51-575 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 575.76

§ 575.76 Transfer of Water or Water Rights

[1] Temporary Changes

A permittee or licensee may temporarily change the point of diversion, place of use, or purpose of use due to a transfer or exchange of water or water rights if that transfer (1) would only involve the amount of water that would have been consumptively used or stored by the permittee or licensee in the absence of the proposed temporary change, (2) would not injure any legal user of the water, and (3) would not unreasonably affect fish, wildlife, or other in-stream beneficial uses [Water Code § 1725]. For the purposes of Water Code § 1725 et seq. (temporary changes), the phrase "consumptively used" means the amount of water that has been consumed through use by evapotranspiration, has percolated underground, or has been otherwise removed from use in the downstream water supply as a result of direct diversion [Water Code § 1725]. A temporary change means any change of point of diversion, place of use, or purpose of use involving a transfer or exchange of water or water rights for a period of one year or less [Water Code § 1728]. The one-year period does not include any time required for monitoring, reporting, or mitigation before or after the temporary change is carried out. If, within a period of one year or less, the water involved in the temporary change is moved to off-stream storage outside of the watershed where the water originated, the change will be considered a temporary change, and the water moved to off-stream storage outside the watershed where the water originated may be put to beneficial use in the place of use and for the purposes of use specified in the order approving the temporary change either during or after that period [Water Code § 1728].

A permittee or licensee who proposes a temporary change must submit a petition to the State Board to change the terms of the permit or license [Water Code § 1726(a)]. The petition must refer to the permit or license that serves as the basis for the water transfer and must include a written description of the changes in water storage, timing and point of diversion, place and purpose of use, timing and point of return flow, and water quality of instream flows that are likely to occur as a result of the proposed temporary change [Water Code § 1726(b)]. The petitioner must also provide a copy of the petition to the Department of Fish and Game, the board of supervisors of the county or counties in which the petitioner stores or uses the water subject to the petition, and the board of supervisors of the county or counties to which the water is proposed to be transferred [Water Code § 1726(c)]. In addition, within 10 days of submitting the petition the petitioner must publish notice in a newspaper of general circulation in the county or counties in which the petitioner stores or uses the water subject to the petition. The Board is required to provide the petitioner with a list of water right holders of record on file with the Board who may be affected by the transfer, and the petitioner must provide written notice to those water right holders not later than 10 days after the date on which the petition is submitted [Water Code § 1726(d)].

Within 10 days of receipt of a petition, the Board must begin an investigation of the proposed temporary change to determine if the water proposed to be transferred would have been consumptively used or stored pursuant to the petitioner's permit or license in the absence of the proposed transfer or conserved pursuant to Water Code § 1011. The Board must also evaluate the changes in water storage, timing and point of diversion, place and purpose of use, timing and point of return flow, water quality, and instream flows, and other changes likely to occur as a result of the proposed temporary change [Water Code § 1726(e)]. Affected water users and other interested parties may file written comments with the Board, within 30 days after the publication date of the notice [Water Code § 1726(f)].

The Board must render a decision in writing not later than 35 days after the date the investigation was commenced or notice was published, whichever is later. The deadline may be extended up to 20 days if comments have been filed. If the Board or the petitioner determines that an additional extension of time is necessary for the Board to make findings or that a hearing is necessary for the Board to make findings, the Board may extend the time for a decision with the petitioner's consent. If the petitioner agrees to a hearing, the Board must identify the issues for which additional evidence is required and provide notice of the time, place, and subject matter of the hearing to the petitioner, the Department of Fish and Game, the board of supervisors of the county or counties where the petitioner stores or uses the water subject to the petition, the water right holders of record, the proposed transferee, and any party who has filed a written comment [Water Code § 1726(g)].

The Board must approve a temporary change if it determines that a preponderance of the evidence shows that the proposed temporary change (1) would not injure any legal user of the water, during a potential hydrologic condition that the Board determines is likely to occur during the proposed change, through significant changes in water quantity, water quality, timing of diversion or use, consumptive use of the water, or reduction in return flows, and (2) would not unreasonably affect fish, wildlife, or other in-stream beneficial uses [Water Code § 1727(b)]. The petitioner has the burden of establishing that the proposed temporary change meets these requirements. If the Board determines that the petitioner has made a prima facie case, the burden of proof shifts to any party that has filed a comment. The Board may make its determination without a hearing [Water Code § 1727(c)].

In reviewing a petition for a temporary change, the Board may not modify any term or condition of the petitioner's permit or license, including those terms that protect other legal users of water, fish, wildlife, and other instream beneficial uses, except as necessary to carry out the temporary change. In addition, in determining that the proposed change would not injure any legal user of the water or unreasonably affect fish, wildlife, or other in-stream beneficial uses, the Board may not deny, or place conditions on, a temporary change to avoid or mitigate impacts that are not caused by the temporary change [Water Code § 1727(d)]. Furthermore, the Department of Fish and Game and any other state agency that comments on the proposed temporary change may not propose conditions to mitigate effects on fish, wildlife, or other in-stream beneficial uses caused by factors other than the proposed temporary change [Water Code § 1727(e)].

Within 30 days after final action by the Board, a party may file a petition for writ of mandate to inquire into the validity of the Board's finding or order. The right to petition is not affected by the failure to seek reconsideration before the Board [Water Code § 1730(a) (repealed as of January 1, 1997, but applicable to all proceedings pending on December 31, 1996); Water Code § 1126 (applicable thereafter)]. In a writ of mandate proceeding, the court considers only those documents and materials that were in the administrative record before the Board made its finding or order. However, if the court finds that there is relevant evidence that, in the exercise of due diligence, could not have been produced, or that was improperly excluded from the administrative record by the Board, the court may admit the evidence at the hearing of the writ [Water Code § 1730(b) (repealed as of January 1, 1997, but applicable to all proceedings pending on December 31, 1996)].

A proposed temporary change under Water Code §§ 1725-1732 is exempt from the requirements of Pub. Res. Code § 21000 et seq. (The California Environmental Quality Act), relating to environmental quality [Water Code § 1729].

[2] Long-Term Transfers

The State Board may consider a petition for a long-term transfer (that is, a transfer for any period in excess of one year) of water or water rights involving a change of point of diversion, place of use, or purpose of use [Water Code § 1735]. Before approving the petition, the Board must provide notice and an opportunity for a hearing, including written notice to the Department of Fish and Game, which must be allowed an opportunity to review and to make recommendations. Thereafter, the Board may approve the petition if the change would not result in substantial injury to any legal user of water and would not unreasonably affect fish, wildlife, or other in-stream beneficial uses [Water Code § 1736].

[3] Expiration of Transfer Period

Following the expiration of the temporary or long-term transfer period, all rights automatically revert to the original holders of that right without any action by the State Board [Water Code §§ 1016, 1731, 1737]. After the conclusion of the term of a water transfer agreement, the transferee or any beneficiary of the transfer may not bring any claim for a continuation of the water supply made available by the agreement or claim any right to a continued supply of water as a result of the transfer, based on reliance, estoppel, intervening public use, prescription, water shortage emergency, unforeseen or unforeseeable increases in demand, or any other cause [Water Code § 1016].

[4] Transfer of Decreed Rights

Any water right determined under a court decree issued under Water Code § 2500 et seq. (relating to statutory adjudications) after January 1, 1981, is transferable under Water Code §§ 1725-1737 (discussed in § 575.76[1] and [2]) and Water Code §§ 1700-1706 (discussed in § 575.75). The court having the appropriate jurisdiction over the decreed rights may enter a supplemental decree modifying any rights involved on motion of the State Board or any party with a vested water right [Water Code § 1740].

§ 575.77 Judicial Review of State Board's Decision

The power of the State Board to prevent unreasonable methods of water use must be broadly interpreted to enable the Board to strike the proper balance between the interests in water quality and water project activities to determine objectively whether a reasonable method of use is manifested [United States v. State Water Resources Control Bd. (1986) 182 Cal. App. 3d 82, 129-130, 227 Cal. Rptr. 161] .

In assessing the validity of conditions imposed by the Board on water appropriation permits in order to implement water quality standards in a Board-developed water quality control plan, the courts ordinarily apply the substantial evidence rule. In the context of water rights issues, this rule has been interpreted to require a search of the record for a reasonable factual basis for the Board's action. Accordingly, in reviewing challenged conditions, courts must determine whether the conditions are supported by precise and specific reasons founded on tangible record evidence [United States v. State Water Resources Control Bd. (1986) 182 Cal. App. 3d 82, 115, 227 Cal. Rptr. 161] .

If the appropriator or a successor in interest ceases to use the water for a useful or beneficial purpose, the right of appropriation ceases [Water Code § 1240]. When the person entitled to the use of water fails to use beneficially for a period of five years all or any part of that water, for which a right of use has vested, for the purpose for which it was appropriated or adjudicated, the unused water may revert to the public and will be regarded as unappropriated public water. This reversion requires a finding by the State Board following notice to the permittee and a public hearing if one is requested by the permittee [Water Code § 1241].

The sale, lease, exchange, or transfer of water or water rights is not evidence of waste or unreasonable use, unreasonable method of use, or unreasonable method of diversion and will not affect any determination of forfeiture applicable to appropriated water [Water Code § 1244].

[1] Acquisition of Right

On or after January 1, 1989, to initiate any right to appropriate water for a "small domestic use," compliance with Water Code §§ 1228-1229.1 is required; these provisions are the exclusive means of acquiring and maintaining the right [Water Code § 1228.9]. However, nothing in Water Code §§ 1228-1229.1 may be construed as affecting any right initiated or acquired pursuant to permit or evidenced by license, and including any application filed but not permitted, before January 1, 1989 [Water Code § 1228.9]. Moreover, these provisions do not apply to those stream segments for which the Director of Fish and Game establishes proposed streamflow requirements under Pub. Res. Code § 10002, notwithstanding the July 1, 1989, deadline for preparation of the requirements [Water Code § 1229.1].

[2] "Small Domestic Use" Defined

"Small domestic use" means a domestic use, not to exceed direct diversion of 4,500 gallons per day or diversion by storage of 10 acre-feet per annum, as that use is defined by State Water Resources Control Board (State Board or Board) rule, and includes impoundment for incidental aesthetic, recreational, or fish and wildlife purposes [Water Code § 1228.1(b)].

[3] "Livestock Stockpond" Defined

"Livestock stockpond" means a water impoundment structure constructed for livestock watering use, not to exceed direct diversion of 4,500 gallons per day, or diversion by storage of 10 acre-feet per year, as that use is defined by the State Board, and includes impoundment for incidental aesthetic, recreational, or fish and wildlife purposes [Water Code § 1228.1(c)].

[4] Terms and Conditions

The State Board is required to establish, and may from time to time revise, reasonable general conditions to which all appropriations made under Water Code §§ 1228-1229.1 must be subject [Water Code § 1228.6(a)].

The conditions must include, but are not limited to, the following [Water Code § 1228.6(a)]:

- The appropriation is subject to prior rights.

- All conditions lawfully required by the Department of Fish and Game are conditions on the appropriations.

- Diversion works must be constructed and water applied to beneficial use with due diligence.

- Registration must be renewed and water use reported pursuant to law and to the rules of the Board.

Immediately on registration under Water Code § 1228.3 (discussed in § 575.79[6]), renewal of registration under Water Code § 1228.5 (discussed in § 575.79[10]), or amended registration under Water Code § 1228.7 (discussed in § 575.79[9]), the Board must provide the registrant with a written document setting forth the conditions required by Water Code § 1228.6, and the perfection and exercise of rights acquired under Water Code §§ 1228-1229.1 must at all times be subject to those conditions [Water Code § 1228.6(b)].

The conditions are deemed "terms and conditions" within the meaning of Water Code § 1825, and the expression of legislative intent contained in that section apply to them [Water Code § 1228.6(c)]. Water Code § 1825 expresses the legislative intent that the state take vigorous action to enforce the terms and conditions of existing permits and licenses to appropriate water and to prevent the unlawful diversion of water (see generally discussion in §§ 575.100 -575.102).

The Board's authority to enforce the terms and conditions of permits and licenses to appropriate water, and to prevent unlawful diversion of water, including, but not limited to, provisions regarding cease and desist orders and the revocation of permits and licenses, applies to appropriations initiated or perfected under Water Code §§ 1228-1229.1 [Water Code § 1228.6(c)].

[5] Who May Register Water Use

Any person may, subject to Water Code § 1228.2(b), obtain a right to appropriate water for a small domestic use or livestock stockpond use on first registering the use with the State Board and thereafter applying the water to reasonable and beneficial use with due diligence [Water Code § 1228.2(a)]. With regard to an appropriation for small domestic use, not more than one registration may be in effect at any time for any facility [Water Code § 1228.2(a)]. With regard to an appropriation for livestock stockpond use, more than one registration may be in effect at any time for a registrant if stockponds subject to registration for that registrant do not exceed the ratio of one per 50 acres [Water Code § 1228.2(a)]. Water Code § 1228.2(b) provides in turn that the initiation of the right to appropriate water is subject to Water Code §§ 1205-1207 (discussed in § 575.55[2][b]).

[6] Registration of Water Use

Registration of water use must be made on a form prescribed by the State Board that sets forth (1) the name and post office address of the registrant; (2) the source of water supply; (3) the nature and amount of the proposed use; (4) the proposed place of diversion; (5) the place where it is intended to use the water; (6) the time for completion of construction of diversion works and for complete application of the water to the proposed use; (7) a certification that the registrant has contacted a representative of the Department of Fish and Game designated by the department for that purpose, has provided information to that department that is set forth in the registration form, and has agreed to comply with all lawful conditions, including, but not limited to, conditions on the construction and operation of diversion works required by the Department of Fish and Game and the certification must include a copy of any conditions required by the Department of Fish and Game; and (8) any other information that may reasonably be required by the Board [Water Code § 1228.3(a)]. Every person registering a small domestic or livestock stockpond use of water must pay the Board a registration fee [Water Code § 1525(b)(2)] and an annual fee thereafter [Water Code § 1525(a); see § 575.82]. Registration is deemed completed on the date the form, executed in substantial compliance with the requirements of Water Code § 1228.3, and the registration fee are received by the Board [Water Code § 1228.3(b)].

The Board must not accept any registration that proposes as a source of water supply any stream system that has been unconditionally declared by the Board to be fully appropriated pursuant to Water Code § 1205, except that Water Code § 1206(b), relating to conditional declarations of fully appropriated stream systems, apply to registration of water use under Water Code §§ 1228-1229.1, and the Board must accept those registrations if consistent with the conditions specified in any such declaration [Water Code § 1228.2(b)].

[7] Registration Lists

The State Board must issue, and mail to any person who so requests, a monthly list of registrations filed during the preceding month and containing the information required by Water Code § 1228.3(a)(1)-(6) (discussed in § 575.79[6]) [Water Code § 1228.3(c)]. The list must include a date before which any interested person may file a written protest in opposition to the approval of a stockpond registration [discussed in § 575.79[12]]. That date may not be later than 30 days from the date on which the list is issued [Water Code § 1228.3(c)].

[8] Effect of Registration

A completed registration gives the registrant, as of the date of completed registration, a priority of right to take and use the amount of water, not exceeding the amount of proposed use as shown on the registration form, ultimately applied with due diligence to reasonable and beneficial use thereunder [Water Code § 1228.4(a)]. The right remains in effect unless and until it is (1) forfeited for nonuse under Water Code § 1241 (discussed in § 575.78) or abandoned; (2) revoked because the registrant knowingly made any false statement, or knowingly concealed any material fact, in the registration; (3) revoked for failure to renew; or (4) revoked under Water Code § 1228.6(c) (discussed in § 575.79[4]) [Water Code § 1228.4(b)].

[9] Amended Registration

Any registrant may change the point of diversion or place of use by delivering to the board an amended registration form in accordance with Water Code § 1228.3 (see § 575.79[6]), including payment of the registration fee specified in Water Code § 1228.8(a) ($100), except that the purpose of the use may not be changed and the change may not operate to the injury of any legal user of the water involved [Water Code § 1228.7(a)]. Editor's Note: Water Code § 1228.8, referred to in Water Code § 1228.7, was repealed by 2003 Stats., ch 741, § 83.

A completed amended registration of water use continues in effect the priority of right as of the date of the original completed registration [Water Code § 1228.7(b)]. All provisions regarding appropriations made under Water Code §§ 1228-1229.1, including, but not limited to, provisions regarding enforcement, apply to the appropriation as described in the completed amended registration, except that the conditions established by the Board under Water Code § 1228.6 (see § 575.79[4]) in effect at the time of completion of the amended registration supersede the conditions that applied to the original completed registration [Water Code § 1228.7(c)].

Registration must be renewed before the expiration of each five-year period following completed registration [Water Code § 1228.5(a)]. Renewal is made on a form prescribed by the State Board and must contain the report of water use made pursuant to the registration as may be required by the Board [Water Code § 1228.5(b)].

The conditions established by the Board under Water Code § 1228.6 (see § 575.79[4]) that are in effect at the time of renewal supersede the conditions applicable to the original completed registration [Water Code § 1228.5(c)].

[11] Reports to the State Board

On or before June 30, 1989, and annually thereafter, the Division of Water Rights is required to prepare and submit to the State Board a report summarizing the location, nature, and amount of water appropriated under Water Code §§ 1228-1229.1 [Water Code § 1228.2(c)]. The report must include a description of the availability of unappropriated water in those stream systems that may become fully appropriated with the next reporting period [Water Code § 1228.2(c)]. Whenever it can be reasonably anticipated that a stream system may become fully appropriated within the next reporting period, the Board must, following notice and hearing, determine whether that stream system should be declared fully appropriated under Water Code §§ 1205-1207 (see § 575.55[2][b]) [Water Code § 1228.2(d)].

[12] Protest of Approval of Stockpond Registration

Before the date set forth on the monthly list of filed registrations [see § 575.79[7]], any interested person may file with the State Board a written protest opposing the approval of a stockpond registration [Water Code § 1228.3(d)]. The protest must clearly set forth the protester's objections to the registered use based on interference with prior rights [Water Code § 1228.3(d)]. The protester must serve the protest on the registrant by mailing a duplicate copy of the protest to the registrant, or through service undertaken in another manner determined to be adequate by the Board [Water Code § 1228.3(d)]. Review of a protested registration must be conducted in accordance with the procedures set forth in Water Code §§ 1345-1348 [Water Code § 1228.3(d)].

An appropriative taking of water that is not surplus is wrongful and may ripen into a prescriptive right when the use is (1) actual, (2) open and notorious, (3) hostile and adverse to the original owners, (4) continuous and uninterrupted for the statutory period of five years, and (5) under claim of right. The permanent right acquired by prescription is commensurate to the rights enjoyed during the full prescriptive period [see Civ. Code § 1007; Code Civ. Proc. § 321; California Water Service Co. v. Edward Sidebotham & Son (1964) 224 Cal. App. 2d 715, 726-727, 37 Cal. Rptr. 1] . The person with the riparian or appropriative right to use the water must have knowledge of the diversion and must be made a party to the action to perfect a prescriptive right [People v. Shirokow (1980) 26 Cal. 3d 301, 312, 162 Cal. Rptr. 30, 605 P.2d 859] .

Neither public rights and properties that the state possesses and administers, nor the public trust as to their administration and exercise, can be destroyed by adverse possession. No one can acquire a prescriptive title to the public rights in the waters of the state that the State Board is charged to administer [People v. Shirokow (1980) 26 Cal. 3d 301, 311, 162 Cal. Rptr. 30, 605 P.2d 859] .

Moreover, because Water Code § 1225 provides that no right to appropriate or use water subject to appropriation can be acquired except by compliance with Water Code § 1000 et seq., there is some controversy over whether prescription is still a valid means of acquiring any water right [People v. Shirokow (1980) 26 Cal. 3d 301, 306-307, 162 Cal. Rptr. 30, 605 P.2d 859] .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Rights to Water
3. Nature and Acquisition of Water Rights

51-575 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 575.81

§ 575.81 Underground Basin Waters

[1] Right to Use Water

Rights to water in an underground basin are classified as overlying, appropriative, and prescriptive. The right of the owner of land overlying an underground basin is analogous to that of the riparian owner in a surface stream. The owner has the right to take water from the ground underneath for use on land within the basin or watershed; it is based on the ownership of the land and is appurtenant thereto [California Water Service Co. v. Edward Sidebotham & Son (1964) 224 Cal. App. 2d 715, 725, 37 Cal. Rptr. 1] .

Any water not needed for the reasonable beneficial use of those having prior rights to underground waters is excess or surplus water and may properly be appropriated on privately owned land for non-overlying use, such as devotion to public use or exportation beyond the basin or watershed. When there is a surplus, the holder of prior rights may not enjoin its appropriation [California Water Service Co. v. Edward Sidebotham & Son (1964) 224 Cal. App. 2d 715, 725, 37 Cal. Rptr. 1] . Moreover, ground water is exempted from the extensive appropriation procedural regulations applicable to surface water set forth in Water Code § 1200 et seq. [Wright v. Goleta Water Dist. (1985) 174 Cal. App. 3d 74, 87, 219 Cal. Rptr. 740 ; see Water Code § 1200].

Appropriation of water that is not excess or surplus is an adverse taking of water and may ripen into a prescriptive right when the use is actual, open and notorious, hostile and adverse to the original owner, continuous and uninterrupted for five years, and under claim of right. Adverse use begins with the first overdraft, or taking of nonsurplus water. Appropriative and prescriptive rights to groundwater are subject to loss by an adverse user; overlying rights are not [California Water Service Co. v. Edward Sidebotham & Son (1964) 224 Cal. App. 2d 715, 726, 37 Cal. Rptr. 1] .

[2] Priority of Competing Uses

The rights of overlying owners are correlative; they are mutual and reciprocal. When there is a sufficient quantity of water, each overlying owner has the right to take all that he or she can beneficially use on his or her land. If there is insufficient water for all the beneficial uses, each overlying owner is limited to his or her proportionate fair share of the total amount available based on reasonable need [City of Pasadena v. City of Alhambra (1949) 33 Cal. 2d 908, 926, 207 P.2d 17 , cert. denied, 339 U.S. 937, 70 S. Ct. 671, 94 L. Ed. 1354] . The proportionate share of each owner is predicated not on past use over a specified period of time, nor on the time of commencement of pumping, but solely on the owner's current reasonable and beneficial need for water [Tehachapi-Cummings County Water Dist. v. Armstrong (1975) 49 Cal. App. 3d 992, 1001, 122 Cal. Rptr. 918] .

When there is insufficient water for the current reasonable needs of all the overlying owners, among the many factors to be considered in determining each owner's proportionate share are (1) the amount of water available, (2) the extent of ownership in the basin, and (3) the nature of the projected use. If the water is used for agriculture, the area sought to be irrigated, the character of the soil, the practicability of irrigation, and the comparative profit of the different crops are also considered [Tehachapi-Cummings County Water Dist. v. Armstrong (1975) 49 Cal. App. 3d 992, 1001-1002, 122 Cal. Rptr. 918] .

