§ 373.10 Governing Law; No Statute or Rule Specifically Authorizes Motion in Limine

Motions in limine are commonly used in California state courts. It is not unusual for each party to an action to submit multiple motions in limine [e.g., Kelly v. New W. Fed. Sav. (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 659, 669, 56 Cal. Rptr. 2d 803 (one party filed 28 motions in limine)]. Considering the frequent use of motions in limine, it is surprising that the motion in limine is not specifically authorized or governed by any California statute or rule of court. However, a trial court's consideration of a motion in limine is implicitly authorized by several such sources, including Code Civ. Proc. § 128(a)(3), (8), which states that every court has the power to provide for the orderly conduct of proceedings before it, and to amend and control its process and orders to make them conform to law and justice. Additional support for a motion in limine is provided by:

(1) Evid. Code § 350, which allows the admission of relevant evidence only.

(2) Evid. Code § 352, which authorizes the exclusion of unduly prejudicial evidence.

(3) Evid. Code § 402(b), which authorizes the hearing and determination of the admissibility of evidence out of the presence or hearing of the jury.

California appellate courts have acknowledged the propriety of the use of motions in limine by trial courts [see People v. Morris (1991) 53 Cal. 3d 152, 188, 279 Cal. Rptr. 720, 807 P.2d 949 ; Ulloa v. McMillin Real Estate & Mortg. (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 333, 338, 57 Cal. Rptr. 3d 1 ; Greer v. Buzgheia (2006) 141 Cal. App. 4th 1150, 1156, 46 Cal. Rptr. 3d 780 ; Clemens v. American Warranty Corp. (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 444, 451, 238 Cal. Rptr. 339 ; Lemer v. Boise Cascade, Inc. (1980) 107 Cal. App. 3d 1, 9-12, 165 Cal. Rptr. 555] . Although there is no reported decision outlining procedural guidelines for a motion in limine, numerous cases discuss the use of pretrial motions to exclude prejudicial evidence from the jury [see, e.g., Cherrigan v. City etc. of San Francisco (1968) 262 Cal. App. 2d 643, 646, 69 Cal. Rptr. 42 ; Sacramento, etc. Drainage Dist. ex rel. State Reclamation Bd. v. Reed (1963) 215 Cal. App. 2d 60, 66-68, 29 Cal. Rptr. 847 , modified, 217 Cal. App. 2d 611, 31 Cal. Rptr. 754] .

A motion is an oral or written request to a court for entry of an order [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1003; see generally Ch. 372, Motions and Orders]. In limine is defined as "on or at the threshold; at the very beginning; preliminarily" [Black's Law Dictionary (5th ed. 1978)]. Accordingly, a motion in limine is a motion directed to the judge, outside the presence of the jury, to limit or exclude certain evidence or testimony in anticipation of such references by adverse counsel or witnesses [see Cotchett & Cartwright, California Products Liability Actions, Ch. 10, Trial, § 10.01[6] (2d ed. Matthew Bender)].

A motion in limine is generally brought before or at the beginning of trial, although it also may be brought during trial [People v. Morris (1991) 53 Cal. 3d 152, 188, 279 Cal. Rptr. 720, 807 P.2d 949 ; Mardirossian & Assocs. v. Ersoff (2007) 153 Cal. App. 4th 257, 269, 62 Cal. Rptr. 3d 665 ; *Kelly v. New W. Fed. Sav. (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 659, 669, 56 Cal. § 373.12 Overview and Purposes of Motion in Limine

[1] Primary Purpose Is to Prohibit Presentation of Particular Items or Categories of Evidence

[a] Common Use of Motion in Limine Is to Consider Evidentiary Issues

In limine motions are designed to facilitate the management of a case, generally by deciding difficult evidentiary issues in advance of trial. The usual purpose of a motion in limine is to preclude the presentation of evidence deemed inadmissible and prejudicial by the moving party [People v. Morris (1991) 53 Cal. 3d 152, 188, 279 Cal. Rptr. 720, 807 P.2d 949 ; Mardirossian & Assocs. v. Ersoff (2007) 153 Cal. App. 4th 257, 268, 62 Cal. Rptr. 3d 665 ; Kelly v. New W. Fed. Sav. (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 659, 669, 56 Cal. Rptr. 2d 803] .

Normally, a motion in limine is considered a procedural mechanism that permits pretrial consideration of evidentiary issues that are expected to arise at trial. Because the motion merely transfers the evidentiary issues to the pretrial phase of the case, a motion in limine may seek to exclude an item or category of evidence on any ground that could be raised at trial [see § 373.14[1]], such as that the evidence is irrelevant, or is subject to discretionary exclusion as unduly prejudicial [Clemens v. American Warranty Corp. (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 444, 451, 238 Cal. Rptr. 339] . If the motion is granted, an order in limine [see § 373.51 (form of order)] typically excludes the challenged evidence and directs parties, counsel, and witnesses not to refer to the excluded matters during trial [People v. Morris (1991) 53 Cal. 3d 152, 188, 279 Cal. Rptr. 720, 807 P.2d 949 ; Kelly v. New W. Fed. Sav. (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 659, 669, 56 Cal. Rptr. 2d 803] .

Although preventing the actual admission of prejudicial evidence is the paramount consideration, another purpose of a motion in limine is to prevent opposing counsel or witnesses from even referring to matters that may be prejudicial and thus create a negative inference in the jurors' minds, even though they are subsequently instructed to disregard them [see Cotchett & Cartwright, California Products Liability Actions, Ch. 10, Trial, § 10.01[6] (2d ed. Matthew Bender)]. This is why an order in limine may bar counsel and witnesses from mentioning the excluded evidence in any manner.

It is the prejudicial effect of the questions asked or statements made in connection with the offer of the evidence, rather than the prejudicial effect of the evidence itself, that a motion in limine is intended to reach [Bridges v. City of Richardson (1962) 163 Tex. 292, 354 S.W.2d 366, 367] . The purpose of the motion is to avoid the obviously futile attempt to "unring the bell" in the event a motion to strike is granted in the proceedings before the jury [Kelly v. New West Federal Savings (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 659, 669, 56 Cal. Rptr. 2d 803 ; Hyatt v. Sierra Boat Co. (1978) 79 Cal. App. 3d 325, 337, 145 Cal. Rptr. 47] . Accordingly, if counsel anticipates that opposing counsel may make some effort to introduce evidence or facts that are likely to create an adverse inference in the jurors' minds, a motion in limine is advisable.

[b] No Limitation on Subject Matter of Motion in Limine

There is nothing in the notion of a "motion in limine" that connotes any limitation on the subject matter, and no statute that limits its use to simply precluding certain evidence. Counsel may want to consider all motions that are appropriate "at the threshold" (to more directly translate from the Latin, "at the preliminary") of the trial, motions that could not only limit the evidence on a certain issue, but seek to admit evidence before trial so it can be shown to the jury during opening statements. A motion in limine might deem evidentiary statements in pretrial submissions "admitted." There is a reasonable basis to use motions in limine as raising issues under Evid. Code § 402 that would, before the commencement of trial, require a hearing on the existence of "preliminary facts."

Although generally used for exclusion of evidence, motions in limine may request favorable pretrial rulings on admissibility of evidence for other purposes than using the evidence in an opening statement. In some cases, for example, a party intends to rely on a particular piece of evidence, but is uncertain whether the evidence will be admitted at trial. Although an opposing party will often bring a motion in limine to exclude that evidence so that the proponent of the evidence will have a chance to obtain a pretrial ruling on admissibility, for tactical reasons a party might not bring such a motion relying on the power of an objection when the evidence is offered. In the event that certain evidence is crucial, and subject to a possible exclusionary objection, the party who needs to rely on that evidence might consider a motion in limine to deem the evidence admitted. Such a motion would, necessarily, involve a hearing with evidence to support the admissibility of the evidence. Courts that might be reluctant to decide on the admissibility of evidence without the foundation laid at the "trial" might respond favorably to the concept of a hearing under Evid. Code § 402, in which the admissibility or inadmissibility of proffered evidence depends on the existence of a preliminary fact is then put to the court for determination of admissibility outside of the present of the jury [Evid. Code §§ 401, 402].

On the other hand, if the evidence is excluded, the pretrial ruling allows the proponent of the evidence to: (1) find another way to get that evidence in at the trial, (2) obtain substitute evidence, or (3) adjust its trial strategy in light of the exclusion.

For a form of motion in limine, see § 373.50.

[2] Strategic Purposes of Motions in Limine

In addition to establishing that certain evidence will be excluded at trial, motions in limine serve other purposes. They permit more careful consideration of evidentiary issues than would take place during trial. And they minimize side-bar conferences and disruptions during trial, allowing an uninterrupted flow of evidence. By resolving potentially critical issues at the outset, they enhance the efficiency of trials and promote settlements [People v. Morris (1991) 53 Cal. 3d 152, 188, 279 Cal. Rptr. 720, 807 P.2d 949 ; Kelly v. New W. Fed. Sav. (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 659, 669-670, 56 Cal. Rptr. 2d 803] . For example, if particular evidence vital to an opponent's case can be excluded in limine, this will often change the parties' perceptions of their chances of success at trial, leading to renewed settlement negotiations.

Unlike an objection to all evidence, which may be used to end the trial and obtain judgment on the pleadings without the introduction of evidence, motions in limine are usually directed at particular items or categories of evidence, rather than at a plaintiff's entire case [Clemens v. American Warranty Corp. (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 444, 451, 238 Cal.

Rptr. 339] . As discussed in greater detail in § 373.12[3][b], when the net effect of one or more motions in limine is to exclude all evidence, the court has the power to dismiss the action without requiring a separate motion for nonsuit or for judgment on the pleadings [Clemens v. American Warranty Corp. (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 444, 451, 238 Cal. Rptr. 339 (although unorthodox, irregularity was nonprejudicial)].

Practice Tip:

In some cases the mere fact the motion in limine is made will alert opposing counsel to a problem area, allowing him or her to undertake additional investigation during the trial to ensure proof is in order on the point. It can also alert opposing counsel to a possible area of proof that had not occurred to him or her. For these reasons, counsel should gauge the adversary and the prejudicial nature of the evidence. Normally, a motion should be made only when counsel deems it necessary to protect the integrity of the lawsuit [Kelly v. New West Federal Savings (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 659, 672, 56 Cal. Rptr. 2d 803] . However, there are situations in which a specific issue is critical and damaging to one side, and is so important that, even though the other side might be unaware of the issue, the motion in limine is essential. This is increasingly an important consideration with the advent of Internet searches and research that can make an opponent aware of many issues, facts, and adverse details that in the past would not have been available. On a vetting, the information might not be admissible. In a trial, fast-moving and multi-faceted, the attorney might want to avoid the prospect of a surprise on the issue. A motion in limine can deflect that surprise. By Patrick A. Cathcart.

From a strategic standpoint, a motion in limine is one option available to determine evidentiary questions before trial. A party that plans to object to evidence need not bring a motion in limine, but may instead defer any objection until the evidence is offered at trial [e.g., Rufo v. Simpson (2001) 86 Cal. App. 4th 573, 608-609, 103 Cal. Rptr. 2d 492 (plaintiff did not waive objection to use of witness's prior testimony by failing to move in limine to exclude that testimony)]. Nevertheless, making the motion can be advisable because it removes uncertainty as to the admission or exclusion of the evidence. In addition, deferring the objection until trial can be risky because it requires diligence in objecting to the evidence. If a party does not move in limine and does not promptly object the first time the evidence is mentioned or offered, the objection may be waived [e.g., Las Palmas Associates v. Las Palmas Center. Associates (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1220, 1241-1242, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 301 (although statute precluded evidence of fraud defendant's wealth, when defendant failed to move in limine to exclude evidence and likewise failed to object when issue was mentioned in opening statements, trial court did not abuse discretion in permitting evidence based on conclusion that plaintiff would be prejudiced by granting delayed motion)].

Practice Tip:

The above discussion notwithstanding, a properly prepared and resolved matter on a motion in limine can dispose of a lawsuit. Every counsel knows the number of cases he or she must tentatively evaluate until the court rules on a key question of law or fact. An able court can dispose of a lengthy trial in a few hours by simply cutting to the key point of law or fact, requesting research when necessary, and after preliminary offers of proof, giving tentative rulings. Settlements in jury trials as well can be a frequent result of early disposition of the critical evidentiary issue. By Patrick A. Cathcart.

[3] Inappropriate Uses of Motions in Limine

[a] Motion in Limine May Not Be Used to Bind Party or Witness to Particular Testimony or View of Evidence

It is not proper to use a motion in limine to attempt to compel a witness or party to conform trial testimony to a preconceived factual scenario based on testimony given during pretrial discovery. Instead, when trial testimony is different from what was given in discovery, the trial testimony can be impeached by the earlier testimony given in discovery [Mardirossian & Assocs. v. Ersoff (2007) 153 Cal. App. 4th 257, 269-271, 62 Cal. Rptr. 3d 665 (trial court properly overruled motion in limine to preclude attorneys from testifying as to hours worked because trial testimony was based on personal knowledge of attorneys and was not inconsistent with discovery testimony that no time records were kept); Fatica v. Superior Court (2002) 99 Cal. App. 4th 350, 352-353, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 904 (trial court erred in ordering in limine that treating physician could testify as fact witness only based on physician's failure to review plaintiff's medical records before discovery deposition); Kelly v. New W. Fed. Sav. (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 659, 672-675, 56 Cal. Rptr. 2d 803 (improper to exclude evidence regarding one of two elevators that could have been site of accident when plaintiff who initially identified elevator as one involved later suggested she was uncertain which was involved)].

Practice Tip:

A motion in limine may be used to require the opponent to provide the "rest of the story" when the opponent offers testimony of part of a witness recollection. If counsel believes that a witness might testify to some but not all of the facts or evidence produced at a deposition, a motion in limine can draw attention the "incomplete" testimony likely to be offered, and request that the court require, if that testimony is offered, that the rest of the testimony be adduced on direct, thus weakening the effect, rather than waiting for cross-examination. Counsel should consider whether the cross-examination that draws out the incomplete testimony would help the party doing the cross-examination more than the deleterious effect of limiting direct examination. By Patrick A. Cathcart.

[b] Motion in Limine Should Not Address Legal Consequences of Evidentiary Exclusion Unless Dispositive of Claim, Defense, or Entire Action

A motion in limine seeks to exclude certain evidence, while a resulting order in limine precludes any use or mention of the excluded evidence [see § 373.12[1]]. However, neither the motion nor the order is concerned with the legal effect of the exclusion. When evidence is excluded, it may be more difficult (or impossible) for a party to prove a necessary element of a claim or defense. But that issue is generally to be resolved through subsequent motions for judgment on the pleadings, for summary judgment, or for nonsuit, not through the in limine motion itself. For this reason, some courts have noted that in limine motions are not designed to replace the dispositive motions prescribed by the Code of Civil Procedure [Blanks v. Shaw (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 336, 89 Cal. Rptr. 3d 710 ; Amtower v. Photon Dynamics, Inc. (2008) 158 Cal. App. 4th 1582, 1593, 71 Cal. Rptr. 3d 361 ; see R & B Auto Ctr., Inc. v. Farmers Group, Inc. (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 327, 350, 44 Cal. Rptr. 3d 426 (noting that use of in limine motions to obtain summary adjudication is "discourage[d]")].

Accordingly, the trial judge generally should not weigh the evidence on a motion in limine, and should not make a wholesale disposition of a case through a ruling on a motion in limine. The judge may address the movant's concerns that the opposing party may be trying to use evidence for an improper purpose or in a way that may be unduly prejudicial by limiting instructions, without taking away the other party's right to a jury trial [see R & B Auto Ctr., Inc. v. Farmers Group, Inc. (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 327, 359, 44 Cal. Rptr. 3d 426 (trial court erred in causing wholesale disposition of unfair competition cause of action through granting motions in limine without tailoring ruling to balance competing concerns of moving parties against right of opposing party to present evidence to establish its cause of action)].

In some cases, a party opposing a motion in limine will admit that if the motion is granted, it can no longer prevail on one or more claims or defenses. Even in the absence of such a concession, it is often clear that a particular evidentiary exclusion is fatal to a claim, defense, or an entire case. In that event, the court need not ignore the practical effect of the in limine motion; instead, the court may order judgment on the claims or defenses that are effectively decided by the evidentiary ruling. For example, if all evidence is excluded, the court has the power to dismiss the action without requiring a separate motion for nonsuit or for judgment on the pleadings [Clemens v. American Warranty Corp. (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 444, 451, 238 Cal. Rptr. 339] . If an exclusion or other evidentiary ruling on a motion in limine effectively decides an issue, claim, or defense, the court may enter an appropriate order [Amtower v. Photon Dynamics, Inc. (2008) 158 Cal. App. 4th 1582, 1596-1597, 71 Cal. Rptr. 3d 361 (trial court properly decided statute of limitations defense based on evidence established through motion in limine); see also K.C. Multimedia, Inc. v. Bank of Am. Tech. & Operations, Inc. (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 939, 90 Cal. Rptr. 3d 247 (trial court did not err in deciding in conjunction with motion in limine that statute preempted common-law remedies for misappropriation of trade secrets)]. The court must be careful to confine the order to the matters effectively decided by the evidentiary ruling [e.g., Blanks v. Shaw (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 336, 89 Cal. Rptr. 3d 710, 739-743 (when motion in limine excluded all evidence as to delayed accrual of cause of action, court properly entered order that discovery rule was inapplicable to toll limitations period, but court erred in deciding issue of defendant's negligence)].

Trial courts may therefore use the in limine process to examine the sufficiency of the evidence [see K.C. Multimedia, Inc. v. Bank of Am. Tech. & Operations, Inc. (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 939, 90 Cal. Rptr. 3d 247 (use of motion in limine to test whether complaint states cause of action is proper); Michelson v. Camp (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 955, 960-961, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 539 (in response to allegations in defendant's trial brief, trial court instructed plaintiffs to make offer of proof as to existence of damages, concluded that, as matter of law, plaintiffs could not show recoverable damages and granted nonsuit for defense); Stein-Brief Group, Inc. v. Home Indemnity Co. (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 364, 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 3 (trial court ordered plaintiff to file pretrial motion in limine setting forth its best case scenario in favor of insurance coverage, concluded that there was no potential for coverage and entered judgment for defense)]. Trial courts have the inherent power to use motions in limine in this way to control the litigation and to adopt any suitable method of practice, even if not specified by statute or court rules [Amtower v. Photon Dynamics, Inc. (2008) 158 Cal. App. 4th 1582, 1594-1595, 71 Cal. Rptr. 3d 361] .

When the trial court uses the in limine process to dispose of a case or cause of action for evidentiary reasons, the reviewing court will review the result as it would the grant of a motion for nonsuit after opening statement, keeping in mind that the grant of such a motion is not favored, that a key consideration is that the nonmoving party has had a full and fair opportunity to state all the facts in its favor, and that all inferences and conflicts in the evidence must be viewed most favorably to the nonmoving party [Amtower v. Photon Dynamics, Inc. (2008) 158 Cal. App. 4th 1582, 1595, 71 Cal. Rptr. 3d 361 ; Fergus v. Songer (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 552, 570, 59 Cal. Rptr. 3d 273] .

If a purported motion in limine actually seeks a dispositive ruling on the merits rather than an evidentiary decision [see § 373.13[4]], the court may disregard the party's label and decide the motion as if it had been properly denominated [e.g., Coshow v. City of Escondido (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 687, 701-702, 34 Cal. Rptr. 3d 19 (trial court construed motion in limine as motion for judgment on pleadings and dismissed)].

[c] Motion in Limine May Not Be Used to Control Conduct of Trial Proceedings

Matters of day-to-day trial logistics and common professional courtesy should not be the subject of motions in limine. For example, the manner in which witnesses are to be called and exhibits presented to the jury are matters to be addressed at trial, not through a motion in limine [Kelly v. New W. Fed. Sav. (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 659, 671, 56 Cal. Rptr. 2d 803 (requiring prior notification of which witnesses will be called and that exhibits be shown to jury only after being seen by counsel and court were not proper subjects of motion in limine)].

§ 373.13 Power of Court to Grant or Deny Motion in Limine

[1] Source of Power Is Court's Inherent Authority

Although motions in limine are not specifically provided for by statute or court rule, it is in a California court's inherent power to grant a motion in limine to provide for the orderly conduct of proceedings before it, to control its process and orders to make them conform to law and justice, and to exclude either wholly irrelevant evidence, or relevant evidence when its probative value is outweighed by the probability that its admission will create undue prejudice, confuse the issues, or mislead the jury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 128(a)(3), (8); Evid. Code §§ 350, 352; Clemens v. American Warranty Corp. (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 444, 451, 238 Cal. Rptr. 339 ; see also K.C. Multimedia, Inc. v. Bank of Am. Tech. & Operations, Inc. (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 939, 90 Cal. Rptr. 3d 247 (trial court acted within bounds of inherent power in deciding in conjunction with motion in limine that statute preempted common-law remedies for misappropriation of trade secrets)].

Cases in which the use of a motion in limine has been recognized as within a court's inherent powers include the following:

- In Helfend v. Southern Cal. Rapid Transit Dist. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 1, 16-18, 84 Cal. Rptr. 173, 465 P.2d 61 , a personal injury case, defendant sought to ask about payments made to plaintiff by his insurer for the limited purpose of questioning the reasonableness of medical costs or showing that plaintiff was a malingerer. The California Supreme Court found that the trial court did not abuse its discretion in excluding the evidence. The court also indicated that the initial inquiry on this subject by counsel should have been made out of the presence of the jury, i.e., by motion in limine.

- In Amtower v. Photon Dynamics, Inc. (2008) 158 Cal. App. 4th 1582, 1593-1595, 71 Cal. Rptr. 3d 361 , an action alleging numerous claims arising from a corporate merger, the trial court granted a motion in limine to exclude all evidence relating to a particular claim under federal securities laws, concluding that the undisputed evidence showed that the claim was barred by limitations. The appellate court affirmed, despite its reservations that the in limine process had been used to dispose of a claim rather than merely decide evidentiary issues. The court noted that disposition of a claim is normally accomplished through the dispositive motions prescribed by the Code of Civil Procedure, and that those motions contain procedural protections and requirements not applicable to in limine proceedings. Nevertheless, the court held that despite "the obvious drawbacks to the use of in limine motions to dispose of a claim, trial courts do have the inherent power to use them in this way" [Amtower v. Photon Dynamics, Inc. (2008) 158 Cal. App. 4th 1582, 1595, 71 Cal. Rptr. 3d 361 , citing Lucas v. County of Los Angeles (1996) 47 Cal. App. 4th 277, 284-285, 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 655] . The appellate court then concluded that because the facts as established at the in limine hearing showed that the plaintiff could not avoid the limitations bar, the dismissal of the claim was proper.

- In Sacramento, etc. Drainage Dist. ex rel. State Reclamation Bd. v. Reed (1963) 215 Cal. App. 2d 60, 66-68, 29 Cal. Rptr. 847 , modified, 217 Cal. App. 2d 611, 31 Cal. Rptr. 754 , an appellate court affirmed the trial court's granting of a pretrial motion to exclude evidence of damage from increased flooding that might be caused by levee construction adjacent to the defendant's property. The appellate court stated that although the motion was not a conventional procedure, it was well conceived under the circumstances and was a proper mode of objection.

- In Pierce v. J.C. Penney Co. (1959) 167 Cal. App. 2d 3, 5 n.1, 13, 334 P.2d 117 , counsel for plaintiff, in a pretrial discussion in chambers, sought permission to introduce evidence of subsequent repairs. An objection at trial that a question about subsequent repairs was immaterial was held sufficient to preserve the issue on appeal, on the rationale that the positions of the parties had been fully stated in chambers. The court thereby indicated that pretrial discussions on the admissibility of evidence are permissible [see Delta Dynamics, Inc. v. Arioto (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 525, 527 n.1, 72 Cal. Rptr. 785, 446 P.2d 785 (approving use of pretrial conference to frame issues to be decided at trial); see also § 373.18[2] (preservation of evidentiary issue through in limine motion)].

The court's inherent powers, as well as its power to control litigation and conserve judicial resources, permit it to entertain a motion in limine to dismiss the entire action when the court determines that the plaintiff has failed to state a cause of action [Lucas v. County of Los Angeles (1996) 47 Cal. App. 4th 277, 284-285, 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 655 (irregular but not improper procedure); see Clemens v. American Warranty Corp. (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 444, 451-452, 238 Cal. Rptr. 339] . This is not precluded by the Code Civ. Proc. § 438(g)(1) requirement for a motion for judgment on the pleadings that there be a material change in law or statute or by the Code Civ. Proc. § 1008 requirements for a motion for reconsideration when an earlier motion for summary judgment has previously been denied [Lucas v. County of Los Angeles (1996) 47 Cal. App. 4th 277, 284, 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 655] .

[2] Court's Discretion in Regard to Motion in Limine

[a] Court Has Discretion to Rule Immediately or Defer Ruling Until Trial

A motion in limine is a procedural mechanism that permits pretrial consideration of evidentiary issues expected to arise at trial [see § 373.12[1]]. Just because the parties have requested pretrial consideration does not mean that the court has to provide it. In many cases, evidence challenged through a motion in limine may be inadmissible as irrelevant, or relevant but unduly prejudicial. In those cases, the court should rule immediately and enter an in limine order [e.g., Fairfax v. Lords (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 1019, 1025-1028, 41 Cal. Rptr. 3d 850 (when defendant missed deadline for designating expert witness, trial court should have granted plaintiff's motion in limine to exclude that witness)]. The issues of relevance and prejudice, however, are often contextual because they depend on the legal theories and other evidence offered at trial. In that instance, the trial court should exercise its discretion to refuse to rule in limine, and instead defer any decision as to whether the challenged evidence will be excluded until it is offered at trial [see, e.g., Silva v. Union Pacific Railroad Co. (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 1024, 1030, 102 Cal. Rptr. 668 (trial court erred in finding that railroad had no duty to fence right-of-way through in limine proceedings because issues of duty and foreseeability are fact-intensive and court had insufficient evidentiary basis for decision)].

A court intending to defer an evidentiary ruling may do so by (1) expressly denying the motion in limine without prejudice to its reassertion if and when the evidence is offered at trial, or (2) taking the motion in limine under advisement.

[b] Court May Not Simply Refuse to Hear Motion in Limine

Although a trial court is not obliged to rule immediately on a motion in limine and may instead defer any decision until trial, the court may not simply ignore the motion and do nothing. When the court refuses to entertain a motion in limine on the ground that it is without power to do so, a writ of mandate may issue to compel the court to hear the motion. The writ has been held proper to compel an exercise of discretion when a trial court has refused to act on the mistaken belief that it is without such authority [e.g., Nadler v. Superior Court (1967) 255 Cal. App. 2d 523, 525, 63 Cal. Rptr. 352 ; see § 373.18 (appellate review of in limine orders)].

[3] Court May Reconsider Evidentiary Issues at Trial

Regardless of whether a motion in limine is granted or denied, the ruling is necessarily tentative because subsequent developments in the case may change the context and require a different outcome in later proceedings or at trial [People v. Rodrigues (1994) 8 Cal. 4th 1060, 1174, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 235, 885 P.2d 1 ; Rufo v. Simpson (2001) 86 Cal. App. 4th 573, 608-609, 103 Cal. Rptr. 2d 492 ; see Cristler v. Express Messenger Systems, Inc. (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 72, 89 Cal. Rptr. 34 (in limine order is not binding but rather subject to reconsideration on more complete record at trial).

[4] Mislabeling of Motion in Limine Does Not Affect Court's Power to Act

In some cases, a motion is labeled by the movant as a motion in limine, but actually seeks not an evidentiary ruling but instead a disposition on the merits of one or more issues or claims. In that event, the court may disregard the party's label and decide the motion as if it had been properly denominated, provided that the appropriate procedural protections for the dispositive motion were provided [e.g., Coshow v. City of Escondido (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 687, 701-702, 34 Cal. Rptr. 3d 19 (trial court properly construed motion in limine as motion for judgment on pleadings and dismissed)].

Conversely, if a party submits a motion for summary adjudication of an issue or claim but the motion actually challenges the admissibility of evidentiary matters, the court may treat the motion as a motion in limine and make an appropriate evidentiary order [Macy's California, Inc. v. Superior Court (1995) 41 Cal. App. 4th 744, 748 n.2, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 496 (objection to evidence relating to negligent infliction of emotional distress should have been raised by motion in limine, not motion for summary adjudication); Merenda v. Superior Court (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 1, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 87 (although defendant moved for summary adjudication, motion actually sought to exclude evidence of particular elements of damages, so court treated it as motion in limine)].

Practice Tip:

The 2005 amendments to Code Civ. Proc. § 437c requiring 75 days' notice and more than 30 days before trial to be heard for summary judgment motions may impinge on the trial court's treating of a motion for summary judgment disguised as a motion in limine [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(a)]. However, if the motion in limine is simply a motion to determine that the "statement of uncontroverted facts" is, in fact, legally uncontroverted, a motion for judgment at the end of plaintiff's opening statement or at the end of the defendant's reply might be facilitated by such a motion. By Patrick A. Cathcart.

§ 373.14 Examples of Evidentiary Exclusions Through Use of Motion in Limine

[1] General Rule: Any Objection to Admissibility That Could Be Raised at Trial Can Be Raised Through Pretrial Motion in Limine

A motion in limine permits pretrial consideration of evidentiary issues expected to arise at trial. Because a motion in limine merely changes the time at which the evidentiary issues are to be considered, the general rule is that any objection to evidence that could be raised at trial can also be raised through a pretrial motion in limine [Condon-Johnson & Assocs. Inc. v. Sacramento Mun. Utility Dist. (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 1384, 57 Cal. Rptr. 3d 849 (motion in limine can be premised on any ground sufficient to object to or move to strike same evidence when offered at trial); Greer v. Buzgheia (2006) 141 Cal. App. 4th 1150, 1156, 46 Cal. Rptr. 3d 780 (scope of motion in limine is any kind of evidence that could be objected to at trial)].

Of course, evidence may be inadmissible on one or more of numerous grounds. The following subsections provide a nonexclusive list of types and categories of evidence that may be excluded through the use of a motion in limine [see Davis, Pre-Trial Motions to Suppress Prejudicial Matters, 4 Trial Lawyers Q. 43, 45-50 (1967)].

[2] Specific Grounds for Excluding Evidence Under Motion in Limine

[a] Evidence Is Irrelevant

Only relevant evidence is admissible [Evid. Code § 350]. A motion in limine may seek to exclude irrelevant evidence [e.g., Ulloa v. McMillin Real Estate & Mortg. (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 333, 338, 57 Cal. Rptr. 3d 1 (although broker may have violated professional ethics by signing contract for client, issue of who signed was irrelevant to claims presented, so trial court properly granted motion in limine to exclude evidence that broker signed)]. For example, evidence that relates solely to an issue not raised in the pleadings or otherwise implicated in the action is irrelevant and may be excluded through a motion in limine [e.g., Schweitzer v. Westminster Investments (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 1195, 1214, 69 Cal. Rptr. 3d 472] .

[b] Evidence Is Unduly Prejudicial or Otherwise Precluded Under Evidence Code

Even when evidence is relevant, it may nevertheless be excluded when its probative value is outweighed by the potential for undue prejudice [Evid. Code § 352]. A motion in limine may seek to exclude evidence as unduly prejudicial [see, e.g., Ulloa v. McMillin Real Estate & Mortg. (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 333, 338, 57 Cal. Rptr. 3d 1 (recognizing rule)].

In some instances, the Evidence Code expressly precludes the introduction of obviously relevant evidence based on a policy determination that the evidence is prejudicial. If a party anticipates that evidence might be mentioned or offered in violation of one of these express prohibitions, it may file a motion in limine to exclude the evidence. For example, an offer to settle a claim is not admissible to show liability on the claim [Evid. Code § 1152], so a defendant may file a motion in limine to preclude evidence of such an offer [Lemer v. Boise Cascade, Inc. (1980) 107 Cal. App. 3d 1, 9-12, 165 Cal. Rptr. 555] .

[c] Evidence Is Not Properly Considered in Determining Damages; Collateral Source Rule

Certain causes of action permit the recovery of only limited damages. For example, a claimant may be restricted to economic damages only, and cannot recover noneconomic damages or punitive damages. When the claimant's damages are limited, a motion in limine may be brought to exclude evidence that relates only to prohibited elements of damages [e.g., Garcia v. Superior Court (2006) 137 Cal. App. 4th 342, 347-348, 39 Cal. Rptr. 902 (motion in limine was proper to raise issue of whether plaintiff could recover noneconomic damages); Merenda v. Superior Court (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 1, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 87 (issue of whether plaintiff could recover emotional distress damages was properly addressed by motion in limine)].

The claimant may also bring a motion in limine to exclude improper evidence that the defendant intends to offer on damages. For example, the common-law collateral source rule provides that a tortfeasor is not entitled to a credit or offset for any recovery that the plaintiff may have obtained from an insurer or other source independent of the tortfeasor. The plaintiff may therefore move in limine to exclude evidence of any such payments [Helfend v. Southern Cal. Rapid Transit Dist. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 1, 14, 84 Cal. Rptr. 173, 465 P.2d 61 (payment for medical expenses); Anheuser-Busch, Inc. v. Starley (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 347, 349-350, 170 P.2d 448 (payment for property damage)].

Although a claimant's recovery of medical expenses is limited, this limitation applies to the recovery of damages, not to evidence of those damages. Accordingly, granting a motion in limine to exclude evidence of the amount of medical expenses originally incurred merely because the expenses were subsequently discounted or written off is improper [Katiuzhinsky v. Perry (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 1288, 1297-1298, 62 Cal. Rptr. 3d 309 ; Greer v. Buzgheia (2006) 141 Cal. App. 4th 1150, 1156-1157, 46 Cal. Rptr. 3d 780] .

[d] Evidence of Character of Party or Witness

Under the Evidence Code, the character of a party or witness may be raised as an issue only in limited circumstances [see Evid. Code §§ 785-791, 1100-1109]. If a party anticipates that prohibited character evidence may be used by an adverse party, it may seek to exclude that evidence by a motion in limine [e.g., Evid. Code § 788 (evidence of prior felony conviction may not be used to impeach credibility of witness who was pardoned or otherwise rehabilitated or exonerated)].

[e] Evidence Is Inadmissible Due to Party's Violation of Disclosure or Discovery Obligations

If a party failed to make mandatory disclosures or to cooperate in discovery, that party may be prohibited from using the evidence not disclosed in any subsequent proceedings [e.g., Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.300 (expert witness was barred when not disclosed)]. If such a bar is applicable, the party that should have received the disclosure or discovery may file a motion in limine to exclude the prohibited evidence [e.g., Fairfax v. Lords (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 1019, 1025-1028, 41 Cal. Rptr. 3d 850 (when defendant missed deadline for designating expert witness, trial court should have granted plaintiff's motion in limine to exclude witness)].

[f] Proposed Expert Testimony Is Inadmissible

To testify as an expert witness, a person must meet certain qualification requirements [Evid. Code § 720]. If such a witness offers an expert opinion, that testimony must be properly supported [Evid. Code § 801]. A motion in limine may be brought to exclude the testimony of an expert witness on the ground that the witness does not qualify as an expert or on the ground that the expert's proposed opinion testimony lacks an adequate foundation [see, e.g., Miranda v. National Emer. Servs., Inc. (1995) 35 Cal. App. 4th 894, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 593 (whether proposed expert met statutory requirements to provide testimony in medical malpractice action relating to emergency services was proper subject of in limine motion)].

§ 373.15 Conditional Grant of Motion Subject to Offer of Proof at Trial

A trial court may reconsider the issues resolved by a motion in limine at a later time in the proceedings, including at trial [see § 373.13[3]]. Accordingly, the court may conditionally grant a motion in limine to prevent mention of prejudicial matter subject to offers of proof at trial. If facts adduced at trial have probative value that may outweigh their prejudicial impact, the trial court may reconsider its ruling on the motion in limine and change it, if appropriate [see, e.g., Lemer v. Boise Cascade, Inc. (1980) 107 Cal. App. 3d 1, 9-12, 165 Cal. Rptr. 555] .

§ 373.16 Procedure for Motion in Limine

[1] Procedure for Movant

[a] Proper Timing of Motion in Limine Governed by Rules of Court, Pretrial Orders, and Scheduling Orders

A motion in limine is not specifically authorized or governed by any California statute or court rule [see § 373.10]. Accordingly, there is generally no specific time period within which the motion must be brought. Instead, the appropriate time for pretrial motions, including a motion in limine, is governed by local rules and standing orders of the trial court, as well as any pretrial orders or scheduling orders entered in the particular case.

The Trial Court Delay Reduction Act requires all superior and municipal courts to implement delay reduction programs [Gov. Code §§ 68605.5, 68620; see generally Ch. 552, Trial Court Delay Reduction]. Some courts have adopted local rules to govern the procedures and timing of motions in limine. For example, in Los Angeles County, with respect to individual calendar cases, parties must file motions in limine with timely statutory notice so as to be heard on the day of the final status conference; with respect to master calendar cases, parties must file and serve motions in limine at least five days before the final status conference, for hearing on the first day of trial [Los Angeles Co. Super. Ct. Rules, Rule 1106.5].

If a party submits a motion in limine after the deadline established by one of these rules, the court may deny the motion on that basis alone [see, e.g., O'Mary v. Mitsubishi Electronics America, Inc. (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th 563, 578, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 389 (noting that motion was untimely under superior court local rule, but declining to consider effect of untimeliness because action had to be remanded in any event)]. That denial does not defeat the claim for exclusion of the evidence; instead, it merely requires that the objection be raised at trial.

[b] Noticing Motion in Limine; Ex Parte Motion Prohibited

Motions in limine generally are directed to the judge of the department to which the case has been assigned for trial, on the day trial is scheduled to begin, preferably before jury selection. They may be made orally or in writing, and should be made on the record with counsel present. Motions in limine must be made outside the hearing of the jury, or in chambers [see Cotchett & Cartwright, California Products Liability Actions, Ch. 10, Trial, § 10.01[6] (2d ed. Matthew Bender)].

Generally, when a motion seeks to affect the rights of an adverse party, notice to that party is required [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1005; McDonald v. Severy (1936) 6 Cal. 2d 629, 631, 59 P.2d 98] . In rare instances, such as a motion for a continuance, an ex parte motion is appropriate [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1332(b)]. However, an order based on an ex parte motion will be entered only in the plainest and most certain of cases when it appears that the rights of the adverse party will not be affected [Consolidated Const. Co. v. Pacific E. Ry. Co. (1920) 184 Cal. 244, 246, 193 P. 238] .

Because a motion in limine affects the rights of the adverse party, it should not be made on an ex parte basis, but should instead be a noticed motion that complies with the statutory and rule-based requirements for motions [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1005; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 3.1300-3.1312], which require that the motion be served and filed at least 16 days before the hearing [Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b)]. For discussion and checklists for noticed motion procedure, as well as forms for use in giving notice, see Ch. 372, Motions and Orders . On making a noticed motion, an order shortening time for notice may be appropriate [see Ch. 524, Shortening and Extension of Time].

A recommended practice is to give the judge and opposing counsel a written motion in limine accompanied by a supporting memorandum and a proposed order. If the judge signs the order, it should then be filed and served on all parties. For forms of a notice and an order, see §§ 373.50 and 373.51, respectively.

[2] Procedure for Opponent of Motion in Limine

A party opposing a motion in limine may do so on procedural or substantive grounds. As to procedural grounds, the opponent may argue that the motion should not be granted because it was made after the time provided in a court order or rule, or because it was made without proper notice. As to substantive grounds, the opponent may simply argue the merits of the evidentiary questions involved, i.e., that the evidence is relevant, not unduly prejudicial, and not otherwise objectionable under the Evidence Code [see § 373.12[3] (inappropriate uses of motion in limine)]. Any opposing papers must be served and filed at least nine days before the hearing date [Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b)].

§ 373.17 Sanctions for Violation of In Limine Order; Possibility of New Trial

An attorney who violates an in limine order by, for example, mentioning prohibited matter within the hearing of the jury, is subject to sanctions, including a citation for contempt [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1209(a)(5); Charbonneau v. Superior Court (1974) 42 Cal. App. 3d 505, 507, 116 Cal. Rptr. 153] . Because such a violation occur in the presence of the court, a contempt citation may be enforced summarily [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1211(a)].

In addition, a motion for a new trial may be granted on the ground that violation of the in limine order constituted an irregularity in the proceedings [see Code Civ. Proc. § 657(1)]. A mistrial may be declared when the attorney's misconduct seriously prejudices an adverse party's claim or defense [see Code Civ. Proc. § 616; Grimshaw v. Ford Motor Co. (1981) 119 Cal. App. 3d 757, 793-795, 174 Cal. Rptr. 348 (declining to reverse trial court's denial of motion for mistrial, which found that misconduct did not result in prejudice)].

§ 373.18 Appellate Review of Order on Motion in Limine

[1] Order Not Subject to Review by Extraordinary Writ; Exceptions

An order granting or denying a motion in limine is an interlocutory order and therefore unappealable [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 904.1, 904.2]. In addition, review of an in limine order by extraordinary writ is generally improper. However, in exceptional circumstances, an in limine order may be reviewable by a writ of mandate or prohibition [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1084-1086 (mandate); Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1102, 1103 (prohibition); cf. Penal Code § 1538.5(i), (o) (authorizing use of these writs to review order granting or denying motion to suppress under Penal Code § 1538.5)]. A writ of mandate is available to correct an error at law [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1085; Nadler v. Superior Court (1967) 255 Cal. App. 2d 523, 525, 63 Cal. Rptr. 352 (writ of mandate may issue to compel court to hear and rule on motion in limine)]. A writ of prohibition may be used to arrest proceedings that are without or in excess of jurisdiction, or involve an error of constitutional dimension [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1102]. Both writs require a showing that there is no plain, speedy, and adequate remedy in the ordinary course of law [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1086, 1103(a)].

For detailed discussions of these procedures, see Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition .

[2] Appeal After Judgment

[a] Appeal Raises Issue of Propriety of Admission or Exclusion of Evidence, Not Validity of in Limine Order Itself

An order in limine is not subject to review on an interlocutory basis [see § 373.18[1], and review is available only after final judgment. On appeal from the final judgment, an erroneous in limine order does not, in itself, constitute reversible error. Instead, the issue on appeal is whether the evidentiary ruling embodied in the order constitutes reversible error, i.e., whether the evidence was improperly excluded or admitted at trial [Hartford Accident & Indem. Co. v. McCardell (Tex. 1963) 369 S.W.2d 331, 335] . In short, the appeal is taken from the rejection or admission of the evidence, not from the in limine order itself [e.g., Palmer v. Ted Stevens Honda, Inc. (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 530, 542, 238 Cal. Rptr. 363 (exclusion of evidence based on undue prejudice through motion in limine is reversible error when exclusion results in miscarriage of justice)].

[b] When Motion in Limine Preserves Objection to Admission of Evidence

When an appellant alleges that evidence was erroneously admitted, the judgment of the trial court may not be set aside unless a timely objection or motion to exclude the evidence stated the specific grounds for excluding the evidence [Evid. Code § 353]. The Evidence Code does not specify when the objection is to be made. Under appropriate circumstances, a motion in limine can serve the function of a motion to exclude under the Evidence Code by allowing the trial court to rule on a specific objection to particular evidence.

A motion in limine to exclude evidence is sufficient to preserve error in the admission of evidence when it satisfies the basic requirements of Evid. Code § 353:

(1) A specific legal ground for exclusion is advanced and subsequently raised on appeal;

(2) The motion is directed to a particular, identifiable body of evidence; and

(3) The motion is made at a time before or during trial when the trial judge can determine the evidentiary question in its appropriate context.

When such a motion is made and denied, the issue is preserved for appeal.

On the other hand, if a motion in limine does not satisfy each of these requirements, a proper objection satisfying Evid. Code § 353 must be made when the evidence is offered at trial to preserve the evidentiary issue for appeal [People v. Morris (1991) 53 Cal. 3d 152, 189-190, 279 Cal. Rptr. 720, 807 P. 2d 949 ; see Boeken v. Philip Morris, Inc. (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 1640, 1675, 26 Cal. Rptr. 638 (motion in limine to exclude evidence is not sufficient to preserve error unless directed at particular, identifiable body of evidence, and made at time when trial court could determine evidentiary issues in proper context); Kelly v. New W. Fed. Sav. (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 659, 671, 56 Cal. Rptr. 2d 803 (renewed objection required when context or substance of testimony or evidence at trial differs from that contemplated by in limine motion)].

To avoid controversy over whether error is preserved, the better practice in handling motions in limine is for the parties to stipulate to the effect of the court's rulings, or for the trial judge to make it clear to counsel at the end of in limine arguments not only what the ruling on the motion is, but whether further objection or argument is desired when the evidence is presented. If this is done, the stipulation or order of the trial court will be respected in the appellate court's determination whether error has been properly preserved [People v. Morris (1991) 53 Cal. 3d 152, 190-191, 279 Cal. Rptr. 720, 807 P. 2d 949] .

[c] When Motion in Limine Preserves Objection to Exclusion of Evidence

Before a judgment will be reversed on appeal because of the erroneous exclusion of evidence, an offer of proof is usually necessary unless the rulings of the court make compliance with this requirement futile [see Evid. Code § 354(a), (b)]. When the trial court has ruled or indicated that it will receive no evidence of a particular type or class or on a particular issue, the prejudicial nature of the exclusion of that evidence may be argued on appeal regardless of whether an offer of proof was made [see Lawless v. Calaway (1944) 24 Cal. 2d 81, 91, 147 P.2d 604] . Therefore, an offer of proof is not necessary when a trial court grants a motion in limine to exclude evidence and the in limine order makes it clear that the evidentiary exclusion will not be reconsidered at trial.

Further, it is arguable that an offer of proof may be made at a pretrial hearing on the motion by presenting the substance, purpose, and relevance of the evidence in question to the court by means of counter-affidavits or declarations [see Evid.

Code § 354 (offers of proof); Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (affidavits), 2015.5 (declarations)]. The Evidence Code does not specify when an offer of proof is to be made. Although such offers are routinely made at trial, an offer of proof at a pretrial hearing should be sufficient when both parties are present and prepared to argue the evidentiary questions. In Delta Dynamics, Inc. v. Arioto (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 525, 527 n.1, 72 Cal. Rptr. 785, 446 P.2d 785 , an appeal was allowed when the attempted offer of proof at trial, taken alone, was too general to provide a ground for appeal, but the court had been sufficiently apprised of the substance, purpose, and relevance of the evidence at the pretrial conference.

§ 373.34 Decisions

[1] Purpose of Motion in Limine

Normal use of motion in limine is to preclude presentation of evidence deemed inadmissible and prejudicial by moving party. People v. Morris (1991) 53 Cal. 3d 152, 188, 279 Cal. Rptr. 720, 807 P. 2d 949 ; Mardirossian & Assocs. v. Ersoff (2007) 153 Cal. App. 4th 257, 268, 62 Cal. Rptr. 3d 665 ; Kelly v. New W. Fed. Sav. (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 659, 669, 56 Cal. Rptr. 2d 803

Courts routinely conduct hearings in limine to determine scope of admissible evidence; court may exclude incompetent evidence or evidence not relevant to issues presented to jury. Redevelopment Agency v. Tobriner (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1087, 1097 n.5, 264 Cal. Rptr. 481

Motion in limine is intended to reach prejudicial effect of questions asked or statements made in connection with offer of evidence, not prejudicial effect of evidence itself. Bridges v. City of Richardson (1962) 163 Tex. 292, 354 S.W.2d 366, 367

[2] Objection to All Evidence

Judge should not weigh evidence on motion in limine and should not make wholesale disposition of case through ruling on motion; appellate court disapproved of trial court having eliminated bulk of party's evidence through rulings on motions in limine, then granting motion for nonsuit before party had opportunity to make opening statement or present evidence to trier of fact. R & B Auto Ctr., Inc. v. Farmers Group, Inc. (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 327, 333, 44 Cal. Rptr. 3d 426

In limine motions are not intended to replace dispositive motions prescribed by Code of Civil Procedure. Blanks v. Seyfarth Shaw LLP (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 336, 89 Cal. Rptr. 3d 710 ; Amtower v. Photon Dynamics, Inc. (2008)

158 Cal. App. 4th 1582, 1593, 71 Cal. Rptr. 3d 361

Objection to all of party's evidence through motion in limine is available when party's pleading is fatally defective; dismissal is not inappropriate or prejudicial following granting of motion. Clemens v. American Warranty Corp (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 444, 452, 238 Cal. Rptr. 339

[3] Offer of Proof

Offer of proof is not prerequisite for arguing on appeal prejudicial nature of exclusion of evidence when entire class of evidence is declared inadmissible by trial court. Lawless v. Calaway (1944) 24 Cal. 2d 81, 91, 147 P.2d 604

[4] Out of Jury's Presence

In personal injury case when defendant sought to ask about payments made to plaintiff by insurer, initial inquiry was improperly made in presence of jury. Helfend v. Southern Cal. Rapid Transit Dist. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 1, 16-18, 84 Cal. Rptr. 173, 465 P.2d 61

[5] Pretrial Discussions

Appeal is allowed when attempted offer of proof at trial, taken alone, was too general to provide ground for appeal but court was sufficiently apprised of substance, purpose, and relevance of evidence at pretrial conference. Delta Dynamics, Inc. v. Arioto (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 525, 527 n.1, 72 Cal. Rptr. 785, 446 P.2d 785

Objection at trial to question about subsequent repairs was sufficient to preserve issue on appeal, although specific ground of objection was not stated at trial because parties had stated their positions at pretrial meeting in chambers. Pierce v. J.C. Penney Co. (1959) 167 Cal. App. 2d 3, 5 n.1, 13, 334 P.2d 117

[6] Proper Denial

Trial court's discretion in denying Evid. Code § 352 motion in limine is properly exercised when record contains affirmative indications that trial court fully understood and executed its duty to weigh probative value against prejudicial effect of evidence. Ramona Manor Convalescent Hospital v. Care Enterprises (1986) 177 Cal. App. 3d 1120, 1137, 225 Cal. Rptr. 120

[7] Proper Grant

Although broker may have violated professional ethics by signing contract for client, issue of who signed was irrelevant to claims presented, so trial court properly granted motion in limine to exclude evidence that broker signed. Ulloa v. McMillin Real Estate & Mortg. (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 333, 338, 57 Cal. Rptr. 3d 1

[8] Appellate Review of Order

Motion in limine to exclude evidence is not sufficient to preserve error for appellate review unless it was directed at particular, identifiable body of evidence and was made at time when trial court could determine evidentiary issues in proper context. Boeken v. Philip Morris, Inc. (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 1640, 1675, 26 Cal. Rptr. 638

Defendant failed to properly raise issue of trial court's exercise of discretion in denying defendant's motion in limine on retrial to exclude plaintiff's evidence of trust deeds and liens recorded after sale of property at issue, testimony by plaintiff's expert, and testimony relating to compensatory damages not awarded in first trial, when, on appeal, defendant failed to identify exhibits or refer to page numbers where appellate court could find evidence defendant claimed was admitted over its objection, failed to refer to trial court's ruling on its objections, failed to refer to or discuss any testimony or other evidence to show how it was prejudiced by unidentified trust deed and liens and unidentified testimony; and failed to support its contention with applicable authority. Simon v. San Paolo United States Holding Co., Inc. (2003) 113 Cal. App. 4th 1137, 1153, 7 Cal. Rptr. 3d 367

Writ of mandate is proper to compel decision on motion in limine when trial court refuses to hear motion on mistaken belief that it is without authority. Nadler v. Superior Court (1967) 255 Cal. App. 2d 523, 525, 63 Cal. Rptr. 352

Improper granting of Evid. Code § 352 motion in limine is reversible error when granting motion results in miscarriage of justice. Palmer v. Ted Stevens Honda, Inc. (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 530, 542, 238 Cal. Rptr. 363

§ 373.40 Checklist for Obtaining Motion in Limine

NOTE:

Scope of Checklist. This checklist sets forth the procedure to be followed in moving to obtain an order in limine. For procedure on noticed motions generally, see Ch. 372, Motions and Orders .

[1] Preliminary Determinations

- Identify facts that are inadmissible in evidence and potentially prejudicial to your client's case if referred to at trial [see §§ 373.12, 373.14].

- Consider facts opposing counsel may refer to in question as well as facts counsel may seek to put in evidence.

- Consider whether motion should address facts even though opposing counsel has not indicated any knowledge of or interest in these facts; opposing counsel may later learn of them or decide, on reevaluation of case, that they would be helpful to case.

- Determine if there is any other factual evidence, documentary or otherwise, for which pretrial ruling on admissibility would be desirable.

- Determine when and how to raise issue, including whether or not to proceed by written motion, and what local rules may require regarding addressing the issue in pretrial conference [see § 373.16].

[2] Prepare Papers

- Prepare sufficient copies of following papers for presentation to court and all counsel:

  - Motion in limine stating grounds for inclusion or exclusion of subject evidence or reference [see § 373.50 (form)].

[3] Present Motion

- Present motion orally or give copies of papers to court and counsel at trial, preferably before jury selection. This should be done on the record, in chambers, with all counsel present.

[4] Order in Limine

- If not familiar with local procedure, check with court clerk before trial to determine procedure for presentation and service of order in limine.

- Judge may sign proposed order, with or without modification, or may issue order orally on the record [see Ch. 372, Motions and Orders (procedures and orders generally)].

[2] Use of Form

This form of motion in limine should be presented to the judge, with copies to all counsel, when making a motion in limine on the record, before jury selection, in chambers with all counsel present. It should be accompanied by a supporting memorandum and a proposed order [see § 373.51].

For grounds for the motion, any objection to evidence that could be raised at trial may also be raised through a pretrial motion in limine [see Condon-Johnson & Assocs. Inc. v. Sacramento Mun. Utility Dist. (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 1384, 57 Cal. Rptr. 3d 849 (motion in limine may be premised on any ground sufficient to object to or move to strike same evidence when offered at trial); see §§ 373.12 -373.14]. For discussion of the procedure on the motion, see § 373.16.

Local rules of court or local court practice may require service of a written motion within a certain number of days before trial. A pretrial order or scheduling order entered in the case may also govern the proper timing of a motion in limine. Counsel should consult local rules or other guidelines for the appropriate procedures.

_____ Judge of the _____ Court

[2] Use of Form

This form of order granting a motion in limine is for submission to the trial judge, with copies to all counsel, along with the motion in limine [see § 373.50] and supporting memorandum. Counsel should check with the judge's clerk to determine whether a written order is appropriate and the procedure for filing and serving any signed order.

PART I. SCOPE

§ 374.01 Scope of Chapter

This part discusses renewed motions and motions to reconsider orders granting or denying a prior motion. For a discussion of notices of motion generally and procedure, see Ch. 372, Motions and Orders .

The chapter includes the following forms:

- Notices of motion for a renewed motion [see § 374.60] and for a motion to reconsider [see § 374.62].

- A supporting declaration for a renewed motion that may be adapted for use with a motion to reconsider [see § 374.61].

- An order granting or denying either type of motion [see § 374.63].

- Ex parte motion to set aside order obtained in violation of the requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 1008 [see § 374.64] and an order granting that motion [see § 374.65].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

33-374 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 374.10

§ 374.10 Governing Law

Renewed motions and motions to reconsider are governed by Code Civ. Proc. § 1008, case law, and local court rules.

The original Code Civ. Proc. § 1008, which was based on prior law, was added to the code in 1933 [Stats. 1933, ch. 744, § 177] and repealed in 1978 [Stats. 1978, ch. 631], at which time a new Code Civ. Proc. § 1008, operative January 1, 1979, was concurrently added. The 1978 version had wider applications, and broadened somewhat the case law on the subject [see George Ball Pacific, Inc. v. Coldwell Banker & Co. (1981) 117 Cal. App. 3d 248, 253, 172 Cal. Rptr. 597] . In 1992, the Legislature further amended Code Civ. Proc. § 1008, and, among other things, explicitly overturned case law that found that the section did not apply to interim orders [Stats. 1992, ch. 460, § 1(b)-(d)]. In 1998, the Legislature again amended Section 1008 to add subsection (g) to state expressly that the section applies to all applications for interim orders [Stats. 1998, ch. 200, § 2],

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

33-374 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 374.11

§ 374.11 "Motion to Reconsider" and "Renewed Motion" Distinguished

The term "motion to reconsider" is ordinarily used to describe a motion seeking to reopen consideration of a previous motion that the court either granted or denied [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(a)]. The purpose of this motion appears to be to allow the trial court to correct an erroneous ruling.

The term "renewed motion" is used to describe a new motion by the same party who made the prior motion, based on new or different facts, circumstances, or law, but seeking the same relief sought by the prior motion, which the trial court denied [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(b)]. Nevertheless, the term "motion to reconsider" is often applied collectively to both kinds of motions [see, e.g., Stewart v. Superior Court (1985) 163 Cal. App. 3d 915, 916, 209 Cal. Rptr. 870 (court describing motion under Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(b), which governs renewed motions, as motion for reconsideration); Graham v. Hansen (1982) 128 Cal. App. 3d 965, 969-970, 180 Cal. Rptr. 604 (renewed motion entitled motion for reconsideration)].

Volume 33: Motions After Trial thru Negotiable Instruments-Chs. 371-385
Chapter 374 MOTIONS TO RECONSIDER AND RENEWED MOTIONS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

33-374 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 374.12

§ 374.12 Jurisdiction Limited to Code Civ. Proc. § 1008 Motions

Code Civ. Proc. § 1008 curtails the availability of applications for reconsideration of orders and renewals of previous motions. The section explicitly limits the courts' jurisdiction regarding motions for reconsideration and renewed motions to those made in accordance with Code Civ. Proc. § 1008 [Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(e) (overturning holding of Ziller Electronics Lab GmbH v. Superior Court (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 1222, 1231, 254 Cal. Rptr. 410 (motion toreconsider may not be subject to 10-day limit of section 1008(a) if made under court's inherent jurisdiction)].

This limitation expressly applies to all applications for reconsideration of orders or renewal of motions, whether the order is interim or final [Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(e), (g)].

Until the California Supreme Court addressed the issue in Le Francois v. Goel (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 1094, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 249 , the appellate courts were split as to the implications of Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(e). Early cases interpreting the new code section generally held that a court acts in excess of its jurisdiction when it grants a motion to reconsider that is not based on "new or different facts, circumstances, or law" [see Gilberd v. AC Transit (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 1494, 1499, 38 Cal. Rptr. 2d 626 (distinguished, but not disapproved by, Le Francois v. Goel (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 1094, 1107, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 249); accord Pazderka v. Caballeros Dimas Alang, Inc. (1998) 62 Cal. App. 4th 658, 669-670, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 242 ; see also Garcia v. Hejmadi (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 674, 685, 691 n.*, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 228] .

Later appellate court cases considered the issue of whether Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(e), as initially interpreted, violated separation of powers principles. One line of cases held that Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(e) does not govern the court's ability, on its own motion, to reevaluate its own interim rulings and that, at any time prior to the entry of judgment, the court retains the inherent authority to change its decision [Darling, Hall & Rae v. Kritt (1999) 75 Cal. App. 4th 1148, 1156-1157, 89 Cal. Rptr. 2d 676 ; see also Schachter v. Citigroup, Inc. (2005) 126 Cal. App. 4th 726, 738, 23 Cal. Rptr. 3d 920 ; Kerns v. CSE Ins. Group (2003) 106 Cal. App. 4th 368, 388-390, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 754] . A second line of cases stated that Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(e) constituted an "impermissible interference with the core functions of the judiciary" and held that a trial court has inherent power to reconsider interim orders, either on its own motion or on the motion of a party [Scott Co. v. U.S. Fid. & Guar. Ins. Co. (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 197, 206-212, 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 89 (disapproved by Le Francois v. Goel (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 1094, 1107 n.5, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 249); see also Wozniak v. Lucutz (2002) 102 Cal. App. 4th 1031, 1041-1042, 126 Cal. Rptr. 2d 310 (disapproved by Le Francois v. Goel (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 1094, 1107 n.5, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 249); Remsen v. Lavacot (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 421, 427, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 612 (disapproved by Le Francois v. Goel (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 1094, 1107 n.5, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 249)].

The court granted review in Le Francois v. Goel (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 1094, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 249 to decide whether a trial court may ever, either on its own motion or on the motion of a party, reconsider its interim orders in the absence of new facts of new law. The court noted that separation of powers principles were applicable in this instance: "The Legislature may regulate the courts' inherent power to resolve specific controversies between parties, but it may not defeat or materially impair the courts' exercise of that power" [Le Francois v. Goel (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 1094, 1103, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 249] . After examining the legislative history, the court concluded that the Legislature did not want to hinder the courts' ability to act, but rather to protect the courts from repetitive motions. The legislature purpose of conserving judicial resources is advanced by an interpretation of Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(e) consistent with the line of cases limiting the parties' power to file repetitive motions but not a court's authority to reconsider interim rulings on its own motion, even in the absence of new facts or law [Le Francois v. Goel (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 1094, 1107, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 249] . Addressing concerns that this would be a "distinction without a difference," the court made clear that the distinction between a party filing a motion to reconsider and the court acting on its own motion is not a meaningless distinction. While a party may ask the court to reconsider a prior ruling, for example, at a status conference, a party may not file a written motion to reconsider that has procedural significance if it does not satisfy the requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 1008. The court did suggest that proper procedure would be for a court that had a concern about an erroneous prior ruling to inform the parties, solicit briefing, and hold a hearing [Le Francois v. Goel (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 1094, 1107-1108, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 249] .

Code Civ. Proc. § 1008 is not the exclusive vehicle by which a court can reconsider issues previously decided by demurrer and summary judgment; a trial court may revisit its prior rulings on its own initiative and use a party's motions in limine as a basis for granting judgment on the pleadings [Coshow v. City of Escondido (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 687, 702, 34 Cal. Rptr. 3d 19] .

Section 1008 itself does not by its terms purport to govern all repetitive motions, but instead describes itself as circumscribing the trial courts' "jurisdiction" over "applications to reconsider any order of a judge or court," and applications "for the renewal of a previous motion" [Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(e); see Standard Microsystems Corp. v. Winbond Electronics Corp. (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 868, 885, 102 Cal. Rptr. 3d 140]. Section 1008 does not, by its terms or by any principled application of them, apply to motions not described in it [Standard Microsystems Corp. v. Winbond Electronics Corp. (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 868, 890, 102 Cal. Rptr. 3d 140] . A motion for reconsideration explicitly directs the court's attention to a previous order and seeks to "modify, amend, or revoke [that] order" [Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(a); see Standard Microsystems Corp. v. Winbond Electronics Corp. (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 868, 889, 102 Cal. Rptr. 3d 140] . Merely asking the court to grant relief that is inconsistent with a prior order, whether by the same or a different judge, is not a "motion for reconsideration." It may be barred by other, court-made rules of law, but it is not barred by section 1008 [Standard Microsystems Corp. v. Winbond Electronics Corp. (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 868, 890, 102 Cal. Rptr. 3d 140] .

Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(b), which governs a second application for "the same order" the court has already declined to make, two motions seek the "same order" when they ask the court to issue the same "direction." However, a motion seeking a previously denied order in addition to newly requested relief is not entirely barred, as if its repetitive aspect somehow tainted the whole [Standard Microsystems Corp. v. Winbond Electronics Corp. (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 868, 891-893, 102 Cal. Rptr. 3d 140] .

A court has jurisdiction to reconsider an order denying relief from default under Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b), which the court is specifically authorized to make in the first instance after judgment has been entered, after entry of judgment, as long it does so in accordance with the requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 1008. Nothing in the language of Code Civ. Proc. § 1008 limits the court's reconsideration authority to pretrial, i.e., "interim," orders. To the contrary, Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(e) applies to all applications to reconsider any order of a judge or court, or for the renewal of a previous motion, whether the order deciding the previous matter or motion is interim or final [D.R.S. Trading Co., Inc. v. Barnes (2009) 180 Cal. App. 4th 815, 819-821,103 Cal. Rptr. 3d 329 ; see In re Marriage of Barthold (2008) 158 Cal. App. 4th 1301, 1308, 70 Cal. Rptr. 3d 691 (expressly rejecting appellant's assertion that trial court had authority to reconsider only "interim" decisions and could not grant reconsideration of postjudgment motion)].

Even if Code Civ. Proc. § 1008 applies by its terms to a second motion for relief from default, there is no legislative intention to bar the operation of Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b) [Standard Microsystems Corp. v. Winbond Electronics Corp. (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 868, 893-896, 102 Cal. Rptr. 3d 140 ; for discussion of Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b) generally, see Ch. 489, Relief from Judgments and Orders]. When a defendant makes the required prima facie showing for mandatory relief under § 473(b) by submitting the affidavit of the original attorney detailing the erroneous opinions, advice, and fundamental procedural misconceptions and missteps that produced the original default, as well as the ensuing judgment, under § 473(b), the court is required to vacate the resulting default and judgment. Insofar as a conflict exists between Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(b) and 1008, it is resolved in favor of allowing relief under section 473(b), not denying it under section 1008 [Standard Microsystems Corp. v. Winbond Electronics Corp. (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 868, 894-895, 102 Cal. Rptr. 3d 140] . On the other hand, when a party invokes the mandatory provisions of § 473(b) unsuccessfully and then seeks to invoke them again, no categorical rule governs, for in some cases the second motion may be only a rehash of the first, while in others it might assert attorney mistakes directly involved in bringing about the first denial [Standard Microsystems Corp. v. Winbond Electronics Corp. (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 868, 895, 102 Cal. Rptr. 3d 140] .

Chapter 374 MOTIONS TO RECONSIDER AND RENEWED MOTIONS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

33-374 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 374.14

§ 374.14 Availability of Motion

[1] Motion to Reconsider

When an application for an order has been made to a judge or to the court and refused in whole or in part, or granted, or granted conditionally or on terms, any party affected by the order may, within 10 days after service on the party of written notice of entry of the order and based on new or different facts, circumstances, or law, apply to the same judge who made the order, to reconsider the matter and to modify, amend, or revoke the prior order [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(a); for a form of notice of motion, see § 374.62].

The applying party must state by affidavit (or declaration under Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5) what application was made before, when and to what judge, what order or decisions were made, and what new or different facts, circumstances, or law are claimed to be shown [Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(a); for a form of declaration, see § 374.61].

The facts asserted on the motion for reconsideration need not be newly discovered; they need only be different from those asserted on the original motion [Careau & Co. v. Security Pacific Business Credit, Inc. (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 1371, 1386-1387 n.9, 272 Cal. Rptr. 387 (applying Section 1008(a) as enacted, Stats. 1978, ch. 631)]. To be entitled to reconsideration, however, in addition to showing that evidence of new or different facts exist, the applying party should show that the party has a satisfactory explanation for failing to produce such evidence at the original hearing [New York Times Co. v. Superior Court (2005) 135 Cal. App. 4th 206, 213, 37 Cal. Rptr. 3d 338 ; McPherson v. City of Manhattan Beach (2000) 78 Cal. App. 4th 1252, 1265, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 725 ; Kalivas v. Barry Controls Corp. (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 1152, 1160-1161, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 200 ; see Pazderka v. Caballeros Dimas Alang, Inc. (1998) 62 Cal. App. 4th 658, 670, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 242 (must not only provide new evidence, but also satisfactory explanation for failure to produce at earlier time); Lucas v. Santa Maria Public Airport Dist. (1995) 39 Cal. App. 4th 1017, 1027-1028, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 177 (moving party must provide trial court with satisfactory explanation why he or she failed to produce evidence at earlier time); accord, Mink v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal. App. 4th 1338, 1342, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 195] .

In addition, the court may, on its own motion, reconsider a prior order it entered and enter a different order any time it determines that there has been a change of law, not including a later enacted statute without retroactive application, that warrants reconsideration of the prior order [Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(c); Valdez v. Himmelfarb (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 1261, 1275, 51 Cal. Rptr. 3d 195 ; see Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(f)].

[2] Renewed Motion

When a party whose original application for an order was refused in whole or in part, or granted conditionally or on terms, subsequently applies for the same order on new or different facts, circumstances, or law, it shall be shown by affidavit (or declaration under Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5) what application was made before, when and to what judge, what order or decisions were made, and what new or different facts, circumstances, or law are claimed to be shown [Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(b); for a form of notice of motion, see § 374.60, and for the supporting declaration, see § 374.61].

Whether the "new" facts alleged are sufficient to satisfy the requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(b) is a question confided to the sound discretion of the trial court, with which the appellate court will not interfere absent an obvious showing of abuse [Graham v. Hansen (1982) 128 Cal. App. 3d 965, 971, 180 Cal. Rptr. 604 (prior law)]. Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(b) does not, however, permit a party to relitigate as a special defense a law and order motion that was previously denied [Stewart v. Superior Court (1985) 163 Cal. App. 3d 915, 916, 209 Cal. Rptr. 870] .

Chapter 374 MOTIONS TO RECONSIDER AND RENEWED MOTIONS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

33-374 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 374.15

§ 374.15 Time Limitations on Motions

[1] Motion to Reconsider

An application to reconsider must be made within 10 days after the party making the application is served written notice of entry of the order [Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(a); see Advanced Building Maintenance v. State Comp. Ins. Fund (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 1388, 1392, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 310 (motion untimely when filed on October 31, 1994, because amended notice of ruling on demurrer and motion to strike was served on October 12, 1994, and motion for reconsideration should have been filed by October 22, 1994)]. This time limit is jurisdictional [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(e)]. However, the statute sets no time limit for ruling on the motion.

The 1992 addition of subsection (e) to Section 1008, abrogates prior case law that held that the 10-day limit was not jurisdictional [see Stats. 1992, ch. 460, § 1(b); see also, e.g., Ziller Electronics Lab GmbH v. Superior Court (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 1222, 1231, 254 Cal. Rptr. 410] .

Under prior law, the time limitations on a motion to reconsider were affected by whether the motion involved an interim order, a final order, or an order granting judgment [see Blue Mountain Development Co. v. Carville (1982) 132 Cal. App. 3d 1005, 1012-1013, 183 Cal. Rptr. 594 (disapproved on another ground in Passavanti v. Williams (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 1602, 1607-1608 n.5, 275 Cal. Rptr. 887)]. In amending Section 1008 in 1992, the Legislature noted that some California courts had found that the section does not apply to interim orders, expressly stated its intent that Section 1008 applies to both interim and final orders, and stated that inclusion of interim orders within the application of the section is desirable in order to reduce the number of motions to reconsider and renewals of previous motions heard by judges in California [Stats. 1992, ch. 460, § 1]. In view of this express intent, counsel should use prior case law construing various provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 1008 with caution.

[2] Renewed Motion

Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(b) sets no time limit on either the making of a renewed motion or for ruling on it. However, the motion must be based upon new or different facts, circumstances, or law, and supported by a declaration showing what application was made before, when and to what judge, what order or decisions were made, and what new or different facts, circumstances, or law are claimed to be shown [Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(b)]. Thus, presumably the motion should be made as soon as reasonable after the new or different information becomes available.

[3] Appealable Orders

A second motion, decided after an appealable order denying the first motion has become final, cannot be considered as a renewal of, or as an amendment to, the first motion [Rambush v. Rambush (1968) 267 Cal. App. 2d 734, 741, 73 Cal. Rptr. 268] . It would be error to grant a motion for reconsideration of a final order absent a showing of newly discovered evidence because a trial court has no jurisdiction to correct judicial error in the making of a final order except as provided by statute [Blue Mountain Development Co. v. Carville (1982) 132 Cal. App. 3d 1005, 1013, 183 Cal. Rptr. 594 (disapproved on another ground in Passavanti v. Williams (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 1602, 1607-1608 n.5, 275 Cal. Rptr. 887); see also [4], below]. Thus, for example, an order denying a motion for class certification is an appealable order and is not subject to renewal after the time to appeal has expired [Stephen v. Enterprise Rent-A-Car (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 806, 811, 816-818, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 130] .

Recourse in this situation might be, for example, to a motion for relief from the order on the basis of mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect under Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b), if the more rigorous requirements of that section can be established [see Stephen v. Enterprise Rent-A-Car (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 806, 818, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 130 ; Rambush v. Rambush (1968) 267 Cal. App. 2d 734, 742, 73 Cal. Rptr. 268] . For discussion and forms of that and other methods of seeking relief from orders, see Ch. 489, Relief From Judgments and Orders .

[4] Orders Granting Judgment

[a] Limitation on Reconsideration After Judgment Is Entered

Some final appealable orders are actually judgments [see [3], above] and may not be reconsidered by the court after they are entered. Although a court may reconsider its order granting or denying a motion and may even reconsider or alter its judgment so long as the judgment has not yet been entered, once judgment has been entered, the court may not reconsider it and loses its unrestricted power to change the judgment. The court may correct judicial error only certain limited procedures such as motions for new trial and motions to vacate the judgment [Passavanti v. Williams (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 1602, 1605-1606, 275 Cal. Rptr. 887 (prior law; involving motion to reconsider order granting summary judgment after judgment had been entered); see Ramon v. Aerospace Corp. (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 1233, 1236-1238, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 217 (Passavanti followed; after entry of judgment, trial court loses its power to rule on reconsideration motion)]. Once a trial court has entered judgment, the court is without jurisdiction to grant a motion for reconsideration even if the motion was brought before the judgment was entered and is still pending at the time of entry of judgment [APRI Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1999) 76 Cal. App. 4th 176, 180-182, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 171] .

Nonetheless, a minute order granting a motion for summary judgment is an interim order subject to a motion to reconsider [see George Ball Pacific, Inc. v. Coldwell Banker & Co. (1981) 117 Cal. App. 3d 248, 252-253, 172 Cal. Rptr. 597 (prior law); see also Stratton v. First Nat. Life Ins. Co. (1989) 210 Cal. App. 3d 1071, 1081-1082, 258 Cal. Rptr. 721 (prior law; criticized on another ground in Passavanti v. Williams (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 1602, 1608 n.5, 275 Cal. Rptr. 887)].

Also, an order granting a motion for discretionary dismissal of an action for failure to effect service within two years after the action was commenced is subject to reconsideration on motion [Ladd v. Dart Equipment Corp. (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 1088, 1091-1092, 281 Cal. Rptr. 813 (prior law; motion based on Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(a))].

[b] Limitations Regarding Specific Orders

Additional time limits may be imposed because of the nature of the order sought on the motion to reconsider or renewed motion. For example, the Court of Appeal of the First Appellate District, Division Two, citing cases, has pointed out that a timely motion to reconsider an appealable order granting a new trial, to be consistent with the jurisdictional 60-day limit for acting on new trial motions [see Code Civ. Proc. § 660], must be ruled on within the 60 days or is deemed denied by operation of law, and that, by parallel reasoning, an order denying a timely motion to reconsider an appealable dismissal order must be entered within the jurisdictional 60 days following entry of judgment or it will not extend the time under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.108(b) in which to file a notice of appeal from the dismissal order [Stephen v. Enterprise Rent-A-Car (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 806, 818, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 130] . To the extent Stephen may suggest that a motion to reconsider a properly entered written order of dismissal, which constitutes the judgment [see Code Civ. Proc. § 581d], is permissible, it appears to beinconsistent with the holding in Passavanti v. Williams (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 1602, 275 Cal. Rptr. 887 , that a court cannot reconsider an order granting a judgment after the judgment has been entered [Passavanti v. Williams (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 1602, 1606, 275 Cal. Rptr. 887] .

The Stephen court further pointed out that if jurisdictional considerations compel implying time limits on motions under Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(a), they must in some cases also limit Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(b). Thus, for example, an open ended time for "renewed" motions is incompatible with California law deeming death-knell class certification denials final and binding when not timely appealed. The onus is thus on a plaintiff to bring such motion within whatever time limit applies for fixing the finality of the order [Stephen v. Enterprise Rent-A-Car (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 806, 818, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 130] .

Chapter 374 MOTIONS TO RECONSIDER AND RENEWED MOTIONS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

33-374 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 374.16

§ 374.16 Grounds for Motion

[1] New or Different Facts, Circumstances, or Law

Both motions to reconsider and renewed motions are required to be based on new or different facts, circumstances, or law [Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(a), (b)]. In both cases, a moving party must provide a supporting affidavit (or declaration under Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5) setting forth what new or different facts, circumstances, or law are claimed to be shown. [Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(a), (b); see, e.g., Pazderka v. Caballeros Dimas Alang, Inc. (1998) 62 Cal. App. 4th 658, 670, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 242 (counsel's declaration that counsel mistakenly believed Code Civ. Proc. § 998 offer included issue of attorney's fees and costs did not disclose new facts but merely counsel's mistake; mistake based on ignorance of law or imprecision in drafting offer is not proper basis for reconsideration)].

In addition to showing that evidence of new or different facts, circumstances, or law exist, the party moving for reconsideration must show that the party has a satisfactory explanation for failing to produce the evidence at an earlier time [New York Times Co. v. Superior Court (2005) 135 Cal. App. 4th 206, 213, 37 Cal. Rptr. 3d 338 ; McPherson v. City of Manhattan Beach (2000) 78 Cal. App. 4th 1252, 1265, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 725 ; Pazderka v. Caballeros Dimas Alang, Inc. (1998) 62 Cal. App. 4th 658, 670, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 242 ; Garcia v. Hejmadi (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 674, 685-691, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 228 (threshold showing of diligence required, i.e., an explanation is required of why the newly discovered matter was not presented earlier); Lucas v. Santa Maria Public Airport Dist. (1995) 39 Cal. App. 4th 1017, 1027-1028, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 177 (moving party must provide trial court with satisfactory explanation why he or she failed to produce evidence at earlier time); accord Mink v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal. App. 4th 1338, 1342, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 195 ; see also Kalivas v. Barry Controls Corp. (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 1152, 1160-1161, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 200 (party should show that new or different facts exist, and party has satisfactory explanation for failure to produce such evidence at an earlier time)]. Moreover, when the basis for a motion for reconsideration is "different law," a showing must be made that there is a satisfactory explanation for failing to provide this information earlier [Baldwin v. Home Savings of America (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th 1192, 1193, 1198-1200, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 592] .

A similar showing under former Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(a) and (b), a motion to reconsider was to be based on an alleged "different state of facts" and a renewed motion was to be based on "new" facts. Therefore, cases distinguishing between the two standards should be used with caution [see, e.g., Rains v. Superior Court (1984) 150 Cal. App. 3d

933, 944, 198 Cal. Rptr. 249 (prior law; involving a motion to reconsider a ruling sustaining a demurrer to the complaint without leave to amend); Blue Mountain Development Co. v. Carville (1982) 132 Cal. App. 3d 1005, 1013, 183 Cal. Rptr. 594 (prior law; involving a motion to reconsider a denial of an application for a writ of execution; disapproved on another ground in Passavanti v. Williams (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 1602, 1607-1608 n.5, 275 Cal. Rptr. 887)].

One court has stated that it could comfortably assume that the (current) language "new or different facts, circumstances, or law," was designed to approve generally, the case law relaxation of what constitutes new or different facts justifying reconsideration. This does not mean, however, that all facts not previously presented to a court now suffice [Garcia v. Hejmadi (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 674, 690, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 228] .

A court's failure to consider properly submitted points and authorities may constitute "new circumstances" such that the trial court has jurisdiction to grant reconsideration under Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(a) [Johnston v. Corrigan (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 553, 556, 25 Cal. Rptr. 3d 657] .

An alleged new or different law does not include a later enacted statute without a retroactive application [Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(f)].

If the court at any time determines that there has been a change of law that warrants the court to reconsider a prior order it entered, it may do so on its own motion and enter a different order [Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(c)]. Section 1008(c) means exactly what it says. When a trial court concludes that there has been a change of law that warrants reconsideration of a prior order, it has jurisdiction to reconsider and change its order [Valdez v. Himmelfarb (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 1261, 1275, 51 Cal. Rptr. 3d 195 (appellate court's decision regarding statute of limitations issue constituted a "change of law"); International Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1998) 62 Cal. App. 4th 784, 788, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 849 (based on two recently decided appellate opinions, judge reconsidered and vacated earlier ruling granting summary adjudication of issues)].

Moreover, Code Civ. Proc. § 1008 does not govern the court's ability, on itsown motion, to reevaluate its own interim rulings. The trial court retains inherent authority to change its decision at any time before entry of judgment and thus in exercising its inherent authority is not bound by the new fact or law requirement in Code Civ. Proc. § 1008 [Le Francois v. Goel (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 1094, 1107, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 249 ; Darling, Hall & Rae v. Kritt (1999) 75 Cal. App. 4th 1148, 1155-1157, 89 Cal. Rptr. 2d 676 ; for further discussion, see § 374.12].

[2] No New or Different Facts, Circumstances, or Law

If no new or different facts, circumstances, or law exist, counsel should ascertain whether the order made is one that is subject to attack by a statutory procedure, for example, a motion for relief from mistake, inadvertence, surprise, excusable neglect under Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b) [for discussion and forms, see Ch. 489, Relief From Judgments and Orders], or for correction of clerical error under Code Civ. Proc. § 473(d) [for discussion and forms, see Ch. 489, Relief From Judgments and Orders], a motion for new trial on the ground of error in law under Code Civ. Proc. § 657(7) [see Blue Mountain Development Co. v. Carville (1982) 132 Cal. App. 3d 1005, 1013, 183 Cal. Rptr. 594 (dictum; disapproved on another ground in Passavanti v. Williams (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 1602, 1607-1608 n.5, 275 Cal. Rptr. 887); for discussion and forms, see Ch. 371, Motions After Trial, § 371.60 et seq.], or subject to attack by an established nonstatutory motion to vacate the prior order on the ground of extrinsic fraud or mistake [for discussion and forms, see Ch. 489, Relief From Judgments and Orders]. If it is, counsel should proceed by such a motion. However, motions brought under these statutes cannot be used to circumvent the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 1008 by merely raising the same issues on which the court previously ruled [see Gilberd v. AC Transit (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 1494, 1502, 38 Cal. Rptr. 2d 626 (rejecting general relief mechanism of Code Civ. Proc. § 473 and motion for new trial under Code Civ. Proc. § 657 used merely to circumvent jurisdictional effect of motion for reconsideration); but see Community Memorial Hospital v. County of Ventura (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 199, 204-205, 56 Cal. Rptr. 2d 732

(declining to follow Gilbert to extent it might be read to preclude a motion for summary judgment based on issues similar to those argued and lost on demurrer)].

If no alternative motion is available, counsel should determine whether the renewed motion or motion to reconsider is authorized under, or recognized by, case law. If the prior order was an appealable order, or subject to review by extraordinary writ, counsel should determine what impact the granting or denial of the motion for reconsideration will have on the time to appeal, or to seek review by extraordinary writ [see §§ 374.23, 374.24].

For the purposes of *Code Civ. § 374.18 Res Judicata

The plea of res judicata does not deprive a court of jurisdiction to pass on and decide a motion after it has previously decided a like motion. Although its action on the second motion may be erroneous, it is not in excess of jurisdiction [Imperial Beverage Co. v. Superior Court (1944) 24 Cal. 2d 627, 634, 150 P.2d 881 (prior law); see also Curtin v. Koskey (1991)231 Cal. App. 3d 873, 876-877, 282 Cal. Rptr. 706 ; Hennigan v. United Pacific Ins. Co. (1975) 53 Cal. App. 3d 1, 7, 125 Cal. Rptr. 408 (prior law)]. However, failure to appeal from two prior orders, each denying a motion to vacate a summary judgment of bail forfeiture [see Penal Code § 1308], has been held to bar, on the ground of res judicata, a third motion seeking the same relief [see People v. Silva (1981) 114 Cal. App. 3d 538, 549-552, 170 Cal. Rptr. 713] .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

33-374 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 374.19

§ 374.19 Motion to Be Made Before Same Judge or Court

[1] Requirement

A motion to reconsider an order must be made to the same judge or court that made the order [Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(a)]. Formerly, a motion to reconsider had to be made before the same judge who made the prior order [see former Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(a); see also Curtin v. Koskey (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 873, 877, 282 Cal. Rptr 706 (applying Section 1008(a) as enacted by Stats. 1978, ch. 631)].

No express limitation is made on who may hear a renewed motion [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(b)].

When either type of motion is directed to a judge other than the one who decided the original motion, the proper procedure is for the second judge to direct the moving party to the judge who ruled on the first motion. If the original judge is unavailable, the second judge may hear the reconsideration motion [Scott Co. v. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Ins. Co. (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 197, 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 89 (different judge authorized to entertain reconsideration motion when original judge was unavailable); Ziller Electronics Lab GmbH v. Superior Court (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 1222, 1232, 254 Cal. Rptr. 410 (abrogated on other grounds by 1992 amendment of Code Civ. Proc. § 1008)]. Unavailability of thefirst judge that authorizes a new judge to entertain the reconsideration motion, includes unavailability due to retirement [see International Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1998) 62 Cal. App. 4th 784, 786 n.2, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 849] .

Even though Section 1008 now allows the motion to be made to the court, rather than just the judge, that made the prior order, this preferred procedure is not inconsistent with the statute, and may continue to be preferred. The attorney may wish to verify local practice.

[2] Order by Court Commissioner

If the prior order was made by a court commissioner sitting as a temporary judge under the parties' stipulation, the stipulation allowing the commissioner to hear the matter in which the order was made confers authority on the commissioner to rule on the motion to reconsider the ruling, and a second stipulation is not required [McCartney v. Superior Court (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 1334, 1339, 273 Cal. Rptr. 250 (prior law)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

§ 374.20 Opposition to Motion

Because the nature of a motion is determined by the nature of the relief sought and not by the label attached to it [San Francisco v. Muller (1960) 177 Cal. App. 2d 600, 603, 2 Cal. Rptr. 383] , in opposing a renewed motion or motion to reconsider, counsel should not necessarily limit his or her opposition to the propriety of that motion. Rather, counsel should carefully examine both the grounds stated in the notice of motion and the supporting papers to determine if the gravamen of the motion is something other than what it purports to be. For example, the motion might in reality be one seeking relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b) or (d), or under some other statute [see, e.g., Robinson v. Varela (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 611, 617, 136 Cal. Rptr. 783 (gravamen of motion to reconsider was a motion for relief under former Code Civ. Proc. § 556, relating to writ of attachment, and so treated by appellate court)].

If the gravamen is something other than simply a renewed motion or motion to reconsider, counsel, in his or her opposing memorandum of points and authorities, should include any points and authorities in opposition to the motion actually made.

§ 374.21 Ruling on Motion

If it is apparent to the court that a subsequent motion, after denial of the first, is based on substantially the same grounds and seeks substantially the same relief as the preceding motion, the court may summarily deny it without further reconsideration. The court may also reconsider the prior matter and deny the motion to reconsider or it may reconsider the prior matter and reverse the prior decisions but it should not ignore the notice of motion for reconsideration [see Muller v. Tanner (1969) 2 Cal. App. 3d 445, 460-461, 82 Cal. Rptr. 738] .

On reconsideration, the court's power to weigh the conflicts is the same as on its first consideration of the motion. In other words, the power of the court to resolve the conflicts is not exhausted by its conclusions of the first order. Rather, it has power to reexamine the evidence on reconsideration and arrive at a different conclusion if it thinks the ends of justice will be served thereby [see Harth v. Ten Eyck (1941) 16 Cal. 2d 829, 833-834, 108 P.2d 675 ; Lopez v. Larson (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d 383, 393, 153 Cal. Rptr. 912] . There is no impropriety or error by the judge in reversing the prior order on later concluding it was wrong [Hover v. MacKenzie (1954) 122 Cal. App. 2d 852, 857, 266 P.2d 60 ; see also Rambush v. Rambush (1968) 267 Cal. App. 2d 734, 740 n.3, 73 Cal. Rptr. 268] .

Also, care should be taken to distinguish a court's decision for or against reconsideration from its decision after reconsideration. If a litigant seeks reconsideration of an order denying a motion, such as a motion to intervene, the trial court may sometimes enter an order "denying reconsideration" when it is plain from the record that the first motion was denied without prejudice and the second ruling was intended to be a ruling on the merits of the motion for intervention rather than simply a denial of reconsideration [Blue Mountain Development Co. v. Carville (1982) 132 Cal. App. 3d 1005, 1011, 183 Cal. Rptr. 594 (disapproved on another ground in Passavanti v. Williams (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 1602, 1607-1608 n.5, 275 Cal. Rptr. 887)].

§ 374.22 Review of Order on Motion to Reconsider

Appealable orders in civil actions and proceedings are listed in Code Civ. Proc. § 904.1 and 904.2, and these statutes do not include an order granting or denying a motion to reconsider [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 904.1 and 904.2]. If the order being reconsidered is nonappealable, then the order denying reconsideration is also nonappealable [Ghanooni v. Super Shuttle (1992) 2 Cal. App. 4th 380, 381 n.2, 3 Cal. Rptr. 2d 43 (criticized on other grounds in Greene v. Amante (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 684, 689, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 571)]. However, if the original order is appealable, the courts of appeal are in conflict as to whether, or under what circumstances, the denial of a motion to reconsider is appealable.

In Gill v. Hughes (1991) 227 Cal. App. 3d 1299, 1310 n.3, 278 Cal. Rptr. 306 , the court noted that when a motion for reconsideration raises new facts, the appellate courts have reached different conclusions regarding the appealability of the denial of that motion. The Gill court cited a comparison of Santee v. Santa Clara County Office of Education (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 702, 269 Cal. Rptr. 605 (Sixth Appellate District; order denying motion for reconsideration that raises new facts is appealable), with Rojes v. Riverside General Hospital (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 1151, 250 Cal. Rptr. 435 (Fourth Appellate District; order denying motion for reconsideration is always nonappealable; overruled on another ground by the same district and division in Passavanti v. Williams (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 1602, 1605, 275 Cal. Rptr. 887) [Gill v. Hughes (1991) 227 Cal. App. 3d 1299, 1310 n.3, 278 Cal. Rptr. 306 ; see Crotty v. Trader (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 765, 768-769, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 818 (First Dist., Div. Two; court followed Rojes in holding reconsideration order nonappealable even if court granted reconsideration and subsequently denied motion on its merits)].

Denial of a motion to reconsider may be challenged by peremptory writ [Mink v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal. App. 4th 1338, 1344, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 195 (ordering reconsideration of grant of summary adjudication dismissing claims as untimely after discovering that complaint was timely filed because of an intervening weekend and court holiday); cf. International Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1998) 62 Cal. App. 4th 784, 786 n.2, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 849 (order denying summary adjudication is reviewable on appeal from final judgment; appellate court saw no reason why, absent other compelling facts, it ought to use writ procedure to review orders to grant or deny reconsideration of a summary adjudication order and denied petition for writ of mandate)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

33-374 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 374.23

§ 374.23 Effect of Filing Valid Motion to Reconsider on Time to Appeal Original Order

[1] When Time Is Extended

The time for filing a notice of appeal from a superior court judgment or appealable order is set forth in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.104.

Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.108 provides for an extension of time when a motion for reconsideration of an appealable order is made. Specifically, Rule 8.108 provides that if a "valid" motion to reconsider an appealable order is made, the time to appeal that order is the earliest of: (1) 30 days after the clerk or a party served an order denying the motion or a notice of entry of that order; (2) 90 days after the first motion to reconsider is filed; or (3) 180 days after entry of the appealable order [California Rules of Ct., Rule 8.108(d)].

The Fourth Appellate District held that while a motion for reconsideration of an appealable order will extend the time to file a notice of appeal from the order, a motion for reconsideration (of the order granting or constituting the judgment) filed after judgment has been entered will not extend the time to appeal from the judgment [Passavanti v. Williams (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 1602, 1605-1608, 275 Cal. Rptr. 887] . That is because a trial court loses its power to rule on a reconsideration motion after entry of judgment and thus a reconsideration motion made after entry of judgment cannot extend the time to file a notice of appeal under Cal. Rules of Ct., 8.104 [Ramon v. Aerospace Corp. (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 1233, 1236-1238, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 217 (Second Dist., Div. Three; Passavanti followed) ; see Crotty v. Trader (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 765, 771, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 818 (First Dist., Div. Two; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.108, which extends time to file a notice of appeal when a motion for new trial is served, filed and denied, does not apply to a postjudgment motion for reconsideration); but see Fryer v. Kaiser Foundation Health Plan, Inc. (1963) 221 Cal. App. 2d 674, 676-677, 34 Cal. Rptr. 688 (Second Dist., Div. Four; reconsideration motion made after entry of judgment of dismissal which was granted and thereafter trial court reaffirmed its judgment of dismissal construed as new judgment which began period for filing notice of appeal under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.104)].

Thus, to determine whether the time for appeal is extended by a motion to reconsider, orders must first of all be distinguished from judgments, and, secondly, it must be determined whether the order for which reconsideration is sought is appealable [see Passavanti v. Williams (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 1602, 1605, 275 Cal. Rptr. 887] .

When a reconsideration motion has been made before entry of judgment and thereafter judgment is entered without a ruling on the motion, it has been held that the entry of the judgment has the effect of denying the motion by implication. A motion for reconsideration refiled thereafter is an invalid motion. Rather, the judgment may be attacked in one of three ways, that is, by a motion for a new trial, by a motion to vacate, or by filing a timely notice of appeal [Ramon v. Aerospace Corp. (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 1233, 1238, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 217] .

Orders may be made before trial, during trial, after trial, or after entry of a final judgment. An order is any "direction of a court or judge made or entered in writing and not included in a judgment" [Code Civ. Proc. § 1003]. Despite the use of the word "direction" in this statutory definition, not every order need include a direction to do anything but may, for example, simply deny a motion and yet be an appealable order [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 904.1(a)(2), (4)-(6), (13), 904.2(b), (c), (e)-(g); see also Passavanti v. Williams (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 1602, 1605 n.3, 275 Cal. Rptr. 887] .

A judgment, on the other hand, is the final determination of the rights of the parties in an action [Code Civ. Proc. § 577] or proceeding [Code Civ. Proc. § 1064]. Although there may be numerous orders made throughout an action or proceeding, there is only one judgment [Passavanti v. Williams (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 1602, 1605, 275 Cal. Rptr. 887] .

Nevertheless, some determinations, though characterized as orders, are in effect final judgments for purposes of appeal, and orders of dismissal are considered judgments under Code Civ. Proc. § 581d [Passavanti v. Williams (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 1602, 1607-1608 n.5, 275 Cal. Rptr. 887 ; see also APRI Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1999) 76 Cal. App. 4th 176, 181, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 171 (entry of order in "Civil Register Report" satisfies requirement of Code Civ. Proc. § 581d so as to constitute entry of judgment).] Moreover, judgments are sometimes mislabeled as orders. Nevertheless, a judgment, no matter how designated, is the final determination of the rights of the parties in an action, and an order, which is the final determination in the action, is the judgment [Passavanti v. Williams (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 1602, 1606, 275 Cal. Rptr. 887] .

§ 374.24 Effect of Motion to Reconsider on Review by Extraordinary Writ

The delay resulting from the making of a motion to reconsider might also result in loss of a right to review by extraordinary writ. For example, Code Civ. Proc. § 400 authorizes review by mandate of a superior court order granting or denying a motion for change of venue, provided the petition for the writ is filed within 20 days after service of a written notice of the order, or within up to 30 days if the superior court grants an extension for good cause prior to expiration of the initial 20-day period. (Although a superior court order, other than in a limited civil case, granting or denying a motion for change of venue is not appealable [see Code Civ. Proc. § 904.1], a superior court order in a limited civil case granting or denying such a motion is [Code Civ. Proc. § 904.2(c)].) In Dunas v. Superior Court (1970) 9 Cal. App. 3d 236, 87 Cal. Rptr. 719 , the trial court granted defendants' motion for change of venue on December 9, 1969, and notice of the ruling was mailed to plaintiff's counsel on December 19, 1969. On December 30, 1969, plaintiff filed a notice of motion for reconsideration. The trial court granted the motion to reconsider on February 20, 1970, and, on reconsideration, again ruled that the case be transferred. Notice of the ruling was mailed to plaintiff's counsel on February 27, 1970, and plaintiff filed a petition for writ of mandate under Code Civ. Proc. § 400 on March 6, 1970. The court of appeal held, under the circumstances of the case, that there was no recognized procedure for plaintiff's motion to reconsider and, accordingly, the trial court acted in excess of its jurisdiction in entertaining and ruling on the motion. It denied the petition for writ of mandate on the ground that, since plaintiff did not seek appropriate and timely relief from the only effective order made, that is, the order of December 9, granting the motion for change of venue, he lost the right to a review on the merits [Dunas v. Superior Court (1970) 9 Cal. App. 3d 236, 239, 240, 87 Cal. Rptr. 719 (prior law)].

On the other hand, it has been held that an order denying a renewed motion to quash service of summons on the ground of lack of personal jurisdiction after denial of the original motion [former Code Civ. Proc. § 416.1 (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(a)(1))] is reviewable by mandate under former Code Civ. Proc. § 416.3 [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(c)] if the petition was filed within 10 days after service on the petitioning party of a written notice of entry of the order denying the second motion although filed more than 10 days after service of written notice of entry of the order denying the first motion [Josephson v. Superior Court (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 354, 360, 33 Cal. Rptr. 196 (prior law; issuing a peremptory writ of mandate to the superior court requiring it to enter its order quashing service of summons on petitioner); see also Amparan v. Superior Court (1966) 246 Cal. App. 2d 41, 43, 54 Cal. Rptr. 501] .

CAUTION:

Code Civ. Proc. § 1008* was amended in 1992, effective January 1, 1993, for the following purposes, among other things:

(1) To apply to interim orders [Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(e)],

(2) To provide that the 10-day limitation period for motions to reconsider runs from receipt of the written notice of entry of order [Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(a)],

(3) To provide that a motion to reconsider should be made to the same judge or court that made the order [Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(a)],

(4) To make the grounds for a motion to reconsider the same as for a renewed motion (i.e., based on new or different facts, circumstances, or law) [Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(a), (b)], and

(5) To limit jurisdiction to hear motions to reconsider and renewed motions to the provisions of the section [Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(f)].

An additional amendment in 1998 further clarified that Seciton 1008 applies to all applications for interim orders [Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(g)].

The decisions discussed below, many of which were decided under prior law, are cited as persuasive rather than controlling authority on points of law that are arguably still valid under Code Civ. Proc. § 1008.

[1] Appeal

Reconsideration order nonappealable even if court granted reconsideration and subsequently denied motion on its merits. Crotty v. Trader (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 765, 768-769, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 818

Order denying reconsideration of nonappealable order as itself nonappealable. Ghanooni v. Super Shuttle (1992) 2 Cal. App. 4th 380, 381, 3 Cal. Rptr. 2d 43 (criticized on other grounds in Greene v. Amante (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 684, 689, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 571)

When order for which reconsideration is sought is not final and appealable in its own right, order denying reconsideration as not appealable. Jade K. v. Viguri (1989) 210 Cal. App. 3d 1459, 1466, 258 Cal. Rptr. 907

Order denying reconsideration as appealable as order made after judgment if order as to which reconsideration is sought is appealable. Rabbitt v. Vincente (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 170, 174, 240 Cal. Rptr. 524

Court's ruling on motion for reconsideration of summary judgment based on new facts [Code Civ. Proc. § 1008] as appealable order. Bartschi v. Chico Community Memorial Hospital (1982) 137 Cal. App. 3d 502, 508, 187 Cal. Rptr. 61 (prior law)

Appealability of order denying reconsideration. Blue Mountain Development Co. v. Carville (1982) 132 Cal. App. 3d 1005, 1010-1012, 183 Cal. Rptr. 594 (prior law)

[b] Time for Filing

Trial court loses its power to rule on reconsideration motion after entry of judgment; thus a motion for reconsideration made after entry of judgment cannot extend time to file notice of appeal under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2 (renumbered 8.104 in 2007). Ramon v. Aerospace Corp. (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 1233, 1236-1238, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 217 ; Fryer v. Kaiser Foundation Health Plan, Inc. (1963) 221 Cal. App. 2d 674, 676-677, 34 Cal. Rptr. 688 (reconsideration motion made after entry of judgment of dismissal which was granted and thereafter trial court reaffirmed its judgment of dismissal construed as new judgment which began period for filing notice of appeal under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2 (renumbered 8.104 in 2007))

Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3 (renumbered 8.108 in 2007), which extends time to file notice of appeal when motion for new trial is served, filed and denied, does not apply to postjudgment motion for reconsideration. Crotty v. Trader (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 765, 771, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 818

For purposes of Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3 (renumbered 8.108 in 2007) (extension of time to appeal), motion for reconsideration under Code Civ. Proc. § 1008 as treated in same manner as motion for new trial or motion to vacate; timely filing of motion to reconsider as generally extending time for filing notice of appeal until 30 days after entry of order denying reconsideration. Jade K. v. Viguri (1989) 210 Cal. App. 3d 1459, 1467, 258 Cal. Rptr. 907 (prior law)

[2] Applicability

Code Civ. Proc. § 1008 limits parties' ability to file a motion to reconsider in the absence of new facts or law. However, it does not restrict the court's ability, on its own motion, to reconsider its own prior interim rulings, even in the absence of new facts or law [Le Francois v. Goel (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 1094, 1107, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 249] .

Although the trial had authority under Le Francois v. Goel (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 1094, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 249 to act sua sponte to reconsider its order granting summary judgment, in a case where the court acted only in response to plaintiff's motion for reconsideration and because plaintiff's motion was not based on new or different facts, circumstances, or law, the grant of reconsideration was error. New York Times Co. v. Superior Court (2005) 135 Cal. App. 4th 206, 215, 37 Cal. Rptr. 3d 338

Code Civ. Proc. § 1008 is not the exclusive vehicle by which a court can reconsider issues previously decided by demurrer and summary judgment; a trial court may revisit its prior rulings on its own initiative and use a party's motions in limine as a basis for granting judgment on the pleadings. Coshow v. City of Escondido (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 687, 702, 34 Cal. Rptr. 3d 19

Code Civ. Proc. § 1008 only operates to regulate the actions of the parties to civil litigation rather than the inherent powers of the trial court itself; the procedural prerequisites set forth for reconsideration of orders and renewal of motions previously denied are jurisdictional only as applied to the actions of parties to litigation and not to the actions of the trial courts themselves. Kerns v. CSE Insurance Group (2003) 106 Cal. App. 4th 368, 389-391, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 754 (reconciling Garcia v. Hejmadi (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 674, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 228 , Gilberd v. AC Transit (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 1494, 38 Cal. Rptr. 2d 626 , and Morite of California v. Superior Court (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 485, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 666)

Code Civ. Proc. § 1008 does not govern court's ability, on its own motion, to reevaluate its own interim rulings; cases holding section 1008 to be jurisdictional do not apply in this situation; instead, trial court retains inherent authority to change its decision at any time before entry of judgment; only requirement is that court exercise "due consideration" before modifying, amending, or revoking its prior orders. Darling, Hall & Rae v. Kritt (1999) 75 Cal. App. 4th 1148, 1156-1157, 89 Cal. Rptr. 2d 676 (distinguishing Garcia v. Hejmadi (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 674, 685, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 228 and Gilberd v. AC Transit (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 1494, 38 Cal. Rptr. 2d 626)

Code Civ. Proc. § 1008 not applicable to motion for summary adjudication by insurer seeking to terminate earlier summary adjudication that insurers had a duty to defend; because insurer's duty to defend endures only so long as possibility of duty to indemnify remains alive, trial court must evaluate duty to defend based on showing before it at time of a particular motion; thus, although subsequent motion by insurer might theoretically constitute impermissible motion for reconsideration if supporting facts were precisely same as presented on earlier motion, in instant case insurer had presented argument about trigger of coverage in earlier motion, while on present motion insurer contended that New York law applied and precluded existence of duty to defend. Liberty Mutual Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 617, 619, 623, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 219

Code Civ. Proc. § 1008 as not applying to criminal cases. Smith v. Superior Court (1981) 115 Cal. App. 3d 285, 291 n.2, 171 Cal. Rptr. 387

[3] Discretion of Court

It would be an abuse of discretion for trial court not to reconsider, pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(c), its sanction order against plaintiff in case where appellate court decided that plaintiff's action was not barred by applicable statute of limitations and therefore plaintiff did not bring case in bad faith; appellate court's decision regarding statute of limitations issue constituted a "change of law" for purposes of Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(c). Valdez v. Himmelfarb (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 1261, 1275, 51 Cal. Rptr. 3d 195

Leave to renew motion as addressed to sound discretion of court. Josephson v. Superior Court (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 354, 358, 33 Cal. Rptr. 196

One of court's rights as not to have administration of justice impeded and burdened by repeated motions raising questions on which court has already ruled. City & County of San Francisco v. Muller (1960) 177 Cal. App. 2d 600, 604, 2 Cal. Rptr. 383

[4] Jurisdiction to Reconsider

After plaintiff obtained default judgment against defendants, trial court, after initially denying defendants' motion for relief from default, properly reconsidered its decision under Code Civ. Proc. § 1008 and granted motion, where trial court had jurisdiction to reconsider its order under circumstances, because § 1008 allowed trial court to reconsider interim orders that could later be incorporated into judgment and orders made after judgment, in accordance with requirements of § 1008. D.R.S. Trading Co., Inc. v. Barnes (2009) 180 Cal. App. 4th 815, 819-821, 103 Cal. Rptr. 3d 329

To extent defendants' second motion for relief from default relied upon mandatory provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b), it did not ask trial court to reconsider its previous order under Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(a), where first order was entirely correct when made; and where second motion rested on entirely different legal theory, invoked different statutory ground, and relied in very substantial part on markedly different facts, and neither asked for, nor sought by sly evasion, determination contrary to any determination made in first order, but, rather, cited first order as part of series of events entitling defendants to relief from judgment. Standard Microsystems Corp. v. Winbond Electronics Corp. (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 868, 884-891, 102 Cal. Rptr. 3d 140

Once trial court has entered judgment it is without power to grant reconsideration; thus, court is without jurisdiction to grant motion for reconsideration even if motion was brought before judgment was entered and is still pending at time of entry of judgment. APRI Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1999) 76 Cal. App. 4th 176, 180-182, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 171

Court acts in excess of jurisdiction when it grants motion to reconsider that is not based on new or different facts, circumstances, or law. Pazderka v. Caballeros Dimas Alang, Inc. (1998) 62 Cal. App. 4th 658, 670, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 242

Trial court loses its power to rule on motion for reconsideration after entry of judgment; final judgment terminates litigation and leaves nothing in nature of judicial action to be done other than questions of enforcement or compliance; after judgment, trial court can only correct judicial error in accordance with statutory proceedings, and motion for reconsideration is not such a motion. Ramon v. Aerospace Corp. (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 1233, 1237-1238, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 217

By making Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(e) expressly jurisdictional, legislature intended to prevent courts from modifying, amending or revoking prior orders without due reconsideration. Morite of California v. Superior Court (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 485, 492-493, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 666

Although decision on motion is not res judicata and trial court has jurisdiction to reconsider prior ruling or to entertain renewal of previous motion, one trial court judge as not permitted to reconsider and overrule ruling of another judge, absent showing that first judge is unavailable. Curtin v. Koskey (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 873, 876-878, 282 Cal. Rptr. 706 (prior law)

[4A] Jurisdiction Over Renewed Motions

Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(b), two motions seek "same order" when they ask court to issue same "direction," so, in this view, defendants' second motion to vacate default judgment sought "same order" as first insofar as both asked trial court to direct that default have no further effect, so to that extent, second motion arguably constituted renewal of first. However, assuming second motion was renewal of first motion insofar as it sought relief from underlying default, it was not barred, in whole or part, where relief sought was ancillary to, and would be necessary to carry into effect, order vacating judgment, which was subject to no such constraint. Standard Microsystems Corp. v. Winbond Electronics

Corp. (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 868, 891-893, 102 Cal. Rptr. 3d 140

[5] Oral Argument on Motion to Reconsider

Court's denial of motion for reconsideration without oral argument as harmless error, if error at all, when moving papers did not set forth different facts as required under Code Civ. Proc. § 1008, and, on appeal, no statement was made of what evidence or argument not raised in moving papers would have been asserted at argument. M.E. Gray Co. v. Gray (1985) 163 Cal. App. 3d 1025, 1036-1037, 210 Cal. Rptr. 285

[6] Requirements

[a] New Facts

Where defendants had opportunity at original hearing to present evidence concerning defendant city's interpretation of municipal code provision involved in land use decision, declaration of city planning employee setting forth that interpretation submitted after hearing was not "new" evidence; motion for reconsideration was properly denied because defendants were not able to give satisfactory explanation of why they were unable to present the evidence at original hearing. McPherson v. City of Manhattan Beach (2000) 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 725 (also noting evidence would have been irrelevant)

When one defendant failed to comply with discovery request for documents and court granted another defendant's petition to compel arbitration although plaintiff asked court to delay ruling on petition until documents were received, and court also tentatively ruled to stay remainder of lawsuit pending completion of arbitration, plaintiff's motion for reconsideration did not fail to set forth any new or different facts, circumstances, or law as required by Code Civ. Proc. § 1008 when discovery documents were not produced until hearing of plaintiff's reconsideration motion; court did not exceed its jurisdiction in granting plaintiff's motion to reconsider as it had authority to consider motion and correctly realized this new evidence warranted second look at its previous ruling. Hollister v. Benzl (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 582, 584-585, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 903

Counsel's declaration that counsel mistakenly believed Code Civ. Proc. § 998 offer included issue of attorney fees and costs did not disclose new facts but merely counsel's mistake; mistake based on ignorance of law or imprecision in drafting the offer is not proper basis for reconsideration. Pazderka v. Caballeros Dimas Alang, Inc. (1998) 62 Cal. App. 4th 658, 670, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 242

1992 amendment to Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(a), requiring "new or different facts, circumstances, or law" does not mean that any facts not previously presented to a court now qualify as "different" (if not "new") facts or circumstances justifying reconsideration; amendment's reference to "new or different" facts did not make prerequisites less restrictive; threshold showing of diligence is required, i.e., explanation of why newly discovered matter was not presented earlier; although court could comfortably assume that amended language "new or different facts, circumstances, or law" was designed to approve generally, case law relaxation of what constitutes new or different acts justifying reconsideration, that does not mean that all facts not previously presented now suffice. Garcia v. Hejmadi (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 674, 685-691, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 228

To be entitled to reconsideration, party should show that (1) evidence of new or different facts exist and (2) party has satisfactory explanation for failing to produce such evidence at earlier time. Kalivas v. Barry Controls Corp. (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 1152, 1160-1161, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 200

Error to deny motion to reconsider interim order on ground of no new facts since requirement only applies to final order; error as not, however, warranting reversal in absence of showing of injury. Robbins v. Los Angeles Unified

School Dist. (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 313, 318, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 649 (prior law)

Discovery of timely filing of complaint due to intervening weekend and court holiday as sufficient to warrant reconsideration of grant of summary adjudication dismissing claims as untimely; relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b), also appropriate. Mink v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal. App. 4th 1338, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 195

Party seeking reconsideration under Code Civ. Proc. § 1008 as required to provide not only new evidence but also satisfactory explanation for failure to produce that evidence at an earlier time; moving party's burden as same as that of party seeking new trial on ground of newly discovered evidence, material for party making application that he or she could not, with reasonable diligence, have discovered and produced at trial (see Code Civ. Proc. § 657(4)). Jade K. v. Viguri (1989) 210 Cal. App. 3d 1459, 1467, 258 Cal. Rptr. 907 (prior law)

Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(a) as permitting any affected party to seek reconsideration of court's order, regardless of how court rules on motion, provided motion is based on alleged "different" set of facts and is made within 10 days of knowledge of court's order. Graham v. Hansen (1982) 128 Cal. App. 3d 965, 970, 180 Cal. Rptr. 604

Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(b) as applying to renewed motions based on "new" facts and as imposing no time limitations on such motions. Graham v. Hansen (1982) 128 Cal. App. 3d 965, 970-971, 180 Cal. Rptr. 604

[b] New Circumstances

Evidence that the trial court had failed to consider cross-defendants' timely filed memorandum of points and authorities in support of its special motion to strike was a sufficient showing of "new circumstances" such that the trial court had jurisdiction to grant reconsideration under Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(a). Johnston v. Corrigan (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 553, 556, 25 Cal. Rptr. 3d 657

[c] Prior Ruling Erroneous

Order denying motion for reconsideration as determination that requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 1008 are not met; if requirements are met to reviewing court's satisfaction but it is unconvinced that earlier ruling was erroneous, proper course as granting reconsideration and reaffirming earlier ruling. Corns v. Miller (1986) 181 Cal. App. 3d 195, 202, 226 Cal. Rptr. 247

[d] Refusal of Application for Order

Compliance with Code Civ. Proc. § 1008, relating to renewal of application for order, on filing of second motion to compel satisfaction of judgment as required only if first motion is refused and not if first motion is denied without prejudice with permission to refile motion to be heard by judge before whom stipulation for judgment was made. Chambreau v. Coughlan (1968) 263 Cal. App. 2d 712, 717-718, 69 Cal. Rptr. 783

[7] Timing of Motion to Reconsider

Court is without jurisdiction to grant motion for reconsideration brought beforejudgment was entered if motion is still pending at time of entry of judgment. APRI Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1999) 76 Cal. App. 4th 176, 180-182, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 171

Trial court loses its power to rule on reconsideration motion after entry of judgment. Ramon v. Aerospace Corp.

Motion for reconsideration under Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(a) must be made within 10 days after service of written notice of entry of order; motion for reconsideration filed on October 31, 1994, held untimely because amended notice of ruling on demurrer and motion to strike served on October 12, 1994, and motion for reconsideration should have been filed by October 22, 1994. Advanced Building Maintenance v. State Comp. Ins. Fund (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 1388, 1392, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 310

Practical time limitation on motion to reconsider an appealable order as within 60-day jurisdictional time frame for court to rule on motion. Stephen v. Enterprise Rent-A-Car (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 806, 818, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 130

Motion for reconsideration as properly considered only before entry of judgment; after summary judgment, proper method of attacking judgment as motion for new trial and appeal, and not motion for reconsideration; but court as free to consider motion regardless of label put on it by moving party. Eddy v. Sharp (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 858, 863 n.3, 245 Cal. Rptr. 211 (prior law)

Ten-day period for seeking reconsideration of order under Code Civ. Proc. § 1008 as not terminating court's jurisdiction to vacate its declaration of mistrial, provided relief from mistrial order is sought within reasonable time not to exceed six months pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b). Phelps v. Superior Court (1982) 136 Cal. App. 3d 802, 815-816, 186 Cal. Rptr. 626 (prior law)

[2] Use of Form

The form of notice of motion in [1], above, is for use by a party to renew a prior motion refused in whole or in part or granted conditionally or on terms when new or different facts, circumstances, or law exist to support the renewed motion [Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(b)].

[3] Accompanying Papers

A form of supporting declaration must accompany the notice of motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1008(b), 1010; for a form, see § 374.61].

A memorandum must be filed and a copy served with the notice of motion [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(a); see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1005(b), 1010; see Ch. 417, Points and Authorities].

[4] Time of Motion

No time limit is specified for bringing a renewed motion [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(b)]. A renewed motion on the ground of newly discovered evidence after denial of a motion under Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b), to vacate and set aside a default and default judgment is authorized by Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(b), providing for renewal of an earlier motion based on "new facts," and the motion is not subject to the 10-day limitation governing applications under Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(a) [Monsan Homes, Inc. v. Pogrebneak (1989) 210 Cal. App. 3d 826, 831, 258 Cal. Rptr. 676 (criticized on other grounds in *Passavanti v. Williams (1990) 225 Cal. I, _____ [name], declare:

1. I am _____ [identify declarant, e.g., an attorney at law duly admitted to practice before all the courts of California and the attorney of record herein for _____ (specify moving party, e.g., defendant) or other statement as appropriate] and make this declaration in support of _____ [specify moving party, e.g., defendant's] renewed motion _____ [specify, e.g., for summary judgment].

2. On _____ [date], _____ [I or, on behalf of _____ (specify party, e.g., defendant) I], filed in this court a notice of motion _____ [specify relief sought by prior motion, e.g., for summary judgment]. The motion was heard on _____[date], by the Honorable _____ [name]. By [minute] order made [and entered] on _____ [the same date or specify date], the motion was _____ [denied in _____ (whole or part) or granted conditionally or granted on terms]. _____ [A conformed copy of the order is attached hereto as Exhibit A and made a part hereof or The court is requested to take judicial notice of its order].

3. As shown by the papers submitted in support of and in opposition to the prior motion _____ [specify, e.g., for summary judgment], which are in the court's file of this case, the court's order was based on the following _____ [facts or circumstances or law]: _____ [specify, e.g., The action, based on medical malpractice, was filed within three years as required by the Code of Civil Procedure Section 340.5, and there was no showing that plaintiff had not discovered his/her injury and its cause more than one year before the complaint was filed].

4. A _____ [new or different] state of _____ [facts or circumstances or law] is now presented than was presented at the time the prior motion was heard and ruled on in that _____ [Set forth new facts, circumstances or law within personal knowledge of declarant or facts or circumstances of which court must take judicial notice, or facts or circumstances of which court may take judicial notice with request that it do so, e.g., subsequent to the ruling on the prior motion, plaintiff answered defendant's interrogatories. In reply to the question When did you first become aware of your injury and its cause?, plaintiff replied "On _____" (specify date). Thereafter, on _____ (date), defendant caused plaintiff's deposition to be taken at which plaintiff testified that on _____ (same date as given in answer to interrogatories) he/she discovered the nature and extent of his/her injury and "knew at that time that it was caused by defendant." As shown by the record herein, the complaint was filed _____ (date), which is more than one year after plaintiff's admitted discovery. The action is, therefore, barred under the provisions of Code of Civil Procedure Section 340.5].

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of California that the foregoing is true and correct.

The form of declaration in [1], above, is for use in support of a renewed motion by a party whose prior motion for an order was refused in whole or in part or granted conditionally or on terms where the subsequent motion is based on new or different facts, circumstances, or law [Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(b)].

When the party who originally made an application for an order which was refused in whole or in part, or granted conditionally or on terms, makes a subsequent application for the same order based on new or different facts, circumstances, or law, the application must be supported by an affidavit [Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(b)]. A declaration under penalty of perjury may be submitted in lieu of an affidavit [Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5].

[3] Content of Declaration

The supporting affidavit or declaration must show what application was madebefore, when and to what judge, what order or decisions were made on it, and what new different facts, circumstances, or law are claimed to be shown [Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(b)].

A supporting memorandum must be filed and a copy served with the notice of motion [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(a); see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1005(b), 1010; for discussion and forms, see Ch. 417, Points and Authorities].

[4] Motion Made to Same Judge or Court

The application to reconsider may be made by a party to the same judge or court that made the order [Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(a), as amended by Stats. 1992, ch. 460, § 4 (formerly requiring application to the same judge)]. For further discussion, see § 374.19.

[5] Time of Motion

The motion for reconsideration must be made within 10 days after the moving party has been served with written notice of entry of the prior order [Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(a)].

Judge of the _____ Court

[2] Use of Form

The form of order set out in [1], above, outlines the format requirements of anorder granting or denying a renewed motion or motion for reconsideration [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1003, 1064 (order defined)].

[3] Content

The form contains a caption [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 2.111]. It identifies the moving party, the order sought, the date of the hearing, and the names of counsel for the appearing parties, and sets forth the particular order granted or the court's ruling denying the motion. The order is also dated and contains the judge's signature.

The order does not include findings in accordance with the general rule that, unless required by statute or case law with respect to a specific order, findings have no place in an order granting or denying a motion [see Ch. 372, Motions and Orders, § 372.21[18]].

Depending on the underlying motion, there may be particular requirements for the order. For illustrative forms of orders granting or denying specific motions, see appropriate chapters in this publication.

_____ [Specify party, e.g., Defendant] in this matter hereby moves for an order revoking or setting aside the order of this court made herein by the Honorable _____ [name] on _____ [date]. This motion is made on the ground that _____ [specify adverse party, e.g., plaintiff] in moving for the prior order failed to comply with the provisions of _____ [Code of Civil Procedure Section 1008(a) or Code of Civil Procedure Section 1008(b)] and that, therefore, the order may, under the provisions of that section, be revoked or set aside. This motion is based on the following facts:

1. On _____ [date], after hearing, the Honorable _____ presiding, this court made an order _____ [denying or denying in part or granting or granting conditionally or granting on terms] the motion of _____ [specify adverse party, e.g., plaintiff] for an order _____ [specify].

2. Thereafter, on or about _____ [date], _____ [specify adverse party, e.g., plaintiff] made a subsequent motion in this court for the same order sought by the prior motion based on an alleged _____ [new or different] _____ [facts or circumstances or law]. This motion was _____ [e.g., granted] by the Honorable _____, who ordered _____ [specify]. It is this order which is sought to be revoked or set aside.

3. In making the subsequent motion for the same order, _____ [specify adverse party, e.g., plaintiff] failed to comply with the requirements of _____ [Code of Civil Procedure Section 1008(a) or Code of Civil Procedure Section 1008(b)] in that _____ [specify, e.g., he/she/it failed to show by affidavit, declaration, or otherwise what application was made before, or when the application was made and to what judge, or what order or decisions were made on the application, or what new or different facts, circumstances, or law were claimed to be shown or all or any combination of these].

4. _____ [Set forth, in as many separately numbered paragraphs as necessary, facts within personal knowledge of applicant establishing irreparable harm, immediate danger, or any other statutory basis for granting ex parte relief rather than setting the matter for hearing on noticed motion.]

5. The name, address and telephone number of the _____ [attorney for the opposing party or opposing party], as known to me, is _____ [set out name, address, and telephone number].

[EITHER]

6. On _____ [date], at _____ [time], I informed _____ [name], _____ [name of opposing party or attorney person to whom notice was given], the opposing _____ [party or party's attorney], of the date, time and place that the above application for an order _____ [specify order sought] would be made.

6. _____ [Name of opposing party or attorney person to whom notice was given] informed me that _____ [describe response to notice, including whether or not opposition is expected].

[OR]

6. I attempted, in good faith, to inform _____[name], the opposing _____ [party or party's attorney], of the time and place that the above application for an order _____ [specify order sought] would be made. I was unable to do so even though _____ [describe efforts made].

[OR]

6. Notice to the _____ [name], the opposing _____ [party or party's attorney], of the above application for an order _____ [specify order sought] should not be required because _____ [specify reason].

[CONTINUE]

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of California that the foregoing is true and correct.

ORDER

On proof made to the satisfaction of the court, it is hereby ordered that the order of this court made by the undersigned on _____ [date], _____ [e.g., granting] the motion of _____ [specify adverse party, e.g., plaintiff], and ordering that _____ [specify], be, and hereby is, revoked and set aside.
Dated: _____.

_____ [signature]
Judge of the Superior Court

The form of ex parte motion in [1], above, is for use to secure an order revoking or setting aside a prior order secured by the adverse party on a renewed motion or motion for reconsideration that failed to comply with the requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 1008 [Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(d)].

For the format to follow when the facts supporting the granting of the order revoking or setting aside are set forth in a declaration separate from the motion itself, see Ch. 372, Motions and Orders, § 372.68. For a form of order granting the ex parte motion for use where local court rules require a separate written formal order, see § 374.65.

The moving party must generally give notify all parties no later than 10:00 a.m. the court day before to the ex parte appearance, and the application for the ex parte order must be accompanied by a declaration regarding notice [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1204(b)]. For discussion of the notice requirements and contents of an application for an ex parte order, see Ch. 372, Motions and Orders, § 372.19.

[3] Power to Revoke, Set Aside, or Vacate Order for Noncompliance

The failure of a party who made a renewed motion based on an alleged different state of facts to make the showing by affidavit (or declaration) required by Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(b) is declared by that section to be a ground for revoking or setting aside, on ex parte motion, the order made on the renewed motion.

An order made contrary to any of the requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 1008 may be revoked by the judge or commissioner who made it or vacated by a judge of the court in which the action or proceeding is pending [Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(d)].

[2] Use of Form

The form of order in [1], above, is for use when the court grants the ex parte motion to revoke and set aside a prior order made on the reapplication of a party who failed to comply with the requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 1008 [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(d)].

Unless a separate written order is required by local court rule, the order will normally appear at the end of the ex parte motion, as indicated in the form in § 374.64.

[3] Filing and Service

If the judge signs the order, the originals of the ex parte motion and order will be filed. Counsel should have a clerk conform the copies, serve a copy of each on the adverse party, and prepare and file a proof of service.

Chapter 375 MOTIONS TO STRIKE: PLEADINGS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

9-375 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 375.11

§ 375.11 Grounds for Motion to Strike

[1] In Unlimited Civil Cases

The court may, on a motion to strike made pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 435 or at any time in its discretion and on terms it deems proper, take the following action [Code Civ. Proc. § 436]:

(a) Strike out any irrelevant, false, or improper matter inserted in any pleading [see Code Civ. Proc. § 431.10 (immaterial allegation and irrelevant matter)]; or

(b) Strike out all or any part of any pleading not drawn or filed in conformity with the laws of California, a court rule, or an order of the court.

"Pleading" means a demurrer, answer, complaint, or cross complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 435(a)(2)].

The term "false" in Code Civ. Proc. § 436(a), replaces "sham" in the predecessor statute (former Code Civ. Proc. § 453), which was repealed on enactment of Section 436. One court has noted that a legislative intent to change the law is presumed when one statute is repealed and another statute with different phraseology is enacted on the same subject [Garcia v. Sterling (1985) 176 Cal. App. 3d 17, 21, 221 Cal. Rptr. 349] . Consequently, in determining a proper ground under Section 436, the term "false" cannot be construed according to any historical meaning of "sham" that is not synonymous with the current term "false" [Garcia v. Sterling (1985) 176 Cal. App. 3d 17, 21, 221 Cal. Rptr. 349] .

The trial court has inherent power apart from statute to strike a pleading filed in disregard of established procedural requirements or that is otherwise violative of orderly judicial administration [Kronsberg v. Milton J. Wershow Co. (1965) 238 Cal. App. 2d 170, 173, 47 Cal. Rptr. 592 ; Tostevin v. Douglas (1958) 160 Cal. App. 2d 321, 331, 325 P.2d 130 ; see also Williams v. International Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union (1959) 172 Cal. App. 2d 84, 87, 341 P.2d 729] .Thus, a court has inherent power to strike, for example, an amended complaint that does not in fact or spirit conform to the previous rulings of the court [Kronsberg v. Milton J. Wershow Co. (1965) 238 Cal. App. 2d 170, 172, 47 Cal. Rptr. 592 ; see also Janis v. California State Lottery Com. (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 824, 829, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 549 (amended complaint not in conformity with court's previous ruling stricken)]. The motion should be made within the time limits prescribed by Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 3.1100, 3.1322.

Some examples of pleadings subject to a motion to strike are the following:

- An unverified pleading if verification is required [see Code Civ. Proc. § 446; Hearst v. Hart (1900) 128 Cal. 327, 328, 60 P. 846 ; Henderson v. Palmer Union Oil Co. (1923) 64 Cal. App. 81, 84, 220 P. 672] ;

- An unauthorized pleading, such as one filed by a corporation in propria persona [see Himmel v. City Council (1959) 169 Cal. App. 2d 97, 100, 336 P.2d 996] or by a person who is not a party to the lawsuit [see, e.g., Milstein v. Turner (1951) 107 Cal. App. 2d 184, 185-186, 236 P.2d 606 ; Estate of Walters (1949) 89 Cal. App. 2d 797, 799-800, 202 P.2d 89] ;

- An original, amended, or supplemental pleading filed without leave of court if leave is required [see, e.g., Williams v. International Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union (1959) 172 Cal. App. 2d 84, 87-88, 341 P.2d 729 ; Himmel v. City Council (1959) 169 Cal. App. 2d 97, 101, 336 P.2d 996] ;

- An original or amended pleading that is not timely filed [see, e.g., Buck v. Morrossis (1952) 114 Cal. App. 2d 461, 464-465, 250 P.2d 270 (demurrer); Lincoln Holding Corp. v. Union Indem. Co. (1933) 129 Cal. App. 399, 401, 18 P.2d 744 (amended complaint)];

- An amended complaint that fails to amend a previous complaint to which a demurrer was sustained [see, e.g., Kronsberg v. Milton J. Wershow Co. (1965) 238 Cal. App. 2d 170, 173, 47 Cal. Rptr. 592 ; Neal v. Bank of America (1949) 93 Cal. App. 2d 678, 683, 209 P.2d 825] ;

- Punitive damages allegations when punitive damages are not available for that cause of action [Grieves v. Superior Court (1984) 157 Cal. App. 3d 159, 164, 203 Cal. Rptr. 556] ;

- An amended pleading filed after a motion for judgment on the pleadings that was granted with leave to amend if the time for filing an amended pleading has expired or the pleading violates the court's order [Code Civ. Proc § 438(i)(1)(A)]. In this situation the time limit specified in Code Civ. Proc. § 435(b)(1) does not apply [Code Civ. Proc. § 435(b)(1), (e)].

[2] Specific Types of Actions

[a] Actions Against Architects, Engineers, and Land Surveyors

A motion to strike may properly be based on the plaintiff's failure to file the required professional consultation certificate in actions arising out of the professional negligence of a person holding a valid architect's, engineer's, or land surveyor's certificate [Code Civ. Proc. § 411.35]. For further discussion, see Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings, § 206.114[9], and see Ch. 56, Architects .

[b] Actions Chilling Free Speech--Strategic Lawsuit Against Public Participation (SLAPP Suits)

A cause of action against a person arising from any act of that person in furtherance of his or her constitutional right of petition or free speech in connection with a public issue (Strategic Lawsuit Against Public Participation--SLAPP suit) is subject to a special motion to strike, absent plaintiff's showing that plaintiff will probably prevail on the claim [see Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16]. This special motion to strike was provided to encourage participation in matters of public significance and to reduce the increase in lawsuits brought primarily to chill the valid exercise of free speech and the right to petition for redress of grievances, commonly know as SLAPP (that is, strategic litigation against public participation) suits [see Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(a)]. For discussion of anti-SLAPP motions to strike, see Ch. 376, Motions to Strike: Anti -SLAPP.

[3] In Limited Civil Cases

Motions to strike are not allowed in limited civil cases, except on the ground that the damages or relief sought are not supported by the allegations of the complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 91, 92(d)].

If the motion to strike is based on matter of which the court may take judicial notice pursuant to *Evid. 9-375 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 375.13

§ 375.13 Motion to Strike Compared to Demurrer

A motion to strike the whole or part of a pleading is a counterpart to a demurrer. The function of both a demurrer and a motion to strike is to raise objections topleadings on grounds that appear on the face of the pleading or from matters of which the court is required to take judicial notice [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.30(a), 430.70 (demurrers), 437 (motions to strike)]. The function of a demurrer is to raise certain statutory objections [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10, 430.20]. That is, a demurrer tests whether sufficient facts have been stated with requisite clarity and not, for example, to challenge the presence of surplusage or other objectionable matter in a pleading [Henke v. Eureka Endowment Asso. (1893) 100 Cal. 429, 433, 34 P. 1089 ; Mitchell v. Steelman (1857) 8 Cal. 363, 369] . A motion to strike, on the other hand, is used to raise objections that do not constitute a ground of demurrer [see, e.g., White Lighting Co. v. Wolfson (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 336, 353, 66 Cal. Rptr. 697, 438 P.2d 345 ; Warren v. Atchison, T. & S.F. Ry. Co. (1971) 19 Cal. App. 3d 24, 41, 96 Cal. Rptr. 317] .

A motion to strike is not a proper substitute for a special demurrer to attack a pleading that is uncertain or otherwise formally defective if the objection may be reached by demurrer [Allerton v. King (1929) 96 Cal. App. 230, 233-234, 274 P. 90 (motion to strike allegations in answer; decided before enactment of Code Civ. Proc. §§ 435, 436)].

For discussion of demurrers, see Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

9-375 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 375.14

§ 375.14 Inappropriate Motion to Strike

[1] Summary Judgment Motion

A motion to strike that is supported by facts outside the pleadings, ordinarily set forth in affidavits, that is, a "speaking motion," will ordinarily be treated as a motion for summary judgment under Code Civ. Proc. § 437c [City and County of San Francisco v. Strahlendorf (1992) 7 Cal. App. 4th 1911, 1914, 9 Cal. Rptr. 2d 817] . A motion so treated must therefore comply with the specific provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 437c [see, e.g., Vesely v. Sager (1971) 5 Cal. 3d 153, 167, 95 Cal. Rptr. 623, 486 P.2d 151] . Thus, such a motion to strike will be granted only if the affidavits filed in support of the motion are sufficient to sustain a judgment in favor of the moving party and the affidavits filed in opposition are insufficient to raise a triable issue of fact [see Mediterranean Exports, Inc. v. Superior Court (1981) 119 Cal. App. 3d 605, 616, 174 Cal. Rptr. 169 ; see also Ch. 537, Summary Judgment].

[2] Judgment on Pleadings

A "motion to strike" that attacks a complaint on the ground that a claim fails to state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action effectively seeks a judgment on pleadings and may be treated accordingly by the court [Pierson v. Sharp Memorial Hospital, Inc. (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 340, 342-343, 264 Cal. Rptr. 673] .

§ 375.15 Time Limitations

Any party, within the time allowed to respond to a pleading, may serve and file a notice of motion to strike the whole or any part of the pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 435(b)(1), 585(f)].

Filing a motion to strike does not extend the time in which to demur [Code Civ. Proc. § 585(f)].

A motion to strike may also be made without regard to these time limitations if it is made to strike an untimely or otherwise improper amended pleading filed after a motion for judgment on the pleadings has been granted with leave to amend [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 435(b)(1), (e), 438(i)(1)(A); for discussion, see Ch. 389, Nonsuit and Motions for Judgment].

§ 375.16 Notice Requirement

[1] Motion to Strike Answer, Complaint, or Cross Complaint

A notice of motion to strike the answer or the complaint or cross complaint, or a portion of it, must specify a hearing date set in accordance with Code Civ. Proc. § 1005 [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 435(b)(2), 585(f); see Code Civ. Proc. § 435(a)(1) ("complaint" includes cross complaint)]. A notice of motion to strike a demurrer, or a portion of it, must set the hearing concurrently with the hearing on the demurrer [Code Civ. Proc. § 435(b)(3)].

Notice of a motion to strike the answer or the complaint (or cross complaint; see Code Civ. Proc. § 435(a)), or a portion of it, must be given at least 16 court days before the hearing. However, if the notice is served by mail, the 16-day period must be increased by five calendar days if the place of mailing and address are within California, 10 calendar days if either the place of mailing or address is outside California but within the United States, and 20 calendar days if either the place of mailing or address is outside the United States. If the notice is served by facsimile transmission, express mail, or another method of overnight delivery, the required 16-day period of notice before the hearing is increased by two calendar days [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 435(b)(2), 1005(b)]. An extension period of two court days may apply in the case of electronic service [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1010.6(a)(6); for discussion, see Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers, § 518.41[8]].

[2] Motion to Strike Demurrer

A notice of motion to strike a demurrer or portion of a demurrer must set the hearing thereon concurrently with the hearing on the demurrer [Code Civ. Proc. § 435(b)(3)].

§ 375.18 Time to Answer Extended if Demurrer Not Filed

If a party serves and files a notice of motion to strike without demurring to the complaint, the time to answer is extended, and no default may be entered against that defendant, except as provided in Code Civ. Proc. §§ 585 and 586 [Code Civ. Proc. § 435(c); see Code Civ. Proc. § 472a(d) (court to allow party to answer if motion to strike complaint is denied)].

Code Civ. Proc. § 585 allows the plaintiff to take the defendant's default if the defendant fails to respond to the complaint. The responses that preclude the taking of default include timely service of a notice of motion to strike a pleading [Code Civ. Proc. § 585(c), (f); see Code Civ. Proc. § 585(e) (application to cross complaints)], so that an untimely notice of motion to strike, if no other response has been made to the pleading, exposes the defendant to default. Code Civ. Proc. § 586 contains a comparable provision relating to the defendant's failure to respond to an amended complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 586(a)(1)]. Code Civ. Proc. § 586 also governs the taking of defaults after the court has ruled on a demurrer or motion to strike [Code Civ. Proc. § 586(a)(2), (3), (7)].

For discussion and forms relating to defaults, see Ch. 205, Defaults and Default Judgments .

[1] Motion Granted Without Leave to Amend Complaint

A judgment of dismissal may be entered if a motion to strike the whole of a complaint is granted without leave to amend and either party moves for dismissal [Code Civ. Proc. § 581(f)(3), (4)].

[2] Motion Granted With Leave to Amend Complaint

When a motion to strike is granted pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 436, the court may order that an amendment or amended pleading be filed on terms it deems proper [Code Civ. Proc. § 472a(d)]. If a motion to strike all or part of a complaint is granted with leave to amend and the plaintiff fails to amend within the time allowed by the court, either party may move for dismissal. On that motion, the court may enter a judgment of dismissal [Code Civ. Proc. § 581(f)(4)].

[3] Time to Answer if Demurrer Is Stricken

If a demurrer is stricken pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 436 and there is no answer filed, the court must allow an answer to be filed on terms that are just [Code Civ. Proc. § 472a(c)].

[4] Default After Answer Is Stricken

A default judgment may be taken when a motion to strike the entire answer is granted without leave to amend or when a motion to strike all or part of the answer is granted with leave to amend and the defendant fails to amend within the time allowed by the court [Code Civ. Proc. § 586(a)(7)].

[5] Time to Answer if Motion Denied

If a motion to strike a complaint or cross complaint, or a portion of it, is denied, the court must allow the party filing the motion to strike to file an answer [Code Civ. Proc. § 472a(d); see Code Civ. Proc. § 435(c) (extension of time to answer)].

§ 375.23 Review of Order

[1] By Appeal

An order granting or denying a motion to strike the whole or any part of a pleading is usually not appealable, although the ruling may be reviewed on appealfrom the final judgment in the action. If the order operates to remove from the case the only cause of action or defense or leaves no further issue to be determined, the order is appealable [see Wilson v. Sharp (1954) 42 Cal. 2d 675, 677, 268 P.2d 1062 ; Timberidge Enterprises, Inc. v. City of Santa Rosa (1978) 86 Cal. App. 3d 873, 878, 150 Cal. Rptr. 606 (exception applicable to order striking complaint in intervention)].

If, for example, the parties to a complaint and cross complaint are the same, an order granting or denying a motion to strike the cross complaint is not appealable. If the parties are not the same, the order striking the cross complaint is appealable [Lerner v. Ehrlich (1963) 222 Cal. App. 2d 168, 170, 35 Cal. Rptr. 106] .

[2] By Extraordinary Writ

In appropriate cases, the ruling on a motion to strike may be subject to review by a higher court by extraordinary writ [see, e.g., Clauson v. Superior Court (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 1253, 1255, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747 (mandate directing trial court to issue new order denying motion to strike punitive damage allegations in complaint); Evans v. Superior Court (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 162, 170-171, 136 Cal. Rptr. 596 (mandate directing trial court to enter order striking cross complaint); Ford Motor Co. v. Superior Court (1971) 16 Cal. App. 3d 442, 449, 94 Cal. Rptr. 127 (mandate directing trial court to reinstate affirmative defenses of collateral estoppel in answers that had been stricken on motion)].

[1] Appealability of Order

Order granting motion to strike third amended complaint, which removed particular defendant from case and left no issues to be determined between that defendant and plaintiff, as appealable as final judgment within meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 904.1. Kuperman v. Great Republic Life Ins. Co. (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 943, 946-947, 241 Cal. Rptr. 187

Order granting motion to strike complaint that would operate to remove from case only cause of action alleged against defendants and to leave no issues to be determined between opposing parties as appealable, even if it is void. Adohr Milk Farms, Inc. v. Love (1967) 255 Cal. App. 2d 366, 370-371, 63 Cal. Rptr. 123

Order striking demurrer on motion as not independently appealable, but as reviewable, if at all, on appeal from judgment. Buck v. Morrossis (1952) 114 Cal. App. 2d 461, 462, 250 P.2d 270 ; see also Cuddahy v. Gragg (1920) 46 Cal. App. 578, 580, 189 P. 721

[2] Demurrer Distinguished

Motion to strike as generally used to reach defects in pleading that are not subject to demurrer; motion to strike as not lying to attack complaint for insufficiency of allegations to justify relief, which is ground for general demurrer. Pierson v. Sharp Memorial Hospital, Inc. (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 340, 342, 264 Cal. Rptr 673

[3] Grounds for Motion to Strike

[a] Proper Grounds

Trial court has authority to strike sham pleadings, or those not in conformity with its prior ruling. Janis v. California State Lottery Com. (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 824, 829, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 549

Motion to strike is appropriate vehicle for attacking allegations in complaint requesting improper relief. Satz v. Superior Court (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 1525, 1533 n.9, 275 Cal. Rptr. 710 ; Saberi v. Bakhtiari (1985) 169 Cal. App. 3d 509, 517, 215 Cal. Rptr. 359

Under Code Civ. Proc. § 436(a), trial court has discretion to strike from pleading any irrelevant, false, or improper matter. La Jolla Village Homeowners' Assn. v. Superior Court (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 1131, 1141, 261 Cal. Rptr. 146 , disapproved on other grounds in Jimenez v. Superior Court (2002) 29 Cal. 4th 473, 127 Cal. Rptr. 2d 614, 58 P.3d 450

In action by hospital patient for, among other things, battery and violation of constitutional rights, based on defendant's life-sustaining measures in light of patient's wish to die, motion to strike allegations that defendant's conduct was extreme, malicious, and outrageous and related allegations, was properly granted because patient's right to have treatment withdrawn was not established at that time and allegations were not supported by fact. Bartling v. Glendale Adventist Medical Center (1986) 184 Cal. App. 3d 961, 969-971, 229 Cal. Rptr. 360

Trial court may dismiss complaint sua sponte pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 436(b) because complaint failed to state cause of action and was therefore not drawn in conformity with Code Civ. Proc. § 425.10. Lodi v. Lodi (1985) 173 Cal. App. 3d 628, 630-631, 219 Cal. Rptr. 116

Cross complaint filed without leave of court after trial date had been set and vacated by stipulation of parties was properly stricken. Loney v. Superior Court (1984) 160 Cal. App. 3d 719, 721-724, 206 Cal. Rptr. 769

[b] Improper Grounds

Motion to strike entire complaint arising out of denied probate claim was improper under Code Civ. Proc. § 436(b); moving party failed to identify any court rule or order that was violated by the filing of the complaint and instead generically asserted the complaint was "illegally filed without leave of court." Ferraro v. Camarlinghi (2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 509, 529, 75 Cal. Rptr. 3d 19

In civil action under Fair Employment and Housing Act (Gov. Code § 12900 et seq.), all relief generally available in noncontractual actions, including punitive damages, is available; defendant's motion to strike prayers for punitive damages was properly denied. Commodore Home Systems, Inc. v. Superior Court (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 211, 221, 185 Cal. Rptr. 270, 649 P.2d 912

In action by workers' compensation carrier against State Compensation Insurance Fund stating causes of action for breach of covenant of good faith and constructive fraud based on alleged improper calculation of premiums, punitive damages allegations were improperly stricken because complaint alleged specific intent sufficient as matter of pleading to show malice, and conduct properly characterized as despicable. Courtesy Ambulance Service v. Superior Court (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 1504, 1519, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 161

Trial court abused its discretion by granting motion to strike allegations and references in complaint that adequately pleaded cause of action for punitive damages when language at issue could be determined to be ultimate facts rather than conclusions of law, and granting motion would have deprived plaintiff of opportunity to plead action and possibly would have required retrial or reversal. Perkins v. Superior Court (1981) 117 Cal. App. 3d 1, 5, 6-7, 172 Cal. Rptr. 427

Right to have pleading (demurrer) stricken for lack of timeliness is not absolute and within trial court's discretion if no question of jurisdiction is involved and if late filing is mere irregularity. Tuck v. Thuesen (1970) 10 Cal. App. 3d 193, 196, 88 Cal. Rptr. 759 (disapproved on other grounds in Neel v. Magana, Olney, Levy,Cathcart & Gelfand (1971) 6 Cal. 3d 176, 190 n.29, 98 Cal. Rptr. 837, 491 P.2d 421)

[4] Mandate

In mandate proceeding challenging order striking punitive damage allegations in second amended complaint, appellate court reviews order de novo; in passing on correctness of ruling on motion to strike, judges read allegations of pleading subject to motion to strike as a whole, all parts in their context, and assume their truth; in ruling on motion to strike, courts do not read allegations in isolation. Clauson v. Superior Court (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 1253, 1255, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747

In mandate proceeding reviewing trial court's order striking causes of action and granting motions for judgment on pleadings without leave to amend, reviewing court as considering de novo whether trial court's ruling deprived party of opportunity to plead cause of action, which would be abuse of discretion. La Jolla Village Homeowners' Assn. v. Superior Court (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 1131, 1140, 261 Cal. Rptr. 146 , disapproved on other grounds in Jimenez v. Superior Court (2002) 29 Cal 4th 473, 127 Cal. Rptr. 2d 614, 158 P.3d 480

[5] Ruling on Motion

In ruling on motion to strike, courts do not read allegations in isolation; in passing on correctness of ruling on motion to strike, judges read allegations of pleading subject to motion to strike as a whole, all parts in their context, and assume their truth. Clauson v. Superior Court (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 1253, 1255, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747

[6] Timeliness of Motion to Strike

Defendant as permitted under Code Civ. Proc. § 435 to move to strike complaint only prior to answer. Adohr Milk Farms, Inc. v. Love (1967) 255 Cal. App. 2d 366, 370-371, 63 Cal. Rptr. 123

PART IV. PROCEDURAL CHECKLISTS

9-375 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 375.50

§ 375.50 Moving Party's Checklist

[1] Preliminary Determinations

1. Examine the adverse pleading to determine whether the whole or part is subject to a motion to strike, as opposed, for example, to a demurrer or to a motion for summary judgment.

NOTE:

Motions to strike are not allowed in limited civil cases except on the ground that the damages or relief sought are not supported by the allegations of the complaint [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 91, 92(d)].

2. Determine the date the notice of motion must be filed.

NOTE:

A notice of motion to strike must be given within the time to plead and, if a demurrer is interposed, concurrently with the demurrer [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1322].

[2] Preparation of Papers

1. Notice of Motion and Motion to Strike.

a. Draft notice of motion and motion to strike [FORMS: §§ 375.60 and 375.61].

b. Sign the notice of motion and motion.

2. Draft supporting memorandum [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113]. For forms of memoranda, see California Points and Authorities, Ch. 160, Motions to Strike (Matthew Bender), and the General Index to that publication. See also Ch. 417, Points and Authorities , in this publication.

3. Prepare any supporting declaration.

NOTE:

Although Code Civ. Proc. § 2009 generally authorizes the use of affidavits to support motions, Code Civ. Proc. § 437(a) provides that the grounds for a motion to strike must appear on the face of the challenged pleadings or from matters of which the court is required to take judicial notice. The grounds for these motions most often appear in the court's file, to which sufficient reference may usually be made in the notice of motion or in the accompanying points and authorities [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437(b)**].

Should counsel determine that sworn statements are needed in support of the motion, he or she should consider whether the motion is not, in reality, one for summary judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c], rather than a motion to strike.

4. Prepare declaration or certificate regarding proof of service [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1013a and Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers].

5. Prepare proposed order [FORM: § 375.62].

6. Demurrer or other responsive paper, if desired.

If counsel is interposing both a demurrer and a motion to strike, they must be made concurrently and be noticed for hearing and heard on the same date [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1322].

NOTE:

Filing of the notice of motion does not extend the time in which to demur [Code Civ. Proc. § 435(d)]; for discussion and forms relating to demurrers, see Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings . Although a motion to strike extends the time to answer [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 435(c), 585(f)], counsel may wish to consider going ahead and preparing an answer as well, particularly if the motion to strike goes only to part of a complaint.

[3] Service and Filing

1. Serve copies of the notice of motion, motion and memorandum on the attorney for the party whose pleading is challenged or, if the party has no attorney, on the other party [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1005, 1011, 1012, 1015; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 1.6(19), 3.1100, 3.1103(b), 3.1322].

a. Service is commonly made in person or by mail [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1011, 1012].

b. Service in person must be completed at least 16 court days before the selected hearing date [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1322].

(1) When service is by mail, this 16-day period for completing service before the hearing date is extended by five calendar days if the place of mailing and the place of address are within California, by 10 calendar days if either of these places is outside California but within the United States, or by 20 calendar days if either of these places is outside the United States [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1322].

(2) When service is by fax transmission, express mail, or another form of overnight delivery, this 16-day period is extended by two calendar days [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1322]. An extension period of two court days may apply in the case of electronic service [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1010.6(a)(6); for discussion, see Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers, § 518.41[8]].

2. File the originals of the notice of motion and motion to strike and accompanying papers with the clerk of the court in which the action is pending [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1005(b), 1013a; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1322].

NOTE:

A motion on all the grounds stated in the written notice is deemed to have been made and to be pending before the court for all purposes on the due service and filing of the notice of motion [Code Civ. Proc. § 1005.5].

a. Pay filing fee.

b. Generally, it is good practice to submit the office copy to the clerk to be stamped together with the original, to serve as a check on the contents of the original.

c. File proof of service no later than five calendar days before the hearing date [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1300(c)].

[4] Response to Opposing Party's Memorandum

1. File response if appropriate.

a. Examine the memorandum, if any, filed in response to the motion to strike.

b. If time permits, counsel may wish to file a supplemental memorandum, with proof of service, in opposition to the opposing party's memorandum. Local practice may vary, but usually this supplemental memorandum should be filed directly with the clerk of the law and motion department or division, rather than in the office of the court clerk, so that the court will have sufficient time to consider the memorandum prior to the hearing on the motion.

NOTE:

Local court rules may, however, impose limitations on when and with whom the supplemental memorandum may be filed and should be checked if counsel is unfamiliar with them.

2. Serve and file any response papers.

All reply papers must be filed and a copy served at least five court days before the time appointed for the hearing. All reply papers must be served by personal delivery, facsimile transmission, express mail, or other means consistent with the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1010, 1011, 1012, and 1013, and reasonably calculated to ensure delivery to the other party or parties not later than the close of the next business day after the time the reply papers are filed [Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b), (c); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1300(a); cf. Code Civ. Proc. § 1010.6(a)(6) (two court day extension in case of electronic service; although Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b) expressly excludes extensions under Code Civ. Proc. § 1013, it is silent as to section 1010.6)]. Unless otherwise provided by local court rule, all papers relating to a law and motion proceeding must be filed in the clerk's office [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1302(a)].

PART IV. PROCEDURAL CHECKLISTS

9-375 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 375.51

§ 375.51 Opposing Party's Checklist

[1] Preliminary Determinations

1. On receipt of the notice of motion, motion and supporting memorandum, ascertain if it was timely served. Read the notice of motion and motion to ascertain the alleged defects in the pleading and what is sought to be stricken.

2. Read the supporting memorandum and verify the citations to determine whether they support the points or statements for which they are cited.

NOTE:

Points may be inaccurately stated or not supported by the authorities cited. Moreover, a case cited may superficially support the point in that it makes an identical or similar statement, but may actually hold that the statement is not applicable to the facts of that case or that the case presents an exception to the rule. In that situation, the case is usually not authority for the statement made but, rather, an authority in opposition to it.

3. If the motion is well taken, determine the advisability of not opposing it or of stipulating that the motion be granted with leave to amend the pleading.

[2] Preparation of Papers

1. If counsel intends to oppose the motion, prepare an opposing memorandum. For forms of memoranda, see California Points and Authorities, Ch. 160, Motions to Strike (Matthew Bender), and the General Index to that publication. See also Ch. 417, Points and Authorities , in this publication.

2. Prepare the certificate, affidavit, or declaration, as the case may be, of service [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1013(b), 1013a, 2009, 2015.5].

[3] Service and Filing

1. Serve copies of the opposing memorandum on the moving party's attorney or, if none, on the moving party [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1005(b), (c), 1011, 1012, 1015; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 1.6(19), 3.1100, 3.1103].

NOTE:

Service is commonly by mail or in person, although alternative methods are authorized. Unless otherwise ordered or specifically provided by law, all papers opposing a motion must be served at least nine court days before the hearing. All papers opposing a motion must be served by personal delivery, facsimile transmission, express mail, or other means consistent with the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1010, 1011, 1012, and 1013, and reasonably calculated to ensure delivery to the other party or parties not later than the close of the next business day after the time the opposing papers are filed [Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b), (c); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1300; cf. Code Civ. Proc. § 1010.6(a)(6) (two court day extension in case of electronic service; although Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b) expressly excludes extensions under Code Civ. Proc. § 1013, it is silent as to Code Civ. Proc. § 1010.6)].

2. File the original opposing papers with the clerk of the court in which the action is pending. The papers may be delivered in person or by mail.

a. Unless otherwise ordered or specifically provided by law, all papers opposing a motion must be filed at least nine court days before the hearing [Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1300; cf. Code Civ. Proc. § 1010.6(a)(6) (two court day extension in case of electronic service; although Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b) expressly excludes extensions under Code Civ. Proc. § 1013, it is silent as to Code Civ. Proc. § 1010.6)].

b. Unless otherwise provided by local rule, all papers relating to a law and motion proceeding must be filed in the clerk's office [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1302(a)]. If the court has a law and motion department or division, local court rule may require that the memorandum be filed with the clerk thereof, rather than with the court clerk, to ensure that the judge has an opportunity to consider it before the hearing.

Judge of the Superior Court

The order in [1], above, is for use when a formal order denying or granting the motion is required by the court. The general rule is that an order is ineffective unless it is filed with the clerk or entered in the minutes [Jablon v. Henneberger (1949) 33 Cal. 2d 773, 775, 205 P.2d 1] . Under this rule, the order granting the motion must be entered in the official minutes and not merely in the rough minutes of the department clerk, in order that it be effective [Jablon v. Henneberger (1949) 205 P.2d 1] .

[3] Procedure on Concurrent Demurrer and Motion to Strike

If both a general demurrer to a pleading and a motion to strike the pleading are filed concurrently, the court may, if it sustains the demurrer, place the motion off calendar, and, conversely, if it grants the motion, it may place the demurrer off calendar [see B. F. G. Builders v. Weisner & Coover Co. (1962) 206 Cal. App. 2d 752, 758-759, 23 Cal. Rptr. 815 (trial court should not both sustain demurrer and grant motion to strike)].

The court's ruling on both the notice of motion and demurrer may be contained in the same order [for a form of ruling on demurrer, see § 206.139].

[4] Order

If a motion to strike is granted pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 436, the court may order that an amendment or amended pleading be filed on terms it deems proper. If a motion to strike a complaint or cross complaint, or a portion of it, is denied, the court must allow the party filing the motion to strike to file an answer [Code Civ. Proc. § 472a(d)].

If a demurrer is stricken pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 436 and there is no answer filed, the court must allow an answer to be filed on terms that are just [Code Civ. Proc. § 472a(c)].

[5] Judgment of Dismissal

An action may be dismissed by the court if a motion to strike the whole of a complaint is granted without leave to amend, or if a motion to strike all or part of a complaint is granted with leave to amend and the plaintiff fails to amend within the time allowed by the court and either party moves for dismissal [Code Civ. Proc. § 581(f)(3), (4)]. A dismissal ordered by the court must be in the form of a written order signed by the court and filed in the action. The dismissal constitutes a judgment and is effective for all purposes [Code Civ. Proc. § 581d].

[6] Default on Judgment After Ruling on Motion

A default judgment may be entered against the defendant in the following circumstances]:

- When defendant fails to answer the complaint within the time allowed by the court after denying defendant's motion to strike the complaint and overruling defendant's demurrer, if any [Code Civ. Proc. § 586(a)(2)].

- When defendant fails to answer the unstricken portion of the complaint within the time allowed after defendant's motion to strike has been granted in whole or in part and no demurrer has been sustained or is then pending [Code Civ. Proc. § 586(a)(3)].

- When a motion to strike the entire answer is granted without leave to amend [Code Civ. Proc. § 586(a)(7)].

- When a motion to strike all or part of the answer is granted with leave to amend and the defendant fails to amend within the time allowed by the court [Code Civ. Proc. § 586(a)(7)].

§ 376.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter discusses special motions to strike SLAPP suits, that is, Strategic Lawsuits Against Public Participation. It provides a history of the statute, relevant definitions, and an explanation of California courts' construction of the statute [see § 376.10 et seq.] as well as an explanation of the parties' burdens [see § 376.20 et seq.] and procedural requirements [see § 376.18 et seq.]. The chapter also discusses statutory exceptions to the anti-SLAPP statute [see § 376.16 et seq.] and the statute's application to malicious prosecution lawsuits [see § 376.17 et seq.]. It contains the following forms:

- Notice of special motion to strike a SLAPP suit [see § 376.60].
- Supporting declaration for motion to strike a SLAPP suit [see § 376.61].
- Notice of special motion to strike a SLAPPback Complaint [see § 376.62].

The chapter also includes Procedural Checklists for the moving and opposing parties on a special motion to strike [see §§ 376.50, 376.51] and on a special motion to strike a SLAPPback [see §§ 376.52], as well as a Research Guide [see § 376.40 et seq.].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

9-376 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 376.10

§ 376.10 Governing Statutes, Types of Motions, Historical Development, and Legislative Findings of SLAPP Statutes

[1] Anti-SLAPP Motions to Strike

Authority for a special motion to strike a SLAPP suit is pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16.

Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 was passed by the legislature in 1992 and enacted on January 1, 1993 [1992 Stats. ch. 726]. In passing the l992 statute, the legislature specifically found: "The Legislature finds and declares that there has been a disturbing increase in lawsuits brought primarily to chill the valid exercise of the constitutional rights of freedom of speech and petition for the redress of grievances. The Legislature finds and declares that it is in the public interest to encourage continued participation in matters of public significance, and that this participation should not be chilled through abuse of the judicial process. To this end, this section shall be construed broadly" [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(a)].

The enactment of this statute created a new type of motion to strike, and resulted in a large body of case law interpreting the statute. In both refining the statute and responding to case law developments, Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 has been amended in 1993 [1993 Stats. ch. 1293], 1997 [1997 Stats. ch. 271], 1999 [1999 Stats. ch. 260; effective October 10, 1999], and 2005 [2005 Stats. ch. 535; effective October 5, 2005]. The 2005 amendments included a Legislative finding: "It is the intent of the Legislature, in amending subdivision (f) of Section 425.16 of the Code of Civil Procedure [time limits for bringing and scheduling motion], to overrule the decisions in Decker v. U.D. Registry, Inc. (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 1382, 1387-1390 and Fair Political Practices Commission v. American Civil Rights Coalition, Inc. (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 1171, 1174-1178 " [2005 Stats. ch. 535, § 3]. The 2005 amendment also included the addition of the new SLAPPback statute of Code Civ. Proc. § 425.18 [2005 Stats. ch. 535, § 2].

