area, _ _[(C) directs the tenant to make all rent and other payments due the landlord under such lease directly to the Owners responsible for collecting Assessments,]_ _ and _ _[(C)/(D)]_ _ is made subject to this Agreement and any failure of the tenant(s) to comply with the terms of such documents shall be a default hereunder; (iii) such Owner complies with all applicable laws governing leasing of residential units; and (iv) a copy of the executed lease is provided to the Owners prior to the commencement of the lease term.

The leasing Owner or the association, as the case may be, shall comply with all applicable laws governing residential tenant evictions, and all expenses, including reasonable attorneys' fees, arising therefrom shall be borne solely by the leasing Owner either directly or as provided in section 16.2 below.

No Owner's exclusive occupancy area may be leased for any period less than _ _[number]_ _ _ _[months/years]_ _, provided, however, that so long as an Owner occupies his or her exclusive occupancy area as his or her principal residence, she or he shall be permitted to rent or lease such area for any shorter period of time while _ _[he or she is/they are]_ _ temporarily absent due to vacation, work-related travel, or medical or other emergency reasons. Nothing in this Agreement shall be construed to prohibit an Owner from sharing his or her exclusive occupancy area with a non-Owner roommate. Each leasing Owner shall provide his or her tenant with a current copy of this Agreement and all Rules promulgated by the Owners then in effect and shall be responsible for compliance by such tenant with all of the provisions of such documents during the tenant's occupancy and use of the Unit. Any Owner that leases or rents his or her Unit shall be responsible for the payment of all insurance policy premium increases and all other costs for any insurance policy or policies obtained and maintained by the Owners arising from such lease or rental of his or her Unit.

[Add the following paragraph if association requires security deposit from leasing owners]

An Owner that rents or leases _ _[his/her/their]_ _ exclusive use area shall deposit with the association a sum of money equal to _ _[dollar amount]_ _ and at all times maintain such deposit, as security for _ _[his/her/their]_ _ performance of all of _ _[his/her/their]_ _ financial obligations under this Agreement, including but not limited to the Owner's maintenance and repair obligations under Article VI above.

Notwithstanding an Owner's establishment and maintenance of such deposit, _ _[she/he/they]_ _ shall remain primarily responsible for the payment of all assessments and other financial obligations under this Agreement relating to such Owner and such Owner's interest; the association, in its sole discretion, may draw upon such deposit to offset any financial obligation incurred by such Owner with respect to the Property. Unless otherwise agreed upon by the Owners, all rents from a rented or leased Unit shall be credited towards and shall offset the financial contribution obligations of the Owner who could otherwise have occupied the rented unit.

Automobiles, motorcycles, campers, boats, trailers, commercial vehicles, and trucks are not to be parked within the Property.

(g) Activities Affecting Insurance. Except as otherwise provided in section 8.4(b) (leasing) above, nothing shall be done or kept within any Unit or within the Common Area that will increase the rate of any insurance policy relating thereto without the prior written consent of all voting Owners, and no Owner shall permit anything to be done or kept within his or her Unit or within the Common Area that would cause any improvements on the Property to be uninsurable against loss by fire or casualty or result in the cancellation of any insurance on any Unit or any part of the Common Area.

(h) Right to Sell. Each Owner shall be entitled to sell his or her Interest upon (a) compliance with the requirements of section 10.2 and Articles 13 or 17, as the case may be, and (b) approval by _ _[a majority/all]_ _ of the nonselling Owners of the prospective buyer upon their review of and satisfaction with such buyer's standard form loan application, credit report, tax returns, and any information the nonselling Owners may reasonably request from the prospective buyer or selling Owner, such approval not to be unreasonably withheld.

9. INSURANCE

9.1 Scope of Insurance Coverage. The Owners shall purchase, obtain and maintain the following types of insurance:

(a) Fire and Casualty Insurance. A blanket policy or policies of fire and casualty insurance for the full replacement value of the Property and all improvements thereon. The insurance shall be kept in full force and effect at all times and the full replacement value of the insured property shall be redetermined on an annual basis. Depending on the nature of the insured property and the requirements, if any, imposed by institutional mortgagees having an interest in such property, the policy maintained pursuant to this section 9.1 shall contain _ _[e.g., an agreed amount endorsement or its equivalent, an increased cost of construction endorsement or a contingent liability from operation of building laws endorsement or the equivalent, an extended coverage endorsement, vandalism, malicious mischief coverage, a special form endorsement and a clause to permit cash settlements for full insurable value in case of partial destruction]_ _. (b) Public Liability and Property Damage Insurance. A blanket policy or policies of comprehensive public liability and property damage insurance naming as parties insured all of the Owners. The policy or policies will insure each named party against any liability incident to the ownership and use of the Common Area and include, if obtainable, a cross-liability or severability of interest endorsement insuring each insured Owner against liability to each other insured Owner. The limits of such insurance shall not be less than One Million Dollars ($1,000,000) covering all claims for death, personal injury and property damage arising out of a single occurrence. Such insurance shall include coverage against water damage liability, liability for property of others, and any other liability or risk customarily covered with respect to projects similar in construction, location and use.

9.3 Annual Adjustment. The Owners shall annually review all policies of insurance maintained by the Owners and adjusted, if necessary, to provide such coverage and protection as the Owners may deem prudent or as reasonably required by any mortgagee with a first priority lien against the entire Property.

9.4 Other Insurance. Each Owner may at his or her option and sole expense (a) insure his or her personal property and all improvements added to _ _[his/her/their]_ _ Unit, provided that such improvements insurance shall be limited to the type and nature of coverage commonly known as "tenant's improvements," provided further that any improvements constructed with funds derived from a mortgage on the Owner's Unit are to be covered by the insurance carried under section 9.1 so long as such insurance is maintained by the Owners; (b) obtain liability insurance for the interior of _ _[his/her/their]_ _ Unit; and (c) obtain loss assessment coverage to supplement loss coverage under any policy of insurance obtained by the association. _ _[Except as provided in this section 9.4, no/No]_ _ Owner shall separately insure his or her Unit against loss by fire or other casualty covered by any insurance carried by the Owners. If an Owner violates this provision, any diminution in insurance proceeds otherwise payable under the association's policies that results from the existence of such other insurance will be chargeable to the Owner who acquired such other insurance.