In the event of a shortage, an appropriator must yield to overlying owners who are making proper use of the water because the appropriator's right is limited to using the surplus amount of the water, unless the appropriator has gained prescriptive rights through the taking of nonsurplus water [California Water Service Co. v. Edward Sidebotham & Son (1964) 224 Cal. App. 2d 715, 725, 37 Cal. Rptr. 1] . As between appropriators, the one first in time is the first in right, and a prior appropriator is entitled to all the water reasonably needed, up to the amount taken in the past, before a subsequent appropriator may take any [Civ. Code § 1414; California Water Service Co. v. Edward Sidebotham & Son (1964) 224 Cal. App. 2d 715, 725-726, 37 Cal. Rptr. 1] .

[3] Overdraft

An overdraft results when more water is extracted from the basin than is naturally replenished [Tehachapi-Cummings County Water Dist. v. Armstrong (1975) 49 Cal. App. 3d 992, 996 n.2, 122 Cal. Rptr. 918] . Each taking of water in excess of the safe yield is wrongful because the overdraft, from its very beginning, operates progressively to reduce the total available supply [California Water Service Co. v. Edward Sidebotham & Son (1964) 224 Cal. App. 2d 715, 726, 37 Cal. Rptr. 1] . When the supply of water is limited, as it is in an overdrawn basin, the public interest requires that there be the greatest number of beneficial users that the supply can yield. The court must devise a physical solution, such as a proportional reduction in the amount available to each user, or the total elimination of one use, if possible [California Water Service Co. v. Edward Sidebotham & Son (1964) 224 Cal. App. 2d 715, 731-732, 37 Cal. Rptr. 1] .

Each person or entity who holds a permit or license to appropriate water, and each lessor of water [see Water Code § 1020 et seq. (water leases)], is required to pay an annual fee according to a fee schedule established by the State Water Resources Control Board [Water Code §§ 1525(a), 1530]. An annual fee is also imposed on each person or entity filing a "Notice of Extraction and Diversion of Water" in the County of Riverside, San Bernardino, Los Angeles, or Ventura [Water Code § 1529; see Water Code § 4999 et seq.].

In addition, each person or entity who files any of the following must pay a fee according to a fee schedule established by the State Board [Water Code § 1525(b)]:

- An application for a permit to appropriate water [see § 575.350].
- A registration of appropriation for a small domestic use or livestock stockpond.
- A petition for an extension of time within which to begin construction, to complete construction, or to apply the water to full beneficial use under a permit [see § 575.359].
- A petition to change the point of diversion, place of use, or purpose of use, under a permit or license [see § 575.356].
- A petition to change the conditions of a permit or license, requested by the permittee or licensee, that is not otherwise subject to the third and fourth bulleted items above.
- A petition to change the point of discharge, place of use, or purpose of use, of treated wastewater, under Water Code § 1211.
- An application for approval of a water lease agreement.

- A request for release from priority pursuant to Water Code § 10504.
- An application for an assignment of a state-filed application pursuant to Water Code § 10504.

For these listed filings, the schedule may provide for either a single filing fee or for an initial filing fee followed by an annual fee [Water Code § 1525(d)(2)].

Fees are also imposed on each person or entity who files a proof of claim of water right under Water Code § 2575 et seq. [Water Code § 1528; see § 575.381 (proof of claim)].

If the State Board determines that the person or entity on whom a fee or expense is imposed will not pay the fee or expense based on the fact that the fee payer has sovereign immunity [see Water Code § 1560], the Board may allocate the fee or expense, or an appropriate portion of the fee or expense, to persons or entities who have contracts for the delivery of water from the person or entity on whom the fee or expense was initially imposed. The allocation of the fee or expense to these contractors does not affect ownership of any permit, license, or other water right, and does not vest any equitable title in the contractors [Water Code § 1540].

If a fee established under Water Code §§ 1525(b), 1528, or 13160.1 is not paid when due, the Board may cancel the application, registration, petition, request, or claim, or may refer the matter to the State Board of Equalization for collection of the unpaid fee [Water Code § 1535(b)]. In any proceeding pursuant to Water Code § 1052 in which it is determined that there has been a violation of the prohibition against the unauthorized diversion or use of water, the Board or court may impose an additional liability in the amount of any annual fees that would have been required if the diversion or use had been authorized by a permit or license to appropriate water [Water Code § 1538]. If a permit or license holder fails to pay an annual fee for a period of five years, the Board may revoke the permit or license [Water Code § 1539].

A determination by the Board that a person or entity is required to pay a fee, or a Board determination regarding the amount of a fee, is subject to review under Water Code § 1120 et seq. and is not subject to a petition for redetermination by the State Board of Equalization [Water Code § 1537(b)(2)].

§ 575.101 Enforcement of Appropriative Rights

[1] Cease and Desist Order--Violation of Right

If a violation of a term or condition of a permit, license, certification, or registration occurs or threatens to occur, the State Water Resources Control Board (State Board or Board) must give notice by personal notice or certified mail to the person allegedly engaged in the violation, informing the person that he or she may request a hearing not later than 20 days from the date on which the notice is received [Water Code § 1834(a)]. The notice must contain a statement of facts tending to show the proscribed action and notification that the State Board may adopt a proposed preliminary cease and desist order without a hearing unless the alleged violator makes a written request for a hearing within 20 days [Water Code § 1834(a), (b)]. "Person" is not restricted to natural persons and includes public entities such as a city, a county, a district, and the state [Water Code § 1835]. A private party may file a complaint with the Board for harm caused by an alleged violation [see § 575.361].

[2] Issuance of Cease and Desist Orders

If the State Board determines that a person is violating any term or condition of a permit, license, certification, or registration for the appropriation of water, or a prior decision or order of the Board in which the person or a predecessor in interest to that person was named as a party directly affected by the decision or order, the Board may issue an order to cease and desist from that violation [Water Code § 1831(a), (d)]. The cease and desist order will require either immediate compliance or compliance in accordance with a time schedule set by the Board [Water Code § 1831(a), (b), (d)(2)].

Cease and desist orders are effective on issuance. The Board may, after notice and opportunity for hearing, on its own motion or on application from an aggrieved person, modify, revoke, or stay in whole or in part the cease and desist order [Water Code § 1832].

The Board is not precluded from taking any action authorized by Water Code § 275 (board initiated action to prevent waste) or Water Code § 1052 (board initiated action to prevent trespass), and should take vigorous action to enforce the terms and conditions of appropriation permits and licenses to prevent the unlawful diversion of water [Water Code §§ 1825, 1836].

[3] Judicial Review of Cease and Desist Order

Any aggrieved party may file a petition for a writ of mandate for review of a cease and desist order [Water Code § 1126; for discussion and forms relating to mandate proceedings, see Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition]. For a form of petition under Water Code § 1126, see § 575.365.

Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5 governs the mandate proceedings [Water Code § 1126(c)]. The petition for writ of mandate must be filed not later than 30 days from the date of final action by the State Board [Water Code § 1126(b)]. The court is required to exercise its independent judgment on the evidence in any case involving the judicial review of a cease and desist order [Water Code § 1126(c)].

[4] Enforcement of Cease and Desist Order

If any person fails to comply with any valid, final cease and desist order issued by the State Board, the Attorney General, at the Board's request, will petition the court for the issuance of appropriate prohibitory or mandatory injunctive relief [Water Code § 1845(a)]. The Attorney General will also petition for fines of up to $1,000 for each day of the violation [Water Code § 1845(b)]. The amount of the fine will be based on a consideration of all relevant circumstances, including, but not limited to, the extent of harm caused by the violation, the nature and persistence of the violation, the length of time over which the violation occurs, and any corrective action taken by the violator [Water Code § 1845(c)].

Civil liability may also be imposed administratively by the Board [Water Code §§ 1055, 1845(b)(3)]. Under this procedure, the executive director of the Board issues a complaint [Water Code § 1055(a)], which is served by personal notice or certified mail on the alleged violator [Water Code § 1055(b)]. The violator may request a hearing within 20 days after service. The hearing is before a member of the Board [Water Code § 1055(b)], who reports a proposed decision and order to the Board and supplies a copy to the party served [Water Code § 1055(c)]. The Board independently reviews the record and may take additional evidence that is necessary and that could not reasonably have been offered before the hearing officer. The Board may then adopt, with or without revision, the proposed decision and order [Water Code § 1055(c)].

No person or entity may be subject to both civil liability imposed administratively under Water Code § 1055 and civil liability imposed by the court under Water Code § 1845 for the same act or failure to act [Water Code § 1055.2].

[5] Effect on Private Litigants

Any factual or legal determinations made in accordance with a cease and desist order are conclusive and preclude any party to the order from raising those issues in any subsequent administrative proceeding [Water Code § 1850]. The provisions of Water Code §§ 1825-1851 governing enforcement of water rights do not limit the right of any person to bring an action for equitable or legal relief from harm caused by an unauthorized diversion or a violation of a term or condition of a permit or license. That person will not be required to exhaust any administrative remedy provided by Water Code §§ 1825-1851 before bringing that action [Water Code § 1851].

4. Enforcement of Appropriative Rights

§ 575.102 Unauthorized Use Constitutes Trespass

[1] Civil Liability

The unauthorized diversion or use of water subject to Water Code § 1000 et seq. is a trespass [Water Code § 1052(a)]. Any person or entity committing a Water Code § 1052 trespass may be liable for a sum not to exceed $500 for each day in which the trespass occurs. On request of the State Board, the Attorney General will petition the superior court to impose and recover that sum. In determining the appropriate amount, the court will take into consideration all relevant circumstances, including, but not limited to, the extent of harm caused by the violation, the nature and persistence of the violation, the length of time over which the violation occurs, and the corrective action, if any, taken by the violator [Water Code § 1052(d)]. Similarly, on the Board's request, the Attorney General will institute an appropriate action for injunctive relief in the form of a temporary restraining order, preliminary injunction, or permanent injunction [Water Code § 1052(c) (action is to be instituted in superior court for county where diversion or use is threatened, is occurring, or has occurred)]. These remedies are cumulative, not alternative [Water Code § 1052(f)].

[2] Administrative Liability

The State Board may administratively impose civil liability in accordance with Water Code § 1055 for a Water Code § 1052 trespass in an amount not exceeding $500 for each day in which the trespass occurs [Water Code § 1052(b)]. Under this procedure, the executive director of the Board issues a complaint [Water Code § 1055(a)], which is served by personal notice or certified mail on the alleged trespasser [Water Code § 1055(b)]. The trespasser may request a hearing within 20 days after service. The hearing is before a member of the Board [Water Code § 1055(b)], who reports a proposed decision and order to the Board and supplies a copy to the party served [Water Code § 1055(c)]. The Board independently reviews the record and may take additional evidence that is necessary and that could not reasonably have been offered before the hearing officer. The Board may then adopt, with or without revision, the proposed decision and order [Water Code § 1055(c)]. The same procedure may be followed to impose civil liability on a person or entity for any willful misstatement in connection with the preparation of a statement of water diversion and use [Water Code §§ 1055(a), 5107].

In determining the amount of civil liability, the Board will consider all relevant circumstances, including, but not limited to, the extent of harm caused by the violation, the nature and persistence of the violation, the length of time over which the violation occurs, and the corrective action, if any, taken by the violator [Water Code § 1055.3].

Any party aggrieved by a final order issued by the Board under Water Code § 1055 may obtain review of the Board's order in superior court by filing a petition for writ of mandate within 30 days following the order's issuance. If no aggrieved party petitions for writ of mandate within the time provided, the Board's order is not subject to review by any court [Water Code § 1055.1 (repealed as of January 1, 1997, but applicable to proceedings pending on December 31, 1996); Water Code § 1126 (applicable thereafter)]. For discussion and forms relating to review by writ of mandate of an adminstrative hearing under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5, see Ch. 474C, Procedures in Reviewing Agency Decisions .

After the time for review has expired, the Board may apply to the clerk of the appropriate court for a judgment to collect the administrative civil liability imposed in accordance with Water Code § 1055. The application constitutes a sufficient showing to warrant issuance of the judgment, and the court clerk must enter the judgment immediately in conformity with the application. The judgment entered by the clerk has the same force and effect as, and is subject to all the provisions of law relating to, a judgment in a civil action, and may be enforced in the same manner as any other judgment of the court in which it is entered [Water Code § 1055.4].

[3] Cease and Desist Orders

If the State Board determines that any person is violating or threatening to violate the prohibition against the unauthorized diversion of water set forth in Water Code § 1052 or a prior decision or order of the Board in which the person or a predecessor in interest to that person was named as a party directly affected by the decision or order, the Board may issue an order to cease and desist from that violation [Water Code § 1831(a), (d)]. The cease and desist order will require either immediate compliance or compliance in accordance with a time schedule set by the Board [Water Code § 1831(a), (b), (d)(2)]. For a discussion of the issuance of cease and desist orders by the Board, see § 575.101[2].

[4] Civil and Administrative Liability Are Distinct

No person or entity will be subject to both civil liability imposed under Water Code § 1055 and civil liability imposed by the superior court under Water Code § 1052(d) for the same act or failure to act [Water Code § 1055.2].

§ 575.140 Statutory Adjudication of Water Rights in Stream System

Water Code §§ 2500-2866 establish a statutory procedure for the adjudication of water rights under which the Board may determine all rights to water of a stream system, whether based on appropriation, riparian right, or other basis of right [Water Code § 2501]. The State Board's determination is filed in court, which after a hearing will enter a decree determining the rights of all persons involved in the proceeding [Water Code §§ 2750, 2768]. "Stream system" includes stream, lake, or other body of water, and tributaries and contributory sources, but does not include an underground water supply other than a subterranean stream flowing through known and definite channels [Water Code § 2500].

§ 575.141 Petition to Board

On petition by one or more claimants to water of any stream system, requesting the determination of the rights of the claimants to the water of that stream system, the State Board will investigate the relevant facts and conditions. If it finds that the public interest and necessity will be served by a determination of the water rights involved, the Board will enter an order granting the petition and begin determination procedures [Water Code § 2525; for a form of petition, see § 575.380].

The Board also has authority to initiate its own investigation of water waste and to take appropriate remedial action. Thus, the Board may begin or continue an investigation of water usage, even if parties who were contesting water rights have settled the dispute [see Imperial Irrigation Dist. v. State Water Resources Control Bd. (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 548, 568-569, 275 Cal. Rptr. 250] .

After granting the petition the State Board will issue a notice stating that the proceedings are pending, that all claimants to rights to the use of water of that stream system must inform the Board within 60 days from the date of the notice of their intention to file proof of claim, the date by which that written notice must be received, and the fact that all claimants will be required to make proof of their claims after the conclusion of the Board's investigation [Water Code § 2526 (although the notice is not required to so state, an intent to file proof of claim may also be filed after the Board's investigation under Water Code § 2555)]. The notice must be published in generally circulating newspapers in the counties in which any part of the stream system is situated and must be mailed to riparian owners and appropriators of waters from the stream system [Water Code § 2527].

All interested claimants who received notice of the proceedings must notify the Board of their intention to file proof of claim and to appear and submit proof of their respective claims at the time and in the manner required by Water Code §§ 2500-2866 [Water Code § 2528]. The proof of claim must be filed with the Board on a form provided by the Board [Water Code § 2575; see § 575.381].

Within 60 days of the date by which claimants were required to provide notice of their intent to file proof of claim, the Board must file for record in the county recorder's office of each county in which any part of the stream system is situated a notice setting forth facts enumerated in Water Code § 2529(a) [Water Code § 2529(a)]. It must identify the current owners of each parcel that appears to be riparian to the stream system or to which water is diverted from the stream, and must be recorded in a manner so that anyone researching the title of a parcel will find the notice [Water Code § 2529(b); see Water Code § 2529(c) (supplementary notice if and when additional parcels are identified)].

The State Board will investigate the diversion of water, the beneficial uses being made of the water, the water supply available for those uses, and any other essential data [Water Code § 2550]. The Board will conduct a detailed field investigation of the water uses of all water users known to the Board, giving 30 days written notice to those users who gave notice of intent to file proof of claim. The Board will define the place and purpose of use, determine the locations and capacity of each person's diversion works and conduits conveying water from the stream system, and the amount of water diverted and reasonably required to satisfy the uses being made [Water Code §§ 2551, 2554]. Each claimant must be present at some time during the field investigation in person or by an agent authorized to sign the proof of claim, and must cooperate in the investigation and provide necessary information to the Board [Water Code §§ 2551, 2552]. At the conclusion of that investigation the claimant will receive a copy of the factual determinations of the Board [Water Code § 2553].

Water users who were not present during the field investigation and those who did not file notice of intent to file proof of claim must, insofar as they are known, be supplied with a copy of the factual determinations of the representative of the Board and a blank proof of claim form. They may file proof of claim after completion of the investigation of their project by the Board's representatives on the same basis as persons who were present and who filed timely notice of intent [Water Code § 2555].

After all the field investigations are complete and the time for filing proofs of claims has expired, the State Board must prepare a report describing the water supply and abstracting the claim of water right of each claimant [Water Code § 2600]. The report must note separately any material difference between the claims and the Board's factual determinations and must include a map showing the use of the stream system, as well as any other necessary information [Water Code §§ 2601, 2602]. The report must include a preliminary order of determination establishing the several rights to the water of the stream system, giving appropriate consideration to claims at variance with the Board's measurements and determinations [Water Code § 2603].

A copy of the report will be sent by registered mail to each claimant and to each person not filing a claim who appears in the report as a water user. A notice setting forth the objection procedure will accompany the report [Water Code § 2604].

The objection procedure notice accompanying the State Board's report must set a deadline of at least 60 days by which objections to the report or preliminary order of determination must be filed [Water Code § 2604]. It will also set a reasonably convenient time and place for inspection of the filed proofs of claim, Board measurements, and other data collected during the investigation. The period for inspection by all interested persons will last at least five days and will end at least 30 days before the deadline for filing objections [Water Code §§ 2625-2627].

Objections to the report and preliminary order of determination must be written and must state with reasonable certainty the grounds of the objection [Water Code § 2628; see § 575.382].

§ 575.147 Hearing on Objections

The State Board will mail copies of the objections to the claimant or water user against whom the objections are directed and will notify by registered mail the persons whose rights are significantly affected to appear before it at a specified time and place when the objections will be heard. The notice will be sent within 10 days after the filing deadline and will specify a hearing date of at least 15 days later [Water Code § 2650].

The Board may adjourn the hearing of objections on reasonable notice to all parties in interest [Water Code § 2651]. At the hearing each party must pay for the direct examination of his or her own witness and the cross examination of the opponent's witness. The parties will share equally for that part of the examination directed by the Board's representative [Water Code § 2652]. The parties must also provide one copy of the transcript of hearing testimony to the Board at their own expense [Water Code § 2653].

The State Board will adopt an order determining and establishing the several rights to the water of the stream system after the hearing or after the expiration of the filing time if no objections are filed [Water Code § 2700]. In its order, the Board may establish standards for the water's reasonable use. The Board has authority to set controls and conditions on water use, including standards of quality and prevention of waste. The Board may order a water user to develop and present a water conservation plan to remedy misuse of water, and may retain jurisdiction to review the adequacy of the water user's plans [Imperial Irrigation Dist. v. State Wat. Resources Control Bd. (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 548, 570, 275 Cal. Rptr. 250] . Notice of its adoption and a copy of the order of determination will be sent by registered mail to each claimant and each person whose rights are determined in the order [Water Code § 2701].

The Board may order a reconsideration of all or part of the order of determination on its own motion or on petition by any party affected by the order. The Board's authority to order reconsideration on its own motion expires 30 days after it adopts the order. A petition to reconsider must be filed within 30 days after the Water Code § 2701 notice of it is sent. The Board must rule on a reconsideration petition within 90 days after the notice required by Water Code § 2701 is sent [Water Code § 2702(a)].

The order of determination may be reconsidered by the Board on all the pertinent parts of the record and arguments, or a further hearing may be held, on notice to all affected parties, to receive additional evidence that the Board may, for cause, allow. The order on reconsideration has the same effect as an original order [Water Code § 2702(b)].

§ 575.149 Filing Order in Court

[1] Notice of Hearing

A copy of the order, the original evidence, and the transcript of testimony certified by the State Board will be filed with the superior court of the county in which the stream system is situated [Water Code § 2750]. The court will issue an order setting the time for hearing and certified copies of the order will be sent by the Board to each known party in interest [Water Code §§ 2751-2753]. The Board will also publish the order in appropriate newspapers [Water Code §§ 2754, 2755].

Whenever the court finds the State is a necessary party to the action, it will make an order to that effect and copies of all pleadings and proceedings on file will be served on the Attorney General [Water Code § 2765].

[2] Exceptions to Order

Each party in interest who is dissatisfied with the order of determination may file with the court a notice of exceptions to the order of determination. The notice of exceptions must be filed and copies sent by registered mail to the State Board and to each person who was an adverse party to any issue raised by the exception at least 10 days before the hearing [Water Code §§ 2757-2759; for form of objection to determination, see § 575.382].

The hearing pleadings will consist of the order of determination, the statements or claims of claimants, and the exceptions made to the order of determination, although the court may allow additional pleadings as may be necessary to a final determination of the proceeding [Water Code §§ 2760, 2761]. If no exceptions are filed, the court will enter a decree affirming the order of determination [Water Code § 2762].

All proceedings on the hearing will accord as nearly as possible with the rules governing civil actions [Water Code § 2764]. All parties in interest who filed notices of exceptions will appear at the hearing, which will continue until all exceptions are settled [Water Code § 2763].

[3] Powers of Court

The court (1) may employ qualified persons to conduct additional investigations and to testify, (2) may take additional evidence on any issue, (3) may refer the case for further evidence to be taken by the State Board, and (4) may require a further determination by the State Board [Water Code §§ 2766, 2767]. It may also assess and adjudge costs against any party [Water Code § 2770].

[4] Court Decree

After the hearing the court will enter a decree determining the rights of all persons involved in the proceedings [Water Code § 2768]. The decree will declare the priority, amount, season of use, purpose of use, point of diversion, and place of use as to the water right adjudged to each party. For water used for irrigation, the decree will also declare the specific tracts of land to which it is appurtenant, together with any other factor necessary to define the right [Water Code § 2769].

[5] Conclusiveness of Decree

The decree is conclusive as to the rights of all existing claimants on the stream system lawfully embraced in the determination [Water Code § 2773]. When a decree has been entered, any claimant who has failed to appear and submit proof of his or her claim is barred and estopped from subsequently asserting any rights theretofore acquired on the stream system embraced in the proceedings, and will be held to have forfeited all rights to water theretofore claimed by him or her on the stream system, other than as provided in the decree, unless entitled to relief under the laws of this state [Water Code § 2774].

Appeals from the decree may be taken by the State Board or by any party in interest in the same manner and with the same effect as in civil cases [Water Code § 2771; see Ch. 40, Appeal: An Overview].

A certified copy of the decree will be filed for record in the office of the county recorder of each county in which any part of the stream system is situated [Water Code § 2772].

A claimant who had no actual knowledge or notice that the proceedings were pending prior to entry of the order of determination by the State Board may intervene in the proceedings. The intervention, in the form of filing an exception to the order and a proof of claim containing all the matters required of noticed claimants, must be made at least 10 days before the hearing or within any further time the court may allow [Water Code § 2780]. The intervening claimant must apply for a court order prescribing the notice requirements to the other claimants and contests by them [Water Code § 2781]. The court will hear and determine the exception and proof of intervenor and any contest as nearly as possible in accordance with the provisions of Water Code §§ 2750-2774, which govern the court proceeding [Water Code § 2782; for a form of exception and an order prescribing notice see §§ 575.383 and 575.384].