For analysis of Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 and case authority interpreting the statute, see § 376.11 et seq.

[2] Exceptions to Anti-SLAPP Motions to Strike

Statutory exceptions to the anti-SLAPP statute are found in Code Civ. Proc. § 425.17.

Code Civ. Proc. § 425.17 was passed by the legislature in 2003 and enacted on January 1, 2004 [2003 Stats. ch. 338]. The enactment of the anti-SLAPP statute [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16] resulted in a large body of case law as a result of litigation exploring the reach of the new statue. As a response, and in passing the 2003 statute, the legislature specifically found: "The Legislature finds and declares that there has been a disturbing abuse of Section 425.16, the California Anti-SLAPP Law, which has undermined the exercise of the constitutional rights of freedom of speech and petition for the redress of grievances, contrary to the purpose and intent of Section 425.16. The Legislature finds and declares that it is in the public interest to encourage continued participation in matters of public significance, and that this participation should not be chilled through abuse of the judicial process or Section 425.16" [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.17(a)].

For analysis of Code Civ. Proc. § 425.17 and case authority interpreting the statute, see § 376.16.

Provisions relating to SLAPPback actions are pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 425.18.

Code Civ. Proc. § 425.18 was passed by the legislature in 2005 and enacted on October 5, 2005 [2005 Stats. ch. 535]. The enactment of the anti-SLAPP statute [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16] resulted in a body of case law regarding malicious prosecution actions that were brought after an anti-SLAPP motion to strike was granted. As a response, and in passing the 2005 statute, the legislature specifically found: "The Legislature finds and declares that a SLAPPback is distinguishable in character and origin from the ordinary malicious prosecution action. The Legislature further finds and declares that a SLAPPback cause of action should be treated differently, as provided in this section, from an ordinary malicious prosecution action because a SLAPPback is consistent with the Legislature's intent to protect the valid exercise of the constitutional rights of free speech and petition by its deterrent effect on SLAPP (strategic lawsuit against public participation) litigation and by its restoration of public confidence in participatory democracy" [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.18(a)].

Volume 33: Motions After Trial thru Negotiable Instruments-Chs. 371-385
Chapter 376 MOTIONS TO STRIKE: ANTI-SLAPP
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

9-376 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 376.11

§ 376.11 Definition of SLAPP (Strategic Lawsuit Against Public Participation) and Purpose of Anti-SLAPP Motion to Strike

A cause of action against a person arising from any act of that person in furtherance of his or her right of petition or free speech under the United States or California Constitution in connection with a public issue is subject to a special motion to strike, unless the court determines that the plaintiff has established that there is a probability that the plaintiff will prevail on the claim [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(b)(1)].

In enacting this special motion to strike, the Legislature noted that there had been a disturbing increase in lawsuits brought primarily to chill the valid exerciseof the constitutional rights of freedom of speech and petition for the redress of grievances, commonly known as SLAPP suits (i.e. Strategic Lawsuit Against Public Participation) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(a)]. The purpose of this legislation is to encourage continued participation in matters of public significance without this participation being chilled through abuse of the judicial process [see Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(a)] and to eliminate meritless litigation at an early stage [Macias v. Hartwell (1997) 55 Cal. App. 4th 669, 672, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 222 ; Bradbury v. Superior Court (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 1108, 1113, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 207] . Thus, Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 was enacted to curtail SLAPP suits [Rusheen v. Cohen (2006) 37 Cal. 4th 1048, 1055-1056, 39 Cal. Rptr. 3d 516 ; 128 P.3d 713 ; see Bradbury v. Superior Court (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 1108, 1111, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 207] by providing an economical and expeditious remedy to SLAPP suits [Church of Scientology v. Wollersheim (1996) 42 Cal. App. 4th 628, 647 n.3, 49 Cal. Rptr. 2d 620] . Because the motion may be filed within 60 days of the service of complaint and all discovery motions must be stayed upon the filing of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(f), (g)], a successful anti-SLAPP motion to strike quickly disposes of the litigation and obviates the expense of discovery and further litigation.

The anti-SLAPP suit statute is designed to protect the speech interests of private citizens, the public, and governmental speakers. The identity of the speaker is not a decisive factor in determining whether the speech activity is protected under the First Amendment [Schaffer v. City and County of San Francisco (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 992, 1003, 85 Cal. Rptr. 3d 880 ; Bradbury v. Superior Court (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 1108, 1117, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 207 ; see Mission Oaks Ranch, Ltd. v. County of Santa Barbara (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 713, 730, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1 (county; disapproved on other grounds in Briggs v. Eden Council for Hope and Opportunity (1999) 19 Cal. 4th 1106, 1123 n.10, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 471, 969 P.2d 564)]. At the same time, the protection of the statute is not limited to activities that go to the heart of self-government [Briggs v. Eden Council for Hope and Opportunity (1999) 19 Cal. 4th 1106, 1116, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 471, 969 P.2d 564] .

Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 does not apply to any enforcement action brought in the name of the people of the state of California by the Attorney General, district attorney, or city attorney, acting as a public prosecutor [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(d)]. It also does not apply to any illegal act on the part of defendant, even if that act is in furtherance of defendant's right of petition or free speech within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 [see, e.g., Paul for Council v. Hanyecz (2001) 85 Cal. App. 4th 1356, 1367, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 864 (money laundering), overruled in part by Equilon Enterprises v. Consumer Cause, Inc. (2002) 29 Cal. 4th 53, 67, 124 Cal. Rptr. 2d 507 ; People ex. rel. 20th Century Ins. Co. v. Building Permit Consultants, Inc. (2000) 86 Cal. App. 4th 280, 285, 103 Cal. Rptr. 2d 71 (insurance fraud)]. This statute has been held to not violate the equal protection clause of the constitution [People v. Health Laboratories of North America, Inc. (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 442, 451, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 618] .

Chapter 376 MOTIONS TO STRIKE: ANTI-SLAPP
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

9-376 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 376.12

§ 376.12 Nature of a SLAPP Suit Generally

In very general terms, a SLAPP suit has been described as a meritless suit filed primarily to chill the defendant's exercise of First Amendment rights [Macias v. Hartwell (1997) 55 Cal. App. 4th 669, 672, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 222 ; Wilcox v. Superior Court (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 809, 815-816, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 446] . The actions falling within this category have been generally recognized as civil lawsuits aimed at preventing citizens from exercising their political rights or at punishing those who have done so. The paradigm SLAPP is brought to obtain an economic advantage over the defendant, not to vindicate a legally cognizable right of the plaintiff, such as a suit filed by a large land developer against environmental activists or a neighborhood association intended to chill political or legal opposition to the developer's plans (but SLAPP suits are not limited to environmental issues or to defendants who are local organizations with limited resources), and where plaintiffs typically ask for damages which would be ruinous to the defendants [Wilcox v. Superior Court (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 809, 815-816, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 446 , overruled in part by Equilon Enterprises v. Consumer Cause, Inc. (2002) 29 Cal. 4th 53, 67, 124 Cal. Rptr. 2d 507 ; see Conroy v. Spitzer (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 1446, 1448, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 443 (SLAPP suits by definition are aimed at chilling valid exercise of political rights, particularly right of freedom of speech and right to petition government for redress of grievances); see also Sipple v. Foundation for Nat. Progress (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 226, 240, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 677 (Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 is not limited to paradigm SLAPP suits filed by powerful and wealthy developers against impecunious protestors, and applies to media defendants in libel actions)].

SLAPP suits are likely to involve alleged causes of action for defamation, various business torts (such as interference with prospective economic advantage), nuisance, and intentional infliction of emotional distress [Church of Scientology v. Wollersheim (1996) 42 Cal. App. 4th 628, 652, 49 Cal. Rptr. 2d 620 ; Wilcox v. Superior Court (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 809, 816, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 446 , overruled in part by Equilon Enterprises v. Consumer Cause, Inc. (2002) 29 Cal. 4th 53, 67, 124 Cal. Rptr. 2d 507] . The Legislature, however, did not limit application of the provision to such actions, recognizing that all kinds of claims could achieve the objective of a SLAPP suit, that is, to interfere with and burden the defendant's exercise of his or her rights [Church of Scientology v. Wollersheim (1996) 42 Cal. App. 4th 628, 652, 49 Cal. Rptr. 2d 620 ; see also Navellier v. Sletten (2002) 29 Cal. 4th 82, 92-93, 124 Cal. Rptr. 2d 530 ; Midland Pacific Building Corp. v. King (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 264, 273, 68 Cal. Rptr. 3d 499 (breach of contract cause of action arose out of defendant's submissions to planning commission and city council and therefore was subject to anti-SLAPP motion); Foothills Townhome Assn. v. Christiansen (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 688, 696, 76 Cal.

Rptr. 2d 516 (SLAPP suits can conceivably be pleaded in terms of breach of contract or other valid actions)].

Chapter 376 MOTIONS TO STRIKE: ANTI-SLAPP
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

9-376 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 376.13

§ 376.13 Construction of Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16--Anti-SLAPP Motion to Strike

[1] Statute to Be Construed Broadly

In Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(a) the Legislature has declared that it is in the public interest to encourage continued participation in matters of public significance, and thatthis participation should not be chilled through abuse of the judicial process. To this end, the section shall construed broadly [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(a) (last sentence added by Stats. 1997, ch. 271 § 1); see Briggs v. Eden Council for Hope and Opportunity (1999) 19 Cal. 4th 1106, 1119, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 471, 969 P.2d 564 (1997 amendment to section 425.16 mandates broad construction of that section); accord Sipple v. Foundation for Nat. Progress (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 226, 236-240, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 677] .

[2] Complaint, Plaintiff, and Defendant Defined For Purpose of Statute

For the purpose of Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16, "complaint" includes "cross-complaint" and "petition," "plaintiff" includes "cross-complainant" and "petitioner," and "defendant" includes "cross-defendant" and "respondent" [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(h)].

[3] Availability of Injunctive Relief and Other Provisional Remedies

Based on the definitions provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(h), one court of appeals has held that petitions for injunctive relief filed under California's civil harassment statute [Code Civ. Proc. § 527.6] are subject to the anti-SLAPP statute, with the exception of a request for a temporary restraining order under Code Civ. Proc. § 527.6(c) [Thomas v. Quintero (2005) 126 Cal. App. 4th 635, 652, 24 Cal. Rptr. 3d 619 ("complaint" includes a "petition" and Legislature therefore intended to include petitions for injunctive relief)]. Similarly, petitions for workplace violence restraining orders under Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8 are subject to the anti-SLAPP statute [City of Los Angeles v. Animal Defense League (2006) 135 Cal. App. 4th 606, 617, 37 Cal. Rptr. 3d 632] . However, the anti-SLAPP statute does not apply to claims pending in such nonjudicial forums as private arbitration proceedings [Sheppard v. Lightpost Museum Fund (2006) 146 Cal. App. 4th 315, 323-324, 52 Cal. Rptr. 3d 821] , and the anti-SLAPP statute does not apply to a mere request for a subpoena unaccompanied by any actual pleading [Tendler v. www.jewishsurvivors.blogspot.com (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 802, 808, 79 Cal. Rptr. 3d 407 (a civil case cover sheet does not on its own initiate a lawsuit, nor does an affidavit and request for endorsement of subpoenas)].

[4] Two-Part Test for Whether Action Is Subject to Protection of Statute

Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(b)(1) contains a two-part test to determine whether an action is a SLAPP suit subject to a special motion to strike. The first part tests whether the action is a SLAPP suit; the second part decides whether, if it is a SLAPP suit, it may nonetheless survive the motion to strike because the plaintiff has established a probability of prevailing on the complaint. The second part need not be addressed if the action is determined not to be a SLAPP suit [Ericsson GE Mobile Communications, Inc. v. C.S.I. Telecommunications Engineers (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 1591, 1601, 1603, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 491 , disapproved on other grounds in Briggs v. Eden Council for Hope and Opportunity (1999) 19 Cal. 4th 1106, 1123 n.10, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 471, 969 P.2d 564] . On the other hand, once the court determines the first prong of the statute has been met, a plaintiff must provide the court with sufficient evidence to permit the court to determine whether there is a probability that the plaintiff will prevail on the claim [Zamos v. Stroud (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 958, 965, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 54, 87 P.3d 802 ; DuPont Merck Pharmaceutical Co. v. Superior Court (2000) 78 Cal. App. 4th 562, 568, 92 Cal. Rptr. 2d 755] .

For discussion of the prima facie showings for both plaintiffs and defendants, and case authority reviewing various fact patterns, see § 376.20.

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

§ 376.14 What Constitutes a SLAPP Suit

[1] Four Types of Speech or Conduct

A SLAPP suit is a cause of action against a person arising from any act of that person in furtherance of the person's right of petition or free speech under the United States or California Constitution in connection with a public issue [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(b)(1)].

As used in Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16, an act in furtherance of a person's right of petition or free speech under the United States or California Constitution in connection with a public issue includes [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(e)]:

> (1) Any written or oral statement or writing made before a legislative, executive, or judicial proceeding, or any other official proceeding authorized by law;
> (2) Any written or oral statement or writing made in connection with an issue under consideration or review by a legislative, executive, or judicial body, or any other official proceeding authorized by law;
> (3) Any written or oral statement or writing made in a place open to the public or a public forum in connection with an issue of public interest; or
> (4) Any other conduct in furtherance of the exercise of the constitutional right of free speech in connection with a public issue or an issue of public interest.

These four clauses operate independently [Briggs v. Eden Council for Hope and Opportunity (1999) 19 Cal. 4th 1106, 1117, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 471, 969 P.2d 564] .

In addition, even if statements are not expressly covered under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(e), the categories enumerated there are not all-inclusive. The acts in furtherance of a person's right to free speech specified by the statute is preceded by the word "includes" which is ordinarily a term of enlargement rather than limitation. The use of "includes" implies that other acts which are not mentioned are also protected under the statute [Averill v. Superior Court (1996) 42 Cal.

App. 4th 1170, 1175, 50 Cal. Rptr. 2d 62] .

[2] Statements or Writings Before or in Connection With Official Proceeding

The first two subdivisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(e) define an act in furtherance of a person's right of petition or free speech under the United States or California Constitution in connection with a public issue to include the following:

> (1) Any written or oral statement or writing made before a legislative, executive, or judicial proceeding, or any other official proceeding authorized by law.
> (2) Any written or oral statement or writing made in connection with an issueunder consideration or review by a legislative, executive, or judicial body, or any other official proceeding authorized by law.

Under the plain and unambiguous language of the statute, an action may be a SLAPP suit under clauses (1) and (2) without any separate demonstration by the defendant that the statement concerned an issue of public significance [Briggs v. Eden Council for Hope and Opportunity (1999) 19 Cal. 4th 1106, 1113, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 471, 969 P.2d 564 ; Sipple v. Foundation for Nat. Progress (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 226, 236-237, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 677 ; see DuPont Merck Pharmaceutical Co. v. Superior Court (2000) 78 Cal. App. 4th 562, 566-567, 92 Cal. Rptr. 2d 755] . Clauses (3) and (4) include an express limitation to "issue[s] of public interest" and that limitation is not to be read into clauses (1) and (2) [Briggs v. Eden Council for Hope and Opportunity (1999) 19 Cal. 4th 1106, 1117-1118, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 471, 969 P.2d 564 ; see DuPont Merck Pharmaceutical Co. v. Superior Court (2000) 78 Cal. App. 4th 562, 566-567, 92 Cal. Rptr. 2d 755 ; for the language of clause (3) and (4), see § 376.14[3].

Earlier cases that more narrowly construed Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 have been disapproved [Briggs v. Eden Council for Hope and Opportunity (1999) 19 Cal. 4th 1106, 1123 n.10, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 471, 969 P.2d 564] .

Thus, as to acts covered by the first two clauses of Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(e), the statute requires simply any writing or statement made in, or in connection with an issue under consideration or review by, the specified proceeding or body [Kibler v. N. Inyo County Local Hospital Dist. (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 192, 196-198, 46 Cal. Rptr. 3d 41, 139 P.3d 193 (hospital's peer review procedure qualified as an "official proceeding authorized by law" under section 425.16(e)(2) because the procedure is required under Bus. & Prof. Code section 805 et seq.; not only is the peer review process an important tool in protecting the public, but a hospital's decisions resulting from peer review are also subject to judicial review by administrative mandate; therefore, peer review committees are involved in "matters of public significance" pursuant to section 425.16(a) and therefore statements made in connection with issues under consideration by a hospital peer review committee are subject to anti-SLAPP protection); Briggs v. Eden Council for Hope and Opportunity (1999) 19 Cal. 4th 1106, 1116-1117, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 471, 969 P.2d 564 ; Dible v. Haight Ashbury Free Clinics (2008) 170 Cal. App. 4th 843, 88 Cal. Rptr. 3d 464 ; Miller v. Filter (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 652, 665, 58 Cal. Rptr. 3d 671 ; Braun v. Chronicle Publishing Co. (1997) 52 Cal. App. 4th 1036, 1046-1047, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 58 ; but see Century 21 Chamberlain & Associates v. Haberman (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 1, 6-10, 92 Cal. Rptr. 3d 249 (demand commencing private, contractual arbitration is not a judicial proceeding or an official proceeding authorized by law and therefore does not trigger anti-SLAPP protection)].

Nothing in Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(e) confines free speech to speech which furthers the exercise of petition rights [Braun v. Chronicle Publishing Co. (1997) 52 Cal. App. 4th 1036, 1046, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 58] . Under the statute's plain terms it is the context or setting itself that makes the issue a public issue; all that matters is that the First Amendment activity take place in an official proceeding, or be made in connection with an issue being reviewed by an official proceeding [Braun v. Chronicle Publishing Co. (1997) 52 Cal. App. 4th 1036, 1047, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 58] . Thus, news reports published by media defendants made in connection with an issue under consideration or review by an authorized official proceeding fall within the scope of Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(e)(2) [Braun v. Chronicle Publishing Co. (1997) 52 Cal. App. 4th 1036, 1046, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 58 ; see Lafayette Morehouse, Inc. v. Chronicle Publishing Co. (1995)

37 Cal. App. 4th 855, 862-864, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 46 ; see also Sipple v. Foundation for Nat. Progress (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 226, 237-238, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 677 (article, insofar as it discussed statements made during deposition or at hearing at child custody trial, was within Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(e)(1))].

Petitioning activity undertaken in a foreign country, such as the filing of a lawsuit in a foreign country, is not protected by the anti-SLAPP statute. The express language of the anti-SLAPP statute limits motions to strike to causes of action arising from any act "in furtherance of the person's right of petition or free speech under the United States or California Constitution in connection with a public issue" [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(b)(1)]. This language is plain and unambiguous and clearly limits the petitioning or free speech activity to that made pursuant to rights granted by the United States or California Constitutions. Neither Constitution grants a United States citizen the right to petition a foreign government [Guessous v. Chrome Hearts, LLC (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 1177, 1185-1187, 102 Cal. Rptr. 3d 214] .

The anti-SLAPP statute makes "[a] cause of action against a person arising from any act of that person in furtherance of the person's [constitutional] right of petition or free speech ... in connection with a public issue ... subject to a special motion to strike" [PrediWave Corp. v. Simpson Thacher & Bartlett LLP (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 1204, 1227, 102 Cal. Rptr. 3d 245 ; see Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(b)(1)]. Although this statutory language has been interpreted broadly to protect qualifying statements made or conduct undertaken by a person on another person's behalf against a cause of action by a third person, in actions against attorneys based on their litigation activities, in determining the applicability of the anti-SLAPP statute, a distinction must be drawn between (1) clients' causes of action against attorneys based upon the attorneys' acts on behalf of those clients, (2) clients' causes of action against attorneys based upon statements or conduct solely on behalf of different clients, and (3) nonclients' causes of action against attorneys. In the first class, the alleged speech and petitioning activity was carried out by attorneys on behalf of the plaintiffs in the lawsuits now being attacked as SLAPPs, although the attorneys may have allegedly acted incompetently or in violation of the Professional Rules of Conduct. The causes of action in this first class categorically are not being brought "primarily to chill the valid exercise of the constitutional rights of freedom of speech and petition" [PrediWave Corp. v. Simpson Thacher & Bartlett LLP (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 1204, 1227-1228, 102 Cal. Rptr. 3d 245] .

[3] Statements or Writings Made in Public Forum in Connection with Issue of Public Interest

[a] Private Conversations Regarding Public Issues

Because the categories enumerated in Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(e) are not all-inclusive, private conversations regarding a public issue are protected under the statute [Hailstone v. Martinez (2008) 169 Cal. App. 4th 728, 736, 87 Cal. Rptr. 3d 347 ; Averill v. Superior Court (1996) 42 Cal. App. 4th 1170, 1175-1176, 50 Cal. Rptr. 2d 62 ; see also Terry v. Davis Community Church (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 1534, 1546, 33 Cal. Rptr. 3d 145 ("public interest" in a defamation context does not equate with mere curiosity)], as are private letters concerning matters of public interest [Ruiz v. Harbor View Community Assn. (2006) 134 Cal. App. 4th 1456, 1468, 37 Cal. Rptr. 3d 133] .

For example, in Averill, the appellate court issued a writ of mandate directing the trial court to strike the complaint when the defendant homeowner, a critic of the plaintiff's plan to convert a house in defendant's neighborhood into a shelter, opposed the plan before the city council and in a letter to the local newspaper, and on discovering that defendant's employer intended to support plaintiff as a charity, opposed the employer's support for the project through internal channels. Although the plaintiff's only cause of action against the defendant was based on the comments defendant made in private to defendant's employer, the court indicated that they might be considered within the enumerated protected acts of section 425.16(e), and that given the "includes" language, private conversations could not be excluded from protection. The court noted that even though the plaintiff carefully crafted the lawsuit to exclude the public comments and limit it to the private comments to the defendant's employer, the suit appeared to have been filed solely to punish the defendant for criticizing the project and to impose litigation costs on plaintiff for having exercised the right of free speech and to petition the government [Averill v. Superior Court (1996) 42 Cal. App. 4th 1170, 1172-1173, 1176, 50 Cal. Rptr. 2d 62 ; see also Dove Audio v. Rosenfeld, Meyer & Susman (1996) 47 Cal. App. 4th 777, 784, 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 830 (fact communications were made to other private citizens rather than to official agency does not exclude it from protection of anti-SLAPP suit statute)].

In Terry, the court discussed the definition of "an issue of public interest" within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(e)(4). In that case, plaintiffs were former church youth group leaders accused by the church of having an inappropriate sexual relationship with a child. Plaintiffs sued the church for libel, slander, and other tortsbased on a report about their conduct published by the church as well as statements made during a church meeting. The court noted that the statute requires there be some attributes to the speech in question which make it one of public, rather than merely private, interest. The court stated that a matter of public interest must be something of concern to a substantial number of people. Additionally, the focus of the speaker's conduct should be the public interest rather than a mere effort to fuel a private controversy. In this particular case, the court held that the societal interest in protecting children from child molesters was clearly a public interest such that the speech in question was protected under the anti-SLAPP statute [Terry v. Davis Community Church (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 1534, 1546-1551, 33 Cal. Rptr. 3d 145 ; see also Integrated Healthcare Holdings, Inc. v. Fitzgibbons (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 515, 44 Cal. Rptr. 3d 517 (doctor's e-mail to a small number of people articulating his concerns about struggling company's acquisition and operation of four hospitals in county concerned an issue of widespread public interest; acquisition was the subject of numerous public hearings as well as newspaper and periodical articles; therefore e-mail was subject to protection under anti-SLAPP statute)].

In contrast, a lawsuit by two city council members seeking declaratory relief against the City of Santa Monica, based on the fact that the city council meetings frequently run late into the night, was not in the public interest within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 425.17(b); action concerned members' preference for particular working hours, not public interest and, if successful, would not confer a significant benefit on the public as a whole [Holbrook v. City of Santa Monica (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 1242, 1249, 51 Cal. Rptr. 3d 181 ; see also Kurwa v. Harrington, Foxx, Dubrow & Canter, LLP (2007) 146 Cal. App. 4th 841, 53 Cal. Rptr. 3d 256 (ophthalmologist's letter to HMO requesting HMO contract only with him and not his former partner, whose medical license had been suspended, did not involve an issue of public issue, but rather a private matter between the HMO and the two doctors)].

[b] Commercial Conduct and Speech

Commercial conduct and speech made in connection with an issue of public concern under consideration by a legislative body are subject to the SLAPP statute. Thus, protection may apply in an action by a developer against a paid environmental consultant that had been hired by a county to evaluate the developer's proposed project in connection with an environmental impact report [Mission Oaks Ranch, Ltd. v. County of Santa Barbara (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 713, 728, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1 (disapproved by Briggs v. Eden Council for Hope and Opportunity (1999) 19 Cal. 4th 1106, 1123 n.10, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 471, 969 P.2d 564 to extent it suggests statement must concern issue of public significance to be protected under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(e)(1) or (2)); see DuPont Merck Pharmaceutical Co. v. Superior Court (2000) 78 Cal. App. 4th 562, 566-567, 92 Cal. Rptr. 2d 755 (applying Briggs; lobbying and other activities seeking to influence decisions of regulatory and legislative bodies)].

[c] Issue of Public Interest

The courts of appeal have identified two categories of speech or conduct protected by Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(e)(3) and (4): conduct in connection with an issue of "widespread public interest" and conduct in connection with an issue of interest to a limited, but definable, portion of the public and occurring in the context of an ongoing controversy, dispute, or discussion. When the issue is a matter of widespread public interest, there is no requirement of an ongoing controversy, dispute, or discussion [see Integrated Healthcare Holdings, Inc. v. Fitzgibbons (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 515, 44 Cal. Rptr. 3d 517 (financial survival of four hospitals in the county was a matter of widespread public interest)]. On the other hand, when the issue is of interest to a limited, but definable, segment of the population, the conduct must occur in the context of an ongoing controversy, dispute, or discussion such that it warrants protection by a statute that embodies the public policy of "encouraging participation in matters of public significance" in order to be protected under the statute [Du Charme v. International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, Local 45 (2003) 110 Cal. App. 4th 107, 118-119, 1 Cal. Rptr. 3d 501 (emphasis in original) (statement posted by union trustee on web site was unconnected to any discussion, debate, or controversy and therefore not protected); Rivero v. American Federation of State, County, and Municipal Employees, AFL-CIO (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 913, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 81 (union's allegedly defamatory statements concerned supervision of a staff of eight people and were not of interest to others; mere fact the statements were published did not render the statements protected by the anti-SLAPP statute); Kurwa v. Harrington, Foxx, Dubrow & Canter, LLP (2007) 146 Cal. App. 4th 841, 53 Cal. Rptr. 3d 256 (ophthalmologist's letter to HMO requesting HMO contract only with him and not his former partner, whose medical license had been suspended, did not involve an issue of public issue, but rather a private matter between the HMO and the two doctors); see also Ruiz v. Harbor View Community Association (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 1456, 37 Cal. Rptr. 3d 133 (dispute between homeowner and association was of interest to residents of 523 lots, a group large enough for the communications to warrant protection under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(e)(4)); Macias v. Hartwell (1997) 55 Cal. App. 4th 669, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 222 (political flyer distributed to 10,000 union members prior to union election concerned an issue of public interest and was therefore protected); Hailstone v. Martinez (2008) 169 Cal. App. 4th 728, 87 Cal. Rptr. 3d 347 (plaintiff's alleged misappropriation of union funds was of interest to the more than 10,000 members of the union and allegedly defamatory comments were made in connection with the controversy surrounding the investigation into that alleged misappropriation; therefore comments were entitled to protection under the anti-SLAPP statute)].

In Taus v. Loftus (2007) 40 Cal. 4th 683, 712-713, 54 Cal. Rptr. 3d 775, 151 P.3d 1185 , the California Supreme Court held that two articles published in a scientific journal responding to an article published in a different journal regarding suppressed memories of childhood abuse were protected speech under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(e)(3) and (4). The subject of the initial article, referred to as "Jane Doe" in the article, sued the authors of the subsequent articles for defamation, invasion of privacy, and other torts. The court noted that at the time the articles were published, there was a "substantial controversy in the mental health field regarding whether, and under what circumstances, a victim of child abuse might forget or suppress thememory of the abuse over a long period of time and later recover that memory in response to questioning or other actions by a therapist." Defendants therefore satisfied their burden of showing that the conduct fell within the protections of the anti-SLAPP statute.

One court of appeal has adopted a much more expansive interpretation of the phrase "issue of public interest" as "any issue in which the public is interested," and that the issue need not be significant as long as the public has taken an interest [Nygard, Inc. v. Uusi-Kerttula (2007) 159 Cal. App. 4th 1027, 1037, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 210]. In Nygard, the court found an employer's defamation action against a former employee based on an interview the employee gave to a magazine, fell within the statute because there was extensive interest in the plaintiff among the Finnish public. The court cited two other cases in which courts held so-called "tabloids" involved issues of public interest [see Seelig v. Infinity Broadcasting Corp. (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 798, 119 Cal. Rptr. 2d 108 , and Sipple v. Foundation for Nat. Progress (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 226, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 677].

Not every mundane communication between a homeowners association and a homeowner gives rise to a freedom of speech issue, even homeowners association conduct with regard to design review matters and architectural guidelines. Code of Civil Procedure Section 425.16(e)(4) does not come into play unless the right of free speech or the right to petition is involved. The cause of action itself must be based on the speech or petitioning activity. If neither of those rights is at stake, § 425.16(e)(4) is inapplicable, irrespective of whether the subject of the dispute may otherwise be a matter of public interest [Turner v. Vista Pointe Ridge Homeowners Assn. (2009) 180 Cal. App. 4th 676, 681-688, 102 Cal. Rptr. 3d 750] .

A "public forum" traditionally has been defined as a place that is open to the public where information is freely exchanged [Clark v. Burleigh (1992) 4 Cal. 4th 474, 482, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 455, 841 P.2d 975 ; Nygard, Inc. v. Uusi-Kerttula (2007) 159 Cal. App. 4th 1027, 1036, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 210 ; Damon v. Ocean Hills Journalism Club (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 468, 475, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 205].

There is a split of authority regarding whether a newspaper or magazine is a public forum within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(e)(3) [see Nygard, Inc. v. Uusi-Kerttula (2007) 159 Cal. App. 4th 1027, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 210]. One line of cases holds newspapers are not public fora because members of the public cannot freely publish their opinions in them [see Lafayette Morehouse, Inc. v. Chronicle Publishing Co. (1995) 37 Cal. App. 4th 855, 44 Cal.Rptr. 2d 46]. The other line of cases hold that newspapers and magazines are public fora because the opinions expressed in them are open to the public and their contents contribute to the public debate [see Nygard, Inc. v. Uusi-Kerttula (2007) 159 Cal. App. 4th 1027, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 210 ; Damon v. Ocean Hills Journalism Club (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 468, 102 Cal.Rptr. 2d 205]. In Nygard, the court noted that Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(e)(3) refers to a statement or writing made either in a place open to the public or a public forum, suggesting that a public forum is not synonymous with a place open to the public. Additionally, the California Supreme Court has held that public access, not the right to public comment is the hallmark of a public forum [see Barrett v. Rosenthal (2006) 40 Cal. 4th 33, 41 n.4, 51 Cal. Rptr. 3d 55, 146 P.3d 510]. The Nygard court therefore concluded that a magazine was a public forum within the meaning of the statute [Nygard, Inc. v. Uusi-Kerttula (2007) 159 Cal. App. 4th 1027, 1039, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 210].

[4] "Mixed" Causes of Action

In certain cases, a complaint may allege causes of action arising from both activity protected by the anti-SLAPP statute and activity not protected by the anti-SLAPP statute. Such "mixed" causes of action are subject to an anti-SLAPP motion to strike "unless the protected conduct is merely incidental to the unprotected conduct" [Peregrine Funding, Inc. v. Sheppard Mullin Richter & Hampton LLP (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 658, 672, 35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 31 ; see also Raining Data Corp. v. Barrenechea (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 1363, 1368-1372, 97 Cal. Rptr. 3d 196 (gravamen of defendants' cross-complaint was directed at plaintiff's filing of the complaint; the one allegation of a communication that may have been unprotected did not exempt the cross-complaint from an anti-SLAPP motion); Salma v. Capon (2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 1275, 1289,74 Cal. Rptr. 3d 873 (allegations of protected conduct were not merely incidental to allegations of unprotected conduct in intentional interference with prospective economic advantage claim; additionally, harm allegedly caused by protected conduct was distinct from that allegedly caused by unprotected conduct); Gallanis-Politis v. Medina (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 600, 614-615, 61 Cal. Rptr. 3d 701 (supervisor's investigation in response to county counsel's inquiry stemming from discovery requests was at heart of plaintiff's retaliation claim and therefore claim was subject to anti-SLAPP motion to strike); Mann v. Quality Old Time Service, Inc. (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 90, 15 Cal. Rptr. 3d 215 (defendants' reports to government agencies formed a substantial part of the factual basis for defamation and trade libel claims, and thus the anti-SLAPP statute applied)]. Although the California Supreme Court has yet to address the issue of the application of the anti-SLAPP statute to "mixed" causes of action, the published appellate court cases on the issue all conclude that a cause of action alleging both protected and unprotected activity is subject to the anti-SLAPP statute unless the protected conduct is merely incident to the unprotected conduct.

Chapter 376 MOTIONS TO STRIKE: ANTI-SLAPP
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

9-376 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 376.15

§ 376.15 Persons Protected by Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16

[1] Persons Who Engage in or Support Protected Activity

By its terms, Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 applies to persons who act in furtherance of their own right of petition or free speech [see Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(a), (b)(1)].

A defendant moving to strike a SLAPP suit need not, however, demonstrate that its protected statements or writings were made on its own behalf, as opposed to on behalf of its clients or the general public [see Briggs v. Eden Council for Hope and Opportunity (1999) 19 Cal. 4th 1106, 1116, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 471, 969 P.2d 564] .

Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 expressly applies to any writing or speech made in connection with an issue under consideration or review by a legislative,executive, or judicial proceeding, or any other official proceeding authorized by law, but there is no requirement that the writing or speech be promulgated directly to the official body [Ludwig v. Superior Court (1995) 37 Cal. App. 4th 8, 17, 43 Cal. Rptr. 2d 350] . A person can exercise his or her own rights by supporting the forceful activities of others. Thus, both a confident opponent who takes the public podium and a shy opponent who prefers to lend moral support by standing silently in the audience are protected under the statute. Furthermore, there is no meaningful difference between a person who supports and encourages the filing of a lawsuit, and one who supports and encourages a third party to speak out publicly at a public hearing on a matter of public interest [Ludwig v. Superior Court (1995) 37 Cal. App. 4th 8, 18, 43 Cal. Rptr. 2d 350] .

Examples include the following:

- A defendant who has instigated and funded litigation involving a colorable claim brought by others, for example, antidevelopment, environmentally based litigation, or has encouraged others to speak out publicly at a public hearing on a matter of public interest, may be protected [Ludwig v. Superior Court (1995) 37 Cal. App. 4th 8, 17-18, 43 Cal. Rptr. 2d 350] .

- A defendant that counseled a tenant in a dispute with a landlord in anticipation of litigation may be protected [Briggs v. Eden Council for Hope and Opportunity (1999) 19 Cal. 4th 1106, 1115, 81 Cal.

Rptr. 2d 471, 969 P.2d 564] .

[2] Governmental Entities and Employees

The word "person" as used in Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 includes a governmental entity and Section 425.16 extends to public employees who issue reports and comment on issues of public interest relating to their official duties. Thus, as with private parties, Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 also protects governmental entities and their employees and if they are sued as a result of written and verbal comments on issues of public interest relating to their official duties, both may move to specially strike under Section 425.16 [Vargas v. City of Salinas (2009) 46 Cal. 4th 1, 16-19, 92 Cal. Rptr. 3d 286, 205 P.3d 207 ; Schaffer v. City and County of San Francisco (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 992, 1003, 85 Cal. Rptr. 3d 880 ; Santa Barbara County Coalition Against Auto Subsidies v. Santa Barbara County Association of Governments (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 1229, 1237, 84 Cal. Rptr. 3d 714 ; Bradbury v. Superior Court (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 1108, 1113-1117, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 207 ; see Mission Oaks Ranch, Ltd. v. County of Santa Barbara (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 713, 727, 730, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1 , disapproved on other grounds in Briggs v. Eden Council for Hope and Opportunity (1999) 19 Cal. 4th 1106, 1123 n.10, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 471, 969 P.2d 564] .

[3] Persons Engaged in Illegal Acts Involving Constitutional Rights

Even if the acts alleged in the complaint are done in furtherance of the constitutional rights of free speech or petition for redress of grievances in connection with a public issue, if those acts are themselves illegal, defendant is not entitled to protection under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 because the plaintiff's lawsuit must be brought primarily to chill a valid exercise of defendant's constitutional rights [Paul for Council v. Hanyecz (2001) 85 Cal. App. 4th 1356, 1363-1367, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 864] . In Paul for Council, a political candidate who unsuccessfully ran for city council filed an action against several defendants who had illegally laundered campaign contributions to plaintiff's opponent. The defendants filed an anti-SLAPP motion to strike, arguing that their campaign activities were covered by Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16. The trial court ruled in favor of the defendants and dismissed the action after the plaintiff failed to establish a probability of success on his claims. The court of appeal reversed the trial court's ruling and reinstated the action, concluding that the making of a political campaign contribution is a type of political speech, and "[a] contribution serves as a general expression of support for the candidate and his views... ." However, the court next addressed the preamble of Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(a), which states that the statute was enacted to combat suits brought primarily to chill the valid exercise of a defendant's constitutional rights of speech and petition. The probability that the Legislature intended to give defendants protection from a lawsuit based on injuries they are alleged to have caused by their illegal campaign money laundering scheme "is as unlikely as the probability that such protection would exist for them if they injured plaintiff while robbing a bank to obtain the money for the campaign contributions or while hijacking a car to drive the campaign contributions to the post office for mailing." Under the facts demonstrated by this record, the court could not permit the defendants to wrap themselves in this vital legislation. While it is technically true that laundering campaign contributions is an act in furtherance of the giving of such contributions, that is, in furtherance of an act of free speech, the court rejected the notion that the statute exists to protect such illegal activity. Because the defendants did not show that plaintiff's suit was brought primarily to chill a valid exercise of their constitutional rights of free speech or petition for redress of grievances in connection with a public issue, plaintiff had no obligation to establish a probability that he would prevail on his causes of action, and the trial court was therefore required to deny defendants' motion to strike plaintiff's causes of action [Paul for Council v. Hanyecz (2001) 85 Cal. App. 4th 1356, 1364-1367, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 864] .

The California Supreme Court validated the Paul holding in Flatley v. Mauro (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 299, 46 Cal. Rptr. 3d 606 . In Flatley, plaintiff was a professional performer who sued defendant attorney for civil extortion, defamation, fraud, intentional infliction of emotional distress, and wrongful interference with prospective economic advantage. Defendant and his client had alleged that plaintiff raped the client in a hotel suite in Las Vegas. Defendant sent plaintiff a letter demanding a settlement or else they would file suit and disseminate the allegations to the media and thereafter made phone calls to plaintiff with the same threats. Plaintiff never paid defendant or his client, but defendant and his client did file a lawsuit against plaintiff. The lawsuit against plaintiff was eventually dismissed voluntarily, and there was no evidence that the encounter between plaintiff and defendant's client was anything but consensual. In response to plaintiff's complaint, defendant filed an anti-SLAPP motion, arguing that his letter was a pre-litigation settlement offer in furtherance of his constitutional right of petition and that therefore it was protected by section 425.16(e)(1) and (4). The trial court denied the motion and the court of appeal affirmed, holding that defendant's communications constituted extortion and therefore were not protected activity. The California Supreme Court agreed, citing the Paul case with approval. In a factual context in which either the defendant concedes the illegality of his conduct or the illegality is conclusively shown by the evidence, defendant's anti-SLAPP motion must be denied because section 425.16 protects only the valid exercise of the constitutional right of freedom of speech and petition. The court emphasized that the question of whether defendant's conduct leading to the lawsuit was illegal as a matter of law is preliminary and unrelated to the second prong of the anti-SLAPP determination. Defendant then argued that section 425.16 protected all pre-litigation communications, even those that constitute extortion. The court disagreed, stating that litigation-related activity which is privileged under the litigation privilege is not necessarily protected by the anti-SLAPP statute. The attorney's threats to publicly accuse plaintiff of rape unless he paid money was clearly criminal extortion as a matter of law, and because those actions formed the basis of defendant's special motion to strike, the motion was properly denied [Flatley v. Mauro (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 299, 316-332, 46 Cal. Rptr. 3d606 ; see also Cohen v. Brown (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 302, 317, 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 24 (defendant's filing of a false State Bar complaint against plaintiff constituted extortion, which is not constitutionally protected speech entitled to the protections of the anti-SLAPP statute); Novartis Vaccines and Diagnostics, Inc. v. Stop Huntingdon Animal Cruelty USA, Inc. (2006) 143 Cal. App. 4th 1284, 1296, 50 Cal. Rptr. 3d 27 (gravamen of complaint was not speech, but rather acts of harassment, infliction of emotional distress, intrusion and trespass, and because defendant conspired to commit these acts, its conduct was illegal and therefore not protected under anti-SLAPP statute)].

However, conduct that is merely alleged to have been unlawful or unethical does not lose its protection under the anti-SLAPP statute. The exception only applies in cases in which the illegality of defendant's actions is established either through defendant's concession or through the evidence presented in connection with the motion [Cabral v. Martins (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 471, 482, 99 Cal. Rptr. 3d 394 (defendant attorneys who represented clients in action brought by plaintiff for alleged child support evasion were entitled to anti-SLAPP protection despite plaintiff's claim that their actions were unethical and illegal); see also Birkner v. Lam (2007) 156 Cal. App. 4th 275, 285, 67 Cal. Rptr. 3d 190 (trial court found that defendant's conduct in serving eviction notice on plaintiff was not illegal)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

9-376 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 376.16

§ 376.16 Statutory Exceptions to Anti-SLAPP Motion to Strike Code Civ. Proc. § 425.17

[1] Legislative Findings and Declarations

In 2003, the Legislature determined that there had been a "disturbing abuse" of California's anti-SLAPP laws codified in Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 which has undermined the exercise of the constitutional rights of freedom of speech and petition for the redress of grievances, contrary to the purpose and intent of Section 425.16 [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.17(a)]. Consumer groups argued that large corporations were invoking the anti-SLAPP statute to delay and discourage litigation against them by filing SLAPP motions, using the statute as a litigation weapon [Senate Rules Committee Analysis to SB515, 8/22/03]. The Legislature enacted Code Civ. Proc. § 425.17 which provides that certain actions, as specified below, are not subject to a special motion to strike, and further found that it is in the public interest to encourage continued participation in matters of public significance, and that this participation should not be chilled through abuse of the judicial process or Section 425.16 [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.17(a)].

[2] Actions Brought Solely in the Public Interest or on Behalf of General Public

The special motion to strike procedure of Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 does not apply to any action brought solely in the public interest or on behalf of the general public provided that all of the following conditions exist [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.17(b)]:

- The plaintiff does not seek any relief greater than or different from the relief sought for the general public or a class of which the plaintiff is a member. Claims for attorney's fees, costs, or other penalties do not count as seeking "greater" or "different" relief.

- The action, if successful, would enforce an important right affecting the public interest, and would confer a significant benefit, whether pecuniary or nonpecuniary, on the general public or a large class of persons.

- Private enforcement is necessary and places a disproportionate financial burden on the plaintiff in relation to the plaintiff's stake in the matter.

The California Supreme Court has held that the exception found in CCP § 425.17(b) does not apply to an action that seeks any advantage, no matter how narrow, for a particular plaintiff. The "principal thrust or gravamen" test used in interpretation of CCP § 425.16 is inappropriate in determining whether the statutory exception applies; CCP § 425.17(b) specifically applies to an "action," not a "cause of action," and requires that the action be brought solely in the public interest [Club Members for an Honest Election v. Sierra Club (2008) 45 Cal. 4th 309, 319, 86 Cal. Rptr. 3d 288, 196 P.3d 1094 (plaintiffs, a group challenging the Sierra Club's election procedures and an unsuccessful candidate, sought to install one of the plaintiffs on the board of directors and other forms of relief constituting personal advantage)].

The exception of Code Civ. Proc. § 425.17(b) applies only to actions brought "solely" in the public interest or on behalf of the general public; use of the term "solely" expressly conveys the Legislative intent that section 425.17(b) not apply to an action that seeks a more narrow advantage for a particular plaintiff. Such an action would not be brought "solely" in the public's interest. The statutory language of 425.17(b) is unambiguous and bars a litigant seeking "any" personal relief from relying on the section 425.17(b) exception [Club Members for an Honest Election v. Sierra Club (2008) 45 Cal. 4th 309, 316-317, 86 Cal. Rptr. 3d 288, 196 P.3d 1094]. The "principal thrust or gravamen" test for Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 is broadly interpreted; thus, a plaintiff could not deprive a defendant of anti-SLAPP protection by bringing a complaint based upon both protected and unprotected conduct because the anti-SLAPP statute specifically permits the striking of a "cause of action." The exception provided for in Code Civ. Proc. § 425.17 operates in the opposite manner. As an exception, it is to be narrowly interpreted, lest it swallow the rule found in the anti-SLAPP statute. The Legislature also made this general rule of construction explicit in the language it chose. It requires that, under section 425.17(b) an action, as opposed to a cause of action, must be brought "solely" in the public interest [Club Members for an Honest Election v. Sierra Club (2008) 45 Cal. 4th 309, 319-320, 86 Cal. Rptr. 3d 288, 196 P.3d 1094] .

[3] Actions Brought Against a Person Primarily Engaged in the Business of Selling Goods or Services

The special motion to strike procedure of Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 does not apply to any action brought against a person primarily engaged in the business of selling or leasing goods or services, including, but not limited to, insurance, securities, or financial instruments, arising from any statement or conduct by that person. Both of the following conditions must exist [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.17(c)]:

- The statement or conduct consists of representations of fact about that person's or a business competitor's business operations, goods, or services, that is made for the purpose of obtaining approval for, promoting, or securing sales or leases of, or commercial transactions in, the person's goods or services, or the statement or conduct was made in the course of delivering the person's goods or services.

- The intended audience is an actual or potential buyer or customer, or a person likely to repeat the statement to, or otherwise influence, an actual or potential buyer or customer, or the statement or conduct arose out of or within the context of a regulatory approval process, proceeding or investigation notwithstanding that the conduct or statement concerns an important public issue.

- The exception found in this provision does not apply where the statement or conduct was made by a telephone corporation in the course of a proceeding before the California Public Utilities Commission and is the subject of a lawsuit brought by a competitor.

The defendant has the burden of proving that plaintiff's cause of action is outside the statutory exceptions of Code Civ. Proc. § 425.17; if defendant cannot do so, the burden does not shifts to plaintiff to prove a probability of success [Brill Media Co. v. TCW Group, Inc. (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 324, 330, 341, 33 Cal. Rptr. 3d 371 (defendant's large financial management and services conglomerates were primarily engaged in the business of selling goods and services within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 425.17(c); furthermore, the statements made by defendants constituted commercial speech directed at an actual or potential buyer or consumer within the meaning of the exception to the anti-SLAPP statute)].

For the action to involve statements regarding either party's business operations, goods or services, a mere e-mail sent to "set the record straight" with regard to the allegations of the lawsuit and not to obtain approval for, promote, or secure business for the event staffing company is insufficient to fall within the Code Civ. Proc. § 425.17(c) exception to the anti-SLAPP statute [Contemporary Services Corp. v. Staff Pro Inc. (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 1043, 1054, 61 Cal. Rptr. 3d 434 ; see also Sunset Millennium Associates v. LHO Grafton Hotel (2006) 146 Cal. App. 4th 300, 313, 52 Cal. Rptr. 3d 828 (statements made by defendant during environmental impact report review process objecting to competitor hotel's proposed expansion were not made for the purpose of obtaining approval for, promoting, or securing sales or leases of, or commercial transactions in, defendant's goods or services); Navarro v. IHOP Properties, Inc. (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 834, 841, 36 Cal. Rptr. 3d 385 ; Blanchard v. DIRECTV, Inc. (2004) 123 Cal. App. 4th 903, 914, 20 Cal. Rptr. 3d 385 (an unfair competition law claim by plaintiffs who received demand letters from satellite television provider DIRECTV ordering the plaintiffs to stop using decryption devices was not entitled to protection against defendant's anti-SLAPP motion under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.17(b) because the claim would not "enforce an important right affecting the public interest" (second prong of exception) and there was no disproportionate financial burden on the plaintiffs (third prong of exception))].

The legislature intended to exempt purely commercial disputes under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.17, and a cause of action arising from lawyer's advice to prospective clients regarding pending litigation does not fall within statutory exemption to anti-SLAPP statute [Taheri Law Group v. Evans (2008) 160 Cal. App. 4th 482, 491, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 847].

[4] Circumstances Under Which Statutory Exceptions Are Inapplicable

There are circumstances when the foregoing statutory prohibitions against bringing a special motion to strike do not apply. An anti-SLAPP motion is permitted as an exception to the foregoing prohibitions as follows [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.17(d)]:

- The anti-SLAPP motion can be employed against claims arising from gathering, receiving, or processing information for communication to the publisher, editor, reporter, or other person connected or employed upon a newspaper, magazine, or other periodical publication, press association, or wire service, or a person engaged in the dissemination of ideas or expression in any book or academic journal [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.17(d)(1)].

- The anti-SLAPP motion can be employed against claims against any person or entity based upon the creation, dissemination, exhibition, advertisement, or other promotion of any dramatic, literary, musical, political, or artistic work [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.17(d)(2)].

- The anti-SLAPP motion can be employed against claims against any non-profit organization that receives more than 50 percent of its annual revenue from federal, state, or local government grants, awards, programs, or reimbursements for services rendered [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.17(d)(3)].

[5] Effective Date of Statute and Application to Pending Cases

Code Civ. Proc. § 425.17 took effect on January 1, 2004 [2003 Stats. ch. 338]. Appellate court decisions have uniformly held that cases on review following the effective date of the statute are to be decided under the new statutory framework [Physicians Com. for Responsible Medicine v. Tyson Foods, Inc. (2004) 119 Cal. App. 4th 120, 127, 13 Cal. Rptr. 3d 926 (trial court had granted defendant's SLAPP motion prior to the effective date of Code Civ. Proc. § 425.17; on appellate review after the effective date of the statute appellate court reversed decision based on new statute); Brenton v. Metabolife Internat., Inc. (2004) 116 Cal. App. 4th 679, 10 Cal. Rptr. 3d 702 (Code Civ. Proc. § 425.17 provided an independent basis for trial court's order denying defendant's SLAPP motion); Metcalf v. U-Haul Int'l, Inc. (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 1261, 1265, 13 Cal. Rptr. 3d 686 (same)].

§ 376.17 Malicious Prosecution Actions and Anti-SLAPPback Motions to Strike

[1] Case Law Applying Anti-SLAPP Statute to Malicious Prosecution Actions

Because Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(e) defines "act in furtherance of a person's right of petition or free speech under the United States or California Constitution in connection with a public issue" to include both "any written or oral statement or writing made before a ... judicial proceeding" and "any written or oral statement or writing made in connection with an issue under consideration or review by a ... judicial body," the anti-SLAPP statute potentially applies to every malicious prosecution lawsuit [see Jarrow Formulas, Inc. v. LaMarche (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 728, 732, 3 Cal. Rptr. 3d 636, 74 P.3d 737] . In Jarrow Formula, plaintiff argued that there was no indication the Legislature intended for malicious prosecution suits to be subject to anti-SLAPP scrutiny and asked the court to create a categorical exemption from the anti-SLAPP statute for malicious prosecution actions. The California Supreme Court declined to do so, holding that the language of the statute was clear and unambiguous and did not exclude any particular action from its operation [Jarrow Formulas, Inc. v. LaMarche (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 728, 735, 3 Cal. Rptr. 3d 636, 74 P.3d 737] . The court also noted that in Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(d) the court did create categorical exemptions for certain types of actions, and did not do so for malicious prosecution claims [Jarrow Formulas, Inc. v. LaMarche (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 728, 741, 3 Cal. Rptr. 3d 636, 74 P.3d 737] . The court rejected the argument that the anti-SLAPP statute effectively bars malicious prosecution claims, stating that the statute merely " 'subjects to potential dismissal only those actions in which the plaintiff cannot state[] and substantiate[] a legally sufficient claim.' " [Jarrow Formulas, Inc. v. LaMarche (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 728, 734, 3 Cal. Rptr. 3d 636, 74 P.3d 737 , quoting Navellier v. Sletten (2002) 29 Cal. 4th 82, 124 Cal. Rptr. 2d 530, 52 P.3d 703] .

Subsequent malicious prosecution claims have survived scrutiny under the anti-SLAPP statute. In Soukup v. Law Offices of Herbert Hafif (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 260, 46 Cal. Rptr. 3d 638 , plaintiff was able to establish a probability of prevailing on her malicious prosecution claim and therefore met her burden under the second prong of the anti-SLAPP statute. To meet this burden, a malicious prosecution plaintiff "must demonstrate that the complaint is both legally sufficient and supported by a sufficient prima facie showing of facts to sustain a favorable judgment if the evidence submitted by the plaintiff is credited" [Soukup v. Law Offices of Herbert Hafif (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 260, 291, 46 Cal. Rptr. 3d 638 , quoting Matson v. Dvorak (1995) 40 Cal. App.4th 539, 548, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 880] . In Soukup, the plaintiff succeeded in making a prima facie showing that the prior action (1) was commenced by or at the direction of the defendant and was pursued to a legal termination favorable to the plaintiff; (2) was brought without probable cause; and (3) was initiated with malice [Soukup v. Law Offices of Herbert Hafif (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 260, 292, 297, 46 Cal. Rptr. 3d 638] .

Defendant's anti-SLAPP motion in a malicious prosecution case was similarly denied in Slaney v. Ranger Ins. Co. (2004) 115 Cal. App. 4th 306, 321, 8 Cal. Rptr. 3d 915 (plaintiff was able to make prima facie showing of termination of prior suit in its favor, lack of probable cause, and malice and therefore survived anti-SLAPP motion); see also Ross v. Kish (2006) 145 Cal. App.4th 188, 197-198 , 51 Cal. Rptr. 3d 484 (denial of anti-SLAPP motion upheld where plaintiff showed a probability of prevailing on malicious prosecution claim); HMS Capital, Inc. v. Lawyers Title Co. (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 204, 214-219, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 786 (plaintiff established probability of prevailing on malicious prosecution claim and therefore defendant's anti-SLAPP motion was denied).

As in other types of anti-SLAPP motions, the two-pronged analysis applies in malicious prosecution actions. First the court decides whether the defendant has made a threshold showing that the challenged cause of action is one arising from protected activity. The plain language of the anti-SLAPP statute dictates that every claim of malicious prosecution is a cause of action arising from protected activity because every such claim necessarily depends upon written and oral statements in a prior judicial proceeding. Second, if the court finds such a showing has been made, it then determines whether the plaintiff has demonstrated a probability of prevailing on the claim [Daniels v. Robbins (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 204, 214-215, 105 Cal. Rptr. 3d 683] .

With regard to the probability of prevailing on a claim of malicious prosecution, the first element of a malicious prosecution cause of action is that the underlying case must have been terminated in favor of the malicious prosecution plaintiff. The basis of the favorable termination element is that the resolution of the underlying case must have tended to indicate the malicious prosecution plaintiff's innocence. When prior proceedings are terminated by means other than a trial, the termination must reflect on the merits of the case and the malicious prosecution plaintiff's innocence of the misconduct alleged in the underlying lawsuit [Daniels v. Robbins (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 204, 217, 105 Cal. Rptr. 3d 683] . In some circumstances, the dismissal of an underlying action as a result of discovery sanctions will satisfy the favorable termination element of a malicious prosecution claim [Daniels v. Robbins (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 204, 217, 105 Cal. Rptr. 3d 683] . Not every case in which a terminating sanctions motion is granted necessarily results in a "favorable termination." But when the record from the underlying action is devoid of any attempt during discovery to substantiate allegations in the complaint, and the court's dismissal is justified by the plaintiff's lack of evidence to submit the case to a jury at trial, a prima facie showing of facts sufficient to satisfy the "favorable termination" element of a malicious prosecution claim is established for purposes of an anti-SLAPP motion [Daniels v. Robbins (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 204, 219, 105 Cal. Rptr. 3d 683] . Similar types of dismissals are also favorable terminations in appropriate circumstances. For example, a voluntary dismissal is presumed to be a favorable termination on the merits, unless otherwise proved to a jury [Daniels v. Robbins (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 204, 218, 105 Cal. Rptr. 3d 683] . Likewise, a dismissal of an action for failure to prosecute raises a factual issue of favorable termination in an ensuing malicious prosecution action [Daniels v. Robbins (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 204, 218, 105 Cal. Rptr. 3d 683] . A final judgment after trial is a favorable termination even if the plaintiff is precluded by evidentiary sanctions from presenting evidence at the trial [Daniels v. Robbins (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 204, 218, 105 Cal. Rptr. 3d 683 ; Lumpkin v. Friedman (1982) 131 Cal. App. 3d 450, 452-456, 182 Cal. Rptr. 378] .

The second element of the malicious prosecution action on which plaintiff must show a probability of prevailing is whether there was probable cause to institute that action. Probable cause is lacking when a prospective plaintiff and counsel do not have evidence sufficient to uphold a favorable judgment or information affording an inference that such evidence can be obtained for trial. In general, a lawyer is entitled to rely on information provided by the client. However, if the lawyer discovers the client's statements are false, the lawyer cannot rely on the client's statements in prosecuting an action. A letter from a litigation adversary merely suggesting it disagrees with the verity of the allegations in the lawsuit is not sufficient to put the lawyer on notice of the falsity of the client's allegations [Daniels v. Robbins (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 204, 222, 105 Cal. Rptr. 3d 683] .

The "malice" element of a cause of action for malicious prosecution relates to the subjective intent or purpose with which the defendant acted in initiating the prior action. The motive of the defendant must have been something other than that of the satisfaction in a civil action of some personal or financial purpose. The plaintiff must plead and prove actual ill will or some improper ulterior motive. Improper purposes can be established in cases in which, for instance the person bringing the suit does not believe that the claim may be held valid, the proceeding is initiated primarily because of hostility or ill will, the proceeding is initiated solely for the purpose of depriving the opponent of a beneficial use of property, or the proceeding is initiated for the purpose of forcing a settlement bearing no relation to the merits of the claim [Daniels v. Robbins (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 204, 224, 105 Cal. Rptr. 3d 683] . If the prior action was not objectively tenable, the extent of a defendant's attorney's investigation and research may be relevant to the further question of whether or not the attorney acted with malice [Daniels v. Robbins (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 204, 224-225, 105 Cal. Rptr. 3d 683] . Since parties rarely admit an improper motive, malice is usually proven by circumstantial evidence and inferences drawn from the evidence [Daniels v. Robbins (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 204, 225, 105 Cal. Rptr. 3d 683] . Additional proof of malice can consist of evidence a party knowingly brings an action without probable cause, and malice can be inferred when a party continues to prosecute an action after becoming aware that the action lacks probable cause [Daniels v. Robbins (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 204, 226, 105 Cal. Rptr. 3d 683] .

[2] SLAPPback Motions to Strike--Code Civ. Proc. § 425.18

[a] SLAPPback Action Defined

In 2005, and effective January 1, 2006, the Legislature added Code Civ. Proc. § 425.18 to the anti-SLAPP provisions, and, in doing so, created the term "SLAPPback" [2005 Stats. ch. 535]. A SLAPPback is any cause of action for malicious prosecution or abuse of process arising from the filing or maintenance of a prior cause of action that has been dismissed pursuant to an anti-SLAPP motion under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.18(b)(1)]. The Legislature found that a SLAPPback is distinguishable in character and origin from an ordinary malicious prosecution action, and, in fact, is consistent with the Legislature's intent to protect the valid exercise of the constitutional rights of free speech and petition by its deterrent effect on SLAPP litigation [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.18(a)]. Therefore, a SLAPPback should be treated differently from an ordinary malicious prosecution action in terms of the application of the anti-SLAPP statute [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.18(a)]. The California Supreme Court explained that the purpose of a SLAPPback is to "seek compensation for damages beyond the attorney fees and costs awarded to the defendant who prevails on the special motion to strike under the anti-SLAPP statute" [Soukup v. Law Offices of Herbert Hafif (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 260, 280, 46 Cal. Rptr. 3d 638] .

A special motion to strike may not be filed against a SLAPPback by a party whose filing or maintenance of the prior cause of action was illegal as a matter of law [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.18(h)]. Code Civ. Proc. § 425.18(h) provides a narrow exception to the general rule that malicious prosecution actions are subject to the anti-SLAPP statute in cases where the filing and maintenance of the underlying action was illegal as a matter of law. In practical terms, as with all anti-SLAPP motions, defendant must first make the required threshold showing that the challenged action arises from protected activity. Plaintiff then carries the burden of demonstrating that the underlying action was illegal as a matter of law and in doing so must identify with particularity the statute or statutes violated [Soukup v. Law Offices of Herbert Hafif (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 260, 286-287, 46 Cal. Rptr. 3d 638 (plaintiff former employee failed to show that the filing and maintenance of defendant former employer's underlying action was illegal as a matter of law under two different federal statutes requiring the existence of employer-employee relationship at the time of the filing of the underlying action; mere allegation that underlying lawsuit was a "sham suit" was not sufficient under section 425.18(h)); see also Hutton v. Hafif (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 527, 545, 59 Cal. Rptr. 3d 109 (prior action was not illegal as a matter of law when part of the action constituted conduct forbidden by law but the remainder of the action was not illegal)].

Code Civ. Proc. § 425.18 does not apply to a SLAPPback filed by a public entity [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.18(i)].

Because it is procedural in character, the SLAPPback statute applies retroactively to pending actions that originated prior to section 425.18's effective date of January 1, 2006 [Soukup v. Law Offices of Herbert Hafif (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 260, 280, 46 Cal. Rptr. 3d 638] .

[b] Procedure for Anti-SLAPPback Motion to Strike

A special motion to strike a SLAPPback suit must be filed within any one of the following periods of time: (1) within 120 days of the service of the complaint, (2) at the court's discretion, but within six months of the service of the complaint, or (3) at the court's discretion, at any later time in extraordinary cases due to no fault of the defendant and upon written findings of the court stating the extraordinary case and circumstance [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.18(d)]. Additionally, a party opposing a special motion to strike a SLAPPback suit may file an ex parte application for a continuance to obtain necessary discovery [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.18(e)]. Upon entry of an order denying a special motion to strike a SLAPPback, or an order granting the motion as to some but less than all causes of action alleged, the aggrieved party may, within 20days after service of a written notice of the entry of the order, petition an appropriate reviewing court for a peremptory writ [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.18(g)]. Orders relating to a special motions to strike a SLAPPback suit are not appealable under Code Civ. Proc. § 904.1 [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.18(c)]. The purpose of these provisions is "to stack the procedural deck in favor of the SLAPPback plaintiff confronted with a special motion to strike"; however, the Legislature did create a categorical rule exempting SLAPPbacks from the anti-SLAPP statute [Soukup v. Law Offices of Herbert Hafif (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 260, 282, 283, 46 Cal. Rptr. 3d 638] .

[c] Discovery

Discovery proceedings in SLAPPback actions are not stayed upon the filing of a special motion to strike [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.18(c)]. A party opposing a special motion to strike a SLAPPback may file an ex parte application for a continuance to obtain necessary discovery [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.18(e)].

[d] Attorney's Fees and Costs

Prevailing defendants in SLAPPback suits are not entitled to recover attorney's fees and costs [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.18(c); see also Hutton v. Hafif (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 527, 545, 59 Cal. Rptr. 3d 109 (attorney fees not recoverable by defendant in SLAPPback action)]. If the court finds that a special motion to strike a SLAPPback is frivolous or solely intended to cause unnecessary delay, the court must award costs and reasonable attorney's fees to a plaintiff prevailing on the motion [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.18(f)].

§ 376.18 Procedural Requirements for Special Motion to Strike

[1] Time Limitation for Motion and Hearing Date

A special motion to strike under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 may be filed within 60 days of the service of the complaint or, in the court's discretion, at any later time on terms the court deems proper [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(f)]. The motion must be scheduled by the clerk of the court for a hearing not more than 30 days after service unless the docket conditions of the court require a later hearing [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(f); see Hall v. Time Warner, Inc. (2007) 153 Cal. App. 4th 1337, 1349, 63 Cal. Rptr. 3d 798] .

In 2005, the Legislature amended Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(f) to require the clerk to schedule the hearing not more than 30 days after the service of an anti-SLAPP motion. This amendment was specifically in response to, and for the purposes of overruling, cases holding that a defendant who files an anti-SLAPP motion and does not obtain a hearing within 30 days of filing bears the burden of demonstrating that the delay was due to the court's docket conditions rather than other factors such as the convenience of the defense attorney's calendar [see, e.g., Fair Political Practices Comm'n v. American Civil Rights Coalition, Inc. (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 1171, 1175, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 157 (overruled by the Legislature in 2005 Stats. ch. 535, § 3)]. When a reasonable exercise of judicial discretion dictates, the court may continue the hearing date to allow completion of discovery that the court may have authorized [Lafayette Morehouse, Inc. v. Chronicle Publishing Co. (1995) 37 Cal. App. 4th 855, 868, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 46] .

A party who expressly consents to an untimely hearing date waives the right to later object to the hearing as not timely [Greka Integrated, Inc. v. Lowrey (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 1572, 1578, 35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 684] .

The 60-day requirement in Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(f) for filing an anti-SLAPP motion runs from the service of the complaint or an amended complaint, and if the amended complaint is served by mail, defendant has an extra five days in which to file the motion [Lam v. Ngo (2001) 91 Cal. App. 4th 832, 840-842] .

[2] Notification to Judicial Council

Any party who files a special motion to strike under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16, and any party that files opposition to a special motion to strike must, promptly on so filing, transmit to the Judicial Council, by e-mail or fax, the following [

Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(j)(1)]:

- A copy of the endorsed-filed caption page of the motion or opposition,
- A copy of any related notice of appeal or petition for a writ, and
- A conformed copy of any order issued pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16, including any order granting or denying any a special motion to strike, discovery or fees.

Transmission by fax should be sent to 415-865-4332. A clearly addressed cover sheet should direct the fax to:

Judicial Council of California

Council and Legal Services Division

RE: SLAPP Documents Per CCP 425.16

Attn: Office of Court Research

If documents are transmitted by e-mail, the documents should be in Word 97 or higher. The e-mail message, with the documents in an attachment, must include the date the documents were filed with the court. The message should be addressed to SLAPP@jud.ca.gov [see Judicial Council website release: http://www.courtinfo.ca.gov/reference/documents/transmit.pdf].

The Judicial Council must maintain a public record of the information transmitted under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(j) for at least three years, and may store the information on microfilm or other appropriate electronic media [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(j)(2)]. The Judicial Council is posting the log on the California Courts Web site (www.courtinfo.ca.gov). The log is an Excel 97 file, and will be updated by the fifth business day of every month.

[3] Amending Pleadings and Cross-Complaints

There is no express or implied right for the plaintiff to amend a SLAPP complaint, once the motion to strike has been granted [Simmons v. Allstate Ins. Co. (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 1068, 1074, 112 Cal. Rptr. 2d 397 ; but see Nguyen-Lam v. Cao (2009) 171Cal. App. 4th 858, 90 Cal. Rptr. 3d 205 (court of appeals upheld trial court's ruling granting defendant's anti-SLAPP motion based on plaintiff's failure to show a probability of prevailing, but allowing plaintiff to amend complaint)]. Additionally, a plaintiff may not amend his or her pleadings after an anti-SLAPP motion has been filed and before the court has ruled on it [Salma v. Capon (2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 1275, 1294, 74 Cal. Rptr. 3d 873].

The plaintiff cannot amend the pleading if the motion to strike is denied and the defendant has appealed the decision. Rather, there is an implied stay in the proceedings, so that the plaintiff cannot deprive the defendant of the right to the appellate review granted by the Legislature so that the appellate court can determine if the defendant had made a prima facie showing [Roberts v. Los Angeles County Bar Assn. (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 604, 613, 129 Cal. Rptr. 2d 546] .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

§ 376.19 Stay of Discovery Proceedings

All discovery proceedings in the action must be stayed on the filing of a notice of motion made pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(g)]. This includes any discovery motions pending at the time the special motion to strike is filed [Britts v. Superior Court (2006) 145 Cal. App. 4th 1112, 1127, 52 Cal. Rptr. 3d 185] . The stay of discovery must remain in effect until notice of entry of the order ruling on the motion. The court, however, on noticed motion and for good cause shown, may order that specified discovery be conducted notwithstanding this stay requirement [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(g); Contemporary Services Corp. v. Staff Pro Inc. (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 1043, 1061, 61 Cal. Rptr. 3d 434 (requests to conduct limited discovery pending a hearing on a special motion to strike must be in the form of a noticed motion)].

Discovery proceedings in SLAPPback actions are not stayed upon the filing of a special motion to strike [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.18(c)]. A party opposing a special motion to strike a SLAPPback may file an ex parte application for a continuance to obtain necessary discovery [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.18(e)].

Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 motions to strike will commonly be filed early in the legal proceedings before the plaintiff has the opportunity to conduct or complete significant and necessary discovery. For example, in a libel action against a media defendant, the media defendant will generally be the principal, if not the only source, of evidence concerning such matters as whether the defendant knew the published statement was false, or published the statement in reckless disregard of whether the matter was false and defamatory, or acted negligently in failing to ascertain whether the published matter was false and defamatory. Accordingly, if a plaintiff makes a timely and proper showing in response to a motion to strike, that a defendant or witness possesses evidence that the plaintiff needs to establish a prima facie case, the plaintiff must be given the reasonable opportunity to obtain that evidence through discovery before the motion is adjudicated. The trial court must liberally exercise its discretion to authorize reasonable and specified discovery timely requested by a plaintiff, when evidence to establish a prima facie case is reasonably shown to be held, or known, by defendant or its agents and employees [Lafayette Morehouse, Inc. v. Chronicle Publishing Co. (1995) 37 Cal. App. 4th 855, 868, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 46 ; see also Evans v. Unkow (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 1490, 1499, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 624 (failure to comply with statute by not making a timely and proper showing in the trial court for discovery made discovery request on appeal meritless)]. While good cause to lift an anti-SLAPP statute discovery ban may exist when the defendant or a witness possesses evidence needed by plaintiff to make a prima facie case, other relevant factors may weigh against lifting the ban, including whether the information plaintiff seeks to obtain through discovery proceedings is readily available from other sources or can be obtained through informal discovery, the plaintiff's need for the discovery requested, and if the complaint is legally deficient and no amount of discovery will cure the defect [Garment Workers Ctr. v. Superior Court (2004) 117 Cal App. 4th 1156, 1162, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 506] .

However, a plaintiff fails to show good cause for discovery in a defamation action if the plaintiff fails to identify additional facts plaintiff expects to discover or facts necessary to establish the absence of privilege or the existence of actual malice [Sipple v. Foundation for Nat. Progress (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 226, 231, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 677 ; see also Paterno v. Superior Court (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 1342, 1349, 78 Cal. Rptr. 3d 244 (holding plaintiffs who bring defamation actions involving constitutional malice standard cannot show good cause for discovery on question of actual malice unless they have first made a prima facie showing that defendant's published statements contain provably false factual assertions)]. The trial court does not abuse its discretion in denying discovery when it does not appear that further discovery could result in disclosure of information that would permit the plaintiff to demonstrate a prima facie case on any of plaintiff's claims [Sipple v. Foundation for Nat. Progress (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 226, 247, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 677 ; see also Carver v. Bonds (2005) 135 Cal. App. 4th 328, 359] .

For discussion of the continuance of the hearing date when such a request has been granted, see § 376.18[1].

Chapter 376 MOTIONS TO STRIKE: ANTI-SLAPP
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

9-376 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 376.20

§ 376.20 Required Prima Facie Showing

[1] Defendant

A defendant pursuing an anti-SLAPP motion must make an initial prima facie showing that plaintiff's suit arose from an act in furtherance of defendant's right of petition or free speech [Rusheen v. Cohen (2006) 37 Cal. 4th 1048, 1056, 39 Cal. Rptr. 3d 516 ; 128 P.3d 713 ; Zamos v. Stroud (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 958, 965, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 54, 87 P.3d 802 ; Equillon Enterprises, LLC v. Consumer Cause, Inc. (2002) 29 Cal. 4th 53, 67] . A defendant meets this burden by demonstrating that the act underlying the plaintiff's cause fits one of the categories spelled out in Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(e) [Freeman v. Schack (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 719, 726-727, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 867 ; Braun v. Chronicle Publishing Co. (1997) 52 Cal. App. 4th 1036, 1043, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 58 ; Wilcox v. Superior Court (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 809, 820, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 446 ; see DuPont Merck Pharmaceutical Co. v. Superior Court (2000) 78 Cal. App. 4th 562, 565-567, 92 Cal. Rptr. 2d 755 and discussion in § 376.14, above, and Equilon Enterprises, LLC v. Consumer Cause, Inc. (2002) 29 Cal. 4th 53, 58, 124 Cal. Rptr. 2d 507 , and discussion in § 376.20[2], below].

The fact of a prior grant of a preliminary injunction in favor of plaintiff does not have a preclusive, res judicata effect on the later filing by defendant of an anti-SLAPP motion [Lam v. Ngo (2001) 91 Cal. App. 4th 832, 843-844, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 582] .

[2] Defendant Not Required to Demonstrate Intent to Chill First Amendment Rights

Prior to 2002, California appellate courts had divided over the question whether a defendant who moves under the SLAPP statute must, in order to prevail, demonstrate that the cause of action was brought with the intent of chilling the defendant's exercise of constitutional speech or petition rights [compare, e.g., Damon v. Ocean Hills Journalism Club (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 468, 480, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 205 with Foothills Townhome Assn. v. Christiansen (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 688, 696, 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 516] . In Equilon Enterprises, LLC v. Consumer Cause, Inc. (2002) 29 Cal. 4th 53, 124 Cal. Rptr. 2d 507 , the California Supreme Court resolved this issue by holding that the defendant has no such burden. [Equilon Enterprises, LLC v. Consumer Cause, Inc. (2002) 29 Cal. 4th 53, 58-59, 124 Cal. Rptr. 2d 507] .

The court in Equilon Enterprises relied heavily on the fact that the statute's plain language did not require an inquiry as to the plaintiff's subjective motivations. Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16, the court stated, merely makes subject to a special motion to strike any "cause of action against a person arising from any act of that person in furtherance of the person's right of petition or free speech under the United States or California Constitution in connection with a public issue" as to which the plaintiff has not "established that there is a probability that [he or she] will prevail on the claim" [Equilon Enterprises, LLC v. Consumer Cause, Inc. (2002) 29 Cal. 4th 53, 58-59, 124 Cal. Rptr. 2d 507 , quoting Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16]. Looking toward legislative intent as well, the court pointed out that judicial imposition of an intent-to-chill proof requirement would undermine the Legislature's expressed aim that public participation not be chilled, because of the possibility that a defendant's speech could be chilled without plaintiff intending to do so [Equilon Enterprises, LLC v. Consumer Cause, Inc. (2002) 29 Cal. 4th 53, 59-62, 124 Cal. Rptr. 2d 507] . The court clarified that the only element the defendant needs to establish to invoke the protection of the SLAPP statute is that the plaintiff's lawsuit arose from an act on the part of defendant in furtherance of defendant's right of petition or free speech. From that fact the court may "presume" the purpose of the action was to chill the defendant's exercise of First Amendment Rights. It is then up to plaintiff to rebut the presumption by showing a reasonable probability of success on the merits [Equilon Enterprises, LLC v. Consumer Cause, Inc. (2002) 29 Cal. 4th 53, 61, 124 Cal. Rptr. 2d 507 , quoting Fox Searchlight Pictures, Inc. v. Paladino (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 294, 307, 106 Cal. Rptr. 2d 906] .

In City of Cotati v. Cashman (2002) 29 Cal. 4th 69, 124 Cal. Rptr. 2d 519, 52 P.3d 695 , a companion case to Equilon Enterprises, the California Supreme Court reiterated that the anti-SLAPP statute in Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 does not contain an intent-to-chill pleading or proof requirement [City of Cotati v. Cashman (2002) 29 Cal. 4th 69, 75, 124 Cal. Rptr. 2d 519, 52 P.3d 695 , see also Navellier v. Sletten (2002) 29 Cal. 4th 82, 87-88, 124 Cal. Rptr. 2d 530] . The Cotati court also explained that the anti-SLAPP statute's requirement that the cause of action is one "arising from" protected activity is not synonymous with "in response to" protected activity. In Cotati, plaintiff City of Cotati adopted a mobile home park rent stabilization program, and subsequent owners of mobile home parks sued the City in federal court. City then sued the owners in state court, outlining a cause of action for declaratory relief. The owners responded to the state court lawsuit with a SLAPP motion to strike, alleging that the City's state court action arose from the owners' filing of their earlier federal action. The court held that simply because City filed its state court action after owners had filed their federal lawsuit did not mean the state court action was "arising from" the federal court action within the meaning of the anti-SLAPP statute. The court pointed out that to construe "arising from" as meaning "in response to" would in effect render all cross-actions potential SLAPP suits [City of Cotati v. Cashman (2002) 29 Cal. 4th 69, 77, 124 Cal. Rptr. 2d 519, 52 P.3d 695] . The court held that City's state court cause of action arose from the actual controversy giving rise to both the federal and state actions--the City's rent stabilization program--and not the owners' federal lawsuit. Therefore, City's state court action was not subject to a special motion to strike [City of Cotati v. Gene Cashman (2002) 29 Cal. 4th 69, 78, 124 Cal. Rptr. 2d 519, 52 P.3d 695 ; see also In re Episcopal Church Cases (2009) 45 Cal. 4th 467, 87 Cal. Rptr. 3d 275, 198 P.3d 66 (action arose out of property dispute between Los Angeles Diocese and local church after local church disaffiliated from diocese; fact that protected activity led to rift between parties did not make the action a SLAPP suit); City of Riverside v. Stansbury (2007) 155 Cal. App. 4th 1582, 1590-1591, 66 Cal. Rptr. 3d 862 (city's declaratory relief action requesting court's input on constitutionality of proposed initiative was not subject to a special motion to strike; although the action followed the initiative proponents' constitutionally protected activity, the action did not arise out of that activity); Visher v. City of Malibu (2005) 126 Cal. App. 4th 364, 370, 23 Cal. Rptr. 3d 816 (action arose from Malibu's refusal to process plaintiffs' Coastal Development Permit, not from Malibu's litigation against the Coastal Commission and therefore plaintiff's petition for writ of mandate was not a SLAPP suit)].

[3] Plaintiff

[a] Probability That Plaintiff Will Prevail

If the defendant establishes a prima facie showing that plaintiff's suit arose from an act in furtherance of defendant's right of petition or free speech, then the burden shifts to the plaintiff to establish a probability that plaintiff will prevail on the claim [Rusheen v. Cohen (2006) 37 Cal. 4th 1048, 1056, 39 Cal. Rptr. 3d 516 ; 128 P.3d 713 ; Soukup v. Law

Offices of Herbert Hafif (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 260, 291, 46 Cal. Rptr. 3d 638 ; Equilon Enterprises, LLC v. Consumer Cause, Inc. (2002) 29 Cal. 4th 53, 63, 124 Cal. Rptr. 2d 507, 52 P.3d 685 ; Church of Scientology v. Wollersheim (1996) 42 Cal. App. 4th 628, 646, 49 Cal. Rptr. 2d 620 ; see DuPont Merck Pharmaceutical Co. v. Superior Court (2000) 78 Cal. App. 4th 562, 567, 92 Cal. Rptr. 2d 755 ; Kyle v. Carmon (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 901, 907, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 303] . The burden on the plaintiff is similar to the standard used in determining a motion for nonsuit, directed verdict, or summary judgment [Slauson Partnership v. Ochoa (2003) 112 Cal. App. 4th 1005, 1020, 5 Cal. Rptr. 3d 668 ; Kyle v. Carmon (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 901, 907, 84 Cal.Rptr. 2d 303 ; Church of Scientology v. Wollersheim (1996) 42 Cal. App. 4th 628, 653-654, 49 Cal. Rptr. 2d 620] .

In order to preserve the plaintiff's right to a jury trial the court's determination of the motion cannot involve a weighing of the evidence [Zamos v. Stroud (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 958, 965, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 54, 87 P.3d 802 ; Kyle v. Carmon (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 901, 907-908, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 303 ; Church of Scientology v. Wollersheim (1996) 42 Cal. App. 4th 628, 654, 49 Cal. Rptr. 2d 620 ; Wilcox v. Superior Court (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 809, 825, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 446] . Rather, to establish a probability of success on the merits, the plaintiff must make a prima facie showing of facts that would, if proved at trial, support a judgment in the plaintiff's favor [Wilcox v. Superior Court (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 809, 824, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 446 ; see Dixon v. Superior Court (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 733, 744, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 687] . Whether or not plaintiff has established a prima facie case is a question of law [Zamos v. Stroud (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 958, 965, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 54, 87 P.3d 802] . To establish a probability of success, the plaintiff must demonstrate the complaint is legally sufficient and supported by a sufficient prima facie showing of facts to sustain a favorable judgment if the evidence submitted by the plaintiff is credited [Equillon Enterprises, LLC v. Consumer Cause, Inc. (2002) 29 Cal. 4th 53, 61, 124 Cal. Rptr. 2d 507, 52 P.3d 685 ; Rohde v. Wolf (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 28, 37-38, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 348 ; Wilcox v. Superior Court (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 809, 823, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 446] . To accomplish this, the burden is on the plaintiff to meet the defendant's constitutional defenses. This burden is met in the same manner the plaintiff meets the burden of demonstrating the merits of the cause of action, that is, by showing the defendant's purported constitutional defenses are not applicable to the case as a matter of law or by a prima facie showing of facts which, if accepted by the trier of fact, would negate such defenses [Wilcox v. Superior Court (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 809, 824, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 446] .

To satisfy plaintiff's burden, it is not sufficient that plaintiff's complaint had survived a demurrer. Plaintiff must also substantiate the legal sufficiency of its claims. Substantiation requires something more than mere allegations of an unverified complaint. Once the court determines the first prong of the statute has been met, a plaintiff must provide the court with sufficient evidence to permit the court to determine whether there is a probability that the plaintiff will prevail on the claim [DuPont Merck Pharmaceutical Co. v. Superior Court (2000) 78 Cal. App. 4th 562, 568, 92 Cal. Rptr. 2d 755] .

However, an anti-SLAPP motion may not be used like a motion to strike under Code Civ. Proc. § 436, eliminating parts of a cause of action that plaintiff cannot substantiate. When a cause of action refers to both protected and unprotected activity, it is sufficient for purposes of the anti-SLAPP motion that plaintiff can show a probability of prevailing on any part of its cause of action [Mann v. Quality Old Time Service, Inc. (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 90, 100, 15 Cal. Rptr. 3d 215] .

The court, in making its determination that the plaintiff has established that there is a probability that the plaintiff will prevail on the claim, must consider the pleadings, and supporting and opposing affidavits stating the facts on which the liability or defense is based [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(b)(2); see Monterey Plaza Hotel v. Hotel Employees & Restaurant Employees (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 1057, 1063-1064, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 10] . The court will accept as true all evidence favorable to the plaintiff [Dixon v. Superior Court (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 733, 746, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 687] . The plaintiff, however, must base his or her prima facie showing on admissible evidence [Morrow v. Los Angeles Unified School Dist. (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 1424, 1444 ; 57 Cal. Rptr. 3d 885 ; Wilcox v. Superior Court (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 809, 830, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 446 ; see Church of Scientology v. Wollersheim (1996) 42 Cal. App. 4th 628, 654-655, 49 Cal. Rptr. 2d 620 ; see also Macias v. Hartwell (1997) 55 Cal. App. 4th 669, 675, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 222] .

However, one court has held that a plaintiff may meet the requirement of showing a probability of success on the merits if the plaintiff bases the probability of success on evidence which is inadmissible but was not properly objected to [Gallagher v. Connell (2004) 123 Cal. App. 4th 1260, 1266, 20 Cal. Rptr. 3d 673] .

A defendant who interposes objections to plaintiff's evidence but does not seek or obtain rulings on them at the hearing on the motion to strike waives those objections on appeal [Gallant v. City of Carson (2005) 128 Cal. App. 4th 705, 713, 27 Cal. Rptr. 3d 318 ; see also Slauson Partnership v. Ochoa (2003) 112 Cal. App. 4th 1005, 1014 n.4, 5 Cal. Rptr. 3d 668] .

A showing to support a cause of action must be made by competent evidence within the personal knowledge of the declarant [Church of Scientology v. Wollersheim (1996) 42 Cal. App. 4th 628, 654, 49 Cal. Rptr. 2d 620] . Averments on information and belief are insufficient [Church of Scientology v. Wollersheim (1996) 42 Cal. App. 4th 628, 654, 49 Cal. Rptr. 2d 620 ; Evans v. Unkow (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 1490, 1493, 1497-1498, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 624] . Moreover, a party cannot simply rely on allegations in its own pleadings, even if verified, to make the required evidentiary showing. The pleadings merely frame the issues to be decided [Church of Scientology v. Wollersheim (1996) 42 Cal. App. 4th 628, 656, 49 Cal. Rptr. 2d 620] . However, at least one court has held that the opposing party's verified pleadings and the moving party's declaration were sufficient for the court to conclude that the opposing party had shown a probability of success on the merits even though the opposing party failed to submit any evidence of his own [Salma v. Capon (2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 1275, 1289, 74 Cal. Rptr. 3d 873].

If the court determines that the plaintiff has established a probability that he or she will prevail on the claim, neither that determination nor the fact of that determination is admissible in evidence at any later stage of the case or in any subsequent action [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(b)(3)]. Furthermore, no burden of proof or degree of proof otherwise applicable is affected by that determination in any later stage of the case or in any subsequent proceeding [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(b)(3)]. Nevertheless, at least one court has held that its prior holding stating plaintiff had established a prima facie case in the context of anti-SLAPP proceedings precluded a subsequent summary judgment in defendant's favor [Bergman v. Drum (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 11, 20-21, 28 Cal. Rptr. 3d 112 (applying doctrine of law of the case].

§ 376.21 Appeal of Anti-SLAPP Motion

An order granting or denying a special motion to strike under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 is appealable under Code Civ. Proc. § 904.1 and is subject to immediate appeal [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(i); see Haneline Pacific Properties, LLC v. May (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 311, 317, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 919] . However, if the special motion to strike was denied on the grounds that the action or cause of action is exempt from the special motion to strike rules under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.17, the appeal provisions do not apply [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.17(e); Goldstein v. Ralphs Grocery Co. (2004) 122 Cal. App. 4th 229, 232, 19 Cal. Rptr. 3d 292] .

A defendant's appeal of the denial of an anti-SLAPP motion operates to automatically stay all further trial court proceedings on the merits pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 916(a) [Varian Medical Systems, Inc. v. Delfino (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 180, 193-197, 25 Cal. Rptr. 3d 298, 106 P.3d 958] . However, further proceedings on matters not subject to the anti-SLAPP motion are not stayed by the appeal, nor is the appeal of the denial of a motion to strike on the grounds that a cause of action is exempt under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.17 subject to the automatic stay [Varian Medical Systems, Inc. v. Delfino (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 180, 195, 25 Cal. Rptr. 3d 298, 106 P.3d 958 (new trial ordered)].

The appellate court may dismiss the appeal of the denial of an anti-SLAPP motion if the appeal is brought solely for purposes of delay [People ex rel. Lockyer v. Brar (2004) 115 Cal. App. 4th 1315, 1318, 9 Cal. Rptr. 3d 844] .

In reviewing a judgment of dismissal after the trial court grants a special motion to strike pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16, the appellate court uses its independent judgment to determine whether defendant acted in furtherance of its right of petition or free speech in connection with a public issue. Defendant bears the burden to make this prima facie case. If the defendant bears its burden, the appellate court then considers whether the plaintiff has produced sufficient admissible evidence to establish the probability of prevailing on the merits on every cause of action asserted [Mission Oaks Ranch, Ltd. v. County of Santa Barbara (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 713, 721, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1 (disapproved on other grounds in Briggs v. Eden Council for Hope and Opportunity (1999) 19 Cal. 4th 1106, 1123 n.10, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 471, 969 P.2d 564); see Monterey Plaza Hotel v. Hotel Employees & Restaurant Employees (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 1057, 1064, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 10 (appellate court independently reviews entire record to determine if plaintiff made sufficient prima facie case that plaintiff would prevail in light of applicable law regarding complaint); Church of Scientology v. Wollersheim (1996) 42 Cal. App. 4th 628, 653, 49 Cal. Rptr. 2d 620 (same)]. At least one court of appeals has declined to hold that the trial court is required to issue a statement of decision when granting an anti-SLAPP motion [Lien v. Lucky United Properties Inv., Inc. (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 620, 624, 77 Cal. Rptr. 3d 707] .

§ 376.22 Attorney Fees, Costs, and Sanctions

[1] Recovery by Defendant

[a] Prevailing Defendant Entitled to Recover Fees and Costs

In any action subject to Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(b), except as provided in [b], below, a prevailing defendant on a special motion to strike is entitled to recover his or her attorney's fees and costs [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(c); City of Los Angeles v. Animal Defense League (2006) 135 Cal. App. 4th 606, 627, 37 Cal. Rptr. 3d 632 (award of fees mandatory); see Mission Oaks Ranch, Ltd. v. County of Santa Barbara (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 713, 729-731, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1 (county may be a prevailing defendant entitled to reasonable attorney's fees; disapproved on other grounds in Briggs v. Eden Council for Hope and Opportunity (1999) 19 Cal. 4th 1106, 1123 n.10, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 471, 969 P.2d 564)]. Courts have held that the phrase "prevailing party" should be interpreted broadly and applied to partially successful defendants [see Mann v. Quality Old Time Service, Inc. (2006) 139 Cal. App. 4th 328, 340, 42 Cal. Rptr. 3d 607 (defendant was successful in striking trade libel cause of action and therefore was a prevailing party despite losing anti-SLAPP motion on three other causes of action); ComputerXpress, Inc. v. Jackson (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 993, 1018, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 625 (defendants were prevailing parties as they were successful in striking five of nine causes of action alleged in complaint)]. However, a moving defendant cannot be said to have prevailed and therefore recover attorney's fees when his or her anti-SLAPP motion is only granted as to one of numerous causes of action [Endres v. Moran (2006) 135 Cal. App. 4th 952, 956, 37 Cal. Rptr. 3d 786 ; see Lin v. City of Pleasanton (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 1143, 1159 (remanded for determination of prevailing party)].

A prevailing defendant is entitled to recover fees even if they were paid by a third party [Macias v. Hartwell (1997) 55 Cal. App. 4th 669, 675-676, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 222] . A prevailing defendant who represents himself or herself may not recover attorney fees under the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(c) unless he or she secured assistance from another lawyer, in which case the other lawyer's fees are recoverable [Witte v. Kaufman (2006) 141 Cal. App. 4th 1201, 1211-1212, 46 Cal. Rptr. 3d 845 (defendant attorney and defendant law firm did not incur attorney fees in bringing special motion to strike because the attorney and the law firm's members did all legal work themselves; if one attorney enlisted the help of outside counsel, he may be entitled to an attorney fee award for the money spent on that outside counsel); Taheri Law Group v. Evans (2008) 160 Cal. App. 4th 482, 494, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 847 ; but see Dowling v. Zimmerman (2001) 85 Cal.App. 4th 1400, 1423, 103 Cal. Rptr. 2d 174 (SLAPP defendant who initially appears pro se and later retains counsel who successfully brings motion to strike complaint under section 425.16, is entitled to award of reasonable attorney fees under mandatory attorney fees provision of Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(c))].

[b] Limited Exceptions to Prevailing Defendant's Recovery of Fees

Effective January 1, 2010, prevailing defendants are not entitled to an award of attorney's fees and costs if plaintiff's cause of action is brought pursuant to any of the following Gov. Code sections [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(c)]:

- Gov. Code § 6259 (verified petition alleging public records improperly withheld from member of public).

- Gov. Code §§ 11130 or 11130.3 (involving meeting provisions of the legislative body of a local agency or a state body).

- Gov. Code §§ 54960 or 54960.1 (actions to obtain a judicial determination that an action taken by a legislative body of a local agency or a state body is null and void).

Nothing in Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(c) shall be construed to prevent a prevailing defendant from recovering attorney's fees and costs in the above actions if the actions are clearly frivolous, pursuant to those sections of the Government Code.

[c] Effect of Voluntary Dismissal of Suit

A plaintiff may have a voluntary dismissal entered by the clerk after a Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 motion is filed by the defendant and a hearing is held, but before the court rules on the motion [Kyle v. Carmon (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 901, 908 n.4, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 303 (voluntary dismissal with prejudice; court expressly did not decide whether tentative ruling cuts off plaintiff's right to dismiss); see also Law Offices of Andrew L. Ellis v. Yang (2009) 178 Cal. App. 4th 869, 100 Cal. Rptr. 3d 771 (trial court had no jurisdiction to rule on anti-SLAPP motion when plaintiff filed dismissal of complaint, without prejudice, one day prior to scheduled anti-SLAPP hearing)].

The court retains jurisdiction to determine whether to award defendant attorney's fees pursuant to a Section 425.16 motion filed before the voluntary dismissal [Coltrain v. Shewalter (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 94, 107 ; see Major v. Silna (2006) 134 Cal. App. 4th 1485, 1491, 36 Cal. Rptr. 3d 875 ; Liu v. Moore (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 745, 753, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 807] . However, the California Supreme Court has held that if a defendant does not get its anti-SLAPP motion on file prior to a plaintiff's voluntary dismissal of an action, defendant is not entitled to fees or costs under section 425.16(c); although defendant may incur fees in preparing such a motion prior to plaintiff's dismissal of the action, the court reasoned that allowing recovery of fees in such a situation would run counter to the purpose of section 425.16, which is to discourage prolonged litigation [S.B. Beach Props. v. Berti (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 374, 382-383, 46 Cal. Rptr. 3d 380, 138 P.3d 713] .

The courts of appeal differ, however, as to the method for determining whether to award attorney's fees under Section 425.16 when the case has been voluntarily dismissed after defendant files the section 425.16 motion.

One court has held that when the plaintiff voluntarily dismisses an alleged SLAPP suit while a special motion to strike is pending under Code Civ. Proc § 425.16, the trial court has discretion to determine whether the defendant is the prevailing party for purposes of attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc § 425.16(c). In making that determination, the critical issue is which party realized its objectives in the litigation. Since the defendant's goal is to make the plaintiff go away, ordinarily the defendant will be the prevailing party. Thus, a presumption arises that the defendant is the prevailing party. The plaintiff, however, may try to show it actually dismissed because it had substantially achieved its goals through settlement or other means, because the defendant was insolvent, or for other reasons unrelated to the probability of success on the merits so as to rebut the presumption [Coltrain v. Shewalter (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 94, 107, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 600 (Fourth Dist., Div. Two; case involved voluntary dismissal without prejudice)] .

Another court, disagreeing with the reasoning in Coltrain, has held that a defendant who is voluntarily dismissed, with or without prejudice, after filing a Section 425.16 motion to strike, is entitled to have the merits of the motion heard as a predicate to a determination of the defendant's motion for attorney's fees and cost under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(c) [Liu v. Moore (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 745, 751, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 807 (Second Dist., Div. Three)] . The Moore court criticized Coltrain's rationale that the plaintiff might have good-faith reasons for dismissing a SLAPP suit that have nothing to do with oppressing the defendant or avoiding liability for attorney fees, because, for example, if the plaintiff in a SLAPP suit substantially achieved its goals through a settlement or other means, then the plaintiff succeeded in chilling the valid exercise of the constitutional rights of freedom of speech and petition for the redress of grievances since that is the purpose of a SLAPP suit. Also, it is quite possible that a plaintiff in a SLAPP suit is not worried that a defendant might be insolvent, since the focus of the SLAPP suit is to chill speech and/or the petitioning of government, not necessarily to line the plaintiff's pockets with money. Thus, the Moore court viewed adjudication of a defendant's motion to strike as an essential predicate to ruling on the defendant's request for an award of fees and costs. If judicial determination of the motion were not first required, and a fair procedural opportunity to obtain it allowed, then a plaintiff's voluntary dismissal of the action could have the effect of (1) depriving a true SLAPP defendant of statutory authorized fees or (2) entitling a defendant to such relief in a non-SLAPP action which was dismissed by the plaintiff for entirely legitimate reasons. The purpose of the statute's remedial provisions would be frustrated in either situation [Liu v. Moore (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 745, 752-753, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 807] .

Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7 is not a viable alternative to the attorney's fees and costs relief afforded by Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 when there has been a voluntary dismissal while a motion to strike under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 is pending [Liu v. Moore (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 745, 750-751, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 807] .

A trial court has jurisdiction to award attorney fees to a prevailing defendant whose SLAPP motion was not heard solely because the matter was dismissed by the court before defendants obtained a ruling on the SLAPP motion. [Pfeiffer Venice Properties v. Bernard (2002) 101 Cal. App. 4th 211, 218-219, 123 Cal. Rptr. 2d 647] . Similarly, a plaintiff may not avoid an award of attorney fees to defendant by amending the complaint after the filing of an anti-SLAPP motion but before the hearing [Sylmar Air Conditioning v. Pueblo Contracting Servs., Inc. (2004) 122 Cal. App. 4th 1049, 1055, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 882] . Additionally, a grant of judgment on the pleadings does not render an anti-SLAPP motion moot; therefore, a defendant prevailing on both a motion for judgment on the pleadings and an anti-SLAPP motion is entitled to its attorney fees as provided by Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 [ARP Pharmacy Services, Inc. v. Gallagher Bassett Services, Inc. (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 1307, 1323, 42 Cal. Rptr. 3d 256] .

Attorney fees are not automatically available under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1032 and 1033.5(a)(10)(B) (recovery as costs of attorney's fees authorized by statute) if a defendant is dismissed from what defendant contends is a SLAPP suit because Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 authorizes attorney fees only if the defendant prevails on the motion to strike [Liu v. Moore (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 745, 753-754, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 807] .

By its terms, Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 permits the use of the lodestar adjustment method whereby the lodestar is the number of hours reasonably expended multiplied by the reasonable hourly rate, and that figure may be adjusted based on consideration of factors specific to the case, in order to fix the fee at the market rate for legal services provided [Ketchum v. Moses (2001) 24 Cal. 4th 1122, 1136, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 377 ; see also Christian Research Institute v. Alnor (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 1315, 1321-1330, 81 Cal. Rptr. 3d 866] . The Supreme Court noted that because the anti-SLAPP provisions referred to attorney fees and costs without indicating any restrictions on how they are to be calculated, the Legislature presumably intended courts to use the prevailing lodestar method [Ketchum v. Moses (2001) 24 Cal. 4th 1122, 1135-1136, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 377] . The trial court is not required to include a fee enhancement to the basic lodestar figure for contingent risk, exceptional skill or other factors, but retains discretion to do so [Ketchum v. Moses (2001) 24 Cal. 4th 1122, 1138, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 377] . In remanding the case in Ketchum to redetermine the amount of the fee enhancement, the Court found that it was improper to impose an enhancement for contingent risk as to the attorney fees on fees accrued after the motion to strike was granted. The Court also directed that any disapproval on the part of the trial court as to the plaintiff's litigation strategy (to keep the defendant in court) could not be a basis of imposing an enhancement for contingent risk or quality of representation merely for the purpose of punishing the plaintiff [Ketchum v. Moses (2001) 24 Cal. 4th 1122, 1142, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 377, 17 P.3d 735] .

With regard to the extent of recoverable attorney fees and costs, one court has held that a prevailing defendant on a motion to strike is allowed to recover attorney fees and costs on the motion to strike, not the entire suit [Lafayette Morehouse, Inc. v. Chronicle Publishing Co. (1995) 39 Cal. App. 4th 1379, 1383, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 542 (First Dist., Div. Five) ; see also Christian Research Institute v. Alnor (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 1315, 1321-1330, 81 Cal. Rptr. 3d 866 (court noted counsel had inflated fee claim with numerous entries unrelated to special motion to strike)]. Other courts, however, have awarded attorney fees and cost without addressing this specific point [see, e.g., Dove Audio, Inc. v. Rosenfeld, Meyer & Susman (1996) 47 Cal. App. 4th 777, 785, 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 830 (Second Dist., Div. Four; section authorizes court to make award of reasonable attorney's fees to prevailing defendant which will adequately compensate defendant for expense of responding to baseless lawsuit); accord Robertson v. Rodriguez (1995) 36 Cal. App. 4th 347, 360-362, 42 Cal. Rptr. 2d 464 (Second Dist., Div. Three) ; see also Church of Scientology v. Wollersheim (1996) 42 Cal. App. 4th 628, 658-659, 49 Cal. Rptr. 2d 620 (Second Dist., Div. Three)] .

When awarding fees to a defendant who prevails in anti-SLAPP proceedings on some, but not all, causes of action, a court must consider the significance of the overall relief obtained by the prevailing party in relation to the hours expended. The court will first determine the lodestar amount for the hours expended on the successful claims. If work expended on the successful and unsuccessful claims overlapped, the court will then consider the defendant's relative success in achieving his or her objective and may reduce the amount accordingly [Mann v. Quality Old Time Service, Inc. (2006) 139 Cal. App. 4th 328, 345-346, 42 Cal. Rptr. 3d 607] .

In addition, because Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(c) provides for an award of attorney fees and costs to a prevailing defendant on a special motion to strike, and does not preclude recovery of appellate attorney fees and costs by a prevailing defendant-respondent, those fees are recoverable [Dove Audio, Inc. v. Rosenfeld, Meyer & Susman (1996) 47 Cal. App. 4th 777, 785, 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 830 ; Church of Scientology v. Wollersheim (1996) 42 Cal. App. 4th 628, 659, 49 Cal. Rptr. 2d 620 ; see Wanland v. Law Offices of Mastagni, Holstedt & Chiurazzi (2006) 141 Cal. App. 4th 15, 20 (prevailing defendants entitled to costs and fees incurred in challenging undertaking submitted by plaintiff to obtain stay of enforcement of judgment pending appeal of anti-SLAPP ruling); Sipple v. Foundation for Nat. Progress (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 226, 250, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 677 (defendants entitled to attorney fees and costs on appeal; Evans v. Unkow (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 1490, 1493, 1499-1500, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 624 (appellate attorney fees recoverable)].

[e] Stay of Enforcement of Judgment Awarding Attorney Fees Pending Appeal

A SLAPP plaintiff's perfecting of an appeal from a judgment awarding attorney fees and costs to a prevailing defendant under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 does not automatically stay enforcement of the judgment. To stay enforcement of such a judgment, the SLAPP plaintiff must give an appropriate appeal bond or undertaking under the money judgment exception to the automatic stay rule Code Civ. Proc. § 916(a) [Dowling v. Zimmerman (2001) 85 Cal.App. 4th 1400, 1427-1433, 103 Cal. Rptr. 2d 174] .

For general discussion and forms, see Ch. 43, Appeal: Stay of Proceedings .

[2] Recovery by Plaintiff

If the court finds that a special motion to strike is frivolous or is solely intended to cause unnecessary delay, the court must award costs and reasonable attorney's fees pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 128.5 to a plaintiff prevailing on the motion [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(c); Moore v. Shaw (2004) 116 Cal. App. 4th 182, 198-200, 10 Cal. Rptr. 3d 154 ; see also California Back Specialists Medical Group v. Rand (2008) 160 Cal. App. 4th 1032, 1038, 73 Cal. Rptr. 3d 268] . A plaintiff prevailing on a special motion to strike may seek attorney's fees as a part of the motion to strike, by a subsequent noticed motion filed at any time prior to the conclusion of the lawsuit, or as part of a cost memorandum at the conclusion of the lawsuit [Carpenter v. Jack In The Box Corp. (2007) 151 Cal. App. 4th 454, 461, 59 Cal. Rptr. 3d 839] .

An order denying a prevailing plaintiff attorney fees is not immediately appealable under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(i) [Doe v. Luster (2006 145 Cal. App. 4th 139, 146, 51 Cal. Rptr. 3d 403] .

§ 376.23 Application of Anti-SLAPP Statute to Causes of Action That Accrued Prior to Its Enactment

Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 is a procedural statute which applies prospectively to an existing cause of action even though the cause of action may have accrued before the statute's effective date [Robertson v. Rodriguez (1995) 36 Cal. App. 4th 347, 356-357] .

§ 376.24 Application of Anti-SLAPP Statute in Federal Court Actions

Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 can be used by a litigant in a federal court action because there is no "direct collision" with Federal Rules of Civil Procedure and the anti-SLAPP statute serves important, substantive state interests [United States ex rel. Newsham v. Lockheed Missiles & Space Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 1999) 190 F.3d 963, 972 , cert. denied, (2000) 530 U.S. 1203] . Additionally, the "twin purposes" of the Erie doctrine--discouragement of forum shopping and avoidance inequitable administration of law--are served by the application of the anti-SLAPP law in federal court [United States ex rel. Newsham v. Lockheed Missiles & Space Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 1999) 190 F.3d 963, 973 , cert. denied, (2000) 530 U. S. 1203 ; see generally Erie R.R. Co. v. Tompkins (1938) 304 U. S. 64, 58 S. Ct. 817, 82 L. Ed. 1188] . However, the discovery-limiting sections of Code Civ. Proc. §§ 425.16(f) and (g) collide with Fed. R. Civ. P., Rule 56 and therefore do not apply in federal court [Metabolife Int'l v. Wornick (9th Cir. 2001) 264 F.3d 832, 846] .

[1] Activity Protected Under Anti-SLAPP Statute

[a] Statement or Writing Made in Connection With Issue Under Consideration by Legislative, Executive, or Judicial Body

In action by condominium owner against attorney arising from negotiation of settlement agreement in prior case, alleging fraud and intentional infliction of emotional distress, trial court erred in denying defendant's anti-SLAPP motion, where settlement negotiations were exercise of right to petition and statements made as part of negotiations were in connection with underlying lawsuit for purposes of Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(e)(2), and where, although plaintiff's contentions that substance of settlement negotiations allegedly on plaintiff's behalf raised questions about propriety of how settlement negotiations were conducted, attorney was not obligated to show his actions were constitutionally protected as matter of law. Moreover, because attorney could not be held liable for alleged conduct under litigation privilege [Civ. Code § 47(b)], plaintiff failed to demonstrate probability of prevailing on her causes of action. Seltzer v. Barnes (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 953, 960-972

In action stemming from arrest of plaintiff on bench warrant arising from her alleged failure to appear as subpoenaed witness, trial court properly granted defendants' motion to strike second amended complaint upon granting of anti-SLAPP motion, after concluding that anti-SLAPP statute was applicable to second amended complaint and that plaintiff had not established probability she would prevail on merits of her causes of action, where, although some portion of conduct may have been illegal, defendants' conduct in filing allegedly false proof of service and declaration to obtain bench warrant that resulted in plaintiff's arrest was not illegal conduct as matter of law, and where absolute privilege from tort liability, except for claims of malicious prosecution, established by Civ. Code § 47(b), applied to statements made to authorities in order to obtain arrest of person, even when that person had no connection whatsoever to any pending litigation, so that plaintiff would not be apply to show probability of success on merits. Kemps v. Beshwate (2009) 180 Cal. App. 4th 1012, 1016-1019, 103 Cal. Rptr. 3d 480

In an action between business competitors, plaintiffs asserted claims for breach of contract and declaratory judgment and sought injunctive relief, alleging that defendant filed trademark actions in France in violation of covenant not to sue resulting from defendant's prior suits, trial court properly denied defendant's motion to strike, where petitioning activity undertaken in foreign country by filing lawsuits in France was not protected by anti-SLAPP statute, because neither United States nor California Constitution granted United States citizen right to petition foreign government; and where plaintiffs' causes of action for breach of contract and declaratory relief were not subject to special motion to strike under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 because both arose from filing of trademark infringement lawsuits in France as plaintiffs sought judicial determination of extent to which defendant could proceed with French actions or any other lawsuit filed elsewhere in world in light of covenant not to sue. Guessous v. Chrome Hearts, LLC (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 1177, 1185-1187, 102 Cal. Rptr. 3d 214

Filing of a notice of lis pendens in connection with an arbitration claim concerning real property constitutes protected activity within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(e)(1), (2). Manhattan Loft, LLC v. Mercury Liquors, Inc. (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 1040, 1050, 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 457

Cross-complaint arising out of service of three-day notice to quit and subsequent unlawful detainer action was subject to special motion to strike; service of three-day notice to quit was protected activity, as it was a legally required prerequisite to the filing of the unlawful detainer action and statements made in connection with the threatened unlawful detainer action were similarly protected activity. 1100 Park Lane Associates v. Feldman (2008) 160 Cal. App. 4th 1467, 1483, 74 Cal. Rptr. 3d 1

Plaintiff's declaratory relief action arose from defendant's protected activity of filing a Proposition 65 notice and thus was subject to a special motion to strike; because plaintiff could not demonstrate a probability of prevailing on its declaratory relief action, the court granted defendant's special motion to strike. CKE Restaurants, Inc. v. Moore (2008) 159 Cal. App. 4th 262, 272, 70 Cal. Rptr. 3d 921

Matter under consideration by one of the three branches of government need not be the subject of official proceedings to qualify for protection under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(e)(2); the section protects any written or oral statement or writing made in connection with an issue under review by a legislative, executive, or judicial body and therefore dispute between the California Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation and entity providing housing and other services for inmates regarding commissions from telephone revenue was properly the subject of protected activity even though there was no official proceeding pending. Maranatha Corrections, LLC v. Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation (2008) 158 Cal. App. 4th 1075, 1085, 70 Cal. Rptr. 3d 614

Cross-defendant's allegedly defamatory letter to employee who was accused of secretly soliciting employer's customer lists was protected under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(e)(2) despite the fact that letter was sent four months before employer filed suit against employee; it was sufficient that letter was sent in connection with anticipated litigation between the two parties. Neville v. Chudacoff (2008) 160 Cal. App. 4th 1255, 1268, 73 Cal. Rptr. 3d 383

Defendant and cross-complainant's cause of action for abuse of process fell squarely within protection of anti-SLAPP statute; indeed, court stated it was difficult to imagine an abuse of process claim that would not fall within the protection of the statute. Booker v. Rountree (2007) 155 Cal. App. 4th 1366, 1370, 66 Cal. Rptr. 3d 733

Defendant attorney's allegedly defamatory voicemail messages to plaintiff's real estate broker were made in connection with a piece of real property, which was an asset that was the subject of a dispute over which all involved parties threatened litigation; therefore, the statements were made in connection with an issue under review by a judicial body within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(b)(1)(2). Rohde v. Wolf (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 28, 37-38, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 348

Defendant's conduct in initiating State Bar sponsored fee arbitration proceeding and later filing civil complaint were protected activity under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(e)(2); plaintiff law firm therefore had to show a probability of success on the merits regarding its claims of breach of contract, breach of implied covenant of good faith, fraud, and misrepresentation claims against defendant. Philipson & Simon v. Gulsvig (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 347, 362-364, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 504

Defendant, a University of California manager and hearing officer who denied plaintiff's sexual harassment claim and other workplace grievances, was protected by Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(e)(2) when plaintiff sued her for violating his civil rights; her conduct in hearing, deciding, and processing plaintiff's grievances was in furtherance of her right of petition and because plaintiff could not show a probability of prevailing on the merits, her anti-SLAPP motion was granted. Vergos v. McNeal (2007) 146 Cal. App. 4th 1387, 1400, 53 Cal. Rptr. 3d 647

When defendant city official's allegedly defamatory statements fell within official duty privilege of Civ. Code § 47(a), plaintiff could not demonstrate a probability of prevailing on the merits for purposes of defendant's anti-SLAPP motion; defendant made statements at a dinner he attended in his capacity as city attorney and therefore a motion to strike was properly granted. Tutor-Saliba Corp. v. Herrera (2006) 136 Cal. App. 4th 604, 619, 39 Cal. Rptr. 3d 21

Defendant's reports of child abuse to persons bound by law to investigate the allegations and transmit a report to authorities constituted protected activity pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(e)(2). Siam v. Kizilbash (2005) 130 Cal. App. 4th 1563, 31 Cal. Rptr. 3d 368

Court of appeals reversed trial court's denial of defendant's anti-SLAPP motion in case based on defendant's submission of a required statement to the National Association of Securities Dealers (NASD) following plaintiff's termination; NASD, although not publicly funded, is an "official body" for purposes of the anti-SLAPP statute because it has been delegated regulatory authority by federal securities laws; additionally, the communications to the NASD were of "public interest" in that the actions of plaintiff could potentially affect a large number of people; plaintiff was unable to show a probability of success on his claims due to the litigation privilege and therefore the motion was granted. Fontani v. Wells Fargo Investments, LLC (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 719, 737, 28 Cal. Rptr. 3d 833

Appellate court affirmed the trial court's granting of defendant's motion to strike under the anti-SLAPP statute in a case in which plaintiff, a discount seller of contact lenses, sued defendant, an optometrist and lawyer, for inducing breach of fiduciary duties and breach of contract; suit arose out of defendant's communications with other optometrists and optometric agency representatives inviting pursuit of prospective legislation concerning mail order contact lens sales, particularly with plaintiff's former in-house lawyer, against whom breaches of fiduciary duty and contract were alleged in a separate suit. Defendant's communications were found to be statements made in connection with an issue under consideration by a legislative body, statements on an issue of public interest made in a place open to the public, or any other conduct in furtherance of the exercise of the constitutional right of petition or free speech in connection with a public issue or an issue of public interest under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(e); the question of whether the communications were unlawful was irrelevant in the determination of the first prong of the anti-SLAPP statute test and was properly considered in the secondary inquiry as to whether plaintiff had established a probability of success. 1-800 Contacts, Inc. v. Steinberg (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 568, 583-584, 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 789

News reports made in connection with issue under consideration or review by an authorized official proceeding and published by media defendants fall within scope of Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(e)(2); moreover, news reporting activity is free speech; fact that investigative audit on which report was based was confidential did not bar application of Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 in that investigative audit was authorized official proceeding and newspaper articles were made in connection with this proceeding; while investigative audit itself was confidential, topics and events were not. Braun v. Chronicle Publishing Co. (1997) 52 Cal. App. 4th 1036, 1045, 1048-1049, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 58

Communications preparatory to or in anticipation of bringing action or other official proceeding fall within protection of litigation privilege of Civ Code § 47(b) and such statements are equally entitled to benefit of Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16; law firm's letter to private individuals confirming their endorsement of filing of complaint to Attorney General with regard to plaintiff's alleged underpayment of royalties to individuals' designated charities was communication that

(1) raised question of public interest, that is, whether money designated for charities was being received by those charities, and (2) was made in connection with official proceeding authorized by law, that is, proposed complaint to Attorney General seeking investigation. Dove Audio, Inc. v. Rosenfeld, Meyer & Susman (1996) 47 Cal. App. 4th 777, 783-785, 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 830

Cause of action arising from defendant's litigation activity may appropriately be the subject of a Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 motion to strike. Church of Scientology v. Wollersheim (1996) 42 Cal. App. 4th 628, 647-648, 49 Cal. Rptr. 2d 620

[b] Statement or Writing Made in Public Forum in Connection With Issue of Public Interest

In action by municipal contractor after city terminated contract as permitted and, without inviting competitive bids, entered into a new contract with one of plaintiff's competitors, seeking writ of mandate and declaratory relief to invalidate new contract and to compel city to award contract through competitive bidding, trial court erred in granting city's anti-SLAPP motion, reasoning that maintenance of city's bus stops was issue of public interest and plaintiff was not likely to prevail on merits of its claims, where even if plaintiff's claims involved public issue, they were not based on any statement, writing, or conduct by city in furtherance of its right of free speech or its right to petition government for redress of grievances, but, rather, plaintiff's claims were based on state and municipal laws requiring city to award certain contracts through competitive bidding and were not subject to anti-SLAPP statute. Graffiti Protective Coatings, Inc. v. City of Pico Rivera (2010) 181 Cal. App. 4th 1207, 1214-1225, 104 Cal. Rptr. 3d 692

In class action by indie rock musicians against publishers of magazine and tobacco company, based on editorial feature that included band names, alleging unauthorized use of name in violation of Civ. Code § 3344, unauthorized use of name for commercial advantage (right of publicity), and unfair business practice in violation of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 et seq., with gravamen of complaint that publishers and tobacco company used artist names of plaintiffs and members of class knowingly and deliberately for commercial purpose of advertising cigarettes without their prior authorization, feature was protected activity under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 and not unprotected commercial speech, where act from which complaint arose, publication of bands' names within graphic design of feature, constituted conduct in furtherance of defendants' right of free speech in connection with public issue or issue of public interest. Further, trial court properly granted anti-SLAPP motion based on plaintiffs' inability to show probability of success, where defendants invoked their First Amendment right to freedom of speech as defense and assert causes of action failed because plaintiffs had not established that defendants acted with "actual malice," where feature was noncommercial speech as matter of law, and where there was no evidence of actual malice. Further, defendants' First Amendment right of free press also served as bar to plaintiffs' causes of action. Stewart v. Rolling Stone LLC (2010) 181 Cal. App. 4th 664, 677-692, 105 Cal. Rptr. 3d 98

Trial court erred in granting homeowners association's anti-SLAPP motion brought under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(e)(4) on ground that each cause of action alleged by homeowners against association arose out of dispute over architectural guidelines and related to communications from association pertaining to purported noncompliance with guidelines and dispute about architectural guidelines was public issue, where there was no indication that association's actions giving rise to dispute, and upon which homeowners' causes of action were based, were undertaken in furtherance of right of petition or free speech, because causes of action as described in complaint arose out of association's purported unwillingness to grant variance, demand that money be paid in exchange for variance, demand that various disputed improvements be removed, levy of reimbursement assessment, failure to comply with CC&Rs, and demand that homeowners pay to remove tree located in common area; mere fact that certain association demands were put in writing did not convert association's acts in connection with CC&R's enforcement into acts in furtherance of right of free speech, because act of putting demands concerning CC&R's compliance in writing gave rise to breach of contract and other causes of action that did not raise free speech concerns. Turner v. Vista Pointe Ridge Homeowners Assn. (2009) 180 Cal. App. 4th 676, 681-688, 102 Cal. Rptr. 3d 750

Plaintiff sued defendant law firm for intentional interference with contractual relations based on defendant's representation of an adverse party in underlying litigation; defendant's communication of a settlement offer in the underlying action constituted protected activity in that it was connected with an issue under consideration or review by a judicial body. Genethera, Inc. v. Troy & Gould Professional Corporation (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 901, 908, 90 Cal. Rptr. 3d 218

Statements made by Los Angeles Unified School District's local superintendent and Superintendent of Schools regarding principal's inability to properly handle Jefferson High School violence concerned an issue of public interest under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(e); superintendents' special motion to strike principal's causes of action for invasion of privacy and defamation based on those statements was therefore granted. Morrow v. Los Angeles Unified School Dist. (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 1424, 1436-1437, 57 Cal. Rptr. 3d 885

Plaintiff and cross-complainant's website warning the public about her negative experience with a well-known plastic surgeon was protected under the anti-SLAPP statute; plastic surgery is a topic of widespread public interest and discussion and the website contributed toward the public debate on the topic. Gilbert v. Sykes (2007) 147 Cal. App. 4th 13, 23, 53 Cal. Rptr. 3d 752

Websites that are free of charge and accessible to members of the public are public forums for purposes of Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16, and Internet postings regarding a publicly traded company with 59 million shares are considered postings made in connection with a matter of public interest within the meaning of the statute; because plaintiff did not demonstrate a probability of success on its libel claim, defendant's anti-SLAPP motion was granted. Ampex Corp. v. Cargle (2005) 128 Cal. App. 4th 1569, 1576-1577, 27 Cal. Rptr. 3d 863

In defamation action by former manager of homeowners association against several association members, board of director members, and private homeowners association club, court of appeal affirmed trial court's granting of defendants' motion to strike under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 where allegedly defamatory statement made concerning plaintiff's services as manager of homeowners association at board meetings and in newsletter fell within category of any written or oral statement or writing made in place open to public or public forum in connection with issue of public interest under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(e)(3); newsletter was public forum since stated purpose of newsletter was to communicate information of interest and/or concern to residents, it was distributed to residents of community and neighboring businesses, and, while most of articles and letters were critical of plaintiff's management, newsletter also printed letters reflecting contrary viewpoints; "public forum" requirement should be construed in keeping with 1997 amendment to section 425.16 requiring broad interpretation of that section; each of allegedly defamatory statements involved issues of public interest in that they concerned (1) decision whether to continue to be self-governed or to switch to professional management company, and (2) plaintiff's competency to manage association; although homeowners association was private, statements concerned issues of critical importance to large segment of local population; plaintiff's subjective intent in bringing suit was irrelevant. Damon v. Ocean Hills Journalism Club (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 468, 474-480, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 205

Court of appeal affirmed trial court's granting of defendant's motion to strike under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 when (1) plaintiff had been California State Assemblyman whose former assistant had filed sexual harassment charges against him, and had been investigated by Assembly and reprimanded for violating Assembly's sexual harassment policy and various newspapers reported on the sexual harassment suit, plaintiff's reprimand and cost of the defense; (2) plaintiff brought action against defendant, a political rival in 1996 elections for Orange County Board of Supervisors, for libel, slander per se, intentional infliction of emotional distress and negligent infliction of emotional distress, based on numerous comments made about the sexual harassment suit contained in a letter sent by defendant to absentee voters; and (3) once defendant showed that his statements were acts in furtherance of his right of free speech and made in connection with a public issue, plaintiff failed in his burden to show a probability of prevailing on his defamation claim; Section 425.16 applies to suits involving statements made during political campaigns; to establish probability of plaintiff prevailing on his defamation claim against defendant, plaintiff had to make prima facie showing of facts which would, if credited, support judgment in plaintiff's favor; as public official, plaintiff could not recover damages for defendant's statements about plaintiff's fitness for office unless plaintiff proved by clear and convincing evidence that statements were made with actual malice; factual statements made during campaign by defendant were true or based on reliable evidence, that is, Assembly investigation report and reprimand letter, newspaper articles and plaintiff's own statements, and thus defendant did not make them with actual malice; moreover, defendant's expressions of personal opinion about plaintiff's fitness for office are not actionable. Conroy v. Spitzer (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 1446, 1448-1455, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 443

In defamation action against labor union and its research analyst based on statement made by analyst during television newscast concerning firing by plaintiff of two of plaintiff's employees, court of appeal affirmed trial court's granting of defendants' motion to strike under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 when defendants carried initial burden of establishing prima facie showing that plaintiff's complaint arose from defendants' free speech activity and plaintiff failed to establish prima facie case of slander in its pleadings and supporting declarations that defendants made false statement with malice; constitutional protection extended to statements relating to labor disputes provided statements are not made maliciously; as with statements regarding public officials, standard requires determination whether statement was made with knowledge that it was false or with reckless disregard whether or not statement false. Monterey Plaza Hotel v. Hotel Employees & Restaurant Employees (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 1057, 1063-1066, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 10

When developer, who was disgruntled with findings of draft environmental impact report (DEIR) prepared by consultant county hired to evaluate developer's proposed project, sued county, consultant and others after county board of supervisors denied proposed project, Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 held to apply to defendants, and trial court's granting of special motion to strike under Section 425.16 upheld; commercial conduct and speech made in connection with issue of public concern under consideration by a legislature body are subject to SLAPP; Section 425.16 is to be broadly construed to be applicable to any statement, writing or conduct made in connection with issue of public concern which is under consideration or review by legislative body or which is made in preparation for such review. Mission Oaks Ranch, Ltd. v. County of Santa Barbara (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 713, 729, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1 , disapproved by, Briggs v. Eden Council for Hope and Opportunity (1999) 19 Cal. 4th 1106, 1123 to extent it suggests statement must concern issue of public significance to be protected under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(e)(1) or (2)

Anti-SLAPP law applies to defamation actions arising out of statements made in a union election; public issue was union election affecting 10,000 members and plaintiff's qualifications to serve as president; speech by mail, that is, mailing of campaign flyer, is a recognized public forum under the SLAPP statute; private conversations concerning the campaign flyer also protected under anti-SLAPP statute. Macias v. Hartwell (1997) 55 Cal. App. 4th 669, 672-675, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 222

Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 applies to and protects governmental entity and its representatives who are sued for their written and verbal comments concerning an official investigation; when both are sued both may move under Section 425.16; private conversations concerning report also protected under anti-SLAPP statute. Bradbury v. Superior Court (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 1108, 1111, 1114-1115, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 207

Anti-SLAPP law protects statements made by candidate for public office and the candidate's supporters concerning alleged libelous campaign literature. Beilenson v. Superior Court (1996) 44 Cal. App. 4th 944, 946-950

Private conversations, regarding public issue are protected under statute. Averill v. Superior Court (1996) 42 Cal. App. 4th 1170, 1174-1176, 50 Cal. Rptr. 2d 62

Alleged defamatory statements in notice of intention to circulate a petition to recall an elected official fell within scope of statute. Evans v. Unkow (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 1490

In action by plaintiffs who were certified shorthand reporters against defendants, also certified shorthand reporters, in which plaintiffs alleged that direct contracting as practiced by defendants constituted unfair business practice, intentional interference with plaintiffs' prospective economic advantage and interference with existing contracts, cross-defendant who was not a party to original action who was sued for, among other things, defamation, based on memorandum cross defendant circulated to other shorthand reporters supporting plaintiffs in underlying action and soliciting financial contributions for the cost of that litigation was subject to protection of statute. Wilcox v. Superior Court (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 809, 819-827, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 446

Allegedly slanderous and libelous comments made during public review period contemplated by CEQA (California Environmental Quality Act) were comments made in connection with public issue and fall within statutory definition of Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16. Dixon v. Superior Court (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 733, 742-744, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 687

[c] Other Conduct in Furtherance of Exercise of Free Speech or Petition in Connection With Issue of Public Interest

Defendant's interview of Marlon Brando's former housekeeper at her nursing home regarding Brando's will constituted conduct in connection with an issue of public interest; distribution of Brando's assets was an issue of public interest and television interview contributed to public discussion of the issue. Hall v. Time Warner Inc. (2007) 153 Cal. App. 4th 1337, 1347, 63 Cal. Rptr. 3d 798

Controversy surrounding university football coach's termination was of concern to a substantial number of people such that university officials' statements to newspaper and statements to parents during meeting constituted protected speech in connection with a public issue within the meaning of the anti-SLAPP statute. McGarry v. University of San Diego (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 97, 117, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 467

Issue of whether defendants' communications were made in connection with an issue under consideration or review by a legislative, executive, or judicial body was irrelevant for purposes of determination under first prong of anti-SLAPP statute because there appeared to be no dispute that the subject of the communications, the commercial development of the Crystal Bay area of the city of Chula Vista, was a matter of public interest because the anti-SLAPP statute has been broadly construed to involve not only governmental matters but also private conduct that impacts a broad segment of society and/or affects a community in a manner similar to that of a governmental entity (quoting Damon v. Ocean Hills Journalism Club (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 468, 479, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 205). Plaintiff's argument that it did not intend to chill free speech rights by its lawsuit was irrelevant. Plaintiff was unable to demonstrate a probability of prevailing on the merits, and therefore the trial court's granting of the motion was affirmed. Tuchscher Development Enterprises, Inc. v. San Diego Unified Port Dist. (2003) 106 Cal. App. 4th 1219, 1231-1235, 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 57

County bar association's evaluation of candidates for judicial office is constitutionally protected free speech, and lawsuit against it for giving "not qualified" rating to judicial candidate is a SLAPP suit subject to motion to strike under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 if candidate does not show likelihood of prevailing. Roberts v. Los Angeles County Bar Assn. (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 604, 614-615, 129 Cal. Rptr. 2d 546

In action by nationally known political consultant for libel, intentional interference with contract, and intentional interference with prospective economic advantage concerning article that focused on custody dispute between plaintiff and his first wife, court of appeal affirmed trial court's granting of defendants' motion to strike under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 when lawsuit fell under ambit of Section 425.16, and plaintiff failed to show probability of prevailing on claim because article was privileged under Civ. Code § 47(d), article was a fair and true report, and plaintiff, as public figure, failed to show by clear and convincing evidence that article was published with malice. Sipple v. Foundation for Nat. Progress (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 226, 230-250, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 677

[2] Activity Not Protected Under Anti-SLAPP Statute

In action by family of man who died when wheelchair in which he was sitting ignited, against expert witness alleging negligence based on allegedly false testimony and conspiracy to commit fraud based on settlement negotiations in underlying wrongful death action, trial court properly denied defendant's anti-SLAPP motion on ground that defendant's conduct did not arise from protected speech or petitioning activity, where in first cause of action, expert was accused of negligence by (1) falsely testifying in his deposition regarding his presence at product testing session, and (2) failing to continue to act as independent expert and/or disrupting prosecution of wrongful death case by entering into business relationship, agreement, and/or proposal with other defendants to design, develop and/or market device or devices to improve safety of wheelchair in which plaintiffs' decedent was killed, while still obligated to act as plaintiffs' expert in wrongful death case, and conduct described in second allegation did not fall into any of four categories of § 425.16(e); where, although false deposition testimony was statement made in course of judicial proceeding, anti-SLAPP statute could not be used to insulate those statements from recourse by very client on whose behalf statement was made; where gravamen of cause of action for conspiracy to commit fraud was not litigation-related speech or petitioning activity on clients' behalf, but was conduct outside litigation, specifically, suppression of information about defendants' business relationship, which deprived plaintiffs of representation for which they had retained defendants, and to extent cause of action could be said to have arisen from right of free speech or petition, that right clearly was not being exercised in litigation on plaintiffs' behalf. Robles v. Chalilpoyil (2010) 181 Cal. App. 4th 566, 572-582, 104 Cal. Rptr. 3d 628

Trial court erred in granting anti-SLAPP motion of law firm and lawyers that had previously represented plaintiff-company, which sued law firm for breach of fiduciary duty by defendants, constructive fraud by defendants, legal malpractice by defendants, and violation of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 et seq. by defendant law firm, and represented its former president and CEO, where, although cause of action "arising from" defendant's litigation activity could appropriately be subject of anti-SLAPP motion, principal thrust of company's causes of action was that defendants simultaneously represented both company and former president in matters in which they had irreconcilable conflict of interest that allegedly adversely affected defendants' choice of legal strategy and caused defendants' repeated failures to take action to safeguard company against former president's misconduct; where company, as former client, did not bring lawsuit to deter speech and petitioning activities done by their own attorneys on their behalf but rather to complain about quality of their former attorneys' performance. PrediWave Corp. v. Simpson Thacher & Bartlett LLP (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 1204, 1220-1228, 102 Cal. Rptr. 3d 245

In action by former client against his attorney, gravamen of plaintiff's complaint was that defendant attorney violated his fiduciary duties to his client and induced his client to pay him an excessive fee; this alleged conduct did not constitute protected activity and any protected petitioning activity was merely incidental. Hylton v. Frank E. Rogozienski, Inc. (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 1264, 1274, 99 Cal. Rptr. 3d 805

Talent agents' retaliation and wrongful termination claims arose out of defendant's conduct in preventing plaintiffs from performing their job duties, which was not protected activity; the mere fact that defendant's conduct occurred after plaintiffs filed their original complaint seeking a declaration that their employment contracts with defendant were illegal did not transform unprotected activity to protected activity within the meaning of the anti-SLAPP statute. McConnell v. Innovative Artists Talent and Literary Agency, Inc. (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 169, 176-177, 96 Cal. Rptr. 3d 1

Defendant brought anti-SLAPP motion to strike in case where plaintiff, his former tenant, alleged he fraudulently evicted her in order to evade the rent control ordinance by claiming he was removing the unit from the rental market in order to free it for occupancy by a member of his immediate family; court of appeals held the action did not arise out of protected activity because the complaint was premised not on the prosecution of the unlawful detainer action but the allegedly fraudulent eviction, as evidenced by the fact that the family member never moved in. Clark v. Mazgani (2009) 170 Cal. App. 4th 1281, 1286-1287, 89 Cal. Rptr. 3d 24

Where plaintiff sued defendant law firm for breach of the duties of confidentiality and loyalty based on defendant's acceptance of representation of a third party allegedly giving rise to a conflict of interest, principal thrust or gravamen of plaintiff's complaint was the acceptance of allegedly adverse employment, which was not protected activity; protected litigation-related activities were only incidental to principal thrust of complaint. United States Fire Ins. Co. v. Sheppard, Mullin, Richter & Hampton (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 1617, 1629, 90 Cal. Rptr. 3d 669

Communications forming the "principle thrust" or "gravamen" of plaintiff's complaint for interference with contract and prospective economic advantage were not within the litigation privilege; tone of communications was cooperative and not in "serious consideration" of litigation. Haneline Pacific Properties, LLC v. May (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 311, 319-320, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 919

City's declaratory relief action against proponents of an initiative to amend the city's charter was not subject to anti-SLAPP motion; city was simply asking court for guidance regarding constitutionality of initiative and did nothing to impact proponents' First Amendment rights. City of Riverside v. Stansbury (2007) 155 Cal. App. 4th 1582, 1590-1591, 66 Cal. Rptr. 3d 862

Defendant's alleged failures to cease using plaintiff's software and provide certification regarding the deletion of the software pursuant to a settlement agreement reached in a federal copyright and breach of contract case did not constitute protected activity within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(e); the case was a breach of contract action arising from defendant's failure to comply with the settlement agreement, which was not protected activity. Applied Business Software, Inc. v. Pacific Mort. Exchange, Inc. (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 1108, 1117, 79 Cal. Rptr. 3d 849

Defendant's act of noticing and initiating a nonjudicial foreclosure sale after plaintiff defaulted on loan was not subject to anti-SLAPP protection; nonjudicial foreclosure is a private, contractual proceeding, not a proceeding that is closely linked to any governmental, administrative, or judicial proceedings or regulation. Garretson v. Post (2007) 156 Cal. App. 4th 1508, 1523, 68 Cal. Rptr. 3d 230

Gravamen of plaintiff Department of Fair Employment and Housing's complaint against landlord was disability discrimination, not landlord's actions in connection with rental control removal proceeding and filing of unlawful detainer action; mere fact that plaintiff filed complaint after protected activity took place does not mean complaint arose from protected activity. Department of Fair Employment and Housing v. 1105 Alta Loma Road Apartments, LLC (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 1273, 1282-1288, 65 Cal. Rptr. 3d 469

In action by class action litigants against their attorney for breach of contract, negligence, and breach of fiduciary duty, principal thrust of complaint was not attorney's filing or settlement of litigation, but rather was his unethical conduct in representing a party with interests adverse to his clients; because protected activity was merely incidental to unprotected activity, action was not a SLAPP suit. Freeman v. Schack (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 719, 726-727, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 867

Complaint for breach of contract, fraud, and conspiracy to defraud did not arise out of protected activity under the anti-SLAPP statute in case where landowner sued Wal-Mart and others on the basis of a contract to sell land for a Wal-Mart store; the alleged improper conduct on defendants' part did not arise from petitioning activity in pursuing the necessary permits, but rather from conduct and practices involved in carrying out contractual duties, and the thrust of the complaint challenged the manner in which the parties dealt with each other rather than the activity of pursuing governmental approvals for development. Wang v. Wal-Mart Real Estate Business Trust (2007) 153 Cal. App. 4th 790, 804-810, 63 Cal. Rptr. 3d 575

Defendants' actions in terminating plaintiffs' tenancy and removing plaintiffs' apartment from the rental market under the Ellis Act were not activities undertaken in furtherance of defendants' constitutional rights of petition or free speech; although filing and serving the Ellis Act notice and notice to vacate may have constituted protected activity, plaintiffs' complaint requesting declaratory relief did not arise out of the filing and serving of the notice, but rather out of the termination of the tenancy, which was not protected activity under the anti-SLAPP statute. Marlin v. Aimco Venezia, LLC (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 154, 160-162, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 488

Because the anti-SLAPP statute does not extend to claims arising out of free exercise of religion, the statute was not available in a lawsuit arising out of defendants' religious ceremonial outdoor fires and the trial court properly denied defendants' special motion to strike. Castillo v. Pacheco (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 242, 252, 58 Cal. Rptr. 3d 305

An anti-SLAPP motion will not be sustained in a lawsuit for invasion of privacy where a newspaper's publication of information is gathered from public sources. Gates v. Discovery Communications, Inc. (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 679, 696, 21 Cal. Rptr. 3d 663, 101 P. 3d 552

Court of appeal affirmed trial court's denial of defendant's anti-SLAPP motion in case where screenplay writer named character in movie "Reality Bites" after plaintiff, who was a former classmate of the writer's; the specific dispute leading to the lawsuit was the alleged misuse of plaintiff's persona, which was not an issue of public interest within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16. Dyer v. Childress (2007) 147 Cal. App. 4th 1273, 1283, 55 Cal. Rptr. 3d 544

"Garden variety" legal malpractice action does not arise from activity protected under the anti-SLAPP statute; case arose from defendants' allegedly negligent legal representation, not petitioning activity protected under the statute. Kolar v. Donahue, McIntosh & Hammerton (2006) 145 Cal. App.4th 1532, 1540, 52 Cal. Rptr. 3d 712

Auto dealer's speech in protesting manufacturer's notice of intent to establish a new dealership was entitled to anti-SLAPP scrutiny regardless of the fact that the protected speech was in violation of an agreement not to protest; fact that dealer may have violated this agreement was properly addressed by the court under the second prong of the anti-SLAPP analysis. Daimler Chrysler Motors Co. v. Lew Williams, Inc. (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 344, 351, 48 Cal. Rptr. 3d 233

A lawsuit by two city council members seeking declaratory relief against the City of Santa Monica based on the fact that the city council meetings frequently run late into the night was not in the public interest within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 425.17(b); action concerned members' preference for particular working hours, not a public interest and, if successful, would not confer a significant benefit on the public as a whole. Holbrook v. City of Santa Monica (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 1242, 1249, 51 Cal. Rptr. 3d 181

Private company's actions in connection with sexual harassment procedure were not protected conduct under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(e)(1) or (2); a sexual harassment procedure is not an "official proceeding authorized by law" within the meaning of the statute; legislature intended statute to apply to governmental forums. Olaes v. Nationwide Mutual Ins. Co. (2006) 135 Cal. App. 4th 1501, 1509, 38 Cal. Rptr. 3d 467

Court of appeal affirmed trial court's denial of anti-SLAPP motion in action where plaintiff fire protection district sued Contra Costa County's retirement association and the retirement association's board of directors as a result of a decision requiring the district to fund increased retirement benefits for the district's employees. The court held that mere acts of governance mandated by law are not exercises of free speech or petition within the meaning of the anti-SLAPP statute. San Ramon Valley Fire Protection Dist. v. Contra Costa County Employees' Retirement Assoc. (2004) 125 Cal. App. 4th 343, 349-352, 22 Cal. Rptr. 3d 724

Court of appeal affirmed trial court's denial of Metabolife's motion to strike plaintiff's complaint in action where plaintiff sued Metabolife for product liability, negligence, breach of implied warranty, breach of express warranty, and fraud. The court held that because the bulk of the complaint alleged garden-variety personal injury claims for physical injuries proximately caused by activity distinct and apart from any protected conduct (i.e., Metabolife's advertising of its products), the complaint was not based on protected activity as defined under the anti-SLAPP statute. It was therefore distinguishable from cases in which the core of the wrongful, injury-producing conduct was the false advertising. Martinez v. Metabolife Int'l, Inc. (2003) 113 Cal. App. 4th 181, 193, 6 Cal. Rptr. 3d 494

California Supreme Court affirmed the appellate court's reversal of a trial court's granting of an anti-SLAPP motion in a case where a municipality filed a state court action for declaratory relief against mobile home park owners following the owners' filing of a federal court declaratory relief action against the City regarding a mobile home park rent stabilization ordinance. The court emphasized that the fact the City filed the state court lawsuit in response to the owners' federal court lawsuit did not automatically mean the City's state court lawsuit "arose from" the federal court suit within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16. The court noted such a meaning would render all cross-actions potential SLAPPs. Instead, the state court action arose out of a dispute between the owners and the City regarding the rent stabilization ordinance. Thus, the plaintiff City's cause of action was not based on an act in furtherance of the defendant's right of petition or free speech, as required by the statute. The City's lawsuit was therefore not subject to a motion to strike under the anti-SLAPP statute. City of Cotati v. Gene Cashman (2002) 29 Cal. 4th 69, 73-81, 124 Cal. Rptr. 2d 519

Defendants were unable to satisfy the first prong of the anti-SLAPP statute because the commercial speech involved did not implicate a matter of public interest within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(e); defendant's claims of an "herbal product that provides a 100 percent natural alternative to breast implants" was commercial speech about the specific properties and efficacies of a particular product and not a matter of public interest; if the court were to find a matter of public interest in this case, nearly any product could claim its speech was about a topic of public interest. Consumer Justice Center v. Trimedica International, Inc. (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 595, 599-605, 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 191

Classification created by Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(d) exempting public prosecutors' enforcement actions from anti-SLAPP motions bears directly on furthering state's legitimate interest of allowing prosecutors, who did not create the SLAPP problem, to pursue actions to enforce laws, unencumbered by delay, intimidation, or distraction, and therefore, statute does not violate the equal protection clause of either United States or California Constitutions; court affirmed trial court's order denying special motion to strike by manufacturer of weight loss product in action for false or misleading advertising and unfair competition brought by district attorneys of two counties. People v. Health Laboratories of North America, Inc. (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 442, 450-451, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 618

In action by insurance company alleging that company that assisted individuals in preparing repair estimates for earthquake damage to their homes violated Ins. Code § 1871.7(a), which makes it unlawful to procure clients to perform services or benefits under contract of insurance or that will be basis for claim against insurer, trial court properly denied defendants' special motion to strike complaint under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16, where defendants failed to make prima facie showing that causes of action in lawsuit arose from free speech or petition activity under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(b)(1); there was no issue under consideration pending before any official proceeding at time damage reports prepared by defendants were sent to plaintiff insurer; to protect reports and claims under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 because they eventually could be used in connection with official proceeding would be to provide immunity for any kind of criminal fraud so long as defrauding party was willing to litigate its cause. People ex rel. 20th Century Insurance Co. v. Building Permit Consultants, Inc. (2000) 86 Cal. App. 4th 280, 283-285, 103 Cal. Rptr. 2d 71

Complaint alleging that defendants interfered with plaintiff's reelection campaign to city council by influencing election with illegal campaign contributions did not constitute SLAPP suit; when defendants effectively conceded that activities were illegal, the activities, as a matter of law, were not a valid exercise of constitutional rights protected by Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16; since defendants had not shown that plaintiff's suit was brought primarily to chill valid exercise of their constitutional rights of free speech or petition for redress of grievances in connection with public issue, plaintiff had no obligation to establish probability that he would prevail on merits. Paul for Council v. Hanyecz (2001) 85 Cal. App. 4th 1356, 1363, 1367, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 864

[3] Parties' Burdens in Anti-SLAPP Proceedings

California Supreme Court affirmed the trial court's granting of defendant's motion to strike under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 in a case where plaintiff Equilon Enterprises, LLC (formerly Shell Pipe Line Corp. and Texaco, Inc.) filed suit against Consumer Cause, Inc. after Consumer Cause had served plaintiff with a notice of its intent to sue for alleged violations of Proposition 65. Following the service of this intent to sue notice, Equilon filed its suit against Consumer Cause for declaratory and injunctive relief. Consumer Cause then moved under the anti-SLAPP statute to strike Equilon's complaint. The trial court granted the motion, and the Court of Appeal and California Supreme Court both affirmed that ruling. The court noted that the California courts of appeal had divided over the question of whether a defendant must prove a plaintiff had an intent to chill defendant's exercise of speech in order to prevail on an anti-SLAPPmotion to strike. The court held there is no such requirement based on the plain language of the statute and on legislative intent. In this particular case, the court held that the pleadings and affidavits submitted established that Equilon's action was one arising from Consumer Cause's activity in furtherance of its constitutional rights of speech, i.e., the filing of the intent to sue notices. The trial court had found that Equilon had not established a probability of prevailing on is claim, so the granting of the motion was affirmed. Equilon's intent in suing Consumer Cause was deemed irrelevant. Equilon Enterprises, LLC v. Consumer Cause, Inc. (2002) 29 Cal. 4th 53, 58-65, 124 Cal. Rptr. 2d 507

The key question in the first prong of a Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 anti-SLAPP determination is whether the plaintiff's cause of action is based on the defendant's protected free speech or petitioning activity, not whether plaintiff intended to chill defendant's rights in filing the lawsuit. Once the first prong is satisfied, the plaintiff has the opportunity to overcome the anti-SLAPP motion to strike by demonstrating that they have a probability of prevailing on their claim. Plaintiffs in this case filed a lawsuit against defendant for fraud and breach of contract in connection with a prior federal lawsuit in which defendants had filed counterclaims against plaintiffs. The court held that in as much as the plaintiffs' lawsuit arose from defendant's counterclaims in the federal court suit, defendant had satisfied the first prong of the statute. The case was remanded to the trial court for a determination regarding the second prong of the statute's test. Navellier v. Sletten (2002) 29 Cal. 4th 82, 87-104, 124 Cal. Rptr. 2d 530

A plaintiff opposing an anti-SLAPP motion filed after the 60-day deadline imposed by Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(f) need not demonstrate prejudice in opposing motion on the grounds that it was not timely filed; appellate court reviews trial court's decision to deny late motion under abuse of discretion standard. Olsen v. Harbison (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 278, 286-287, 35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 909

The fact that the plaintiff prevailed in a subsequently filed timely action is irrelevant to whether the plaintiff could prevail in an earlier untimely action on the same cause. City of Santa Monica v. Stewart (2005) 126 Cal. App. 4th 43, 75-76, 24 Cal. Rptr. 3d 72

[4] Malicious Prosecution Actions and SLAPPback Motions to Strike

In Jarrow Formulas, Inc. v. LaMarche (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 728, 741, 3 Cal. Rptr. 3d 636, 74 P.3d 737 , California Supreme Court declined to create categorical exemption from anti-SLAPP statute for malicious prosecution actions. Zamos v. Stroud (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 958, 965, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 54

In action against attorneys representing plaintiff in underlying slander litigation, which was dismissed as result of terminating sanctions imposed for plaintiff's refusal to follow court orders and comply with his discovery obligations, alleging malicious prosecution and other causes of action, trial court properly granted defendants' anti-SLAPP motion, where, as to malicious prosecution cause of action, although plaintiff established prima facie showing that underlying action was terminated in her favor based on dismissal of underlying as result of discovery sanctions and that underlying action was brought without probable cause, plaintiff failed to establish prima facie showing that defendants acted with malice, and where plaintiff had not attempted to meet her burden to show she would prevail on her other three causes of action, essentially conceding those causes of action were inappropriate in context of facts alleged and litigation privilege [Civ. Code § 47(b)] foreclosed pursuit of causes of action against defendants. Daniels v. Robbins (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 204, 214-227, 105 Cal. Rptr. 3d 683

Defendant who prevails on special motion to strike, recovering fees pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(c), and subsequently prosecutes successful malicious prosecution action against plaintiff in underlying suit may not enjoy a double recovery of fees; relitigation of amount of fees incurred relating to successful motion to strike is precluded by collateral estoppel doctrine. Jackson v. Yarbray (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 75, 93, 101 Cal. Rptr. 3d 303

Apartment complex owner plaintiff was able to show a probability of prevailing on malicious prosecution claim against all defendants: The litigation was terminated in its favor, defendants lacked probable cause to prosecute some or all of their causes of action, plaintiff presented evidence demonstrating a probability of prevailing on the malicious intent element, and plaintiff established it was damaged by defendants' conduct. Sycamore Ridge Apartments v. Naumann (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 1385, 1412, 69 Cal. Rptr. 3d 561

Trial court's denial of defendants' anti-SLAPP motion was reversed in case where painting subcontractor sued general contractor and its attorneys for malicious prosecution; although a malicious prosecution case is a proper basis for an anti-SLAPP motion, plaintiff was unable to demonstrate a probability of success on the element of probable cause; there was no evidence of the painter's limited scope of work other than his own counsel's assertion and therefore it could not be said that pursuing a cross-complaint against the painter was objectively unreasonable. Marijanovic v. Gray, York & Duffy (2006) 137 Cal. App. 4th 1262, 1271-1272, 40 Cal. Rptr. 3d 867

In order to establish a probability of prevailing on a malicious prosecution action, plaintiff must show favorable termination on all causes of action as the causes of action are not severable; additionally, favorable termination element cannot be established by reference to parties' earlier settlement positions. Staffpro, Inc. v. Elite Show Services, Inc. (2006) 136 Cal. App. 4th 1392, 1401, 39 Cal. Rptr. 3d 682

[5] Statutory Exceptions of Code Civ. Proc. § 425.17

The statutory exception found in CCP § 425.17(b) does not apply to an action that seeks any advantage, no matter how narrow, for a particular plaintiff, as opposed to an action that is brought solely in the public interest. Club Members for an Honest Election v. Sierra Club (2008) 45 Cal. 4th 309, 316-317, 86 Cal. Rptr. 3d 288, 196 P.3d 1094

In class action by indie rock musicians against publishers of magazine and tobacco company, based on editorial feature that included band names, alleging unauthorized use of name in violation of Civ. Code § 3344, unauthorized use of name for commercial advantage (right of publicity), and unfair business practice in violation of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 et seq., with gravamen of complaint that publishers and tobacco company used artist names of plaintiffs and members of class knowingly and deliberately for commercial purpose of advertising cigarettes without their prior authorization, Code Civ. Proc. § 425.17(c) did not apply to preclude anti-SLAPP motion under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16, where, although publishers were primarily engaged in the business of selling goods, goods they sold were copies magazine, not cigarettes, and where statement or conduct at issue did not consist of representations of fact about business operations, goods or services of magazine or of any of defendants' business competitors, but, instead, representation at center of lawsuit was representation that plaintiffs and their fellow musicians endorsed sale and use of cigarettes. Stewart v. Rolling Stone LLC (2010) 181 Cal. App. 4th 664, 675-677, 105 Cal. Rptr. 3d 98

Cause of action arising from lawyer's advice to prospective client regarding pending litigation does not fall within statutory exemption to anti-SLAPP statute found in Code Civ. Proc. § 425.17; legislature intended to exempt purely commercial disputes and client's right to receive legal advice would be thwarted if courts construed exemption as applying to lawyers providing legal advice. Taheri Law Group v. Evans (2008) 160 Cal. App. 4th 482, 491, 72 Cal.

In lawsuit between two competitors in event-staffing business, e-mail describing status of ongoing litigation between the two companies to customers did not contain statements regarding either party's business operations, goods or services such that it would fall within the Code Civ. Proc. § 425.17(c) exception to the anti-SLAPP statute; record showed e-mail was sent to "set the record straight" with regard to the allegations of the lawsuit and not to obtain approval for, promote, or secure business for the event staffing company. Contemporary Services Corp. v. Staff Pro Inc. (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 1043, 1054, 61 Cal. Rptr. 3d 434

Statements made by defendant during environmental impact report review process objecting to competitor hotel's proposed expansion were not made for the purpose of "obtaining approval for, promoting, or securing sales or leases of, or commercial transactions in, [defendant's] goods or services" as required by Code Civ. Proc. § 425.17(c)(1); instead, they were made in an effort to forestall environmental approval of plaintiff's project; therefore, the exception to the anti-SLAPP statute did not apply. Sunset Millennium Associates v. LHO Grafton Hotel (2006) 146 Cal. App. 4th 300, 313, 52 Cal. Rptr. 3d 828

Code Civ. Proc. § 425.17(d)(2) applied in case in which plaintiff sued defendant seeking an injunction to prevent defendant from mailing political letters on behalf of plaintiff's opponents; defendant's letters constituted "political ... work" within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 425.17(d)(2)'s exception to Code Civ. Proc. § 425.17(b) and therefore defendant's conduct fell within the ambit of the anti-SLAPP statute. Major v. Silna (2006) 134 Cal. App. 4th 1485, 1497, 36 Cal. Rptr. 3d 875

Breach of contract and fraud lawsuit filed by franchisee as a result of franchisor's allegedly false promises to process potential buyers of franchise rights without undue delay was not entitled to protection from anti-SLAPP motion under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.17(c); statute requires that the statement of conduct that is the subject of the lawsuit be a representation of fact and a promise is not a representation of fact. Furthermore, franchisor's promises were not made in the course of delivering goods or services but rather in the process of settlement of a lawsuit. Navarro v. IHOP Properties, Inc. (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 834, 841, 36 Cal. Rptr. 3d 385

The defendant has the burden of proving that plaintiff's cause of action is outside the statutory exceptions of Code Civ. Proc. § 425.17; if defendant cannot do so, the burden never shifts to plaintiff to prove a probability of success; defendant's large financialmanagement and services conglomerates were primarily engaged in the business of selling goods and services within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 425.17(c); furthermore, the statements made by defendants constituted commercial speech directed at an actual or potential buyer or consumer within the meaning of the exception to the anti-SLAPP statute. Brill Media Co. v. TCW Group, Inc. (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 324, 330, 341, 33 Cal. Rptr. 3d 371

Plaintiff sued radio call-in show on the basis of age discrimination and unfair competition when he was told he was too old to call and weigh in on various topics; defendant radio call-in show fell within the exception to Code Civ. Proc. § 425.17 as stated in Code Civ. Proc. § 425.17(d)(2) and therefore the trial court's granting of defendant's anti-SLAPP motion was affirmed. Ingels v. Westwood One Broadcasting Services, Inc. (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 1050, 1068, 28 Cal. Rptr. 3d 933

An Unfair Competition Law claim filed by plaintiffs who received demand letters from satellite television provider DIRECTV ordering the plaintiffs to stop using decryption devices was not entitled to protection against defendant's anti-SLAPP motion under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.17(b) because the claim would not "enforce an important rightaffecting the public interest" (second prong of exception) and there was no disproportionate financial burden on the plaintiffs (third prong of exception). Blanchard v. DIRECTV, Inc. (2004) 123 Cal. App. 4th 903, 914, 20 Cal. Rptr. 3d 385

[6] Attorney's Fees and Costs

The party challenging the attorney fee award on appeal has the burden of pointing to the specific items challenged, with sufficient argument and citation to the evidence; general claims that fees are excessive, duplicative, or unrelated to the work will not suffice. Premier Medical Management Systems, Inc. v. California Ins. Guarantee (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 550, 564, 77 Cal. Rptr. 3d 695

Trial court abused its discretion in permitting defendant to file anti-SLAPP motion two years after filing of complaint; while trial court has considerable discretion in deciding whether to allow a party to file an anti-SLAPP motion more than 60 days after the filing of the complaint, in the instant case the delay was extreme, defendant did not offer compelling reasons for the delay and plaintiff was prejudiced by the lengthy delay. Platypus Wear, Inc. v. Goldberg (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 772, 83Cal. Rptr. 3d 95

On appeal, court reviews attorney fee award under abuse of discretion standard; fact that attorney charged $300 per hour, was a relatively new attorney, and practiced in the area of family law did not establish an abuse of discretion in trial court's fee award. Russell v. Foglio (2008) 160 Cal. App. 4th 653, 661-662, 73 Cal. Rptr. 3d 87

Party who represents himself and litigates an anti-SLAPP motion on his own behalf is not entitled to attorney fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(c). Taheri Law Group v. Evans (2008) 160 Cal. App. 4th 482, 494, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 847

A party prevailing on an anti-SLAPP motion may seek an attorney fee award by three different avenues: as a part of the motion to strike itself, by a subsequent noticed motion, or as part of a cost memorandum. Carpenter v. Jack in the Box Corp. (2007) 151 Cal. App. 4th 454, 461, 59 Cal. Rptr. 3d 839

Plaintiff prevailing on anti-SLAPP motion is not subject to the timelines of Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 3.1702 and 8.104 in seeking attorney fees; plaintiff may seek attorney fees by noticed motion or as part of cost memorandum at any time prior to entry of judgment in the lawsuit. Carpenter v. Jack in the Box Corp. (2007) 151 Cal. App. 4th 454, 468, 59 Cal. Rptr. 3d 839

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in reducing attorney fees and costs sought by prevailing defendant from $112,000 to $23,000; trial court determined that attorneys experienced in anti-SLAPP litigation would not have needed to spend 200 hours preparing a motion and that 50 hours was a more reasonable figure. Maughan v. Google Technology Inc. (2006) 143 Cal. App. 4th 1242, 1253, 49 Cal. Rptr. 3d 861

Court may not award attorney fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(c) where plaintiff dismissed claims against defendants before defendants filed anti-SLAPP motion. Chambers v. Miller (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 821, 825, 44 Cal. Rptr. 3d 777

[7] Time for Filing Special Motion to Strike

Counsel may not leverage Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 to obtain an unjust award of attorney fees, and where the trial court severely curtails the number of compensable hours in a fee award, it is presumed the trial court concluded the fee request was padded. Christian Research Institute v. Alnor (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 1315, 1321-1330, 81 Cal. Rptr. 3d 866

Award of attorney's fees to defendant prevailing on anti-SLAPP motion is appealable under Code Civ. Proc. § 904.1(a)(2) as an order made after a judgment; plaintiff's failure to appeal fee award within 60 days of service of notice of entry of order rendered his appeal of the fee award untimely. Melbostad v. Fisher (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 987, 81 Cal. Rptr. 3d 354

Motion for reconsideration of denial of prior motion to strike under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 and new motion to strike under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 were properly denied where more than 60 days had elapsed since the service of the complaint and defendant had not sought leave of court to file motion outside the time limits prescribed by statute. Kunysz IV v. Sandler (2007) 146 Cal. App. 4th 1540, 1543, 53 Cal. Rptr. 3d 779

[8] Application to Federal and Non-Civil Causes of Action

Trial court erred in granting defendant-city's anti-SLAPP motion in § 1983 action by attorney against city council for retaliation for attorney's exercise of constitutional rights, where, although action was based on acts by city that would qualify for protection under anti-SLAPP statute because his claims were based on investigative reports by council's surveillance subcommittee, council's hearing, and subsequent resolution adopted by council condemning him, plaintiff showed probability of success of succeeding on merits, because acts underlying his § 1983 claim were performed under color of state law; attorney made prima facie showing that his prelitigation investigation of alleged inappropriate romantic relationship between city council member and city attorney was protected by right to petition, because investigation was incidental and reasonably related to potential claim that city attorney had conflict of interest, which was claim he would have made to council or incorporated into lawsuit against city had investigation produced evidence of inappropriate romantic relationship to support it, and evidence did not conclusively establish that alleged romantic relationship and claim of conflict of interest attorney purported to investigate were sham; because, although attorney asserted separate causes of action based on violations of his right to petition and right of free speech, claims were identical insofar as both alleged that hiring investigator was protected conduct, and hiring investigator could also be considered protected under right of free speech; because city's alleged permissible intent to protect the privacy of public officials and impermissible intent to retaliate against attorney were inseparably intertwined since condemning attorney's protected conduct to deter future similar conduct was very means city chose to protect privacy of public officials, and because city's actions were motivated, at least in part, by his protected conduct. Tichinin v. City of Morgan Hill (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 1049, 1061-1088, 99 Cal. Rptr. 3d 661

Petition for workplace violence restraining order under Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8 did not fall within exception to anti-SLAPP statute found in Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(d); workplace violence petition is a tool to protect city employees and not the citizenry at large as required by exception; defendants' protests constituted protected activity and city failed to show a probability of success on the merits. City of Los Angeles v. Animal Defense League (2006) 135 Cal. App. 4th 606, 617, 37 Cal. Rptr. 3d 632

Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 applied to cause of action brought in state court alleging violation of federal civil rights under 42 U.S.C. § 1983; state procedure controls when action founded on federal statute is brought in state court unless federal statute provides otherwise. Bradbury v. Superior Court (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 1108, 1111, 1117-1118, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 207

[9] Standing to Bring Anti-SLAPP Motion to Strike

Intervenor in lawsuit had no standing to bring anti-SLAPP motion; plaintiffs did not name insurance company intervenor as a defendant in the complaint, nor did they seek any relief against the intervenor and therefore intervenor's motion was frivolous. Foundation for Taxpayer & Consumer Rights v. Garamendi (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 1375, 1392, 34 Cal. Rptr. 3d 368

§ 376.50 Moving Defendant's Checklist--Anti-SLAPP Motion to Strike

1. Examine complaint or cross-complaint to determine whether all or any causes of action are subject to a special motion to strike under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16. Also determine if there is a bar to bringing a special motion to strike under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.17, or if the suit involves a malicious prosecution action and the related SLAPPback provisions under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.18 [for checklist, see § 376.52].