10. DAMAGE OR DESTRUCTION; CONDEMNATION

10.1 Damage or Destruction

(a) Repair or Reconstruction

(i) If any portion of the Property's improvements is damaged or destroyed by fire or other casualty, such improvements shall be repaired or reconstructed substantially in accordance with the original as-built plans and specifications, modified as may be required by, and in accordance with, all applicable building codes and regulations in force at the time of such repair or reconstruction and subject to such alterations or upgrades as may be approved by the Owners, unless the cost of repair or reconstruction is more than fifty percent (50%) of the current replacement cost of all Property improvements, available insurance proceeds are not sufficient to pay for at least eighty-five percent (85%) of the cost of such repairs or reconstruction, and _ _[a majority of/all]_ _ voting Owners and the holder of any first priority mortgage vote against such repair and reconstruction.

(ii) If the improvements are to be repaired or reconstructed and the cost for repair or reconstruction is in excess of twenty-five percent (25%) of the current replacement cost of all the Property improvements, the Owners shall designate a construction consultant, a general contractor, and an architect for the repair or reconstruction. All insurance proceeds, Owners' monies allocated for the repair or reconstruction, and any loan proceeds obtained by the Owners for the repair or reconstruction shall be deposited with a commercial lending institution experienced in the disbursement of construction loan funds (the depository) as selected by the Owners. Funds shall be disbursed in accordance with the normal construction loan practices of the depository that require as a minimum that the construction consultant, general contractor, and architect certify within 10 days prior to any disbursement substantially the following:

(A) that all of the work completed as of the date of such request for disbursement has been done in compliance with the approved plans and specifications;

(B) that such disbursement request represents monies which either have been paid by or on behalf of the construction consultant, the general contractor or the architect and/or are justly due to contractors, subcontractors, materialmen, engineers, or other persons (whose name and address shall be stated) who have rendered or furnished certain services or materials for the work and giving a brief description of such services and materials and the principal subdivisions or categories thereof and the respective amounts paid or due to each of such persons in respect thereof and stating the progress of the work up to the date of such certificate;

(C) that the sum then requested to be disbursed plus all sums previously disbursed does not exceed the cost of the work insofar as actually accomplished up to the date of such certificate;

(D) that no part of the services and materials described in subsection (i) above has been or is being made the basis for the disbursement of any funds in any previous or then pending application; and

(E) that the amount held by the depository, after payment of the amount required in the pending disbursement request, will be sufficient to pay in full the costs necessary to complete the repair or reconstruction.

(iii) If the cost of repair or reconstruction is less than twenty-five percent (25%) of the current replacement cost of all the Property improvements, the Owners shall disburse the available funds for the repair and reconstruction under such procedures as the Owners deem appropriate under the circumstances.

(iv) The repair or reconstruction shall commence no later than 90 days after the date of such damage or destruction and shall be completed no later than 180 days after the commencement of reconstruction, subject to delays that are beyond the control of the party responsible for making the repairs. The Owner of any damaged or destroyed Unit immediately shall take such steps as may be reasonably necessary to secure any hazardous condition and to screen any unsightly views resulting from the damage or destruction.

(v) If the improvements are not repaired or reconstructed in accordance with the foregoing, all available insurance proceeds shall be disbursed among all Owners and their respective mortgagees in proportion to the respective fair market values of the Owners' respective Interest as of the date immediately preceding the date of damage or destruction as determined by a qualified appraiser selected by the Owners, after first applying the proceeds to the cost of mitigating hazardous conditions on the Property, making provision for the continuance of public liability insurance to protect the interests of the Owners until the Property can be sold, and complying with all other applicable requirements of governmental agencies. In the event of a failure to agree upon an appraiser, the appraiser shall be appointed by the then President of the _ _[name]_ _ County Bar Association.

(vi) If the Property is to be repaired or rebuilt in accordance with this Article 10 and either the damage to the Property is not covered under any insurance policy or the proceeds of any applicable insurance policy are not sufficient to pay all of the repair or rebuilding expenses, the Owners shall pay such noncovered expenses for the Common Area in proportion to their Interests, or an Owner exclusively shall pay such noncovered expenses for _ _[his/her/their]_ _ Unit or Restricted Common Areas, as the case may be.

10.2 Sale of Property

(a) If the failure to repair or reconstruct results in a material alteration of the use of the Property from its use immediately preceding the damage or destruction as determined by the Owners (a material alteration shall be conclusively presumed if repair or reconstruction costs exceed twenty-five percent (25%) of the current replacement cost of all Property improvements), the Property shall be sold in its entirety under such terms and conditions as the Owners deem appropriate.

(b) If the Property is sold, the sales proceeds shall be distributed to all Owners and their respective mortgagees in proportion to the fair market value of the Owners' respective Interests as of the date immediately preceding the date of damage or destruction as determined by the independent appraisal procedure described in section 17.2 below. For the purpose of effecting a sale under this section 10.2, each Owner agrees to cooperate with the other Owners to sell the entire Property for the benefit of the Owners. In the event the association fails to take the necessary steps to sell the Property as required hereunder within 60 days following the determination by the association of a material alteration, or if within 120 days following the date of damage or destruction the association has failed to make a determination as to a material alteration, any Owner may file a partition action as to the entire Property under Civil Code §1359, or any successor statute, and the court shall order partition by sale of the entire Property and distribution of the sale proceeds as provided in Article 18 below.

(c) Notwithstanding anything herein to the contrary, any Owner shall have a right of first refusal to match the terms and conditions of any offer made to the association in the event of a sale of the Property under this section 10.2, provided this right is exercised within 10 days of receipt of notice by such Owner of the terms and conditions of any offer to the Owners. If such Owner subsequently defaults on his or her offer to purchase, he or she shall be liable to the other Owners and his or her mortgagees for any damages resulting from the default.

10.3 Condemnation. In the event of a taking by eminent domain of any part of the Common Area, the proceeds of condemnation shall be allocated between all Owners equally in accordance with section 10.1 above, except that in the event of a taking of any portion of any Restricted Common Area, the proceeds shall be allocated exclusively to the Owner to whom such Restricted Common Area has been assigned under this Agreement.

11. REFINANCING

11.1 Refinancing. The Owners agree that no debt secured by a lien against the entire Property shall be refinanced unless approved by _ _[a majority of/all]_ _ the voting Owners, except as provided in this Article 11. The Owners shall cooperate to achieve a refinancing or loan add-ons, as the case may be, for any of the following purposes without the Owners' prior consent:

(a) Sale of an Owner's Interest within _ _[number]_ _ days.