The court may refer the matter to the Board for further evidence, and may require a further determination by the Board, for which the Board is entitled to reimbursement for expenses [Water Code § 2783].

§ 575.151 Incomplete Appropriations--General Proceedings

Any person claiming rights under an incomplete appropriation, when properly notified, must appear and submit a proof of claim or be held to be in default and to have abandoned or to have no right, title, or interest in or to the water of the stream system, other than as that person may be found to be entitled by the State Board [Water Code § 2801].

The order of determination will provide that within the time prescribed for completion of the appropriation, or within such further time as the court may allow, the claimant must submit to the court proof of completion and the amount of water actually applied to beneficial use [Water Code § 2803; for discussion of the appropriation procedure, see § 575.50 et seq.].

The time for completion may be extended by the court on a motion made prior, but not more than 90 days prior, to the expiration of the previous time limit [Water Code §§ 2807, 2808]. The court may refer the matter of the motion to the Board for its recommendation [Water Code § 2810]. After receipt of the Board's recommendation or after 90 days, the court will either deny the motion or grant an extension of time in the amount for which there is good and sufficient cause [Water Code § 2811]. If the motion is denied, the applicant has 10 days to file notice of intention to offer proof of completion with the court [Water Code §§ 2812, 2813].

The court may hear and determine proof offered as to completion of that right [Water Code § 2806]. If submission of proof of completion is made after entry of the court decree, the court must enter a supplemental decree determining the right before it; if no proof is submitted, the court must enter a supplemental decree denying the right [Water Code § 2815].

Any person claiming a right under incomplete appropriation who fails to complete his or her appropriation within the allowable time limit is deemed to have abandoned his or her right of appropriation as far as it remains incomplete, and has no right, title, or interest in or to the water of the stream system as far as the appropriation has not been completed [Water Code § 2816].

Appeals from any action of the court may be taken by the Board or by any party in interest in the same manner and with the same effect as in civil cases [Water Code § 2817].

Water Code §§ 2801-2820 will not be construed to confer any rights of appropriation on parties who abandoned their appropriations or failed to use due diligence in the application of the water to a beneficial use and in the completion of their appropriations [Water Code § 2818].

[1] Incomplete Appropriation

Incomplete appropriations initiated by application under the provisions of the Water Commision Act or the Water Code will be included in the decree but will continue to be administered by the State Board as in other cases. On issuance of a license by the Board and completion of any court review sought pursuant to Water Code § 1126 and on motion of the licensee or the Board, the court will enter a supplemental decree confirming the right in accordance with the license [Water Code § 2819].

[2] Revocation or Change in Use

Any change authorized by the State Board pursuant to Water Code §§ 1700-1707 (change in use) will also be the subject of a supplemental decree [Water Code § 2819]. A supplemental decree denying a right will be entered after Board revocation of a permit or license relating to a right included in the decree. This will be done on completion of a requested court review of the Board's action under either Water Code §§ 1410-1450 (permits) or Water Code §§ 1675-1675.2 (licenses), on a motion by the Board or any interested party [Water Code § 2820].

On entry of a supplemental decree establishing or modifying a right, the Board must furnish a copy of the supplemental decree to each claimant who could be significantly affected [Water Code § 2826].

State courts have concurrent jurisdiction with the California State Water Resources Control Board in water rights controversies. A party need not exhaust administrative remedies with the State Board before filing suit in court. § 575.171 Judicial Determination of Water Rights

[1] Declaratory Relief

[a] Protection Against Appropriators

Owners of riparian and overlying water rights have the right to obtain a judgment declaring their water rights and protecting their prospective beneficial uses even without the presence of substantial damage to their rights [Tulare Irrigation Dist. v. Lindsay-Strathmore Irrigation Dist. (1935) 3 Cal. 2d 489, 529-530, 45 P.2d 972 ; Tehachapi-Cummings County Water Dist. v. Armstrong (1975) 49 Cal. App. 3d 992, 998, 122 Cal. Rptr. 918] . This protects not only the actual reasonable beneficial use, but also the prospective reasonable beneficial use. As to the prospective reasonable beneficial uses, the quantity of water required cannot be fixed in amount until the need arises. Therefore, as to those uses, the court should declare them paramount to any right of any would-be appropriator. By such a declaratory judgment, an owner's rights will be fully protected against any appropriative use ripening into a right by prescription, but, until the owner needs the water, an appropriator may use it [Tulare Irrigation Dist. v. Lindsay-Strathmore Irrigation Dist. (1935) 3 Cal. 2d 489, 525, 45 P.2d 972] . Because water rights are a species of real property, the action may also be characterized as a quiet title action to adjudicate conflicting claims to water [Tehachapi-Cummings County Water Dist., v. Armstrong (1975) 49 Cal. App. 3d 992, 999 n.5, 122 Cal. Rptr. 918] . For discussion and forms relating to quiet title actions, see Ch. 482, Quieting Title .

[b] Between Owners of Same Type of Right

When there is insufficient water for the uses of all those claiming riparian or overlying water rights, the trial court must ascertain whether there is a physical solution to the problem that will avoid waste and that will not unreasonably or adversely affect the rights of the parties. The court should work out, if possible, a physical solution [Rancho Santa Margarita v. Vail (1938) 11 Cal. 2d 501, 558-559, 81 P.2d 533 (riparian); see California Water Service Co. v. Edward Sidebotham & Son (1964) 224 Cal. App. 2d 715, 724-725, 37 Cal. Rptr. 1 (overlying)]. When the conflict is between those claiming appropriative rights, the one first in time is the first in right, and a prior appropriator is entitled to a judgment entitling him or her to all the water he or she needs, up to the amount that he or she has taken in the past, before a subsequent appropriator may take any [see California Water Service Co. v. Edward Sidebotham & Son (1964) 224 Cal. App. 2d 715, 725-726, 37 Cal. Rptr. 1] .

The court may refer the matter to the State Board for the Board to referee any issue or for the Board to investigate the facts [Water Code §§ 2000, 2001, discussed in § 575.173[1]].

[2] Injunctive Relief

Before ruling on a request for injunctive relief, the trial court must determine whether the owners, considering all the needs of those in the particular water field, are putting the waters to any reasonable beneficial uses, giving consideration to all factors involved, including reasonable methods of use and reasonable methods of diversion. From a consideration of those uses, the court must then determine whether there is a surplus in the water field subject to appropriation. If an owner is putting the water to any reasonable beneficial use, it is necessary for the court to find expressly the quantity so required and so used. A finding that the owner is using a reasonable amount for that purpose is insufficient. The court must fix the quantity required by each owner for his or her actual reasonable beneficial use [Tulare Irrigation Dist. v. Lindsay-Strathmore Irrigation Dist. (1935) 3 Cal. 2d 489, 524-525, 45 P.2d 972 (involving riparian right)].

In ascertaining the rights between riparians, and in ascertaining whether a lower riparian has suffered damages by reason of an upper riparian's diversion sufficient to warrant an injunction, the court should consider all of the water available to either party from the river, and then determine, considering the entire supply, the needs of the parties, their methods of use and diversion, and other necessary factors, whether the lower riparian has in fact suffered damage [Rancho Santa Margarita v. Vail (1938) 11 Cal. 2d 501, 558, 81 P.2d 533] . So long as a riparian owner takes no more than his or her reasonable share and uses it on his or her riparian land, without unreasonable waste, other riparian owners below have no right to inquire, how, or by what means, or at what place, that share is diverted from the stream [Turner v. The James Canal Co. (1909) 155 Cal. 82, 92, 99 P. 520] .

III Declaratory Relief and Quiet Title

§ 575.172 Inadequacy of Private Suits

Although parties who use substantial amounts of water may be ordered joined in the action, it may be impracticable to attempt to include every person having some actual or potential right to the water and its sources of supply. Persons not made parties are not bound by judgment nor are they injured by any injunction [City of Pasadena v. City of Alhambra (1949) 33 Cal. 2d 908, 919-920, 207 P.2d 17 , cert. denied, 339 U.S. 937, 70 S. Ct. 671, 94 L. Ed. 1354] .

A private suit for determining title to water binds only those who are parties to the suit. It may later be nullified by the assertion of a legitimate claim by a water user on the stream who was not a party to the suit. Moreover, private suits are inadequate because shortages in supply, new appropriations, or new riparian uses have the potential for bringing all water users on the stream in conflict [In re Waters of Long Valley Creek Stream System (1979) 25 Cal. 3d 339, 347, 356, 158 Cal. Rptr. 350, 599 P.2d 656 (court retention of jurisdiction over prospective riparian claims may offer partial relief)].

§ 575.173 Court Action

[1] Referral to Board

In any suit brought in any court of competent jurisdiction for determination of rights to water, the court may order a reference to the State Board, as referee, of any or all issues involved in the suit [Water Code § 2000]. The court may also refer the suit to the Board for an investigation of and a report on any or all of the physical facts involved [Water Code § 2001]. For a form of an order of reference to the Board, see § 575.386.

The Board may either base its report solely on its own investigation or may hold additional hearings and take testimony [Water Code § 2010]. The report of the Board as referee must set forth the findings of fact and conclusions of law required by the court's order of reference and may contain its opinion on the law and the facts [Water Code §§ 2011, 2012].

Before filing its report the Board must announce it in the form of a draft [Water Code § 2013]. Notice and a copy of the draft must be mailed by the Board to the parties [Water Code § 2014].

[2] Objections to Report

Any party may file objections to the draft with the State Board within 30 days after the date the draft was mailed [Water Code § 2015]. Before filing its report as referee with the court, the Board will consider the objections and may hold a hearing on them [Water Code § 2016].

The report of the Board as referee is subject to review by the court on exceptions to it filed with the court clerk within 30 days after mailing notice of the filing of the report [Water Code § 2017]. The court will not consider an exception to the report unless that issue was presented as an objection to the Board, although this rule may be changed for good cause or in the court's discretion [Water Code § 2018].

The Board's report is prima facie evidence of the physical facts, but the court will hear any evidence offered by any party to rebut the report or the prima facie evidence [Water Code § 2019].

[3] Expenses

The State Board is not entitled to any fee for its services, but will be paid or reimbursed for its total expenses [Water Code § 2040]. The total expense will be equitably apportioned by the Board against the parties to the suit [Water Code § 2043]. If the Board lacks the funds to advance the expense of a reference, or if it feels that the payment of the expense of any reference is not reasonably certain, it must refuse to undertake a reference until adequate provision is made by the parties and approved by the court for the payment of expenses [Water Code § 2041]. While the reference is pending, the Board may move the court for an order for interim or partial payments. The order may only be granted after a hearing with at least 10 days notice to the parties [Water Code § 2042].

On written application by any aggrieved party within 30 days after the statement of final expense and its apportionment has been mailed to the parties, the court will set a hearing for the determination of any objections to the expenses or the apportionment. The court clerk is required to give at least 10 days notice of the hearing by mail to all the parties [Water Code § 2045]. Failure to object is deemed a waiver, and the court will enter a judgment against the parties and in favor of the Board ex parte if no objections are filed [Water Code §§ 2046, 2047]. If there is a hearing on any objection, the court will apportion the expenses equitably [Water Code § 2048].

[4] Federal Court Cases

The State Board may accept a reference as master or referee from a federal court if the case involves water rights within, or partially within, California [Water Code § 2075]. In so acting, the Board will proceed according to the rules of practice and procedure of the court or as otherwise directed by the court [Water Code § 2076].

[5] Reservation of Jurisdiction

The trial court may reserve jurisdiction over the parties to settle future disputes concerning their rights in the water [Tehachapi-Cummings County Water Dist. v. Armstrong (1975) 49 Cal. App. 3d 992, 1002-1003, 122 Cal. Rptr. 918 (court may also appoint watermaster to monitor amount of future pumping from basin)]. Retention of jurisdiction is desirable so that when an owner claims the need for water, the prospective right to which was awarded under a declaratory decree, the court may determine whether the proposed new use, under all the circumstances, is a reasonably beneficial use and, if so, the quantity required [Tulare Irrigation Dist. v. Lindsay-Strathmore Irrigation Dist. (1935) 3 Cal. 2d 489, 525, 45 P.2d 972] .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Actions Under Agreements to Supply Water

§ 575.190 Governing Law

Private agreements to supply water are contracts and are controlled by contract law [see, e.g., Riverside Water Co. v. Jurupa Ditch Co. (1960) 187 Cal. App. 2d 538, 542, 187 Cal. App. 2d 538, 9 Cal. Rptr. 742] . Thus, the regular rules of contract interpretation will be applied to actions on contracts for the use of water [see Acadia, California, Ltd. v. Herbert (1960) 54 Cal. 2d 328, 334-335, 5 Cal. Rptr. 686, 353 P.2d 294 ; see also Ch. 140, Contracts]. If a water servicer has made a dedication to public use, the consumer has certain vested rights and may seek declaratory relief for a continuation of service [see, e.g., Vila v. Tahoe Southside Water Utility (1965) 233 Cal. App. 2d 469, 479-480, 43 Cal. Rptr. 654] .

B. Actions Under Agreements to Supply Water

§ 575.191 Essential Elements of Water Contract

[1] General Contract Principles

It is essential to the existence of a water contract between private parties that there be (1) parties capable of contracting, (2) consent by the parties, (3) a lawful object, and (4) a sufficient cause or consideration [Civ. Code § 1550; see Marshall & Co. v. Weisel (1966) 242 Cal. App. 2d 191, 196, 51 Cal. Rptr. 183] . When there is no agreement on the part of the user to buy the water offered for sale, a water contract is lacking in mutuality. Similarly, when there is no time specified to which the stated water rate applies, a water use contract is void due to uncertainty [Schimmel v. Martin (1923) 190 Cal. 429, 431, 213 P. 33] .

[2] Characterization of Water as Personal or Real Property

Water may be characterized as real or personal property for purposes of its sale. Water, in its natural state, whether in streams, lakes, or ponds, or in percolation through the soil, is part of the land. Water becomes personal property only when severed from the realty [Copeland v. Fairview Land Etc. Co. (1913) 165 Cal. 148, 154, 131 P. 119] .

When water is sold for domestic use and delivered by means of pipes to the premises, the pipes themselves are fixtures and part of the realty. Severance occurs and water becomes personal property when it is taken from the pipes by the consumer [Copeland v. Fairview Land Etc. Co. (1913) 165 Cal. 148, 154, 131 P. 119] . In comparison, irrigation water, even though delivered in pipes, permeates the soil and remains a part of the realty, so that no severance occurs and the water remains real property [Copeland v. Fairview Land Etc. Co. (1913) 165 Cal. 148, 154, 131 P. 119] .

B. Actions Under Agreements to Supply Water

§ 575.192 Remedies Available for Breach

Breach of a water service contract may merit damages, declaratory relief, and injunctive relief [see Acadia, California, Ltd. v. Herbert (1960) 54 Cal. 2d 328, 337, 5 Cal. Rptr. 686, 353 P.2d 294] . An act which breaches a water service agreement may be actionable either as a breach of contract or as a tort. An action in tort may be the preferable remedy for a disruption of water service, because punitive damages and damages for mental distress may be available [Acadia, California, Ltd. v. Herbert (1960) 54 Cal. 2d 328, 336-338, 5 Cal. Rptr. 686, 353 P.2d 294 ; see Ch. 362, Mental Suffering and Emotional Distress].

[1] Measure of Damages Varies

If there is a permanent failure of a contract to supply water which affects an easement in the water as a perpetual and inseparable part of the real property, the measure of damages is similar to that in eminent domain proceedings and is the difference between the market value of the land with and without the water [Crane v. East Side Canal etc. Co. (1935) 6 Cal. App. 2d 361, 370-371, 44 P.2d 455] .

When the failure to furnish water pursuant to water supply contract is only for a single season or a specified limited period of time, the measure of damages is the difference in the rental value of the land with and without the water [see Crane v. East Side Canal etc. Co. (1935) 6 Cal. App. 2d 361, 370, 44 P.2d 455] .

When a land lease agreement that includes irrigation rights is breached by denying access to irrigation water, the measure of damages is the difference between the rental value of the land with and without water for irrigation [Pallett v. Murphy (1900) 131 Cal. 192, 197-198, 63 P. 366 ; for discussion and forms involving breach of covenants, see Ch. 332, Landlord and Tenant: The Tenancy].

If a contract for the sale of water as personal property is breached, the measure of damages is the amount that will compensate the party aggrieved for all the damage proximately caused thereby, or which, in the ordinary course of things, would be likely to result therefrom [Civ. Code § 3301; for discussion and forms relating to contract damages, see Ch. 177, Damages]. The party aggrieved is required to mitigate damages [see Schultz v. Lakeport (1936) 5 Cal. 2d 377, 383-385, 54 P.2d 1110, 55 P.2d 485] . Moreover, if a water company's failure to supply water is a failure to comply with the applicable municipal regulations, the party aggrieved may recover from the water company twice the amount of damages sustained by reason of that failure [Pub. Util. Code § 8203].

[2] Limitation of Damages

A water company is not liable for damages resulting from a failure to supply water for a particular use in the absence of a specific undertaking to supply water for that use [Gelhaus v. Nevada Irrigation Dist. (1955) 43 Cal. 2d 779, 782, 278 P.2d 689] .

§ 575.194 Water Companies

Any person, firm, or corporation, their lessees, trustees, receivers or trustees appointed by any court whatsoever, owning, controlling, operating, or managing any water system within California, who sells, leases, rents, or delivers water to any person, firm, corporation, municipality, or other political subdivision, whether under contract or otherwise, is a public utility and is subject to the regulation of the Public Utilities Commission, unless specifically provided otherwise [Pub. Util. Code § 2701].

Any corporation or association organized for the purposes of delivering water to its stockholders and members at cost and that delivers water to no one except its stockholders or members, the state or any state agency or department, any public district, or any federal agency that provides fire protection or operates park facilities, or to any other mutual water company, at cost, is not a public utility and is not subject to the regulation of the Public Utilities Commission [Pub. Util. Code § 2705]. However, if this mutual type of corporation or association has a dual purpose or sells water to those outside its association for compensation, it is a public utility [Pub. Util. Code §§ 2702, 2703].

§ 575.195 Dedication to Public Use

[1] Service to Public

Dedication of property to public use is never presumed without evidence of unequivocal intention. It need not be expressly stated; it is normally evidenced by some act which is reasonably interpreted and relied on by the public as a holding out or indication of willingness to provide service on equal terms to all who might apply. A water supplier is subject to the jurisdiction of the Public Utilities Commission only if a dedication to the public has been made [see Cal. Water & Tel. Co. v. Public Util. Com. (1959) 51 Cal. 2d 478, 494, 334 P.2d 887] . A public utility is bound to provide and maintain water service in accordance with the requirements imposed by law, custom, or special contract. Once a system is established as public, all persons to whose use the water is appropriated or dedicated are vested with a right to have the supply continued [Coulter v. Sausalito Bay Water Co. (1932) 122 Cal. App. 480, 496, 10 P.2d 780] .

[2] Dedication May Be Limited

The owner of a water supply may make a limited dedication of it to public use, confining the use to a limited territory, or dedicating only a part of the water to public use. Thus, a water company has the right to decline to furnish its water to persons not within the area it has undertaken to serve [Cal. Water & Tel. Co. v. Public Util. Com. (1959) 51 Cal. 2d 478, 490, 334 P.2d 887] .

B. Actions Under Agreements to Supply Water

51-575 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 575.196

§ 575.196 Extension of Water Service

[1] Reasonable Necessity

The inhabitants of the city, as well as county or municipal authorities, may use mandate proceedings to compel a water district to extend its water mains and supply petitioners with water [see Lukrawka v. Spring Valley Water Co. (1915) 169 Cal. 318, 320, 146 P. 640 ; Boies & Soule v. East Bay Mun. Util. Dist. (1960) 186 Cal. App. 2d 843, 844, 9 Cal. Rptr. 464] .

A public utility may not be compelled to extend its service beyond the territorial limits of its dedication. When a water company has dedicated its service to the inhabitants of a municipality, the territorial scope of its dedication may ordinarily be measured by the municipality's boundaries, and it may be required to make reasonable extensions of its lines to accommodate the increased demands of a growing municipality [Cal. Water & Tel. Co. v. Public Util. Com. (1959) 51 Cal. 2d 478, 492-493, 334 P.2d 887] . The duty of the water company is of a public nature and is to meet a public necessity for the supplying of water to the community. Its obligation is not to supply each or any number of inhabitants of the municipality on demand as an absolute right on their part, but it does have the public duty of furnishing water service when there is a reasonable demand for it and a reasonable extension of service can be made to meet the demand. The right to require the service and the duty of furnishing it by an extension of the water system is determined by the reasonableness of the demand, which is a question of fact [Lukrawka v. Spring Valley Water Co. (1915) 169 Cal. 318, 332-333, 146 P. 640] .

[2] Factors Determining Reasonableness

The expense of extending service is one of many factors in determining whether an extension of service is reasonable; it is not the deciding factor. Among the factors considered in determining reasonable necessity are the duties of the company, the rights of its stockholders, the supply of water which the company may control for distribution, the facilities for making extensions to a locality beyond its present point of service, the rights of existing customers, the wants and necessities of the locality demanding it, and how far the right of the community as a whole may be affected by the demanded extensions [Lukrawka v. Spring Valley Water Co. (1915) 169 Cal. 318, 333-334, 146 P. 640] .

§ 575.197 Public and Private Water Companies

[1] Regulations for Service

A water company, whether privately or publicly owned and operated, has the right to require compliance with reasonable rules and regulations for service to customers and to provide for the discontinuance of the service for the violation thereof [Schultz v. Lakeport (1936) 5 Cal. 2d 377, 381, 55 P.2d 485, 54 P.2d 1110] .

[2] Remedies for Discontinuance of Service

If the water company is a privately owned "water corporation," that is, a corporation or person owning, controlling, operating, or managing any water system for compensation in California, the termination of residential water utility service is governed by statute [Pub. Util. Code § 241; see Pub. Util. Code §§ 777-780].

When there is a legitimate dispute as to consumer compliance, an injunction may be granted to restrain the threatened discontinuance of the service, whatever the character of the proprietorship [see Coulter v. Sausalito Bay Water Co. (1932) 122 Cal. App. 480, 496, 10 P.2d 780] . A water user may choose instead to recover damages, in which case the user will be required to mitigate damages [see Schultz v. Lakeport (1936) 5 Cal. 2d 377, 383-385, 55 P.2d 485, 54 P.2d 1110] .

For further discussion of termination of public utility service, including termination of residential service by a water corporation, see Ch. 277, Gas and Electricity .