2 Determine the date the notice of motion must be filed and the hearing date.

NOTE:

The motion may be filed within 60 days of the service of the complaint, or in the court's discretion, at any later time on terms it deems proper [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(f)].

3. The clerk of the court must schedule the motion for a hearing not more than 30 days after service of the motion unless the court's docket conditions require a later hearing [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(f)].

4. If not already done, consider other responsive pleadings, as appropriate.

NOTE:

An ordinary motion to strike extends the time to answer, but not the time to demur [see Code Civ. Proc. § 435(c), (d)]. Because this special motion to strike can be made up to 60 days after service of the complaint and Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 makes no mention of extending time to plead, although discovery is stayed [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(f), (g)], even though it can be argued that such a special motion made within 30 days after service of the complaint extends the time to answer (see Code Civ.

Proc. §§ 435(c), 585(f)*, a defendant who desires to make such a motion within 30 days after service of the complaint should probably also file an answer, or should file the motion and a demurrer, unless plaintiff is willing to stipulate to an extension.

[2] Preparation of Papers

1. Motion and Notice of Motion on Special Motion to Strike.

a. Draft motion and notice of hearing on special motion to strike [FORM: see § 376.60].

b. Sign special motion and notice of hearing on special motion.

2. Prepare Supporting Declaration(s) [FORM: see § 376.61].

3. Draft supporting memorandum [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113]. For forms of memoranda, see California Points and Authorities, Ch. 160, Motions to Strike (Matthew Bender), and the General Index to that publication. See also Ch. 417, Points and Authorities , in this publication.

4. Prepare declaration or certificate regarding proof of service [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1013a; see also Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers].

5. Prepare proposed order [FORM: see § 376.62].

[3] Service and Filing

1. Serve copies of the special motion and notice of hearing and memorandum on the attorney for the party whose pleading is challenged or, if the party has no attorney, on the other party [Code Civ. Proc. § 1005, 1011, 1012, 1015; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 1.6(19), 3.1100, 3.1103(b)].

a. Service is usually made in person or by mail [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1011, 1012].

b. Service in person must be completed at least 16 court days before the selected hearing date [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b)].
(1) When service is by mail, this 16-day period for completing service before the hearing date is extended by five calendar days if the place of mailing and the place of address are within California, by 10 calendar days if either of these places is outside California but within the United States, or by 20 calendar days if either of these places is outside the United States [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b)].

(2) When service is by fax transmission, express mail, or another form of overnight delivery, this 16-day period is extended by two calendar days [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b)]. An extension period of two court days may apply in the case of electronic service [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1010.6(a)(6); for discussion, see Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers, § 518.41[8]].

2. File the originals of the special motion and notice of hearing on the special motion to strike and accompanying papers with the clerk of the court in which the action is pending [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1005(b), 1013a].

NOTE:

A motion on all the grounds stated in the written notice is deemed to have been made and to be pending before the court for all purposes on the due service and filing of the notice of motion [Code Civ. Proc. § 1005.5].

a. Pay filing fee.

b. Generally, it is good practice to submit the office copy to the clerk to be stamped together with the original, to serve as a check on the contents of the original.

c. File proof of service no later than five calendar days before the hearing date [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1300(c)].

3. Transmit to the Judicial Council, by e-mail or fax, a copy of the endorsed-filed caption page of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(j)(1)].

[4] Response to Plaintiff's Declarations and Memorandum

1. File response if appropriate.

a. Examine declarations submitted by plaintiff to establish a probability that plaintiff would prevail on the claim to determine if any evidentiary objections exist to the declarations.

b. If evidentiary objections exist, consider preparing written objections to the evidence to be submitted to the court in a separate document, reply memorandum or both, similar to the manner for objecting to evidence in papers submitted on a summary judgment motion [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1352 (party desiring to object in summary judgment motion must either submit written objections pursuant to Rule 3.1354, or arrange for court reporter to be present at hearing); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1354 (written objections to evidence in support of motion for summary judgment must be (a) served and filed separately from the other papers in opposition to the motion, (b) identify the name of the document in which the specific material objected to is located, (c) state the exhibit, title, page, and line number of the material objected to, (d) quote or set forth the objectionable statement or material, (e) state the grounds for each objection to that statement or material, and (f) be served and filed at the same time as the objecting party's opposition papers are served and filed)].

c. Examine the memorandum of points and authorities, if any, filed in response to the motion to strike.

d. Counsel may wish to file a reply memorandum, with proof of service, in opposition to plaintiff's opposing memorandum. Local practice may vary, but usually this reply memorandum should be filed directly with the clerk of the law and motion department or division, rather than in the office of the court clerk, so that the court will have sufficient time to consider the memorandum prior to the hearing on the motion. Counsel should check local court rules and practices to determine if there are any local filing or other requirements concerning the reply memorandum. For example, local court rules may impose limitations on when and with whom a reply memorandum may be filed.

2. Serve and file any response papers.

All reply papers must be filed and a copy served at least five court days before the time appointed for the hearing. All reply papers must be served by personal delivery, facsimile transmission, express mail, or other means consistent with the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1010, 1011, 1012, and 1013, and reasonably calculated to ensure delivery to the other party or parties not later than the close of the next business day after the time the reply papers are filed [Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b), (c); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1300(a); cf. Code Civ. Proc. § 1010.6(a)(6) (two court day extension in case of electronic service; although Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b) expressly excludes extensions under Code Civ. Proc. § 1013, it is silent as to Code Civ. Proc. § 1010.6)]. Unless otherwise provided by local court rule, all papers relating to a law and motion proceeding must be filed in the clerk's office [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1302(a)].

PART IV. PROCEDURAL CHECKLISTS

9-376 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 376.51

§ 376.51 Opposing Party's Checklist--Anti-SLAPP Motion to Strike

1. On receipt of the special motion and notice of hearing on the special motion to strike, supporting declaration(s) and supporting memorandum, ascertain if it was timely served and if the motion and notice is in any way defective.

2. Read the supporting papers to determine if the defendant has met defendant's initial burden of making a prima facie showing that the plaintiff's cause(s) of action arose from defendant's acts in furtherance of defendant's rights of petition or free speech under the United States or California Constitution in connection with a public issue. For discussion of defendant's required showing, see § 376.20[1], above. Verify the citations to determine whether they support the points or statements for which they are cited. For discussion of making evidentiary objections, see discussion under § 376.50[4].

NOTE:

Points may be inaccurately stated or not supported by the authorities cited. Moreover, a case cited may superficially support the point in that it makes an identical or similar statement, but may actually hold that the statement is not applicable to the facts of that case or that the case presents an exception to the rule. In that situation, the case is usually not authority for the statement made but, rather, an authority in opposition to it.

3. If the motion is well taken, determine the advisability of not opposing it or of stipulating that the motion be granted with leave to amend the pleading.

[2] Preparation of Papers

1. Prepare opposing declarations to establish a probability that plaintiff will prevail on the claim supported by admissible evidence. For prima facie showing that the plaintiff must make to prevail concerning a special motion to strike under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 and evidentiary rules, see discussion under § 376.20[3][a].

2. Prepare an opposing memorandum of points and authorities. For forms of memoranda, see California Points and Authorities, Ch. 160, Motions to Strike (Matthew Bender), and the General Index to that publication. See also Ch. 417, Points and Authorities , in this publication.

3. Prepare the certificate, affidavit, or declaration, as the case may be, of service [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1013(b), 1013a, 2009, 2015.5].

[3] Service and Filing

1. Serve copies of the opposing declarations and memorandum on the moving party's attorney or, if none, on the moving party [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1005(b), 1011, 1012, 1015; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 1.6(19), 3.1100, 3.1103].

NOTE:

Unless otherwise ordered or specifically provided by law, copies of all papers opposing a motion must be served at least nine court days before the hearing. All papers opposing a motion must be served by personal delivery, facsimile transmission, express mail, or other means consistent with the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1010, 1011, 1012, and 1013, and reasonably calculated toensure delivery to the other party or parties not later than the close of the next business day after the time the opposing papers are filed [Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b), (c); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1300; cf. Code Civ. Proc. § 1010.6(a)(6) (two court day extension in case of electronic service; although Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b) expressly excludes extensions under Code Civ. Proc. § 1013, it is silent as to Code Civ. Proc. § 1010.6)].

2. File the original opposing papers with the clerk of the court in which the action is pending. The papers may be delivered in person or by mail.

a. Unless otherwise ordered or specifically provided by law, all papers opposing a motion must be filed at least nine court days before the time appointed for the hearing [Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1300; cf. Code Civ. Proc. § 1010.6(a)(6) (two court day extension in case of electronic service; although Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b) expressly excludes extensions under Code Civ. Proc. § 1013, it is silent as to Code Civ. Proc. § 1010.6)].

b. Unless otherwise provided by local rule, all papers relating to a law and motion proceeding must be filed in the clerk's office [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1302(a)]. If the court has a law and motion department or division, local court rule may require that the declarations and memorandum be filed with the clerk thereof, rather than with the court clerk, to ensure that the judge has an opportunity to consider it before the hearing.

3. Transmit to the Judicial Council, by e-mail or fax, a copy of the endorsed-filed caption page of the opposition [see Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(j)(1)].

PART IV. PROCEDURAL CHECKLISTS

9-376 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 376.52

§ 376.52 SLAPPback Motion to Strike Checklist

[1] Moving Party's Checklist

[a] Preliminary Determinations

1. Examine complaint or cross-complaint to determine whether it qualifies as a "SLAPPback" under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.18. The complaint or cross-complaint must contain a cause of action for malicious prosecution or abuse of process arising from the filing or maintenance of a prior cause of action that was dismissed pursuant to a special motion to strike [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.18(b)(1)].

2. If action is a "SLAPPback," examine complaint or cross-complaint to determine whether all or any causes of action are subject to a special motion to strike under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16.

3. Determine the date the notice of motion must be filed and the hearing date.

NOTE:

The motion may be filed within 120 days of the service of the complaint, or in the court's discretion, within six months of the service of the complaint or in the court's discretion, at any later time in extraordinary cases due to no fault of the defendant and upon written findings of the court stating the extraordinary case and circumstance [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.18(d)(1)].

4. The clerk of the court must schedule the motion for a hearing not more than 30 days after service of the motion unless the court's docket conditions require a later hearing [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.18(d)(2)].

5. If not already done, consider other responsive pleadings, as appropriate.

NOTE:

An ordinary motion to strike extends the time to answer, but not the time to demur [see Code Civ. Proc. § 435(c), (d)]. Because this special motion to strike can be made up to 120 days after service of the complaint and Code Civ. Proc. § 425.18 makes no mention of extending time to plead, even though it can be argued that such a special motion made within 30 days after service of the complaint extends the time to answer (see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 435(c), 585(f), a defendant who desires to make such a motion within 30 days after service of the complaint should probably also file an answer, or should file the motion and a demurrer, unless plaintiff is willing to stipulate to an extension.

[b] Preparation of Papers

1. Motion and Notice of Motion on Special Motion to Strike SLAPPback.

a. Draft motion and notice of hearing on special motion to strike [FORM: see § 376.62].

b. Sign special motion and notice of hearing on special motion.

2. Prepare Supporting Declaration(s) [FORM: see § 376.61]. If applicable, include in declaration facts demonstrating action is not a SLAPPback. For discussion of SLAPPback actions, see § 376.17.

3. Draft supporting memorandum [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113]. For forms of memoranda, see California Points and Authorities, Ch. 160, Motions to Strike (Matthew Bender), and the General Index to that publication. See also Ch. 417, Points and Authorities , in this publication.

4. Prepare declaration or certificate regarding proof of service [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1013a; see also Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers].

5. Prepare proposed order.

[c] Service and Filing

1. Serve copies of the special motion and notice of hearing and memorandum on the attorney for the party whose pleading is challenged or, if the party has no attorney, on the other party [Code Civ. Proc. § 1005, 1011, 1012, 1015; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 1.6(19), 3.1100, 3.1103(b)].

a. Service is usually made in person or by mail [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1011, 1012].

b. Service in person must be completed at least 16 court days before the selected hearing date [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b)].
(1) When service is by mail, this 16-day period for completing service before the hearing date is extended by five calendar days if the place of mailing and the place of address are within California, by 10 calendar days if either of these places is outsideCalifornia but within the United States, or by 20 calendar days if either of these places is outside the United States [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b)].

(2) When service is by fax transmission, express mail, or another form of overnight delivery, this 16-day period is extended by two calendar days [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b)]. An extension period of two court days may apply in the case of electronic service [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1010.6(a)(6); for discussion, see Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers, § 518.41[8]].

2. File the originals of the special motion and notice of hearing on the special motion to strike and accompanying papers with the clerk of the court in which the action is pending [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1005(b), 1013a].

NOTE:

Unless otherwise ordered or specifically provided by law, copies of all papers opposing a motion must be served at least nine court days before the hearing. All papers opposing a motion must be served by personal delivery, facsimile transmission, express mail, or other means consistent with the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1010, 1011, 1012, and 1013, and reasonably calculated to ensure delivery to the other party or parties not later than the close of the next business day after the time the opposing papers are filed [Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b), (c); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1300; cf. Code Civ. Proc. § 1010.6(a)(6) two court day extension in case of electronic service; although Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b) expressly excludes extensions under Code Civ. Proc. § 1013, it is silent as to Code Civ. Proc. § 1010.6).].

3. Transmit to the Judicial Council, by e-mail or fax, a copy of the endorsed-filed caption page of the opposition [see Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(j)(1)].

1. File response if appropriate.

a. Examine declarations submitted by plaintiff to establish a probability that plaintiff would prevail on the claim to determine if any evidentiary objections exist to the declarations.

b. If evidentiary objections exist, consider preparing written objections to the evidence to be submitted to the court in a separate document, reply memorandum or both, similar to the manner for objecting to evidence in papers submitted on a summary judgment motion [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1352 (party desiring to object in summary judgment motion must either submit written objections pursuant to Rule 3.1354, or arrange for court reporter to be present at hearing); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1354 (written objections to evidence in support of motion for summary judgment must be (a) served and filed separately from the other papers in opposition to the motion; (b) identify the name of the document in which the specific material objected to is located; (c) state the exhibit, title, page, and line number of the material objected to; (d) quote or setforth the objectionable statement or material; (e) state the grounds for each objection to that statement or material; and (f) be served and filed at the same time as the objecting party's opposition papers are served and filed)].

c. Examine the memorandum, if any, filed in response to the special motion to strike.

d. Counsel may wish to file a reply memorandum, with proof of service, in opposition to plaintiff's opposing memorandum. Local practice may vary, but usually this reply memorandum should be filed directly with the clerk of the law and motion department or division, rather than in the office of the court clerk, so that the court will have sufficient time to consider the memorandum prior to the hearing on the motion. Counsel should check local court rules and practices to determine if there are any local filing or other requirements concerning the reply memorandum. For example, local court rules may impose limitations on when and with whom a reply memorandum may be filed.

2. Serve and file any response papers.

All reply papers must be filed and a copy served at least five court days before the time appointed for the hearing. All reply papers must be served by personal delivery, facsimile transmission, express mail, or other means consistent with the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1010, 1011, 1012, and 1013, and reasonably calculated to ensure delivery to the other party or parties not later than the close of the next business day after the time the reply papers are filed [Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b), (c); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1300(a); cf. Code Civ. Proc. § 1010.6(a)(6) (two court day extension in case of electronic service; although Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b) expressly excludes extensions under Code Civ. Proc. § 1013, it is silent as to Code Civ. Proc. § 1010.6)]. Unless otherwise provided by local court rule, all papers relating to a law and motion proceeding must be filed in the clerk's office [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1302(a)].

[2] Opposing Party's Checklist

1. On receipt of the special motion and notice of hearing on the special motion to strike, supporting declaration(s) and supporting memorandum, ascertain if it was timely served and if the motion and notice is in any way defective.

2. Determine whether facts essential to justify opposition to the motion exist, but cannot be presented due to a lack of discovery. If so, consider filing an ex parte application for a continuance to obtain necessary discovery.

3. Read the supporting papers to determine if the defendant has met defendant's initial burden of making a prima facie showing that the plaintiff's cause(s) of action arose from defendant's acts in furtherance of defendant's rights of petition or free speech under the United States or California Constitution in connection with a public issue. For discussion of defendant's required showing, see § 376.20, above. Verify the citations to determine whether they support the points or statements for which they are cited. For discussion of making evidentiary objections, see discussion under § 376.50[4].

NOTE:

Points may be inaccurately stated or not supported by the authorities cited. Moreover, a case cited may superficially support the point in that it makes an identical or similar statement, but may actually hold that the statement is not applicable to the facts of that case or that the case presents an exception to the rule. In that situation, the case is usually not authority for the statement made but, rather, an authority in opposition to it.

4. If the motion is well taken, determine the advisability of not opposing it or of stipulating that the motion be granted with leave to amend the pleading.

[2] Preparation of Papers

1. Prepare opposing declarations to establish a probability that plaintiff will prevail on the claim supported by admissible evidence. For prima facie showing that the plaintiff must make to prevail concerning a special motion to strike under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 and evidentiary rules, see discussion under § 376.20[3][a].

2. If moving party claims action is not a SLAPPback, include in declaration facts demonstrating action is a SLAPPback. For discussion of SLAPPback actions, see § 376.17.

3. Prepare an opposing memorandum. For forms of memoranda, see California Points and Authorities, Ch. 160, Motions to Strike (Matthew Bender), and the General Index to that publication. See also Ch. 417, Points and Authorities , in this publication.

4. Prepare the certificate, affidavit, or declaration, as the case may be, of service [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1013(b), 1013a, 2009, 2015.5].

5. If it appears that facts essential to justify opposition to the motion exist, but cannot then be reasonably presented, file an ex parte application for a continuance to obtain necessary discovery.

[3] Service and Filing

1. Serve copies of the opposing declarations and memorandum on the moving party's attorney or, if none, on the moving party [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1005(b), 1011, 1012, 1015; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 1.6(19), 3.1100, 3.1103].

NOTE:

Unless otherwise ordered or specifically provided by law, copies of all papers opposing a motion must be served at least nine court days before the hearing. All papers opposing a motion must be served by personal delivery, facsimile transmission, express mail, or other means consistent with the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1010, 1011, 1012, and 1013, and reasonably calculated to ensure delivery to the other party or parties not later than the close of the next business day after the time the opposing papers are filed [Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b), (c); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1300; cf. Code Civ. Proc. § 1010.6(a)(6) (two court day extension in case of electronic service; although Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b) expressly excludes extensions under Code Civ. Proc. § 1013, it is silent as to Code Civ. Proc. § 1010.6)].

2. File the original opposing papers with the clerk of the court in which the action is pending. The papers may be delivered in person or by mail.

a. Unless otherwise ordered or specifically provided by law, all papers opposing a motion must be filed at least nine court days before the time appointed for the hearing [Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1300; cf. Code Civ. Proc. § 1010.6(a)(6) (two court day extension in case of electronic service; although Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b) expressly excludes extensions under Code Civ. Proc. § 1013, it is silent as to Code Civ. Proc. § 1010.6)].

b. Unless otherwise provided by local rule, all papers relating to a law and motion proceeding must be filed in the clerk's office [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1302(a)]. If the court has a law and motion department or division, local court rule may require that the declarations and memorandum be filed with the clerk thereof, rather than with the court clerk, to ensure that the judge has an opportunity to consider it before the hearing.

3. Transmit to the Judicial Council, by e-mail or fax, a copy of the endorsed-filed caption page of the opposition [see Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(j)(1)].

The form of motion and notice of hearing on a special motion to strike in [1], above, is for use by a defendant seeking to have a SLAPP suit (that is, strategic lawsuit against public participation) stricken. A special motion to strike under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 is available to a defendant when an alleged cause of action against the defendant arises from an act of the defendant in furtherance of the defendant's right of petition or free speech under the United States or California Constitution in connection with a public issue [see Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(b), (h)]. For the purpose of the statute, act in furtherance of a person's right of petition or free speech under the United States or California Constitution in connection with a public issue is defined in Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(e).

With appropriate modifications, this form may also be used by a cross-defendant or respondent seeking to have a SLAPP suit stricken [see Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(h)].

For discussion of SLAPP suits (Strategic Lawsuit Against Public Participation), see § 376.12.

An ordinary motion to strike extends the time to answer, but not the time to demur [see Code Civ. Proc. § 435(c), (d)]. Because this special motion to strike can be made up to 60 days after service of the complaint and Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 makes no mention of extending time to plead, although discovery is stayed [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(f), (g)], even though it can be argued that such a special motion made within 30 days after service of the complaint extends the time to answer [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 435(c), 585(f)], a defendant who desires to make such a motion within 30 days after service of the complaint should probably also file an answer, or should file the motion and a demurrer, unless plaintiff is willing to stipulate to an extension.

[3] Time for Filing and Hearing Motion

The special motion to strike may be filed within 60 days of the service of the complaint or, in the court's discretion, at any later time on terms it deems proper [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(f)].

The clerk of the court must schedule the motion for a hearing not more than 30 days after service of the motion unless the docket conditions of the court require a later hearing [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(f)].

[4] Accompanying Papers

A supporting memorandum must be filed and a copy served with this notice of motion [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(a); see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1005(b), 1010]. For discussion and forms, see Ch. 417, Points and Authorities .

[5] Notification to Judicial Council

When a party files a special motion to strike under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16, the party must promptly transmit a copy of the endorsed-filed caption page of the motion to the Judicial Council by e-mail or fax [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(j)(1)]. For further discussion, see § 376.18[2].

[6] Required Prima Facie Showing by Defendant

The defendant pursuing an anti-SLAPP motion must make an initial prima facie showing that plaintiff's suit arose from an act in furtherance of defendant's right of petition or free speech. A defendant meets this burden by demonstrating that the act underlying the plaintiff's cause fits one of the categories spelled out in Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(e) [Braun v. Chronicle Publishing Co. (1997) 52 Cal. App. 4th 1036, 1042-1043, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 58] . For further discussion of defendant's required showing, see § 376.20.

[7] Attorney's Fees

In any action subject to Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(b), a prevailing defendant is entitled to recover his or her attorney's fees and costs. If the court finds that the motion to strike is frivolous or is solely intended to cause unnecessary delay, the court must award costs and reasonable attorney's fees to a plaintiff prevailing on the motion, pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 128.5 [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(c)]. For further discussion of attorney fees, see § 376.22.

[8] Stay of Discovery While Motion Is Pending

All discovery proceedings in the action are stayed on the filing of a notice of motion made pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16. The stay of discovery remains in effect until notice of entry of the order ruling on the motion. The court, on noticed motion and for good cause shown, may, however, order that specified discovery be conducteddespite this requirement [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(g)]. For further discussion of discovery, see § 376.19.

[2] Use of Form

The form of motion and notice of hearing on a special motion to strike in [1], above, is for use by a defendant seeking to have a SLAPPback suit stricken (that is, strategic litigation against public participation, containing a cause of action for malicious prosecution or abuse of process, arising from the filing or maintenance of a prior cause of action dismissed pursuant to the anti-SLAPP statute). A special motion to strike under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 is available to a defendant when an alleged cause of action against the defendant arises from an act of the defendant in furtherance of the defendant's right of petition or free speech under the United States or California Constitution in connection with a public issue [see Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(b), (h)]. SLAPPback suits are defined in Code Civ. Proc. § 425.18(b)(1).

An ordinary motion to strike extends the time to answer, but not the time to demur [see Code Civ. Proc. § 435(c), (d)]. Because this special motion to strike can be made up to 120 days after service of the complaint and Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 makes no mention of extending time to plead, even though it can be argued that such a special motion made within 30 days after service of the complaint extends the time to answer [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 435(c), 585(f)], a defendant who desires to make such a motion within 30 days after service of the complaint should probably also file an answer, or should file the motion and a demurrer, unless plaintiff is willing to stipulate to an extension.

[3] Time for Filing and Hearing Motion

A motion to strike a SLAPPback can be made at any time within 120 days of the service of the complaint. At the court's discretion, the motion may be made within six months of the service of the complaint or, in extraordinary cases due to no fault of the defendant, the motion may be made at any later time at the court's discretion [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.18(d)(1)].

The clerk of the court must schedule the motion for a hearing not more than 30 days after service of the motion unless the docket conditions of the court require a later hearing [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.18(d)(2)].

[4] Accompanying Papers

A supporting memorandum must be filed and a copy served with this notice of motion [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(a); see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1005(b), 1010]. For discussion and forms, see Ch. 417, Points and Authorities .

[5] Attorney's Fees

The attorney's fees provision of Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(c) does not apply to a special motion to strike a SLAPPback, and therefore a prevailing defendant is not entitled to attorney's fees [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.18(c)]. However, if the court finds that a special motion to strike a SLAPPback is frivolous or solely intended to cause unnecessary delay, the court shall award costs and reasonable attorney's fees to a prevailing plaintiff [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.18(f).

[6] No Stay of Discovery in SLAPPback Action

The discovery stay imposed by the filing of an anti-SLAPP motion to strike does not apply to anti-SLAPPback motions to strike [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.18(c)]. Additionally, a party opposing a special motion to strike a SLAPPback may file an ex parte application for a continuance to obtain necessary discovery if it appears that facts essential to justify opposition to the motion may exist, but cannot then be presented [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.18(e)].

This chapter discusses methods of changing the names of individuals, corporations, and unincorporated associations. The chapter contains the following forms relating to changing the names of individuals:

- Mandatory Judicial Council forms of petitions for change of name, and for change of name combined with gender change [§§ 377.70, 377.70A].

- Mandatory Judicial Council forms of attachment to the petition, for providing information about the person whose name is to be changed [§ 377.71] and information about the petitioner when he or she is the guardian of the person whose name is to be changed [§ 377.72].

- An optional Judicial Council form for a physician's declaration documenting the petitioner's gender change, for use with a petition for a change of name or a petition for the issuance of a new birth certificate [§ 377.71A].

- Mandatory Judicial Council forms of orders to show cause why a change of name should not be granted [§§ 377.73, 377.73A].

- A mandatory Judicial Council form of proof of service of the order to show cause [§ 377.74].

- Mandatory Judicial Council forms of decrees changing a person's name [§§ 377.75, 377.75A, 377.76].

- Optional Judicial Council forms for obtaining a change of gender and the issuance of a new birth certificate apart from a name-change proceeding [§§ 377.77-377.79].

- Forms for use in obtaining a confidential name change under the "Safe at Home" address confidentiality program for victims of domestic violence, sexual assault, and stalking [§§ 377.80-377.84].

Chapter 377 NAME, CHANGE OF
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

33-377 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 377.10

§ 377.10 Governing Law

The statutory procedure for changing the name of an individual is generally governed by Code Civ. Proc. § 1275 et seq., with certain exceptions applying to applications to change a name under the Uniform Parentage Act (Fam. Code § 7600 et seq.) [see Fam. Code § 7638, and discussion under § 377.16].

An individual also has a common law right to change his or her name without legal proceedings, and this right has not been abrogated beyond certain statutory exceptions that apply to state prisoners, persons under the jurisdiction of the Department of Corrections, and persons required to register as sex offenders [Code Civ. Proc. § 1279.5; see § 377.12[2]]. The statutory procedure exists merely to make the change a matter of public record [In re Ross (1937) 8 Cal. 2d 608, 609, 67 P.2d 94] .

Changes of name and the issuance of new birth certificates for individuals born in California who have undergone a sex change are governed by Health & Safety Code § 103425 et seq.

Changes of name as part of naturalization proceedings are governed by 8 U.S.C. §§ 1447(f) and 1454(c) and Gov. Code § 69847.

The effect of name changes on elections is governed by Elec. Code §§ 2115, 13104, 14218.

Penal provisions for the misuse of another's name or false personation include Penal Code §§ 528, 529, 529.5, 529a, and 530.

Changes in articles of incorporation, including corporate name changes, are governed by Corp. Code §§ 900-911. Restrictions on corporate names and provisions for injunction against the use of improper names by corporations are set forth in Corp. Code §§ 201(a), (b) and 202(a). Limited partnerships' name changes are governed by Corp. Code §§ 15622 (eff. until January 1, 2010), 15902.02 (eff. January 1, 2008). Unincorporated associations' name changes are governed by Corp. Code § 18200(d).

The Name Equality Act of 2007 [see 2007 Stats., ch. 567] allows persons entering into a marriage or a domestic partnership to change their middle or last names by making an appropriate election in the marriage license application or Declaration of Domestic Partnership form, without the need to petition the superior court for a change of name [Fam. Code §§ 298.6, 306.5]. For further discussion, see § 377.31.

§ 377.11 Definitions

An individual's name is the designation by which he or she is known, whether or not he or she was given another name at birth [People v. Leong Quong (1882) 60 Cal. 107, 107-108] . Common law defines a name as consisting of one given name and one surname; middle names or initials are immaterial in civil or criminal proceedings [People v. Smith (1894) 103 Cal. 563, 567, 37 P. 516] .

§ 377.12 Common Law Right

[1] No Statutory Abrogation in General

The statutory procedures for changing an individual's name (see § 377.14) generally do not abrogate the preexisting common law right of a person to change his or her name [Code Civ. Proc. § 1279.5(a); see Fam. Code § 2082; In re McGehee (1945) 147 Cal. App. 2d 25, 26, 304 P.2d 167 ; see also 83 Ops. Cal. Att'y Gen. 136 (2000) (common law change of name is valid in California)]. There are, however, several statutory exceptions set out in Code Civ. Proc. § 1279.5(b)-(e), as discussed in [2], below [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1279.5(a)].

Under common law rules, any person is allowed to change his or her name at any time, without legal proceedings [In re Ross (1937) 8 Cal. 2d 608, 609, 67 P.2d 94 ; In re Marriage of Banks (1974) 42 Cal. App. 3d 631, 637, 117 Cal. Rptr. 37] . Furthermore, without abandoning his or her real name, a person is permitted to adopt a different name or signature with which to transact business, execute contracts, and sue or be sued [California Packing Corp. v. Kandarian (1923) 62 Cal. App. 729, 731, 217 P. 805] .

A person's common law right to choose a name is broad. Essentially, a person is "free to call himself what he will" [see Lee v. Superior Court (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 510, 519, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 763 (quoting In re Ritchie (1984) 159 Cal. App. 3d 1070, 1074, 206 Cal. Rptr. 239)]. The state is not required to give judicial recognition, however, to a name that has been universally recognized as offensive [see Lee v. Superior Court (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 510, 514, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 763 ; see also § 377.17[2]].

[2] Statutory Exceptions for State Prisoners, Parolees, Probationers, and Sex Offenders

Code Civ. Proc. § 1279.5(a) provides that the common law right of a person to change his or her name is not to be construed as abrogated, except as provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 1279.5(b), (c), (d), or (e) [see also [1], above]. These exceptions are as follows:

- No person imprisoned in state prison and under the jurisdiction of the Director of Corrections is allowed to file an application for change of name under Code Civ. Proc. § 1276, except as permitted by the Director at his or her discretion [Code Civ. Proc. § 1279.5(b)].

- A court is required to deny an application for a name change under Code Civ. Proc. § 1276 made a person under the jurisdiction of the Department of Corrections, absent the prior written approval of that person's parole agent or probation officer. The agent or officer, before granting such approval, must determine that the name change will not pose a security risk to the community [Code Civ. Proc. § 1279.5(c)].

- A court is required to deny an application for a name change under Code Civ. Proc. § 1276 made a person who is required to register as a sex offender under the Sex Offender Registration Act [Penal Code § 290 et seq.], unless the court determines that it is in the best interest of justice to grant the application and that doing so will not adversely affect public safety. If an application for a name change is granted for an individual required to register as a sex offender, that individual must, within five working days, notify the chief of police of the city in which he or she is domiciled, or the sheriff of the county if he or she is domiciled in an unincorporated area, and additionally, with the chief of police of a campus of a University of California or California State University if he or she is domiciled on the campus or in any of its facilities [Code Civ. Proc. § 1279.5(d)].

In ruling on an application for name change under Code Civ. Proc. § 1276, the court is required to determine whether the applicant is under the jurisdiction of the Department of Corrections or is required to register as a sex offender under the Sex Offender Registration Act [Penal Code § 290 et seq.], either by using the California Law Enforcement Telecommunications System (CLETS) and Criminal Justice Information System (CJIS), or, if the court is not equipped with these systems, by having the court clerk contact an appropriate local law enforcement agency [Code Civ. Proc. § 1279.5(e)].

Additionally, each applicant for a name change is required to declare under penalty of perjury that he or she is not under the jurisdiction of the Department of Corrections and is not required to register as a sex offender [Code Civ. Proc. § 1279.5(e)]. For a declaration under Code Civ. Proc. § 1279.5(e), see § 377.70[1], [5].

The statutory exceptions set out in Code Civ. Proc. § 1279.5(b), (c), (d), and (e) impose restrictions only on the statutory proceeding for a name change under Code Civ. Proc. § 1276, and do not expressly mention any restriction or abrogation of common law rights. A reasonable construction of these provisions, however, necessarily implies that common law rights to a name change are in fact abrogated with respect to persons subject to Code Civ. Proc. § 1279.5(b), (c), or (d), and that such persons may effect a name change, if at all, only by proceeding under Code Civ. Proc. § 1276 and satisfying the applicable restrictions under Code Civ. Proc. § 1279.5(b)-(e).

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

33-377 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 377.13

§ 377.13 Purpose of Statutory Procedure

The statutory procedure to change an individual's name, set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 1275 et seq., was enacted in affirmation of the common law right, for the purpose of establishing the change as a matter of record [In re Ross (1937) 8 Cal. 2d 608, 609, 67 P.2d 94 ; In re Marriage of Banks (1974) 42 Cal. App. 3d 631, 637,117 Cal. Rptr. 37] . Accordingly, the court's authority is limited to ordering the name change or denying or dismissingthe application; the court may not permanently enjoin the use of the proposed name [In re Weingand (1964) 231 Cal. App. 2d 289, 294, 41 Cal. Rptr. 778] . Courts should encourage the filing of petitions for change of name, because the changes then become a matter of public record [In re Useldinger (1939) 35 Cal. App. 2d 723, 727, 96 P.2d 958] .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

33-377 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 377.14

§ 377.14 Statutory Procedure

[1] Jurisdiction and Venue of Petition to Change Name

An application for a change of name generally must be made by a petition [Code Civ. Proc. § 1276(a)(1); see § 377.70]. Alternatively, it may be made in an action under the Uniform Parentage Act under Fam. Code § 7638 [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1276(a)(2) and discussion in § 377.16[1]].

The statutory procedure for change of name by petition is a special proceeding [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 22, 23], the jurisdiction for which is in the superior court [Code Civ. Proc. § 1275; see also Cal. Const., art. VI, § 10].

A petitioner seeking a change of name is required to initiate the proceeding in the county of residence of the person whose name is to be changed [Code Civ. Proc. § 1276(a); but see Code Civ. Proc. § 1276(e) Code Civ. Proc. § 1276(c), discussed in § 377.15[2][e] (exception when petitioner is guardian of minor appointed by probate or juvenile court)].

[2] Contents of Petition

The petition or pleading to change the name of an adult must contain the following [Code Civ. Proc. § 1276(a)]:

- Place of birth.
- Residence.
- Present name.
- Proposed name.
- Reason for change.

When the petitioner is a participant in the address confidentiality program created under Gov. Code § 6205, et seq., and the petition alleges that the reason for the petition is to avoid domestic violence (as defined in Fam. Code § 6211) or stalking (as defined in Penal Code § 646.9), or that the petitioner is (or is filing on behalf of) a victim of sexual assault (as defined in Evid. Code § 1036.2), the petition must indicate that the proposed name is confidential and will be on file with the Secretary of State under the provisions of the address confidentiality program [Code Civ. Proc. § 1277(b)]. This requirement is in lieu of reciting the proposed name in the petition [Code Civ. Proc. § 1277(b)]. For any petition subject to this requirement, the current legal name of the petitioner must be kept confidential by the court and must not be published or posted in the court's calendars, indexes, or register of actions [see Gov. Code § 69840 et seq.], or by any means or in any public forum, including a hard copy or an electronic copy, or any other type of public media or display [Code Civ. Proc. § 1277(b)(3)]. The petitioner may also request that the court file the petition and any other papers associated with the proceeding under seal. The court may consider the request at the same time as the petition for name change, and may grant the request in any case in which the court finds that all of the following factors apply [Code Civ. Proc. § 1277(b)(4)]:

- There exists an overriding interest that overcomes the right of public access to the record.
- The overriding interest supports sealing the record.
- A substantial probability exists that the overriding interest will be prejudiced if the record is not sealed.
- The proposed order to seal the records is narrowly tailored.
- No less restrictive means exist to achieve the overriding interest.

For forms for use in seeking a confidential name change under the address confidentiality program, see §§ 377.80 -377.84.

A name-change petition generally must be signed by the person whose name is to be changed [Code Civ. Proc. § 1276(a); for discussion of exceptions to this requirement applicable when the person is a minor, see § 377.15[2][b]].

For a mandatory Judicial Council form of petition, see § 377.70. For a mandatory form of attachment, to provide the information listed above that is required under Code Civ. Proc. § 1276(a), see § 377.71.

For discussion of additional or alternate contents of a petition to change a minor's name, see § 377.15[2].

[3] Order to Show Cause

When the petition is filed, the court makes an order to show cause why the application should not be granted. The order is to be directed to all persons interested in the matter [Code Civ. Proc. § 1277(a)].

Generally, the order is required to recite the following [Code Civ. Proc. § 1277(a)]:

- The filing of the petition.
- The name of the person filing the petition.
- The name proposed.

The order must direct all persons interested in the matter to make known any objections they have to the granting of the petition by filing a written objection, including the reasons for the objection, at least two court days before the matter is scheduled to be heard, and by appearing at the hearing to show cause why the petition should not be granted. The order must state that, if no written objection is timely filed, the court may grant the petition without a hearing [Code Civ. Proc. § 1277(a)].

When the petitioner is a participant in the address confidentiality program, and the petition alleges that the reason for the petition is to avoid domestic violence (as defined in Fam. Code § 6211) or stalking (as defined in Penal Code § 646.9), or that the petitioner is (or is filing on behalf of) a victim of sexual assault (as defined in Evid. Code § 1036.2), the order of the court must indicate that the proposed name is confidential and will be on file with the Secretary of State under the provisions of the address confidentiality program [Code Civ. Proc. § 1277(b)]. This requirement is in lieu of reciting the proposed name in the order to show cause, and the order to show cause is not required to be published under Code Civ. Proc. § 1277(a) [Code Civ. Proc. § 1277(b); see [4], below]. In addition, the current legal name of the petitioner must be kept confidential by the court and must not be published or posted in the court's calendars, indexes, or register of actions [see Gov. Code § 69840 et seq.], or byany means or in any public forum, including a hard copy or an electronic copy, or any other type of public media or display [Code Civ. Proc. § 1277(b)(3)].

The order to show cause is required to specify a date for hearing the matter no less than six nor more than 12 weeks from the time the order is made [Code Civ. Proc. § 1277(a)].

For mandatory Judicial Council forms of orders to show cause, see §§ 377.73 and 377.73A.

[4] Publication

A copy of the order to show cause must be published in accordance with Gov. Code § 6064 in a newspaper of general circulation that is designated in the order, if a newspaper is printed in the county in which the court is located. If no newspaper is printed in the county, a copy of the order must be posted by the clerk of the court in three of the most public places in that county [Code Civ. Proc. § 1277(a)].

Four weekly publications of the order are sufficient. If publication is in a daily newspaper, publication once a week for four successive weeks is sufficient [Code Civ. Proc. § 1277(a)].

Proof of this publication or posting must be made to the satifaction of the court at the time of the hearing on the petition [Code Civ. Proc. § 1277(a)].

If the proceeding for change of name is for a witness participating in the state Witness Relocation and Assistance Program (see Penal Code § 14020 et seq.), and the name change has been approved under that program, the action is exempt from the publication requirement [Code Civ. Proc. § 1277(c)]. Also, if the petitioner is a participant in the address confidentiality program, and the petition alleges that the reason for the petition is to avoid domestic violence (as defined in Fam. Code § 6211) or stalking (as defined in Penal Code § 646.9), or that the petitioner is (or is filing on behalf of) a victim of sexual assault (as defined in Evid. Code § 1036.2), the action is exempt from the publication requirement [Code Civ. Proc. § 1277(b)]. In such a case, the current legal name of the petitioner must also be kept confidential by the court and must not be published or posted in the court's calendars, indexes, or register of actions [see Gov. Code § 69840 et seq.], or by any means or in any public forum, including a hard copy or an electronic copy, or any other type of public media or display [Code Civ. Proc. § 1277(b)(3)]. The petitioner may also request that the court file the petition and any other papers associated with the proceeding under seal [Code Civ. Proc. § 1277(b)(4); see [2], above].

[5] Hearing and Order

The court will hear the application at the time designated by the court, only if objections are filed by a person who, in those objections, shows good reason for denying the change [Code Civ. Proc. § 1278(a)]. If no objection is filed at least two court days before the date set for hearing, the court may, without hearing, enter the order that the change of name is granted [Code Civ. Proc. § 1278(a)]. For further discussion of objections, see § 377.17.

At the hearing, the court may examine, on oath, any petitioners, remonstrants, or others, regarding the application, and may either order the change or dismiss the application, according to what may seem right and proper [Code Civ. Proc. § 1278(a)].

At the time of hearing proof of proper publication or posting of the order to show cause must also be made to the satisfaction of the court [Code Civ. Proc. § 1277(a); see [4], above].

When the petitioner is a participant in the address confidentiality program and the petition alleges that the reason for the petition is to avoid domestic violence (as defined in Fam. Code § 6211) or stalking (as defined in Penal Code § 646.9), or that the petitioner is (or is filing on behalf of) a victim of sexual assault (as defined in Evid. Code § 1036.2), the court may not disclose the proposed name unless the court finds by clear and convincing evidence that the allegations of domestic violence or stalking (or presumably--although not mentioned in Code Civ. Proc. § 1278(b)--the allegations of sexual assault) in the petition are false [Code Civ. Proc. § 1278(b); see also Code Civ. Proc. § 1277(b) and discussion in [2] and [3], above].

For discussion of hearing requirements applicable under Code Civ. Proc. § 1278(c), when the petition is brought as part of an action under the Uniform Parentage Act (Fam. Code § 7600 et seq.), see § 377.16[4]. For discussion of additional findings required under Code Civ. Proc. § 1278(d) before granting a petition filed on behalf of a minor ward, see § 377.15[6].

[6] Amendment of Birth Record

When a person born in California has his or her name changed by a court order, an application including an affidavit of that fact may be filed with the office of the State Registrar on the form provided for that purpose. The court order may be from a court in California, another state, the District of Columbia, or any territory of the United States. A certified copy of the court order and the fee required by Health & Safety Code § 103720 must accompany the application and affidavit [Health & Safety Code § 103400].

If the State Registrar accepts the amendment, it is filed and the fact of the amendment is noted on the otherwise unaltered original birth certificate [Health & Safety Code § 103405].

The State Registrar will furnish a certified copy of the amended record of birth to the registrant without any cost beyond the required filing fee [Health & Safety Code § 103410].

An application for amendment of a birth record must be submitted on an original form VS 23, printed on special bond paper, provided by the California Office of Vital Records; photocopies will not be accepted. The form may be obtained from the county recorder's office or county health department in any California county, and it may be ordered directly from the Office of Vital Records (916/445-2684 or <www.dhs.ca.gov/hisp/chs/ovr/ovrformsreq.asp>).

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

33-377 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 377.15

§ 377.15 Minors

[1] Common Law Right of Parent to Change Name on Minor's Behalf

A minor has no common law right to change his or her name, but a parent may apply for a change of name on the minor's behalf [In re Trower (1968) 260 Cal. App. 2d 75, 77, 66 Cal. Rptr. 873] .

[2] Petition

[a] Special Petition Requirements Apply

If a name change is sought on behalf of a minor, the requirements for a petition for change of name is the same as that discussed generally in*§ 377.14[2]*, except for the additional or different requirements discussed in [b]-[e], below [see also discussion in [3]-[6], below.]

[b] Who May Sign Petition on Behalf of Minor

When the person whose name is to be changed is under 18 years of age, the petition for change of name must be signed by one of the following [Code Civ. Proc. § 1276(a)]:

- One of the minor's parents.
- By any guardian of the person.
- If both parents are dead and there is no guardian of the person, by some near relative or friend of the person.

[c] Information Relating to Parents, Relatives, or Guardian,

If the petition is signed by only one parent, and the other parent is living, the petition must specify the other parent's address, if known [Code Civ. Proc. § 1276(b)(1)].

If the petition is signed by a guardian, the petition must specify the following:

- The name and address, if known, of the parent or parents, if living. If the addresses of both parents are unknown or if both parents are deceased, the name and address of the grandparents [Code Civ. Proc. § 1276(c); but see Code Civ. Proc. § 1276(d), discussed in [d], below].

- Relevant information regarding the guardianship [Code Civ. Proc. § 1276(f)].

- Relevant information regarding the likelihood that the child will remain under the guardian's care until the child reaches the age of majority [Code Civ. Proc. § 1276(f)].

- Relevant information suggesting that the child will not likely be returned to the custody of his or her parents [Code Civ. Proc. § 1276(f)].

Information concerning to the duration of the guardian's care and likelihood that the child will not return to his or her parents' custody is relevant to findings that are a prerequisite to considering a petition for name change filed by the guardian of a minor ward [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1278(f) and discussion in [6], below]. For a mandatory Judicial Council form of declaration to be completed by the guardian and attachment to a petition for name change, see § 377.72.

If the petition is not signed by either parent, the petition must name, so far as is known to the person proposing the name change, the parents and their place of residence if living, or, if neither parent is living, near relatives and their place of residence [Code Civ. Proc. § 1276(a); but see Code Civ. Proc. § 1276(d), discussed in [d], below].

[d] Minor Relinquished To Adoption Agency

If the minor is 12 years of age or over, has been relinquished to an adoption agency by his or her parents, and has not been legally adopted, the petition must be signed by the minor and the adoption agency. In that case, the names and addresses of near relatives of the relinquished minor are not to be included in the petition unless they are known to the minor [Code Civ. Proc. § 1276(d)].

[e] Venue When Petitioner Is Guardian Appointed by Juvenile or Probate Court

All applications for the change of the name of a minor submitted by a guardian appointed by the juvenile court or the probate court must be made in the appointing court [Code Civ. Proc. § 1276(e)].

[3] Notice to Nonpetitioning Parent

[a] When Petition Is Filed by Other Parent

If the nonpetitioning parent is living and does not join in consenting to the petition, the petitioning parent must cause the nonpetitioning parent to be served notice of the time and place of the hearing or a copy of the order to show cause, not less than 30 days prior to the hearing, pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 413.10, 414.10, 415.10, or 415.40 (general provisions governing service of persons within the state and outside the state) [Code Civ. Proc. § 1277(a)]. For discussion and forms relating to such service, see Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers . For a mandatory Judicial Council form of proof of such service, see § 377.74.

If notice of the hearing cannot reasonably be accomplished pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 415.10 or 415.40, the court may order that notice be given in a manner that the court determines is reasonably calculated to give actual notice to the nonconsenting parent. In that case, if the court determines that notice bypublication is reasonably calculated to give actual notice to the nonconsenting parent, the court may determine that publication of the order to show cause is sufficient notice to the nonconsenting parent [Code Civ. Proc. § 1277(a)].

If the nonpetitioning parent does not receive actual notice of the hearing, he or she may, as an interested party, make a motion to the court to set aside the decree changing the minor's name [see In re Malloy (1960) 185 Cal. App. 2d 135, 137, 8 Cal. Rptr. 143] .

The nonpetitioning parent may also move to set aside the decree if he or she was in military service at the time of the decree, or was discharged less than 60 days before the date of the decree, and was materially affected in defending against the petition by reason of his or her military service [see In re Larson (1947) 81 Cal. App. 2d 258, 262-263, 183 P.2d 688 (applying former 50 U.S.C. App. § 520, now see 50 U.S.C. App. § 521; see also § 377.20[2]).

[b] When Petition Is Filed by Guardian

When a guardian files a petition to change the name of his or her minor ward under Code Civ. Proc. § 1276, the guardian must provide notice of the hearing to any living parent of the minor by personal service at least 30 days prior to the hearing [Code Civ. Proc. § 1277(e)(1)].

If either or both parents are deceased or cannot be located, and the child's grandparents are living, the guardian must cause to be served on the child's grandparents a notice of the time and place of the hearing, or a copy of the order to show cause. The service must be made not less than 30 days prior to the hearing and must be made pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 413.10, 414.10, 415.10, or 415.40 [Code Civ. Proc. § 1277(e)(2)].

For discussion and forms relating to such service, see Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers . For a mandatory Judicial Council form of proof of such service, see § 377.74.

[4] Petition by Nonrelative

A petitioner who is unrelated to the minor has no right to change the minor's name unless the name is being used for a fraudulent purpose, in a way detrimental to the petitioner's interests [Donald J. v. Evna M. (1978) 81 Cal. App. 3d 929, 936, 147 Cal. Rptr. 15] .

[5] Parental Disputes

A parent has some legal rights to control a minor's use of a surname, but a parent's sex or marital status does not create any primary right or protectible interest in the minor's surname [Donald J. v. Evna M. (1978) 81 Cal. App. 3d 929, 936, 937, 147 Cal. Rptr. 15] . In resolving parental disputes over a child's surname, the court's sole consideration is the child's best interest, and a father does not have any primary right to have a child bear his name [In re Marriage of Schiffman (1980) 28 Cal. 3d 640, 645, 647, 169 Cal. Rptr. 918, 620 P.2d 579] .

[6] Required Findings by Court When Application Filed by Guardian

When the application for a change of name is filed by a guardian on behalf of a minor ward, the court must first find both of the following [Code Civ. Proc. § 1278[d]]:

- The ward is likely to remain in the guardian's care until the age of majority.
- The ward is not likely to be returned to the custody of his or her parents.

Only on making these findings is the court required to consider the petition for name change. It may further grant the petition only if it finds that the proposed name change is in the best interest of the child [Code Civ. Proc. § 1278(d)].

§ 377.16 Action Under Uniform Parentage Act

[1] Applicable Procedure

An application to change the name of a minor or adult child for whom a parent and child relationship is established by a judgment or order under the Uniform Parentage Act (Fam. Code § 7600 et seq.) may be included with a petition filed under the Uniform Parentage Act [Fam. Code § 7638; see also Code Civ. Proc. 1276(a)(2) and discussion in § 377.14[1]]. Otherwise, the procedure for such a change of name is required to conform to the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 1275 et seq., governing change of names generally [Fam. Code § 7638; for discussion of those procedures, see § 377.14]. Within Code Civ. Proc. § 1275 et seq., Sections 1277 and 1278 provide some particular rules that apply to applications for a change of name under the Uniform Parentage Act. These rules are discussed under [2] et seq., below.

For general discussion and forms relating to the Uniform Parentage Act, see Ch. 12A, Adoptions: Termination of Parental Rights (relating to termination of an alleged natural father's rights), and Ch. 412, Paternity.

[2] Service of Application

When an application for change of name is brought as a part of an action under the Uniform Parentage Act, whether as part of a petition or a cross complaint or as a separate order to show cause in a pending action thereunder, the application must be served on all other parties to the action in a like manner as prescribed for the service of a summons as set forthin Code Civ. Proc. § 415.10 et seq. [Code Civ. Proc. § 1277(d); for discussion of requirements for service of summons, see Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers].

[3] Notice of Hearing

On the setting of a hearing on the issue, notice of the hearing must be given to all parties in the action in a like manner and within the time limits prescribed generally for the type of hearing, whether a trial or an order to show cause, at which the issue of the change of name is to be decided [Code Civ. Proc. § 1277(d)].

[4] Conduct of Hearing

The hearing on the issue of a change of name must be conducted pursuant to the statutes and rules of court governing the proceeding under the Uniform Parentage Act, whether the hearing is conducted on an order to show cause or a trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 1278(c)]. For discussion, a procedural guide, and forms relating to proceedings under the Uniform Parentage Act, see Ch. 412, Paternity .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

33-377 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 377.17

§ 377.17 Objections

[1] In General

The court will grant the petition if, in its discretion, the change seems proper [In re Marriage of Banks (1974) 42 Cal. App. 3d 631, 637-638, 117 Cal. Rptr. 37 ; see also Code Civ. Proc. § 1278(a)]. Any person who can show the court good reason against the name change may file objections to the change [Code Civ. Proc. § 1278(a)]. Some substantial reason is necessary for the court to deny the petition [In re Ross (1937) 8 Cal. 2d 608, 610, 67 P.2d 94 ; In re McGehee (1956) 147 Cal. App. 2d 25, 26, 304 P.2d 167] . The burden of proof rests on the party who opposes the change [In re Marriage of Banks (1974) 42 Cal. App. 3d 631, 638, 117 Cal. Rptr. 37] .

[2] Sufficient Objections

No specific grounds for denial of the petition are set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 1275 et seq., other than the grounds set out in Code Civ. Proc. § 1279.5(b)-(d), under which a court is required to deny a petition [see 377.12[2]]. Courts have, however, also held that the following objections are sufficient to warrant denial:

- A showing of fraud or invasion of another's legal rights [In re Useldinger (1939) 35 Cal. App. 2d 723, 727, 96 P.2d 958] .

- A showing that the change would confuse the public and constitutes an attempt to "cash in" on a famous person's reputation [In re Weingand (1964) 231 Cal. App. 2d 289, 293-294, 41 Cal. Rptr. 778] .

- A showing of the repulsiveness, obscenity, or embarrassing character of the proposed name [In re Worms (1967) 252 Cal. App. 2d 130, 133, 60 Cal. Rptr. 88 (disapproved on other grounds in In re Marriage of Schiffman (1980) 28 Cal. 3d 640, 169 Cal. Rptr. 918, 620 P.2d 579 , to the extent the opinion is inconsistent with the proposition that in a parental dispute over a minor's name change, welfare of minor is sole consideration)].

- A showing that the proposed name has the potential of being a "fighting word," such as a racial epithet [Lee v. Superior Court (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 510, 518, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 763] .

[3] Insufficient Objections

Courts have held that the following objections are insufficient to warrant a denial of the petition:

- An objection that the applicant became a bankrupt under his or her original name [In re Ross (1937) 8 Cal. 2d 608, 610, 67 P.2d 94] .

- An objection involving sentimental reasons that are peculiar to the objecting party and do not contravene reasons given for the change [In re McGehee (1956) 147 Cal. App. 2d 25, 26, 304 P.2d 167] .

[1] Fraud

A motion to set aside the decree of name change may be made on the ground that the decree was obtained by fraud. In such a case, the court is authorized to set aside the decree both by its inherent power to do so and by the terms of Code Civ. Proc. § 473 [see In re Malloy (1960) 185 Cal. App. 2d 135, 137-138, 8 Cal. Rptr. 143 ; see generally Ch. 489, Relief From Judgments and Orders].

[2] Minor Applicant's Nonpetitioning Parent in or Just Discharged From Military

When a parent of a minor whose name was changed by court decree was in military service at the time of the decree, or was discharged less than 60 days before the date of the decree, and was materially affected in defending against the petition by reason of his or her military service, that parent may move to set aside the decree under the Servicemembers Civil Relief Act [see In re Larson (1947) 81 Cal. App. 2d 258, 262-263, 183 P.2d 688 (applying predecessor of 50 U.S.C. App. § 521(g)); see also 50 U.S.C. App. § 501 et seq.]. The petition to set aside the decree must be filed not later than 90 days after the parent's termination of or release from military service [50 U.S.C. App. § 521(g)(2)].

Similarly, no person engaged in a trade or business of any kind, or in the provision of a service of any kind, may impose, as a condition of doing business with a person, or as a condition of providing the service to a person, a requirement that the person, regardless of his or her marital status, use a name other than his or her birth name, former name, or name adopted upon solemnization of marriage or registration of domestic partnership, if the person has chosen to use or regularly uses that name [*Code Civ. § 377.24 Sex Change

[1] Petition to Change Name and Issue New Birth Cerificate

A person born in California who has undergone surgical treatment for a change of sex may file a single petition in superior court for both a change of name and an issuance of a new birth certificate reflecting the change of name and gender. The court is required to follow the normal name change procedure set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 1275 et seq. in granting the change of name [Health & Safety Code § 103435; for discussion of that procedure, see § 377.14]. In addition, the petition must be accompanied by a physician's affidavit documenting the sex change [Health & Safety Code § 103430(a)].

For a mandatory Judicial Council form of a combined petition for name change and gender change, see § 377.70A. For mandatory Judicial Council forms of an order to show cause and a decree changing name and gender, see §§ 377.73A and 377.75A.

A certified copy of the court's decree changing the name and birth certificate must be filed with both the Secretary of State and the State Registrar within 30 days [Health & Safety Code § 103435]. The fee payable to the State Registrar is set out in Health & Safety Code § 103725. The State Registrar will furnish a certified copy of the new birth certificate to the registrant without additional cost [Health & Safety Code § 103445].

[2] Separate Petitions to Change Name and Issue New Birth Certificate

Alternatively, the applicant may file separate petitions, one under Code Civ. Proc. § 1275 et seq. for a change of name and one under Health & Safety Code §§ 103425, 103430 and 103440, 103445 for a new birth certificate [see Health & Safety Code § 103435]. When the petitions are filed separately, the court order changing theapplicant's name should accompany the petition for a new birth certificate, if applicable [Health & Safety Code § 103430(a)]. In either case, the court must appoint a time for hearing. At the hearing, the court may examine on oath the petitioner or any other person having knowledge of facts relevant to the petitioner or to the petition [Health & Safety Code §§ 103430(b), 103435]. As with name changes, objections to a new birth certificate may be filed by any person who can show good reason against the change, and the court must either order a new birth certificate or deny the petition, as the court finds right and proper [Health & Safety Code § 103430(b)].

A certified copy of the decree changing the birth certificate must be filed withthe State Registrar within 30 days, together with the fee prescribedin Health & Safety Code § 103725 [Health & Safety Code § 103430(c)]. The State Registrar will furnish a certified copy of the new birth certificate to the registrant without additional cost [Health & Safety Code § 103445].

For a form of petition requesting the issuance of a new birth certificate apart from a change-of-name proceeding, see § 377.77. For further discussion and an alternative form, see Ch. 99, Birth and Death, Establishing Fact of, § 99.35.

State courts of record having jurisdiction in actions at law or in equity in which the amount in controversy is unlimited have jurisdiction to naturalize persons as citizens of the United States [8 U.S.C. § 1421]. In naturalization proceedings, on prayer by petitioner, the court may decree a change of petitioner's name and issue a certificate of naturalization to reflect the decree [8 U.S.C. § 1447(f)]. Naturalization records are maintained by the superior court clerk [Gov. Code § 69847].

Subsequent to naturalization, if the citizen's name is changed, he or she may apply to the United States Attorney General for a new certificate of naturalization bearing the new name. If the Attorney General finds that the name was changed, he or she must issue a new certificate to the applicant and notify the naturalization court [8 U.S.C. § 1454(c)].

When a voter, between the time of his or her last registration and the time for closing the registration for any given election in the same county, has lawfully changed his or her surname, he or she may reregister under the new name. The voter must state the previous name under which he or she was registered in that county in the prior registration portion of the affidavit of registration. The additional statement must be made before signing the affidavit and is deemed part of the affidavit. On reregistration, the last previous registration of the voter must be canceled [Elec. Code § 2115].

If the surname of any person offering to vote has been changed since he or she registered, he or she must sign his or her name both as it was before the change and as it is at the time of voting. The voter must indicate on the roster on the same line, either by brackets or by other means, that the two names identify one person [Elec. Code § 14218].

If a candidate changes his or her name within one year before any election, the new name may not appear on the ballot unless the change was made by marriage or by decree of a court of competent jurisdiction [Elec. Code § 13104].

Any person who falsely personates another, and in such assumed character marries or pretends to marry or to sustain the marriage relation towards another, with or without the connivance of the other, is guilty of a felony [Penal Code § 528].

Any person who falsely personates another in his or her private or official capacity, and in such assumed character does any of the following may be fined up to $10,000 or imprisoned in state prison or county jail for up to one year, or both [Penal Code § 529]:

- Becomes bail or surety for any party in any proceeding whatever before any court or officer authorized to take such bail or surety.

- Verifies, publishes, acknowledges, or proves, in another's name, any written instrument with intent that it be recorded, delivered, or used as true.

- Does any other act, whereby, if done by the person falsely personated, he or she might become liable to any suit or prosecution, or to pay money or incur charge, forfeiture, or penalty, or whereby any benefit might accrue to the party personating, or to any other person.

Any person who falsely personates another, in either his or her private or official capacity, and in such assumed character receives any money or property, knowing that it is intended to be delivered to the personated individual, and with intent to convert the money or property to his or her own use, or to another's use, or with the intent to deprive the true owner thereof, is punishable in the same manner and to the same extent as for larceny of the money or property so received [Penal Code § 530].

Any person who signs any letter addressed to a newspaper with the name of a person other than himself or herself, and sends such letter to the newspaper, or causes it to be sent, with the intent to lead the newspaper to believe that it was written by the person whose name is signed, is guilty of a misdemeanor [Penal Code § 538a].

By complying with the procedure set forth in Corp. Code § 900et seq., a corporation formed in California may amend its articles of incorporation to reflect a change of name [see Corp. Code § 900(a); see also California Legal Forms, Ch. 3, Articles of Incorporation, Ch. 10, Amendment of Articles (MatthewBender)]. The name may not include the words "bank," "trust," "trustee," or related words, unless the certificate of approval of the Commissioner of Financial Institutions is attached to the new articles to be filed [Corp. Code § 201(a)]. In addition, the Secretary of State will not file articles setting forth a name that is likely to mislead the public or that so closely resembles the name of a domestic corporation or a foreign corporation either authorized to do business in the state or with a name registered in the state that it would tend to deceive the public. The Secretary may, however, file articles if there is proofof consent by the other corporation or if the Secretary finds that the public is not likely to be misled. A corporation's use of a name in violation of this rule may be enjoined, whether or not the Secretary of State has filed the articles [Corp. Code § 201(b)].

An applicant for a corporate name change may, on payment of the appropriate fee, reserve a name not prohibited by Corp. Code § 201(b) for 60 days with the Secretary of State. The Secretary of State will not reserve the same name for two or more consecutive 60-day periods to the same applicant or for the use or benefit of the same person, partnership, firm or corporation [Corp. Code § 201(c)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

33-377 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 377.31

§ 377.31 Change of Name on Entering Marriage or Domestic Partnership

The Name Equality Act of 2007 [see 2007 Stats., ch. 567] allows persons entering into a marriage or a domestic partnership to change their middle or last names, or both, by making an appropriate election in the marriage license application or Declaration of Domestic Partnership form, without the need to petition the superior court for a change of name [Fam. Code §§ 298.6, 306.5].

Parties to a marriage or registered domestic partnership are not required to have the same name, and neither party is required to change his or her name. A person's name does not change upon marriage or registration as a domestic partner unless that person elects to change his or her name as follows [Fam. Code §§ 298.6(a), 306.5(a)].

If there is no intent to defraud, any party to a marriage or registered domestic partnership may elect to change the middle or last names, or both, by which he or she wishes to be known after solemnization of the marriage or registration of the domestic partnership, by entering the new name in the space provided on the marriage license or on the official Declaration of Domestic Partnership form [Fam. Code §§ 298.6(b)(1), 306.5(b)(1)]. The party may adopt any of the following last names [Fam. Code §§ 298.6(b)(2), 306.5(b)(2)]:

- The current last name of the other spouse or domestic partner.
- The last name of either spouse or domestic partner given at birth.
- A name combining into a single last name all or a segment of the current last name or the last name of either spouse or domestic partner given at birth.
- A hyphenated combination of last names.

The Name Equality Act also provides that these permissible last names are also permissible choices for a domestic partner's middle name [Fam. Code § 298.6(b)(2)]. However, the Act was amended, effective January 1, 2010, to modify the permissible middle names for a married person; under the amendment, a person entering a marriage may adopt any of the following middle names [Fam. Code § 306.5(b)(3) (as amended by 2009 Stats., ch. 512)]:

- The current last name of either spouse.
- The last name of either spouse given at birth.
- A hyphenated combination of the current middle name and the current last name of the person or spouse.
- A hyphenated combination of the current middle name and the last name given at the birth of the person or spouse.

An election by a person to change his or her name on marriage or registration of a domestic partnership will serve as a record of the name change. A certified copy of the marriage certificate or Certificate of Registered Domestic Partnership containing the new name, or retaining the former name, constitutes proof that the use of the new name or retention of the former name is lawful [Fam. Code §§ 298.6(b)(3)(A), 306.5(b)(4)(A)]. Thus, a certified copy of a marriage certificate or Certificate of Registered Domestic Partnership must be accepted as identification establishing a true, full name for purposes of obtaining a driver's license [Fam. Code § 298.6(b)(3)(B); see Veh. Code § 12800.7 (verification of name and address for purposes of issuance of driver's license); see also Fam. Code §§ 298.6(b)(3)(C), 306.5(b)(4)(C) (true, full name for purposes of Veh. Code § 12800.7 may also be established by other documents, such as marriage certificate issued by other state, or substantial equivalent of Certificate of Domestic Partnership issued by other state or by local jurisdiction)].

The adoption of a new name, or the choice not to adopt a new name, by means of a marriage license application may be made only at the time the marriage license is issued; after the marriage certificate is registered by the local registrar, the certificate may not be amended to add a new name or change the name adopted [Fam. Code § 306.5(b)(5)]. An amendment may be issued to correct a clerical error in the "new name" fields on the marriage license; the amendment must be signed by one of the parties to the marriage and by the county clerk or his or her deputy, and the reason for the amendment must be stated as correcting a clerical error [Fam. Code § 306.5(b)(5) (for this purpose, "clerical error" is error made by county clerk, his or her deputy, or notary authorized to issue confidential marriage licenses, whereby information shown in "new name" field does not match information shown on marriage license application)].

The adoption of a new name, or the choice not to adopt a new name, by means of a marriage license application or Declaration of Domestic Partnership does not, however, abrogate either party's common-law right to change his or her name, to adopt a different name through usage at a future date, or to petition the superior court for a change of name [Fam. Code §§ 298.6(b)(4),(c), 306.5(b)(5), (c); see Code Civ. Proc. § 1275 et seq. (superior court proceedings for change of name)].

PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

33-377 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 377.44

§ 377.44 Decisions

[1] Legal Definition of Name

Name as word by which person is known and distinguished from others; purported name consisting solely of numbers or symbols is not within statutory or common law meaning of name. In re Ritchie (1984) 159 Cal. App. 3d 1070, 1073, 206 Cal. Rptr. 239

Court's refusal to grant name change application is justifiable when based solely on failure of purported name to come within legal meaning of "name." In re Ritchie (1984) 159 Cal. App. 3d 1070, 1073, 206 Cal. Rptr. 239

[2] Right to Name Change

Common law right of alien to adopt any name, absent fraud or interference with rights of others. Application of Chan (S.D.N.Y. 1976) 426 F. Supp. 680, 681

Common law right to change personal name without legal proceedings. In re Ross (1937) 8 Cal. 2d 608, 609, 67 P.2d 94 ; In re Ritchie (1984) 159 Cal. App. 3d 1070, 1072, 206 Cal. Rptr. 239

One-year residence in county is not necessary in name change proceedings. Turesky v. Superior Court (1950) 97 Cal. App. 2d 838, 840, 218 P.2d 784

Because one has a common law right to change name, courts' policy should be to encourage filing of petitions for name change for purposes of public record. In re Useldinger (1939) 35 Cal. App. 2d 723, 727, 96 P.2d 958

[3] Purpose of Statutory Procedure

Purpose of statutory procedure is merely to provide record of change. In re Ross (1937) 8 Cal. 2d 608, 609, 67 P.2d

94 ; In re Marriage of Banks (1974) 42 Cal. App. 3d 631, 637, 117 Cal. Rptr. 37

Court's authority as limited to ordering name change or denying or dismissing application; court lacks authority to permanently enjoin use of proposed name. In re Weingand (1964) 231 Cal. App. 2d 289, 294, 41 Cal. Rptr. 778

[4] Effect of Name Change

Real property conveyance by owner using changed name is valid and transfers title. Emery v. Kipp (1908) 154 Cal. 83, 86, 97 P. 17

Holder of promissory note who changes name has cause of action to collect on note. Cumberland College v. Ish (1863) 22 Cal. 641, 644

Person signing contract by different name as nevertheless bound by contract. California Packing Corp. v. Kandarian (1923) 62 Cal. App. 729, 731, 217 P. 805

[5] Granting or Denying Petition

Applicant becoming bankrupt under original name as insufficient reason to deny application for name change. In re Ross (1937) 8 Cal. 2d 608, 610, 67 P.2d 94

Some substantial reason is necessary for court's denial of application. In re Ross (1937) 8 Cal. 2d 608, 610, 67 P.2d 94 ; In re McGehee (1956) 147 Cal. App. 2d 25, 26, 304 P.2d 167

Denial of petition to change name to "III" as proper, even though there was no intent to defraud, or to profit by someone else's reputation; "III" fails to qualify as name within either statutory or common law. In re Ritchie (1984) 159 Cal. App. 3d 1070, 1073, 206 Cal. Rptr. 239

Burden of proof rests on party who would deny change. In re Marriage of Banks (1974) 42 Cal. App. 3d 631, 638, 117 Cal. Rptr. 37

Change is ordered if in court's discretion it seems proper. In re Marriage of Banks (1974) 42 Cal. App. 3d 631, 637-638, 117 Cal. Rptr. 37 ; see Code Civ. Proc. § 1278

Denial of petition is not abuse of discretion when change would be confusing to public and is attempt to "cash in" on famous actor's reputation. In re Weingand (1964) 231 Cal. App. 2d 289, 293-294, 41 Cal. Rptr. 778

Sentimental reasons peculiar to objecting party that are not contravening reasons for change are insufficient grounds for denial. In re McGehee (1956) 147 Cal. App. 2d 25, 26, 304 P.2d 167

Denial of petition is proper on showing of fraud or invasion of another's legal rights. In re Useldinger (1939) 35 Cal. App. 2d 723, 727, 96 P.2d 958

[6] Setting Aside Decree

Court has inherent jurisdiction to set aside decree changing name on ground of fraud. In re Malloy (1960) 185 Cal. App. 2d 135, 138, 8 Cal. Rptr. 143

Court is authorized to set aside decree changing name pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 473, within six months from decree, when party's failure to appear resulted from mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect. In re Malloy (1960) 185 Cal. App. 2d 135, 138, 8 Cal. Rptr. 143

Parent in military entitled under specified circumstances to have decree changing minor child's name set aside under former 50 U.S.C. App. § 520 (now see 50 U.S.C. App. § 521(g)) (formerly 50 U.S.C. App. § 520(4)). In re Larson (1947) 81 Cal. App. 2d 258, 262-263, 183 P.2d 688

[7] Appeal

Court's decision to deny application is subject to appeal if abuse of discretion. In re Ross (1937) 8 Cal. 2d 608, 609, 67 P.2d 94

[8] Mandate

Writ of mandate is proper to compel superior court to proceed with hearing and determination on petition for name change. Turesky v. Superior Court (1950) 97 Cal. App. 2d 838, 840, 218 P.2d 784

[9] Woman's Former Name

Whether married woman's legal surname is her birth name or her husband's is dictated by her choice. Weathers v. Superior Court (1976) 54 Cal. App. 3d 286, 289, 126 Cal. Rptr. 547

[10] Corporation Name

Corporation must sue and be sued by its corporate name. Curtiss v. Murry (1864) 26 Cal. 633, 634

[11] Disputes Over Minor's Name

In parental disputes over child's surname, sole consideration is child's best interest; father no longer has primary right to have child bear his surname. In re Marriage of Schiffman (1980) 28 Cal. 3d 640, 645, 647, 169 Cal. Rptr. 918, 620 P.2d 579

Pursuant to California Uniform Parentage Act (former Civ. Code § 7000 et seq.; now see Fam. Code § 7600 et seq.), parent's sex or marital status does not create any primary right or protectible interest in having child bear his or her name. Donald J. v. Evna M. (1978) 81 Cal. App. 3d 929, 937, 147 Cal. Rptr. 15

Natural parent seeking to change minor's surname as having some legal rights to control minor's use of surname. Donald J. v. Evna M. (1978) 81 Cal. App. 3d 929, 936, 147 Cal. Rptr. 15

Nonparent petitioner seeking to change minor's name has no right to do so unless, for fraudulent purpose, minor was using a name detrimental to petitoner's interests. Donald J. v. Evna M. (1978) 81 Cal. App. 3d 929, 936, 147 Cal. Rptr. 15

When child has used one surname for some time without objection, court grants one parent's petition for change over other parent's objection reluctantly and only if substantial welfare of child requires it. Donald J. v. Evna M. (1978) 81 Cal. App. 3d 929, 937, 147 Cal. Rptr. 15

Repulsiveness, obscenity, or embarrassing character of proposed name is significant factor for court to consider on petition. In re Worms (1967) 252 Cal. App. 2d 130, 133, 60 Cal. Rptr. 88

[13] Residency Requirement

Court's adoption of one-year residency requirement before hearing name change petition was arbitrary and abuse of court's rulemaking power. Turesky v. Superior Court (1950) 97 Cal. App. 2d 838, 840, 218 P.2d 784

Chapter 377 NAME, CHANGE OF
PART IV. PROCEDURAL CHECKLIST

33-377 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 377.60

§ 377.60 Petitioner's Checklist

NOTE:

Illustrative Checklist. The following checklist is illustrative only of procedures commonly utilized in a change of name proceeding to change the name of an individual.

The term "petitioner," as used in this checklist, refers to the person who brings the proceeding to change a name, whether he or she is acting on his or her own behalf or on behalf of another. The term "applicant," refers to the person whose name is sought to be changed, whether or not he or she is the petitioner.

[1] Application for Name Change

[a] Facts to Be Ascertained

[i] Petitioner Applying on Own Behalf

- ☐ Present name, address, telephone number, and age.
- ☐ Place of birth.
- ☐ Proposed name.
- ☐ Reasons for change of name.
- ☐ Name and address of parent, or if neither parent is living, names and addresses of near relatives.

NOTE:

Requirement Regarding Relatives Is Not Specific. Code Civ. Proc. § 1276 does not require a specific number of near relatives to be listed on the petition in such a situation.

☐ Prior use, if any, of proposed name.

☐ If the applicant is in prison, whether the Director of Corrections will permit the prisoner to file an application [Code Civ. Proc. § 1279.5(b)].

☐ If the applicant is within jurisdiction of Department of Corrections, whether parole agent or probation officer will grant prior written approval after determining that name change will not pose security risk to community [Code Civ. Proc. § 1279.5(c)].

☐ If the applicant is required to register as sex offender under Sex Offender Registration Act [Penal Code § 290 et seq.], whether facts will allow court to determine that it is in best interest of justice to grant application and that doing so will not adversely affect public safety [Code Civ. Proc. § 1279.5(d)].

[ii] Petitioner Applying on Behalf of Minor

☐ Minor's present name, address, telephone number, and age.

☐ Capacity and status of petitioner (parent, guardian, near relative, or friend).

☐ Proposed name for minor.

☐ Reasons for change of name.

☐ Names and addresses of minor's parents, or, if neither is living, names and addresses of near relatives, if known to petitioner.

☐ If petitioner is minor's parent, name and address of nonpetitioning parent, if living.

☐ If the petition is signed by guardian, petition must specify name and address of parents (or grandparents, if both parents are deceased) [Code Civ. Proc. § 1276(c)]; relevant information regarding guardianship; likelihood that child will remain under guardian's care until child reaches age of majority; and information suggesting that child will not likely be returned to custody of his or her parents [Code Civ. Proc. § 1276(c)].

☐ If minor is over 12 and parents have relinquished him or her relinquished to an adoption agency, whether legal adoption has taken place or is about to take place.

☐ Minor's prior use, if any, of proposed name.

[b] Documents to Be Obtained

[i] Petitioner Applying on Own Behalf

Code Civ. Proc. § 1275 et seq. do not require the following documents, but they may be useful in establishing necessary facts:

☐ Birth certificate.

☐ Documentary proof, if any, of prior use of proposed name, such as correspondence, newspaper articles, or advertisements.

☐ If petitioner is in state prison, written permission to file the petition from the Director of Corrections [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1279.5].

☐ If seeking name change and new birth certificate (or new birth certificate without name change) after sex change, physician's affidavit documenting the sex change [see Health & Safety Code §§ 103430(a), 103435].

[ii] Petitioner Applying on Behalf of Minor

Code Civ. Proc. § 1275 et seq. do not require the following documents, but they may be useful in establishing necessary facts:

☐ Minor's birth certificate.

☐ If petitioner is guardian, proof of status as guardian.

☐ If petitioner is adoption agency, proof, if available, that applicant was relinquished to agency and has not been legally adopted.

[c] Preliminary Determinations

☐ Applicant's capacity.

☐ Determine whether applicant is 18 years of age or over.

☐ If so, he or she may bring the proceeding.

☐ If not, application must be made by one of minor's parents or guardian of person. If both parents are dead and there is no guardian of person, application must be made by some near relative or friend of person. Code Civ. Proc. § 1276(a)(1)

☐ Potential opposition.

☐ Determine whether:

☐ The proposed name is close to that of a celebrity or other person whose name has commercial and professional value.

☐ Any facts exist that might indicate that petitioner is trying to confuse the public or pass himself or herself off as that person or that person's relative.

☐ If petitioner is a parent applying on minor's behalf, determine whether:

☐ The other parent is alive.

☐ If so, whether the other parent opposes the change of name.

☐ Jurisdiction and venue.

☐ Determine county of residence of person whose name is to be changed [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1275, 1276].

☐ Newspaper to publish notice.

☐ Determine name of newspaper of general circulation in the county, if any, and costs of publication [Code Civ. Proc. § 1277(a)].

NOTE:
No Publication of Name Change of Participants in Address Confidentiality or Witness Protection Programs. Special protections against disclosure of petitioner's current legal name and proposed name apply when name change is related to participation in the address confidentiality program (to avoid domestic violence or stalking, or if the name change is for a victim of sexual assault) or participation in the state Witness Protection Program [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1277(b), (c), discussed in § 377.14[3], [4]].

☐ Seeking new birth certificate after sex change.

☐ If petitioner is applying for a name change following a sex change, determine whether or not to file a single petition for both change of name and issuance of a new birth certificate [see Health & Safety Code § 103435].

NOTE:
New Birth Certificate Without Name Change. A person who has had a surgical change of gender may obtain a new birth certificate to reflect the gender change, without seeking a change of name [see Health & Safety Code §§ 103425, 103435; see also §§ 377.77 -377.79 (Cal. Judicial Council forms for obtaining order for new birth certificate to reflect change of gender, without change of name)].

[d] Drafting Petition and Order to Show Cause

NOTE:

Inclusion in Petition Under Uniform Parentage Act. An application tochange the name of a minor or adult child for whom a parent and child relationship is established under the Uniform Parentage Act (Fam. Code § 7600 et seq.), may be included with a petition filed under the Act [see Fam. Code § 7638].

☐ Prepare petition [for forms, see §§ 377.70-377.72].

☐ Make the following number of copies of petition:

☐ Original for filing.

☐ Copy for client, if desired.

☐ Office copy.

☐ Any additional copies desired.

☐ Obtain signatures [Code Civ. Proc. § 1276].

☐ If name change is sought on behalf of minor, petition must be signed by either one of minor's parents or any guardian of the person (or some near relative or friend of the person, if both parents are dead and there is no guardian of person) [Code Civ. Proc. § 1276(a)(1)].

☐ If applicant is a minor 12 years of age or older and has been relinquished to an adoption agency but not legally adopted, both the minor's and the adoption agency's signatures.

☐ Make the following number of copies order to show cause:

☐ Original for signature by the court and for filing.

☐ Either one copy for publication in a newspaper or, if there is no newspaper of general circulation in the county, three copies for posting.

☐ If petitioner is parent seeking name change on minor's behalf, one copy for service on parent not joining in consent [Code Civ. Proc. § 1277(a)].

☐ Any additional copies desired.

[e] Filing

☐ Deliver original and all copies of petition and order to show cause to the court clerk:

☐ Originals for filing after judge has signed the order to show cause.

☐ Copies for court clerk to conform.

☐ Pay required fees.

NOTE:

Payment at Time of Filing; Amount. Petitioner must pay the filing fee at the time of filing the first paper. Filing fees are fixed by statute [Gov. Code § 70611 (effective January 1, 2006, uniform filing fee for first filing in superior courts other than in limited civil case, adoption proceeding, proceeding under Probate Code, or proceeding under Family Code)]. However, a given county may have authority to impose additional fees for particular purposes [see, e.g., Gov. Code §§ 70622 (surcharge for courthouse repairs in Riverside County), 70624 (surcharge for courthouse repairs in San Bernardino County)]. Therefore, counsel should refer to local rules and check with the court clerk to determine the exact amount of fees to be paid when the petition is filed.

[f] Notice

☐ Publication.

NOTE:

Uniform Parentage Act. If the application for change of name is brought as part of an action under the Uniform Parentage Act (Fam. Code § 7600 et seq.), whether as part of a petition or cross complaint or as a separate order to show cause in a pending action thereunder, service of the application must be made on all other parties to the action in a like manner as prescribed for the service of a summons as set forth in Code Civ. Proc. §§ 415.10-417.40 [Code Civ. Proc. § 1277(d); for discussion and forms relating to service, see Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers].

On the setting of a hearing on the issue of a change of name, notice of the hearing must be given to all parties within the time limits prescribed generally for the type of hearing (whether trial or order to show cause) at which the issue of the change of name is to be decided [Code Civ. Proc. § 1277(d)].

☐ Deliver conformed copy of the order to show cause to the newspaper designated in the order and obtain [Code Civ. Proc. § 1277(a)]:

☐ If a daily newspaper, publication once a week for four successive weeks.

NOTE:
No Publication of Name Change of Participants in Address Confidentiality or Witness Protection Programs. Special protections against disclosure of petitioner's current legal name and proposed name apply when name change is related to participation in the address confidentiality program (to avoid domestic violence or stalking, or if the name change is for a victim of sexual assault) or participation in the state Witness Protection Program [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1277(b), (c), discussed in § 377.14[3], [4]].

☐ Obtain affidavit of publication from printer.

NOTE:
Proof of Publication. Proof of publication is required at the hearing [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1277(a)]. The proof may be given by the affidavit or declaration of the printer of the newspaper or by his or her foreman or principal clerk and annexed to the copy of the order to show cause. It must specify the newspaper and the times when publication was made [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2010, 2015.5].

☐ File proof of publication, or if part of newspaper's service, verify that newspaper has done so.

☐ Posting.

☐ If there is no newspaper of general circulation in the county in which the proceeding is brought, deliver three conformed copies of the order to show cause to the court clerk for posting. Pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1277(a), the order must be posted in three of the most public places in the county, and proof of such posting is required at the hearing.

☐ Notice to nonsigning parent.

☐ If the petition is filed by one parent on behalf of a minor, and the other parent is living and does not join in consenting to the petition, serve the other parent with notice of the time and place of the hearing or a copy of the order to show cause, not less than 30 days prior to the hearing, pursuant to the service provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 413.10, 414.10, 415.10, or 415.40 [Code Civ. Proc. § 1277(a); for discussion and forms relating to service generally, see Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers ; for a form of proof of service, see § 377.74].

NOTE:
Court May Order Different Manner of Giving Notice. If notice of the hearing cannot reasonably be accomplished pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 415.10 or 415.40, the court may order that notice be given in a manner that the court determines is reasonably calculated to give actual notice to the nonconsenting parent. In that case, if the court determines that notice by publication is reasonably calculated to give actual notice to the nonconsenting parent, the court may determine that publication of the order to show cause is sufficient notice to the nonconsenting parent [Code Civ. Proc. § 1277(a)].

☐ If guardian files a petition to change the name of his or her minor ward under Code Civ. Proc. § 1276, the guardian must provide notice of hearing to any living parent of minor bypersonal service at least 30 days prior to the hearing [Code Civ. Proc. § 1277(e)(1)]. If either or both parents are deceased or cannot be located, and child's grandparents are living, guardian must cause to be served on child's grandparents notice of time and place of hearing, or copy of order to show cause. Service must be made not less than 30 days prior to hearing, pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 413.10, 414.10, 415.10, or 415.40 [Code Civ. Proc. § 1277(e)(2) for discussion and forms relating to such service, see Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers ; for a form of proof of service, see § 377.74].

[2] If Court Refuses to Hear Petition

☐ Prepare petition for writ of mandate to compel the superior court to hear the petition for change of name [see Turesky v. Superior Court (1950) 97 Cal. App. 2d 838, 840, 218 P.2d 784] . For discussion, a procedural checklist, and forms relating to mandate, see Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition .

[3] If Court Grants Petition for Name Change

☐ Make the following number of copies:

☐ Original for filing with court.

☐ A copy for certification by court clerk, for filing with Secretary of State.

☐ If amendment of birth records is desired, an additional copy for certification by court clerk for filing with State Registrar.

☐ If petitioner changed name following a sex change, an additional copy for certification by court clerk for applying for new birthcertificate.

☐ One copy for service on each remonstrant, if he or she appeared in propria persona to oppose the petition, or two copies for service on his or her attorney, if remonstrant opposed the petition by attorney.

☐ Copy for client, if desired.

☐ Office copy.

☐ Any additional copies desired.

[b] Presentation of Decree to Court Clerk

☐ Present the original and copies of the decree changing name to the court clerk or judge's clerk for signature.

☐ Have the clerk certify one of the copies for forwarding to the Secretary of State, and pay the fee designated by Gov. Code § 26833.

☐ Have the clerk certify an additional copy if amendment of the birth record is desired or if a new birth certificate is desired when petitioner obtained the name change following a sex change.

☐ Have the clerk file the original, conform the copies, and return all copies to counsel.

[c] Notice of Entry of Judgment (Decree)

☐ Prepare a notice of entry of judgment (decree) [for forms, see Ch. 318, Judgments] unless court orders clerk to do so or petitioner is not represented by counsel [see Code Civ. Proc. § 664.5].

☐ Make the following number of copies:

- ☐ Original for filing.
- ☐ Copy for service on each remonstrant, if he or she appeared in propria persona, or two copies for service on his or her attorney if he or she was represented by counsel in the proceeding.
- ☐ Office copy.
- ☐ Any additional copies desired.

☐ Prepare proof of service of notice of entry of judgment [for forms, see Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers].

☐ Make same number of copies as the notice of entry of judgment.

☐ Service and Filing

- ☐ Attach the original of the proof of service to the original of the notice of entry of judgment and attach a copy of the proof of service to each copy of the notice of entry of judgment.
- ☐ Serve one copy of the papers on remonstrant, if he or she appeared in propria persona, or two copies on his or her attorney, if remonstrant appeared by counsel [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1015].

☐ Deliver the original of the notice of entry of judgment and the proof of service to the court for filing.

[d] Amendment of Birth Record

☐ County recorder's office.

☐ California Office of Vital Records (916/445-2684; <www.dhs.ca.gov/hisp/chs/ovr/ovrformsreq.asp>).

☐ Prepare application using original form.

NOTE:

Original Form Required. An application for amendment of a birth record must be submitted on an original form VS 23, printed on special bond paper, provided by the California Office of Vital Records; photocopies will not be accepted. For more information, including an online pamphlet with detailed instructions for completion and submission of the application, visit <www.dhs.ca.gov>.

☐ Make the following number of copies:

☐ Original for delivery to State Registrar.

☐ Copy for client, if desired.

☐ Any additional copies desired.

☐ Attach a certified copy of the decree changing name to the original application.

☐ Deliver the application plus the fee designated in Health & Safety Code § 103720 to the State Registrar.

[e] Obtaining New Birth Certificate After Sex Change

☐ County recorder's office.

☐ Prepare application using original form.

NOTE:

Original Form Required. An application for amendment of a birth record must be submitted on an original form VS 24(S), printed on special bond paper, provided by the California Office of Vital Records; photocopies will not be accepted. For more information, including an online pamphlet with detailed instructions for completion and submission of the application, visit <www.dhs.ca.gov>.

☐ If the petitioner applied for a name change, but not for a new birth certificate, or if a new birth certificate is desired without a change of name, a separate petition may be filed in court for the issuance of a new birth certificate, pursuant to Health & Safety Code §§ 103425, 103430 [see §§ 377.77 -377.79; see also Ch. 99, Birth and Death, Establishing Fact of, § 99.35].

[4] If Court Denies Petition for Name Change

☐ File notice of appeal [see Code Civ. Proc. § 904.1; In re Ross (1937) 8 Cal. 2d 608, 609, 67 P.2d 94 ; for discussion, see § 377.17].

☐ For discussion and forms relating to appeals, see Ch. 40, Appeal: An Overview , et seq.

PART IV. PROCEDURAL CHECKLIST

33-377 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 377.61

§ 377.61 Remonstrant's Checklist

NOTE:
Illustrative Checklist. The following checklist is illustrative only of procedures commonly utilized.

[1] Objecting to Name Change

[a] Determining Objections

☐ Determine whether remonstrant has good reason to object to the change of name [Code Civ. Proc. § 1278(a)].

☐ Possible grounds include:

☐ Change would result in fraud or the invasion of another's legal rights [see In re Useldinger (1939) 35 Cal. App. 2d 723, 727, 96 P.2d 958] .

☐ Change would confuse the public and is an attempt by petitioner to "cash in" on a famous person's reputation [see In re Weingand (1964) 231 Cal. App. 2d 289, 293-294, 41 Cal. Rptr. 778] .

☐ Proposed name is repulsive, obscene, or embarassing [see In re Worms (1967) 252 Cal. App. 2d 130, 133, 60 Cal. Rptr. 88 (disapproved on other grounds, in In re Marriage of Schiffman (1980) 28 Cal. 3d 640, 647, 169 Cal. Rptr. 918, 620 P.2d 579 to extent it is inconsistent with rule that minor's welfare is sole consideration in parental dispute over minor's surname)]; and

contrary to the minor's best interests [see In re Marriage of Schiffman (1980) 28 Cal. 3d 640, 647, 169 Cal. Rptr. 918, 620 P.2d 579] .

☐ Grounds for denial exist under Code Civ. Proc. § 1279.5(b)-(e) [see § 377.12[2]].

[b] Facts to Be Ascertained

☐ If name change constitutes fraud or invasion of another's legal rights.

☐ Remonstrant's name, address, and telephone number;

☐ Reasons why petitioner's use of the proposed name would constitute fraud or the invasion of another's legal rights;

☐ The nature and extent of petitioner's prior use of proposed name, if known to remonstrant; and

☐ Date and place of hearing on application for name change, as designated on the order to show cause.

☐ If name change is for purpose of "cashing in" on remonstrant's name.

☐ Remonstrant's name, address, and telephone number.

☐ Remonstrant's occupation.

☐ Remonstrant's professional standing and the professional or commercial value of his or her name.

☐ Length of time either that remonstrant has been known by the general public, or members of a particular class, by his or her own name, or that he or she has used and been known by the name in question.

☐ Date and place of hearing on application for change of name, as designated on the order to show cause.

☐ If minor's name was changed without remonstrant parent's consent.

☐ Remonstrant's name, address, and telephone number.

☐ Whether petitioning parent knows remonstrant's address, if remonstrant has not been served with order to show cause [Code Civ. Proc. § 1277(a)].

☐ Reasons why remonstrant objects to change of minor's name, and how those reasons relate to the minor's welfare.

☐ Date and place of hearing on name change, as designated by the order to show cause.

[c] Documents to Be Obtained

☐ If change of petitioner's name would result in fraud or the invasion of another's legal rights:

☐ Documents, if any, supporting an assertion of fraud on petitioner's part; or ☐ Documents, if any, supporting a showing of another's legal right or rights, which would be invaded by the name change.

☐ If petitioner is attempting to "cash in" on remonstrant's name:

☐ Documents, if any, proving commercial value of remonstrant's name and knowledge and acceptance of the name by the community or by members of a particular class in the community; and ☐ Documents, if any, proving length of time the name used by remonstrant has been known and accepted in the community or the length of time that the name has had commercial value.

☐ If remonstrant is the parent of a minor objecting to the other parent's petition to change the minor's name.

☐ Minor's birth certificate.

☐ Any documentary evidence tending to show that a change of name is contrary to the minor's welfare.

☐ Documentary proof that petitioning parent knew remonstrant's address, if applicable.

[d] Drafting Objections

☐ Prepare the objections in the following number of copies:

☐ Original for filing.

☐ Copy for service on petitioner, if desired [see [e], below].

☐ Copy for client, if desired.

☐ Office copy.

☐ Any additional copies desired.

☐ Have remonstrant sign the objections.

[e] Service

NOTE:

No Notice Prescribed by Code. Code Civ. Proc. § 1278 does not specifically require that the objections be served on petitioner. The provisions of Part Two of the Code of Civil Procecure, which include sections governing service of summons and papers [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 413.10 et seq., 1010 et seq.], are not specifically incorporated into proceedings for change of name. Nevertheless, it would seem that if petitioner were not served, questions of fairness might arise. If counsel serves petitioner, it appears that proof of service made as provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 1011 et seq. would be proper. For a discussion and forms relating to service, see Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers .

[f] Filing

☐ Deliver the original of the objections and proof of service, if made, to the court clerk for filing at least two court days before date set for hearing [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1277(a), 1278(a)].

☐ Pay required fees.

NOTE:

Payment at Time of Filing; Amount. The adverse party must pays a filing fee at the time of filing that party's first paper. The amount of the fee is fixed by statute [Gov. Code § 70612 (effective January 1, 2006, uniform filing fee for adverse party's first filing in superior court)]. However, a given county may have authority to impose additional fees for particular purposes [see, e.g., Gov. Code §§ 70622 (surcharge for courthouse repairs in Riverside County), 70624 (surcharge for courthouse repairs in San Bernardino County)]. Therefore, counsel should refer to local rules and check with the court clerk to determine the exact amount of fees to be paid when the objections are filed.

[2] Motion to Set Aside Decree Changing Name

[a] Determine Grounds for Motion

☐ Failure to appear at the original hearing due to mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect, or fraud [see Code Civ. Proc. § 473; In re Malloy (1960) 185 Cal. App. 2d 135, 137-138, 8 Cal. Rptr. 143] .

☐ Failure of parent petitioning for minor's name change give notice of the hearing on the petition to the parent who does not join in consenting to the petition [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1277(a); see also Code Civ. Proc. § 1276; In re Malloy (1960) 185 Cal. App. 2d 135, 137-138, 8 Cal. Rptr. 143 (decision made prior to statutoryrequirement of notice to nonconsenting parent set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 1277)].

☐ Failure to comply with requirements of the Servicemembers Civil ReliefAct (50 U.S.C. App. § 521) [see In re Larson (1947) 81 Cal. App. 2d 258, 262, 183 P.2d 688 (disapproved on other grounds in In re Marriage of Schiffman (1980) 28 Cal. 3d 640, 647, 169 Cal. Rptr. 918, 620 P.2d 579)].

[b] Facts to Be Ascertained

☐ Remonstrant's name, address, and telephone number.

☐ Facts establishing remonstrant as an interested party.

☐ Date and place of hearing of name change.

☐ In case of fraud or mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect:

☐ Facts establishing fraud by petitioner in obtaining name change or facts establishing mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect of remonstrant.

☐ In case of failure to give notice to nonconsenting parent:

☐ Name, address, telephone number, and age of minor whose name was changed.

☐ Name, address, and telephone number of petitioning parent.

☐ Dates of parents' divorce and any remarriages, if applicable.

[c] Documents to Be Obtained

☐ Copy of decree changing name, showing court, case number, and date of decree.

☐ Documents, if any, supporting an assertion of fraud on petitioner's part, or mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect on remonstrant's part.

☐ If moving party is nonconsenting parent, minor's birth certificate.

☐ Documentary proof, if any, that petitioning parent knew nonconsenting parent's address at time notice of hearing should have been served.

NOTE:
Detailed Checklist and Forms: See Ch. 489, Relief From Judgments and Orders , for forms and a detailed checklist regarding the procedure for setting aside a judgment.

[3] Appeal

[a] If Court Grants Decree Changing Name

☐ File notice of appeal [see Code Civ. Proc. § 904.1].

☐ For discussion and forms relating to appeals, see Ch. 40, Appeal: An Overview , et seq.

[b] If Court Denies Motion to Set Aside Decree

☐ File notice of appeal [see Code Civ. Proc. § 904.1(a)(2)].

☐ For a discussion and forms relating to appeals generally, see Ch. 40, Appeal: An Overview , et seq.

[2] Use of Form

This form of petition for change of name is an illustrative reproduction of Cal. Judicial Council Form NC-100, adopted by the Judicial Council for mandatoryuse [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1.31; see also Cal. Rules of Ct., Appen. A]. This form is available in an interactive, electronic format in LexisNexis(R) Automated California Judicial Council Forms, which may be accessed at www.lexisone.com for an individual or monthly charge. A noninteractive version in PDF format also is available at www.lexisone.com at no charge.

The petition is for use in initiating a proceeding to change an individual's name under Code Civ. Proc. § 1275 et seq. [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1276 and discussion in § 377.14]. It may be submitted by the person whose name is to be changed, or if that person is a minor, by the person's parent, guardian, near relative, or friend [Code Civ. Proc. § 1276(a)].

The petition is completed by attaching mandatory Cal. Judicial Council Form NC-110, for use in providing additional information relating to the petition and the petitioner's signature [§ 377.71]. If the petitioner is the guardian of a minor whose name is to be changed, the petition must also be completed by attaching mandatory Cal. Judicial Council Form NC-110G, for use in providing information concerning the guardianship [§ 377.72].

Page Two of the form of petition sets out detailed instructions for completing the petition and other necessary forms, filing the petition together with related attachments, requesting a hearing date, publishing or posting the order to show once it has been completed and filed, and preparing for the hearing. For further discussion and a checklist relating to these requirements, see respectively §§ 377.14-377.16 and 377.60.

For a mandatory Judicial Council form to be used instead of this form when the petitioner seeks both a name change and the issuance of a birth certificate reflecting a change of gender [see Health & Safety Code §§ 103430, 103435], see § 377.70A. For a form approved by the Judicial Council for optional used in petitioning for a change of gender and issuance of a new birth certificate for someone who has already obtained, or who does not desire, a name change [see Health & Safety Code §§ 103425, 103430, 10340], see § 377.77.

If the petitioner seeks a confidential name change under the "Safe at Home" address confidentiality program for victims of domestic violence, sexual assault, and stalking [see Gov. Code § 6205 et seq.; see also § 377.14[1]], a Confidential Cover Sheet (Judicial Council Form NC-400) must be attached to the front of the petition for name change and every other document filed in the proceedings [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.575(d); see Code Civ. Proc. § 1277(b)(3)]. The petitioner may also apply for an order to file records under seal in the name-change proceeding [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1277(b)(4)]. For forms for the Confidential Cover Sheet and application to file under seal, see §§ 377.80 -377.84.

This form is to be used instead of the form illustrated in § 377.70 when the petitioner seeks both a change of name and the issuance of a birth certificate reflecting a change of gender [see Health & Safety Code §§ 103430, 103435]. This petition is completed by attaching mandatory Cal. Judicial Council Form NC-110, for use in providing additional information relating to the petitioner and to the petitioner's signature [see § 377.71]. Also required is a physician's affidavit or declaration documenting the change of gender [Health & Safety Code § 103430(a)], which may be submitted using optional Cal. Judicial Council Form NC-210/NC-310 [see § 377.71A]. Page Two of this form sets out detailed instructions for completing the petition and other necessary forms, filing the petition together with related attachments, requesting a hearing date, publishing or posting the order to show once it has been completed and filed, and preparing for the hearing. [2] Use of Form

This form of attachment to the mandatory Judicial Council form of petition for change of name is an illustrative reproduction of Cal. Judicial Council Form NC-110, adopted by the Judicial Council for mandatory use [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1.31; see also Cal. Rules of Ct., Appen. A]. This form is available in an interactive, electronic format in LexisNexis(R) Automated California Judicial Council Forms, which may be accessed at www.lexisone.com for an individual or monthly charge. A noninteractive version in PDF format also is available at www.lexisone.com at no charge.

This attachment is for use in completing the petition for name change. It provides for additional information and signatures required under Code Civ. Proc. § 1276(a),(d) [see discussion in §§ 377.14[2], 377.15]. It also includes a declaration required to be completed by each adult individual seeking a name change, regarding whether he or she is under the jurisdiction of the Department of Corrections or is required to register as a sex offender [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1279.5(e) and discussion in § 377.12[2]].

An additional attachment, mandatory Cal. Judicial Council Form NC-110G, must be completed and attached to the petition when the petition is brought on behalf of a minor by a guardian [see § 377.72].

For illustrative copies of the petitions to which this form must be attached, see §§ 377.70 and 377.70A.

This is an illustrative reproduction of Cal. Judicial Council Form NC-210/NC-310, adopted by the Judicial Council for optional use [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1.35; see also Cal. Rules of Ct., Appen. A] as an attachment to the mandatory Judicial Council form of petition for change of name and gender. This form is available in an interactive, electronic format in LexisNexis(R) Automated California Judicial Council Forms, which may be accessed at www.lexisone.com for an individual or monthly charge. A noninteractive version in PDF format also is available at www.lexisone.com at no charge.

A physician's affidavit or declaration documenting the petitioner's change of gender must accompany any petition for change of name and gender [Health & Safety Code §§ 103425, 103430(a)]. Similarly, if the petition seeks only a change of gender and issuance of a new birth certificate, without a change of name, a physician's affidavit or declaration documenting the gender change must be attached [Health & Safety Code §§ 103425, 103430(a)]. The physician's declaration may be prepared using this form, or a different form of physician's affidavit or declaration may be used [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1.35; see also Cal. Rules of Ct., Appen. A].

For illustrative copies of the petitions to which this form must be attached, see §§ 377.70A [Cal. Judicial Council Form NC-200] and 377.77 [Cal. Judicial Council Form NC-200].

This form of supplemental attachment to the mandatory Judicial Council form of petition for change of name is an illustrative reproduction of Cal. Judicial Council Form NC-110G, adopted by the Judicial Council for mandatory use [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1.31; see also Cal. Rules of Ct., Appen. A]. This form is available in an interactive, electronic format in LexisNexis(R) Automated California Judicial Council Forms, which may be accessed at www.lexisone.com for an individual or monthly charge. A noninteractive version in PDF format also is available at www.lexisone.com at no charge.

This supplemental attachment is for use in completing the petition for name change when it has been brought on behalf of a minor by a guardian. It provides the additional information regarding the guardianship, in the form of a declaration by the guardian, which is required under Code Civ. Proc. § 1276(f) [see discussion in § 377.15[1][c]]. A separate supplemental attachment, or declaration by the guardian, must be completed for each minor whose name is to be changed, when the petition seeks a name change for more than one minor.

For an illustrative form of the petition to which this form must be attached, see § 377.70.

[1] FORM Order to Show Cause for Change of Name [Code Civ. Proc. § 1277; Cal. Judicial Council Form NC-120]

This form of order to show cause is an illustrative reproduction of Cal. Judicial Council Form NC-120, adopted by the Judicial Council for mandatory use [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1.31; see also Cal. Rules of Ct., Appen. A]. This form is available in an interactive, electronic format in LexisNexis(R) Automated California Judicial Council Forms, which may be accessed at www.lexisone.com for an individual or monthly charge. A noninteractive version in PDF format also is available at www.lexisone.com at no charge.

This form of order to show cause is required to be completed by a petitioner for a change of name under Code Civ. Proc. § 1275 et seq. The petitioner must request from the clerk of the court a hearing date on the matter not less than six nor more than 12 weeks from the time the order is made [Code Civ. Proc. § 1277(a)]. The instructions to the underlying petition, Cal. Judicial Council Form NC-100 [see § 377.70], recommend requesting a hearing date at least six weeks in the future. After obtaining a hearing date, the petitioner must obtain the judge's signature on the order, and arrange for the publication or posting of the order pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1277 [see discussion in § 377.14[4]].

Paragraph 2 of this form requires that any person objecting to the name change (1) file a written objection that includes the reasons for the objection at least two court days before the matter is scheduled to be heard, and (2) appear at the hearing to show cause why the petition should not be granted. If no written objection is timely filed, the court may grant the petition without a hearing [Code Civ. Proc. § 1277(a)].

When the change of name relates to a minor, a copy of order to show cause or other notice of the hearing must be served on nonpetitioning parents or, if none, on nonpetitioning grandparents [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1277(a), (e) and discussion in § 377.15[3]]. For a mandatory form of proof of such service, see § 377.74.

For a mandatory Judicial Council form to be used instead of this form when the petitioner seeks both a name change and the issuance of a birth certificate reflecting a change of gender [see Health & Safety Code §§ 103430, 103435], see § 377.73A.

For further discussion regarding the order to show cause, see § 377.14[3].

This form is an illustrative reproduction of Cal. Judicial Council Form NC-410, adopted by the Judicial Council for mandatory use [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1.31; see also Cal. Rules of Ct., Appen. A]. This form is available in an interactive, electronic format in LexisNexis(R) Automated California Judicial Council Forms, which may be accessed at www.lexisone.com for an individual or monthly charge. A noninteractive version in PDF format also is available at www.lexisone.com at no charge.

This form is for use in applying for an order to file records under seal in a confidential name-change proceeding for a participant in the "Safe at Home" address confidentiality program for victims of domestic violence, sexual assault, and stalking [Code Civ. Proc. § 1277(b)(4); see Gov. Code § 6205 et seq.]. This application to file records under seal must be filed at the time the petition for a name change [see § 377.70] is submitted to the court [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.577(a),(b)]. The application must be accompanied by a declaration containing facts sufficient to justify the sealing [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.577(b)]. The records that may be filed under seal must be lodged with the court in a sealed envelope; affixed to the envelope must be a confidential cover sheet [Judicial Council Form NC-400; see § 377.81] that includes the notation "CONDITIONALLY UNDER SEAL" under the title and case number [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.577(d)].

For related forms for use in confidential name-change proceedings, see § 377.80 (Information Sheet), § 377.81 (Confidential Cover Sheet), § 377.83 (Declaration in Support of Application to File Documents Under Seal), and § 377.84 (Order on Application to File Documents Under Seal).

This chapter discusses and contains forms for use in negligence actions.

This chapter begins with a discussion of the general elements of negligence [see § 380.10 et seq.]. It then discusses in detail the required elements of a cause of action for negligence in four parts. The first analysis covers the element of duty, including the statutory definition of duty and various factors considered by the courts in determining whether or not a duty exists; it also covers various types of special relationships pursuant to which a duty may be found to exist [see § 380.30 et seq.]. The second analysis covers the element of breach of duty, including the general standard of care and various other standards of care that the courts have imposed with respect to certain types of persons [see § 380.50 et seq.]. The third analysis covers the element of causation, including actual cause or cause in fact and legal (proximate) cause [see § 380.70 et seq.]. The fourth analysis covers the element of injury and damages, including the plaintiff's duty to mitigate damages [see § 380.90 et seq.]. Forms related to these elements, including complaints for negligence, answers, and other pleadings are provided [see § 380.290 et seq.].

This chapter also discusses various doctrines affecting proof of negligence, including the presumption of negligence arising from a violation of statute and the doctrine of res ipsa loquitur [see § 380.110 et seq.]. Included are forms of complaints to be used in cases based on these doctrines [see § 380.310 et seq.].

This chapter also discusses various doctrines affecting liability, including the doctrines of strict and vicarious liability, and joint and several liability [see § 380.130 et seq.]. Forms of complaints to be used in cases based on these doctrines are included in this chapter [see § 380.330 et seq.].

This chapter also discusses various procedural matters in negligence actions, including statutes of limitations, venue and pleading requirements, and motions for summary adjudication [see § 380.150 et seq.]. Relevant forms are included in this chapter [see § 380.350 et seq.].

This chapter also discusses various affirmative defenses available in negligence actions, including comparative negligence, express assumption of the risk, implied assumption of the risk, the firefighter's rule, and the exclusive remedy of the Workers' Compensation Act [see § 380.170 et seq.]. Relevant forms are included in this chapter [see § 380.370 et seq.].

§ 380.10 Elements of Negligence

Most courts summarize the elements of actionable negligence as a legal duty of care owed by defendant either to plaintiff or to the class of which plaintiff is a member, an act or omission by defendant that is a breach of the duty owed to plaintiff, injury and damages to plaintiff, and defendant's breach as an actual (or direct) and legal (or proximate) cause of plaintiff's injury and damages; generally, the courts consolidate these separate elements of actionable negligence, which the plaintiff has the burden of pleading and proving, into either three or four separate elements [see Hoyem v. Manhattan Beach City Sch. Dist. (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 508, 513-514, 150 Cal. Rptr. 1, 585 P.2d 851 ; United States Liab. Ins. Co. v. Haidinger-Hayes, Inc. (1970) 1 Cal. 3d 586, 594, 83 Cal. Rptr. 418, 463 P.2d 770 ; Koepke v. Loo (1993) 18 Cal. App. 4th 1444, 1448-1449, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 34] . However, applicable statutes indicate that the following five distinct elements are essential to a tort cause of action, including an action based on negligence:

- Duty on the party of defendant to use due care [see Civ. Code §§ 1714(a), 3333].
- Breach of that duty [see Civ. Code § 3333].
- Detriment to the plaintiff (plaintiff's loss or harm suffered in person or property) [see Civ. Code §§ 3281, 3282, 3333].
- Plaintiff's detriment being a proximate result of defendant's breach of duty [see Civ. Code § 3333].
- Damages (the measure of the detriment in terms of money) [see Civ. Code §§ 3281, 3333].

NOTE:

Both courts and commentators have observed the misunderstanding and confusion created by the use of the term "proximate cause" [see, e.g., Mitchell v. Gonzales (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 1041, 1050-1051, 1 Cal.

Rptr. 2d 913, 819 P.2d 872] . Most practicing trial lawyers no longer use the term "proximate cause," preferring instead the term "legal cause."

As one commentator has observed, "[n]egligence as it is commonly understood is conduct [that] involves undue risk of harm to others" [Prosser and Keeton on the Law of Torts (5th ed. 1984), ch. 5, Negligence: Standard of Conduct, § 31, p. 169 ("negligence ... is ... behavior [that] should be recognized as involving unreasonable danger to others")].

Although negligence has historically been categorized by distinct "degrees" of legal fault, corresponding to required degrees of care (such as slight, ordinary, and gross negligence), the development of the doctrine ofcomparative negligence under Li v. Yellow Cab Co. [Li v. Yellow Cab Co. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 804, 119 Cal. Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d 1226 ; see § 380.170[1]] makes these distinctions unnecessary [Continental Ins. Co. v. American Prot. Indus. (1987) 197 Cal. App. 3d 322, 329 n.7, 329-330, 242 Cal. Rptr. 784] .

§ 380.30 Duty

[1] Existence as Essential Element

The cause of action for negligence requires a showing that the defendant breached a duty of care owed to the plaintiff or to a class of persons of which the plaintiff is a member. This is an indispensable prerequisite to the imposition of liability based on negligence [see, e.g., Richards v. Stanley (1954) 43 Cal. 2d 60, 63, 271 P.2d 23 ; Valdez v. J.D. Diffenbaugh Co. (1975) 51 Cal. App. 3d 494, 505, 124 Cal. Rptr. 467] . The requirement of duty is an "obligation, recognized by the law, requiring the actor to conform to a certain standard of conduct, for the protection of others against unreasonable risks" [Prosser and Keeton on the Law of Torts (5th ed. 1984) ch. 5, § 30, p. 164; see Hilyar v. Union Ice Co. (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 30, 36-37, 286 P.2d 21 ; Peter W. v. San Francisco Unified Sch. Dist. (1976) 60 Cal. App. 3d 814, 822, 131 Cal. Rptr. 854] .

"Duty" in our legal system refers to the judicial determination that one person should be required to compensate another who has been injured, based on a number of policy considerations involving the interests of both parties as well as society [Dillon v. Legg (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 728, 734, 69 Cal. Rptr. 72, 441 P.2d 912] . The question of duty may involve two separate issues: (1) whether or not there is any legally recognized obligation to exercise care to avoid or minimize risks of harm, and (2) the degree of care required to satisfy that obligation.

[2] Case-by-Case Determination

Duty is an ephemeral concept whose ascertainment and definition in any specific factual context is an imprecise task [Valdez v. J.D. Diffenbaugh Co. (1975) 51 Cal. App. 3d 494, 505, 124 Cal. Rptr. 467] . Legal duties are merely conclusory expressions that, in cases of a particular type, liability should be imposed for damage done [Tarasoff v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 425, 434, 131 Cal. Rptr. 14, 551 P.2d 334] .

The common law rule of general application accepted by the courts is that all persons are required to use ordinary care to prevent others from being injured as the result of their conduct [Hilyar v. Union Ice Co. (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 30, 36, 286 P.2d 21] . Beyond this general statement, there seems to be no universal principle to apply to determine whether or not a defendant owes a duty to a plaintiff. "Duty" is only an expression of the sum total of those considerations of policy that lead the law to say that a particular plaintiff is entitled to protection [Dillon v. Legg (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 728, 734, 69 Cal. Rptr. 72, 441 P.2d 912 ; De Lima v. Magnesite Waterproofing & Refinishing (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 776, 781, 236 Cal. Rptr. 519] . Courts invoke the concept of duty to limit the otherwise potentially infinite liability that would follow from every negligent act [Dillon v. Legg (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 728, 739, 69 Cal. Rptr. 72, 441 P.2d 912] .

The California Supreme Court has repeatedly resisted overly rigid common law formulations of duty [J'Aire Corp. v. Gregory (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 799, 805, 157 Cal. Rptr. 407, 598 P.2d 60 ; see, e.g., Rowland v. Christian (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 108, 116-120, 70 Cal. Rptr. 97, 443 P.2d 561 (abolishing common law limitations on duty of possessors of real property to protect entrants from injury)]. Specific duties are thus determined on a case-by-case analysis.

[3] Statutory Definition

Civ. Code § 1714(a) provides that every person is responsible, not only for the results of his or her willful acts, but also for an injury occasioned to another by his or her want of ordinary care or skill in the management of his or her property or person, except so far as the other person has, willfully or by want of ordinary care, brought the injury on himself or herself. By its terms, this provision imposes the obligation to exercise ordinary care and skill to avoid injury to others.

The California Supreme Court has held that unless a statutory provision provides an exception to the fundamental principle enunciated by Civ. Code § 1714, no such exception should be made unless clearly supported by public policy [Rowland v. Christian (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 108, 112, 70 Cal. Rptr. 97, 443 P.2d 561] . The Court has also stated that Section 1714 incorporates a broad principle of responsibility based on civil law, as opposed to the more restricted common law [Li v. Yellow Cab Co. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 804, 818-823, 119 Cal. Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d 1226 ; see Rowland v. Christian (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 108, 112, 70 Cal. Rptr. 97, 443 P.2d 561] .

[a] Balancing of Factors

In Rowland v. Christian, the California Supreme Court observed that the general rule in California, as codified in Civ. Code § 1714, is that every person is liable for injuries caused by his or her failure to exercise reasonable care under the circumstances. The Court held that this generalprinciple should not be departed from in the absence of a statutory exception, unless such a departure is clearly supported by public policy [Rowland v. Christian (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 108, 112, 70 Cal. Rptr. 97, 443 P.2d 561] . The Court identified a number of factors that courts should consider in determining whether or not an exception to the general duty to exercise ordinary care should be made. These factors include [Rowland v. Christian (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 108, 112-113, 70 Cal. Rptr. 97, 443 P.2d 561] :

- The foreseeability of harm to the plaintiff;
- The degree of certainty that the plaintiff has been injured;
- The connection between the defendant's conduct and the injury suffered;
- The moral blame attached to the defendant's conduct;
- The policy of preventing future harm;

- The extent of the burden on the defendant caused by the imposition of a duty to exercise care;
- The consequences to the community of imposing such a duty; and
- The availability, cost, and prevalence of insurance for the risk involved.

[b] Public Policy Limitations

The courts recognize that there may be situations in which a defendant is not subject to a duty of reasonable care because a public policy clearly supports an exception to the general rule [see Rowland v. Christian (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 108, 112, 70 Cal. Rptr. 97, 443 P.2d 561 ; see, e.g., Parsons v. Crown Disposal Co. (1997) 15 Cal. 4th 456, 474, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 291, 936 P.2d 70 (consequences to community of imposing duty on garbage company to guard against possibility of frightening horse with loud noises from its garbage truck, as well as high social utility of defendant's garbage collection activity, militated against imposing duty)]. In many cases, the public policy limitation may involve application and balancing of some of the factors set forth in Rowland v. Christian [Rowland v. Christian (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 108, 112-113, 70 Cal. Rptr. 97, 443 P.2d 561 ; see Monreal v. Tobin (1998) 61 Cal. App. 4th 1337, 1351, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 168 (applying Rowland balancing test and concluding that a reasonably prudent driver of a vehicle traveling at the posted maximum speed limit in the middle lane of a four-lane freeway, owes no common law or statutory duty to move his or her vehicle to the right into the next slower lane even if other traffic is traveling in excess of the posted speed limit); Krawitz v. Rusch (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 957, 963-965, 257 Cal. Rptr. 610 ; see § 380.30[4]]. In other cases, the public policy limitation may involve considerations that are separate from or in addition to the specific factors listed in Rowland [see Borer v. American Airlines, Inc. (1977) 19 Cal. 3d 441, 446-450, 138 Cal. Rptr. 302, 563 P.2d 858 (denying cause of action for loss of consortium to children whose parent was injured based on several policy reasons including intangible nature of loss, fact that loss was essentially noncompensable, and fact that unrealistic social burden of providing damages would be created)].

A court is most likely to closely analyze public policy considerations if the plaintiff seeks tort recovery for conduct that was not previously considered actionable. For example, general considerations of public policy were central to a decision of the California Supreme Court in a case involving a child's "wrongful life" claim for general damages resulting from an alleged negligent failure of a health care provider to advise the child's parents of a possible hereditary condition of deafness, depriving them of the right to decide not to conceive the child. The Court denied the child's "wrongful life" claim for general damages, relying on the public policy against compensating intangible losses of a problematic or speculative nature [Turpin v. Sortini (1982) 31 Cal. 3d 220, 236-237, 182 Cal. Rptr. 337, 643 P.2d 954] . For similar reasons, a plaintiff's claim against a school district for "negligent education" was rejected on the grounds that there could be no reasonable degree of certainty of the plaintiff's injury and no certain connection between the defendant's conduct and the injury suffered [Peter W. v. San Francisco Unified Sch. Dist. (1976) 60 Cal. App. 3d 814, 824-825, 131 Cal. Rptr. 854] . The court of appeal also has refused to expand the duties of insurers, on the basis of public policy, by imposing a duty on them to affirmatively volunteer advice to insureds regarding the availability of additional or different insurance coverage. Neither the long term relationship between insureds and their agent, the generally superior knowledge of the agent regarding coverage, nor the agent's review of the policies issued gives rise to such a duty [Fitzpatrick v. Hayes (1997) 57 Cal. App. 4th 916, 928, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 445] .

[c] Mixed Question of Law and Fact

Generally, the existence of a duty of care is a question of law to be determined by the court, because the concept of duty is not based on easily determined, natural rules that particular persons are obligated to act in certain ways towards certain persons [Ramirez v. Plough, Inc. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 539, 546, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 97, 863 P.2d 167 ; Ballard v. Uribe (1986) 41 Cal. 3d 564, 572 n. 6, 224 Cal. Rptr. 664, 715 P.2d 624 ; Thompson v. County of Alameda (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 741, 750, 167 Cal. Rptr. 70, 614 P.2d 728] . Prior to the California Supreme Court's decision in Ann M. v. Pacific Plaza Shopping Ctr. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 666, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 137, 863 P.2d 207 , it was somewhat misleading to state flatly that duty was a question of law, because a primary consideration in a court's determination of duty is the foreseeability of the plaintiff's injury, and the Court had held that foreseeability was generally a question of fact for the jury [Palma v. U.S. Indus. Fasteners, Inc. (1984) 36 Cal. 3d 171, 186, 203 Cal. Rptr. 626, 681 P.2d 893 ; Weirum v. RKO Gen., Inc. (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 40, 46,123 Cal. Rptr. 468, 539 P.2d 36] . This led some courts to hold that duty was "primarily" a question of law [see, e.g., Weirum v. RKO Gen., Inc. (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 40, 46, 123 Cal. Rptr. 468, 539 P.2d 36] or that it was a "mixed question" of law and fact [see, e.g., Barker v. Wah Low (1971) 19 Cal. App. 3d 710, 721-722, 97 Cal. Rptr. 85] . In Ann M. v. Pacific Plaza Shopping Center, the Court rejected the view that foreseeability in the context of determining duty is normally a question of fact reserved for the jury. It held that foreseeability, when analyzed to determine the existence of scope of a duty, is a question of law to be decided by the court [Ann M. v. Pacific Plaza Shopping Ctr. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 666, 678, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 137, 863 P.2d 207] .

In some cases, a court may decide that even if the defendant could have foreseen the plaintiff's injury, the defendant had no duty to prevent it. Such a determination may result if other facts considered in the duty question, such as the burden to the defendant of preventing harm, lead the court to conclude that a duty should not be imposed, notwithstanding the foreseeability of the plaintiff's injury [see Baldwin v. Zoradi (1981) 123 Cal. App. 3d 275, 286-287, 176 Cal. Rptr. 809 (college trustees had no duty to prevent plaintiff's injury that resulted from on-campus drinking)]. If a court decides in such a case that the defendant owed no duty to the plaintiff, it may be said that duty is entirely a question of law.

Courts have also decided the duty question purely as a matter of law when they determine that there are overriding public policy reasons compelling a determination that the defendant owed no duty to the plaintiff to guard against the injuries of which the plaintiff complains [see, e.g., Turpin v. Sortini (1982) 31 Cal. 3d 220, 237, 182 Cal. Rptr. 337, 643 P.2d 954 (health care providers had no duty to infant plaintiff to have advised her parents not to conceive her)].

However, issues of fact may require resolution before the issue of duty can be determined. In one case, for example, the court of appeal, recognizing that a utility company can be held liable for the negligent placement of utility poles along a roadway, concluded that there was an unresolved issue of fact as to whether the defendant power company exercised sufficient control over the placement of the light pole hit by plaintiff's vehicle to impose a duty on the power company to place the pole in such a way as to minimize the risk of injury caused by collisions. Thus, even though the court recognized that the question of whether a duty of care existed was a question of law, the court also recognized that unresolved and disputed factual issues could prevent a court from deciding the question without first disposing of unresolved factual disputes [Laabs v. Southern California Edison Co. (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 1260, 1277-1279, 97 Cal. Rptr. 3d 241].

[5] Foreseeability

[a] Most Important Factor in Determining Whether Duty Imposed

The existence of a duty is determined by weighing a number of factors set forth by the California Supreme Court [see Rowland v. Christian (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 108, 112-113, 70 Cal. Rptr. 97, 443 P.2d 561 ; see also § 380.30[4]]. The courts have consistently held that one of the factors, foreseeability of harm, is a primary consideration in determining the existence of a duty [see, e.g., Hedlund v. Superior Court (1983) 34 Cal. 3d 695, 705, 194 Cal. Rptr. 805, 669 P.2d 41 ; Weirum v. RKO Gen., Inc. (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 40, 46, 123 Cal. Rptr. 468, 539 P.2d 36 ; De Lima v. Magnesite Waterproofing & Refinishing (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 776, 782, 236 Cal. Rptr. 519] . The California Supreme Court has stated that, as a general principle, a defendant owes a duty of care to all persons who are foreseeably endangered by the defendant's conduct [Tarasoff v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 425, 434-435, 131 Cal. Rptr. 14, 551 P.2d 334] .

While reasonable foreseeability of injury is only one factor to consider, it is essential to a finding that a duty of care existed, and a finding that injury was not reasonably foreseeable precludes a finding that a legal duty existed, regardless of whether the other factors may weigh in favor of imposing a duty [Ludwig v. City of San Diego (1998) 65 Cal. App.

4th 1105, 1111-1112, 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 809 (summary judgment for defendant was proper based only on finding that injury was not reasonably foreseeable)].

A court's task in determining duty is not to decide whether a particular plaintiff's injury was reasonably foreseeable in light of a particular defendant's conduct, but rather to evaluate more generally whether the category of negligent conduct at issue is sufficiently likely to result in the kind of harm experienced that liability may appropriately be imposed on the negligent party [Ballard v. Uribe (1986) 41 Cal. 3d 564, 572 n.6, 224 Cal. Rptr. 664, 715 P.2d 624 ; Brooks v. Eugene Burger Mgmt. Corp. (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1611, 1620, 264 Cal. Rptr. 756] . The foreseeability of harm must be decided on a case-by-case basis [see Dillon v. Legg (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 728, 740, 69 Cal. Rptr. 72, 441 P.2d 912] .

[b] Not Always Determinative of Duty

Although the foreseeability of a risk is the primary consideration in deciding whether or not the defendant had a duty to protect against the risk, the existence of a duty does not automatically follow from a finding that the risk was foreseeable [Parsons v. Crown Disposal Co. (1997) 15 Cal. 4th 456, 476, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 291, 936 P.2d 70 ; Baldwin v. Zoradi (1981) 123 Cal. App. 3d 275, 286, 176 Cal. Rptr. 809 ; see, e.g., Davidson v. City of Westminster (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 197, 203-209, 185 Cal. Rptr. 252, 649 P.2d 894 (police officers had no duty to warn plaintiff of potential assault absent special relationship, notwithstanding foreseeability of attack)]. A court must consider the factors other than foreseeability enumerated in Rowland v. Christian [Rowland v. Christian (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 108, 112-113, 70 Cal. Rptr. 97, 443 P.2d 561 ; see § 380.30[4]] in determining whether or not to impose a duty of care in a particular case [Jamison v. Mark C. Bloome Co. (1980) 112 Cal. App. 3d 570, 580, 169 Cal. Rptr. 399] . Consideration of these other factors may lead a court to conclude that the defendant should not be held liable even though the plaintiff's injury was foreseeable [see, e.g., Elden v. Sheldon (1988) 46 Cal. 3d 267, 274-277, 250 Cal. Rptr. 254, 758 P.2d 582 (public policy reasons for denying negligent infliction of emotional distress recovery to persons not in immediate family of injured person, despite foreseeability of harm to unmarried cohabitant of injured person)].

Social policy considerations, such as the social utility of the defendant's conduct and the consequences to the community of imposing a duty on the defendant, may limit liability even for foreseeable injury. For example, a plaintiff who was thrown from a horse when the horse was frightened by loud noises from a nearby garbage truck was denied recovery for hisinjuries despite the fact that the defendant's employee knew that a bridle path abutted the garbage bin, and that the collection procedure might frighten a horse. The California Supreme Court held that the social utility of the defendant's conduct, and the consequences to the community of imposing a duty on the defendant to guard against frightening a horse, overrode the foreseeability factor [Parsons v. Crown Disposal Co. (1997) 15 Cal. 4th 456, 476, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 291, 936 P.2d 70 ; see also Burns v. Neiman Marcus Group, Inc. (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 479, 489-490, 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 130 (regardless of foreseeability of possibility of injury caused by merchant's acceptance of third-party checks in payment of credit card bill, other Rowland factors militated against imposition of duty to inquire of drawer as to holder's authority to tender check as payment)].

If foreseeability is minimal and the other factors are also weak, a court must determine that no duty exists [Forrand v. Foodmaker, Inc. (1986) 182 Cal. App. 3d 196, 200, 227 Cal. Rptr. 74] . For example, an automotive repair shop had no duty to protect the public from vandals breaking into a shed and overturning drums of recycled oil that spilled onto the sidewalk; the harm was only minimally foreseeable, and this factor was outweighed by the "morality" of recyling oil and the heavy burden that would be imposed on the defendant if it were required to guard the oil drums more closely [Jamison v. Mark C. Bloome Co. (1980) 112 Cal. App. 3d 570, 580-581, 169 Cal. Rptr. 399] .

Because the courts must weigh the foreseeability of any harm along with a number of other factors [see § 380.30[4]], the degree of foreseeability necessary to support the imposition of a duty varies from case to case; foreseeability is an "elastic factor" in the balancing process used to determine the existence of a duty [Isaacs v. Huntington Mem'l Hosp.

(1985) 38 Cal. 3d 112, 125, 211 Cal. Rptr. 356, 695 P.2d 653] . If the burden of preventing future harm is great, a high degree of foreseeability may be required before a duty will be imposed [Rogers v. Jones (1976) 56 Cal. App. 3d 346, 352, 128 Cal. Rptr. 404 (no duty imposed on parking lot operator because of near impossibility of completely controlling stadium crowds)]. If there are strong policy reasons for preventing harm such as that suffered by the plaintiff, or if the harm can be prevented by simple means, a lesser degree of foreseeability may be required [Doe v. Roe (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 1538, 1544, 267 Cal. Rptr. 564 (strong public policy of preventing venereal disease and ease of warning prospective sex partner made slight degree of foreseeability sufficient to impose duty of care on defendant who knew he had genital herpes but nonetheless had sexual relations with plaintiff without revealing fact of disease to her); Musgrove v. Ambrose Props. (1978) 87 Cal. App. 3d 44, 52-53, 150 Cal. Rptr. 722 (shopping center could easily post signs forbidding bicycles on walkways or post security guards to prevent persons from riding bicycles on walkways and thereby prevent bicyclists from running into pedestrians)].

[d] Question of Law Decided by Court

Prior to the California Supreme Court's opinion in Ann M. v. Pacific Plaza Shopping Center [Ann M. v. Pacific Plaza Shopping Ctr. (1993) 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 137, 863 P.2d 207] , language in Isaacs v. Huntington Memorial Hospital Isaacs v. Huntington Mem'l Hosp. (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 112, 126, 127, 130, 211 Cal. Rptr. 356, 695 P.2d 653] was read as holding that whether a particular risk of harm was foreseeable by defendant was generally a question of fact to be decided by a jury. The Court has rejected this view, and now holds that foreseeability, when analyzed to determine the existence or scope of a duty, is a question of law to be decided by the court [Ann M. v. Pacific Plaza Shopping Ctr. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 666, 678, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 137, 863 P.2d 207] .

[i] Actual Foreseeability Not Required

In analyzing whether a particular risk of harm was foreseeable by the defendant, the question is not whether the defendant actually foresaw the risk, but whether the risk was reasonably foreseeable [Dillon v. Legg (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 728, 741, 69 Cal. Rptr. 72, 441 P.2d 912] . For example, if a defendant contractor failed to complete portions of a dam as scheduled, and a very heavy rainfall caused the dam to give way, flooding plaintiff's quarry operation, the proper inquiry was whether or not such a rainfall and the resulting damage was reasonably foreseeable. The plaintiff was not required to show that the contractor had actually foreseen what would happen [Diamond Springs Lime Co. v. American River Constructors (1971) 16 Cal. App. 3d 581, 598, 94 Cal. Rptr. 200] .

[ii] Precise Circumstances Need Not Be Foreseeable

In proving that a defendant could reasonably have foreseen the risk of harm, a plaintiff is not required to show that the precise circumstances under which he or she was harmed were foreseeable. For example, where a plaintiff's factory suffered a power surge, damaging equipment and idling workers for two hours because the defendant negligently ran into a nearby utility pole, the jury's decision that the plaintiff's damages were foreseeable by the defendant was not improper. By driving negligently, the defendant could reasonably have foreseen that his actions could damage another's property, and it was not necessary to show that he could have foreseen the precise circumstances under which the damage occurred [George A. Hormel & Co. v. Maez (1979) 92 Cal. App. 3d 963, 968-969, 155 Cal. Rptr. 337] .

Although the precise circumstances of harm need not be foreseeable, the courts have imposed some limits on what a defendant will be reasonably required to foresee. In a case involving a tow truck driver who was killed by a third party while attempting to remove an intoxicated motorist's car from the side of a freeway after she had been arrested, the court held that the intoxicated motorist was not liable for the tow truck driver's death. The motorist had a duty to avoid driving under the influence of alcohol, andmight have foreseen that doing so would result in her being stopped by the side of the road, but her negligent conduct was not sufficiently likely to result in the harm experienced (a third party's striking and killing the tow truck driver) to impose liability [Bryant v. Glastetter (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 770, 780, 38

Cal. Rptr. 2d 291] .

[iii] "Likely Enough in Setting of Modern Life" Standard

The California Supreme Court has held that foreseeability is not to be measured by what is more probable than not, but "includes whatever is likely enough in the setting of modern life that a reasonably thoughtful [person] would take account of it in guiding practical conduct" [Bigbee v. Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. (1983) 34 Cal. 3d 49, 57, 192 Cal. Rptr. 857, 665 P.2d 947] .

Although this "setting of modern life" test for determining whether or not a risk is "reasonably foreseeable" is somewhat amorphous, several courts have used it in determing the foreseeability of risks [see, e.g., Sturgeon v. Curnutt (1994) 29 Cal. App. 4th 301, 307, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 498 ; Cohen v. Southland Corp. (1984) 157 Cal. App. 3d 130, 141, 203 Cal. Rptr. 572 (risk that late-night convenience store customer will be injured in attempted robbery of store may be foreseeable); Gomez v. Ticor (1983) 145 Cal. App. 3d 622, 629, 193 Cal. Rptr. 600 (violent criminal attack in large, unattended parking facility may be foreseeable)]. For example, it was not reasonably foreseeable that a visitor to a house would be accidentally shot by a resident of the house who was known to possess firearms and to have a drinking problem, because there was no evidence that the resident had ever harmed anyone due to either his drinking problem or his possession of firearms, and no evidence that he handled firearms unsafely while drunk [Sturgeon v. Curnutt (1994) 29 Cal. App. 4th 301, 307-308, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 498] .

[iv] Prior Similar Incidents

In some cases, especially those involving liability for criminal acts of third parties, the plaintiff may be able to prove that the defendant could reasonably have foreseen the risk of harm the plaintiff suffered because of the previous occurrence of similar incidents. However, the degree of foreseeability needed to impose a particular duty to prevent harm varies, depending on the burden of imposing the preventative measures suggested by the plaintiff in the particular case [Delgado v. Trax Bar & Grill (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 224, 243-244]. A heightened degree of foreseeability is necessary before a duty will be imposed on a defendant to take great or onerous preventative security measures. To establish this heightened degree of foreseeability, a plaintiff must provide evidence of prior similar criminal incidents or other indications of a reasonably foreseeable risk of violent criminal assaults in that location [Delgado v. Trax Bar & Grill (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 224, 243-244]. By contrast, a lesser degree of foreseeability, one not requiring evidence of prior similar incidents on or near the premises, is all that is required if the plaintiff seeks to impose a duty to take preventative measures that are simple or create only a minimal burden on the defendant [Delgado v. Trax Bar & Grill (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 224, 243-244].

For example, the owner of a shopping mall where the plaintiff was raped did not have a duty to provide security guards in the mall's common areas because the owner had no notice of any prior similar incidents. Evidence of the presence of transients on the premises and of a high statistical crime rate in the surrounding area did not qualify as evidence of prior similar incidents [Ann M. v. Pacific Plaza Shopping Ctr. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 666, 679-680, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 137, 863 P.2d 207] . The California Supreme Court has also held that neither the owner of a commercial building nor the parking services company owed a legal duty of care to prevent a sexual assault on the plaintiff in the building's underground parking garage. In that particular case, no assaults had occurred in the parking garage in the preceding ten years, and although numerous bank robberies had occurred in the bank on the ground floor of the building, the Court concluded that these incidents were not sufficiently similar to the sexual assault to establish the requisite foreseeability [Sharon P. v. Arman, Ltd. (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 1181, 1197, 91 Cal. Rptr. 2d 35, 989 P.2d 121] . In addition, although the plaintiff provided police statistics of criminal activity, including sexual assaults, in the surrounding 50-block area for the 15 months prior to the attack in question, she provided no evidence showing the proximity of these crimes to the parking garage [Sharon P. v. Arman, Ltd. (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 1181, 1198, 91 Cal. Rptr. 2d 35, 989 P.2d 121] . Similarly, previous crimes near and at a defendant's restaurant did not support a finding that the defendant could foresee a mass murderous assault [see Lopez v. McDonald's Corp. (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 495, 510-512, 238 Cal. Rptr. 436] .

By contrast, the court of appeal, in reversing a grant of nonsuit, held that a patron assaulted at a gas station had provided substantial evidence of prior violent crime on the premises, even though his assault was racially motivated and the earlier criminal activity may not have been. The evidence showed that the station had been the site of many recent robberies and attacks and that violent gang activity was rampant on the premises and in the neighborhood. Despite the lack of evidence showing that the earlier crimes were specifically racially motivated, the court noted that all that is required is proof of prior similar incidents, not proof of prior identical incidents [Claxton v. Atlantic Richfield Co. (2003) 108 Cal. App. 4th 327, 338-339, 133 Cal. Rptr. 2d 425] .

The high degree of foreseeability provided by prior similar incidents and required to impose a duty of care to take expensive precautions may also apply in cases involving noncriminal acts of third persons, such as so-called "curb jumping" cases in which a patron of a business is struck andinjured by a car that jumps a curb and comes onto the sidewalk. In these cases, the owner of the business premises generally is not liable because such accidents are insufficiently likely, as a matter of law, if all of the following conditions are met: the business has provided both curbs and wheelstops, the parking lot design is typical of most businesses and meets local standards and regulations, there were no prior similar incidents, and nothing required customers to remain in a fixed location adjacent to the parking area [Jefferson v. Qwik Korner Mkt., Inc. (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 990, 994-995, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 171] . Thus, a convenience store whose parking lot had a raised curb and concrete wheelstops did not have a duty to install metal posts at the end of each parking space; imposing such a duty would be unreasonably burdensome given the absence of any prior similar incidents [Jefferson v. Qwik Korner Mkt., Inc. (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 990, 995-996, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 171] .

In another case, the California Supreme Court held that neither a child care facility nor the owner of the premises owed a duty of care to protect against the criminal actions of a man who intentionally drove his car through a four-feet-high chain link fence that surrounded a playground, killing two children [Wiener v. Southcoast Childcare Ctrs., Inc. (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 1138, 1141-1142, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 615, 88 P.3d 517] . The Court in that case held that the foreseeability of the injury-causing conduct had to be analyzed under the Ann M. test for determining the foreseeability of third-party criminal conduct, and not under the less stringent test for foreseeability that would be used in a case of ordinary negligence involving a "curb-jumping" accident. Under the Ann M. standard, the Court concluded, the criminal assault that occurred was unforeseeable, given the absence of any prior acts of violence at the child care center or at any other similar business in the area, and the complete impossibility of anticipating the driver's outrageous conduct [Wiener v. Southcoast Childcare Ctrs., Inc. (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 1138, 1150, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 615, 88 P.3d 517] .

If one person acts negligently so that another is injured, the first person will be held to foresee that a third person may come to the injured person's aid, and the first person will be liable for injuries the third person sustains in a rescue attempt unless the rescuer acted recklessly [see Solgaard v. Guy F. Atkinson Co. (1971) 6 Cal. 3d 361, 368-369, 99 Cal. Rptr. 29, 491 P.2d 821] . For example, a dam builder that failed to follow municipal safety orders, thereby causing a worker to fall down a steep slope, was liable to the physician who was injured while going to the worker's aid [Solgaard v. Guy F. Atkinson Co. (1971) 6 Cal. 3d 361, 368-369, 99 Cal. Rptr. 29, 491 P.2d 821] . However, an intoxicated motorist was not liable to a tow truck driver who was killed by a third party while attempting to remove the motorist's car from the side of a freeway after she had been arrested; the tow truck driver was not rescuing the motorist, but was performing the job he had been hired to do [Bryant v. Glastetter (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 770, 784, 38 Cal. Rptr. 2d 291] .

Although the rescue doctrine has traditionally been applied to allow recovery to a plaintiff who rescues a third party from a peril created by the defendant's negligence, the doctrine may also be applied if the rescued party is the defendant whose negligence created the peril [Sears v. Morrison (1999) 76 Cal. App. 4th 577, 579, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 528] . In so holding, the court of appeal concluded that most of the policy considerations that justify the doctrine in third-party cases apply equally if the party being rescued is the original negligent party [Sears v. Morrison (1999) 76 Cal. App. 4th 577, 581, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 528] . Although the court noted one distinction--that the negligent party does not owe a legal duty to avoid inflicting self-injury--the court dismissed the relevance of this distinction on the grounds that the rescue doctrine is based on a duty to avoid creating a situation that results in injury to the rescuer, not to the party being rescued [Sears v. Morrison (1999) 76 Cal. App. 4th 577, 581-582, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 528] .

§ 380.31 Duty Arising From Contract

[1] Same Act as Both Tort and Breach of Contract

If two parties have a contractual relationship, the obligation allegedly breached may not be purely contractual, but may also be an obligation imposed by law, the breach of which constitutes a tort [see Civ. Code § 1427]. The distinction between actions based on tort and those based on breach of contract is significant for a number of reasons. First, certain items of recovery that are available in tort actions, such as punitive damages [see Civ. Code § 3294(a)] and compensatory damages for emotional distress, are generally not available in actions for breach of contract [see Erlich v. Menezes (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 543, 558, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 886, 981 P.2d 978 ; Quigley v. Pet, Inc. (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 877, 887-888, 208 Cal. Rptr. 394] . Secondly, the applicable statute of limitations and various procedural issues may differ depending on whether the action is based on contract or tort [see, e.g., Voth v. Wasco Pub. Util. Dist. (1976) 56 Cal. App. 3d 353, 356-357, 128 Cal. Rptr. 608 (applicability of claims requirement in action against public entity); Allred v. Bekins Wide World Van Servs. (1975) 45 Cal. App. 3d 984, 988-990, 120 Cal. Rptr. 312 (applicable limitations period)].

The same act may constitute both a tort and a breach of contract [see, e.g., Crisci v. Security Ins. Co. (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 425, 432-433, 58 Cal. Rptr. 13, 426 P.2d 173 (breach by insurer of implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing owed to insured)]. In this situation, the injured party generally may elect to waive the contract and sue in tort or waive the tort and base his or her action on contract [Eads v. Marks (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 807, 811, 249 P.2d 257] . However, not every breach of contract will subjectthe breaching party to liability in tort [see Quigley v. Pet, Inc. (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 877, 889, 208 Cal. Rptr. 394] .

Outside of the insurance contract context, tort recovery for breach of contract is precluded absent the violation of an independent duty arising from principles of tort law. More specifically, mere bad-faith denial of the existence of a contract or denial of liability under the contract are insufficient to justify tort liability [Freeman & Mills, Inc. v. Belcher Oil Co. (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 85, 102, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 420, 900 P.2d 669] . A negligent breach of contract alone will generally be insufficient to support an award of tort damages, at least outside of the insurance context [Erlich v. Menezes (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 543, 553-554, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 886, 981 P.2d 978] .

For example, the Supreme Court refused to allow homeowners or a homeowners association to recover in negligence from housing developers and contractors for deviations from applicable building codes and industry standards that had not yet caused property damage or personal injury or ripened into involuntary out-of-pocket repair costs [Aas v. Superior Court (2000) 101 Cal. Rptr. 2d 718, 12 P.3d 1125] . In that opinion, the Supreme Court rejected an argument for allowing recovery of tort damages for economic loss that was based on the court of appeal's holding in North American Chemical Co. v. Superior Court, which had held that the negligent performance of a services contract may support a tort recovery for foreseeable economic loss even in the absence of injury to person or property [see North Am. Chem. Co. v. Superior Court (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th 764, 774, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 466] . In the homeowners' case, however, the Supreme Court reiterated that the negligent performance of a construction contract, without more, does not justify an award of tort damages [Aas v. Superior Court (2000) 101 Cal. Rptr. 2d 718, 12 P.3d 1125] .

It should be noted that while the general principles enunciated by the Supreme Court in that opinion are still valid, their application in the context of defects arising from new residential construction has subsequently been abrogated by the Right to Repair Act, codified at Civ. Code § 895 et seq. [see Greystone Homes, Inc. v. Midtec, Inc. (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 1194, 1202, 86 Cal. Rptr. 3d 196]. Under that Act, a homeowner may recover for economic loss from a builder or other parties if the defendant violates building standards provided in the Act, without having to show that the violation caused property damage or personal injury [see Civ. Code §§ 896, 942]. For further discussion of the Right to Repair Act, see Ch. 104, Building Contracts .

As a general rule, however, it appears that a tortious breach of contract may occur if [Erlich v. Menezes (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 543, 553-554, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 886, 981 P.2d 978] :

- The breach is accompanied by a common law tort, such as fraud or conversion;
- The means used to breach the contract are tortious by use of deceit or undue coercion; or
- One party intentionally breaches the contract, intending or knowing that the breach will cause severe, unmitigable harm in the form of mental anguish, personal hardship, or substantial consequential damages.

In one case, for example, the California Supreme Court held that a helicopter manufacturer could recover tort damages, including punitive damages, from a parts manufacturer that provided vital parts knowing that they were not in conformity with manufacturing specifications as detailed in the contract between the parties. The Court concluded that the parts manufacturer committed the intentional tort of fraud by providing certificates of compliance with the parts, despite knowing that the parts were not in compliance, and that the helicopter manufacturer relied on these affirmative misrepresentations to its detriment when it accepted the nonconforming parts. Under these circumstances, the fraudulent act of providing the false certificates of compliance was an independent tort separate from the breach of contract itself, which was the provision of the nonconforming parts [Robinson Helicopter Co., Inc. v. Dana Corp. (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 979, 990-991, 22 Cal. Rptr. 3d 352, 102 P.3d 268] . Although it is unclear to what extent the Court predicated its decision on these concerns, the Court also noted that the defendant's act of providing critical helicopter parts that were not in compliance with specifications placed the lives of people flying in the helicopters at risk and exposed the helicopter manufacturer to liability for personal damages beyond any damage to the helicopters, even though the defective parts were discovered before any accidents actually occurred [Robinson Helicopter Co., Inc. v. Dana Corp. (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 979, 991 n.7, 993, 22 Cal. Rptr. 3d 352, 102 P.3d 268] .

[2] Contractual Relationship as Creating Independent Legal Duty

If the defendant owes a duty to exercise due care under general negligence principles, the defendant may be liable in tort even if the failure to exercise due care also constitutes a breach of contract [see, e.g., Eads v. Marks (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 807, 810-811, 249 P.2d 257 ; Voth v. Wasco Pub. Util. Dist. (1976) 56 Cal. App. 3d 353, 356-357, 128 Cal. Rptr. 608] . The existence of a contractual relationship may, in some instances, create an independent legal duty to exercise due care, the breach of which will give rise to a cause of action in tort [J'Aire Corp. v. Gregory (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 799, 803, 157 Cal. Rptr. 407, 598 P.2d 60 ; Eads v. Marks (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 807, 810-811, 249 P.2d 257 ; see Marois v. Royal Investigation & Patrol, Inc. (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 193, 200, 208 Cal. Rptr. 384 (private security guard who contracted with business to provide security services thereby created special relationship with business's customers that imposed an affirmative duty to protect them from acts of third persons)]. In this situation, the defendant's contractual duties are not conclusive as to the extent of any legal duty of care owed to third parties; that duty is measured by legal standards of reasonableness [Seibert Sec. Servs., Inc. v. Superior Court (1993) 18 Cal. App. 4th 394, 412 n.11, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 514] .

[3] Claim by Person Not Party to Contract

Assuming that a particular contract creates a legal duty of care between the parties, a question may arise as to the circumstances under which this duty may be owed to persons who are not parties to the contract. If a third party sues in tort, the existence of a duty of care to that party is not determined solely by the presence or absence of contractual privity; instead, the court must examine and balance a number of policyfactors in determining whether or not a duty of care extends to that party. Those factors include the following [Lucas v. Hamm (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 583, 588, 15 Cal. Rptr. 821, 364 P.2d 685 (attorney owes duty of care to those who are intended to be beneficiaries of will); Sumitomo Bank v. Taurus Developers, Inc. (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 211, 223-226, 229 Cal. Rptr. 719 (builder must exercise reasonable care towards those who purchase houses even if no privity of contract exists); Ales-Peratis Foods Int'l, Inc. v. American Can Co. (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 277, 289-290, 209 Cal. Rptr. 917 (packager of seafood had cause of action in tort against can manufacturer for economic losses sustained as result of negligently manufactured cans, notwithstanding packager's lack of privity of contract with manufacturer)]:

- The extent to which the transaction was intended to affect the person not party to the contract;
- The foreseeability of harm to that person;
- The degree of certainty that the person suffered injury;
- The closeness of the connection between the defendant's conduct and the injury suffered;
- The moral blame attached to the defendant's conduct; and
- The policy of preventing future harm.

However, the mere presence of a foreseeable risk of injury to third persons is not sufficient, standing alone, to impose liability for negligent conduct; other factors must be considered. For example, the California Supreme Court has held that an auditor's liability for general negligence in conducting an audit of a client's financial statements is confined to the person who contracts for or engages the audit services. The Court considered such factors as liability being out of proportion to fault, the effective use of contract rather than tort liability to adjust risks among a sophisticated class of plaintiffs, and the increased expense and decreased availability of auditing services that would result from expanded liability [Bily v. Arthur Young & Co. (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 370, 398-406, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 51, 834 P.2d 745] . Similarly, absent extraordinary and specific facts, a bank does not owe a duty of care to a noncustomer [Software Design & Application, Ltd. v. Hoefer & Arnett, Inc. (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 472, 479, 56 Cal. Rptr. 2d 756] , even if a third party illegally opens an account at the bank under the name of the noncustomer [Rodriguez v. Bank of the West (2008) 16 Cal. App. 4th 454, 466, 75 Cal. Rptr. 3d 543], or to third parties who were unknown to the bank and were not parties to the bank's deposit contract [Chazen v. Centennial Bank (1998) 61 Cal. App. 4th 532, 545, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 462] . Nor does an environmental consultant hired pursuant to a contract with a county to prepare an environmental impact report owe a duty to the developer whose project is being evaluated [Mission Oaks Ranch, Ltd. v. County of Santa Barbara (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 713, 725-726, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1 , disapproved on other grounds, Briggs v. Eden Council for Hope & Opportunity (1999) 19 Cal. 4th 1106, 1123 n.10, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 471, 969 P.2d 564] .

An independent adjustor retained by an insurance company owes no duty of care to the insured, with whom the adjustor has no contract, and cannot be held liable for negligently handling a claim if the only loss is economic [Sanchez v. Lindsey Morden Claims Servs., Inc. (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 249, 250-251, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 799] . However, a duty may be found if physical harm is involved. For example, the court of appeal in another case held that a corporation under contract to a health plan to administer claims owes a duty to health plan members to exercise due care to protect those members from physical injury caused by negligence in denying benefits under the plan [Mintz v. Blue Cross of California (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 1594, 1611, 92 Cal. Rptr. 3d 422] .

Despite the lack of privity of contract, it is clearly established that a subcontractor on a construction project can be held liable in negligence to the party who hires the general contractor if the subcontractor's work is below the applicable standard of care in the industry [see, e.g., Stonegate Homeowners Assn. v. Staben (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 740, 748-749, 50 Cal. Rptr. 3d 709] . In addition, a workers' compensation claims administrator hired to provide claim services for a self-insured employer owes a duty of care when handling claims to the employer's excess insurer liable for paying claims that exceed a specified amount [National Union Fire Ins. Co. of Pittsburgh, PA v. Cambridge Integrated Services Group, Inc. (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 35, 46-47, 89 Cal. Rptr. 3d 473].

§ 380.32 Affirmative Duty to Protect, Warn, or Aid Others

[1] Traditional Rule of Nonliability for "Nonfeasance"

A person generally is not liable for his or her mere nonfeasance, i.e., his or her failure to act to protect or assist others who are imperiled by circumstances, by their own actions, or by the actions of a third party [Tarasoff v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 425, 435, n.5, 131 Cal. Rptr. 14, 551 P.2d 334 ; Weirum v. RKO Gen., Inc. (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 40, 48-49, 123 Cal. Rptr. 468, 539 P.2d 36 ; Todd v. Dow (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 253, 258, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 490] . Thus, a person generally will not be liable for failing to take affirmative action that would have benefited another unless the person was obligated to act pursuant to a preexisting legal duty [Stout v. City of Porterville (1983) 148 Cal. App. 3d 937, 942, 196 Cal. Rptr. 301] .

[2] Voluntary Assumption of Duty

[a] Liability for Negligent Performance

[i] Reliance or Increased Risk of Harm

Even in those instances in which the relationship between two persons would not ordinarily give rise to a duty of care on the part of one person to aid or protect the other, one who voluntarily undertakes to do so is under a duty to exercise due care in the performance and will be liable if (1) the failure to exercise due care increases the risk of harm to the other, or (2) harm is suffered because of the other's reliance on the undertaking [Williams v. State of California (1983) 34 Cal. 3d 18, 23, 192 Cal. Rptr. 233, 664 P.2d 137] . For example, when a defendant employer gave the plaintiff a physical examination as a condition of employment, and the company doctor failed to diagnose a disease, which later worsened without medical treatment, the defendant was held liable for failing to exercise ordinary care because it had undertaken to render medical advice, even though the defendant otherwise would have had no duty to do so [Coffee v. McDonnell-Douglas Corp. (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 551, 557-560, 105 Cal. Rptr. 358, 503 P.2d 1366] .

[ii] Duty to Third Parties

A defendant who voluntarily undertakes to render services to another person that the defendant should recognize as necessary for the protection of a third party or a third party's property has a duty to the third party to exercise reasonable care in the undertaking. Defendant is liable to the third party for breach of this duty if (1) defendant's failure to exercise reasonable care increases the risk of harm to the thirdparty, (2) defendant has undertaken to perform a duty owed by the other person to the third party, or (3) the third party suffers harm because either the third party or the person to whom defendant rendered the services relied on defendant's undertaking [FNS Mortgage Serv. Corp. v. Pacific Gen. Group, Inc. (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 1564, 1572, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 916 ; Restatement (Second) of Torts § 324A].

For example, a nonprofit association that promoted uniformity in the plumbing trade through its uniform plumbing code and its listing of plumbing products that met code standards was liable to plaintiff for continuing to list a manufacturer's pipe that defendant knew did not meet its standards; the pipe prematurely deteriorated and caused substantial damage to the apartment complex being constructed by plaintiff. Virtually all public entities had adopted defendant's code, and building inspectors would not sanction the use of pipe not listed by defendant; because defendant had undertaken to render the services of inspecting pipe manufacturers and delisting those who did not adhere to its standards, defendant should have recognized that its services were necessary for the protection of consumers such as plaintiff who acquired and installed pipe. Furthermore, defendant had undertaken to perform a duty owed by local building officials to consumers, and defendant's failure to exercise reasonable care in its activities increased the risk of harm to consumers such as plaintiff because of the reliance by local building officials on defendant's undertaking [FNS Mortgage Serv. Corp. v. Pacific Gen. Group, Inc. (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 1564, 1572-1573, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 916] .

By contrast, the California Supreme Court held in one case that the parent corporation for a manufacturer of silicone breast implants did not owe a duty under these rules to plaintiffs who had been injured by the breast implants. Plaintiffs had sued the parent corporation for allegedly negligently undertaking to provide toxicological research on silicone products to the subsidiary manufacturer. However, the toxicological research provided by the parent corporation to the subsidiary was provided between 1948 and the early 1960s, the use of silicone in breast implants was not conceived until 1961 or clinically tested until 1962, and by 1964 the subsidiary corporation had its own research department. It was undisputed that the parent corporation never tested, made, or sold silicone breast implants. On these facts, the Court held that while the voluntary undertaking of providing toxicological research to a medical manufacturer theoretically implicates the well-being of third parties, the parent corporation's undertaking was not a sufficient basis for liability, especially in light of the fact that plaintiffs' injuries occurred many years after the parent corporation had ceased providing toxicological research to the subsidiary [Artiglio v. Corning Inc. (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 604, 615-618, 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 479, 957 P.2d 1313 (not reasonable to conclude that defendant should have recognized that own toxicology research was necessary for protection of plaintiffs)].