(b) To pay off and remove the lien of any existing debt secured by a lien against the entire Property that will mature within _ _[number]_ _ days.

(c) To reduce all the Owners' monthly payment amounts on any mortgage secured by a lien against the entire Property, provided that the terms of any refinancing loan for such purpose shall include an annual percentage interest rate not less than _ _[number]_ _ point(s) below the existing loan's annual percentage interest rate, a term not less than _ _[number]_ _ years shorter than the existing loan's term, and substantially similar other terms in all other respects.

(d) To pay off and remove the lien of any Owner's seller-financing loan secured primarily by a lien against an Owner's Interest.

Owners' cooperation shall include submitting loan applications, granting lenders' reasonable requests for access to Owners' credit information, and providing copies of Owners' tax returns and such other information as lenders may reasonably require to approve a loan.

11.2 Refinancing Expenses. Refinancing expenses shall be allocated to Owners in proportion to their then-existing debt shares as provided in section 7.2 above, except that all expenses arising from a refinancing for the sole purpose of facilitating an Owner's sale of his or her Interest shall be borne exclusively by such selling Owner.

11.3 Assumable Loans. In connection with the refinancing of any loan secured by the entire Property, the Owners shall reasonably attempt to secure a loan that allows for substitution and may be assumable by subsequent purchasers of then-existing Owners' Interests.

12. RIGHT OF FIRST REFUSAL AS CONDITION PRECEDENT TO SALE OF OWNERSHIP INTEREST TO THIRD PERSON. No Owner shall have the right to sell, exchange, or otherwise transfer _ _[his/her/their]_ _ Interest, or any part thereof, except upon the following terms and conditions and under the following circumstances. An Owner's interest in the Property, or any part thereof, may be sold, exchanged, gifted or otherwise transferred as follows:

12.1 Other Owners. To another Owner or Owners.

12.2 Third Parties. To any other person or party subject to the following conditions:

(a) The ownership interest in the Property or any part thereof which the Owner (the Selling Owner) intends to sell, exchange, or otherwise transfer to a third person shall first be offered in writing (such written offer shall hereafter be referred to as the Offering Notice) to all other Owners (the Remaining Owners) at the stated price or exchange value at which the Interest is proposed to be sold or exchanged to such third person and on the proposed terms thereof. The Remaining Owners, collectively and individually, shall have a period of _ _[number]_ _ (_ _) days after the effective date of the Offering Notice (as determined in accordance with Article 23) in which to accept or reject said offer. If more than one Remaining Owner individually elects to buy the Selling Owner's Interest as provided in this section 12.2, the Selling Owner shall have the sole discretion to sell to any such Remaining Owner. In the event the Remaining Owners, or any of them, accept the offer, the purchase price shall be paid as specified in section 18.1. If no Remaining Owner elects to purchase the Selling Owner's entire Interest, or the part thereof proposed to be sold, within the _ _[number]_ _ (_ _)-day period herein provided, then said interest may be sold to third parties in accordance with the provisions of section 12.2(d) below.

[Add following paragraph if selling owner proposes to exchange interest]

(b) In the event the Selling Owner proposes to exchange the Interest, the exchange value to be credited for such Interest, together with the identity of the other property for which it is being exchanged and the terms and conditions of such exchange shall be set forth in the Offering Notice. In the event of such exchange, the Remaining Owners, collectively and individually, shall have the right to acquire the Selling Owner's Interest in exchange for other property with a purchase price or exchange value and terms equal to that set forth in said offer. If more than one Remaining Owner individually elects to exchange for the Selling Owner's Interest as provided in this section 12.2, the Selling Owner shall have the sole discretion to exchange _ _[his/her/their]_ _ Interest to any Remaining Owner. No Remaining Owner shall have the right to participate in the acquisition of the other property for which the Selling Owner's Interest is being exchanged other than for the purposes of effecting the exchange. The Remaining Owners shall cooperate to effect such exchange provided that such Remaining Owners bear no additional costs or expenses in excess of the acquisition price of the Interest to be so acquired.

[Continue]

[(c)] If the Remaining Owners, or any of them, accepts the offer, an escrow shall be opened at a responsible escrow company of the Remaining Owner(s)' choice for processing the purchase of the Selling Owner's interest and escrow shall close within _ _[number]_ _ (_ _) days after the effective date of the Offering Notice (as determined in accordance with Article 23) or within the time stated for close of escrow as set forth in such third party's offer, whichever is later. The title insurance premium and all other costs and expenses of escrow shall be borne and paid for by the respective parties in accordance with the custom and practice then prevailing in the City of _ _[name of city]_ _, _ _[name of county]_ _ County.

[(d)] Unless the interest offered for sale _ _[or exchange]_ _ has been purchased in accordance with the terms and procedures set forth above, the Selling Owner may sell _ _[or exchange]_ _ his or her entire Interest to any third person or party during a 3-month period next following the expiration of the _ _[number]_ _ (_ _)-day period referred to in section 12.2(a) above, but not at a price lower than the proposed price or on terms, including without limitation interest rate, maturity, and payments, more favorable to the purchaser than the proposed terms set out in the Offering Notice. After the expiration of the 3-month period, no portion of the Selling Owner's interest may be sold _ _[or exchanged]_ _ without the interest first being reoffered to the Remaining Owners in accordance with section 12.2(a) above.

12.3 Other Events Constituting Offers to Sell. Upon the occurrence of any of the events enumerated below, such event shall be deemed to constitute an offer by the affected Owner, or his or her executor, trustee, personal representative, or successor-in-interest, as the case may be, to sell his or her Interest to the other Owners, or any of them, at a price and on terms as described in section 12.4.

(a) The death of the Owner;

(b) The voluntary or involuntary filing of a petition in bankruptcy or for the protection under similar insolvency laws or any general assignment of assets for the benefits of creditors; or

(c) The entry of a final decree of divorce or dissolution of marriage that transfers the Owner's Interest to any person not a party to this Agreement (provided, however, that the Owner whose Interest was so transferred shall have a first option for 10 days from entry of such decree to purchase his or her former Interest, prior to the right of first refusal held by the other Owner(s) pursuant to this Article 12).