The formation and organization of local agencies, including the various types of water districts, are governed by the Cortese-Knox-Hertzberg Local Government Reorganization Act of 2000 [Gov. Code § 56000 et seq.]. Under the Act, the local agency formation commission (LAFCO) of the principal county of the entity proposing a change of organization or reorganization is the "conducting authority" for changes of organization or reorganization, unless another conducting authority is specified by law [Gov. Code § 56029]. However, a metropolitan water district is not a "district" or a "special district," and any proceedings for a change of organization involving the entity [see Gov. Code § 57000 et seq.] must be conducted in accordance with the principal act authorizing the establishment of that entity [Gov. Code § 56036(b)]. Furthermore, if the LAFCO determines that a water conservation district, water replenishment district, the Orange County Water District, a California water storage district, a water agency, a county water authority or a water authority is not a "district" or a "special district," any proceedings for a change of organization involving the entity [see Gov. Code § 57000 et seq.] must be conducted in accordance with the principal act authorizing the establishment of that entity [Gov. Code § 56036(c)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Water Districts: Formation; Inclusion; Exclusion

§ 575.212 Overlapping Districts

Some overlap of purpose and territory is inevitable given the broad scope of powers and purposes of water districts [see, e.g., Water Code §§ 31000-31187 (county water districts); Water Code §§ 43000-44105 (water storage districts); Water Code §§ 71590-71759 (municipal water districts)]. While cooperation between water districts having overlapping territory and some overlapping purposes is often specifically provided for by statute, more frequently it is not [see, e.g., Water Code §§ 31150-31162 and Water Code §§ 31180-31182 (relations between county water districts and irrigation districts and municipality utility districts, respectively)].

When each district enjoys some powers not held by the other, neither district is of a greater or higher class. The overlapping of one district by another, each having different powers as well as some in common, does not affect the continued existence of either [36 Ops. Cal. Att'y Gen. 299-300 (1960) ; see, e.g., Water Code § 30065 (public corporation or agency having substantially identical purposes as county water district is not destroyed, nor are its powers impaired, by annexation of all or part of agency's territory by county district)].

When one water district is adequately providing a particular service within an area under the jurisdiction of two districts having common powers over the subject, the district first in time and functioning in the area should continue to provide the service without duplication by the other. Any further problem should be solved by the governing bodies of the two districts in a manner which will work to the best advantage of the inhabitants and with the least tax burden [see South Santa Clara Valley Water Conservation Dist. v. Santa Clara Valley Water Dist. (1978) 76 Cal. App. 3d 852, 861-862, 143 Cal. Rptr. 193] .

Federal Power Act (16 U.S.C. § 791a et seq.) preempts state regulation regarding minimum instream flow requirements for hydroelectric project of federally licensed power plant; federal interest in accomplishing congressional objectives of protecting wildlife and ensuring economical feasibility of federally licensed power plants, precludes California from imposing significantly higher minimum stream flow requirements than those of Federal Energy Regulatory Commission. State of California v. FERC (1990) 495 U.S. 490, 506-507, 110 S. Ct. 2024, 109 L. Ed. 2d 474

United States assertion of authority under Commerce Clause to utilize or regulate water flow of navigable water is not taking of property in Fifth Amendment sense because United States has superior navigation easement which precludes private ownership of water or its flow. United States v. Grand River Dam Authority (1960) 363 U.S. 229, 231-232, 80 S. Ct. 1134, 4 L. Ed. 2d 1186 , reh'g denied, 364 U.S. 855, 81 S. Ct. 33, 5 L. Ed. 2d 78

Equitable apportionment of benefits is doctrine governing interstate water controversies; controversies between states involve different considerations than controversies between private parties. New Jersey v. New York (1930) 283 U.S. 336, 342-343, 51 S. Ct. 478, 75 L. Ed. 1104 ; Connecticut v. Massachusetts (1930) 282 U.S. 660, 670-671, 51 S. Ct. 286, 75 L. Ed. 602

Surcharge on price of water from project if water is put to agricultural or manufacturing use on land of one owner in excess of 160 acres is valid limitation of subsidy received by persons with large land holdings. Metropolitan Water Dist. v. Marquardt (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 159, 186-188, 28 Cal. Rptr. 724, 379 P.2d 28

Federal government has power to impose reasonable conditions on use of federal funds, property, and privileges, especially in regard to water projects; state is unable to compel use of federal property on terms other than those prescribed or authorized by Congress. Ivanhoe Irrig. Dist. v. All Parties (1960) 53 Cal. 2d 692, 704, 3 Cal. Rptr. 317, 350 P.2d 69

[3] Navigability Issues

Stream is not required to be navigable in fact throughout year in order to be navigable in law. Hitchings v. Del Rio Woods Recreation & Park Dist. (1976) 55 Cal. App. 3d 560, 569-571, 127 Cal. Rptr. 830

Navigability of river determines whether owners of riparian property may obstruct use of river because they own stream, banks, and bed or whether that obstruction would be nuisance under Civ. Code § 3479. People ex rel. Baker v. Mack (1971) 19 Cal. App. 3d 1040, 1044, 97 Cal. Rptr. 448

Stream capable of use, and used, for pleasure boating is navigable even though stream is not used for commercial purpose; failure of Legislature to include stream within list of navigable waters in Harb. & Nav. Code §§ 101-106 is of no consequence in determining navigability. People ex rel. Baker v. Mack (1971) 19 Cal. App. 3d 1040, 1044, 1047-1049, 97 Cal. Rptr. 448

Navigability caused by flood waters creates public navigation right until owners of flooded land, in whom title remains, reclaim land. Bohn v. Albertson (1951) 107 Cal. App. 2d 738, 749-750, 238 P.2d 128

[4] Public Trust

On entering Union, state is given ownership in public trust over all lands under waters subject to ebb and flow of tide, whether or not those waters are navigable; ownership rights remain in title holders when state has previously relinquished public trust claim to tidelands. Phillips Petroleum Co. v. Mississippi (1988) 484 U.S. 469, 476-484, 108 S. Ct. 791, 98 L. Ed. 2d 877

Littoral property owners' fee simple title in shorezone of lake is impressed with public trust analagous to easement, acquired by state through prescription and held for benefit of public for purposes of commerce, navigation, fishing, recreation, and preservation of land in its natural state; public trust is applicable to lands between low and high watermarks of level of lake after construction of nearby dam since that was current level of lake. State v. Superior Court of Lake County (1981) 29 Cal. 3d 210, 226-232, 172 Cal. Rptr. 696, 625 P.2d 239 (Clear Lake) ; Fogerty v. State of California (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 224, 233-234, 231 Cal. Rptr. 810 (Lake Tahoe)

Tidelands public trust doctrine easement for commerce, navigation, and fishery exists only over those lands to which state acquired title on admission to Union; no easement for seawater flow through shallow lagoon as existing for property granted by Mexico to private ownership, ceded to United States, and patented under Act of 1851. City of Los Angeles v. Venice Peninsula Properties (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 1522, 1530-1535, 253 Cal. Rptr. 331

Owner of unimproved real property has no cause of action against Department of Health Services based on moratorium on new water service connections, when local water district imposed moratorium, and Department issued new permit to water district on condition that it continue existing moratorium; Department has discretion under former Health & Safety Code § 4010 et seq. (now see Health & Safety Code § 116325 et seq.) (procedures regarding issuance of water permits to water districts) to require water district to continue moratorium, and does not have nondiscretionary duty to issue permit without conditions once it made required potability determinations. *Gilbert v. Potential water user does not possess absolute right to be afforded water service; cause of action for inverse condemnation under Cal. Const., art. I, § 19, is not established based on denial of application for new water service connection for use on real property that, when purchased, lacked service connection to water district system. *Gilbert v. [1] Appropriative Rights

Appellate court's direction to trial court to issue appropriate writs commanding State Water Resources Control Board to attach conditions mandated by Fish & Game Code § 5946 to licenses that it issued to local power agency, requiring that agency release sufficient water from its dams into streams to protect preexisting fisheries, subject to immediate compliance by virtue of statutory mandate; water board not entitled to delay implementation of court directive while conducting administrative hearing to determine feasibility. California Trout, Inc. v. Superior Court (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 187, 203, 207-213, 266 Cal. Rptr. 788

Denial of petitions for writs of mandate seeking rescission of licenses confirming rights to appropriation of water improperly denied when licenses violated Fish & Game Code §§ 5937 and 5946, requiring licenses to appropriate water in Mono and Inyo counties to be conditioned on dam owners allowing sufficient flow of water to keep fish below dam in good condition; Fish & Game Code § 5946 not limited to appropriation of water obtained by diversion from dams constructed after September 9, 1953, effective date of statute. California Trout, Inc. v. State Water Resources Control Bd. (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 585, 598-633, 255 Cal. Rptr. 184

Public trust imposes duty of continuing supervision on state over taking and use of appropriated water; state not confined to past allocation decisions which might be incorrect in light of current knowledge or inconsistent with current needs, but has power to reconsider allocation decisions; no vested rights bar that reconsideration. United States v. State Water Resources Control Bd. (1986) 182 Cal. App. 3d 82, 149-150, 227 Cal. Rptr. 161

Filing application for appropriative water right confers possessory interest in real property pending perfection of appropriator's right to take water; applicant able to maintain action against trespassers or hostile claimants. Miller & Lux, Inc. v. Bank of America (1963) 212 Cal. App. 2d 719, 726, 28 Cal. Rptr. 401

[2] Board Actions

Board has broad discretion to act on appropriation applications, but may not arbitrarily and capriciously reject application. People v. Shirokow (1980) 26 Cal. 3d 301, 310, 162 Cal. Rptr. 30, 605 P.2d 859 ; East Bay M. U. Dist. v. Dept. of P. Wks. (1934) 1 Cal. 2d 476, 481, 35 P.2d 1027

Under Water Code §§ 1253-1256, "public interest" is primary statutory standard guiding board in acting on applications to appropriate water. Bank of America v. State Water Resources Control Bd (1974) 42 Cal. App. 3d 198, 212, 116 Cal. Rptr. 770

[3] Diversion Requirements in General

Fish & Game Code § 1603, requiring notice to Department of Fish and Game before any diversion or obstruction of streambed designated as wildlife resource by department, is constitutional, and violation is a misdemeanor. Rutherford v. State of California (1987) 188 Cal. App. 3d 1267, 1278, 233 Cal. Rptr. 781

[4] Generally

Watercourse is a stream, containing definite bed, banks, and channel, which flows into some other river, stream, lake, or sea; none of these characteristics is an absolute fixed factor. South Santa Clara Etc. Dist. v. Johnson (1964) 231 Cal. App. 2d 388, 393-394, 403, 41 Cal. Rptr. 846

Owner of land in which spring with no natural outlet lies owns water as completely as he or she does soil. State of California v. Hansen (1961) 189 Cal. App. 2d 604, 610, 11 Cal. Rptr. 335

[5] Prescription

Owner of prescriptive right who ceased for period of more than five years to apply any part of water to beneficial use loses right to water. Bazet v. Nugget Bar Placers, Inc. (1931) 211 Cal. 607, 617-618, 296 P. 616

Water easement rights conveyed by grant able to be enlarged by enlarged claim exercised openly, notoriously, continuously, and adversely during prescription period of five years. Security Pac. Nat. Bank v. City of San Diego (1971) 19 Cal. App. 3d 421, 432, 432 n.3, 97 Cal. Rptr. 61

Riparian right not lost by nonuse, but subject to appropriation and beneficial use by others. In re Waters of Long Valley Creek Stream System (1979) 25 Cal. 3d 339, 358-359, 158 Cal. Rptr. 350, 599 P.2d 656 ; Wright v. Goleta Water Dist. (1985) 174 Cal. App. 3d 74, 83, 219 Cal. Rptr. 740 ; *Orange County Water District v. City of Riverside (1959) 173 Cal. New appropriator's burden of proving existence of surplus from which it can extract quantity of water it desires without injury to those with prior rights arises only after riparians first proved the amount required by them for reasonable beneficial purposes. Tulare Irrigation Dist. v. Lindsay-Strathmore Irrigation Dist. (1935) 3 Cal. 2d 489, 535, 45 P.2d 972 ; Peabody v. City of Vallejo (1935) 2 Cal. 2d 351, 381, 40 P.2d 486

Appropriator is able to claim only amount necessary to properly supply needs, and is permitted no waste; appropriator is not bound to adopt best methods for utilizing water or to take extraordinary precautions to prevent waste. Tulare Irrigation Dist. v. Lindsay-Strathmore Irrigation Dist. (1935) 3 Cal. 2d 489, 573, 45 P.2d 972

Trial court with expressly reserved jurisdiction over consent judgment prohibiting water district from interfering with defendant water company's use of water from lake does not abdicate its responsibilities under public trust doctrine in refusing to consider adoption of plan of water district, allegedly designed to increase water use efficiency, interpreting and modifying physical solution injunction. Big Bear Mun. Water Dist. v. Bear Valley Mutual Water Co. (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 363, 375-384, 254 Cal. Rptr. 757

Board has power to adjudicate all competing water claims, even riparian claims and prescriptive claims which do not fall within appropriative licensing system. Imperial Irrigation Dist. v. State Water Resources Control Bd. (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 1160, 1169, 231 Cal. Rptr. 283

Judicial action is merited even without annual overdraft when sufficient injury can be shown either through requiring wells to be deepened or abandoned and through increased pumping costs throughout basin. Tehachapi-Cummings County Water Dist. v. Armstrong (1975) 49 Cal. App. 3d 992, 999, 122 Cal. Rptr. 918

B. Actions Under Agreements to Supply Water

§ 575.312 Decisions

[1] Actions on Contract

Injunction to refrain from diverting water does not excuse water company from contract obligation to supply irrigation water, especially when injunction was three years old and water company took no steps to have injunction dissolved. Sample v. Fresno Flume Etc. Co. (1900) 129 Cal. 222, 226-228, 61 P. 1085

Municipality's acceptance of district's offer to supply water by enactment of ordinance creates binding contract; recovery of costs of system is based on landowner's proportionate share of capacity of whole line. American-Hawaiian Steamship Co. v. Home Sav. and Loan Assn. (1974) 38 Cal. App. 3d 73, 80-81, 112 Cal. Rptr. 897

Requirements contract between subdivision developer and water company binds subdivider to look to water company for all water service and binds company to extend its service into additional units whenever extension provisions went into operation. Citizens Suburban Co. v. Rosemont Dev. Co. (1966) 244 Cal. App. 2d 666, 677-678, 53 Cal. Rptr. 551

Regular rules of contract interpretation apply in contract dispute between water company and community service district. Bakersfield Country Club v. Pacific Water Co. (1961) 192 Cal. App. 2d 528, 535-537, 13 Cal. Rptr. 573

When contract consideration running to upstream promissor was that promisor could use water flowing in river without regard to downstream promissee's water rights, subsequent diminishment or drying up of river does not relieve promisor from liability on promise. Riverside Water Co. v. Jurupa Ditch Co. (1960) 187 Cal. App. 2d 538, 542, 9 Cal. Rptr. 742

[2] Extension of Service

Water public utility seeking to extend its main beyond its dedicated area was required to comply with terms and conditions in its main extension rule on file with Public Utilities Commission, and must obtain PUC authority for any deviations; PUC was unable to compel water utility to extend its mains into a wholly new proposed residential community to be created in nondedicated territory. Cal. Water & Tel. Co. v. Public Util. Com. (1959) 51 Cal. 2d 478, 501-502, 334 P.2d 887

[3] Liability for Failure to Provide Water

Primary business of water company is being furnisher of water as commodity; liability for fire loss is not within ordinary relation of water distributor and consumer and is created only by express private contract to that effect. Lainer Investments v. Department of Water & Power (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 1, 9-13, 215 Cal. Rptr. 812 ; Luis v. Orcutt Town Water Co. (1962) 204 Cal. App. 2d 433, 438-440, 22 Cal. Rptr. 389

[4] Miscellaneous

Water rights acquired from riparian owners are taxable. San Francisco v. County of Alemeda (1936) 5 Cal. 2d 243, 246-247, 54 P.2d 462

[5] Rates

City acquisition of water system of another community obligates city to deal fairly with customers in that community and to provide them with service at reasonable rates; rates established by lawful rate-fixing body are presumed reasonable, fair, and lawful; lack of uniformity in rates does not establish unreasonableness. Hansen v. City of San Buenaventura (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 1172, 1180-1181, 233 Cal. Rptr. 22, 729 P.2d 186

In action by water company against water district alleging excessive charges for water provided under water service agreement, and seeking declaration that charges were unconstitutional under Cal. Const., art. XIIIB (limiting government's authority to expend proceeds of taxes), defendant has burden of proving compliance with art. XIIIB, that is, that fees are not excessive and therefore "proceeds of taxes" for purposes of invoking constitutional prohibition. Oildale Mutual Wat. Co. v. North of the River Mun. Wat. Dist. (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1628, 1634, 264 Cal. Rptr. 544

Writ of mandamus is proper to compel public irrigation district to fulfill its statutory duties; petition is required to show that (1) district has clear duty; (2) petitioner has beneficial interest in district's performance of that duty; (3) district has ability to perform duty; (4) district has failed to perform duty or has abused its discretion in performing duty; and (5) petitioner has no other plain, speedy, or adequate remedy. Elmore v. Imperial Irrigation Dist. (1984) 159 Cal. App. 3d 185, 193, 205 Cal. Rptr. 433

Municipal water district's promulgation of rates for water and sewer services is quasi-legislative and reviewable only by means of ordinary mandate under Code Civ. Proc. § 1085; standard of review is whether actions were arbitrary or capricious or whether district failed to follow procedure and give notices required by law. Car lton Santee Corp. v. Padre Dam Mun. Water Dist. (1981) 120 Cal. App. 3d 14, 18-19, 174 Cal. Rptr. 413

Municipal water district is quasi-municipal corporation with broad grant of legislative policy-making power; merger agreement by which two public agencies join to form one integrated water system is within authority of Water Code §§ 71722, 71723. Hewitt v. Rincon del Diablo Municipal Water Dist. (1980) 107 Cal. App. 3d 78, 84, 89, 165 Cal. Rptr. 545

General district first in time and functioning in area of overlap with special district continues to have authority within its own territory without interference. South Santa Clara Valley Water Conservation Dist. v. Santa Clara Valley Water Dist. (1978) 76 Cal. App. 3d 852, 861-862, 143 Cal. Rptr. 193

List of agencies in Cal. Const., Art. XIII, § 40, which prohibits incurring indebtedness exceeding income and revenue without election, is exclusive; water district's performing functions traditionally performed by county are not sufficient to subject it to debt limitation applicable to county. Vanoni v. County of Sonoma (1974) 40 Cal. App. 3d 743, 748-750, 115 Cal. Rptr. 485

Administrative mandamus under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5 is not available to review water district's decision to grant or withhold its consent to annexation of part of its territory by another water district. Wilson v. Hidden Valley Mun. Water Dist. (1967) 256 Cal. App. 2d 271, 276-277, 63 Cal. Rptr. 889

Consent is condition precedent to formation of new district containing in whole or in part territory of existing district or annexation by district of portion of another district. Fuller v. San Bernardino Valley Mun. Wat. Dist. (1966) 242 Cal. App. 2d 52, 63, 51 Cal. Rptr. 120

Water Code § 30065 requires consent of county water district before new public agency with substantial identity of purpose is formed within district; "purpose" as object to be attained or end sought. Andressen v. Board of Supervisors (1965) 235 Cal. App. 2d 436, 442, 45 Cal. Rptr. 306

[2] Use of Form

This form is a reproduction of the State Water Resources Control Board, Division of Water Rights, form for use to apply for a permit to appropriate water. Use of the form is mandatory [see Water Code § 1252; 23 Cal. Code Reg. § 705]. An application will not be accepted unless the filing fee is also submitted [23 Cal. Code Reg. § 676; see Water Code § 1525(b)(1)]. An application is complete when the State Board has certified that the applicant has fully and completely disclosed all information required [23 Cal. Code Reg. § 656(a); see 23 Cal. Code Reg. § 683 regarding necessity of submitting environmental information; for the environmental information form, see § 575.352]. If an application is incomplete [see 23 Cal. Code Reg. § 656(b)], but the applicant has made a bona fide attempt to conform to the laws and regulations, the Board will notify the applicant of the incompleteness and allow 60 days for an amended and completed application to be filed. For good cause shown, this time may be extended. If an amended and completed application is not filed within the time allowed, the application may be canceled without notice [see Water Code §§ 1270, 1270; 23 Cal. Code Reg. § 679].

After receipt of a conforming application, the Board will issue and deliver a notice of that application to the applicant and to the district attorney and the board of supervisors of each county in which water is to be diverted [Water Code § 1300]. The notice serves to provide information concerning protests to the application [see Water Code § 1304]. Appropriation rights to water may only be obtained through compliance with this application procedure [Water Code § 1225; see § 575.55[2]].

This form, as well as other Division of Water Rights forms and further water rights information, can be obtained at www.waterrights.ca.gov. The form is available in Adobe PDF format. The State Water Resources Control Board also maintains a useful website at www.swrcb.ca.gov.

As soon as practicable after receiving a complete application and, if an instream beneficial use assessment is required by Water Code § 1250.5 (small hydroelectric project), as soon as practicable after the determination that the instream beneficial use assessment is adequate, the State Board will issue a notice. The applicant will be directed to post or publish it [Water Code § 1300; 23 Cal. Code Reg. § 684(a)].

When the application is for three cubic feet or less per second or for 200 acre-feet or less per annum of storage, the Board will mail three copies of the notice to the applicant by registered mail and will send a copy by registered mail to each person known or judged by the Board to be interested in the application [Water Code §§ 1320, 1321]. The applicant must post the notice within 20 days of its issuance in at least two conspicuous places in the locality to be affected by the proposed application [Water Code § 1322].

The applicant, or the person posting notice on the applicant's behalf, must submit proof of posting by an affidavit (or declaration under Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5) filed within 40 days from the date of issuance of the notice [Water Code § 1323]. Failure to file proof of posting may result in the Board's cancelling the application after giving the applicant notice and 15 days in which to file the proof [Water Code § 1324].

[1] FORM Appropriation of Water--Protest--Board Form [Water Code § 1330]

This form is a reproduction of the State Water Resources Control Board, Division of Water Rights, form for use by any interested person to protest an application to appropriate water. One side of the form is for use when the protest is based on injury to vested rights. The other side is for use when the protest is based on environmental considerations, public interest, public trust, and other issues. Any interested person may, within the time allowed in the notice of application or within a further time allowed for good cause, file a written protest [Water Code § 1330; 23 Cal. Code Reg. § 747]. The time allowed for protests of an application for more than three cubic feet per second or for more than 200 acre-feet per annum of storage is 60 days from the date of issuance of the notice; for applications for those amounts or less, the time allowed is 40 days [Water Code §§ 1302, 1303].

A duplicate copy of the protest must be sent to the applicant. Depending on the grounds of the protest, it must contain specific allegations [see 23 Cal. Code Reg. § 745].

This form, as well as other Division of Water Rights forms and further water rights information, can be obtained at www.waterrights.ca.gov. The form is available in Adobe PDF format. The State Water Resources Control Board also maintains a useful website at www.swrcb.ca.gov.

[3] Resolving the Protest

The protestant and the applicant must make a good faith effort to resolve the protest within 180 days from the date on which the period provided under Water Code § 1330 expires. However, for good cause, the State Board may allow additional time for the protestant and the applicant to attempt to resolve the protest [Water Code § 1333]. The Board may request the protestant or the applicant to supply additional information that the Board determines is reasonably necessary to attempt to resolve the protest [Water Code § 1334], and may cancel a protest or application for failure to provide the information requested by the Board within the time period provided [Water Code § 1335].