The California Supreme Court has also refused to find that private contractors who undertook to provide traffic lights at an intersection as a condition for obtaining a condominium building permit from a city owed a duty of care to a third-party driver to install the lights within a certain time frame [Paz v. State of California (2000) 22 Cal. 4th 550, 553-554, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 703, 994 P.2d 975] . In that particular case, the third party alleged that the intersection was a dangerous condition of public property because of limited lines of sight, that the city knew this, and that even though the condominium project had not been completed at the time of the accident, the contractors had negligently failed to install the lights required by their agreement with the city within a reasonable time period. However, the Court concluded that under the facts of the case, the plaintiff could not satisfy any of the three conditions for imposing liability under Restatement (Second) of Torts § 324A. First, the failure to install the lights by a certain time period did not increase the existing risk to drivers. Second, the contractors had not undertaken to perform a duty owed by the city, because cities generally have no affirmative duty to install traffic control signals. Finally, the plaintiff could provide no evidence that he was harmed because he or the city relied on the installation of the traffic lights by any particular time prior to the completion of the condominium project [Paz v. State of California (2000) 22 Cal. 4th 550, 559-562, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 703, 994 P.2d 975] .

In another case, the court of appeal rejected the argument that a professional medical association that voluntarily recommends standards for blood banks should be held liable to a surgery patient who developed AIDS as a result of a blood transfusion in 1984. In that case, the plaintiff argued that the association had been negligent in the months prior to the surgery for failing to recommend that blood banks (1) question donors about their sexual preferences and activities, (2) make available to recipients directed blood donations from family and friends, and (3) offer surrogate testing of the blood supply by screening for a hepatitis B antigen that was prevalent in the same populations that were at risk for AIDS. The court of appeal held, however, that the association owed no duty of care to the patient, because in light of the knowledge and conflicting medical and scientific opinions available during the relevant period, it was not reasonably foreseeable then that any of these measures would have reduced the risk of AIDS contamination of the blood supply [N.N.V. v. American Assn. of Blood Banks (1999) 75 Cal. App. 4th 1358, 1377-1380, 89 Cal. Rptr. 2d 885] . In addition, policy concerns led the court to state more generally that, absent fraud or bad faith, a professional medical association such as the defendant in this case should not face liability for making a choice among competing scientific and medical opinions, if the medical and scientific community has reached no consensus on the proper approach to a medical situation [N.N.V. v. American Assn. of Blood Banks (1999) 75 Cal. App. 4th 1358, 1392, 89 Cal. Rptr. 2d 885] .

The court of appeal has also rejected a plaintiff's claim that a not-for-profit engineering corporation, which tested small appliances for compliance with engineering standards designed to reduce the risk of fire and electrical shock, had undertaken any duty to protect consumers from health hazards associated with exposure to asbestos that may have been used in insulation in the products [Dekens v. Underwriters Labs. Inc. (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 1177, 1185, 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 699] .

There appears to be some confusion in the courts regarding the rule of liability to third parties provided by Restatement (Second) of Torts § 324A. Section 324A states that "One who undertakes ... to render services to another [that he or she] should recognize as necessary for the protection of a third person ..., is subject to liabilityto the third person for physical harm resulting from [his or her] failure to exercise reasonable care ..., if harm is suffered because of reliance of the other or the third person upon the undertaking." However, one court has inaccurately quoted language from an earlier decision [Williams v. Saga Enters., Inc. (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 142, 152, 274 Cal. Rptr. 901] as holding that Section 324A applies to situations in which a defendant has undertaken to render services to another for the protection of that other person, rather than a third person [Johnson v. County of Ventura (1994) 29 Cal. App. 4th 1400, 1406, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 150] . Based, presumably, on this interpretation of the Section 324A language, the court ruled that a city was not liable for the stabbing death of an elderly woman by a patient of a county hospital. The patient left a county hospital while being treated for psychiatric problems and was not taken into custody and returned to the hospital by city police after they found him breaking into homes near the hospital, despite the hospital's request that the police not only find him but bring him back [Johnson v. County of Ventura (1994) 29 Cal. App. 4th 1400, 1406, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 150] . The court held that the city had undertaken to provide a service to the county (the "other"), not the decedent (the "third person"), and its undertaking created no duty of care to the decedent or the general public. Aside from its apparent misinterpretation of the third person language of Section 324A, the court also held that Section 324A did not apply because the police had not induced the decedent's reliance on a promise to protect her, and that the police's release of the patient did not increase the harm to the decedent but merely left her as she was [Johnson v. County of Ventura (1994) 29 Cal. App. 4th 1400, 1406, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 150] .

[b] Liability for Reliance on Unfulfilled Promise

A person may incur liability by making a promise to do something without ever performing that promise, with the result that the promisee has relied on the promise to his or her detriment [Williams v. State of California (1983) 34 Cal. 3d 18, 23-24, 192 Cal. Rptr. 233, 664 P.2d 137] . For example, an automobile club that undertook to provide emergency road service to its members could be held liable for injuries suffered by a stranded motorist who was struck and killed by a drunk driver on the freeway while waiting for a tow truck that never arrived. The club, by promising to render assistance to the motorist, was under a duty to do so with due care [Bloomberg v. Interinsurance Exch. (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 571, 575-576, 207 Cal. Rptr. 853] .

Such a voluntarily undertaken protective duty may be limited in duration and scope, however. For example, in a wrongful death action by the heirs of a district attorney who was killed by a man he had successfully prosecuted 30 years earlier, a promise by police officials to alert the decedent of any threatening behavior by the man did not obligate them to contact the decedent eight years after the promise was made, and the voluntary conduct of one officer did not impose a duty of care on all other officers in the department [Weissich v. County of Marin (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 1069, 1077-1078, 1080, 274 Cal. Rptr. 342] .

[c] Liability for Negligent Misrepresentation Involving Risk of Physical Harm

[i] Elements

A person who negligently gives false information to another is liable for physical harm suffered by the other person that was caused by action taken by the other person in reasonable reliance on the information [Garcia v. Superior Court (1990) 50 Cal. 3d 728, 734, 268 Cal. Rptr. 779, 789 P.2d 960] . The plaintiff must allege all of the following [Garcia v. Superior Court (1990) 50 Cal. 3d 728, 735-737, 268 Cal. Rptr. 779, 789 P.2d 960 (parole officer, having chosen to communicate information about killer to potential victim, had duty to use reasonable care in doing so)]:

- The defendant had a duty to exercise reasonable care in giving the information to the plaintiff;
- The defendant gave false information to the plaintiff with a degree of culpability at least equal to negligence;
- The plaintiff actually and reasonably relied on the alleged misrepresentations; and
- The plaintiff's reliance on the defendant's misrepresentations proximately caused the plaintiff's physical injury or death.

Physical injury that stems entirely from emotional distress caused by a negligent misrepresentation is not sufficient to support a cause of action for negligent misrepresentation, at least if there was no reason for the defendant to believe that the plaintiff's physical safety might depend on the accuracy of the information provided [Friedman v. Merck & Co. (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 454, 480-481, 487, 131 Cal. Rptr. 2d 885] .

Alternatively, a cause of action for negligent misrepresentation involving physical harm may be brought under the statute [Civ. Code § 1710(2)] governing deceit [see Garcia v. Superior Court (1990) 50 Cal. 3d 728, 737 n.7, 268 Cal. Rptr. 779, 789 P.2d 960] . For a discussion of the requirements for a cause of action for deceit under Civ. Code § 1710(2), see Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit .

Liability for a negligent misrepresentation resulting in physical harm must be based on an affirmative or positive assertion of fact, not on an implied misrepresentation [Weissich v. County of Marin (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 1069, 1082-1083, 274 Cal. Rptr. 342] . Evidence that the plaintiff took independent precautionary action may support a conclusion that the plaintiff did not rely on defendant's representations [see M.B. v. City of San Diego (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 699, 708, 284 Cal. Rptr. 555] . As is true for proximate cause generally, the time span betwen a negligent misrepresentation and occurrence of the harm is a factor that the court will consider in determining whether plaintiff's reliance on the misrepresentation proximately caused his or her injury [see Weissich v. County of Marin (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 1069, 1083-1084, 274 Cal. Rptr. 342 ; see also § 380.73[1]].

[ii] Exception to Business Purposes Rule

Misrepresentations involving a risk of physical harm constitute an exception to theordinary rule that liability for negligent misrepresentation is imposed only on those who supply information for business purposes in the course of a business or profession [Garcia v. Superior Court (1990) 50 Cal. 3d 728, 735, 268 Cal. Rptr. 779, 789 P.2d 960] . If the resulting harm is bodily harm or physical harm to property, a defendant may be liable for negligence even though the defendant gave the information gratuitously and derived no benefit from giving it [Garcia v. Superior Court (1990) 50 Cal. 3d 728, 735, 268 Cal. Rptr. 779, 789 P.2d 960] .

[d] Statutory Protections for "Good Samaritans"

If one who has no legal duty to aid another nevertheless undertakes to render assistance as a "good Samaritan," he or she generally has a duty to act with reasonable care [Colby v. Schwartz (1978) 78 Cal. App. 3d 885, 889-890, 144 Cal. Rptr. 624] . The conduct of one who renders aid in an emergency setting will be measured by the care that the ordinary person could reasonably be expected to exercise under similar circumstances [Colby v. Schwartz (1978) 78 Cal. App. 3d 885, 890, 144 Cal. Rptr. 624] .

Several statutes protect rescuers and others from liability for certain types of aid rendered in emergency situations. For example, Health and Safety Code § 1799.102, as amended effective for actions filed on or after August 6, 2009, provides that medical, law enforcement, and emergency personnel providing emergency medical or nonmedical care in good faith and not for compensation at the scene of an emergency are not liable for any civil damages resulting from any act or omission. The scene of an emergency for these purposes does not include emergency departments and other places where medical care is usually offered [Health & Safety Code § 1799.102(a)]. Under that statute, persons other than medical, law enforcement, and emergency personnel who render emergency medical or nonmedical care or assistance at the scene of an emergency are not to be held liable for civil damages for any act or omission other than an act or omission that constitutes gross negligence or willful or wanton misconduct [Health & Safety Code § 1799.102(b)(2)]. Prior to the 2009 amendment, this statute provided a single, more general immunity for all persons volunteering aid at the scene of an emergency [see former Health & Safety Code § 1799.102], although the California Supreme Court in 2008 had interpreted the protection to apply only to persons rendering medical aid at the scene of a medical emergency [Van Horn v. Watson (2008) 45 Cal. 4th 322, 329-331, 86 Cal. Rptr. 3d 350, 197 P.3d 164 (pulling injured friend from car involved in accident out of fear that car might explode was not emergency medical care)].

Other statutes providing immunity govern particular individuals rendering emergency aid under specified circumstances [see, e.g., Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 2395 (physician, surgeon, or podiatrist rendering aid at scene of emergency), 2727.5 (nurse rendering aid at scene of emergency); Civ. Code § 1714.2(a), (e) (anyone trained in CPR who renders emergency CPR at scene of emergency in good faith and not for compensation)].

[3] Special Relationships Imposing Duty to Protect, Warn, or Aid Others

[a] Creation and Effect

Under general common law rules, one person owes no duty to control the conduct of another or to warn those endangered by that conduct [Todd v. Dow (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 253, 258, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 490 ; see also Davidson v. City of Westminster (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 197, 203, 185 Cal. Rptr. 252, 649 P.2d 894] . However, California courts have recognized that "special relationships" may create special duties, including the duty to protect against the harmful acts of third persons [see Tarasoff v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 425, 435, 131 Cal. Rptr. 14, 551 P.2d 334 ; Marois v. Royal Investigation & Patrol, Inc. (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 193, 199, 208 Cal. Rptr. 384] . A duty is imposed on a defendant to control the conduct of others if the defendant has some special relationship either with the person whose conduct needs to be controlled or with the person who is the foreseeable victim of that conduct [ see Tarasoff v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 425, 435-436, 131 Cal. Rptr. 14, 551 P.2d 334 ; Todd v. Dow (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 253, 258, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 490] . A duty arising from a special relationship may encompass a duty to warn, a duty to control the dangerous conduct of a third person, or both [see Tarasoff v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 425, 436, 131 Cal. Rptr. 14, 551 P.2d 334] .

However, even if a special relationship is found to exist between the defendant and either the active wrongdoer or the victim, the defendant does not have a duty to protect the victim unless the risk of harm incurred was foreseeable [see Romero v. Superior Court (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 1068, 1081, 107 Cal. Rptr. 2d 801 ; Megeff v. Doland (1981) 123 Cal. App. 3d 251, 257, 176 Cal. Rptr. 467] . For example, in one case, a 13-year-old girl was sexually assaulted by a 16-year-old boy in the home of the defendants, who were the parents of another boy. The girl's mother had agreed to leave the girl there with a group of teenagers after the defendants had indicated that they would be at home working in the garden while the teenagers were there, although the assault took place while the defendants were away from the house for about an hour. The court of appeal held that although a special relationship existed, the defendants did not owe a duty of care to prevent the sexual assault, because unless they had actual knowledge that the assailant had any propensities to commit a sexual assault, the assault was not reasonably foreseeable [Romero v. Superior Court (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 1068, 1081, 107 Cal. Rptr. 2d 801 ; see also J.L. v. Children's Institute, Inc. (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 388, 398, 99 Cal. Rptr. 3d 5 (home daycare referral organization did not owe duty to prevent sexual assault committed at daycare provider to whom victim's mother had been referred, in absence of history of sexual misconduct by assailant or knowledge of same by organization)].

In determining whether the requisite foreseeability of harm was present, foreseeability must be measured by what the defendant actually knew, not by constructive knowledge or information that the defendant arguably should have known, but did not [Margaret W. v. Kelley R. (2006) 139 Cal. App. 4th 141, 156-161, 42 Cal. Rptr. 3d 519 (mother who invited daughter's teenage friend to spend night at her home was not liable when friend was raped after leaving house while mother was out; mother had no actual knowledge to suggest danger of rape)].

The issues of duty to control or warn are generally treated as parallel [Brenneman v. State of California (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 812, 819, 256 Cal. Rptr. 363] , although one court has stated that a duty to control may well be broader than a duty to warn a potential victim [see Duffy v. City of Oceanside (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 666, 671, 224 Cal. Rptr. 879] .

[b] Existence of Special Relationship as Question of Law

[i] Balancing of Public Policy Considerations and Other Interests

The existence of a duty based on the existence of a special relationship is entirely a question of law that must be determined only by the court [Reid v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. (1985) 173 Cal. App. 3d 557, 572, 218 Cal. Rptr. 913] . In determining whether or not a special relationship exists, the courts have balanced policy considerations and competing interests. For example, the California Supreme Court has held that a therapist who has predicted that a patient poses a serious danger of violence to a foreseeable victim has a duty to exercise reasonable care to protect the victim. The Court balanced the public interest in supporting effective treatment of mental illness and the privacy rights of patients, on the one hand, against the publicinterest in safety from violent assault, on the other [Tarasoff v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (1976) 17 Cal. 3d. 425, 435-442, 131 Cal. Rptr. 14, 551 P.2d 334 ; see § 380.32[3][c][ii]].

Public policy may also weigh against imposing a special relationship in a particular case. For example, public entities and employees have no affirmative duty to warn of the release of an inmate with a violent history who has made nonspecific threats of harm directed at nonspecific victims [Thompson v. County of Alameda (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 741, 754, 167 Cal. Rptr. 70, 614 P.2d 728 ; see Brenneman v. State of California (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 812, 820, 256 Cal. Rptr. 363 ; see also § 380.32[3][c][ii]]. In Thompson, the Supreme Court cited the legislature's choosing as a matter of public policy to continue parole and probation programs even though risks may be borne by the public, and the Court also noted its skepticism concerning any net benefit that might flow from a duty to issue a generalized warning of the probationary release of offenders [Thompson v. County of Alameda (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 741, 754, 167 Cal. Rptr. 70, 614 P.2d 728] .

Similarly, a residential substance abuse treatment facility housing inmates from the Department of Corrections owes no legal duty to neighborhood residents who are injured by escaped inmates, even if the treatment facility is negligent in allowing inmates to escape with a kitchen knife stolen from the facility. According to the court of appeal, imposition of a duty in such circumstances is outweighed by the public policy of encouraging rehabilitation of criminal offenders, the lack or foreseeability of injury to any specifically identifiable individual, and the fact that the risk of injury is shared by all members of the general public [Rice v. Center Point, Inc. (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 949, 958, 65 Cal. Rptr. 3d 312 ; see also Beauchene v. Synanon Foundation, Inc. (2007) 88 Cal. App. 3d 342, 345-348, 151 Cal. Rptr. 796] .

[ii] Ability to Control as Essential

In general, a defendant is not liable because of a "special relationship" unless the defendant had the ability to control the wrongdoer's conduct and to protect the plaintiff effectively [Todd v. Dow (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 253, 259, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 490] . If the natural relationship between the parties creates no inference of an ability to control, the complaint must specifically allege the actual custodial ability [see Wise v. Superior Court (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 1008, 1013, 272 Cal. Rptr. 222 ; Megeff v. Doland (1981) 123 Cal. App. 3d 251, 261, 176 Cal. Rptr. 467] .

[c] Types of Special Relationships

[i] General Requirements for Finding Special Relationship

Numerous types of special relationships may result in specialty. A court may determine that under any given fact situation a special relationship arose between two parties that created a duty in one towards the other. The essential question is whether A's conduct brings A into a relationship with B such that social policy required A to take affirmative action or precaution to avoid harm to B [see Draper Mortuary v. Superior Court (1982) 135 Cal. App. 3d 533, 537, 185 Cal. Rptr. 396] . Special relationships generally involve some kind of dependency or reliance on the defendant [Olson v. Children's Home Soc'y (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 1362, 1366, 252 Cal. Rptr. 11] .

However, not every situation of dependency or reliance creates a special relationship. For example, in a case involving two women and a man they had both been romantically involved with, one woman was not liable for the man's attack on the other woman, because there was no special relationship between the first woman and the attacker or between the two women. The first woman, who was also the attacker's employer, had no duty to warn the other woman, even though the first woman had undertaken significant efforts to assist the attacker with alcoholism rehabilitation. As a nonprofessional volunteer, she did not assume a duty of continued assistance with respect either to the man or to the other woman, even after she became aware that the attacker had retaken possession of a gun that might cause peril to the other woman. The fact that she had previously told the other woman that she had taken the gun from the attacker did not impose a duty on her to advise the other woman of the change in the gun's possession [Koepke v. Loo (1993) 18 Cal. App. 4th 1444, 1450-1458, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 34] .

[ii] Persons Responsible for Dangerous or Mentally Disturbed Persons

Because of the special relationship between the therapist and the patient, a psychotherapists or other psychiatric caretaker may be liable for injuries inflicted by a psychiatric patient on a foreseeable and readily identifiable victim [Thompson v. County of Alameda (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 741, 753-755, 167 Cal. Rptr. 70, 614 P.2d 728 ; Tarasoff v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 425, 431, 131 Cal. Rptr. 14, 551 P.2d 334] . The imposition of a duty is not limited to those instances in which the defendant stands in a special relationship to both the victim and to the patient [Tarasoff v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 425, 436, 131 Cal. Rptr. 14, 551 P.2d 334] . The therapist's duty probably includes at least a warning to any identified potential victim; the precise conduct required will vary from case to case and must be measured against the traditional negligence standard of reasonable care under the circumstances [see Tarasoff v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 425, 439, 131 Cal. Rptr. 14, 551 P.2d 334] . A therapist may be liable for failure to protect the victim if the plaintiff alleges and proves that the therapist determined, or should have determined, that the patient presented a serious danger of harm to the victim [Tarasoff v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (1976) 131 Cal. Rptr. 14, 551 P.2d 334] . A psychotherapist has no duty to disclose a patient's confidences if the risk of harm is self-inflicted injury or mere property damage [Bellah v. Greenson (1978) 81 Cal. App. 3d 614, 622, 146 Cal. Rptr. 535] , but a caretaker does have a duty to warn plaintiffs of the release of a family member who is clearly schizophrenic and suicidal [Johnson v. County of Los Angeles (1983) 143 Cal. App. 3d 298, 311, 191 Cal. Rptr. 704] .

The legislature has limited the liability of psychotherapists for the violent acts of patients by providing in Civ. Code § 43.92 that a psychotherapist may not be held liable for failing to warn of and protect from a patient's threatened violent behavior, or for failing to predict, warn of, and protect from a patient's threatened violent behavior, unless the patient has communicated to the psychotherapist a serious threatof physical violence against a reasonably identifiable victim [see Calderon v. Glick (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 224, 232, 31 Cal. Rptr. 3d 707 (no duty to warn if patient consistently denied to psychotherapists that patient intended to harm anyone); Barry v. Turek (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 1241, 1246, 267 Cal. Rptr. 553 (mental patient's prior conduct of following nurses in inappropriately close ways but without violence did not constitute serious threat of physical violence for purposes of establishing exception to Civ. Code § 43.92 immunity)]. There is no monetary liability on the part of, and no cause of action against, a psychotherapist who discharges his or her duty to warn and protect under these limited circumstances by making reasonable efforts to communicate the threat to the victims and to a law enforcement agency [Civ. Code § 43.92(b)].

Although the statute states that the communication must come from the patient to trigger a duty to warn, the court of appeal has held that the duty to warn is also triggered under the statute if the threat of harm is communicated to the psychotherapist by a member of the patient's immediate family for the purpose of facilitating and furthering the patient's treatment [Ewing v. Goldstein (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 807, 817, 15 Cal. Rptr. 3d 864 (triable issue of fact existed as to whether duty was triggered by information known to therapist)]. Expert medical testimony is not required to prove that the psychotherapist actually believed or predicted that the patient posed a serious threat of physical violence to another person [Ewing v. Northridge Hosp. Med. Ctr. (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 1289, 1302-1304, 16 Cal. Rptr. 3d 591] .

For purposes of the statute, a "psychotherapist" includes licensed psychologists, certain licensed clinical social workers and school psychologists, licensed family or marriage counselors, authorized medical practitioners who devote a substantial amount of time to the practice of psychiatry, registered psychological assistants, registered marriage or family counselor interns, associate clinical social workers, persons rendering mental health treatment or counseling services as authorized by Fam. Code § 6924, and persons reasonably believed by the patient to be any of these professionals [see Evid. Code § 1010]. For discussion regarding a psychotherapist's duty of care to suicidal patients, see Ch. 304, Insane and Other Incompetent Persons .

A special relationship does not exist if a defendant provides nonprofessional guidance to another person seeking advice and the defendant has no control over the environment of the person being counseled [Nally v. Grace Cmty. Church (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 278, 294, 253 Cal. Rptr. 97, 763 P.2d 948 (religious nontherapist counselor); see also Adams v. City of Fremont (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 243, 248, 278-279, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 196 (applying Nally standard, police officers responding to crisis involving person threatening suicide with loaded firearm do not have special relationship with person)]. However, nontherapist counselors may be liable for injuries related to their counseling activities, if they hold themselves out as professionals [Nally v. Grace Community Church (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 278, 300 n. 8, 253 Cal. Rptr. 97, 763 P.2d 948] .

[iii] Law Enforcement Officials

Although no special relationship exists between law enforcement officers and the public generally, the California

Supreme Court has identified several circumstances in which an officer has a duty to exercise reasonable care to protect another and may be liable for breach of that duty. These circumstances include all of the following [see Williams v. State of California (1983) 34 Cal. 3d 18, 24-25, 192 Cal. Rptr. 233, 664 P.2d 137] :

- An act by an officer that places a person in peril or increases the risk of harm [see, e.g., Lugtu v. California Hwy. Patrol (2001) 26 Cal. 4th 703, 718, 724, 110 Cal. Rptr. 2d 528, 28 P.3d 249 (officer had duty to exercise reasonable care for safety of persons stopped for speeding on center median of highway); McCorkle v. City of Los Angeles (1969) 70 Cal. 2d 252, 262-263, 74 Cal. Rptr. 389, 449 P.2d 453 (officer investigating accident directed plaintiff to follow him into intersection where plaintiff was hit by another car)].

- An omission or failure to act after the officer has promised to act [see Morgan v. County of Yuba (1964) 230 Cal. App. 2d 938, 945, 41 Cal. Rptr. 508 (sheriff's promise to warn woman of release from custody of man who had threatened to kill her)].

- A special relationship in which the plaintiff relied to his or her detriment on official conduct in a situation of dependency [see Carpenter v. City of Los Angeles (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 923, 931, 281 Cal. Rptr. 500 (city's duty to warn witness in criminal prosecution because police officer assured witness that accused posed no real danger to him and witness relied on this assurance)].

An affirmative duty to protect may be imposed on law enforcement only in the context of an explicit and well-defined commitment to provide police protection, and an offer of special protection on one occasion does not, by itself, give rise to a continuing special relationship applicable at a later date or with other officers [Zelig v. County of Los Angeles (2002) 27 Cal. 4th 1112, 1129-1131, 119 Cal. Rptr. 2d 709, 45 P.3d 1171 ; Hernandez v. City of Pomona (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 1492, 1501-1503, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 406] .

Despite the general rule that an act increasing the risk of harm to a person may support imposing a tort duty of care on an officer, a tort duty may nonetheless be denied if application of the traditional Rowland factors weighs against imposing a duty under the circumstances [Adams v. City of Fremont (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 243, 285, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 196 ; see generally § 380.30[4][a]]. In one case, for example, the court of appeal held that police officers responding to a crisis involving a person threatening suicide with a loaded firearm had no duty actionable in tort to prevent the threatened suicide from being carried out. Although the actions of the police arguably heightened tensions at an already tense situation, the court noted that this is often the case when the police are called to respond to a volatile situation, and the social utility of involving police in suicidal standoffs weighed against the imposition of liability [Adams v. City of Fremont (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 243, 248, 284-285, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 196 (police actions eventually resulting in suicide included surrounding suicidal person in his backyard, brandishing weapons, using police dog, shouting orders, and attempting to talk person into disarming)].

This rationale has subsequently been applied more generally, outside the context of a suicide, to deny liability for negligence if a plaintiff argues that bad tactical decisions by police responding to a tense situation proved to be ineffective in preventing harm [Munoz v. City of Union City (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 1077, 1097-1098, 16 Cal. Rptr. 3d 521] . However, police may still be liable for the unreasonable use of deadly force in a crisis situation [Munoz v. City of Union City (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 1077, 1099-1107, 16 Cal. Rptr. 3d 521] .

Law enforcement officers generally do not have a duty to conduct an investigation of circumstances causing an accident, but once an officer undertakes an investigation, he or she may have a duty to use due care in conducting the investigation. If a person is dependent on the officer and relies to his or her detriment on the officer, liability may result if the officer's conduct prevents other assistance [see Clemente v. State of California (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 202, 213, 219 Cal. Rptr. 445, 707 P.2d 818] .

In certain situations, a statute may also impose a mandatory duty to investigate, and tort liability may then be predicated on a failure to investigate. For example, Pen. Code § 11166(a) imposes a mandatory duty on a police officer to investigate child abuse or neglect allegations that the officer receives and, if a reasonable person would have suspected child abuse or neglect, to report to the appropriate agency [Alejo v. City of Alhambra (1999) 75 Cal. App. 4th 1180, 1186, 89 Cal. Rptr. 2d 768] . The failure to perform these mandatory statutory duties may support a tort action for negligence per se against the officer and the employing entity if the child is subsequently injured through further abuse [Alejo v. City of Alhambra (1999) 75 Cal. App. 4th 1180, 1184-1190, 89 Cal. Rptr. 2d 768] . For a discussion of the negligence per se doctrine, see § 380.50[3].

In one case, the court of appeal held that a special relationship was not established between officers of the California Highway Patrol and members of the family of an 18-year-old girl who died in an automobile accident merely because the officers investigated the accident, took control of the decedent's remains, and took photographs of the scene and the decedent. In that particular case, the plaintiffs had argued that a special relationship could support an action for negligence after officers e-mailed nine gruesome photographs of the decedent taken at the accident scene to the officers' friends and family members as a Halloween prank, starting a chain reaction that resulted in thousands of Internet sites picking up the images and some of the plaintiffs receiving personal e-mails from strangers taunting them with the gruesome photographs [Catsouras v. Department of California Highway Patrol (2010) 181 Cal. App. 4th 856, 877-881, 104 Cal. Rptr. 3d 352] . The court went on to hold, however, that a duty of care sufficient to support a negligence action could be established under those facts through application of the general factors articulated in Rowland v. Christian, which are described in § 380.30[4][a] [Catsouras v. Department of California Highway Patrol (2010) 181 Cal. App. 4th 856, 881-886, 104 Cal. Rptr. 3d 352] .

Even if a special relationship exists that imposes a duty on a law enforcement officer to protect another, the officer and his or her employer may be immune from liability for breach of that duty under one or more statutory immunities [see, e.g., Gov. Code §§ 846 (immunity for injuries resulting from failure to arrest person or keep him or her in custody), 845.8 (immunity for injuries resulting from discretionary acts concerning parole or escape of prisoner), 845 (immunity for injuries resulting from failure to provide adequate police protection)].

[iv] Parents and Children

A parent has a duty to exercise reasonable care to control his or her minor children so as to prevent them from intentionally harming others or from conducting themselves in a manner that creates an unreasonable risk of harm to others, if the parent (1) knows or has reason to know that he or she has control of the children, and (2) knows or has reason to know of the necessity and opportunity for exercising control [Costello v. Hart (1972) 23 Cal. App. 3d 898, 900, 100 Cal. Rptr. 554 ; see Robertson v. Wentz (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1281, 1288-1290, 232 Cal. Rptr. 634 (no duty if noncustodial parent had no control over child)]. Even if the parent is not present and has no opportunity to control the child's conduct, the parent may be liable for injuries to third persons if the parent knows or should have known of the child's dangerous habits or propensities and negligently fails to warn other persons imperilled by this conduct [see Ellis v. D'Angelo (1953) 116 Cal. App. 2d 310, 317, 253 P.2d 675 (negligent failure by parents to warn babysitter of child's habit of violently attacking others)].

The parent need not have known of the child's dangerous propensities for any particular length of time, if the parent knew in sufficient time to avoid the harm [Costello v. Hart (1972) 23 Cal. App. 3d 898, 900, 100 Cal. Rptr. 554] . Furthermore, if the parent is present and has an opportunity to control the child's dangerous behavior, but neglects to do so, he or she may be liable even though he or she had no prior knowledge of any dangerous propensity [Costello v. Hart (1972) 23 Cal. App. 3d 898, 901, 100 Cal. Rptr. 554] . However, the parent-child relationship does not create a duty of care with respect to acts of a "child" over the age of 18 if the parents had no ability to control the child and the child has not threatened anyone or exhibited any violent conduct [Todd v. Dow (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 253, 259-261, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 490 (parents of 24-year-old son who stored rifle at parents' house did not owe duty to plaintiff accidently shot by son elsewhere)].

Parents generally are not vicariously liable for their children's negligent conduct [Reida v. Lund (1971) 18 Cal. App. 3d 698, 702, 96 Cal. Rptr. 102] . This general rule is subject to certain limited statutory exceptions [see, e.g., Civ. Code §§ 1714.1 (limited vicarious liability for child's willful misconduct), 1714.3 (limited vicarious liability for discharge of firearm by minor); Veh. Code § 17708 (limited vicarious liability for negligent or wrongful acts or omissions in operation of motor vehicle)].

Parents are not immune from liability for negligently injuring their children [Gibson v. Gibson (1971) 3 Cal. 3d 914, 922-923, 92 Cal. Rptr. 288, 479 P.2d 648] . However, the parent-child relationship is unique in some aspects (particularly those relating to parental authority and discipline), and thus not all traditional concepts of tort liability can be applied to suits by children against their parents [Gibson v. Gibson (1971) 3 Cal. 3d 914, 921, 92 Cal. Rptr. 288, 479 P.2d 648] . The standard that must be applied to parental conduct is the traditional one of reasonableness, but viewed in light of the parental role [Gibson v. Gibson (1971) 3 Cal. 3d 914, 921, 92 Cal. Rptr. 288, 479 P.2d 648] . The proper test of a parent's conduct is what an ordinarily reasonable and prudent parent would have done in similar circumstances [Gibson v. Gibson (1971) 3 Cal. 3d 914, 921, 92 Cal. Rptr. 288, 479 P.2d 648] . Although parents are not immune from liability for negligently injuring their children, a child has no cause of action against his or her parent based on the claim that the child should not have been conceived or, if conceived, should not have been allowed to be born alive [Civ. Code § 43.6].

For further discussion, see Ch. 367A, Minors: Tort Actions , and Ch. 394, Parent and Child .

[v] Spouses

Fam. Code § 1000 provides that a married person is not liable for injury or damage caused by the other spouse unless the married person would be liable for the injury or damage if the marriage did not exist [Fam. Code § 1000(a)]. The spouses' community property may, however, be used to satisfy the liability of the spouse who caused the injury [see Fam. Code § 1000(b)]. The language of this statute makes it reasonablyclear that the existence of a marital relationship does not, in itself, create a "special relationship" requiring a married person to protect third persons against negligent or wrongful acts by his or her spouse, or to warn them of such acts. For example, a wife was not liable to victims shot by her husband, where there was no evidence that she had the ability to control her husband's conduct [Wise v. Superior Court (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 1008, 1013-1014, 272 Cal. Rptr. 222] .

However, a married person may in some circumstances have a duty to warn of the foreseeable harmful acts of his or her spouse if there is a special relationship between the married person and the plaintiff, or if the married person is partially responsible for putting the plaintiff into a risk of danger from the spouse [see Pamela L. v. Farmer (1980) 112 Cal. App. 3d 206, 209-212, 169 Cal. Rptr. 282] .

For further discussion, see Ch. 359, Marriage .

[vi] Schools

A school district and its personnel owe a legal duty to exercise reasonable care in supervising students in their charge on the school premises, and may be held liable for injuries proximately caused by the failure to exercise this care [Hoyem v. Manhattan Beach City Sch. Dist. (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 508, 513, 150 Cal. Rptr. 1, 585 P.2d 851 ; see Lucas v. Fresno Unified Sch. Dist. (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 866, 872-873, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 79] . The standard of care that school authorities must exercise is the degree of care that a person of ordinary prudence, charged with comparable duties, would exercise under the same circumstances [Dailey v. Los Angeles Unified Sch. Dist. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 741, 747, 87 Cal. Rptr. 376, 470 P.2d 360] . The amount of care that the school must exercise towards its students varies with their age and maturity [compare Dailey v. Los Angeles Unified Sch. Dist. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 741, 748-751, 87 Cal. Rptr. 376, 470 P.2d 360 (16 year-old killed while engaged in "slap-boxing" match at secondary school), with Crow v. State of California (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 192, 209, 271 Cal. Rptr. 349 (university student assaulted by other student during dormitory party); Tanja H. v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 434, 441, 278 Cal. Rptr. 918 (university student sexually assaulted by fellow students in dormitory)], and the required degree of caution increases with the immaturity of the child [Raymond v. Paradise Unified Sch. Dist. (1963) 218 Cal. App. 2d 1, 10, 31 Cal. Rptr. 847] . The same considerations that apply when determining the duty owed by colleges to their students should apply to school districts that offer adult education classes [see Patterson v. Sacramento City Unified School Dist. (2007) 155 Cal. App. 4th 821, 831-832, 66 Cal. Rptr. 3d 337] .

A school should also consider the special vulnerability of special-needs students when monitoring the school grounds, as these students are more susceptible to victimization by other students. For example, if a school district allows a hidden area to be maintained on campus without taking adequate steps to prevent access by students, the foreseeability of that area being used to inflict injury on a special-needs student may be imputed to the district even without proof of prior incidents of victimization taking place in that hidden area [Jennifer C. v. Los Angeles Unified School Dist. (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 1320, 1328-1329, 86 Cal. Rptr. 3d 274].

A school's staff has a duty to adequately supervise persons attending school functions, and may be liable for even intentional injuries inflicted by other participants [Beck v. San Francisco Unified Sch. Dist. (1964) 225 Cal. App. 2d 503, 508-509, 37 Cal. Rptr. 471] . A school does not have a special relationship to children not attending classes or school functions, however, and has no general duty to supervise its facilities to guard against all injuries that may occur there [Bartell v. Palos Verdes Peninsula Sch. Dist (1978) 83 Cal. App. 3d 492, 500, 147 Cal. Rptr. 898] . For example, a school district was not liable for injuries to children who, when school was not in session, entered school grounds through an unlocked gate or a hole in the fence and played a dangerous game on the school's open concrete area [Bartell v. Palos Verdes Peninsula Sch. Dist. (1978) 83 Cal. App. 3d 492, 500, 147 Cal. Rptr. 898] . However, a school district may be liable for a failure to supervise in the morning hours prior to the start of classes if the campus is open to students and the district knows that students are present then [see, e.g., M. W. v. Panama Buena Vista Union Sch. Dist. (2003) 110 Cal. App. 4th 508, 520-521, 1 Cal. Rptr. 3d 673 (district liable for sexual assault of special education student by another student in unsupervised restroom before start of classes)].

Generally, a school district does not have a duty to protect against injuries incurred by students off school premises, such as when they travel between their homes and school [see Kerwin v. County of San Mateo (1959) 176 Cal. App. 2d 304, 307, 1 Cal. Rptr. 437 ; Educ. Code § 44808; see also Educ. Code § 35330; Castro v. Los Angeles Bd. of Educ. (1976) 54 Cal. App. 3d 232, 235-236, 126 Cal. Rptr. 537 (participants in field trips or excursions conducted by a school district deemed to have waived all claims against district unless participation in trip required)]. The school district may be liable, however, if the area in which the injury occurred is held to be an extension of the school premises [Satariano v. Sleight (1942) 54 Cal. App. 2d 278, 284-285, 129 P.2d 35 ; but see Wright v. Arcade Sch. Dist. (1964) 230 Cal. App. 2d 272, 280, 40 Cal. Rptr. 812] .

Similarly, if a school district provides transportation to and from school, it has a duty to exercise reasonable care for the safety of students using the system [Raymond v. Paradise Unified Sch. Dist. (1963) 218 Cal. App. 2d 1, 9-11, 31 Cal. Rptr. 847 ; see Farley v. El Tejon Unified Sch. Dist. (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 371, 376, 274 Cal. Rptr. 780] . Moreover, if a member of the school staff breaches a duty to students while on school premises, the school may be liable for injuries resulting from that breach, even if they occur off the premises [Hoyem v. Manhattan Beach City Sch. Dist. (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 508, 514-520, 150 Cal. Rptr. 1, 585 P.2d 851 (school staff negligently supervised lunch break, allowing student to leave school grounds and be struck by car); Eric M. v. Cajon Valley Union School Dist. (2009) 174 Cal. App. 4th 285, 299, 95 Cal. Rptr. 3d 428 (triable issue of fact as to whether school violated duty to supervise 6-year-old child who boarded then disembarked from school bus unattended and was struck by car off school property while walking home); Perna v. Conejo Valley Unified Sch. Dist. (1983) 143 Cal. App. 3d 292, 295-296, 192 Cal. Rptr. 10 (student kept after school to help teacher grade papers struck by car on way home because crossing guard no longer on duty)].

The duty to supervise students under a school's care is primarily designed to protect the students themselves from injury and does not extend to nonstudents who are injured by a student off school premises, at least when the school neither knew nor had reason to know that the particular student posed a danger [Hoff v. Vacaville Unified Sch. Dist. (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 925, 934-937, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 811, 968 P.2d 522] . Thus, in one case a school district owed no duty to a third party who was injured across the street from a school parking lot when struck by a student driving in a reckless manner away from an unsupervised school parking lot. In that particular case, the school considered the student to be responsible and had no reason to know that he would drive his car away from the lot in a reckless manner [Hoff v. Vacaville Unified Sch. Dist. (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 925, 934-937, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 811, 968 P.2d 522] . In that case, the Supreme Court also rejected the argument that liability could be predicated on Educ. Code § 44807, because that statute was designed to protect students rather than members of the general public who were not on school property. The Court also rejected an argument based on Educ. Code § 44808, finding that the school had not specifically assumed responsibility for the student's off-campus conduct at the parking lot at issue merely by providing supervision at another parking lot [Hoff v. Vacaville Unified Sch. Dist. (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 925, 938-940, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 811, 968 P.2d 522] .

A school district's duty to protect students from off-campus criminal acts by third persons only requires it to exercise reasonable care to protect against known or reasonably foreseeable risks [Brownell v. Los Angeles Unified Sch. Dist. (1992) 4 Cal. App. 4th 787, 798, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 756 ; see Educ. Code § 44808]. Foreseeability is determined in light of all the circumstances and does not require prior identical, or even similar, events. The facts must demonstrate, however, that the school district was aware of the need for the precautions it did not take, and that these precautions could have aided in deterring criminal conduct [Brownell v. Los Angeles Unified Sch. Dist. (1992) 4 Cal. App. 4th 787, 797, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 756 (school had no duty to scout neighborhood for presence of gang members before releasing students)].

School districts are not liable for failure to exercise reasonable care to provide an adequate education [Peter W. v. San Francisco Unified Sch. Dist. (1976) 60 Cal. App. 3d 814, 817-825, 131 Cal. Rptr. 854] . Similarly, statutory provisions requiring that public schools provide free appropriate special education for handicapped students and follow certain procedures for ensuring that students receive such an education (20 U.S.C.S. §§ 1401-1485; Educ. Code §§ 56000-56885) do not impose a duty of care on school officials towards parents and students with respect to the discharge of those procedures, and a school district is not liable on a negligence theory for injuries resulting from delays occurring during the statutory procedures [see Keech v. Berkeley Unified Sch. Dist. (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 464, 469-471, 210 Cal. Rptr. 7] .

For further discussion, see Ch. 513, Schools: Student Rights and Responsibilities .

[vii] Possessors of Premises

One who owns, occupies, or otherwise controls real property has a duty to exercise reasonable care in the management of the premises to avoid exposing persons on the premises to an unreasonable risk of harm [Civ. Code § 1714(a); Ann M. v. Pacific Plaza Shopping Ctr. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 666, 674, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 137, 863 P.2d 207] . An occupier of land who is aware of a concealed condition involving an unreasonable risk of harm to those coming in contact with it and who knows that a person on the premises is about to come in contact with it has a duty to warn of or repair the condition [Rowland v. Christian (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 108, 119, 70 Cal. Rptr. 97, 443 P.2d 561 ; Sprecher v. Adamson Companies (1981) 30 Cal. 3d 358, 362, 367, 371, 178 Cal. Rptr. 783, 636 P.2d 1121 (no immunity from liability for harm caused by natural condition of land)]. The basic premises liability created by Civ. Code § 1714(a) may be affected by other, more specific statutes [see, e.g., Civ. Code §§ 846 (limiting duty of property owner toward recreational users), 847 (limiting liability of property owners toward persons injured while committing specified crimes)].

Liability of a premises owner no longer depends on whether the plaintiff is an invitee, licensee, or trespasser [Rowland v. Christian (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 108, 119, 70 Cal. Rptr. 97, 443 P.2d 561] . Instead, the existence of aduty of care in a particular case is determined according to the policy factors generally applicable to negligence cases [see

Rowland v. Christian (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 108, 112-113, 70 Cal. Rptr. 97, 443 P.2d 561 ; see § 380.30[4]]. The plaintiff's status as invitee, licensee, or trespasser may still be relevant, however, in considering the foreseeability of a particular injury or the plaintiff's presence on the premises [Ann M. v. Pacific Plaza Shopping Ctr. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 666, 674-675, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 137, 863 P.2d 207 ; Rowland v. Christian (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 108, 119, 70 Cal. Rptr. 97, 443 P.2d 561] .

A possessor's duty to protect persons on the premises may in some cases include a duty to protect those persons from negligent or even criminal third-party conduct that is reasonably foreseeable [see, e.g., Peterson v. San Francisco Cmty. Coll. Dist. (1984) 36 Cal. 3d 799, 806-809, 205 Cal. Rptr. 842, 685 P.2d 1193 (duty of college to protect students from reasonably foreseeable assaults on campus); Cohen v. Southland Corp. (1984) 157 Cal. App. 3d 130, 141, 203 Cal. Rptr. 572 (convenience store operator who could reasonably foresee injuries from armed robberies on premises had minimal duty to protect customers from injuries)]. This duty may also be imposed on private security guards hired by the possessor to protect patrons [Marois v. Royal Investigation & Patrol, Inc. (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 193, 199-200, 208 Cal. Rptr. 384] , but the duty owed by the security service is no greater than that of the landowner [Seibert Sec. Servs., Inc. v. Superior Court (1993) 18 Cal. App. 4th 394, 413, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 514] . Landlords owe this duty to both their tenants and the employees and patrons of their tenants [Ann M. v. Pacific Plaza Shopping Ctr. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 666, 674, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 137, 863 P.2d 207] . However, to establish a duty to provide security guards to protect against third-party criminal acts, a plaintiff must prove that prior similar incidents of violent crime occurring on the defendant's premises made those acts highly foreseeable [Ann M. v. Pacific Plaza Shopping Ctr. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 666, 679, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 137, 863 P.2d 207] .

To protect invitees, including customers and potential customers, from criminal conduct as it is occurring, store or restaurant employees may have a duty to take minimally burdensome measures such as issuing a warning or calling 911, if those measures can be undertaken without increasing the risk of harm to the employees [Morris v. De La Torre (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 260, 277-278, 30 Cal. Rptr. 3d 173,113 P.3d1182] .

For further discussion, see Ch. 421, Premises Liability .

[viii] Possessors of Personal Property

Another recognized special relationship exists between the possessor of a chattel and a licensee. The relationship imposes a duty on the possessor to control an incompetent licensee's conduct. The duty is established when the possessor supplies the chattel to a person whom the supplier knows, or has reason to know, to be likely, because of his or her youth, inexperience, or otherwise, to use it in a manner involving unreasonable risk of physical harm to himself or herself and others whom the supplier should expect to share in or be endangered by its use [see Jacoves v. United Merch. Corp. (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 88, 115, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 468] . A supplier is not entitled to assume that the other person will use the chattel safely if the supplier has reason to know that the other person has a propensity or fixed purpose to misuse it [see Jacoves v. United Merch. Corp. (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 88, 115, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 468 ; Restatement (Second) of Torts § 390, cmt. b]. The supplier may be liable not only for harm sustained by a third party who is injured by the incompetent person, but also for harm sustained by the incompetent person [Jacoves v. United Merch. Corp. (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 88, 115, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 468] .

Those who may be liable as suppliers of chattels include sellers as well as lenders and donors [see Jacoves v. United Merch. Corp. (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 88, 115, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 468 (dictum); see also Knighten v. Sam's Parking Valet (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 69, 75, 253 Cal. Rptr. 365] .

This type of special relationship usually occurs in cases involving the negligent entrustment of a motor vehicle [see, e.g., Allen v. Toledo (1980) 109 Cal. App. 3d 415, 422, 167 Cal. Rptr. 270] , or the failure to safeguard a firearm [see Reida v. Lund (1971) 18 Cal. App. 3d 698, 704, 96 Cal. Rptr. 102] . This "negligent entrustment" doctrine may also apply to the rental of an aircraft [see White v. Inbound Aviation (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 910, 920-923, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d

A physician or other health care provider generally has a duty to exercise the degree of knowledge, care, and skill ordinarily possessed by other members of the medical profession when diagnosing and treating patients [see Carmichael v. Reitz (1971) 17 Cal. App. 3d 958, 975, 95 Cal. Rptr. 381] . In addition to the physician's duty to exercise the requisite degree of skill when rendering medical treatment, the confidential relationship that arises between a physician and a patient may give rise to special affirmative duties on the part of the physician to protect or warn the patient; a breach of this duty may make the physician liable for nonfeasance [see Tresemer v. Barke (1978) 86 Cal. App. 3d 656, 672, 150 Cal. Rptr. 384] . These duties include a duty to warn former patients of hazards created by prior treatment [see Tresemer v. Barke (1978) 86 Cal. App. 3d 656, 669-672, 150 Cal. Rptr. 384 (physician's failure to warn former patient of subsequently discovered hazards of intrauterine device)]. Furthermore, a physician who is negligent in carrying out his or her duties to a patient may also be liable to third persons who are foreseeably injured by the patient's conduct [see Myers v. Quesenberry (1983) 144 Cal. App. 3d 888, 892, 193 Cal. Rptr. 733 (physician who failed to warn patient aboutconsequences of her medical condition could be liable for injuries suffered by third person in accident caused by that condition)].

For further discussion, see Ch. 295, Hospitals , and Ch. 415, Physicians: Medical Malpractice .

[x] Relationships of Dependency

A special relationship imposing a duty to act may exist if the defendant places the plaintiff in circumstances that make the plaintiff dependent on the defendant for protection [Williams v. State of California (1983) 34 Cal. 3d 18, 25, 192 Cal. Rptr. 233, 664 P.2d 137] . For example, a special relationship exists between a county and a child that it places in an abusive foster home and eventually allows to be adopted by the abusive foster parents, because the child is wholly dependent on the county to supervise his or her placement [see Ronald S. v. County of San Diego (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 887, 895, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 418] . Similarly, a special relationship may also exist between an adult and a minor who is not the adult's child if the adult invites the minor into the adult's home while the child's parents are not present, because in that situation the minor is vulnerable to third-party misconduct and dependent on the adult for protection form risks of harm while in the adult's home [see, e.g., Romero v. Superior Court (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 1068, 1081, 107 Cal. Rptr. 2d 801] .

A city and its police department had a special relationship with two female minors, who were participants in a police department program designed to encourage teenagers to consider careers in law enforcement, to protect the minors from sexual abuse committed by a police officer during the course of program activities. Even though the sexual activities were consensual, the defendants had a duty of care to protect the minors in the program from the officer's conduct [Doe 1 v. City of Murrieta (2002) 102 Cal. App. 4th 899, 917-918, 126 Cal. Rptr. 2d 213] . This duty of care could be imposed under the circumstances through application of the traditional, policy-driven Rowland factors, especially because of available indications that the minors, who were spending excessive time with the officer, were infatuated with him and the foreseeability that sexual activities might occur [Doe 1 v. City of Murrieta (2002) 102 Cal. App. 4th 899, 913-916, 126 Cal. Rptr. 2d 213] .

Because a prisoner is dependent and vulnerable, there is a special relationship between a jailer and a prisoner such that the jailer owes a duty of care to the prisoner to take steps to protect the prisoner from foreseeable harm [Giraldo v. Department of Corrections & Rehabilitation (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 231, 250-251, 85 Cal. Rptr. 3d 371]. A child residing with his or her incarcerated mother under the Pregnant and Parenting Women's Alternative Sentencing Program Act [see Pen. Code § 1174 et seq.] is similarly dependent on the personnel running the housing facility when he or she needs medical care [Lawson v. Superior Court (2010) 180 Cal. App. 4th 1372, 1390, 103 Cal. Rptr. 3d 834] .

[xi] Business Establishments and Their Customers or Invitees

A special relationship exists between a business establishment and its customers or invitees. Pursuant to this relationship, the establishment has a duty to take reasonable precautions to protect its patrons from criminal conduct by third parties [Seibert Sec. Servs., Inc. v. Superior Court (1993) 18 Cal. App. 4th 394, 412, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 514 ; see § 380.74]. Similarly, commercial operators of sports and recreational facilities owe a duty of care to their patrons to ensure that the facilities and related services that are provided, such as equipment rentals, do not increase the risk of injury above the level inherent in the sport or recreational activity itself. A commercial operator violates this duty if it sells or rents defective equipment to its patrons that aggravates the patrons' risk of injury [Harrold v. Rolling J Ranch (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 578, 586-587, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 671 (duty of commercial riding stable to supply horses that are not unduly dangerous and to warn patrons of particular horse's predisposition to behave in ways that add to the ordinary risk of horse riding)]. The inherent danger of participating in or watching certain sports does not mean that the commercial operators of facilities offering these activities owe no duty of care to participants or spectators [Harrold v. Rolling J Ranch (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 578, 588, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 671] .

A mortuary was held to have a special relationship to a bereaved family and thus could be liable for failing to lock the door to the chapel in which the remains lay, which allowed a person to enter the room and assault the corpse [Draper Mortuary v. Superior Court (1982) 135 Cal. App. 3d 533, 538, 185 Cal. Rptr. 396] . By undertaking to accept the care and custody of the corpse, the mortuary incurred a duty of care towards the family members, and they could recover for the emotional distress they suffered, if a jury found that the duty was breached [Draper Mortuary v. Superior Court (1982) 135 Cal. App. 3d 533, 538, 185 Cal. Rptr. 396 ; see also Ch. 180, Dead Bodies and Cemeteries].

[xii] Common Carriers

The California Supreme Court has held that there is a special relationship between a common carrier and its passengers requiring the carrier to protect passengers from assaults by third persons [Lopez v. Southern Cal. Rapid Transit Dist. (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 780, 789-791, 221 Cal. Rptr. 840, 710 P.2d 907 (passengers have no control over who is admitted on bus and wholly dependent on bus driver to summon help or provide means of escape); see also Civ. Code § 2100)]. A common carrier also has a duty, following an accident between its vehicle and a third person, to collect and preserve information concerning the other vehicle and its driver for use by the carrier's passengers in future civil litigation [De Vera v. Long Beach Pub. Transp. Co. (1986) 180 Cal. App. 3d 782, 795, 225 Cal. Rptr. 789] . For further discussion, see Ch. 106, Buses and Streetcars , Ch. 109, Carriers , and Ch. 485, Railroads .

[xiii] Contractors Hired to Repair Equipment

A special relationship sufficient to support tort liability for nonfeasance may arise out of a contract in which a repair company agrees for a fee to keep a piece of equipment in repair, perform all work necessary for the safety and maintenance of the equipment, and make periodic inspections of the equipment, or if the repairer has otherwise voluntarily assumed the owner's duty to inspect and maintain the safety of the equipment or undertaken a systematic inspection of the equipment and fails to do so properly [Seo v. All-Makes Overhead Doors (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 1193, 1204-1206, 119 Cal. Rptr. 2d 160] . In addition, a negligent repair or failure to make a requested repair can support tort liability if it causes an injury to a third party [Seo v. All-Makes Overhead Doors (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 1193, 1206, 119 Cal. Rptr. 2d 160] .

However, in the absence of a special relationship derived from a contract or voluntary undertaking, a repair company hired to repair equipment that it did not manufacture does not owe a duty of care to third parties to warn the equipment owner of design defects in the equipment being repaired, at least if the defect is unrelated to the repairs being made [Seo v. All-Makes Overhead Doors (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 1193, 1205-1206, 119 Cal. Rptr. 2d 160] .

[xiv] Fiduciary Relationships

A fiduciary relationship (such as that between principal and agent) may give rise to a special duty on the fiduciary's part to take affirmative action to discover and inform the principal of reasonably obtainable material information [see McCollum v. Friendly Hills Travel Ctr. (1985) 172 Cal. App. 3d 83, 91-94, 217 Cal. Rptr. 919] . For example, a travel agent is under a duty to disclose reasonable obtainable information to the traveler concerning the safety of travel arrangements unless the danger is so clearly obvious and apparent to the traveler that, as a matter of law, the agent would not be negligent in failing to disclose it [see McCollum v. Friendly Hills Travel Ctr. (1985) 172 Cal. App. 3d 83, 94, 217 Cal. Rptr. 919] . For further discussion, see Ch. 427, Principal and Agent .

[4] Creation of Foreseeable Peril

Persons who create a foreseeable peril, not readily discoverable by endangered persons, or who increase the risk of harm of this peril, have a duty to exercise reasonable care to protect against, or at least give adequate warning of, the potential peril [see Johnson v. State of California (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 782, 785-786, 73 Cal. Rptr. 240, 447 P.2d 352 (creating foreseeable peril); Pamela L. v. Farmer (1980) 112 Cal. App. 3d 206, 209-210, 169 Cal. Rptr. 282 (increasing risk of harm from foreseeable peril)]. For example, a state agency that placed a juvenile with a history of violence and cruelty in a foster home should have warned the foster parents of the boy's history and could be held liable for injuries he inflicted on them [Johnson v. State of California (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 782, 786, 73 Cal. Rptr. 240, 447 P.2d 352] .

The California Supreme Court has held that a plaintiff who contracted HIV from a sexual partner may state a cause of action for negligent transmission of HIV. Moreover, this cause of action does not require actual knowledge on the part of the defendant that he or she was infected at the time of transmission. It is sufficient that the defendant, under the totality of the circumstances, had reason to know that he or she was infected [John B. v. Superior Court (2006) 38 Cal. 4th 1177, 1191, 45 Cal. Rptr. 3d 316, 137 P.3d 153] . A person would have "reason to know" of infection if there is sufficient information to cause a reasonably intelligent person to infer that he or she is infected with HIV or that infection is so highly probable that his or her conduct would be predicated on that assumption [John B. v. Superior Court (2006) 38 Cal. 4th 1177, 1191, 45 Cal. Rptr. 3d 316, 137 P.3d 153] .

In recognizing a cause of action for negligent transmission of HIV, the Supreme Court cautioned that its holding should be understood in the context of the facts of the case before it. In that case, the plaintiff and the defendant were engaged and eventually married, the defendant (the husband) falsely represented himself as monogamous and disease-free and insisted that the couple stop using condoms, and the plaintiff (the wife) stopped using condoms in reliance on those representations, even though she subsequently learned that her husband had engaged in unprotected sexual relations with other men both before and after they were married. The Court did not consider the scope of any duty that might be owed by a person if the relationship does not extend beyond the sexual encounter itself or does not contemplate sexual exclusivity, or if the defendant has not made representations of being disease-free or has not insisted on having sex without the use of condoms [see John B. v. Superior Court (2006) 38 Cal. 4th 1177, 1193, 45 Cal. Rptr. 3d 316, 137 P.3d 153] .

A woman who invited and encouraged young girls to come swim in her pool, knowing that the girls would be left alone with her husband and knowing that he had a history of molesting women and children, could be liable for damages the girls suffered when her husband sexually molested them. By encouraging and inviting the children to play in her swimming pool under the circumstances and telling them it would be safe for them to do so, she had increased the risk of harm to them by giving her husband peculiar opportunity and temptation to commit such misconduct [Pamela L. v. Farmer (1980) 112 Cal. App. 3d 206, 209-210, 169 Cal. Rptr. 282] .

In contrast, the producers of a violent movie had not committed an affirmative act that created an undue risk of harm and thus were not under a duty to protect or warn against potential violent acts by third persons who allegedly were attracted to the vicinity of the theatre by the showing of the film [see Bill v. Superior Court (1982) 137 Cal. App. 3d

1002, 1006-1009, 1011, 1014, 187 Cal. Rptr. 625 (court did not decide case on constitutional grounds despite concern about potential First Amendment difficulties with imposing liability)].

In another case, the court of appeal held that the Internet social networking site MySpace.com could not be held liable in negligence, gross negligence, or products liability for failing to implement controls on its site to prevent sexual predators from communicating with minors. The court held that the federal Communications Decency Act of 1996 provided a broad immunity from liability to the website operators for communications that they did not create, as well as for failing to implement the safety measures sought by plaintiffs [Doe II v. MySpace Inc. (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 561, 572-573, 96 Cal. Rptr. 3d 148 ; see 47 U.S.C.S. § 230].

[5] Duty to Aid Others in Peril in Absence of Special Relationship

[a] No Duty Imposed

As a general rule, one who has not created a peril and who does not stand ina special relationship to a person in danger has no duty to come to the aid of that person [see Williams v. State of California (1983) 34 Cal. 3d 18, 23, 192 Cal. Rptr. 233, 664 P.2d 137] . This rule derives from the traditional common law notion that a person should not be liable for nonfeasance or inaction [Tarasoff v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 425, 435 n. 5, 131 Cal. Rptr. 14, 551 P.2d 334 ; Restatement (Second) of Torts § 314, cmt. c; see § 380.32[1]]. Thus, for example, under the traditional view, one who sits on a dock and sees another person drowning has no duty to come to that person's rescue and will not be liable for injury or death resulting from the failure to aid the drowning person [Restatement (Second) of Torts § 314, cmt. c].

[b] Statutory Provisions Imposing Duty

Despite the traditional rule imposing no duty to aid others in peril in absence of a special relationship, several statutes have created such a duty. For example, a driver of a motor vehicle who is involved in an accident that results in injury to a person other than the driver must immediately stop the vehicle to identify himself or herself and to render reasonable assistance to any person injured in the accident [Veh. Code §§ 20001, 20003, 20004]. The assistance required includes making arrangements for carrying the injured person to a medical treatment facility, if treatment appears necessary or if such help is requested [see Veh. Code § 20003(a)]. Because these code sections impose a specific duty to stop and aid, the failure to do so constitutes negligence as a matter of law, absent a legally sufficient excuse or justification [Brooks v. E.J. Willig Truck Transp. Co. (1953) 40 Cal. 2d 669, 679, 255 P.2d 802] . The failure to stop and render aid is an independent wrong, and does not depend on legal responsibility for the original injury [Karl v. C.A. Reed Lumber Co. (1969) 275 Cal. App. 2d 358, 361, 79 Cal. Rptr. 852] . For further discussion, see Ch. 82, Automobiles: Causes of Action .

Vessel operators involved in boating accidents have a similar statutory duty to stop and render aid. If involved in a collision, accident, or other casualty, the vessel operator must render whatever assistance is practicable and necessary to save persons affected by the occurrence or to minimize any danger caused by the occurrence [Harb. & Nav. Code § 656(a)]. However, the operator need only take such action as will not cause serious damage to his or her own vessel, crew, and passengers [Harb. & Nav. Code § 656(a)]. For further discussion, see Ch. 100, Boats and Boating .

Cal-OSHA statutes and regulations may be used to impose a duty of care on employers that, if breached, may be the basis of a tort suit brought by an injured employee [see Elsner v. Uveges (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 915, 935-936, 22 Cal. Rptr. 3d 530, 102 P.3d 915] . Consistent with that principle, the court of appeal held that two Cal-OSHA provisions, Lab. Code § 6400(b) and 8 Cal. Code Regs. § 336.11, impose a duty of care on each employer engaged at a multi-employer work site, both construction and non-construction, to report all non-obvious hazards about which the employer learns because its own employees were exposed to the hazard during the course of their work, even if that employer did not create the hazard. A breach of this duty is actionable in tort by any worker at the site who is subsequently injured by the hazard if it is not reported [Suarez v. Pacific Northstar Mechanical, Inc. (2009) 180 Cal. App. 4th 430, 445, 103 Cal. Rptr. 3d 168] . The duty to report is fulfilled under these provisions if the employer reports the hazard to the employer responsible for creating the hazard, to the employer responsible for safety and health conditions at the worksite, or to the employer actually responsible for correcting the hazard [Suarez v. Pacific Northstar Mechanical, Inc. (2009) 180 Cal. App. 4th 430, 440-441, 103 Cal. Rptr. 3d 168 ; see 8 Cal. Code Regs. § 336.11]. The language of Lab. Code § 6400(b) would also support the imposition of liability under the appropriate circumstances on the employer who actually created the hazard, on the employer responsible for safety and health conditions at the worksite, and on the employer with responsibility for actually correcting the hazard [see Lab. Code § 6400(b)(2)-(4)].

[c] Liability for Preventing Another From Rendering Assistance

Another exception to the general rule of no duty to aid others in the absence of a special relationship is an appellate court's holding that a business establishment may be liable for denying use of its telephone to a "good Samaritan" who seeks to call the police for an emergency occurring nearby [Soldano v. O'Daniels (1983) 141 Cal. App. 3d 443, 453, 190 Cal. Rptr. 310] . Although the court did not find a special relationship between the defendant and either the plaintiff's decedent or the good Samaritan [Soldano v. O'Daniels (1983) 141 Cal. App. 3d 443, 449, 190 Cal. Rptr. 310] , the court nevertheless imposed a duty on the defendant not to interfere with the good Samaritan's attempt to aid the plaintiff's decedent [Soldano v. O'Daniels (1983) 141 Cal. App. 3d 443, 450-453, 453, 190 Cal. Rptr. 310] . The court explained that its decision was both "a slight departure" from the "morally questionable" rule of nonliability for inaction absent a special relationship, as set forth in the Restatement (Second) of Torts § 314, and a "logical extension" of Restatement (Second) of Torts § 327, which imposes liability for negligent interference with a third person who defendant knows is trying to render necessary aid [Soldano v. O'Daniels (1983) 141 Cal. App. 3d 443, 455, 190 Cal. Rptr. 310] .

§ 380.50 Standard of Care

[1] Reasonable or Ordinary Care

Assuming that a defendant owed a duty of care to the plaintiff in a particular case, the next issue is whether the defendant breached that duty. To determine whether the duty owed was breached, it is also necessary to determine what standard or degree of care was owed by the defendant to the plaintiff. Under the general rule of Civ. Code § 1714(a) [see § 380.50[1]], a defendant is liable for the failure to exercise "ordinary care." The California Supreme Court has defined ordinary care as that degree of care that ordinarily prudent people can be reasonably expected to exercise under similar circumstances [Hilyar v. Union Ice Co. (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 30, 36, 286 P.2d 21] . The degree of care required will vary depending on the circumstances of the case [DeMartini v. Alexander Sanitarium, Inc. (1961) 192 Cal. App. 2d 442, 448-449, 13 Cal. Rptr. 564 (hospital must take into account known physical or mental condition of patients when acting with due care)]. The greater the danger and the seriousness of the reasonably anticipated consequences, the higher the degree of care that must be exercised [Hilyar v. Union Ice Co. (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 30, 36, 286 P.2d 21] . For example, those who deal with firearms, which are inherently dangerous, are required to exercise a very high degree of care [Warner v. Santa Catalina Island Co. (1955) 44 Cal. 2d 310, 317, 282 P.2d 12] .

What constitutes due care in any particular case is overwhelmingly a question of fact for the jury [Brummett v. County of Sacramento (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 880, 887, 148 Cal. Rptr. 361, 582 P.2d 952] . This means that the jury will determine how a reasonably prudent person would have acted under the circumstances presented, and then will decide whether the defendant's conduct conformed to that standard [Laird v. T. W. Mather, Inc. (1958) 51 Cal. 2d 210, 215-216, 331 P.2d 617] .

Customary standards or usage in a particular industry or community may be relevant evidence in determining whether due care was exercised in a particular case [Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 801, 809, 148 Cal. Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109] . For example, a court approved the admission of expert testimony for the purpose of establishing customary practices of diverting traffic during highway construction, explaining that the standard "is always due care," and that evidence of custom simply aids the jury in its determination of the specific case [Bouse v. Madonna Constr. Co. (1962) 201 Cal. App. 2d 26, 29-30, 19 Cal. Rptr. 823] .

Although what others do is some evidence of what should be done, custom is never a substitute for due care [Diamond v. Grow (1966) 243 Cal. App. 2d 396, 401, 52 Cal. Rptr. 265] . Conformity to general practice or custom will not insulate a defendant from liability unless the custom itself is consistent with due care [Reagh v. San Francisco Unified Sch. Dist. (1953) 119 Cal. App. 2d 65, 70, 259 P.2d 43] . For example, the fact that the general practice in the medical community was not to count instruments following surgery did not exonerate a hospital and nurses from liability for failing to count instruments and leaving a large metal clamp in the plaintiff's body [Leonard v. Watsonville Cmty. Hosp. (1956) 47 Cal. 2d 509, 519-520, 305 P.2d 36] .

[3] Violation of Statute, Ordinance, or Regulation (Negligence Per Se or Presumed Negligence)

Evid. Code § 669 provides that a person will be presumed to have failed to exercise due care if (1) he or she violated a statute, ordinance, or regulation of a public entity, (2) the violation was the proximate cause of injury or death, (3) the injury or death resulted from an occurrence the nature of which the statute was designed to prevent, and (4) the injured person was one of the class of persons for whose protection the statute, ordinance, or regulation was adopted [Evid. Code § 669(a)]. The presumption of negligence may be rebutted by proof that the violator acted as would a person of ordinary prudence under similar circumstances who desired to comply with the law [Evid. Code § 669(b)(1)]. The presumption may also be rebutted by proof that the violator was a child who exercised the degree of care ordinarily exercised by persons of his or her maturity, intelligence, and capacity under similar circumstances [Evid. Code § 669(b)(2)]. However, rebuttal of the presumption based on the violator's status as a child is not available if the violation occurred in the course of an activity normally engaged in only by adults and requiring adult qualifications [Evid. Code § 669(b)(2)].

[4] Imminent Peril (Sudden Peril or Emergency)

The two basic and indispensable elements of the doctrine of "imminent peril" are (1) the sudden and unexpected appearance of danger, and (2) the necessity of making an immediate choice between two or more alternative courses of action [Givens v. Southern Pac. Co. (1961) 194 Cal. App. 2d 39, 45-46, 14 Cal. Rptr. 736] . If these two elements are present, a person is not necessarily negligent if he or she makes a choice that ultimately proves to have been the wrong one, provided that he or she chose one of the courses of action a person of ordinary prudence would have chosen under the circumstances [Balthrop v. Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Ry. Co. (1959) 167 Cal. App. 2d 437, 446, 334 P.2d 1041] . A defendant will not be liable even if some alternative course of action would have avoided the injury [Schultz v. Mathias (1970) 3 Cal. App. 3d 904, 912-913, 83 Cal. Rptr. 888] . Whether or not the defendant was confronted with imminent peril before acting is generally a question of fact for the jury [Leo v. Dunham (1953) 41 Cal. 2d 712, 715, 264 P.2d 1] .

The doctrine of imminent peril does not apply in favor of a person who placed himself or herself in the critical situation [see Wright v. Sniffin (1947) 80 Cal. App. 2d 358, 364, 365-366, 181 P.2d 675] . Reliance on the doctrine will thus be denied if the party's negligence causes or contributes to the creation of the perilous situation [Pittman v. Boiven (1967) 249 Cal. App. 2d 207, 216, 57 Cal. Rptr. 319] .

Although by its terms the imminent peril doctrine is a defensive doctrine used to determine whether a defendant exercised appropriate care, at least one court of appeal opinion has held that it was reversible error for a trial court to refuse to instruct the jury on the doctrine when requested by a plaintiff who was attempting to establish that he acted prudently and had a right to recover for an injury sustained when he was attempting a rescue [Harris v. Oaks

Shopping Ctr. (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 206, 208-210, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 523] . Allowing a plaintiff to use the doctrine offensively under those circumstances would effectively allow recovery under the rescue doctrine if the imminent threat is merely perceived, rather than real. For discussion of the rescue doctrine generally, see § 380.30[5][e][v].

2. Breach Of Duty

33-380 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 380.51

AUTHOR: MICHAEL S. FIELDS CONTRIBUTING EDITORIAL CONSULTANT Mr. Fields is a private practitioner in Beverly Hills who has specialized in personal injury litigation since 1969.

§ 380.51 Degree of Care Owed by or to Certain Persons

[1] Professionals and Those With Special Skills

A person who undertakes to render services in the practice of a trade or profession is required to have and use the skill and knowledge ordinarily possessed by other practitioners of that trade or profession under similar circumstances [Estate of Beach (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 623, 635, 125 Cal. Rptr. 570, 542 P.2d 994] . More generally, persons who possess knowledge, skill, or intelligence superior to that of the ordinarily prudent person are under a duty to exercise a degree of care that is consistent with that knowledge, skill, or intelligence [see Prosser and Keeton on the Law of Torts (5th ed. 1984) ch. 5, Negligence: Standard of Conduct, § 32, p. 185]. Thus, the degree of care to be exercised by professionals and others with special skills is judged not by that of the ordinary, reasonable person but by that of others who possess those skills [see Estate of Beach (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 623, 635, 125 Cal. Rptr. 570, 542 P.2d 994] .

In a case holding that the same breach of duty could not give rise to distinct causes of action for both "ordinary" and "professional" negligence, the California Supreme Court rejected the concept of "degrees" of care, holding that there are only different amounts of care [Flowers v. Torrance Mem'l Hosp. Med. Ctr. (1994) 8 Cal. 4th 992, 995, 997, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 685, 884 P.2d 142 ; see also Donnelly v. Southern Pac. Co. (1941) 18 Cal. 2d 863, 871, 118 P.2d 465] . The standard of care required of all persons is the care a person of ordinary person would exercise under the circumstances, unless a statutory or judicially-created exception requires a higher standard [Flowers v. Torrance Mem'l Hosp. Med. Ctr. (1994) 8 Cal. 4th 992, 997, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 685, 884 P.2d 142] . Thus, although the standard remains constant, the amount of care considered reasonable will vary according to such factors as the risk involved or, in the case of professionals, the defendant's skill, training, and knowledge [Flowers v. Torrance Mem'l Hosp. Med. Ctr. (1994) 8 Cal. 4th 992, 997-998, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 685, 884 P.2d 142] .

Heightened standards of care have been most commonly imposed on physicians [see, e.g., Finn v. G.D. Searle & Co.

(1984) 35 Cal. 3d 691, 704, 200 Cal. Rptr. 870, 677 P.2d 1147] and attorneys [see, e.g., Heyer v. Flaig(1969) 70 Cal. 2d 223, 229, 74 Cal. Rptr. 225, 449 P.2d 161] . Other professionals who have been held to special standards of care include nurses [see, e.g., Fraijo v. Hartland Hosp. (1979) 99 Cal. App. 3d 331, 342, 160 Cal. Rptr. 246] , architects [see, e.g., Cooper v. Jevne (1976) 56 Cal. App. 3d 860, 868, 128 Cal. Rptr. 724] , engineers [see, e.g., Huang v. Garner (1984) 157 Cal. App. 3d 404, 413, 203 Cal. Rptr. 800] , accountants [see, e.g., Lindner v. Barlow, Davis & Wood (1962) 210 Cal. App. 2d 660, 665, 27 Cal. Rptr. 101] , and persons holding themselves out as expert investment advisors [see Civ. Code § 3372].

For further discussion, see Ch. 56, Architects , Ch. 76, Attorney Professional Liability , and Ch. 415, Physicians: Medical Malpractice .

[2] Common Carriers

Common carriers have a statutory duty to exercise the utmost care and diligence for their passengers' safe carriage and must provide safe vehicles [see Civ. Code §§ 2100, 2101; see also McBride v. Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Ry. Co. (1955) 44 Cal. 2d 113, 116, 279 P.2d 966] . However, a carrier is not an insurer of the safety of its passengers; the plaintiff passenger must still establish that the carrier was negligent [see Civ. Code § 2100; McBride v. Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Ry. Co. (1955) 44 Cal. 2d 113, 117, 279 P.2d 966] .

For further discussion, see Ch. 106, Buses and Streetcars , Ch. 109, Carriers , and Ch. 485, Railroads .

[3] Children

[a] Standard of Care Owed to Them by Parents and Others

Persons dealing with children must exercise a greater degree of care towards them than they are required to exercise towards adults [Pamela L. v. Farmer (1980) 112 Cal. App. 3d 206, 211, 169 Cal. Rptr. 282] . Thus, businesses that know that children are likely to be present have a duty to keep the premises reasonably safe for children [Crane v. Smith (1943) 23 Cal. 2d 288, 297, 144 P.2d 356] . Similarly, a person who drives in an area where he or she knows children are frequently present must exercise greater care for their safety than would a driver under ordinary circumstances [Hilyar v. Union Ice Co. (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 30, 36-37, 286 P.2d 21] .

The degree of care that must be exercised towards a minor varies according to the minor's age; the amount of care required increases with the minor's immaturity and consequent heedlessness of danger [Satariano v. Sleight (1942) 54 Cal. App. 2d 278, 283, 129 P.2d 35] .

[b] Standard of Care Owed by Them

[i] Different Than Adult Standard

Fam. Code § 6600 restates the provisions of former Civ. Code § 41 that a minor "is civilly liable for a wrong done by the minor, but is not liable in exemplary damages unless at the time of the act the minor was capable of knowing that the act was wrongful." This provision has been interpreted to mean that a minor is liable for his or her torts if the minor had the state of mind necessary to commit the particular wrong with which he or she is charged [see People v. Lara (1967) 67 Cal. 2d 365, 380, 62 Cal. Rptr. 586, 432 P.2d 202] .

A child is not required to exercise the same degree of care as an adult would, but must only exercise that degree ordinarily used by children of the same age, intelligence, and experience under similar circumstances [Pittman v. Pedro Petroleum Corp. (1974) 42 Cal. App. 3d 859, 864, 117 Cal. Rptr. 220] . The issue of a child's standard of care commonly arises in determining whether or not a child has been contributorily negligent for purposes of applying the comparative negligence doctrine [see, e.g., Cummings v. County of Los Angeles (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 258, 263, 14 Cal.

Although the question of a child's negligence is normally a question of fact [see Christian v. Goodwin (1961) 188 Cal. App. 2d 650, 652, 10 Cal. Rptr. 507] , cases decided before the adoption of comparative negligence held that a child under the age of five years is incapable of contributory negligence as a matter of law [see Morris v. McCauley's Quality Transmission Serv. (1976) 60 Cal. App. 3d 964, 970 n. 4, 132 Cal. Rptr. 37] .

For further discussion, see Ch. 367A, Minors: Tort Actions .

[ii] Exception for Children Engaging in Adult Activities

If a minor engages in adult activities, he or she is required to exercise the same degree of care as would a reasonable adult [Prichard v. Veterans Cab Co. (1965) 63 Cal. 2d 727, 732, 47 Cal. Rptr. 904, 408 P.2d 360] . This rule is most commonly imposed when minors operate motor vehicles requiring adult qualifications. Thus, no special instruction on the standard of care owed by children is appropriate in cases involving a minor driving a motorcycle [Prichard v. Veterans Cab Co. (1965) 63 Cal. 2d 727, 732, 47 Cal. Rptr. 904, 408 P.2d 360] or an automobile [Neudeck v. Bransten (1965) 233 Cal. App. 2d 17, 21, 43 Cal. Rptr. 250] .

[4] Mentally Disabled Persons

Civ. Code § 41 provides that "a person of unsound mind, of whatever degree, is civilly liable for a wrong done by the person, but is not liable in exemplary damages unless at the time of the act the person was capableof knowing that the act was wrongful." California follows the general rule that although physical capabilities may be taken into account as variable circumstances in the application of the reasonable person standard, mental capacity remains an invariable; a defendant is held to the objective standard of reasonableness without regard for his or her actual mental disability [Mullen v. Bruce (1959) 168 Cal. App. 2d 494, 496-497, 335 P.2d 945] .

However, in certain limited circumstances, the subjective mental incapacity of a person may be taken into account if he or she is the plaintiff and the issue is his or her comparative fault [see De Martini v. Alexander Sanitarium, Inc. (1961) 192 Cal. App. 2d 442, 448, 13 Cal. Rptr. 564] , but this rule does not apply if the defendant has not been shown to have knowledge of the plaintiff's condition [Fox v. City & County of San Francisco (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 164, 170, 120 Cal. Rptr. 779] . Moreover, this subjective standard is not available in cases in which a plaintiff's act is intentional, albeit irrational [Fox v. City & County of San Francisco (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 164, 172, 120 Cal. Rptr. 779] .

For further discussion, see Ch. 304, Insane and Other Incompetent Persons .

[5] Physically Disabled Persons

A person who has a physical disability is held to the same standard of care as other persons, except that his or her physical impairment is taken into account as a circumstance [Jones v. Bayley (1942) 49 Cal. App. 2d 647, 654, 122 P.2d 293] . Thus, it is appropriate to instruct the jury that the amount of care required of one with a physical disability is that which an ordinarily prudent person with the same disability would use under similar circumstances [CACI No. 403; see Conjorsky v. Murray (1955) 135 Cal. App. 2d 478, 482, 287 P.2d 505] .

§ 380.70 "Actual Cause" or "Cause in Fact" Distinguished From "Legal" ("Proximate") Cause

To establish a cause of action based on negligent conduct, the plaintiff usually must establish that the defendant's conduct caused the plaintiff's damages [Hutchison v. Southern Cal. First Nat'l Bank (1972) 27 Cal. App. 3d 572, 578, 103 Cal. Rptr. 816] . Thus, except in those cases in which the law holds the defendant vicariously liable for the tortious conduct of a third person [see § 380.131[1]], the plaintiff must show "a reasonable connection between the act or omission of the defendant and the damage which the plaintiff has suffered" [Prosser and Keeton on the Law of Torts (5th ed. 1984) ch. 7, Proximate Cause, § 41, p. 263]. This element is often expressed by courts as a requirement that the defendant's conduct be the "proximate cause" or "legal cause" of the plaintiff's damages [see, e.g., Valdez v. J.D. Diffenbaugh Co. (1975) 51 Cal. App. 3d 494, 509, 124 Cal. Rptr. 467] .

The use of the terms "legal cause" and "proximate cause" has led to considerable confusion because courts and other authorities have often used these terms in referring to two very separate issues: (1) whether there is any factual relationship between the defendant's conduct and the plaintiff's claimed injuries (an issue often referred to as "actual causation" or "direct causation" or "cause-in-fact") [see § 380.71]; and (2) whether, assuming such a factual relationship is shown, the defendant should be held legally responsible for the plaintiff's injuries [see § 380.73[1]].

Many California decisions have used the terms "proximate cause" and "legal cause" synonymously to refer to the second issue--whether the defendant should, as a matter of policy, be held legally responsible for the consequences of his or her acts--rather than the issue of actual causation [see, e.g., Akins v. County of Sonoma (1967) 67 Cal. 2d 185, 199, 60 Cal. Rptr. 499, 430 P.2d 57 ; Beauchene v. Synanon Found., Inc. (1979) 88 Cal. App. 3d 342, 346-347, 151 Cal. Rptr. 796] . Other decisions, although purporting to recognize a conceptual difference between actual and proximate cause, nevertheless use the term "proximate cause" when discussing the question of actual causation [see, e.g., Valdez v. J.D. Diffenbaugh Co. (1975) 51 Cal. App. 3d 494, 508-509, 124 Cal. Rptr. 467] . Some opinions have used the term "proximate cause" to refer to both issues [see Banville v. Schmidt (1974) 37 Cal. App. 3d 92, 107, 112

Cal. Rptr. 126] . Prior official jury instructions on the subject of causation, BAJI Nos. 3.75 and 3.76, contributed to the confusion by using the terms "proximate cause" and "legal cause" to refer to what is essentially the issue of actual causation or cause-in-fact. Subsequent to the California Supreme Court's disapproval of BAJI No. 3.75 and suggestion that BAJI No. 3.76 be modified [Mitchell v. Gonzales (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 1041, 1053 n.9, 1054, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 913, 819 P.2d 872] , the Committee on Standard Jury Instructions withdrew BAJI No. 3.75 and modiied BAJI No. 3.76 to eliminate all reference to the term "proximate cause." Because of the confusion created by the use of the term "proximate cause," most attorneys prefer to use the term "actual cause" or "direct cause" when referring to the existence of a factual relationship between the defendant's conduct and the plaintiff's claimed injuries and the term "legal cause" when referring to whether, assuming the factual relationship is shown, the defendant should be held legally responsible.

§ 380.71 Establishing Actual Cause

[1] Question of Fact

The issue of actual or direct causation or cause-in-fact involves an inquiry into whether the defendant's conduct brought about or contributed in some way to the plaintiff's injury [see Akins v. County of Sonoma (1967) 67 Cal. 2d 185, 198-199, 60 Cal. Rptr. 499, 430 P.2d 57] . Actual cause is ordinarily a question of fact for the jury to decide [see, e.g., Hoyem v. Manhattan Beach City Sch. Dist. (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 508, 520 n. 5, 150 Cal. Rptr. 1, 585 P.2d 851] . Only in the relatively rare case in which only one conclusion may reasonably be drawn from the evidence will the issue be decided by the court as a matter of law [see Banville v. Schmidt (1974) 37 Cal. App. 3d 92, 106, 112 Cal. Rptr. 126] . Because the issue of actual cause is ordinarily a jury determination, the drafting of appropriate jury instructions on the issue of causation is critical [see Vahey v. Sacia (1981) 126 Cal. App. 3d 171, 174-179, 178 Cal. Rptr. 559] .

As a general rule, the plaintiff bears the burden of proving that his or her injuries were actually caused by the defendant [see Sindell v. Abbott Labs. (1980) 26 Cal. 3d 588, 597, 163 Cal. Rptr. 132, 607 P.2d 924 ; see also Cottle v. Superior Court (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 1367, 1384-1385, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 882 (causation must be proven within reasonable medical probability based on competent expert testimony; mere possibility that injury was caused by exposure to chemicals was insufficient basis for submission of issue to jury); see also § 380.72[3]]. However, the burden of proof as to causation may, in some instances, be shifted to the defendant [see, e.g., Summers v. Tice (1948) 33 Cal. 2d 80, 88, 199 P.2d 1 ; see also § 380.72[4][a]].

[2] Test for Determining Actual Cause

California has adopted the "substantial factor" test for proving cause-in-fact, or actual cause, in negligence cases [Viner v. Sweet (2003) 30 Cal. 4th 1232, 1238, 135 Cal. Rptr. 2d 629, 70 P.3d 1046 ; Rutherford v. Owens-Ill., Inc. (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 953, 968, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 16, 941 P.2d 1203 ; Mitchell v. Gonzales (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 1041, 1052-1053, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 913, 819 P.2d 872] . As defined by the Judicial Council of California in Civil Jury Instruction No. 430, a "substantial factor" is a factor that a reasonable person would consider to have contributed to the harm suffered by the plaintiff. That factor must be more than a remote or trivial factor, but it does not have to be the only cause of the harm [CACI No. 430]. One court of appeal opinion predating this CACI instruction stated that conduct is a substantial factor in bringing about harm if it has created a force or series of forces that are in active operation up to the time of the harm, or if the effects of the negligent conduct actively operate to bring about harm to another [Osborn v. Irwin Memorial Blood Bank (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 234, 253, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 101] . If a defendant's conduct was a substantial factorin causing the harm, that defendant may be liable even if some other person, condition, or event was also a substantial factor in causing the harm [CACI No. 431].

Prior to adoption of the substantial factor test, the most commonly used test for determining whether or not the defendant's conduct was the actual cause of the plaintiff's injury was the "but for" test--that is, the plaintiff was required to show that but for the defendant's act or omission, the plaintiff would not have been harmed [see, e.g., Hoyem v. Manhattan Beach City Sch. Dist. (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 508, 520 n.5, 150 Cal. Rptr. 1, 585 P.2d 851 ; Vecchione v. Carlin (1980) 111 Cal. App. 3d 351, 359, 168 Cal. Rptr. 571] . Although the substantial factor test is now considered the primary test for causation, conceptually the "but for" test is actually subsumed within the substantial factor test. In Viner v. Sweet, the California Supreme Court, citing Section 432 of the Restatement (Second) of Torts, explained that a defendant's negligent conduct is not a substantial factor in bringing about harm if the harm would have occurred even without the defendant's conduct [Viner v. Sweet (2003) 30 Cal. 4th 1232, 1239, 135 Cal. Rptr. 2d 629, 70 P.3d 1046] . Thus, failing the "but for" test will generally result in a finding that the defendant's conduct is not a substantial factor in bringing about the harm.

However, satisfying the "but for" test is not always necessary to satisfy the substantial factor test. If two forces are actively operating independently of one another, and if each is sufficient by itself to bring about the harm, the conduct of each actor may be a substantial factor in causing the harm even though the "but for" test is not satisfied [Viner v. Sweet (2003) 30 Cal. 4th 1232, 1239, 135 Cal. Rptr. 2d 629, 70 P.3d 1046] . Therefore, in cases in which there are multiple causes, the substantial factor test should not be confused by adding a "but for" test. Even in cases that do not involve multiple independent causes, a "but for" instruction is not generally required if a "substantial factor" instruction is given, because the additional instruction is generally considered redundant [Mayes v. Bryan (2006) 139 Cal. App. 4th 1075, 1094-1095, 44 Cal. Rptr. 3d 14] .

If there is no issue of concurrent independent causes that might confuse a jury, however, there are situations in which instructing the jury specifically on the "but for" test may be desirable or even necessary. For example, the California Supreme Court continues to recognize that a "but for" standard for actual causation is appropriate in professional malpractice cases. To protect against speculative and conjectural claims, the plaintiff in an attorney malpractice case involving litigation negligence must prove as an element of the claim against the attorney that but for the attorney's alleged negligence, the plaintiff would have obtained a more favorable judgment or settlement in the underlying action [Viner v. Sweet (2003) 30 Cal. 4th 1232, 1240, 135 Cal. Rptr. 2d 629, 70 P.3d 1046 ; see also Mattco Forge, Inc. v. Arthur Young & Co. (1997) 52 Cal. App. 4th 820, 832-834, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 780] . Similarly, if the alleged malpractice occurs while advice is givenregarding, or documents are being prepared for, a business transaction, a plaintiff complaining of malpractice in a transactional setting is required to prove that but for the malpractice, the plaintiffwould more likely than not have obtained a more favorable result [Viner v. Sweet (2003) 30 Cal. 4th 1232, 1243, 135 Cal. Rptr. 2d 629, 70 P.3d 1046] . The test for causation in attorney malpractice cases is discussed in greater detail in Ch. 76, Attorney Professional Liability.

The substantial factor test is used to determine cause-in-fact, rather than to assess legal or policy considerations that may limit liability. For discussion of "proximate cause" as a policy determination regarding whether a defendant is liable, see § 380.73. For further discussion of the rules that govern if there are multiple causes of harm, see § 380.74.

§ 380.72 Proof of Actual Cause

[1] Absolute Certainty of Proof Not Required

The plaintiff is not required to establish the fact of causation with absolute certainty; it is sufficient if there is evidence from which reasonable persons could conclude that it is more probable than not that the defendant's act was a cause of the plaintiff's injury [Simmons v. West Covina Med. Clinic (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 696, 702, 260 Cal. Rptr. 772] . A wide range of proof is available to establish cause. For example, a plaintiff was allowed to rely on experimental test results to show that the probable cause of an automobile's rolling over was a defective design [Culpepper v. Volkswagen of Am., Inc. (1973) 33 Cal. App. 3d 510, 515, 521-522, 109 Cal. Rptr. 110] . In another case, the question of whether the plaintiff had in fact been poisoned by a chemical in the defendant's manufacturing plant was contested, and the plaintiff was unable to offer direct evidence that the poisonous substance was in fact present in the atmosphere at the defendant's manufacturing plant. Instead, the plaintiff was permitted to offer evidence, such as expert testimony on the effects of glue sniffing and the toxicology of a related chemical, from which an inference might be drawn [Ruiz v. Minnesota Mining & Mfg. Co. (1971) 15 Cal. App. 3d 462, 467-469, 93 Cal. Rptr. 270] , because this evidence had "a rational tendency to prove or disprove" the disputed fact of causation [Ruiz v. Minnesota Mining & Mfg. Co. (1971) 15 Cal. App. 3d 462, 467, 93 Cal. Rptr. 270] .

A plaintiff is not required to rule out all possible alternatives to the causal mechanism shown by the evidence. The plaintiff is only required to show that a particular mechanism was more probably than not a cause-in-fact of his or her injuries. For example, a plaintiff alleged that the collapse of a defectively welded pillar supporting the roof of plaintiff's vehicle caused the plaintiff's injury when the vehicle rolled over after plunging down an embankment. The plaintiff was not required to rule out the possibility that the roof would have collapsed even if the supporting pillar had been flawlessly welded [Doupnik v. General Motors Corp. (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 849, 863-865, 275 Cal. Rptr. 715] .

Although absolute certainty of proof may not be required, courts have also held that conjectural evidence indicating only a mere "possible" causal relationship between the defendant's act and the plaintiff's injury is insufficient to establish a prima facie case of causation [Jones v. Ortho Pharm. Corp. (1985) 163 Cal. App. 3d 396, 402-403, 209 Cal. Rptr. 456] .

[2] Abstract Negligence

In many cases involving victims of assaultive crimes, such as rape or robbery, committed by a third party, plaintiffs allege that the defendant (generally the owner or operator of the premises on which the assault occurred) is negligent for having failed to take adequate security measures to deter the assault. In attempting to prove that the inadequacy of the defendant's security measures was the legal cause of the plaintiff's injury, plaintiffs have offered expert testimony that compares the defendant's security measures to some abstract standard that allegedly would have prevented the crime against the plaintiff, finds those measures wanting, but does not actually prove that the crime would not have occurred had the defendant adhered to this abstract standard. The courts have criticized and rejected this type of testimony as establishing only abstract negligence [see Nola M. v. University of S. Cal. (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 421, 435, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 97 ; Noble v. Los Angeles Dodgers, Inc. (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 912, 916-918, 214 Cal. Rptr. 395] .

In a case involving a daytime assault and attempted rape by unknown assailants at a large apartment complex, for example, the California Supreme Court upheld summary judgment for the owners of the apartment complex. The owners provided nighttime security personnel and daytime inspections to ensure that security gates were operating properly, but the gates were not all secured properly. The plaintiff, who had been making a delivery at the apartment complex, argued that daytime security guards would have prevented the assault. Assuming for the sake of analysis that the owners may have breached a duty to provide reasonable security measures, the Court concluded that the plaintiff could not prove that this breach was the actual cause of the assault and attempted rape. The plaintiff admitted that she could not prove the identity or background of the three men who assaulted her nor how they got on the apartment complex premises. Absent any evidence that the attackers were unauthorized intruders, rather than authorized residents, or that it was more probable than not the attack would not have occurred if there had been an increased security presence, the Court held that the plaintiff could not prove that any breach of duty on the part of the defendants actually caused the harm [Saelzler v. Advanced Group 400 (2001) 25 Cal. 4th 763, 775-776, 107 Cal. Rptr. 2d 617, 23 P.3d 1143 ; see also Sandoval v. Bank of Am. (2002) 94 Cal. App. 4th 1378, 1387, 115 Cal. Rptr. 2d 128 (plaintiff need only show that proposed security measures would more likely than not have prevented attack, not that they would have absolutely prevented attack)].

According to the Court, the opinion testimony of the plaintiff's expert--that the attack would not have occurred if the defendants had provided daytime security guards and made a better effort to maintain the security gates in proper working condition--was speculation and did not raise a triable issue of fact on causation [Saelzler v. Advanced Group 400 (2001) 25 Cal. 4th 763, 781, 107 Cal. Rptr. 2d 617, 23 P.3d 1143] .

Similarly, the owners of a baseball stadium were held not liable for the injuries of a patron who was attacked by two drunks in the stadium parking lot, despite testimony by plaintiff's expert witness that the stadium security force should have been larger and should have been deployed differently. The court noted that no one could reasonably conclude that any number of police, in whatever deployment, could prevent all crime or any particular crime, and that the evidence was insufficient to support a causative link between the alleged negligence and plaintiff's injuries [Noble v. Los Angeles Dodgers, Inc. (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 912, 916-918, 214 Cal. Rptr. 395] .

Another court applied this concept of abstract negligence to deny recovery to a woman who was raped on a university campus, and who offered expert testimony that sharply criticized both the university's security department and the university's failure to reduce foliage and increase lighting in the vicinity of the crime. The court found that this testimony was merely setting up an abstract standard that was purportedly better than that adhered to by the university, but that the testimony was not proof that the university's adherence to this abstract standard would have prevented the rape [Nola M. v. University of S. Cal. (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 421, 435, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 97] .

Conversely, the court of appeal held that a trial court erred in granting summary judgment in favor of a security company that failed to provide an armed security guard at a convenience store one night as the company was under contract to do. After a clerk at the store was hit in the face by a woman who was attempting to leave the store without paying for her goods, the clerk sued the security company and argued that the injury would not have occurred if the armed guard had been present. The court of appeal held that the issue of causation should have gone to the jury. The court noted undisputed evidence that the security guard was normally positioned about a foot from the door where the altercation occurred and concluded that it was more likely than not that the woman would not have struck the clerk if an armed guard had been standing right there [Mukthar v. Latin Am. Sec. Serv. (2006) 139 Cal. App. 4th 284, 291, 42 Cal. Rptr. 3d 563] .

[3] Burden of Proof on Plaintiff

The plaintiff generally bears the burden of proving that the defendant actually caused his or her injuries [see Sindell v. Abbott Labs. (1980) 26 Cal. 3d 588, 597, 163 Cal. Rptr. 132, 607 P.2d 924] . There are, however, exceptional circumstances in which the burden of proof regarding causation shifts to the defendant [see § 380.72[4]].

[4] Circumstances Shifting Burden of Proof to Defendant

[a] Multiple Defendants and Single Cause of Harm (Summers v. Tice)

[i] Application of Rule of Alternate Liability

One important exception to the general rule that a plaintiff bears the burden of proving causation was set forth by the California Supreme Court in Summers v. Tice [Summers v. Tice (1948) 33 Cal. 2d 80, 199 P.2d 1] . The plaintiff in Summers had been bird hunting with the two defendants. The plaintiff established that each of the defendants had negligently fired his gun in the plaintiff's direction at the same time. The plaintiff was hit by two birdshot pellets--one in the eye, the other in the lip [Summers v. Tice (1948) 33 Cal. 2d 80, 82, 199 P.2d 1] . The shot in the eye could only have been caused by one of the two defendants. The plaintiff was completely unable to show which defendant caused the injury and, under the general rule, would have been subject to a nonsuit motion by each defendant [Summers v. Tice (1948) 33 Cal. 2d 80, 84, 87, 199 P.2d 1] . Nevertheless, the Court affirmed the judgment against both defendants, noting that both defendants were wrongdoers in that each had been negligent toward the plaintiff, and that they had brought about a situation in which the negligence of one of them injured the plaintiff. The injured party was placed in the unfair position of having to point to which defendant caused the injury. If one of them escaped liability, so would the other, leaving the plaintiff without a remedy. The Court held instead that each defendant should be required to absolve himself if he can [Summers v. Tice (1948) 33 Cal. 2d 80, 86, 88 199 P.2d 1] . If the defendants failed to do so, they could be held jointly liable for the injury to the plaintiff [Summers v. Tice (1948) 33 Cal. 2d 80, 88, 199 P.2d 1] .

The Summers rule of alternate liability apparently applies only if the plaintiff establishes that each of the defendants against whom the rule is invoked has engaged in tortious conduct [see Summers v. Tice (1948) 33 Cal. 2d 80, 86, 88, 199 P.2d 1 ; see also Sindell v. Abbott Labs. (1980) 26 Cal. 3d 588, 602 ; Restatement (Second) of Torts § 433B(3) & cmt. g]. The defendant need not, however, be in a better position to explain causation for the Summers rule to apply [Sindell v. Abbott Labs. (1980) 26 Cal. 3d 588, 600-602, 163 Cal. Rptr. 132, 607 P.2d 924] . The burden of proof regarding causation may be shifted to the defendants under the Summers rule even if the plaintiff may have been comparatively negligent [see Vahey v. Sacia (1981) 126 Cal. App. 3d 171, 177, 178 Cal. Rptr. 559] .

[ii] Limitations on Application

The alternative liability doctrine of Summers v. Tice [Summers v. Tice (1948) 33 Cal. 2d 80, 199 P.2d 1] does not apply to actions in which the plaintiff cannot identify which of several alleged defendants has harmed him or her and has not joined all potential tortfeasors, or cannot identify the specific source of harm involved in his or her injury [Setliff v. E.I. Du Pont De Nemours & Co. (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 1525, 1536, 38 Cal. Rptr. 2d 763] . For example, a paint store employee brought suit against 40 manufacturers of paint, solvents, strippers, and glue, claiming that exposure to these products had injured him [Setliff v. E.I. Du Pont De Nemours & Co. (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 1525, 1535-1536, 38 Cal. Rptr. 2d 763] . The plaintiff's complaint alleged that he could not identify which defendant manufactured the product(s) responsible for his injuries, but that all the products contained volatile organic compounds (VOCs) that pollute the environment. Observing that VOCs are present in products not manufactured by the defendants, the court concluded that simply tying his injury to VOCs and alleging that all of defendants' products contained VOCs was not sufficient to allege that defendants caused his injury [Setliff v. E.I. Du Pont De Nemours & Co. (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 1525, 1536, 38 Cal. Rptr. 2d 763 ; see also Klein v. Council of Chem. Ass'ns (E.D. Pa. 1984) 587 F. Supp. 213, 221] .

The California Supreme Court has refused to apply the doctrine of alternative liability and its burden-shifting rule to asbestos-related latent personal injury actions, and has defined the proper standards for jury instructions in these cases [Rutherford v. Owens-Ill., Inc. (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 953, 982, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 16, 941 P.2d 1203] . The Court held that in the context of a cause of action for asbestos-related latent injuries, the plaintiff must first establish some threshold exposure to the defendant's defective asbestos-containing products, and must further establish in reasonable medical probability that a particular exposure or series of exposures was a "legal cause" of the plaintiff's injury, or in other words, a substantial factor in bringing about the injury. In an asbestos-related cancer case, the plaintiff need not prove that fibers from the defendant's product were the actual fibers, or among the actual fibers, that actually began the process of malignant cellular growth. Instead, the plaintiff may meet the burden of proving that exposure to the defendant's product was a substantial factor causing the illness by showing that in reasonable medical probability it contributed to the plaintiff's (or decedent's) risk of developing cancer [Rutherford v. Owens-Ill., Inc. (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 953, 982, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 16, 941 P.2d 1203 (use of jury instruction shifting burden of proof to asbestos defendants on element of causation constituted nonprejudicial error)].

Although not limited to cases with multiple defendants and not involving the shifting of the burden of proof, courts have more generally rejected attempts by plaintiffs to hold defendants liable for toxic exposures in the absence of allegations specifying the particular chemicals or products responsible for the injury, explaining how the toxins entered the body, and explaining how that exposure caused the alleged injury [Bockrath v. Aldrich Chemical Co. (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 71, 80, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 846, 980 P.2d 398 ; Oddone v. Superior Court (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 813, 821, 101 Cal. Rptr. 3d 867] .

[b] Producer of Substantial Share of Market for Defective Product (Sindell v. Abbott Laboratories)

[i] Application of Rule

In Sindell v. Abbott Laboratories [Sindell v. Abbott Labs. (1980) 26 Cal. 3d 588, 163 Cal. Rptr. 132, 607 P.2d 924] , the plaintiff sued a group of five manufacturers of the drug DES, a medicine intended to reduce miscarriages that had a disastrous side effect of causing rapidly growing adenocarcinoma in the daughters of mothers who had taken the drug. The plaintiff was unable to identify which company had manufactured the particular batch of DES that her mother ingested, so she sued a group of the larger manufacturers of the drug, alleging that they marketed the drug without giving adequate warning of its potential danger [Sindell v. Abbott Labs. (1980) 26 Cal. 3d 588, 594, 163 Cal. Rptr. 132, 607 P.2d 924] . The five named defendants, together with five or six other companies, were apparently responsible for producing 90 percent of the DES that had been marketed; approximately 200 companies manufactured DES. The DES itself did not vary in quality from manufacturer to manufacturer, but was produced from a common formula [Sindell v. Abbott Labs. (1980) 26 Cal. 3d 588, 611-612, 163 Cal. Rptr. 132, 607 P.2d 924] .

The trial court sustained the defendants' demurrers to the complaint on the ground that the plaintiff had admitted that she could not identify the manufacturer that produced the drug responsible for her injuries, but the California Supreme Court reversed. Although the Court found the Summers rationale for shifting the burden of proof regarding causation to be inapplicable to this case [see § 380.72[4]], the Court nevertheless agreed that a modification or extension of the Summers rule was warranted. Although the Court acknowledged that the number of manufacturers that produced DES created the likelihood that none of the defendants had produced the DES that caused the injury and that the responsible manufacturer, not named in the action, would escape liability [Sindell v. Abbott Labs. (1980) 26 Cal. 3d 588, 611, 163 Cal. Rptr. 132, 607 P.2d 924] , the Court ruled that in this case the likelihood that any of the defendants supplied the DES that injured the plaintiff should instead be measured by the percentage that the DES produced by each of them bears to the entire production of the drug sold by all manufacturers [Sindell v. Abbott Labs. (1980) 26 Cal. 3d 588, 612, 163 Cal. Rptr. 132, 607 P.2d 924] .

The Court therefore held that if a plaintiff joined in the action the manufacturers of a "substantial share" of the product that caused the plaintiff's injury, the burden of proof would shift to the defendants to demonstrate that they could not have produced the substance that injured the plaintiff [see Sindell v. Abbott Labs. (1980) 26 Cal. 3d 588, 598, 612, 163 Cal. Rptr. 132, 607 P.2d 924 ; see Miles Labs., Inc. v. Superior Court (1982) 133 Cal. App. 3d 587, 594-595, 184 Cal. Rptr. 98 (defendant failed to establish, as matter of law, that it could not have produced particular drug that injured plaintiff)]. The Court further held that each defendant in the case would be liable "for the proportion of the judgment represented by its share of the market unless it demonstrates that it could not have made the product that caused plaintiff's injuries" [see Sindell v. Abbott Labs. (1980) 26 Cal. 3d 588, 612, 163 Cal. Rptr. 132, 607 P.2d 924] .

The opinion did not clearly indicate whether a plaintiff in this situation is entitled to compensation for 100 percent of his or her damages or is limited to the proportion of his or her damages represented by the named defendants' combined share of the total market for the product. The former interpretation seems more likely in light of the Court's suggestion that the named defendants could cross-complaint against other manufacturers, not joined in the original complaint, who might have produced the drug that caused the injury [see Sindell v. Abbott Labs. (1980) 26 Cal. 3d 588, 612, 163 Cal. Rptr. 132, 607 P.2d 924] .

[ii] Cases to Which Rule Does Not Apply

The California Supreme Court has subsequently clarified the market share theory of Sindell, holding that the theory cannot be used to prove a cause of action based on fraud or breach of warranty, because these causes of action depend on proof of the state of mind of the party that made the representation [Brown v. Superior Court (1988) 44 Cal. 3d 1049, 1070-1072, 245 Cal. Rptr. 412, 751 P.2d 470] . The Court also held that manufacturers of prescription drugs could not be held liable for design defects on a strict products liability theory, and noted that a cause of action for breach of warranty could not be maintained against a prescription drug manufacturer whether or not it was based on the market share theory [Brown v. Superior Court (1988) 44 Cal. 3d 1049, 1072 n. 14, 245 Cal. Rptr. 412, 751 P.2d 470] .

In another case relying on Sindell, the plaintiff, who had been infected by a defective Salk polio vaccine, attempted to shift the burden of proof to several defendant manufacturers to show that they had not produced the defective vaccine [Sheffield v. Eli Lilly & Co. (1983) 144 Cal. App. 3d 583, 593-594, 192 Cal. Rptr. 870] . The court of appeal ruled that the Sindell theory does not extend to a product that is "not intrinsically defective for the purpose for which it was used" [Sheffield v. Eli Lilly & Co. (1983) 144 Cal. App. 3d 583, 593, 192 Cal. Rptr. 870] . The defect of which the plaintiff had complained was specific to some identified batch of vaccine, not to the product itself [Sheffield v. Eli Lilly & Co. (1983) 144 Cal. App. 3d 583, 594, 192 Cal. Rptr. 870] . However, the fact that the plaintiff's injury is caused by the product being used for a purpose other than that for which it was originally manufactured will not preclude the application of the Sindell rule if the manufacturers knew of and acquiesced in the product's use for that unintended purpose [see Miles Labs., Inc. v. Superior Court (1982) 133 Cal. App. 3d 587, 595-596, 184 Cal. Rptr. 98] .

Because the market share rule applies only to fungible goods, such as the drug produced from an identical formula that was involved in Sindell [Setliff v. E.I. Du Pont de Nemours & Co. (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 1525, 1537, 38 Cal. Rptr.

2d 763 ; see Sindell v. Abbott Labs. (1980) 26 Cal. 3d 588, 611, 163 Cal. Rptr. 132, 607 P.2d 924] , courts have refused to apply it to asbestos, which is a generic designation for diverse products put to numerous different uses [Setliff v. E.I. Du Pont de Nemours & Co. (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 1525, 1537, 38 Cal. Rptr. 2d 763 ; see also Mullen v. Armstrong World Indus., Inc. (1988) 200 Cal. App. 3d 250, 255-257, 246 Cal. Rptr. 32 ; cf. Wheeler v. Raybestos-Manhattan (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 1152, 1157-1158, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 109 (permitting use of market-share theory in case involving asbestos brake pads); but see Ferris v. Gatke Corp. (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 1211, 1222, 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 819 (failure to show defendant's share of brake pad market precluded application of market-share theory)]. A court of appeal has also refused to apply the rule in an action by a paint store employee against 40 manufacturers of paint, solvents, strippers, and glue, that claimed that exposure to these products had injured him, because plaintiff's response to defendants' demurrers admitted that he did not know if there was a fungible agent common to all of the products [Setliff v. E.I. Du Pont de Nemours & Co. (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 1525, 1537, 38 Cal. Rptr. 2d 763] .

[5] Identification of Cause Prevented by Defendant's Negligence

The defendant's negligent action may itself constitute an obstacle to the plaintiff's ability to prove the critical element of causation. The California Supreme Court has held that in that situation, the plaintiff should not be precluded from recovery for failure to prove causation with certainty [Haft v. Lone Palm Hotel (1970) 3 Cal. 3d 756, 772, 91 Cal. Rptr. 745, 478 P.2d 465] . In that particular case, the plaintiff's husband and five-year-old son drowned in defendant hotel's swimming pool. The plaintiff was able to establish a number of violations of regulations and statutes, including a failure to post warnings that no lifeguard was on duty and that children should not use the pool without adult supervision [Haft v. Lone Palm Hotel (1970) 3 Cal. 3d 756, 763, 91 Cal. Rptr. 745, 478 P.2d 465] . The plaintiff was unable to establish the exact circumstance of the drowning, and there was no direct evidence that the presence of a lifeguard would have prevented the drowning. In holding that the burden of proving causation should be shifted to the defendants, the Court noted that lifeguards served two functions: the primary one of saving lives and a secondary one of "witnessing those accidents that do occur" [Haft v. Lone Palm Hotel (1970) 3 Cal. 3d 756, 771, 91 Cal. Rptr. 745, 478 P.2d 465] . The defendant's failure to provide a lifeguard greatly enhanced the chances the drownings would occur, and the available facts suggested, at the very least, that a competent lifeguard, exercising reasonable care, would have prevented the deaths [Haft v. Lone Palm Hotel (1970) 3 Cal. 3d 756, 772 n. 18, 91 Cal. Rptr. 745, 478 P.2d 465] . Because the defendant's actions prevented the plaintiff from proving her case, the Court reasoned that "[u]nder these circumstances the burden of proof of causation should be shifted to defendants to absolve themselves if they can" [Haft v. Lone Palm Hotel (1970) 3 Cal. 3d 756, 772, 91 Cal. Rptr. 745, 478 P.2d 465 ; cf. Fagerquist v. Western Sun Aviation, Inc. (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 709, 723-726, 236 Cal. Rptr. 633 (facts did not support finding that defendant's failure of compliance prevented plaintiff's ability to prove causation)].

Thus, if the defendant's acts can be shown to deprive the plaintiff "of a means of definitively establishing the facts" of causation, the burden of proof may be shifted to the defendant, at least if there is some prima facie showing that the defendant's negligence may have caused the injury [see Haft v. Lone Palm Hotel (1970) 3 Cal. 3d 756, 771-772, 91 Cal. Rptr. 745, 478 P.2d 465 ; see also McGee v. Cessna Aircraft Co. (1983) 139 Cal. App. 3d 179, 187-190, 188 Cal. Rptr. 542 ; Vahey v. Sacia (1981) 126 Cal. App. 3d 171, 177-178, 178 Cal. Rptr. 559] .

The burden of proof will not be shifted, however, unless there is some causal link between the defendant and the injury alleged. For example, the court refused to shift the burden of proof of causation to the defendant in a case in which the plaintiff sought damages for a cancerous condition allegedly caused by ingestion of a contraceptive drug. The plaintiff claimed that the defendant manufacturer's failure to comply with federal regulations requiring a premarketing study of whether or not the drug could cause cancer made it impossible for her to prove causation. The court held that before a failure to comply with regulations can shift the burden of proof to the defendant, it must be shown that the instrumentality that caused the injury was under the defendant's control [Jones v. Ortho Pharm. Corp. (1985) 163 Cal. App. 3d 396, 405-406, 209 Cal. Rptr. 456] .

§ 380.73 Legal (Proximate) Cause

[1] Policy Considerations and Relationship to Issue of Duty

The fact that the defendant's conduct was an actual cause of the plaintiff's harm is not sufficient in itself to impose liability on the defendant for that harm. A defendant's conduct must also be the "proximate cause" or "legal cause" of the plaintiff's harm [Akins v. County of Sonoma (1967) 67 Cal. 2d 185, 199, 60 Cal. Rptr. 499, 430 P.2d 57 ; Hardison v. Bushnell (1993) 18 Cal. App. 4th 22, 26, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 106] . "Legal cause" or "proximate cause" is not really a matter of causation at all, but involves a policy determination as to whether the defendant should be held legally responsible for the consequences of his or her acts [see Mosley v. Arden Farms Co. (1945) 26 Cal. 2d 213, 220-221, 157 P.2d 372] . The doctrine of legal or proximate cause limits a defendant's liability; that is, in certain situations in which the defendant's conduct is an actual cause of the plaintiff's harm, the defendant will, nevertheless, be absolved of liability because of the manner in which the injury occurred [Hardison v. Bushnell (1993) 18 Cal. App. 4th 22, 26, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 106] .

A number of commentators have suggested that the issues of policy that frequently underlie the determination of "proximate cause" should be addressed in terms of whether or not the defendant owed a duty to the plaintiff [see Prosser and Keeton on the Law of Torts (5th ed. 1984) ch. 7, Proximate Cause, § 42, pp. 274-275]. The California courts, at least since the Supreme Court's decision in Rowland v. Christian [Rowland v. Christian (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 108, 70 Cal. Rptr. 97, 443 P.2d 561] , generally appear to have followed this analytical approach [see Isaacs v. Huntington Mem'l Hosp. (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 112, 123-129, 211 Cal. Rptr. 356, 695 P.2d 653 ; Rowland v. Christian (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 108, 112-113, 70 Cal. Rptr. 97, 443 P.2d 561 ; Beauchene v. Synanon Found., Inc. (1979) 88 Cal. App. 3d 342, 347, 151 Cal. Rptr. 796 ; see also § 380.30[4][a]].

NOTE:

Both courts and commentators have observed the misunderstanding and confusion created by the use of the term "proximate cause" [see, e.g., Mitchell v. Gonzales (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 1041, 1050-1051, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 913, 819 P.2d 872] . Most practicing trial lawyers no longer use the term "proximate cause," preferring instead the term "legal cause."

[2] As Question of Law or Fact

To the extent that proximate cause or legal cause involves a policy determination that the defendant should be held responsible for a plaintiff's injury, it is, in the first instance, a question of law for the court [see Mosley v. Arden Farms Co. (1945) 26 Cal. 2d 213, 222-223, 157 P.2d 372 ; Golden v. Dungan (1971) 20 Cal. App. 3d 295, 311, 97 Cal. Rptr. 577] . Certain subissues involved in the determination of legal (proximate) cause are, however, questions of fact. For example, the issue of legal (proximate) cause most often arises if a third party's conduct (or some other force) coincided with or intervened after the act of the defendant that allegedly caused the plaintiff's harm. Whether or not the defendant's conduct is deemed the legal (proximate) cause of the plaintiff's harm in such cases often turns on whether or not the intervening act or the harm to the plaintiff was reasonably foreseeable. Foreseeability is a question of fact that must be decided by the jury unless the undisputed facts leave no room for a reasonable difference of opinion [Bigbee v. Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. (1983) 34 Cal. 3d 49, 56, 192 Cal. Rptr. 857, 665 P.2d 947 ; see Constance B. v. State of California (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 200, 211, 223 Cal. Rptr. 645 (no factual question regarding causation exisited because undisputed facts showed that alleged improper lighting, patrolling, and maintenance, and insufficient visibility, were not proximate cause of assault on plaintiff at state-owned rest stop)].

§ 380.74 Multiple Causes of Harm

[1] Liability of Defendant If Not Sole Legal (Proximate) Cause

A plaintiff is not required to prove that the defendant's conduct was the sole legal (proximate) cause of his or her injury, but only that such negligence was one legal (proximate) cause [American Motorcycle Assn. v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 578, 586, 146 Cal. Rptr. 182, 578 P.2d 899] . In other words, there may be more than one legal (proximate) cause of an injury [Muffett v. Royster (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 289, 307, 195 Cal. Rptr. 73] .

Under Proposition 51, the Fair Responsibility Act of 1986, if a defendant's act is not the sole legal (proximate) cause of plaintiff's harm, the defendant is jointly liable with all other defendants for that proportion of the plaintiff's economic damages not attributable to the fault of plaintiff, but is only liable for his or her proportionate share of plaintiff's noneconomic damages [see Civ. Code § 1431.2(a); see also § 380.132[3][a]].

[2] Concurring Causes

If two separate wrongful acts occur together and injury to a plaintiff results, each of those acts may be a legal (proximate) cause of the harm [Fennessey v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1942) 20 Cal. 2d 141, 145, 124 P.2d 51] . The central question presented in cases of concurrent negligence is often a factual one: whether the negligence of one or both of the defendants actually caused a plaintiff's harm. A party may be held liable for negligence that was a material element and substantial factor in bringing about the plaintiff's injury, even if another party's concurrent negligence would have produced identical harm without it [Thomsen v. Rexall Drug & Chem. Co. (1965) 235 Cal. App. 2d 775, 783, 45 Cal. Rptr. 642] .

Assuming that both wrongful acts are found to be a substantial factor in causing the plaintiff's harm, this fact alone will not relieve either tortfeasor from liability, because there can be more than one legal or (proximate) cause of an injury [

Muffett v. Royster (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 289, 307, 195 Cal. Rptr. 73] . As a general rule, an actor will be liable if his or her negligence contributed to the plaintiff's injury, even if another party's concurrent negligence also contributed to the injury [Taylor v. Oakland Scavenger Co. (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 594, 602, 110 P.2d 1044 ; Johnston v. Key Sys. Transit Lines (1959) 167 Cal. App. 2d 383, 385, 334 P.2d 243] .

[3] Intervening Causes

[a] Relieving Defendant of Liability

An act or condition that occurs after the defendant's negligent act or omission and is causally related to the plaintiff's injury is often called an "independent intervening act" [Prosser and Keeton on the Law of Torts (5th ed. 1984) ch. 7, Proximate Cause, § 44, p. 301; Restatement (Second) of Torts § 441(1)]. Whether such independent intervening acts relieve a defendant from liability for the consequences of his or her negligence is a question that is commonly discussed under the doctrine of legal (proximate) cause [see, e.g., Hoyem v. Manhattan Beach City Sch. Dist. (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 508, 520-522, 150 Cal. Rptr. 1, 585 P.2d 851] . The question of a defendant's legal responsibility for the consequences of such intervening acts can also be, and frequently is, addressed in terms of whether or not the defendant owed the plaintiff a duty to protect him or her from those acts [see, e.g., Isaacs v. Huntington Mem'l Hosp. (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 112, 123-129, 211 Cal. Rptr. 356, 695 P.2d 653 ; Weirum v. RKO Gen., Inc. (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 40, 45-49, 123 Cal. Rptr. 468, 539 P.2d 36] . The courts have held that if the likelihood of such an intervening act is one of the risks that makes the defendant's conduct negligent, the occurrence of such an act does not prevent the defendant from being liable for harm caused by it [see Bigbee v. Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. (1983) 34 Cal. 3d 49, 58, 192 Cal. Rptr. 857, 665 P.2d 947] .

Whether the court addresses the issue of liability in such cases in terms of duty or legal (proximate) cause, the crucial question is generally whether or not the defendant could have reasonably foreseen either the intervening act [see Bigbee v. Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. (1983) 34 Cal. 3d 49, 55-56, 192 Cal. Rptr. 857, 665 P.2d 947] or a risk of harm of the type suffered by the plaintiff [see Akins v. County of Sonoma (1967) 67 Cal. 2d 185, 199, 60 Cal. Rptr. 499, 430 P.2d 57 ; Pappert v. San Diego Gas & Elec. Co. (1982) 137 Cal. App. 3d 205, 210-211, 186 Cal. Rptr. 847 ; see also United Pacific Co. v. Southern Cal. Edison Co. (1985) 163 Cal. App. 3d 700, 710-712, 209 Cal. Rptr. 819 (no prejudicial error for trial court to state rule of foreseeability of harm in instruction on negligence rather than in instruction on causation)]. Thus, if an independent intervening act is not reasonably foreseeable and the results that it caused were not foreseeable, the defendant's conduct is not deemed the legal (proximate) cause of the plaintiff's injuries [Hardison v. Bushnell (1993) 18 Cal. App. 4th 22, 26-29, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 106] . Foreseeability in such cases is a question of fact for the jury unless the undisputed facts leave no room for a reasonable difference of opinion [Bigbee v. Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. (1983) 34 Cal. 3d 49, 56, 192 Cal. Rptr. 857, 665 P.2d 947 ; see Blecker v. Wolbart (1985) 167 Cal. App. 3d 1195, 1200-1203, 213 Cal. Rptr. 781 (if defendant's negligence causes a personal injury that is aggravated by subsequent medical treatment, injury caused by medical treatment is foreseeable as matter of law); see also Maxwell v. Powers (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 1596, 1606-1607, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 62 (first treating physician's negligence makes that physician liable for aggravation of plaintiff's condition by subsequent negligent treatment of other physicians)]. The issue of foreseeability of result merely looks to the likelihood of injury. Neither the particular injuries sustained by the plaintiff, the manner in which they were inflicted, nor the circumstances in which they were received are factors included within the test of foreseeability [Hardison v. Bushnell (1993) 18 Cal. App. 4th 22, 27-28, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 106] .

[b] Innocent or Negligent Acts by Third Parties

A defendant is not relieved of liability for his or her own negligence by the intervening negligent act of a third person if such an act was reasonably foreseeable [see, e.g., Hoyem v. Manhattan Beach City Sch. Dist. (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 508, 520-522, 150 Cal. Rptr. 1, 585 P.2d 851 ; Willis v. Gordon (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 629, 635, 143 Cal. Rptr. 723, 574 P.2d 794] . If a risk of injury is foreseeable by a defendant, intervening negligent acts causing such an injury do not break the chain of causation unless thay are highly extraordinary or done in an extraordinarily negligent manner [see Stewart v. Cox (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 857, 864, 13 Cal. Rptr. 521, 362 P.2d 345] . For example, a drunk driver's actions in losing control and running into decedent's car, which was stranded on side of freeway, was not so uncommon as to be unforeseeable as a matter of law. Therefore, the defendant,an auto club that negligently failed to aid the stranded decedent, was not entitled to demur on the grounds that its negligence was not a legal (proximate) cause of the death [see Bloomberg v. Interinsurance Exch. (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 571, 576-577, 207 Cal. Rptr. 853] . Similarly, a former truck owner's negligent failure to replace a fan blade in response to a manufacturer's recall notice was not a superseding cause of an accident in which a truck mechanic's arm was severed when the blade broke off from the engine and struck his shoulder, and therefore did not relieve either the truck or fan's manufacturers from liability for the defective design of the fan. Evidence at trial indicated that there was nothing highly extraordinary about the former owner's failure to respond to the truck manufacturer's recall notice, nor was there anything unusual about the low success rate for the fan recall [Springmeyer v. Ford Motor Co. (1998) 60 Cal. App. 4th 1541, 1558-1559, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 190 (mere failure to prevent harm threatened by defendant's conduct is not ordinarily viewed as superseding cause)].

If the defendant has negligently created or increased a risk of harm to the plaintiff, a third party's failure to prevent the harm will not relieve the defendant from liability for resulting injuries [Stewart v. Cox (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 857, 864, 13 Cal. Rptr. 521, 362 P.2d 345 ; see Cline v. Watkins (1977) 66 Cal. App. 3d 174, 179, 180, 135 Cal. Rptr. 838 (lawyer's negligence not superseded by second lawyer's similar negligence)].

If the defendant could foresee neither the negligent act that caused the plaintiff's injury nor a risk of the type of harm that the plaintiff suffered, the defendant will not be liable to the plaintiff [Schrimscher v. Bryson (1976) 58 Cal. App. 3d 660, 664, 130 Cal. Rptr. 125] . For example, a seventeen year old was not liable for the damage caused by a fire which began when his fifteen year old friend dropped a lit cigarette on a wood pile; the connection between the defendant's initial act of giving his friend a pack of cigarettes and the later fire was too attenuated to show the fire was reasonably within the scope of the risk created by the initial act [Wawanesa Mut. Ins. Co. v. Matlock (1997) 60 Cal. App. 4th 583, 588, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 512] .

[c] Intentionally Tortious or Criminal Acts by Third Parties

If a reasonable person in the defendant's position could foresee an intentionally tortious or criminal act, that act will not supersede the defendant's original negligence as the legal (proximate) cause of the resulting damage [see, e.g., Pool v. City of Oakland (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 1051, 1064, 232 Cal. Rptr. 528, 728 P.2d 1163 (defendant liable for wrongful acts of police that were foreseeable consequence of defendant's acts); Michael R. v. Jeffrey B. (1984) 158 Cal. App. 3d 1059, 1068, 205 Cal. Rptr. 312 (when defendant minor verbally encouraged other minor to shoot plaintiff with slingshot, other minor's intentional act was reasonably foreseeable and therefore not a superseding cause of plaintiff's injury)]. In particular, if the likelihood that a third person may act in a particular manner is the hazard or one of the hazards that makes the defendant negligent, such an act, even if it is intentionally tortious or criminal, does not prevent the defendant from being liable for the harm it causes [Landeros v. Flood (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 399, 411, 131 Cal. Rptr. 69, 551 P.2d 389 (defendant doctor's failure to diagnose battered-child syndrome was proximate cause of child's injuries)].

A defendant is not liable, however, for injuries resulting from a third party's intentionally tortious act that was not reasonably foreseeable [see, e.g., Kane v. Hartford Accident & Indem. Co. (1979) 98 Cal. App. 3d 350, 360-361, 159 Cal. Rptr. 446 (company that provided bond for hospital employee not liable for employee's assault on plaintiff despite company's failure to investigate employee's background and discover record of property-related crimes)].

Even if third-party criminal conduct was foreseeable by the defendant, courts have in some cases refused to hold defendants liable for allegedly providing inadequate security measures and therefore causing the plaintiff's injuries by negligently failing to deter crime [Noble v. Los Angeles Dodgers, Inc. (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 912, 916-919, 214 Cal. Rptr. 395] . For example, in a case involving a heavily-armed man who entered a restaurant in an area plagued with robberies and killed or wounded dozens of people, the restaurant's failure to install security cameras or employ licensed security guards was held not to be the cause of the injuries and deaths. These measures could not possibly have deterred this particular criminal or prevented the massacre [Lopez v. McDonald's Corp. (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 495, 502, 514-517, 238 Cal. Rptr. 436 ; see Thai v. Stang (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 1264, 1274, 263 Cal. Rptr. 202 (skating rink owners' failure to hire security guard was not cause of plaintiff's injuries from drive-by shooting in front of rink)].

In cases involving intentionally tortious or criminal acts by third parties, particularly the failure to anticipate or protect against criminal acts, the defendant often is the owner or possessor of the premises where those acts have occurred. For further discussion of this issue, see Ch. 421, Premises Liability .

[d] "Acts of God"

Unusual conditions that may be termed "acts of God" do not break the chain of causation emanating from the defendant's negligence if the "act of God" was foreseeable [American Motorcyle Ass'n v. Superior Court (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 578, 586, 146 Cal. Rptr. 182, 578 P.2d 899 ; see Southern Pac. Co. v. City of Los Angeles (1936) 5 Cal. 2d 545, 549, 55 P.2d 847 (unusually heavy rainfall was not so unforeseeable as to break chain of causation stemming from defendant's negligent construction of aqueduct)]. If the defendant's negligence combines with an "act of God" to cause injury, thedefendant will be liable [Dufour v. Henry J. Kaiser Co. (1963) 215 Cal. App. 2d 26, 29, 29 Cal. Rptr. 871] .

However, implicit in the term "foreseeability" is the conclusion that the natural event could have been anticipated or prepared for if only the defendant had acted reasonably. Therefore, if the consequences of the natural event, no matter how foreseeable, could not have been prevented or mitigated, the defendant is not liable. In this situation, there is no legal (proximate) causation [Mancuso v. Southern Cal. Edison Co. (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 88, 103-104, 283 Cal. Rptr. 300] .

[e] Intervening Acts of Plaintiff

The rule that foreseeable intervening negligent acts by others will not relieve a defendant from liability for injuries caused by his or her negligence applies to the plaintiff's own intervening negligent acts [see, e.g., Bilyeu v. Standard Freight Lines (1960) 182 Cal. App. 2d 536, 542-543, 6 Cal. Rptr. 65 (plaintiff highway patrolman's voluntarily attempting to remove obstructions from highway caused by defendant's negligence was reasonably foreseeable and therefore not superseding cause of injury plaintiff suffered while trying to remove obstructions)]. If the plaintiff's negligence is not so unforeseeable as to constitute a superseding cause of the injury, which would preclude recovery entirely, his or her negligence merely serves to reduce the amount of damages otherwise recoverable from the defendant [see § 380.170[1]].

§ 380.90 Sufficiency of Injury or Damages

The final element of a cause of action in negligence that the plaintiff has the burden of pleading and proving is injury or damages. A negligent act in and of itself is not actionable unless it results in an injury to the plaintiff [Fields v. Napa Milling Co. (1958) 164 Cal. App. 2d 442, 447, 330 P.2d 459] . A defendant's mere breach of duty causing only nominal damages, speculative harm, or the threat of future harm not yet realized, is not sufficient to create a cause of action [Budd v. Nixen (1971) 6 Cal. 3d 195, 200, 98 Cal. Rptr. 849, 491 P.2d 433] . However, once a plaintiff has suffered actual and appreciable harm, the tort of negligence is complete, and the fact that the amount of damages may be speculative, uncertain, or difficult to prove will not toll the limitations period [Davies v. Krasna (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 502, 514, 121 Cal. Rptr. 705, 535 P.2d 1161] . Punitive damages may be awarded in unintentional tort actions under Civ. Code § 3294, if actual substantial damages have been awarded [Potter v. Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 965, 1004, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 550, 863 P.2d 795] .

The injury required as an element of actionable negligence means an act causing harm in the sense of detrimental physical changes to the body. A physical injury may be actionable whether or not it gives rise to emotional distress. However, an invasion of the legally protected interest in bodily security that causes no detrimental change is not sufficient because it causes no harm and therefore no actual damage. For example, the impairment of a plaintiff's bone marrow resulting from an overdose of anticancer drugs was a detrimental change in the physical condition of plaintiff's body because it was an appreciable functional impairment of her immune system; it was, therefore, an actionable injury for which damages were recoverable [Duarte v. Zachariah (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 1652, 1661-1663, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 88] .

A person injured by the wrongful act of another must exercise reasonable care and diligence to avoid loss or minimize the resulting damages, and cannot recover for any losses that might have been prevented by reasonable efforts and expenditures on his or her part [*Valencia v. § 380.110 Presumption of Negligence Arising From Statutory Violation

[1] Elements Necessary to Establish Presumption

The failure of a person to exercise due care is presumed if all of the following conditions are met [Evid. Code § 669(a)]:

- The person violated a statute, ordinance, or regulation of a public entity;
- The violation directly and legally (proximately) caused death or injury to person or property;
- The death or injury resulted from an occurrence of the nature that the statute, ordinance, or regulation was designed to prevent; and
- The person suffering the death or injury to his or her person or property was one of the class of persons for whose protection the statute, ordinance, or regulation was adopted.

Evid. Code § 669 creates a presumption of negligence only when a viable underlying claim for negligence exists, that is, only when an independent negligence duty of care is first proven to exist under the circumstances [California Serv. Station & Auto. Repair Ass'n v. American Home Assurance Co. (1998) 62 Cal. App. 4th 1166, 1177-1180, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 182] . Further, if the statute, ordinance, or regulation allegedly violated creates a duty that is not a negligence duty of care, a violation of that statute, ordinance, or regulation does not create a presumption of negligence [see California Serv. Station & Auto. Repair Ass'n v. American Home Assurance Co. (1998) 62 Cal. App. 4th 1166, 1176-1180, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 182] .

[2] Violation of Statute, Ordinance, or Regulation

[a] As Establishing Breach of Duty

Plaintiffs commonly invoke statutory standards in negligence actions to establish a defendant's breach of duty. In these cases, proof of the defendant's violation of a statutory standard of conduct raises a presumption of negligence that may be rebutted only by evidence establishing a justification or excuse for the statutory violation [Ramirez v. Plough, Inc. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 539, 547, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 97, 863 P.2d 167] . The significance of a statute in a civil suit for negligence lies in the statute's formulation of a standard of conduct that the court adopts in the determination of the defendant's liability. The decision as to what the standard should be rests with the court, and the standard formulated by a legislative body in a statute or regulation becomes the standard to determine liability only because the court accepts it. If a legislative body has generalized a standard of care from the experience of the community and prohibits conduct that is likely to cause harm, the court accepts the formulated standards and applies them, except if they would serve to impose liability without fault [Ramirez v. Plough, Inc. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 539, 547, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 97, 863 P.2d 167] .

[b] Statutory Compliance as Establishing No Breach of Duty

A defendant may raise statutory compliance as a defense in a negligence action to establish that no breach of duty occurred. Courts have generally not looked with favor on the use of statutory compliance as a defense to tort liability. However, if the evidence shows no unusual circumstances, but only the ordinary situation contemplated by the statute or regulation, then the trier of fact or the court, as a matter of law, may accept the minimum standard prescribed by the statute or regulation as sufficient for the occasion [Ramirez v. Plough, Inc. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 539, 547-548, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 97, 863 P.2d 167] . Thus, for example, it has been held that a defendant manufacturer of nonprescription drugs complied with the applicable statutory standard of care with respect to package warnings on its drugs by including these warnings in English, as required by former Health & Safety Code § 25900 (now see Health & Safety Code § 108800), and did not have a duty to include foreign-language warnings with its packaging materials [see Ramirez v. Plough, Inc. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 539, 548-556, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 97, 863 P.2d 167] .

[c] What Constitutes Statute, Ordinance, or Regulation

Evid. Code § 669.1 provides that a rule, policy, manual, or guideline of state or local government setting forth standards of conduct or guidelines for its employees in the conduct of their public employment is not considered a "statute, ordinance, or regulation" of the public entity within the meaning of Evid. Code § 669, unless the rule, manual, policy, or guideline has been formally adopted as a statute, as an ordinance of a local government entity in California empowered to adopt ordinances, or as a regulation by an agency of the state pursuant to the Administrative Procedure Act [Gov. Code § 11340 et seq.], or by an agency of the United States government pursuant to the federal Administrative Procedure Act [5 U.S.C.S. § 501 et seq.]. This provision only applies to causes of action arising out of facts occurring after 1987, regardless of the date the action is commenced or tried [see 1987 Stats., ch. 1207, § 4].

[3] Violation as Direct and Legal (Proximate) Cause of Harm

A presumption of negligence under Evid. Code § 669 does not arise if the injury or damage would have resulted even if there were no statutory violation [Nunneley v. Edgar Hotel (1950) 36 Cal. 2d 493, 498-499, 225 P.2d 497 ; see also Roth v. Parker (1997) 57 Cal. App. 4th. 542, 550, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 250 (plaintiff passenger failed to establish that accident would not have occurred if driver of car in which she was a passenger had stopped at stop sign rather than rolling slowly through it)]. The issue of direct and legal (proximate) causation is a question of fact for the jury [see Cade v. Mid-City Hosp. Corp. (1975) 45 Cal. App. 3d 589, 597, 119 Cal. Rptr. 571] .

[4] Harm Resulting From Type of Occurrence Statute Designed to Prevent Courts determining whether the harm resulted from an occurrence of the nature that the statute, ordinance, or regulation was designed to prevent have examined the intent behind the statute and compared that intent to the injury involved [see, e.g., Peterson v. City of Long Beach (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 238, 246, 155 Cal. Rptr. 360, 594 P.2d 477 (presumption ofnegligence applied to police officer's shooting person from behind because departmental regulation prohibited discharge of an officer's firearm under those circumstances)]. Courts have refused to interpret the intent of a statute more narrowly than necessary [see, e.g., Courtell v. McEachen (1959) 51 Cal. 2d 448, 459, 334 P.2d 870 (ordinance regulating open fires not intended solely to prevent danger of fires spreading to other property but also to protect against all perils that may arise from fires not properly started, controlled, or extinguished)].

However, courts have also refused to expand the intent of statutes without limit [see, e.g., Mark v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 170, 183, 101 Cal. Rptr. 908, 496 P.2d 1276 (ordinance prohibiting extinguishment of any public light not intended to guard against electrocution of one who attempts to extinguish light); Wawanesa Mut. Ins. Co. v. Matlock (1997) 60 Cal. App. 4th 583, 587, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 512 (statute making it illegal to furnish tobacco to minors intended to prevent early addiction to tobacco, not fires); Cade v. Mid-City Hosp. Corp. (1975) 45 Cal. App. 3d 589, 598, 119 Cal. Rptr. 571 (regulation prohibiting unauthorized medical treatment by hospital employees as not protecting against failure of hospital employees to perform test as ordered)].

The determination of the nature of the occurrences that a particular statute, ordinance, or regulation was designed to prevent involves statutory interpretation and is, therefore, a question of law [Cade v. Mid-City Hosp. Corp. (1975) 45 Cal. App. 3d 589, 597, 119 Cal. Rptr. 571] .

[5] Person Harmed as Member of Class Statute Designed to Protect

The determination of the class of persons for whose protection a statute, ordinance, or regulation was adopted must be made on a case-by-case basis. In some cases, the issue will be clear, as in the case of a safety regulation [see, e.g., Haft v. Lone Palm Hotel (1970) 3 Cal. 3d 756, 763, 91 Cal. Rptr. 745, 478 P.2d 465 (regulations regarding safety measures required of swimming pool owners as clearly designed to protect hotel guests who drowned in pool)]. In other cases, the court will examine the legislative history of the statute to determine if it was intended to protect the general public [see, e.g., Vesely v. Sager (1971) 5 Cal. 3d 153, 165, 95 Cal. Rptr. 623, 486 P.2d 151 (statute prohibiting sale of alcoholic beverages to obviously intoxicated person as intended to protect members of general public)].

In some cases, the determination that a person is not one of the class of persons for whose benefit a statute was adopted will follow from the court's determination regarding the occurrences that the statute was designed to prevent [see, e.g., Ramirez v. Nelson (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 908, 919, 80 Cal. Rptr. 3d 728, 188 P.3d 659 (criminal statute prohibiting equipment from being operated within 6 feet of power lines intended to protect public from severed lines and not intended to protect workers who violate statute from electrocution); Mark v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 170, 183, 101 Cal. Rptr. 908, 496 P.2d 1276 (decedent electrocuted while attempting to unscrew streetlight bulb was not member of class of persons for whose benefit ordinance was enacted because purpose of ordinance prohibiting extinguishment of any public light was to assure adequate street lighting); Andres v. Young Men's Christian Assn. (1998) 64 Cal. App. 4th 85, 92, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 788 (user of small spa pool killed when suffering seizure in unsupervised pool was not member of class of persons intended to be protected by regulation requiring supervision for purposes of sanitation and hygiene)].

If a statute is found not to protect a particular class of persons, the basis for the finding is usually that the statute imposed only a limited duty on the violator [see, e.g., Randi W. v. Muroc Joint Unified Sch. Dist. (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 1066, 1087, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 263 (Child Abuse Reporting Act protects children in the custodial care of the person charged with reporting the abuse, not a child from another school district who is molested by a former school district employee); Stafford v. United Farm Workers (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 319, 324, 188 Cal. Rptr. 600, 656 P.2d 564 (temporary restraining order limiting picketing was for benefit of employers, not motorists passing site of violation of order); Routh v. Quinn (1942) 20 Cal. 2d 488, 491-492, 127 P.2d 1 (statute imposing duty of care on tax assessor in computing amount of property tax due as owed only to public as entity, not to purchaser at tax delinquency sale)].

Whether or not the person injured was a member of the class of person for whose protection the statute, ordinance, or regulation was adopted is a question of law [Cade v. Mid-City Hosp. Corp. (1975) 45 Cal. App. 3d 589, 597, 119 Cal. Rptr. 571] .

[6] Effect of Presumption

Application of the presumption of negligence arising from a statutory violation means that the court has adopted the conduct prescribed by the statute as the standard of care for a reasonable person under the circumstances. Therefore, a violation of the statute is presumed to be negligence [Casey v. Russell (1982) 138 Cal. App. 3d 379, 383, 188 Cal. Rptr. 18] . Once the presumption is established, the party against whom it operates has the burden of proving the nonexistence of the presumed negligence [see Evid. Code § 606].

[7] Rebutting Presumption

[a] Violator Acted Reasonably With Intent to Obey Law

Once established, the presumption of negligence may be rebutted by proof that the person violating the statute, ordinance, or regulation did what might reasonably be expected of a person of ordinary prudence, acting under similar circumstances, who desired to comply with the law [Evid. Code § 669(b)(1)]. The defendant must show that he or she was desirous of complying with the statute in question, but was faced with other circumstances that prevented compliance or that justified noncompliance [Casey v. Russell (1982) 138 Cal. App. 3d 379, 384-385, 188 Cal. Rptr. 18 ; see Byrne v. City & County of San Francisco (1980) 113 Cal. App. 3d 731, 741-742, 170 Cal. Rptr. 302 (violation of statute requiring driver to yield right-of-way to pedestrian in crosswalk as excused because of obstructions to driver's view of crosswalk and pedestrian's action incrossing when unsafe to do so); cf. La Manna v. Stewart (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 413, 427, 118 Cal. Rptr. 761, 530 P.2d 1073 (violation of statute requiring driver to yield right-of-way to pedestrian in crosswalk cannot be excused on ground that driver was watching another potential hazard)].

The question of justification or excuse for the violation is ordinarily one of fact [see Alarid v. Vanier (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 617, 624, 327 P.2d 897] , although there must be evidence in the record sufficient to support a finding of justification or excuse before the issue may be submitted to the jury [see Grant v. Petronella (1975) 50 Cal. App. 3d 281, 289 n. 1, 123 Cal. Rptr. 399] .

[b] Violator Was Child

Once established, the presumption of negligence may also be rebutted by proof that the person violating the statute, ordinance, or regulation was a child and exercised the degree of care ordinarily exercised by persons of his or her maturity, intelligence, and capacity under similar circumstances [Evid. Code § 669(b)(2)]. The presumption may not be rebutted by this proof, however, if the violation occurred in the course of an activity normally engaged in only by adults and requiring adult qualifications [Evid. Code § 669(b)(2); see Prichard v. Veterans Cab Co. (1965) 63 Cal. 2d 727, 731-732, 47 Cal. Rptr. 904, 408 P.2d 360 (minor driving motor vehicle)].

§ 380.111 Res Ipsa Loquitur

[1] Nature and Effect of Doctrine

In negligence actions, the doctrine of res ipsa loquitur applies if the occurrence of an injury is of such a nature that it can be said, in light of past experience, that it probably was the result of negligence by someone and that the defendant probably is the person responsible [Gannon v. Elliot (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 1, 6, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 86] . In determining whether these probabilities exist with respect to a particular occurrence, the courts have relied on both expert testimony and common knowledge [see Gannon v. Elliot (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 1, 6, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 86] .

The general conditions for the application of the doctrine are [Newing v. Cheatham (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 351, 359, 124 Cal. Rptr. 193, 540 P.2d 33] :

- The accident must be of a kind that ordinarily does not occur in the absence of someone's negligence;
- It must be caused by an agency or instrumentality within the defendant's exclusive control; and
- It must not have been due to any voluntary action or contribution on the plaintiff's part.

Once these conditions have been met, a presumption affecting the burden of producing evidence is created [Evid. Code § 646(b)], requiring a finding of negligence unless the defendant introduces sufficient evidence to sustain a finding that either (1) the accident resulted from some cause other than the defendant's negligence, or (2) the defendant exercised due care in all possible respects in which he or she might have been negligent [Newing v. Cheatham (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 351, 364-365, 124 Cal. Rptr. 193, 540 P.2d 33 (doctrine establishes defendant's negligence as matter of law if defendant fails to produce evidence supporting such a finding)]. Even if the defendant introduces evidence sufficient to support a finding that he or she was not negligent or that any negligence on his or her part was not a proximate cause of the occurrence, the trier of fact may still find the defendant liable based on the facts that gave rise to the res ipsa presumption as well as the other evidence in the case [see Evid. Code §§ 604, 646(c)]. Moreover, even if the doctrine has established that the defendant was negligent, the defendant may still assert defenses on grounds other than a lack of negligence, such as the plaintiff's contributory negligence or assumption of the risk [see Newing v. Cheatham (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 351, 365, 124 Cal. Rptr. 193, 540 P.2d 33] .

[2] Prerequisites for Application

[a] Type of Accident or Injury Not Occurring in Absence of Negligence

For the doctrine of res ipsa loquitur to apply, the accident must be of a kind that ordinarily does not occur in the absence of someone's negligence [Newing v. Cheatham (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 351, 359, 124 Cal. Rptr. 193, 540 P.2d 33] . Because the doctrine permits the jury to infer negligence from the happening of the accident alone, there must be a basis, either in common experience or expert testimony, for concluding that the occurrence of such an accident is more probably than not the result of negligence [Tomei v. Henning (1967) 67 Cal. 2d 319, 322, 62 Cal. Rptr. 9, 431 P.2d 633 ; Hale v. Venuto (1982) 137 Cal. App. 3d 910, 918, 187 Cal. Rptr. 357] . Although there are many situations in which a lay person, without expert testimony, may infer as a matter of common knowledge that the injury would not have occurred unless someone was negligent [see, e.g. Meier v. Ross Gen. Hosp. (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 420, 429, 71 Cal. Rptr. 903, 445 P.2d 519 (hospital left patient in second story room with unlocked window after suicide attempt; patient jumped out of window)], often the plaintiff must produce some expert testimony that would support an inference of negligence from the fact of the accident itself [Hale v. Venuto (1982) 137 Cal. App. 3d 910, 918, 187 Cal. Rptr. 357] . Res ipsa loquitur often applies to an injury whose cause is a mystery, if there is a reasonable and logical inference that the defendant was negligent and that this negligence caused the injury [Clark v. Gibbons (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 399, 409, 58 Cal. Rptr. 125, 426 P.2d 525] .

The doctrine of res ipsa loquitur does not apply in a strict products liability action [Barrett v. Atlas Powder Co. (1978) 86 Cal. App. 3d 560, 565,150 Cal. Rptr. 339] . However, res ipsa loquitur may be applied in a products liability action based on negligence, rather than on strict liability in tort [see Jiminez v. Sears, Roebuck & Co. (1971) 4 Cal. 3d 379, 383-386, 93 Cal. Rptr. 769, 482 P.2d 681] .

[b] Instrumentality in Defendant's Exclusive Control

[i] Requirement Not Absolute

For the doctrine of res ipsa loquitur to apply, the agency or instrumentality causing the accident must have been within the defendant's exclusive management and control. The purpose of this requirement is to link the defendant with the probability, established under the first element [see § 380.111[2]], that the accident was negligently caused [Newing v. Cheatham (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 351, 362, 124 Cal. Rptr. 193, 540 P.2d 33] . The phrase "exclusive control" does not mean that the plaintiff must exclude all other persons who might possibly have been responsible, if the defendant's negligence appears to be the more probable explanation of the accident [Bedford v. Re (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 593, 597, 108 Cal. Rptr. 364, 510 P.2d 724 ; Emerick v. Raleigh Hills Hosp. (1982) 133 Cal. App. 3d 575, 584, 184 Cal. Rptr. 92] . For example, if the accident occurs some time after the defendant relinquished control of the instrumentality that caused the accident, the doctrine may still apply if there is evidence that the plaintiff or some third person had not improperly handled or otherwise changed the condition of the instrumentality after the defendant relinquished control [see, e.g. Bedford v. Re (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 593, 597-598, 108 Cal. Rptr. 364, 510 P.2d 724 (wall that collapsed had not been misused or changed after defendant relinquished control)]. The condition is satisfied if there is evidence, conflicting or otherwise, that supports a reasonable inference that the instrumentality was not mishandled or changed in condition [see Bedford v. Re (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 593, 597-598, 108 Cal. Rptr. 364, 510 P.2d 724] .

The defendant's control over some, but not all, of the instrumentalities that caused the plaintiff's injury will preclude the application of the doctrine only if (1) the plaintiff had control of one of the possible instrumentalities [see, e.g.

Anderson v. Jones (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 284, 288-290, 72 Cal. Rptr. 187 (plaintiff running down median strip of freeway was struck by car; doctrine inapplicable because of lack of exclusive control by defendant driver of path followed by plaintiff)], or (2) the instrumentality allegedly in the control of the defendant was altered by another after it left the defendant's control in a manner that would appear to preclude the defendant's responsibility for the plaintiff's injury [see, e.g. Putensen v. Clay Adams, Inc. (1970) 12 Cal. App. 3d 1062, 1075-1076, 91 Cal. Rptr. 319 (plastic tube, inserted in plaintiff's heart, that "kinked" and stopped blood flow was altered by another before insertion and after defendant relinquished control)].

The doctrine of res ipsa loquitur may also be applied if the plaintiff is an innocent bystander and it is not clear whether the negligence of the defendant or a third party, or both, caused the plaintiff's injuries [see Tobler v. Chapman (1973) 31 Cal. App. 3d 568, 582-585, 107 Cal. Rptr. 614 (application of doctrine not affected by fact that not all potentially negligent parties are defendants in action)].

[ii] More Than One Defendant

The doctrine of res ipsa loquitur is applicable against more than one defendant if circumstances show a probability that all defendants were negligent [Zentz v. Coca Cola Bottling Co. (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 436, 446, 247 P.2d 344] .

The doctrine may be applied even though any one defendant could argue that it is more likely that the negligence of the other defendants was responsible for the plaintiff's injuries [see Ybarra v. Spangard (1944) 25 Cal. 2d 486, 489-490, 154 P.2d 687 (doctrine applied to hospital patient injured while under general anesthesia who could not determine which medical personnel were negligent); Martinides v. Mayer (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1185, 1195-1196, 256 Cal. Rptr. 679 (doctrine applied in case of plaintiff injured by hit-and-run vehicle where jury found that two individuals were driving vehicle when it collided with plaintiff)]. If multiple defendants at one time or another had control of one or more of the agencies or instrumentalities that might have harmed the plaintiff, the defendants have the burden of initial explanation [Ybarra v. Spangard (1944) 25 Cal. 2d 486, 492, 154 P.2d 687] .

[c] No Contribution by Plaintiff

For the doctrine of res ipsa loquitur to apply, the accident must not have been due to any voluntary action or contribution by the plaintiff [Newing v. Cheatham (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 351, 363, 124 Cal. Rptr. 193, 540 P.2d 33] . This requirement is related to the condition of control by the defendant of the instrumentality causing the accident, and has been employed as a means of showing that the defendant, rather than the plaintiff, had control and was responsible for the injury [Zentz v. Coca Cola Bottling Co. (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 436, 444, 247 P.2d 344] . A plaintiff may properly rely on the doctrine even if he or she participated in the events leading to the accident if the evidence excludes his or her conduct as the responsible cause [Zentz v. Coca Cola Bottling Co. (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 436, 444-445, 247 P.2d 344 ; Emerick v. Raleigh Hills Hosp. (1982) 133 Cal. App. 3d 575, 584, 184 Cal. Rptr. 92] . Thus, even if the plaintiff was negligent, that fact does not preclude the application of the doctrine if the plaintiff's negligence was not the proximate cause of the accident [Shahinian v. McCormick (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 554, 561, 30 Cal. Rptr. 521, 381 P.2d 377] . Moreover, even if the plaintiff's conduct may be viewed as a proximate cause of the accident, the doctrine may still be applicable if the plaintiff's conduct was foreseeableand was one of the risks that would render the defendant's conduct negligent [see Emerick v. Raleigh Hills Hosp. (1982) 133 Cal. App. 3d 575, 585, 184 Cal. Rptr. 92 (doctrine applied to sink that collapsed while plaintiff was leaning against it, because properly installed sink should not ordinarily collapse under these circumstances and plaintiff's conduct was to be expected and should have been foreseen by defendant)].

[3] Scope of Evidence of Specific Acts of Negligence

Ordinarily, the introduction of evidence of specific acts of negligence does not deprive a plaintiff of use of the doctrine of res ipsa loquitur [Bedford v. Re (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 593, 599, 108 Cal. Rptr. 364, 510 P.2d 724] . The doctrine does not apply, however, if the facts regarding the accident and the care exercised by the defendant are shown as a matter of law, thus eliminating any justification for resort to the doctrine [see Akins v. County of Sonoma (1967) 67 Cal. 2d 185, 195, 60 Cal. Rptr. 499, 430 P.2d 57 (doctrine inapplicable because plaintiff injured in fall from bleachers maintained by defendant introduced uncontradicted evidence regarding condition of bleachers, how accident happened, and care exercised by defendant)].

[4] Rebuttal of Presumption

A defendant may attempt to avoid the presumption raised by the res ipsa loquitur doctrine by introducing evidence tending to show the nonexistence of one of the three conditions of the doctrine [see § 380.111[1]]. The introduction of evidence sufficient to sustain a finding of the nonexistence of the presumed fact--the defendant's negligence--causes the presumption to "disappear" as a matter of law [Evid. Code § 604; see Evid. Code § 646(b)].

Once the defendant has introduced evidence sufficient to support a finding that he or she was not negligent, or that any negligence was not a proximate cause of the plaintiff's injuries, the court must instruct the jury that it may not find that a proximate cause of the occurrence was some negligent conduct by the defendant unless the jury believes, after weighing all the evidence and drawing such inferences therefrom as the jury believes are warranted, that it is more probable than not that the occurrence was caused by some negligent conduct by the defendant [Evid. Code § 646(c)(2)]. The determination of the sufficiency of the rebuttal evidence must be made by the trial judge; if the judge finds there is evidence that, if believed, would rebut the presumption, the judge cannot give an unqualified res ipsa loquitur instruction to the jury [Slater v. Kehoe (1974) 38 Cal. App. 3d 819, 833, 113 Cal. Rptr. 790] . However, the jury may still be able to draw an inference, from the facts that gave rise to the presumption, that the accident was caused by the defendant's lack of due care [Evid. Code § 646(c)(1)], unless the defendant's evidence is so clear that his or her lack of negligence is established as a matter of law [see Leonard v. WatsonvilleCmty. Hosp. (1956) 47 Cal. 2d 509, 515, 305 P.2d 36] . Even if the defendant has introduced sufficient rebuttal evidence, the facts supporting the res ipsa loquitur conditions may still support an inference that a proximate cause of the occurrence was some negligent conduct by the defendant [Frantz v. San Luis Med. Clinic (1978) 81 Cal. App. 3d 34, 43-44, 146 Cal. Rptr. 146] . However, this permissive inference does not alter the plaintiff's burden of proving, by a preponderance of the evidence, that the plaintiff's injury was proximately caused by the defendant's negligence [Frantz v. San Luis Med. Clinic (1978) 81 Cal. App. 3d 34, 44, 146 Cal. Rptr. 146] .

[1] Ultrahazardous Activities

Certain activities under certain conditions are so hazardous to the public generally and occur so infrequently that liability is imposed on persons who carry on these activities even in the absence of negligence. A person who carries on an ultrahazardous activity is liable for all damages that he or she should recognize as likely to be caused by any unpreventable miscarriage of the activity, although the utmost care is exercised to prevent the harm and the defendant has not been negligent [Luthringer v. Moore (1948) 31 Cal. 2d 489, 498-500, 190 P.2d 1] .

An activity is ultrahazardous if it (1) necessarily involves a risk of serious harm to the person or property of another that cannot be eliminated by the exercise of the utmost care and (2) is not a matter of common usage [Luthringer v. Moore (1948) 31 Cal. 2d 489, 498, 190 P.2d 1 ; but see Travelers Indemnity Co. v. City of Redondo Beach (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 1432, 1444, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 337 (applying more restrictive definition set out in Restatement (Second) of Torts § 520)].

An activity is a matter of common usage if it is customarily carried on by the great mass of mankind or by many people in the community; it does not cease to be so because it is carried on for a purpose peculiar to the individual who carries it on. Certain activities may be so generally carried on as to be regarded as customary, such as the driving of an automobile, and so are considered a matter of customary usage and not ultrahazardous [Luthringer v. Moore (1948) 31 Cal. 2d 489, 498, 190 P.2d 1] . Moreover, the act of driving a motor vehicle under the influence of alcohol, although unquestionably dangerous and hazardous-in-fact, does not come within the rubric of an ultrahazardous or abnormally dangerous activity for purposes of imposing strict liability in tort [Goodwin v. Reilley (1985) 176 Cal. App. 3d 86, 92, 221 Cal. Rptr. 374] .

Although some cases involving the application of the doctrine of strict liability have been decided by way of demurrer [ see, e.g., Marin Mun. Water Dist. v. Northwestern Pac. R.R. Co. (1967) 253 Cal. App. 2d 83, 87, 98, 99, 61 Cal. Rptr. 520] , other cases indicate that it is improper for the court to determine the question at the pleading stage [see, e.g., Travelers Indem. Co. v. City of Redondo Beach (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 1432, 1444, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 337 ; SKF Farms v. Superior Court (1984) 153 Cal. App. 3d 902, 906, 200 Cal. Rptr. 497] .

[2] Dangerous Animals

The keeper of an animal of a species that is dangerous by nature, or of any animal that the keeper knows, or has reason to know, to have dangerous propensities, is liable, without wrongful intent or negligence, for damage to others resulting from this propensity. In this situation, the keeper is an insurer against the acts of the animal to anyone who is injured without fault, irrespective of the keeper's negligence [Hillman v. Garcia-Ruby (1955) 44 Cal. 2d 625, 626, 283 P.2d 1033 (dangerous dog); Talizin v. Oak Creek Riding Club (1959) 176 Cal. App. 2d 429, 437, 1 Cal. Rptr. 514 (dangerous horse); Baugh v. Beatty (1949) 91 Cal. App. 2d 786, 791-792, 205 P.2d 671 (chimpanzee; wild animals presumed to be vicious)].

§ 380.131 Vicarious Liability

[1] Based on Relationships

Under certain circumstances, one person may be vicariously liable for injuries and damages caused by another person in the absence of any negligence attributable to the first person. Vicarious liability is a departure from the normal tort principle that liability follows fault. It is usually imposed for policy reasons by either common law or statute, and is based on the relationship between the parties [see Restatement (Second) of Torts § 315; see also Matthias v. United Pac. Ins. Co. (1968) 260 Cal. App. 2d 752, 755, 67 Cal. Rptr. 511] .