12.4 Notice; Appraisal

(a) Upon an Owner's death, his or her personal representative or successor-in-interest or, in the event of an Owner's bankruptcy or proposed court-ordered sale of his or her interest pursuant to a final decree of marital dissolution, the Owner himself or herself, shall give written notice to the Remaining Owner(s) of such Owner's demise, bankruptcy, or forced sale pursuant to a final decree of marital dissolution, as the case may be, and the Remaining Owner(s), or any of them, shall have the right to purchase the Interest at the Specified Purchase Price as defined in this subsection by giving written notice to the personal representative, successor-in-interest, Owner, or trustee in bankruptcy, as the case may be, within 30 after their receipt of the notice required by this section 12.4.

(b) The Specified Purchase Price for occurrences under section 12.3 shall be the then current fair market value of the Interest, less the amount of the Selling Owner's or deceased Owner's share of any debt secured by the Property as described in section 7.2(b) above, and the amount of any money advanced to the Selling Owner or the deceased Owner by the purchasing Owner, as provided in section 16.2 below. If the parties cannot agree on the fair market value, then within 15 days of a written demand by either party, the parties shall either: (a) jointly appoint an appraiser for the purpose of determining the fair market value or (b) failing a joint action, each separately designate an appraiser. In the latter case, within 5 days of their appointment, the designated appraisers jointly shall designate a third appraiser, whose determination of the Interest's fair market value shall be binding and conclusive. The failure of either party timely to appoint an appraiser shall be deemed an express approval of the other party's appraiser and such appraiser's appraisal shall be the fair market value. The fees of the appraiser(s) shall be treated as an item of the regular expenses and shall be paid in equal shares by the parties.

12.5 Multiple Purchasing Owners. In the event that more than one Remaining Owner exercise their rights to purchase a Selling Owner or deceased Owner's Interest under this Article 12, then the Selling Owner, or his or her executor, trustee, personal representative, or successor-in-interest, as the case may be, in his or her sole discretion may choose from among such Owners, provided that the selected Owner complies in all respects with the terms under this Article 12 for purchasing such Interest.

13. SALE OR EXCHANGE OF ENTIRE PROPERTY

13.1 Generally. Except as expressly provided herein, the entire Property, or any specific portion thereof, may be sold or exchanged only upon the written vote or consent of all the Owners. Each of the Owners hereby covenants and agrees to execute all documents, including grant deeds, as shall be required to effect any sale, refinance or exchange required hereunder or following such approval.

13.2 Division of Proceeds on Sale. The Owners agree that proceeds from any sale of the Property or any specific portion thereof shall be divided among them as specified in Article 18, below.

14. EFFECT OF TRANSFER. Upon the sale or other transfer to any person or party of any Owner's Interest, or any part thereof, as provided in this Agreement, the transferee or transferees shall become a tenant-in-common with the remaining Owners and their rights, interests, and obligations in and to the Property and the allocation of the proceeds therefrom shall be governed and determined in accordance with Article 18 below. Each Owner who acquires an Interest shall be personally liable only for obligations attributable to such Owner that become due and payable following the Owner's acquisition of the Interest, and shall not be personally liable for delinquent obligations of prior Owners unless the new Owner expressly assumes the personal liability; provided, however that the lien for such unpaid assessments shall remain, and if unpaid by the new Owner, may be foreclosed upon as provided in this Agreement.

15. ENCUMBRANCE OF OWNERSHIP INTERESTS. Each Owner covenants and agrees that he or she shall not encumber, hypothecate, mortgage, pledge, assign, or otherwise alienate for security purposes _ _[his/her/their]_ _ Interest without first obtaining the prior written consent of _ _[a majority of/all]_ _ the other Owners. Any such lien, encumbrance, mortgage, pledge, judgment, or other charge placed against the Property without such consent shall be removed from the Property by such Owner within 30 days from the date it is placed on the Property. Failure to remove the same within 30 days shall constitute a material breach of this Agreement and the nonbreaching Owner may, at its option and at the sole cost and expense of the breaching Owner, immediately pay such monies or take such other actions as may be necessary to remove such lien or encumbrance. Any sums so paid, together with all costs incurred in removing such liens, including reasonable attorney fees, shall be regarded as a loan to the Defaulting Owner, enforceable and repayable as set forth in section 16.2, below.

16. DEFAULTS AND REMEDIES

16.1 Defaults. The following events shall be deemed a default (Default) if not cured within 7 days (except if the cure shall reasonably require more than 7 days and the defaulting Owner has commenced action to cure the default within such time) of the defaulting Owner's receipt of written notice from a nondefaulting Owner:

(a) An Owner's failure to pay in full when due _ _[his/her/their]_ _ share of any Regular or Special Assessments _ _[for any 2 consecutive months or any cumulative period of 4 months]_ _.

(b) An Owner's failure within 30 days after receipt of written demand from the Owners or any of them to remove any involuntary lien or encumbrance against the Property or to bond against such lien or encumbrance arising from action by the defaulting Owner.

(c) An Owner's willful and persistent breach of any other financial obligations under this Agreement.

16.2 Remedies. In addition to all other remedies permitted by law or under this Agreement, Owners or any Owner, as the case may be, that are in compliance with the terms and provisions of this Agreement (a Nondefaulting Owner) shall have the remedies described in this section 16.2 against an Owner who commits a Default (a Defaulting Owner). For all other violations of this Agreement, a Nondefaulting Owner shall have the remedies provided in Article 24 below.

(a) Advance of Funds by Nondefaulting Owner. The Nondefaulting Owner shall have the right, but not the obligation, to advance money owing by the Defaulting Owner. The amount of such advance shall constitute a loan to the Defaulting Owner and shall bear interest at the rate of the Bank of America NT & SA (San Francisco branch) reference rate in effect on the date of advancement plus three percent (3%), or the maximum legal rate, if less, from the date of advancement until paid in full.

(b) Assignment of _ _[Reserve Funds/Rents, Issues, and Profits]_ _. Any such advance shall be due and repayable upon demand of the advancing Nondefaulting Owner. Unless repaid on demand, any such advance, together with interest as set forth above, shall, at the option of the Nondefaulting Owner, be deducted and repaid from _ _[the Defaulting Owner's contribution to the Owner's reserve account, if any, which the Defaulting Owner shall immediately restore/any rents, issues and profits of the Property, if any, otherwise distributable to the Defaulting Owner]_ _.