[4] Field Investigations Required for Minor Applications

The State Board's Division of Water Rights must conduct a field investigation of all minor protested applications [Water Code § 1345]. "Minor applications" are applications that do not involve direct diversions in excess of three cubic-feet per second or storage in excess of 200 acre-feet per year [Water Code § 1348]. The Board must notify the parties not less than 20 days before conducting the field investigation, so that the parties may attend and present information to the Board [Water Code § 1345]. The Division of Water Rights may request the parties to submit information in support of their positions before, during, or after the field investigation. After the field investigation, the Division of Water Rights may conduct additional proceedings in accordance with the informal hearing procedure set forth in Gov. Code § 11445.10 et seq. [Water Code § 1346]. Based on the field investigation and any other information it has obtained, the Division of Water Rights must issue a decision unless the Board determines that additional proceedings should be conducted [Water Code § 1347]. The decision is subject to review as provided in Water Code § 1120 et seq. [Water Code § 1347].

This form is a reproduction of the State Water Resources Control Board, Division of Water Rights, form for use by an applicant, permittee, or licensee to petition the State Board for a change in the point of diversion or place of use from that specified in the application, permit, or license or for the addition of a point of rediversion. The change may be made at any time after notice of the application has been given, but only with the permission of the Board [Water Code § 1701; 23 Cal. Code Reg. § 791]. The petitioner must also give written notice of the proposed change to the Department of Fish and Game [Water Code § 1703]. Before any change is granted, the petitioner must establish to the Board's satisfaction, and it must find, that the change will not operate to the injury of any legal user of the water involved. The required fee must be submitted before the petition will be considered [Water Code § 1702; 23 Cal. Code Reg. § 791]. The Board may require that the petitioner publish or otherwise give notice of the change in a manner prescribed by the Board [Water Code § 1703; 23 Cal. Code Reg. § 745].

The Board has other specific forms of petitions that should be used to petition for change in the distribution of storage water or for change in the purpose of water use.

This form is a reproduction of the State Water Resources Control Board, Division of Water Rights, form for use to protest a change petition or an extension of time. One side of the form is for use when the protest is based on injury to vested rights. The other side is for use when the protest is based on environmental or public interest considerations. If a protest against a proposed change is filed with the State Board at any time before the Board grants permission to make the change pursuant to Water Code § 1701, the Board will set a time and place for a hearing on the petition and the objections [Water Code § 1704].

[3] Minor Petition for Change

A minor petition for change is one that does not involve direct diversions in excess of three cubic-feet per second or storage in excess of 200 acre-feet per year [Water Code § 1704.4]. In the case of minor petitions, a protest does not automatically result in a hearing. Rather, the State Board's Division of Water Rights will conduct a field investigation. The Board must notify the parties not less than 20 days before conducting the field investigation, so that the parties may attend and present information to the Board [Water Code § 1704.1]. The Division of Water Rights may request the parties to submit information in support of their positions before, during, or after the field investigation. After the field investigation, the Division of Water Rights may conduct additional proceedings in accordance with the informal hearing procedure set forth in Gov. Code § 11445.10 et seq. [Water Code § 1704.2]. Based on the field investigation and any other information it has obtained, the Division of Water Rights must issue an order acting on the minor petition for change unless the Board determines that additional proceedings should be conducted [Water Code § 1704.3].

[4] Judicial Review

The order of the Division of Water Rights is subject to review as provided in Water Code § 1120 et seq. [Water Code § 1704.3]. Any petition for a writ of mandate to inquire into the validity of the State Board's order after the hearing must be filed not later than 30 days from the date of final action by the Board [Water Code § 1126].

[2] Use of Form

This form is a reproduction of the State Water Resources Control Board, Division of Water Rights, form for use by the permittee to request an extension of time in putting the water to beneficial use [Water Code § 1398]. There is a mandatory fee, and extensions may be submitted on this form [23 Cal. Code Reg. § 842]. Actual construction work on any project must begin within the time specified in the permit, which must not be less than 60 days from the date of the permit [Water Code § 1395]. Due diligence must be exercised in construction and water utilization, although time extensions may be granted for good cause shown [Water Code §§ 1396, 1398]. An extension of time will be granted only on those conditions that the State Board finds are in the public interest and on a showing that due diligence has been exercised, that failure to comply with previous time requirements was caused by obstacles that could not reasonably be avoided, and that satisfactory progress will be made if an extension is granted. Good cause does not usually include lack of finances, occupation with other work, physical disability, and other conditions affecting the person and not the enterprise [23 Cal. Code Reg. § 844].

This form, as well as other Division of Water Rights forms and further water rights information, can be obtained at www.waterrights.ca.gov. The form is available in Adobe PDF format. The State Water Resources Control Board also maintains a useful website at www.swrcb.ca.gov.

[3] Notice

The State Board may require the permittee applying for an extension of time to cause notice to be given in a manner prescribed by the Board. Usually the Board does not require notice when the project is already under construction or a substantial financial commitment has been made, the project is not in an area of unusual competition for water, and the project is not a large multi-stage project which may be behind schedule [23 Cal. Code Reg. § 843(a)]. Protests to the extension of time may be filed and the Board may require a hearing [23 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 843(c), 844]. After any hearing on a petition for extension of time, the Board may revoke the permit [Water Code §§ 1398(b), 1410].

This form is a reproduction of the State Water Resources Control Board, Division of Water Rights, form for use to make a statement of water diversion and use. Each person who, after December 31, 1965, diverts water must file with the State Board, before July 1 of the succeeding year, a statement of diversion and use [Water Code § 5101]. However, Water Code § 5101 lists several circumstances under which no statement needs to be filed, including diversions covered by an application, permit, or license to appropriate water on file with the Board. A separate statement must be filed for each point of diversion [Water Code § 5102]. Supplemental statements must be filed at three-year intervals [Water Code § 5104].

If any person fails to file the required statement, the Board may, at that person's expense, conduct its own investigation and determination, after first giving that person written notice of its intention and 60 days in which to file the statement without penalty [Water Code § 5105].

Neither the statements nor the Board determinations constitute evidence of a water right. However, they are evidence of the facts stated therein in a Board application proceeding [Water Code §§ 5106, 5106].

Petitioner respectfully represents:

1. _____ [Set forth identity of petitioner and if petitioner is not an individual, set forth petitioner's identity as corporation, partnership, or other entity capable of holding an interest in real property and its interest in appropriating water, e.g., Petitioner is a water company which delivers, supplies, and distributes water for domestic and irrigation uses, and acquires or constructs dams, canals, ditches, land, rights-of-way, or other appurtenances that are necessary to accomplish its purpose].

2. Respondent State Water Resources Control Board of the State of California is the board within the Resources Agency of the State of California charged with the orderly and efficient administration of water resources. Under Water Code Sections 1250 through 1259, the State Board is charged with investigating all applications to appropriate water and to exercise its judgment in issuing permits for appropriations which will best utilize water for the public interest. Pursuant to Water Code Section 1350, the Board is required to hold a hearing before rejecting any application to appropriate water.

3. On _____ [date], petitioner filed with the Board an Application to Appropriate Water, application No. _____, for a permit to appropriate unappropriated water of the State of California to be used _____ [specify beneficial purpose, e.g., for irrigation and domestic purposes]. Petitioner made the application on a printed blank form prescribed by the Board and complied with all the application requirements. A copy of the application is attached to this petition as Exhibit A and made a part of the petition.

4. In that application petitioner sought to appropriate water from _____ [specify the natural channel, e.g., Muddy River], a natural channel beginning _____ [specify source, e.g., in the foothills of the Sierra Madre Mountains] and flowing in a generally _____ [specify direction, e.g., southeasterly] direction to its termination in _____ [specify location, e.g., the Pacific Ocean]. Petitioner sought to divert the water at _____ [specify diversion point], which is situated in _____ County, California.

5. The water that petitioner sought to appropriate was from the _____ [specify the natural channel, e.g., Muddy River] and was unappropriated, and was therefore public water subject to appropriation under Section 1201 of the Water Code.

6. The State Board held a hearing on the application on _____ [date], and rejected petitioner's application in an order dated _____ [date]. A copy of the order containing the facts and conclusions on which it is based is attached to this petition as Exhibit B, and made a part of this petition.

[7. On _____ [date], petitioner filed a reconsideration petition with the State Board, pursuant to Section 1122 of the Water Code, requesting a reconsideration of the Board's rejection of the application.]

[8. The Board (held a hearing on the reconsideration petition on _____ (date), and) rejected petitioner's application in an order dated _____ (date). A copy of the order containing the facts and conclusions on which it is based is attached to this petition as Exhibit C, and made a part of this petition.]

9. _____ [Allege the reason why the decision is invalid, e.g., The Board's refusal to issue the appropriation permit to petitioner was arbitrary and was not supported by the evidence, which indicated that the appropriation was urgently needed for domestic and irrigation purposes]. _____ [A verbatim transcript of the record of the hearing, containing the evidence received, is attached to this petition as Exhibit D and made a part of this petition or The substance of the evidence received at the hearing is as follows: _____ (state substance of evidence)].

[EITHER, if alleging that evidence does not support findings]

10. The evidence does not support the findings for the following reasons: _____ [specify].

[AND/OR, if alleging that incompetent evidence was received]

10. Petitioner objected at the hearing to the following evidence, on the grounds indicated, but in each instance petitioner's objection was not sustained and the evidence was received: _____ [identify evidence, e.g., the testimony of _____ (name), which was offered to show _____ (specify); _____ (specify and state ground for objection, e.g., the evidence was objected to on the ground that _____ (specify))].

[CONTINUE]

[12. Petitioner is informed and believes and thereon alleges that respondent's action was arbitrary and capricious. As an incident of bringing and maintaining this proceeding, petitioner has become and is obligated personally to pay to his/her/its counsel _____ (name), attorney's fees _____ (exceeding $7,500 or in the sum of $_____).]

13. The Board has the duty to approve petitioner's application and issue an appropriation permit. Petitioner is the party beneficially interested, and has no plain, speedy, or adequate remedy at law, but brings this petition under the authority of Section 1126 of the Water Code.

WHEREFORE, petitioner prays judgment as follows:

[1. For an alternative writ of mandate directing respondent to set aside its order of _____ (date), rejecting petitioner's appropriation permit and to reconsider whether petitioner is entitled to receive a permit, or alternatively to show cause why a peremptory writ of mandate to the same effect should not be issued;]

[2. For an order restraining operation of the State Board's cease and desist order of _____ (date), _____ (specify effect of cease and desist order), until further order of the court and for an order to show cause why operation of that order should not be stayed pending the judgment in this proceeding;]

3. For a peremptory writ of mandate directing respondent to set aside its order of _____ [date], rejecting petitioner's appropriation permit and directing respondent to reconsider whether petitioner is entitled to receive a permit;

[4. For reasonable attorney's fees, in addition to any other relief granted or other costs awarded;]

5. For costs of suit; and

6. For such other and further relief as the court may deem equitable.

VERIFICATION

I, _____ [name], am the petitioner in the above-entitled proceeding. I have read the foregoing petition and know the contents tof this petition. The same is true of my own knowledge, except as to those matters that are therein alleged on information and belief, and as to those matters, I believe it to be true.

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of California that the foregoing is true and correct.

[2] Use of Form

This form of petition is for use by an applicant, whose application for a permit to appropriate water was denied, to petition the court for a writ of mandate for relief from that denial. Any interested person may petition for a writ of mandate inquiring into the State Water Resources Control Board action. The petition must be made within 30 days of the State Board action [Water Code § 1126(b)]. Optional Paragraphs 7 and 8 should be included when the applicant requested a reconsideration by the Board, although failure to seek a reconsideration does not affect the right to petition [Water Code § 1126(b)].

[3] Allegations

This petition for a writ of mandate alleges the following:

- The petitioner's identity as one capable of appropriating water (Paragraph 1) [see Water Code §§ 1252, 1252.5];

- The respondent's identity and capacity to make appropriation decision (Paragraph 2) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5(a); Water Code § 1253];

- That an application was made to appropriate water (Paragraph 3) [see Water Code §§ 1250-1258];

- That the location of the diversion point is within the county (Paragraph 4);

- That the water to be appropriated is public water (Paragraph 5) [Water Code § 1201];

- That the respondent held a hearing and rejected the application (Paragraph 6) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5(a); Water Code § 1350];

- That the respondent's decision is not supported by the evidence (Paragraph 9) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5(a), (b)];

- The specific reasons why the evidence does not support the findings (Paragraph(s) 10); and

- That the petitioner is beneficially interested and has no adequate or speedy legal remedy (Paragraph 13) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1086].

The form includes optional paragraphs for use to allege (1) the petitioner's request for a reconsideration and respondent's denial (Paragraphs 7 and 8) [see Water Code § 1122], (2) the submission of any additional relevant evidence (Paragraph 11) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5(e)], and (3) arbitrary and capricious action by the State Board warranting attorney's fees (Paragraph 12) [see Gov. Code § 800].

[4] Verification

A petition for a writ of mandate must be verified [Code Civ. Proc. § 1086]. Proof of service on each respondent and real party in interest of a copy of a petition that seeks an alternative writ must accompany the petition when it is offered for filing except when, in its discretion and for good cause, the court has granted the application for the writ ex parte [Code Civ. Proc. § 1107; for a discussion of serving the petition, see Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition].

[5] Points and Authorities

Points and authorities also customarily accompany a petition filed in a superior court, although they do not appear to be expressly required by statute. When no alternative writ is sought, proof of service of a copy of the petition need not accompany the application, but proof of service of a copy of the filed petition must be lodged with the court before a hearing or any action by the court [Code Civ. Proc. § 1088.5].

Respondent.	)

Petitioner respectfully represents:

1. Petitioner _____ [set forth petitioner's identity as one aggrieved by the preliminary cease and desist order, e.g., holds a permit to appropriate water from the Muddy River for domestic and irrigation purposes].

2. Respondent State Water Resources Control Board of the State of California is the board within the Resources Agency of the State of California charged with enforcement of the terms or conditions of any permit or license issued by it in order that the public interest is best served. Under Water Code Sections 1825 through 1851, the State Board is allowed to issue preliminary cease and desist orders to prevent permit or license violations. Pursuant to Water Code Sections 1831 and 1834, when requested to do so by the person alleged to be committing a violation, the Board is required to hold a hearing before issuing a preliminary cease and desist order.

3. On _____ [date], petitioner _____ [delivered or mailed] a written request for a hearing to the State Board signed _____ [by or on behalf of] petitioner. On _____ [date], the Board held a hearing to receive evidence _____ [specify issue of hearing, e.g., on whether or not a violation of petitioner's permit was occurring]. Petitioner attended the hearing.

4. On _____ [date], petitioner received the State Board's preliminary cease and desist order providing that _____[specify terms of order]. [A copy of the preliminary cease and desist order is attached to this petition as Exhibit A and made a part of this petition.]

[5. On _____ (date), petitioner received the State Board's final cease and desist order. A copy of the final cease and desist order is attached to this petition as Exhibit B and made a part of this petition.]

6. [Invalidity of State Board's action. See § 575.364, Paragraph 9.]

[7. Description of evidence introduced at hearing or incorporation of transcript of hearing. See § 575.364, Paragraph 9.]

[8. Grounds for allowing submission of additional evidence. See § 575.364, Paragraph 11.]

9. [Attorney's fees allegation. See § 575.364, Paragraph 12.]

10. The State Board has the duty to revoke any cease and desist order against petitioner because its continuance is not in the public interest. Petitioner is the party aggrieved by the cease and desist order, and has no adequate or speedy remedy at law, but brings this petition under the authority of Section 1126 of the Water Code.

WHEREFORE, petitioner prays judgment as follows:

[1. For an alternative writ of mandate directing respondent to set aside its cease and desist order of _____ (date), compelling petitioner to cease and desist from _____ (specify), or in the alternative to show cause why a peremptory writ of mandate to the same effect should not be issued;]

[2. For an order restraining operation of the State Board's cease and desist order of _____ (date), _____ (specify effect of cease and desist order), until further order of the court and to show cause why operation of that order should not be stayed pending the judgment in this proceeding;]

3. For a peremptory writ of mandate directing respondent to set aside its order of _____ [date], compelling petitioner to cease and desist from _____ [specify];

[4. For reasonable attorney's fees, in addition to any other relief granted or other costs awarded;]

5. For costs of suit; and

6. For such other and further relief as the court may deem equitable.

[Verification. See § 575.364.]

CAUTION:

A petition for a writ of mandate must be verified [Code Civ. Proc. § 1086]. Proof of service on each respondent and real party in interest of a copy of a petition that seeks an alternative writ must accompany the petition when it is offered for filing except when, in its discretion and for good cause, the court has granted the application for the writ ex parte [Code Civ. Proc. § 1107; for a discussion of serving the petition, see Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition]. Points and authorities also customarily accompany a petition filed in a superior court, although they do not appear to be expressly required by statute. When no alternative writ is sought, proof of service of a copy of the petition need not accompany the application, but proof of service of a copy of the filed petition must be lodged with the court before a hearing or any action by the court [Code Civ. Proc. § 1088.5].

This form of petition for a writ of mandate is for use by a person aggrieved by a cease and desist order issued by the State Board to obtain judicial review of that order. After notifying the alleged violator, the Board may issue a preliminary cease and desist order when it determines that there is a violation of a permit or license to appropriate water [Water Code §§ 1831, 1834]. Any aggrieved person may file a petition for a writ of mandate for review of either a preliminary or a final cease and desist order. The petition should be filed within 30 days after receipt of the final cease and desist order [Water Code § 1126]. For further discussion of the enforcement of water rights, see § 575.101.

[3] Allegations

This petition for a writ of mandate alleges (1) the petitioner's identity as one aggrieved by the cease and desist order (Paragraph 1) [see Water Code § 1126], (2) that the respondent is the state entity with discretion to make a decision (Paragraph 2) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5(a); Water Code §§ 1831-1836], (3) that the respondent held a hearing (Paragraph 3) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5(a); Water Code § 1834], (4) that the respondent issued a preliminary cease and desist order (Paragraph 4) [see Water Code § 1831], and (5) that the petitioner is an aggrieved person and has no adequate or speedy legal remedy (Paragraph 10) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1086]. An optional paragraph is included for use when the State Board has issued a final cease and desist order (Paragraph 5) [see Water Code § 1833].

PETITION FOR DETERMINATION OF WATER RIGHTS

To The State Water Resources Control Board:

The undersigned, your petitioners, respectfully represent:

First--That they are claimants to water or use of water of the above-named stream system, to wit, said _____ and its tributaries, in _____ County, California.

Second--That there are various claimants to waters and the use of water of this stream system and to _____ [specify nature of right, e.g., appropriative] rights in and to the waters of this petition.

Third--That the public interest and necessity will be served by a determination of the rights in and to the water of this stream system.

WHEREFORE, your petitioners request that a determination of the rights of the various claimants to the waters of this stream system be undertaken as provided for in Sections 2500 to 2900, inclusive, of the California Water Code.

[2] Use of Form

This form is for use by claimants to the water or the use of water in a stream system to petition the State Board for a determination of the rights of the various claimants to that water [Water Code § 2525; 23 Cal. Code Reg. § 945]. For discussion of adjudications of water rights by the Board, see § 575.140. The procedure of petitioning the Board is an alternative to filing an action for declaratory relief for determination of water rights in the courts, and is preferable in many ways [see § 575.172]. [2] Use of Form

This form is a reproduction of the State Water Resources Control Board form for use by a claimant as a proof of claim of a water right [Water Code § 2575; 23 Cal. Code Reg. § 947(a)]. All interested claimants who receive notice of the determination proceedings must notify the State Board of their intention to file a proof of claim and to appear and submit proof of their claims [Water Code § 2528]. An interested claimant may provide the requisite notice of intention through a letter to the Board. A separate proof must be filed for each purpose of use, except that water for incidental domestic, stock watering, and recreational use may be claimed in the same proof with any other use [23 Cal. Code Reg. § 947(b)]. When a water right is held by two or more parties and the interests in that water right have been divided among the parties, each party must file a separate proof covering his or her individual interest in the water right [23 Cal. Code Reg. § 947(f)].

Any person not submitting a proof of claim by the conclusion of the investigation will be notified that his or her rights will be entered in the preliminary order of determination by the Board based on information gathered during the investigation unless a claim is submitted within 30 days [Water Code § 2577].

		[(Civ. Code § 3422;) Code Civ. Proc. §(§ 526, 527(a),) 1060]

Plaintiff alleges:

1. Plaintiff is, and at all times herein mentioned was, the owner of land located at _____ [address], _____ County, California, more particularly described as follows: _____ [set forth legal description].

2. Defendant _____ [name] is, and at all times herein mentioned was, the owner of land located at _____ [address], _____ County, California, more particularly described as follows: _____ [set forth legal description of land].

[IDENTIFY, in successively numbered paragraphs, each additional defendant claiming water rights adverse to plaintiff's claim; then CONTINUE]

[3. Plaintiff is ignorant of the true names and capacities of defendants sued herein as DOES I-_____, inclusive, and therefore sues these defendants by such fictitious names. Plaintiff will amend this complaint to allege their true names and capacities when ascertained. (Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that each of the fictitiously named defendants is claiming an interest in the water described below.)]

[4. (Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that) (A)t all times herein mentioned each of the defendants sued herein as DOES I-_____, (specify number smaller than total number of does alleged to reflect only those to whom the agency allegation applies) inclusive, was the agent and employee of each of the remaining defendants and was at all times acting within the course and scope of such agency and employment.]

[5. If plaintiff is asserting a riparian right, add description of riparian ownership, e.g., Plaintiff has a right to the use of _____ (specify amount in gallons, acre-feet, or other measure of water or proportion of watercourse), in that his/her land is riparian to the Muddy River, located _____ (upstream or downstream) from defendant's land.]

6. Plaintiff is a claimant to water and the use of water of _____ [specify water, e.g., the Muddy River and its tributaries)] in _____ County, California, for beneficial use as follows: _____ [set forth particular use and amount of water in gallons, acre-feet, or other measure].

7. Each of the defendants is a claimant to water and the use of water of _____ [specify water, e.g., the Muddy River and its tributaries] in _____ County, California, [for uses which each defendant claims to be beneficial and in amounts which are unknown to plaintiff or if the uses and amounts are known, plaintiff may describe them with particularity].

8. An actual controversy has arisen and now exists among the various claimants to the water and the use of that water because of the disputed types and amounts of the various claims.

9. Plaintiff will suffer damages _____ [describe type of damage, e.g., in the form of loss of crops due to inadequate irrigation water] as a result of defendants' use of water under their claimed water rights, which are adverse to the water rights claimed by plaintiff. The various claims of defendants are adverse to each other as well as to the claim of plaintiff.

10. Plaintiff has no plain, speedy, or adequate remedy at law, and a judicial declaration is necessary and appropriate at this time under the circumstances in order that plaintiff may ascertain the extent of his/her/its rights to the water and to the use of that water.

[11. The assertion and enforcement by defendants, and each of them, of their respective claims to the water and use of the water, unless and until enjoined and restrained by order of this court, will _____ (specify particular facts establishing grounds for preliminary injunctive relief, e.g., cause great and irreparable injury to plaintiff in that plaintiff's land is planted in crops which require water, defendants' use of the water leaves no water available for plaintiff, and plaintiff has already lost a portion of his/her/its crop and may lose the entire crop if defendants' use of the water continues until this action can be brought to trial).]