[2] Parent and Child

Under certain circumstances, a parent may be liable for the negligent and/or intentional torts of his or her child [see Ch. 394, Parent and Child ; see also Civ. Code §§ 1714.1 (parents' liability for acts of willful misconduct of minor), 1714.3 (parents' liability for injury caused by discharge of firearm by minor)]. For a discussion of parents' potential liability created by a child's use of an automobile, see Ch. 82, Automobiles: Causes of Action . For a general discussion of the rights of minors, see Ch. 367A, Minors: Tort Actions .

[3] Automobile Owner and Driver

The owner of an automobile is liable for an injury caused by the negligent operation of the automobile by any person driving with the owner's permission [see Veh. Code § 17150]. The parents or guardian or a minor may be held liable for any damages proximately resulting from the minor's negligent driving of an automobile [see generally Veh. Code §§ 17706-17714]. For a complete discussion of vicarious liability based on the use of an automobile, see Ch. 82, Automobiles: Causes of Action, § 82.16.

[4] Employer and Employee

[a] Doctrine of Respondeat Superior

Under the doctrine of respondeat superior, an employer may be held vicariously liable for torts committed by an employee within the scope of his or her employment [Henriksen v. City of Rialto (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 1612, 1618, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 308] . This doctrine is codified in Civ. Code § 2338, which provides that, unless required by or under the authority of law to employ that particular agent, a principal is responsible to third persons for the negligence of his or her agent in the transaction of the business of the agency, including wrongful acts committed by the agent in and as a part of the transaction of the business, and for the agent's willful omission to fulfill the obligations of the principal [see Spradlin v. Cox (1988) 201 Cal. App. 3d 799, 808-809, 247 Cal. Rptr. 347] .

For a complete discussion of the doctrine of respondeat superior in the employer-employee relationship, see Ch. 248, Employer's Liability for Employee's Torts .

[b] Policy Reasons for Imposing Liability

Liability based on respondeat superior is founded on policy rather than on any misconduct on the employer's part. The rationale for the doctrine is that an employer's liability should extend beyond the employer's actual or possible control over its employees to include risks inherent in or created by the enterprise, because the employer, rather than the innocent injured party, is best able to spread the risk through prices, rates, or liability insurance [Perez v. Van Groningen & Sons, Inc. (1986) 41 Cal. 3d 962, 967, 227 Cal. Rptr. 106, 719 P.2d 676 ; Hinman v. Westinghouse Elec. Co. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 956, 959-960, 88 Cal. Rptr. 188, 471 P.2d 988] . The following three policy reasons underlie imposition of liability under respondeat superior [Henriksen v. City of Rialto (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 1612, 1618, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 308] :

- Preventing recurrence of the tortious conduct;
- Giving greater assurance of compensation for the victim; and
- Ensuring that the victim's losses will be equitably borne by those who benefit from the enterprise that gave rise to the injury.

[c] Proving Respondeat Superior

For the doctrine of respondeat superior to apply, thus exposing the employer to liability for an employee's tort, the plaintiff must prove that the employee's tortious conduct was committed within the scope of employment [Spradlin v. Cox (1988) 201 Cal. App. 3d 799, 809, 247 Cal. Rptr. 347] . A risk arises out of the employment if, in the context of the particular enterprise, an employee's conduct is not so unusual or startling that it would seem unfair to include the loss resulting from it among other costs of the employer's business [Perez v. Van Groningen & Sons, Inc. (1986) 41 Cal. 3d 962, 968, 227 Cal. Rptr. 106, 719 P.2d 676] . The inquiry should be whether the risk was one that may fairly be regarded as typical or broadly identical to the enterprise undertaken by the employer [Henriksen v. City of Rialto (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 1612, 1618, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 308] . If the plaintiff is injured when the employee has substantially deviated from his or her employment duties, the employer is not liable [Le Elder v. Rice (1994) 21 Cal. App. 4th 1604, 1607, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 749] . Thus, it is necessary to determine the main purpose of the employee's activity that caused injury to the plaintiff [Le Elder v. Rice (1994) 21 Cal. App. 4th 1604, 1607, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 749] . However, proof of the employer's authorization of the employee's act is not necessary to show that the act was within the scope of employment [Perez v. Van Groningen & Sons, Inc. (1986) 41 Cal. 3d 962, 966 n.1, 227 Cal. Rptr. 106, 719 P.2d 676] .

Whether an employee's tort was committed within the scope of employment, exposing the employer to tort liability under the doctrine of respondeat superior, is ordinarily a question of fact. It becomes a question of law, however, if the undisputed facts would not support an inference that the employee was acting within the scope of his or her employment [Henriksen v. City of Rialto (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 1612, 1617, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 308] .

[5] Employer and Independent Contractor

In general, an employer of an independent contractor is not liable for physical harm caused to another by an act or omission of the independent contractor or the contractor's servants [Walker v. Capistrano Saddle Club (1970) 12 Cal. App. 3d 894, 898, 90 Cal. Rptr. 912 ; see also Restatement (Second) of Torts § 409]. There are, however, many exceptions to this rule, such as the "peculiar risk" doctrine. Under this well-established doctrine, a person who engages an independent contractor may be liable for any injuries to others resulting from the contractor's negligence [see Griesel v. Dart Indus., Inc. (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 578, 585-587, 153 Cal. Rptr. 213, 591 P.2d 503 ; Torres v. Reardon (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 831, 838-839, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 52 . The person who employs an independent contractor to do work that the principal should recognize as likely to create, during its progress, a peculiar risk of harm to others unless special precautions are taken, is subject to liability for physical harm caused by the contractor's failure to exercise reasonable care to take these precautions, regardless of whether the principal has provided for these precautions in the contract or otherwise [Griesel v. Dart Indus., Inc. (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 578, 585, 153 Cal. Rptr. 213, 591 P.2d 503 ; Torres v. Reardon (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 831, 839, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 52 ; Restatement (Second) of Torts §§ 413, 416].

California was one of a minority of jurisdictions that expanded the traditional peculiar risk doctrine to permit an employee of an independent contractor to seek recovery from the nonnegligent hirer for injuries caused by the negligence of the contractor [Privette v. Superior Court (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 689, 696, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 72, 854 P.2d 721 ; see also Woolen v. Aerojet Gen. Corp. (1962) 57 Cal. 2d 407, 410-411, 20 Cal. Rptr. 12, 369 P.2d 708 , overruled, Privette v. Superior Court (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 689 (case that initially expanded doctrine)]. However, the California Supreme Court has reexamined this extension of the doctrine in light of policies advanced by the workers' compensation laws, and concluded that those policies supported precluding employees of negligent independent contractors from recovering damages from the hirer under the peculiar risk doctrine [Privette v. Superior Court (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 689, 701-702, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 72, 854 P.2d 721] . For further discussion of the peculiar risk doctrine, see Ch. 248, Employer's Liability for Employee's Torts .

[6] Principal and Agent

A principal is vicariously liable for the torts of his or her agent in the transaction of the business of the agency [Civ. Code §§ 2330, 2338]. An agent is one who represents another person (the principal) in dealings with third persons [Civ. Code § 2295]. Agency may encompass an employment relationship and thus an employee may also be an agent [Estate of Levinthal (1980) 105 Cal. App. 3d 691, 699, 164 Cal. Rptr. 628] . However, agency and employment are conceptually distinct relationships. An agent works not only for, but in the place of, the principal [see Civ. Code § 2330], but an employee remains entirely under the employer's control and direction [Gipson v. Davis Realty Co. (1963) 215 Cal. App. 2d 190, 205-206, 30 Cal. Rptr. 253] . For further discussion of the liability of a principal for the acts of an agent outside of the employer-employee context, see Ch. 427, Principal and Agent .

[7] Partners and Partnerships

All members of a general partnership are jointly and severally liable for the wrongful acts or omissions of a partner [Corp. Code § 15014]. General partners in a limited partnership are similarly liable [Corp. Code § 15643 (repealed effective Jan. 1, 2010); Corp. Code §§ 15904.03(a), 15904.04(a) (effective for limited partnerships formed after 2007, for pre-existing limited partnerships electing to be governed by 2008 Act, and for all other limited partnerships on Jan. 1, 2010)]. Limited partners, in contrast, generally are not liable for the wrongs of the partnership beyond their capital contributions [see Corp. Code § 15632(repealed effective Jan. 1, 2010); Corp. Code § 15903.03(a) (effective for limited partnerships formed after 2007, for pre-existing limited partnerships electing to be governed by 2008 Act, and for all other limited partnerships on Jan. 1, 2010)]. The statutes governing limited partnership liability however, may not be construed to affect the liability of a limited partner to third parties for the limited partner's participation in tortious conduct [Corp. Code § 15632(a) (repealed effective Jan. 1, 2010); Corp. Code § 15903.03(a) (effective for limited partnerships formed after 2007, for pre-existing limited partnerships electing to be governed by 2008 Act, and for all other limited partnerships on Jan. 1, 2010)]. For further discussion of tort liability of partners and partnerships, see Ch. 402,Partnerships: Actions Between General Partners or Partnership and Third Parties , and Ch. 405, Partnerships: Actions Between Limited Partners or Partnerships and Third Parties.

[8] Corporate Officers and Directors

Corporate officers and directors cannot be held vicariously liable for the acts or obligations of their corporation. However, they may be individually liable if they directly authorize or actively participate in wrongful or tortious conduct [Frances T. v. Village Green Owners Ass'n (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 490, 503-504, 229 Cal. Rptr. 456, 723 P.2d 573 ; Seagate Tech. v. A.J. Kogyo Co. (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 696, 701-702, 268 Cal. Rptr. 586 ; Taylor-Rush v. Multitech Corp. (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 103, 113, 265 Cal. Rptr. 672] , if they breached a duty to a third party as opposed to the corporation, or if they caused physical as opposed to pecuniary harm to a third party's person or property [Michaelis v. Benavides (1998) 61 Cal. App. 4th 681, 686, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 776 (the legal fiction of the corporation was never intended to insulate officers from liability for their own tortious conduct)]. Individual liability has its roots in the law of agency. Directors are considered to be agents of the corporate principal, and, under agency law, an agent is always liable for his or her own torts, regardless of the principal's liability. Director status, therefore, neither immunizes a person from individual liability nor subjects him or her to vicarious liability [Frances T. v. Village Green Owners Ass'n (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 490, 503-505, 229 Cal. Rptr. 456, 723 P.2d 573 ; Seagate Tech. v. A.J. Kogyo Co. (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 696, 702, 268 Cal. Rptr. 586] .

[9] Trusts and Trustees

A trust is liable for authorized actions of the trustee [see Prob. Code § 18004]. A claim based on a tort committed in the course of administration of the trust may be asserted against the trust by proceeding against the trustee in the trustee's representative capacity, whether or not the trustee is personally liable on the claim [Prob. Code § 18004]. For further discussion of the liability of trusts and trustees to third parties, see Ch. 560, Trusts: Express, Public, Charitable, and Totten Trusts .

AUTHOR: MICHAEL S. FIELDS CONTRIBUTING EDITORIAL CONSULTANT Mr. Fields is a private practitioner in Beverly Hills who has specialized in personal injury litigation since 1969.

§ 380.132 Joint and Several Liability

[1] Types of Joint Liability

If more than one tortfeasor has proximately caused the plaintiff's indivisible injury, the rule of joint and several liability makes each tortfeasor liablefor the entire amount of the plaintiff's damages [see American Motorcycle Assn. v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 578, 586-587, 146 Cal. Rptr. 182, 578 P.2d 899] . Each tortfeasor is personally liable for the damage sustained, and the injured person may sue one or all of the tortfeasors to obtain recovery for his or her injuries. The fact that one of the tortfeasors is judgment proof does not relieve another tortfeasor from liability for damage that he or she caused [see American Motorcycle Assn. v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 578, 587, 146 Cal. Rptr. 182, 578 P.2d 899] .

Independent tortfeasors not acting in concert are not jointly liable even if their actions unite to produce one injury. Each independent tortfeasor is responsible only for the part of the damage resulting from his or her own acts [Alhino v. Starr (1980) 112 Cal. App. 3d 158, 175, 169 Cal. Rptr. 136] .

[2] Effect of Joint Liability

The doctrine of joint and several liability did not change when California adopted the rule of comparative negligence [see American Motorcycle Assn. v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 578, 588-590, 146 Cal. Rptr. 182, 578 P.2d 899] . Thus, a defendant whose negligence is the proximate cause of the plaintiff's injuries is liable to the plaintiff for the full amount of the plaintiff's damages, diminished only in proportion to the amount of negligence attributable to the plaintiff [American Motorcycle Assn. v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 578, 590, 146 Cal. Rptr. 182, 578 P.2d 899] .

However, under Proposition 51 (the Fair Responsibility Act of 1986), in actions for personal injury, property damage, or wrongful death, based on principles of comparative fault, joint tortfeasors are no longer jointly liable for an injured party's noneconomic damages, such as pain and suffering, but are liable only for their proportionate share of those damages according to their percentage of fault [see Civ. Code §§ 1431-1431.5]. Proposition 51 is constitutional [Evangelatos v. Superior Court (1988) 44 Cal. 3d 1188, 1200-1205, 246 Cal. Rptr. 629, 753 P.2d 585] , but it does not apply retroactively; that is, it does not apply to causes of action accruing prior to its effective date (June 4, 1986) [Evangelatos v. Superior Court (1988) 44 Cal. 3d 1188, 1205-1225, 246 Cal. Rptr. 629, 753 P.2d 585] . For further discussion of Proposition 51 (the Fair Responsibility Act of 1986), see Ch. 300, Indemnity and Contribution .

[3] Liability for Damages

[a] Economic Damages

In a negligence action involving multiple tortfeasors each of whom has proximately caused indivisible injury to the plaintiff, each tortfeasor is jointly and severally liable for all of the plaintiff's economic damages that flow from the injury [see American Motorcycle Assn. v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 578, 586-588, 146 Cal. Rptr. 182, 578 P.2d 899 ; see also Civ. Code§ 1431.2(b)(1)]. The term "economic damages," in this context, means objectively verifiable monetary losses, including medical expenses, loss of earnings, burial costs, loss of use of property, costs of repair or replacement, costs of obtaining substitute domestic services, loss of employment, and loss of business or employment opportunities [Civ. Code § 1431.2(b)(1)].

[b] Noneconomic Damages

In a negligence action involving multiple tortfeasors each of whom has proximately caused indivisible damage to the plaintiff, the liability of each defendant for noneconomic damages is several only and is not joint [Civ. Code § 1431.2(a)]. Each tortfeasor is liable only for the amount of noneconomic damages allocated to that defendant in direct proportion to that defendant's percentage of fault, and judgments for noneconomic losses must be made separately [Civ. Code § 1431.2(a)]. The term "noneconomic damages," in this context, means subjective, nonmonetary losses, including, but not limited to, pain, suffering, inconvenience, mental suffering, emotional distress, loss of society and companionship, loss of consortium, injury to reputation, and humiliation [Civ. Code § 1431.2(b)(2)].

§ 380.150 Statutes of Limitations

[1] Classified by Nature of Damages

For purposes of statutes of limitations, actions in tort for negligence are classified by the nature of the damage. An action for injury or death founded on ordinary negligence must generally be commenced within two years (one year, prior to January 1, 2003) after the commission of the negligent act [Code Civ. Proc. § 335.1; see former Code Civ. Proc. § 340(3); Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions,]. A three-year statute of limitations applies to the commencement of an action based on negligent damage to real property or to tangible personal property [Code Civ. Proc. § 338(b), (c)]. For further discussion of statutes of limitation, see Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions .

Special limitations periods apply to suits brought against a public entity after presenting the required claim to the entity [Gov. Code § 945.6; see also Gov. Code § 945.8 (limitations period for suits against public entities not requiring presentation of claims); see § 380.151].

[2] Running and Tolling of Statute

The applicable statute of limitations begins to run when the plaintiff both sustains damage and discovers, or should discover, his or her cause of action [Budd v. Nixen (1971) 6 Cal. 3d 195, 201-203, 98 Cal. Rptr. 849, 491 P.2d 433 ; see Kleefeld v. Superior Court (1994) 25 Cal. App. 4th 1680, 1684-1685, 31 Cal. Rptr. 2d 12 (limitations period for action for personal injury and wrongful death as beginning to run when plaintiff suspects wrongdoing on part of defendant)]. The damage must be appreciable and actual harm consisting of more than nominal damages [Davies v. Krasna (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 502, 514, 121 Cal. Rptr. 705, 535 P.2d 1161 ; City of San Diego v. United States Gypsum Co. (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 575, 582, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 876] . When the plaintiff first suffered damages is a question of fact [Budd v. Nixen (1971) 6 Cal. 3d 195, 201-203, 98 Cal. Rptr. 849, 491 P.2d 433] . Counsel drafting a complaint should be careful not to include allegations that a defendant could use to establish that some appreciable and actual harm occurred early enough to start the limitations period running and thus bar plaintiff's action because it was not filed during that period [see, e.g., City of San Diego v. United States Gypsum Co. (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 575, 583-584, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 876] .

The plaintiff's ignorance of the cause of action or of the identity of the wrongdoer does not toll the statute of limitations [Neel v. Magana, Olney, Levy, Cathcart & Gelfand (1971) 6 Cal. 3d 176, 187, 98 Cal. Rptr. 837, 491 P.2d 421] , nor does uncertainty as to the amount of damages or the difficulty of proving damages [Davies v. Krasna (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 502, 514, 121 Cal. Rptr. 705, 535 P.2d 1161] .

For further discussion of statutes of limitation, see Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions .

[3] Special Limitations Periods for Actions Involving Professional Negligence

A plaintiff must commence an action for injury or death against a health care provider that is based on that person's alleged professional negligence by the earlier of either (1) three years after the date of injury or (2) one year after the plaintiff discovers, or through the use of reasonable diligence should have discovered, the injury [Code Civ. Proc. § 340.5]. However, this statute of limitations has been held unconstitutional as a denial of equal protection to the extent that it provides different accrual dates for minors and adults in medical malpractice actions [see Torres v. County of Los Angeles (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 325, 334, 257 Cal. Rptr. 211] .

A plaintiff must commence an action against an attorney for a wrongful act or omission (other than actual fraud) arising in the performance of professional services by the earlier of either (1) one year after the plaintiff discovers, or through the use of reasonable diligence should have discovered, the facts constituting the wrongful act or omission, or (2) four years from the date of the wrongful act or omission [Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6].

For further discussion of statutes of limitations applicable to actions involving professional negligence, see Ch. 76, Attorney Professional Liability, Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions, and Ch. 415, Physicians: Medical Malpractice.

§ 380.151 Prerequisite of Submitting Claim to Public Entity Defendant

A plaintiff may not bring a suit for money or damages on certain causes of action against a defendant that is a public entity, unless the plaintiff has first presented a written claim to the entity as required by Gov. Code § 900 et seq. and Gov. Code § 910 et seq., and the public entity's board has either acted on the claim or has been deemed to have rejected it [Gov. Code § 945.4]. AUTHOR: MICHAEL S. FIELDS CONTRIBUTING EDITORIAL CONSULTANT Mr. Fields is a private practitioner in Beverly Hills who has specialized in personal injury litigation since 1969.

§ 380.152 Venue

[1] Type of Injury

In a negligence action for personal injuries, property damage, or wrongful death, venue is appropriate either in the county where the injury occurs or in the county in which any of the defendants resides at the commencement of the action [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a); Paesano v. Superior Court (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 17, 20, 250 Cal. Rptr. 842] . This venue rule applies only to negligence actions involving physical injury, and is inapplicable to actions for severe humiliation, anguish, emotional distress, and trauma [Cubic Corp. v. Superior Court (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 622, 625, 231 Cal. Rptr. 18] . Actions for nonphysical injury must be commenced in the county in which the defendant resides, and the defendant is entitled to a change of venue to this county if the action is commenced elsewhere [Carruth v. Superior Court (1978) 80 Cal. App. 3d 215, 220, 145 Cal. Rptr. 344 (action for malicious prosecution that also included prayer for damages for emotional distress)].

For further discussion of venue, see Ch. 571, Venue .

[2] Corporations

A corporation may be sued in the county where its principal place of business is located or in the county in which liability arises [Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5]. In a tort action, liability arises where the injury occurs [see Mission Imps., Inc. v. Superior Court (1982) 31 Cal. 3d 921, 928-929, 184 Cal. Rptr. 296, 647 P.2d 1075] . In an action against both corporate and individual defendants, venue is proper for the action as a whole if venue is correct as to any defendant. Thus, a plaintiff may properly choose an individual defendant's residence as the venue for the action even if the corporate defendant is located elsewhere. An individual defendant may compel transfer of the action to the county in which he or she resides if the action is not originally filed there, because venue at the residence of any individual defendant is controlling at the option of that defendant [Buran Equip. Co. v. Superior Court (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 1662, 1666-1667, 236 Cal. Rptr. 171] . In addition, a defendant may have the action removed from the California courts to the appropriate federal district court if the action arises under federal law or involves diversity jurisdiction [28 U.S.C.S. § 1441; see Ch. 265, Federal Courts: Jurisdiction and Removal].

[3] Partnerships and Associations

A partnership or association may be sued in the county in which liability arises [Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5; Mosby v. Superior Court (1974) 43 Cal. App. 3d 219, 225, 117 Cal. Rptr. 588] . In a tort action, liability arises where the injury occurs [see Mission Imps., Inc. v. Superior Court (1982) 31 Cal. 3d 921, 928-929, 184 Cal. Rptr. 296, 647 P.2d 1075] . A partnership or association may also be sued in the county of its principal place of business if it has filed the statement provided by statute with the Secretary of State. After filing this statement, a partnership or association must be treated as a corporation for venue purposes [Code Civ. Proc. § 395.2; San Francisco Found. v. Superior Court (1984) 37 Cal. 3d 285, 296, 208 Cal. Rptr. 31, 690 P.2d 1 ; see § 380.152[2]].

[4] Actions Against Government Entities

The proper county for trial of an action against the state for death or for injury to persons or personal property is the county in which the death or injury occurred [Gov. Code § 955.2; State of California v. Superior Court (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 328, 329-330, 238 Cal. Rptr. 315] . An action against a city, county, city and county, or local agency for negligent injury to persons or property occurring within that city, county, or city and county, or within the county where the local agency is located, must be tried in that county or city and county, or in the county where that city or local agency is located [Code Civ. Proc. § 394(a); Delgado v. Superior Court (1977) 74 Cal. App. 3d 560, 562-564, 141 Cal. Rptr. 528] .

§ 380.153 Pleading

The essential elements of a cause of action based on negligence may be generally alleged in the complaint [see Hoyem v. Manhattan Beach City Sch. Dist. (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 508, 513-514, 150 Cal. Rptr. 1, 585 P.2d 851] . The facts giving rise to the existence of a duty must be pleaded in the complaint; a complaint that does not contain these facts is fatally defective [see Jacoves v. United Merch. Corp. (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 88, 113, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 468] .

The elements of actionable negligence that the plaintiff has the burden of pleading and proving are the following: (1) facts showing a legal duty of care owed by the defendant to the plaintiff or to the class of which the plaintiff is a member, (2) an act or omission by the defendant constitutinga breach of the duty owed the plaintiff, (3) injury and damages to the plaintiff, and (4) the defendant's breach as a proximate cause of the plaintiff's injury and damages [see Hoyem v. Manhattan Beach City Sch. Dist. (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 508, 513-514, 150 Cal. Rptr. 1, 585 P.2d 851] .

§ 380.154 Prejudgment Interest in Personal Injury Actions

Civ. Code § 3291 permits the plaintiff in an action brought to recover damages for negligently or willfully inflicted personal injuries to claim in the complaint interest on the damages alleged. If the plaintiff makes an offer pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 998, which the defendant does not accept prior to trial or within 30 days, whichever occurs first, and the plaintiff obtains a judgment more favorable than the offer, the judgment must bear interest at the legal rate of 10 percent per annum calculated from the date of the plaintiff's first offer pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 998 that was less than the judgment. The interest accrues until the satisfaction of the judgment [Civ. Code § 3291]. Civ. Code § 3291 does not apply to a public entity, or to a public employee for an act or omission within the scope of employment [Civ. Code § 3291].

§ 380.155 Motions for Summary Adjudication Under Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(f)

[1] Matters to Which Motion Applies

A party may move for summary adjudication as to one or more causes of action within an action, one or more affirmative defenses, one or more claims for damages, or one or more issues of duty, if that party contends that [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(f)(1)]:

- The cause of action has no merit;
- There is no affirmative defense as to that cause of action;
- There is no merit to an affirmative defense as to any cause of action;
- There is no merit to a claim for punitive damages; or
- One or more defendants either owed or did not owe a duty to the plaintiff.

For purposes of a summary adjudication motion, a cause of action has no merit if one or more of the elements of the cause of action cannot be separately pleaded, or if the defendant establishes an affirmative defense as to that cause of action [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(o)].

A motion for summary adjudication may be granted only if it completely disposes of a cause of action, an affirmative defense, a claim for damages, or an issue of duty [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(f)(1); see, e.g., Catalano v. Superior Court (2000) 82 Cal. App. 4th 91, 97-98, 97 Cal. Rptr. 2d 842 (summary adjudication not properly granted if adjudication only disposed of some facts relating to punitive damages claim, but did not dispose of entire punitive damages claim)].

If a motion for summary adjudication is granted, at the trial of the action, the cause or causes of action within the action, affirmative defense or defenses, claim for damages, or issue or issues of duty as to which the motion was granted shall be deemed established, and the action must proceed as to the remaining cause or causes of action, affirmative defense or defenses, claim for damages, or issue or issues of duty [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(n)(1)].

In the trial of the action, the fact that a motion for summary adjudication was granted as to one or more causes of action, affirmative defenses, claims for damages, or issues of duty within the action does not bar any cause of action, affirmative defense, claim for damages, or issue of duty as to which summary adjudication either was not sought or was denied [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(n)(2)]. Parties, witnesses, and the court are not permitted to comment to the jury about the grant or denial of a motion for summary adjudication [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(n)(3)].

[2] As Alternative to Motion for Summary Judgment

A motion for summary adjudication may be made by itself or as an alternative to a motion for summary judgment, and the same procedure applies to a motion for summary adjudication as applies to a motion for summary judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(f)(2)]. A party may not move for summary judgment based on issues asserted in a prior motion for summary adjudication, unless that party establishes to the satisfaction of the court newly discovered facts or circumstances or a change of law supporting the issues reasserted in the summary judgment motion [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(f)(2)]. A "change of law" does not include a later enacted statute without retroactive application [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(s)].

§ 380.170 Comparative Negligence (Comparative Fault)

[1] Adoption by Li as Replacement for Contributory Negligence

The California Supreme Court established the rule of comparative negligence in this state in the case of Li v. Yellow Cab [Li v. Yellow Cab Co. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 804, 119 Cal. Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d 1226] . Under the defense of contributory negligence in effect prior to Li, a defendant was released from all obligation to compensate an injured plaintiff, even though the defendant's act was also a cause of the injury, if the plaintiff's own negligence or misconduct was a proximate cause of his or her own injury [see, e.g., Straten v. Spencer (1921) 52 Cal. App. 98, 106-107, 197 P. 540] . The change to a comparative negligence system did not affect the generalduty to exercise reasonable care for one's own safety, but merely changed the effect of a failure to exercise such care on one's ability to recover from another for the latter's negligence [see Li v. Yellow Cab Co. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 804, 829, 119 Cal. Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d 1226] .

[2] Abolition of "Last Clear Chance" Doctrine

The adoption of the doctrine of comparative negligence has abolished the "last clear chance" doctrine in California [Li v. Yellow Cab Co. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 804, 824, 829, 119 Cal. Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d 1226] .

[3] Willful Misconduct

[a] Before Li

Prior to the decision in Li, the defense of the plaintiff's contributory negligence was unavailable if the defendant's act was intentional [Bartosh v. Banning (1967) 251 Cal. App. 2d 378, 385, 59 Cal. Rptr. 382 ; Lovett v. Hitchcock (1961) 192 Cal. App. 2d 806, 810, 14 Cal. Rptr. 117] .

[b] Viability After Li

Although there is no longer a distinction between "mere" negligence and wanton or reckless misconduct [see Zavala v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (1981) 125 Cal. App. 3d 646, 650, 178 Cal. Rptr. 185 ; Sorensen v. Allred (1980) 112 Cal. App. 3d 717, 725, 169 Cal. Rptr. 441] , it appears that, under the doctrine of comparative negligence, a defendant who has committed an intentional tort is not entitled to have the plaintiff's recovery reduced because of the plaintiff's negligence [see Li v. Yellow Cab Co. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 804, 825-826, 119 Cal. Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d 1226 ; Allen v. Sundean (1982) 137 Cal. App. 3d 216, 226, 186 Cal. Rptr. 863] .

[4] Application to Specific Types of Actions

[a] Strict Products Liability

The California Supreme Court has extended the principles of comparative fault to actions based on a theory of strict products liability. In these cases, a plaintiff is entitled to recover damages if he or she has proven that a product defect was a proximate cause of his or her injury, but the recovery must be reduced in proportion to the plaintiff's own contributory negligence [Daly v. General Motors Corp. (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 725, 742, 144 Cal. Rptr. 380, 575 P.2d 1162] . The comparative fault concept also requires the apportionment of liability if one tortfeasor's liability is based on negligence and the other tortfeasor's liability is based on the strict products liability doctrine [Safeway Stores, Inc. v. Nest-Kart (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 322, 327-332, 146 Cal. Rptr. 550, 579 P.2d 441] .

For further discussion of the effect of applying comparative fault principles to strict products liability actions, see Ch. 460, Products Liability , and Cotchett & Cartwright, California Products Liability Actions, Chs. 2 and 8 (Matthew Bender).

[b] Insurance Bad Faith

If an insurer raises the affirmative defense of comparative fault, the negligent conduct of the plaintiff can be compared with the bad faith conduct of the insurer [Patrick v. Maryland Cas. Co. (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 1566, 1575, 267 Cal. Rptr. 24] .

For further discussion of an insurer's duty to act in good faith and related issues, including the defense of comparative fault, see Ch. 308, Insurance , and California Torts, Ch. 82 (Matthew Bender).

[5] Computation of Award

[a] "Pure" Form of Comparative Negligence Adopted

Under the "pure" form of comparative negligence adopted by the California Supreme Court in Li v. Yellow Cab Co. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 804, 119 Cal. Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d 1226 , there is no threshold level of fault that a plaintiff must remain below in order to recover damages [Li v. Yellow Cab Co. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 804, 827-829, 119 Cal. Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d 1226] . The formula for awarding damages under a pure comparative fault system requires the trier of fact to ascertain whether or not the plaintiff was partially responsible for the injury. If so, the trier of fact must then reduce the total amount of the plaintiff's damages by the proportion or percentage of negligence attributable to the plaintiff [see Drust v. Drust (1980) 113 Cal. App. 3d 1, 6 n. 1, 169 Cal. Rptr. 750] , as compared with the fault of all other persons whose conduct contributed to the injury [see American Motorcyle Ass'n v. Superior Court (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 578, 589 n. 2, 146 Cal. Rptr. 182, 578 P.2d 899] . However, where there is no duty, there can be no comparative liability. For example, a reasonably prudent driver of a vehicle traveling at the posted maximum speed limit in the middle lane of a freeway, at night, and in light traffic during clear weather, has no common law or statutory duty to other drivers and passengers to move his or her vehicle to the right into the next slower lane if another driver approaches from behind in the same lane at a speed in excess of the posted maximum speed limit. Accordingly, such a driver cannot be held comparatively liable for any resulting damage if the speeding vehicle approaching from behind in the same lane collides into the rear of the law-abiding driver's vehicle [Monreal v Tobin (1998) 61 Cal. App. 4th 1337, 1351, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 168 (five percent comparative fault share reversed because referee erred in finding prudent driver comparatively negligent)].

In a wrongful death action, any award to the plaintiff is properly reduced by the percentage of negligence attributable to the decedent [Munoz v. Olin(1979) 24 Cal. 3d 629, 631, 156 Cal. Rptr. 727, 596 P.2d 1143] . Any award to a plaintiff who is a minor must be reduced by the percentage of negligence attributable to the minor [Wiley v. Southern Pac. Transp. Co. (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 177, 194, 269 Cal. Rptr. 240] . Under Civ. Code § 3333.2 of the Medical Injury Compensation Reform Act of 1975 (MICRA), the trial court must factor in the plaintiff's comparative fault before, not after, reducing the plaintiff's noneconomic damage award to the $250,000 cap [McAdory v. Rogers (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1273, 1281, 264 Cal. Rptr. 71] .

[b] Setoffs

Under the comparative negligence rule, a plaintiff's award is the difference between his or her damages and the portion of those damages caused by the plaintiff's own negligence [see Li v. Yellow Cab Co. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 804, 829, 119 Cal. Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d 1226] . If the plaintiff has already obtained a settlement from fewer than all defendants, the amount of the settlement is subtracted from the plaintiff's damages after they have been discounted for the plaintiff's negligence [Lemos v. Eichel (1978) 83 Cal. App. 3d 110, 118, 147 Cal. Rptr. 603] . Payments under uninsured motorist policies are also subtracted from the plaintiff's damages after the total has been discounted by the plaintiff's negligence [see Waite v. Godfrey (1980) 106 Cal. App. 3d 760, 771-775, 163 Cal. Rptr. 881 ; see also Ins. Code § 11580.2(e) (payments under automobile medical payments coverage may be offset against amounts due under uninsured motorist coverage if policy so provides)], as are any payments received from the plaintiff's insurer that are not within the collateral source rule [Helfend v. Southern Cal. Rapid Transit Dist. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 1, 6-14, 84 Cal. Rptr. 173, 465 P.2d 61] and workers' compensation benefits to the extent that they do not exceed the amount of the employer's proportionate negligence [see Curtis v. State of California ex rel. Dept. of Transportation (Cal App. 5th Dist. 1982) 128 Cal. App. 3d 668, 683].

An individual plaintiff's award may not be reduced by the fault of a coplaintiff in the absence of pleading and proof of a legal relationship requiring this fault to be imputed to the individual plaintiff [Lemos v. Eichel (1978) 83 Cal. App. 3d 110, 118, 147 Cal. Rptr. 603] .

[6] Pleading and Proof

To assert the affirmative defense of comparative negligence, the defendant must plead and prove that the plaintiff was negligent and that the plaintiff's negligence was a proximate cause of the accident and resulting injuries [see Simmons v. Wexler (1979) 94 Cal. App. 3d 1007, 1014, 156 Cal. Rptr. 810] . The defendant must establish a causal link between the plaintiff's actions and the harm suffered by the plaintiff [Potter v. Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 965, 1011, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 550, 863 P.2d 795 (comparative fault principles not properly invoked if defendant failed to establish causal link between plaintiffs' smoking and their fear of significantly increased risk of cancer)].

Before the advent of comparative negligence, the burden of proof was on the defendant to demonstrate contributory negligence by the plaintiff [Gyerman v. United States Lines Co. (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 488, 503, 102 Cal. Rptr. 795, 498 P.2d 1043] . This burden has not changed with the introduction of comparative fault [Drust v. Drust (1980) 113 Cal. App. 3d 1, 6, 169 Cal. Rptr. 750] .

33-380 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 380.171

AUTHOR: MICHAEL S. FIELDS CONTRIBUTING EDITORIAL CONSULTANT Mr. Fields is a private practitioner in Beverly Hills who has specialized in personal injury litigation since 1969.

§ 380.171 Express Assumption of Risk

[1] Defined

Express assumption of the risk involves an agreement by the plaintiff to assume the risks of a particular activity and to relieve the defendant from liability [Ferrell v. Southern Nev. Off-Road Enthusiasts, Ltd. (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 309, 318, 195 Cal. Rptr. 90] .

Express assumption of the risk is distinct from implied assumption of the risk, and the special rules regarding a distinction between primary and secondary assumption of the risk do not affect the rules relating to express assumption of the risk [Allan v. Snow Summit, Inc. (1996) 51 Cal. App. 4th 1358, 1374-1375, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 813] .

[2] Requirements of Release

[a] Clear, Unambiguous, and Explicit Language

Courts will not give effect to a plaintiff's express waiver of a defendant's liability unless the waiver is sufficiently clear, explicit, and comprehensible in each of its essential details [Ferrell v. Southern Nev. Off-Road Enthusiasts, Ltd. (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 309, 318, 195 Cal. Rptr. 90] . For example, courts will not enforce a release that fails to include in the text exculpatory language that explicitly sets forth to a person untrained in the law the full nature and force of the release [Hohe v. San Diego Unified Sch. Dist. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 1559, 1565-1566, 274 Cal. Rptr. 647 ; Ferrell v. Southern Nev. Off-Road Enthusiasts, Ltd. (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 309, 319, 195 Cal. Rptr. 90] . Courts will not generally release a defendant from liability for his or her own negligence unless the release clearly, explicitly, and unambiguously states that the defendant will not be held liable for negligent conduct [see, e.g., Cohen v. Five Brooks Stable (2008) 159 Cal. App. 4th 1476, 1486-1490, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 471 ; see [b], below].

On the other hand, if a release from liability clearly notifies the prospective releasor, in clear and unambiguous language understandable to any lay person, of the effect of signing the agreement, it will effectively preclude liability unless the release is against public policy [see Madison v. Superior Court (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 589, 597-600, 250 Cal. Rptr. 299 ; McAtee v. Newhall Land & Farming Co. (1985) 169 Cal. App. 3d 1031, 1033-1034, 216 Cal. Rptr. 465 ; see § 380.171[3]].

Whether a contract provision is clear and unambiguous is a question of law, not of fact [Madison v. Superior Court (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 589, 598, 250 Cal. Rptr. 299] .

[b] Scope of Release

Whether or not a release bars recovery against a negligent party turns primarily on contractual interpretation; the intent of the parties as expressed in the agreement controls [Hohe v. San Diego Unified Sch. Dist. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 1559, 1567, 274 Cal. Rptr. 647 ; see also Rossmoor Sanitation, Inc. v. Pylon, Inc. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 622, 633, 119 Cal. Rptr. 449, 532 P.2d 97] . The express terms of the agreement must apply to the particular misconduct of the defendant that is alleged to have caused the injury. Even a document purporting to release the defendant from "all liability" may, in fact, release the defendant only from liability for injuries that arose from risks particular to the activity involved that are obvious, or that might reasonably be foreseen by the party who executed the release [Bennett v. United States Cycling Fed'n (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 1485, 1490-1491, 239 Cal. Rptr. 55] . Negligence that creates a risk that would not realistically be appreciated by the releasor is not within the scope of the release; whether a given risk is of such a nature is a triable issue of fact [Bennett v. United States Cycling Fed'n (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 1485, 1491, 239 Cal. Rptr. 55] . However, failure expressly to include the word "negligence" in the release from liability will not render the release unenforceable when it is clear from the language and context of the release that the parties intended that the release cover the defendant's negligence [Sanchez v. Bally's Total Fitness Corp. (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 62, 66-69, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 902] .

It has also been held that if a plaintiff has given a defendant a clear, unambiguous release of all liability for any act of negligence, the release is, by definition, applicable to the defendant's negligent act, whatever that act may have been, and that it is only necessary that the act of negligence that results in injury to the releasor be reasonably related to the object or purpose for which the release was given [National & Int'l Bhd. of Street Racers, Inc. v. Superior Court (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 934, 938, 264 Cal. Rptr. 44 ; see, e.g., Benedek v. PLC Santa Monica (2002) 104 Cal. App. 4th 1351, 1358, 129 Cal. Rptr. 2d 197 (clear, unambiguous, explicit health club membership provision releasing club from liability for all injuries to member on premises, whether sustained while using exercise equipment or not, applied to member injured while trying to support falling television)]. For example, the release signed by a skydiver who was killed in a jump over the ocean was a sufficiently unequivocal waiver of the liability of defendant skydiving company for two reasons, even though it had been signed several years before, when the skydiving company was operating at an inland location, and it did not refer to jumps over water. First, the passage of time alone after the signing of a release is not dispositive. Second, the release was broad enough in scope to cover the fatal jump because it contained no limitations on time or place, made no reference to exceptions for bodies of water or particular weather conditions, and included in the risks assumed any defects in the dropzone [Paralift, Inc.v. Superior Court (1994) 23 Cal. App. 4th 748, 755-757, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 177] .

Even if an agreement purporting to excuse a potential defendant from liability for negligence is valid and enforceable, the same release will not generally excuse the defendant from liability for gross negligence. "Gross negligence" includes the failure to exercise even slight care, or an extreme departure from the ordinary standard of conduct [City of Santa Barbara v. Superior Court (2007) 41 Cal. 4th 747, 766, 62 Cal. Rptr. 3d 527, 161 P.3d 1095] . While allowing a party to shield itself from liability for negligence may be justified in order to create an incentive for that party to provide a valuable service for the public, exculpation from liability for gross negligence exceeds the protection necessary to create such an incentive and instead removes any obligation to adhere to even a minimal standard of care [City of Santa Barbara v. Superior Court (2007) 41 Cal. 4th 747, 776-777, 62 Cal. Rptr. 3d 527, 161 P.3d 1095] . In one case, for example, the California Supreme Court held that an agreement releasing a city from liability for negligence committed against a developmentally disabled child who was participating in a recreational camp designed for the needs of such children violated public policy and was unenforceable to the extent that it could be used to release the city from liability for gross negligence [City of Santa Barbara v. Superior Court (2007) 41 Cal. 4th 747, 777, 62 Cal. Rptr. 3d 527, 161 P.3d 1095] .

[3] Public Policy Limitations of Civ. Code § 1668

Civ. Code § 1668 provides that all contracts that have for their object, directly or indirectly, exempting anyone from responsibility for his or her own fraud, or willful injury to the person or property of another, or violation of law, whether willful or negligent, are against the policy of the law. A broad release purporting to release a person "from and against any and all liability whatsoever, at common law or otherwise," includes a release from liability for fraud and intentional acts, and thus on its face violates the public policy stated in Civ. Code § 1668 [Baker Pac. Corp. v. Suttles (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 1148, 1154, 269 Cal. Rptr. 709] . Based on its plain language, Civ. Code § 1668 prevents parties from releasing themselves from liability for violations of statutory or regulatory law [Health Net of Cal., Inc. v. Department of Health Servs. (2003) 113 Cal. App. 4th 224, 227, 6 Cal. Rptr. 3d 235] .

The California Supreme Court has interpreted Civ. Code § 1668 to invalidate exculpatory clauses in certain types of agreements as contrary to public policy [see, e.g., Henrioulle v. Marin Ventures, Inc. (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 512, 518-519, 143 Cal. Rptr. 247, 573 P.2d 465 (exculpatory clause in residential lease); Tunkl v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (1963) 60 Cal. 2d 92, 98-101, 32 Cal. Rptr. 33, 383 P.2d 441 (exculpatory clause in hospital admission form)]. The Court has identified the following six criteria for identifying the type of agreement in which an exculpatory clause is invalid as contrary to public policy [Henrioulle v. MarinVentures, Inc. (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 512, 518, 143 Cal. Rptr. 247, 573 P.2d 465 ; see also Tunkl v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (1963) 60 Cal. 2d 92, 98-101, 32 Cal. Rptr. 33, 383 P.2d 441] :

- The agreement concerns a business of a type generally thought suitable for public regulation.

- The party seeking exculpation is engaged in performing a service of great importance to the public, which is often a matter of practical necessity for some members of the public.

- The party seeking exculpation holds himself or herself out as willing to perform this service for any member of the public who seeks it, or at least any member coming within certain established standards.

- As a result of the essential nature of the service, the party invoking exculpation possesses, in the economic setting of the transaction, a decisive advantage of bargaining strength against any member of the public who seeks his or her services.

- In exercising a superior bargaining power, the party invoking exculpation confronts the public with a standardized adhesion contract of exculpation and makes no provision whereby a purchaser may pay additional fees and obtain protection against negligence.

- As a result of the transaction, the person or property of the purchaser is placed under the control of the seller, subject to the risk of carelessness by the seller or his or her agents.

If the agreement meets some or all of these six criteria, the exculpatory clause may be held invalid as contrary to public policy [see Gavin W. v. YMCA of Metro. L.A. (2003) 106 Cal. App. 4th 662, 671-676, 131 Cal. Rptr. 2d 168 (exculpatory clause in contract to provide child care services); Baker Pac. Corp. v. Suttles (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 1148, 1157, 269 Cal. Rptr. 709 (exculpatory clause in employment agreement); Gardner v. Downtown Porsche Audi (1986) 180 Cal. App. 3d 713, 716-717, 225 Cal. Rptr. 757 (exculpatory clause in automobile repair order form)]. A court is not required to apply these criteria to invalidate a contract purporting to avoid liability for fraud, willful injury, or a violation of law. Such a contract is in violation of the express language of Civ. Code § 1668 [Capri v. L.A. Fitness International, LLC (2006) 136 Cal. App. 4th 1078, 1084-1085, 39 Cal. Rptr. 3d 425 (negligence per se action based on fitness club's alleged violation of statutes governing swimming pool maintenance was not barred by written release)].

However, if the contract is not invalid under the express language of Section 1668, and does not meet the "public policy" criteria listed above, it is likely that it will be enforced if it is sufficiently clear [see, e.g., Platzer v. Mammoth Mountain Ski Area (2002) 104 Cal. App. 4th 1253, 1259-1260, 128 Cal. Rptr. 2d 885 (contractual provision releasing ski lift operator from liability for ordinary negligence was valid); Hulsey v. Elsinore Parachute Ctr. (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 333, 339-345, 214 Cal. Rptr. 194 (release from liability signed to participate in high-risk sports activities, such as parachute jumping, is not invalid as contrary to public policy); see also § 380.171[2]]. As noted under [2], above, however, even if an agreement purporting to excuse a potential defendant from liability for negligence is valid and enforceable, the same release will not generally excuse the defendant from liability for gross negligence [City of Santa Barbara v. Superior Court (2007) 41 Cal. 4th 747, 777, 62 Cal. Rptr. 3d 527, 161 P.3d 1095] .

[4] Applicability in Wrongful Death Action

In a wrongful death action, the fact that the decedent signed a release that would otherwise be enforceable will ordinarily preclude any liability to the decedent's heirs. Courts have held, however, that the release as such cannot preclude an action by the heirs; because a wrongful death action belongs not to the decedent but to his or her heirs, a preinjury release or waiver of a right of action executed by the decedent during his or her lifetime is ineffective to bar the action [Madison v. Superior Court (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 589, 596-597, 250 Cal. Rptr. 299 ; Scroggs v. Coast Cmty. Coll. Dist. (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 1399, 1402-1403, 239 Cal. Rptr. 916] . A wrongful death action is, nevertheless, subject to any defense that could have been maintained against the decedent had he or she lived, including express assumption of the risk through preinjury release [Saenz v. Whitewater Voyages, Inc. (1990) 226 Cal. App. 3d 758, 763-764, 276 Cal. Rptr. 672] .

For further discussion, see Ch. 181, Death and Survival Actions .

[5] Sales Contracts

Commercial entities are entitled to contract to limit the liability of one to the other, or otherwise allocate the risk of doing business [Philippine Airlines, Inc. v. McDonnell Douglas Corp. (1987) 189 Cal. App. 3d 234, 237, 234 Cal. Rptr. 423 ; see also Com. Code §§ 2316(2), (4), 2719]. Contractual clauses seeking to limit liability are strictly construed, and any ambiguities are resolved against the party seeking to limit its liability for negligence [Philippine Airlines, Inc. v. McDonnell Douglas Corp. (1987) 189 Cal. App. 3d 234, 237, 234 Cal. Rptr. 423 ; see Nunes Turfgrass, Inc. v. Vaughan-Jacklin Seed Co. (1988) 200 Cal. App. 3d 1518, 1538-1539, 246 Cal. Rptr. 823 (limitations on liability in commercial contracts as tested under Com. Code § 2719(3) rather than under Civ. Code § 1668)].

[6] Challenging Validity of Release

[a] Before Acceptance

Prospective parties to a release may test its validity in a declaratory relief action prior to the parties' acceptance of the release and their entry into the underlying transaction [see, e.g., Baker Pac. Corp. v. Suttles (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 1148, 1154-1157, 269 Cal. Rptr. 709] .

[b] After Acceptance

A preinjury release may be subjected to judicial review in litigation arising after the complaining party has signed and accepted the release, entered into the underlying transaction or service contemplated in the contract, suffered injury, and brought an action for damages against the releasee. The exculpatory language is raised as an affirmative defense and resolved in summary proceedings or at a bifurcated trial [see, e.g., Madison v. Superior Court (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d

589, 250 Cal. Rptr. 299 ; see also Baker Pac. Corp. v. Suttles (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 1148, 269 Cal. Rptr. 709] .

[7] Agreements By or on Behalf of Minors

Fam. Code § 6710 permits a minor to disaffirm his or her contract, including a release from liability, with certain limited exceptions [Celli v. Sports Car Club of Am., Inc. (1972) 29 Cal. App. 3d 511, 517, 105 Cal. Rptr. 904 ; see Fam. Code §§ 6711, 6712, 6750, 6751]. A minor may disaffirm a release from liability by any act or declaration, and express notice to the other party is unnecessary [Celli v. Sports Car Club of Am., Inc. (1972) 29 Cal. App. 3d 511, 517, 105 Cal. Rptr. 904 (filing of action is sufficient)].

A minor cannot, however, disaffirm on the basis of his or her minority a release signed by a parent on the minor's behalf [Hohe v. San Diego Unified Sch. Dist. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 1559, 1564-1565, 274 Cal. Rptr. 647 ; see Doyle v. Giuliucci (1965) 62 Cal. 2d 606, 609, 43 Cal. Rptr. 697, 401 P.2d 1 (minor couldnot disaffirm parent's agreement to arbitrate disputes arising from contract to provide health care services)].

§ 380.172 Implied Assumption of Risk

[1] Reasonable Versus Unreasonable Criteria Before Knight v. Jewett

In Li v. Yellow Cab Co. [Li v. Yellow Cab Co. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 804, 119 Cal. Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d 1226] , the California Supreme Court stated in dicta that the doctrine of assumption of risk would be merged into the comparative fault scheme in instances in which a plaintiff "unreasonably undertakes to encounter a specific known risk imposed by a defendant's negligence" [Li v. Yellow Cab. Co. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 804, 824, 119 Cal. Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d 1226] . After Li, but before the Court's decision in Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696 , various court of appeal decisions considered application of the assumption of risk doctrine in light of comparative fault principles but reached conflicting results [see, e.g., Ordway v. Superior Court (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 98, 104, 243 Cal. Rptr. 536 (plaintiff who knowingly and voluntarily assumed risk for any purpose deemed to have agreed to reduce defendant's duty of care); Segoviano v. Housing Auth. (1983) 143 Cal. App. 3d 162, 164, 169-170, 191 Cal. Rptr. 578 (doctrine of reasonable implied assumption of risk abolished by absolute foreclosure of any right by defendant to contend that plaintiff's reasonable implied assumption of risk can be asserted either as total defense arising from implied waiver by plaintiff or partial defense based on lack of due care by plaintiff)].

In those cases that held that reasonable implied assumption of the risk continued to be a viable defense, the defense extended only to the danger that the injured person knowingly assumed [Von Beltz v. Stuntman, Inc. (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 1467, 1479-1480, 255 Cal. Rptr. 755] . Hence, the defense did not bar recovery by a plaintiff who was not aware of the dangers that the defendant knew the plaintiff would confront. For example, a defendant who changed the nature of the activity or otherwise altered the risk without the plaintiff's acquiescence was liable for any resulting injuries [Von Beltz v. Stuntman, Inc. (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 1467, 1479-1480, 255 Cal. Rptr. 755] .

[2] Primary Versus Secondary Assumption of Risk Under Knight v. Jewett

[a] Adoption of Duty-Based Approach by Lead Opinion

In Knight v. Jewett [Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696] , the California Supreme Court considered the proper application of the doctrine of assumption of risk in light of the adoption of comparative fault principles. In the Court's lead opinion, three justices embraced an approach based on the defendant's duty (using the terminology of "primary" versus "secondary" assumption of risk) [see Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 314, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696 (George, J., with Lucas, C.J., and Arabian, J., concurring)]. The Court did not reach a clear majority opinion with regard to the exact rationale behind its decision in the case [see Tan v. Goddard (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 1528, 1534, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 89 (concluding that lead opinion was plurality opinion)], and the justices themselves disagree regarding the character of the lead opinion [compare Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 314 n.6, 321, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696 (lead opinion reflects "view of the majority"); with Ford v. Gouin (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 339, 351 (Kennard, J., concurring and dissenting; stating that no single view in Knight garnered majority)].

However, according to the lead opinion, appellate decisions misinterpreted the statement in Li that assumption of risk is in reality a form of contributory negligence in which "a plaintiff unreasonably undertakes to encounter a specific known risk imposed by a defendant's negligence" [Li v. Yellow Cab Co. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 804, 824, 119 Cal. Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d 1226] , by suggesting that Li contemplated less favorable legal treatment for a plaintiff who reasonably encounters a known risk than for a plaintiff who unreasonably encounters such a risk [see Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 307, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696] . The Court observed that nothing in this passage suggests that the assumption of risk doctrine should survive as a total bar to a plaintiff's recovery if that plaintiff acts reasonably in encountering such a risk [Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 307, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696] . The Court concluded that terminology distinguishing between reasonable and unreasonable assumption of risk, as a means of differentiating between the cases in which a plaintiff is barred from bringing an action and cases in which a plaintiff is not barred, is more misleading than helpful [Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 309, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696] . Instead, the lead opinion interpreted Li as drawing a distinction between assumption of risk cases in which the defendant has not breached any legal duty to the plaintiff and those in which the defendant has breached a legal duty [Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 310, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696] .

According to the lead opinion, the question of the existence and scope of a defendant's duty of care, as affected by the plaintiff's assumption of risk, is a legal question that depends on the nature of the activity in question and on the parties' general relationship to the activity, and is an issue to be decided by the court not by the jury [Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 313, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696] . However, if a case presents an issue of secondary assumption of risk, or a factual issue of whether the defendant increased the risks inherent in the sport, the jury must be properly instructed as to the scope of the defendant's duty under the assumption of risk doctrine, and the jury must allocate responsibility for the injury by weighing that duty against the plaintiff's acceptance of the risks of thesport [Vine v. Bear Valley Ski Co. (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 577, 582-583, 13 Cal. Rptr. 3d 370 (error to fail to instruct jury on assumption of risk in case involving snowboarding accident); see also Luna v. Vela (2008) 169 Cal. App. 4th 102, 112, 86 Cal. Rptr. 3d 588 (jury to determine whether homeowner increased risks inherent in volleyball when failing to mark net tie-down lines)].

[b] Primary Assumption of Risk Precludes Liability if No Duty Exists

According to the lead opinion in Knight v. Jewett [Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696] , the doctrine of assumption of risk, in light of the adoption of comparative fault principles, consists of two separate defenses: "primary assumption of risk" and "secondary assumption of risk" [Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 309, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696] . Primary assumption of risk describes the situation in which the defendant, by virtue of the nature of the activity and the parties' relationship to the activity, owes no legal duty to protect the plaintiff from the particular risk of harm that caused the injury; the doctrine operates as a complete bar to the plaintiff's recovery [Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 314-315, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696] . In primary assumption of risk cases, a total bar to the plaintiff's cause of action is consistent with comparative fault principles, because if the defendant has not breached a legal duty of care to the plaintiff, the defendant has not committed any conduct that would warrant the imposition of any liability whatsoever, and thus there is no occasion for invoking comparative fault principles [Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 310, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696] .

Thus, under this analysis, assumption of risk is an absolute defense only if public policy dictates that the class of which the defendant is a member should owe no duty of care to the class of which the plaintiff is a member in relation to the activity in which they are involved. The inquiry does not begin with the question of whether or not the plaintiff assumed the risk; rather, the inquiry begins and ends with an analysis of whether the defendant owed a duty to the plaintiff, after assessing factors such as those listed in Rowland v. Christian [Harrold v. Rolling J Ranch (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 578, 584, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 671 ; see Rowland v. Christian (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 108, 70 Cal. Rptr. 97, 443 P.2d 561 ; see § 380.30[4][a]].

[c] Secondary Assumption of Risk Merged Into Comparative Fault Scheme if Duty Exists

"Secondary assumption of risk" involves the situation in which the defendant owes a duty of care to the plaintiff but the plaintiff proceeds to encounter a known risk imposed by the defendant's breach of duty. In this situation, the doctrine is merged into the comparative fault scheme and the trier of fact, in apportioning the loss resulting from the injury, may consider the relative responsibility of the parties [Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 315, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696] . Comparative fault principles preclude automatically placing all of the loss on the plaintiff in such cases because the injury may have been caused by the combined effect of the defendant's and the plaintiff's culpable conduct. To retain assumption of risk as a complete defense in such a case "would fly in the face" of the basic holding of Li that a rule placing all of the loss on one of two parties, both of whom are partially at fault for an injury, is inherently inequitable. In the assumption of risk context, it is improper to impose all responsibility on a plaintiff who is aware of a risk of harm created by the defendant's duty but fails to avoid the harm; in such instances, comparative fault principles call for a sharing of the burden of liability [Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 310-311, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696] .

[3] Consent-Based Analysis by Dissent in Knight v. Jewett

In Knight v. Jewett [Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696] , three justices declined to adopt the lead opinion's primary/secondary or duty-based assumption of risk analysis, advocating instead a plaintiff's subjective consent approach (referred to variously as a "consent-based" approach or "implied consent" approach), under which the affirmative defense of implied assumption of risk bars an action only if the plaintiff voluntarily accepted a risk with knowledge and appreciation of that risk [see Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 322-323, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696 (Panelli, J., concurring and dissenting, with Baxter, J., concurring; adopting and applying analysis set forth by Kennard, J., dissenting)]. This approach, like the lead opinion, rejects the reasonable/unreasonable terminology. The essential distinction under the consent-based analysis is between conduct by the plaintiff that is deliberate, which would bar recovery, and conduct that is merely careless, which would be apportioned under the comparative fault system [Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 332-333, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696 (Kennard, J., dissenting)].

[4] Application of Primary Assumption of Risk

[a] Sports Participants

[i] No Duty Unless Intentional Injury, Recklessness, or Increase of Risk Beyond Risk Inherent in Sport

Knight v. Jewett [Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696] involved a plaintiff who was injured by another player during a game of touch football. The lead opinion concluded that the defendant was entitled to summary judgment under "primary assumption of risk" because the defendant did not breach any legal duty owed to the plaintiff. The Court stated that a participant in an active sport breaches a legal duty of care to other participants only if the participant intentionally injures another player, engages in conduct that is so reckless as to be totally outside the range of the ordinary activity involved in thesport, or fails to use due care not to increase the risks to a participant over and above those inherent in the sport [Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 315-316, 320-321, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696 ; Freeman v. Hale(1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 1388, 1393, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 418] . By eliminating liability for unintended accidents, the primary assumption of risk doctrine ensures that "the fervor of athletic competition will not be chilled by the constant threat of litigation from every misstep, sharp turn and sudden stop" [Stimson v. Carlson (1992) 11 Cal. App. 4th 1201, 1206, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 670] .

In Ford v. Gouin [Ford v. Gouin (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 339, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 30, 834 P.2d 724] , the companion case to Knight, the Court applied these principles to a noncompetitive sport (waterskiing) and refused to hold the defendant ski boat driver liable in the absence of intentional injury or reckless conduct; the Court reasoned that imposition of liability for ordinary negligence (for example, making too sharp a turn) would inhibit the nature of noncompetitive sports that are active and potentially risky [Ford v. Gouin (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 339, 344-345, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 30, 834 P.2d 724] .

Although a sports participant has a duty not to engage in intentional or reckless conduct that is outside the range of ordinary activity inherent in the sport, this does not mean that all intentional conduct, even if accompanied by an increased risk of injury, is actionable. For example, the California Supreme Court held that the primary assumption of risk doctrine protected a community college from liability to an intercollegiate baseball player who was struck by a pitch, even if the pitch was thrown at the player intentionally. The Court determined that the risk of being hit with a pitch was inherent in the game of baseball, and despite the fact that the conduct was in violation of the official rules of the game, intentionally throwing a pitch at or near a batter was a recognized strategy that was part of the game [Avila v. Citrus Cmty. Coll. Dist. (2006) 38 Cal. 4th 148, 163-165, 41 Cal. Rptr. 3d 299, 131 P.3d 383] .

In Cheong v. Antablin, the Supreme Court applied the principles of duty and assumption of risk enunciated in Knight v. Jewett to collisions between recreational skiers. The Court restated the basic principles of Knight's lead opinion as the controlling law, and concluded that the principles of primary assumption of risk barred the action. In response to the plaintiff's argument that a local ordinance imposed a higher duty on the defendant than Knight established, the majority refused to consider whether a local ordinance can even modify the duty established by Knight, but held that in any event, the local ordinance in question did not modify that duty [Cheong v. Antablin (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 1063, 1068-1070, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 859, 862-863, 946 P.2d 817 ; see also Domenghini v. Evans (1997) 61 Cal. App. 4th 118, 121-122, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 917 (classifying cattle roundup as sporting event and barring participant's negligence action on the basis of primary assumption of the risk)].

The primary assumption of risk doctrine protects a party who is pursuing a sport in an appropriate venue from liability for an injury to another party who is engaged in a different activity in the same venue. A plaintiff who knowingly engages in his or her own activity in a particular venue assumes the risk of injury caused by a party who is vigorously engaged in a different activity in the same venue [Mastro v. Petrick (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 83, 90, 112 Cal. Rptr. 2d 185] . Therefore, the question of whether a defendant in such a case is liable hinges on whether the defendant's conduct was so reckless as to fall outside the range of ordinary activity involved in the defendant's sport [Mastro v. Petrick (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 83, 89-91, 112 Cal. Rptr. 2d 185 (primary assumption of risk protected snowboarder from liability for injury to skier); but see Lackner v. North (2006) 135 Cal. App. 4th 1188, 1200-1201, 37 Cal. Rptr. 3d 863 (triable issue existed as to whether snowboarder acted recklessly by boarding at high rate of speed into flat area used for resting between runs without looking ahead for skiers who were resting)].

The rule that defendants generally have a duty to use due care not to increase the risks to a participant over and above those inherent in the sport, also applies in instances involving spectators. Thus, while foul balls may represent an inherent, and under Knight, an assumed risk to spectators attending baseball games, the owners of the team have a duty not to increase those risks [Lowe v. California League of Prof'l Baseball (1997) 56 Cal. App. 4th 112, 119, 123, 65 Cal. Rptr. 2d 105 (triable issue of fact whether team's mascot cavorting in stands and distracting spectator's attention while baseball game was in progress constituted negligence by increasing inherent risk of spectator being struck by foul ball)]. Another court of appeal opinion applied the same standard, but concluded that a professional hockey club, the league, and the owners and operators of the hockey arena owed no duty to a spectator to protect her from being hit in the face by a flying puck during pregame warm-ups, because such a risk was inherent in attending a game [Nemarnik v. Los Angeles Kings Hockey Club (2002) 103 Cal. App. 4th 631, 643, 127 Cal. Rptr. 2d 10] . The court in that case also concluded that obstructions of view caused by the unpredictable movements of other fans are an inherent and unavoidable part of attending a sporting event [Nemarnik v. Los Angeles Kings Hockey Club (2002) 103 Cal. App. 4th 631, 638, 127 Cal. Rptr. 2d 10] .

Under the doctrine of primary assumption of risk, the defendant has a duty not to increase the risks inherent in a sport, not to decrease the risks that are inherently present. For example, a Little League Baseball association had no duty to reduce the risk of injury from being struck by a baseball, a risk inherent in the sport, by providing helmets with face guards, if the face guard was not a part of the normal safety equipment used by the League [Balthazor v. Little League Baseball, Inc. (1998) 62 Cal. App. 4th 47, 52, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 337] . Similarly, the League had no duty to provide safety glasses to help reduce the risk of players getting hit bya fly ball that they have lost sight of in the glare of the sun, the risk of which is an inherent part of the game of baseball [West v. Sundown Little League of Stockton, Inc. (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 351, 359, 116 Cal. Rptr. 2d 849] .

[ii] Non-Contact and "Teamless" Sports

The doctrine of primary assumption of the risk is not limited to situations involving contact sports or other sports where the defendant is an opponent. For example, the doctrine is applicable to "teamless" endeavors such as golf or sportfishing, where one participates in close proximity with others similarly engaged [Shin v. Ahn (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 482, 486, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 803, 165 P.3d 581 ; Mosca v. Lichtenwalter (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 551, 554, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 58 ; see also Shelly v. Stepp (1998) 62 Cal. App. 4th 1288, 1294, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 323 (primary assumption of risk applied to injury sustained by rider of racehorse at track); Staten v. Superior Court (1996) 45 Cal. App. 4th 1628, 1634, 53 Cal. Rptr. 2d 657 (applying primary assumption of risk to sport of figure skating)].

The court of appeal has defined a "sport" for primary assumption of risk purposes as an activity done for enjoyment or thrill, requiring physical exertion as well as elements of skill and involving a challenge containing a potential risk of injury [Record v. Reason (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 472, 482, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 547 (water "tubing" was sport for primary assumption of risk purposes); see also Moser v. Ratinoff (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 1211, 1220-1221, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 198 (noncompetitive, organized bicycle ride on public highway was sport subject to primary assumption of risk analysis)]. Applying this definition, one court of appeal opinion held that taking passengers for a ride around a lake on a boat was not a sport covered by the primary assumption of risk doctrine [Shannon v. Rhodes (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 792, 800-801, 112 Cal. Rptr. 2d 217]. Similarly, the court of appeal held in another case that primary assumption of risk was not a defense in an action brought against a yacht club by a boat passenger who broke his leg when he jumped off of the boat in an attempt to help in tying off the boat as it was returning to the dock. The court concluded that plaintiff passenger was not engaged in an active sport and any comparison of the negligence of the respective parties was a question of fact still to be resolved [Kindrich v. Long Beach Yacht Club (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 1252, 1255, 1262-1263, 84 Cal. Rptr. 3d 824].

In another case, by contrast, the court of appeal held that the primary assumption of risk doctrine applies to the activity of riding a personal watercraft, even if the rider is merely a passenger and the watercraft is being operated at a modest speed. The court noted that a personal watercraft is open to the elements, with no hull or cabin, and is designed for high performance, speed, and quick turning maneuvers. In addition, unlike the benign activity of riding in a boat, riding a personal watercraft requires some physical exertion and balance by the passenger to hold onto the operator, or grips or handles, to avoid being thrown off the vessel [Truong v. Nguyen (2007) 156 Cal. App. 4th 865, 887-891, 67 Cal. Rptr. 3d 675].

Some activities that could be a "sport" covered by the primary assumption of risk doctrine are not always considered a covered sport under all circumstances. In one case, for example, the court of appeal held that the act of riding a "scooter" on a residential sidewalk was not necessarily a recreational activity covered by the primary assumption of risk doctrine. The evidence in that case showed only that the plaintiff, an 11-year-old girl, was riding her scooter on a residential sidewalk and fell over a three-inch-high sidewalk separation. In the absence of any evidence that the plaintiff was attempting a tricky maneuver, racing, or riding at any particular speed, the court held that the defendant was not entitled to summary judgment on the grounds of primary assumption of risk [Childs v. County of Santa Barbara (2004) 115 Cal. App. 4th 64, 70-71, 8 Cal. Rptr. 3d 823] .

[iii] Injuries Sustained During Practice

For participation to fall within the primary assumption of risk category, the sporting activity need not be part of a competition, but may instead involve practice for the sport [Shelly v. Stepp (1998) 62 Cal. App. 4th 1288, 1294, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 323 (primary assumption of risk applied to injury sustained by exercise rider of racehorse at track); see also Aaris v. Las Virgenes Unified Sch. Dist. (1998) 64 Cal. App. 4th 1112, 1117-1118, 75 Cal. Rptr. 2d 801 (defense applied to injury sustained during cheerleader practice)]. For discussion of the effect of the primary assumption of risk doctrine on coaches, trainers, or instructors, see § 380.172[4][d].

[iv] Restricting Nature of Activity in Advance

The extent to which a plaintiff can unilaterally change the nature of a sport in advance through agreeing to participate in a less vigorous activity is not entirely settled. The Supreme Court in Knight concluded that a defendant's liability must be based on the nature of the sport itself, rather than on the particular plaintiff's subjective knowledge and expectations [Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 313, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696] . Although that approach may be justified in the context of a competitive sport, one court of appeal opinion concluded that a plaintiff's admonition to the defendant to go slow or "take it easy" prior to the plaintiff's riding on a water tube being towed behind a motorboat could not be used to change the inherent nature of the sport of water "tubing." That particular activity, according to the court, is inherently about trying to stay on the tube as it whips quickly through the water [Record v. Reason (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 472, 483-484, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 547] . As noted by the dissent in that case, however, this particular result is subject to criticism on the grounds that these words should have created a factual dispute as to exactly what risk the plaintiff assumed [Record v. Reason (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 472, 490-491, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 547] . The majority's approach in this particular case would carry more weight in the context of a competitive sport, in which there are multiple participants at once. However, in the context of water tubing, the only participant is arguably the person riding the tube, and that person should have been able to define the nature of the activity in advance.

[v] Effect of Violation of Statute or Local Ordinance

In Cheong v. Antablin [Cheong v. Antablin (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 1063, 1066, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 859, 946 P.2d 817] , the Supreme Court determined that a local ordinance, placing a duty on skiers to ski in a safe and reasonable manner, neither altered the rule that a skier owed a duty to fellow skiers not to injure them intentionally or to actrecklessly, nor abrogated the assumption of risk defense. The Court rejected plaintiff's argument that the ordinance imposed a higher duty of care on defendant than that established in Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696 ; although it recognized that Knight was a development of the common law of torts, and that the legislature could, within constitutional limits, choose to modify the common law by statute. Whether a local ordinance such as the instant one could modify Knight was, according to the Court, less clear. The Court did not decide this question here because it concluded that the ordinance did not modify the Knight standard even if it could. According to the Court, the ordinance evinced no clear intent to modify common law assumption of risk principles. The Court rejected plaintiff's argument that the assumption of the risk provisions of the ordinance were intended to protect ski area operators, not skiers, from liability for injuries due to negligent skiing, saying that nothing in the language of the ordinance limited the scope of those provisions in this fashion. Accordingly, it concluded that the ordinance by itself, did not give plaintiff a cause of action [Cheong v. Antablin (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 1063, 1066-1070, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 859, 946 P.2d 817] .

Plaintiff's second argument was that Evid. Code § 669(a) provided him with a cause of action in that (1) defendant violated an ordinance, (2) the violation caused his injury, (3) the ordinance was designed to prevent his injury, and (4) he was one of the class the ordinance was intended to protect. Relying heavily on Ford v. Gouin [Ford v. Gouin (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 339, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 30, 834 P.2d 724] , the plaintiff argued that if a plaintiff who is a participant in an active sport is also a member of the class of persons intended to be protected by a statute, then Evid. Code § 669 will in turn transform the statute into a legal duty of due care on the defendant, thus abrogating the assumption of risk defense. In response, the Court determined that there was no legal duty in this case because the elements of Evid. Code § 669(a) had not been met, specifically, plaintiff had not demonstrated that he was one of the class of persons the ordinance was intended to protect. By stating that skiers assumed the inherent risks of skiing, including the risk of collision and the risk that others would fail to ski within their own ability, the ordinance made clear that petitioner, who was injured in a collision with a fellow skier, was not one of the class of persons for whose protection the ordinance was adopted [Cheong v. Antablin (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 1063, 1071, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 859, 946 P.2d 817] .

NOTE:

In Cheong v. Antablin [Cheong v. Antablin (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 1063, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 859, 946 P.2d 817] , the California Supreme Court raised two issues of potential significance to an assumption of risk case involving an ordinance or statute, but declined to decide either. The first involved the question of whether an ordinance or statute could impose a higher duty of care on defendant than Knight established. The Court acknowledged that Knight was a development of the common law of torts, and that the legislature could, within constitutional limits, choose to modify the common law by statute. Whether a local ordinance such as the instant one could modify Knight was, according to the Court, less clear. However, the Court did not decide this question here because it concluded that the ordinance did not modify the Knight standard even if it could.

The second issue left open by the Court's opinion in Cheong was whether the breach of a statutory duty under Evid. Code § 669(a) would create tort liability between coparticipants in an active sport despite the Knight doctrine of primary assumption of risk. According to the Court, Justice Arabian's opinion in Ford implicitly assumed, and the opinions of Justice George, joined by Chief Justice Lucas, and Justice Mosk expressly concluded that, if the four elements of Evid. Code § 669(a) were satisfied, the statute created tort liability between coparticipants in an active sport, despite the Knight doctrine of primary assumption of risk. A number of the justices who signed the majority opinion in Cheong questioned whether this conclusion was correct. Three justices were of the opinion that Evid. Code § 669(a) only creates an evidentiary presumption of negligence, while the Knight doctrine, when applicable, provides that negligence alone is insufficient to impose tort liability. However, the Court did not resolve the issue because it determined that even if the conclusion was correct, the elements of Evid. Code § 669(a) had not been met in this case.

One court of appeal decision adopted the approach that a presumption of negligence under Evid. Code § 669(a) could not overcome the primary assumption of risk defense, because the primary assumption of risk defense protects against liability for conduct that is merely negligent [see Distefano v. Forester (2001) 85 Cal. App. 4th 1249, 1272-1274, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 813 (violation of standard of care provided by statutes governing off-road driving did not overcome primary assumption of risk defense, because negligence was insufficient basis for tort liability between participants in sport of off-roading)]. However, the court's analysis of the issue was dicta because the court had already held that the plaintiff failed to plead the issue at trial and could not amend his pleading on appeal [Distefano v. Forester (2001) 85 Cal. App. 4th 1249, 1266, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 813] .

At least one subsequent court of appeal opinion has adopted the conclusion of the Distefano court, based primarily on the fact that a majority of the California Supreme Court appeared to agree with that conclusion [Moser v. Ratinoff (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 1211, 1226, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 198] .

Another court of appeal opinion has subsequently held that provisions of the Harbors and Navigation Code governing the use of jet skis did not abrogate the primary assumption of risk doctrine, because the language of the statutes did not demonstrate a clear intent to do so [Whelihan v. Espinoza (2003) 110 Cal. App. 4th 1566, 1575, 2 Cal. Rptr. 3d 883 ; see Harb. & Nav. Code §§ 655(a), 655.7(c)]. The plaintiff in that case was driving a jet ski that collided with another driven by her friend. Although the statutes at issue in that case criminalize reckless or negligent operation of watercraft and were enacted after the Supreme Court's decision in Knight v. Jewett, the court concluded that the statutes did not prevent application of the primary assumption of risk doctrine to the active sport of jet skiing, which by its very nature involves skill and challenges that pose a significant risk of injury [Whelihan v. Espinoza (2003) 110 Cal. App. 4th 1566, 1573-1575, 2 Cal. Rptr. 3d 883] .

Because the plaintiff specifically pleaded only negligent conduct on the part of the defendant, the court rejected the plaintiff's argument that triable issues remained as to whether the defendant's conduct was so reckless as to be outside the range of the ordinary activity involved in jet skiing [Whelihan v. Espinoza (2003) 110 Cal. App. 4th 1566, 1575-1576, 2 Cal. Rptr. 3d 883 ; but see Huff v. Wilkins (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 732, 740-743, 746, 41 Cal. Rptr. 3d 754 (although plaintiff did not plead recklessness, summary judgment was inappropriate because defendants did not establish that their violation of statutory requirements governing operation of all-terrain vehicles (ATVs) by minors did not increase risk inherent in off-road ATV activity)]. A subsequent court of appeal opinion has reached the same result under similar facts [Peart v. Ferro (2004) 119 Cal. App. 4th 60, 78-82, 13 Cal. Rptr. 3d 885 (personal watercraft used by parties was not technically jet ski because it was equipped with seat)].

[vi] Relationship Between Parties

In Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696 , the Supreme Court held that a participant in an active sport owes only a limited duty of care to coparticipants; a duty to avoid intentional injury or conduct so reckless as to be totally outside the range of ordinary activity involved in the sport. In a case decidedsince Knight, the California Supreme Court clarified that the statement in Knight that "defendants generally do have a duty to use due care not to increase the risks to a participant over and above those inherent in the sport" did not impose a general duty on defendants not to increase the risk inherent in whatever sporting or recreational activity a plaintiff happens to be pursuing, regardless of the lack of relationship between the parties. On the contrary, Knight simply requires courts in each instance to examine the question of duty in light of the nature of the defendant's activities and the relationship of the parties to that activity. Thus, when parties have no relationship, and instead are independent actors separately pursuing their own activities, and there is no policy reason for imposing a duty, a defendant generally has no duty to avoid the risks inherent in a plaintiff's activity [Parsons v. Crown Disposal Co. (1997) 15 Cal. 4th 456, 482-483, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 291, 936 P.2d 70 (garbage company owed no duty to horseback rider to avoid increasing risks inherent in recreational horseback riding)].

The court of appeal applied these principles in a subsequent case in which the plaintiff was skateboarding in the driveway of the defendants' home when he tripped and impaled himself on a pipe inside a planter located in the driveway. Although the plaintiff argued that the defendants increased the risk of his injury by concealing a pipe in the planter, the court of appeal held that the defendants did not owe a duty to the plaintiff not to increase the risks to the plaintiff while he was skateboarding. Unlike a commercial facility that might provide a course for skateboarding, the defendants did not hold out their driveway as an appropriate or safe place to skateboard and did not otherwise have any organized relationship with the plaintiff's skateboarding [Calhoon v. Lewis (2000) 81 Cal. App. 4th 108, 116-117, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 394] .

[vii] Defining Conduct Outside Range of Ordinary Activity and Risks Inherent in Sport

Conduct that is totally outside the range of ordinary activity involved in a sport, or conduct that increases the risks to a participant beyond those inherent in the sport, does not bar recovery for injuries under the doctrine of primary assumption of risk [see § 380.172[4][a][i]]. Conduct is totally outside the range of ordinary activity involved in a sport, and any risks resulting from that conduct are not inherent to the sport, if the prohibition of the conduct would neither deter vigorous participation in the sport nor otherwise fundamentally alter the nature of the sport [Freeman v. Hale (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 1388, 1394, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 418] .

For example, in a case involving a defendant who collided with plaintiff on the ski slopes, the court held that defendant's consumption of alcohol while skiing was not an activity ordinarily involved in skiing; although collisions are an inherent risk of skiing and therefore defendant did not have a duty to avoid an inadvertent collision with plaintiff, defendant did have a duty to avoid increasing the risk of collision [Freeman v. Hale (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 1388, 1395, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 418] . Furthermore, the court noted that consumption of alcohol could be prohibited during or shortly before skiing without fundamentally altering the nature of the sport; such a prohibition would instead promote vigorous participation in the sport by permitting skiers to ski to the best of their physical abilities [Freeman v. Hale (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 1388, 1396, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 418] . Similarly, the court of appeal in another case held that requiring a snowboarder to watch where he or she is going and not engage in a snowball fight while snowboarding at a high rate of speed would not deter vigorous participation in the sport or otherwise fundamentally alter the nature of snowboarding [Mammoth Mountain Ski Area v. Graham (2006) 135 Cal. App. 4th 1367, 1373-1374, 38 Cal. Rptr. 3d 422 ; see also Yancey v. Superior Court (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 558, 565-566, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 777 (requiring discus throwers to ensure field was clear before throwing would not change nature of sport)]. Another court of appeal decision held that the operation of an all-terrain vehicle by a minor without first complying with reasonable safety regulations governing that operation increased the risks of injury to other operators beyond those inherent in the activity, and that imposing liability for this conduct would not chill vigorous participation in off-road, recreational all-terrain vehicle use [Huff v. Wilkins (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 732, 740-743, 41 Cal. Rptr. 3d 754] .

In contrast, an owner and operator of a ski resort had no duty to protect plaintiff, an intermediate to advanced level skier, from such risks inherent in the sport as encountering rough terrain, trees, rocks, and ravines. The defendant's general duty not to increase risks to skiers on its property over and above those inherent in the sport did not impose a duty on defendant to change the entire mountain to ensure plaintiff's safety [O'Donoghue v. Bear Mountain Ski Resort (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 188, 192-193, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 467 ; see also Harrold v. Rolling J Ranch (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 578, 588, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 671 (stable operator as having no duty to provide "ideal" horses that never made sudden movements because imposing duty would put all such facilities out of business); and Domenghini v. Evans (1997) 61 Cal. App. 4th 118, 121-122, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 917 (owners of calf have no duty to protect participant in cattle roundup from injury because kicking and head butting are inherent risks of participation in this activity); but see Van Dyke v. S.K.I. Ltd. (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 1310, 1317, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 775 (summary judgment for ski resort operator reversed when plaintiff's evidence supported argument that risk of harm to skiers was increased through dangerous placement of signpost in ski run)].

A golfer who injures another golfer with an an errant golf shot may defend against liability on the basis of the primary assumption of risk doctrine, so long as the defendant golfer did not intend to injure the other golfer or engage in conduct so reckless as to be totally outside the range of ordinary activity involved in the sport [Shin v. Ahn (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 482, 497, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 803, 165 P.3d 581] . The violation of a golfing rule of etiquette by the defendant does not in and of itself establish a basis for liability [Shin v. Ahn (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 482, 497, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 803, 165 P.3d 581] . For example, the failure to yell "fore" before hitting a shot, while possibly negligent, is not reckless nor does it alter the inherent risk of being struck by an errant shot [Dilger v. Moyles (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 1452, 1456] . Similarly, while rules of golfing etiquette state that a player should ensure that no one is standing close by or in a position to be hit when making a shot, the risk of being hit with an errant ball is inherent in the sport and whether the defendant acted recklessly when injuring another golfer with an errant shot depends on the totality of circumstances. While a golfer cannot just ignore other players whenmaking a shot, once having checked to see if others are reasonably likely to be struck and having concluded that it is safe to hit, a golfer who then concentrates on the ball in order to make the shot is not required to break his or her concentration in order to check the field again [Shin v. Ahn (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 482, 497-500, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 803, 165 P.3d 581] . Factors that may bear on whether a golfer's conduct was reasonable, negligent, or reckless may include the golfer's skill level, whether topographical conditions obscure the golfer's view, what steps the golfer took to determine whether anyone was within range, and the distance and angle between plaintiff and defendant when the shot was made [Shin v. Ahn (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 482, 500, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 803, 165 P.3d 581] .

An inherent risk of harm may exist despite the presence of safety measures. The question whether a sport can be made safer if certain techniques are used bears on the standard of care, and is a question that is reached only if the threshold question of duty is resolved against the defendant. For example, a sportfisherman whose fishing line became entangled in kelp and slingshotted over the boat rail injuring plaintiff, owed no duty to plaintiff even though the danger could have been minimized if specific techniques were used to free the line [Mosca v. Lichtenwalter (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 551, 554, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 58] .

[b] Coaches, Trainers, Instructors, or Persons in Control of Activity

Similar to the duty owed by participants in competitive sports, coaches, trainers, and instructors owe a limited duty of care to those they instruct not to increase the risks inherent in learning the particular sport [Rodrigo v. Koryo Martial Arts (2002) 100 Cal. App. 4th 946, 956, 961, 122 Cal. Rptr. 2d 832 (tae kwon do instructor did not increase risk of sport by having students wait in line to perform kick, even if inadequate supervision allowed one student to accidentally kick another while waiting in line)]. Generally, determining liability based on the defendant's status as an instructor hinges on the facts surrounding the participants' levels of experience and/or their relationships to one another in the activity undertaken, rather than merely the labels given to the participants [Regents of Univ. of Cal. v. Superior Court (1996) 41 Cal. App. 4th 1040, 1046, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 922] . Moreover, a student's subjective expectation that he or she would not be injured during the activity is irrelevant to application of the primary assumption of risk doctrine in this context. Instead, the scope of the instructor's duty is determined by the nature of the sport and the parties' relationship to the sport and to each other [Rodrigo v. Koryo Martial Arts (2002) 100 Cal. App. 4th 946, 957-959, 122 Cal. Rptr. 2d 832] .

Therefore, the primary assumption of risk doctrine was successfully invoked in a case in which a student in a rock climbing class was killed in a fall when his supporting ropes came free during a rock climbing exercise. In that particular case, the court concluded that the student had not been taken beyond his level of experience or capability during the activity that lead to the fall, and that the risk of such a fall was inherent in the sport [Regents of Univ. of Cal. v. Superior Court (1996) 41 Cal. App. 4th 1040, 1046-1047, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 922] . In another case, primary assumption of risk was a bar to recovery against the employer of the instructors of a noncontact football class when a participant was injured in an unintentional collision with another player, since the instructors did nothing to increase the dangers inherent in the game [Fortier v. Los Rios Cmty. Coll. Dist. (1996) 45 Cal. App. 4th 430, 436-439, 52 Cal. Rptr. 2d 812] .

The mere fact that a student participant may have, in hindsight, been pushed beyond his or her capabilities, or required to perform without adequate instruction, will not preclude application of the primary assumption of risk doctrine, at least absent reckless conduct that is totally outside the range of ordinary activity involved in teaching or coaching or an intent to injure by the instructor [Kahn v. East Side Union High Sch. Dist. (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 990, 1011, 4 Cal. Rptr. 3d 103, 75 P.3d 30 ; Hamilton v. Martinelli & Assocs. (2003) 110 Cal. App. 4th 1012, 1022-1024, 2 Cal. Rptr. 3d 168 (trainer at required self-defense training course for probation officer employed at youth detention facility not liable for injuring officer during training maneuver); Bushnell v. Japanese-Am. Religious & Cultural Ctr. (1996) 43 Cal. App. 4th 525, 531-532, 50 Cal. Rptr. 2d 671 (primary assumption of risk precluded liability to student injured during judo instruction); see also Lupash v. City of Seal Beach (1999) 75 Cal. App. 4th 1428, 1439-1441, 89 Cal. Rptr. 2d 920 (coach's urging tired lifeguard student to continue was normal in youth sports and did not constitute recklessness or show intent to cause injury)]. In one case, for example, the California Supreme Court held that a high school swimming coach and a school district were not entitled to summary judgment because there were triable issues of fact as to whether the coach was reckless in requiring the plaintiff, a 14-year-old swimmer, to dive into a shallow racing pool without adequate instruction. The plaintiff, who hit the bottom of the pool while performing the dive, presented evidence that she had not received any instruction from her coach on how to perform the dive safely, even though the dive was considered one of the riskiest maneuvers in the sport. She also presented evidence that the coach knew that she had a deep-seated fear of performing the dive, had previously promised her she would not have to make the dive, and had waited until the beginning of a competitive meet to inform her that she had the choice of either making the dive or not competing with the team [Kahn v. East Side Union High Sch. Dist. (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 990, 1011-1013, 4 Cal. Rptr. 3d 103, 75 P.3d 30] .

In another case, by contrast, primary assumption of risk was successfully invoked by a school district to defend against liability for an arm injury sustained by a student during supervised wrestling practice while engaged in a maneuver with the instructor. The court held that the risk of such an injury was inherent in the sport of wrestling, and the fact that the injury was sustained while practicing a maneuver with the instructor, who may have pushed the student beyond his capabilities, did not remove the risk from that which was to be normally anticipated in the activity [Lilley v. Elk Grove Unified Sch. Dist. (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 939, 943-944, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 638 ; see also Kane v. National Ski Patrol Sys., Inc. (2001) 88 Cal. App. 4th 204, 214, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 600 (ski instructor's assessment errors in evaluating skill level of students or difficulty of conditions of terrain did not rise to level of recklessness sufficient to overcome primary assumption of risk doctrine)].

However, if imposition of a duty of care would not fundamentally alter the nature of the sporting activity, the primary assumption of risk defense does not apply. In onecase, for example, a seventh-grade student in a physical education golf class was inadvertently hit in the face by a golf club swung by another student. The student sued the instructor and the school district, alleging negligent supervision, and the court of appeal held that the primary assumption of risk doctrine did not apply. The court concluded that being hit in the head by a golf club was not an inherent risk of the game of golf and that imposing a prudent person duty of care on the defendants would not fundamentally alter the game of golf, chill vigorous participation in the sport, or chill a coach's ability to challenge student athletes to push themselves [Hemady v. Long Beach Unified School Dist. (2006) 143 Cal. App. 4th 566, 576-579, 49 Cal. Rptr. 3d 464] .

A coach, trainer, or instructor is not an insurer, and a student must exercise due care for his or her own safety by noticing that which is obvious, and by asking appropriate questions [Tan v. Goddard (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 1528, 1534-1535, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 89 ; see also Ferrari v. Grand Canyon Dories (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 248, 253-257, 38 Cal. Rptr. 2d 65 (summary judgment for defendant river rafting company upheld on basis of primary assumption of risk in suit brought by customer injured while rafting with guide)]. Thus, even when primary assumption of risk may not apply, secondary assumption of risk may apply if the student's voluntary action in encountering a danger caused by the coach's, trainer's, or instructor's breach of duty is a cause of the student's injury [see Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 310, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696] .

Application of secondary assumption of risk principles to determine the liability of instructors and coaches is proper when the instructor or coach fails to provide a safe environment in which to perform the activity without unnecessary risk [see Bushnell v. Japanese-Am. Religious & Cultural Ctr. (1996) 43 Cal. App. 4th 525, 532-534, 50 Cal. Rptr. 2d 671] . For example, a student at a jockey training school who was injured when the horse he was riding fell was not barred from recovering from the school and one of its trainers. The trainer knew that the horse had injured its foot and was not walking normally, but nevertheless instructed the student to ride the horse on a rocky track. Summary judgment for the school and the trainer was reversed because there was a triable issue regarding whether the trainer had breached his duty to ensure that the horses he assigned the student to ride were reasonably safe to ride under the conditions the trainer prescribed [Tan v. Goddard (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 1528, 1531, 1534-1535, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 89 ; see also Giardino v. Brown (2002) 98 Cal. App. 4th 820, 834, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 77 (company that provided riding horses to Girl Scout camp owed duty not to knowingly or without due care provide horses inappropriate for beginning riders at children's camp, and triable issue existed as to whether defendant breached duty)].

Similarly, secondary assumption of risk applied in a case involving an experienced horse show competitor who was injured while practicing jumps at a riding club. An instructor at the club raised the height of the jumps without lengthening the distance between obstacles; when the plaintiff followed the instructor's directions to ride through the course in a reverse direction, her horse landed too close to an obstacle, knocked it down, and popped up into the air, causing her to lose her balance and fall. The plaintiff was entitled to have the trier of fact consider comparative fault principles, because the instructor (and the riding club that employed her) had breached their duty to plaintiff to ensure that the jumps were not beyond the capacity of horse and rider [Galardi v. Seahorse Riding Club (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 817, 820, 822-823, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 270] .

A duty of care to participants similar to that imposed on a coach, trainer, or instructor also applies to others who are not participants or proprietors, but who are in control of an athletic or sporting activity. These persons have a duty to the participants not to increase the risks inherent in the activity; for example, they have a duty not to supply faulty equipment [Bjork v. Mason (2000) 77 Cal. App. 4th 544, 552-556, 92 Cal. Rptr. 2d 49 (general negligence rules apply to providing equipment and triable issue of fact existed as to whether defendant owed duty not to provide defective rope used in water tubing); see Saffro v. Elite Racing, Inc. (2002) 98 Cal. App. 4th 173, 179, 119 Cal. Rptr. 2d 497 (organizers of marathon have duty to runners to provide adequate water and electrolyte fluids along 26-mile course)], as well as a duty not to provide equipment designed in such a way as to increase the risks inherent in the sport [Sanchez v. Hillerich & Bradsby Co. (2002) 104 Cal. App. 4th 703, 715, 128 Cal. Rptr. 2d 529 (particular baseball bat design substantially increased risk that pitcher would be hit by line drive)]. Similarly, the primary assumption of risk doctrine will not insulate an equipment manufacturer from liability for supplying defective equipment [Ford v. Polaris Indus., Inc. (2006) 139 Cal. App. 4th 755, 770-775, 43 Cal. Rptr. 3d 215 (jet ski manufacturer could be liable for defective design); Bunch v. Hoffinger Indus., Inc. (2004) 123 Cal. App. 4th 1278, 1300, 20 Cal. Rptr. 3d 780 (manufacturer of swimming pool liner not shielded from liability for failing to warn of hazards of diving into shallow pool)].

A person is not a coparticipant if he or she is merely observing and not actively engaged in the activity [Wattenbarger v. Cincinnati Reds, Inc. (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 746, 754 & n.6 , cf. Parsons v. Crown Disposal Co. (1997) 15 Cal. 4th 456, 481-483, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 291, 936 P.2d 70 (absent relationship between parties or other policy reason for imposing duty, opinion in Knight does not impose on defendant general duty to avoid increasing risksinherent in plaintiff's activity when defendant is not participating in activity in which plaintiff is engaging)]. Thus, employees of a major-league baseball team ata tryout camp did not become coparticipants by deciding what would be done and when, determining who would play what positions and for how long, supplying the equipment, and eliminating players with injuries from participating further in the tryout [Wattenbarger v. Cincinnati Reds, Inc. (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 746, 754, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 732] .

The primary assumption of risk doctrine has been applied to injuries sustained by minors participating in sports activities under the supervision of adult instructors. [see, e.g., Aaris v. Las Virgenes Unified Sch. Dist. (1998) 64 Cal. App. 4th 1112, 1115-1118, 75 Cal. Rptr. 2d 801] . It would seem anomalous to apply the primary assumption of risk doctrine to preclude a plaintiff who is a minor from recovering for an injury, when the same minor would have the right to disaffirm an express release from liability signed before the injury [see Fam. Code § 6710]. However, since parents are oftenrequired to sign a release on behalf of a child who is a minor before the child may engage in many organized sports activities, it should be noted that a minor may not disaffirm on the grounds of minority an express assumption of risk signed by a parent [see Aaris v. Las Virgenes Unified Sch. Dist. (1998) 64 Cal. App. 4th 1112, 1120, 75 Cal. Rptr. 2d 801 (release signed by parent barred recovery for injury to minor sustained during cheerleader practice when, under particular facts, application of primary assumption of risk doctrine resulted in conclusion that school had violated no duty of care); Hohe v. San Diego Unified Sch. Dist. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 1559, 1565, 274 Cal. Rptr. 647 ; see also § 380.171[7]].

A coach or other person in charge of an activity does not necessarily owe a duty of care to protect third parties from injury caused by sporting participants under the instruction of that coach. In one case, for example, the coach of a high school snowboarding team had no duty to protect an unaffiliated skier from the inherent risk of a collision with a member of the coach's team. The coach had told his team members to warm up "slow and easy" and meet him at a specified part of the ski run, and he did nothing to increase the risks inherent in the activity. The snowboarding team member who had the collision was an experienced snowboarder with no history of reckless snowboarding. The mere fact that the coach was not personally supervising the students at the time of the collision did not support a finding that the coach owed that skier a duty of care [Lackner v. North (2006) 135 Cal. App. 4th 1188, 1205-1207, 37 Cal. Rptr. 3d 863] .

[c] Application to Non-Sporting Activities

The primary assumption of risk doctrine, as articulated in Knight and subsequent cases, is not limited in its application to cases involving sporting activities. The doctrine may be applied, on a case-by-case basis, to other activities in which conditions or conduct that otherwise might be viewed as dangerous are an integral part of the activity [Saville v. Sierra Coll. (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 857, 867, 871, 36 Cal. Rptr. 3d 515] . For example, the firefighter's rule discussed in § 380.173 is one application of the assumption of risk doctrine outside of the sports context.

As another example, the primary assumption of risk doctrine was applied in a case in which a student in a community college police officer training class was injured while participating in training exercises demonstrating police officer arrest and control maneuvers. The court of appeal noted that the risk of injury was inherent in the physically demanding maneuvers and that the instructors had no duty to eliminate all risk of injury to the students, because doing so would invariably chill vigorous participation in the training exercises [Saville v. Sierra Coll. (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 857, 868-869].

Similarly, fitness training under the guidance of a personal trainer is a physical activity involving an element of risk or danger to which the primary assumption of risk doctrine may be applied [Rostai v. Neste Enters. (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 326, 333, 41 Cal. Rptr. 3d 411] . The risks of injury inherent in fitness training may include injury to the obvious muscles, such as those in the legs and arms, but also to less obvious areas, such as the heart. For example, a personal trainer successfully defended on the basis of primary assumption of risk in a case in which a client suffered a heart attack due to overexertion during his first workout with the trainer. Although the client argued that the primary assumption of risk doctrine did not apply to the activity, the court disagreed, and the court concluded that the trainer did nothing more than push the client beyond his comfort level, which was inherent in the training regimen and consistent with the goals of the activity [Rostai v. Neste Enters. (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 326, 333-334, 41 Cal. Rptr. 3d 411] .

In another case, primary assumption of risk was a defense when plaintiff was injured by co-participants in a "product toss" at a skateboarding competition sponsored by a skateboard store. In this particular product toss, professional skateboarders who had been performing at the event in the store's parking lot threw a skateboard deck (a skateboard without wheels or other hardware) into a crowd of fans located in a designated area, who were to compete with each other to gain possession of the board. Plaintiff, who was a willing participant, initially caught the board, but eventually fell to the ground and was injured by other participants, some of whom fell on top of him. Concluding that primary assumption of risk was a complete defense to plaintiff's negligence suit against the store, the court of appeal noted that the product toss had aspects of a competitive sporting activity and the inherent risk of injury from participating was self-evident, despite plaintiff's claim that he personally did not appreciate the risk of injury [McGarry v. Sax (2008) 158 Cal. App. 4th 983, 1000, 70 Cal. Rptr. 3d 519].

Conversely, in another case, the court of appeal held that the primary assumption of risk doctrine provided a complete defense to the possessors of land upon which a "Burning Man" festival was held when a participant tripped and fell after voluntarily entering the aftermath of a large, man-shaped bonfire. An experienced participant in the festival, plaintiff walked into the remnants of the large fire in order to ceremoniously burn a photograph of a recently deceased friend. The court held that plaintiff was aware of the risks inherent in walking into the remnants of the fire, which was still actively burning in spots, and that the risk of falling and being burned was inherent, obvious, and necessary to the event [Beninati v. Black Rock City, LLC (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 650, 658-659, 96 Cal. Rptr. 3d 105]. The fact that plaintiff could not see beneath the flames and ash that covered the ground did not render the risk of tripping less obvious. The court also concluded that plaintiff had failed to provide any evidence that defendant had done anything to increase the risk of harm inherent in the activity [Beninati v. Black Rock City, LLC (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 650, 660-661, 96 Cal. Rptr. 3d 105].

By comparison, the court of appeal held that the primary assumption of risk defense did not apply to an injury sustained by an adult education student taking a truck driving training course who was injured when loading a flatbed truck without supervision by an instructor. The court of appeal first rejected the school district's contention that the activity was inherently dangerous as a matter of law, then concluded that imposing a duty of care to supervise would not impermissibly chill participation in that particular activity. To the contrary, the court concluded that public policy favored requiring proper instruction and supervision when inexperienced students are asked to load flatbed trucks [Patterson v. Sacramento City Unified School Dist. (2007) 155 Cal. App. 4th 821, 840-842, 66 Cal. Rptr. 3d 337] .

[5] Application of Secondary Assumption of Risk if Duty of Care Exists

In a case in which the plaintiff, a tenant in the defendant's apartment complex, slipped and fell on a sloping lawn near his apartment that both he and thedefendant knew was hazardous because other people had previously slipped and fallen there, the court applied the duty analysis of the lead opinion in Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 309, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696 and held that the case fell into the "secondary assumption of risk" category in which comparative negligence principlesdetermine the relative fault of the parties. The court observed that the evidence showed, and the jury found, that the defendant had a duty of care to the plaintiff to eliminate dangerous conditions on its property, that the defendant breached that duty by maintaining the sloping lawn despite reports of earlier accidents, and that by walking across the lawn the plaintiff knowingly proceeded to encounter the risk created by the defendant [Curties v. Hill Top Developers, Inc. (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 1651, 1656, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 445] .

Similarly, a case in which a firefighter fell on wet steps while conducting a fire safety inspection of a public housing authority's apartment building was held to be a "secondary assumption of risk" case. The court held that the housing authority had a duty to tenants and visitors to maintain its premises in reasonably safe condition, and therefore a jury must decide whether the authority had breached that duty by not installing skid-resistant treads and by leaving the stairs wet and slippery. The plaintiff was not automatically barred from recovering because he chose to traverse the wet steps, but this fact could be considered by the jury in determining comparative fault [Donohue v. San Francisco Hous. Auth. (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 658, 665-666, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 148] .

Although the owner of a golf course has a duty to provide a reasonably safe course and not increase the risk inherent in golfing, the owner may be entitled to summary judgment on the basis of primary assumption of risk in an action alleging negligent course design, if the court finds as a matter of law that the design of the course did not increase the risks inherent in the sport [see American Golf Corp. v. Superior Court (2000) 79 Cal. App. 4th 30, 38-39, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 683 (no triable issue of fact as to whether construction and placement of yardage markers increased risk of getting struck with errant shot)]. However, if a triable issue of fact exists as to whether the design of the course violated the duty to provide a reasonably safe golf course, secondary assumption of risk principles may govern the action, and summary judgment would be inappropriate [see Morgan v. FUJI Country USA, Inc. (1995) 34 Cal. App. 4th 127, 134, 40 Cal. Rptr. 2d 249 (plaintiff alleged that golf course owner had breached duty of care by not reasonably protecting golfers teeing off on one hole from being hit by golf balls from adjacent hole)].

§ 380.173 Firefighter's Rule

[1] No Recovery by Firefighter or Public Safety Officer for Negligence Necessitating Presence

The firefighter's rule provides that a person who has started a fire is not liable for injuries sustained by a firefighter who is summoned to fight the fire [see Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 309-310 n.5, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696] . The firefighter's rule also is applicable to police officers and bars their recovery for injuries incurred as a result of conduct thatnecessitated their presence at the scene [Walters v. Sloan (1977) 20 Cal. 3d 199, 202, 142 Cal. Rptr. 152, 571 P.2d 609 ; Gibb v. Stetson (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 1008, 1010 n.2, 245 Cal. Rptr. 283] .

Courts have extended application of the firefighter's rule to public safety officers other than firefighters and police officers. For example, the rule has been applied to publicly-employed lifeguards, because the only discernible difference between firefighters and lifeguards is that they respond to different types of hazards and emergencies [City of Oceanside v. Superior Court (2000) 81 Cal. App. 4th 269, 279-280, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 621] . In addition, the firefighter's rule applies not only to the risk of injury while responding to an emergency situation, but extends to apply to the risk of injury while training to respond to emergency situations [Hamilton v. Martinelli & Assocs. (2003) 110 Cal. App. 4th 1012, 1026, 2 Cal. Rptr. 3d 168 (trainer at required self-defense training course for probation officer employed at youth detention facility not liable for injuring officer during training maneuver)].

The rule has also been extended to veterinarians and their assistants who are attacked or bitten by animals receiving care and treatment while under their control [Cohen v. McIntyre (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 650, 655, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 143 ; Nelson v. Hall (1985) 165 Cal. App. 3d 709, 714, 211 Cal. Rptr. 668] . However, the California Supreme Court has noted that cases applying the rule to veterinarians and their assistants are on shaky ground if they are based on the plaintiff's subjective acceptance of the foreseeable occupational hazard of dog bites. Such an application of the rule may be sound only if it is based on defendant's relationship with plaintiff, and defendant's conduct in entrusting an animal to plaintiff's professional care and control [Neighbarger v. Irwin Indus., Inc. (1994) 8 Cal. 4th 532, 545, 34 Cal. Rptr.

2d 630, 882 P.2d 347 ; see also Davis v. Gaschler (1992) 11 Cal. App. 4th 1392, 1401, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 679 ("veterinarian's rule" not applicable to professional dog breeder and handler bitten while acting as "Good Samaritan" in helping injured dog)].

In one case, for example, the California Supreme Court held that the assumption of risk doctrine is a defense to the imposition of strict liability under the dog bite statute if a kennel worker is bitten by a dog under the kennel's care. The Court recognized that the kennel was hired by the dog's owner to take careof the dog while the owner was away, which included taking the necessary steps and precautions to avoid being bitten or otherwise injured by the dog [Priebe v. Nelson (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 1112, 1130-1132, 47 Cal. Rptr. 3d 553, 140 P.3d 848 ; see Civ. Code § 3342 (dog bite statute)].

At least one court of appeal opinion has applied this general rule in a case involving, not a veterinarian, but the assistant of a professional shark handler who was bitten by defendant's shark while being employed to move the shark. The court of appeal analogized the situation to that of the veterinarian and concluded that defendant owed no duty to protect a professional shark handler or his or her crew from the very danger defendant employed the handler to confront [Rosenbloom v. Hanour Corp. (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 1477, 1480-1481 & n.4 , (noting that plaintiff's subjective appreciation of risk was irrelevant)].

Similarly, the firefighter's rule has been applied to private tow truck drivers whose duty it is to help motorists in cases of mechanical breakdown. An auto club tow truck driver's contract-based obligation, through amotorists' auto club membership, to help the motorist in case of mechanical breakdown, along with compelling policy considerations, warranted the conclusion, in at least one case, that a motorist owed no duty to a tow truck driver to keep his or her car in good mechanical condition [Dyer v. Superior Court (1997) 56 Cal. App. 4th 61, 69, 65 Cal. Rptr. 2d 85] .

The firefighter's rule is not actually a separate concept, but rather is an example of the application of the primary versus secondary assumption of risk doctrine set forth in Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 313-314, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696 : a legal determination of whether, based on the nature of the activity involved and the relationship of the parties to that activity, defendant owed plaintiff a duty of care [Neighbarger v. Irwin Indus., Inc. (1994) 8 Cal. 4th 532, 538, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 630, 882 P.2d 347 ; see § 380.172[2][b]]. The proper basis for the rule is not, as had been held before Knight, plaintiff's voluntary acceptance of a known risk of injury in the course of employment. Rather, the rule is based on a public policy determination that a person who negligently starts a fire does not owe a duty of care to protect the responding firefighter from the very danger that requires the firefighter's presence [Neighbarger v. Irwin Indus., Inc. (1994) 8 Cal. 4th 532, 541, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 630, 882 P.2d 347] .

The rule recognizes that most fires, and perhaps most crimes, are due at least in part to negligence. The policy bases of the rule preclude imposing tort liability on the average citizen who is compelled to call on police or fire personnel, who are experts retained with public funds to deal with inevitable, although negligently created, occurrences. This freedom from liability permits individuals who require police or fire department assistance to summon help without pausing to consider whether they will be held liable for consequences that, in most cases, are beyond their control [Neighbarger v. Irwin Indus., Inc. (1994) 8 Cal. 4th 532, 540, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 630, 882 P.2d 347 ; Seibert Sec. Servs., Inc. v. Superior Court (1993) 18 Cal. App. 4th 394, 406, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 514] .

The firefighter's rule applies to intentional acts, as well as to negligent and reckless acts, if they could reasonably have been foreseen by the firefighter or police officer when he or she embarked on a course of action [see City of Los Angeles v. O'Brian (1984) 154 Cal. App. 3d 904, 906-907, 201 Cal. Rptr. 561] . However, statutory exceptions now significantly limit the applicability of the rule in cases involving intentional misconduct [see Civ. Code § 1714.9; see § 380.173[4]].

[2] Applicability of Rule to Private Employees

The California Supreme Court has distinguished between publicly employed firefighters and private safety employees, and held that the firefighter's rule does not preclude a private safety employee from stating a cause of action against a third party who is not his or her employer for injuries caused by that third party's negligence in starting a fire [Neighbarger v. Irwin Industries, Inc. (1994) 8 Cal. 4th 532, 534-535, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 630, 882 P.2d 347]. The Court reasoned that by establishing public fire departments and taxing themselves to pay for their services, the public in effect has purchased exoneration from the duty of care and does not have to pay twice, through taxation and individual liability, for those services [Neighbarger v. Irwin Indus., Inc. (1994) 8 Cal. 4th 532, 542-543, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 630, 882 P.2d 347] . In contrast, a defendant whose negligence injures private safety employees employed by another does not have the same relationship with those private safety employees as a member of the public has with publicly employed firefighters, because the defendant has not paid in any way to be relieved of the duty of care owed toward the private employees. Another consideration supporting the distinction between publicly employed firefighters and private safety employees is that actions by publicly employed firefighters would involve costly litigation over subrogation that would ultimately be financed by the public and that would not benefit the firefighter, who receives retirement or workers' compensation benefits, whereas actions by private safety employees shift the loss from the innocent employees and their employer to the third party whose negligence caused the injuries [Neighbarger v. Irwin Indus., Inc. (1994) 8 Cal. 4th 532, 543, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 630, 882 P.2d 347] . A third distinction is that the public good is best served by a quick response to fires without questions about the fire's cause, which warrants eliminating the public's duty of care to publicly employed firefighters, but no similar concern justifies eliminating the duty of care owed by third parties to private safety employees [Neighbarger v. Irwin Indus., Inc. (1994) 8 Cal. 4th 532, 544, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 630, 882 P.2d 347] .

In drawing this distinction, the Court rejected the reasoning of a court of appeal decision [Holland v. Crumb (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 1844, 1852, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 366] applying the firefighter's rule to preclude recovery by a privately-employed tow truck driver who was struck by traffic while preparing to tow a disabled vehicle. The Court observed that the court of appeal had based its decision on the theory that the driver had assumed the foreseeable risk of his hazardous employment; noting that private employees do not assume all the foreseeable risks of their employment, the Court held that application of the firefighter's rule requires a closer analysis focusing on the relationship of the parties and defendant's duty of care [Neighbarger v. Irwin Indus., Inc. (1994) 8 Cal. 4th 532, 545 n.4, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 630, 882 P.2d 347 ; see also Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 313, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696 ; but see Bryant v. Glastetter (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 770, 784, 38 Cal. Rptr. 2d 291 (noting that Holland v. Crumb arrived at correct result, but declining to follow its reasoning and ruling intoxicated motorist not liable for death of tow truck driver because not reasonably foreseeable that driver would be killed by third party while attempting to remove motorist's car from side of freeway)].

Another, later court of appeal opinion stated that the footnote in Neighbarger v. Irwin Industries, Inc. [Neighbarger v. Irwin Indus., Inc. (1994) 8 Cal 4th 532, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 630, 882 P.2d 347] , in which the Supreme Court rejected the reasoning by which the court of appeal in Holland v. Crumb applied the firefighter's rule to claims by private tow truck operators, viewed in context, did not overrule the holding in Holland, nor was the footnote persuasive dictum that Holland was wrongly decided. However, the court declined to treat Holland as persuasive precedent, and instead analyzed the issue under general assumption of risk principles (noting that the firefighter's rule is only a specific application of the assumption of risk doctrine) [Dyer v. Superior Court (1997) 56 Cal. App. 4th 61, 67-68, 70, 65 Cal. Rptr. 2d 85] . The court concluded that, on the facts of the case, a motorist owed no duty to an auto club tow truck driver to maintain his car in running order, and that the assumption of risk doctrine barred plaintiff's claim for negligence against defendant. Plaintiff contended that this doctrine was inapplicable to him because he was not a public safety employee, and thus he did not receive the "special public compensation for confronting the dangers posed by the defendant's negligence" that the Neighbarger court identified as one of the policy bases for the firefighter's rule. The court of appeal ruled that Neighbarger did not support plaintiff's contention. According to the court, Neighbarger discussed in dicta applications of the assumption of risk doctrine to private workers, but did not decide the viability of these applications. Moreover, the Court in Neighbarger acknowledged that the firefighter's rule had been applied to some safety workers despite the absence of "special public compensation," and stated that in these cases, the crucial question was the relationship between the public and the safety workers. The court in Dyer held that the nature of defendant's relationship with plaintiff, together with compelling policy considerations, warranted the conclusion that defendant owed no duty to plaintiff [Dyer v. Superior Court (1997) 56 Cal. App. 4th 61, 73, 65 Cal. Rptr. 2d 85 ; see also Herrle v. Estate of Marshall (1996) 45 Cal. App. 4th 1761, 53 Cal. Rptr. 2d 713 (applying firefighter's rule to certified nurse's aides)].

[3] Exception for Injuries Resulting From Independent Act of Misconduct or Unrelated Risk

[a] Scope of Exception

The firefighter's rule is not applicable to an injury that is caused by a risk not normally associated with the police officer's or firefighter's presence on the defendant's premises [Lipson v. Superior Court (1982) 31 Cal. 3d 362, 369, 182 Cal. Rptr. 629, 644 P.2d 822 ; Seibert Sec. Servs., Inc. v. Superior Court (1993) 18 Cal. App. 4th 394, 407, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 514 (rule does not apply to police officer pursuing suspect who is injured due to dangerous condition on real property or to firefighter who falls through defectively maintained roof while fighting fire)]. Thus, recovery is proper if the officer's or firefighter's injury resulted from the defendant's separate and independent act that was not the original circumstance for which the officer or firefighter was called [Rose v. City of Los Angeles (1984) 159 Cal. App. 3d 883, 889, 206 Cal. Rptr. 49] .

For example, the firefighter's rule was not a defense to an action brought by a police officer against the wife of a man who shot the officer after he arrived on the scene. The wife had affirmatively misrepresented to the officer that her husband was not violent when she knew otherwise, and absent those misrepresentations, the officer would have responded differently [Boon v. Rivera (2000) 80 Cal. App. 4th 1322, 1329-1330, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 276] .

In another example, a police officer who was hit by an automobile driven by a prostitute's customer while he was arresting the prostitute was not precluded by the firefighter's rule from recovering for his injuries, because these injuries were not proximately caused by the conduct that necessitated his presence [Shaw v. Plunkett (1982) 135 Cal. App. 3d 756, 760, 185 Cal. Rptr. 571] .

Similarly, the rule did not bar a firefighter's recovery for injuries from slipping and falling on wet steps while inspecting a building for fire code violations, because the condition of the steps was not the risk that caused the firefighter's presence in the building [Donohue v. San Francisco Hous. Auth. (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 658, 663, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 148] .

Finally, the firefighter's rule did not apply to a claim against the manufacturer of an automatic garage door brought by a firefighter who was injured when the door failed to open, trapping the firefighter inside the garage while fighting a fire in the house. In that particular case, the garage door had nothing to do with creating the fire, and the plaintiff did not allege that the fire caused the garage door to malfunction [Stapper v. GMI Holdings, Inc. (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 787, 791-793, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 688 (policies supporting firefighter's rule did not apply to injury caused by allegedly defective door mechanism)].

Although the firefighter's rule generally applies only to conduct that necessitates the public safety officer's presence on the scene, and does not apply to independent acts of misconduct that occur after the officer arrives on the scene, the rule does apply if one public safety officer is negligently injured by another public safety officer employed by a different public entity while the two officers were jointly engaged in the discharge of their responsibilities [see Calatayud v. State of California (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1057, 1068-1072, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 202, 959 P.2d 360 ; City of Oceanside v. Superior Court (2000) 81 Cal. App. 4th 269, 280-284, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 621] .

Although application of the rule in those circumstances seems to extend the rule beyond its normal parameters, this extension should be construed narrowly. Application of the rule under those circumstances is probably properly viewed as a policy decision that public safety employees, whoreceive compensation and workers' compensation coverage for confronting the hazards of their employment, should not be able to bring suit against other negligent public safety employees or their employers for injuries sustained while engaging in their hazardous duties, merely because the negligent officer happens to be employed by a different public agency [see Calatayud v. State of California (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1057, 1068-1072, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 202, 959 P.2d 360 ; City of Oceanside v. Superior Court (2000) 81 Cal. App. 4th 269, 280-283, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 621] . For public safety employees employed by the same public agency, suit is barred by the exclusive remedy doctrine of the workers' compensation laws [see City of Oceanside v. Superior Court (2000) 81 Cal. App. 4th 269, 282, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 621] .

[b] Exception Not Applicable to Firefighters or Police Officers Encountering Hazards by Chance

Firefighters and police officers who have not been called to the scene of a fire or other emergency, but who have been injured while responding to an hazard that they encounter by chance in the course of their duties, have claimed that the independent act exception to the firefighter's rule applies to them because they were at a particular location for reasons unrelated to the hazard to which they responded. However, the courts have ruled that the exception does not apply in this situation; firefighters and police officers who respond to perceived risks in their professional capacity in order to protect the public cannot claim, simply because their presence at the scene was fortuitous rather than the result of a radio call or other summons, that their presence was independent of or unrelated to the cause of their injuries [Kelhi v. Fitzpatrick (1994) 25 Cal. App. 4th 1149, 1158-1159, 31 Cal. Rptr. 2d 182 ; Seibert Sec. Servs., Inc. v. Superior Court (1993) 18 Cal. App. 4th 394, 411, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 514] .

For example, a highway patrol officer in uniform who was driving to work on his official motorcycle was barred by the firefighter's rule from recovering for injuries caused by tires that broke off a pickup truck on the highway ahead of him. When the officer saw the truck lose its tires, he responded by turning on his flashers, checking traffic behind him to ensure that no vehicles ran into the tires, and asking the truck's driver to move onto the shoulder; after he moved around the truck to look for the tires, which were rolling down the highway, they veered, bounced off a retaining wall, and hit him. The risk that caused his injuries, the runaway tires, was not the conduct that brought him to that highway at that moment, but it was the risk that prompted his response as a police officer. His actions were the same as those he would have taken had he been summoned to the scene, and an officer called to the scene would have been barred from recovery by the firefighter's rule for a similar injury; therefore, the exception for unrelated or independent acts did not apply to allow his recovery for any negligence on the part of the truck's owner, driver, or manufacturer, that caused the tires to come off the truck [Kelhi v. Fitzpatrick (1994) 25 Cal. App. 4th 1149, 1152, 1158-1159, 31 Cal. Rptr. 2d 182] .

Similarly, the firefighter's rule barred recovery by a police officer who brought a suspect into a hospital for examination, was doing paperwork when he heard a cry for help from a private security guard being attacked by a mental patient, and was injured when he went to the guard's assistance. The guard's negligence in failing to restrain the mental patient was independent of and unrelated to the conduct that brought the officer to the hospital, but it was the immediate cause of his presence in the holding cell where the patient was attacking the guard [Seibert Sec. Servs., Inc. v. Superior Court (1993) 18 Cal. App. 4th 394, 411, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 514] .

[4] Statutory Exceptions Under Civ. Code § 1714.9

Civ. Code § 1714.9 provides that notwithstanding statutory or decisional law to the contrary, any person is responsible not only for the results of that person's willful acts causing injury to a peace officer, firefighter, or any emergency medical personnel employed by a public entity, but is also responsible for any injury occasioned to that person by the want of ordinary care or skill in the management of the person's property or person, in any of the following situations [Civ. Code § 1714.9(a)]:

- The conduct causing injury occurs after the person knows or should have known of the presence of the peace officer, firefighter, or emergency medical personnel [see Seibert Sec. Servs., Inc. v. Superior Court (1993) 18 Cal. App. 4th 394, 408-410, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 514 (exception can reasonably be applied to new conduct committed by person after officer has been summoned, but cannot be reasonably applied to conduct occurring while officer is present but before he or she has undertaken duties of protection or crime prevention)].

- The conduct causing injury violates a statute, ordinance, or regulation, and the conduct causing injury was itself not the event that precipitated either the response or presence of the peace officer, firefighter, or emergency medical personnel.

- The conduct causing injury was intended to injure the peace officer, firefighter, or emergency medical personnel.

- The conduct causing the injury is arson as defined by Penal Code § 451.

Although Civ. Code § 1714.9 uses the phrase "that person" to refer both to the person willfully injuring a peace officer, a firefighter, or emergency medical personnel, as well as to the person injured by negligence, it was intended to create, and has been applied as creating, an exception to the firefighter's rule for both willful and negligent acts that fell into any of its four categories [see, e.g., Gibb v. Stetson (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 1008, 1014-1016, 245 Cal. Rptr. 283 ; City of Redlands v. Sorensen (1985) 176 Cal. App. 3d 202, 208-211, 221 Cal. Rptr. 728] .

The exceptions contained in Civ. Code § 1714.9 are not exclusive; other judicially-created exceptions may also be applicable [Seibert Sec. Servs., Inc. v. Superior Court (1993) 18 Cal. App. 4th 394, 406, n.7, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 514 ; see § 380.173[3]].

The liability provided in Civ. Code § 1714.9(a)(1), described in the first paragraph listed above does not apply when a peace officer, firefighter, or emergency medical personnel is negligently injured by a fellow public safety member employed by a different public safety agency when the public safety personnel were jointly engaged in the discharge of their responsibilities [Calatayud v. State of California (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1057, 1064, 1072, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 202, 959 P.2d 360] . The court of appeal has extended this rationale to preclude application under those circumstances of the common law independent acts exception as well [City of Oceanside v. Superior Court (2000) 81 Cal. App. 4th 269, 280-283, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 621 ; see § 380.173[3]]. For these purposes, joint engagement between public service agencies does not require formal coordination between the agencies. It is sufficient that the officers from one agency were trying to assist officers from the other in their official duties [McElroy v. State of California (2002) 100 Cal. App. 4th 546, 548-549, 122 Cal. Rptr. 2d 612] .

The statutory exception for injury-causing conduct that occurs after the defendant knows or should know of the officer's presence at the scene applies only if the officer is injured by a separate, subsequent act of negligence other than the act that necessitated the officer's presence at the scene [Hamilton v. Martinelli & Assocs. (2003) 110 Cal. App. 4th 1012, 1027, 2 Cal. Rptr. 3d 168] . In one case, for example, the court of appeal held that a trainer at a self-defense training course required for a probation officer who worked at a youth detention facility was not liable for injuring the officer during a training maneuver. The court concluded that because the training necessitated the officer's presence at the scene, and because the alleged negligence occurred during the training, the alleged negligence was not a separate, subsequent act as required to impose liability under the statute [Hamilton v. Martinelli & Assocs. (2003) 110 Cal. App. 4th 1012, 1028, 2 Cal. Rptr. 3d 168] .

The additional liability created by Civ. Code § 1714.9 does not preclude reduction of an award of damages because of the comparative fault of the peace officer, the firefighter, or emergency medical personnel in causing the injury [Civ. Code § 1714.9(b)]. In addition, the liability imposed by Civ. Code § 1714.9 does not apply to an employer of a peace officer, a firefighter, or emergency service personnel [Civ. Code § 1714.9(d)]. The employer of a firefighter, a peace officer, or emergency medical personnel may, however, be subrogated to the rights granted by Civ. Code § 1714.9 to the extent of the workers' compensation benefits and other liabilities of the employer, including all salary, wage, pension, or other emolument paid to the employee or the employee's dependents [Civ. Code § 1714.9(c)].

§ 380.174 Workers' Compensation Act

A defendant in a negligence action may claim as an affirmative defense that he or she is one of the class of persons protected from an action at law by the provisions of the Workers' Compensation Act. Anyone asserting this affirmative defense bears the burden of pleading and proving the existence of the conditions of compensation set forth in the Act that are necessary to its application [Doney v. Tambouratgis (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 91, 96-97, 151 Cal. Rptr. 347, 587 P.2d 1160 ; see Lab. Code § 3600].

§ 380.192 Decisions

[1] Breach of Duty

[a] Effect of Custom

Custom in community does not necessarily establish how reasonable person must act, but is evidence to be considered in determining proper standard of care. Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 801, 809, 148 Cal. Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109

Rules, practices, and customs involved in activity in which defendant was participating at time of injury have direct bearing on question of negligence, although they do not of themselves establish standard of prudent conduct. Tucker v. Lombardo (1956) 47 Cal. 2d 457, 464, 303 P.2d 1041

Conformity with industry custom is no excuse for negligence unless industry practice is consistent with due care. Irelan-Yuba Gold Quartz Mining Co. v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1941) 18 Cal. 2d 557, 567, 116 P.2d 611

Evidence of custom in same trade or occupation admissible but not conclusive on question of ordinary care; conformity to general practice or custom is no excuse unless it is consistent with due care. Reagh v. San Francisco Unified Sch. Dist. (1953) 119 Cal. App. 2d 65, 70, 259 P.2d 43

[b] Professional Negligence

Degree of care and skill required to fulfill professional duty is ordinarily question of fact that may require testimony by professionals in field if matter is within knowledge of experts only. Carleton v. Tortosa (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 745,

754-755, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 734

[c] Standard of Care Owed by Children

Minor who was passenger in back seat of automobile involved in two-car collision not contributorily negligent, because she did not have driver's license, was not conversing with driver at time of accident, and was under no duty to observe traffic conditions on highway. Casey v. Russell (1982) 138 Cal. App. 3d 379, 386-387, 188 Cal. Rptr. 18

[d] Violation of Statute

Plaintiff thrown from horse after horse was frightened by loud noises from nearby garbage truck was not entitled to recover for negligence per se, because th ere was no evidence suggesting that defendant violated Veh. Code § 21759, right of way statute that imposed duty on driver of vehicle approaching ridden animal to exercise proper control of vehicle, and to reduce speed or stop as necessary or as requested by any person riding the animal; defendant's employee was not "driving" truck at time of accident, and truck was not "approaching" plaintiff; moreover, plaintiff neither signaled nor otherwise requested that defendant's employee cease operation of truck's lifting mechanism. Parsons v. Crown Disposal Co. (1997) 15 Cal. 4th 456, 484, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 291, 936 P.2d 70

Regulation permitting exercise of discretion and phrased in nonmandatory language may nevertheless form basis of negligence per se instruction, if defendant would be exposed to disciplinary action for ignoring suggestions of regulation. Clemente v. State of California (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 202, 215-216, 219 Cal. Rptr. 445, 707 P.2d 818 (guidelines concerning investigation of accidents by Highway Patrol officers)

Police officer called to enforce criminal statute was not within class of persons for whose protection statute was adopted. Hubbard v. Boelt (1980) 28 Cal. 3d 480, 486, 169 Cal. Rptr. 706, 620 P.2d 156

Presumption of negligence arises from violation of statute. Alarid v. Vanier (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 617, 621, 327 P.2d 897

Statute prohibiting parking vehicle on sidewalk was not designed to protect party from being struck by different vehicle, which jumped curb for reason unrelated to presence on sidewalk of illegally parked vehicle. Victor v. Hedges (1999) 77 Cal. App. 4th 229, 238, 91 Cal. Rptr. 2d 466

Property owners not entitled to judgment on negligence per se theory under Evid. Code § 669 on their cross-complaint against contractor for costs they incurred to repair work contractor had undertaken; building code provision on which they relied was designed to ensure safety and not to prevent owners from incurring costs associated with remedying building code violations. Morris v. Horton (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 968, 972-973, 27 Cal. Rptr. 2d 585

Court required to instruct jury on principles of negligence per se in case in which plaintiff was injured by run-away dog and sued dog's owners for violation of local ordinance forbidding dog owners to allow their dogs to wander loose on public streets; plaintiff not required to prove that dog's owners acted willfully and with mens rea. Delfino v. Sloan (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 1429, 1438-1440, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 265

Ordinance requiring abutting landowners to maintain public sidewalk creates duty to city, not to pedestrians; trial court instruction on negligence per se doctrine was error. Selger v. Steven Bros., Inc. (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 1585, 1590-1591, 272 Cal. Rptr. 544

If ordinance or statute is intended to protect certain class from particular risk of harm, violation of that statute or ordinance is per se breach of duty in absence of any excuse or justification for violation. City of Los Angeles v. Shpegel-Dimsey, Inc. (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 1009, 1021, 244 Cal. Rptr. 507

Presumption of negligence applicable only if injury was proximately caused by hazardous condition or violation of statute; proximate causation exists if there is reason to believe absence of condition or compliance with statute would have prevented or lessened likelihood of injury. City of Los Angeles v. Shpegel-Dimsey, Inc. (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 1009, 1021, 244 Cal. Rptr. 507

Instruction providing that violation of statute is not negligence if the usual reasonable person standard of care has been satisfied was error; instruction required to convey necessity for some special circumstances that justify violation of statute despite desire to comply with particular statute. Casey v. Russell (1982) 138 Cal. App. 3d 379, 385, 188 Cal. Rptr. 18

Burden on plaintiff to prove injury resulted from occurrence statute was designed to prevent; issue is one of law. Ronald M. v. White (1980) 112 Cal. App. 3d 473, 477, 169 Cal. Rptr. 370

Prerequisites to application of Evid. Code § 669, creating presumption of negligence from violation of statute or ordinance: (1) violation, (2) violation is proximate cause of injury, (3) injury resulted from occurrence that statute designed to prevent, and (4) injured party is member of class of persons for whose protection statute was adopted. Salinero v. Pon (1981) 124 Cal. App. 3d 120, 134, 177 Cal. Rptr. 204

Presumption of negligence raised by violation of statute rebutted if violator proves he or she did what might reasonably be expected of person of ordinary prudence, who desired to comply with law, acting under similar circumstances. Byrne v. City & County of San Francisco (1980) 113 Cal. App. 3d 731, 740, 170 Cal. Rptr. 302

Violation of statute or safety regulation does not expose one to liability for negligence unless violation proximately causes injury in question. Valdez v. J.D. Diffenbaugh Co. (1975) 51 Cal. App. 3d 494, 510, 124 Cal. Rptr. 467

Violation of statute does not impose strict or absolute tort liability, but creates rebuttable presumption of negligence. Beard v. Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Ry. Co. (1970) 4 Cal. App. 3d 129, 142, 84 Cal. Rptr. 449

[2] Causation

[a] Burden of Proof

Alternative liability doctrine of Summers v. Tice inapplicable when plaintiff cannot identify specific source of harm involved in injury. Setliff v. E.I. Du Pont de Nemours & Co. (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 1525, 1536, 38 Cal. Rptr. 2d 763 ; see also Klein v. Council of Chem. Ass'ns (E.D. Pa. 1984) 587 F. Supp. 213, 221 .

Market share theory of liability applicable only to fungible goods, such as drugs produced from identical formula. Setliff v. E.I. Du Pont de Nemours & Co. (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 1525, 1537, 38 Cal. Rptr. 2d 763 ; see Sindell v. Abbott Labs. (1980) 26 Cal. 3d 588, 611, 163 Cal. Rptr. 132, 607 P.2d 924

Courts reluctant to shift burden of proof to defendants under alternate liability rule of Summers v. Tice in asbestos litigation. Lineaweaver v. Plant Insulation Co. (1995) 31 Cal. App. 4th 1409, 1418, 37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 902

Burden of proof regarding causation does not shift to defendant unless defendant's failure to comply with mandatory requirement of statute or regulation prevents plaintiff from conclusively proving that injuries were proximately caused by that failure. Fagerquist v. Western Sun Aviation, Inc. (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 709, 723-726, 236 Cal. Rptr. 633

Plaintiff not required to establish causation with absolute certainty; sufficient to introduce evidence from which reasonable persons could conclude that it is more probable than not that defendant's conduct was cause. Valdez v. J.D. Diffenbaugh Co. (1975) 51 Cal. App. 3d 494, 509, 124 Cal. Rptr. 467

[b] "But For" Test

BAJI No. 3.75 (so-called proximate cause instruction containing "but for" test) disapproved for use in any negligence action because grammatically confusing and conceptually misleading; BAJI No. 3.76, which employs substantial factor test, is approved for use in lieu of BAJI No. 3.75. Mitchell v. Gonzales (1991) 54 Cal.3d 1041, 1049, 1054, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 913, 819 P.2d 872

Plaintiff entitled to recover when plaintiff proves that injury would not have occurred "but for" defendant's negligence. Akins v. County of Sonoma (1967) 67 Cal. 2d 185, 198-199, 60 Cal. Rptr. 499, 430 P.2d 57

To establish proximate, or legal, cause, plaintiff need only show that defendant's negligent act in some way contributed to plaintiff's injury, that is, but for defendant's negligence injury would not have occurred. Valdez v. J.D. Diffenbaugh Co. (1975) 51 Cal. App. 3d 494, 508, 124 Cal. Rptr. 467

[c] Concurrent Causation

Concurrent tortfeasor liable for whole of indivisible injury if his or her negligence is proximate cause of injury; tortfeasor is entitled to escape responsibility simply because another act, either "innocent" occurrence, such as act of God, or other negligent conduct, may also have been cause of injury. American Motorcycle Assn. v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 578, 586-588, 146 Cal. Rptr. 182, 578 P.2d 899

Defendant's inability reasonably to anticipate occurrence of other concurrent cause does not shield defendant from liability if his or her own negligence was one of causes of injury. Taylor v. Oakland Scavenger Co. (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 594, 602, 110 P.2d 1044

Refusing to instruct jury on concurrent causation as defined in BAJI No. 3.77 is error if physician's negligence may have been additional proximate cause of patient's death. Logacz v. Limansky (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 1149, 1157-1159, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 257

[d] Direct Causation

Defendant liable for all damages flowing directly, without intervening force, from his or her negligence, regardless whether or not harm was foreseeable. Gibson v. Garcia (1950) 96 Cal. App. 2d 681, 685, 216 P.2d 119

[e] Intervening Causes

Navy employee's precarious stowing of briefcase in airplane's overhead luggage bin was proximate cause of injury to other passenger who was struck on head by briefcase when flight attendant opened overhead bin; flight attendant's acts not so unforeseeable as to be superseding cause that cut off Navy employee's liability. USAir Inc. v. United States Dep't of Navy (9th Cir. 1994) 14 F.3d 1410, 1413

Defendant liable for injury proximately or substantially caused by his or her negligent conduct, even if third person's conduct directly precipitates injury; fact that third person's act was innocent, negligent, intentionally tortious, or criminal does not insulate defendant from liability. Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 801, 812, 148

Cal. Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109

Bank liable for loss resulting when plaintiff lost money because bank negligently failed to require signature of both estate's coexecutors, even though third person's criminal conduct directly precipitated plaintiff's injury; defendant bank breached its duty to act reasonably to prevent third party from embezzling plaintiff's money. Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 801, 812-813, 148 Cal. Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109

In action against owner and lessee of bleachers on behalf of three-year old for injuries received when child fell from top of bleachers, alleged negligent supervision of child by parents was not intervening cause cutting off liability of defendants unless jury determined that parents' negligence was not foreseeable and that results it caused were not foreseeable. Akins v. County of Sonoma (1967) 67 Cal. 2d 185, 199, 60 Cal. Rptr. 499, 430 P.2d 57

Rest. Torts §§ 442-453 (rules for determining whether intervening act of third person constitutes superseding cause) accepted in California. Stewart v. Cox (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 857, 863-864, 13 Cal. Rptr. 521, 362 P.2d 345

Fact that intervening act of third person is negligent is not superseding cause if reasonable person is not aware of situation would not regard it as highly extraordinary that third person so acted, or if act is normal response to situation created by defendant's conduct, and manner in which intervening act is done is not extraordinarily negligent. Stewart v. Cox (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 857, 864, 13 Cal. Rptr. 521, 362 P.2d 345 ; see also Restatement of Torts § 447

Owner of bulldozer, who left it unattended and unlocked, liable to plaintiff injured when bulldozer was started by three juveniles; fact that intervening act was intentionally tortious and criminal did not preclude owner's liability, because this precise foreseeable risk made owner's leaving bulldozer unlocked and unattended negligent. Richardson v. Ham (1955) 44 Cal. 2d 772, 776-777, 285 P.2d 269

Owner of automobile who left keys in car not liable to third person injured as result of negligent driving of a thief; in absence of statute to contrary, owner is under no duty to persons who may be injured by automobile's use to keep it out of hands of third persons in absence of facts putting owner on notice that third person is incompetent to handle it. Richards v. Stanley (1954) 43 Cal. 2d 60, 63, 271 P.2d 23

Tow truck stolen from lot of truck service center located in high-crime area when key was left in ignition and lot's gate was left open implicated special circumstances rule; close temporal connection between theft and injuries to third parties precluded court from concluding as matter of law that conduct of service center was not legal cause of harm. Carrera v. Maurice J. Sopp & Son (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 366, 381-385, 99 Cal. Rptr. 3d 268

Tortfeasors allegedly liable for original automobile accident that necessitated transportation of victim to hospital could be held liable for further injury or death suffered by victim on way to hospital; error to sustain demurrer for original tortfeasors when victim was killed in crash of helicopter transporting victim to hospital. Anaya v. Superior Court (2000) 78 Cal. App. 4th 971, 976, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 228

Operator of oil field, even if negligent, was not liable to employee of independent contractor hired to work in field who was injured by exploding pipe, even though risk of exploding pipe was foreseeable, when intervening action of co-workers who used torch to cut pipe that may have contained pressurized gas was extraordinarily negligent and dangerous. Martinez v. Vintage Petroleum, Inc. (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 695, 700-701, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 449

Physician who negligently treated plaintiff was liable for aggravation of plaintiff's condition caused by negligence of physicians who subsequently treated plaintiff, because original physician's negligence was proximate cause of damages resulting from subsequent negligent treatment; thus, physician who did not read radiologist's report revealing serious injury to plaintiff's kidney before transferring patient to another hospital was liable for patient's losing kidney due to other hospital's failure to conduct additional tests to assure that kidney was undamaged. Maxwell v. Powers (1994) 22

In personal injury action by passenger in truck who was injured when semitractor turned left across lane in which truck was traveling and collided with truck, defendant semitractor driver's negligence was proximate cause of passenger's injuries; dusty weather conditions, plaintiff's failure to wear seat belt and alcohol consumption prior to accident, and truck driver's excessive speed did not supersede defendant's negligence. Hardison v. Bushnell (1993) 18 Cal. App. 4th 22, 28-29, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 106

Speeding car that killed truck driver who was standing on highway shoulder in darkness because his truck had broken down was not intervening or superseding cause cutting off liability of defendants that had negligently maintained the truck, unless jury determined that defendants could not have foreseen possibility of this sort of accident. Jackson v. Ryder Truck Rental, Inc. (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 1830, 1840, 1848, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 913

In negligence action based on employee's injury by defective machine, in which issue remained as to whether employer's failure to prevent harm was superseding cause precluding manufacturer's liability, trial court's failureto give any instruction on that issue constituted reversible error; court required to modify faulty instructions submitted by parties instead of rejecting them outright; liability of manufacturer not precluded as matter of law, even though 35 years had elapsed since machine was manufactured. Paverud v. Niagara Mach. & Tool Works (1987) 189 Cal. App. 3d 858, 863-864, 234 Cal. Rptr. 585

Act of original wrongdoer who has caused personal injury is normally proximate cause of subsequent injury caused by negligent medical treatment of original injury; negligent treatment reasonably foreseeable. Blecker v. Wolbart (1985) 167 Cal. App. 3d 1195, 1200-1203, 213 Cal. Rptr. 781

Statement of rule relating to foreseeability of intervening conduct in instruction on negligence instead of in instruction on causation was not prejudicial error, if error at all, because duty and causation aspects of issue of intervening acts are interrelated. United Pac. Co. v. Southern Cal. Edison Co. (1985) 163 Cal. App. 3d 700, 710-712, 209 Cal. Rptr. 819

Generally, if risk of injury by intervening act might have been reasonably foreseen, defendant liable; but independent, intervening act that is highly unusual or extraordinary, not reasonably likely to happen, and hence not foreseeable, is superseding cause precluding liability. Bloomberg v. Interinsurance Exch. (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 571, 576, 207 Cal. Rptr. 853

Act of third party not reasonably foreseeable and not normal consequence in situation is superseding cause. Commercial Standard Title Co. v. Superior Court (1979) 92 Cal. App. 3d 934, 944, 155 Cal. Rptr. 393

Independent intervening act is superseding cause relieving actor of liability for negligence only if intervening act is highly unusual or extraordinary and hence not reasonably foreseeable. Cline v. Watkins (1977) 66 Cal. App. 3d 174, 178, 135 Cal. Rptr. 838 ; see also Restatement (Second) of Torts §§ 435, 447

Negligent lawyer not relieved of consequences of lack of care because subsequently hired attorney could have avoided injury had he or she not been negligent also. Cline v. Watkins (1977) 66 Cal. App. 3d 174, 180, 135 Cal. Rptr. 838

Reasonable foreseeability of independent intervening cause is question of fact unless under undisputed facts there is no room for reasonable difference of opinion. Cline v. Watkins (1977) 66 Cal. App. 3d 174, 178, 135 Cal. Rptr. 838 ; Schrimscher v. Bryson (1976) 58 Cal. App. 3d 660, 664, 130 Cal. Rptr. 125

When young boy attending baseball game was hit in head by baseball, negligently treated and diagnosed by physician at ballpark first aid station, and subsequently negligently treated at hospital, physician not relieved of liability by subsequent negligent conduct of hospital. Fish v. Los Angeles Dodgers Baseball Club (1976) 56 Cal. App. 3d 620,

634-641, 128 Cal. Rptr. 807

Negligent act totally unrelated causatively to accident at issue is not possibly intervening cause. Valdez v. J.D. Diffenbaugh Co. (1975) 51 Cal. App. 3d 494, 510, 124 Cal. Rptr. 467

Issue of superseding cause not reached until finding of negligence on defendant's part and further finding that but for defendant's negligence, accident would not have occurred. Ewart v. Southern Cal. Gas Co. (1965) 237 Cal. App. 2d 163, 169, 46 Cal. Rptr. 631

Nonculpable intervening conduct of third person less likely to be superseding cause than negligent or criminal conduct. Ewart v. Southern Cal. Gas Co. (1965) 237 Cal. App. 2d 163, 169, 46 Cal. Rptr. 631

[f] Proximate Cause

Plaintiff required to prove that defendant's breach of duty was proximate cause of plaintiff's injury; court will not reach issue of proximate cause until plaintiff has proved existence of duty and its breach; defendant not liable for damages proximately caused to plaintiff by defendant's conduct unless defendant breached duty to plaintiff. Richards v. Stanley (1954) 43 Cal. 2d 60, 63, 69, 271 P.2d 23

To establish proximate cause in any case other than one of direct causation, consequences of defendant's actions must reasonably have been foreseen by prudent person. Mosley v. Arden Farms Co. (1945) 26 Cal. 2d 213, 216, 157 P.2d 372

Plaintiff in negligence action bears burden of showing that defendant's negligence was proximate cause of injury; proximate cause generally question of fact. Stangle v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 971, 975, 244 Cal. Rptr. 103

Foreseeability for purposes of proximate cause analysis, is not measured by what is more probable than not, but includes whatever is likely enough in setting of modern life that reasonably thoughtful person would take account of it in guiding practical conduct; general character of event or harm, not its precise nature or manner of occurrence, is what may be foreseeable and therefore potential basis of liability, including conduct by third person that may be innocent, negligent, intentionally tortious, or criminal. City of Los Angeles v. Shpegel-Dimsey, Inc. (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 1009, 1022, 244 Cal. Rptr. 507

Proximate causation, or foreseeability of injury, decided as question of law only if undisputed facts leave no room for reasonable difference of opinion. City of Los Angeles v. Shpegel-Dimsey, Inc. (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 1009, 1021-1022, 244 Cal. Rptr. 507

Proximate cause is not always cause in fact but encompasses questions of policy of whether law will extend responsibility for conduct to consequences that have occurred. Jackson v. City of San Diego (1981) 121 Cal. App. 3d 579, 588, 175 Cal. Rptr. 395 ; but see Asgari v. City of Los Angeles (1997) 15 Cal. 4th 744, 758 n.10, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 842, 937 P.2d 273 (disapproving Jackson to extent it permits recovery of damages for postarraignment confinement)

Although ordinarily question of fact if conflicting inferences can be drawn, proximate cause is issue of law if facts are undisputed and only one conclusion can be drawn. Hooks v. Southern Cal. Permanente Med. Group (1980) 107 Cal. App. 3d 435, 447, 165 Cal. Rptr. 741

Negligent tortfeasor liable for all damage proximately caused by his or her negligence; he or she may not escape liability merely because another cause,whether innocent or not, contributes to injury. Stone v. Foster (1980) 106 Cal.