(c) Security for Advances. The Nondefaulting Owners shall have a lien upon the ownership interest of the Defaulting Owner in the Property to the extent of such advances and interest; provided, however that such lien shall not be perfected and may not be foreclosed or otherwise enforced until recording of a Notice of Lien in the office of the County Recorder of _ _[name]_ _ County. Said notice shall state the name of the Defaulting Owner, the amount of the advance, together with the interest, costs and reasonable attorneys' fees, and a description of the property against which the lien has been assessed. Each lien shall secure interest on any unpaid advance or assessment and shall likewise secure costs of suit and reasonable attorney fees to be fixed and awarded by the court in the event any action or suit is brought to collect such charge.

(d) Subordination of Lien. The lien of each of the advances or assessments provided for under this section 16.2 shall be subordinate to the lien of any bona fide first or second mortgage(s) or first or second deed(s) of trust now or hereafter placed upon the Defaulting Owner's ownership interest subject to advances or assessments; provided, however, that such subordination shall apply only to the advances or assessments which have become due and payable prior to the sale of the Defaulting Owner's interest pursuant to a decree of foreclosure of any such mortgage or deed of trust or pursuant to a power of sale in such mortgage or deed of trust.

(e) Notice of Default. Any advance not repaid or assessment not paid within 15 days after the due date shall be deemed to be in default and shall bear interest from the due date at the rate of ten percent (10%) per annum and the Nondefaulting Owner may bring an action at law against the Defaulting Owner, who shall be personally obligated to pay the same, or may foreclose the lien against the Defaulting Owner's ownership interest in the Property. No action shall be brought to foreclose the lien securing any advance or assessment under this section 16.2 less than 90 days following the mailing of a Notice of Lien described in section 16.2(c) above signed by the Nondefaulting Owner and recording of a copy of such notice in the Office of the Recorder of _ _[name]_ _ County.

17. RIGHT TO PURCHASE AS CONDITION PRECEDENT TO PARTITION. Each Owner shall retain all of his or her right as a tenant-in-common to unilaterally seek and obtain a partition and sale of the Property, and to otherwise act unilaterally with respect to his or her Interest therein except as expressly provided for in this Agreement; subject, however, to the satisfaction or waiver by the other Owners of the following conditions precedent:

17.1 Offer to Nonelecting Owners. In the event that any Owner(s) elects to have the Property partitioned and sold, such Owner(s) (the Electing Owner) shall first be required to offer to sell _ _[his/her/their]_ _ entire Interest in the Property to the other Owners (the Nonelecting Owner) as a condition precedent to the institution of legal action for partition and sale. Said offer shall be made in writing to all the Nonelecting Owners and shall contain the price and terms on which said Property is being offered. The Nonelecting Owners, collectively and individually, shall have _ _[number]_ _ (_ _) days after the effective date of said offer (as determined in accordance with Article 23) within which to elect to purchase (or acquire by exchange) the Electing Owner's interest in the Property. The election to purchase or acquire by exchange shall be delivered to the Electing Owner in writing prior to the expiration of said _ _[number]_ _ (_ _)-day period and said election shall specify whether the purchase price shall be at the price stated in the offer or the fair market value of the Property as determined by appraisal pursuant to section 17.2. If there are more than one offer from individual Nonelecting Owners, the Electing Owner shall have the sole discretion to accept an offer from among the Nonelecting Owners.

17.2 Appraisal Procedure. If the Nonelecting Owner chooses to purchase the interest of the Electing Owner based on appraisal, such appraisal shall be made using a single qualified M.A.I. appraiser mutually agreed upon by the parties. If the parties cannot agree on a single appraiser within 15 days of the effective date (as determined in accordance with Article 23) of the Nonelecting Owner's notice of purchase, then each party shall select one (1) appraiser so qualified within 15 days thereafter and the two (2) appraisers so selected shall then select a single appraiser (the Designated Appraiser) similarly qualified within 15 days following their designation. The Designated Appraiser shall make an independent appraisal of the fair market value of the Property within 30 days from the date of his or her appointment.

17.3 Binding Effect of Price Election. In the event that the Nonelecting Owner elects to purchase the Interest of the Electing Owner in lieu of partition at the price based on the net sales price established by appraisal, rather than that set forth in the Electing Owner's initial offer to sell, this election shall be binding regardless of whether the resulting price is greater or lesser than the initial offered price.

17.4 Payment of Purchase Price. In the event that the Nonelecting Owner elects to purchase (or acquire by exchange) an offered Interest in the Property, an escrow shall be established at any responsible title company selected by the purchaser, and escrow shall close within _ _[number]_ _ (_ _) days of the election of a Nonelecting Owner to purchase (or acquire by exchange) such Interest. Unless the parties otherwise agree, the purchase price for such Interest shall be paid in cash at the time of purchase. The title insurance premium and all other costs and expenses of escrow shall be borne and paid for by the respective parties in accordance with the custom and practice then prevailing in the City of _ _[name of city]_ _, _ _[name of county]_ _ County, provided that any additional costs incurred to effect an exchange shall be paid by the party on whose behalf they are incurred.

17.5 Failure to Purchase Entire Interest. If no Nonelecting Owner elects to purchase the Electing Owner's entire Interest, the Electing Owner shall then have the right to immediately and without further notice take all such steps as shall be necessary to effect a court-ordered partition and sale or exchange of the Property.

18. PROCEEDS FROM SALE OF PROPERTY

18.1 Interest. An Owner who sells _ _[his/her/their]_ _ Interest as provided in this Agreement, shall be entitled to all proceeds realized from such sale less (a) the balance as of the sale date of any liens or encumbrances against or allocable to the Interest of such Owner as provided in this Agreement, the amount of such lien or encumbrance shall be paid to the association or other Owners individually, as the case may be; and (b) all expenses for inspections, repairs to the Owner's Unit and/or Restricted Common Area, refinancing or loan assumption fees, and other closing expenses arising from such sale.