[12. Plaintiff has no adequate remedy at law for the injuries _____ (currently being suffered or which are threatened) in that _____ (specify any additional facts tending to show grounds for permanent injunctive relief, e.g., defendants will continue to use the water and plaintiff would be required to maintain a multiplicity of judicial proceedings to protect his/her interests).]

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment as follows:

1. For a declaration determining the rights of the various claimants to the waters of _____ [specify the water in controversy, e.g., the Muddy River and its tributaries];

[2. For issuance of a temporary restraining order and preliminary injunction restraining and enjoining defendants from _____ [specify, e.g., removing any water from the Muddy River];

[3. For issuance of a permanent injunction restraining and enjoining defendants from _____ [specify, e.g., removing any water from the Muddy River];

4. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

5. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

VERIFICATION

I, _____ [name], am the plaintiff in the above-entitled action. I have read the foregoing complaint and know the contents tof this petition. The same is true of my own knowledge, except as to those matters which are therein alleged on information and belief, and as to those matters, I believe it to be true.

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of California that the foregoing is true and correct.

[2] Use of Form

This form of complaint is for use by a plaintiff to bring an action for declaratory relief to determine water rights in a watercourse and to request injunctive relief from interference with that right [see Civ. Code § 3422; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 526, 527(a), 1060]. The plaintiff's claim may be based on a riparian right, an appropriative right, or both.

[3] Allegations

The above complaint alleges the following:

- Plaintiff's and defendant's ownership of land for purposes of venue (Paragraphs 1 and 2) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 392(a)(1)];

- Plaintiff's and defendants' claims to water (Optional Paragraph 5; Paragraphs 6 and 7);
- Existence of an actual controversy (Paragraph 8); and
- The necessity for a declaration of rights (Paragraphs 9 and 10) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1060].

Optional Paragraph 5 is for use if plaintiff is asserting a riparian right. In that case, plaintiff must plead the following:

- The riparian character of the land;
- The quantity of water or the proportion of the watercourse to which entitlement is claimed; and
- The location of the land with regard to the land of the other party.

The riparian character of the land may be pleaded either by alleging the existence of ultimate facts, which if proved would establish the land as riparian, or by alleging generally that the land is riparian to a stream or natural watercourse. The following three facts must be proved to establish land as riparian [see Hudson v. West (1957) 47 Cal. 2d 823, 828-830, 306 P.2d 807 (holding that quantity of water must be definite and if number of inches of running water is indefinite complaint is subject to demurrer for uncertainty)]:

- Some part of the land must be contiguous to a natural watercourse;
- The land for which water is claimed must be within the watershed of the stream; and
- The land for which water is claimed must be part of the smallest tract held under one title in the chain of title leading to the present owner.

The form also includes optional paragraphs for alleging the following:

- The fictitious names of defendants (Paragraph 3) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 474; see also Ch. 20, Allegations Commonly Used];
- The agency relationship of defendants (Paragraph 4) [see Ch. 427, Principal and Agent];
- Facts to support preliminary injunctive relief (Paragraph 11) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 526; E.H. Renzel Co. v. Warehousemen's Union (1940) 16 Cal. 2d 369, 373, 7 L.R.R.M. (BNA) 686, 106 P.2d 1] ; and
- Any additional facts necessary to support permanent injunctive relief (Paragraph 12) [see Civ. Code § 3422; see also Ch. 303, Injunctions].

[4] Verification

A complaint seeking preliminary injunctive relief must be either verified or accompanied by affidavits (or declarations under Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5) in support of the allegations of the complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 527(a)]. If relying on a verified complaint instead of affidavits (or declarations), counsel must plead evidentiary facts that would entitle plaintiff to the relief sought [see E.H. Renzel Co. v. Warehousemen's Union (1940) 16 Cal. 2d 369, 373, 7 L.R.R.M. (BNA) 686, 106 P.2d 1 ; Finnie v. Town of Tiburon (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 1, 15, 244 Cal. Rptr. 581] . For discussion, a procedural checklist, and additional forms necessary to obtain a temporary restraining order or preliminary injunction, see Ch. 303, Injunctions .

[5] Jurisdiction and Venue

The county in which the real property through which plaintiff is asserting a right to the watercourse is situated is the proper county for the action [Code Civ. Proc. § 392(a)(1)]. The action must be brought in the superior court and is not a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85, 86(a)(7), (8), 580(b), 1060].

[6] State Statutes

Permanent injunctive relief. Civ. Code § 3422

Preliminary injunctive relief. Code Civ. Proc. §§ 526, 527(a)

Declaratory relief for determination of rights to water in watercourse. Code Civ. Proc. § 1060

Plaintiff alleges:

1. Plaintiff is, and at all times herein mentioned was, the owner, in possession, and entitled to the possession of land located at _____ [address], _____ County, California, more particularly described as follows: _____ [set forth legal description] and to all right, title, and interest in and to any and all springs, streams, ditches, canals, flumes, rights-of-way, water locations, water rights, privileges, and licenses in any way connected with or appurtenant to that real property. Plaintiff has a right to the use of _____ [specify amount of water in gallons, acre-feet, or other measure or proportion of watercourse], in that his/her land is riparian to _____ [specify watercourse, e.g., the Muddy River], and located _____ [upstream or downstream] from defendant's land.

4. At all times herein mentioned, _____ [specify watercourse, e.g., the Muddy River] was, and now is, a natural watercourse flowing in its natural course in a generally _____ [specify direction, e.g., southerly] direction through, along, over, across, on, and past plaintiff's above-described real property, which is riparian tto this petition. _____ [Specify manner in which water may be of use to plaintiff, e.g., A large portion of plaintiff's land is irrigated by the natural flow of the Muddy River across it. That natural irrigation renders the land capable of producing large quantities of pasturage for livestock.]

5. Plaintiff and his/her/its predecessors in interest, under their rights as riparian proprietors in _____ [specify watercourse, e.g., the Muddy River], and by virtue of their ownership of the property bordering thereon, have for more than _____ years used, and are now using, except as that use has been interfered with by defendants as hereinafter alleged, the water of _____ [specify watercourse, e.g., the Muddy River] for _____ [set forth beneficial uses made of that water, e.g., stock, domestic, and agricultural purposes]. Plaintiff's use of his/her/its land has required the entire amount of his/her/its riparian right for those purposes, and will continue to so require.

[EITHER]

6. Defendant at all times herein mentioned was the owner of land located at _____ [address], _____ County, California, more particularly described as follows: _____ [set forth legal description], together with riparian rights on _____ [specify watercourse, e.g., the Muddy River]. Defendant's riparian right on that watercourse is upper to plaintiff's.

[OR]

6. Defendant has not, and never had, any right whatsoever in or to the waters of _____ [specify watercourse, e.g., the Muddy River], or any part tof this petition, or any right to divert any of its waters, and defendant's use of the water is neither a riparian use, nor the lawful exercise of a riparian right. If defendant had not wrongfully taken those waters, plaintiff would have put them to reasonable, lawful, and beneficial purposes.

[CONTINUE]

7. _____ [Set forth defendant's use of the water of that watercourse which has injured plaintiff, e.g., During the past two years defendant has performed logging operations on his land, and in so doing, has wrongfully and unlawfully dammed up the Muddy River, taking large quantities of water from the river, thereby preventing the waters of the river from reaching plaintiff's land in sufficient quantities for plaintiff's purposes as set forth above, and interrupting the natural flow of the waters].

8. As a proximate result of defendant's unlawful and wrongful taking of the waters of _____ [specify watercourse, e.g., the Muddy River], that water has not been reaching plaintiff's land in sufficient quantities to provide water for _____ [specify purpose for which plaintiff used the water, e.g., pasturage for livestock] and plaintiff has sustained damages _____ [specify nature and extent of damages, e.g., by being required to move his stock to another range, rent pasturage, hire extra help, and pay extra labor, all to his damage in the sum of

[9. The aforementioned acts of the defendant were willful and _____ (oppressive or fraudulent or malicious or any combination tof this petition) in that _____ (allege facts indicating presence of oppression, fraud, and/or malice).]

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment as follows:

1. For general damages in the sum of $_____;

[2. For punitive damages;]

3. For costs of suit; and

4. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

_____ [signature]
Attorney for Plaintiff

[2] Use of Form

This form of complaint is for use by a plaintiff to bring an action to recover damages for interference with a riparian water right against the owner of an upper riparian right. The form is adapted from the fact situation in Eldridge v. Scott Lumber Co. (1960) 187 Cal. App. 2d 457, 9 Cal. Rptr. 623 .

[3] Allegations

The above complaint alleges (1) plaintiff's ownership of land for purposes of venue (Paragraph 1) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 392(a)(1)], (2) plaintiff's riparian right to water (Paragraphs 1 and 4) [see Hudson v. West (1957) 47 Cal. 2d 823, 828-829, 306 P.2d 807] , (3) plaintiff's beneficial riparian use (Paragraph 5), (4) defendant's riparian right or lack tof this petition (Paragraph 6), (5) facts showing the defendant's use causing injury (Paragraph 7), and (6) damages proximately caused by defendant's wrongful conduct (Paragraph 8). It also includes an optional allegation for punitive damages (Paragraph 9) [Civ. Code § 3294].

[4] Decisions

Lower riparian owner is entitled to damages when land used for grazing and cattle lost weight due to lack of water caused by upstream damming. Eldridge v. Scott Lumber Co. (1960) 187 Cal. App. 2d 457, 460-461, 9 Cal. Rptr. 623

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], DEFENDANT ALLEGES that:

1. The waters alleged in the complaint to have been impounded on his/her/its property were not waters of the watercourse specified in the complaint, nor of any other watercourse.

2. The waters impounded by defendant were, and are, in fact surface drainage waters only. These surface waters are, and were at all times mentioned in the complaint, fed only by the runoff of waters at times of heavy rainfall from natural drainage resulting solely from that rainfall. That runoff did not then, or now, consist of waters running in a well-defined channel.

This form of affirmative defense is for use by a defendant in an answer to a complaint of interference with the riparian right of another through the impounding of waters. When the waters impounded are not part of a watercourse, but are merely surface drainage waters, there is no interference with a riparian right [South Santa Clara Etc. Dist. v. Johnson (1964) 231 Cal. App. 2d 388, 394-395, 403, 41 Cal. Rptr. 846] .

If more than one affirmative defense is set forth in the answer, each defense must be separately stated and numbered [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(g); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.112]. If the complaint sets forth more than one cause of action, the affirmative defense must refer to the cause of action it is intended to answer [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(g)].

For discussion and forms relating to affirmative defenses, see Ch. 26, Answers .

Defendant has a right to the use of _____ (specify amount of water in gallons, acre-feet, or other measure or proportion of watercourse), in that his/her/its land is riparian to _____ (specify watercourse, e.g., the Muddy River), and his/her/its land is located _____ (upstream or downstream) from plaintiff's land.]

2. [2] Use of Form

This form of affirmative defense is for use by a defendant in an answer to a complaint of interference with the riparian right of another. A riparian owner is permitted to use a reasonable amount of water necessary for beneficial enjoyment of the riparian property [see Gutierrez v. Wege (1905) 145 Cal. 730, 734-735, 79 P. 449 (impounding of waters)].

2. As a riparian owner plaintiff was only entitled to the amount of water necessary for useful and beneficial purposes, and the amount of water which continued to reach plaintiff's land was sufficient to satisfy his/her/its reasonable demands.

[2] Use of Form

This form of affirmative defense is for use by a defendant in an answer to a complaint of interference with the riparian right of another. When a riparian owner has enough water to satisfy the reasonable demands on the riparian property, that owner has no authority to interfere with the use by another [see Meridian, Ltd. v. San Francisco (1939) 13 Cal. 2d 424, 450, 90 P.2d 537, 91 P.2d 105 (impounding case suggesting that seepage, drainage, and spill causing return flow may be included in determining amount of water available to lower riparian)].

1. At all times mentioned in the complaint, defendant was, and is, the riparian owner of the property described as belonging to him/her/it in the complaint, and is thereby entitled to make reasonable use of the waters flowing on his/her/its property.

2. Defendant's use of waters on his/her/its property exceeded his/her/its riparian right and was adverse to the riparian rights of plaintiff in that _____ [specify improper nature of water use, e.g., defendant impounded water during the dry season, retained it for an indefinite period of time, and released it only to suit his/her/its convenience].

3. For _____ [five or more] years defendant [and his/her/its predecessors in title] has/have openly, notoriously, continuously, and under a claim of right to do so, _____ [state facts showing adverse use of water, e.g., diverted waters from the watercourse and impounded them for a beneficial purpose].

4. Through the above-described diversion of water, defendant has acquired a prescriptive right to the waters of the watercourse as against plaintiff.

This form of affirmative defense is for use by a defendant in an answer to a complaint of interference with the riparian right of another. An upper riparian owner may acquire a prescriptive right to the waters of a stream as against a lower riparian owner by an adverse use of those waters for the prescriptive period [Moore v. Cal. Oregon Power Co. (1943) 22 Cal. 2d 725, 735, 140 P.2d 798] . Adverse possession for a five-year period will ripen into title by prescription [Civ. Code § 1007; Code Civ. Proc. § 321].

For discussion and forms relating to adverse possession and use of real property, see Ch. 13, Adverse Possession .

This general form of complaint is for use by the owner of a riparian right to bring an action for damages and injunctive relief against an upstream owner of a water right who has diverted or has threatened to divert water from the watercourse in an amount that interferes or would interfere with the amount needed by the plaintiff. The court will act to enjoin upstream diversion when it is wrongful and when the amount so diverted would be used for reasonable and beneficial purposes by the lower riparian plaintiff [Carlsbad Etc. Co. v. San Luis Rey Etc. Co. (1947) 78 Cal. App. 2d 900, 914, 178 P.2d 844] . The complaint may also be used to apply for a temporary restraining order if, within the 10 days preceeding the filing of the complaint, the plaintiff was in peaceable possession of the water flow and the defendant either actually deprived or threatened to deprive the plaintiff of the water [see Code Civ. Proc. § 530].

No temporary restraining order will be granted without notice to the opposing party unless the applicant or the applicant's attorney certifies one of the following to the court under oath [Code Civ. Proc. § 527(c); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1204(b)]:

- That within the applicable time period before the application, the applicant informed the opposing party or the opposing party's attorney at what time and where the application would be made;

- That the applicant in good faith attempted but was unable to inform the opposing party and the opposing party's attorney, specifying the efforts made to contact them; or

- That for reasons specified the applicant should not be required to so inform the opposing party or the opposing party's attorney.

[3] Allegations

This complaint alleges the following:

- That the plaintiff's beneficial use of water was wrongfully diverted (Paragraph 5) [see Carlsbad Etc. Co. v. San Luis Rey Etc. Co. (1947) 78 Cal. App. 2d 900, 914, 178 P.2d 844] ;

- Proximate damages (Paragraph 8) [see Civ. Code § 3333];

- Facts to support preliminary injunctive relief (Paragraph 9) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 526; E.H. Renzel Co. v. Warehousemen's Union (1940) 16 Cal. 2d 369, 373, 7 L.R.R.M. (BNA) 686, 106 P.2d 1 ; see also Ch. 303, Injunctions]; and

- Any additional facts necessary to support permanent injunctive relief (Paragraph 10) [see Civ. Code § 3422].

Also included are optional alternative allegations for use when a temporary restraining order without notice to defendant is sought either because wrongful diversions or threats of wrongful diversion have occurred within the 10 days before filing the complaint (Paragraphs 6 and 7) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 530].

[4] Certification re Notice

In an action for an injunction or a restraining order brought to prevent the diversion, diminution, or increase of the flow of water in its natural channels, notice of the application must first be given to the defendant. However, if it appears from the verified complaint or affidavits on which the application is made that within 10 days prior to the time of application the plaintiff was in the peaceable possession of the flow of that water and that within that time the plaintiff has been deprived of the flow by the defendant's wrongful diversion or has received from the defendant threats to divert that water, notice is not required. If notice of that application is given and on the hearing it appears to the court that the plaintiff is entitled to the injunction, but that issuance of the injunction will cause great damage to the defendant and that the plaintiff will not be greatly damaged by the acts complained of pending the litigation, and can be fully compensated for the damages suffered, the court may refuse to issue the injunction if the defendant gives a bond as provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 532 [Code Civ. Proc. § 530].

When a temporary restraining order is sought without formal notice, the applicant or the applicant's attorney is required to certify to the court under oath that (1) within the applicable time period before the application he or she informed the opposing party or his or her attorney at what time and where the application would be made; (2) that he or she in good faith attempted to inform the opposing party or his or her attorney but was unable to do so, specifying the efforts made; or (3) that for reasons specified he or she should not be required to so inform the opposing party or his or her attorney [Code Civ. Proc. § 527(c); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1204(b)]. For a form of an application for a preliminary injunction and a form of preliminary injunction, see §§ 575.393 and 575.394, respectively.

A complaint seeking preliminary injunctive relief must be either verified or accompanied by affidavits (or declarations under Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5) in support of the allegations of the complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 527(a)]. If relying on a verified complaint instead of affidavits (or declarations), counsel must plead evidentiary facts that would entitle plaintiff to the relief sought [see E.H. Renzel Co. v. Warehousemen's Union (1940) 16 Cal. 2d 369, 373, 7 L.R.R.M. (BNA) 686, 106 P.2d 1 ; Finnie v. Town of Tiburon (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 1, 15, 244 Cal. Rptr. 581] . In a limited civil case, the court may issue temporary restraining orders and preliminary injunctions, but not permanent injunctive relief; thus, if permanent injunctive relief is sought, the action cannot be brought as a limited civil case [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85, 86(a)(8), 580(b)(1)].

For discussion, a procedural checklist, and additional forms necessary to obtain a temporary restraining order or preliminary injunction, see Ch. 303, Injunctions .

This form is for use by a defendant who is subject to a preliminary injunction barring the diversion of water to give notice of a motion to dissolve or modify the injunction. In actions in which an injunction to prevent the diversion of water is available, the court may dissolve or modify the injunction (1) if the water is diverted for domestic or irrigation uses only, (2) if the defendant will suffer great damage if the injunction is continued, and (3) if the plaintiff can be fully compensated for damages sustained [Code Civ. Proc. § 532].

The dissolution or modification is subject to the person enjoined giving a bond in an amount fixed by the court, conditioned that the enjoined person will pay all damages that the person on whose behalf the injunction issued may suffer by reason of the continuance, during the litigation, of the acts complained of. On trial, the amount of the damages must be ascertained, and in case judgment is rendered for the person in whose behalf the injunction was granted, the amount fixed as damages must be included in the judgment, together with reasonable attorney's fees. In any proceedings to enforce the liability on the bond, the amount of the damages as fixed in the judgment is conclusive [Code Civ. Proc. § 532(b)]. For discussion of Code Civ. Proc. § 530, governing the injunction procedures, see § 575.392.

I, _____ [name], declare:

1. I am _____ [identify declarant, e.g., an attorney at law duly admitted to practice before all the courts of the State of California and the attorney of record herein for defendant or other statement as appropriate].

2. On _____ [date] this court issued a preliminary injunction restraining defendant from diverting water from _____ [specify watercourse, e.g., the Muddy River] at any point on that watercourse upstream from the land described in plaintiff's complaint in the above-entitled action.

3. Defendant has fully complied with that order but if the order is continued, defendant will suffer great damages in that _____ [set forth reasons for defendant's damage, e.g., defendant is a public water district supplying water to approximately _____ subscribers occupying approximately _____ acres in _____ County, California. Those subscribers have no other source of water for irrigating that land and defendant has been unable to procure any other adequate supply of water. Estimates by qualified engineers indicate that the cost of relocating the diversion point to a location downstream from plaintiff's land is $_____, a sum beyond defendant's ability to obtain a bond. The land serviced by defendant is planted in various agricultural products with an annual value of $_____. Declarant is informed and believes and thereon alleges that the entire production of those agricultural products will be destroyed unless an immediate supply of water sufficient for proper irrigation of those lands is made available].

4. All of the water proposed to be diverted from the watercourse will be used for irrigational and domestic purposes.

5. Trial of this action has been set for _____ [date]. The only damage that may result to plaintiff by dissolution of the preliminary injunction and defendant's diversion from the upstream location during the pendency of this action would be _____ [specify potential damage, e.g., the loss of the orange crop from plaintiff's west orchard, amounting to $_____], which can be fully compensated for in damages.

6. Defendant is willing and able to post with the court a bond as provided in Section 532 of the Code of Civil Procedure, in the amount the court may fix conditioned on defendant's paying all damages that plaintiff may suffer by defendant's diversion of water from the upstream location during the pendency of this action.

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of California that this is true and correct.

[2] Use of Form

This form of declaration is for use by a defendant seeking the dissolution of a preliminary injunction. In specified circumstances, the court may dissolve a preliminary injunction which enjoined water diversion [see Code Civ. Proc. § 532]. For a related form, see § 575.395.

Plaintiff alleges:

1. [Plaintiff's status as owner of land. See § 575.385, Paragraph 1.]

2. At all times herein mentioned, defendant was, and still is, the owner of real property adjoining plaintiff's above-described property on the _____ [specify direction, e.g., south] and located at _____ [address], _____ County, California, more particularly described as follows: _____ [set forth legal description].

5. Plaintiff had for many years [profitably] used the above-described land _____ [specify uses to which land was put, e.g., for ranching and grazing]. Prior to the drilling and operation of the wells on defendant's property as described below, there was abundant water on plaintiff's land _____ [specify indications of sufficient water for plaintiff's needs, e.g., as indicated by the lush grass and other foliage for use as pasturage].

6. Prior to the drilling and operation of the wells on defendant's property as described below, plaintiff's above-described land and soil were naturally well supplied with ground water, underground water, moisture, and percolating waters [and was particularly well adapted to the use plaintiff made of the land].

7. Between _____ [date], and _____ [date], defendant drilled wells on and into his/her/its property and maintained, and continues to maintain, pumping stations in close proximity to plaintiff's property. Defendant has used and operated and continues to use and operate those wells and pumping stations for the purpose of _____ [specify purpose which requires the pumping and exportation of large quantities of water, e.g., supplying water to the inhabitants of the city of _____, _____ County, California, for household, domestic, commercial, industrial, and other purposes for profit].

8. Defendant's wells and pumps are large and powerful and have been, and are now, pumping great and excessive quantities of water by a system of ditches and pipelines, and withdraw from beneath the surface of plaintiff's property the greater part of the natural underground and percolating waters, lowering and continuing to lower the normal water table. Plaintiff's land and soil have been rendered dry and unproductive resulting in _____ [specify injury, e.g., much lower profits than before the wells and pumps were drilled].

9. The water withdrawn, and now being withdrawn, by defendant's wells is from the underground waters common to the lands of plaintiff and defendant. Defendant is withdrawing a quantity of water greatly in excess of the amount to which he/she/it is entitled by law. The operation of those wells and pumps is unreasonable and has drained excessive quantities of water from beneath defendant's land and from part of the common water supply underlying plaintiff's land.

10. There are other and closer sources of water available to defendant to adequately _____ [specify purpose for which supply is used, e.g., supply water to the inhabitants of the city of _____], but there is no other source of water available to plaintiff.

[11. Prior to commencing this action, plaintiff had made repeated demands to defendant to cease the pumping, but defendant refused to comply. Defendant continues the wrongful and unlawful pumping over the protests of plaintiff and without his/her/its consent.]