App. 3d 334, 348, 164 Cal. Rptr. 901

If plaintiff's injury results from combination of defendant's negligence and innocent cause, defendant liable for entire loss unless defendant can prove extent of loss resulting from own conduct. Stone v. Foster (1980) 106 Cal. App. 3d 334, 347-348, 164 Cal. Rptr. 901

Proximate cause is cause which, in natural and continuous sequence, unbroken by any efficient intervening cause, produced injury or damage complained of and without which result would not have occurred. Whitcombe v. County of Yolo (1977) 73 Cal. App. 3d 698, 708, 141 Cal. Rptr. 189

Issue of proximate cause is not question of causation as much as policy determination of whether or not defendant should be held responsible for his or her acts. Valdez v. J.D. Diffenbaugh Co. (1975) 51 Cal. App. 3d 494, 509, 124 Cal. Rptr. 467

Proximate cause is always, in first instance, question of law, which becomes question of fact if conflicting inferences or conclusions can be drawn from evidence. Golden v. Dungan (1971) 20 Cal. App. 3d 295, 311, 97 Cal. Rptr. 577

Proximate or legal cause is separate and distinct from actual cause. Beaupre v. Nave (1970) 13 Cal. App. 3d 402, 405-406, 91 Cal. Rptr. 473

Each proximate cause decision turns on own facts and has little value as precedent. Beck v. San Francisco Unified Sch. Dist. (1964) 225 Cal. App. 2d 503, 508, 37 Cal. Rptr. 471

[g] "Substantial Factor" Test

BAJI No. 3.75 (so-called proximate cause instruction containing "but for" test) disapproved for use in any negligence action because grammatically confusing and conceptually misleading; BAJI No. 3.76, which employs substantial factor test, is approved for use in lieu of BAJI No. 3.75. Mitchell v. Gonzales (1991) 54 Cal.3d 1041, 1049, 1054, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 913, 819 P.2d 872

Plaintiff entitled to recover if defendant's conduct is "substantial factor" in causing plaintiff's injury. Willis v. Gordon (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 629, 635, 143 Cal. Rptr. 723, 574 P.2d 794

Serologist's failure to provide accurate analysis of crime scene evidence to plaintiff's attorneys before plaintiff's criminal trial was not substantial factor in plaintiff's conviction; no credible evidence indicated reasonable probability that test results would have resulted in judgment of acquittal, because results did not exonerate plaintiff and other evidence established plaintiff's guilt. Williams v. Wraxall (1995) 33 Cal. App. 4th 120, 133-134, 39 Cal. Rptr. 2d 658

Substantial factor applicable in case involving child born with brain damage resulting from three separate causes. Espinosa v. Little Co. of Mary Hosp. (1995) 31 Cal. App. 4th 1304, 1316, 37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 541

Defendant liable for shooting of plaintiff on employer's premises by fired employee, because conduct of security guards employed by defendant was "substantial factor" in bringing about shooting; security guards' failure to prevent fired employee from entering employer's premises three times in two days demonstrated to fired employee that security was lax enough to allow him to come back and injure plaintiff. Rosh v. Cave Imaging Sys., Inc. (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 1225, 1235-1236, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 136

[3] Damages

In ordinary negligence actions for physical injury, recovery for emotional distress caused by that injury is available as item of parasitic damages; if plaintiff can demonstrate physical injury caused by defendant's negligence, anxiety specifically due to reasonable fear of future harm attributable to injury may also constitute proper element of damages; absent present physical injury or illness, fear of cancer damages recoverable only if plaintiff pleads and proves that due to defendant's negligent breach of duty owed to plaintiff, he or she was exposed to toxic substance that threatens cancer, and fear stems from knowing it is more likely than not plaintiff will develop cancer due to exposure. Potter v. Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 965, 981, 997, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 550, 863 P.2d 795

In action for damages regarding accident during which law enforcement officer failed to ascertain identity of tortfeasor, plaintiff not required to prove that but for officer's negligence, suit would have resulted in collectible judgment in plaintiff's favor. Clemente v. State of California (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 202, 218-220, 219 Cal. Rptr. 445, 707 P.2d 818

Allegations of willful, reckless, and wanton misconduct insufficient to warrant exemplary damages, but allegations of conscious disregard of safety justify exemplary damages if nondeliberate injury is alleged. Taylor v. Superior Court (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 890, 895-896, 157 Cal. Rptr. 693, 598 P.2d 854

Once plaintiff has suffered actual and appreciable harm, neither speculative nor uncertain character of damages, nor difficulty of proof tolls period of limitation. Davies v. Krasna (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 502, 514, 121 Cal. Rptr. 705, 535 P.2d 1161

Mere breach of duty causing only nominal damages, speculative harm, or threat of future harm not yet realized insufficient to create cause of action. Budd v. Nixen (1971) 6 Cal. 3d 195, 200, 98 Cal. Rptr. 849, 491 P.2d 433

Person injured by wrongful act of another must exercise reasonable care and diligence to avoid loss or minimize resulting damages, and is precluded from recovery for losses that might have been prevented by reasonable efforts and expenditures on his or her part. Valencia v. Shell Oil Co. (1944) 23 Cal. 2d 840, 844, 147 P.2d 558

Plaintiff has duty to minimize damages in every reasonable way; failure to return to work when reasonably able to do so terminates damage for loss of wages at that time. Pretzer v. California Transit Co. (1930) 211 Cal. 202, 208, 294 P. 382

Injury element of actionable negligence requires act causing harm, i.e., detrimental physical changes to plaintiff's body; physical injury actionable whether or not it gives rise to emotional distress; impairment of bone marrow resulting from overdose of anticancer drugs was actionable injury, in that it constituted detrimental change to immune system. Duarte v. Zachariah (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 1652, 1661-1663, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 88

Plaintiff whose property was damaged by defendant's negligence is not limited to recovery of costs of repairs, but may recover for all injury to propertyproximately caused by defendant's negligence, including recovery for inconvenience caused by injury or loss of use. City of Los Angeles v. Shpegel-Dimsey, Inc. (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 1009, 1023, 244 Cal. Rptr. 507

Defendant bears burden of producing evidence of plaintiff's failure to mitigate damages. Blake v. E. Thompson Petroleum Repair Co. (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 823, 831, 832, 216 Cal. Rptr. 568

Damages for economic losses recoverable from manufacturer of defective cans if manufacturer knew that single customer had ordered large quantity for specific purpose, manufacturer shipped negligently manufactured products not suitable for that purpose, and economic injury was reasonably foreseeable if product proved defective. Ales-Peratis Foods Int'l, Inc. v. American Can Co. (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 277, 289-291, 209 Cal. Rptr. 917

Damages for economic losses recoverable in negligence action against manufacturer and lessor of defective sander if necessary business relationship with defendants is proven. Pisano v. American Leasing (1983) 146 Cal. App. 3d 194, 197, 194 Cal. Rptr. 77

Party injured by tortious act has active duty to use reasonable care and diligence to minimize loss; plaintiff was not entitled to compensation for damages he or she could have avoided by reasonable effort or expense. Jarchow v. Transamerica Title Ins. Co. (1975) 48 Cal. App. 3d 917, 949, 122 Cal. Rptr. 470

No cause of action for negligence without compensable damage. Oakes v. McCarthy Co. (1968) 267 Cal. App. 2d 231, 254, 73 Cal. Rptr. 127

Nominal damages to vindicate technical right not recoverable in negligence action if no actual loss has occurred. Fields v. Napa Milling Co. (1958) 164 Cal. App. 2d 442, 448, 330 P.2d 459

[4] Duty

[a] Duty to Control Conduct of Another

Except in certain special circumstances, person owes no duty to control conduct of another or to warn those endangered by that conduct; person's mere proximity to assailant, even with knowledge of assailant's assaultive tendencies, does not establish relation imposing duty to control assailant's conduct. Davidson v. City of Westminster (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 197, 203, 205, 185 Cal. Rptr. 252, 649 P.2d 894

As general rule, no duty to control conduct of another person; exceptions when defendant stands in special relationship either to person whose conduct needs to be controlled or to foreseeable victim of that conduct. Robertson v. Wentz (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1281, 1288, 232 Cal. Rptr. 634

[b] Foreseeability

Degree of foreseeability necessary to warrant finding of duty varies from case to case, with high degree of foreseeability likely to be required if burden of preventing future harm is great, and lesser degree required if there are strong policy reasons for preventing harm or harm can be prevented by simple means. Isaacs v. Huntington Mem'l Hosp. (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 112, 125, 211 Cal. Rptr. 356, 695 P.2d 653

Neither intoxicated drivers nor swift traffic on major thoroughfare were unforeseeable as matter of law in plaintiff's action against telephone company for injuries sustained when plaintiff was using company's telephone booth and was struck by intoxicated driver; foreseeability of risk that phone booth user might be injured by car veering off street and crashing into phone booth having defective door was question of fact for jury. Bigbee v. Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. (1983) 34 Cal. 3d 49, 58-60, 192 Cal. Rptr. 857, 665 P.2d 947

Mere fact that particular kind of accident has not happened before not evidence that accident is one that might not reasonably have been anticipated. Weirum v. RKO Gen., Inc. (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 40, 47, 123 Cal. Rptr. 468, 539 P.2d 36

Radio station that sponsored contest directing contestants to drive to various locations liable to plaintiff who was injured when his car was forced off highway by speeding contestant; contestants' actions foreseeable; if likelihood that person may react in particular manner is risk that makes defendant negligent, reaction does not prevent defendant from being liable for harm caused. Weirum v. RKO Gen., Inc. (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 40, 47, 123 Cal. Rptr. 468, 539 P.2d 36

Concept of foreseability relevant to analysis of several aspects of negligence; persons's duty extends to all persons foreseeably endangered by his or her conduct. Rodriguez v. Bethlehem Steel Corp. (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 382, 399, 115 Cal. Rptr. 765, 525 P.2d 669

Foreseeability of risk is chief element in determining whether defendant owes duty; because duty and foreseeability are inherently intertwined, duty adjudicated on case-by-case basis. Dillon v. Legg (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 728, 740, 69 Cal. Rptr. 72, 441 P.2d 912

In absence of overriding policy consideration, foreseeability of risk of primary importance in establishing element of duty. Dillon v. Legg (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 728, 739, 69 Cal. Rptr. 72, 441 P.2d 912

In order to limit otherwise potentially infinite liability that would follow every negligent act, defendant liable only for injuries that were reasonably foreseeable to defendant at time. Dillon v. Legg (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 728, 739, 69 Cal. Rptr. 72, 441 P.2d 912

Despite foreseeability of potential injury, business that rented skating facility out for use as all-night "rave" party site had no duty to prevent teenage girls from ingesting drugs at party and then driving away. Sakiyama v. AMF Bowling Ctrs., Inc. (2003) 110 Cal. App. 4th 398, 407-412, 1 Cal. Rptr. 3d 762

Not reasonably foreseeable that defendant's action in taking plaintiff to public sidewalk adjacent to road undergoing construction would subject plaintiff to unreasonable risk of harm from driver who lost control of automobile, jumped curb, and struck plaintiff. Victor v. Hedges (1999) 77 Cal. App. 4th 229, 243-244, 91 Cal. Rptr. 2d 466

Intoxicated motorist not liable for death of tow truck driver because she could not have foreseen that her driving under influence would result in third party's striking and killing tow truck driver while he was trying to remove her car from side of freeway. Bryant v. Glastetter (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 770, 780, 38 Cal. Rptr. 2d 291

"Open range" law (Food & Agric. Code § 17123), which provides that persons grazing cattle in counties devoted chiefly to grazing are not required to fence in their cattle, does not absolve cattle owners of duty under Civ. Code § 1714 to exercise reasonable care in management of animals; that duty includes keeping them off well-traveled highways, especially at night, to avoid reasonably foreseeable collisions with automobiles. Shively v. Dye Creek Cattle Co. (1994) 29 Cal. App. 4th 1620, 1629-1631, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 238

Dog owner not liable to visitor claiming to have contracted Lyme disease from tick carried by dog, because evidence showed that owner did not know, and could not reasonably be expected to have known, that ticks carrying disease were present in area; owner had no duty to warn visitor not to allow dog to sit on her lap. Butcher v. Gay (1994) 29 Cal. App. 4th 388, 405-406, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 771

Landlords not liable to visitor shot accidentally by tenant despite their knowledge that tenant had drinking problem and owned firearms; shooting was not foreseeable risk absent evidence that tenant had ever harmed anyone due to either his drinking problem or his possession of firearms or evidence that tenant handled firearms unsafely while drunk. Sturgeon v. Curnutt (1994) 29 Cal. App. 4th 301, 307, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 498

Act foreseeable only if it is sufficiently likely and not simply imaginable or conceivable; owner of convenience store not liable to customer struck by curb-jumping automobile in absence of prior similar incidents. Jefferson v. Qwik Korner Mkt., Inc. (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 990, 995-996, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 171

Jury able reasonably to find that defendant, who had contracted with decedent's employer to maintain its trucks, was liable for decedent's death, because defendant's negligent maintenance of trucks had placed decedent in position in which he was exposed to reasonably foreseeable risk of injury from intoxicated or otherwise out-of-control drivers; truck in which decedent was driving broke down on highway due to defective electrical system, and decedent was hit by speeding car as he stood on shoulder of highway in dark. Jackson v. Ryder Truck Rental, Inc. (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 1830, 1840, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 913

Liability not imposed against record company for teenager's committing suicide after listening to rock music album expressing view that suicide is acceptable alternative to life; music was not directed and intended toward goal of bringing about imminent suicide of its listeners, nor was it likely to produce that result; suicide not foreseeable risk, because music had been recorded and produced years before, there was no "real time" urging of listeners to act in particular manner, and no dynamic interaction with or live importuning of particular listeners. McCollum v. CBS, Inc. (1988) 202 Cal. App. 3d 989, 1000-1001, 249 Cal. Rptr. 187

One who creates foreseeable danger not readily discoverable by endangered persons has duty to warn them of potential peril, whether or not special relationship existed between parties; police officer has duty to warn newspaper photographer that accident scene was contrived by officer, irrespective of status as police officer. Bastian v. County of San Luis Obispo (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 520, 529-530, 245 Cal. Rptr. 78

Shooting in hotel of one resident by another was unforeseeable to hotel proprietor as matter of law if there was no evidence that assailant had any history of violence or assaultive behavior, that proprietor or anyone else knew or should have known that assailant possessed gun, that proprietor knew or should have known of risk to other hotel guests, and that proprietor failed to exercise reasonable care to protect victims or other residents. Gray v. Kircher (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 1069, 1074-1075, 236 Cal. Rptr. 891

Risk of maniacal, mass-murderous assault on patrons of restaurant not foreseeable to restaurant as matter of law; negligence cause of action not stated against restaurant; restaurant's general duty to take reasonable precautions to protect patrons from reasonably foreseeable criminal conduct of unknown third parties does not include burden to prevent once-in-a-lifetime massacres. Lopez v. McDonald's Corp. (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 495, 504-512, 238 Cal. Rptr. 436

After independent contractor weatherproofed stairs with adequate friction to avoid slickness of surface, plaintiff's slipping on stairs due to second contractor's resealing of stairs with dangerously slick compound was not reasonably foreseeable; as matter of law, contractor does not owe duty to warn customer or subsequently hired contractors of proper resealing method. Lima v. Magnesite Waterproofing & Refinishing (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 776, 782-783, 236 Cal. Rptr. 519

Primary aspect of duty is foreseeability of risk; defendant owes duty of care to all persons foreseeably endangered by his or her conduct, with respect to all risks that make conduct unreasonably dangerous; foreseeability is question of fact unless decisional law has established that there could be no foreseeability of risk under same or similar factual situation. Robertson v. Wentz (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1281, 1288, 232 Cal. Rptr. 634

Risk that glass fragments in unmarked paper bag on attorney's desk may constitute evidence that should not be thrown away was not foreseeable to maintenance person as matter o0f law; negligent spoliation of evidence cause of action not stated against maintenance company. Velasco v. Commercial Bldg. Maint. Co. (1985) 169 Cal. App. 3d 874, 878-879, 215 Cal. Rptr. 504

Foreseeability of risk is usually question of fact; and is question of law only if under undisputed facts there is no room for reasonable difference of opinion. Twohig v. Briner (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 1102, 1106, 214 Cal. Rptr. 729

Conduct of intoxicated or speeding drivers in losing control and colliding with poles, buildings, or other objects standing alongside roads is not uncommon and therefore foreseeable because injury or death caused by other drivers is among possible dangers awaiting stranded motorists; foreseeability of drunk driver losing control of vehicle and running into car is question of fact that cannot be decided on demurrer. Bloomberg v. Interinsurance Exch. (1984) 162

Cal. App. 3d 571, 576-577, 207 Cal. Rptr. 853

Ordinary care requires avoidance of "unreasonable risk" turning on basic question of whether foreseeable risk of danger outweighs utility of act or manner in which it is done. Chaplis v. County of Monterey (1979) 97 Cal. App. 3d 249, 265, 158 Cal. Rptr. 395

[c] General Requirement of Duty

Liability founded on negligence requires existence of duty of care owed by alleged wrongdoer to plaintiff, or to class of which plaintiff is member. Spearman v. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 1105, 1110, 230 Cal. Rptr. 264

[d] Imminent Peril

Instruction on imminent peril is error if peril created by defendant's own negligence, or in absence of evidence that some other course of action was available to defendant at time peril was perceived. Casey v. Russell (1982) 138 Cal. App. 3d 379, 386, 188 Cal. Rptr. 18

[e] Negligent Misrepresentation

Plaintiff's independent precautionary action supported conclusion that plaintiff did not rely on representations; cause of action for negligent misrepresentation therefore precluded even assuming duty based on voluntary undertaking existed. M.B. v. City of San Diego (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 699, 708, 284 Cal. Rptr. 555

[f] Nonliability for Nonfeasance

Gas company owed no duty to family (plaintiffs) who rented apartment for failing to take action to prevent plaintiffs from being exposed to excessive amount of carbon monoxide emitted from defective wall furnace, even if company representative walked past furnace on way to inspect water heater and should have noticed by discoloration of furnace that furnace could have posed danger to plaintiffs; gas company had no responsibility for furnace, as it neither installed nor inspected it, nor did company sell or lease it to apartment owners. Williams v. Southern California Gas Co. (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 591, 603-604, 98 Cal. Rptr. 3d 258

Relatives of convicted child molester who was out on parole had no duty to inform parolee's girlfriend about his past convictions when she and her young son accompanied parolee to residences of relatives; relatives had no knowledge that parolee was molesting girlfriend's son, and even though some molestations took place at their residences when parolee was alone with child, relatives did nothing to facilitate molestations and made no representations as to safety of child if left alone with parolee. Eric J. v. Betty M. (1999) 76 Cal. App. 4th 715, 727-730, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 549

Paramedic team employed by city owed no duty to render medical attention or otherwise assist gunshot victim if emergency personnel involved did not create peril, voluntarily assume special duty to assist, make promise or statement to induce reliance, or increase risk that otherwise would have existed; Health & Safety Code § 1799.107 (providing for nonliability of emergency rescue personnel unless action performed in grossly negligent manner) imposes no general duty on emergency personnel to provide assistance whenever and wherever summoned, but rather limits public entity's liability exposure. Zepeda v. City of Los Angeles (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 232, 236, 272 Cal. Rptr. 635

Absent special relationship giving rise to duty to act, no duty to take affirmative action to assist or protect another, no matter how great danger in which other is placed, or how easily he or she could be rescued. Stangle v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 971, 974, 244 Cal. Rptr. 103

[g] Physicians

No special relationship exists between physician acting as proctor during surgery and either surgeons performing operation or patient who suffers injuries; no duty on proctor to take affirmative action to assist or to protect patient. Clarke v. Hoek (1985) 174 Cal. App. 3d 208, 211-220, 219 Cal. Rptr. 845

Physicians are in special relationship with patient and have duty to warn patient not to engage in conduct, such as driving, that is foreseeably dangerous in patient's condition; duty extends to benefit of third persons. Myers v. Quesenberry (1983) 144 Cal. App. 3d 888, 893-894, 193 Cal. Rptr. 733

[h] Police Officers

Police officers conducting surveillance of dangerous site not in special relationship with assailant or with victim assaulted at site during surveillance. Davidson v. City of Westminster (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 197, 206-209, 185 Cal. Rptr. 252, 649 P.2d 894

CHP officers owed no duty to tow truck driver who had completed extraction of car from road-side ditch and was returning to tow truck to get receipt book; tow truck driver was not in position of dependency on officers, nor did officers create risk of harm. Minch v. Department of Cal. Highway Patrol (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 895, 904-907, 44 Cal. Rptr. 3d 846

Police investigation of prior assault in apartment complex did nto create special relationship between police and resident of apartment complex. Denton v. City of Fullerton (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 1636, 1643, 285 Cal. Rptr. 297

Jury instruction regarding standard of care of specialists (BAJI No. 6.37.1) inapplicable to conduct of police officer. Miller v. Kennedy (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 141, 147-148, 241 Cal. Rptr. 472

Special relationship created by police conduct that causes victim to rely detrimentally on police to such extent that risk of harm as result of police negligence is greater than that to which victim was already exposed. Lopez v. City of San Diego (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 678, 681, 235 Cal. Rptr. 583

No detrimental reliance supporting claim of special relationship between highway patrol and motorist if officer's warning could not, as matter of law, be reasonably interpreted to mean smoke-obscured highway ahead was suitable for travel at high speeds. Foremost Dairies, Inc. v. State of California (1986) 190 Cal. App. 3d 361, 366, 232 Cal. Rptr. 70

Absent special relationship creating special duty, victim of crime that police might have prevented cannot recover; officers responding to investigate do not create special relationship, especially if they in no way induced reliance that they would provide protection. Von Batsch v. American Dist. Tel. Co. (1985) 175 Cal. App. 3d 1111, 1121-1125, 222 Cal. Rptr. 239

Police under duty to exercise due care during chase of suspect; failure to sound siren is potential basis for liability although suspect being chased, rather than police, actually collided with plaintiff. Stark v. City of Los Angeles (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 276, 283-284, 214 Cal. Rptr. 216

Highway patrol officer's act in stopping and releasing motorist after motorist passed sobriety tests did not create relationship requiring affirmative duty to other motorists when officer did not perform affirmative act that placed person in peril or increase risk of harm. Harris v. Smith (1984) 157 Cal. App. 3d 100, 104-107, 203 Cal. Rptr. 541

Police officer owed no duty under special relationship theory to intoxicated man for injuries incurred after officer failed to take him into custody. Stout v. City of Porterville (1983) 148 Cal. App. 3d 937, 942-945, 196 Cal. Rptr. 301

Police officers who undertook to investigate party and observed intoxicated condition of minors had no duty to prevent minor defendants from driving or to protect minor victim from accepting ride with intoxicated minor; specialrelationship not created by observation of conduct that might foreseeably create risk of harm. Jackson v. Clements (1983) 146 Cal. App. 3d 983, 987-988, 194 Cal. Rptr. 553

[i] Psychotherapists

Therapist has duty, once he or she determines or should determine that patient presents serious danger of violence to another, to use reasonable care to protect intended victim against that danger. Tarasoff v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 425, 431, 131 Cal. Rptr. 14, 551 P.2d 334

Allegations of existence of psychiatrist-patient relationship, knowledge on part of psychiatrist that patient was likely to attempt suicide, and failure by psychiatrist to take preventive measures, were sufficient to state cause of action for breach of psychiatrist's duty of care towards patient. Bellah v. Greenson (1978) 81 Cal. App. 3d 614, 620, 146 Cal. Rptr. 535

[j] Public Agencies

Additional factors that may be considered in determining whether or not to impose duty on public agency include (1) extent of agency's powers, (2) role imposed on agency by law, and (3) limitations imposed by agency's budget. Davidson v. City of Westminster (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 197, 203, 185 Cal. Rptr. 252, 649 P.2d 894

Governmental agencies have no duty to public as whole to warn that particular person is threat to public's well-being, but have duty to warn specific foreseeable victim, if government's actions create foreseeable peril to that specific foreseeable victim and victim cannot readily discover danger. Wallace v. City of Los Angeles (1993) 12 Cal. App. 4th 1385, 1396, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 113

Special relationship created if public employee asks private citizen to assist employee in performance of public function that involves foreseeable risk of injury. Wallace v. City of Los Angeles (1993) 12 Cal. App. 4th 1385, 1400, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 113

State has no duty to supervise or control convicted child-molester out on parole, or to warn victim or victim's parents of danger posed, absent direct or continuing relationship between state and plaintiff (or plaintiff's decedent) or prior threat to specific identifiable victim. Brenneman v. State of California (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 812, 820, 256 Cal. Rptr. 363

[k] Public Policy Limitations

State has no duty to permit decedent security guard to take firearm test that would have allowed him to carry weapon and therefore to defend himself against violent attack. Nunn v. State of California (1984) 35 Cal. 3d 616, 627-628, 200 Cal. Rptr. 440, 677 P.2d 846

Many considerations, including guidance of history, continually refined concepts of morals and justice, convenience of rule, and social judgment allocating loss, justify imposition of duty in particular circumstances. Weirum v. RKO Gen., Inc. (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 40, 46, 123 Cal. Rptr. 468, 539 P.2d 36

Intoxicated motorist not liable for death of tow truck driver killed by third party while attempting to remove motorist's car from freeway after her arrest; public policy encourages drivers whose cars are disabled to seek assistance rather than attempt self-help. Bryant v. Glastetter (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 770, 782-783, 38 Cal. Rptr. 2d 291

Any departure from fundamental principles stated in Civ. Code § 1714 involves balancing of considerations, including those set forth in Rowland v. Christian (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 108, 112-113, 70 Cal. Rptr. 97, 443 P.2d 561 , and public policy; nondealer who sold vehicle owed no duty to install seatbelts prior to sale. Krawitz v. Rusch (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 957, 963-965, 257 Cal. Rptr. 610

Strong public policy considerations militate against imposition of duty on landlord to enforce insurance clause in lease agreement for benefit of tenant's business invitees. Morales v. Fansler (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 1581, 1584-1589, 1589, 258 Cal. Rptr. 96

Absent endorsement or sponsorship for economic gain, publisher of advertisement has no duty to investigate safety of advertised product; thus, publisher that neither endorsed nor sponsored product is not liable for injuries sustained from use of product. Walters v. Seventeen Magazine (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 1119, 1121-1122, 241 Cal. Rptr. 101

Private rehabilitation facility owes no duty of care toward community members for criminal conduct of its residents. Cardenas v. Eggleston Youth Ctr. (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 331, 335, 238 Cal. Rptr. 251

Weight of public policy applied in determining existence of duty measured by balancing of (1) foreseeability of harm to plaintiff; (2) degree of certainty that plaintiff suffered injury; (3) closeness of connection between defendant's conduct and injury suffered; (4) moral blame attached to defendant's conduct; (5) policy of preventing future harm; (6) extent of burden to defendant and consequences to community of imposing duty to exercise care with resulting liability for breach; and (7) availability, cost, and prevalence of insurance for risk involved. Wylie v. Gresch (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 412, 416-417, 236 Cal. Rptr. 552

Whether and extent to which new duty is recognized is ultimately question of public policy. Jones v. Grewe (1987) 189 Cal. App. 3d 950, 954, 234 Cal. Rptr. 717

Public policy precludes imposition of liability on peace officers and public entities for negligent infliction of emotional distress caused by officers' conduct in bringing plaintiff to scene of police standoff to aid in surrender of armed and suicidal relative. Allen v. Toten (1985) 172 Cal. App. 3d 1079, 1091, 218 Cal. Rptr. 725

First Amendment policies and practical obstacles to enforcement weigh against imposition of duty on movie producers to warn patrons or provide security protection outside theater against possibility of violence incited by nature of film; activity of producing motion picture not grounds for imposition of liability even if film had tendency to attract violence-prone individuals to vicinity of theater. Bill v. Superior Court (1982) 137 Cal. App. 3d 1002, 1011, 1013-1014, 187 Cal. Rptr. 625

Recovery denied to person who claimed that defendant social services agency failed to take proper steps to find him adequate adoptive home and thereforedeprived him of adequate upbringing; no manageable standard for assessing wrongfulness of defendant's conduct or calculating plaintiff's damages. Smith v. Alameda County Soc. Servs. Agency (1979) 90 Cal. App. 3d 929, 937, 153 Cal. Rptr. 712

Private agency acting under governmental program for rehabilitation of drug offenders not liable for participant's escaping from "halfway house" and killing several people; same public policy considerations leading to legislative immunization of public entities for release or probation of criminals apply to agency's actions. Beauchene v. Synanon Found., Inc. (1979) 88 Cal. App. 3d 342, 348, 151 Cal. Rptr. 796

If existence of duty rests on question of determining reasonable foreseeability of injury to plaintiff, liability primarily matter for jury determination unless reasonable minds could not differ on point. Richards v. Stanley (1954) 43 Cal. 2d 60, 66, 271 P.2d 23

Proper question for jury is whether it was reasonably foreseeable that injury was likely to result from defendant's conduct, not whether defendant foresaw or by exercise of ordinary care would have foreseen identical consequence that happened. Werkman v. Howard Zink Corp. (1950) 97 Cal. App. 2d 418, 425, 218 P.2d 43

[m] Question of Law

Foreseeability is question of law if reasonable minds could not differ on point. Hooks v. Southern Cal. Permanente Med. Group (1980) 107 Cal. App. 3d 435, 443, 165 Cal. Rptr. 741

Whether duty predicated on negligence principles exists is primarily question of law. Stangle v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 971, 974, 244 Cal. Rptr. 103

Whether duty existed is question of law; determination that defendant owed plaintiff no duty of care is complete defense to cause of action for negligence. Owens v. Kings Supermarket (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 379, 384-385, 243 Cal. Rptr. 627

Determination of duty is primarily question of law in which foreseeability of risk to another is principal consideration. De Lima v. Magnesite Waterproofing & Refinishing (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 776, 782, 236 Cal. Rptr. 519

Whether legal duty exists in given case is primarily question of law; determination in typical negligence action that there is no duty giving rise to liability is essentially shorthand way of expressing conclusion that weight of public policy warrants departure from Civ. Code § 1714(a), which broadly imposes liability on everyone for injury occasioned to another by his or her want of ordinary care or skill in management of his or her property or person, except so far as latter has, willfully or by want of ordinary care, brought injury on him or herself. Wylie v. Gresch (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 412, 416, 236 Cal. Rptr. 552

Whether duty of care exists is question of law for court. Jones v. Grewe (1987) 189 Cal. App. 3d 950, 954, 234 Cal. Rptr. 717

[n] Rescuers

Persons injured while undertaking necessary rescue are entitled, absent rash or reckless conduct on their part, to recover from person whose negligence created peril necessitating rescue. Solgaard v. Guy F. Atkinson Co. (1971) 6 Cal. 3d 361, 368, 99 Cal. Rptr. 29, 491 P.2d 821

Intoxicated motorist not liable to tow truck driver killed by third party while attempting to remove motorist's car from freeway after her arrest; tow truck driver was not rescuing motorist, but was performing job he had been hired to do. Bryant v. Glastetter (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 770, 784, 38 Cal. Rptr. 2d 291

Rescue doctrine expands risks rescuer may take in order to save third person in danger. Scott v. Texaco, Inc. (1966) 239 Cal. App. 2d 431, 434, 48 Cal. Rptr. 785

[o] Schools

School district was subject to liability for death of student who participated in "slap boxing match" during lunch break, if school district was aware of practice of slap boxing and its danger; that student's death resulted from his voluntary participation in dangerous activity was irrelevant, because that conduct is expected from young students, who therfore rquire supervision. Dailey v. Los Angeles Unified Sch. Dist. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 741, 750-751, 87 Cal. Rptr. 376, 470 P.2d 360

School district entitled to summary judgment on claim that it failed to protect student from injuries caused by another student during fight, despite fact that student who caused injuries had been in trouble before; no aspect of assailant's prior conduct bore any relation to plaintiff, there was no indication that assailant even knew plaintiff before attack, and fight arose suddenly during lunch break, immediately after school monitor had passed through area in which fight occurred. Thompson v. Sacramento City Unified Sch. Dist. (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 1352, 1369-1372, 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 748

School district not liable for death of boy who suffered fatal injuries from skateboarding games on school grounds while school was not in session; although defendant may have foreseen those activities, concomitant duty to forestall and prevent harm does not automatically follow. Bartell v. Palos Verdes Peninsula Sch. Dist. (1978) 83 Cal. App. 3d 492, 500, 147 Cal. Rptr. 898

University and student not in special relationship that would impose liability on university for personal injuries caused by student driving after drinking alcoholic beverages in dormitory in violation of university rules. Baldwin v. Zoradi (1981) 123 Cal. App. 3d 275, 286, 295, 176 Cal. Rptr. 809

[p] Special Relationships

Duty to warn another who may be endangered by conduct of third party arises if special relationship exists between actor and another that gives another right to protection; commonly recognized special relationships are those between common carriers and passengers, innkeepers and guests, andpossessors of land and those entering at owner's invitation. Peterson v. San Francisco Cmty. Coll. Dist. (1984) 36 Cal. 3d 799, 806, 205 Cal. Rptr. 842, 685 P.2d 1193

Absent special relationship between parties, no duty exists to control conduct of third person to prevent him or her from causing harm to another. Richards v. Stanley (1954) 43 Cal. 2d 60, 65, 271 P.2d 23

General objective to "preserve, protect, and police" common areas as stated in bylaws and related covenants for privately owned community did not create special relationship imposing duty on property owners' association to prevent resident from driving while drunk and killing another resident. Titus v. Canyon Lake Property Owners Assn. (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 906, 911-913, 13 Cal. Rptr. 3d 807

Paramedics did not have special relationship with person they were transporting voluntarily to hospital, even though person was clearly acting erratically; therefore, paramedics had no affirmative duty to prevent person from escaping ambulance on arrival at hospital and were not liable for failing to protect her from her own suicidal, reckless, or irrational conduct when she was subsequently hit by car and killed. Hernandez v. KWPH Enters. (2004) 116 Cal. App. 4th 170, 181, 10 Cal. Rptr. 3d 137

Although duty of care was imposed based on analysis of Rowland factors, special relationship existed between Boy

Scouts and 12-year-old scout sufficient to impose duty on organization to take steps to protect scout from harm caused by sexual molestation by troop leader. Juarez v. Boy Scouts of Am., Inc. (2000) 81 Cal. App. 4th 377, 410-411, 97 Cal. Rptr. 2d 12

Christian Scientist Church and its members have no legal duty of care based on special relationship with seriously ill child who died after failing to respond to Church's spiritual practices; child's father was present and exercised legal control over decisions regarding choice of treatment for child, and only father could possibly be liable for failure to exercise proper judgment concerning whether to seek conventional medical treatment. Quigley v. First Church of Christ, Scientist (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 1027, 1034-1035, 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 792

Special relationship among parties created if defendant's action is equivalent to inviting or enticing incompetent driver to tamper with vehicle. Avis Rent a Car Sys., Inc. v. Superior Court (1993) 12 Cal. App. 4th 221, 233, 15 Cal. Rptr. 2d 711

No special relationship exists between adoption agency and natural mother who gives child up for adoption that would place duty on agency to inform mother years later when it discovers that child has genetically transmitted disease. Olson v. Children's Home Soc'y (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 1362, 1365-1367, 252 Cal. Rptr. 11

If avoidance of foreseeable harm requires defendant to control or warn of conduct of another person, liability incurred only if defendant bears some special relationship to dangerous person or potential victim. Lundy v. California Realty (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 813, 819, 216 Cal. Rptr. 575

Special relationship creating duty to control conduct of third person requires knowledge of specific risk to identifiable and foreseeable victim. Megeff v. Doland (1981) 123 Cal. App. 3d 251, 257, 176 Cal. Rptr. 467

One who takes charge of third person whom he or she knows or should know is likely to cause bodily harm to others if not controlled, is under duty to exercise reasonable care to control third person to prevent harm. Megeff v. Doland (1981) 123 Cal. App. 3d 251, 257, 176 Cal. Rptr. 467

Trend favors expansion of list of special relationships justifying imposing liability and duty to aid or protect in any relation of dependence or mutual dependence. Pamela L. v. Farmer (1980) 112 Cal. App. 3d 206, 211, 169 Cal. Rptr. 282 ; Mann v. State of California (1977) 70 Cal. App. 3d 773, 779-780, 139 Cal. Rptr. 82

Mere presence in social group does not create special relationship necessary to impose duty to control conduct of third person to prevent physical harm to another person. Ronald M. v. White (1980) 112 Cal. App. 3d 473, 476, 169 Cal. Rptr. 370

Absent special relationship, defendant under no duty to control conduct of another. Bartell v. Palos Verdes Peninsula Sch. Dist. (1978) 83 Cal. App. 3d 492, 498, 147 Cal. Rptr. 898

Once traffic officer has chosen to investigate plight of specific persons on freeway, special relationship arises and liability attaches if officer breached limited duty to protect under these special circumstances. Mann v. State of California (1977) 70 Cal. App. 3d 773, 780, 139 Cal. Rptr. 82

[q] Statutory Definition

Civ. Code § 1714(a) (liability for negligence) states civil law, not common law principle. Rowland v. Christian (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 108, 111-112, 70 Cal. Rptr. 97, 443 P.2d 561

Civ. Code § 1714 imposes duty on every person to exercise reasonable care to avoid injury to every other person; however, Civ. Code § 1714 does not establish legal duty of defendant in any particular case. Lundy v. California Realty (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 813, 818, 216 Cal. Rptr. 575

[r] Voluntary Assumption of Duty

Although one need do nothing to rescue another from peril not of that individual's own making, person entering affirmative course of conduct affecting interests of another assumes duty to act and incurs liability for negligent acts or omissions. Schwartz v. Helms Bakery Ltd. (1967) 67 Cal. 2d 232, 238, 60 Cal. Rptr. 510, 430 P.2d 68

Evidence regarding hiring of security guards to patrol open air market did not show that landlord of market voluntarily assumed duty to safeguard property of market's tenants, and therefore landlord not liable for theft from tenant's stall. Rotman v. Maclin Mkts., Inc. (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 1709, 1715-1716, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 130

Defendant who voluntarily undertakes to render services to another person that defendant should recognize as necessary for protection of third party, has duty to third party to exercise reasonable care; defendant liable to third party for breach of this duty if (1) defendant's failure to exercise reasonable care increases risk of harm to third party, (2) defendant has undertaken to perform duty owed by another person to third party, or (3) third partysuffers harm because either third party or person to whom defendant rendered services relied on defendant's undertaking. FNS Mortgage Serv. Corp. v. Pacific Gen. Group, Inc. (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 1564, 1572-1573, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 916 ; but see Johnson v. County of Ventura (1994) 29 Cal. App. 4th 1400, 1406, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 150

Once voluntary act performed, "good Samaritan" not required to continue rendering aid indefinitely. Baker v. City of Los Angeles (1986) 188 Cal. App. 3d 902, 907, 233 Cal. Rptr. 760

Defendant who begins affirmative course of conduct affecting interests of another assumes duty to act and incurs liability for negligent acts or omissions; one who undertakes an act is required to do it with care. Bloomberg v. Interinsurance Exch. (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 571, 575, 207 Cal. Rptr. 853

One who voluntarily assumes duty is required to exercise reasonable care in performing that duty; plaintiff may combine this theory with different negligence theory if warranted by facts. White v. Uniroyal, Inc. (1984) 155 Cal. App. 3d 1, 33-34, 202 Cal. Rptr. 141

[5] Elements of Cause of Action for Negligence

Elements of cause of action for negligence: (1) legal duty to use due care, (2) breach of that duty; (3) reasonably close causal connection between that breach and resulting injury; and (4) actual loss or damage. Wylie v. Gresch (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 412, 416, 236 Cal. Rptr. 552

Four essential elements of cause of action for negligence: (1) defendant's legal duty of care to plaintiff; (2) defendant's breach of duty by negligent act or omission; (3) injury to plaintiff as result of breach; and (4) compensable damages. Robertson v. Wentz (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1281, 1287, 232 Cal. Rptr. 634

Actionable negligence: (1) defendant's legal duty to use due care; (2) breach of that duty; and (3) breach as proximate (or legal) cause of plaintiff's resulting injury. Valdez v. J.D. Diffenbaugh Co. (1975) 51 Cal. App. 3d 494, 504, 124 Cal. Rptr. 467

Cause of action for negligence: (1) duty of defendant with respect to injured person's injury; (2) violation of that duty; (3) causal relation between defendant's conduct and injury suffered; and (4) plaintiff's loss, that is, damages. Premo v.

Grigg (1965) 237 Cal. App. 2d 192, 195, 46 Cal. Rptr. 683

Pleading proximate cause in general terms. Eads v. Marks (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 807, 812, 249 P.2d 257

Pleading duty arising from contract. Eads v. Marks (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 807, 811-812, 249 P.2d 257

Complaint is required to set forth only essential facts with reasonable precision and with sufficient particularity to acquaint defendant with nature, source, and extent of cause of action. Rannard v. Lockheed Aircraft Corp. (1945) 26 Cal. 2d 149, 156-157, 157 P.2d 1

Pleading duty arising from statute. Routh v. Quinn (1942) 20 Cal. 2d 488, 491-492, 127 P.2d 1

Alleging negligent act or omission. Guilliams v. Hollywood Hosp. (1941) 18 Cal. 2d 97, 101-102, 114 P.2d 1

Denial on lack of information and belief is sufficient if matter is not presumably within defendant's knowledge. Jensen v. Dorr (1911) 159 Cal. 742, 747, 116 P. 553

Allegation for personal injuries suffered by peace officer that defendant's act of "slumping or going limp" caused plaintiff's knee to be injured was generally sufficient to state cause of action for negligence. Gibb v. Stetson (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 1008, 1012, 245 Cal. Rptr. 283

Facts from which jury could conclude that city should have warned employee of fellow employee's dangerous propensities are sufficiently alleged if employee was dating fellow employee, fellow employee was parolee who had been convicted of kidnapping, rape, and sexual assault, and employee had previously complained to supervisors that fellow employee had sexually harassed her. Duffy v. City of Oceanside (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 666, 674-675, 224 Cal. Rptr. 879

Facts alleged in complaint and not controverted in answer are not in issue. Carlton v. Superior Court (1968) 261 Cal. App. 2d 282, 289, 67 Cal. Rptr. 568

Cause of action in tort may be based on violation of statute. Miglierini v. Havemann (1966) 240 Cal. App. 2d 570, 573, 49 Cal. Rptr. 795

Complaint did not state cause of action based on negligence. Miglierini v. Havemann (1966) 240 Cal. App. 2d 570, 573, 49 Cal. Rptr. 795

Failure of complaint to state facts sufficient to constitute cause of action is proper affirmative defense. Bracker v. American Nat'l Food, Inc. (1955) 133 Cal. App. 2d 338, 339-340, 284 P.2d 163

Plaintiff must plead facts showing causal connection between defendant's negligence and plaintiff's injury as necessary. Potter v. Richards (1955) 132 Cal. App. 2d 380, 384-385, 282 P.2d 113

New matter is something relied on by defendant that is not put in issue by plaintiff and that must be pleaded by defendant. Jetty v. Craco (1954) 123 Cal. App. 2d 876, 880, 267 P.2d 1055

Plaintiff must plead facts showing existence of duty as necessary. Pascoe v. Southern Cal. Edison Co. (1951) 102 Cal. App. 2d 254, 259, 227 P.2d 555

Affirmative allegation in answer contrary to plaintiff's allegation is equivalent of denial. Elliott v. Bertsch (1943) 59 Cal. App. 2d 543, 546-547, 139 P.2d 332

[7] Verdicts

Special verdicts are valid in negligence actions even though jurors who do not join in negligence special verdict vote on proximate cause special verdict; judgment permitted to be entered on both special verdicts although nine identical jurors are not in agreement on questions of negligence and proximate cause. Resch v. Volkswagen of Am., Inc. (1984) 36 Cal. 3d 676, 682, 205 Cal. Rptr. 827, 685 P.2d 1178

Special verdicts apportioning damages in negligence actions are valid if they command votes of any nine jurors, who agree both that defendant isnegligent and that negligence is proximate cause of plaintiff's injuries. Juarez v. Superior Court (1982) 31 Cal. 3d 759, 768, 183 Cal. Rptr. 852, 647 P.2d 128

§ 380.212 Decisions

[1] Res Ipsa Loquitur

Doctrine is inapplicable if court must enter into field of conjecture to determine whether necessary elements are present, if conclusions based on that conjecture contradict experience reflected in judicial opinions and overlookequally probable explanations of accident. Brown v. Poway Unified Sch. Dist. (1993) 4 Cal. 4th 820, 828, 15 Cal. Rptr. 2d 679, 843 P.2d 624

Experience teaches that slips and falls are not so likely to be result of negligence that presumption to that effect is justified. Brown v. Poway Unified Sch. Dist. (1993) 4 Cal. 4th 820, 826-828, 15 Cal. Rptr. 2d 679, 843 P.2d 624

Issue of existence of conditions for application of doctrine of res ipsa loquitur is usually a question of fact for the jury, but all three conditions may exist as a matter of law. Newing v. Cheatham (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 351, 359, 124 Cal. Rptr. 193, 540 P.2d 33

Plaintiff is entitled to have jury instructed on res ipsa loquitur if sufficient evidence is presented to support conclusion that all elements of doctrine have been established. Kerr v. Bock (1971) 5 Cal. 3d 321, 323-325, 95 Cal. Rptr. 788, 486 P.2d 684

Plaintiff is entitled to establish that it was more probable than not that defendant's negligence caused accident by showing that defendant was responsible for all reasonably probable causes to which accident could be attributed; plaintiff is not required to exclude all other possible causes, including his or her own conduct. Shahinian v. McCormick (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 554, 559, 30 Cal. Rptr. 521, 381 P.2d 377

"Res ipsa loquitur," translated from Latin, means "the thing (or affair) speaks for itself." Zentz v. Coca Cola Bottling

Co. (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 436, 440, 247 P.2d 344

Application of doctrine is appropriate even if defendant is not in better position than plaintiff to explain what occurred if it appears more probable than not that injury resulted from negligence on defendant's part. Zentz v. Coca Cola Bottling Co. (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 436, 445, 247 P.2d 344

Application of doctrine is justified if defendant has superior knowledge of what occurred and if chief evidence of cause of accident may be accessible to defendant but inaccessible to plaintiff. Ybarra v. Spangard (1944) 25 Cal. 2d 486, 490, 154 P.2d 687

Trial court's determination that bone fragment in ground beef could not have been larger than one-eighth of inch and that no one could reasonably expect defendant to remove it from ground beef made doctrine of res ipsa loquitur inapplicable; trial court's determination was same as finding that fragment's presence could not be attributed to lack of due care, actual or presumed. Ford v. Miller Meat Co. (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 1196, 1203, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 899

Jury was entitled to rely on its own common knowledge in determining standard of care in medical malpractice action that arose after defendant left cap from surgical instrument in plaintiff's hip during surgery; cap was sufficiently large to have layperson apply common knowledge in assessing negligence; opinion of four physicians that defendant was not negligent, as opposed to only one who testified to contrary, did not preclude jury from relying on its common knowledge; under doctrine of res ipsa loquitur, proper to instruct jury that it can infer negligence from happening of accident itself, if it finds, based on common knowledge, the testimony of physicians called as expert witnesses, and all the circumstances, that the injury was more likely than not the result of negligence. Gannon v. Elliot (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 1, 6-11, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 86

Nonsuit in negligence action based on res ipsa loquitur is proper if plaintiff failed to present expert testimony regarding alleged medical malpractice or even describe precise nature of injury. Zavala v. Board of Trs. (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 1755, 1764-1765, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 768

Plaintiffs are not entitled to application of res ipsa loquitur doctrine in action for damages to real property caused by a fire, if evidence indicated two possible causes for the fire, only one of which was under defendant's control. Gicking v. Kimberlin (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 73, 76-77, 215 Cal. Rptr. 834

In some circumstances, court is entitled to take judicial notice of fact that certain events are ordinarily caused by someone's negligence. Hinckley v. La Mesa R. V. Ctr., Inc. (1984) 158 Cal. App. 3d 630, 640, 205 Cal. Rptr. 22 (fire in relatively new vehicle ordinarily does not occur in absence of negligence)

When fire in motorhome was allegedly caused by defendant's negligent wiring, fact that plaintiff had inspected wiring after vehicle left defendant's actual control did nto preclude finding that agency or instrumentality causing fire was under defendant's exclusive control. Hinckley v. La Mesa R. V. Ctr., Inc. (1984) 158 Cal. App. 3d 630, 640-641, 205 Cal. Rptr. 22

Issue of applicability of doctrine properly taken from jury if one element was nonexistent as matter of law. Fuller v. Sears, Roebuck & Co. (1982) 136 Cal. App. 3d Supp. 1, 7 , 186 Cal. Rptr. 26

Plaintiff entitled to directed verdict on liability if plaintiff presented uncontro verted evidence supporting all three elements required for application of doctrine of res ipsa loquitur, and defendant failed to produce evidence sufficient to rebut presumption. Sanchez v. Bay Gen. Hosp. (1981) 116 Cal. App. 3d 776, 786-789, 172 Cal. Rptr. 342

Factor of greater probability of defendant's negligence is fundamental basis of doctrine. Folk v. Kilk (1975) 53 Cal. App. 3d 176, 184-185, 126 Cal. Rptr. 172

Conditional res ipsa loquitur jury instruction proper if there is conflict in evidence on one or more elements of doctrine, but evidence could support finding that elements were satisfied. Cline v. Lund (1973) 31 Cal. App. 3d 755, 763-764, 107 Cal. Rptr. 629

Trial court properly refused proposed res ipsa loquitur instruction if defendant to whom doctrine did not apply was included in scope of instruction. Clemens v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (1970) 8 Cal. App. 3d 1, 14, 87 Cal. Rptr. 108

[2] Violation of Statute, Ordinance, or Regulation

Pursuant to legislative amendment to Lab. Code § 6304.5, effective January 1, 2000, Cal-OSHA workplace safety statutes and regulations may be used to establish negligence in action brought by injured worker against party who is not worker's employer, eliminating exception that had existed since 1971; exception still exists in action against state for taking or failing to take actions in regulatory capacity. Elsner v. Uveges (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 915, 935-939, 22 Cal. Rptr. 3d 530, 102 P.3d 915

Violation of guidelines concerning investigation of accidents by Highway Patrol officers forms basis of negligence per se instruction if subject would be exposed to disciplinary action for ignoring guidelines. Clemente v. State of California (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 202, 214-216, 219 Cal. Rptr. 445, 707 P.2d 818

Fact that manufacturer of airplane complied with safety regulations applicable to airplane's design did not preclude finding that design was defective. Elsworth v. Beech Aircraft Corp. (1984) 37 Cal. 3d 540, 550, 208 Cal. Rptr. 874, 691 P.2d 630

Presumption of negligence set forth in Evid. Code § 669 applicable to violation of temporary restraining order. Stafford v. United Farm Workers (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 319, 324, 188 Cal. Rptr. 600, 656 P.2d 564

Violation of police department's internal regulations regarding police use of firearms created presumption of negligence. Peterson v. City of Long Beach (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 238, 243-244, 155 Cal. Rptr. 360, 594 P.2d 477

Fact that plaintiff is unsuccessful in establishing presumption of negligence based on statutory violation doess not preclude finding of negligence if plaintiff establishes basic elements of negligence cause of action. Nunneley v. Edgar Hotel (1950) 36 Cal. 2d 493, 500-501, 225 P.2d 497 (defendant found negligent despite plaintiff's failure to establish all elements required to create presumption of negligence)

School district not liable for failing to report suspected child abuse as required by Child Abuse and Neglect Reporting Act, Pen. Code § 11164 et seq., in action by students abused by substitute teacher while he was employed by different school district after employment with defendant had ended, as Act was intended to protect students under current custodial care of reporter; 2000 amendments to statute did not abrogate similar holding of Randi W. v. Muroc Joint Unified School Dist. (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 1066, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 263, 929 P.2d 582 . P.S. v. San Bernardino City Unified School Dist. (2009) 174 Cal. App. 4th 953, 964-965, 94 Cal. Rptr. 3d 788

State building code regulation placing slope restriction on disability parking spaces and adjacent access aisles was intended to facilitate transition of disabled persons, particularly those in wheelchairs, from vehicle to pavement and was not designed to prevent injury to pedestrian who falls while walking across unoccupied parking space, even if injured party happens to have disability. Urhausen v. Longs Drug Stores California, Inc. (2007) 155 Cal. App. 4th 254, 268-270, 65 Cal. Rptr. 3d 838

Statute prohibiting parking vehicle on sidewalk was not designed to protect party from being struck by different vehicle

that jumped curb for reason unrelated to presence on sidewalk of illegally parked vehicle. Victor v. Hedges (1999) 77 Cal. App. 4th 229, 238, 91 Cal. Rptr. 2d 466

Jury finding that statute regulating employee housing conditions did not apply to farmer who allowed migrant farmworkers to occupy land under his control, would not preclude finding that farmer breached common-law duty to provide reasonably safe housing that was found to exist independent of statute. Reyes v. Kosha (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 451, 465 n.5, 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 457

Evid. Code § 669 creates presumption of negligence only when negligence duty of care is first proven to exist under circumstances; if statute, ordinance, or regulation allegedly violated creates duty that is not negligence duty of care, violation of that statute, ordinance, or regulation does not create presumption of negligence. California Serv. Station & Auto. Repair Ass'n v. American Home Assurance Co. (1998) 62 Cal. App. 4th 1166, 1176-1180, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 182 ; see also Rosales v. City of Los Angeles (2000) 82 Cal. App. 4th 419, 430, 98 Cal. Rptr. 2d 144

Violator of ordinance requiring abutting landowners to maintain public sidewalk owes duty to city, not to pedestrian who slipped and fell on dog excrement; trial court erred in instructing on negligence per se doctrine, because ordinance did not clearly and unambiguously create duty of care owing to pedestrians. Selger v. Steven Bros., Inc. (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 1585, 1590-1591, 272 Cal. Rptr. 544

City within class of persons whose property was intended to be protected by city fire code. City of Los Angeles v. Shpegel-Dimsey, Inc. (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 1009, 1021, 244 Cal. Rptr. 507

Building code requirement of fences at construction sites is designed to protect pedestrians from construction-related accidents on public walkways, not to protect plaintiff who dove into shallow water off reconstructed pier. Fredette v. City of Long Beach (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 122, 136, 231 Cal. Rptr. 598

Statute requiring school districts to provide special education programs to handicapped children not intended to "protect" parents from having to pay costs of alternative care. Keech v. Berkeley Unified Sch. Dist. (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 464, 470-471, 210 Cal. Rptr. 7

Violation of statute, ordinance, or regulation is question of fact for jury to decide. Cade v. Mid-City Hosp. Corp. (1975) 45 Cal. App. 3d 589, 596-597, 119 Cal. Rptr. 571

One injured by dog as result of violation of leash ordinance is entitled to recover damages against dog's owner. Rollins v. Hedin (1952) 114 Cal. App. 2d 488, 490, 250 P.2d 728

33-380 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 380.232

AUTHOR: MICHAEL S. FIELDS CONTRIBUTING EDITORIAL CONSULTANT Mr. Fields is a private practitioner in Beverly Hills who has specialized in personal injury litigation since 1969.

§ 380.232 Decisions

[1] Joint and Several Liability

Joint and several liability requires that tortfeasor whose negligence was proximate cause of an indivisible injury remain liable for total amount of damages, regardless of comparative fault; Proposition 51 provides that defendant in any action for personal injury is liable only for amount of noneconomic damages allocated to that defendant in direct proportion to that defendant's percentage of fault; Proposition 51 abolished need for equitable indemnity among multiple tortfeasors. General Motors Corp. v. Doupnik (9th Cir. 1993) 1 F.3d 862, 865-866

[2] Strict Liability

Whether activity is ultrahazardous and liability therefore applies in absence of negligence is determined by considering several factors and weight given to each as merited by evidence; issue, by its very nature, is one that cannot be decided on demurrer. Travelers Indem. Co. v. City of Redondo Beach (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 1432, 1444, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 337

[3] Vicarious Liability: Employer and Employee

Although workers' compensation cases can be helpful in determining employer's vicarious liability for employee's torts, cases are not controlling precedent if liability based on respondeat superior principles. Perez v. Van Groningen & Sons, Inc. (1986) 41 Cal. 3d 962, 967 n.2, 227 Cal. Rptr. 106, 719 P.2d 676

Whether or not negligent act was committed within scope of employment is question of fact and burden of proof is with plaintiff. Ducey v. Argo Sales Co. (1979) 25 Cal. 3d 707, 721-722, 159 Cal. Rptr. 835, 602 P.2d 755

City was not liable for arson fire set by city fire marshal while inspecting building in official capacity; fire marshal's act was so startling and unusual an occurrence as to be outside risks that should fairly be imposed on his public employer. Thorn v. City of Glendale (1994) 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1

Employer was not liable under doctrine of respondeat superior for injuries sustained by plaintiff struck by employer's van driven by employee who was then engaging in purely personal activity of driving his children to school before going home; different result was not compelled by fact that employee was on call 24 hours a day. Le Elder v. Rice (1994) 21 Cal. App. 4th 1604, 1607-1610, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 749

City was not liable under doctrine of respondeat superior for injuries sustained by police officer who was accidentally shot by fellow officer with whom he was socializing after duty hours, because officer was not acting within scope of his employment at time of shooting; fact that city expected loaded weapon to be on officer's person while off duty in order to respond to emergencies did not render city responsible under doctrine for accidental discharge of weapon. Henriksen v. City of Rialto (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 1612, 1617-1622, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 308

Analytically, question of whether tort is committed within course of employment turns on whether (1) act performed was either required or incident to employee's duties, or (2) employee's misconduct could reasonably be foreseen as outgrowth of employee's duties. Spradlin v. Cox (1988) 247 Cal. Rptr. 347

Employer is liable for injury caused by employee during personal errand if errand was foreseeable and minor deviation from employee's duties. Lazar v. Thermal Equip. Corp. (1983) 148 Cal. App. 3d 458, 465, 195 Cal. Rptr. 890

Good faith settlement by employee does not release employer jointly liable based on respondeat superior. Mayhugh v. County of Orange (1983) 141 Cal. App. 3d 763, 767, 190 Cal. Rptr. 537

Employer is vicariously liable under doctrine of respondeat superior for negligence of intoxicated employee driving home after attending Christmas party given at employer's premises during work hours and at which employer encouraged employee to drink excessive amounts of alcohol. Harris v. Trojan Fireworks Co. (1981) 120 Cal. App. 3d 157, 165, 174 Cal. Rptr. 452

Employer is generally liable for torts of employee committed within scope of employment. Golden W. Broadcasters, Inc. v. Superior Court (1981) 114 Cal. App. 3d 947, 956, 171 Cal. Rptr. 95

Doctrine of respondeat superior is grounded on deeply rooted sentiment that business enterprise cannot justly disclaim responsibility for accidents characteristic of its activities; respondeat superior includes liability for employee's intentional tort as well as negligence. Rodgers v. Kemper Constr. Co. (1975) 50 Cal. App. 3d 608, 618, 124 Cal. Rptr. 143

§ 380.251 Decisions

[1] Motion for Summary Adjudication

If plaintiff pleads two separate and distinct causes of action as single cause of action, defendant is entitled to file summary adjudication motion challenging one of the distinct causes of action. Lilienthal & Fowler v. Superior Court (1993) 12 Cal. App. 4th 1848, 1852-1855, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 458

Motion for summary adjudication is not appropriate method of challenging legal sufficiency of opposing party's pleadings; motion for judgment on pleadings must be filed. Merenda v. Superior Court (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 1, 6, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 87

Summary adjudication motion is not proper to determine that punitive damages claim has merit; defendant is entitled to jury trial on issue. Haines v. Parra (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 1553, 1559-1561, 239 Cal. Rptr. 178

Summary adjudication order eliminates necessity of proving or disproving claim or defense at trial. Conway v. Bughouse, Inc. (1980) 105 Cal. App. 3d 194, 202, 164 Cal. Rptr. 585

[2] Statutes of Limitations

Damages are sufficient to make limitations period begin running if appreciable and actual harm consist of more than nominal damages. Davies v. Krasna (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 502, 514, 121 Cal. Rptr. 705, 535 P.2d 1161 ; City of San Diego v. United States Gypsum Co. (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 575, 582, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 876

Cause of action against manufacturer of intrauterine device for personal injuries of abortion and unwanted pregnancy accrued when injuries incurred, rather than seven years later when plaintiff learned of facts constituting possible fraud regarding pregnancy rate associated with device; plaintiff knew of or was able to discover cause of action for personal injury action based on undesirable side effect of device at time injuries sustained. Snow v. A.H. Robins Co. (1985) 165 Cal. App. 3d 120, 128-131, 211 Cal. Rptr. 271

Delayed accrual of cause of action that postpones running of statute of limitations applies to actions based on fraud and progressively developing or continuing wrongs if nature, extent, or permanence of harm are difficult to discover; cause of action in fraud against manufacturer of intrauterine device based on allegedly false and fraudulent representations accrued when plaintiff learned of facts constituting possible fraud, rather than when plaintiff's injuries first appeared. Snow v. A.H. Robins Co. (1985) 165 Cal. App. 3d 120, 127, 134-135, 211 Cal. Rptr. 271

If physical injury is essential element of cause of action, period of limitations does not commence until injury has occurred, even though this may be some time after occurrence of wrongful act. Aldaco v. Tropic Ice Cream Co. (1980) 110 Cal. App. 3d 523, 526, 168 Cal. Rptr. 59

Manner of pleading statute of limitations in answer was proper. Brown v. World Church (1969) 272 Cal. App. 2d 684, 691, 77 Cal. Rptr. 669

Defense of statute of limitations must be raised by defendant. Dicker v. Bisno (1957) 155 Cal. App. 2d 554, 560, 318 P.2d 159

§ 380.272 Decisions

[1] Assumption of Risk

General rule limiting duty of care of coparticipant in active sports to avoidance of intentional and reckless misconduct is applicable to participants engaged in noncompetitive but active sports activity, such as ski boat driver towing water-skier. Ford v. Gouin (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 339, 345, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 30, 834 P.2d 724

Duty of care is reduced by either express agreement or "primary assumption of risk." Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 308 n. 4, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696

In "primary assumption of risk," by virtue of nature of activity and parties' relationship to activity, defendant owes no legal duty to protect plaintiff from particular risk of harm that caused injury; doctrine operates as complete bar to plaintiff's recovery. Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 314-315, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696 ; see also O'Donoghue v. Bear Mountain Ski Resort (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 188, 192-193, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 467

In "secondary assumption of risk," defendant owes duty of care to plaintiff who proceeds to encounter known risk imposed by defendant's breach of duty; doctrine is merged into comparative fault scheme; trier of fact, in apportioning loss resulting from injury, is entitled to consider parties' relative responsibility. Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 315, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696

Use of "reasonable implied assumption of risk"/"unreasonable implied assumption of risk" terminology, as means of differentiating between cases in which plaintiff is barred from bringing action and those in which plaintiff is not barred, is more misleading than helpful. Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 309-310, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696

Question whether defendant owed legal duty to protect plaintiff from particular risk is not answered by reference to reasonableness of plaintiff's conduct, but by reference to nature of activity or sport in which defendant is engaged and relationship of defendant and plaintiff to that activity or sport. Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 309, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696

Participant in active sport breaches legal duty of care to other participants only if participant intentionally injures coparticipant, engages in conduct so reckless as to be totally outside range of ordinary activity involved in sport, or increases risk beyond risk inherent in sport. Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 320-321, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696 ; see also Freeman v. Hale (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 1388, 1393, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 418 ; Wattenbarger v. Cincinnati Reds, Inc. (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 746, 754, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 732 ; Yancey v. Superior Court (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 558, 566-567, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 777

Terminology distinguishing between "reasonable" and "unreasonable" implied assumption of risk is disapproved. Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 307, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696

Defense of assumption of risk, insofar as it is variant of contributory negligence, and defense of last clear chance are subsumed under general process of assessing liability in proportion to fault, and are not recognized as separate defenses. Li v. Yellow Cab. Co. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 804, 826, 119 Cal. Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d 1226

Assumption of risk as variant of contributory negligence exists if plaintiff unreasonably undertakes to encounter specific known risk imposed by defendant's negligence. Li v. Yellow Cab Co. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 804, 824, 119 Cal. Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d 1226

Assumption of risk is not variant of contributory negligence, and therefore is still viable defense, if plaintiff agrees to relieve defendant of obligation of reasonable conduct toward plaintiff. Li v. Yellow Cab Co. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 804, 824-825, 119 Cal. Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d 1226

Owners of cattle ranch who had invited friends to ranch for barbecue could not be held liable for injuries to guest who asked to ride one of their horses, assured owners that she had ridden before, but was injured when she lost control of horse, which broke into gallop and swerved suddenly, throwing her into fence; primary assumption of risk provided defense to owners, who had no reason to suspect that horse would bolt, did nothing to increase risks inherent in riding, and were entitled to take guest at word when she assured them she had experience as rider. Levinson v. Owens (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 1534, 1549-1551, 98 Cal. Rptr. 3d 779

Triable issue of fact as to whether stable that provided horses for recreational trail riding could be held liable for increasing risks inherent in activity; conflicting evidence existed as to whether defendant's trail guide told riders that he wanted to increase gait of horses from walk to gallop, as he admitted would be proper course of conduct, or if instead he prompted his horse into gallop without notice, causing plaintiff's horse to also bolt into gallop unexpectedly and throw her from saddle. Cohen v. Five Brooks Stable (2008) 159 Cal. App. 4th 1476, 1494-1495, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 471

Triable issue of fact existed regarding whether ski resort increased inherent risks of downhill skiing by converting ordinary slope into racing slope without properly marking area. Solis v. Kirkwood Resort Co. (2001) 94 Cal. App. 4th 354, 365-367, 114 Cal. Rptr. 2d 265

Instructors of junior lifeguards had no duty to decrease inherent risk of injuries to students by instructing them to walk down beach and check ocean floor for uneven terrain before swimming. Lupash v. City of Seal Beach (1999) 75 Cal. App. 4th 1428, 1437-1439, 89 Cal. Rptr. 2d 920

Triable issue existed as to whether defendant's use of snowboard without retention strap increased risks to plaintiff beyond those inherent in skiing. Campbell v. Derylo (1999) 75 Cal. App. 4th 823, 830, 89 Cal. Rptr. 2d 519

River rafting company was not liable for injury sustained by passenger on metal-framed river raft who was allowed to sit in rear of raft and was injured when she hit her head on the metal frame when raft hit rapids; primary assumption of risk was applicable because rafting is inherently risky activity, metal framed rafts were industry norm, plaintiff was aware of risks, and guide had admonished plaintiff to hold on as raft approached rapids. Ferrari v. Grand Canyon Dories (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 248, 257, 38 Cal. Rptr. 2d 65

Under doctrine of "secondary assumption of risk," premises owner and organization sponsoring dance had no legal duty to protect plaintiff against inherent risks of social dancing, which may include falling, but had duty to use due care not to increase risk by making floor too slippery; defendants were not entitled to summary judgment against plaintiff who attended dance and fell because soap flakes had been applied to dance floor to make it slippery but had not been thoroughly swept up. Bush v. Parents Without Partners (1993) 17 Cal. App. 4th 322, 329, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 178

"Secondary assumption of risk" applied to firefighter who slipped and fell on wet steps on defendant's premises while conducting a fire safety inspection. Donohue v. San Francisco Hous. Auth. (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 658, 665-666, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 148

"Secondary assumption of risk" applied to strict products liability claim; "primary assumption of risk" was inapplicable to bar plaintiff's claim because manufacturer had duty to produce defect-free product. Milwaukee Elec. Tool Corp. v. Superior Court (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 547, 562, 565-566, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 24

"Secondary assumption of risk" applied to case in which both plaintiff-tenant and defendant-landlord had notice of danger of sloping lawn area on defendant's property, but plaintiff nevertheless proceeded to walk on area and sustained injury. Curties v. Hill Top Developers, Inc. (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 1651, 1656, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 445

"Secondary assumption of risk" applied to student's suit against school district for injuries he sustained during school recess after he joined other students in throwing dirt clods at each other; school district had statutorily-imposed duty to supervise students during recess; plaintiff could not, as matter of law, have voluntarily assumed risk that district would breach its statutorily-imposed duty of supervision. Lucas v. Fresno Unified Sch. Dist. (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 866, 872-873, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 79

[2] Comparative Negligence

Under comparative fault principles, damages are apportioned based on various causes contributing to plaintiff's harm as opposed to particular defendant's negligence; in action by residents living near landfill against tire company whose toxic waste disposal contaminated plaintiffs' water supply, comparative fault principles based on plaintiffs' cigarette smoking were applicable although plaintiffs' conduct did not contribute to water contamination, because conduct allegedly contributed to harm plaintiffs suffered, i.e., their fear of significantly increased risk of cancer; defendant had burden of establishing causal link between plaintiffs' smoking and harm suffered; if plaintiffs' smoking is negligent and portion of plaintiff's fear of developing cancer is attributable to smoking, court properly applyied comparative fault principles in determining extent to which plaintiff's emotional distress damages for this fear should be reduced to reflect proportion of these damages for which plaintiffs should bear responsibility. Potter v. Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 965, 1011-1012, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 550, 863 P.2d 795

Refusal to give instruction on comparative negligence regarding plaintiff's failure to wear helmet was proper if plaintiff had been advised by doctor to wear helmet after prior injury, but no evidence at trial clarified what type of helmet should have been worn, or whether helmet would have prevented particular injuries incurred. Clemente v. State of California (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 202, 217-218, 219 Cal. Rptr. 445, 707 P.2d 818

Plaintiff's negligence must be weighed against combined total of all other negligence, including that of nonparties, that was proximate cause of plaintiff's injuries. American Motorcycle Assn. v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 578, 589 n. 2, 146 Cal. Rptr. 182, 578 P.2d 899

Fundamental purpose of comparative negligence system is assigning responsibility and liability for damages in direct proportion to amount of each party's negligence. Li v. Yellow Cab Co. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 804, 828-829, 119 Cal. Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d 1226

All-or-nothing rule of contributory negligence has been replaced with rule of comparative negligence under which liability for damages is apportioned inaccordance with fault of persons whose negligence caused the injuries. Li v. Yellow Cab Co. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 804, 828-829, 119 Cal. Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d 1226

Under comparative negligence, plaintiff's contributory negligence does not bar recovery, but damages awarded must be diminished in proportion to amount of negligence attributable to plaintiff. Li v. Yellow Cab Co. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 804, 829, 119 Cal. Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d 1226

Use of special verdicts or jury interrogatories is not required, but is aid to jurors in assigning fault percentages and avoiding quotient verdicts. Li v. Yellow Cab Co. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 804, 824, 119 Cal. Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d 1226

Burden of proving plaintiff's contributory negligence for failing to use seat belt is on defendant, who must prove whether or not plaintiff in exercise of reasonable care should have used available seat belt and what injuries would have been sustained, according to expert testimony, if seat belt had been used. Franklin v. Gibson (1982) 138 Cal. App. 3d 340, 343-344, 188 Cal. Rptr. 23

Neither term "contributory negligence" nor concept of contributory negligence, meaning negligence on plaintiff's part contributing causally to plaintiff's injury, is abolished with doctrine of contributory negligence. Wittenbach v. Ryan (1976) 63 Cal. App. 3d 712, 718, 134 Cal. Rptr. 47

[3] Express Assumption of Risk

Public policy does not oppose private, voluntary transactions in which one party, for consideration, agrees to shoulder risk that law would otherwise have placed on other party. Tunkl v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (1963) 60 Cal. 2d 92, 101, 32 Cal. Rptr. 33, 383 P.2d 441

Exculpatory language in health club membership form that referenced only injuries arising "from the negligence or other acts of anyone else using [the club]" did not shield health club from liability when injured club member alleged that her injury was caused by club's own negligence in failing to inspect and keep clean exercise equipment. Zipusch v. LA Workout, Inc. (2007) 155 Cal. App. 4th 1281, 1290-1292, 66 Cal. Rptr. 3d 704

Release at racetrack was given to allow spectator to watch car race from close-up perspective of pit area while protecting track from liability for injuries caused by potentially dangerous racing activities; release did not extend to injuries caused by collapse of bleachers in pit area due to defective construction or maintenance, because no causal relationship existed between collapse and reason release was given. Sweat v. Big Time Auto Racing, Inc. (2004) 117 Cal. App. 4th 1301, 1306-1308, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 678

Triable issue of fact existed regarding whether liability release signed as part of weekday season ski pass extended to injury sustained while skiing on weekend pursuant to single-day pass that did not carry separate release agreement. Solis v. Kirkwood Resort Co. (2001) 94 Cal. App. 4th 354, 360-364, 114 Cal. Rptr. 2d 265

Express assumption of risk and release from liability in health club membership contract clearly and unambiguously covered injury to club member sustained while exercising under supervision of personal trainer employed by club. Lund v. Bally's Aerobic Plus, Inc. (2000) 78 Cal. App. 4th 733, 738-739, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 169

Skydiving company was not liable for death of skydiver over ocean because release executed while company was only operating jumps over inland areas was sufficiently unequivocal and broad enough in scope to apply to fatal jump. Paralift, Inc. v. Superior Court (1994) 23 Cal. App. 4th 748, 755-757, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 177

Agent and employee of entity to whom preinjury release was given and who was acting within course and scope of that agency and employment when accident occurred, was entitled to legal protection of release and waiver to same extent as entity, even though not specifically named in it. Madison v. Superior Court (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 589, 593 n. 2, 250 Cal. Rptr. 299

Rule is well established that in absence of fraud, overreaching, or excusable neglect, one who signs instrument may not avoid impact of its terms on ground that he or she failed to read it before signing it. Madison v. Superior Court (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 589, 596 n. 5, 250 Cal. Rptr. 299

Civ. Code § 1668 does not apply to every contract, but only to contracts that involve public interest; absent public interest involvement, Civ. Code § 1668 does not invalidate contracts that seek to exempt one from liability for simple negligence or for strict liability; releases signed by persons seeking to participate in scuba diving activities and classes do not involve a public interest. Madison v. Superior Court (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 589, 598-599, 250 Cal. Rptr. 299

Releases signed by motorcycle dirt bike riders did not involve public interest. Kurashige v. Indian Dunes, Inc. (1988) 200 Cal. App. 3d 606, 612, 246 Cal. Rptr. 310

Fact that releasor signs two exculpatory agreements releasing and indemnifying defendant from any liability does not necessarily create enough ambiguity to invalidate either agreement; general exculpatory language in one agreement for rental of ultralight aircraft and more specific language regarding negligence in related waiver and release did not create ambiguity; both exculpatory clauses were operative and barred plaintiff's action for negligence. Powers v. Superior Court (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 318, 320-322, 242 Cal. Rptr. 55

Release signed by participant in bicycle race releasing sponsors and cities valid, because bicycle racing is not compelled essential service of great public importance; no triable issue of fact existed as to whether release related to type of risk that caused participant's injuries. Okura v. United States Cycling Fed'n (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 1462, 1466-1468, 231 Cal. Rptr. 429

[4] Fireghter's Rule

Liability provided in Civ. Code § 1714.9(a)(1) (providing exception to firefighter's rule for conduct causing injury after person knows or has reason to know of presence of peace officer, firefighter, or emergency medical personnel) does not apply when peace officer, firefighter, or emergency medical personnel is negligently injured by fellow public safety member employed by different public safety agency when public safety personnel were jointly engaged in discharge of their responsibilities. Calatayud v. State of California (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1057, 1059-1060, 1068, 1072, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 202, 959 P.2d 360

Firefighter's rule not applicable to bar recovery by private safety employees injured in fire negligently started by employees of third party; by establishing public fire departments and taxing themselves to pay for their services, public in effect purchases exoneration from duty of care and is not required to pay twice, through taxation and individual liability, for those services; in contrast, defendant whose negligence injures private safety employees employed by another does not have same relationship with those private safety employees as member of public has with publicly-employed firefighters, because defendant has not paid to be relieved of duty of care owed toward private employees. Neighbarger v. Irwin Indus., Inc. (1994) 8 Cal. 4th 532, 541-545, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 630, 882 P.2d 347

Firefighter's rule not separate concept, but example of application of assumption of riskdoctrine set forth in Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 313, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696 ; proper basis for rule is not plaintiff's voluntary acceptance of known risk of injury in course of employment, but rather public policy determination that person who negligently starts fire does not owe duty of care to protect responding firefighter from very danger that requires firefighter's presence. Neighbarger v. Irwin Indus., Inc. (1994) 8 Cal. 4th 532, 541, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 630, 882 P.2d 347

Application of firefighter's rule to veterinarians and veterinary assistants tenuous if based on veterinarian's or veterinary assistant's subjective acceptance of foreseeable occupational hazard of dog bites; however, application of rule may be sound if based on defendant's relationship with plaintiff and defendant's conduct in entrusting animal to plaintiff's professional care and control. Neighbarger v. Irwin Indus., Inc. (1994) 8 Cal. 4th 532, 541, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 630, 882 P.2d 347

Rationale for firefighter's rule is "primary assumption of risk" theory that party who negligently started fire has no legal duty to protect firefighters from very danger that they are employed to confront. Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 309-310 n.5, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696 ; Cohen v. McIntyre (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 650, 654-655, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 143

Rule does not protect defendant who commits independent acts of misconduct after firefighters or police officers have arrived on premises; firefighter entitled to recover damages for personal injuries sustained as result of defendant's negligent or intentional misrepresentation of nature of hazard that firefighter was called to confront. Lipson v. Superior Court (1982) 31 Cal. 3d 362, 373, 182 Cal. Rptr. 629, 644 P.2d 822 (misrepresentation as to toxic nature of chemicals involved in boil-over)

If defendant's maintenance of ultrahazardous activity or condition produces separate injury, firefighter entitled to seek recovery on theory of strict liability; firefighter's rule not bar to recovery under these circumstances. Lipson v. Superior Court (1982) 31 Cal. 3d 362, 378-379, 182 Cal. Rptr. 629, 644 P.2d 822

Common law firefighter's rule provides that negligence in causing fire furnishes no basis for liability to professional firefighter injured while fighting fire; firefighter injured while performing his or her duties has no cause of action against person whose negligence caused fire. Hubbard v. Boelt (1980) 28 Cal. 3d 480, 484, 169 Cal. Rptr. 706, 620 P.2d 156 ; Walters v. Sloan (1977) 20 Cal. 3d 199, 202, 142 Cal. Rptr. 152, 571 P.2d 609

Firefighter's rule did not apply to negligence of truck driver who collided with police car while police car was responding at high speed to domestic disturbance. Terry v. Garcia (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 245, 252-253, 134 Cal. Rptr. 2d 565

Firefighter's rule barred police officer's negligence claim against state highway patrol officer for attack by police dog controlled by highway patrol officer that occurred while both officers were engaged in capture of felon, because hazard posed by dog was inherent in plaintiff's duties as police officer. Farnam v. State of California (2000) 84 Cal. App. 4th 1448, 1452-1455, 101 Cal. Rptr. 2d 642

Civ. Code § 1714.9(a) establishes duty by those present at scene of emergency to refrain from misstating material facts concerning nature of emergency to those public safety officials called to scene; wife of man who shot police officer after wife misrepresented to officer that her husband was not violent when she knew otherwise had duty under statute not to misrepresent nature of hazard. Boon v. Rivera (2000) 80 Cal. App. 4th 1322, 1330-1333, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 276

Firefighter's rule was applicable to protect psychiatrist from liability for injury to police officer caused by psychiatrist's patient in case in which psychiatrist allegedly knew that patient harbored homicidal feelings toward his work supervisor, but failed to warn authorities of patient's potential for violence. Tilley v. Schulte (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 79, 83-84, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 497

Firefighter's rule not bar to recovery by tow truck operator who was fatally injured while working to remove drunk driver's car from side of road, because operator was performing work he was hired to do and did not qualify as rescuer. Bryant v. Glastetter (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 770, 777-778, 38 Cal. Rptr. 2d 291

Exception to rule for independent act of misconduct or unrelated risk not applicable merely because firefighter or police officer encountered risk that caused injuries by chance rather than by being summoned to scene by radio call; highway patrol officer barred from recovery for injuries caused on his way to work when he saw tires come off truck, warned traffic behind him with flashers, had driver of truck pull over, moved around truck to spot tires, and was hit when tires bounced off wall and onto his motorcycle. Kelhi v. Fitzpatrick (1994) 25 Cal. App. 4th 1149, 1152, 1158-1159, 31 Cal. Rptr. 2d 182

Exception to rule that exists if police officer's presence is unrelated to negligence causing his or her injury not applicable unless officer has come to specific location to perform specific immediate duty and defendant's unrelated negligent or intentional conduct increases risks inherent in performing that duty. Seibert Sec. Servs., Inc. v. Superior Court (1993) 18 Cal. App. 4th 394, 410-411, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 514

Rule not to be subverted by artificial isolation of specific factors. Seibert Sec. Servs., Inc. v. Superior Court (1993) 18 Cal. App. 4th 394, 415, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 514

Rule precludes tort cause of action by plaintiff, employed and compensated for work that carries with it certain hazards, for damages resulting from those very hazards; in absence of employment or other compensation for activity from which injuries resulted, rule not applicable; assumption of risk in such case classified as "secondary assumption of risk," with plaintiff's damages apportioned according to comparative fault principles. Davis v. Gaschler (1992) 11 Cal. App. 4th 1392, 1400-1401, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 679

Variant of firefighter's rule is veterinarian's rule, under which veterinarian is deemed to assume risks incident to his or her profession, including risks inherent in treating injured animals. Davis v. Gaschler (1992) 11 Cal. App. 4th 1392, 1400-1401, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 679 ; Nelson v. Hall (1985) 165 Cal. App. 3d 709, 714, 211 Cal. Rptr. 668

Rule is inapplicable to negligence that does not cause fire; application of rule is consistently denied if plaintiffs have alleged negligent failure to warn of hidden, known danger. Terhell v. American Commonwealth Assocs. (1985) 172 Cal. App. 3d 434, 441, 218 Cal. Rptr. 256

Rule does not bar firefighter from stating cause of action for personal injury sustained in fall through hole in roof of building while fighting fire on premises, if complaint alleged that defendants negligently maintained roof so as to create concealed opening that was hazardous to anyone on roof and that defendants knew of opening and its hazard, but failed to warn plaintiff of its existence. Terhell v. American Commonwealth Assocs. (1985) 172 Cal. App. 3d 434, 437, 441-442, 218 Cal. Rptr. 256

Rule is applicable to intentional acts that could have been reasonably foreseen by plaintiff; rule was defense to police officer's action for injuries sustained when defendant intentionally rammed marked police vehicle in which plaintiff was openly trailing defendant as suspected car thief. City of Los Angeles v. O'Brian (1984) 154 Cal. App. 3d 904, 906-907, 201 Cal. Rptr. 561

Rule does not bar police officer's recovery for injuries from an intentional assault orbattery if this criminal activity is not part of risk that occasioned officer's presence. Krueger v. City of Anaheim (1982) 130 Cal. App. 3d 166, 172-173, 181 Cal. Rptr. 631

Firefighter's rule bars recovery of damages for injuries sustained by both paid-call firefighters, persons who volunteer to fight individual fires in exchange for fixed sum regardless of amount of time spent, and full-time, professional firefighters. Baker v. Superior Court (1982) 129 Cal. App. 3d 710, 722, 181 Cal. Rptr. 311

Rule is inapplicable to preclude recovery by firefighter or police officer whose injuries resulted from risks faced in common by all members of public, or significant percentage thereof, and for which firefighter or police officer has received no special training. Malo v. Willis (1981) 126 Cal. App. 3d 543, 547, 178 Cal. Rptr. 774

[5] Workers' Compensation

Defendant claiming protection from action at law under Workers' Compensation Act bears burden of pleading and proving, as affirmative defense, existence of conditions of compensation. Doney v. Tambouratgis (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 91, 96-97, 151 Cal. Rptr. 347, 587 P.2d 1160 ; Popejoy v. Hannon (1951) 37 Cal. 2d 159, 173, 231 P.2d 484

Mere fact that defendant in tort action is also plaintiff's employer is not sufficient to raise exclusive remedy provisions of Workers' Compensation Act as affirmative defense. Coca-Cola Bottling Co. v. Superior Court (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 1273, 1285, 286 Cal. Rptr. 855

If employer properly pleads and proves existence of employment relationship as defense to employee's cause of action and no exception to exclusive remedy rule is established, civil court lacks subject matter jurisdiction to render judgment. Johnson v. Stratlaw, Inc. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 1156, 1164, 274 Cal. Rptr. 363

§ 380.290 Complaint for Damages [Civ. Code § 3333] for Personal Injury and Property Damage Based on Negligence [Civ. Code § 1714(a)]--General Form

[1] FORM Complaint for Damages [Civ. Code § 3333] for Personal Injury and Property Damage Based on Negligence [Civ. Code § 1714(a)]--General Form

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)
Plaintiff,	)	NO. _____
vs.	)	COMPLAINT FOR PERSONAL INJURY AND
_____ [name]	)	PROPERTY DAMAGE
[; and DOES 1 through _____, inclusive], Defend-	)	[LIMITED CIVIL CASE]
ant(s).	)	[Amount demanded _____
	)	(exceeds or does not exceed) $10,000]

Plaintiff alleges:

FIRST CAUSE OF ACTION
FIRST COUNT
(Negligence)

1. Defendant _____ [name] is, and at all times mentioned in this complaint was,

_____ [state capacity and residence of defendant or other basis of venue, e.g., a resident of _____ County, California, or a corporation duly organized and existing under the laws of the State of California with its principal place of business in _____ [city], _____ County, California].

[2. Plaintiff is ignorant of the true names and capacities of defendants sued in this complaint as Does 1-_____, inclusive, and therefore sues these defendants by these fictitious names. Plaintiff will amend this complaint to allege their true names and capacities when ascertained. (Plaintiff is informed and believes and alleges on this information and belief that each of the fictitiously named defendants is negligently responsible in some manner for the occurrences alleged in this complaint, and that plaintiff's injuries as alleged in this complaint were proximately caused by that negligence.)]

[3. (Plaintiff is informed and believes and on this information and belief alleges that) (A)t all times mentioned in this complaint each of the defendants was the agent and employee of each of the remaining defendants, and in doing the things alleged in this complaint, was acting within the course and scope of this agency and employment.]

4. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff was _____ [allege facts showing status and activity of plaintiff placing him/her in class of persons to whom defendant owed a duty and the location of the accident if venue is based on this fact, e.g., grocery shopping at defendant's store located at _____, California or a pedestrian crossing _____ Street at its intersection with _____ Street in _____ California].

5. At this time and place, defendant[s, and each of them,] _____ [allege facts such as defendant's ownership, possession, or control of the instrumentality causing the accident, the contractual or special relationship, or the statute, that establish defendant's duty to plaintiff, e.g., owned, maintained, controlled, managed, and operated this premises or was the owner of a _____ (year, make, model) automobile bearing California license number _____].

6. At this time and place, defendant[s, and each of them,] negligently _____ [allege acts or omissions of defendant, e.g., owned, maintained, controlled, managed, and operated this grocery store or entrusted, owned, maintained, operated and drove this automobile] so as to cause _____ [allege the result of defendant's negligence constituting breach of duty owed plaintiff, e.g., plaintiff's hand to be severely lacerated by pieces of broken glass on the shelf next to the ketchup bottles or the automobile to collide with plaintiff, violently throwing him/her to the pavement] and to directly and legally cause the injuries and damages described below.

7. As a direct and legal result of the negligence of defendant[s, and each of them,] plaintiff was hurt and injured in his/her health, strength, and activity, sustaining injury to his/her nervous system and person, all of which injuries have caused, and continue to cause, plaintiff great mental, physical, emotional, and nervous pain and suffering. [Plaintiff is informed and believes and on this information and belief alleges that these injuries will result in permanent disability to him/her.] As a result of these injuries, plaintiff has suffered general damages.

8. As a further direct and legal result of the negligence of defendant[s, and each of them,] plaintiff has incurred[, and will continue to incur,] medical and related expenses. Plaintiff does not know at this time the exact amount of expenses that have been incurred and that will be incurred in the future.

9. As a further direct and legal result of the negligence of defendant[s, and each of them,] plaintiff's earning capacity has been and will be greatly impaired, both in the past and present in an amount according to proof.

10. As a further direct and legal result of the negligence of defendant[s, and each of them,] plaintiff's _____ [describe personal property] was _____ [damaged or describe damage, e.g., destroyed beyond repair, all to plaintiff's damage in the sum of $_____]. [If property was not destroyed, add: Plaintiff _____ (has expended or must expend) $_____ for repair of the damage to _____ (describe personal property), which is a reasonable sum for this repair.] [For either destroyed or damaged property, add: Plaintiff lost the use of _____ (describe personal property) for a period of _____ (specify length of time) while it was being _____ (repaired or replaced), to plaintiff's damage in the sum of $_____.]

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment against defendant as hereinafter set forth.

SECOND COUNT
(_____ [Specify theory, e.g., Strict Liability])

[Paragraphs in succeeding causes of actions or counts should be numbered consecutively from the last paragraph of the immediately preceding cause of action or count.]

[11. _____ (If desired, specify any paragraphs from preceding counts to be incorporated by reference, e.g., Plaintiff realleges, refers to, and herein incorporates by reference as if set out in full Paragraphs 1 through 10 of the First Count.)]

[12. _____ (Here and in subsequent numbered paragraphs, state facts constituting the count under the theory alleged, in ordinary and concise language.)]

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment against defendants, and each of them, as follows:

[Set forth prayer for relief for each count, for example:]

On the FIRST COUNT:

1. For general damages according to proof;

2. For medical and related expenses according to proof;

3. For loss of earnings according to proof;

4. For damage to personal property _____ [according to proof or in the sum of $_____];

5. For interest at the legal rate according to proof;

On the SECOND COUNT:

6. For general damages according to proof;

7. For medical and related expenses according to proof;

8. For loss of earnings according to proof;

9. For damage to personal property _____ [according to proof or in the sum of $_____];

10. For interest at the legal rate according to proof;

On ALL COUNTS:

11. For costs of suit incurred; and

12. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By:_____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff_____ [name]

[Verification, if desired.]

[2] Use of Form

This general complaint form may be used to obtain damages for personal injuries and property damage directly and legally caused by defendant's negligence. Depending on the facts of the case, counsel may wish to delete paragraphs of the complaint that do not apply. For instance, if counsel is certain that no property damage is involved, Paragraph 10 of the complaint and Paragraph 4 of the prayer, would be omitted.

[3] Causes of Action and Counts

The phrase "causes of action" is often used indiscriminately to mean what it says and also to mean "counts," which state differently the same cause of action [see Eichler Homes of San Mateo, Inc. v. Superior Court (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 845, 847, 13 Cal. Rptr. 194, 361 P.2d 914] . The essence of a cause of action is the existence of a primary right and one violation of that right [Kaufman & Broad Bldg. Co. v. City & Suburban Mortgage Co. (1970) 10 Cal. App. 3d 206, 215, 88 Cal. Rptr. 858] . An example of a primary right is the plaintiff's right to be free from injury to his or her person [see Slater v. Blackwood (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 791, 795, 126 Cal. Rptr. 225, 543 P.2d 593 ; see also Flowers v. Torrance Mem'l Hosp. Med. Ctr. (1994) 8 Cal. 4th 992, 997-998, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 685, 884 P.2d 142 (single set of facts not giving rise to separate and distinct claims for ordinary and professional negligence because health care provider's medical expertise and skill is merely factor affecting standard of care governing negligence action)].

A plaintiff may plead in one cause of action alternative, inconsistent theories of recovery under separate "counts" [see Eichler Homes of San Mateo, Inc. v. Superior Court (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 845, 847, 13 Cal. Rptr. 194, 361 P.2d 914 ; Tanforan v. Tanforan (1916) 173 Cal. 270, 273-274, 159 P. 709] . For example, a plaintiff may bring an action to recoverdamages arising from personal injuries suffered in an automobile accident by seeking recovery under both negligence and willful misconduct theories [see Savage v. Van Marle (1974) 39 Cal. App. 3d 241, 245, 114 Cal. Rptr. 51 ; but see Flowers v. Torrance Mem'l Hosp. Med. Ctr. (1994) 8 Cal. 4th 992, 998, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 685, 884 P.2d 142 (single set of facts not giving rise to separate and distinct claims for ordinary and professional negligence because health care provider's medical expertise and skill is merely factor affecting standard of care governing negligence action)].

Generally, it is a good practice to state a separate count for each separate theory of liability, rather than to combine theories in a single count or cause of action. This approach helps avoid inconsistent pleading in the same count, as well as confusion in the framing of issues [see Steiner v. Rowley (1950) 35 Cal. 2d 713, 718-719, 221 P.2d 9 ; Zumbrun v. University of S. Cal. (1972) 25 Cal. App. 3d 1, 9, 101 Cal. Rptr. 499] .

Each separately stated cause of action must be separately numbered [Cal. Rules of Ct. Rule 2.112(1)], and separately stated counts should also be separately numbered. This number designation should appear as a heading in capital letters centered above the cause of action of count [see, e.g., Los Angeles Co. Super. Ct. Rules, Rule 9.3(a)]. The paragraphs within each cause of action or count should be numbered with arabic numerals rather than roman numerals, and should be numbered consecutively throughout the complaint for ease of reference. In some courts, this practice is required [see, e.g., Los Angeles Co. Super. Ct. Rules, Rule 9.2(b)].

For further discussion of counts and causes of action, see Ch. 123, Complaints and Cross Complaints , and Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

[4] Allegations

Most courts summarize the elements of actionable negligence as a legal duty of care owed by defendant either to plaintiff or to the class of which plaintiff is a member, an act or omission by defendant that is a breach of the duty owed to plaintiff, injury and damages to plaintiff, and defendant's breach as an actual (or direct) and legal (or proximate) cause of plaintiff's injury and damages; generally, the courts consolidate these separate elements of actionable negligence, which the plaintiff has the burden of pleading and proving, into either three or four separate elements [see Hoyem v. Manhattan Beach City Sch. Dist. (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 508, 513-514, 150 Cal. Rptr. 1, 585 P.2d 851 ; United States Liab. Ins. Co. v. Haidinger-Hayes, Inc. (1970) 1 Cal. 3d 586, 594, 83 Cal. Rptr. 418, 463 P.2d 770 ; Koepke v. Loo (1993) 18 Cal. App. 4th 1444, 1448-1449, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 34] . However, applicable statutes indicate that the following five distinct elements are essential to a tort cause of action, including an action based on negligence: (1) duty on the part of defendant to use due care [see Civ. Code §§ 1714(a), 3333]; (2) breach of that duty [see Civ. Code § 3333]; (3)detriment to plaintiff (i.e., plaintiff's loss or harm suffered in person or property) [see Civ. Code §§ 3281, 3282, 3333]; (4) plaintiff's detriment being an actual (or direct) and legal (or proximate) result of defendant's breach of duty [see Civ. Code § 3333]; and (5) damages, that is, the measure of the detriment in terms of money [see Civ. Code §§ 3281, 3333].

[5] Pleading

The complaint may generally allege the elements of negligence [see Hoyem v. Manhattan Beach City Sch. Dist. (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 508, 513-514, 150 Cal. Rptr. 1, 585 P.2d 851] . The facts giving rise to the existence of a duty must be pleaded in the complaint; a complaint that does not contain these facts is fatally defective [see Jacoves v. United Merch. Corp. (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 88, 113, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 468] . For further discussion, see § 380.290[5].

This complaint alleges (1) the residence of defendant (Paragraph 1) and (2) the place of the accident (Paragraph 4), either one of which may be the basis for venue [see Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a); see § 380.152[1]]; the negligence and fictitious names of defendants sued pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 474 (Paragraph 2); (3) facts regarding plaintiff's status and activity that establish the duty owed by defendant to plaintiff (Paragraph 4) [see § 380.50 et seq.,]; (4) the actions or omissions of defendant that constitute the breach of duty and that directly and legally caused plaintiff's damages (Paragraph 6) [see § 380.50 et seq. and § 380.70 et seq.]; and (5) plaintiff's damages consisting of general damages for pain and suffering (Paragraph 7), as well as medical expenses (Paragraph 8), loss of earnings and earning capacity (Paragraph 9), and property damage (Paragraph 10), as applicable [see § 380.90 et seq.].

[6] Venue

In an action for injury to the person or to personal property or for death from a wrongful act or negligence, either the county in which the injury occurs or the county in which the defendants, or some of them, reside at the commencement of the action is a proper county for the trial of the action [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a); see § 380.152[1]]. If venue is based on the situs of the wrongful act or negligence, the allegation of defendant's residence in Paragraph 1 is not needed. Special venue provisions apply if the defendant is a corporation, partnership, association, or governmental entity [see § 380.152[2]-[4]].

[7] Specification of Damages

In an action to recover damages for personal injury or wrongful death, the complaint must not state the amount of actual or punitive damages demanded for this cause of action [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.10(b)].

Otherwise, the amounts claimed as damages for anything other than personal injury or wrongful death (for example, property damage) must be alleged [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.10(b)] or an equivalent statement must be included, for example, a statement that the damages for a particular loss or harm sustained [see Civ. Code §§ 3281, 3282] are not known and that leave will be sought to amend the complaint to state the exact amount when ascertained. If this is done, counsel must remember to seek leave to amend the complaint to so state before judgment.

No claim for punitive damages may state an amount sought regardless of the nature of the case or whether it is a limited civil case [Civ. Code § 3295(e)].

For discussion of and forms for requesting and stating the amount of damages sought when they are not stated in the complaint [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 425.11, 425.115], see Ch. 177, Damages , and Ch. 205, Defaults and Default Judgments .

[8] Signature

Every pleading must be subscribed by the party or his or her attorney [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 128.7(a), 446(a)].

[9] Verification

Although verification of this complaint is not required [see Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7(a)], verification will require any answer to be verified in an unlimited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 92(b), 446]. Verification will also preclude the defendant from using a general denial in an unlimited civil case, and will preclude a general denial in a limited civil case if the action is a claim assigned to a third party for collection [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(d)]. For further discussion see Ch. 26, Answers .

_____ [name], [et al.,]	)	JURY [and/or PROPERTY DAMAGE]
Defendant(s).	)	[Amount demanded _____
	)	(exceeds or does not exceed) $10,000]
	)	[LIMITED CIVIL CASE]

Defendant answers the complaint of plaintiff [name] as follows:

ANSWER TO _____ [specify, e.g.,
FIRST] CAUSE OF ACTION

1. Answering paragraph _____ [number] of plaintiff's complaint, defendant denies the following allegations: [set forth the material allegations denied, e.g., that defendant owed a duty to plaintiff to protect plaintiff from the criminal activities of third persons entering on the defendant's premises, and that defendant had notice or knowledge of criminal activity by third persons on or in the vicinity of the defendant's premises prior to the date on which the plaintiff's alleged injuries were sustained.]

[Repeat for all paragraphs containing allegations which defendant denies]

2. Defendant has no information or belief sufficient to enable defendant to answer the allegations of paragraph _____ [number] of plaintiff's complaint, and basing [his/her/its] denial on that ground, denies generally and specifically each and every allegation contained in that paragraph.

[Repeat for all paragraphs that defendant denies for lack of sufficient information or belief]

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], DEFENDANT ALLEGES _____ [set forth in this and, if necessary, subsequently numbered paragraphs ultimate facts establishing defense]

WHEREFORE, defendant prays that plaintiff take nothing by the complaint and that defendant be awarded costs of suit.

_____ [firm name, if any]
By:_____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[Verification, if complaint was verified.]

[2] Use of Form

This general answer form may be used to respond to a complaint for personal injuries and property damage.

[3] Caption

The caption should be completed in the same manner as the caption in the complaint, with one exception. If there is more than one party on either side, it is sufficient to state the name of the first party on each side with an appropriate indication of the other parties (i.e., "et al.") [Code Civ. Proc. § 422.40].

[4] General Denial

If the complaint is not verified, or is subject to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 90-100, which includes most limited civil cases [see Code Civ. Proc. § 91], or if the demand or the value of the property in controversy does not exceed $1,000, the defendant may make a general denial [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 431.30(d), 431.40(a)]. If the cause of action is a claim assigned to a third party for collection and the complaint is verified, the denial of the allegations must be made positively or according to the information and belief of the defendant, even if the complaint is subject to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 90-100 [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(d)].

A general denial only puts in issue the material allegations of the complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(d)].

[5] Specific Denials

If the complaint is verified, the denial of the allegations of the complaint must be made positively or according to the information and belief of the defendant, unless the complaint is subject to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 90-100, which includes most limited civil cases [see Code Civ. Proc. § 91] [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(d)]. If the defendant has no information or belief on the subject sufficient to enable the defendant to answer an allegation of the complaint, the defendant may so state in the answer and base a denial on that ground [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(e)].

The denials of the controverted allegations may be stated in any of the following ways [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(f)]:

- By reference to the specific paragraphs or parts of the complaint;
- By express admission of certain allegations of the complaint with a general denial of all of the allegations not so admitted; or
- By denial of certain allegations on information and belief, or for lack of sufficient information or belief, with a general denial of all allegations not so denied or expressly admitted.

Every material allegation of the complaint not denied in the answer will be deemed true [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.20(a)].

[6] Affirmative Defenses

An answer must contain a statement of any new matter constituting a defense [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)]. Each defense must be separately stated and numbered and must refer to the causes of action they are intended to answer, in a manner by which they may be intelligently distinguished [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(g); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.112].

The most common affirmative defenses asserted in a negligence action are the following:

- Comparative negligence [see § 380.170[1]; see also § 380.370];
- Statutes of limitations [see § 380.150[1]; see also § 380.351];
- Plaintiff's violation of statute, ordinance, or regulation as comparative negligence [see § 380.110[1]];
- Plaintiff's express assumption of risk [see § 380.171[1]; see also § 380.373];
- Plaintiff's implied assumption of risk [see § 380.172[2][b]; see also § 380.374];
- Imputed comparative negligence based on vicarious liability of plaintiff [see § 380.131[1]; see also § 380.372];
- Workers' compensation as plaintiff's exclusive remedy [see § 380.174; see also § 380.376]; and
- Plaintiff's failure to mitigate damages [see § 380.91; see also § 380.292].

Any ground for a demurrer to the complaint that does not appear on the face of the complaint may also be raised as an affirmative defense [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(b)]. These defenses might include allegations that the court lacks jurisdiction, that the plaintiff lacks capacity, that there is another action pendingbetween the same parties on the same cause of action, or that the pleading does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10].

[7] Prayer

Affirmative relief may not be claimed in the answer [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(c)]. If the defendant wishes to seek affirmative relief, the defendant must file a cross complaint [see Ch. 123, Complaints and Cross Complaints]. A defendant may, however, request costs and may also request attorney's fees, if allowed by the nature of the action [see Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees].

[8] Signature

Every pleading must be subscribed by the party or his or her attorney [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 128.7(a), 446].

[9] Verification

Although verification of this complaint is not required [see Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7(a)], verification will require any answer to be verified in an unlimited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 92(b), 446]. Verification will also preclude the defendant from using a general denial in an unlimited civil case, and will preclude a general denial in a limited civil case if the action is a claim assigned to a third party for collection [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(d)]. For further discussion see Ch. 26, Answers .

§ 380.292 Affirmative Defense Allegation--Plaintiff's Failure to Mitigate Damages

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense Allegation--Plaintiff's Failure to Mitigate Damages

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges that plaintiff failed to exercise reasonable care and diligence to mitigate plaintiff's alleged damages in that, among other things, _____ [set out acts or omissions plaintiff could have performed to mitigate damages, e.g., plaintiff did not return to work as soon as plaintiff had recovered from his/her injuries].

[2] Use of Form

This form of affirmative defense is for insertion in an answer to a complaint based on negligence if the plaintiff did not exercise reasonable care and diligence to mitigate his or her damages. The facts alleged in the form are taken from Pretzer v. California Transit Co;. [Pretzer v. California Transit Co(1930) 211 Cal. 202, 294 P. 382] . For further discussion of the duty to mitigate damages, see § 380.91.

[2] Use of Form

This form of complaint consists of the Judicial Council general complaint form for use in any action based on personal injury, property damage, and/or wrongful death, along with the general negligence attachment [Judicial Council Forms PLD-PI-001, PLD-PI-001(2)]. The Judicial Council has also approved cause of action attachments based on premises liability [see Ch. 421, Premises Liability], motor vehicle accident [see Ch. 82, Automobiles: Causes of Action], intentional tort [see Ch. 58, Assault and Battery , and Ch. 362, Mental Suffering and Emotional Distress], and products liability [see Ch. 460, Products Liability]. If counsel seeks exemplary damages in addition to compensatory damages, the exemplary damages attachment must also be included [see Ch. 177, Damages]. The Judicial Council approved these forms effective January 1, 1982, although the forms shown were revised effective January 1, 2007. Use of these forms is optional [see Code Civ. Proc. § 425.12; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1.35(b)]. Before using these forms, counsel should verify whether or not they have been modified.

For general information relating to the use of Judicial Council complaint forms, see Ch. 123, Complaints and Cross Complaints . These forms are available in an interactive, electronic format in LexisNexis(R) Automated California Judicial Council Forms, which may be accessed at www.lexisone.com for an individual or monthly charge. A noninteractive version in PDF format also is available at www.lexisone.com at no charge.

[3] Judicial Council Trial Court Forms

Code Civ. Proc. § 425.12 requires the Judicial Council to develop and approve official forms for use in California trial courts for any complaint, cross complaint, or answer in any action based on personal injury, property damage, or wrongful death [see Code Civ. Proc. § 425.12].

[4] Filling Out Complaint Form

[a] Caption

The box at the top of the page should be filled in with the name, address, and telephone number of the attorney or, if being filed in propria persona, the plaintiff. It should also include the name of the plaintiff being represented by the attorney filing the complaint.

The next box should contain the name and address of the court in which the complaint is to be filed.

The next box should contain the names of all plaintiffs and defendants. Although the form refers throughout to plaintiff and defendant in the singular, it is also intended to be used if there is more than one plaintiff or defendant (see, e.g., Paragraphs 3.a. and 5.a.). For a complete discussion and examples of the manner of setting forth a party's name, see Ch. 108, Captions and Introductions .

If the plaintiff is ignorant of the true names or capacities of additional possible defendants and wishes to sue them under fictitious names pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 474, the box to the left of "DOES" should be checked and the number of "Doe defendants" entered. For a complete discussion of alleging Doe defendants, see Ch. 20, Allegations Commonly Used .

In the box entitled "COMPLAINT," the box labeled "AMENDED" should be checked if the complaint is being amended, which should be followed by the number of times the complaint has been amended, such as "first" if the complaint is being amended for the first time. In all actions other than those based on motor vehicle accidents, the box to the left of "OTHER" should be checked and the nature of the cause(s) of action specified (e.g., general negligence, products liability, premises liability, etc.).

In the box labeled "Jurisdiction," the appropriate box should be marked to identify the action as a limited civil case (if the amount of damages sought is no more than $25,000) or as an unlimited civil case (if the amount of damages exceeds $25,000). If the action is a limited civil case, the appropriate box should be marked indicating whether the amount in controversy is greater than $10,000 or not. If the complaint is an amended complaint, and the amendment reclassifies the action from a limited to an unlimited civil case, or vice versa, then this should be indicated by marking the appropriate boxes.

The names of all plaintiffs and defendants should be included in the appropriate spaces of Paragraph 1.

[c] Number of Pages (Paragraph 2.)

Once the complaint, including attachments and exhibits, is completed, the total number of pages should be inserted on line 2. That number should be no less than four because the three-page general complaint form must always have one or more cause of action attachments appended.

If any plaintiff is not a competent adult suing on his or her own behalf, the capacity of each such plaintiff must be alleged by checking the appropriate boxes in Paragraph 3. and, where appropriate, providing the specified information. For a discussion and references relating to allegations of plaintiff's capacity, see Ch. 20, Allegations Commonly Used .

[e] Short Title

The short title of a case usually consists of the last name of the first plaintiff and the last name of the first defendant separated by a "v." The short title should be typed in the box labeled "SHORT TITLE" on the top of every page other than the first page.

[f] Plaintiff Using Fictitious Business Name (Paragraph 4.)

If any plaintiff is doing business under a fictitious name, the box in Paragraph 4. should be checked, the plaintiff should be identified, and the fictitious business name should be provided. Paragraph 4. also alleges that the named plaintiff has complied with the laws governing the use of fictitious business names.

[g] Defendant's Capacity (Paragraph 5.)

The capacity of each defendant not being sued as an individual should be alleged by checking the appropriate boxes in Paragraph 5. and by specifying information where indicated.

[h] Joinder of Parties (Paragraph 7.)

Paragraph 7. refers to a party who should have been joined as a plaintiff, but who would not consent to being a plaintiff and is therefore joined as a defendant pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 382. For discussion relating to joinder of parties under Code Civ. Proc. § 382, see Ch. 395, Parties .

[i] Venue (Paragraph 8.)

Paragraph 8. alleges the proper bases for venue in the chosen court. In an action for injury to person or personal property or for death from wrongful act or negligence, venue lies either in a county in which one or more of the defendants reside or in the county where the injury occured [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)]. If a defendant is a corporation or association, it may be sued "where the obligation or liability arises," or in the county of the defendant's principal place of business [Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5; see Ch. 571, Venue].

[j] Claims Statute (Paragraph 9.)

The appropriate boxes in Paragraph 9. should be checked if specific claims statutes are applicable. For example, claims against a decedent's estate are governed by Prob. Code § 9000 et. seq. and personal injury claims against public entities are governed by Gov. Code § 910 et seq. For discussion and forms relating to these claims statutes, see Ch. 440, Probate: Is Probate Necessary ?, and Ch. 464, Public Entities and Officers: California Tort Claims Act.

[k] Causes of Action (Paragraph 10.)

The causes of action that are attached to the particular complaint should be indicated in Paragraph 10. Each complaint must have at least one cause of action attached.

Because a plaintiff who has suffered personal injury usually suffers additional damages subsequent to the filing of the complaint, it is suggested that the words "and/or will suffer" be typed to the right of the words "Plaintiff has suffered" in Paragraph 11., if personal injuries are alleged. The box to the left of each type of damages suffered by the plaintiff should then be checked.

If there is more than one plaintiff, it is suggested that the name(s) of the plaintiff(s) who suffered a particular type of damage be typed to the right of that checked damage item. For instance, if only plaintiff Jones suffered property damage, counsel should check the box to the left of "property damage" and add "(Plaintiff Jones)" to the right. Counsel may, however, wish to avoid unnecessarily narrowing the damages sought at the pleading stage of the action.

If all damages checked apply to all plaintiffs, the wording following 11. may be modified to read, for example "Plaintiffs Smith and Jones have suffered and/or will suffer."

For further discussion regarding pleading general and special damages, see Ch. 177, Damages .

[m] Specification of Damages (Paragraph 14.)

Paragraph 14. is used to indicate the damages being sought. In an action to recover damages for personal injury or wrongful death, the complaint must not state the amount of actual or punitive damages demanded [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.10(b)].

[5] Filling Out General Negligence Attachment to Complaint Form

The injury and damages aspects of the cause of action for negligence have already been pleaded in Paragraphs 11. and/or 12. of the complaint. Therefore, in the general negligence cause of action attachment to the complaint, the plaintiff must set forth ultimate facts alleging the existence of a duty owed by the defendant to the plaintiff, the defendant's breach of this duty, and the breach as the proximate cause of the plaintiff's injury and damages.

[2] Use of Form

This form is an illustration of the Judicial Council answer form for use in responding to a complaint based on personal injury, property damage, and/or wrongful death [Judicial Council Form PLD-PI-003]. The Judicial Council approved this form effective January 1, 1982, with a nonsubstantive revision effective January 1, 2007. Use of the form is optional [see Code Civ. Proc. § 425.12; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1.35(b)].

For general information relating to the use of Judicial Council answer forms, see Ch. 26, Answers . [3] General Denial

If the complaint is not verified, if the complaint is subject to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 90-100, which includes most limited civil cases [see Code Civ. Proc. § 91], or if the demand or the value of the property in controversy does not exceed

$1,000, the defendant may make a general denial [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 431.30(d), 431.40(a)]. The Judicial Council has adopted a form of general denial for this purpose [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.40(c); Judicial Council Form PLD-050]. The general denial form is available in an interactive, electronic format in LexisNexis(R) Automated California Judicial Council Forms, which may be accessed at www.lexisone.com for an individual or monthly charge. [3] Filling Out Cross Complaint

[a] Caption

The space entitled "CROSS-COMPLAINANT" should be filled in with the full name of each defendant on whose behalf the cross complaint is being asserted. The space entitled "CROSS- DEFENDANT" should be filled in with the full name of each person or entity against whom the cross complaint is being asserted. If there is a possibility of additional persons or entities being liable and their names, capacities, and/or actions are unknown, the box to the left of "DOES" should be checked and a number placed on the line to the right.

Although the form refers throughout to cross complainant and cross defendant in the singular, it is also intended to be used if there is more than one cross complainant or cross defendant (see, e.g., Paragraphs 3.a. and 4.a.).

In the box entitled "CROSS-COMPLAINT," the box labeled "AMENDED" should be checked if the cross-complaint is being amended, which should be followed by the number of times the cross-complaint has been amended, such as "first" if the cross-complaint is being amended for the first time.

The box entitled "CROSS-COMPLAINT" is also used to indicate the causes of action the cross complainant is asserting. If a cause of action for anything other than apportionment of fault, indemnification, or declaratory relief is being asserted, the box to the left of "Other" should be checked, its title typed to the right, and the appropriate cause of action attachment completed and appended to the form.

In the box labeled "Jurisdiction," the appropriate box should be marked toidentify the action as a limited civil case (if the amount sought is no morethan $25,000) or as an unlimited civil case (if the amount sought exceeds $25,000). If the cross-complaint reclassifies the action from a limited to an unlimited civil case, then this should be indicated by marking the appropriate box.

[b] Indemnification

[i] Declaratory Relief (Paragraph 9.)

A defendant may assert a cross complaint for declaratory relief against a joint tortfeasor to obtain a declaration of defendant's right to partial or complete indemnity should defendant be found liable to plaintiff. In addition to alleging a cause of action for declaratory relief regarding the cross complainant's right to implied equitable indemnity or partial equitable indemnity, Paragraph 9. might be used if the cross complainant seeks a determination of the cross defendant's duty to indemnify the cross complainant on a theory of implied contractual indemnity, or contractual indemnity, pursuant to a written agreement between the cross complainant and the cross defendant [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1060; for further discussion, see Ch. 182, Declaratory Relief , and Ch. 300, Indemnity and Contribution , §].

A cause of action for implied indemnity (Paragraph 7.) or partial equitable indemnity (Paragraph 8.) does not accrue until the cross complainant has incurred an actual loss through payment [E. L. White, Inc. v. City of Huntington Beach (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 497, 506, 146 Cal. Rptr. 614, 579 P.2d 505 ; People ex rel. Dep't of Transp. v. Superior Court (1980) 26 Cal. 3d 744, 757, 759, 163 Cal. Rptr. 585, 608 P.2d 673] . The courts have indicated that the proper form of action for indemnity before the cross complainant has incurred a loss is an action for declaratory relief, namely, for a declaration that the cross complainant is entitled to be indemnified for any judgment rendered against the cross complainant in favor of the plaintiff [see Roylance v. Doelger (1962) 57 Cal. 2d 255, 258-262, 19 Cal. Rptr. 7, 368 P.2d 535 ; Dreybus v. Bayless Rents (1963) 213 Cal. App. 2d 506, 508, 28 Cal. Rptr. 825] . Therefore, if the cross complainant is seeking indemnity, counsel should use Paragraph 9., alleging a cause of action for declaratory relief. Counsel may check Paragraphs 7. and 8. and incorporate them into Paragraph 9.

[ii] Indemnification Cause of Action (Paragraph 7.)

Paragraph 7. may be used if the cross complainant contends that the cross complainant, if found liable to plaintiff, would be entitled to complete implied equitable indemnity from a cross defendant. Implied equitable indemnity is appropriate if a passively negligent cross complainant is found vicariously liable for the active negligence of a cross defendant [see Cobb v. Southern Pac. Co. (1967) 251 Cal. App. 2d 929, 933, 59 Cal. Rptr. 916 ; Aerojet General

Corp. v. D. Zelinsky & Sons (1967) 249 Cal. App. 2d 604, 57 Cal. Rptr. 701] . For a complete discussion of indemnity, see Ch. 300, Indemnity and Contribution .

[iii] Apportionment of Fault (Paragraph 8.)

Apportionment of fault is appropriate if a cross complainant found liable to plaintiff is only partially at fault and the cross defendants are also partially at fault. In such a case, the cross defendants should be forced to pay a share of plaintiff's judgment in proportion to their comparative negligence and to reimburse the cross complaint for any payment made to plaintiff in excess of the cross complainant's share of negligence [see American Motorcyle Ass'n v. Superior Court (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 578, 586-588, 599, 146 Cal. Rptr. 182, 578 P.2d 899] . For further discussion, see Ch. 300, Indemnity and Contribution .

[c] Additional Causes of Action (Paragraph 10.)

If a defendant fails to allege in a cross complaint any related cause of action the defendant has against the plaintiff, the defendant may not assert that cause of action in any other action [Code Civ. Proc. § 426.30(a)]. A defendant may assert in a cross complaint any cause of action the defendant has against any plaintiff or may assert a cause of action against any person, including a nonparty, if it arises out of the same transaction, occurrence, or series of transactions or occurrences as the cause of action brought against the defendant [Code Civ. Proc. § 428.10]. For further discussion, see Ch. 123, Complaints and Cross Complaints .

If a defendant wishes to assert a cause of action other than those for which there is an attachment approved by the Judicial Council (listed in Paragraph 11.), or for indemnity, contribution, or declaratory relief, which can be alleged in Paragraphs 7.-9., respectively, defendant should check the box to the right of 10., insert the number of the cause of action, specify its title, and allege it in the space provided or in an additional attachment.

Paragraph 11. lists specific Judicial Council forms of causes of action that may be attached, as well as providing for attachment of a cause of action prepraed by counsel. This is done by checking the box for "Other" and specifying the cause of action being attached. If Paragraph 11. is used, counsel must also check the box for "Other" in the caption and specify the cause of action there.

The box "Other" in Paragraph 11. should not be check if causes of action for indemnification (Paragraph 7.), apportionment of fault (Paragraph 8.), or declaratory relief (Paragrpah 9.) are being stated, because they are asserted directly on the cross complaint form.

[e] Specification of Damages (Paragraph 14.)

Paragraph 14. of the form is filled out to illustrate its use in an unlimited civil case. If the form is being used in a limited civil case, the box in Paragraph 14.a.(2) should be checked and the phrase "in the amount of $" in Paragraph 14.a.(2) should be crossed out or slashed out and the words "according to proof" should be typed in instead of a dollar amount. No dollar amount may be alleged in an action to recover damages for personal injury or wrongful death [see Code Civ. Proc. § 425.10(b)].

(Statutory Violation)

1. Defendant _____ [name] is, and at all times mentioned in this complaint was, _____ [state capacity and residence of defendant or other basis of venue, e.g., a resident of _____ County, California, or a corporation duly organized and existing under the laws of the State of California with its principal place of business in _____ [city], _____ County, California].

[2. Defendants Doe 1 through Doe _____, inclusive, are sued herein under fictitious names. Their true names and capacities are unknown to plaintiff. When their true names and capacities are ascertained, plaintiff will amend this complaint by inserting their true names and capacities herein. (Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges, that each of the fictitiously named defendants is responsible in some manner for the occurrences herein alleged, and that plaintiff's damages as herein alleged were proximately caused by those defendants.)]

3. [Agency allegation, if appropriate. See § 380.290, Paragraph 3.]

4. At all times mentioned herein, defendant was the owner of a certain _____ [breed] dog.

5. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff was _____ [allege facts showing status and activity of plaintiff placing him/her in class of persons to whom defendant owed a duty and the location of the accident when venue is based on this fact, e.g., riding his bicycle in a northwesterly direction on Main Street near the intersection of First Avenue, in the City of Oakland, County of Alameda, State of California, when plaintiff was chased and bitten in the right leg by defendant's dog].

6. At this time and place there was in effect [set forth statute, ordinance, or regulation allegedly violated by defendant, e.g., an ordinance of the City of Oakland, to wit, Oakland City Ordinance No. 84-73, article 119, which provides, in relevant part, that no person owning, possessing, or controlling any animal shall allow that animal to be at large, and that a dog is considered to be at large unless under effective restraint by a leash, except when the dog is on private property owned by, or in the possession of, the person owning or controlling the dog. A true and correct copy of this ordinance, certified as such by the city clerk, is attached as Exhibit A to this complaint and is incorporated in this complaint by reference.]

7. At this time and place, defendant[s, and each of them,] [was/were] in violation of the aforesaid [statute/ordinance/regulation] in that [set forth facts showing defendant's violation of statute, ordinance, or regulation, e.g., defendant's dog was not under restraint by a leash or any other means, but was wandering loose on a public street.]

[2] Use of Form

This complaint form may be used to obtain damages for personal injuries directly and legally caused by defendant's negligence if that negligence is based on the defendant's violation of a statute, ordinance or regulation. Paragraph 6 sets forth the statute, ordinance, or regulation that was allegedly violated by the defendant, and Paragraph 7 describes the defendant's violation on which the presumption of negligence is based.

[3] Presumption of Failure to Exercise Due Care Based on Violation of Statute, Ordinance of Public Entity

The failure of a defendant to exercise due care is presumed if all of the following conditions are satisfied [see Evid. Code § 669(a)]:

- The defendant violated a statute, ordinance, or regulation of a public entity;
- The violation directly and legally (proximately) caused injury to the plaintiff or the plaintiff's property;
- The injury resulted from an occurrence of the nature that the statute, ordinance, or regulation was designed to prevent; and
- The plaintiff is one of the class of persons for whose protection the statute, ordinance, or regulation was adopted.

[2] Use of Form

This complaint form may be used to obtain damages for personal injuries directly and legally caused by defendant's negligence if the plaintiff seeks to apply the doctrine of res ipsa loquitur to the action. Paragraph 5 sets forth an allegation of the defendant's management and control of the instrumentality that caused the plaintiff's injuries, and Paragraph 6 sets forth an allegation that the accident would not have occurred if the defendant had exercised ordinary care in the management and control of the instrumentality that caused the plaintiff's injuries.

[3] Conditions for Application of Res Ipsa Loquitur Doctrine

The general conditions for the application of the doctrine of res ipsa loquitur are [Newing v. Cheatham (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 351, 359, 124 Cal. Rptr. 193, 540 P.2d 33] :

- The accident must be of a kind that ordinarily does not occur in the absence of someone's negligence;
- It must be caused by an agency or instrumentality within the defendant's exclusive control; and
- It must not have been due to any voluntary action or contribution on the plaintiff's part.

Once the conditions have been met, a presumption affecting the burden of producing evidence is created [Evid. Code § 646(b)], which requires a finding of negligence unless the defendant introduces sufficient evidence to sustain a finding that either (1) the accident resulted from some cause other than the defendant's negligence, or (2) the defendant exercised due care in all possible respects in which he or she might have been negligent [Newing v. Cheatham (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 351, 364-365, 124 Cal. Rptr. 193, 540 P.2d 33] .

[2] Use of Form

This form of notice of motion is for use by a party to move for summary adjudication with respect to one or more causes of action within an action, an affirmative defense, a claim for punitive damages, or the issue of whether one or more defendants owed a duty to one or more plaintiffs [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(f)].

[3] Alternative to Summary Judgment Motion

A motion for summary adjudication may be made by itself or as an alternative to a motion for summary judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(f)(2)]. Summary adjudication may not be granted, however, if the notice of motion is only for summary judgment [Gonzales v. Superior Court (1987) 189 Cal. App. 3d 1542, 1545-1546, 235 Cal. Rptr. 106] .

[4] Specification of Issues

A court may adjudicate only those issues that are specified in the motion for summary adjudication [Homestead Sav. v. Superior Court (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 494, 498-499, 499, 224 Cal. Rptr. 554] .

[5] Supporting Papers

A motion for summary adjudication must be supported by affidavits, declarations, admissions, answers to interrogatories, depositions, and matters of which the court must or may take judicial notice [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(b)(1)]. The moving party may not rely on his or her own pleadings (even if verified) to support the motion [Code

Civ. Proc. § 437c(p)]. The supporting papers must include a separate statement setting forth plainlyand concisely all material facts that the moving party contends are undisputed; each material fact that is stated must be followed by a reference to the supporting evidence [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(b); United Cmty. Church v. Garcin (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 327, 335-337, 282 Cal. Rptr. 368] . The motion for summary adjudication should also be supported by a memorandum of points and authorities, because the court may construe the moving party's failure to file such a memorandum as an admission that the motion is not meritorious and therefore as cause for its denial [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113 (requirements for memorandum of points and authorities)].

33-380 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 380.351

AUTHOR: MICHAEL S. FIELDS CONTRIBUTING EDITORIAL CONSULTANT Mr. Fields is a private practitioner in Beverly Hills who has specialized in personal injury litigation since 1969.

§ 380.351 Affirmative Defense Allegation [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)]--Action Barred by Statute of Limitations [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 335.1, 338(b), (c), 458]

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense Allegation [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)]--Action Barred by Statute of Limitations [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 335.1, 338(b), (c), 458]

AS A _____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges that the action is barred by the provisions of _____ [if action based on personal injury, Code Civ. Proc. § 335.1 or, if action based on injury to real property, Code Civ. Proc. § 338(b) or, if action based on injury to personal property, Code Civ. Proc. § 338(c)].

[2] Use of Form

This affirmative defense allegation is for use in an answer to a complaint seeking damages based on ordinary negligence if the plaintiff failed to file the complaint within the applicable limitations period. An action for personal injury or wrongful death must be filed within two years (one year, prior to January 1, 2003) [Code Civ. Proc. § 335.1; see former Code Civ. Proc. § 340(3); Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions, § 345.14]; an action for damages to real or personal property must be filed within three years [Code Civ. Proc. § 338(b), (c)].

If more than one affirmative defense is set forth in the answer, each defense must be separately stated [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(g)] and numbered [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.112(1)]. If the complaint sets forth more than one cause of action, the affirmative defense must refer to the cause of action it is intended to answer [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(g)].

[3] Alternative Procedures

If the fact that the action is barred by the statute of limitations appears on the face of the complaint or from any matter the court must or may take judicial notice of [see Evid. Code §§ 451, 452], the defendant may raise the objection by demurrer [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(a)]. Whether or not the fact so appears, if the defense can be indisputably established by affidavits, declarations, admissions, answers to interrogatories, or depositions, the defendant may move for summary judgment on that ground [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c; see Ch. 537, Summary Judgment]. If the fact does not so appear and cannot be indisputably established on a motion for summary judgment because fact issues must be determined, the defendant may allege the bar of the statute as an affirmative defense in the answer to the complaint and then move for a separate trial of that issue [see Code Civ. Proc. § 597].

[4] Pleading Statute of Limitations in Answer

A defendant asserting that the action is barred by the statute of limitations may, in the answer to the complaint, plead the bar of the statute in one of two ways:

- By alleging all of the facts showing that the action is barred and indicating that the lateness of the commencement of the action is being urged as a defense [Brown v. World Church (1969) 272 Cal. App. 2d 684, 691, 77 Cal. Rptr. 669] ; or

- By stating generally that the cause of action is barred by a specified section of the Code of Civil Procedure or, if the section is subdivided, by a specified section and the subdivision [Code Civ. Proc. § 458].

If the second method is used and the defendant fails to specify the code section relied on or, if the section is subdivided, the code section and the subdivision relied on, the plea is insufficient [Brown v. World Church (1969) 272 Cal. App. 2d 684, 691, 77 Cal. Rptr. 669] and is subject to a demurrer on the ground that it does not state facts sufficient to constitute a defense [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.20(a), 430.50(b)].

Code Civ. Proc. § 458 further provides that if the allegation that the action is barred is controverted, the party pleading the defense must establish, at trial, the facts showing that the cause of action is barred. The plaintiff does not, however, file a replication to the answer. Rather, the statute provides that the statement of any new matter in the answer in avoidance or constituting a defense must, at trial, be deemed controverted by the opposite party [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.20(b)]. Because the affirmative defense is deemed controverted by operation of law, the defendant has the burden of establishing it at trial.

[5] Pleading Statute of Limitations by Demurrer

A complaint that shows on its face, or from any matter properly brought to the court's attention that the court must or may take judicial notice of [see Evid. Code §§ 451-456], that the cause of action sued on is barred by the statute of limitations is subject to a demurrer on the ground that it fails to state a cause of action [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10(e), 430.50(a)].

§ 380.370 Affirmative Defense Allegation--Comparative Negligence of Plaintiff--General Form

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense Allegation--Comparative Negligence of Plaintiff--General Form

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges that Plaintiff failed to exercise reasonable and ordinary care, caution, or prudence for his/her own safety in order to avoid the alleged accident. The resulting injuries and damages, if any, sustained by plaintiff were proximately caused and contributed to by the negligence of plaintiff [in that, among other things, _____ (set out acts or omissions of plaintiff constituting negligence, e.g., plaintiff failed to look where she was placing her hand)].

[2] Use of Form

This form of affirmative defense allegation is for insertion in an answer to a complaint based on negligence if plaintiff's negligence was a contributing factor to the accident. For a discussion of comparative negligence, see § 380.170[1].

If more than one affirmative defense is set forth in the answer, each defense must be separately stated [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(g)] and numbered [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.112(1)]. If the complaint sets forth more than one cause of action, the affirmative defense must refer to the cause of action it is intended to answer [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(g)].

[3] Pleading Comparative Negligence

The defendant has the burden of pleading and proving that the plaintiff was negligent and that the plaintiff's negligence was a proximate cause of the accident and resulting injuries [Simmons v. Wexler (1979) 94 Cal. App. 3d 1007, 1014, 156 Cal. Rptr. 810] . Many practitioners prefer to plead facts as generally as possible to avoid tying themselves down to a specific set of narrow facts at the pleading stage. The basic elements of negligence may be generally alleged in a complaint or answer [see Singer v. Superior Court (1960) 54 Cal. 2d 318, 323, 5 Cal. Rptr. 697, 353 P.2d 305 ; Hoyem v. Manhattan Beach City Sch. Dist. (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 508, 513-514, 150 Cal. Rptr. 1, 585 P.2d 851] . Therefore, it is likely that a defendant can plead plaintiff's comparative fault generally and omit the allegations of the specific actions of plaintiff set out as optional language in the example.

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense Allegation--Comparative Negligence of Plaintiff--Plaintiff's Violation of Statute, Ordinance, or Regulation[Evid. Code § 669]

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges that at the time and place of the alleged injuries, plaintiff was not exercising ordinary care, caution, or prudence to prevent his/her injuries. Plaintiff was injured while _____ [allege actions of plaintiff at time of accident that were in violation of statute, ordinance, or regulation, e.g., standing in a roadway hitchhiking]. That conduct was in direct violation of _____ [cite or identify statute, ordinance, or regulation, e.g., Section 21957 of the Vehicle Code], then and there in full force and effect, which provides that _____ [set forth relevant portions, e.g., no person shall stand in a roadway for the purpose of soliciting a ride from the driver of any vehicle]. Therefore, the alleged injuries were proximately caused by the negligence of plaintiff.

[2] Use of Form

This affirmative defense allegation is for insertion in an answer to a complaint based on negligence if the plaintiff's conduct at the time of the accident was in violation of a statute, ordinance, or regulation.

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense Allegation--Comparative Negligence of Plaintiff--Based on Vicarious Liability

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges:

1. _____ [Allege facts demonstrating that the proximate cause of plaintiff's injuries and/or damages is the negligence of a third person that is properly imputed to plaintiff, e.g., Plaintiff is seeking to recover for damage to the motor of its truck, which it had rented to defendant. Defendant is informed and believes that the reason the motor was damaged while being used by defendant is that it contained an insufficient amount of oil. The truck was operated by defendant with an insufficient amount of oil as a proximate result of the negligence of plaintiff's employees in failing to properly maintain and inspect the truck prior to renting it to defendant].

2. Because of the relationship existing between plaintiff and _____ [specify, e.g., plaintiff's employee] at the time and place alleged in the complaint, the contributory negligence of _____ [specify, e.g., plaintiff's employee] is imputed to plaintiff and plaintiff's recovery, if any, from defendant must be reduced accordingly.

[2] Use of Form

This affirmative defense allegation is for use in an answer to a complaint if the proximate cause of the plaintiff's injuries or damages is the negligence of a third person that is properly imputed to the plaintiff.

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense Allegation--Express Assumption of Risk by Plaintiff

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges:

1. Prior to _____ [date of injury or death], namely, on _____ [date], _____ [plaintiff or _____ (name), plaintiff's decedent] signed a written waiver, release, and indemnity agreement.

[EITHER, plead effect of agreement]

2. A copy of the agreement referred to in Paragraph 1 is attached hereto as Exhibit 1 and made a part hereof. By the terms of that agreement, _____ [plaintiff or plaintiff's decedent], in consideration of _____ [specify, e.g. being enrolled in a scuba diving training class given by _____ (defendant or _____ [name], defendant's employer)], expressly released and discharged _____ [defendant or defendant's employer, and his/her officers, agents, and employees,] from any and all liability for any negligence on his/her/their part that might result in, and expressly waived all claims for damages for, injury to the person, damage to the property, or the death of _____ [plaintiff or plaintiff's decedent] _____ [specify activities, e.g., while participating in the scuba diving course or activities] and, by the express terms of which _____ [plaintiff or plaintiff's decedent] expressly assumed all risks of any injury he/she might suffer to person or property as a result of the negligence of defendants or any of them during the _____ [specify, e.g., training course].

[OR, plead terms of agreement]

2. The agreement referred to in Paragraph 1 provides[, in relevant part,] as follows: _____ [set forth exact terms of agreement].

[2] Use of Form

This form is for use in an answer to the complaint in an action based on negligence for damages for personal injury, property damage, or wrongful death, to allege the affirmative defense of express assumption of risk because the plaintiff or the plaintiff's decedent signed a written waiver and release agreement before the injury or death [see § 380.171[1]].

§ 380.374 Affirmative Defense Allegation--Implied Assumption of Risk by Plaintiff--Primary Assumption of Risk by Participant in Active Sport

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense Allegation--Implied Assumption of Risk by Plaintiff--Primary Assumption of Risk by Participant in Active Sport

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges that plaintiff is completely barred from recovery because plaintiff's injury resulted from his/her participation with defendant in an active sport, namely _____ [specify sport or activity in which plaintiff and defendant were engaged, e.g., touch football], and defendant neither intentionally injured plaintiff nor engaged in conduct that was so reckless as to fall outside the range of the ordinary activity involved in that sport. Therefore, defendant owed no duty to protect plaintiff from the particular risk of harm that caused the injury.

[If appropriate, add: The sport as played by plaintiff and defendant involved the type of physical contact that generally could be expected to result in injury(, and even though the sport was not organized and well-defined, plaintiff knew of the type of conduct involved).]

CAUTION:

The first paragraph of this form is based on what is, apparently, a plurality opinion of the Supreme Court in Knight v. Jewett [Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 314-315, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696 ; see § 380.172[3]]. Pending further clarification by the Court, the weight of decisional guidance in the lead opinion and the vitality of the dissent's analysis are therefore unclear [see Del Mar Water, Light & Power Co. v. Eshleman (1914) 167 Cal. 666, 682, 140 P. 591 (any proposition or principle stated in opinion not to be taken as opinion of Court unless agreed to by at least four justices)]. The optional second paragraph includes language that would support the analysis used in the dissent [see Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 336-338, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696 (Kennard, J., dissenting)].

Counsel should therefore consider asserting affirmative defenses under both theories to the extent that both theories are supported by the facts, pending further clarification by the Court.

[2] Use of Form

This form is for use by a defendant to allege as an affirmative defense that the plaintiff is barred by implied assumption of risk from recovering damages for injuries suffered during participation in an active sport. The defense is based on the rule that participants in an active sport cannot recover for injuries suffered during that participation unless the injuries were caused by either intentional or reckless misconduct falling outsidethe range of the ordinary activity involved in the sport [see Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 320, 321, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696 (George, J., joined by Lucas, C.J., and Arabian, J.; Mosk, J., concurring and dissenting)]. The optional paragraph is based on the analysis used in three justices' dissenting opinions [see Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 323, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696 (Panelli, J., concurring and dissenting, joined by Baxter, J., concurring in result, but dissenting in favor of consent analysis stated in dissent by Kennard, J.)], and, if nothing else should add to the viability of the defense if supported by the facts of the case.

For a form of affirmative defense allegation for use if a plaintiff has expressly assumed the risk, see § 380.373.

[3] Assumption of Risk by Participants in Active Sports

A participant in an active sport breaches a legal duty of care to other participants--that is, engages in conduct that properly may subject him or her to financial liability--only if the participant intentionally injures another player or engages in conduct that is so reckless as to be totally outside the range of the ordinary activity involved in the sport [Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 320, 321, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696 (George, J., joined by Lucas, C.J., and Arabian, J., with Mosk, J., apparently concurring on this point)].

The proper analysis by which this result is reached is not entirely clear. At least three justices of the California Supreme Court analyzed the issue and concluded that if, by virtue of the nature of the activity and the parties' relationship to the activity, the defendant owes no legal duty to protect the plaintiff from the particular risk of harm that caused the injury, the doctrine of assumption of risk continues to operate as a complete bar to the plaintiff's recovery [Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 307, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696 (plurality opinion)]. The Court referred to this approach as "primary assumption of risk" [Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 307, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696] . The focal point is whether the defendant's alleged conduct breached the legal duty of care that the defendant owed to the plaintiff [see Ford v. Gouin (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 339, 344, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 30, 834 P.2d 724 (companion case to Knight)].

The dissent in Knight favored a "consent-based" analysis under which the defense of implied assumption of the risk remains a complete bar to recovery in negligence cases in which the plaintiff has knowingly and voluntarily consented to encounter a specific risk [see Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 331, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696] . Their approach is a subjective evaluation of what a particular plaintiff knew and appreciated about the encountered risk [Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 324, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696 (Kennard, J., dissenting, with whom two other justices concurred; criticizing that lead opinion because "by thus transforming an affirmative defense into an element of the plaintiff's negligence action, the plurality would abolish the defense without acknowledging that it is doing so")].

For further discussion, see § 380.172[2][a].

§ 380.375 Affirmative Defense Allegation--Implied Assumption of Risk by Plaintiff--Secondary Assumption of Risk

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense Allegation--Implied Assumption of Risk by Plaintiff--Secondary Assumption of Risk

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges that plaintiff assumed the risk of plaintiff's alleged injuries in that plaintiff [specify facts showing plaintiff's assumption of risk, e.g., proceeded to walk across the mezzanine area of defendant's premises even though defendant had posted prominent signs at each entrance to the mezzanine stating that that area was closed for cleaning]. The resulting injuries and damages, if any, sustained by plaintiff were proximately caused and contributed to by the negligence of plaintiff in that, among other things, [set out acts or omissions of plaintiff constituting negligence, e.g., plaintiff ignored the warning signs posted by defendant and the obvious wet condition of the floor in the mezzanine area where plaintiff allegedly slipped and fell and sustained the injuries complained of].

[2] Use of Form

This form is for use by a defendant to allege the affirmative defense that the plaintiff should share in the liability for his/her injuries because of the plaintiff's secondary assumption of risk. According to the lead opinion in Knight v. Jewett [Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696] , the doctrine of assumption of risk, in light of the adoption of comparative fault principles, consists of two separate defenses: (1) primary assumption of risk, which applies if the defendant does not owe a duty to the plaintiff and operates as a complete bar to the plaintiff's recovery; and (2) secondary assumption of risk, which applies if the defendant does owe a duty of care to the plaintiff, but the plaintiff proceeds to encounter a known risk imposed by the defendant's breach of duty. Secondary assumption of risk is merged into the comparative fault scheme, and the trier of fact may consider the parties' relative responsibility in apportioning the loss resulting from the injury [Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 315, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834

§ 380.376 Affirmative Defense--Workers' Compensation as Plaintiff's Exclusive Remedy [Lab. Code §§ 3601, 5300]

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense--Workers' Compensation as Plaintiff's Exclusive Remedy [Lab. Code §§ 3601, 5300]

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges that at the time and place of plaintiff's alleged accident, plaintiff was an employee of defendant, plaintiff was performing services growing out of and incidental to his/her employment, plaintiff was acting within the course of his/her employment, and plaintiff's exclusive remedy is that provided by workers' compensation benefits pursuant to Sections 3201 through 6149 of the Labor Code.

[2] Use of Form

This form of affirmative defense allegation is for insertion in an answer to a complaint against the plaintiff's employer, if the plaintiff's injuries were incurred while the plaintiff was in the course of his or her employment. Under these circumstances, except for a few notable exceptions, the plaintiff's exclusive remedy is workers' compensation [see Lab. Code §§ 3600, 3601, 5300].

A defendant in a negligence action who claims to be one of the class of persons protected from an action at law by the provisions of the Workers' Compensation Act bears the burden of pleading and proving, as an affirmative defense to the action, the existence of the conditions of compensation set forth in the Act that are necessary to its application [Doney v. Tambouratgis (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 91, 96-97, 151 Cal. Rptr. 347, 587 P.2d 1160 ; Coca-Cola Bottling Co. v. Superior Court (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 1273, 1283-1284, 286 Cal. Rptr. 855] . § 385.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter discusses "negotiable instruments" under Division 3 of the Commercial Code, as enacted operative January 1, 1993 [see Com. Code § 3101]. The chapter includes forms for use in actions on the most common kinds of negotiable instruments: promissory notes [see §§ 385.90 -385.118] and checks [see §§ 385.119 -385.127], as well as allegations of affirmative defenses having general application for holder in due course issues in those actions [see §§ 385.128 -385.132].

This chapter focuses on actions by and between the parties to a check, other than banks. For discussion and forms relating to banks' duties and liabilities with respect to checks, see Ch. 95, Banks, Deposits, and Checks .

In addition to negotiable instruments as governed by Division 3, this chapter discusses Civ. Code § 1719, which imposes penalties for writing bad checks [see §§ 385.119, 385.120]. The many Civil Code sections regulating notes, negotiable or otherwise, secured by deeds of trusts or mortgages on real estate are discussed in Ch. 555, Trust Deeds and Real Property Mortgages .

For discussion and a form relating to Com. Code § 3311, which governs the tender of checks in satisfaction of disputed, unliquidated claims, see Ch. 6, Accord and Satisfaction .

For discussion and a form relating to Civ. Code § 1725, which prohibits a retailer from requiring credit card information before accepting a check in payment of a transaction, see Ch. 127, Consumer Contracts and Loans .

For forms for use in actions involving assignment of nonnegotiable instruments and choses in action generally, see Ch. 60, Assignments .

Chapter 385 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

33-385 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 385.10

§ 385.10 Governing Law

Negotiable instruments are governed by Division 3 of the Commercial Code (Com. Code § 3101 et seq.). Division 3 does not apply to money, payment orders, which are governed by Division 11 (Com. Code § 11101 et seq.), or securities, which are governed by Division 8 (Com. Code § 8101 et seq.) [Com. Code § 3102(a)]. Regulations of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System and operating circulars of the Federal Reserve Banks supersede any inconsistent provision of Division 3 to the extent of the inconsistency [Com. Code § 3102(c)].

If there is conflict between Division 3 and Division 4 (Com. Code § 4101 et seq.) or Division 9 (Com. Code § 9101 et seq.), Divisions 4 and 9 govern [Com. Code § 3102(b)].

Penalties imposed against the drawer of checks that are unpaid for specified reasons are governed by Civ. Code § 1719.

Unless governed by the particular provisions authorizing issuance of bonds, notes, commercial paper, leases, or other evidences of indebtedness by a public body, Gov. Code § 5450 et seq. govern a pledge of collateral by a public body to secure the evidence of indebtedness.

Cases decided under prior versions of Division 3 have been retained without any notation that they were decided under prior law except when it is not apparent from the date of the case which law it interpreted.

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

33-385 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 385.11

§ 385.11 Definitions

[1] Instruments

"Instrument" means a negotiable instrument [Com. Code § 3104(b)], and, throughout this chapter, both terms are used interchangeably. Negotiable instruments are classified as notes, drafts [see Com. Code § 3104(e)], checks [see Com. Code § 3104(f)], and certificates of deposit [see Com. Code § 3104(j)]. Checks include cashier's checks [see Com. Code § 3104(g)], teller's checks [see Com. Code § 3104(h)], demand drafts [see Com. Code § 3104(k)], and traveler's checks [see Com. Code § 3104(i); but see Com. Code § 3312(a)(1) (for purposes of that section, "check" means cashier's check, teller's check, or certified check)].

An instrument that complies with the requirements of negotiability (see § 385.13[1]) is one or more of the following:

- A draft if it is an order or written instruction to pay money signed by the person giving the instruction. The instruction may be addressed to any person, including the person giving the instruction, or to one or more persons jointly or in the alternative but not in succession. An authorization to pay is not an order unless the person authorized to pay is also instructed to pay [Com. Code §§ 3103(a)(6), 3104(e)].

- A check if it is (a) a draft, other than a documentary draft, payable on demand and drawn on a bank, (b) a cashier's check or teller's check, or (c) a demand draft [see Com. Code § 3104(k)]. An instrument may be a check even though it is described on its face by another term, such as "money order" [Com. Code § 3104(f)].

- A certificate of deposit if it contains an acknowledgment by a bank that a sum of money has been received by the bank and a promise by the bank to repay the sum of money. A certificate of deposit is a note of the bank [Com. Code § 3104(j)].

- A note if it is a promise or written undertaking to pay money signed by the person undertaking to pay. An acknowledgment of an obligation by the obligor is not a promise unless the obligor also undertakes to pay the obligation [Com. Code §§ 3103(a)(9), 3104(e)].

If an instrument falls within the definition of both "note" and "draft," a person entitled to enforce the instrument may treat it as either a note or a draft [Com. Code § 3104(e)].

A cashier's check is a draft with respect to which the drawer and drawee are the same bank or branches of the same bank [Com. Code § 3104(g)].

A teller's check is a draft drawn by a bank (1) on another bank, or (2) payable at or through a bank [Com. Code § 3104(h)].

A traveler's check is an instrument that (1) is payable on demand, (2) is drawn on or payable at or through a bank, (3) is designated by the term "traveler's check" or by a substantially similar term, and (4) requires, as a condition to payment, a countersignature by a person whose specimen signature appears on the instrument [Com. Code § 3104(i)].

A demand draft is a writing, not signed by a customer, that is created by a third party under the purported authority of the customer for the purpose of charging the customer's account with a bank. A demand draft must contain the customer's account number, and may contain the customer's printed or typewritten name, a notation that the customer authorized the draft, or the statement "No Signature Required" or words to that effect. The term "demand draft" does not include a check purportedly drawn by and bearing the signature of a fiduciary [Com. Code § 3104(k); see Com. Code § 3307(a)(1)].

A "certified check" means a check accepted by the bank on which it is drawn. Acceptance may be made as stated in Com. Code § 3409(a) (see § 385.25) or by a writing on the check that indicates that the check is certified. The drawee of a check has no obligation to certify the check, and refusal to certify is not dishonor of the check [Com. Code § 3409(d)].

[2] Parties to Instruments

The term "issuer" includes both makers and drawers [see Com. Code § 3105(c)]. A maker is a person who signs or is identified in a note as a person undertaking to pay [Com. Code § 3103(a)(5)]. A drawer is a person who signs or is identified in a draft as a person ordering payment [Com. Code § 3103(a)(3)].

A drawee is the person ordered in a draft to make payment [Com. Code § 3103(a)(2)]. A drawee becomes an "acceptor" when it has accepted a draft [Com. Code § 3103(a)(1); see Com. Code § 3409(a) (defining "acceptance" and discussed in § 385.35)].

An "endorser" is a person who makes an endorsement [Com. Code § 3204(b)]. Various types of endorsements are discussed in § 385.19.

There may also be "accommodation parties" and "accommodated parties" to instruments [see Com. Code § 3419], as discussed in § 385.40.

Chapter 385 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

33-385 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 385.12

§ 385.12 Negotiation

[1] In General

Negotiation is a voluntary or involuntary transfer of possession of an instrument by a person other than the issuer to a person who thereby becomes its holder, and is thus entitled to enforce it [Com. Code §§ 3201(a), 3301; see Com. Code § 3105 (issue, issuer)]. Except for negotiation by a remitter, if an instrument is payable to an identified person, negotiation requires transfer of possession of the instrument and its endorsement by the holder [Com. Code § 3201(b); see Com. Code § 3103(a)(11) ("remitter" means person who purchases instrument from its issuer if instrument is payable to identified person other than purchaser)].

Remitter transactions usually involve a cashier's check or teller's check. For example, B buys goods from S and pays for them with a cashier's check issued by Bank and purchased from Bank by B. The check is issued when it is delivered by Bank to B, whether it is payable to B or to S [see Com. Code § 3105(b); Official Comment 2 to U.C.C. § 3-201 (1990)]. If the check is payable to B, negotiation requires B to endorse the check and deliver it to S. If the check is payable to S, negotiation occurs when B transfers the check to S. B is the remitter and, until delivery of the check to S, is also the owner of the check, even though B is never a party to the check [Official Comment 2 to U.C.C. § 3-201 (1990)].

If an instrument is payable to bearer or if it has been endorsed in blank, it may be negotiated by transfer of possession alone [Com. Code §§ 3201(b), 3205(b); see also discussion § 385.19[2]].

Negotiation does not occur if a transferor purports to transfer less than the entire instrument. The transferee obtains no rights under Division 3 and has only the rights of a partial assignee [Com. Code § 3203(d)].

Negotiation is effective even if obtained (1) from an infant, a corporation exceeding its powers, or a person without capacity; (2) by fraud, duress, or mistake; or (3) in breach of duty or as part of an illegal transaction [Com. Code § (a)].

To the extent permitted by other law, negotiation may be rescinded or may be subject to other remedies, but those remedies may not be asserted against a subsequent holder in due course or against a person paying the instrument in good faith and without knowledge of facts that are a basis for rescission or other remedy [Com. Code § (b); see also §§

385.115, 385.116 ("real" defenses available against holder in due course)].

[2] Transfer

An instrument is transferred when it is delivered by a person other than its issuer for the purpose of giving to the person receiving delivery the right to enforce the instrument [Com. Code § 3203(a)]. Whether or not a transfer is a negotiation, transfer of an instrument vests the transferee with any right of the transferor to enforce the instrument, including any right as a holder in due course, but the transferee cannot acquire rights of a holder in due course by a transfer, directly or indirectly, from a holder in due course if the transferee engaged in fraud or illegality affecting the instrument [Com. Code § 3203(b); see Com. Code § 3203(d) (discussed under § 385.12[1]); Finalco, Inc. v. Roosevelt (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1301, 1305-1306, 3 Cal. Rptr. 2d 865 (entity that reacquired note it had previously assigned while it was holder and that knew of default and defenses at time of reacquisition as taking free from all claims and defenses to same extent as holder)]. *Com. Code § (b)*is known as the "shelter" doctrine, and its purpose is to assure the holder in due course a free market for its paper. Thus, when a transferee takes an instrument from a holder in due course, the transferee takes free from all claims and defenses to the same extent as did the holder in due course even if the transferee is aware of those claims and defenses. If this were not the rule, a holder in due course could be deprived of a market for the instrument if the obligor widely disseminated notice of a claim or defense. Com. Code § (b) does not make the transferee a holder in due course; it transfers the freedom from claims and defenses of the original holder in due course to each succeeding transferee [Finalco, Inc. v. Roosevelt (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1301, 1305-1306, 3 Cal. Rptr. 2d 865 (decided under former Com. Code § 3201(1))].

Unless otherwise agreed, if an instrument is transferred for value and the transferee does not become a holder because of lack of endorsement by the transferor, the transferee has a specifically enforceable right to the transferor's unqualified endorsement, but negotiation of the instrument does not occur until that endorsement is made [Com. Code § 3203(c)].

[3] Endorsement

An endorsement is a signature, other than that of a signer as maker, drawer, or acceptor, that, alone or accompanied by other words, is madeon an instrument for negotiating the instrument. Regardless of the signer's intent, a signature and its accompanying words is an endorsement unless the accompanying words, terms of the instrument, place of the signature, or other circumstances unambiguously indicate that the signature was made for a purpose other than endorsement. For the purpose of determining whether a signature is made on an instrument, a paper affixed to the instrument is a part of the instrument [Com. Code § 3204(a); see Com. Code § 3204(b) (endorser as one who makes endorsement)]. An endorsement may also be made for the purpose of restricting payment of the instrument or incurring endorser's liability on the instrument [Com. Code § 3204(a)].

For the purpose of determining whether the transferee of an instrument is a holder, an endorsement that transfers a security interest in the instrument is effective as an unqualified endorsement of the instrument [Com. Code § 3204(c)]. If an instrument is payable to a holder under a name that is not the holder's name, endorsement may be made by the holder in the name stated in the instrument or in the holder's name, or both, but a person paying or taking the instrument for value or collection may require signature in both names [Com. Code § 3204(d)].

For discussion of specific types of endorsements, see § 385.19.

Chapter 385 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

33-385 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 385.13

§ 385.13 Forms of Negotiable Instruments

[1] Basic Criteria

Except as provided in Com. Code § 3104(c) and (d) (discussed below), "negotiable instrument" means an unconditional promise or order to pay a fixed amount of money, with or without interest or other charges described in the promise or order, if it is all of the following [Com. Code § 3104(a)]:

(1) Is payable to bearer or to order at the time it is issued or first comes into a holder's possession;

(2) Is payable on demand or at a definite time; and

(3) Does not state any other undertaking or instruction by the person promising or ordering payment to do any act in addition to the payment of money, but the promise or order may contain (i) an undertaking or power to give, maintain, or protect collateral to secure payment, (ii) an authorization or power to the holder to confess judgment or realize on or dispose of collateral [see Commercial Nat. Bank of Peoria v. Kermeen (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 396, 402, 275 Cal. Rptr. 122 (cognovit clause in preprinted promissory note form as not, without more, showing voluntary and knowing waiver of fundamental due process rights; without such waiver, sister-state court has no personal jurisdiction over defendant and its judgment is not entitled to full faith and credit in California)], or (iii) a waiver of the benefit of any law intended for the advantage or protection of an obligor.

An order that meets all of the requirements of Com. Code § 3104(a), except that it is not payable to bearer or to order at the time it is issued or first comes into a holder's possession, and otherwise falls within the definition of "check" [see Com. Code § 3104(f) (discussed in § 385.11)] is a negotiable instrument and a check [Com. Code § 3104(c)]. However, a promise or order other than a check is not a negotiable instrument if, at the time it is issued or first comes into a holder's possession, it contains a conspicuous statement, however expressed, to the effect that the promise or order is not negotiable or is not an instrument governed by Division 3 [Com. Code § 3104(d)].

[2] Unconditional Promise or Order to Pay

Except as provided in Com. Code § 3106, for the purposes of Com. Code § 3104(a), a promise or order is unconditional unless it states (1) an express condition to payment, (2) that the promise or order is subject to or governed by another writing [see Growth Equities Corp. v. Freed (1991) 227 Cal. App. 3d 506, 509-511, 277 Cal. Rptr. 848 (note secured by and "subject to" partnership agreement as nonnegotiable)], or (3) that rights or obligations with respect to the promise or order are stated in another writing. A reference to another writing does not of itself make the promise or order conditional [Com. Code § 3106(a)].

A promise or order is not made conditional (1) by a reference to another writing for a statement of rights with respect to collateral, prepayment, or acceleration [see Growth Equities Corp. v. Freed (1991) 227 Cal. App. 3d 506, 509, 277 Cal. Rptr. 848 (fact that note was secured by partnership agreement did not undermine its negotiability, but fact that note stated on its face that it was "subject to" agreement did)], or (2) because payment is limited to resort to a particular fund or source [Com. Code § 3106(b)].

When a note states that it is "secured by" and "subject to" another agreement, the "subject to" language is not redundant and does not mean the same thing as "secured by" [Growth Equities Corp. v. Freed (1991) 227 Cal. App. 3d 506, 509-510, 277 Cal. Rptr. 848 (distinguishing Mann v. Leasko (1960) 179 Cal. App. 2d 692, 4 Cal. Rptr. 124 , which involved note that was secured by lien but did not recite that it was subject to lien)].

If a promise or order requires, as a condition to payment, a countersignature by a person whose specimen signature appears on the promise or order [see, e.g., Com. Code § 3104(i) (traveler's check)], the condition does not make the promise or order conditional for the purposes of Com. Code § 3104(a). If the person whose specimen signature appears on an instrument fails to countersign the instrument, the failure to countersign is a defense to the issuer's obligation, but the failure does not prevent a transferee of the instrument from becoming a holder of the instrument [Com. Code § 3106(c)].

If a promise or order at the time it is issued or first comes into a holder's possession contains a statement, required by applicable statutory oradministrative law, to the effect that the holder's or transferee's rights are subject to claims or defenses that the issuer could assert against the original payee, the promise or order is not thereby made conditional for the purposes of Com. Code § 3104(a); but, if the promise or order is an instrument, there cannot be a holder in due course of the instrument [Com. Code § 3106(d); see, e.g., 16 C.F.R. § 433.2 (requires legend; see discussion under § 385.29[2][g])].

[3] Payable on Demand or at Definite Time

A promise or order is "payable on demand" if it (1) states that it is payable on demand or at sight, or otherwise indicates that it is payable at the will of the holder, or (2) does not state any time of payment [Com. Code § 3108(a)].

Subject to rights of prepayment, acceleration, extension at the option of the holder, or extension to a further definite time at the maker's or acceptor's option or automatically on or after a specified act or event, a promise or order is "payable at a definite time" if it is payable at one of the following times [Com. Code § 3108(b)]:

- On elapse of a definite period of time after sight or acceptance;
- At a fixed date or dates; or
- At a time or times readily ascertainable at the time the promise or order is issued [see Com. Code § 3105(a) (issue is first delivery of instrument by maker or drawer for purpose of giving rights on instrument to any person)].

If an instrument payable at a fixed date is also payable on demand made before the fixed date, the instrument is payable on demand until the fixed date and, if demand for payment is not made before that date, becomes payable at a definite time on the fixed date [Com. Code § 3108(c)].

An instrument may be antedated or postdated. If the instrument is payable at a fixed period after date, the date stated determines the time of payment [Com. Code § 3113(a)]. Except as provided in Com. Code § 4401(c) (which allows a bank to pay postdated check before its date unless customer complies with notification procedure), an instrument payable on demand is not payable before the date of the instrument [Com. Code § 3113(a)]. If an instrument is undated, its date is the date of its issue or, in the case of an unissued instrument, the date it first comes into a holder's possession [Com. Code § 3113(b)].

[4] Payable to Order or Bearer

A negotiable instrument is required to be made payable either to order or to bearer [Com. Code § 3104(a)(1); Rottman v. Hevener (1921) 54 Cal. App. 485, 487, 202 P. 334] . "Bearer" means the person in possession of an instrument, document of title, or certificated security that is payable to bearer or endorsed in blank [Com. Code § 1201(b)(5)]. A promise or order is payable to bearer if it is any of the following [Com. Code § 3109(a)]:

- States that it is payable to bearer or to the order of bearer or otherwise indicates that the person in possession of the promise or order is entitled to payment;

- Does not state a payee; or

- States that it is payable to or to the order of cash or otherwise indicates that it is not payable to an identified person.

A promise or order that is not payable to bearer is payable to order if it is payable (1) to the order of an identified person or (2) to an identified person or order. A promise or order that is payable to order is payable to the identified person [Com. Code § 3109(b)]. An "identified person" may be identified in any way, including by name, identifying number, office, or account number [see Com. Code § 3110(c)].

An instrument that is payable to bearer may become payable to an identified person if it is specially endorsed pursuant to Com. Code § 3205(a), which is discussed in § 385.19[1]. An instrument that is payable to an identified person may become payable to bearer if it is endorsed in blank Com. Code § 3205(b), which is discussed in § 385.19[2] [Com. Code § 3109(c)].

§ 385.14 Other Writings

Subject to applicable law regarding exclusion of proof of contemporaneous or previous agreements, the obligation of a party to an instrument to pay the instrument may be modified, supplemented, or nullified by a separate agreement of the obligor and a person entitled to enforce the instrument, if the instrument is issued or the obligation is incurred in reliance on the agreement or as part of the same transaction giving rise to the agreement. To the extent an obligation is modified, supplemented, or nullified by an agreement under this section, the agreement is a defense to the obligation [Com. Code § 3117].

Chapter 385 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

33-385 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 385.15

§ 385.15 Parol or Extrinsic Evidence

Terms with respect to which the parties' confirmatory memoranda agree or that are otherwise set forth in a writing intended by the parties as a final expression of their agreement with respect to those terms as are included in the writing may not be contradicted by evidence of any prior agreement or of a contemporaneous oral agreement, but may be explained or supplemented by the following [Com. Code § 2202]:

- By course of dealing or usage of trade [Com. Code § 1303(b), (c); see,e.g., Insurance Co. of North America v. NNR Aircargo Service (USA), Inc. (9th Cir. 2000) 201 F.3d 1111, 1113-1115 (under Com. Code § 1303(b), receipt of 47 identical invoices for 47 separate transactions was sufficient to constitute course of dealing, modifying shipping agreement)] or by course of performance [Com. Code § 1303(a)]; and

- By evidence of consistent additional terms unless the court finds the writing to have been intended also as a complete and exclusive statement of the terms of the agreement [Com. Code § 2202].

Thus, a prior or contemporaneous oral agreement that a promissory note is not payable according to its terms is no defense to an action on that note in the absence of fraud, mistake, lack or failure of consideration, or nonoccurrence of a condition precedent [Coast Bank v. Holmes (1971) 19 Cal. App. 3d 581, 589, 97 Cal. Rptr. 30] . Nevertheless, under Com. Code § 2202, evidence of oral collateral agreements is to be excluded in the interpretation of promissory notes only when the fact finder is likely to be misled [Birsner v. Bolles (1971) 20 Cal. App. 3d 635, 637-639, 97 Cal. Rptr. 846] .

§ 385.16 Rules of Construction

[1] Contradictory Terms

If an instrument contains contradictory terms, typewritten terms prevail over printed terms, handwritten terms prevail over both, and words prevail over numbers [Com. Code § 3114].

[2] Interest

Unless otherwise provided in the instrument [Com. Code § 3112(a)]:

- An instrument is not payable with interest, and
- Interest on an interest-bearing instrument is payable from the date of the instrument [Com. Code § 3112(a)].

Interest may be stated in an instrument as a fixed or variable amount of money or it may be expressed as a fixed or variable rate or rates. The amount or rate of interest may be stated or described in the instrument in any manner and may require reference to information not contained in the instrument. If an instrument provides for interest, but the amount of interest payable cannot be ascertained from the description, interest is payable at the judgment rate in effect at the place of payment of the instrument and at the time interest first accrues [Com. Code § 3112(b)].

[3] Payment in Foreign Money

Unless the instrument otherwise provides, an instrument that states the amount payable in foreign money may be paid in the foreign money or in an equivalent amount in dollars calculated by using the current bank-offered spot rate at the place of payment for the purchase of dollars on the day on which the instrument is paid [Com. Code § 3107].

[4] Place of Payment

Except as otherwise provided for items in Division 4 (Com. Code § 4101 et seq.), an instrument is payable at the place of payment stated in the instrument. If no place of payment is stated, an instrument is payable at the address of the drawee or maker stated in the instrument. If no address is stated, the place of payment is the place of business of the drawee or maker. If a drawee or maker has more than one place of business, the place of payment is any place of business of the drawee or maker chosen by the person entitled to enforce the instrument. If the drawee or maker has no place of business, the place of payment is the residence of the drawee or maker [Com. Code § 3111].

[5] Joint and Several Liability; Right to Contribution

Except as otherwise provided in the instrument, two or more persons who have the same liability on an instrument as makers, drawers, acceptors, endorsers who endorse as joint payees, or anomalous endorsers are jointly and severally liable in the capacity in which they sign [Com. Code § 3116(a)].

Except as provided in Com. Code § 3419(e) [see § 385.40[1]] or by agreement of the affected parties, a party having joint and several liability who pays the instrument is entitled to receive from any party having the same joint and several liability contribution in accordance with applicable law [Com. Code § 3116(b)]. Discharge of one party having joint and several liability by a person entitled to enforce the instrument does not affect the right under Com. Code § 3116(b) of a party having the same joint and several liability to receive contribution from the party discharged [Com. Code § 3116(c)]. For discussion and forms dealing with indemnity and contribution generally, see Ch. 300, Indemnity and Contribution .

§ 385.17 Determining to Whom Instrument Is Payable

[1] Maker's Intent Governs

The person to whom an instrument is payable may be identified in any way, including by name, identifying number, office, or account number [Com. Code § 3110(c)]. The person to whom an instrument is initially payable is determined by the intent of the person, whether or not authorized, who signed the instrument as, or in the name or behalf of, the issuer [Com. Code § 3110(a); see Com. Code § 3105(c) (issuer includes both makers and drawers)]. The instrument is payable to the person intended by the signer even if that person is identified in the instrument by a name or other identification that is not that of the intended person.If more than one person signs in the name or behalf of the issuer of an instrument and all the signers do not intend the same person as payee, the instrumentis payable to any person intended by one or more of the signers [Com. Code § 3110(a)].

When the issuer's signature is made by automated means, such as a check-writing machine, the payee of the instrument is determined by the intent of the person who supplied the name or identification of the payee, whether or not authorized to do so [Com. Code § 3110(b)].

[2] Instrument Payable to Account

If an instrument is payable to an account that is identified only by number, the instrument is payable to the person to whom the account is payable. An instrument that is payable to an account identified by number and by the name of a person is payable to the named person, whether or not that person is the owner of the account identified by number [Com. Code § 3110(c)(1)].

[3] Instrument Payable to Trust, Estate, or Representative

An instrument payable to a trust, an estate, or a person described as trustee or representative of a trust or estate is payable to the trustee, the representative, or a successor of either, whether or not the beneficiary or estate is also named [Com. Code § 3110(c)(2)(A)].

[4] Instrument Payable to Agent or Officer

An instrument payable to a person described as agent or similar representative of a named or identified person is payable to the represented person, the representative, or a successor of the representative [Com. Code § 3110(c)(2)(B)].

An instrument payable to an office or to a person described as holding an office is payable to the named person, the incumbent of the office, or a successor to the incumbent [Com. Code § 3110(c)(2)(D)].

[5] Instrument Payable to Fund or Organization That Is Not Legal Entity

An instrument payable to a fund or organization that is not a legal entity is payable to a representative of the members of that fund or organization [Com. Code § 3110(c)(2)(C)].

[6] Instrument With Alternative or Joint Payees

If an instrument is payable to two or more persons alternatively, it is payable to any of them and may be negotiated, discharged, or enforced by any or all of them in possession of the instrument. If an instrument payable to two or more persons is ambiguous as to whether it is payable to the persons alternatively, the instrument is payable to the persons alternatively [Com. Code § 3110(d)].

If an instrument is payable to two or more persons not alternatively, it is payable to all of them and may be negotiated, discharged, or enforced only by all of them [Com. Code § 3110(d); Feldman Constr. Co. v. Union Bank (1972) 28 Cal. App. 3d 731, 735, 104 Cal. Rptr. 912] .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

33-385 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 385.18

§ 385.18 Signatures

[1] How Made; Effect

A signature may be made (1) manually or by means of a device or machine, and (2) by the use of any name, including a trade or assumed name, or by a word, mark, or symbol executed or adopted by a person with present intention to authenticate a writing [Com. Code § 3401(b)]. A person is not liable on an instrument unless (1) the person signed the instrument, or (2) the person is represented by an agent or representative who signed the instrument and the signature is binding on the represented person under Com. Code § 3402[Com. Code § 3401(a)].

Signatures can be those of makers, drawers, acceptors, endorsers, guarantors, or accommodation parties [see Com. Code § 3203(a), 3419].

For discussion of how to establish the validity of a signature in an action on an instrument, see the discussion § 385.49.

[2] When Representive's Signature Binds Represented Party

If a person acting or purporting to act as a representative signs an instrument by signing either the name of the represented person or the name of the signer, the represented person is bound by the signature to the same extent the represented person would be bound if the signature were on a simple contract. If the represented person is bound, the signature of the representative is the "authorized signature of the represented person" and the represented person is liable on the instrument, whether or not identified in the instrument [Com. Code § 3402(a)].

[3] Liability of Person Signing as Representative

If a representative signs the name of the representative to an instrument, the signature is an authorized signature of the represented person, and the form of the signature shows unambiguously that the signature is made on behalf of the represented person who is identified in the instrument, the representative is not liable on the instrument [Com. Code § 3402(b)(1)].

Subject to Com. Code § 3402(c) (discussed below), if the form of the signature does not show unambiguously that the signature is made in a representative capacity or the represented person is not identified in the instrument, therepresentative is liable on the instrument to a holder in due course that took the instrument without notice that the representative was not intended to be liable on the instrument [Com. Code § 3402(b)(2)].With respect to any other person, the representative is liable on the instrument unless the representative proves that the original parties did not intend the representative to be liable on the instrument [Com. Code § 3402(b)(2)].

If a representative signs the name of the representative as drawer of a check without indication of the representative status and the check is payable from an account of the represented person who is identified on the check, the signer is not liable on the check if the signature is an authorized signature of the represented person [Com. Code § 3402(c)].

[4] Unauthorized Signature

Unless otherwise provided in Division 3 or Division 4, an unauthorized signature is ineffective except as the signature of the unauthorized signer in favor of a person who in good faith pays the instrument or takes it for value. An unauthorized signature may be ratified for all purposes of Division 3 [Com. Code § 3403(a)]. For example, the maker's signature "MM by CA, Attny in fact" on a note was held to be authorized even though the power of attorney was not executed until two days after the note was signed because the particular power of attorney specified that it "ratified and confirmed" all things that the attorney in fact "shall cause to be done" in furtherance of the specific transaction referred to in the power of attorney [see White v. Moriarty (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 1290, 1295-1296, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 200] .

If the signature of more than one person is required to constitute the authorized signature of an organization, the signature of the organization is unauthorized if one of the required signatures is lacking [Com. Code § 3403(b)].

The civil or criminal liability of a person who makes an unauthorized signature is not affected by any provision of Division 3 that makes the unauthorized signature effective for the purposes of Division 3 [Com. Code § 3403(c)].

Chapter 385 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

33-385 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 385.19

§ 385.19 Endorsements

[1] Special Endorsement

If an endorsement is made by the holder of an instrument, whether payable to an identified person or payable to bearer, and the endorsement identifies a person to whom it makes the instrument payable, it is a "special endorsement." When specially endorsed, an instrument becomes payable to the identified person and may be negotiated only by the endorsement of that person. The principles stated in Com. Code § 3110 (see § 385.17) apply to special endorsements [Com. Code § 3205(a); see also Com. Code § 3204 (endorsements in general, discussed in § 385.76[4])].

[2] Endorsement in Blank

If an endorsement is made by the holder of an instrument and it is not a special endorsement, it is a "blank endorsement." When endorsed in blank, an instrument becomes payable to bearer and may be negotiated by transfer of possession alone until it is specially endorsed [Com. Code § 3205(b); see Spencer v. Sterling Bank (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 1055, 1059-1060, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 576 (endorsement "for deposit only," while restrictive, is also a blank endorsement because it does not specify where or for whose benefit the checks are to be deposited.].

The holder may convert a blank endorsement that consists only of a signature into a special endorsement by writing, above the signature of the endorser, words identifying the person to whom the instrument is made payable [Com. Code § 3205(c)].

[3] Anomalous Endorsement

An anomalous endorsement is an endorsement made by a person who is not the holder of the instrument. An anomalous endorsement does not affect the manner in which the instrument may be negotiated [Com. Code § 3205(d); see also Com. Code § 3419(c), discussed in § 385.76[11][b]].

[4] Restrictive Endorsements

[a] Generally of No Effect

An endorsement limiting payment to a particular person or otherwise prohibiting further transfer or negotiation of the instrument is not effective to prevent further transfer or negotiation of the instrument [Com. Code § 3206(a)]. Similarly, an endorsement stating a condition to the right of the endorsee to receive payment does not affect the right of the endorsee to enforce the instrument. A person paying the instrument or taking it for value or collection may disregard the condition, and the rights and liabilities of that person are not affected by whether the condition has been fulfilled [Com. Code § 3206(b)].

The presence on an instrument of an endorsement to which Com. Code § 3206 applies does not prevent a purchaser of the instrument from becoming a holder in due course of the instrument unless the purchaser is a converter under Com. Code § 3206(c) or has notice or knowledge of breach of fiduciary duty as stated in Com. Code § 3206(d) [Com. Code § 3206(e)].

[b] Provide Defense to Obligor

In an action to enforce the obligation of a party to pay the instrument, the obligor has a defense if payment would violate an endorsement to which Com. Code § 3206 applies and the payment is not permitted by Com. Code § 3206 [Com. Code § 3206(f)].