18.2 Entire Property. The Owners agree that upon the sale of the entire Property, and following repayment of the outstanding principal and interest on all indebtedness secured by blanket liens on the Property, the balance of proceeds, if any, shall be divided among the Owners in proportion to their respective Interests, except that an Owner's share shall be (a) reduced by the balance as of the date of the sale of any liens or encumbrances against or allocable to the Interest of such Owner as provided in Article 16 and the amount of such lien or encumbrance shall be paid to the lienholder Owner(s) _ _[; and (b) if the Owners' documented and approved relative expenditures for alterations or improvements to their respective Unit or Restricted Common Area as provided in Article 6 above are unequal, increased by the amount, if any, by which such Owner's approved expenditures exceed the other Owners' lowest approved expenditures for such alterations or improvements]_ _. In addition, all other costs and expenses allocated to the Owners in connection with such sale, including, but not limited to, escrow costs, title insurance premiums, and transfer taxes, shall be divided between the Owners in proportion to their respective Interests.

19. ATTORNEY FEES AND COSTS. If any party hereto institutes any legal action or arbitration to enforce or interpret this Agreement, or for damages for any alleged breach hereof, the prevailing party in such proceeding shall be entitled to reasonable attorney fees in addition to all other recoverable costs and damages.

20. GOVERNING LAW. This Agreement shall be subject to, governed by, and construed in accordance with the laws of the State of California.

21. AMENDMENT. This Agreement may be amended in whole or in part only by mutual written agreement of all of the Owners. Any amendment of this Agreement shall be dated, acknowledged, and recorded, and shall be labeled "Amendment to Tenancy-In-Common Agreement," and if, and to the extent, any conflict arises between the provisions of any earlier document or documents, the most recent duly executed amendment shall be controlling.

22. INDEMNITY. Each Owner shall indemnify and hold harmless each of the other Owners from any and all expense and liability resulting from or arising out of any negligence or misconduct on his or her part to the extent that the amount exceeds the applicable insurance carried by the Owners on the Property.

23. NOTICES. Notices, demands, and acceptances required or permitted to be given hereunder shall be in writing and shall be sent personally delivered or by registered or certified mail, return receipt requested, postage prepaid, to the Owners' Units or such other address as an Owner may designate in writing to the other Owners. Such notice shall be deemed delivered and effective upon personal delivery or, if mailed, 48 hours after the postmark thereon.

24. DISPUTE RESOLUTION. Except as provided in Article 16 and actions for injunctive relief, to compel arbitration, or for unlawful detainer, any controversy, dispute, or claim arising out of, in connection with, or in relation to the interpretation, performance, or breach of this Agreement shall be resolved, at the request of any Owner, as follows:

24.1 Mediation. Before instituting any arbitration relating to the rights and/or duties of the Owners under this Agreement, other than the payment or collection of any assessments, the Owner that desires to initiate such action (the Complainant) must make a good faith attempt to mediate such dispute in accordance with this section. The Complainant shall send the other party(ies) (the Respondent(s)) written notice of the nature of the dispute, the facts giving rise to such claim, and the Complainant's desire to mediate the matter (the Mediation Notice). The Mediation Notice shall name a mediator (who shall have at least 3 years' experience mediating real estate disputes in _ _[name]_ _ County and no personal or business relationship with the Complainant). The parties shall share the cost of initiating and conducting mediation equally. Within 7 days of Respondent's receipt of the Mediation Notice, Respondent shall inform Complainant in writing if Respondent does not agree with Complainant's choice of mediator (the Rejection Notice). Such Rejection Notice shall include the name of Respondent's choice of qualified mediator as provided in this section 24.1. Complainant and Respondent's mediators shall then select a third qualified mediator to hear the dispute. Within 30 days after the final mediator is chosen, the parties shall schedule and attend a mediation session and attempt in good faith to resolve their dispute. If the mediation does not resolve the dispute or if the Respondent refuses to attend such mediation, the Complainant may commence arbitration as provided below. The requirements of this provision shall not apply under circumstances where the Complainant would be entitled to injunctive or declaratory relief.

24.2 Arbitration. In case of any claim or dispute between Owners that relates to the rights and/or duties of the Owners under this Agreement, the dispute shall be submitted to, and conclusively determined by binding arbitration conducted by a retired judge from the panel of JAMS/Endispute, Inc., appointed pursuant to the provisions of California Code of Civil Procedure §638(1). The parties intend this general reference agreement to be specifically enforceable in accordance with said §638(1). If the parties cannot agree upon a member of the JAMS/Endispute panel, one shall be appointed by the Presiding Judge in _ _[name]_ _ County. The arbitrator shall award costs and attorney fees to the prevailing party _ _[and shall have the authority to order a sale of the Property in accordance with Code of Civil Procedure §872.820 to effectuate any remedy provided in this Agreement]_ _. The provisions of this section 24.2 shall not preclude an Owner from seeking injunctive or other provisional or equitable relief to preserve the status quo pending the parties' resolution of their dispute, and the filing of an action seeking injunctive or other provisional relief shall not be construed as a waiver of that Owner's arbitration rights.

None of the foregoing provisions of this Article 8 shall limit or affect any other rights or remedies available to Buyer at law or in equity in the event of a default by Seller under this Agreement. In addition to all other rights or remedies available to Buyer at law or in equity, Buyer is hereunder given the right of specific performance in the event of a default by Seller in the performance of its obligations under this Agreement.

8.3 Default of Buyer. SHOULD BUYER DEFAULT IN ITS OBLIGATIONS TO PURCHASE THE PROPERTY UNDER THE TERMS OF THIS AGREEMENT, BUYER AND SELLER AGREE THAT IT WOULD BE IMPRACTICAL OR EXTREMELY DIFFICULT TO FIX ACTUAL DAMAGES AND THAT THE DEPOSIT CONSTITUTES A REASONABLE ESTIMATE, UNDER THE CIRCUMSTANCES EXISTING AT THE TIME THIS AGREEMENT IS MADE, OF THE DAMAGES SELLER WOULD SUSTAIN BECAUSE OF SUCH DEFAULT. IN THE EVENT OF ANY SUCH DEFAULT, SELLER SHALL RETAIN THE DEPOSIT, AND ANY INTEREST ACCRUED THEREON AS LIQUIDATED DAMAGES. 2. Execution & Delivery of Escrow Instructions

These instructions may be executed in counterparts and said counterparts together will constitute one and the same instrument. In the event that the parties hereto utilize facsimile or electronically transmitted instructions to Escrow Holder, said parties hereby instruct Escrow Holder to rely upon such instructions as if they were originals. Any amendments and supplements to these instructions must be in writing and shall only be effective when executed and delivered to Escrow Holder. Escrow Holder shall not be concerned with nor have any obligations with respect to items designated as memoranda in these instructions or with any other agreement or contract between the parties to this escrow.