12. As a proximate result of defendant's unlawful and wrongful pumping, plaintiff has sustained damages _____ [specify nature and extent of damages, e.g., in that the value of his/her/its land has decreased by $_____ and 200 head of cattle have died from lack of water], all to plaintiff's damage in the sum of $_____.

13. Defendant's pumping operations, unless and until enjoined and restrained by order of this court, will _____ (specify particular facts establishing grounds for preliminary injunctive relief, e.g., cause great and irreparable injury to plaintiff in that plaintiff's land and soil have been rendered dry and unproductive resulting in the death of foliage and an inadequate amount of water for watering purposes, resulting in the death of several head of cattle and the possible death of the entire herd if defendant's pumping continues until this action can be brought to trial).]

14. Plaintiff has no adequate remedy at law for the injuries currently being suffered in that _____ [specify any additional facts tending to show grounds for permanent injunctive relief, e.g., defendants will continue to pump and export the water, rendering plaintiff's land so dry as to be useless for ranching purposes, the only purpose for which it is suitable, and plaintiff would be required to maintain a multiplicity of judicial proceedings to protect his/her/its interests].

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment as follows:

1. For issuance of a preliminary injunction and a permanent injunction restraining and enjoining defendants from _____ [specify, e.g., withdrawing water from the common underground basin],

2. For damages in the sum of $_____,

3. For costs of suit herein incurred, and

4. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

[2] Use of Form

This form of complaint is for use by a plaintiff to bring an action for damages and injunctive relief for interference with plaintiff's underground and percolating water caused by the defendant's drilling, pumping, and exporting of water from a common underground basin. The rights of an overlying landowner to underground water beneath the land are correlative and analagous to the riparian right, and injunctive relief may be appropriate [see Tehachapi-Cummings County Water Dist. v. Armstrong (1975) 49 Cal. App. 3d 992, 999, 1001, 122 Cal. Rptr. 918 ; see also § 575.81]. Although in most instances the parties will be adjoining landowners, that relationship is not essential to the action.

[3] Allegations

This complaint alleges the following:

- That the plaintiff's use of his or her land required water, which was in ample supply before the defendant's pumping (Paragraphs 5 and 6);

- The defendant's wrongful drilling and pumping (Paragraphs 7 and 11);

- That the defendant's pumping of water from the common underground waters was in an amount greater than the defendant's share of those waters (Paragraphs 8 and 9) [see City of Pasadena v. City of Alhambra (1949) 33 Cal. 2d 908, 926, 207 P.2d 17 , cert. denied, 339 U.S. 937, 70 S. Ct. 671, 94 L. Ed. 1354] ;

- That the plaintiff had no other source of water, while the defendant did (Paragraph 10);

- The damages proximately caused by the defendant's pumping (Paragraph 12) [see Civ. Code § 3333];

- Facts to support preliminary injunctive relief (Paragraph 13) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 526; E.H. Renzel Co. v. Warehousemen's Union (1940) 16 Cal. 2d 369, 373, 7 L.R.R.M. (BNA) 686, 106 P.2d 1] ; and

- Any additional facts necessary to support permanent injunctive relief (Paragraph 14) [see Civ. Code § 3422; see also Ch. 303, Injunctions].

[4] Verification

A complaint seeking preliminary injunctive relief must be either verified or accompanied by affidavits (or declarations under Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5) in support of the allegations of the complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 527(a)]. If relying on a verified complaint instead of affidavits (or declarations), counsel must plead evidentiary facts that would entitle plaintiff to the relief sought [see E.H. Renzel Co. v. Warehousemen's Union (1940) 16 Cal. 2d 369, 373, 7 L.R.R.M. (BNA) 686, 106 P.2d 1 ; Finnie v. Town of Tiburon (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 1, 15, 244 Cal. Rptr. 581] . In a limited civil case, the court may issue temporary restraining orders and preliminary injunctions, but not permanent injunctive relief; thus, if permanent injunctive relief is sought, the action cannot be brought as a limited civil case [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85, 86(a)(8), 580(b)(1)]. For discussion, a procedural checklist, and additional forms necessary to obtain a temporary restraining order or preliminary injunction, see Ch. 303, Injunctions .

FIRST COUNT
(Quiet Title)

1. [Plaintiff's ownership of land. See § 575.385, Paragraph 1.]

2. [Defendant's ownership of adjoining land. See § 575.385, Paragraph 2.]

5. A natural spring is located on defendant's above-described property _____ [specify position, e.g., at a point approximately 60 feet southeast of its northwest corner].

6. Plaintiff is the owner of an easement _____ [describe easement, e.g., in the form of a pipeline running southeasterly from plaintiff's land across defendant's property to the base of the spring and including a catch basin at the base of that spring].

7. The basis of plaintiff's title is prescriptive, resulting from plaintiff's actual, open, exclusive, hostile, and adverse possession and use of the above-described easement for more than five years.

8. Plaintiff is seeking to quiet title against the claims of defendant(s) as follows: defendant(s) _____ [name(s) of the named defendant(s)], who _____ [describe claim of named defendant(s), e.g., denies that plaintiff's use of the easement has been hostile or continuous for the requisite period and claims to have permitted plaintiff's use of the easement] [continue with whichever are applicable:; the claims of the successor defendants described in Paragraph _____; the claims of all unknown defendants described in Paragraph 9, whether or not the claim or cloud is known to plaintiff; and the unknown, uncertain, or contingent claim, if any, of _____ (name) more fully described in Paragraph 10]. (If this person is subject to a legal disability, allege: This person is subject to _____ (specify legal disability).)]

11. Plaintiff seeks to quiet title as of _____ [date]. [If the date is a date other than the date the complaint is filed, allege why a determination as of that date is sought.]

12. For _____ [five or more] years plaintiff [and his/her/its predecessors in title] has/have openly, notoriously, continuously, and under a claim of right to do so, diverted waters from that spring and used them for _____ [specify beneficial purpose, e.g., irrigation of an orange grove and domestic use for plaintiff's household]. Through this diversion of water, plaintiff has acquired a prescriptive right to the waters of the spring.

SECOND COUNT

13. Plaintiff refers to and herein incorporates Paragraphs 1-6 of the First Count.

14. At all times herein mentioned, the water diverted from that spring by plaintiff [and his/her/its predecessors in title], amounting to a maximum of _____ [specify amount in gallons, acre-feet, or other measure] per year, has been, and now is, applied for the above-described beneficial purposes and no others.

15. On or about _____ [date], defendant, without plaintiff's knowledge or consent, and without any right do to so, _____ [describe interference with the flow of plaintiff's water, e.g., placed a cap on the two-inch water pipeline at the point where it protrudes into the catch basin, thereby preventing the flow of water from the spring to plaintiff's land].

16. Plaintiff has made demands on defendant that _____ [describe demand, e.g., the cap be removed and the water be permitted to flow as it previously did], but defendant has refused, and continues to refuse, to do so.

[17. Temporary restraining order allegation. See § 575.392, Paragraphs 6 and 7.]

18. [Proximate damage allegation. See § 575.392, Paragraph 8.]

19. [Preliminary injunctive relief allegation. See § 575.392, Paragraph 9.]

20. [Permanent injunctive relief allegation. See § 575.392, Paragraph 10.]

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment as follows:

On the FIRST COUNT:

1. For a judgment that plaintiff is the owner of the easement and that defendant[s, and each of them] has/have no interest in the easement adverse to plaintiff's interest;

On the SECOND COUNT:

2. For an order requiring defendant[s, and each of them] to show cause, if any, why he/she/it/they should not be enjoined as hereinafter set forth, during the pendency of this action;

3. For [a temporary restraining order,] a preliminary injunction, and a permanent injunction, all enjoining defendant[s, and each of them], and their agents, servants, and employees, all persons acting under, in concert with, or for them:

a. From _____ [specify each of the acts, courses of conduct, and conditions defendants are to be prohibited from doing, commencing, continuing, or maintaining, e.g., placing a cap on the pipeline and thus preventing the flow of water to plaintiff's property]; and

b. To _____ [specify each of the acts, courses of conduct, and conditions defendants are to be commanded to do or undertake, e.g., maintain the pipeline in its present condition and refrain from in any way interfering with the flow of water through the pipeline to plaintiff's property];

4. For damages [in the sum of $_____ or according to proof];

On all COUNTS:

5. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

6. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

_____ [signature]
Attorney for Plaintiff

[Verification. See § 575.385.]

CAUTION:
A complaint to quiet title must be verified [Code Civ. Proc. § 761.020]. The above form does not contain any allegations regarding defendants who are personal representatives [Code Civ. Proc. § 762.030(a)] or heirs and intestate or testate successors [Code Civ. Proc. § 762.030(b)] of persons known or believed by the plaintiff to be deceased. If those defendants are necessary in your particular situation, use the appropriate allegations from Ch. 482, Quieting Title.

[2] Use of Form

This form of complaint is for use by a plaintiff to quiet title to his or her interest in an easement and to seek damages for and injunctive relief against interference with a prescriptive water right. Although in most instances the parties will be adjoining landowners, that relationship is not essential to the action.

For discussions regarding who must be named as defendants in a quiet title action and the statutory designations for particular classes of defendants, see Ch. 482, Quieting Title . A plaintiff who intends to name unknown persons as defendants may wish to obtain a title report before commencing the action, because an examination of the record title and an inspection of the property will be necessary [see Code Civ. Proc. § 762.060(b)]. Also, the court may order plaintiff to obtain a title report and keep it available for inspection and copying by the parties [Code Civ. Proc. § 762.040(b)].

There is some question as to whether an attempt to base a right of prescription on a use that began after 1908 is valid, because since that time Water Code § 1225 has required a permit for the right to appropriate [see § 575.55[1]]. Counsel should also be aware of the existence of Water Code §§ 5100-5108, requiring a statement of water use and diversion from all but those specifically excepted. Claimants under a prescriptive right are not within any of the exceptions [Water Code § 5101].

The first cause of action of the above complaint alleges (1) the parties' ownership and a description of the land (Paragraphs 1 and 2) [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 392(a)(1), 761.020(a)], (2) location of a spring (Paragraph 5) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 761.020(a)], (3) plaintiff's ownership of an easement (Paragraph 6) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 761.020(b)], (4) the basis of plaintiff's title (Paragraph 7) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 761.020(b); see Ch. 13, Adverse Possession], (5) the adverse claim to plaintiff's title (Paragraph 8) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 761.020(c); Ch. 482, Quieting Title], (6) the date as of which a determination is sought (Paragraph 11) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 761.020(d)], and (7) plaintiff's prescriptive right to the spring water (Paragraph 12) [see Civ. Code § 1007; Code Civ. Proc. § 321]. It also alleges plaintiff's beneficial use of the water, which is necessary in an action to quiet title to a water right (Paragraph 13) [see Carlsbad Etc. Co. v. San Luis Rey Etc. Co. (1947) 78 Cal. App. 2d 900, 914, 178 P.2d 844] . The complaint also includes optional paragraphs for use when unknown defendants have been named (Paragraph 9) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 762.060(a)], and when the claim of a named defendant is unknown (Paragraph 10) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 762.020(b)].

This form also incorporates fictitious name allegations (Paragraph 3) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 474]. Rules governing civil actions generally apply in quiet title actions unless they are inconsistent with quiet title provisions [Code Civ. Proc. § 760.060]. Some people also additionally designate testate and intestate successors or "all persons unknown" as DOES. That is not recommended because it differs from the statutory language of Code Civ. Proc. §§ 762.030(b)(2), (3) and 762.060, by which those defendants are to be designated, and because it may limit the in rem effect of the judgment by limiting the number of adverse claimants in those classes [see Code Civ. Proc. § 763.030(b)].

The second cause of action of the complaint incorporates by reference the paragraphs setting forth plaintiff's ownership of the land, the location of the spring, and the nature of plaintiff's interest in the easement. The second cause of action alleges facts showing defendant's wrongful acts causing injury (Paragraphs 15 and 16).

[4] Lis Pendens

Immediately on filing the complaint in a quiet title action, the plaintiff must file a lis pendens in the office of the county recorder of each county in which any real property described in the complaint is located [Code Civ. Proc. § 761.010].

Before recording the notice, the plaintiff must mail a copy of the notice to be mailed, by registered or certified mail, return receipt requested, to all known addresses of the parties to whom the plaintiff's claim is adverse and to all owners of record of the real property affected by the plaintiff's claim as shown by the latest county assessment roll or more recent assessment information in the possession of the county. If there is no known address for service on an adverse party or owner, then as to that party or owner a declaration under penalty of perjury to that effect must be recorded in lieu of a filed proof of service, and service on that party is not required. Immediately after recording the notice, the plaintiff must file a copy of the notice in the court in which the action is pending. Upon an adverse party's being joined in the action, the notice must be served on that party [Code Civ. Proc. § 405.22].

Any notice of pendency of action is void and invalid as to any adverse party or owner of record unless mailing requirements have been met for that party or owner and a proof of service in the form and content specified in Code Civ. Proc. § 1013a has been recorded with the notice of pendency of action [Code Civ. Proc. § 405.23] (or an in lieu declaration has been recorded as described above).

From the time of recording of the notice of pendency of action, any purchaser, encumbrancer, or other transferee of the real property described in the notice is deemed to have notice of the pendency of the action as it relates to the real property, but only insofar as the action is pending against parties not fictitiously named. The plaintiff's rights and interest in the property, as ultimately determined in the pending noticed action, relate back to the date of recording of the notice [Code Civ. Proc. § 405.24].

§ 575.400 Allegation for Complaint or Affirmative Defense--Acquisition of Right to Water by Prescription [Civ. Code § 1007; Code Civ. Proc. § 321]

[1] FORM Allegation for Complaint or Affirmative Defense--Acquisition of Right to Water by Prescription [Civ. Code § 1007, Code Civ. Proc. § 321]

1. _____ [Name of party pleading the right] is, and at all times herein mentioned was, _____ [specify activity requiring beneficial use of water, e.g., engaged in the cultivation of flowers for commercial florists] on the premises described as follows: _____ [set forth legal description].

2. For _____ [number greater than five] years prior to the commencement of this action, _____ [plaintiff or defendant], [and his/her/its predecessors in title], has/have hostilely, openly, notoriously, continuously, and without interruption, under a claim of absolute right, diverted and used _____ [specify amount of water in gallons, acre-feet, or other measure] of the water of _____ [specify watercourse, e.g., the Muddy River], and _____ [plaintiff or defendant] is still beneficially using those waters for _____ [specify uses to which the waters were put, e.g., the watering of the flower fields] for which _____ [plaintiff or defendant] has acquired the right to divert, direct, and use that water.

This allegation is for use by a plaintiff in a complaint to enforce a water right based on prescription or by a defendant to assert such a right as an affirmative defense. Adverse use of water for a beneficial purpose for five years may confer a title by prescription [see Civ. Code § 1007; Code Civ. Proc. § 321; Cal. Const., Art. X, § 2].

There is some question as to whether an attempt to base a right of prescription on a use that began after 1908 is valid, because since that time Water Code § 1225 has required a permit for the right to appropriate [see § 575.55[1]]. Counsel should also be aware of the existence of Water Code §§ 5100-5108, requiring a statement of water use and diversion from all but those specifically excepted. Claimants under a prescriptive right are not within any of the exceptions [

Water Code § 5101].

When using these paragraphs as allegations, they should replace Paragraphs 6 through 10 in § 575.399.

[AS A (_____ [if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST]) SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE (if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE _____[specify, e.g., SECOND] CAUSE OF ACTION), DEFENDANT ALLEGES that:]

1. _____ [Name of opposing party] has lost his/her/its _____ [prescriptive or appropriative] right in _____ [describe water to which right had attached, e.g., Clear Stream] situated in _____ County, California. _____ [Name of opposing party] had the right to divert water therefrom _____ [describe former use to which lost water right was put, e.g., for domestic uses on his/her land], but has lost that right in that for more than _____ [number greater than five] years _____ [name of opposing party] has failed to make any beneficial use of that water under his/her/its right.

2. [That water was appropriated by _____ (name of opposing party) for _____ (describe use, e.g., domestic purposes for his/her garden and care of barnyard animals), and] since on or about _____ [date] _____ [name of opposing party] has failed to beneficially use that water [or to use that water for that purpose] and has thereby lost his/her/its right to that water.

3. On _____ [date], the State Water Resources Control Board made a [written] finding that _____ [name of opposing party] had failed to make beneficial use of the above-described water for _____ years and had thereby lost his/her/its rights to that water. [A copy of the finding is attached to this complaint as Exhibit A and made a part of this complaint.]

This form of allegation is for use by a plaintiff in a complaint to claim a water right based on nonuse by the previous owner or by a defendant to assert that plaintiff's water right has been lost through nonuse. It may be used when the former owner's right was either prescriptive or appropriative [see Water Code §§ 1240, 1241]. A riparian owner's right will not be lost through nonuse, although to the extent the right is not exercised, riparian water is subject to appropriation and beneficial use by others [Orange County Water District v. City of Riverside (1959) 173 Cal. App. 2d 137, 184, 343 P.2d 450] .

When using these paragraphs as allegations in a complaint, omit the optional introductory paragraph; the allegations should replace Paragraphs 6-10 in § 575.399. For discussion of affirmative defenses, see § 575.388.

Water that is unused may revert to the public and be available for appropriation by another. The reversion requires (1) a finding by the State Water Resources Control Board of nonuse for five years, (2) notice to the permittee, and (3) a public hearing if one is requested by the permittee [Water Code § 1241]. Before using the above allegation, it is advisable to have a finding of reversion by the State Board.

[AS A (_____ [if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST]) SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE (if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE _____ [specify, e.g., SECOND] CAUSE OF ACTION), DEFENDANT ALLEGES that:]

1. Since _____ [date], _____ [name of opposing party] has abandoned any right he/she/it may have had to _____ [describe water to which right had attached, e.g., Clear Stream] situated in _____ County, California, by relinquishing his/her/its possession and enjoyment tof this petition, in that he/she/it _____ [set forth acts showing relinquishment, e.g., moved away from her house on the land near the stream]. _____ [Name of opposing party] intended that relinquishment to be an abandonment in that _____ [set forth facts from which intention may be inferred, e.g., she sold her barnyard animals, failed to replant a garden, and no longer used the land or waters for any beneficial purpose].

2. On _____ [date], the State Water Resources Control Board made a [written] finding that _____ [name of opposing party] abandoned any right he/she/it may have had to that water on or about _____ [date], by relinquishing his/her/its possession and enjoyment tof this petition and that he/she/it thereby lost his/her/its rights to the water. [A copy of the finding is attached to this complaint/defense as Exhibit A and made a part of this complaint/defense.]

This allegation is for use by any party to an action who claims a right to water, alleging abandonment by the previous appropriative or prescriptive owner [see Water Code §§ 1240, 1241]. It may be used by a plaintiff in a complaint to enforce a water right based on abandonment by the previous owner or by a defendant to assert that plaintiff's water right has been lost through abandonment. Abandonment requires proof of an intent to permanently relinquish the possession and enjoyment of a property right. Nonuse affords evidence on which the intent to abandon may be inferred [Lindblom v. Round Valley Water Co. (1918) 178 Cal. 450, 455, 173 P. 994] . The previous owner's right ceases at the moment abandonment is complete [Smith v. Hawkins (1895) 110 Cal. 122, 126-128, 42 P. 453] .

When using these paragraphs as allegations, omit the optional introductory paragraph; the allegations should replace Paragraphs 6-10 in § 575.399. For discussion of affirmative defenses, see § 575.388.

Plaintiff alleges:

1. Plaintiff is, and at all times herein mentioned was, the owner of a parcel of land located at _____ [address], _____ County, California, more particularly described as follows: _____ [set forth legal description].

[4. On or about _____ [date], defendant sold and conveyed to plaintiff the above-described parcel of real property (and a residence thereon).]

5. Without a supply of water the above-described parcel was worthless and uninhabitable, as it had no water of its own. _____ [Describe defendant's knowledge of the land's condition and steps taken to make the land habitable, e.g., Defendant owned the parcels surrounding the parcel sold to plaintiff, planned to develop them for residential purposes, and toward that end, had developed a water system, consisting of a well, pump, and distribution lines for the purpose of supplying and distributing water to the entire tract, of which plaintiff's parcel was only a small portion].

6. [As part of the transaction conveying the above-described property to plaintiff, and for the same consideration,] [d]efendant and plaintiff executed a written water use agreement, _____ [a copy of which is attached to this complaint as Exhibit A and made a part of this complaint or set forth terms of water use agreement].

This form of complaint is for use by a plaintiff to bring an action for declaratory relief to determine his or her rights under a water service agreement, and to recover damages for breach of the agreement. The form suggests a well as the source of the water, but its use is not restricted to well water. Although the form seeks contract damages, denial of water service may support an action for mental suffering, for which tort damages, including exemplary damages, are available; both contract and tort damages will not be awarded [Acadia, California, Ltd. v. Herbert (1960) 54 Cal. 2d 328, 337, 5 Cal. Rptr. 686, 353 P.2d 294 ; for discussion and forms relating to mental suffering, see Ch. 362, Mental Suffering and Emotional Distress].

With appropriate modifications, the form can be adapted and expanded to seek injunctive relief as well. For a complaint seeking injunctive relief against interference with a water right, see § 575.399. The above form is adapted from the fact situation in Acadia, California, Ltd. v. Herbert (1960) 54 Cal. 2d 328, 5 Cal. Rptr. 686, 353 P.2d 294 .

[3] Allegations

This complaint alleges: (1) plaintiff's ownership of land for purposes of venue (Paragraph 1) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 392(a)(1)], (2) factual background for existence of water use agreement (Paragraphs 4-6) [see Ch. 140, Contracts], (3) defendant's breach (Paragraph 7), (4) plaintiff's performance (Paragraph 8), (5) existence of sufficient water supply for delivery (Paragraph 9), (6) the existence of an actual controversy and the necessity for a judicial determination (Paragraphs 10-12) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1060; see also Ch. 182, Declaratory Relief], and (7) damages (Paragraph 13) [see Civ. Code § 3300].

[4] Decisions

Declaratory judgment, injunctive relief, and damages are appropriate relief in action for breach of water delivery contract. Robinson v. Nevada Irrigation Dist. (1980) 101 Cal. App. 3d 760, 769, 161 Cal. Rptr. 863

[2] Use of Form

This complaint is for use by a subdivision developer to bring an action for declaratory relief to determine the rights and obligations of the parties to a contract for supplying water service to a subdivision. In the example used the dispute relates to the responsibility to perform particular obligations under the contract after the supplier has assigned the contract. A declaratory relief action is appropriate in ascertaining the duties of providing water when there is a controversy between the parties concerning contract responsibility [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1060; Bakersfield Country Club v. Pacific Water Co. (1961) 192 Cal. App. 2d 528, 531, 13 Cal. Rptr. 573] . The form is adapted from the fact situation in Bakersfield Country Club v. Pacific Water Co. (1961) 192 Cal. App. 2d 528, 13 Cal. Rptr. 573 .