[c] "For Deposit Only"

If an instrument bears an endorsement (1) described in Com. Code § 4201(b) ("pay any bank"), or (2) in blank or to a particular bank using the words "for deposit," "for collection," or other words indicating a purpose of having the instrument collected by a bank for the endorser or for a particular account, a person, other than a bank, who purchases the instrument when so endorsed converts the instrument unless the amount paid for the instrument is received by the endorser or applied consistently with the endorsement [Com. Code § 3206(c)(1)]. Similarly, a depositary bank that purchases the instrument or takes it for collection when so endorsed converts the instrument unless the amount paid by the bank with respect to the instrument is received by the endorser or applied consistently with the endorsement [Com. Code § 3206(c)(2); see Spencer v. Sterling Bank (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 1055, 1059-1060, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 576 (bank's acceptance for collection of cashiers' checks endorsed "for deposit only," for deposit to third party's trust account, was not violation of restrictive endorsement)]. A payor bank that is also the depositary bank or that takes the instrument for immediate payment over the counter from a person other than a collecting bank converts the instrument unless the proceeds of the instrument are received by the endorser or applied consistently with the endorsement [Com. Code § 3206(c)(3)]. Any other payor bank or intermediary bank may disregard the endorsement and is not liable if the proceeds of the instrument are not received by the endorser or applied consistently with the endorsement [Com. Code § 3206(c)(4)].

[d] Endorsement to Agent, Trustee, or Fiduciary

Except for an endorsement for collection [see Com. Code § 3206(c) (see § 385.19[4][c])], if an instrument bears an endorsement using words to the effect that payment is to be made to the endorsee as agent, trustee, or other fiduciary for the benefit of the endorser or another person, unless there is notice of breach of fiduciary duty as provided in Com. Code § 3307 (discussed in § 385.41), a person who purchases the instrument from the endorsee or takes the instrument from the endorsee for collection or payment may pay the proceeds of payment or the value given for the instrument to the endorsee without regard to whether the endorsee violates a fiduciary duty to the endorser [Com. Code § 3206(d)(1)]. A subsequent transferee of the instrument or person who pays the instrument is neither given notice nor otherwise affected by the restriction in the endorsement unless the transferee or payor knows that the fiduciary dealt with the instrument or its proceeds in breach of fiduciary duty [Com. Code § 3206(d)(2)].

§ 385.20 Cancellation of Prior Endorsements by Reacquisition

Reacquisition of an instrument occurs if it is transferred to a former holder, by negotiation or otherwise. A former holder who reacquires the instrument may cancel endorsements made after the reacquirer first became a holder of the instrument. If the cancellation causes the instrument to be payable to the reacquirer or to bearer, the reacquirer may negotiate the instrument. An endorser whose endorsement is canceled is discharged, and the discharge is effective against any subsequent holder [Com. Code § 3207].

§ 385.21 "Fictitious Payees"

[1] Endorsement Effective in Favor of Holder

If an impostor, by use of the mails or otherwise, induces the issuer of an instrument to issue the instrument to the impostor, or to a person acting in concert with the impostor, by impersonating the payee of the instrument or a person authorized to act for the payee, an endorsement of the instrument by any person in the name of the payee is effective as the endorsement of the payee in favor of a person who, in good faith, pays the instrument or takes it for value or for collection [Com. Code § 3404(a)].

If (1) a person whose intent determines to whom an instrument is payable [see Com. Code § 3110(a), (b) (see § 385.17[1])] does not intend the person identified as payee to have any interest in the instrument, or (2) the person identified as payee of an instrument is a fictitious person, the following rules apply until the instrument is negotiated by special endorsement [Com. Code § 3404(b); see Com. Code § 3205(a) (see § 385.19[1])]:

- Any person in possession of the instrument is its holder.

- An endorsement by any person in the name of the payee stated in the instrument is effective as the endorsement of the payee in favor of a person who, in good faith, pays the instrument or takes it for value or for collection.

The phrase "person identified as payee" in Com. Code § 3404(b) refers to the named payee, not the intended payee. When a claim or defense depends on proving that "a person whose intent determines to whom an instrument is payable (subdivision (a) or (b) of Section 3110) does not intend the person identified as payee to have any interest in the instrument" [Com. Code § 3404(b)], the claimant or defendant is required to prove that the person identified as payee on the instrument (the named payee) was not the intended payee as determined under Com. Code § 3110(a), and that the maker or drawer of the instrument so intended [Unlimited Adjusting Group, Inc. v. Wells Fargo Bank (2009) 174 Cal. App. 4th 883, 894-895, 94 Cal. Rptr. 3d 672].

For purposes of Com. Code § 3404(a) or (b), an endorsement is made in the name of a payee if (1) it is made in a name substantially similar to that of the payee or (2) the instrument, whether or not endorsed, is deposited in a depositary bank to an account in a name substantially similar to that of the payee [Com. Code § 3404(c)].

[2] Liability of Person Paying Instrument

With respect to an instrument to which Com. Code § 3404(a) or (b) applies, if a person paying the instrument or taking it for value or for collection fails to exercise ordinary care in paying or taking the instrument and that failure contributes to a loss resulting from payment of the instrument, the person bearing the loss may recover from the person failing to exercise ordinary care to the extent the failure to exercise ordinary care contributed to the loss [Com. Code § 3404(d)].

Ordinary care, as used in Division 3 in the case of a person engaged in business, means observance of reasonable commercial standards,prevailing in the area in which the person is located, with respect to the business in which the person is engaged. In the case of a bank that takes an instrument for processing for collection or payment by automated means, reasonable commercial standards do not require the bank to examine the instrument if the failure to examine does not violate the bank's prescribed procedures and the bank's procedures do not vary unreasonably from general banking usage not disapproved by Division 3 or Division 4 [Com. Code § 3103(a)(7)].

§ 385.22 Fraudulent Endorsement by Employee

[1] Terms Defined

In the case of an instrument payable to an employer, a fraudulent endorsement is a forged endorsement purporting to be that of the employer [Com. Code § 3405(a)(2)(A)]. In the case of an instrument with respect to which the employer is the issuer, a forged endorsement is one that purports to be that of the person identified as payee [Com. Code § 3405(a)(2)(B)].

For purposes of Com. Code § 3405, "employee" includes an independent contractor and employee of an independent contractor retained by the employer [Com. Code § 3405(a)(1)].

An employee has responsibility with respect to instruments if he or she has authority for any of the following [Com. Code § 3405(a)(3)]:

- To sign or endorse instruments on behalf of the employer;
- To process instruments received by the employer for bookkeeping purposes, for deposit to an account, or for other disposition;
- To prepare or process instruments for issue in the name of the employer;
- To supply information determining the names or addresses of payees of instruments to be issued in the name of the employer;
- To control the disposition of instruments to be issued in the name of the employer; or
- To act otherwise with respect to instruments in a responsible capacity.

"Responsibility" does not include authority that merely allows an employee to have access to instruments or blank or incomplete instrument forms that are being stored or transported or are part of incoming or outgoing mail, or similar access [Com. Code § 3405(a)(3)].

[2] When Fraudulent Endorsement Effective

For the purpose of determining the rights and liabilities of a person who, in good faith, pays an instrument or takes it for value or for collection, if an employer entrusted an employee with responsibility with respect to the instrument and the employee or a person acting in concert with theemployee makes a fraudulent endorsement of the instrument, the endorsement is effective as the endorsement of the person to whom the instrument is payable if it is made in the name of that person [Com. Code § 3405(b)]. If the person paying the instrument or taking it for value or for collection fails to exercise ordinary care in paying or taking the instrument and that failure contributes to a loss resulting from the fraud, the person bearing the loss may recover from the person failing to exercise ordinary care to the extent the failure to exercise ordinary care contributed to the loss [Com. Code § 3405(b); see Com. Code § 3103(a)(7) (ordinary care means observance of reasonable commercial standards, prevailing in area with respect to business in which person is engaged); see, e.g., Newman v. Wells Fargo Bank (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 73, 83-85, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 310 (complaint alleging that bank allowed plaintiff's employees to cash or deposit checks in their personal accounts despite suspicious circumstances indicating fraud stated cause of action under Com. Code § 3405(b))].

Under Com. Code § 3405(b), an endorsement is made in the name of the person to whom an instrument is payable if (1) it is made in a name substantially similar to the name of that person or (2) the instrument, whether or not endorsed, is deposited in a depositary bank to an account in a name substantially similar to the name of that person [Com. Code § 3405(c)].

§ 385.23 Delivery

"Delivery" of an instrument means voluntary transfer of possession [Com. Code § 1201(b)(15)]. The first delivery of an instrument by the maker or drawer, whether to a holder or nonholder, for the purpose of giving rights on the instrument to any person is "issue" [Com. Code § 3105(a)].

Delivery is necessary for transfer of an instrument [see Com. Code § 3203(a), discussed in § 385.12[2]].

§ 385.24 Consideration

"Consideration" means any consideration sufficient to support a simple contract. The drawer or maker of an instrument has a defense if the instrument is issued without consideration [Com. Code § 3303(b); see Saks v. Charity Mission Baptist Church (2001) 90 Cal. App. 4th 1116, 1133-1137, 110 Cal. Rptr. 2d 45 (in breach of contract action by real estate investor against church, attempting to hold church liable for promissory notes signed by pastor, evidence established church's defense that notes lacked consideration)].

If an instrument is issued for a promise of performance, the issuer has a defenseto the extent performance of the promise is due and the promise has not been performed [Com. Code § 3303(b)].

If an instrument is issued for value as stated in Com. Code § 3303(a) (discussed in § 385.28[3]), the instrument is also issued for consideration [Com. Code § 3303(b)].

§ 385.25 Who May Enforce Instrument

"Person entitled to enforce" an instrument means any of the following [Com. Code § 3301]:

- The holder of the instrument;
- A nonholder in possession of the instrument who has the rights of a holder; or
- A person not in possession of the instrument who is entitled to enforce the instrument pursuant to Com. Code § 3309 (see § 385.48) or Com. Code § 3418(d). Com. Code § 3418(d) provides that, if an instrument is paid or accepted by mistake and the payor or acceptor recovers payment or revokes acceptance, the instrument is treated as dishonored, and the person from whom payment is recovered has rights as a person entitled to enforce the dishonored instrument [but see Com. Code § 3418(c) (revocation of payment or acceptance as not permitted against person who took the instrument in good faith and for value or who, in good faith, changed position in reliance on the payment or acceptance)].

A person may be a person entitled to enforce the instrument even though the person is not the owner of the instrument or is in wrongful possession of the instrument [Com. Code § 3301].

33-385 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 385.27

§ 385.27 Defenses to Enforcement

[1] "Real" Defenses Assertable Against Holder in Due Course

Anyone's right to enforce the obligation of a party to pay an instrument, including the rights of a holder in due course, is subject to all of the following "real" defenses [see Com. Code § 3305(b); Official Comment 1 to UCC § 3-305 (1990); see also Com. Code § 3305(c) (discussed in § 385.27[8])]:

- A defense of the obligor based on the obligor's infancy to the extent it is a defense to a simple contract [Com. Code § 3305(a)(1)(A); see Civ. Code § 1556; Fam. Code §§ 6500 et seq., 6700 et seq.; see also Ch. 367A, Minors: Tort Actions] 365, Minors: Contract Actions, §§ 365.30 et seq., 365.160-365.162 (disaffirmation of minors' contracts);

- A defense of the obligor based on duress, lack of legal capacity, or illegality of the transaction that, under other law, nullifies the obligation of the obligor [Com. Code § 3305(a)(1)(B); see §§ 385.115, 385.116, 385.129, 385.130];

- A defense of the obligor based on fraud that induced the obligor to sign the instrument with neither knowledge nor reasonable opportunity to learn of its character or its essential terms [Com. Code § 3305(a)(1)(C)]; and

- A defense of the obligor based on discharge of the obligor in insolvency proceedings [Com. Code § 3305(a)(1)(D)]. For a form of affirmative defense based on discharge in bankruptcy, see Ch. 94, Bankruptcy . "Insolvency proceeding" is defined in Com. Code § 1201(b)(22) to include any assignment for the benefit of creditors or other proceedings intended to liquidate or rehabilitate the estate of the person involved. For discussion of assignments for the benefit of creditors, see Ch. 307, Insolvency [see also Official Comment 1 to UCC § 3-305 (1990) (insolvency includes bankruptcy whether or not the debtor is insolvent, which is defined in Com. Code § 1201(b)(23) as person who either has ceased to pay his or her debts in ordinary course of business or cannot pay his or her debts as they become due or is insolvent within meaning of federal bankruptcy law)].

[2] Fraud in the Essence

The fraud referred to in Com. Code § 3305(a)(1)(C) is "real" or "essential" fraud, sometimes referred to as fraud in the essence or fraud in the factum, and is effective against a holder in due course. A common illustration is that of a maker who is tricked into signing a note in the belief that it is merely a receipt or some other document. The theory of the defense is that the signature on the instrument is ineffective because the signer did not intend to sign such an instrument at all. Under this provision, the defense extends to an instrument signed with knowledge that it is a negotiable instrument, but without knowledge of its essential terms. The test of the defense is that of excusable ignorance of the contents of the writing signed. The party must not only have been in ignorance, but must also have had no reasonable opportunity to obtain knowledge. In determining what is a reasonable opportunity, all relevant factors are to be taken into account, including the signer's intelligence, education, business experience, and ability to read and understand English. Also relevant is the nature of the representations that were made, whether the signer had good reason to rely on the representations or to have confidence in the person making them, the presence or absence of any third person who might read orexplain the instrument to the signer, or any other possibility of obtaining independent information, and the apparent necessity, or lack of it, for acting without delay. Unless the misrepresentation meets this test, it is cut off by a holder in due course [Official Comment 1 to U.C.C. § 3-305 (1990); see also Fleming v. Kagan (1961) 189 Cal. App. 2d 791, 796-797, 11 Cal. Rptr. 737 (discussing difference between fraud that makes note void and that which only makes it voidable)].

[3] Miscellaneous Division 3 Defenses

The obligor of a negotiable instrument may assert the following defenses of the obligor stated in other sections of Division 3 against any person entitled to enforce the instrument except a holder in due course [Com. Code § 3305(a)(2), (b); Official Comment 2 to U.C.C. § 3-305 (1990); see also Com. Code § 3305(c) (discussed in § 385.27[8])]:

- Nonissuance of the instrument, conditional issuance, and issuance for a special purpose [Com. Code § 3105(b)];
- Issuance without consideration or for which promised performance has not been given [see Com. Code § 3303(b) (see § 385.24)];
- Failure to countersign a traveler's check [Com. Code § 3106(c)];
- Modification of the obligation by separate agreement [Com. Code § 3117];
- Payment that violates a restrictive endorsement [Com. Code § 3206(f)]; and
- Breach of warranty when a draft is accepted [Com. Code § 3206(f)].

An unissued instrument, or an unissued incomplete instrument that is completed, is binding on the maker or drawer, but nonissuance is a defense [Com. Code § 3105(b); see Com. Code §§ 3105(a) ("issue" as first delivery by maker or drawer for purpose of giving rights on instrument), 3115 (incomplete instruments)]. For an affirmative defense based on an incomplete instrument having been complete without authority of the signer, see § 385.132. An instrument that is conditionally issued or is issued for a special purpose is binding on the maker or drawer, but failure of the condition or special purpose to be fulfilled is a defense [Com. Code § 3105(b)].

Defenses available to accommodation parties [Com. Code § 3305(d)] are discussed in § 385.40[3].

[4] Common Law and Contract Defenses

Except when the party seeking payment of the instrument is a holder in due course, the obligor may assert any defense of the obligor that would be available against enforcement of a right to payment under a simple contract [Com. Code § 3305(a)(2), (b); see also Com. Code § 3305(c) (discussed in § 385.27[8])]. The most prevalent defenses this provision are fraud, misrepresentation, or mistake in the issuance of the instrument [Official Comment 2 to U.C.C. § 3-305 (1990); but see Com. Code § 3305(a)(1)(C) (discussed under § 385.27[1]; this type of fraud or mistake may be elevated to level that allows it to be asserted against holder in due course)].

[5] Claim in Recoupment

The right to enforce a party's obligation to pay an instrument is subject to a claim in recoupment that the obligor has against the original payee of the instrument if the claim arose from the transaction that gave rise to the instrument. As against a transferee of the instrument, the obligor's claim in recoupment may be asserted only to reduce the amount owing on the instrument at the time the action is brought [Com. Code § 3305(a)(3)]. A claim in recoupment cannot be asserted against a holder in due course except in the rare instance when the original payee was a holder is due course [Com. Code § 3305(a)(3), (b)].

For example, Buyer issues a note to Seller as payment for equipment that Seller promises to deliver. If the equipment is not delivered or is delivered and is rightfully rejected, Buyer has a defense to payment of the note because the performance that was consideration for the note was not rendered [see Com. Code § 3303(b); Official Comment 3 to U.C.C. § 3-305 (1990)]. This defense is included in Com. Code § 3305(a)(2) and can always be asserted against Seller [Official Comment 3 to U.C.C. § 3-305 (1990) (result same as that under former Com. Code § 3408)]. If Buyer accepted the equipment and could not, under Division 2, revoke acceptance, but incurred expenses for repair, Buyer would be obligated to pay the price of the equipment that is represented by the note, but would also have a claim in recoupment based on its claim for breach of warranty. That claim could be asserted against Seller to reduce the amount owing on the note. It would not matter whether Seller was a holder in due course, because Com. Code § 3305(b) allows assertion of a claim in recoupment against a holder in due course unless that claim in recoupment is "against a person other than the holder" [Official Comment 3 to U.C.C. § 3-305 (1990)]. If Seller negotiates the note to a holder who has notice of Buyer's warranty claim at the time of the negotiation, holder is not a holder in due course [see Com. Code § 3302(a)(2)(F)]. Buyer may assert the claim in recoupment against holder but only to reduce the amount owed on the note. If holder had no notice, holder would be a holder in due course and Buyer may not assert the claim against holder [Official Comment 3 to U.C.C. § 3-305 (1990)].

[6] Lost or Stolen Instrument

An obligor is not obliged to pay the instrument if the person seeking enforcement of the instrument does not have rights of a holder in due course and the obligor proves that the instrument is a lost or stolen instrument [Com. Code § 3305(c)].

[7] Property or Possessory Right in Instrument or Proceeds

A person taking an instrument, other than a person having rights of a holder in due course, is subject to a claim of a property or possessory right in the instrument or its proceeds, including a claim to rescind a negotiation and to recover the instrument or its proceeds [Com. Code § 3306].

A person having rights of a holder in due course takes free of the claim to the instrument [Com. Code § 3306].

Claims covered by Com. Code § 3306 include not only claims to ownership but also any other claim of a property or possessory right. It includes the claim to a lien or the claim of a person in rightful possession of an instrument who was wrongfully deprived of possession. Also included is a claim based on Com. Code § (b) for rescission of a negotiation of the instrument by the claimant [Official Comment to U.C.C. § 3-306 (1990); see also rescission example in Official Comment 4 to U.C.C. § 3-305 (1990), discussed in § 385.27[8]].

[8] Defenses Requiring Joinder of Third Party

Except as stated in Com. Code § 3305(d) (action against accomodation party), in an action to enforce the obligation of a party to pay the instrument, the obligor may not assert against the person entitled to enforce the instrument a defense, claim in recoupment, or claim to the instrument (Com. Code § 3306) of another person, but the other person's claim to the instrument may be asserted by the obligor if the other person is joined in the action and personally asserts the claim against the person entitled to enforce the instrument [Com. Code § 3305(c)].

Com. Code § 3305(c) applies principally to cases in which an obligation is paid with the instrument of a third person. For example, Buyer buys goods from Seller and negotiates to Seller a cashier's check issued by Bank in payment of the price. Shortly after delivering the check to Seller, Buyer learns that Seller defrauded Buyer in the sale transaction. Seller may enforce the check against Bank even though Seller is not a holder in due course. Bank has no defense to its obligation to pay the check and it may not assert defenses, claims in recoupment, or claims to the instrument of Buyer except to the extent permitted by the "but" clause of the first sentence of Com. Code § 3305(c). Buyer may have a claim to the instrument under Com. Code § 3306 based on a right to rescind the negotiation to Seller because of Seller's fraud [Official Comment 4 to U.C.C. § 3-305 (1990); see also Com. Code § (b); Official Comment 2 to U.C.C. § 3-201 (1990)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

33-385 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 385.28

§ 385.28 Holder in Due Course

[1] Elements

Subject to Com. Code § 3106(c), (d) (see § 385.13[2]), "holder in due course" means the holder of an instrument, which, when issued or negotiated to the holder, did not bear such apparent evidence of forgery or alteration or was not otherwise so irregular or incomplete as to call into question its authenticity, who took the instrument [Com. Code § 3302(a)]:

- For value;
- In good faith;
- Without notice that the instrument was overdue [see Com. Code § 3304 (discussed in § 385.28[4])] or had been dishonored or that there was an uncured default with respect to payment of another instrument issued as part of the same series;
- Without notice that the instrument contains an unauthorized signature or has been altered;
- Without notice of any claim to the instrument described in Com. Code 3306 (see § 385.27[7]); and
- Without notice that any party has a defense or claim in recoupment described in Com. Code 3305(a) (discussed under § 385.27[1]).

Although an offer to sell a note for two thirds of its value is not itself sufficient to raise an inference that the instrument is tainted, it is a circumstance to be considered in determining the question of a buyer's good faith. Nevertheless, if the trial court found that the buyer acted in good faith, the fact that the buyer acquired a note with a value of $11,064 for $7,000 does not defeat his or her status as a holder in due course; that consideration was adequate [Wilson v. Steele (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 1053, 1065, 259 Cal. Rptr. 851 ; see Witty v. Clinch (1929) 207 Cal. 779, 783, 279 P. 797 (accord; inadequacy of price paid on negotiable paper as not of itself sufficient to raise inference of suspicion that holder was buying tainted instrument)]. Similarly, the fact that the payee of a note and the beneficiary of the deed of trust securing it are different people does not constitute such an irregularity as to preclude the buyer from becoming a holder in due course, at least when it gives no notice of the actual defect to which that particular note is subject [Wilson v. Steele (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 1053, 1065, 259 Cal. Rptr. 851] .

The payee of an instrument can be a holder in due course, even though this is not the usual situation. For example, a Wells Fargo customer paid a consulting firm for services by check, on which it later stopped payment. When the firm presented the check to Wells Fargo, the bank paid it by issuing a cashier's check to the firm but later issued a stop payment on the cashier's check. When the firm tried to deposit it at another bank, the cashier's check was not honored. The firm brought suit against Wells Fargo for wrongful dishonor of the cashier's check. The court found that the firm had given value for the cashier's check and was entitled to holder-in-due-course status under Com. Code § 3302 [Gentner v. Wells Fargo Bank (1999) 76 Cal. App. 4th 1165, 1168-1170, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 904 (Com. Code § 3418 precluded bank from recovering its mistaken payment as long as payee took instrument in good faith)].

To be effective, notice must be received at a time and in a manner that gives a reasonable opportunity to act on it [Com. Code § 3302(f)].

Notice of discharge of a party, other than discharge in an insolvency proceeding, is not notice of a defense that negates one's status as a holder in due course, but discharge is effective against a person who became a holder in due course with notice of the discharge [Com. Code § 3302(b)]. Public filing or recording of a document does not of itself constitute notice of a defense, claim in recoupment, or claim to the instrument [Com. Code § 3302(b)].

Except to the extent a transferor or predecessor in interest has rights as a holder in due course, a person does not acquire rights of a holder in due course of an instrument taken in any of the following ways [Com. Code § 3302(c)]:

- By legal process or by purchase in an execution, bankruptcy, or creditor's sale or similar proceeding;
- By purchase as part of a bulk transaction not in ordinary course of business of the transferor; or
- As the successor in interest to an estate or other organization.

If the promise of performance that is the consideration for an instrument has been partially performed [see Com. Code § 3303(a)(1) (discussed under--Value, below)], the holder may assert rights as a holder in due course of the instrument only to the fraction of the amount payable under the instrument equal to the value of the partial performance divided by the value of the promised performance [Com. Code § 3302(d)].

[2] Rights Limited to Amount Secured

If the person entitled to enforce an instrument has only a security interest in the instrument and the person obliged to pay the instrument has a defense, claim in recoupment, or claim to the instrument that may be asserted against the person who granted the security interest, the person entitled to enforce the instrument may assert rights as a holder in due course only to an amount payable under the instrument that, at the time of enforcement of the instrument, does not exceed the amount of the unpaid obligation secured [Com. Code § 3302(e); see Adolph Ramish, Inc. v. Woodruff (1934) 2 Cal. 2d 190, 204, 40 P.2d 509 (pledgee of promissory notes as holder in due course only to extent or amount of debt owed by pledgor)].

[3] Value

An instrument is issued or transferred for value if any of the following apply [Com. Code § 3303(a); see also Com. Code § 3303(b) (discussed in § 385.90[14])]:

- The instrument is issued or transferred for a promise of performance, to the extent the promise has been performed [cf. Com. Code § 3303(b) (promise unperformed)];

- The transferee acquires a security interest or other lien in the instrument other than a lien obtained by judicial proceeding;

- The instrument is issued or transferred as payment of, or as security for, an antecedent claim against any person, whether or not the claim is due;

- The instrument is issued or transferred in exchange for a negotiable instrument; or

- The instrument is issued or transferred in exchange for the incurring of an irrevocable obligation to a third party by the person taking the instrument.

[4] When Instrument Is Overdue

An instrument that is payable on demand becomes overdue at the earliest of the following times [Com. Code § 3304(a)]:

- On the day after the day demand for payment is duly made;

- If the instrument is a check, 90 days after its date; or

- If the instrument is not a check, when the instrument has been outstanding for a period of time after its date that is unreasonably long under the circumstances of the particular case in light of the nature of the instrument and usage of the trade.

If an instrument is payable at a definite time, the principal is payable in installments, and a due date has not been accelerated, the instrument becomes overdue on default under the instrument for nonpayment of an installment, and the instrument remains overdue until the default is cured [Com. Code § 3304(b)(1)]. If an instrument is payable at a definite time, but the principal is not payable in installments, and the due date has not been accelerated, the instrument becomes overdue on the day after the due date [Com. Code § 3304(b)(2)]. If an instrument is payable at a definite time and a due date with respect to principal has been accelerated, the instrument becomes overdue on the day after the accelerated due date [Com. Code § 3304(b)(3)].

Unless the due date of principal has been accelerated, an instrument does not become overdue if there is default in payment of interest but no default in payment of principal [Com. Code § 3304(c)].

[5] Defenses Against Holder in Due Course

The right of a holder in due course to enforce the obligation of a party to pay the instrument is subject to the defenses of the obligor stated in Com. Code § 3305(a)(1) (see items (1)-(4) listed under § 385.27[1]), but is not subject to the defenses of the obligor stated in Com. Code § 3305(a)(2) or claims in recoupment stated in Com. Code § 3305(a)(3) (see items (5) and (6), respectively, under § 385.27[1]) against a person other than the holder [Com. Code § 3305(b)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

33-385 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 385.29

§ 385.29 Limitations on Holder in Due Course Doctrine

[1] Close Connection to Seller and Transaction

Com. Code § 3302 is subject to any law limiting status as a holder in due course in particular classes of transactions [Com. Code § 3302(g)]. One limitation created by case law denies the status of a holder in due course to a financial institution that actively participates in a transaction in which a promissory note is given and has a close connection with the seller [Coml. Credit Corp. v. Orange Co. Mach. Works (1950) 34 Cal. 2d 766, 771, 214 P.2d 819 ; see King v. Central Bank (1977) 18 Cal. 3d 840, 846, 135 Cal. Rptr. 771, 558 P.2d 857 ; Vasquez v. Superior Court (1971) 4 Cal. 3d 800, 822, 94 Cal. Rptr. 796, 484 P.2d 964 ; Morgan v. Reasor Corp. (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 881, 894-895, 73 Cal. Rptr. 398, 447 P.2d 638 (superseded on another point by enactment of Civ. Code § 1801.4 to exclude specified construction and sales contracts from Unruh Act)]. The California Supreme Court held that, since the assignee of the contract and note (the plaintiff) had advanced money to the seller with the understanding that these instruments would be assigned by the seller to the plaintiff, had supplied the contract forms to the seller, and had actively participated in the transaction from its inception, it could not claim holder in due course status. In the assignee's action against the buyer and maker of the note, the Court held that the maker could properly raise the defense of failure of consideration (failure to deliver equipment purchased under conditional sales contract pursuant to which note had been given) [see Com. Code § 3303(b) (see § 385.24)]. The Court noted that, in a very real sense, the finance company was a moving force in the transaction from its very inception and had acted as a party to it [Coml. Credit Corp. v. Orange Co. Mach. Works (1950) 34 Cal. 2d 766, 771, 214 P.2d 819] .

The underlying rationale of the holding is that the finance company is better able to bear the risk of the dealer's insolvency than the buyer and is in a far better position to protect his or her interests against unscrupulous and insolvent dealers [Vasquez v. Superior Court (1971) 4 Cal. 3d 800, 825, 94 Cal. Rptr. 796, 484 P.2d 964] .

[2] Consumer Protection Statutes

[a] Override of Commercial Code

Com. Code § 9403 establishes rules regarding agreements not to assert claims and defenses against assignees. In general, an agreement between an account debtor and an assignor not to assert against an assignee any claim or defense that the account debtor may have against the assignor is enforceable by an assignee taking an assignment that satisfies all of the following conditions [Com. Code § 9403(b)(1)-(4)]:

- It is taken for value [see Com. Code §§ 3303(a), 9403(a)].
- It is taken in good faith.
- It is taken without notice of a claim of a property or possessory right to the property assigned.
- It is taken without notice of a defense or claim in recoupment of the type that may be asserted against a person entitled to enforce a negotiable instrument under Com. Code § 3305(a).

However, this does not apply to defenses of a type that may be asserted against a holder in due course of a negotiable instrument under Com. Code § 3305(b) [Com. Code § 9403(c)]. For discussion of Com. Code § 3305(a) and (b), see § 385.27[1].

In a consumer transaction, if a record evidences the account debtor's obligation, and other law apart from Division 9 of the Commercial Code requires that the record include a statement to the effect that the rights of an assignee are subject to claims or defenses that the account debtor could assert against the original obligee, and the record does not include such a statement, then both of the following apply [Com. Code § 9403(d)(1), (2)]:

- The record has the same effect as if the record included such a statement.
- The account debtor may assert against an assignee those claims and defenses that would have been available if the record included such a statement.

Except to that extent, Com. Code § 9403 does not displace other law apart from Division 9 which gives effect to an agreement by an account debtor not to assert a claim or defense against an assignee [Com. Code § 9403(f)].

Com. Code § 9403 is subject to any other law apart from Division 9 which establishes a different rule for an account debtor who is an individual and who incurred the obligation primarily for personal, family, or household purposes [Com. Code § 9403(e)].

Some provisions of other law apart from Division 9 are discussed below.

[b] Unruh Act and Rees-Levering Motor Vehicle Sales and Finance Act

The Unruh Act (Civ. Code § 1801 et seq.), relating to retail installment sales, provides that no contract or obligation may contain any provision by which the buyer agrees not to assert against a seller a claim or defense arising out of the sale or agrees not to assert against an assignee such a claim or defense other than as provided in Civ. Code § 1804.2 [Civ. Code § 1804.1(a)].

An assignee of the seller's rights is subject to all equities and defenses of the buyer against the seller arising out of the sale, notwithstanding an agreement to the contrary, but the assignee's liability may not exceed the amount of the debt owing to the assignee at the time of the assignment [Civ. Code § 1804.2(a); see Vasquez v. Superior Court (1971) 4 Cal. 3d 800, 823, 94 Cal. Rptr. 796, 484 P.2d 964 (involving language in earlier version of statute)]. The assignee has recourse against the seller to the extent of any liability incurred by the assignee pursuant to Civ. Code § 1804.2, regardless of whether the assignment was with or without recourse [Civ. Code § 1804.2(b)].

The Rees-Levering Motor Vehicle Sales and Finance Act (Civ. Code § 2981 et seq.) contains substantially identical provisions [see Civ. Code §§ 2983.5, 2983.7(a)].

The Unruh Act further provides that no retail installment account may require or entail the execution of any note or series of notes by the buyer that, when separately negotiated, will cut off as to third parties any right of action or defense that the buyer may have against the seller [Civ. Code § 1810.7; see Vasquez v. Superior Court (1971) 4 Cal. 3d 800, 822 n.19, 94 Cal. Rptr. 796, 484 P.2d 964 (citing predecessor statute)].

For further discussion of the Unruh Act, see Ch. 501, Sales: Retail Installment Sales . For further discussion of the Rees-Levering Motor Vehicle Sales and Finance Act, see Ch. 89, Automobiles: Sales and Financing Under the Rees-Levering Act ; see also California Legal Forms, Ch. 47, Automotive Financing and Vehicle Leasing (Matthew Bender).

[c] Discount-Buying Services

The statutes governing contracts for discount-buying services (Civ. Code § 1812.100 et seq.) provide that no retail installment account may require or entail the execution of any note or series of notes by the buyer that, when separately negotiated, will cut off as to third parties any right of action or defense that the buyer may have against the seller [Civ. Code § 1812.113]. Additionally, no right of action or defense arising out of a contract for discount-buying services that the buyer has against the discount-buying organization may be cut off by assignment or transfer of the contract to any third party [Civ. Code § 1812.114].

For further discussion of discount-buying services, see Ch. 128, Consumer Contracts: Statutes Regulating Specific Types of Contracts .

[d] Seller-Assisted Marketing Plans

The rights of an assignee of a seller-assisted marketing plan contract [see Civ. Code § 1812.200 et seq.] or the seller's rights are subject to all equities, rights, and defenses of the purchaser against the seller [Civ. Code § 1812.211].

For further discussion of seller-assisted marketing plans see Ch. 515, Securities and Franchise Regulations, § 515.50 et seq.

[e] Dance Studio Act and Health Studio Services Act

The Dance Studio Act (Civ. Code § 1812.50 et seq.) covers contracts for dance studio lessons and other services, whereas the Health Studio Services Act (Civ. Code § 1812.80 et seq.) covers contracts for health studio services. Both Acts provide that no right of action or defense arising out of any contract that the buyer has against the seller, and that would be cut off by assignment, is cut off by assignment of the contract to any third party, whether or not he or she acquires the contract in good faith and for value, unless the assignee gives notice of the assignment to the buyer as provided in the respective Act [Civ. Code §§ 1812.56 (dance studios), 1812.88 (health studios)].

Both Acts also prohibit governed contracts from requiring the execution of any note or series of notes by the buyer that, when separately negotiated, will cut off as to third parties any right of action or defense that the buyer may have against the seller [Civ. Code §§ 1812.55 (dance studios), 1812.87 (health studios)].

For further discussion of dance and health studios, see Ch. 128, Consumer Contracts: Statutes Regulating Specific Types of Contracts .

[f] Song-Beverly Credit Card Act of 1971

The Song-Beverly Credit Card Act of 1971 (Civ. Code § 1747 et seq.) limits the applicability of the holder in due course doctrine with respect to multiparty credit cards, such as MasterCard and Visa. The Act allows the cardholder to raise against the card issuer any defenses that he or she has against the retailer if (1) the amount of the initial transaction exceeded $50, (2) the purchase was made in California or, if not within California, within 100 miles from the cardholder's current designated address in California, and (3) the cardholder made a good faith attempt to resolve the problem or disagreement with the retailer [Civ. Code § 1747.90(a)(1)]. The monetary and geographic limitations do not apply if the retailer and the card issuer are related in any of the following ways [Civ. Code § 1747.90(a)(2)]:

(1) They are the same entity;

(2) The issuer controls the retailer, directly or indirectly, or both are controlled by the same entity;

(3) The retailer is a franchised dealer of the issuer's products or services; or

(4) The retailer obtained the order for the transaction through a mail solicitation made by or participated in by the issuer in which thecardholder was solicited to enter into the transaction by using the credit card of that issuer.

For further discussion of credit card regulation, see Ch. 127, Consumer Contracts and Loans .

[g] Federal Trade Commission Regulations

In 1975, the Federal Trade Commission adopted regulations to preserve consumers' claims and defenses. These regulations are set forth in 16 C.F.R. §§ 433.1-433.3. These regulations (as enunciated on September 1, 1989) have been specifically adopted by the California Legislature as applicable to consumer credit contracts as defined in 16 C.F.R. § 433.1(i). The regulations provide specialized disclosures and permit consumers to preserve their claims and defenses against enforcement, notwithstanding the sale of their loan obligation to a third party [Stats. 1989, ch. 1462, § 4].

In connection with any sale or lease of goods or services to consumers, in or affecting commerce, it is an unfair or deceptive act or practice (1) to take or receive a consumer credit contract that fails to contain, in at least 10-point boldface type, the notice that any holder of the contract is subject to all claims and defenses that the debtor could assert against the seller, or (2) to accept as full or partial payment for such sale or lease the proceeds of any purchase money loan, unless any consumer credit contract made in connection with the purchase money loan contains a like notice [16 C.F.R. § 433.2; see Com. Code § 3106(d) (see § 385.13[2])].

Under prior versions of Division 3, this legend may have had the unintended effect of making the note conditional and, thus, nonnegotiable. Nevertheless, Com. Code § 3106(d), as amended by Stats. 1992, ch. 914, § 6, was designed to allow for one to preclude the possibility of a holder in due course without rendering the note nonnegotiable or excluding the note from Division 3 [see Uniform Commercial Code Comment No. 3 to Com. Code § 3106(d)].

Chapter 385 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

33-385 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 385.30

§ 385.30 Presentment

[1] How and Where Made

Presentment is a demand made by or on behalf of a person entitled to enforce an instrument to the drawee or a party obliged to pay the instrument or, in the case of a note or accepted draft payable at a bank, to the bank, to pay the instrument [Com. Code § 3501(a)(1)]. Presentment is also a demand made by or on behalf of a person entitled to enforce a draft to the drawee to accept a draft [Com. Code § 3501(a)(2)].

The rules regarding presentment set forth in Com. Code § 3501(b) are subject to Division 4 (Com. Code § 4101 et seq.), agreement of the parties, and clearinghouse rules and the like [Com. Code § 3501(b)].

Presentment may be made at the place of payment of the instrument and must be made at the place of payment if the instrument is payable at a bank in the United States [Com. Code § 3501(b)(1)]. Presentment may be made by any commercially reasonable means, including an oral, written, or electronic communication, and is effective when the demand for payment or acceptance is received by the person to whom presentment is made [Com. Code § 3501(b)(1)]. Presentment is effective if made to any one of two or more makers, acceptors, drawees, or other payors [Com. Code § 3501(b)(1)].

On demand of the person to whom presentment is made, the person making presentment is required to do the following [Com. Code § 3501(b)(2)]:

(A) Exhibit the instrument;

(B) Give reasonable identification and, if presentment is made on behalf of another person, reasonable evidence of authority to do so; and

(C) Sign a receipt on the instrument for any payment made or surrender the instrument if full payment is made.

[2] Rights of Party to Whom Presentment Is Made

Without dishonoring the instrument, the party to whom presentment is made may do the following [Com. Code § 3501(b)(3)]:

(A) Return the instrument for lack of a necessary endorsement; or

(B) Refuse payment or acceptance for failure of the presentment to comply with the terms of the instrument, an agreement of the parties, or other applicable law or rule.

The party to whom presentment is made may treat presentment as occurring on the next business day after the day of presentment if the party to whom presentment is made has established a cutoff hour not earlier than 2 p.m. for the receipt and processing of instruments presented for payment or acceptance and presentment is made after the cutoff hour [Com. Code § 3501(b)(4)].

The foregoing rules regarding presentment are subject to Division 4 (Com. Code § 4101 et seq.), agreement of the parties, and clearinghouse rules and the like [Com. Code § 3501(b)].

[3] When Presentment Is Required

Except when the instrument by its terms does not require presentment or the party obligated on an instrument pays it voluntarily, presentment is required for acceptance and payment or dishonor [see Com. Code § 3502 (see § 3853.31)]. With respect to notes, revised Division 3 recognizes that, in practice, payees do not make formal demand for payment in the majority of cases and the maker forwards payment voluntarily on the due date [Official Comment 2 to U.C.C. § 3-502 (1990)].

Under former Division 3, presentment was necessary to charge "secondary parties." That is no longer the case, and the concept of "secondary parties" has been omitted from the current Division 3 [see Official Comments to U.C.C. §§ 3-414, 3-502 (1990)]. A drawer's liability is now established in accordance with Com. Code § 3414, see § 385.37. An endorser's liability is now established in accordance with Com. Code § 3415, see § 385.38.

[4] When Presentment Is Excused

In any case in which presentment is otherwise required for dishonor under Com. Code § 3502 and presentment is excused under Com. Code § 3504, dishonor occurs without presentment if the instrument is not duly accepted or paid [Com. Code § 3502(e)]. Presentment for payment or acceptance of an instrument is excused if any of the following occur [Com. Code § 3504(a)]:

(1) The person entitled to present the instrument cannot with reasonable diligence make presentment;

(2) The maker or acceptor has repudiated an obligation to pay the instrument or is dead or in insolvency proceedings;

(3) By the terms of the instrument presentment is not necessary to enforce the obligation of endorsers or the drawer;

(4) The drawer or endorser whose obligation is being enforced has waived presentment [see Com. Code § 3504(b) (waiver of presentment as waiver of notice of dishonor)] or otherwise has no reason to expect or right to require that the instrument be paid or accepted; or

(5) The drawer instructed the drawee not to pay or accept the draft or the drawee was not obligated to the drawer to pay the draft.

Chapter 385 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

33-385 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 385.31

§ 385.31 Times for Presentment and Dishonor

[1] Notes Payable on Demand

If a note is payable on demand, the note is dishonored if presentment is duly made to the maker and the note is not paid on the day of presentment [Com. Code § 3502(a)(1); see Com. Code § 3113 (see § 385.13[3])].

[2] Notes Not Payable on Demand

If a note is not payable on demand, is not payable at or through a bank, and by its terms does not require presentment, the note is dishonored if it is not paid on the day it becomes payable [Com. Code § 3502(a)(3); see Com. Code § 3113 (see § 385.13[3])].

If a note is not payable on demand and is payable at or through a bank or the terms of the note require presentment, the note is dishonored if presentment is duly made and the note is not paid on the day it becomes payable or the day of presentment, whichever is later [Com. Code § 3502(a)(2)].

[3] Checks and Unaccepted Drafts Presented to Payor Bank

If a check is duly presented for payment to the payor bank otherwise than for immediate payment over the counter, the check is dishonored if the payor bank makes timely return of the check or sends timely notice of dishonor or nonpayment under Com. Code § 4301 or 4302, or becomes accountable for the amount of the check under Com. Code § 4302 [Com. Code § 3502(b)(1); see Com. Code § 4105(3) (payor bank as bank that is drawee of draft); see also Com. Code § 3113 (see § 385.13[3])].

[4] Checks and Unaccepted Drafts Payable on Demand

If an unaccepted draft other than a documentary draft is payable on demand and Com. Code § 3502(b)(1) does not apply, the draft is dishonored if presentment for payment is duly made to the drawee and the draft is not paid on the day of presentment [Com. Code § 3502(b)(2); see Com. Code § 3103(a)(2) (drawee as person ordered in draft to make payment); see also Com. Code § 3113(discussed in § 385.13[3])].

[5] Checks and Unaccepted Drafts Payable on Date Stated in Draft

If an unaccepted draft other than a documentary draft is payable on a date stated in the draft, the draft is dishonored if either of the following occur [Com. Code § 3502(b)(3); see Com. Code § 3113 (see § 385.13[3])]:

(A) Presentment for payment is duly made to the drawee and payment is not made on the day the draft becomes payable or the day of presentment, whichever is later; or

(B) Presentment for acceptance is duly made before the day the draft becomes payable and the draft is not accepted on the day of presentment.

[6] Checks and Unaccepted Drafts Payable on Lapse of Time

If an unaccepted draft other than a documentary draft is payable on elapse of a period of time after sight or acceptance, the draft is dishonored if presentment for acceptance is duly made and the draft is not accepted on the day of presentment [Com. Code § 3502(b)(4); see Com. Code § 3113 (see § 385.13[3])].

[7] Unaccepted Documentary Drafts

Dishonor of an unaccepted documentary draft occurs according to the rules stated in Com. Code § 3502(b)(2), (3), and (4)(discussed above), except that the drawee may delay payment or acceptance without dishonoruntil no later than the close of the third business day of the drawee following the day on which payment or acceptance is required by Com. Code § 3502(b)(2), (3), or (4) [Com. Code § 3502(c); see Com. Code § 3113 (see § 385.13[3])].

[8] Accepted Drafts

If an accepted draft is payable on demand, the draft is dishonored if presentment for payment is duly made to the acceptor and the draft is not paid on the day of presentment [Com. Code § 3502(d)(1); see Com. Code § 3103(a)(1) (acceptor as drawee who has accepted draft); see also Com. Code § 3409 (discussed in § 385.35)].

If an accepted draft is not payable on demand, the draft is dishonored if presentment for payment is duly made to the acceptor and payment is not made on the day it becomes payable or the day of presentment, whichever is later [Com. Code § 3502(d)(2); see Com. Code § 3113 (see § 385.13[3])].

[9] Consent to Late Acceptance

If a draft is dishonored because timely acceptance of the draft was not made and the person entitled to demand acceptance consents to a late acceptance, from the time of acceptance, the draft is treated as never having been dishonored [Com. Code § 3502(f)].

Chapter 385 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

33-385 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 385.32

§ 385.32 Notice of Dishonor

[1] Manner of Giving

Notice of dishonor may be given by any person [Com. Code § 3503(b)]. Notice of dishonor may be given by any commercially reasonable means, including an oral, written, or electronic communication. A notice is sufficient if it reasonably identifies the instrument and indicates that the instrument has been dishonored or has not been paid or accepted. Return of an instrument given to a bank for collection is sufficient notice of dishonor [Com. Code § 3503(b)].

Giving notice of dishonor that complies with this section or having notice of dishonor excused under Com. Code § 3504(b) (see § 385.32[3]) is a prerequisite to enforcement of an endorser's obligation under Com. Code § 3415(a) (see § 385.38[1]) or a drawer's obligation under Com. Code § 3414(d) (see § 385.37[1]) [Com. Code § 3503(a)].

[2] Time for Giving

Subject to Com. Code 3504(c), with respect to an instrument taken for collection by a collecting bank, notice of dishonor must be given (1) by the bank before midnight of the next banking day following the banking day on which the bank receives notice of dishonor of the instrument, or (2) by any other person within 30 days following the day on which the person receives notice of dishonor [Com. Code § 3503(c)]. With respect to any other instrument, notice of dishonor must be given within 30 days following the day on which dishonor occurs [Com. Code § 3503(c)].

Delay in giving notice of dishonor is excused if the delay was caused by circumstances beyond the control of the person giving the notice and the person giving the notice exercised reasonable diligence after the cause of the delay ceased to operate [Com. Code § 3504(c)].

[3] When Notice of Dishonor Is Excused

Notice of dishonor is excused if (1) by the terms of the instrument, notice of dishonor is not necessary to enforce the obligation of a party to pay the instrument, or (2) the party whose obligation is being enforced waived notice of dishonor [Com. Code § 3504(b)].

A waiver of presentment is also a waiver of notice of dishonor [Com. Code § 3504(b)].

§ 385.33 Protest of Dishonor

Under former Division 3, protest of dishonor was required to enforce an endorser's or drawer's liability [see former Com. Code § 3501(3), (4)]. Except for the possibility that protest may be required for liability on international drafts governed by foreign law, protest is no longer mandatory but must be requested by the holder. Protest is a service provided by the banking system to establish that dishonor has occurred [Official Comment to U.C.C. § 3-505 (1990)].

A protest is a certificate of dishonor made by a United States consul or vice consul or by a notary public or other person authorized to administer oaths by the law of the place where dishonor occurs. It may be made on information satisfactory to that person. The protest must identify the instrument and certify either that presentment has been made or, if not made, the reason why it was not made, and that the instrument has been dishonored by nonacceptance or nonpayment. The protest may also certify that notice of dishonor has been given to some or all parties [Com. Code § 3505(b)].

§ 385.34 Evidence and Presumptions of Dishonor and Notice of Dishonor

The following are admissible as evidence and create a presumption of dishonor and of any notice of dishonor stated [Com. Code § 3505(a)]:

(1) A document regular in form as provided in Com. Code § 3505(b) that purports to be a protest [see discussion in § 385.33];

(2) A purported stamp or writing of the drawee, payor bank, or presenting bank on or accompanying the instrument stating that acceptance or payment has been refused unless reasons for the refusal are stated and the reasons are not consistent with dishonor; and

(3) A book or record of the drawee, payor bank, or collecting bank, kept in the usual course of business, which shows dishonor, even if there is no evidence of who made the entry.

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

33-385 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 385.35

§ 385.35 Acceptance by Drawee

[1] As Presented

A check or other draft does not itself operate as an assignment of the funds in the hands of the drawee available for its payment. The drawee is not liable on the instrument until the drawee accepts it [Com. Code § 3408]. "Acceptance" means the drawee's signed agreement to pay a draft as presented. Acceptance must be written on the draft and may consist of the drawee's signature alone. Acceptance may be made at any time and becomes effective when notification pursuant to instructions is given or the accepted draft is delivered for the purpose of giving rights on the acceptance to any person [Com. Code § 3409(a); see also Com. Code §§ 3414(c) (discussed in § 385.37[2]), 3415(c) (discussed in § 385.38[3])]. A draft may be accepted although it has not been signed by the drawer, is otherwise incomplete, is overdue, or has been dishonored [Com. Code § 3409(b)].

If a draft is payable at a fixed period after sight and the acceptor fails to date the acceptance, the holder may complete the acceptance by supplying a date in good faith [Com. Code § 3409(c)].

[2] With Varying Terms

If the terms of a drawee's acceptance vary from the terms of the draft as presented, the holder may refuse the acceptance and treat the draft as dishonored. In that case, the drawee may cancel the acceptance [Com. Code § 3410(a)].

The terms of a draft are not varied by an acceptance to pay at a particular bank or place in the United States, unless the acceptance states that the draft is to be paid only at that bank or place [Com. Code § 3410(b)].

If the holder assents to an acceptance varying the terms of a draft, the obligation of each drawer and endorser that does not expressly assent to the acceptance is discharged [Com. Code § 3410(c)].

[3] Obligations of Acceptor

Acceptance of a draft obligates the acceptor to pay the draft as follows [Com. Code § 3413(a)]:

(1) According to its terms at the time it was accepted, even though the acceptance states that the draft is payable "as originally drawn" or equivalent terms;

(2) If the acceptance varies the terms of the draft, according to the terms of the draft as varied; or

(3) If the acceptance is of a draft that is an incomplete instrument, according to its terms when completed, to the extent stated in Com. Code §§ 3115 (incomplete instrument) and 3407 (alteration).

The acceptor owes its obligation to a person entitled to enforce the draft or to the drawer or an endorser who paid the draft under Com. Code § 3414 or 3415 [Com. Code § 3413(a)].

If the certification of a check or other acceptance of a draft states the amount certified or accepted, the obligation of the acceptor is that amount [Com. Code § 3413(b)]. If (1) the certification or acceptance does not state an amount, (2) the amount of the instrument is subsequently raised, and (3) the instrument is then negotiated to a holder in due course, the obligation of the acceptor is the amount of the instrument at the time it was taken by the holder in due course [Com. Code § 3413(b)].

§ 385.36 Issuer's Liability

The issuer of a note or cashier's check or other draft drawn on the drawer is obliged to pay the instrument (a) according to its terms at the time it was issued or, if not issued, at the time it first came into possession of a holder, or (b) if the issuer signed an incomplete instrument, according to its terms when completed, to the extent stated in Com. Code §§ 3115 (incomplete instruments) and 3407 (alteration) [Com. Code § 3412; see also discussion in § 385.11[2]]. The issuer's obligation is owed to a person entitled to enforce the instrument or to an endorser who paid the instrument under Com. Code § 3415 (see § 385.38) [Com. Code § 3412].

Chapter 385 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

33-385 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 385.37

§ 385.37 Drawer's Liability on Draft

[1] After Dishonor

Except in the case of cashier's checks or other drafts drawn on the drawer, if an unaccepted draft is dishonored, the drawer is obliged to pay the draft (1) according to its terms at the time it was issued or, if not issued, at the time it first came into possession of a holder, or (2) if the drawer signed an incomplete instrument, according to its terms when completed, to the extent stated in Com. Code §§ 3115 (incomplete instrument) and 3407 (alteration) [Com. Code § 3414(a), (b)]. The drawer owes this obligation to a person entitled to enforce the draft or to an endorser who paid the draft under Com. Code § 3415 [Com. Code § 3414(a), (b)].

If a draft is accepted, the acceptor is not a bank, and the acceptor dishonors the draft, the drawer's obligation to pay the draft is the same as the obligation of an endorser under Com. Code § 3415(a) and (c) (see § 385.38) [Com. Code § 3414(d)]. A drawer's obligation under Com. Code § 3414(d) may not be enforced unless (1) the drawer is given notice of dishonor of the instrument complying with Com. Code § 3503 (discussed in § 385.32[1]), or (2) notice of dishonor is excused under Com. Code § 3504(b) (see § 385.32[3]) [Com. Code § 3503(a)].

[2] Discharged by Bank's Acceptance

If a draft is accepted by a bank, the drawer is discharged, regardless of when or by whom acceptance was obtained [Com. Code § 3414(c); see also Com. Code § 3410(c) (discussed in § 385.35[2])].

[3] Drawer's Disclaimer

A drawer has no liability under Com. Code § 3414(b) to pay a draft, other than a check, that contains a disclaimer stating that the draft is drawn "without recourse" or otherwise disclaiming liability of the drawer to pay the draft [Com. Code § 3414(e)]. A disclaimer of the liability stated in Com. Code § 3414(b) is not effective if the draft is a check [Com. Code § 3414(e)].

[4] Discharge by Assignment

The drawer of a check may discharge his or her obligation to pay the check, to the extent deprived of funds, by assigning to the person entitled to enforce the check the rights of the drawer against the drawee with respect to the funds if all of the following occur [Com. Code § 3414(f); but see Com. Code § 3414(a) (provision inapplicable to cashier's checks or other drafts drawn on drawer)]:

- The check is not presented for payment or given to a depositary bank for collection within 30 days after its date;

- The drawee suspends payments after expiration of the 30-day period without paying the check; and

- Because of the suspension of payments, the drawer is deprived of funds maintained with the drawee to cover payment of the check.

In most cases, the payee will not suffer any loss because of the existence of federal deposit insurance that covers accounts up to $100,000. Thus, in most cases, Com. Code § 3414(f) is expected to be of little importance. However, Com. Code § 3414(f) contemplates damage caused by delays in obtaining full payment [Official Comment 6 to U.C.C. § 3-414 (1990)].

[5] Debit Card Holder's Liability

A debit card holder has no liability for erroneous or fraudulent transfers initiated by the card issuer or its agent or employee [Civ. Code § 1748.31(c)]. With regard to unauthorized use of a debit card, the card holder is liable only if all of the following conditions are satisfied [Civ. Code § 1748.31(a)]:

- The card is an accepted debit card.

- Subject to certain conditions regarding notification (see below), the liability is not in excess of $50.

- The issuer has given adequate notice to the card holder of the potential liability.

- The issuer has provided the card holder with a description of the means by which the issuer may be notified of loss or theft of the card.

- The unauthorized use occurs before the issuer has been notified by the card holder that an unauthorized use of the debit card has occurred or may occur as the result of a loss, theft, or otherwise.

- The issuer has provided a means to identify the card holder to whom the debit card was issued.

If the card holder fails to report an unauthorized use that appears on a periodic statement within 60 days of the issuer's transmittal of the statement, and if the issuer establishes that the unauthorized use would not have occurred had the card holder notified the issuer within the 60-day period, the card holder is liable for the amount of each unauthorized transfer that occurs after the close of the 60 days and before notice to the issuer. If the card holder's delay in notifying the issuer is due to extenuating circumstances beyond the card holder's reasonable control, the time for notifying the issuer is extended to a reasonable period. Examples of such extenuating circumstances include, but are not limited to, extended travel, death or serious illness of the card holder or a member of the card holder's family, hospitalization, permanent mental impairment, or a serious physical impairment, unless the circumstance did not reasonably contribute to the card holder's delay in notifying the issuer within the 60-day period [Civ. Code § 1748.31(b)].

To reduce the risk that a debit card will be used without authorization, California law provides, generally, that no person, firm, partnership, association, corporation, or limited liability company that accepts debit cards for the transaction of business may print more than the last five digits of the debit card account number or the expiration date on any electronically printed receipt [Civ. Code § 1747.09(a), (b)], whether the receipt is given to the cardholder [Civ. Code § 1747.09(a)(1)] or, starting January 1, 2009, the vendor retains the receipt and the cardholder either signed it or used a personal identification number to complete the transaction [Civ. Code § 1747.09(a)(2), (3), (d); see Civ. Code § 1747.09(c) (section does not apply to other documents used for internal administrative purposes)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

33-385 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 385.38

§ 385.38 Endorser's Liability

[1] After Dishonor

If an instrument is dishonored, an endorser is obliged to pay the amount due on the instrument (1) according to the terms of the instrument at the time it was endorsed or, (2) if the endorser endorsed an incomplete instrument, according to its terms when completed, to the extent stated in Com. Code §§ 3115 (incomplete instrument) and 3407 (alteration) [Com. Code § 3415(a)]. The endorser owes this obligation to a person entitled to enforce the instrument or to a subsequent endorser who paid the instrument under this section [Com. Code § 3415(a)].

An endorser's obligation under Com. Code § 3415(a) may not be enforced unless (1) the endorser is given notice of dishonor of the instrument complying with Com. Code § 3503 (discussed in § 385.32[1]), or (2) notice of dishonor is excused under Com. Code § 3504(b) (see § 385.32[3]) [Com. Code § 3503(a)].

An endorser's liability under Com. Code § 3415(a) is subject to Com. Code § 3415(b)-(d) (discussed in § 385.38[2], [3]) and to Com. Code § 3419(d) (relating to accomodation parties, discussed in § 385.40[2]),

[2] Endorser's Disclaimer

If an endorsement states that it is made "without recourse" or otherwise disclaims liability of the endorser, the endorser is not liable under Com. Code § 3415(a) to pay the instrument [Com. Code § 3415(b)].

[3] Discharge of Endorser's Liability

If notice of dishonor of an instrument is required by Com. Code § 3503 (discussed in § 385.32) and notice of dishonor complying with that section is not given to an endorser, the the endorser's liability under Com. Code § 3415(a) is discharged [Com. Code § 3415(c); see also Com. Code § 3410(c) (discussed in § 385.35[2])].

If a draft is accepted by a bank after an endorsement is made, the endorser's liability under Com. Code § 3415(a) is discharged [Com. Code § 3415(d)].

If an endorser of a check is liable under Com. Code § 3415(a) and the check is not presented for payment, or given to a depositary bank for collection, within 30 days after the day the endorsement was made, the liability of the endorser under Com. Code § 3415(a) is discharged [Com. Code § 3415(e)].

§ 385.39 Warranties on Transfer and Presentment

The Division 3 warranties made by parties on transfer and presentment [Com. Code §§ 3416 (transfer), 3417(presentment)] are substantially similar to the Division 4 warranties made on transfer and presentment [Com. Code §§ 4207, 4208], except to the extent necessary to reflect the fact that the Division 3 transfer warranties apply to "instruments," which is to say "negotiable instruments" [see Com. Code § 3104(b)], whereas the Division 4 transfer warranties apply to "items" [see Com. Code § 4104(a)(9)]. A nonnegotiable note may be an "item." A check is usually both a negotiable instrument within Division 3 [Com. Code § 3104(b)-(f)] and an "item" within Division 4 [Com. Code § 4104(a)(9)].

Similarly, the presentment warranties of both Division 3 and Division 4 apply to "unaccepted drafts." "Checks" are "unaccepted drafts" under both definitions [Com. Code §§ 3104(b)-(f), 4104(a)(7), (9); see Com. Code § 4104; Official Comment to U.C.C. § 4-208 (1990) ("draft" as used in Division 4 includes items that are orders to pay, which may include instruments that are not negotiable)]. The presentment warranties of Com. Code § 3417(d) apply to presentment of notes and accepted drafts to any party obligated on the instrument, including an endorser and to presentment of dishonored drafts if presentment is made to the drawer or endorser [Official Comment 4 to U.C.C. § 3-417 (1990)].

Chapter 385 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

33-385 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 385.40

§ 385.40 Accommodation Parties

[1] Signature in Any Capacity

If an instrument is issued for value given for the benefit of a party to the instrument (the "accommodated party") and another party to the instrument (the "accommodation party") signs the instrument for the purpose of incurring liability on the instrument without being a direct beneficiary of the value given for the instrument, the instrument is signed by the accommodation party "for accommodation" [Com. Code § 3419(a)].

An accommodation party may sign the instrument as maker, drawer, acceptor, or endorser and, subject to Com. Code § 3419(d), is obliged to pay the instrument in the capacity in which the accommodation party signs. The obligation of an accommodation party may be enforced notwithstanding any statute of frauds and whether or not the accommodation party receives consideration for the accommodation [Com. Code § 3419(b)].

A person signing an instrument is presumed to be an accommodation party and there is notice that the instrument is signed for accommodation if the signature is an anomalous endorsement [see Com. Code § 3205(d) (discussed in § 385.189[3])], or is accompanied by words indicating that the signer is acting as surety or guarantor with respect to the obligation of another party to the instrument [Com. Code § 3419(c)]. The obligation of an accommodation party to pay the instrument is not affected by the fact that the person enforcing the obligation had notice when he or she took the instrument that the accommodation party signed the instrument for accommodation [Com. Code § 3419(c)]. The latter rule, however, is subject to the exceptions provided in Com. Code § 3605 (see § 385.45[6], [7]) [Com. Code § 3419(c)].

[2] Guarantee of Collection Only

If the signature of a party to an instrument is accompanied by words indicating unambiguously that the party is guaranteeing collection rather than payment of the obligation of another party to the instrument, the signer is obliged to pay the amount due on the instrument to a personentitled to enforce the instrument only if any of the following occur [Com. Code § 3419(d)]:

- Execution of judgment against the other party has been returned unsatisfied;

- The other party is insolvent or in an insolvency proceeding;
- The other party cannot be served with process; or
- It is otherwise apparent that payment cannot be obtained from the other party.

[3] Defenses of Accommodation Party

In an action to enforce the obligation of an accommodation party to pay an instrument, the accommodation party may assert against the person entitled to enforce the instrument any defense or claim in recoupment under Com. Code § 3305(a) that the accommodated party could assert against the person entitled to enforce the instrument, except the defenses of discharge in insolvency proceedings, infancy, and lack of legal capacity [Com. Code § 3305(d)]. For discussion of any defense or claim in recoupment under Com. Code § 3305(a), see §§ 385.27[1], [3] -[5].

[4] Right of Reimbursement

An accommodation party who pays the instrument is entitled to reimbursement from the accommodated party and is entitled to enforce the instrument against the accommodated party [Com. Code § 3419(e)].

An accommodated party who pays the instrument has no right of recourse against, and is not entitled to contribution from, an accommodation party [Com. Code § 3419(e); Quality Wash Group V, Ltd. v. Hallak (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 1687, 1701-1702, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 592] . An accommodation maker who pays the payee or holder of a negotiable instrument generally has the same rights as a guarantor under Civ. Code § 2848 in that the accommodation maker then is entitled to enforce the note against the primary maker ("party accommodated") in accordance with its terms. Thus, the maker might have the right to recover attorney's fees and interest at the note rate rather than the legal rate [Flojo Internat., Inc. v. Lassleben (1992) 4 Cal. App. 4th 713, 721-722, 6 Cal. Rptr. 2d 99 (payee assigned note to accommodation maker after payment)]. For discussion of a guarantor's rights under the Civil Code and forms for their enforcement, see Ch. 538, Suretyship, Bonds, and Undertakings .

§ 385.41 Third Party's Liability for Fiduciary's Breach

[1] "Fiduciary" and "Represented Person" Defined

As used in this discussion and Com. Code § 3307, "fiduciary" means an agent, trustee, partner, corporate officer or director, limited liability company manager, or other representative owing a fiduciary duty with respect to an instrument [Com. Code § 3307(a)(1)]. "Represented person" means the principal, beneficiary, partnership, corporation, limited liability company, or other person to whom the fiduciary duty is owed [Com. Code § 3307(a)(2)]. For a complaint under Com. Code § 3307, for use by a represented person against a bank that took a check with notice of breach of duty by the fiduciary, see Form 75 in Ch. 95, Banks, Deposits, and Checks .

[2] Instrument Payable to Fiduciary Personally

If an instrument is issued by the represented person or the fiduciary as such and made payable to the fiduciary personally, one who (1) takes the instrument from the fiduciary for payment or collection or for value and (2) has knowledge of the fiduciary status of the fiduciary does not have notice of the breach of fiduciary duty unless the taker knows of the breach of fiduciary duty [Com. Code § 3307(b)(3); cf. Fin. Code §§ 953 (authorization for bank withdrawals), 6661 (authorization for savings and loan withdrawals when notice of adverse claims); Prob. Code § 18100 (when person dealing in good faith with fiduciary is not bound to inquire regarding fiduciary's power to conduct transaction)].

[3] Instrument Payable to Fiduciary or Represented Person

If an instrument is payable to the represented person or the fiduciary as such, one who (i) takes the instrument from the fiduciary for payment or collection or for value and (ii) has knowledge of the fiduciary status of the fiduciary has notice of the breach of fiduciary duty if the instrument is taken or deposited as follows [Com. Code § 3307(b)(2);§ 385.41[2]]:

- Taken in payment of or as security for a debt known by the taker to be the personal debt of the fiduciary;

- Taken in a transaction known by the taker to be for the personal benefit of the fiduciary; or

- Deposited to an account other than an account of the fiduciary, as such, or an account of the represented person.

[4] Instrument Issued to Taker by Fiduciary or Represented Person

If an instrument is issued by the represented person or the fiduciary as such to the taker as payee, one who (1) takes the instrument from the fiduciary for payment or collection or for value, and (2) has knowledge of the fiduciary status of the fiduciary has notice of the breach of fiduciary duty if the instrument is taken or deposited as follows [Com. Code § 3307(b)(4); see also § 385.41[2]]:

- Taken in payment of or as security for a debt known by the taker to be the personal debt of the fiduciary;

- Taken in a transaction known by the taker to be for the personal benefit of the fiduciary; or

- Deposited to an account other than an account of the fiduciary as such, or an account of the represented person.

[5] Notice of Represented Person's Claim

In the foregoing situations, under Com. Code § 3307(b)(2)-(4), if the represented person makes a claim to the instrument or its proceeds on the basis that the transaction of the fiduciary is a breach of fiduciary duty, notice of breach of fiduciary duty by the fiduciary is notice of the claim of the represented person [Com. Code § 3307(b)(1)].

§ 385.42 Incomplete Instruments

An incomplete instrument is a signed writing, whether or not issued by the signer, is the contents show at the time of signing that it is incomplete but that the signer intended it to be completed by the addition of words or numbers [Com. Code § 3115(a)]. Subject to Com. Code § 3115(c) (discussed below), if an incomplete instrument is an instrument under Com. Code § 3104 (see §§ 385.11[1] and 385.13[1]), it may be enforced according to its terms if it is not completed, or according to its terms as augmented by completion. If an incomplete instrument is not an instrument under Com. Code § 3104 but, after completion, the requirements of Com. Code § 3104 are met, the instrument may be enforced according to its terms as augmented by completion [Com. Code § 3115(b)].

If words or numbers are added to an incomplete instrument without authority of the signer, there is an alteration of the incomplete instrument under Com. Code § 3407 [Com. Code § 3115(c)]. The burden of establishing that words or numbers were added to an incomplete instrument without authority of the signer is on the person asserting the lack of authority [Com. Code § 3115(d)]. For a form for an affirmative defense for use in an action on an incomplete instrument, see § 385.132.

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

33-385 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 385.43

§ 385.43 Alteration of Instrument; Forged Signature on Instrument

[1] Meaning and Effect of Alteration

"Alteration" means (1) an unauthorized change in an instrument that purports to modify in any respect the obligation of a party, or (2) an unauthorized addition of words or numbers or other change to an incomplete instrument relating to the obligation of a party [Com. Code § 3407(a)]. Except as provided in Com. Code § 3407(c), an alteration that is fraudulently made discharges a party whose obligation is affected by the alteration unless that party assents or is precluded from asserting the alteration. No other alteration discharges a party, and the instrument may be enforced according to its original terms [Com. Code § 3407(b)].

A payor bank or drawee paying a fraudulently altered instrument or a person taking it for value, in good faith and without notice of the alteration,may enforce rights with respect to the instrument (1) according to its original terms, or (2) in the case of an incomplete instrument altered by unauthorized completion, according to its terms as completed [Com. Code § 3407(c)]. For a form of affirmative defense based on alteration, see § 385.114.

[2] Lack of Ordinary Care Can Preclude Assertion of Alteration or Forged Signature

A person whose failure to exercise ordinary care contributes to an alteration of an instrument or to the making of a forged signature on an instrument is precluded from asserting the alteration or the forgery against a person who, in good faith, pays the instrument or takes it for value or for collection [Com. Code § 3406(a)]. Under Com. Code § 3406(a), the burden of proving failure to exercise ordinary care is on the person asserting the preclusion [Com. Code § 3406(c)].

Under Com. Code § 3406(a), if the person asserting the preclusion fails to exercise ordinary care in paying or taking the instrument and that failure contributes to loss, the loss is allocated between the person precluded and the person asserting the preclusion according to the extent to which the failure of each to exercise ordinary care contributed to the loss [Com. Code § 3406(b)]. Under Com. Code § 3406(b), the burden of proving failure to exercise ordinary care is on the person precluded [Com. Code § 3406(c)].

Whether Com. Code § 3406(a) creates any cause of action is debatable [compare Official Comment 1 to U.C.C. § 3-406 (1990) ("Section 3-406 adopts the doctrine of Young v. Grote, 4 Bing. 253 (1827), which held that a drawer who so negligently draws an instrument as to facilitate its material alteration is liable to a drawee who pays the altered instrument in good faith. Under Section 3-406 the doctrine is expanded to apply not only to drafts but to all instruments.") with Burns v. Neiman Marcus Group, Inc. (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 479, 494-495, 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 130 (favorably citing Virginia Supreme Court's opinion stating that drawer of check can have no statutory right of action under Virginia version of Section 3-406 because that statute contains no words showing legislative intent to create any cause of action)]. It is clear, however, that Com. Code § 3-406(b) does not create any cause of action but operates only in conjunction with Com. Code § 3-406(a) [Burns v. Neiman Marcus Group, Inc. (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 479, 493, 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 130]. That is, subdivision (a) empowers a person, on taking a fraudulently altered or forged instrument in good faith and for value or collection, or on paying such an instrument in good faith, to treat the instrument as it is written, if a lack of ordinary care by the obligor on the instrument substantially contributed to the alteration or the forgery [see Official Comment 1 to U.C.C. § 3-406 (1990)]; and subdivision (b) provides a comparative-negligence rule to be applied in the event that subdivision (a) is invoked by a person whose own lack of ordinary care also substantially contributed to the alteration or forgery [see Official Comment 4 to U.C.C. § 3-406 (1990)]. Therefore, in the absence of a claim of preclusion under Com. Code § 3-406(a), subsection (b) of that section does not become applicable [Burns v. Neiman Marcus Group, Inc. (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 479, 494, 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 130].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

33-385 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 385.44

§ 385.44 Conversion of Instruments

[1] Availability of Action

The law applicable to conversion of personal property applies to instruments [Com. Code § 3420(a)]. An instrument is also converted if it is taken by transfer, other than a negotiation, from a person not entitled to enforce the instrument, or a bank makes or obtains payment with respect to the instrument for a person not entitled to enforce the instrument or receive payment [Com. Code § 3420(a)]. This covers cases in which a depositary or payor bank takes an instrument bearing a forged endorsement. It also covers cases in which an instrument is payable to two persons, the two persons are not alternative payees, and it is negotiated by only one of them [see Official Comment to U.C.C. § 3-420 (1990)].

[2] Missing Endorsements

If a bank makes payment with respect to a check, to a person not entitled to receive payment, then the bank is liable for conversion under Com. Code § 3420(a), without regard to whether the check bore a forged or unauthorized endorsement or there was a missing endorsement [Gil v. Bank of America (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 1371, 1377, 42 Cal. Rptr. 3d 310] . For further discussion, see Ch. 95, Banks, Deposits, and Checks, § 95.328.

[3] Not Available to Drawer or Payee Who Never Took Delivery

An action for conversion of an instrument may not be brought by the following persons [Com. Code § 3420(a)]:

- The issuer or acceptor of the instrument.

- A payee or endorsee who did not receive delivery of the instrument either directly or through delivery to an agent or a copayee.

Under former Com. Code § 3419, cases were divided on whether the drawer of a check paid on a forged endorsement had a cause of action against the depositary bank that took the check [see, e.g., Cooper v. Union Bank (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 371, 378, 107 Cal. Rptr. 1, 507 P.2d 609 ; Tedesco v. Crocker National Bank (1983) 148 Cal. App. 3d 1211, 1216, 196 Cal. Rptr. 534 (drawer has cause of action); Allied Concord etc. Corp. v. Bank of America (1969) 275 Cal. App.

2d 1, 7-8, 80 Cal. Rptr. 622 (drawer has no conversion claim against depositary or collecting bank)]. Com. Code § 3420(a)(1) resolved this prior conflict by stating that the drawer has no cause of action for conversion. The check represents an obligation of the drawer rather than property of the drawer. Thus, there is no reason why a drawer should have an action in conversion. The drawer's appropriate remedy is against the drawee bank for recredit of his or her account [Official Comment 1 to U.C.C. § 3-420 (1990)]. The drawee then has a cause of action against the depositary bank for breach of warranty under Com. Code § 3417(a)(1) or 4208(a)(1). The loss will fall on the entity that gave value to the forger, usually the depositary bank [Official Comment 1 to U.C.C. § 3-420 (1990)].

*Com. Code § 3420(a)(2)*resolved a similar conflict regarding whether a payee who never took delivery of the check has a cause of action for conversion by limiting causes of action for conversion to payees who took delivery of the check [Official Comment 1 to U.C.C. § 3-420 (1990)].

[4] Liability for Conversion

In an action for conversion of an instrument, the measure of liability is presumed to be the amount payable on the instrument, but recovery may not exceed the amount of the plaintiff's interest in the instrument [Com. Code § 3420(b)].

A representative, other than a depositary bank, who has in good faith dealt with an instrument or its proceeds on behalf of one who was not the person entitled to enforce the instrument is not liable in conversion to the person who is entitled to enforce the instrument beyond the amount of any proceeds that it has not paid out [Com. Code § 3420(c)].

A depositary bank is ultimately liable in the case of a forged endorsement because of its warranty to the payor bank under Com. Code § 4208(a)(1) and it is usually the most convenient defendant, especially in cases involving multiple checks drawn on different banks. There is no reason to make the owner of a check bring multiple actions against various payor banks and to require those banks to assert warranty rights against the depositary bank. Thus, the defense provided by Com. Code § 3420(c) is limited to collecting banks other than depositary banks. If the owner of a checks sues both the payor bank and the depositary bank, he or she is entitled to only one recovery [Official Comment 3 to U.C.C. § 3-420 (1990)].

Chapter 385 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

33-385 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 385.45

§ 385.45 Discharge

[1] In General

A party's obligation of to pay an instrument is discharged as stated in Division 3 or by an act or agreement with the party that would discharge an obligation to pay money under a simple contract [Com. Code § 3601(a)]. However, discharge of the obligation of a party is not effective against a person acquiring rights of a holder in due course of the instrument without notice of the discharge [Com. Code § 3601(b); see § 385.110]. Counsel may also wish to consider the related defense or cross claim of setoff, which is discussed in Ch. 26, Answers [see Code Civ. Proc. § 431.70].

[2] Extent to Which Taking Check or Note Discharges Underlying Obligation

Unless the parties agree otherwise, if a certified check, cashier's check, or teller's check is taken in payment of an obligation, the obligation is discharged to the extent of the amount of the check [Com. Code § 3310(a) (but discharge of obligation does not affect any liability obligor may have as endorser)].

Unless the parties agree otherwise, and except as provided in Com. Code § 3310(a), if a note or an uncertified check is taken in payment of an obligation, the obligation is suspended to the extent of the amount of the check or note [Com. Code § 3310(b); see Jessup Farms v. Baldwin (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 639, 656, 190 Cal. Rptr. 355, 660 P.2d 813 (predecessor section, former Com. Code § 3802, inapplicable because parties did not agree to suspend original obligation but only intended, by execution of second note, to renew balance of existing obligation)]. In the case of an uncertified check, suspension continues until dishonor of the check or until it is paid orcertified. Payment or certification of the check results in discharge of the obligation to the extent of the amount of the check [Com. Code § 3310(b)(1); Cornwell v. Bank of America (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 995, 1000-1001, 274 Cal. Rptr. 322 (underlying obligation not discharged until check paid); see Navrides v. Zurich Ins. Co. (1971) 5 Cal. 3d 698, 706, 97 Cal. Rptr. 309, 488 P.2d 637 (dictum, accord; check is never payment of debt for which it is given until check itself is paid or otherwise discharged, unless expressly agreed to be taken in payment)]. In the case of a note, suspension continues until dishonor of the note or until it is paid. Payment of the note results in discharge of the obligation to the extent of the payment [Com. Code § 3310(b)(2)].

Under Com. Code § 3310(b)(1), once a check is honored, the underlying obligation is considered fully discharged as of the time the check was received by the creditor. In a case in which a judgment debtor sent a check for the judgment amount to the creditor's counsel and the counsel's bank put a five-day hold on the checks, the court held that interest on the judgment did not continue to accrue until the checks were cleared for payment by the bank [Long v. Cuttle Construction Co. (1998) 60 Cal. App. 4th 834, 837-838, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 698 (no interest accrued during suspension of obligation, which extended until point of discharge)].

If the check or note is dishonored and the obligee of the obligation for which the instrument was taken is the person entitled to enforce that instrument, the obligee may enforce either the instrument or the obligation [Com. Code § 3310(b)(3); see also Com. Code § 3310(b)(4), (c); accord, Cignetti v. American Trust Co. (1956) 139 Cal. App. 2d 744, 746, 294 P.2d 490 (disapproved on other grounds in Navrides v. Zurich Ins. Co. (1971) 5 Cal. 3d 698, 712, 97 Cal. Rptr. 309, 488 P.2d 637)].

Unless the parties agree otherwise, and except as provided in Com. Code § 3310(a), if the obligee is the person entitled to enforce the instrument but no longer has possession of it because it was lost, stolen, or destroyed, the obligation may not be enforced to the extent of the amount payable on the instrument, and, to that extent, the obligee's rights against the obligor are limited to enforcement of the instrument [Com. Code § 3310(b)(4)].

[3] Payment

Subject to Com. Code § 3602(b), an instrument is paid to the extent payment is made (1) by or on behalf of a party obliged to pay the instrument, and (2) to a person entitled to enforce the instrument [Com. Code § 3602(a)]. To the extent of the payment, the obligation of the party obliged to pay the instrument is discharged even though payment is made with knowledge of a claim to the instrument under Com. Code § 3306 by another person [Com. Code § 3602(a); see discussion in § 385.27[7]].

The obligation of a party to pay the instrument is not discharged under Com. Code § 3602(a) if either of the following applies [Com. Code § 3602(b)]:

- A claim to the instrument under Com. Code § 3306 (see § 385.27[7]) is enforceable against the party receiving payment and (A) payment is made with knowledge by the payor that payment is prohibited by injunction or similar process of a court of competent jurisdiction, or (B) in the case of an instrument other than a cashier's check, teller's check, or certified check, the party making payment accepted, from the person having a claim to the instrument, indemnity against loss resulting from refusal to pay the person entitled to enforce the instrument; or

- The person making payment knows that the instrument is a stolen instrument and pays a person it knows is in wrongful possession of the instrument.

[4] Tender of Payment

Tender of payment of an obligation to pay an instrument, made to a person entitled to enforce the instrument, is governed by principles of law applicable to tender of payment under a simple contract [Com. Code § 3603(a)].

If tender of payment of an obligation to pay an instrument is made to a person entitled to enforce the instrument and the tender is refused, the obligation of an endorser or accommodation party having a right of recourse with respect to the obligation to which the tender relates is discharged, to the extent of the amount of the tender [Com. Code § 3603(b)].

If tender of payment of an amount due on an instrument is made to a person entitled to enforce the instrument, the obligation of the obligor to pay interest after the due date on the amount tendered is discharged [Com. Code § 3603(c)].

If presentment is required with respect to an instrument and the obligor is able and ready to pay on the due date at every place of payment stated in the instrument, the obligor is deemed to have made tender of payment on the due date to the person entitled to enforce the instrument [Com. Code § 3603(c)].

[5] Cancellation or Renunciation

A person entitled to enforce an instrument, with or without consideration, may discharge the obligation of a party to pay the instrument by either of the following [Com. Code § 3604(a)]:

(1) An intentional voluntary act, such as surrender of the instrument to the party, destruction, mutilation, or cancellation of the instrument, cancellation or striking out of the party's signature, or the addition of words to the instrument indicating discharge; or

(2) An signed written agreement not to sue or other signed written renunciation of rights against the party.

However, cancellation or striking out of an endorsement pursuant to Com. Code § 3604(a) does not affect the status and rights of a party derived from the endorsement [Com. Code § 3604(b)].

Discharge under Com. Code § 3604 of a party's obligation to pay an instrument does not discharge an endorser's or accommodation party's obligation who has a right of recourse against the discharged party [Com. Code § 3605(b); see also Com. Code § 3419(e) (accommodation party's right of recourse)]. Similarly, if a note is held in joint tenancy, consent of both payees is necessary to extinguish the obligation represented by the note [see Lovetro v. Steers (1965) 234 Cal. App. 2d 461, 466, 44 Cal. Rptr. 604 (dictum)].

[6] Effect of Discharge, Extension, or Modification on Endorser or Accommodation Party

"Endorser," as used in Com. Code § 3605, includes a drawer of a draft that was accepted by an entity other than a bank and then dishonored [Com. Code § 3605(a); see Com. Code § 3414(d) (see § 385.37[1])].

If a person entitled to enforce an instrument agrees, with or without consideration, to extend the due date of the obligation of a party to pay the instrument, the extension discharges an endorser or accommodation party who has a right of recourse against the party whose obligation is extended to the extent the endorser or accommodation party proves that the extension caused loss to the endorser or accommodation party with respect to the right of recourse [Com. Code § 3605(c)]. Nevertheless, an accommodation party is not discharged under Com. Code § 3605(c) unless the person entitled to enforce the instrument knows of the accommodation or has notice under Com. Code § 3419(c) that the instrument was signed for accommodation [Com. Code § 3605(h); see Com. Code § 3419(c) (discussed in § 385.40[1])].

If a person entitled to enforce an instrument agrees, with or without consideration, to a material modification of the obligation of a party other than an extension of the due date, the modification discharges the obligation of an endorser or accommodation party having a right of recourse against the person whose obligation is modified to the extent the modification causes loss to the endorser or accommodation party with respect to the right of recourse [Com. Code § 3605(d)]. Nevertheless, an accommodation party is not discharged under Com. Code § 3605(d) unless the person entitled to enforce the instrument knows of the accommodation or has notice under Com. Code § 3419(c) that the instrument was signed for accommodation [Com. Code § 3605(h); see Com. Code § 3419(c) (see § 385.40[1])]. The loss suffered by the endorser or accommodation party as a result of the modification is equal to the amount of the right of recourse unless the person enforcing the instrument proves that no loss was caused by the modification or that the loss caused by the modification was an amount less than the amount of the right of recourse [Com. Code § 3605(d)].

[7] Effect of Impairment of Collateral on Endorser or Accommodation Party

If a party's obligation to pay an instrument is secured by an interest in collateral and a person entitled to enforce the instrument impairs the value of the interest in collateral, the obligation of an endorser or accommodation party having a right of recourse against the obligor is discharged to the extent of the impairment [Com. Code § 3605(e); see Com. Code § 3605(a) (endorser includes drawer of draft dishonored after acceptance by entity other than bank); see also Com. Code § 3414(d) (discussed in § 385.37)]. However, an accommodation party is not discharge Com. Code § 3605(e) unless the person entitled to enforce the instrument knows of the accommodation or has notice Com. Code § 3419(c) that the instrument was signed for accommodation [Com. Code § 3605(h); see Com. Code § 3419(c) (see § 385.40[1]); see also Com. Code § 3605(i) (see § 385.45[8])].

The value of an interest in collateral is impaired to the extent (1) the value of the interest is reduced to an amount less than the amount of the right of recourse of the party asserting discharge, or (2) the reduction in value of the interest causes an increase in the amount by which the amount of the right of recourse exceeds the value of the interest [Com. Code § 3605(e)]. The burden of proving impairment is on the party asserting discharge [Com. Code § 3605(e)].

If the obligation of a party is secured by an interest in collateral not provided by an accommodation party and a person entitled to enforce the instrument impairs the value of the interest in collateral, the obligation of any party who is jointly and severally liable with respect to the secured obligation is discharged to the extent the impairment causes the party asserting discharge to pay more than that party would have been obliged to pay, taking into account rights of contribution, if impairment had not occurred [Com. Code § 3605(f)]. If the party asserting discharge is an accommodation party not entitled to discharge under Com. Code § 3605(e), the party is deemed to have a right to contribution based on joint and several liability rather than a right to reimbursement. The burden of proving impairment is on the party asserting discharge [Com. Code § 3605(f)].

Under Com. Code § 3605(e) or (f), impairing value of an interest in collateral includes the following [Com. Code § 3605(g)]:

(1) Failure to obtain or maintain perfection or recordation of the interest in collateral;

(2) Release of collateral without substitution of collateral of equal value;

(3) Failure to perform a duty to preserve the value of collateral owed, under Division 9 (Com. Code § 9101 et seq.) or other law, to a debtor or surety or other person secondarily liable; or

(4) Failure to comply with applicable law in disposing of collateral.

[8] Consent Vitiates Discharge

A party is not discharged under Com. Code § 3605 if (1) the party asserting discharge consents to the event or conduct that is the basis of the discharge, or (2) the instrument or a separate agreement of the party provides for waiver of discharge under Com. Code § 3605 either specifically or by general language indicating that parties waive defenses based on suretyship or impairment of collateral [Com. Code § 3605(i)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

33-385 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 385.46

§ 385.46 Statutes of Limitations

[1] Action on Note Payable at Definite Time

Except as provided in Com. Code § 3118(e) (see § 385.46[5]), an action to enforce the obligation of a party to pay a note payable at a definite time must be commenced within six years after the due date or dates stated in the note or, if a due date is accelerated, within six years after the accelerated due date [Com. Code § 3118(a)].

[2] Action on Demand Note

Except as provided in Com. Code § 3118(d) (acceptor's obligation) or (e) (certificates of deposit), if demand for payment is made to the maker of a note payable on demand, an action to enforce the obligation of a party to pay the note must be commenced within six years after the demand. If no demand for payment is made to the maker, an action to enforce the note is barred if neither principal nor interest on the note has been paid for a continuous period of 10 years [Com. Code § 3118(b)].

[3] Action on Unaccepted Drafts

Except as provided in Com. Code § 3118(d) (acceptor's obligation), an action to enforce the obligation of a party to an unaccepted draft to pay the draft must be commenced within 3 years after dishonor of the draft or 10 years after the date of the draft, whichever period expires first [Com. Code § 3118(c)].

[4] Actions Against Acceptors or on Accepted Drafts

An action to enforce the obligation of the acceptor of a certified check or the issuer of a teller's check, cashier's check, or traveler's check must be commenced within three years after demand for payment is made to the acceptor or issuer, as the case may be [Com. Code § 3118(d)].

An action to enforce the obligation of a party to pay an accepted draft, other than a certified check, must be commenced (1) within six years after the due date or dates stated in the draft or acceptance if the obligation of the acceptor is payable at a definite time, or (2) within six years after the date of the acceptance if the obligation of the acceptor is payable on demand [Com. Code § 3118(f)].

[5] Action on Certificates of Deposit

An action to enforce the obligation of a party to a certificate of deposit to pay the instrument must be commenced within six years after demand for payment is made to the maker, but, if the instrument states a due date and the maker is not required to pay before that date, the six-year period begins when a demand for payment is in effect and the due date has passed [Com. Code § 3118(e)].

[6] All Other Actions

Unless governed by other law regarding claims for indemnity or contribution, the following actions must be commenced within three years after the cause of action accrues [Com. Code § 3118(g)]:

- An action for conversion of an instrument, for money had and received, or like action based on conversion;

- An action for breach of warranty; or

- An action to enforce an obligation, duty, or right arising under Division 3 and not governed by Com. Code § 3118.

§ 385.47 Notice to Third Parties

In an action for breach of an obligation for which a third person is answerable over pursuant to Division 3 or Division 4 (Com. Code § 4101 et seq.), the defendant may give the third person written notice of the litigation, and the person notified may then give similar notice to any other person who is answerable over [Com. Code § 3119].

If the notice states (1) that the person notified may come in and defend and (2) that failure to do so will bind the person notified in an action later brought by the person giving the notice as to any determination of fact common to the two litigations, the person notified is so bound unless after seasonable receipt of the notice the person notified does come in and defend [Com. Code § 3119].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

33-385 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 385.48

§ 385.48 Enforcement of Lost, Destroyed, or Stolen Instruments

A person not in possession of an instrument is entitled to enforce the instrument if all of the following apply [Com. Code § 3309(a); but see Com. Code § 3305(c) (discussed in § 385.27[6])]:

- The person was in possession of the instrument and entitled to enforce it when loss of possession occurred;

- The loss of possession was not the result of a transfer by the person or a lawful seizure; and

- The person cannot reasonably obtain possession of the instrument because the instrument was destroyed, its whereabouts cannot be determined, or it is in the wrongful possession of an unknown person or a person that cannot be found or is not amenable to service of process. If the lost, stolen, or destroyed instrument is a teller's check, cashier's check, or certified check, Com. Code § 3312 establishes a much simpler claim procedure for use by the payee or remitter [see Ch. 95, Banks, Deposits, and Checks, § 385.128].

The court of appeal has held that a joint payee alleged a cause of action for recovery of the amount of a check from the drawer under Com. Code § 3309 when, with regard to the requirement that "the person was in possession" before loss of possession, it alleged that it was a joint payee of a check which was delivered to a copayee who deposited the check without obtaining plaintiff's endorsement or consent [Crystaplex Plastics, Ltd. v. Redevelopment Agency of the City of Barstow (2000) 77 Cal. App. 4th 990, 999-1000, 92 Cal. Rptr. 2d 197 (failure to allege plaintiff's actual possession of check was not fatal to cause of action because delivery of check to joint payee was sufficient to satisfy possession requirement)].

A person seeking enforcement of an instrument under Com. Code § 3309(a) is required to prove the terms of the instrument and the person's right to enforce the instrument [Com. Code § 3309(b)]. If that proof is made, Com. Code § 3308 (see discussion in § 385.49) applies to the case as if the person seeking enforcement had produced the instrument. The court may not enter judgment in favor of the person seeking enforcement unless it finds that the person required to pay the instrument is adequately protected against loss that might occur by reason of a claim by another person to enforce the instrument. Adequate protection may be provided by any reasonable means [Com. Code § 3309(b)]. For a form of complaint to enforce a lost note, see § 385.100.

Civ. Code § 3415 governs restoration of lost instruments and authorizes an action by the owner to require execution of a duplicate. However, in the case of negotiable instruments, Civ. Code § 3415(b) requires an indemnity bond. For discussion of Civ. Code § 3415 and related forms, see Ch. 356, Lost Papers .

§ 385.49 Establishing Signatures

In an action with respect to an instrument, the authenticity of, and authority to make, each signature on the instrument is admitted unless specifically denied in the pleadings [Com. Code § 3308(a)]. If the validity of a signature is denied in the pleadings, the burden of establishing validity is on the person claiming validity, but the signature is presumed to be authentic and authorized unless the action is to enforce the liability of the purported signer and the signer is dead or incompetent at the time of trial of the issue of validity of the signature [Com. Code § 3308(a)].

If an action to enforce the instrument is brought against a person as the undisclosed principal of a person who signed the instrument as a party to the instrument, the plaintiff has the burden of establishing that the defendant is liable on the instrument as a represented person under Com. Code § 3402(a) (see § 385.18[2]) [Com. Code § 3308(a)].

If the validity of signatures is admitted or proved and there is compliance with Com. Code § 3308(a), a plaintiff producing the instrument is entitled to payment if the plaintiff proves entitlement to enforce the instrument under Com. Code § 3301(see discussion in § 385.25), unless the defendant proves a defense or claim in recoupment. If a defense or claim in recoupment is proved, the right to payment of the plaintiff is subject to the defense or claim, except to the extent the plaintiff proves that the plaintiff has rights of a holder in due course that are not subject to the defense or claim [Com. Code § 3308(b); see Com. Code §§ 3302(b), 3305(a)-(c) (discussed under § 385.27[1])].

§ 385.76 Decisions

[1] Covenant of Good Faith and Fair Dealing

Standard for tort recovery requires every person to act with reasonable regard for his or her own interests; when maker stopped making payments on installment note and did not inform payee of their intention to bring note current with proceeds of second note, payee does not breach covenant of good faith and fair dealing by recording notice of default. Gaffney v. Downey Savings & Loan Assn. (1988) 200 Cal. App. 3d 1154, 1171-1172, 246 Cal. Rptr. 421

[2] Defenses

Denial of "execution" puts in issue whether defendant's signature was obtained by fraud or whether instrument was delivered, but not defense of fraud in inducement or "sham transaction." FPI Development, Inc. v. Nakashima (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 367, 401-403, 282 Cal. Rptr. 508

Setoff is defense to action on note and may be raised by affirmative defense or by cross complaint. American National Bank v. Stanfill (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 1089, 1097, 252 Cal. Rptr. 861

Whether individual makers of note who were also directors of corporate depositor and authorized signatories of corporate deposit account were depositors withinmeaning of Com. Code § 4401 and thus entitled to assert defense of setoff based on bank's payment of unauthorized withdrawals from corporate account is issue of fact to be determined on case-by-case basis. American National Bank v. Stanfill (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 1089, 1098-1101, 252 Cal. Rptr. 861

[3] Drafts and Bills of Exchange

Check differs from bill of exchange in that it is always drawn on bank deposit, whereas bill is not. Wilson v. Buchenau (N.D. Cal. 1942) 43 F. Supp. 272, 275

"Draft" or "bill of exchange" is order by one person on another to pay sum of money therein stated to third person on demand or at future time therein specified. People v. McNear (1961) 190 Cal. App. 2d 541, 546, 12 Cal. Rptr. 124

[4] Endorsement

Complaint alleging that bank allowed plaintiff's employees to cash or deposit checks with fraudulent endorsements in their personal accounts despitesuspicious circumstances indicating fraud stated cause of action under Com. Code § 3405(b). Newman v. Wells Fargo Bank (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 73, 83-85, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 310

Signatures were presumed genuine in absence of contrary evidence [former Com. Code § 3307(1)(b); now see Com. Code § 3308]; in absence of any contrary evidence, endorsements on note constituted substantial evidence of endorsee's status as holder. White v. Moriarty (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 1290, 1296 n.2, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 200 ; see Com. Code § 3204(a) (defining endorsement)

Endorsement by attachment to note does not make endorsee holder in due course when there is space to endorse on note itself. Pribus v. Bush (1981) 118 Cal. App. 3d 1003, 1007-1010, 173 Cal. Rptr. 747

Possession by third person of negotiable promissory note, payable to corporation, bearing endorsement of the corporation, regular in form, and signed by its general manager, is sufficient to raise presumption that officer so endorsing it had authority to make endorsement and that person having possession of it is owner of note. California Standard Fin. Corp. v. J.D. Millar Realty Co. (1931) 118 Cal. App. 185, 189, 5 P.2d 41

Endorsement of draft by holder to collecting bank by means of rubber stamp is sufficient. Allenberg v. Rapken & Co. Ltd., (1930) 108 Cal. App. 99, 102, 291 P. 281

[5] Enforcement of Lost, Destroyed, or Stolen Instruments

Joint payee alleged cause of action for recovery of amount of check from drawer under Com. Code § 3309 when it was alleged that it was joint payee of check which was delivered to copayee who deposited it without obtaining plaintiff's endorsement or consent. Crystaplex Plastics, Ltd. v. Redevelopment Agency of the City of Barstow (2000) 77 Cal. App. 4th 990, 999-1000, 92 Cal. Rptr. 2d 197

[6] Holders in Due Course

[a] Determination of Status and Burden of Proof

Payee of check is entitled to holder-in-due-course status under Com. Code § 3302; bank precluded from recovering its mistaken payment as long as payee took instrument in good faith. Gentner v. Wells Fargo Bank (1999) 76 Cal. App. 4th 1165, 1168-1170, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 904

Summary judgment is precluded by existence of issues of fact whether plaintiff banks achieved status of holders in due course; holder in due course status does not cut off defenses if holder has dealt with one asserting defense; material issues pertaining to status as defense include whether plaintiffs were involved in transactions on which the notes were based, whether they knew that underlying obligations were voidable (now see Com. Code § 3302(a)), whether they had notice that defendant's note had been partially discharged (now see Com. Code § 3602), and whether they knew that underlying sales agreements were executory. Barclays Discount Bank Ltd. v. Levy (9th Cir. 1984) 743 F.2d 722, 725-728

Bank was mere transferee and not holder in due course when it acquired notes as security for loan that contained only endorsement to borrower and its successors and assigns and no endorsement to bank. Security Pacific National Bank v. Chess (1976) 58 Cal. App. 3d 555, 561-562, 129 Cal. Rptr. 852

Instances in which bank is agent of payee of promissory note rather than holder in due course. Michigan Nat'l Bank v. Hardman Aerospace (1973) 36 Cal. App. 3d 196, 203 n.4, 111 Cal. Rptr. 514

Plaintiff has burden of proof that he or she took check for value and as holder in due course when payee's title to check was defective because of fraud in negotiating it. Bramante v. Krug (1956) 143 Cal. App. 2d 771, 772, 300 P.2d 71

[b] Duty to Inquire

Purchaser of negotiable paper before maturity is not required to make inquiry of makers as to consideration and circumstances leading up to its execution. Witty v. Clinch (1929) 207 Cal. 779, 783, 279 P. 797 ; Allenberg v. Rapken & Co., Ltd. (1930) 108 Cal. App. 99, 103, 291 P. 281

Holder is not called required make inquiry concerning execution and consideration for which negotiable instrument given, under penalty of having bad faith imputed to him or her, unless there is something on face of instrument or circumstances surrounding its negotiating to arouse suspicion. Barthelmess v. Cavalier (1934) 2 Cal. App. 2d 477, 487, 38 P.2d 484

[c] Good Faith

Requirement of "good faith" generally means that transaction was honestly conceived and consummated without collusion, fraud, knowledge of fraud, or intent to assist in perpetration of fraud. Mann v. Leasko (1960) 179 Cal. App. 2d 692, 697, 4 Cal. Rptr. 124

"Good faith" is defined as act done honestly, whether it is done negligently or not. Appel v. Morford (1943) 62 Cal. App. 2d 36, 40, 144 P.2d 95 ; now see Com. Code § 1201(b)(20)

Mere knowledge of facts sufficient to put prudent person on inquiry does not affect position of one as bona fide purchaser or pledgee. Barthelmess v. Cavalier (1934) 2 Cal. App. 2d 477, 487, 38 P.2d 484

Holder may assume bona fide character only as to advances made prior to maturity of instrument when note is taken as collateral security for future advances. Sonoma County Nat'l Bank v. Skinner (1919) 42 Cal. App. 202, 205, 183 P. 464

[d] Knowledge Affecting Status

Mere presence of suspicious circumstances that would be sufficient to put reasonably prudent individual on inquiry does not negate existence of good faith as to holder in due course of negotiable instrument. Mann v. Leasko (1960) 179 Cal. App. 2d 692, 697, 4 Cal. Rptr. 124

Nothing short of actual knowledge of defects in instrument or of actual bad faith will defeat status of endorsee who otherwise qualifies as holder indue course. Mann v. Leasko (1960) 179 Cal. App. 2d 692, 698, 4 Cal. Rptr. 124

Endorsee having actual knowledge of infirmity in payee's title as not becoming holder in due course of check. California Bank v. Diamond (1956) 144 Cal. App. 2d 387, 392, 301 P.2d 60

Filing of lis pendens in action to cancel promissory note and trust deed on real property securing note, as not conveying to holder in due course of note constructive notice of maker's equities against payee; promissory note as personal property so that former Code Civ. Proc. § 409 (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 405.24) is not applicable. Ross v. Title Guar. & Trust Co. (1934) 136 Cal. App. 393, 400, 29 P.2d 236 ; now see Com. Code § 3302(b)

Qualified endorsement as not impairing negotiability, and one taking such instrument without knowledge of defects and paying value therefor as occupying position of holder in due course against maker. Ross v. Title Guar. & Trust Co. (1934) 136 Cal. App. 393, 403, 29 P.2d 236

Mere knowledge of facts sufficient to put prudent person on inquiry or mere suspicion of infirmity or defect of title, without actual knowledge, as not precluding transferee from occupying position of holder in due course unless circumstances or suspicions are so cogent and obvious that to remain passive would amount to bad faith. Allenberg v. Rapken & Co., Ltd. (1930) 108 Cal. App. 99, 103, 291 P. 281

[7] Impairment of Contract Constitutionally Prohibited

Application of increased penalty on bond delinquencies imposed by amendment to statute [Sts. & Hy. Code § 6442] made after bonds were issued as unconstitutional impairment of contract; penalty had to remain at rate in effect when bonds were issued. Schuhart v. Pinguelo (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 1599, 1604-1606, 282 Cal. Rptr. 144

[8] Negotiability of Instruments

[a] Determination in General

Provision in promissory note that makers, sureties, guarantors, and endorsers of note consented to extensions of time at or after maturity of note as not rendering note nonnegotiable when note definitely fixed payment date and only purpose of provision was to permit holder and subsequent endorsees of note to extend time of payment, at or after maturity, without releasing maker or any person who may have endorsed instrument prior to its maturity of liability that has attached to them as endorsers. Pugh v. Dawson (1928) 95 Cal. App. 505, 509-510, 273 P. 39

Negotiability of one of several notes maturing at different times belonging to single transaction and forming connective series as not affected by provision that, on failure of maker to pay any one of notes of series to which it belongs, rest shall become due and payable. Havens v. Foskett (1927) 81 Cal. App. 653, 658, 254 P. 642

[b] Unaffected by Other Writings

Negotiability of bond as not destroyed by conditions of trust indenture securing it when, on its face, it is an unconditional promise to pay, signed by maker, engaging to pay at fixed future time to bearer, certain sum of money. Siebenhauer v. Bank of Cal. Nat'l Ass'n (1930) 211 Cal. 239, 243, 294 P. 1062

Contemporaneous execution and transfer of promissory note and nonnegotiable contract securing performance by lien on real property as not, in and of itself, impairing negotiability of note. Mann v. Leasko (1960) 179 Cal. App. 2d 692, 696-697, 4 Cal. Rptr. 124

Negotiability of promissory note otherwise negotiable in form, secured by mortgage or deed of trust on real or personal property, as not affected or abridged by reason of statement therein that it is so secured by fact that instrument is so secured, or by any conditions contained in mortgage or deed of trust securing it. Mann v. Leasko (1960) 179 Cal. App. 2d 692, 696, 4 Cal. Rptr. 124 ; but see Growth Equities Corp. v. Freed (1991) 227 Cal. App. 3d 506, 509-511, 277 Cal. Rptr. 848 (distinguishing Mann and holding note to be nonnegotiable because it recited that it was secured by and "subject to" other agreement)

Promissory note as unconditional promise to pay under former Civ. Code § 3084 (now see Com. Code § 3106(b)(2)), even though parties indicated by contemporaneous writing that fund from which repayment should be made and thereby set forth circumstances that gave rise to instrument. Martin v. Ajax Constr. Co. (1954) 124 Cal. App. 2d 425, 430, 269 P.2d 132

[9] Notation on Instrument

Marginal notation placed on promissory note by maker before signing note with intention of making notation part of contract as substantive part of note. Rogers v. Harris (1955) 138 Cal. App. 2d 1, 4-5, 291 P.2d 68

Placing of notation on instrument by note teller for purpose of teller's own information in computing interest as amounting at most to spoliation and not as constituting material alteration of instrument. American Trust Co. v. Greuner (1936) 13 Cal. App. 2d 279, 282, 56 P.2d 967

[10] Parol Evidence

Oral agreement collateral to promissory note that repayment schedule would be adopted and terms of note renegotiated on date of note's maturity as sufficiently consistent with terms of note to be admissible as parol evidence supporting affirmative defense to nonpayment of note on date of maturity. Bank of Beverly Hills v. Catain (1982) 128 Cal. App. 3d 28, 36, 180 Cal. Rptr. 67

[11] Parties to Instruments

[a] In General

Extent of obligation assumed in and by promissory notes or bills of exchange as determined by intention of parties rather than by particular place whereone of parties has placed his signature; signing in unusual place as having no other effect than requiring proof to disclose capacity in which instrument was signed. Engelman v. Gordon (1966) 242 Cal. App. 2d 510, 517-518, 51 Cal. Rptr. 627

[b] Accommodation Parties

Maker of promissory note as not "accommodation party" within meaning of Com. Code § 3415 if third person who was allegedly accommodated and who received loan proceeds was not party to note. Bank of America v. Superior Court (1970) 4 Cal. App. 3d 435, 439, 84 Cal. Rptr. 421

Whether or not defendants are accommodation endorsers on note as ordinarily question of fact for fact finder. Western Hardwood Lbr. Co. v. Superior Furniture Mfg., Ltd. (1936) 18 Cal. App. 2d 287, 289, 63 P.2d 828

[c] Agents

Agent who signs promissory note in his or her own name as personally liable unless he or she indicates on writing itself intention to bind principal only. Hollywood Nat. Bank v. International Business Machines Corp. (1974) 38 Cal. App. 3d 607, 617, 113 Cal. Rptr. 494 ; now see Com. Code § 3404(a)(2)

Agent's power to endorse commercial paper not to be implied from authority to collect debt. Cignetti v. American Trust Co. (1956) 139 Cal. App. 2d 744, 748, 294 P.2d 490

[d] Coobligors

Shareholder of corporation that executed promissory note was coobligor, not merely surety, when note stated on its face that shareholder was jointly and severally liable on debt and nothing in its terms indicated that she executed it in any capacity other than obligor. Jessup Farms v. Baldwin (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 639, 645 n.4, 190 Cal. Rptr. 355, 660 P.2d 813

[e] Endorsers

Contract of endorser, except insofar as he or she qualifies it in writing, is that if instrument is dishonored he or she will, on compliance by holder with conditions, pay amount of note [former Civ. Code § 3116; now see Com. Code § 3415], and constituting conditional promise to pay note. Hurlbut v. Quigley (1919) 180 Cal. 265, 269, 180 P. 613

Obligation of endorser of promissory note is totally separate and independent from that of makers. Wiener v. Van Winkle (1969) 273 Cal. App. 2d 774, 786, 78 Cal. Rptr. 761

Note endorsed "without recourse" is qualified endorsement in which endorser warrants that he or she has no knowledge of any fact that would render instrument valueless, but endorser does not warrant that obligor will pay. Fleming v. Kagan (1961) 189 Cal. App. 2d 791, 799, 11 Cal. Rptr. 737 ; see Com. Code § 3415(b)

Assignment of "all right, title and interest" of payee endorsed on instrument is equivalent to endorsement without recourse and makes endorser mere assignor of title who will not be liable as endorser on maker's default. Kane v.

Eastman (1931) 110 Cal. App. 753, 758, 295 P. 63 ; Gaetani v. Goss-Golden West Sheet Metal (2000) 84 Cal. App. 4th 1118, 1120, 101 Cal. Rptr. 2d 432 (construing former Com. Code § 3414(1)); see Com. Code § 3415(b)

[f] Joint Obligors

Release of one joint debtor does not extinguish obligation of any of other joint debtors to pay so much of debt as was not paid by released obligor [Civ. Code § 1543]. Lovetro v. Steers (1965) 234 Cal. App. 2d 461, 477, 44 Cal. Rptr. 604

[g] Payees

Check made payable to order of "Security Pacific National Bank A/C No. 260 049 569 G.C. Associates" designated G.C. Associates as payee and Security Pacific National Bank as payee's agent (pursuant to Com. Code § 3117) authorized to deposit funds in specified account. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. v. Security Pac. Nat. Bank (1978) 85 Cal. App. 3d 797, 814-817, 149 Cal. Rptr. 883

[12] Presentment

Giving of checks constitutes conditional payment only; drawer of check not exonerated by failure of payee to present checks for payment except to extent payee can show loss by reason of failure. Zinn v. Fred R. Bright Co. (1969) 271 Cal. App. 2d 597, 603, 76 Cal. Rptr. 663 ; now see Com. Code § 3414(f) (drawee's suspension of payments)

[13] Transfer and Negotiation

Transfer occurs at time of certification if check is certified at instance of payee to whom check has been delivered; if certification is procured at instance of drawer, transfer does not occur until check is delivered to payee. Umbsen v. Crocker First Nat'l Bank (1949) 33 Cal. 2d 599, 601-602, 203 P.2d 752

Payment of instrument by one who is neither party to paper nor in any way bound for its payment generally constitutes purchase in absence of anything showing contrary intent. Proctor v. Pyle (1939) 33 Cal. App. 2d 121, 130-131, 91 P.2d 187

§ 385.90 Complaint for Money Due on Default [Civ. Code § 3302] on Note [Com. Code § 3104(e)]--By Payee Against Maker--Demand Note [Com. Code §§ 3108(a), 3118(b), 3502(a)(1)]

[1] FORM Complaint for Money Due on Default [Civ. Code § 3302] on Note [Com. Code § 3104(e)]--By Payee Against Maker--Demand Note [Com. Code §§ 3108(a), 3118(b), 3502(a)(1)]
SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)
Plaintiff,	)	NO. _____
vs.	)	COMPLAINT FOR MONEY
_____ [name], [and DOES I	)	[Amount demanded _____
through_____,]	)	(exceeds or does not exceed) $10,000]
Defendant(s).	)	[LIMITED CIVIL CASE]

Plaintiff alleges:

1. Defendant is, and at all times herein mentioned was, a resident of _____ [city], _____County, California [or allege other basis of venue, e.g., county where note was made or is payable].

[2. Plaintiff is ignorant of the true names and capacities of defendants sued herein as DOES I through _____, inclusive, and therefore sues these defendants by such fictitious names. Plaintiff will amend this complaint to allege their true names and capacities when ascertained. (Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that each of such fictitiously named defendants is responsible in some manner or status to pay the obligation described herein and that plaintiff's loss as herein alleged was proximately caused by defendants' acts.)]

3. On or about _____ [date], at _____ [city], _____ County, California, defendant, for valuable consideration, made, executed, and delivered to plaintiff his/her/its promissory note [of that date] in the [principal] amount of $_____, payable _____ [describe terms of payment, e.g., to plaintiff or order, on demand, with interest thereon at the rate of _____ percent per annum from the date of the note]. A copy of this note is attached as Exhibit A and incorporated by reference.

4. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff demanded that defendant pay the note _____ [describe demand, e.g., by mailing a copy of the letter attached as Exhibit B and incorporated by reference, to defendant by certified mail, return receipt requested]. Defendant failed [and refused] andcontinues to fail [and refuse] to pay the note, or any part of it [other than the sum of $_____], and there is now due, owing, and unpaid from defendant to plaintiff the sum of $_____, together with interest thereon [at the rate of _____ percent per annum from _____ (date)].

[5. The note provides that in the event legal action is taken to enforce collection, the maker promises to pay such sum as the court may fix as reasonable attorney's fees. (Plaintiff has employed _____ (name), an active member of the State Bar of California, to file and prosecute this action and has become obligated to pay this attorney a reasonable fee for his/her services.) The amount of $_____ is a reasonable attorney's fee for the prosecution of this action.]

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment against defendant[s, and each of them,] as follows:

1. For the [principal] sum of $_____;

2. For interest on the [principal] sum at _____percent per annum from _____ [date];

3. For reasonable attorney's fees in the sum of $_____;

4. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

5. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

Attorney for Plaintiff

VERIFICATION

I, _____ [name], am the plaintiff in the above entitled action. I have read the foregoing complaint and know the contents thereof. The same is true of my own knowledge, except as to those matters which are therein stated on information and belief, and, as to those matters, I believe it to be true.

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of California that the foregoing is true and correct.

[2] Use of Form

This complaint is for use in an action by the payee of a promissory note against the maker to recover the sums owed after maturity. Although it is intended as a general form of complaint, the hypothetical facts used in Paragraph 3 and the allegations in Paragraph 4 are appropriate only for demand notes. These include notes that do not state any time for payment [see Com. Code § 3108(a) (see § 385.13[3])] and whose maker did not assert any of its rights under Com. Code § 3501(b)(2)-(4) (discussed in § 385.30[1], [2]) [see Com. Code § 3501(a) (presentment as demand for payment)]. Therefore, in cases involving other types of notes, counsel should modify the allegations in Paragraph 3 that reflect the terms of the note on which he or she is suing and should replace Paragraph 4 with appropriate allegations from §§ 385.91-385.96, 385.98, and 385.99.

[3] General Allegations

This complaint alleges:

- The capacity and residence of the defendant (Paragraph 1).

- The existence of fictitious defendants (Optional Paragraph 2).

- The execution, delivery, and terms of the note and the fact that the note was issued for consideration (Paragraph 3) [see FPI Development, Inc. v. Nakashima (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 367, 383, 282 Cal. Rptr. 508 (in simple action on note, allegation of execution of note alleges existence of contract, incorporation of copy of note alleges its terms, and allegation of nonpayment in accordance with those terms alleges breach)].

- Demand for payment and nonpayment [see Com. Code § 3502(a)(1) (dishonor of demand note, discussed in § 385.31[1]); see also Com. Code § 3501(a) (presentment as demand)].

- The existence of an attorney's fee provision and plaintiff's engagement of an attorney to prosecute the action.

This last allegation is not necessary [see Civ. Code § 1717(a) (attorney's fees pursuant to contract provision as element of costs); Ganey v. Doran (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 901, 911-912, 236 Cal. Rptr. 787 (contract provision for attorney's fees need not be pleaded if contract is made part of complaint)]. Reasonable attorney's fees are fixed by the court on notice and motion by a party [Civ. Code § 1717(a)]. For discussion of attorney's fees awards pursuant to a contract provision and forms and procedures for their recovery, see Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees, § 174.50 et seq.

[4] Demand for Payment and Attorney's Fees

In the case of a demand note, the normal rule is that suit may be filed without making a demand for payment [see Prescott v. Grady (1891) 91 Cal. 518, 520-523, 27 P. 755 (under normal rules of pleading, there would be no "breach," and therefore no accrual of cause of action, until there was dishonor, but demand notes are subject to special rule); see also Official Comments 2 and 3 to U.C.C. § 3-502 (1990)]. However, if plaintiff seeks attorney's fees in accordance with an attorney's fee provision in the contract, a demand must normally be made prior to suit [All-West Design, Inc. v. Boozer (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 1212, 1226, 228 Cal. Rptr. 736 (under facts of case, which involved cross complaint on installment note, no error occurred in awarding attorney's fees even though no prelitigation demand was made); Green v. Carlstrom (1963) 212 Cal. App. 2d 240, 244, 27 Cal. Rptr. 850 (acceleration of installment note)].

[5] Verification

Although verification of this complaint is not required [see Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7(a)], verification will require any answer to be verified in an unlimited civil case in superior court [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 92(b), 446]. Verification will also preclude a general denial in an unlimited civil case, and will preclude a general denial in a limited civil case when the action is a claim assigned to a third party for collection [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(d)]. For further discussion see Ch. 26, Answers .

[6] Limitation Period for Actions on Demand Notes

Com. Code § 3118(b) provides two limitation periods for commencement of actions on demand notes other than certificates of deposit, which are governed by Com. Code § 3118(e), and certain obligations of banks governed by Com. Code § 3118(d):

- If demand is made to the maker, an action to enforce the obligation of a party to pay the note must be commenced within six years after demand; and

- If no demand for payment is made to the maker, an action to enforce the note is barred if neither principal or interest on the note has been paid for a continuous period of 10 years.

This reflects a change from prior law, in that drawers and endorsers now are subject to a limitation period that runs from the same date [Official Comment 2 to UCC § 3118 (1990)].

[7] Jurisdiction and Venue

The superior court has jurisdiction of the action, which will be classified as an unlimited civil case unless the amount in controversy, exclusive of interest, is $25,000 or less, in which case it will be classified as a limited civil case [Cal. Const., art. VI, § 10; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85, 86(a)(1)].

In limited civil cases, the caption must identify the case as a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. § 422.30(b); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(10)], and the first page of the paper must state whether or not the demand exceeds $10,000 [Gov. Code § 70613(b); see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(9) (statement regarding amount of demand must appear "below the character of the action or proceeding")].

An action on a note is a form of action for breach of contract [FPI Development, Inc. v. Nakashima (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 367, 383, 282 Cal. Rptr. 508] . Thus, the proper venue is the county where the defendant resides, where the note was to be paid, or where the note was made [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)]. If the maker is a corporation, venue is proper in the county where the corporation maintains its principal place of business, where the note was made, or where it is to be paid [Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5; see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 395.2 (action against unincorporated association), 410.70 (action against persons jointly liable)].

[8] Waiver of Security

If the note is secured by real property or by an interest in real property, an action on the note will amount to waiver of plaintiff's security interest [Code Civ. Proc. § 726(a)]. Thus, it is usually more prudent to foreclose on the collateral first. Similarly, if the note is secured by personal property, a combined action on the note and under the security agreement may be more prudent than simply proceeding on the note [see Com. Code § 9601(secured party's options on default); but see Official Comment 1 to UCC § 3-106 (1990) (statement that note is subject to or governed by security agreement renders it nonnegotiable)]. If the collateral is real property, see Ch. 555, Trust Deeds and Real Property Mortgages . If the collateral is personal property, see Ch. 503, Sales: Secured Transactions .

[13] Consideration

Burden of pleading and proving lack of consideration to support written instrument is on party seeking to avoid it on that ground. Hualde Ranch Co. v. Beebe (1935) 3 Cal. App. 2d 592, 593-594, 40 P.2d 545

[14] Demand

No actual demand is necessary on demand note, whether negotiable or nonnegotiable, under principle that obligation for payment of money on demand is due immediately. Rottman v. Hevener (1921) 54 Cal. App. 485, 488, 202 P. 334

[15] Interest

Prejudgment interest is not allowed on delinquent interest payments under interest-only note; express agreement is required to compound interest. Ninety Five Ten v. Crain (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 36, 39-41, 282 Cal. Rptr. 141 (disapproving Daum Development Corp. v. Yuba Plaza, Inc. (1970) 11 Cal. App. 3d 65, 89 Cal. Rptr. 458 , to extent that it may be construed to sanction award of interest on interest in absence of agreement therefor)

[16] Pleading

Allegation that note was made implies delivery; further allegation of delivery is unnecessary. Smith v. Waite (1894) 103 Cal. 372, 373, 37 P. 232

Genuineness and due execution, in form exhibited, of copy of note annexed to complaint is admitted for all purposes of trial unless denied by verified answer. Ward v. Clay (1890) 82 Cal. 502, 505, 23 P. 50 (dictum)

Person suing on promissory note generally is not required to plead or prove contractual relationship giving rise to execution and delivery of note. Fellom v. Adams (1969) 274 Cal. App. 2d 855, 863, 79 Cal. Rptr. 633

[17] Presentment

Note not payable at any particular place is payable and to be presented for payment at residence or place of business of maker or wherever maker may be found, at option of presentor. Wills v. Booth (1907) 6 Cal. App. 197, 203, 91 P. 759 ; now see Com. Code §§ 3501, 3502(a)

Presentment for payment of note is excused if maker has no place of business or residence within state or maker's place of business or residence cannot be ascertained with reasonable diligence. Wills v. Booth (1907) 6 Cal. App. 197, 203, 91 P. 759 (allegation as to lack of knowledge of whereabouts of maker based on information and belief is insufficient)

[18] Statute of Limitations

Debt is payable and due immediately when obligation is for payment of money on demand, on call, or on demand after date, and statute of limitations begins running at once if not immediately paid. Rottman v. Hevener (1921) 54 Cal. App. 485, 488, 202 P. 334

PART IV. FORMS

33-385 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 385.91

§ 385.91 Allegations Regarding Terms and Nonpayment of Installment Note [Com. Code §§ 3108(b), 3118(a), 3502(a)(2), (3)]

[1] FORM Allegations Regarding Terms and Nonpayment of Installment Note [Com. Code §§ 3108(b), 3118(a), 3502(a)(2), (3)]

1. On or about _____ [date], at _____ [city], _____ County, California, defendant, for valuable consideration, made, executed, and delivered to plaintiff his/her/its promissory note [of that date] in the [principal] amount of $_____, payable _____ [describe terms of payment, e.g., to plaintiff or order, on (or before) July 1, 2006, with quarterly installment payments in the amount of $_____, beginning on September 30, 2001, each payment to be credited first to interest at the rate of _____ percent per annum on the unpaid principal amount]. A copy of this note is attached as Exhibit A and incorporated by reference.

2. [Although plaintiff has made demand therefor,] [D]efendant has not paid the amount due on the note, or any part thereof, except the installments due _____ [specify, e.g., to and including July 20, 2005]

[OR]

the following amounts:

_____ $ _____
____ [date] _____

_____ $ _____
____ [date] _____

_____ $ _____
____ [date] _____

[CONTINUE]

After application of those payments to interest and principal in accordance with the terms of the note, there remains a balance due and owing to the date of this complaint in the amount of $_____, principal, and $_____, interest. No part of this balance has been paid to date.

[2] Use of Form

These allegations are for use in place of Paragraphs 3 and 4, respectively, of § 385.90 in an action by a payee against the maker on default of payments due on an installment promissory note. Paragraph 1 of this form may be used in place of Paragraph 3 of the form in § 385.90, and Paragraph 2 may be used in place of Paragraph 4. An installment note is a species of "note payable at a definite time" [see Com. Code § 3108(b) (see § 385.13[3])].

Because one need not allege the payee's or holder's exercise of an option to accelerate [see § 385.92], Paragraph 2 of this form and the allegation in § 385.92 may appear interchangeable. Nevertheless, Paragraph 2 is intended for use only in the anomalous situation in which the note has not been accelerated and plaintiff seeks to recover only the delinquentinstallments or those delinquent installments he or she is entitled to collect [see Bliss v. California Coop. Producers (1947) 30 Cal. 2d 240, 246, 181 P.2d 369] .

Demand for payment may not be necessary before commencement of suit unless the terms of the note require presentment [see Com. Code § 3502(a)(2), (3) (dishonor of demand note, discussed in § 385.31[2]); see also Com. Code § 3501(a) (presentment as demand)] or unless plaintiff seeks to recover attorney's fee in accordance with a provision for them in the note [see § 385.90].

[3] Limitation Period Applicable to Notes Payable at Definite Time

Unless the note is a certificate of deposit, and thus governed by Com. Code § 3118(e), an action to enforce the obligation of a party to pay a note payable at a definite time must be commenced within six years after the due date or dates stated in the note or, if a due date is accelerated, within six years after the accelerated due date [Com. Code § 3118(a); see also Official Comment 2 to U.C.C. § 3118 (1990) (current provision is change from prior law; drawers and endorsers now are subject to limitation period that runs from same date)].

When a note is payable in installments (and the payee does not accelerate), a cause of action on each installment accrues on the day following the date that installment is due, and the statute of limitations begins to run against each installment as it becomes due [White v. Moriarty (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 1290, 1299, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 200 (considered effect under Code Civ. Proc. § 337(1); see now Com. Code § 3118(a))].

[4] State Statutes

Note payable in installments is payable at definite time. Com. Code § 3108(b)

Effect of partial transfer of instrument. Com. Code § 3203(d)

When installment note is overdue. Com. Code § 3304(b)

Time of dishonor of note payable in installments. Com. Code § 3502(a)(2), (3)

[5] Interest

Payee is entitled to recover interest at contract rate from date last installment of note was due until date of judgment. Reid v. Balter (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 1186, 1196, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 287 (note was not accelerated, suit was brought after last installment came due)

[6] Rights of Transferee of Installment Note

Transferee of installment note is holder in due course as to installments to mature infuture when transfer is made after one or more but not all of installments are due on its face if he or she has no notice of default in payment of past due installments. Bliss v. California Coop. Producers (1947) 30 Cal. 2d 240, 246, 181 P.2d 369 ; see also Wilson v. Steele (1989) 211Cal. App. 3d 1053 (decided under former Com. Code § 3304(3)(a), (4)(f) (now see Com. Code §§ 3302(a)(2)(C), 3304(b), (c)); knowledge that interest-only installment payments had not been made as not depriving transferee of status as holder in due course)

Transferee of installment note is not required to ascertain whether or not past due installments had been paid in order to be holder in due course as to installment to mature in future. Bliss v. California Coop. Producers (1947) 30 Cal. 2d 240, 245, 181 P.2d 369

PART IV. FORMS

33-385 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 385.92

§ 385.92 Allegations Regarding Installment Note With Option to Accelerate and That Balance of Note Payable in Installments Is Unpaid After Payee's Election to Accelerate [Com. Code § 3108(b)]

[1] FORM Allegations Regarding Installment Note With Option to Accelerate and That Balance of Note Payable in Installments Is Unpaid After Payee's Election to Accelerate [Com. Code § 3108(b)]

1. [Terms of installment note. See § 385.91[1], Paragraph 2.]

[2. By its terms, the note provides that plaintiff may, at his/her/its election, declare the remaining (principal) balance immediately due and payment in the event any installment is not paid when due.]

3. [Although plaintiff has made demand therefor,] [D]efendant has not paid _____ [specify number or dates of unpaid installments, e.g., any installments due after, and including that due on, June 30, 2006], or any part thereof, and, as provided in the note, [plaintiff has exercised its option to accelerate and] the whole amount thereof is now due, owing, and unpaid, together with interest [at the rate of _____] thereon from _____ [date] [and an additional _____ (specify any additional interest or amount owed as prepayment penalty, e.g., six months' interest or $_____ as prepayment penalty)].

[2] Use of Form

These allegations are for use in place of Paragraphs 3 and 4 of the form in § 385.90[1] in an action by a payee against the maker on default of payments due on an installment promissory note when the payee has elected to accelerate the date of maturity for the payment of the whole amount due [see Com. Code § 3106(b) (option to accelerate as not condition that renders note nonnegotiable)]. Paragraph 1 of this form may be used in place of Paragraph 3 of the form in § 385.90[1], and Paragraph 3 may be used in place of Paragraph 4. Paragraph 2 of this form is not necessary if a copy of the note is attached to the complaint and incorporated by reference, or if the acceleration option is set forth as a term in Paragraph 1. Nevertheless, its use is recommended for clarity.

Unless the terms of the note require presentment, it is not necessary to allege demand for payment (Paragraph 3) [see Com. Code § 3502(a)(2), (3) (dishonor of demand note, discussed in § 385.31[2]); see also Com. Code § 3501(a) (presentment as demand)] unless plaintiff seeks to recover attorney's fees in accordance with a provision for these fees in the note [see § 385.90].

The allegation that plaintiff exercised its option to declare the remaining principal sum of a promissory note due and payable is unnecessary because commencement of the action itself is sufficient to show exercise of this option [Title G. & T. Co. v. Fraternal Finance Co. (1934) 220 Cal. 362, 364, 30 P.2d 515 ; Green v. Carlstrom (1963) 212 Cal. App. 2d 240,243-244, 27 Cal. Rptr. 850 ;see, e.g., Federal Sav. and Loan Ins. Corp. v. Musacchio (N.D. Cal. 1988) 695 F. Supp. 1044, 1047-1048] .

[3] State Statutes

Note is payable at definite time even though subject to acceleration. Com. Code § 3108(b)

[4] Decisions

[a] Acceleration

Under Com. Code § 1303(e), fact that payee had told maker and guarantors that it did not intend to accelerate note but hoped they could agree on deferred payment plan and generally lenient collection practices does not provide basis for claim of estoppel, given language in note that payee's failure to exercise its option to accelerate would not be construed as waiver of that option. U.S. v. Grayson (9th Cir. 1989) 879 F.2d 620, 624 (interpreting California law for guidance)

After default, holder is entitled to proceed with action on note containing acceleration clause even though note payment had been extended three years. Title G. & T. Co. v. Fraternal Finance Co. (1934) 220 Cal. 362, 363-364, 30 P.2d 515

[b] Interest on Accelerated Note

Holder of promissory note who accelerates its maturity is not entitled to recover portion of unpaid balance representing unearned interest. Furesz v. Garcia (1981) 120 Cal. App. 3d 793, 796-797, 174 Cal. Rptr. 803

[c] Prepayment Penalties on Accelerated Notes

Prepayment penalty specified in note to apply whether prepayment was "voluntary or involuntary, including any prepayment effected by holder's exercise of acceleration clause," is enforceable against holder of junior encumbrance who paid after holder's acceleration. Pacific Trust Co. TTEE v. Fidelity Sav. & Loan Assn. (1986) 184 Cal. App. 3d 817, 823-826, 229 Cal. Rptr. 269 ; but see Tan v. California Fed. Sav. & Loan Assn. (1983) 140 Cal. App. 3d 800, 809-811, 189 Cal. Rptr. 775 (prepayment penalty not required under terms of note when due-on-sale clause is enforced)

Civ. Code § 1671 does not invalidate prepayment penalty of six months' interest since federal regulations at time note was made provided for prepayment penalties; prepayment penalty is enforceable against holder of junior encumbrance. Pacific Trust Co. TTEE v. Fidelity Sav. & Loan Assn. (1986) 184 Cal. App. 3d 817, 821-823, 824-826, 229 Cal. Rptr. 269

Prepayment penalty of six months' interest was not unenforcable as unreasonable restraint on alienation. Sacramento Sav. & Loan Assn v. Superior Court (1983) 137 Cal. App. 3d 142, 145-147, 186 Cal. Rptr. 823

33-385 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 385.93

§ 385.93 Allegations Regarding Terms and Acceleration of Series of Notes on Failure to Pay One

[1] FORM Allegations Regarding Terms and Acceleration of Series of Notes on Failure to Pay One

1. On _____ [date], at _____ [city], _____ County, California, defendant executed and delivered to plaintiff his/her/its promissory notes in writing. The original maturity dates and amounts of these notes are as follows: _____ [set forth maturity dates and amounts of notes sued on]. True copies of these notes are attached hereto, in order of original maturity date, as Exhibits A through _____, and incorporated by this reference.

2. Each of the promissory notes provides that the note shall become due and payable forthwith, at the option of the holder, if the principal or interest of any other note of this series is not paid at maturity.

3. Defendant has not paid the note due on _____ [date], or the note due on _____ [date], _____ [continue alleging other notes due] or any part thereof. [Plaintiff is now, and has been at all times, the holder of every note mentioned in this complaint.] [Plaintiff has, by written notice delivered to defendant on _____ (date), and following the defaults, exercised his/her/its option to declare each and every other note in the same series due and payable forthwith and demanded immediate payment of them. A copy of this written notice is attached as Exhibit E and incorporated by reference.] By reason of the foregoing, the total principal sum of $_____ is unpaid, due, and owing to plaintiff from defendant on all of the notes, together with costs of collection and interest on the notes of _____ percent per annum on _____ [specify interest due on each note].

[2] Use of Form

These allegations are for use in place of Paragraphs 3 and 4 of the form in § 385.90[1] in an action by a payee against a maker on default of payments due on one or more notes in a series of notes that give the holder the option to declare the entire series due on the failure to pay one of them [see Com. Code § 3106(b)(1) (note is not rendered conditional by reference to another writing for statement of rights with respect to acceleration); Official Comment 1 to U.C.C. 3-106 (1990)]. Paragraphs 1 and 2 of this form are for use in place of Paragraph 3 of the form in § 385.90[1]; Paragraph 3 of this form is for use in place of Paragraph 4 of the form in § 385.90[1].

If the notes contain attorney's fees provisions, the allegation of demand in Paragraph 3 should be retained [see § 385.90; see also Com. Code § 3108(a)(1) (note that indicates it is payable at will of holder as note payable on demand)].

[3] Decisions

Civ. Code § 1479, governing application of payment on several obligations, requiresapplication of payment to note with earliest maturity date or asotherwise mandating ratable allocation among obligations with same maturity date, regardless of whether such obligations are secured or unsecured. Jessup Farms v. Baldwin (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 639, 654, 190 Cal. Rptr. 355, 660 P.2d 813 (dictum, as renewal of already matured obligation left only one obligation)

When single action is brought to recover on series of promissory notes, each containing attorney's fees provision, and plaintiff recovers on some but not all notes, trial court as required to apportion fees among litigants. Epstein v. Frank (1981) 125 Cal. App. 3d 111, 125, 177 Cal. Rptr. 831

Negotiability of one of several notes maturing at different times belonging to single transaction forming connective series as not affected by provision that, on failure of maker to pay any one of series, rest shall become due and payable to holder. Havens v. Foskett (1927) 81 Cal. App. 653, 658, 254 P. 642

§ 385.94 Allegation of Partial Payment

[1] FORM Allegation of Partial Payment

Although plaintiff has made demand therefor, defendant has not paid on the note, or any part thereof, except the following amounts:

_____ $ _____

_____ $ _____
____ [date] _____

_____ $ _____

There is now due, owing, and unpaid from defendant to plaintiff on the promissory note a balance of $_____, principal, together with interest from _____ [date].

[2] Use of Form

The foregoing allegation is for use in place of Paragraph 4 of § 385.90[1] in an action by a payee against the maker on default of some, but not all, payments due on a promissory note [Com. Code § 3602(a) (obligation discharged to extent of payment); but see Com. Code § 3601(b) (discharge as not effective against person acquiring rights of holder in due course without notice of discharge)].

The foregoing allegation allows more flexibility than the allegation of partial payment in § 385.91[1] in that it is not limited to use with installment notes and the partial payments need not have been installments.

[3] State Statutes

Holder's rights when promise that was consideration for instrument is only partially performed. Com. Code § 3303(b)

§ 385.95 Allegations of Terms and Nonpayment of Note Payable at or After Sight [Com. Code § 3108(a), (b)]

[1] FORM Allegations of Terms and Nonpayment of Note Payable at or After Sight [Com. Code § 3108(a), (b)]

1. On or about _____ [date], in _____ [city], _____ County, California, defendant, for valuable consideration, made, executed, and delivered to plaintiff his/her/its promissory note [of that date] in the amount of $_____, payable to the order of plaintiff, together with interest thereon at the rate of _____ percent per annum, _____ [at sight or _____(number) days after sight]. A copy of the note is attached hereto as Exhibit A and made a part hereof.

2. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff presented the note to _____ [allege presentment in accordance with terms of note, e.g., defendant at the address stated in the note] and thereby demanded payment in accordance with the terms of the note. No part of the note has been paid[, although the time provided for in the note has elapsed], and there is now due, owing, and unpaid from defendant to plaintiff on the note the sum of $_____.

[2] Use of Form

The foregoing allegations are for use in place of Paragraphs 3 and 4, respectively, of § 385.90[1] in an action by a payee against a maker of a note payable "at sight" or a specified number of days "after sight." A note is "payable on demand" if it states that it is payable at sight [Com. Code § 3108(a)(1)]. A note is "payable at a definite time" if it is payable on elapse of a definite period of time after sight [Com. Code § 3108(b)].

Presentment implies demand for payment [see Com. Code § 3501(a); see also Com. Code § 3502(a)(1) (discussed in § 385.31), Com. Code § 3502(a)(2), (3) (discussed in § 385.31[2])].

[1] FORM Allegation Regarding Terms of Note With No Time for Payment Expressed [Com. Code § 3108(a)(2)]

On or about _____ [date], at _____ [city], _____ County, defendant, for valuable consideration, made, executed, and delivered to plaintiff his/her/its promissory note in writing dated on that day, wherein defendant promised to pay to the order of plaintiff at _____ [city], _____ County, the sum of $_____ [, together with interest thereon at the rate of percent _____ per annum]. The time when the note was to be paid was not expressed in the note. A copy of the note is attached hereto as Exhibit A and made a part hereof.

[2] Use of Form

The foregoing allegation is for use in place of Paragraph 3 of § 385.90[1] in an action for money due on a note by a payee against the maker when no time for payment is expressed in the note. A note that does not express a time for payment is a form of demand note [Com. Code § 3108(a)(2)].

§ 385.97 Allegations Regarding Acknowledgment by Maker of Obligation Previously Barred by Statute of Limitations [Code Civ. Proc. § 360]

[1] FORM Allegations Regarding Acknowledgment by Maker of Obligation Previously Barred by Statute of Limitations [Code Civ. Proc. § 360]

1. Thereafter, on _____ [date], [plaintiff _____ (describe any new consideration or promise flowing from plaintiff to defendant, e.g., agreed to guarantee certain debts of defendant), and, as a part of the consideration for this _____ (specify, e.g., guarantee),] defendant acknowledged and agreed in writing that defendant would pay to plaintiff all monies on the promissory note even though plaintiff's claim on that note had become barred by the provisions of _____ [specify applicable statute of limitations, e.g., Commercial Code Section 3118(a)], on _____ [date]. A copy of that written acknowledgment is attached hereto as Exhibit B and made a part hereof.

2. No part of the principal or interest on the promissory note has been paid [except _____ (continue with any payments made before the limitation period began to run, e.g., $_____, which was paid on June 23, 1982, and $_____, which was paid on July 20, 1983]. Immediately prior to the commencement of the above-entitled action, plaintiff demanded of defendant that defendant pay to plaintiff the balance of the principal and interest now due and unpaid on the promissory note, but defendant refused and still refuses to pay the balance of the principal or interest or any part of the balance. There is now due, owing, and unpaid from defendant to plaintiff the sum of $_____, principal with interest thereon at the rate of _____ percent per annum from _____ [date].

[2] Use of Form

The foregoing allegations are for use in an action for money due on default on a note by the payee against the maker after the maker has made a written an acknowledgment of the obligation on a note previously barred by the statute of limitations [see Code Civ. Proc. § 360 (necessity of written acknowledgment, signed by person obligated, to renew contract); see also Com. Code § 3303(b) (discussed in § 385.90[14])]. Paragraph 1 of the foregoing form may be inserted in § 385.90 between Paragraphs 3 and 4 of that form; Paragraph 2 is for use in place of Paragraph 4 of § 385.90. The allegation in Paragraph 1 regarding additional consideration flowing from plaintiff to defendant is optional because, under Code Civ. Proc. § 360, the preexisting debt itself, even though barred by statute of limitations, is sufficient consideration to support a new acknowledgment of or promise to pay the note [Easton v. Ash (1941) 18 Cal. 2d 530, 534-535, 116 P.2d 433] . For further discussion of, and another form relating to, Code Civ. Proc. § 360, see Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions .

[3] Decisions

Code Civ. Proc. § 360 (renewal of obligation by acknowledgment) as requiring only that acknowledgment of existing debt be in writing signed by party to be charged. *Easton v. § 385.98 Allegations Regarding Terms and Default Due to Failure to Furnish Additional Security [Com. Code § 3104(a)(3)(ii)]

[1] FORM Allegations Regarding Terms and Default Due to Failure to Furnish Additional Security [Com. Code § 3104(a)(3)(ii)]

1. By terms of this note, defendant deposited with plaintiff _____ [specify collateral furnished to secure the loan, e.g., 100 shares of XYZ Corp., registered in the name of defendant,] to secure the note. The note further provided that plaintiff had the right to require additional security as he/she/it deemed proper and that the note became due and payable on defendant's failure to provide any additional security requested by plaintiff.

2. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff served notice of demand for additional security _____ [specify additional collateral requested, e.g., in the amount of $_____] on defendant. A copy of this notice is attached hereto as Exhibit B and made a part hereof.

3. Thereafter, defendant refused and continues to refuse to furnish additional security. [Plaintiff demanded that defendant pay the note, but] [N]o part of the note [or interest thereon] has been paid, and there is now unpaid on account of the note $_____, principal, and interest thereon [at the rate of _____ percent per annum from _____(date)].

[2] Use of Form

The foregoing allegations are for use in an action by a payee against a maker on default of payment on a promissory note occasioned by the maker's failure to furnish additional security as agreed to in the note. Paragraphs 1 and 2 of the foregoing form may be inserted in the form of complaint [§ 385.90[1]] after Paragraph 3. Paragraph 3 of this form is for use in place of Paragraph 4 of § 385.90[1]. The allegation of demand in Paragraph 3 of this form may or may not be necessary [see § 385.90[1]].

COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name], as _____ [specify title, e.g., Executor of the Will] of _____ [name], deceased, Plaintiff, vs. _____ [name], [and DOES I through _____] Defendant(s).	)))))))	NO. _____ COMPLAINT FOR ENFORCEMNT OF LOST INSTRUMENT [Amount demanded _____ (exceeds or does not exceed) $10,000] [LIMITED CIVIL CASE]

Plaintiff alleges:

1. Plaintiff is the duly appointed, qualified, and acting _____ [title, e.g., executor of the will] of _____ [decedent's name], who died on _____ [date]. On _____ [date], letters _____ [testamentary or of administration or of administration with will annexed], a certified copy of which is attached hereto as Exhibit A and made a part hereof, were issued to plaintiff, and, since that time, plaintiff has been and now is the personal representative of decedent's estate.

2. The cause of action sued on herein arose in and is payable in _____ County, California, and defendant is a resident of _____ County, California [or other allegation of capacity and residence of defendant; see § 385.90[1], Paragraph 1].

[3. Fictitious name allegation, if appropriate. See § 385.90[1], Paragraph 2.]

4. On or about _____ [date], at _____ [city], _____ County, California, defendant, for valuable consideration, made, executed, and delivered to decedent his/her/its promissory note [of that date] in the amount of $_____, payable _____ [describe terms of payment, e.g., to decedent or order, three years from date, with interest at the rate of _____ percent per annum]. [A copy of this note is attached hereto as Exhibit B and made a part hereof.]

5. On a date unknown to plaintiff, the note was lost and remains lost as of the date of filing this complaint. [Plaintiff is informed and believesand on such information and belief alleges that] [D]ecedent did not transfer the note or any interest in it. Plaintiff also did not transfer the note or any interest in it. [Plaintiff is informed and believes and on such information and belief alleges that] [T]he note was never seized or taken from decedent in any lawful manner. _____ [Continue with fact establishing plaintiff's knowledge of the foregoing, e.g., Decedent maintained a notebook that contained copies of decedent's will and copies of all documents relating to decedent's assets and liabilities. [2] Use of Form

The foregoing complaint is for use in an action by a personal representative of a deceased payee against the maker of a lost, overdue promissory note for enforcement of that note [see Com. Code § 3309 (discussed in § 385.48]. U.C.C. § 3-309 is a modification of former U.C.C. § 3-804. The rights stated are those of "a person entitled to enforce the instrument" at the time of loss rather than those of an "owner," as in former Section 3-804 [Official Comment to U.C.C. § 3-309 (1990)]. Com. Code § 3301 defines "person entitled to enforce an instrument" and includes both persons not in possession who are entitled to enforce the instrument in accordance with Com. Code § 3309 [see Com. Code § 3301(c)] and anyone who, under applicable law, is a successor to the holder or otherwise acquires the holder's rights [Official Comment to U.C.C. § 3-301].

Although Civ. Code § 3415(b) requires the court to order the owner of a lost or destroyed negotiable instrument to give an indemnity bond to any person reissuing, reexecuting, or reacknowledging the instrument, Com. Code § 3309, as amended by Stats. 1992, ch. 914, § 6, only requires "adequate protection" to be given to the person required to pay the instrument unless the court finds that the person required to pay the instrument already is adequately protected against loss that might occur by reason of a claim by another person to enforce the instrument. Adequate protection may be provided by any reasonable means [see also § 385.100[4]].

For discussion and forms relating to surety bonds, see Ch. 538, Suretyship, Bonds, and Undertakings .

[3] Allegations

This complaint alleges (1) plaintiff's capacity as personal representative (Paragraph 1) [see Com. Code § 3301(c) (person entitled to enforce instrument); Prob. Code §§ 9650, 9651 (powers and responsibilities of personal representatives generally)]; (2) the execution, delivery, and terms of the lost instrument and the fact that the note was issued for consideration (Paragraph 4) [see FPI Development, Inc. v. Nakashima (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 367, 383, 282 Cal. Rptr. 508 (in simple action on note, allegation of execution of note alleges existence of contract, incorporation of copy of note alleges its terms, and allegation of nonpayment in accordance with those terms alleges breach)]; (3) the loss of the note while plaintiff or decedent was its holder, that neither plaintiff nor decedent transferred the note or had it lawfully seized, and plaintiff's inability to obtain possession of the note (Paragraph 5) [Com. Code § 3309(a)]; (4) that plaintiff is the holder of the lost note (Paragraph 6); (5) additional efforts to find the note, sufficient to sustain the conclusion that it is lost (Paragraph 7) [see Com. Code § 3309(a)(3)]; and (6) alternative allegations regarding indemnity oradequate protection: either that it was tendered at the time of demand (first alternative Paragraph 9) or that plaintiff stands ready, willing, and able to provide it if the court determines it is necessary (second alternative Paragraph 9) [see Com. Code § 3309(b)].

The form adopts the allegation of demand for payment from § 385.90, but other demand allegations [see, e.g., §§ 385.91 -385.93, 385.95, 385.98] may be more appropriate depending on the terms of the note and the event of default [see §§

385.90 and 385.91].

[4] U.C.C. Comment on Indemnification

Under U.C.C. § 3-309(b), judgment to enforce the instrument may not be given unless the court finds that the defendant will be adequately protected against a claim to the instrument by a holder that may appear at some later time. The court is given discretion to determine how adequate protection is to be assured. Former U.C.C. § 3-804 allowed the court to "require security indemnifying the defendant against loss." Under Section 3-309 adequate protection is a flexible concept. For example, there is substantial risk that a holder in due course may make a demand for payment if the instrument was payable to bearer when it was lost or stolen. On the other hand, if the instrument was payable to the person who lost it and that person did note endorse it, no other person could be the holder of the instrument. In some cases, there is risk of loss only if there is doubt about whether the facts alleged by the person who lost the instrument are true. Thus, the type of adequate protection that is reasonable in the circumstances may depend on the degree of certainty about the facts of the case [Official Comment to U.C.C. § 3-309 (1990)]. This is a change from prior California law. Nevertheless, pre-Code cases are included below for possible guidance.

[7] Decisions

[a] Enforcement of Lost, Destroyed, or Stolen Instruments

Interpretation of requirement in Com. Code § 3309 that "person was in possession" before possession was lost, to hold that joint payee alleged cause of action for recovery of amount of check from drawer under that section by alleging it was joint payee of check which was delivered to copayee, who deposited it without obtaining plaintiff's endorsement or consent. Crystaplex Plastics, Ltd. v. Redevelopment Agency of the City of Barstow (2000) 77 Cal. App. 4th 990, 999-1000, 92 Cal. Rptr. 2d 197 (failure to allege plaintiff's actual possession of check was not fatal to cause of action because delivery of check to joint payee was sufficient to satisfy possession requirement)

[b] Indemnity

Even if it produces hardship, better rule as to require indemnity in all cases, whether note has been lost or destroyed. Randolph v. Harris (1865) 28 Cal. 561, 565 (note destroyed by fire; indemnity tendered before suit and again during trial, though not in proper form); Welton v. Adams & Co. (1854) 4 Cal. 37, 41 (certificate of deposit destroyed in fire; owners unable to provide security)

Failure to tender indemnity before suit as not fatal to recovery and only affects the question of costs, which plaintiff can have only if indemnity was tendered before suit. Randolph v. Harris (1865) 28 Cal. 561, 565-566

On issue of indemnity, no distinction as existing between note that was destroyed by fire and one that was lost. Randolph v. Harris (1865) 28 Cal. 561, 564-565

Trustee's demand for corporate surety (rather than individual surety) before executing reconveyance of lost note and mortgage as reasonable because corporate sureties generally remain in existence longer, able to be located longer, and less subject to financial vagaries. *Huckell v. Indemnity as not essential in case of nonnegotiable instrument. Dollar v. International Banking Corp. (1910) 13 Cal. App. 331, 342, 109 P. 499 (nonnegotiable deposit receipt)

[c] Obligations on Instrument After Loss

Person as not losing right to collect lost instrument, which is primary evidence of obligation; loss or destruction of instrument as not changing obligation of parties. Johnston v. Wolf (1931) 118 Cal. App. 388, 391, 5 P.2d 673 (trade acceptance apparently lost in mail in transit to endorsee)

[d] Proof of Loss

Example of testimony of owner as being sufficient to establish loss of paid and canceled note and mortgage on way home from recorder's office. Woods v. Jensen (1900) 130 Cal. 200, 205, 62 P. 473 ; see also California National Bank v. Weldon (1910) 14 Cal. App. 765, 769-770, 113 P. 334 (check apparently lost in mail between banks in collection chain after depositary bank paid payee)

[2] Use of Form

The foregoing form of complaint is for use in an action for money on default on a note by the payee against the maker and a party endorsing before delivery. Such an anomalous endorser is presumed to be an accommodation party [Com. Code § 3419(c)] and is obligated to pay the instrument in the capacity in which he or she signed the instrument (in this case, in the capacity of endorser) [Com. Code § 3419(b); see discussion in § 385.40[1]]. Thus, the endorser is not liable on the note until after presentment (if required) to the maker and receipt by the endorser of notice of dishonor [see Com. Code § 3415 (discussed in § 385.38; see also discussion in § 385.103[4]].

Although both the maker and endorser are named as defendants in the foregoing form, plaintiff may have only one recovery [see also Com. Code § 3419(e) (accommodation party who pays instrument as entitled to reimbursement from accommodated party)].

[3] Allegations

The foregoing complaint alleges (1) defendants' residences or other allegation for venue (Paragraph 1); (2) the execution of the note by the maker, for consideration, and its delivery to plaintiff (Paragraph 3) [see FPI Development, Inc. v. Nakashima (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 367, 383, 282 Cal. Rptr. 508] ; (3) the gratuitous endorsement before delivery (Paragraph 4) [see Com. Code § 3419(a)-(c); Official Comments 1, 2 to U.C.C. § 3-419 (1990)]; (4) presentment and dishonor of the note at maturity (Paragraph 5) [see Com. Code §§ 3501, 3502(a); see also § 385.90 (demand is usually prerequisite to award pursuant to attorney's fees provision in note)]; (5) that notice of dishonor was given to the endorser (Paragraph 6) [see Com. Code §§ 3415(a), (c), 3503]; and (6) that the note remains unpaid (Paragraph 7).

[2] Use of Form

The foregoing complaint is for use in an action by a payee against a guarantor on default by the maker of payment due on a promissory note. Under Com. Code § 3419, as revised by Stats. 1992, ch. 914, § 6, a person signing as guarantor is presumed to be an accommodation maker and obligated to pay the instrument in the capacity in which he or she signs the instrument, here as maker [Com. Code § 3419(b); see discussion in § 385.40[1]; see also § 385.103[4]].

An accommodation maker who pays the payee or holder of a negotiable instrument generally has the same rights as a guarantor under Civ. Code § 2848 in that the accommodation maker then is entitled to enforce the note against the primary maker ("party accommodated") in accordance with its terms [Flojo Internat., Inc. v. Lassleben (1992) 4 Cal. App. 4th 713, 721-722, 6 Cal. Rptr. 2d 99 (payee assigned note to accommodation maker after payment)]. For discussion of guarantor's rights under the Civil Code and forms for their enforcement, see Ch. 538, Suretyship, Bonds, and Undertakings .

[3] Allegations

The foregoing complaint alleges (1) the execution of the note by the maker, for consideration, and its delivery to plaintiff (Paragraph 3) [see FPI Development, Inc. v. Nakashima (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 367, 383, 282 Cal. Rptr. 508] ; (2) the signature by the accommodation party (Paragraph 4) [see Com. Code § 3419(a)-(c); Official Comments 1, 2 to U.C.C. § 3-419 (1990)]; and (3) default and demand for payment note at maturity and the fact that the note remains unpaid (Paragraph 5) [see Com. Code §§ 3501, 3502(a); see also § 385.90 (demand is usually prerequisite to award pursuant to attorney's fees provision in note); Flojo Internat., Inc. v. Lassleben (1992) 4 Cal. App. 4th 713, 721-722, 6 Cal. Rptr. 2d 99 (payee assigned note to guarantor after payment; guarantor entitled to enforce note against maker in accordance with its terms, including increased interest rate after default and attorney's fee provision)].

Counsel may wish to substitute, in whole or in part, allegations from §§ 385.91-385.96, 385.98, 385.99 regarding terms of the note or default and presentment or demand.

[4] U.C.C. Comment on Accommodation Parties

Former Division 3 was confusing because the obligation of a guarantor was covered in both U.C.C. §§ 3-415 and 3-416. The latter section suggested that a signature accompanied by words of guaranty created an obligation distinct from that of an accommodation party. Revised Division 3 eliminates that confusion by stating in Section 3-419 the obligation of a person who uses words of guaranty. Portions of former Section 3-416 are preserved: Section 3-416(2) is reflected in U.C.C. § 3-419(d), and former Section 3-416(4) is reflected in U.C.C. § 3-419(c) [Official Comment 4 to U.C.C. § 3-419 (1990)].

U.C.C. § 3-419(b) states that an accommodation party is liable on the instrument in the capacity in which the party signed the instrument. In most cases, that will be either that of a maker or endorser. But subsection (d) provides a limitation on subsection (b). If the signature of the accommodation party is accompanied by words indicating unambiguously that the party is guaranteeing collection rather than payment of the instrument,liability is limited to that stated in subsection (d), which is based on former Section 3-416(2) [Official Comment 4 to U.C.C. § 3-419 (1990)].

Whether a person is an accommodation party is a question of fact, but it is almost always the case that a comaker who signs with words of guaranty after the signature is an accommodation party. Under U.C.C. § 3-419(c), signing with words of guaranty or as an anomalous endorser also creates a presumption that the signer is an accommodation party [Official Comment 3 to U.C.C. § 3-419 (1990)].

An accommodation party may sign the instrument at the time value is obtained by the accommodated party or later [Official Comment 1 to U.C.C. § 3-419 (1990)]. It does not matter whether the accommodation party signs gratuitously at the time the instrument is issued or after the instrument is in the possession of a holder. U.C.C. § 3-319(b) takes the view that there need be no consideration running to the accommodation party and is intended to change ocassional decisions holding that there is no sufficient consideration when the accommodation party signs a note after it is in the hands of a holder who has givein value. Such an accommodation party is liable to the holder even though there is no extension or time or other concession [Official Comment 2 to U.C.C. § 3-419 (1990)].

[5] State Statutes

Contract of accommodation party. Com. Code § 3419

[Caption. See § 385.90[1].]

Plaintiff alleges:

1. [Capacity and residence of defendant. See § 385.90[1], Paragraph 1.]

[2. Fictitious name allegation, if appropriate. See § 385.90[1], Paragraph 2.]

3. A copy of the note[, both front and back,] is attached hereto as Exhibit A and made a part hereof.

4. By the terms of this note, defendant promised to pay _____ [name of payee] or order $_____, _____ [describe terms of payment, e.g., on presentation to Bank at its main office in Los Angeles, California, on June 30, 1995, and interest on that amount from the date of the note at the rate of _____ percent per annum].

5. On _____ [date], for valuable consideration, _____ [name of payee] endorsed the note in blank and delivered it to plaintiff, who continues in possession of it.

6. [On or about _____(date), plaintiff demanded that defendant pay the note _____ (describe demand, e.g., by presenting the note to Bank for payment), but] [N]o part of this note has been paid, and there is now due, owing, and unpaid on account of the note the sum of $_____, principal, together with interest thereon [at the rate of _____ percent per annum from _____ (date)].

[2] Use of Form

The foregoing complaint is a general form for use in an action by an endorsee, who may or may not qualify as a holder in due course [see Com. Code § 3302], against the maker on default of the payment due on apromissory note. The foregoing form alleges a blank endorsement (Paragraph 5) [see Com. Code § 3205(b) (endorsement in blank as making instrument payable to bearer)]. If a special endorsement was used, counsel may substitute allegations from § 385.105 or 385.106.

If the endorsement was an "anomalous endorsement," such as one made before issuance and delivery of the note, or if the purpose of the endorsement was not clear, the most likely effect is that the endorser is an accommodation party and liable as an endorser [Com. Code §§ 3204(a), 3205(d), 3419(a)-(c); see § 385.102].

[3] Allegations

Older cases hold a complaint sufficient to state a cause of action by a holder of a promissory note if it alleges that (1) at the time the note was made, it was delivered to the payee (Paragraph 3); (2) the payee endorsed the note in blank (Paragraph 5); and (3) the plaintiff was in possession of it (Paragraph 5) [see, e.g., Eames v. Crosier (1894) 101 Cal. 260, 261-262, 35 P. 873] . The following additional allegations, however, seem necessary or appropriate under the Commercial Code: (4) the note was issued for consideration (Paragraph 3) [see Com. Code §§ 3303 (value and consideration), 3305(a) (b) (defenses); see also FPI Development, Inc. v. Nakashima (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 367, 383, 282 Cal. Rptr. 508 (in simple action on note, allegation of execution of note alleges existence of contract, incorporation of copy of note alleges its terms, and allegation of nonpayment in accordance with those terms alleges breach)]; (5) plaintiff gave value when the original payee transferred the note to plaintiff (Paragraph 5) [see Com. Code § 3302(a)(2)(A) (holder in due course as one who, among other things, took for value)]; and (6) any necessary presentment or demand for payment was made (Paragraph 6) [see Com. Code § 3502(a)]. Demand for payment before commencement of suit is generally necessary to recover attorney's fees in accordance with a provision therefor in the note [see § 385.90].