3. Deposit of Funds

(i) All funds received in this escrow will be deposited with other escrow funds in one or more non-interest-bearing escrow accounts of Escrow Holder in a financial institution selected by Escrow Holder. Escrow Holder shall not be responsible and shall have no liability for any delay in closing this escrow if the funds deposited in this escrow are not available for immediate withdrawal as a matter of right following deposit in such financial institution.

(ii) You have the opportunity to earn interest on the funds you deposit with us through a deposit account arrangement that Escrow Holder has established with one of its financial institutions. The interest rate for these accounts varies between financial institutions, fluctuates periodically based on market conditions and other factors, and may change prior to or during the time your funds are on deposit. You will not have an opportunity to earn interest on any funds deposited by a lender.

(iii) If you elect to earn interest through this special account arrangement, Escrow Holder will charge you an additional fee of $35.00 for the establishment and maintenance of the account. This fee compensates Escrow Holder for the costs associated with opening and managing the interest-bearing account, preparing correspondence/documentation, transferring funds, maintaining appropriate records for audit/reconciliation purposes and filing any required tax withholding statements. It is important that you consider this cost in your decision since the cost may exceed the interest you earn. If you are interested in having your funds deposited in an interest-bearing account, please contact your escrow officer.

(iv) If you do not elect to have your funds deposited in an interest-bearing account, your funds (together with any funds deposited by a lender) will be held in Escrow Holder's general escrow trust account. The general escrow trust account is restricted and protected against claims by third parties or creditors of Escrow Holder. Escrow Holder and/or its parent company may receive certain direct and indirect financial benefits from the financial institution as a result of maintaining the general escrow trust account. These benefits may include, without limitation, credits allowed by such financial institution on loans to Escrow Holder and/or its parent company and earnings on investments made with the proceed of such loans, as well as accounting, reporting and other services and products of such financial institution. Escrow Holder shall have no obligation to account to the parties to this escrow in any manner for the value of, or to pay to any party, any benefit received by Escrow Holder and/or its parent company. Any such benefits shall be deemed additional compensation of Escrow Holder for its services in connection with this escrow. Some or all of these benefits may be deemed interest due you under California Insurance Code Section 12413.5. As indicated above, you may elect to have your funds placed in a separate, interest-bearing account and receive the benefits therefrom, but you will be required to pay Escrow Holder an additional fee for this service. Alternatively, you may leave your funds in the general escrow trust account and thereby authorize Escrow Holder to keep the benefits it and/or its parent company receives from the financial institution. In either event, you understand and agree that Escrow Holder and/or its parent company may receive and retain for their sole benefit any and all benefits derived from the general escrow trust account prior to the deposit of your funds in an interest-bearing account and following the withdrawal of your funds from such interest-bearing account (normally two business days prior to the close of escrow).

(v) All parties depositing funds in connection with this escrow are hereby notified that the funds so deposited are insured only to the limit provided by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

(vi) Funds deposited by a lender are ordinarily deposited to escrow one or two days prior to closing. You should be aware that your lender may begin charging interest on your loan from the date loan funds are deposited into Escrow Holder's escrow trust account.

4. Good Funds Law – California Insurance Code §12413.1

All parties are aware and understand that California Insurance Code §12413.1 mandates that funds deposited into an escrow must be collected and available for withdrawal PRIOR TO DISBURSEMENT. The determination of the availability of funds is set forth as follows:

(i) CASH AND ELECTRONIC TRANSFERS ("wired funds") are available for SAME DAY disbursement.

(ii) CASHIER'S CHECKS AND CERTIFIED CHECKS are available for disbursement THE NEXT BUSINESS DAY;

In order to avoid unnecessary delays of two to seven days, or more, please use wire transfers, cashier's checks or certified checks whenever possible.

5. License of Escrow Holder

Escrow Holder is licensed by the California Department of Insurance to act as an underwritten title company, or if Escrow Holder's name includes the word "Insurance", Escrow Holder has a Certificate of Authority issued by the California Department of Insurance to transact the business of title insurance.

6. Prorations

All adjustments and prorations called for in this escrow shall be made on the basis of a thirty (30) day month, unless otherwise instructed in writing.

7. Sufficiency, Validity, Authority, etc. of Documents

Escrow Holder shall not be responsible or have any liability with respect to the sufficiency or correctness as to form, manner of execution, or validity of any document deposited in this escrow, nor as to the identity, authority or rights of any person executing the same. Escrow Holder's duties hereunder shall be limited to the proper handling and disbursement of funds deposited in this escrow and the proper safekeeping and delivery of such documents received by Escrow Holder, in accordance with the written instructions given to Escrow Holder in this escrow in which all parties have concurred.

8. Conveyance and Vesting

Escrow Holder is instructed to draw a Grant Deed, using any standard form, conveying title from Seller to Buyer, with Buyer's legal vesting. Buyer acknowledges that Escrow Holder cannot give advice as to vesting, and understands that the vesting designated may have significant legal and tax consequences. Buyer is advised to seek the advice of Buyer's own attorney and accountant with regard to vesting. Buyer shall furnish Escrow Holder with Buyer's vesting prior to the date of preparation of Buyer's loan documents or close of escrow (if Buyer is not obtaining financing). Escrow Holder is hereby authorized and instructed to complete and/or correct Buyer's vesting on the Grant Deed, even if it has already been executed and notarized. If Buyer is married and taking title alone, (1) Buyer shall furnish Escrow Holder with the name of Buyer's spouse, (2) Escrow Holder is authorized and instructed to prepare an Interspousal Transfer or Quitclaim Deed for Buyer's spouse's signature and (3) Escrow Holder is to record same at close of escrow, charging Buyer's account for the preparation and recording fees associated with this deed.

10. Cancellation

In the event this escrow is canceled, the parties hereto agree to pay Escrow Holder its cancellation fee for work performed, and to pay all expenses incurred by Escrow Holder. If a demand to cancel this escrow is submitted to Escrow Holder or if there is no written communication from the parties for a period of six months, Escrow Holder shall notify the parties of its intention to cancel this escrow and return all documents and funds (less cancellation fees and costs) to the party depositing the same. If no written objection to such notice is given to Escrow Holder within fifteen (15) days of mailing such notice, Escrow Holder shall cancel this escrow and return all funds and/or documents then held by Escrow Holder to the party depositing the same.

11. Disputes

No notice, demand or change of instruction shall be of any effect in this escrow unless given in writing by all parties affected thereby. In the event a demand for funds and/or documents deposited with Escrow Holder in connection with this escrow is made and which is not concurred in by all parties hereto, Escrow Holder, notwithstanding which party made such demand, may elect to do any of the following:

(i) Take no further action in connection with this escrow and continue to hold such funds and/or documents until receipt of mutual concurring instructions from all parties to this escrow as to the disposition of such funds and/or documents;

(ii) Commence an action in interpleader and obtain an order from the court allowing Escrow Holder to deposit such funds and/or documents with the court, in which case Escrow Holder shall have no further liability or obligations with respect to this escrow; or

In the event Escrow Holder interpleads any funds and/or documents with any court pursuant to either subparagraphs (ii) or (iii) above, Escrow Holder shall be entitled to reimbursement of its reasonable attorneys' fees and expenses of litigation in connection with such action.

14. Failure to Close Timely

If the conditions for closing this escrow have not occurred at the time set forth herein for closing, Escrow Holder is nevertheless to continue to act hereunder and to close this escrow as soon thereafter as such conditions (except as to time) shall have been met, unless any party shall have made a written demand on Escrow Holder for cancellation of this escrow and/or for the return of any funds and/or documents deposited by such party.

18. Foreign Investment in Real Property Act (FIRPTA)

Buyer is hereby notified that FIRPTA withholding (Internal Revenue Code Section 1445) may be applicable to certain sales of United States real estate by non-resident aliens. Unless instructed otherwise by the parties to this escrow, Escrow Holder is released from any liability, obligation or responsibility with respect to compliance with said Code Section, including, but not limited to (a) withholding of funds, (b) advising the parties as to the requirements of said sections, (c) determining whether transferor (Seller) is a foreign person or entity and/or (d) obtaining a non-foreign affidavit.

19. Preliminary Change of Ownership

Prior to the close of escrow, Buyer may hand Escrow Holder a fully completed and executed "Preliminary Change of Ownership Report" (PCOR) pursuant to the requirements of California Revenue and Taxation Code Section 480.3. Buyer may elect not to complete and execute said form prior to the close of escrow. Should Buyer choose not to execute the PCOR or should the County Recorders office reject the PCOR for any reason, Buyer is aware that a $20.00 charge will be assessed by the County Recorder's office and Escrow Holder will charge the account of Buyer accordingly. In the event the PCOR has not been filed at the time the documents record OR the County Tax Assessors office determines that the form has not been properly completed, Buyer will be responsible for obtaining and completing a new PCOR and any additional documents that may be required by the Assessor's office. Failure to file a proper PCOR will result in additional penalties in accordance with Section 480 of the California Revenue and Taxation Code. Escrow Holder's sole duty shall be the delivery of the PCOR to the County Recorder at the time of recordation of transfer documents, if it is provided to Escrow Holder. Escrow Holder assumes no liability or responsibility regarding the proper completion of the PCOR.

20. Supplemental Taxes

Buyer is advised that the County Tax Assessor will revalue property that changes ownership or contains new construction, which may result in a supplemental assessment. The supplemental taxes will be assessed from the date of the change in ownership or completion of construction.

21. Fire/Hazard Insurance

Buyer shall obtain Fire/Hazard Insurance coverage on the subject property prior to the close of escrow, as per requirements of the new lender. If Buyer has not paid policy premium prior to close of escrow, Escrow Holder is authorized and instructed to debit Buyer's account with the cost of the annual premium and pay such premium to the insurance agent and/or company, at the close of escrow, from funds deposited by Buyer. Escrow Holder is instructed to request that the insurance company deliver the original policy and copies, as required, to all necessary parties. In the event the property is covered by a blanket insurance policy, Buyer shall provide Escrow Holder with a Certificate of Insurance. FAILURE TO PROVIDE FIRE/HAZARD INSURANCE WILL DELAY THE CLOSE OF ESCROW. Escrow Holder has no obligation to obtain fire or other insurance in the absence of a written instruction to do so.

22. Fees and Charges; Messenger Fees

Escrow, title, and recording charges and other costs are to be charged to the principals' accounts in accordance with customary practices in this County, unless Escrow Holder is instructed to do otherwise in writing. Such charges include the cost of such messenger service and the Company's expenses for arranging such messenger service and its overhead and profit. Special messenger services will be billed at the cost of such services. There will be no additional charge for pick-up or delivery of packages via the Company's regularly scheduled messenger runs.

23. Fees Paid in Advance

Escrow Holder is hereby instructed to use Buyer's funds deposited into escrow to pay any fees required prior to close of escrow to entities such as, but not limited to, homeowner's association management companies for ordering documents and statements, lenders for ordering payoff statements, and cities which require city reports. In the event escrow is cancelled and Buyer is entitled to a refund of deposited funds, the amount of any fees advanced shall be deducted from the funds returned to Buyer. Seller hereby agrees to immediately deposit into escrow the amount of fees advanced for which Seller is responsible, and Escrow Holder will immediately disburse the amount of such deposit to Buyer. Buyer hereby agrees to immediately return to Escrow Holder any documentation provided to Buyer that is associated with fees advanced by Escrow Holder. Buyer shall not be reimbursed for any fees associated with documents provided to Buyer which are not returned to Escrow Holder. Escrow Holder shall not be liable to Buyer for fees deducted from Buyer's deposit in the event Seller fails to deposit the amount of such fees into escrow.

24. Special Recording; Late Confirmation of Recording

Seller's proceeds may not be available, and encumbrances may not be paid off, until the first business day following the day of recording if 1) documents recorded at close of escrow are recorded later in the day than 8:00 a.m. (which is called a "special recording") or if 2) the County Recorder does not provide confirmation of recording within sufficient time to allow same-day disbursement of funds by wire or check.

25. IRS Form 1099 Requirements

If requested by Escrow Holder, Seller will furnish Escrow Holder with sufficient information to file form 1099, if required, with the Internal Revenue Service for the sale of the real property which is subject to this escrow.

Print

26. Disclosure Reports

Escrow holder is not to be concerned with disclosures made by the parties to each other. In the event escrow holder receives any disclosure reports requiring signatures or approval by a party, escrow holder's only responsibility will be to forward the report to the appropriate party.