For alternative allegations regarding terms of the note and types of defaults, see §§ 385.90 -385.93, 385.95, 385.96, 385.98, 385.99.

[2] Use of Form

The foregoing complaint is for use in an action by an endorsee against the maker and the payee/endorser to recover the amount due on default of the promissory note [see Com. Code § 3415(a)-(c)(endorser's liability on note)]. The obligation of an endorser is owed to a person entitled to enforce the instrument or to a subsequent endorser who paid the instrument under Com. Code § 3415 [Com. Code § 3415(a)]. The latter situation is addressed in § 385.107.

[3] Allegations

Paragraphs 1-6 of the foregoing form contain the same allegations as those in § 385.104 (endorsee against maker), except that Paragraph 5 of this form offers alternative allegations regarding the type of endorsement [Com. Code § 3205(a), (b)]. The only additional allegations in the foregoing form of complaint are (1) that the endorser was given notice of dishonor (Paragraph 7) [see Com. Code §§ 3415(c), 3503(a) (if notice of dishonor is required under Com. Code § 3503, it must be given to endorser or endorser's liability is discharged)] and (2) that, after that notice of dishonor, the endorser still has not paid the note (Paragraph 8). The allegations regarding demand for payment are optional (Paragraphs 6, 8) because it may or may not be necessary, depending on the type and terms of the note [see Com. Code §§ 3501, 3502(a); but see § 385.90 (demand generally necessary for attorney's fee award)].

[2] Use of Form

The foregoing form of complaint is for use in an action by a remote endorsee against the maker on default of payment due on a promissory note.

[3] Allegations

The foregoing form contains the same allegations as those in § 385.104 with the addition of another endorsement, a special endorsement (Paragraph 5). A special endorsement is one made by a holder of an instrument, whether that instrument is payable to an identified person or to bearer, that identifies the person to whom it makes the instrument payable. Once specially endorsed, the instrument becomes payable to that identified person and requires that person's endorsement for negotiation (Paragraph 6) [Com. Code § 3205(a); see also Com. Code § 3110 (determining to whom instrument is payable)].

5. On or about _____ [date], for valuable consideration, defendant _____ [name of payee] endorsed and delivered the note to plaintiff.

6. Thereafter and before maturity of the note, for valuable consideration, plaintiff endorsed and delivered the note to _____ [name of second endorsee].

7. On or about _____ [date], the note was presented to defendant _____ [name of maker] for payment but that defendant refused and continues to refuse to pay the note.

8. On or about _____ [date], notice of dishonor was given to [plaintiff and] defendant _____ [name of payee/initial endorser].

9. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff paid _____ [name of second endorsee], holder and owner of the note, $_____, principal, and $_____, interest, then due on the note.

10. Thereafter, plaintiff notified defendants that he/she/it had paid the note to the holder.

11. No part of the note has been paid by defendants, or by either of them, and there is now due, owing, and unpaid on account of the note the sum of $_____, principal, and interest on that amount from the date of the note at the rate of _____ percent per annum.

[2] Use of Form

The foregoing complaint is for use in an action by an endorsee, who subsequently endorsed and transferred the note and paid it at maturity to the subsequent endorsee, to recover the sums paid plus interest from the maker and payee/initial endorser [see Com. Code § 3415(a)-(c) (endorser's liability on note)]. The obligation of an endorser is owed to a person entitled to enforce the instrument or to a subsequent endorser who paid the instrument under Com. Code § 3415 [Com. Code § 3415(a)]. The former situation is addressed in § 385.105.

[3] Allegations

The foregoing form of complaint alleges (1) the issuance and terms of the note (Paragraphs 3, 4) [for alternative allegations of terms, see §§ 385.90 -385.93, 385.95, 385.96, 385.98, 385.99]; (2) endorsement and transfer to plaintiff (Paragraph 5) [Com. Code § 3502]; (3) plaintiff's subsequent endorsement and transfer to another (Paragraph 6) [Com. Code § 3502; for more specific allegations of blank and special endorsements, see §§ 385.104 -385.106]; (4) presentation of the note to defendant maker for payment and nonpayment (Paragraph 7) [see Com. Code §§ 3501(a), 3502(a) (demand for payment may or may not be necessary, depending on terms of note); but see § 385.90 (demand generally necessary for attorney's fees award)]; (5) that the payee/initial endorser was given notice of dishonor (Paragraph 8) [Com. Code § 3503(a)]; (6) that plaintiff paid the subsequent holder and the amount of payment (Paragraph 9); (7) that plaintiff notified both defendants of the payment (Paragraph 10); but (8) that defendant's have not reimbursed plaintiff and the amount owing (Paragraph 11).

[2] Use of Form

The foregoing complaint is for use in an action by an endorsee against the maker and payee/endorser on default of payment on a promissory note when presentment and/or notice of dishonor have been excused or waived because either (1) the endorser waived presentment and notice of dishonor (first and second alternative Paragraphs 6) [see Com. Code § 3504(a)(4) (endorser whose obligation is being enforced waived presentment), (b) (party whose obligation is being enforced waived notice of dishonor; waiver of presentment as also waiver of notice of dishonor)] or (2) the person entitled to make presentment cannot with reasonable diligence make presentment (third alternative Paragraph 6) [Com. Code § 3504(a)(1)].

There are other instances in which presentment is excused, the most common being when it is not necessary under the terms of the note [Com. Code § 3504(a)(3); see also discussion in see § 385.32[3], Official Comments to U.C.C. § 3-502 (1990); but see § 385.90 (demand generally necessary for attorney's fees award)].

Except for the allegations relating to waiver or excuse of presentment, the foregoing form contains the same basic allegations of issuance, delivery, and endorsement used in §§ 385.104 and 385.105. For alternative allegations regarding terms of the note and types of defaults, see §§ 385.90 -385.93, 385.95, 385.96, 385.98, 385.99.

[2] Use of Form

The foregoing complaint is for use in an action by an endorsee against the maker and payee on default of payment on a promissory note when the payee transferred the note by delivery alone and subsequently endorsed it on plaintiff's request as required by Com. Code § 3203(c).

Except for the allegations relating to transfer without endorsement (Paragraph 5) [Com. Code § 3203(c)], plaintiff's request for endorsement, and defendant payee's endorsement (Paragraph 6) [Com. Code § 3203(c)], the foregoing form contains the same basic allegations of issuance, delivery, presentment, notice of dishonor, and nonpayment used in §§ 385.104 and 385.105. For alternative allegations regarding terms of the note, see §§ 385.90 -385.93, 385.95, 385.96, 385.98, 385.99. Presentment to defendant maker may or may not be necessary, depending on the terms of the note, but demand before instituting suit is generally necessary to support the award of attorney's fees under a provision in the note [see Com. Code § 3502; § 385.90].

PART IV. FORMS

33-385 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 385.110

§ 385.110 Affirmative Defense [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)]--Tender of Amount Due on Note [Civ. Code § 1500 Code Civ. Proc. § 2074 Com. Code § 3603]

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)]--Tender of Amount Due on Note [Civ. Code § 1500 Code Civ. Proc. § 2074 Com. Code § 3603]

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state: TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges the following:

1. On or about _____ [date], and prior to the commencement of this action, defendant _____ [describe how tender was made, e.g., offered in writing to pay plaintiff at _____ (city), _____ County, California, $_____] in full payment and satisfaction of the note that is the subject of this action. [That offer was accompanied by delivery to plaintiff of defendant's check number 527 in the amount of $_____, which check has never been presented for payment.]

[2. Defendant was ready and able to pay that amount on the date it was due at every place of payment provided for in the note.]

3. Plaintiff refused and continues to refuse to accept the payment so tendered [but has not made any objections to the tender].

4. On or about _____ [date], defendant deposited to the credit of plaintiff in _____ [specify name, and type of entity where deposit was made, e.g., Big Bank, a national trust and savings association], located at _____ [city], California, the sum of $_____ in accordance with Civil Code Section 1500.

5. On _____ [date], defendant notified plaintiff in writing of the deposit by _____ [specify method of delivery of notice, e.g., certified mail, return receipt requested] to _____ [state place to which notice was delivered]. A copy of the notice is attached hereto as Exhibit 1 and made a part hereof.

[2] Use of Form

The foregoing affirmative defense based on defendant's tender of the amount due on a note is for use by the defendant in an action brought by the holder of a promissory note alleging default of payment due. Com. Code § 3603(a) provides that the effect of tender is governed by principles of law applicable to payment under a simple contract, which are set forth in Civ. Code §§ 1485-1495, 1500, 1504 and Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2074, 2076.

[3] Allegations

Paragraph 1 alleges the tender or offer of payment [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2074 (offer in writing to pay sum of money, if not accepted, as equivalentto actual production and tender of money); see also Com. Code § 3310(b)(1)(discussed in the Introduction § 385.45[2]]).

Optional Paragraph 2 is for use when presentment is required with respect to the instrument [see Com. Code § 3603(c) (discussed in the Introduction under--Tender of Payment, above); see also Com. Code § 3603(b) (tender, if refused, discharges obligation of endorser or accommodation party who has right of recourse)]. Tender discharges the obligation to pay interest after the due date on the amount tendered [Com. Code § 3603(c); see Civ. Code § 1504].

Civ. Code § 1500 provides that an obligation for the payment of money is extinguished by an offer of payment if the amount is immediately deposited in the name of the creditor with a bank or savings and loan association in California in good repute and the creditor is notified of the deposit (Paragraphs 5, 6).

[4] Discharge and Holders in Due Course

Discharge, by tender or otherwise, is not effective against a person acquiring the rights of a holder in due course of the instrument without notice of the discharge [Com. Code § 3601(b)]. Notice of discharge is not treated as a defense that prevents holder in due course status. Discharge is effective against a holder in due course only if the holder had notice of the discharge when he, she, or it acquired holder in due course status. For example, if an instrument bearing a canceled endorsement is taken by a holder, the holder has notice that the endorser has been discharged. In that example, the discharge is effective against the holder even if the holder is a holder in due course [Official Comment to U.C.C. § 3-601 (1990)].

§ 385.111 Affirmative Defense [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)]--Note Not Properly Presented for Payment [Com. Code § 3502(a)(2)]

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)]--Note Not Properly Presented for Payment [Com. Code § 3502(a)(2)]

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state: TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges the following:

1. By the terms of the promissory note set forth in plaintiff's complaint, the note was payable _____ [at or through] _____ [state where presentment to be made, e.g., the Bank of _____ (name)], _____ [city], _____ County, California, on _____ [date].

2. The note was not presented for payment at _____ [state where presentment to be made, e.g., that bank] according to its terms.

3. On _____ [date], the date on which the note was payable, defendant had funds available at _____ [state where presentment to be made, e.g., the bank] for the purpose of paying the note and was ready, willing, and able to pay the note.

[2] Use of Form

The foregoing affirmative defense, based on plaintiff's failure to present the note for payment in accordance with its terms, is for use by the defendant in an action brought by the holder of a promissory note alleging default of payment due [see Com. Code § 3502(a)(2)]. The form is for use only when the note is not payable on demand and is payable at or through a bank or the terms of the note require presentment [Com. Code § 3502(a)(2)]. It does not address "improper" presentment arising from an obligee's failure to comply with any of the obligor's prerogatives set forth in Com. Code § 3501(b) (discussed in § 385.30[2]).

In the great majority of cases, presentment of the note is waived and formal demand is not contemplated. Rather, the maker is expected to send payment to the holder when it is due. If payment is note made when due, the holder usually makes demand for payment [Official Comment 2 to U.C.C. § 3-502 (1990)].

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)]--Satisfaction and Discharge of Note [Com. Code § 3603] Through Payment

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state: TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges the following:

1. On or about _____ [date], _____ [name, e.g., defendant] discharged the obligation that is the basis of this action by paying _____ [name and status of entity paid, e.g., John Doe, holder of the note described in the complaint on file herein] all sums then owing on the note.

[EITHER]

2. At the time _____ [name, e.g., defendant] paid _____ [name entity paid, e.g., John Doe], he/she/it believed him/her/it to be the true owner of the note, had no knowledge that any other person or entity claimed the note, and had no knowledge that the note was stolen or that holder was in wrongful possession of the note.

[OR]

2. At the time _____ [name, e.g., defendant] paid _____ [name entity paid, e.g., John Doe], he/she/it knew of _____ [identify claimant, e.g., plaintiff's] claim to the note, but had not then, and never has, accepted any indemnity from _____ [plaintiff or that claimant] against any loss resulting from refusal to pay the note.

3. At the time _____ [name, e.g., defendant] paid _____ [name entity paid, e.g., John Doe], he/she/it did not know of any injunction or other court order prohibiting payment of the note.

[2] Use of Form

The foregoing affirmative defense based on the payment of the note is for use by the defendant in an action brought by the payee or holder of a promissory note alleging default of payment due [see Com. Code § 3602 (discussed in the Introduction under--Payment, above)]. This defense is not effective against a person who acquired rights of a holder in due course of the instrument without knowledge of the discharge [Com. Code § 3601(b)]. A holder who acquired the note with knowledge of the payment would not be a holder in due course [see Com. Code § 3302; see also § 385.110].

If payment is by check, the underlying obligation is not discharged until the check itself is paid [Com. Code § 3310(b); Cornwell v. Bank of America(1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 995, 1000-1001, 274 Cal. Rptr. 322] . Thus, counsel may wish to add an additional allegation that the check has been negotiated by the creditor and paid [but see Civ. Code § 1476 (if creditor directs particular manner of performance, risk of loss in mail would be on creditor)].

[3] State Statutes

Performance by or for obligor as extinguishing obligation. Civ. Code § 1473

If creditor directs debtor to perform obligation in particular manner, obligation as extinguished by performance in that manner, even though creditor does not receive benefit of that performance. Civ. Code § 1476

§ 385.113 Affirmative Defense [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)]--Extension of Maturity Through Execution of Renewal Note

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)]--Extension of Maturity Through Execution of Renewal Note

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state: TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges the following:

1. The note set forth in the complaint herein was by its terms payable on _____ [date].

2. On that date, defendant made, executed, and delivered to plaintiff a renewal note by which he/she/it promised and agreed to pay to plaintiff the sum of $_____, _____ [set forth relevant terms of renewal note, e.g., two years from the date of the note, with interest payable quarterly at the (increased) rate of _____ percent per annum]. [At the same time, defendant paid to plaintiff the sum of $_____, which was the interest then due on the note set forth in the complaint herein.] [A copy of the renewal note is attached hereto as Exhibit 1 and made a part hereof.]

3. Plaintiff accepted this renewal note and interest as payment for the [principal] amount owed on the note set forth in the complaint herein and as an extension of credit represented by that note.

4. The renewal note is not yet due and payable.

[2] Use of Form

The foregoing affirmative defense based on the extension of the maturity date of the note by execution of a renewal note is for use by the maker in an action brought by the payee or holder of a promissory note alleging default of payment due [see Civ. Code § 1530 (novation)]. This defense is not effective against a person who acquired rights of a holder in due course of the instrument without knowledge of the discharge [Com. Code § 3601(b); see also § 385.110].

[3] Effect on Endorser or Accommodation Party

An extension of the due date discharges an endorser or accommodation party who has a right of recourse against the party whose obligation is extended to the extent the endorser or accommodation party proves that the extension caused it loss with respect to the right of recourse [Com. Code § 3605(c); see also Com. Code § 3605(i) (consent or waiver)]. Thus, the foregoing form can be modified for use by an endorser or accommodation party with a right of recourse by (1) modifying the allegations to make clear that the renewal note was executed by the maker without the concurrence or consent of the endorser or accommodation party, (2) deleting Paragraph 4, (3) adding an allegation regarding the right of recourse [see Com. Code § 3419(e)], and (4) adding an allegation that the extension caused the endorser's or accommodation party's loss, most likely by deterioration of the maker's financial condition during the period of the extension so that the value of the right of recourse was reduced [see Official Comment 4 to U.C.C. § 3-605 (1990)].

If the renewal note constitutes more than extension of the due date and amounts to a material modification of the obligation, the modification discharges the obligation of an endorser or accommodation party having a right of recourse against the person whose obligation is modified to the extent the modification causes loss to the endorser or accommodation party with respect to the right of recourse. In this case, however, the amount of the loss is deemed equal to the amount of the right of recourse unless the party seeking to enforce the instrument proves that it was less [Com. Code § 3605(d); see Official Comment 5 to U.C.C. § 3-605 (1990)].

33-385 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 385.114

§ 385.114 Affirmative Defense [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)]--Alteration of Note [Com. Code §§ 3302(a)(2)(D), 3305(a)(2), (b), 3407]

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)]--Alteration of Note [Com. Code §§ 3302(a)(2)(D), 3305(a)(2), (b), 3407]

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state: TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges the following:

1. After the execution and delivery of the note mentioned in plaintiff's complaint and before the commencement of the above-entitled action, the note was fraudulently altered by _____ [specify the nature of alteration, e.g., changing the maturity date from _____ (date) to _____ (date) or changing the principal amount due from $_____ to $_____ or erasing or otherwise deleting the name of _____ (name) as comaker or changing the place of payment from _____ (city), _____ County, California, to _____(city), _____ County, California].

2. The foregoing material alteration of the note was without the knowledge or consent of defendant.

[2] Use of Form

The foregoing affirmative defense based on an alteration of the obligation contained in a note is for use by the defendant in an action brought by the holder of a promissory note alleging default of payment due [Com. Code § 3407; see also Com. Code § 3406 (preclusions, comparative negligence)]. This defense may not be maintained against a person who took the note for value, in good faith, and without knowledge of the alteration [see Com. Code § 3305(a)(2), (b)]. Nor can it be asserted by a person whose want of ordinary care contributed to the alteration against a person who, in good faith, paid the instrument or took it for value [Com. Code § 3406(a); for discussion of burdens of proof regarding preclusion, see § 385.43[2]]. A holder who took the note for value in good faith and without notice of the alteration may enforce the note according to its original terms or, in the case of an incomplete instrument altered by an unauthorized completion, according to its terms as completed [Com. Code § 3407(c)]. The defense can be asserted against a holder who knows of the alteration or claim of alteration at the time he or she became the holder [see Com. Code § 3302(a)(2)(D); for a form of affirmative defense based on holder's knowledge of any infirmity, see § 385.128].

This is a personal defense of the party whose obligation is modified, and anyone whose obligation is not affected is not discharged. But, if an alteration discharges a party, any party who has a right of recourse against that party is also discharged, because the obligation of the party with the right of recourse is affected by the alteration [Official Comment 1 to U.C.C. § 3-407 (1990)].

Assent to the alteration given before or after it is made will prevent a party from asserting the discharge (Paragraph 2). The phrase "or is precluded from asserting the alteration" in Com. Code § 3407(b) recognizes the possibility of an estoppel or other ground barring the defense that does not arise from assent [Official Comment 1 to U.C.C. § 3-407 (1990)].

If blanks are filled or an incomplete instrument is otherwise completed, the loss is on the party who left the instrument incomplete and the instrument may be enforced in its completed form. This result is intended even though the instrument was stolen from the issuer and completed after the theft [Official Comment 2 to U.C.C. § 3-407 (1990)].

The word "material" was dropped from the current version of Com. Code § 3407; and the type of alteration addressed is one that changes the contract of the parties in any respect. As under the former version of the statute, the alteration must be fraudulently made. Thus, there is no discharge if a blank is filled in the honest belief that it is authorized or if a change is made with a benevolent motive, such as the desire to give the obligor the benefit of a lower interest rate. Changes favorable to the obligor are unlikely to be made with any fraudulent intent, but if such an intent is found, the alteration may operate as a discharge [Official Comment 1 to U.C.C. § 3-407 (1990)].

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state: TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges that the _____ [specify instrument, e.g., note] was made, executed, and delivered pursuant to a [written] agreement between plaintiff and _____ [specify, e.g., defendant] that was and is contrary to law [and public policy], in that _____ [specify portions of agreement contrary to public policy, e.g., the agreement provided that defendant would issue the note as payment for construction of a residence by _____(name), a person not licensed as a contractor, as required by Business and Professions Code Section 7031].

[2] Use of Form

The foregoing affirmative defense--that the note in question was given pursuant to an illegal agreement--is for use by the defendant in an action brought by the holder of a promissory note alleging default of payment due [see Civ. Code § 1689(b)(6); Com. Code § 3305(a)(1)(B), (b)].

The defense that an instrument was issued as part of an illegal transaction, if the illegality is sufficient under applicable local law to nullify the obligation of the obligor, is a "real" defense, which thus may be asserted against a holder in due course [Com. Code § 3305(a)(1)(B), (b); see also § 385.116]. The effect of the illegality is a matter of local law. Usury and gambling are types of illegality most frequently asserted under Com. Code § 3305(a)(1)(B). If, under the applicable local law, the effect of the illegality is to make the obligation entirely null and void, the defense may be asserted against a holder in due course. Otherwise, it is cut off [Official Comment 1 to U.C.C. § 3-305 (1990)].

Plaintiff knew that prudent business practice and ordinary care required that plaintiff not release its security interest in, and that defendant not relinquish his/her title to, the vehicle until _____'s (name of purchaser) check had cleared. Nevertheless, without verifying that the check tendered by _____ (name of purchaser) was drawn on sufficient funds, plaintiff instructed defendant to relinquish title to the vehicle by signing off on the "pink slip" and releasing it to _____(name of purchaser). Defendant acquiesced in plaintiff's instructions, signed off on the "pink slip," and turned it over to _____ (name of purchaser) because he/she believed that plaintiff had verified that the check was good and that by complying with plaintiff's instructions, he/she would be released from liability on the note.]

[2] Use of Form

The foregoing form of affirmative defense based on equitable estoppel (sometimes called estoppel in pais or estoppel by conduct) is for use by a defendant in answer to a payee's complaint to collect on a promissory note after the defendant has taken action as instructed by the payee and that the payee, actually or impliedly, represented would fully discharge the defendant from liability on the note [see Civ. Code § 1476 (obligation extinguished by performance in accordance with creditor's instruction)].

The required elements of the defense are (1) a representation or concealment of material facts, (2) made with knowledge, actual or virtual, of the facts, (3) to a party ignorant, actually and permissibly, of the truth, (4) with the intent, actual or virtual, that the latter act on it, and (5) that defendant was induced to rely on it [Evid. Code § 623; see San Diego Credit Union v. Smith (1986) 176 Cal. App. 3d 919, 922-923, 222 Cal. Rptr. 467] .

[3] State Statutes

Party who has, by statement or conduct, intentionally and deliberately led another to believe particular thing to be true and to act on such belief as not allowed in any litigation arising out of such statement or conduct to contradict it. Evid. Code § 623

[4] Decisions

Once party has gained advantage on basis of specific representations, it is not thereafter permitted to disavow its previous representations. Alling v. Universal Manufacturing Corp. (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 1412, 1442, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 718 (applying doctrine to bar proof under licensing agreement after plaintiffs had represented to court and defendant that they were only pursuing claims under purchase agreement)

Elements of doctrine of equitable estoppel; doctrine not applicable if one element (here reliance on sign posted where lottery ticket was purchased) is missing. Hair v. State of California (1991) 2 Cal. App. 4th 321, 328-329, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 871

Estoppel [see Evid. Code § 623] as requiring reliance and detriment; reliance may be unreasonable as matter of law when particular agreement provides that it will not affect matter with respect to which plaintiff alleges reliance. Aragon-Haas v. Family Security Ins. Services, Inc. (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 232, 241, 282 Cal. Rptr. 233 (wrongful termination action; employee stock purchase agreement provided that it would not affect status or terms of employer-employee or independent contractor relationship)

Equitable estoppel as not available to bar collection of prepayment penalty when collection agent mistakenly accepted payoff from maker's agent without penalty and maker's agent knew of clear penalty language in note. Sanguansak v. Myers (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 110, 117-118, 223 Cal. Rptr. 490

Payee as equitably estopped under Evid. Code § 623 from asserting maker's liability on note after maker did what payee instructed him to do in response to maker's request that payee accept third-party payoff and relinquish its security interest. San Diego Credit Union v. Smith (1986) 176 Cal. App. 3d 919, 922-923, 222 Cal. Rptr. 467

Civ. Code § 1606, which provides that moral obligation may be sufficient consideration, as not applicable to revive obligation that payee is equitably estopped from asserting; thus, extension agreement not binding on maker. San Diego Credit Union v. Smith (1986) 176 Cal. App. 3d 919, 923-924, 222 Cal. Rptr. 467

§ 385.119 Notice From Payee to Drawer Regarding Potential Liability of Maker for Treble Damages [Civ. Code § 1719(a), (c)]

[1] FORM Notice From Payee to Drawer Regarding Potential Liability of Maker for Treble Damages [Civ. Code § 1719(a), (c)]

TO: _____ [name of drawer]

_____ [Name of payee] is the payee of a check you wrote for $_____. The check was not paid because you stopped payment, and the payee demands payment. You may have a good faith dispute as to whether you owe the full amount. If you do not have a good faith dispute with the payee and fail to pay the payee the full amount of the check in cash, a service charge of an amount not to exceed $25 for the first check passed on insufficient funds and an amount not to exceed $35 for each subsequent check passed on insufficient funds, and the costs to mail this notice within 30 days after this notice was mailed, you could be sued and held responsible to pay at least both of the following:

(1) The amount of the check.

(2) Damages of at least $100 or, if higher, three times the amount of the check up to $1,500.

(3) The cost of mailing this notice.

If the court determines that you do have a good faith dispute with the payee, you will not have to pay the service charge, treble damages, or mailing cost mentioned above. If you stopped payment because you think you have a good faith dispute with the payee, you should try to work out your dispute with the payee. You can contact the payee at:

_____ [name of payee]

_____ [street address]

_____ [telephone number].

You may wish to contact a lawyer to discuss your legal rights and responsibilities.

_____ [name of sender of notice]

[2] Use of Form

This form is the statutory notice set forth in Civ. Code § 1719(c). It, or a substantially similar notice, must be sent to the payee at least 30 days prior to the commencement of suit if the maker wishes to recover damages under Civ. Code § 1719 against a payee who has stopped payment on a check [Civ. Code § 1719(c); see § 385.120 (complaint for use in such an action)].

In cases other than those involving stop payments, this notice may be modified to constitute the demand required by Civ. Code § 1719(a). In that case, the statement in the second sentence of the form giving the reason that payment was not made should be replaced with the actual reason, that is, lack of funds or the fact that maker has no account with the drawee [see Civ. Code § 1719(a)(6)].

[3] Rights of Assignee

The assignee of the payee or a holder of the check may demand, recover, or enforce the service charge, damages, and costs specified in Civ. Code § 1719 to the same extent as the original payee [Civ. Code § 1719(i)]. A drawer is liable for damages and costs only if all of the requirements of that section have been satisfied. Furthermore, the drawer will not be liable more than once under that section on each check for a service charge, damages, or costs [Civ. Code § 1719(j)].

[4] Service Charge

Notwithstanding any penal sanctions that may apply, any person who passes a check on insufficient funds will be liable to the payee for the amount of the check and a service charge payable to the payee of not more than $25 for the first check passed on insufficient funds and not more than $35 for each subsequent check passed on insufficient funds [Civ. Code § 1719(a)(1)]. However, a person will not be liable for the service charge if, at any time, he or she presents the payee with written confirmation by his or her financial institution that the check was returned to the payee by the financial institution due to an error on its part. Furthermore, a person will not be liable for the service charge if he or she presents the payee with written confirmation that his or her account had insufficient funds as a result of a delay in the regularly scheduled transfer of, or the posting of, a direct deposit of a social security or government benefit assistance payment [Civ. Code § 1719(a)(4), (5)].

If a person becomes liable for treble damages for a check that is the subject of a written demand [see § 385.120[4]], that person will no longer be liable for any service charge for that check or for any costs to mail the written demand [Civ. Code § 1719(a)(2); Imperial Merchant Servs., Inc. v. Hunt (2009) 47 Cal. 4th 381, 386-387, 97 Cal. Rptr. 3d 464, 212 P.3d 736].

[5] Copy and Certified Mail Receipt

The notice and demand must be sent to the maker by certified mail [Civ. Code § 1719(a)(2)], unless the payee is the court. In that case, written demand for payment may be mailed to the drawer by the court clerk [Civ. Code § 1719(g)].

In the case of a stop payment, a court may not award damages or costs under Civ. Code § 1719 unless a copy of this notice and a signed certified mail receipt showing delivery, or, if refused, attempted delivery, of the notice to the drawer's last known address are received into evidence [Civ. Code § 1719(d)]. In the case of a stop payment when the demand is mailed by the court clerk, however, the court may not award damages or costs under Civ. Code § 1719(d), unless the court receives into evidence a copy of the written demand and a certificate of mailing by the court clerk in the form provided by statute for service in civil actions [Civ. Code § 1719(g); see Code Civ. Proc. § 1013a(service in civil actions)]. The requirements of Civ. Code § 1719 with regard to remedies are mandatory on the court [Civ. Code § 1719(h)].

[1] FORM Complaint for Money Due on Dishonor of Check [Civ. Code §§ 1719, 3302]--By Payee Against Drawer [Com. Code § 3414(b)]

[Caption. See § 385.90[1].]

Plaintiff alleges:

1. [Capacity and residence of defendant. See § 385.90[1], Paragraph 1.]

2. [Fictitious name allegation, if appropriate. See § 385.90[1], Paragraph 2.]

3. On or about _____ [date], defendant, for valuable consideration, issued and delivered to plaintiff his/her/its check, number _____, dated _____, and [purportedly] drawn on _____ [name of drawee], at its branch located at _____ [address of office on which drawn, city], _____ County, California, and payable to the order of _____ [plaintiff or _____ (name), plaintiff's assignor,] in the amount of $_____. A copy of the check, front and back, is attached as Exhibit A and incorporated by reference.

4. [If desired or necessary, describe plaintiff's collection attempts, e.g., On or about _____ (date), plaintiff endorsed the check for collection and deposited the check to his/her/its account at First Bank.] On or about _____ [date], the check was presented to the drawee for payment but was not paid. [It was returned by the drawee (on which it was purportedly drawn) with the notation that _____ (there were not sufficient funds for payment or defendant did not have an account with drawee or defendant had instructed the drawee to stop payment on the check).]

5. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff made written demand of defendant to pay the

$_____ [in accordance with the requirements of Civil Code Section 1719, informing him/her/it of the provisions of that section. The demand and notice were sent by certified mail at a cost to plaintiff of $_____. (Copies of the demand and notice and the signed certified mail receipt showing delivery to defendant's address are attached to this complaint as Exhibits B and C, respectively, and made parts hereof.)]

[6. Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that defendant stopped payment on the check without any reasonable belief that he/she/it was legally entitled to do so because _____ (describe circumstances indicating nonexistence of bona fide dispute, e.g., even though plaintiff wrote and called defendant to see if this dispute could be resolved, defendant never said there was any problem with the goods for which the check was payment and has never asked plaintiff to exchange or to repair them. Defendant said only that he/she decided after delivering the check that he/she could not afford the purchase, although he/she has refused to return the goods).]

[7. Plaintiff made a reasonable effort to reconcile and resolve this dispute prior to instituting this action. In addition to sending the notice required by Civil Code Section 1719, which advised defendant to try to work out our dispute and how to contact plaintiff, plaintiff _____ (describe other attempts to resolve dispute, e.g., telephoned defendant several times over the course of a two-week period and sent a letter asking defendant to contact plaintiff to discuss any dissatisfaction with the goods for which the check was payment or to establish a payment plan for the amount of the check. Defendant refused to speak on the telephone to plaintiff and never responded to plaintiff's letter).]

8. Defendant has not paid the check or any part thereof, and there is now due, owing, and unpaid from defendant to plaintiff the sum of $_____.

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment against defendant as follows:

1. For the [principal] sum of $_____;

2. For interest on the [principal] sum of $_____ from _____ [date];

[3. For $1,500 plus the costs of mailing demand by certified mail pursuant to Civil Code Section 1719;]

4. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

5. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

[2] Use of Form

This complaint is for use in an action by a payee against the drawer following the dishonor of a check after the payee has made an unsuccessful demand on the drawee for payment and desires to recover the amount due [see Com. Code § 3414(b) (discussed in § 385.37[1])].

For a complaint for use after dishonor against the drawer of a check payable to bearer, see § 385.124.

[3] Allegations

This complaint alleges:

- Defendant's residence or other basis for venue (Paragraph 1).
- Defendant's issuance of the check and delivery to plaintiff or plaintiff's assignor (Paragraph 3).
- Presentment and dishonor (Paragraph 4) [see Com. Code § 3501(b)(2)(4) (discussed in § 385.30[1], [2]), 3502(b) (when unaccepted draft is dishonored); see also Com. Code § 3505(a) (evidence and presumptions of dishonor)].
- Demand for payment (Paragraph 5).
- Nonpayment (Paragraph 8).

The requirement under former Division 3 of notice of dishonor or protest has been eliminated except as a prerequisite to enforcement of an endorser's liability or in the case of dishonor after acceptance by an acceptor other than a bank [Official Comment 2 to U.C.C. § 3-414 (1990); Official Comment 1 to U.C.C. § 3-502 (1990)]. The liability of the drawer of an unaccepted draft is treated as primary liability [Official Comment 2 to U.C.C. § 3-414 (1990)]. Nevertheless, the allegation regarding demand (Paragraph 5) has been retained in the belief that it is customary and prudent and because it is required if plaintiff seeks treble damages pursuant to Civ. Code § 1719 [Civ. Code § 1719(a), (c), (d), (g); for the statutory notice set forth in Civ. Code § 1719(c), see § 385.119]. In the case of a stop payment, if delivery of the written demand was refused, a signed receipt showing attempted delivery is sufficient evidence [Civ. Code § 1719(d)], unless the demand is mailed by the court clerk. In that case, the court may not award damages or costs in accordance with Civ. Code § 1719(d) unless the court receives into evidence a copy of the written demand and a certificate of mailing by the court clerk in the form provided by statute for service in civil actions [Civ. Code § 1719(g); see Code Civ. Proc. § 1013a (service in civil actions)]. In either situation, Paragraph 5 should be modified accordingly.

Optional Paragraphs 6 and 7 and the optional allegations in Paragraphs 4 and 5 are for use if the plaintiff wishes to seek treble damages pursuant to Civ. Code § 1719, discussed in § 385.120[4].

To protect personal privacy and other legitimate interests, parties and their attorneys must not include financial account numbers, or must redact such numbers when inclusion is necessary, in all pleadings and other papers filed in the court's public file, whether filed in paper or electronic form, unless otherwise provided by law or ordered by the court [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1.20(b)].

[4] Statutory Treble Damages

[a] Nonpayment After Demand

Notwithstanding any penal sections that may apply [see, e.g., Penal Code § 476a], any person who passes a check on insufficient funds (subject to thequalifications below) will be liable to the payee for the amount of the check and a service charge payable to the payee of not more than $25 for the first check passed on insufficient funds and not more than $35 for each subsequent check passed on insufficient funds [Civ. Code § 1719(a)(1)]. However, a person will not be liable for the service charge if, at any time, he or she presents the payee with written confirmation by his or her financial institution that the check was returned to the payee by the financial institution due to an error on its part. Furthermore, a person will not be liable for the service charge if he or she presents the payee with written confirmation that his or her account had insufficient funds as a result of a delay in the regularly scheduled transfer of, or the posting of, a direct deposit of a social security or government benefit assistance payment [Civ. Code § 1719(a)(4), (5)].

Notwithstanding any penal sanctions that may apply, a person who passes a check on insufficient funds will be liable to the payee for damages equal to treble the amount of the check if a written demand for payment is mailed by certified mail to the person who passed the check. The person who passed the check has 30 days from the date the demand was mailed to pay the amount of the check, service charge, and the costs to mail the demand. If those amounts are not paid, the person who passed the check will be liable instead for the amount of the check, minus any partial payment made within 30 days of the demand, and damages equal to treble that amount, but not less than $100 or more than $1,500. When a person becomes liable for treble damages for a check that is the subject of a written demand, that person will no longer be liable for any service charge for that check and any costs to mail the written demand funds [Civ. Code § 1719(a)(2)]. As used here, "pass a check on insufficient funds" means to make, utter, draw, or deliver any check, draft, or order for the payment of money on any bank, depository, firm, or corporation that refuses to honor the check, draft, or order because (1) of lack of funds or credit in the account to pay the check, or (2) the maker does not have an account with the drawee, or (3) the maker instructed the drawee to stop payment [Civ. Code § 1719(a)(6); cf. Com. Code § 3103(a)(3), (5) (Commercial Code definitions limit "maker" to person who issues note, whereas person who issues check is "drawer")].

The written demand for payment must be sent by certified mail (see optional allegations in Paragraph 5) and must inform the maker of the provisions of Civil Code § 1719, the amount of the check, and the amount of the service charge payable to the payee [Civ. Code § 1719(a)(2)]. If the payee-plaintiff prevails under Civ. Code § 1719, treble damages are mandatory [Civ. Code § 1719(h); see Mughrabi v. Suzuki (1988) 197 Cal. App. 3d 1212, 1215-1216, 243 Cal. Rptr. 438] .

A drawer is liable for damages and costs only if all of the requirements of Civ. Code § 1719 have been satisfied. Furthermore, the drawer will not be liable more than once under that section on each check for a service charge, damages, or costs [Civ. Code § 1719(j)].

The statutory damages prescribed in Civ. Code § 1719 are exclusive in the sense that the payee or an assignee, on recovering a service charge pursuant to that section, may not also recover prejudgment interest under Civ. Code § 3287. If, after a proper demand, the service charge is not paid (together with the amount of the check and the cost of mailing the demand), and the payee or assignee sues for treble damages instead, then in that case as well, prejudgment interest may not be recovered [Imperial Merchant Servs., Inc. v. Hunt (2009) 47 Cal. 4th 381, 386-387, 97 Cal. Rptr. 3d 464, 212 P.3d 736].

In lieu of pursuing the statutory relief authorized in Civ. Code § 1719, if the check was taken as payment of an obligation, the payee or an assignee may seek damages for breach of the underlying obligation [see Com. Code § 3310(b)(3)], and in that case, prejudgment interest may be claimed [Imperial Merchant Servs., Inc. v. Hunt (2009) 47 Cal. 4th 381, 394, 97 Cal. Rptr. 3d 464, 212 P.3d 736 ; see Com. Code § 3302 (interest is recoverable)].

[b] When Drawer Has Stopped Payment

There is no cause of action under Civ. Code § 1719 if the drawer has stopped payment to resolve a good faith dispute with the payee [Civ. Code § 1719(a)(3)]. To recover under this provision when the drawer has stopped payment, the payee must prove by clear and convincing evidence both (1) that there was no good faith dispute, as defined in Civ. Code § 1719(b) (Paragraph 6) [Civ. Code § 1719(a)(3)], and (2) that he or she made a reasonable effort to reconcile and resolve the dispute prior to institutingthe action (Paragraph 7) [Civ. Code § 1719(e)]. The requirements of Civ. Code § 1719(a) and (e) appear to be inconsistent. Nevertheless, this inconsistency may be resolved if the dispute referred to in Civ. Code § 1719(e) is interpreted as the dispute about nonpayment rather than the "good faith dispute" defined in Civ. Code § 1719(b) and referred to in Civ. Code § 1719(a)(3).

If the reason for nonpayment is that payment on the check was stopped, the payee must first send notice to the maker in substantially the form set forth in Civ. Code § 1719(c) (see optional allegations in Paragraph 5) [Civ. Code § 1719(c); see Civ. Code § 1719(d), (g) (copies of notice and certified mail receipt showing delivery, or attempted delivery if refused, required as evidence in case of stop payment; copy of written demand and certificate of mailing in form required by Code Civ. Proc. § 1013a for service in civil actions required as evidence in case of stop payment when demand is by court); see also § 385.119 (form for notice)].

[c] Determining Existence of Good Faith Dispute

In the case of a stop payment, the existence of a "good faith dispute" is determined by the trier of fact. A "good faith dispute" is one in which the court finds that the maker of the check had a reasonable belief of his or her legal entitlement to withhold payment. Grounds to such an entitlement include, but are not limited to, the following: services were not rendered; goods were not delivered; goods or services purchased were faulty, not as promised, or otherwise unsatisfactory; or there was an overcharge [Civ. Code § 1719(b)].

[d] Jurisdiction and Venue

A cause of action under Civ. Code § 1719 may be brought in the small claims court by the original payee if it does not exceed the jurisdiction of that court or in any other appropriate court [Civ. Code § 1719(e)].

An action on a check is covered by Code Civ. Proc. § 395, relating to venue in contract actions [Roff v. Crenshaw (1945) 69 Cal. App. 2d 536, 538, 159 P.2d 661] .

[e] Action by Payee's Assignee

A cause of action under Civ. Code § 1719 may be brought by a holder of the check or an assignee of the payee. The proceeding is a limited civil case. If the assignee is acting on behalf of the payee for a flat fee or a percentage fee, the assignee may not charge the payee a greater flat fee or percentage fee for that portion of the amount collected that represents treble damages than is charged the payee for collecting the face amount of the check, draft, or order [Civ. Code § 1719(f)]. This restriction does not apply to an action brought in small claims court [Civ. Code § 1719(f)].

The assignee of the payee or a holder of the check may demand, recover, or enforce the service charge, damages, and costs specified in Civ. Code § 1719 to the same extent as the original payee [Civ. Code § 1719(i)].

[5] Limitation Period

An action to enforce the obligation of a party to an unaccepted draft to pay the draft must be commenced within 3 years after dishonor of the draft or within 10 years after the date of the draft, whichever period expires first [Com. Code § 3118(c)]. This reflects a change from prior law. Drawers and endorsers now are subject to a limitation period that runs from the same date [Official Comment 2 to U.C.C. § 3-118 (1990)].

[6] Decisions

In action on check under Civ. Code 1719, maker of dishonored check may raise defense under Com. Code § 3101 et seq. to establish that check is unenforceable. Cohen v. Disner (1995) 36 Cal. App. 4th 855, 857

[2] Use of Form

This complaint is for use in an action by an endorsee of a check against the drawer and the original payee/endorser after the check has been dishonored [see Com. Code §§ 3414(b) (drawer's liability), 3415 (endorser's liability)]. Plaintiff may add the optional allegations from § 385.120 and modify the prayer to seek additional damages from the drawer in accordance with Civ. Code § 1719, but plaintiff may have only one recovery.

[3] Allegations

This complaint alleges:

- The issuance of the check to defendant payee and its terms (Paragraph 3) [see Com. Code §§ 3105, 3303].

- Its endorsement and negotiation to plaintiff (Paragraph 4) [see Com. Code §§ 3202, 3204-3205].

- Plaintiff's negotiation of the check and its presentment and dishonor (Paragraph 5) [see Com. Code §§ 3501-3503].

- That the endorser was given notice of dishonor (Paragraph 6) [see Com. Code §§ 3415(c), 3503(a) (if notice of dishonor is required under Com. Code § 3503, it must be given to endorser or endorser's liability is discharged)].

- That, after the notice of dishonor, the check remains unpaid (Paragraph 7).

An endorser's liability is discharged if the check is not presented for payment or given to a depositary bank for collection within 30 days after the day the endorsement was made [Com. Code § 3415(e)]. Therefore, if more than 30 days separate the dates of endorsement alleged in Paragraph 4 and presentment alleged in Paragraph 5, counsel should insert additional allegations regarding deposit for collection within the 30-day period in Paragraph 5.

To protect personal privacy and other legitimate interests, parties and their attorneys must not include financial account numbers, or must redact such numbers when inclusion is necessary, in all pleadings and other papers filed in the court's public file, whether filed in paper or electronic form, unless otherwise provided by law or ordered by the court [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1.20(b)].

[2] Use of Form

This complaint is for use in an action by an endorsee of a check against the drawer and subsequent endorser/accommodation endorser after dishonor of the check [see Com. Code § 3419(a)-(c)]. The payee/first endorser is not a defendant. Except for that difference, the allegations in this complaint are basically the same as those in § 385.121, with the addition of allegations:

- Regarding the second endorsement (Paragraph 5) [see Com. Code §§ 3419(c) (anomalous endorsement or words of guaranty as creating presumption that party is signing as accommodation party), 3205(d) (anomalous endorsement as one made by person who is not holder of instrument)].

- That plaintiff was owner and holder of the note (Paragraph 6) [see Com. Code §§ 3109(c) (instrument payable to identified person as becoming payable to bearer if endorsed in blank), 3201(b), 3205(b), (c) (negotiation of check endorsed in blank)].

- That both prior endorsers (prior to plaintiff, who may have endorsed the check in presenting it for collection) were given notice of dishonor (Paragraph 7) [see Com. Code §§ 3415(c), 3503(a) (if notice of dishonor is required under Com. Code § 3503)].

The second endorser will be an anomalous endorser, and therefore presumed to be an accommodation endorser, whether he or she endorsed the check before or after its delivery to plaintiff [see Official Comments 1, 2 to U.C.C. § 3-419 (1990)]. Endorsement before delivery is the situation addressed in § 385.102, although that complaint is for use in an action on a note.

To protect personal privacy and other legitimate interests, parties and their attorneys must not include financial account numbers, or must redact such numbers when inclusion is necessary, in all pleadings and other papers filed in the court's public file, whether filed in paper or electronic form, unless otherwise provided by law or ordered by the court [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1.20(b)].

[2] Use of Form

This complaint is for use in an action by an endorsee of a check against the payees/endorsers after dishonor of a check payable to joint payees [see Com. Code §§ 3116, 3415]. Endorsers usually are not jointly and severally liable, but they are when an instrument is payable to two payees jointly and endorsed by both of them [Official Comment 2 to U.C.C. § 3-116 (1990)].

[3] Allegations

This complaint alleges:

- The issuance of the check to defendants as joint payees and its terms (Paragraph 3) [see Com. Code §§ 3105, 3110(d), 3303].

- Its endorsement and negotiation to plaintiff for value (Paragraph 4) [see Com. Code § 3202, 3204-3205].

- Plaintiff's negotiation of the check and its presentment and dishonor (Paragraph 5) [see Com. Code §§ 3501-3503; see also § 385.121].

- That both defendant/endorsers were given notice of dishonor (Paragraph 6) [see Com. Code §§ 3415(c), 3503(a) (if notice of dishonor is required under Com. Code § 3503, it must be given to endorser or endorser's liability is discharged)].

- That after that notice of dishonor, the check remains unpaid (Paragraph 7).

To protect personal privacy and other legitimate interests, parties and their attorneys must not include financial account numbers, or must redact such numbers when inclusion is necessary, in all pleadings and other papers filed in the court's public file, whether filed in paper or electronic form, unless otherwise provided by law or ordered by the court [*Cal. [2] Use of Form

This complaint is for use in an action by a holder against the drawer on the dishonor of a check made payable to bearer [Com. Code §§ 3109, 3201(b), 3414(b)]. Counsel may wish to add the optional allegations from § 385.120 to attempt to collect the penalty and costs authorized by Civ.Code § 1719. It is not clear, however, that the holder of a check payable to bearer is considered a "payee" within the meaning of Civ. Code § 1719.

[3] Allegations

This complaint alleges the issuance and delivery of a check payable to bearer (Paragraph 3) [Com. Code § 3109(a)(1), (3)]. In addition to the optional allegations in Paragraph 3, a check is payable to bearer if it does not state a payee [Com. Code § 3109(a)(2)], if it otherwise indicates that the person in possession of it is entitled to payment [Com. Code § 3109(a)(1)], or if it otherwise indicates that it is not payable to an identified person [Com. Code § 3109(a)(3)].

If the check was originally issued to plaintiff, optional Paragraph 4 is not necessary. A check payable to bearer may by negotiated by delivery alone [see Com. Code § 3201(b); Official Comment 1 to U.C.C. § 3109 (1990)]. Thus, the transfer to plaintiff alleged in optional Paragraph 4 does not contain any allegation regarding endorsement, although one may be added [see, e.g., Com. Code § 3109(c) (instrument originally payable to bearer may become payable to identified person if it is specially endorsed pursuant to Com. Code § 3205(a)]. The optional allegation regarding consideration is for use if it is necessary to establish plaintiff's status as a holder in due course [see Com. Code § 3302(a)(2)(A) (holder in due course as one who, among other things, took for value)].

Notice of dishonor is no longer a prerequisite to enforcement of drawer's liability (Paragraph 5) [see Official Comment 2 to U.C.C. § 3-414 (1990); Official Comment 1 to U.C.C. § 3-502 (1990); see also § 385.120].

To protect personal privacy and other legitimate interests, parties and their attorneys must not include financial account numbers, or must redact such numbers when inclusion is necessary, in all pleadings and other papers filed in the court's public file, whether filed in paper or electronic form, unless otherwise provided by law or ordered by the court [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1.20(b)].

33-385 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 385.125

§ 385.125 Affirmative Defense [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)]--Failure of Consideration [Com. Code §§ 3303(b), 3305(a)(2), (b)(2)]

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)]--Failure of Consideration [Com. Code §§ 3303(b), 3305(a)(2), (b)(2)]

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state: TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges that he/she/it received no consideration in exchange for the _____ [specify instrument, e.g., check], and any alleged consideration tendered failed completely in that _____ [describe failure of consideration, e.g., at the time the check was presented, no part of the promise in return for which the check was issued had been performed].

[2] Use of Form

This affirmative defense based on failure of consideration is for use in an action brought by a party who is not a holder in due course against an obligor on an instrument for default in payment allegedly due [Com. Code §§ 3303(b), 3305(a)(2)]. The defense of failure of consideration cannot be asserted against a holder in due course, except to the extent the holder knew of the defense when he or she acquired his or her interest in the instrument [see Com. Code §§ 3302(a)(2)(F), 3305(b)].

[3] Decisions

Failure of consideration is good defense to action on negotiable promissory note by one not holder in due course. Bliss v. California Coop. Producers (1947) 30 Cal. 2d 240, 248-249, 181 P.2d 369 ; Benson v. Andrews (1955) 138 Cal. App. 2d 123, 132, 292 P.2d 39

Affirmative defense that instrument sued on, although unconditional by its terms, was actually given as collateral security for other obligation, and thus is conditional. Thompson v. Koeller (1920) 183 Cal. 476, 480, 191 P. 927

When plaintiff is not holder in due course, general denial as putting in issue question whether consideration was given for note that recites that it was given for consideration. FPI Development, Inc. v. Nakashima (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 367, 397, 282 Cal. Rptr. 508

Knowledge that note was given in consideration of executory agreement not yet performed by payee as not preventing endorsee for value from being holder in due course, unless he or she has notice of breach of agreement. Mann v. Leasko (1960) 179 Cal. App. 2d 692, 697, 4 Cal. Rptr. 124

[2] Use of Form

The foregoing affirmative defense based on the check in question having been certified is for use by a drawer or endorser in an action brought by the payee or holder. A check is "certified" when it is accepted by the bank on which it is drawn [Com. Code § 3409(a), (d); see discussion in § 385.35[1]]. Once the check is certified, the drawer is discharged [Com. Code § 3414(c); see also Com. Code § 3414(f)], as is any endorser who endorsed the check before the acceptance or certification [see Com. Code § 3415(d)]. After certification, only the bank remains liable on the check in accordance with Com. Code §§ 3312 and 3411 [see Ch. 95, Banks, Deposits, and Checks].

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state: TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges the following:

1. Defendant's endorsement of the check that is the subject of this complaint and delivery of the check to plaintiff occurred on or about _____ [date].

2. Plaintiff failed to present the check to the drawee for payment or to give the check to a depositary bank for collection within 30 days after the date of this defendant's endorsement.

[2] Use of Form

The foregoing affirmative defense is for use by an endorser whose liability has been discharged because of plaintiff's failure to present for payment or to give it to a depositary bank for collection within 30 days after defendant endorsed it [see Com. Code § 3415(e)].

[3] State Statutes

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state: TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges the following:

1. _____ [Name of payee or previous holder] assigned or transferred the _____ [specify, e.g., promissory note] that is the subject of this complaint to plaintiff on or about _____ [date].

2. Plaintiff claims to be a purchaser in good faith, for value, and without notice of any infirmities in or of, or defenses against enforcement of, the note, but she/he/it at all times knew of the infirmities of the note alleged herein.

[Continue with allegations of particular defense or infirmity, incorporating them from another defense form if appropriate]

[2] Use of Form

The foregoing affirmative defense based on the holder's knowledge of the infirmities of a promissory note is for use in an action brought by a holder against the obligor for default in payment allegedly due [see Com. Code § 3302(a)(2) (discussed in the Introduction under Holder in Due Course--Elements, above)].

§ 385.129 Affirmative Defense [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)]--Defendant's Signature Obtained by Duress [Com. Code § 3305(a)(1)(B)]--Threats of Criminal Prosecution

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)]--Defendant's Signature Obtained by Duress [Com. Code § 3305(a)(1)(B)]--Threats of Criminal Prosecution

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state: TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges the following:

1. On or about _____ [date], at _____ [city], _____ County, California, plaintiff _____ [set forth facts showing threats of criminal prosecution, e.g., fraudulently caused a criminal complaint to be lodged against defendant and thereafter informed defendant that the criminal complaint would be dismissed if defendant signed the note set forth in plaintiff's complaint].

2. By reason of plaintiff's coercion, intimidation, and threat of criminal prosecution, defendant signed the _____ [specify type of instrument, e.g., note]; defendant signed it solely to avoid a continuance of the prosecution.

3. On or about _____ [date], and subsequent to defendant's execution of the _____ [specify type of instrument, e.g., note], the criminal charge was dismissed.

[2] Use of Form

The foregoing affirmative defense based on plaintiff's coercing defendant to sign an instrument through threats of criminal prosecution is for use in an action brought by the payee or holder of an instrument. Duress sufficient under local law to nullify an obligation is a "real" defense that may be asserted against a holder in due course [Com. Code § 3305(a)(1)(B), (b)].

Whether duress is a defense to enforcement of an instrument under Com. Code § 3305(a)(1)(B) is a matter of degree. An instrument signed at the point of a gun is void, even in the hands of a holder in due course. One signed under threat to prosecute the child of the maker for theft may be merely voidable, so that defense is cut off. The statutes differ in their provisions and the interpretations given them. They are primarily matters of local concern and local policy. All such matters are therefore left to local law. If, under local law, the effect of the duress is to make the obligation entirely null and void, the defense may be asserted against a holder in due course. Otherwise, it is cut off [Official Comment 1 to U.C.C. § 3-305 (1990)].

[3] State Statutes

Consent to contract as not real when elements of duress, fraud, undue influence, and mistake are present. Civ. Code § 1567

Elements of duress. Civ. Code § 1568

Acts constituting duress. Civ. Code § 1569

[4] Decisions

Instrument as void and unenforceable if executed or obtained through clear threat of criminal prosecution, particularly if threat is carried to extent of actually initiating prosecution. Slocum v. Nelson (1945) 72 Cal. App. 2d 33, 37-38, 163 P.2d 888

§ 385.130 Affirmative Defense [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)]--Drawer or Maker Incompetent [Civ. Code § 1556 Com. Code § 3305(a)(1)(B)]

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)]--Drawer or Maker Incompetent [Civ. Code § 1556 Com. Code § 3305(a)(1)(B)]

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state: TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges that, at all times referred to in the complaint, defendant was _____ [specify type of incapacity, e.g., of unsound mind and was wholly and absolutely incompetent and unable to understand the nature of the transactions in which he/she then participated. He/She was incapable of making any contract, including the note that is the subject of this action]. [Plaintiff at all times knew of the aforementioned circumstances.]

[2] Use of Form

The foregoing affirmative defense based on the defendant's lack of legal capacity is for use in an action brought by an obligee against a drawer or maker of an instrument for default in payment allegedly due. Lack of legal capacity sufficient under local law to nullify an obligation is a "real" defense that may be asserted against a holder in due course [Com. Code § 3305(a)(1)(B), (b)].

Lack of capacity under Com. Code § 3305(a)(1)(B) covers mental incompetence, guardianship, ultra vires acts or lack of corporate capacity to do business, or any other incapacity apart from infancy (which is addressed by Com. Code § 3305(a)(1)(A)). Such incapacity is largely statutory. Its existence and effect is left to the law of each state. If, under the state law, the effect is to render the obligation of the instrument entirely null and void, the defense may be asserted against a holder in due course. If the effect is merely to render the obligation voidable at the election of the holder, the defense is cut off [Official Comment 1 to U.C.C. § 3-305 (1990)].

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state: TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges that he/she did not sign the _____ [specify instrument, e.g., note] set forth in plaintiff's complaint. The signature to the note purporting to be that of defendant was forged and made without the authority of defendant, the person whose signature it purports to be.

[2] Use of Form

The foregoing affirmative defense based on the defendant's forged or unauthorized signature is for use in an action brought by a payee or holder against a maker or endorser for default in payment allegedly due [Com. Code § 3403]. To be a holder in due course, one must have taken the instrument in question without notice that it contained an unauthorized signature and the instrument must not have contained any apparent evidence of forgery [*see Com. AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state: TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges the following:

1. On or about _____ [date], defendant signed his/her name to a _____ [specify instrument, e.g., blank promissory note] without filling in the date, the name of the payee, the amount, and the maturity date and left the incomplete instrument in _____ [describe location, e.g., a desk drawer in his/her office at _____ (address), _____ (city), California].

2. On or about _____ [date], the _____ [specify instrument, e.g., note] disappeared from defendant's _____ [describe location, e.g., desk drawer in his/her office], and, without defendant's authority, the note was completed by a person or persons unknown to the defendant by writing in the date, the name of the payee, the amount, and the maturity date.

3. The _____ [specify instrument, e.g., note in question] is attached to plaintiff's complaint as Exhibit A.

4. Plaintiff was not a holder in due course of the _____ [specify instrument, e.g., note], in that _____ [explain, e.g., plaintiff at the time of the transfer to him/her of the note knew of the above facts].

[2] Use of Form

The foregoing affirmative defense based on the lack of delivery [Com. Code § 3105(b)] and incompleteness of the instrument [Com. Code § 3115; see also Com. Code §§ 3406, 3407 (liability for alterations)] is for use in an action brought by a holder not in due course against a maker or drawer of an instrument for default in payment allegedly due. Lack of delivery or issuance is not a defense that may be asserted against a holder in due course [see Com. Code § 3305(a)(2), (b)], but, if one know of the existence of that defense when he or she acquired the instrument, he or she would not be a holder in due course [Com. Code § 3302(a)(2)(F)].

The definitions of terms and criteria for defining a newspaper of general circulation are set forth in Gov. Code §§ 6000-6008. The special proceeding to obtain a judgment of a newspaper's standing is governed by Gov. Code §§ 6020-6027. Requirements for publication of official notices generally are governed by Gov. Code §§ 6040-6044 and the manner and time periods for such publication are prescribed by Gov. Code §§ 6060-6066. Prior to 1943, the criteria for a newspaper of general circulation and the procedure for obtaining an adjudication of a newspaper's standing as such a newspaper were found in the former Political Code §§ 4460-4464. Cases dealing with newspapers of general circulation, decided prior to 1943, thus refer to the former Political Code rather than the current Government Code sections.

§ 386.11 Significance of a Newspaper's Status

Whenever any official advertising, notice, resolution, order, or other matter is required by law to be published in a newspaper, publication must be made in a newspaper of general circulation [Gov. Code § 6040]. Publication in a newspaper of general circulation is not required when the notice or other matter is not required by law to be published in a newspaper [Wilke & Holzheiser, Inc. v. Dept. of Alcoholic Bev. Control (1966) 65 Cal. 2d 349, 377, 55 Cal. Rptr. 23, 420 P.2d 735] .

On or after July 1, 1952, to qualify as a newspaper of general circulation for the purpose of publishing official matter, a newspaper must obtain, or have previously obtained, a judicial decree establishing the newspaper as having such status [Gov. Code § 6027].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

34-386 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 386.12

§ 386.12 Alternative Criteria for Newspaper of General Circulation

[1] Generally

Gov. Code §§ 6000 and 6008 provide two alternative definitions of a newspaper of general circulation. For the purpose of obtaining an adjudication of its standing, a newspaper may qualify as one of general circulation under either the criteria of Gov. Code § 6000 or Gov. Code § 6008.

The differences between the requirements of the two sections are briefly summarized as follows. Under Gov. Code § 6000, a newspaper must have been established and must have been printed and published in the same city or town for at least one year prior to the filing of its petition for an adjudication of its standing. Gov. Code § 6008 does not require that the newspaper be printed and published in the same city or town, but it does require that the newspaper have been established and published for at least three years prior to the filing of the petition for an adjudication of its standing. Gov. Code § 6008 also requires a substantial distribution list of paid subscribers in the area for which the newspaper seeks an adjudication of its standing, a minimum amount of space in the newspaper that is devoted to news coverage, and that the newspaper have only one principal office of publication, located in the area for which the newspaper seeks adjudication of its standing.

[2] Common Requirements

[a] Generally

Gov. Code §§ 6000 and 6008 both require that the newspaper be published for the dissemination of local or telegraphic news and intelligence of a general character, that it have a bona fide subscription list of paying subscribers, and that it be published at regular intervals of not less than weekly in the area for which the newspaper seeks an adjudication of its status [Gov. Code §§ 6000, 6008(a)].

Cases have interpreted the requirements of regular intervals to mean publishing not at equal intervals, but with regularity, and not only occasionally [In re Tribune Publishing Co. (1910) 12 Cal. App. 754, 756, 108 P. 667] . For example, a newspaper published every week, although not always published on the same day of each week, is published at regular intervals [In re Christensen (1951) 104 Cal. App. 2d 375, 379, 231 P.2d 152] .

[b] Of Being Published

For a newspaper to be published pursuant to Gov. Code § 6000, it must have been issued from the place where it is printed and sold to or circulated among its subscribers during the entire one-year period required by Gov. Code § 6000 [Gov. Code § 6004]. A newspaper is "published" for the purpose of Gov. Code § 6008 if it is issued from the place where it is sold to or circulated among its subscribers during the entire three-year period required by Gov. Code § 6008 [Gov. Code § 6008].

[c] Of Being Established

For a newspaper to be established pursuant to the requirements of Gov. Code § 6000, it must have been in existence under a specified name during the entire one-year period prior to the filing of the petition [Gov. Code § 6002]. As required by Gov. Code § 6008, a newspaper that is established is one that is in existence under a specified name during the entire three-year period prior to the filing of the petition [see Gov. Code § 6008]. Pursuant to both sections, however, a modification of the newspaper's name during the required period that does not substantially change the newspaper's identity will not affect whether or not the newspaper is established [see Gov. Code §§ 6002, 6008; see also Gov. Code § 6024]. For example, changing a newspaper's name by dropping one word from the name, if the identity of the newspaper is not destroyed by the change, will not affect the newspaper's standing [In re Lefavor (1917) 35 Cal. App. 145, 147, 169 P. 412] . Similarly, a change in a newspaper's ownership or consolidation with another newspaper does not, in and of itself, affect a newspaper's standing [Brown Newspaper Publishing Co. v. Superior Court (1981) 114 Cal. App. 3d 462, 468, 170 Cal. Rptr. 611] .

[3] Content

Gov. Code §§ 6000 and 6008 both require that a newspaper of general circulation contain local or telegraphic news and intelligence of a general character [see Gov. Code §§ 6000, 6008]. The news may be either local or telegraphic, but need not be both [see In re Herman (1920) 183 Cal. 153, 162, 191 P. 934] .

The required news and intelligence must be of a general character in order to serve the legislative purpose of having legal notices published in newspapers, assuring that such notices will come to the attention of a substantial number of persons in the affected area [see In re Norwalk Call (1964) 62 Cal. 2d 185, 190, 41 Cal. Rptr. 666, 397 P.2d 426 ; see also In re Herman (1920) 183 Cal. 153, 164, 191 P. 934] . In the case of In re Herman (1920) 183 Cal. 153, 163-164, 191 P. 934 , decided under former Political Code § 4460, the California Supreme Court stated that an example of a newspaper containing news and intelligence of a general character is one that contains news accounts of court and official proceedings, accounts of activity of the state legislature, reviews of court decisions, general advertisements, personal notices, and diverse local current events. In another case, a court held that a newspaper containing information about candidates for local office, news about the local school district, American Legion post, local business, social events, and advertisements contained news of interest to the local public, and intelligence of a general character [In re Paradise News Press (1957) 151 Cal. App. 2d 496, 498, 311 P.2d 555] .

Conversely, a newspaper generally containing no news or legal notices, but consisting chiefly of tables, directories, and weather information, does not contain news and intelligence of a general character, and therefore does not qualify as a newspaper of general circulation [In re Herman (1920) 183 Cal. 153, 162-164, 191 P. 934] .

[4] Subscribers

Gov. Code §§ 6000 and 6008 both require that a newspaper of general circulation have a "bona fide subscription list of paying subscribers." A bona fide subscription list has been defined as a list containing only those who, in good faith, pay regularly for subscriptions [In re Herman (1920) 183 Cal. 153, 164-165, 191 P. 934] . Neither section requires a specific number of subscribers [In re Herman (1920) 183 Cal. 153, 164-165, 191 P. 934 ; see In re Paradise News

Press (1957) 151 Cal. App. 2d 496, 499, 311 P.2d 555 ; In re Green (1913) 21 Cal. App. 138 142, 131 P. 91] . Evidence that there is considerable circulation to nonsubscribers or that the number of subscribers has decreased in proportion to the population of an area does not preclude a newspaper from having a bona fide subscription list [In re Paradise News Press (1957) 151 Cal. App. 2d 496, 499, 311 P.2d 555 ; In re Application of Simpson (1923) 217 P. 789] .

If a newspaper seeks to qualify as a newspaper of general circulation under Gov. Code § 6008, it must meet the additional requirement that it has had a substantial distribution to paid subscribers in the area for which it seeks adjudication of its standing. It has been held that although the phrase "substantial distribution to paid subscribers" is relative, its meaning is determinable and not unconstitutionally vague. For example, a newspaper that had a paid distribution of less than two hundredths of one percent of the local population did not have a substantial distribution to paid subscribers within the meaning of Gov. Code § 6008 [In re Carson Bulletin (1978) 85 Cal. App. 3d 785, 794-795, 149 Cal. Rptr. 764] .

[5] Printed and Published Pursuant to Gov. Code § 6000

[a] Definition of "Printed"

Pursuant to Gov. Code § 6000, a newspaper of general circulation must have been printed and published at regular intervals in the area for which it seeks an adjudication of its standing. Gov. Code § 6003 defines the term "printed" as being the mechanical work of producing the newspaper, that is, the typesetting, and the impressing of type on paper. This mechanical work must have been performed for a year prior to the newspaper's petition regarding its standing. "Printing" does not refer to any particular method of reproduction, but merely to the general mechanical process [In re News-Ledger (1967) 255 Cal. App. 2d 211, 215, 63 Cal. Rptr. 69 ; In re "Sonora Daily" (1951) 108 Cal. App. 2d 53, 59, 238 P.2d 111] .

[b] Published and Printed in Same Place

"Published," as defined in Gov. Code § 6004, means that the newspaper is issued from the place where it is printed and sold during the entire one-year period required in Gov. Code § 6000. The terms "printed" and "published" are not synonymous [Gov. Code § 6005]. The requirement of Gov. Code § 6004 that a newspaper be printed and pub lished in the same place refers to the same city, town, county, or other area where the official publications of the newspaper are to be made, not to the same situs or building [In re Christensen (1951) 104 Cal. App. 2d 375, 378-379, 231 P.2d 152] . In addition, Gov. Code § 6004.5 requires that a newspaper of general circulation, if printed or published in a city or town, must be both printed and published in that same city or town.

The requirement that a newspaper of general circulation be printed and published in the city, town, or county where it seeks to publish legal notices has been held to be reasonable and constitutional [see In re Application of Monrovia Evening Post (1926) 199 Cal. 263, 269-270, 248 P. 1017] . A newspaper will not qualify under Gov. Code § 6000 as a newspaper of general circulation for a city if the mechanical work of printing is performed in another city [In re Covina Argus-Citizen (1960) 177 Cal. App. 2d 315, 319, 2 Cal. Rptr. 184 ; see also In re Application of Monrovia Evening Post (1926) 199 Cal. 263, 266-267 (decided under former Pol. Code §§ 4460-4464)]. Nevertheless, such newspaper may qualify as a newspaper of general circulation for the county in which it is both printed and published [Western States Newspapers, Inc. v. Gehringer (1962) 203 Cal. App. 2d 793, 797, 22 Cal. Rptr. 144 ; In re Covina Argus-Citizen (1960) 177 Cal. App. 2d 315, 319, 2 Cal. Rptr. 184] . An interpretation that Gov. Code § 6004.5 requires a newspaper to be published and printed in the same city in order to qualify as a newspaper of general circulation for the county is contrary to the policy of encouraging competitive enterprise and contrary to the general purpose of the statute [In re Lynwood Herald American (1957) 152 Cal. App. 2d 901, 909, 313 P.2d 584] .

[6] Newspaper for Particular Group

[a] Generally

Prior to 1974 and the enactment of Gov. Code § 6008, Gov. Code § 6000 provided the only criteria for a newspaper of general circulation. Therefore, Gov. Code §§ 6001-6007 were enacted with the purpose of governing and defining a newspaper of general circulation under the standards of Gov. Code § 6000 only. The following discussion of Gov. Code § 6001 and the cases decided under it may therefore apply only to the standards of Gov. Code § 6000, although it would seem to apply to the analysis of a newspaper's standing under Gov. Code § 6008 as well.

A newspaper that is devoted to the interests, entertainment, or instruction of a particular class, trade, calling, profession, race, or denomination, or published for such purpose, does not qualify as a newspaper of general circulation [Gov. Code § 6001]. Nevertheless, if such a newspaper also contains news of a general character, and items of interest to the general public, so that the general reading public might look to the newspaper for news of passing events, it may still qualify as a newspaper of general circulation [In re Labor Journal (1923) 190 Cal. 500, 503-504, 213 P. 498 ; In re David (1929) 98 Cal. App. 69, 73, 276 P. 419] .

[b] Foreign Language Newspaper

Although there has been at least one opinion to the contrary, it has been held that a newspaper published in a foreign language may be a newspaper of general circulation [In re La Opinion (1970) 10 Cal. App. 3d 1012, 1017, 1018, 89 Cal. Rptr. 404 ; see also Richardson v. Tobin (1872) 45 Cal. 30, 33 (case decided prior to enactment of statutes defining newspaper of general circulation); but see In re L'Italo-Americano (1934) 2 Cal. App. 2d 690, 692-696, 38 P.2d 810] .

§ 386.13 Exemption of Newspapers Established Prior to 1923

The standing of a newspaper that was established prior to 1923 is unaffected by the requirements of Gov. Code §§ 6000-6075 regarding newspapers of general circulation [Gov. Code § 6006]. Therefore, a newspaper that met all the requirements of a newpaper of general circulation prior to 1923 is not disqualified from such status by subsequently failing to meet statutory requirements [In re Norwalk Call (1964) 62 Cal. 2d 185, 189, 41 Cal. Rptr. 666, 397 P.2d 426 ; Brown Newspaper Publishing Co. v. Superior Court (1981) 114 Cal. App. 3d 462, 467, 170 Cal. Rptr. 611] . Thus, newspapers of general circulation prior to 1923 are thereafter freed from the requirement that they be printed and published in the same place [Brown Newspaper Publishing Co. v. Superior Court (1981) 114 Cal. App. 3d 462, 467, 170 Cal. Rptr. 611 ; In re Anaheim Daily Gazette (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 438, 444, 29 Cal. Rptr. 520] . A newspaper established prior to 1923 is entitled to the exemption, despite changes in the political structure or names of government entities in the newspaper's area, and changes in the name or ownership of the newspaper that occur after 1923 [In re Norwalk Call (1964) 62 Cal. 2d 185, 189-190, 41 Cal. Rptr. 666, 397 P.2d 426 ; Brown Newspaper Publishing Co. v. Superior Court (1981) 114 Cal. App. 3d 462, 469, 170 Cal. Rptr. 611] .

Whether a newspaper of general circulation that was established prior to 1923 may obtain an adjudication that it is a newspaper of general circulation for every city incorporated since 1923 within the county in which the newspaper is established is a question that has not yet been decided by the courts; however, an attempt to obtain this adjudication by ex parte modification of a prior decree and without the published notice required by Gov. Code § 6021 is impermissible [In re Molz (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 836, 843-846, 26 Cal. Rptr. 3d 131] .

§ 386.14 Exemptions During Wartime

The status of a newspaper of general circulation is not affected if publication of the newspaper is discontinued because of conditions induced by a war to which the United States is a party, so long as the publication is renewed either while the war is still pending, or within one year from the date hostilities officially terminate [Gov. Code § 6006]. For example, when, due to wartime conditions, the mechanical work of printing a newspaper was discontinued in the town in which it was published, but was reinstated within one year following the end of the war, the newspaper's standing as one of general circulation was unchanged [*In re Hancock (1949) 92 Cal. § 386.15 Procedure for Obtaining Adjudication of General Circulation Status

[1] Petition

On and after July 1, 1952, a newspaper will not be, in fact or in law, a newspaper of general circulation unless it obtains or has obtained a judicial decree establishing its status [Gov. Code § 6027]. In order to obtain a decree establishing its status as a newspaper of general circulation, the publisher, manager, editor, or attorney for the newspaper must file a verified petition in the superior court of the county in which the newspaper is established, printed, and published, or, under Gov. Code § 6008, in the county in which it is established and published [Gov. Code §§ 6008, 6020].The petition must set forth facts which justify an adjudication of status as a newspaper of general circulation [Gov. Code § 6020].

A petition alleging that a newspaper meets all the requirements of Gov. Code § 6000 is sufficient; it is not required to allege in addition that the newspaper is not devoted to a particular class, as prohibited by Gov. Code § 6001 [In re The Santa Ana Independent (1946) 75 Cal. App. 2d 764, 765-766, 171 P.2d 548] . A petition made pursuant to Gov. Code § 6008 must set forth facts showing that the newspaper meets the criteria of that section [see Gov. Code § 6008].

[2] Notice of Petition

The petition, or substance of the petition, together with a notice that the petitioner intends on a named day to apply for an order declaring it to be a newspaper of general circulation, must be published in the petitioning newspaper. In addition, publication must be made in another newspaper of general circulation published in the same city as the petitioner. If there is no such newspaper, or if such newspaper refuses to publish the petition and notice, then the petitioner must publish the required documents in a newspaper of general circulation published in the same county as the petitioner, or, if there is no such newspaper, or it refuses to publish, then in a newspaper of general circulation of an adjacent county, or other newspaper as directed by the court [Gov. Code § 6021]. Such publication must be made for 10 days [Gov. Code §§ 6021, 6062]. The period of notice commences on the first day of publication and terminates at the end of the tenth day, including therein the first day. Publication must be made on each day on which the newspaper is published during the period [Gov. Code § 6062].

Publication of notice required by Gov. Code § 6021 is satisfied by publication in a weekly newspaper for a period of 10 days; publication for 10 weeks in a weekly newspaper is not required [In re The Santa Ana Independent (1946) 75

Cal. App. 2d 764, 766-768, 171 P.2d 548] . The court is not permitted to make notice requirements in addition to the requirements of publication of notice and petition imposed by Gov. Code § 6021 [In re Carson Bulletin (1978) 85 Cal. App. 3d 785, 790, 796, 149 Cal. Rptr. 764] .

[3] Hearing and Judgment

On proof of the publication of the petition and notice, the court sets the petition for hearing [Gov. Code § 6022]. Any person may appear and contest the petition, either prior to or on the day set for the hearing, or the day to which it is continued, regardless of whether or not such person has a pecuniary interest in the matter [Gov. Code § 6022; see also In re Herman (1920) 183 Cal. 153, 158, 191 P. 934] . The court hears the proofs of the petitioner and any contestants, and within 10 days thereafter, renders its decision and judgment. The clerk enters the judgment in the records of the court [Gov. Code § 6023].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

34-386 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 386.16

§ 386.16 Vacating or Modifying Judgment

The decision and judgment establishing the general circulation status of a newspaper may be vacated, modified, or set aside by the court on its own motion, or on the motion of any person, whether or not a party to the original proceeding, on (a) a verified statement of facts made to the court; (b) 10 days notice to the petitioner for the newspaper in question; and (c) a satisfactory showing made to the court that the newspaper has ceased to be a newspaper of general circulation [Gov. Code § 6024(1)]. The decision or judgment may also be modified on a satisfactory showing made to the court that the newspaper has modified its name without any substantial change in its character or identity as a newspaper of general circulation [Gov. Code § 6024(2)]. All publications made in a newspaper during the period it was adjudged to be a newspaper of general circulation, however, are valid and sufficient [Gov. Code § 6025].

A motion to vacate, modify, or set aside a judgment declaring a newspaper to be one of general circulation will be granted when the newspaper has failed to meet either the requirements of Gov. Code § 6000 or Gov. Code § 6008 [In re Carson Bulletin (1978) 85 Cal. App. 3d 785, 789-790, 149 Cal. Rptr. 764] . Nevertheless, if a newspaper qualified as one of general circulation prior to 1923, its standing as a newspaper of general circulation will be upheld, or upheld and modified, if it has subsequently failed to meet the requirements of a newspaper of general circulation [Brown Newspaper Publishing Co. v. Superior Court (1981) 114 Cal. App. 3d 462, 468, 469, 170 Cal. Rptr. 611 ; In re The Anaheim Daily Gazette (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 438, 444-445, 29 Cal. Rptr. 520] .

A newspaper may not seek modification of a prior decree regarding which cities are within its scope as a newspaper of general circulation using Gov. Code § 6024; a change of this type is in substance a petition for an order declaring it to be newspaper of general circulation and requires the newspaper to follow the procedural requirements of Gov. Code §§ 6021, 6022 and provide notice of the petition to the public [In re Molz (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 836, 844, 26 Cal. Rptr. 3d 131] .

On a motion to vacate a judgment determining the status of a newspaper, the moving party has the burden of proof of showing that ultimate facts have materially changed subsequent to the original order, and particularly that the newspaper has ceased to be one of general circulation [In re Hancock (1949) 92 Cal. App. 2d 481, 486, 207 P.2d 61] .

An adjudication of a newspaper's status may be modified if, for example, the newspaper is no longer printed in the city for which it is a newspaper of general circulation, but is printed and published in the same county. In such a case, the newspaper's standing as one of general circulation for the city would be vacated, whereas its standing for the county would be upheld [In re Covina Argus-Citizen (1960) 177 Cal. App. 2d 315, 319-320, 2 Cal. Rptr. 184] .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

34-386 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 386.17

§ 386.17 Appeal

The Court of Appeal has jurisdiction over an appeal from a judgment on a general-circulation petition [Lendennie v. Sabel (In re Perris City News) (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 1194, 1197-1199, 118 Cal. Rptr. 2d 38 ; In re Molz (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 836, 841, 26 Cal. Rptr. 3d 131 ; see Cal. Const., art. VI, § 11(a)].

Gov. Code § 6026, enacted in 1943, provides that an appeal may be taken to the Supreme Court from any final decision or judgment relating to a newspaper's standing, or from any final order vacating, modifying, or setting aside a decision or judgment previously entered [In re Hancock (1949) 92 Cal. App. 2d 481, 485, 207 P.2d 61 (reasonable construction of Gov. Code § 6026 would also permit appeal from order denying motions to vacate, modify, or set aside decree previously entered)]. This statute conflicts, however, with constitutional provisions adopted in 1966. Those provisions confer appellate jurisdiction on the Supreme Court only when a judgment of death has been pronounced [Cal. Const., art. VI, § 11], when the Supreme Court transfers a case to itself from a court of appeal [Cal. Const., art. VI, § 12(a)], or when it reviews a decision of a court of appeal [Cal. Const., art. VI, § 12(b)]. With those exceptions, courts of appeal have appellate jurisdiction whenever superior courts have original jurisdiction [Cal. Const., art. VI, § 11(a)]. Because general-circulation petitions are matters over which the superior courts have original jurisdiction [Gov. Code § 6020], the court of appeal has appellate jurisdiction over appeals from judgments resolving those petitions. Therefore, since appellate jurisdiction conferred by the California Constitution cannot be destroyed or abridged by legislative action, the limiting language of Gov. Code § 6026 is declared void and courts of appeal are judicially interpreted to have appellate jurisdiction over any final decision or judgment concerning a general-circulation petition [Lendennie v. Sabel (In re Perris City News) (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 1194, 1197-1199, 118 Cal. Rptr. 2d 38] .

An order denying a motion to vacate a judgment that a newspaper is a newspaper of general circulation is also appealable to the courts of appeal [In re Molz (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 836, 841-843, 26 Cal. Rptr. 3d 131] .

On appeal, the finding of the trial court that the newspaper is one of general circulation is conclusive, unless the evidence appears insufficient to support that finding as a matter of law [In re Herman (1920) 183 Cal. 153, 162, 191 P. 934 ; In re David (1929) 98 Cal. App. 69, 71, 276 P. 419] .

34-386 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 386.31

[1] Appeal

Finding of trial court that newspaper is one of general circulation as conclusive on appeal unless evidence appears insufficient to support finding as matter of law. In re Herman (1920) 183 Cal. 153, 162, 191 P. 934 ; In re David (1929) 98 Cal. App. 69, 71, 276 P. 419 (cases decided under former Pol. Code §§ 4460-4464)

An order denying a motion to vacate a judgment that a newspaper is a newspaper of general circulation is appealable to the courts of appeal. In re Molz (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 836, 841-843, 26 Cal. Rptr. 3d 131

Reasonable construction of Gov. Code § 6026 as permitting appeal from orders denying motions to vacate, set aside, or modify decree previously entered. In re Hancock (1949) 92 Cal. App. 2d 481, 485, 207 P.2d 61

[2] Consolidation of Newspapers

Two newspapers as legally consolidated for purposes of establishing their status as newspaper of general circulation. In re Gluckman (1936) 6 Cal. 2d 455, 456, 58 P.2d 166 (decided under former Pol. Code §§ 4460-4464)

[3] Contesting Petition

Any person as allowed to contest petition of newspaper to have itself declared a newspaper of general circulation, and judgment of court to that effect may be vacated on motion by any person, whether or not such person has pecuniary interest in matter. In re Herman (1920) 183 Cal. 153, 158, 191 P. 934 (decided under former Pol. Code §§ 4460-4464)

[4] County Newspapers

Los Angeles County zoning ordinance requiring hearings to be published in newspaper of general circulation for county as satisfied by publication in newspaper of general circulation for county, even though published in different part of county from part to which notice referred. Steiger v. Board of Supervisors (1956) 143 Cal. App. 2d 352, 358-359, 300 P.2d 210

Newspaper as being one of general circulation for county, but not for particular city. In re Christensen (1951) 104 Cal. App. 2d 375, 379, 231 P.2d 152

[5] Exemption of Prior Newspapers from Statutory Requirements

[a] Generally

Statutory classification imposing requirements on new newspapers and not on existing ones as reasonable and constitutional. In re Byers (1933) 219 Cal. 446, 450, 27 P.2d 641 (decided under former Pol. Code §§ 4460-4464)

[b] Newspapers Prior to 1923

Whether a newspaper of general circulation that was established prior to 1923 may obtain an adjudication that it is a newspaper of general circulation for every city incorporated since 1923 within the county in which the newspaper is established is a question that has not yet been decided by the courts; however, an attempt to obtain this adjudication by ex parte modification of a prior decree and without the published notice required by § Gov. Code § 6021 is impermissible. In re Molz (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 836, 843-846, 26 Cal. Rptr. 3d 131]

Newspaper meeting all requirements of established newspaper of general circulation before 1923 as not disqualified from such status by subsequently ceasing to be printed in place of publication. Brown Newspaper Publishing Co. v. Superior Court (1981) 114 Cal. App. 3d 462, 467, 170 Cal. Rptr. 611

Newspaper established prior to 1923 as exempt from statutory requirements pursuant to Gov. Code § 6000, although it did not rely on exemption when its status was adjudicated in 1952, and its place of printing changed in 1965. Brown Newspaper Publishing Co. v. Superior Court (1981) 114 Cal. App. 3d 462, 467-468, 170 Cal. Rptr. 611

Change in name, ownership, and consolidation as not negating newspaper's exemption from printing requirement under Gov. Code § 6006. Brown Newspaper Publishing Co. v. Superior Court (1981) 114 Cal. App. 3d 462, 469, 170 Cal. Rptr. 611

Newspaper established as newspaper of general circulation before 1923 that has continued to meet standards in force at that time as entitled to exemption of Gov. Code § 6006 even though during some intervening time in the past it did not meet additional requirements added by Legislature and subsequently eliminated. In re Norwalk Call (1964) 62 Cal. 2d 185, 189, 41 Cal. Rptr. 666, 397 P.2d 426

Newspaper as entitled to exemption of Gov. Code § 6006 even though changes of political structure or names of government entities occurred within its area after 1923. In re Norwalk Call (1964) 62 Cal. 2d 185, 189-190, 41 Cal. Rptr. 666, 397 P.2d 426

Plain meaning of Gov. Code § 6006 as freeing newspapers of general circulation before 1923 from requirement that they be printed in place of publication. In re Anaheim Daily Gazette (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 438, 444, 29 Cal. Rptr. 520

[c] Wartime

Exemption of Gov. Code § 6007 as applying when mechanical work of printing newspaper is discontinued in town where newspaper is published, due to war conditions. In re Hancock (1949) 92 Cal. App. 2d 481, 488-489, 207 P.2d 61

[6] Legislative Intent

Legislature as intending newspaper of general circulation to be one to which general public would resort in order to be informed of news and intelligence, editorial opinion, and advertisements. In re Herman (1920) 183 Cal. 153, 164, 191 P. 934 (decided under former Pol. Code §§ 4460-4464)

Purpose of limiting publication of notices in established newspaper of general circulation as assuring that published material will come to attention of substantial number of people in area. In re Norwalk Call (1964) 41 Cal. Rptr. 666, 397 P.2d 426

General object of statutes pertaining to publication as providing means of displaying public notices, and one legislative requirement furthering that object is that newspaper must have fixed and permanent abode in order to qualify as organ for publication of such notices. In re "Sonora Daily" (1951) 108 Cal. App. 2d 53, 58-59, 238 P.2d 111

Notice by publication as required to be such as would be reasonably likely to bring fact of pendency and purpose of proceeding to attention of those interested. In re David (1929) 98 Cal. App. 69, 74, 276 P. 419 (case decided under former Pol. Code §§ 4460-4464)

Statute (former Pol. Code § 4460, now Gov. Code § 6000) as intending that newspaper for official public advertising for city must be published within such city and be known as newspaper of that city for period of at least one year prior to petition to qualify for such official publication of advertising. In re Miller (1910) 15 Cal. App. 43, 44-45, 113 P. 690 (decided under former Pol. Code §§ 4460-4464)

[7] Foreign Language Newspapers

When Legislature requires publication in daily newspaper but does not specify language in which newspaper must be published, court as having no power to require that publication be in newspaper of a particular language. Richardson v. Tobin (1872) 45 Cal. 30, 33 (decided under Stats. 1871-2, p. 804)

Gov. Code § 6000, properly construed, as not precluding foreign language newspaper from being newspaper of general circulation. In re La Opinion (1970) 10 Cal. App. 3d 1012, 1017, 1018, 89 Cal. Rptr. 404

Fact that definition of newspaper of general circulation does not require such newspapers to be published in English as matter of legislative judgment and not matter of due proces requiring courts to impose such requirement by judicial construction. In re La Opinion (1970) 10 Cal. App. 3d 1012, 1019-1020, 89 Cal. Rptr. 404

California statutes requiring publication of legal notices and advertisements printed in English as not imposing any requirement as to nature of newspaper in which notices appear. In re La Opinion (1970) 10 Cal. App. 3d 1012, 1018, 89 Cal. Rptr. 404

Newspaper published in foreign language as not one of general circulation. In re L'Italo-Americano (1934) 2 Cal. App. 2d 690, 692-696, 38 P.2d 810 (case decided under former Pol. Code §§ 4460-4464)

[8] Newspaper for Particular Class

Fact that newspaper devoted to interests of particular class of persons, such as persons engaged in some business or calling, and specialized in news primarily of interest to such class, as not excluding newspaper from qualifying as one of general circulation if it also publishes news of general character. In re Labor Journal (1923) 190 Cal. 500, 503-504, 213 P. 498 (case decided under former Pol. Code §§ 4460-4464)

Newspaper devoted to particular class as possibly newspaper of general circulation if it publishes intelligence of passing events, news, and items of interest to general public, together with news of interest to particular class, so long as news is of such character that general reading public might look to newspaper for news of passing events. In re David (1929) 98 Cal. App. 69, 73, 276 P. 419 (case decided under former Pol. Code §§ 4460-4464)

[9] Petition and Notice Requirement

Court as not permitted to make notice requirements in addition to requirements of publication of notice and petition required by Gov. Code § 6021. In re Carson Bulletin (1978) 85 Cal. App. 3d 785, 790, 796, 149 Cal. Rptr. 764

Petition to establish newspaper as one of general circulation, if containing all matters required by Gov. Code § 6000, as not required to allege that Gov. Code § 6001 does not apply to newspaper. In re Santa Ana Independent (1946) 75 Cal. App. 2d 764, 765-766

Publication of notice required by Gov. Code § 6021 for period of 10 days as satisfied by publication in weekly newspaper for period of 10 days; publication as not required to be made for 10 weeks in such newspaper. In re The Santa Ana Independent (1946) 75 Cal. App. 2d 764, 766-768, 171 P.2d 548

[10] Petition to Vacate or Modify Judgment

A newspaper may not seek modification of a prior decree regarding which cities are within its scope as a newspaper of general circulation using Gov. Code § 6024; a change of this type is in substance a petition for an order declaring it to be newspaper of general circulation and requires the newspaper to follow the procedural requirements of Gov. Code §§ 6021, 6022 and provide notice of the petition to the public. In re Molz (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 836, 844, 26 Cal. Rptr. 3d 131]

Motion to vacate judgment declaring newspaper to be one of general circulation as properly granted when newspaper failed to meet requirements of Gov. Code § 6000 or Gov. Code § 6008. In re Carson Bulletin (1978) 85 Cal. App. 3d 785, 789-790, 149 Cal. Rptr. 764

Decree reflecting newspaper's qualification as newspaper of general circulation as upheld or upheld and modified under Gov. Code § 6024(2), even though place of printing changed, if newspaper qualified prior to 1923. Brown Newspaper Publishing Co. v. Superior Court (1981) 114 Cal. App. 3d 462, 468, 469, 170 Cal. Rptr. 611 ; in re The Anaheim Daily Gazette (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 438, 444-445, 29 Cal. Rptr. 520

Gov. Code § 6024 language stating that court may vacate, modify, or set aside decision and judgment as not meaning that court has discretion to determine whether newspaper's failure to meet standards of newspaper of general circulation may be disregarded. In re Covina Argus-Citizen (1960) 177 Cal. App. 2d 315, 318-319, 2 Cal. Rptr. 184

Adjudication that newspaper is one of general circulation for city and county as permitted to be modified under Gov. Code § 6024 to vacate only portion adjudging newspaper to be one of general circulation for city. In re Covina Argus-Citizen (1950) 177 Cal. App. 2d 315, 319-320, 2 Cal. Rptr. 184

On a motion to vacate judgment determining status of newspaper, petitioner as having burden of proof to show that ultimate facts have materially changed subsequent to original order and particularly that newspaper has ceased to be one of general circulation. In re Hancock (1949) 92 Cal. App. 2d 481, 486, 207 P.2d 61

Petitioner as failing to show that newspaper had ceased to be one of general circulation when evidence showed that Gov. Code § 6007 applied and that during wartime between 3,000 and 4,000 copies of newspaper had been printed per week in city of 13,000, serving surrounding area of 55,000, although there was some variation in delivery due to wartime shortages. In re Hancock (1949) 92 Cal. App. 2d 481, 489-490, 207 P.2d 61

Original judgment that newspaper one of general circulation as res judicata; burden as on party seeking to vacate judgment to prove newspaper has ceased to be one of general circulation. In re Simpson (1923) 62 Cal. App. 549, 552, 217 P. 789

[11] Publication of Official Notices

Gov. Code § 6040, requiring publication of official notices in a newspaper of general circulation, as applying only when the matter in question is required by law to be published in a newspaper. Wilke & Holzheiser, Inc. v. Dept. of Alcoholic Bev. Control (1966) 65 Cal. 2d 349, 377, 55 Cal. Rptr. 23, 420 P.2d 735

[12] Requirements for Newspaper of General Circulation

[a] Alternative

Gov. Code § 6008 as providing criteria for newspaper of general circulation alternative to criteria of Gov. Code § 6000 so that newspaper as required either to be printed in the applicable area, or to have substantial distribution to paid subscribers in that area. In re Carson Bulletin (1978) 85 Cal. App. 3d 785, 792-793, 149 Cal. Rptr. 764

[b] Content

Newspaper containing no news, no legal notices except for particular notice at issue, but containing chiefly temperature, rainfall, and other tables and directories, as not qualified to be newspaper of general circulation. In re Herman (1920) 183 Cal. 153, 162-164, 191 P. 934 (decided under former Pol. Code §§ 4460-4464)

Under statute (former Pol. Code § 4460, now Gov. Code § 6000), either local or telegraphic news, but not both, as required for newspaper of general circulation, along with intelligence of general character. In re Herman (1920) 183 Cal. 153, 162, 191 P. 934 (decided under former Pol. Code § 4460)

Although having small circulation, newspaper of daily publication, published for chief purpose of giving notice of court proceedings, real estate transactions, and probate and execution sales, and including want ads and limited news items, as qualifying as newspaper in which legal notice of trust deed could be published. Baldwin v. Brown (1924) 193 Cal. 345, 351-352, 224 P. 462 (decided under former Pol. Code §§ 4460-4464)

In determining whether or not newspaper qualifies as one of general circulation pursuant to Gov. Code § 6001, test as being content of newspaper, not persons to whom it appeals. In re La Opinion (1970) 10 Cal. App. 3d 1012, 1018-1019, 89 Cal. Rptr. 404

Lack of editorials as not precluding newspaper from qualifying as one of general circulation under Gov. Code § 6000. In re Paradise News Press (1957) 151 Cal. App. 2d 496, 498, 311 P.2d 555

Information regarding candidates for local positions, school district news, American Legion Posts, local business, social news, and advertisements as news items of interest to people living in area of publication, and as constituting intelligence of general character within meaning of Gov. Code § 6000. In re Paradise News Press (1957) 151 Cal. App. 2d 496, 311 P.2d 555

Finding by trial court that newspaper was one of general circulation as not supported by the evidence, which indicated that no telegraphic news, social or political news, or personal items were reported, and local news items were limited to those of interest to construction industry. In re David (1929) 98 Cal. App. 69, 74, 276 P. 419 (case decided under former Pol. Code §§ 4460-4464)

[c] Delivery

No difference between getting newspapers by mail or by newspaper delivery for purposes of requirements of Gov. Code § 6000. In re Paradise News Press (1957) 151 Cal. App. 2d 496, 499, 311 P.2d 555

[d] Established Newspaper

Purpose of requiring that publications be made in established newspaper of general circulation as not affected by changes in name or political structure of area served by newspaper. In re Norwalk Call (1964) 62 Cal. 2d 185, 190, 41 Cal. Rptr. 666, 397 P.2d 426

Change in name, ownership, and consolidation as not independently affecting newspaper's status as newspaper of general circulation. Brown Newspaper Publishing Co. v. Superior Court (1981) 114 Cal. App. 3d 462, 468, 170 Cal. Rptr. 611

Change in name, ownership, and consolidation as not requiring new one-year period under Gov. Code § 6000. Brown Newspaper Publishing Co. v. Superior Court (1981) 114 Cal. App. 3d 462, 469, 170 Cal. Rptr. 611

Changing of newspaper's name by dropping one word from name during one-year period prior to petition as not changing newspaper's character or destroying its identity for purposes of determining whether or not it was newspaper of general circulation. In re Lefavor (1917) 35 Cal. App. 145, 147, 169 P. 412 (decided under former Pol. Code §§ 4460-4464)

[e] Principal Office of Publication

A newspaper's "principal office of publication" for purposes of Gov. Code § 6008(d) is located in the city where its distribution center and circulation staff are located. In re Tri-Valley Herald (1985) 169 Cal. App. 3d 865, 872, 215 Cal. Rptr. 529

[f] Printed and Published

"Printing" in Gov. Code § 6003 as not referring to exclusive means of using type to reproduce copies of newspaper, but as referring to general mechanical means of multiplying copies. In re News-Ledger (1967) 255 Cal. App. 2d 211, 215, 63 Cal. Rptr. 69

When actual printing occurred in another county for preponderant part of one year before filing petition, petition as properly de nied. In re News-Ledger (1967) 255 Cal. App. 2d 211, 216, 63 Cal. Rptr. 69 (case decided under Gov. Code § 6000, prior to enactment of Gov. Code § 6008 establishing alternative criteria for newspaper of general circulation)

Word "publish" as ordinarily meaning to disclose, reveal, proclaim, circulate, or make public. Western States Newspapers, Inc. v. Gehringer (1962) 203 Cal. App. 2d 793, 797-798, 22 Cal. Rptr. 144

For purposes of defining newspaper of general circulation, term "published" as not including printing of newspaper and as not referring to publishing in newspaper, but term as limited to publishing of newspaper. Western States Newspapers, Inc. v. Gehringer (1962) 203 Cal. App. 2d 793, 797, 22 Cal. Rptr. 144

Newspaper as not qualifying as one of general circulation for city unless printed in city, although it may qualify as newspaper of general circulation for county in which it is printed and published. Western States Newspapers, Inc. v. Gehringer (1962) 203 Cal. App. 2d 793, 797, 22 Cal. Rptr. 144 ; In re Covina Argus-Citizen (1960) 177 Cal. App. 2d 315, 319, 2 Cal. Rptr. 184 (cases decided under Gov. Code § 6000, prior to enactment of Gov. Code § 6008, establishing alternative criteria for newspaper of general circulation)

Requirement that newspaper must be printed and published in same city to have standing as newspaper of general circulation for that city as constitutional as applied in withdrawing newspaper's standing pursuant to Gov. Code § 6024. In re Covina Argus-Citizen (1960) 177 Cal. App. 2d 315, 320, 2 Cal. Rptr. 184 (case decided prior to enactment of Gov. Code § 6008 establishing alternative criteria for newspaper of general circulation)

Interpretation that Gov. Code § 6004.5 requires newspaper to be both published and printed in same city just to qualify as newspaper of general circulation for county as contrary to policy of encouraging competitive enterprise and contrary to general purpose of statute. In re Lynwood Herald American (1957) 152 Cal. App. 2d 901, 909, 313 P.2d 584 (case decided under Gov. Code § 6000, prior to enactment of Gov. Code § 6008 establishing alternative criteria for newspaper of general circulation)

Gov. Code § 6004.5 as not affecting requirement that for newspaper to qualify as one of general circulation in particular area, newspaper must be both printed and published within that area. In re The Paul Bunyan News (1959) 175 Cal. App. 2d 80, 81-82, 345 P.2d 527 ; In re Lynwood Herald American (1957) 152 Cal. App. 2d 901, 908-909, 313 P.2d 584 (cases decided under Gov. Code § 6000, prior to enactment of Gov. Code § 6008 establishing alternative criteria for newspaper of general circulation)

Requirement of Gov. Code § 6004 that newspaper be printed and published in same place as referring to same city, town, county, or other area where publication is to be made, not same situs or building. In re Christensen (1951) 104 Cal. App. 2d 375, 378-379, 231 P.2d 152 (case decided under Gov. Code § 6000, prior to enactment of Gov. Code § 6008 establishing alternative criteria for newspaper of general circulation)

Word "printed" as used in Gov. Code §§ 6000 and 6003 as including reproduction by any process so that no particular printing process is required in order for newspaper to qualify as newspaper of general circulation. In re "Sonora Daily" (1951) 108 Cal. App. 2d 53, 59, 238 P.2d 111

Fact that newspaper uses in its make up boiler-plate material procured elsewhere than at place where newspaper is printed and published as insufficient to disqualify newspaper from being one of general circulation. In re Hoyle (1927) 84 Cal. App. 511, 515, 258 P. 726

When mechanical work of printing newspaper is performed in one city, that newspaper as not one of general circulation qualified to print legal notices in another city. Application of Monrovia Evening Post (1926) 199 Cal. 263, 266-267,

248 P. 1017 (decided under former Pol. Code §§ 4458, 4460-4464, prior to enactment of Gov. Code § 6008 establishing alternative criteria for newspaper of general circulation)

Requirement that newspaper of general circulation be printed and published in city, town, or county where it seeks to publish notices as reasonable and constitutional. Application of Monrovia Evening Post (1926) 199 Cal. 263, 269-270, 248 P. 1017 (decided under former Pol. Code §§ 4458, 4460-4464, prior to enactment of Gov. Code § 6008 establishing alternative criteria for newspaper of general circulation)

[g] Regular Intervals

Requirement of statute (former Pol. Code § 4460, now Gov. Code § 6000) that newspaper be published at regular intervals as not requiring equal intervals, but as requiring regularity, that is, that newspaper not be published only occasionally. *In re Tribune Publishing Co. Newspaper published every week, though not always on same day of each week, as being published at regular intervals. In re Christensen (1951) 104 Cal. App. 2d 375, 379, 231 P.2d 152

[h] Subscribers

Bona fide subscription list as meaning list containing only those who in good faith pay regularly for subscriptions, and not requiring any specific number of subscribers. In re Herman (1920) 183 Cal. 153, 164-165, 191 P. 934 (decided under former Pol. Code §§ 4460-4464)

Requirement in Gov. Code § 6008 of "substantial distribution to paid subscribers," though relative, as not meaning paid distribution to less than two-hundredths of one percent of local population. In re Carson Bulletin (1978) 85 Cal. App. 3d 785, 795, 149 Cal. Rptr. 764

Gov. Code § 6008 requirement of substantial distribution to paid subscribers as not unconstitutionally vague. In re Carson Bulletin (1978) 85 Cal. App. 3d 785, 794-795, 149 Cal. Rptr. 764

Fact that there is considerable circulation above subscription list as not precluding newspaper from being one of general circulation; question is one of fact for trial court. In re Paradise News Press (1957) 151 Cal. App. 2d 496, 499, 311 P.2d 555

Evidence as sustaining finding that newspaper had bona fide subscription list of paying customers when evidence indicated that 14,500 copies were distributed within county one year to 2,000 paying subscribers, including 500 paid-up subscribers. In re The Santa Ana Independent (1946) 75 Cal. App. 2d 764, 768-769, 171 P.2d 548

Evidence that population of city in which newspaper is printed and published has increased, while number of subscribers has decreased, as insufficient to compel finding that newspaper has ceased to be one of general circulation. In re Simpson (1923) 62 Cal. App. 549, 555-556, 217 P. 789 (decided under former Pol. Code §§ 4460-4464)

Newspaper's general circulation as depending on diversity of its subscribers rather than on number of subscribers. In re Green (1913) 21 Cal. App. 138, 142, 131 P. 91 (decided under former Pol. Code §§ 4460-4464)

PART IV. PROCEDURAL CHECKLIST

34-386 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 386.50

§ 386.50 Petitioner's Procedures

[1] Prepare Petition and Notice of Intention

[a] Petition

1. Determine whether newspaper qualifies as one of general circulation under Gov. Code § 6000 or under alternative criteria of Gov. Code § 6008 [see Introduction under § 386.12[1]].

2. Prepare verified petition alleging newspaper's standing under criteria of either Gov. Code § 6000 or Gov. Code § 6008. The petitioner, as publisher, manager, editor, or attorney of newspaper, must verify petition [see Gov. Code §§ 6008, 6020; § 386.70 and 386.71].

[b] Notice of Intention

Prepare accompanying notice of intention to apply on named day for order declaring status of newspaper as one of general circulation [see Gov. Code § 6021; § 386.72].

[2] File Petition and Notice of Intention

File original petition and notice with clerk of superior court of the county in which newspaper is established, printed, and published [see Gov. Code § 6020], or in which it is established [see Gov. Code § 6008]. Pay filing fees for first paper filed in a civil proceeding [see Gov. Code § 70611].

[3] Publish Petition or Substance of Petition, and Notice of Intention

[a] Content and Time

Either the substance of petition or the petition itself, together with notice of intention, must be published for 10 days [see Gov. Code § 6021; Comments to § 386.72].

[b] Manner

Publication must be made in petitioning newspaper and in some other newspaper of general circulation in same city or county, or in adjacent county [see Gov. Code § 6021; Comments to § 386.72].

[c] Court Order Directing Publication

1. If there is no such other newspaper in the same city [see Paragraph B, above], or it refuses to publish, and if there is no such newspaper in the same county, or it refuses to publish, and if petitioner does not publish in a newspaper of general circulation in an adjacent county, a court order must be obtained directing publication in some newspaper [see Gov. Code § 6021].

2. If a court order is sought, prepare an ex parte application, declaration, and order according to standard procedures for such applications [see § 386.73; see also Ch. 372, Motions and Orders].

[d] Proof of Publication

Prepare proof of publication by petitioning newspaper. Ordinarily, the other newspaper in which publication is made will prepare its proof of publication [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2010]. File proof of publication [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2011].

[4] Hearing

[a] Order Setting Hearing

On proof of publication, prepare an order setting time and place for hearing on petition to be presented to the court for signature [see § 386.74 and Ch. 372, Motions and Orders].

[b] Hearing

1. The court sets petition for hearing on proof of petition and notice [see Gov. Code § 6022].

2. Petitioner presents proof to court [see Gov. Code § 6023].

3. Court hears proof of contestant, if any [see Gov. Code § 6023].

[c] Judgment

Within 10 days after hearing, the court must render its decision and judgment and the clerk must enter it in the records of the court [see Gov. Code § 6023]. The statute does not specifically provide who is to prepare the judgment. Pursuant to Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1590, however, the court may designate a party to prepare a proposed judgment. If so directed, prepare the proposed judgment for signature by the court [see § 386.76, and Ch. 318, Judgments, § 318.40 et seq.].

[5] Appeal

Judgment may be appealed from [see Gov. Code § 6026; see also Cal. Const., art. III, § 11]. For procedures on appeal, see Ch. 40, Appeal: An Overview et seq.

PART IV. PROCEDURAL CHECKLIST

34-386 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 386.51

§ 386.51 Contestant's Procedures

[1] Prepare and File Contest

[a] Prepare Contest

Any person may contest petition, either prior to or on the day set for the hearing, or the day to which hearing is continued [see Gov. Code § 6022]. Prepare opposition, alleging that newspaper does not meet criteria of either Gov. Code § 6000 or Gov. Code § 6008 [see § 386.75].

[b] File Contest

File opposition with the clerk of the court and pay fee [see Gov. Code § 70612].

[2] Hearing

Contestant appears either prior to or on day set for hearing, or the day to which it is continued [Gov. Code § 6022], and presents proof to court [see Gov. Code § 6023].

[3] Appeal

Judgment may be appealed from [see Gov. Code § 6026; see also Cal. Const., art. VI, § 11]. For procedures on appeal, see Ch. 40, Appeal: An Overview et seq.

PART IV. PROCEDURAL CHECKLIST

34-386 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 386.52

§ 386.52 Procedures to Vacate, Modify, or Set Aside Judgment, or Modify Judgment to Reflect a New Name

NOTE:

The following procedures are for use by persons who may or may not have been parties to the original proceeding. A motion to vacate, modify, or set aside the judgment of a newspaper's standing pursuant to Gov. Code § 6024(1) may be brought by any person, whether or not a party to the original proceeding, on a showing that the newspaper has ceased to be one of general circulation. A motion to modify the judgment to reflect the newspaper's new name pursuant to Gov. Code § 6024(2) may be brought by any interested party, whether or not a party to the original proceeding. Such a motion would most likely be brought by a person representing the original petitioning newspaper, although that person would not necessarily have been the original petitioner.

[1] Motion to Vacate, Modify, or Set Aside Judgment of Newspaper's Standing

[a] Prepare Papers

1. Notice of Motion

Prepare notice of motion, such as the one set out in § 386.77 [see Gov. Code § 6024(1); see also Code Civ. Proc. § 1010].

2. Verified Statement of Facts

The motion must be accompanied by a verified statement of facts, showing that the newspaper has ceased to be one of general circulation [see Gov. Code § 6024(1)(a) § 386.78].

3. Supporting Memorandum

A supporting memorandum is not specifically required to be submitted in support of the motion, but it is better practice to submit a memorandum, as is generally required in law and motion proceedings [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 3.1103(a), 3.1113; see also Ch. 417, Points and Authorities].

[b] Serve and File Papers

1. Time of Service

Ten days' notice to the original petitioner is required by Gov. Code § 6024(1). However, if possible, counsel should also comply with the longer notice period applicable to noticed motions generally [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1005 (effective January 1, 1005, at least 16 court days' notice required for most motions), 1013].

2. Manner of Service

Serve papers on the original petitioner in the same manner as with other notices of motion [see Gov. Code § 6024(1); Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1010-1013; see also Ch. 372, Motions and Orders].

3. Filing Papers

Prepare proof of service and file with moving papers in the court in which the original petition was heard [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1013a; see also Ch. 372, Motions and Orders ; Ch. 371, Motions After Trial ; and Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers].

[c] Argue Motion at Hearing

Moving party has burden of proving that newspaper has ceased to be one of general circulation [see Gov. Code § 6024(1); In re Hancock (1949) 92 Cal. App. 2d 481, 486, 207 P.2d 61 ; In re Simpson (1923) 62 Cal. App. 549, 552, 217 P. 789] .

[d] Prepare and File Order

1. If the court grants motion, prepare order, as in § 386.79, and file original order after it is signed by the judge.

2. Prepare, serve, and file notice of entry of order [Code Civ. Proc. § 664.5; see also Code Civ. Proc. § 1019.5(a) and Ch. 372, Motions and Orders].

[e] Appeal

1. An order denying a motion to vacate, modify, or set aside a decree previously entered is appealable under Gov. Code § 6026 [In re Hancock (1949) 92 Cal. App. 2d 481, 485, 207 P.2d 61] .

2. Appeals from superior courts are made to the court of appeal [Cal. Const., art. VI, § 11(a)], but Gov. Code § 6026, enacted prior to adoption of Cal. Const., art. VI, § 11, provides that a final order vacating, modifying, or setting aside a judgment previously entered is appealable to the California Supreme Court. Since Cal. Const., art. VI, § 11(a) limits appellate jurisdiction to the Supreme Court to death penalty cases, it appears that this later adopted constitutional provision supersedes the previously enacted Gov. Code § 6026. For further discussion relating to appellate jurisdiction in civil cases, see Ch. 40, Appeal: An Overview .

[2] Prepare Motion to Modify Judgment of Newspaper's Standing to Reflect New Name

[a] Prepare Papers

1. Notice of Motion

Prepare notice of motion, such as the one set out in § 386.80 [see Gov. Code § 6024(2); see also Code Civ. Proc. § 1010].

2. Verified Statement of Facts

The motion must be accompanied by a verified statement of facts showing that the newspaper has modified its name without destroying its character or identity as a newspaper of general circulation [see Gov. Code § 6024(2) § 386.81].

3. Supporting Memorandum

A supporting memorandum is not specifically required to be submitted in support of the motion, but it is better practice to submit a memorandum, as is generally required in law and motion proceedings [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 3.1103(a), 3.1113; see also Ch. 417, Points and Authorities].

[b] Give Notice and File Papers

1. Notice

NOTE:
Gov. Code § 6024(2)* apparently requires 10 days' notice on petitioner. Nevertheless, the petitioner, or his or her successor, is most likely to bring this motion. Since there would be no party on whom to serve notice in such a situation, notice by publication may be sufficient. Also, although 10 days' notice to the original petitioner is required by Gov. Code § 6024, a lengthier notice period is applicable to noticed motions generally [*see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1005 (effective January 1, 1005, at least 16 court days' notice required for most motions), 1013]. It is therefore recommended that counsel comply with the longer notice period whenever possible.

2. Filing Papers

Depending on the type of notice given, either prepare proof of service or proof of publication [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1013a, 2010, 2011; see also Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers]. File such proof with moving papers in the court in which the original petition was heard [see Ch. 371, Motions After Trial ; Ch. 372, Motions and Orders ; and Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers].

[c] Argue Motion at Hearing

Moving party has burden of proving that modification of newspaper's name has not destroyed newspaper's character as newspaper of general circulation [see Gov. Code § 6024(2); Comments to § 386.80].

[d] Prepare and File Order

1. If the court grants motion, prepare order, as in § 386.82, and file original order after it is signed by the judge.

2. Prepare, serve, and file notice of entry of order [Code Civ. Proc. § 664.5; see also Code Civ. Proc. § 1019.5(a) and Ch. 372, Motions and Orders].

[e] Appeal

See § 386.52[1][e].

[2] Use of Form

The foregoing form is for use in obtaining an adjudication of a newspaper's status as one of general circulation for a city or county, or both, or for the state, under the criteria of Gov. Code § 6000. For a newspaper to qualify as one of general circulation under the criteria of Gov. Code § 6000, it must have been established, printed, and published for at least one year prior to the filing of the petition, and, if printed or published in a town or city, it must be printed and published in the same town or city [Gov. Code §§ 6000, 6004.5]. If the newspaper is not printed and published in the same town or city, the petitioner must proceed under the alternative criteria of Gov. Code § 6008 [see discussion in Introduction § 386.12]. For obtaining an adjudication of a newspaper's status under the alternative criteria of Gov. Code § 6008, see § 386.71.

A newspaper may be adjudged as a newspaper of general circulation for either a city or a county [see Gov. Code § 6000; see also In re Covina Argus-Citizen (1960) 177 Cal. App. 2d 315, 319-320, 2 Cal. Rptr. 184 ; In re Christensen (1951) 104 Cal. App. 2d 375, 379, 231 P.2d 152] . A newspaper may also be adjudged one of general circulation for the state [see Gov. Code § 6000].

[3] Filing and Publishing

The petition must be filed in the superior court of the county in which the newspaper is established, printed, and published. It may be filed by the newspaper's publisher, manager, editor, or attorney, and must be verified [Gov. Code § 6020]. The petition must be published in a newspaper of general circulation, together with a notice of intention [Gov. Code § 6021; see § 386.72].

[4] State Statutes

"Newspaper of general circulation" defined. Gov. Code § 6000

"Established" newspaper defined. Gov. Code § 6002

"Printed" newspaper defined. Gov. Code § 6003

"Published" newspaper defined. Gov. Code § 6004

Petitioner, _____ [name], alleges:

1. Petitioner is the _____ [publisher of or manager of or editor of or attorney for] the newspaper known as _____ [state name of newspaper], hereafter referred to as "the newspaper."

2. The newspaper is a newspaper of general circulation published for the dissemination of _____ [local or telegraphic] news and intelligence of a general character in _____ [specify city, county, district, or judicial district], California. The business address of the newspaper is _____ [number], _____ [street].

3. The newspaper has a bona fide subscription list of paying subscribers, numbering _____, and a substantial distribution to paying subscribers, numbering _____, within _____ [state name of city, county, district, or judicial district for which petitioner seeks adjudication of newspaper's status].

4. For more than three years preceding the filing of this petition, the newspaper has been established under the name of _____, and has been so established and published, that is, issued and sold or distributed regularly _____ [specify interval of not less than weekly, e.g., every Thursday] in _____ [state, name of city, county, district, or judicial district for which petitioner seeks adjudication of newspaper's status].

5. During each year of the three-year period preceding the filing of this petition, the newspaper has maintained a minimum coverage of _____ [local or telegraphic] news and intelligence of a general character of not less than twenty-five percent of its total inches; it has had only one principal office of publication, located in _____ [name of city, county, district, or judicial district for which petitioner seeks adjudication of newspaper's status].

WHEREFORE, petitioner prays for judgment ascertaining and establishing _____ [name of newspaper] as a newspaper of general circulation, as defined in Section 6008 of the Government Code, for _____ [name of city, county, district, or judicial district for which petitioner seeks adjudication of newspaper's status].
Dated: _____.

[Verification. See § 386.70.]

[2] Use of Form

The foregoing form is for use in obtaining an adjudication of a newspaper's status as one of general circulation, under the criteria of Gov. Code § 6008, enacted as an alternative to the criteria of Gov. Code § 6000.

[a] Proceeding Under Gov. Code § 6008

Petitioner should proceed under Gov. Code § 6008, and use this form rather than § 386.70, if the newspaper is printed or published in a town or city, but is not printed and published in the same town or city as required by Gov. Code §§ 6000 and 6004.5 [see § 386.70]. In order to qualify under Gov. Code § 6008, however, the newpaper must have been established and published for at least three years prior to the filing of the petition, whereas under Gov. Code § 6000, the newspaper must have been established, published, and printed for only one year prior to filing the petition. In addition, Gov. Code § 6008 requires that, during the three-year period preceding the petition, the newspaper has maintained a minimum coverage of news and intelligence of a general character of twenty-five percent of its total inches, has had only one principal office of publication, which is located in the area for which it seeks an adjudication of its status, and has had a substantial distribution to paid subscribers in the area for which it seeks an adjudication of its status [see In re Carson Bulletin (1978) 85 Cal. App. 3d 785, 792-793, 149 Cal. Rptr. 764] .

[3] Governing Law

Prior to 1974 and the enactment of Gov. Code § 6008, Gov. Code § 6000 provided the only criteria for a newspaper of general circulation. Therefore, Gov. Code §§ 6001-6007 were enacted with the purpose of governing and defining a newspaper of general circulation under the standards of Gov. Code § 6000 only. In addition, any cases decided prior to 1974 were decided under Gov. Code § 6000 and may or may not apply to a newspaper of general circulation under the criteria of Gov. Code § 6008.

[4] Filing and Publishing

The petition must be filed in the superior court of the county in which the newspaper is established and published. It may be filed by the newspaper's publisher, manager, editor, or attorney, and must be verified [Gov. Code §§ 6008, 6020]. The petition, or substance thereof must be published in a newspaper of general circulation, together with a notice of intention [Gov. Code § 6021; see § 386.72].

[5] State Statutes

Alternative criteria for "newspaper of general circulation." Gov. Code § 6008

[6] Decisions

Gov. Code § 6008 as providing criteria for newspaper of general circulation alternative to criteria of Gov. Code § 6000 so that newspaper as required either to be printed in the applicable area or to have substantial distribution to paid subscribers in that area. In re Carson Bulletin (1978) 85 Cal. App. 3d 785, 792-793, 149 Cal. Rptr. 764

Gov. Code § 6008 requirement of substantial distribution to paid subscribers as not unconstitutionally vague. In re Carson Bulletin (1978) 85 Cal. App. 3d 785, 794-795, 149 Cal. Rptr. 764

Requirement in Gov. Code § 6008 of "substantial distribution to paid subscribers," though relative, as not meaning paid distribution to less than two-hundredths of one percent of the local population. In re Carson Bulletin (1978) 85 Cal. App. 3d 785, 795, 149 Cal. Rptr. 764

[2] Use of Form

The foregoing form is for use by petitioner to provide notice, as required by Gov. Code § 6021, that petitioner intends to apply on a named day for an order that the newspaper be ascertained and established as one of general circulation.

[3] Publication

[a] Requirement

The petition, as in § 386.70 or 2, or the substance of the petition, must be published together with the foregoing notice [Gov. Code § 6021]. Publication of the petition, or its substance, and the foregoing notice must be made for 10 days [Gov. Code §§ 6021, 6062]. Publication must be made in the petitioning newspaper and in some other newspaper of general circulation published in the same city, or if there is no such other newspaper, or it refuses to publish, then in some newspaper of general circulation for the county. If there is no other newspaper of general circulation for the county, or if such newspaper refuses to publish, then publication must be made in some newspaper of general circulation in an adjacent county, or in another newspaper as directed by the court [Gov. Code § 6021].

[b] Proof of Publication in Newspaper

Evidence of the publication of a document or notice required by law, or by an order of a court or judge, to be published in a newspaper may be given by the affidavit, or declaration under penalty executed pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5, of the printer of the newspaper, or his or her foreman or principal clerk, annexed to a copy of the document or notice, specifying the times when, and the paper in which, the publication was made [Code Civ. Proc. § 2010]. The affidavit or declaration is filed with the court clerk [Code Civ. Proc. § 2011].

I, _____ [name], hereby apply, _____ [as petitioner or on behalf of petitioner] in the above-entitled matter, for an order directing the publication of the [substance of the] petition and notice of intention to apply on a named day for an order declaring the status of the above-named newspaper as one of general circulation, in order to enable such publication in compliance with Section 6021 of the Government Code.

Dated: _____

_____ [signature]

[Attorney for] Petitioner

DECLARATION

I, _____ [name], declare:

1. I am the petitioner in the above-entitled matter.

2. I have filed with this court a verified petition to have the standing of the newspaper known as _____ [state name of newspaper], hereinafter referred to as "the newspaper," as a newspaper of general circulation ascertained and established, pursuant to Section _____ [6000 or 6008 of the Government Code].

[EITHER]

3. There are no newspapers of general circulation in the city or county [, or adjacent county,] in which to publish [the substance of] such petition and the accompanying notice of intention pursuant to the publication requirements of Section 6021 of the Government Code.

[OR]

3. On _____ [date], I requested publication of [the substance of] such petition and the accompanying notice of intention in a newspaper of general circulation for _____ [state name of city, county, or adjacent county] known as _____ [state name of other newspaper]. That newspaper refused to make such publication. [In addition, although I attempted, on _____ [date], to have such publication made in _____ (state name(s) of other newspaper(s)), (an)other newspaper(s) of general circulation, in _____ (state name of city, county, or adjacent county), such publication was refused.]

4. It is necessary that the court direct publication of [the substance of] the petition and accompanying notice of intention in some newspaper in order that petitioner be enabled to comply with the publication requirements of Section 6021 of the Government Code.

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of California that the foregoing is true and correct.

ORDER DIRECTING PUBLICATION

[Gov. Code § 6021]

Proof having been made to the satisfaction of the court,

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the [substance of the] petition to have the above--named newspaper adjudicated as one of general circulation, together with the notice of intention to apply on a named day for an order declaring the newspaper to be one of general circulation, be published, pursuant to Section 6062 of the Government Code,

(1) In the petitioning newspaper, and

(2) In the _____ [name of newspaper], a newspaper of general circulation in _____ [name of city, county, or adjacent county].
Dated: _____.

_____ [signature]

Judge of the Superior Court

[2] Use of Form

The foregoing form is for use in obtaining an order directing publication of the petition and notice of intention in a particular newspaper when publication by the petitioner in another newspaper is not possible because other newspapers of general circulation in the city, county, or adjacent county do not exist or will not consent to publish the petition and notice of intention [see Gov. Code § 6021].

Publication must be made in the petitioner's newspaper and in some other newspaper of general circulation in the same city, or if none exists, or publication in such newspaper is refused, then in some newspaper of general circulation for the county. If there is no such newspaper in the county, or if it refuses publication, then the petitioner may either publish the petition and notice of intention in a newspaper of general circulation for an adjacent county, or in such other newspaper as the court directs [Gov. Code § 6021].

Counsel should consult local rules regarding the procedure for making ex parte applications. For a discussion of ex parte applications for orders generally, see Ch. 372, Motions and Orders .

California, should be denied on the following grounds:

[EITHER, if petitioner is seeking adjudication under the criteria of Gov. Code § 6000, the enumerated grounds might include the following:]

(a) _____ [Name of newspaper] does not have a bona fide subscription list of paying subscribers.

(b) _____ [Name of newspaper] is a newspaper devoted to the interests, or published for the entertainment or instruction of a particular _____ [class or profession or trade or calling or race or denomination], that is _____ [name of class, profession, trade, calling, race or denomination], with the avowed purpose to entertain or instruct such class, within the contemplation of Section 6001 of the Government Code.

(c) _____ [Name of newspaper] has not been established, as that term is defined in Section 6002 of the Government Code, in that it has not been in existence under that name for the whole of one year immediately preceding the filing of the petition.

(d) _____ [Name of newspaper] is not printed and published in the same _____ [city or town], as required by Section 6004.5 of the Government Code, in that it is printed in the _____ [city or town] of _____ [name of city or town] and published in the _____ [city or town] of _____ [name of city or town].

[OR, if petitioner is seeking adjudication under the criteria of Gov. Code § 6008, the enumerated grounds might include the following:]

(a) _____ [Name of newspaper] does not have a substantial distribution to paid subscribers in _____ [name of city, county, district, or judicial district for which petitioner seeks adjudication].

(b) [Name of newspaper] has not been established, in that it has not been in existence under a specified name, during the entire three-year period prior to filing its petition.

[2] Use of Form

The foregoing form is for use by anyone seeking to contest the petition to have a newspaper's status adjudicated as one of general circulation. Any person may appear and contest the petition, either prior to or on the day set for the hearing, or the day to which it is continued [Gov. Code § 6022]. Because a petition may be based on the criteria of a newspaper of general circulation as found in either Gov. Code § 6000 or Gov. Code § 6008, the contestant will also have to base his, her, or its argument on the newspaper's failure to meet the criteria of the applicable section.

[3] Caption

When a contest is filed, it is suggested that, as in the case of a cross complaint, the title of the proceeding and parties should contain a double caption, as shown in the caption of the foregoing form.

[4] Capacity of Contestant

"Any person" may appear and contest the petition [Gov. Code § 6022]. Therefore, it would seem to be unnecessary to allege the capacity or interest of the contestant. If, however, the contetant has a particular legal capacity, such as that of a corporation, the capacity should be alleged initially in the body of the document.

vs.
Respondent.

The verified petition of _____ [name] to have the standing of _____ [name of newspaper] ascertained and established as a newspaper of general circulation, as defined in Section _____ [6000 or 6008 of the Government Code], came on regularly for hearing by the court on _____ [date], in [_____ (Department or Division) _____ of] the above-entitled court. Petitoner appeared _____ [by his/her attorney _____ (name) or on his/her own behalf] [and contestants(s) appeared _____ (by his/her attorneys(s) _____ (name(s)) or on his/her own behalf].

Evidence, both oral and documentary, was introduced [on behalf of _____ (both or all) parties], and the matter was [argued and] submitted for decision. On proof made to the satisfaction of the court, the court finds as follows:

1. The [substance of the] petition and notice of intention of petitioner to apply to the court on a named day for an order declaring the newspaper to be a newspaper of general circulation was duly published pursuant to Section 6062 of the Government Code, proof of such publication was duly made, and the court set the petition for hearing, as required by Sections 6021 and 6022 of the Government Code.

2. The _____ [name of newspaper] is a newspaper of general circulation, published for the dissemination of _____ [local or telegraphic] newsand intelligence of a general character in the City of _____, County of _____, California.

[EITHER, if pursuant to Gov. Code § 6000]

3. The petitioning newspaper has a bona fide subscription list of paying subscribers, numbering _____ in the _____ [city or county] [and elsewhere in the surrounding area].

4. For more than one year preceding the filing of the petition, the petitioning newspaper has been established under the name of _____ [name], and has been printed and published at regular intervals in _____ [name of city or county].

5. During the whole of such one-year period, the mechanical work of producing the petitioning newspaper, that is, the work of typesetting and impressing type on paper, has been performed in _____ [name of city or county]; the newspaper has been issued from the same _____ [city or county] where it is printed and sold; it has been both printed and published in the _____ [city or county]; and it has been published as a _____ [weekly or daily or other] newspaper on each _____ [specify day(s) of week newspaper is published] [and has had an average _____ (weekly or daily or other) circulation of _____ (state number)].

[OR, if pursuant to Gov. Code § 6008]

3. The petitioning newspaper has a bona fide subscription list of paying subscribers numbering _____, and a substantial distribution to paying subscribers numbering _____, within _____ [state name of city, county, district, or judicial district for which newspaper is adjudicated as one of general circulation].

4. For more than three years preceding the filing of the petition, the newspaper has been established under the name of _____, and has been so established and published, that is, issued and sold or distributed at regular intervals of not less than weekly in _____ [state name of city, district, or judicial district for which newspaper is adjudged as one of general circulation].

5. During each year of such three-year period, the newspaper has maintained a minimum coverage of _____ [local or telegraphic] news and intelligence of a general character of not less than 25 percent of its total inches; and has had only one principal office of publication, located in _____ [state name of city, county, district, or judicial district for which newspaper is adjudicated as one of general circulation].

WHEREFORE, IT IS ORDERED, ADJUDGED, AND DECREED that the _____ [name of newspaper] is a newspaper of general circulation, as defined in section _____ [6000or 6008 of the Government Code], for _____ [state name of city, county, district, or judicial district], California.

CAUTION:

In a contested action or special proceeding, the party submitting a judgment for entry must prepare and mail a copy of the notice of entry of judgment to all appearing parties and file proof of service, together with the original notice of entry of judgment, unless a prevailing party was not represented by counsel or the court orders the clerk to mail notice. [Code Civ. Proc. § 664.5].

[2] Use of Form

This form is for use by the petitioner to obtain a judgment that the petitioning newspaper is one of general circulation. If requested by the court to do so, counsel for petitioner will prepare the judgment and present it to the judge for signature. Within 10 days after the hearing on the petition, the court must render its decision and judgment and the clerk must enter it in the court records [Gov. Code § 6023]. If there are any contestants to the petition, a notice of entry of judgment must be served on any contestant appearing at the hearing [see Code Civ. Proc. § 664.5]. For a form of notice of entry of judgment, see Ch. 318 Judgments, § 318.40 et seq.

[3] Findings

Findings are included in this judgment because Gov. Code § 6023 provides for the court to render its decision and judgment.

To _____ [name], petitioner and respondent in the above-entitled matter [, and to _____ (his/her) attorney of record _____ (name)]:

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that, on _____ [date], at _____ [time], or as soon thereafter as the matter may be heard, in [_____ (Department or Division) _____ of] this court, located at _____ [address], _____ [city], contestant herein will, and hearby does, move for an order _____ [vacating or modifying or setting aside] the judgment of the above-named newspaper's status as a newspaper of general circulation for _____ [name of city, county, district, or judicial district for which newspaper was declared to be a newspaper of general circulation], California. The motion will be made on the grounds that the newspaper has ceased to be a newspaper of general circulation as defined in Section _____ [6000 or 6008] of the Government Code].

The motion will be based on this notice of motion, on the declaration of _____ [name] and the supporting memorandum served and filed herewith, on the papers and records on file herein, and on such oral and documentary evidence as may be presented at the hearing of the motion.
Dated: _____.

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Contestant _____ [name]

[2] Use of Form

This notice of motion is for use by any person, whether or not a party to the original proceeding, to move for an order vacating, modifying, or setting aside the court's judgment of a newspaper's standing as a newspaper of general circulation. The motion must be accompanied by a verified statement of facts to the court.

[3] Notice

Although Gov. Code § 6024(1) requires 10 days' notice of this motion, Code Civ. Proc. § 1005 imposes a lengthier notice period for noticed motions generally, with more time required if the notice is served by mail, express mail, other method of overnight delivery, or fax [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b) (effective January 1, 1005, at least 16 court days' notice required for most motions)]. It is therefore a prudent practice to comply with the longer notice period of Code Civ. Proc. § 1005 whenever possible.

[4] Required Showing

In order to obtain an order vacating, modifying, or setting aside a judgment of newspaper's standing as one of general circulation, the moving party must make a satisfactory showing to the court that the newspaper has ceased to be one of general circulation [Gov. Code § 6024(1)]. The moving party has the burden of showing that ultimate facts have materially changed subsequent to the original order adjudicating the newspaper's standing [In re Hancock (1949) 92 Cal. App. 2d 481, 486, 207 P.2d 61] . The motion is properly granted if the newspaper no longer meets the requirements of either Gov. Code § 6000 or 6008 [In re Carson Bulletin (1978) 85 Cal. App. 3d 785, 789-790, 149 Cal. Rptr. 764] .

[5] Caption

The double caption in this form should be used to indicate the moving party as "contestant" and the original petitioner as "respondent." The statute does not specifically refer to the moving party as "contestant," however that term has been used in this form as one possible designation for the moving party that might avoid confusion. The moving party need not have been a contestant to the original petition, however [see Gov. Code § 6024(1)].

[6] Supporting Memorandum

A supporting memorandum is not specifically required to be submitted in support of the motion, but it is better practice to submit a memorandum, as is generally required in law and motion proceedings [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 3.1103(a), 3.1113; see also Ch. 417, Points and Authorities].

[7] Decisions

Gov. Code § 6024 language stating that court "may" vacate, modify, or set aside decision and judgment as not meaning that court has discretion to determine whether or not newspaper's failure to meet standards of newspaper of general circulation may be disregarded. In re Covina Argus-Citizen (1960) 177 Cal. App. 2d 315, 318-319, 2 Cal. Rptr. 184

Adjudication that newspaper is one of general circulation for city and county as permitted to be modified under Gov. Code § 6024 to vacate only portion adjudging newspaper to be one of general circulation for city. In re Covina Argus-Citizen (1960) 177 Cal. App. 2d 315, 319-320, 2 Cal. Rptr. 184

Petitioner as failing to show that newspaper had ceased to be one of general circulation when evidence showed that Gov. Code § 6007 applied and that during wartime between 3,000 and 4,000 copies of newspaper had been printed per week in city of 13,000, serving surrounding area of 55,000, although there was some variation in delivery due to wartime shortages. In re Hancock (1940) 92 Cal. App. 2d 481, 489-490, 207 P.2d 61

Original judgment that newspaper is one of general circulation as res judicata, and burden as on party seeking to vacate judgment to prove newspaper has ceased to be one of general circulation. In re Simpson (1923) 62 Cal. App. 549, 552, 217 P. 789

[2] Use of Form

This form is used to support a motion to vacate, modify, or set aside a judgment pursuant to Gov. Code § 6024(1). That section requires that the motion be accompanied by a "verified statement of facts," which in this form is referred to as a declaration [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]. The declaration must include statements showing why the newspaper in question has ceased to be a newspaper of general circulation. Since a newspaper may qualify as one of general circulation under either Gov. Code § 6000 or Gov. Code § 6008, the declaration must state why the newspaper fails to quality under each of those two sections.

[2] Use of Form

This form of order is for use when the court has granted a motion to vacate, modify, or set aside an earlier judgment adjudging a newspaper to be one of general circulation on a showing that the newspaper has ceased to be one of general circulation [see Gov. Code § 6024(1)].

[3] State Statutes

VI, § 11(a)* (limiting appellate jurisdiction of Supreme Court to death penalty cases only; this constitutional provision appears to supersede the previously enacted Gov. Code § 6026, and would require any appeal be taken to court of appeal); see also discussion in Procedural Checklist, Paragraph IX(E)

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that, on _____ [date], at _____ [time], or as soon thereafter as the matter may be heard, in [_____ (Department or Division) _____ of] this court, located at _____ [street address], _____ [city], petitioner in the above-entitled matter will, and hereby does, move for an order modifying the judgment of the above-named newspaper's status as a newspaper of general circulation for _____ [name of city, county, district, or judicial district for which newspaper was adjudged to be one of general circulation], California, to reflect a modification in such newspaper's name.

The motion will be made on the ground that the newspaper has modified its name without any substantial change in its character or identity as a newspaper of general circulation.

The motion will be based on this notice of motion, on the declaration of _____ [name] and the memorandum of points and authorities [served and] filed herewith, on the papers and records on file herein, and on such oral and documentary evidence as may be presented at the hearing of the motion.
Dated: _____.

_____ [firm name, if any]

Attorney for Contestant _____ [name]

[2] Use of Form

This form is for use in obtaining an order modifying the judgment of a newspaper's standing to reflect a modification in the newspaper's name. The decision and judgment of a newspaper's standing as one of general circulation may be modified by the court on its own motion or on the motion of any person interested, whether or not a party to the original proceeding, on a verified statement of facts made to the court, along with 10 days' notice to the petitioner, and a satisfactory showing to the court that the newspaper has modified its name without any substantial change in its character or identity as a newspaper of general circulation [Gov. Code § 6024(2)].

[3] Notice Requirement

It would seem that this motion would be made by a person representing the newspaper, who wished to have the original judgment reflect the newspaper's new name. Nevertheless, Gov. Code § 6024(2) appears to require 10 days' notice to the original petitioner only. It seems unlikely that someone representing the newspaper for purposes of this motion would need to give notice of the motion to someone who represented the same newspaper for purposes of the original petition. It is therefore unclear what notice is actually required on this motion. It is suggested that notice of the motion might be given in the same manner as notice of the original petition, that is, by publication in the petitioning newspaper and some other newspaper of general circulation, pursuant to the requirements of Gov. Code § 6021 [see § 386.72].

Regarding the time period required for notice, although Gov. Code § 6024(2) requires 10 days' notice of this motion, Code Civ. Proc. § 1005 imposes a lengthier notice period for noticed motions generally, with more time required if the notice is served by mail, express mail, other method of overnight delivery, or fax [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b) (effective January 1, 1005, at least 16 court days' notice required for most motions)]. It is therefore a prudent practice to comply with the longer notice period of Code Civ. Proc. § 1005 whenever possible.

[4] Caption

The double caption in this form reflects the contingency that there was a contestant to the original petition. If there was no such contestant, then that part of the caption referring to a contestant and respondent should be deleted.

[5] State Statutes

Modifying judgment to reflect modification in newspaper's name. Gov. Code § 6024(2)

[6] Decisions

Decree reflecting newspaper's qualification as newspaper of general circulation as upheld or upheld and modified under Gov. Code § 6024(2), if newspaper qualified prior to 1923, even though place of printing changed. Brown Newspaper Publishing Co. v. Superior Court (1981) 114 Cal. App. 3d 462, 468, 469, 170 Cal. Rptr. 611 ; In re The Anaheim Daily Gazette (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 438, 444-445, 29 Cal. Rptr. 520

Chapter 387 NONMARITAL COHABITATION
PART I. SCOPE

34-387 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 387.01

§ 387.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter starts with an overview of cohabitation and a review of domestic partnerships [see § 387.10 et seq.].

This chapter then examines the legal effects of cohabitation, and compares the rights of married persons to those of nonmarital partners in a number of contexts. It also discusses various forms of joint ownership available to nonmarital partners. This chapter also briefly summarizes federal and state laws prohibiting credit discrimination against nonmarital partners [see § 387.30 et seq.].

This chapter then discusses the enforcement of rights that unmarried, cohabiting parties may acquire in relation to each other concerning property, support, and related matters, by implied agreement between themselves, when neither of them believes himself or herself to be legally married to the other [see § 387.50 et seq.]. It also discusses equitable remedies that may be available to the nonmarital partners. It sets forth forms of complaint for use in enforcing implied agreements [see §§ 387.200-387.201].

§ 387.10 Governing Law

The rights of unmarried cohabitants (referred to as "nonmarital partners" in this chapter) are not regulated, as such, by statute. The leading case defining the rights and duties of nonmarital partners is Marvin v. Marvin (1976) 18 Cal. 3d 660, 681, 134 Cal. Rptr. 815, 557 P.2d 106 . The leading case extending the constitutional protection of the parent-child relationship to unmarried parents is Stanley v. Illinois (1972) 405 U.S. 645, 649-659, 92 S. Ct. 1208, 31 L. Ed. 2d 551 .

Statutory provisions governing the availability of federal income tax dependency deductions to a nonmarital partner for his or her cohabitant and the cohabitant's children or dependents are contained in I.R.C. § 152(d)(2)(H), (f)(3). Statutory provisions governing the availability of unemployment benefits for a nonmarital partner who resigns to accompany his or her nonmarital partner to another location are contained in Unemp. Ins. Code § 1256. Other statutory provisions that permit nonmarital partners to approximate the incidents of marriage are discussed in § 387.30 et seq.

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Cohabitation In General and Domestic Partnerships

34-387 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 387.11

§ 387.11 Legal Recognition of Cohabitation

[1] In General

The California Supreme Court has taken judicial notice of a modern increase in the number of couples living together without marriage [Marvin v. Marvin (1976) 18 Cal. 3d 660, 665, 134 Cal. Rptr. 815, 557 P.2d 106 ; see Comment, In re Cary: A Judicial Recognition of Illicit Cohabitation, 25 Hastings L.J. 1226 (1974) (according to federal census, approximately eight times more couples were living together without marriage in 1970 than in 1960)]. The Court has noted the following categories of persons who may choose to live together without marriage [see Marvin v. Marvin (1976) 18 Cal. 3d 660, 675-676 n.11, 134 Cal. Rptr. 815, 557 P.2d 106] :

- Persons who make a deliberate decision to avoid the strictures of the community property system by not getting married.

- Couples who seek an intimate and committed relationship without the permanency that marriage implies.

- Persons who fear the loss of pension, welfare, or tax benefits that may be occasioned by marriage [see Beckman v. Mayhew (1975) 49 Cal. App. 3d 529, 532-533, 122 Cal. Rptr. 604] .

- Couples who would like to try living together on an experimental basis as a prelude to marriage.

- Persons who cannot spare the time or money required to dissolve a former marriage [see In re Raya (1967) 255 Cal. App. 2d 260, 262, 63 Cal. Rptr. 252] .

- Persons who erroneously believe that the doctrine of common-law marriage prevails in California and that merely by living together they can become legally married.

To this list must be added persons who are unable to marry, including persons who are still married to, although separated from, a previous partner, and couples of the same sex, discussed in § 387.11[5], who are prohibited from marrying in California [see Fam. Code § 300; Kay & Amyx, "Marvin v. Marvin: Preserving the Options," 65 Cal. L. Rev. 937 (1977); see also discussion of right to marry in Ch. 359, Marriage .].

In addition, on and after January 1, 2000, unmarried couples of the same sex, or of the opposite sex who are over age 62 and eligible for Social Security benefits, who meet applicable requirements may register with the State of California as "domestic partners" [Fam. Code § 297 et seq. (operative until January 1, 2005); § 387.11[2]]. Starting January 1, 2005, the requirements for registration are modified and the consequences of registration are significantly broadened [Fam. Code § 297 et seq. (operative on and after January 1, 2005); § 387.11[3][d]].

This legislation grants legal recognition to registered domestic partners comparable to marriage, both procedurally and in terms of substantive rights and obligations granted to and imposed on partners, and is supported by policy considerations similar to those favoring marriage [Koebke v. Bernardo Heights Country Club (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 824, 845, 31 Cal. Rptr. 3d 565] . The California Defense of Marriage Act (Fam. Code § 308.5), which provides that only marriage between a man and a woman is valid or recognized in this state, does not preclude the legislature from giving registered domestic partners the same rights and obligations as spouses [Knight v. Superior Court (2005) 128 Cal. App. 4th 14, 22-31, 26 Cal. Rptr. 3d 687] .

[2] Domestic Partner Registration Before January 1, 2005

[a] Scope of Prior Law

An increasing number of California communities permit unmarried couples to register with a local city or county clerk as "domestic partners." Registration has varying effects depending on the terms of the local ordinance, such as eligibility to participate in health care benefits as a beneficiary of a partner who is employedby the city or county. In addition, on and after January 1, 2000, legislation permits registration of "domestic partnerships" with the State of California [Fam. Code § 297 et seq.]. The following discussion concerns the requirements for, and effects of, statewide registration, which generally will preempt local laws on domestic partnerships on and after July 1, 2000 (see § 387.11[2][f]) [see Fam. Code § 299.6(a)].

[b] Definitions and Eligibility for State Registration

On and after January 1, 2000, two unmarried adults who "have chosen to share one another's lives in an intimate and committed relationship of mutual caring" may register as domestic partners with the Secretary of State of California if they meet the following requirements [Fam. Code § 297(a), (b) (operative until January 1, 2005)]:

1. Both persons are at least 18 years old, capable of consenting to the domestic partnership, and are either (a) members of the same sex or, (b) if one or both of them qualify for Social Security benefits, and with respect to such qualifying persons who are members of the opposite sex, one or both are over the age of 62;

2. Neither person is married, a member of another domestic partnership, or related to one another by blood in such a way that would prevent them from marrying in California--assuming they otherwise were permitted to marry;

3. Both persons have a common residence;

4. Both persons agree to be jointly responsible for each other's "basic living expenses" incurred during the partnership;

5. Both persons file a Declaration of Domestic Partnership with the Secretary of State in accordance with state law; and

6. Neither person has previously have filed a Declaration of Domestic Partnership with the Secretary of State without it having already been terminated in accordance with state law.

As used in the above requirements, the term "have a common residence" means that both partners share the same residence. It is not necessary that the legal right to possess the residence be in both partner's names, and the fact that one partner leaves the residence does not mean that there ceases to be a common residence if the person who left intends to return. In addition, the fact that either or both partners have additional residences does not preclude their having a common residence [see Fam. Code § 297(c) (operative until January 1, 2005)].

"Joint responsibility" and "basic living expenses" are also defined by statute. "Joint responsibility" means that each partner agrees to provide for the other partner's basic living expenses if that partner is unable to provide for himself or herself. "Basic living expenses" means shelter, utilities, and all other costs directly related to maintenance of the common household of the partners' common residence. It also means any other cost, such as medical care, if some or all of the cost is paid as a benefit because a person is another person's domestic partner [see Fam. Code § 297(d), (e) (operative until January 1, 2005)].

For discussion of the rights of third parties to enforce the "joint responsibility" of the partners, see § 387.11[3][c] [see Fam. Code § 297(e) (operative until January 1, 2005)].

[c] Registration With Secretary of State

To register a domestic partnership at the state level, persons who meet the eligibility requirements for registration (see § 387.11[2][b]) must file a completed Declaration of Domestic Partnership form with the Secretary of State, and pay a filing fee. The form--which is promulgated by the Secretary of State and distributed both through its offices and county clerk offices--must require each applicant to (1) recite that he or she currently meets the eligibility requirements for registration, (2) provide a mailing address, (3) sign the form with a declaration that all representations are true, correct, and contain no material omissions of fact to the best of his or her knowledge and belief, and (4) have his or her signature acknowledged by a notary public. Both partners are to sign one form (see § 387.160). A violation of the registration procedures is punishable as a misdemeanor [see Fam. Code § 298 (operative until January 1, 2005)].

On accepting the Declaration, the Secretary of State will register it and return a copy of the registered form to the partners at the address they provided for their common residence [see Fam. Code § 298.5(a) (operative until January 1, 2005)].

No person who has filed a Declaration of Domestic Partnership may file a new Declaration until at least six months after the date that a Notice of Termination of Domestic Partnership (see § 387.11[3][e]) was filed with the Secretary of State in connection with the termination of the most recent domestic partnership. However, this prohibition does not apply if the prior domestic partnership ended because one of the partners died or married [see Fam. Code § 298.5(b) (operative until January 1, 2005)].

[d] Termination of Domestic Partnership

Termination of a domestic partnership that has been established of record with the Secretary of State is complete on the happening of any of the following: (1) one partner giving, or sending to the other by certified mail, a written notice that he or she is terminating the partnership; (2) death of a partner; (3) marriage of a partner; or (4) the cessation of the partners having a common residence [see Fam. Code § 299(a) (repealed January 1, 2005)].

On termination, at least one partner must file a Notice of Termination of Domestic Partnership (a form promulgated by the Secretary of State) with the office of the Secretary of State by certified mail (see § 387.161). The date of receipt of the form by the Secretary of State will be deemed the actual termination date of the domestic partnership, unless termination occurs because of one partner's marriage or death--in which case the date will be that listed on the termination form. The partner who files the Notice of Termination of Domestic Partnership must send a copy of the notice to the last known address of the other partner [see Fam. Code § 299(b) (repealed January 1, 2005)].

A former domestic partner who has given a copy of a Declaration of Domestic Partnership to any third party in order to qualify for any benefit or right must, within 60 days of termination of the partnership, give or send to that third party written notification of the termination at the third party's last known address. A third party who suffers a loss as a result of the failure by a domestic partner to send this notice is entitled to seek recovery from the partner who was obliged to send it for any actual resulting loss [see Fam. Code § 299(c) (repealed January 1, 2005)]. However, failure to notify a third party of the termination of a domestic partnership does not delay or prevent its termination [see Fam. Code § 299(d) (repealed January 1, 2005)].

[e] Legal Effects of Domestic Partnership

As a result of establishing a domestic partnership that is eligible for state registration, the partners are jointly responsible, pursuant to their agreement, for each other's "basic living expenses," as defined by statute (see § 387.11[2][b]). In addition, persons to whom these "basic living expenses" are owed may enforce this responsibility if, in extending credit or providing goods or services, they relied on the existence of the domestic partnership and the agreement of the partners to be jointly responsible for those specific expenses [Fam. Code § 297(e) (operative until January 1, 2005); Fam. Code § 299.5(a) (repealed January 1, 2005)].

State registration as a domestic partner is not evidence of, and does not establish, any rights existing under law other than as expressly provided to domestic partners in Fam. Code § 297 et seq. (establishment, registration, and termination, of domestic partnerships), and any provision of law specifically referring to domestic partners. And the existence of the above statutory provisions does not diminish any right under any other provision of law [see Fam. Code § 299.5(a) (repealed January 1, 2005); Holguin v. Flores (2004) 122 Cal. App. 4th 428, 435-437, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 749 (domestic partnership statute does not apply to unmarried cohabiting couples generally)]. In addition, state registration (1) does not of itself change the character of real or personal property or any interest in property owned by either partner or both of them before registering, and (2) does not of itself create any interest in, or rights to, any real or personal property owned by one partner in the other partner, including, but not limited to, rights similar to community or quasi-community property [see Fam. Code § 299.5(c), (d) (repealed January 1, 2005)]. Moreover, the formation of a domestic partnership does not change the individual income or estate tax liability of each domestic partner before or during the partnership, unless otherwise provided by law [see Fam. Code § 299.5(f) (repealed January 1, 2005)].

Any property or interest that the parties acquire during their partnership in which title is shared will be held by them in "proportion of interest assigned to each partner at the time the property or interest was acquired unless expressly agreed in writing by both parties," and this principle governs any division of property on termination of the partnership [see Fam. Code § 299.5(e) (repealed January 1, 2005)]. Finally, on termination of the partnership, the partners, from that time forward, will incur none of the obligations to one another as domestic partners that are created in Fam. Code § 297 et seq. (establishment, registration, and termination, of domestic partnerships) and other any provision of law specifically referring to domestic partners [see Fam. Code § 299.5(b) (repealed January 1, 2005)].

Apart from the above legal effects, legislation that became operative January 1, 2002, established a variety of legal rights that flow from attaining the status of a domestic partner, as defined in Fam. Code § 297. Two of the most significant of these are that:

1. A cause of action for wrongful death or for negligent infliction of emotional distress may now be brought with respect to a domestic partner [Civ. Code § 1714.01; Code Civ. Proc. § 377.60(a), (f); see Bouley v. Long Beach Memorial Medical Center (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 601, 606, 25 Cal. Rptr. 3d 813 (2002 and 2005 amendments to Code Civ. Proc. § 377.60, giving domestic partners standing, operate retroactively and apply to deaths occurring before January 1, 2002); see also Armijo v. Miles (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 1405, 1412, 26 Cal. Rptr. 3d 623 (amendment to Code Civ. Proc. § 377.60, giving domestic partners standing, does not violate California Defense of Marriage Act (Fam. Code § 308.5) because it has nothing to do with marriage)].

2. A domestic partner may be treated as a "stepparent" for purposes of filing a petition for adoption of a child of his or her domestic partner [Fam. Code § 9000(b), (g)].

In addition, the legislation that became operative January 1, 2002, set forth a host of other domestic partner rights in the areas of (1) continued health coverage for a partner and his or her child under the Public Employees' Medical andHospital Care Act on the death of the employee or annuitant; (2) rights to make health care decisions on behalf of a domestic partner under certain circumstances; (3) coverage under group health care service plans; (4) use of sick leave to attend to an ill domestic partner; (5) conservatorship proceedings; (6) unemployment benefits that otherwise might be lost in following a domestic partner to a new location; (7) participation by children of a domestic partner in administration of a decedent's estate; and (8) claims for disability benefits on behalf of a domestic partner who is mentally unable to make the claim for benefits. The legislation also provided that termination of a domestic partnership, among other effects, revokes a bequest of property made in a will to a former domestic partner, as described in Probate Code Section 6122.1. Finally, the legislation extended to domestic partners a limited number of tax benefits--relating to an exclusion from gross income for certain amounts expended for medical care and employer provided coverage under an accident or health plan, and with respect to a deduction for certain health insurance costs of self-employed individuals and regarding some group health plans.

[f] State Preemption of Local Domestic Partnership Laws

The provisions for state registration of domestic partners (§ 387.11[3][c]) preempt any local ordinance regarding domestic partnership on and after July 1, 2000. Any domestic partnership previously established under local ordinance will remain valid, but on and after July 1, 2000, such a partnership will be governed by the state law provided that state registration occurs [see Fam. Code § 299.6(a), (b)]. If state registration does not occur, the provisions of the Domestic Partner Act do not apply to the partnership [Velez v. Smith (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 1154, 1167, 48 Cal. Rptr. 3d 642 (registration of domestic partnership under local law does not constitute registration under Act)].

Despite state preemption, however, local jurisdictions are expressly permitted to retain or adopt ordinances, policies, or laws that offer rights within that jurisdiction to domestic partners or that impose duties on third parties regarding domestic partners, as defined by Fam. Code § 297 et seq. or as more broadly defined by the local jurisdiction, that are in addition to those provided under state law. Those local rights may be conditioned on the partners' agreement to assume the additional obligations set forth in Fam. Code § 297 et seq. [see Fam. Code § 299.6(c)].

[3] Domestic Partnerships on and After January 1, 2005

[a] Scope of Current Law

The California Domestic Partner Rights and Responsibilities Act of 2003 extends the rights and duties of marriage to persons registered as domestic partners on and after January 1, 2005 [Stats. 2003, ch. 421]. Transitional and administrative provisions of this legislation took effect January 1, 2004, but its major provisions become operative January 1, 2005 [Stats. 2003, ch. 421 § 14]. This legislation is intended (1) to provide all caring and committed couples, regardless of their gender or sexual orientation, the opportunity to obtain essential rights and to assume corresponding duties; and (2) to further the state's interests in promoting stable and lasting family relationships and in protecting residents from the consequences of various common life crises [see Stats. 2003, ch. 421].

The provisions of this Act are intended to apply to all California domestic partnerships in existence on or after January 1, 2005, including those registered under prior law. Accordingly, the Secretary of State is directed to send a statutory letter to existing registered domestic partners on or before June 30, 2004, to send the letter again on or before December 1, 2004, and to send the letter again on or before January 31, 2005. The letter advises registered domestic partners that state law relating to the rights and responsibilities of domestic partners changes as of January 1, 2005; and that domestic partners who do not wish to be subject to "new rights and responsibilities, including laws governing community property, those governing property transfer, those regarding duties of mutual financial support and mutual responsibilities for certain debts to third parties, and many others" must terminate their domestic partnership before January 1, 2005. The statutory letter further advises existing domestic partners that the requirements for termination of a domestic partnership also change as of January 1, 2005 [see Fam. Code § 299.3].

An amendment enacted during 2004 and operative January 1, 2005, allowed parties to domestic partnerships registered before January 1, 2005, to make enforceable agreements between themselves up to June 30, 2005 [Fam. Code § 297.5(k)(2); see Fam. Code §§ 1600-1620]. The remaining notice from the Secretary of State to pre-2005 registered partners was required to include a sentence advising partners that they would have until June 30, 2005, to enter into a written agreement with their domestic partners that would be enforceable in the same manner as a premarital agreement under California law [Fam. Code § 299.3].

[b] Requirements for Domestic Partnership

Two adults may establish a domestic partnership when both persons file a declaration of domestic partnership with the Secretary of State, and (1) both have a common residence; (2) neither is married to someone else, or is a member of another domestic partnership with someone else that has not been terminated, dissolved, or adjudged a nullity; (3) they are not related by blood in a way that would prevent them from being married to each other; (4) both are at least age 18; (5) either (a) both persons are members of the same sex or (b) at least one is eligible for Social Security benefits, and at least one is over the age of 62; and (6) both are capable of consenting to the domestic partnership [Fam. Code § 297(b) (operative January 1, 2005); Velez v. Smith (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 1154, 1165-1166 , 48 Cal. Rptr. 3d 642 (to obtain benefits of Domestic Partnership Act, formal registration is necessary)].

A legal union of two persons of the same sex, other than a marriage, that was validly formed in another jurisdiction, will be recognized as a domestic partner ship, whether or not it is called a domestic partnership in the other jurisdiction, if it is substantially equivalent to a California domestic partnership [Fam. Code § 299.2 (operative January 1, 2005)].

[c] Legal Effects of Domestic Partnership

Registered domestic partners are declared to have the same rights, protections, andbenefits, and are subject to the same responsibilities, obligations, and duties under law, as are granted to and imposed spouses [Fam. Code § 297.5(a) (operative January 1, 2005)]. Former and surviving domestic partners have the same rights and duties as former spouses and widows or widowers, respectively [Fam. Code § 297.5(b), (c) (operative January 1, 2005); Velez v. Smith (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 1154, 1172, 48 Cal. Rptr. 3d 642 ("former" domestic partners must have been previously registered in California with Secretary of State, not merely registered under local domestic partnership law)].

The rights and obligations of registered domestic partners with respect to a child of either of them are the same as those of spouses, and the rights and obligations of former or surviving domestic partners with respect to a child of either are the same as those of former or surviving spouses [Fam. Code § 297.5(d) (operative January 1, 2005)]; see Charisma R. v. Kristina S. (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 301, 307-308, 44 Cal. Rptr. 3d 332 (registered domestic partner of birth mother is entitled to bring petition to establish parental relationship with child born to birth mother by artificial insemination from anonymous donor).

Statutes, administrative regulations, court rules, government policies, common law, and any other provisions or sources of law are to be considered in determining the law relating to spouses that becomes law relating to domestic partners [Fam. Code § 297.5 (a), (b), (c) (operative January 1, 2005)]. However, the domestic partnership law does not modify the California Constitution or any statute that was adopted by initiative [Fam. Code § 297.5(i) (operative January 1, 2005)]. References in pertinent other law to date of marriage are deemed to refer to the date of registration of a domestic partnership with the state [Fam. Code § 297.5(k)(1)]. However, for domestic partnerships registered before January 1, 2005, an agreement fully executed and in force as of June 30, 2005, is enforceable if it would be a valid premarital agreement but for its date [Fam. Code § 297.5(k)(2); see Fam. Code §§ 1600-1620]. Registered domestic partners have the same rights regarding nondiscrimination as do spouses [Fam. Code § 297.5(f)].

When state law relies on federal law, registered domestic partners will be treated by California law as if federal law recognized a domestic partnership in the same manner as California law [Fam. Code § 297.5(e), (operative January 1, 2005)].