[3] Allegations

The complaint alleges: (1) plaintiff's identity and capacity (Paragraph 1), (2) existence of a contract (Paragraph 4) [see Ch. 140, Contracts], (3) a breach resulting in no water service (Paragraphs 7 and 8), (4) plaintiff's performance (Paragraph 9), and (5) existence of an actual controversy (Paragraph 10) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1060; see also Ch. 182, Declaratory Relief].

Also included are optional paragraphs for use when defendant water company has been purchased or otherwise transferred (Paragraphs 5 and 6).

Respondent(s).	)

Plaintiff alleges:

1. Petitioner is, and at all times herein mentioned was, the owner of land located at _____ [address], _____ County, California, more particularly described as follows: _____ [set forth legal description]. This land is situated within the area serviced with water by respondent _____ [specify name of Water District], a public corporation.

2. The respondent Water District is a public utility and in exclusive control of the water supplied to the inhabitants of the area surrounding and including petitioner's lot. By law, respondent has the duty to supply all inhabitants of that area with water.

3. At all times herein mentioned respondent Water District has consistently refused, and still refuses, to supply water to petitioner's above-described land as well as to the land of others with an equal right, even though petitioner has complied with all the rules and regulations for obtaining service and has submitted a demand for water service as described below.

4. Petitioner's land is within the flow of the conduit of respondent Water District. Respondent has sufficient water available to it to supply petitioner's land, but refuses to extend its water mains or service to petitioner's parcel of land.

5. On or about _____ [date], [and on or about _____ (date),] a written and/or oral demand was made on respondent requesting that water be supplied to petitioner's land. _____ [Set forth details of demands including extension of water conduits, tender, if any, of legal water rates, etc.].

6. Respondent Water District has consistently refused, and still refuses, to serve water to petitioner's land through its existing facilities and has consistently refused, and still refuses, _____ [describe refusal to expand facilities to serve petitioner, e.g., to install or extend additional conduits or water mains to serve petitioner's parcel of land].

7. As a result of the refusal of the respondent to supply water to petitioner's above-described land, petitioner has suffered damages in that _____ [specify damages, e.g., petitioner has been required to transport his/her own water supply for his/her living and garden needs from a town 50 miles away, at a cost of $_____].

[8. Petitioner is informed and believes and thereon alleges that the aforementioned acts of the respondent were willful and _____ (oppressive or fraudulent or malicious or any combination tof this petition) in that _____ (allege facts indicating presence of oppression, fraud, malice, or any combination tof this petition). Petitioner is therefore entitled to exemplary damages.]

9. Petitioner is a person beneficially interested in the issuance of a writ by virtue of the fact that _____ [specify facts demonstrating that petitioner is beneficially interested in the issuance of a writ, e.g., the issuance of a writ ordering respondent to provide service will directly and immediately benefit petitioner who is still without water service].

10. Petitioner has no plain, speedy, and adequate remedy in the ordinary course of law, other than the relief sought herein, in that respondent, a public utility, has been granted the exclusive privilege from the State of California to supply water to the inhabitants of the area surrounding and including petitioner's land, and in that there is no other available water supply in that area.

WHEREFORE, petitioner prays:

1. That the court issue a peremptory writ of mandate ordering respondent Water District to supply petitioner with water;

2. For compensatory damages in the sum of $_____;

[3. For punitive damages;]

3. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

4. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

[2] Use of Form

This form is for use by a person residing within the boundaries of a water district to petition for a writ of mandate to compel the water district to extend its mains and provide water service to the petitioner's property [see Lukrawka v. Spring Valley Water Co. (1915) 169 Cal. 318, 320, 146 P. 640 ; Boies & Soule v. East Bay Mun. Util. Dist. (1960) 186 Cal. App. 2d 843, 844, 9 Cal. Rptr. 464] .

[3] Allegations

This petition alleges the following:

- The petitioner's capacity (Paragraph 1);
- The existence of the respondent's duty to provide water (Paragraph 2) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1085; Hildreth v. Montecito Creek W. Co. (1903) 139 Cal. 22, 25-26, 72 P. 395] ;
- The petitioner's right to receive water (Paragraph 3) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1085; Hartigan v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (1918) 38 Cal. App. 763, 764, 177 P. 484] ;
- The ability of the respondent to deliver water to all those entitled (Paragraph 4) [see Cozzens v. North Fork Ditch Co. (1905) 2 Cal. App. 404, 414, 84 P. 342] ;
- Demand made of respondent (Paragraph 5) [see Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition];
- Compensatory damages (Paragraph 7) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1095];
- Petitioner is a beneficially interested person (Paragraph 9) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1086]; and
- Lack of an adequate legal remedy (Paragraph 10) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1086].

The form also includes an optional paragraph for alleging exemplary damages (Paragraph 8) [see Civ. Code § 3294; Lowe v. Yolo County etc. Water Co. (1910) 157 Cal. 503, 510-512, 108 P. 297] .

[4] Verification

A petition for a writ of mandate must be verified [Code Civ. Proc. § 1086]. Proof of service on each respondent and real party in interest of a copy of a petition that seeks an alternative writ must accompany the petition when it is offered for filing except when, in its discretion and for good cause, the court has granted the application for the writ ex parte [Code Civ. Proc. § 1107; for a discussion of serving the petition, see Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition].

[5] Points and Authorities

Points and authorities also customarily accompany a petition filed in a superior court, although they do not appear to be expressly required by statute. When no alternative writ is sought, proof of service of a copy of the petition need not accompany the application, but proof of service of a copy of the filed petition must be lodged with the court before a hearing or any action by the court [Code Civ. Proc. § 1088.5].

[6] Decisions

When water company's obligation to connect water service was clear under its own rules, superior court has jurisdiction over action brought by prospective water user for mandatory injunction requiring provision of service and for compensatory and exemplary damages; existence and exercise of that jurisdiction is in aid and not in derogation of jurisdiction of Public Utilities Commission. Vila v. Tahoe Southside Water Utility (1965) 233 Cal. App. 2d 469, 479-480, 43 Cal. Rptr. 654

[1] FORM Proceedings Before Department of Water Resources--Petition for Formation of Water Storage District [Water Code §§ 39400, 39425]

BEFORE THE DEPARTMENT OF WATER RESOURCES OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA

Petition for Formation of Water Storage District

To the Department of Water Resources of the State of California:

Petitioners allege:

[EITHER]

1. Petitioners constitute a majority in number of the holders of title to land irrigated or susceptible of irrigation from a common source and by the same system of works and are also the holders of title to a majority in value of the land included within the proposed water storage district.

[OR]

1. Petitioners number not less than 500 persons, each of whom is the holder of title to land within the proposed water storage district, and include the holders of title to not less than 10 percent in value of the land included within the proposed water storage district.

[CONTINUE]

2. The boundaries of the proposed water storage district, which lies within the _____ [County or Counties] of _____, California, are as follows: _____ [set forth legal description].

3. The proposed source(s) of water supply is/are as follows: _____ [set forth general description, e.g., the Red River project for the importation of water into the proposed water district which may be used on lands within the district, as well as any project under Federal Reclamation Law, including any appropriate extensions or modifications].

[4. The location proposed for storage of water to be used for irrigation is as follows: _____ (set forth location).]

5. _____ [Drainage or Reclamation] connected with the project is as follows: _____ [describe, e.g., the district will install and operate those drainage canals and works as are necessary and practicable for the removal of waters containing excessive amounts of salt, and operate whatever wells, pumping plants, and other facilities as are necessary and practicable to control the level of ground waters within the district].

[EITHER]

6. It is not proposed that the water storage district develop any hydroelectrical energy.

[OR]

6. Incidental development of hydroelectrical energy is as follows: _____ [set forth description of any hydroelectrical energy resulting].

7. The nature of the proposed works to be developed is as follows: _____ [set forth general description, e.g., the works will consist of conduits and distribution facilities necessary to deliver water to lands within the district, together with (temporary) surface storage facilities as described above, (and) the _____ (drainage or reclamation) facilities as described above(, and the facilities for the development of hydroelectric energy)].

8. Submitted and filed with this petition is a list of the names and addresses of all persons holding title to land within the proposed district as shown by the last equalized assessment roll of [each of] the affected _____ [county or counties].

9. Submitted and filed with this petition is the undertaking in the amount and form required by Section 39428 of the Water Code.

WHEREFORE, petitioners pray that the territory included within the proposed district be formed into a water storage district in accordance with the provisions of Section 39000 et seq. of the Water Code, and that the district be known as _____ Water Storage District.

[COMPILE sufficient signatures to meet statutorily required number of holders of title]

This petition is for use by the holders of title to land susceptible of irrigation from a common source to petition for the formation of a water storage district. Water Code § 39400 sets forth the qualifications and number of petitioners required. A water storage district need not consist of contiguous parcels of land and may include land situated within other water storage districts having different plans and purposes [Water Code §§ 39401, 39402].

The petition is submitted to the Department of Water Resources and must be accompanied (1) by an undertaking in an amount double to the formation cost and (2) by a list of the names and addresses of all persons holding title to land within the proposed district [Water Code §§ 39427-39430].

[3] Procedure After Filing of Petition

After the formation petition is filed, the department will determine the practicability, feasibility, and utility of the proposed project, and may make all necessary studies, examinations, surveys, plans, and estimates of cost [Water Code § 39600]. There will be a hearing on the petition at which its sufficiency and the notice compliance will be considered [Water Code §§ 39750-39752]. If the department finds compliance with the statutory requirements, a hearing on the petition is held, after which the department makes an order as specified by statute [Water Code §§ 39755-39800].

Within 60 days after filing its order, the department will give notice of an election to be held to determine whether the district should be formed [Water Code § 39900]. If a majority votes for formation, the department will declare the territory formed as a district under the name designated, and will file for record in the office of the county recorder of each affected county a certified copy of the order declaring the district formed [Water Code §§ 40100-40101]. Formation of the district is complete with the filing for record of the order [Water Code § 40102].

BEFORE THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS OF THE _____ WATER STORAGE DISTRICT

Petition for Exclusion of Land From _____ Water Storage District

To the Board of Directors of the _____ Water Storage District:

Petitioner alleges:

1. Petitioner is the holder of title to a tract of land located in _____, County, California, more particularly described as follows: _____ [set forth description, which need not be more particular or certain than is required when the land is entered in the assessment book by the county assessor, as provided in Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 321-328].

2. The boundaries of the _____ [name] Water Storage District are as follows: _____ [describe].

3. _____ [All or The following described portion] of petitioner's land is presently included within the boundaries of _____ [name] Water Storage District: _____ [set forth description].

[4. The following described tract(s) is/are contiguous to the tract(s) described in Paragraph 3 of this petition:

_____ (set forth description).]

5. The land described above in Paragraph 3 [and the contiguous tract(s) described above in Paragraph 4] should be excluded from the _____ [name] Water Storage District for the following reason: _____ [set forth specific reason for exclusion, e.g., petitioner was not advised by registered mail or otherwise informed of the proposed formation of the _____ [name] Water Storage District and the inclusion of his/her land within it as required by Section 39465 of the Water Code].

[6. The _____ [name] Water Storage District, at the time of the filing of this petition, has no bonded indebtedness. Therefore, petitioner's exclusion from the district does not require the approval of any bondholders].

WHEREFORE, petitioner prays that the boundary of the _____ [name] Water Storage District be changed to exclude petitioner's land, and that the board hold hearings, duly noticed, and conduct other proceedings as are necessary and proper in accordance with the provisions of Sections 48000 et seq. of the Water Code to exclude petitioner's land from the boundaries of the _____ [name] Water Storage District.

Petition for Formation of County Water District

To the Board of Supervisors of _____ County, California:

1. Petitioners are voters residing within the boundaries of the proposed district hereinafter described. Petitioners hereby petition the Board of Supervisors of _____ County to initiate the procedures as may be required by law to organize and incorporate a county water district and request that territory lying within the proposed boundaries of the proposed district be incorporated into a county water district in accordance with the provisions of Section 30000 et seq. of the Water Code.

2. The boundaries for the proposed county water district are as follows: _____ [describe].

3. The territory within the proposed boundaries is situated _____ [entirely within the County of _____ or within the contiguous Counties of _____ and _____], California.

4. When organized, the proposed district shall be known as the _____ County Water District.

5. Petitioners constitute voters equal in number to at least 10 percent of the voters registered within the boundaries of the proposed district 30 days prior to the filing of this petition.

[6. The boundaries of the proposed county water district include (part of) the _____ (City or Cities) of

_____ (and _____).]

[7. This petition is signed by at least 10 percent of the voters of _____ (that or that part of the or each) municipal corporation and of the unincorporated territory included in the proposed district voting at the election.]

WHEREFORE, petitioners pray that the above-described territory be incorporated into a county water district to be known as the _____ County Water District, as prescribed by law.

[2] Use of Form

This form is for use by residents of one or two or more contiguous counties to petition for the formation of a county water district [Water Code § 30200]. The petition must be signed by 10 percent of the registered voters within the proposed boundaries [Water Code § 30202]. If at least part of one or more municipal corporations is included within the proposed district, the petition must be signed by at least 10 percent of those voters as well [Water Code § 30203]. Optional Paragraphs 6 and 7 may be used in that situation.

The petition is presented to the board of supervisors of the county in which the greater portion of the district is located [Water Code §§ 30064, 30260]. The county elections official will publish notice of the petition and the time of hearing [Water Code § 30230]. The board of supervisors will hold a hearing on the petition and consider all relevant evidence [Water Code §§ 30260-30263]. The board of supervisors will make changes in the proposed boundaries as deemed advisable, and will either dismiss the petition and terminate the proceedings or call an election to determine whether the district should be organized, depending on which alternative it determines is in the public interest [Water Code §§ 30264, 30264.1]. The election will be held on the next established election date not less than 74 days after the final hearing on the formation petition [Water Code § 30291]. If there is a majority vote in favor of formation, the board of supervisors will declare the district formed [Water Code § 30320].

Application for Inclusion of Land Within Proposed _____ County Water District

To the Board of Supervisors of _____ County, California:

The application of _____ [name] respectfully shows:

1. Applicant is the owner of the following described real property located in _____ County, more particularly described as follows: _____ [set forth legal description of real property].

2. That property has not been included within the boundaries of the proposed _____ County Water District, more particularly set forth in the petition for the formation of that county water district and in the notice of hearing thereon [published in _____ (name of newspaper) on _____ (date)].

3. Applicant's property will be benefited by the proposed county water district in that _____ [specify benefit of inclusion within the proposed district, e.g., applicant's land is not included within any existing water district and applicant presently has no consistent and reliable access to water].

WHEREFORE, applicant prays that the real property above described be included within the proposed county water district.

[2] Use of Form

This form is for use to petition a local agency formation commission to detach territory from a county water district [see Gov. Code § 56650; Water Code § 32200]. With appropriate modification, it may be used to have land annexed, rather than detached, from a county water district [see Water Code § 32400]. Land consisting of any portion of the county wherein the district was formed or of any municipality therein, or land in a county contiguous to the county wherein the district was formed or of any municipality therein, may be included within the district. It is not necessary that the land to be annexed be contiguous to any portion of the district [Water Code § 32400]. Commission proceedings for annexation of land to, or detachment of land from, a district after its formation may be initiated by petition or by resolution of an application [see Gov. Code § 56650].

[3] Petition Signature Requirements

A resident-voter petitioner is required to add to his or her signature his or her place of residence, giving street and number or a designation sufficient to enable the place of residency to be readily ascertained [Gov. Code § 56704(b)]. A landowner petitioner must affix the date on which he or she signs the petition, and include a written description sufficient to identify the location of the land owned [Gov. Code § 56704(c)]. The number of signatures required on petitions for district annexation or detachment is set forth in Gov. Code §§ 56767 and 56768.

[4] Commission Proceedings

The petition is filed with the executive officer who must determine within 30 days whether or not it is complete and acceptable for filing. Immediately after receiving an application, and before issuing a certificate of filing, the executive officer will give mailed notice of the application to each interested agency, each subject agency, and other affected county. If it is acceptable, the executive officer will issue a certificate of filing and set the proposal for hearing and give published notice. The hearing date must not be more than 90 days after issuance of the certificate of filing or after the application is deemed accepted, whichever is earlier [Gov. Code § 56658]. The executive officer must review each application and prepare a report, including his or her recommendations, on the application. The report must be completed at least five days before the hearing [Gov. Code § 56665].

At the hearing the commission must hear and receive any oral or written protests, objections or evidence made, presented, or filed and consider the report of the executive officer [Gov. Code § 56666]. In any order approving a proposal for an annexation to, or detachment from, a district, the commission may determine that any election called may be held within a specified territory [Gov. Code § 56876]. Not later than 35 days after the conclusion of the hearing, the commission must adopt a resolution making determinations approving or disapproving the plan. If it disapproves the proposed plan, no further proceedings will be taken [Gov. Code § 56880]. The resolution of the commission is to initiate protest proceedings [see Gov. Code § 57000 et seq.] in compliance with the resolution [Gov. Code § 56881(d)].

[5] Conducting Authority

Within 35 days following the adoption of the commission's resolution making determinations, and following the reconsideration period [see Gov. Code § 56895 (person or agency seeking reconsideration must file written request within 30 days of adoption of initial or superseding resolution by commission making determinations)], the executive officer of the commission must set the proposal for hearing and give notice of that hearing by mailing, publication, and posting [Gov. Code § 57002(a)]. The date of the hearing must not be less than 21 days or more than 60 days after the date the notice is given [Gov. Code § 57002(a)]. The hearing may not be held before expiration of the reconsideration period [Gov. Code § 57002(a); see Gov. Code § 56895(b) (reconsideration period)]. If authorized by the commission [ see Gov. Code § 56663] a change of organization or reorganization may be approved by resolution of the conducting authority without notice, hearing, and election [Gov. Code § 57002(c)]. The protest hearing must be held by the commission on the date and at the time specified in the notice given by the executive officer. It may be continued on a later date, not to exceed 60 days from the date specified [Gov. Code § 57050(a)].

In the case of annexations or detachments in registered voter districts, the commission, not more than 30 days after the hearing's conclusion, must make a finding regarding the value of extant written protests, and, in the case of inhabited territory, either terminate the proceedings or order an election by the registered voters residing within the affected territory, if extant protests have been filed by either of the following: (1) at least 25 percent, but less than 50 percent, of the registered voters residing in the affected territory, or (2) at least 25 percent of owners of land who also own at least 25 percent of the assessed value of land within the affected territory [Gov. Code § 57075(a)].

In the case of annexations or detachments in landowner-voter districts, the commission must either terminate the proceedings or make a finding regarding the value of extant written protests, and must order an election within the affected territory if extant protests have been filed representing either of the following: (1) 25 percent or more of the owners of land who also own 25 percent or more of the assessed value of land within the territory, or (2) 25 percent or more of the voting power of landowner voters entitled to vote as a result of owning property within the territory [Gov. Code § 57076(b)].

[6] Petition Signed by All Landowners

If a petition for an annexation or a detachment, or for a reorganization consisting solely of annexations or detachments, is signed by all the owners of land within the affected territory of the proposed change, the commission may approve or disapprove the change without notice and hearing [Gov. Code § 56663(a)]. The commission might also approve and authorize the conducting authority to conduct proceedings without notice, hearing, and an election [Gov. Code § 56663(a)].

§ 575.448 Petition to County Board of Supervisors for Formation of Municipal Water District [Water Code §§ 71120-71124]

[1] FORM Petition to County Board of Supervisors for Formation of Municipal Water District [Water Code §§ 71120-71124]

Petition for Formation of Municipal Water District

To the Board of Supervisors of _____ County, California:

The undersigned hereby petition for the formation of a municipal water district in accordance with the provisions of Section 71000 et seq. of the Water Code, and their petition respectfully shows:

1. The boundaries for the proposed municipal water district are: _____ [set forth legal description].

[EITHER]

2. Those boundaries include _____ [the entire or a portion of the] corporate area of the _____ [City or Cities] of _____ [and _____].

[OR]

2. Those boundaries do not include the entire or any portion of the corporate area of any city.

[CONTINUE]

3. Petitioners constitute qualified voters equal in number to at least 10 percent of the voters registered within the boundaries of the proposed district as of _____ [specify date 30 days prior to the date petition is filed].

[EITHER, if one or more city is included]

4. Petitioners constitute at least 10 percent of the voters in the _____ [City or Cities] of _____ [and _____, respectively], registered to vote therein as of _____ [specify date 30 days prior to the date petition is filed].

[OR, if only portion of city; 12 or more resident voters]

4. There are _____ [specify number of 12 or more] registered voters residing within that portion of the City of _____ that is included within the boundaries of the proposed municipal water district. Petitioners are voters residing within that portion equal in number to at least 10 percent of _____ [specify the lesser of either the total number of registered voters in that portion or the number of voters of that portion voting for all candidates for the office of Governor at the last general election prior to the filing of this petition].

[OR, if only portion of city; less than 12 resident voters]

4. There are _____ [specify number less than 12] registered voters residing within that portion of the City of _____ which is included within the boundaries of the proposed municipal water district. Petitioners are at least 50 percent of the voters residing in that portion.

[CONTINUE]

5. The proposed name for the district is the _____ Municipal Water District.

WHEREFORE, petitioners pray that the above-described territory be incorporated into a municipal water district to be known as the _____ Municipal Water District, as prescribed by law.

Name	Residence	Date

_____ [signature]	_____	_____
_____ [signature]	_____	_____

This form is for use to petition for formation of a municipal water district. The petition is filed with the elections official of the principal county, which is the county in which the greater portion of the land of a proposed district is situated [Water Code §§ 71015, 71050, 71120]. The formation petition may consist of separate documents [Water Code § 71120]. It must be signed by 10 percent of the registered voters within the boundaries of the proposed district. If a city is included within the boundaries, the petition must also be signed by 10 percent of its voters [Water Code § 71121]. If only a portion of a city is included, the petition must also include a specified percentage of its voters [Water Code § 71122]. The alternative Paragraphs 4 are for use to state that these requirements have been met, and one or more of them may be appropriate. If the second alternative Paragraph 2 is used, indicating that no portion of any city is within the proposed district boundaries, Paragraph 4 is not necessary.

After an examination and certification of the signatures of voters reveal that the petition is sufficient, the elections official presents the petition to the board of supervisors [Water Code §§ 71126, 71133]. The board of supervisors will make an order dividing the proposed district into five divisions based on population and will provide for an election to determine formation and election of the first board of directors [Water Code §§ 71160, 71161]. On a majority vote, the board of supervisors will declare the territory included within the proposed boundaries to be formed as a municipal water district under the designated name [Water Code § 71190].

[3] Supplemental Petition

If the petition is insufficient it may be amended by filing a supplemental petition to include the requisite number of signatures within 10 days [Water Code § 71129].

Chapter 577 WORKERS' COMPENSATION
PART I. SCOPE

§ 577.01 Scope of Chapter

IMPORTANT NOTE: Comprehensive workers' compensation reform was recently enacted into law. Stats. 2004 Ch. 34 (SB 899) applies prospectively from the date of enactment (April 19, 2004), regardless of the date of injury, unless specified otherwise in the chaptered bill. Selected highlights of the reform legislation are set forth below. Detailed discussion of SB 899 is set forth throughout this chapter.

Medical Provider Networks. In enacting Labor Code §§ 4616-4616.7, the legislature has authorized insurers and employers beginning January 1, 2005, to create or modify medical provider networks within which their employees' industrial injuries must be treated. The Administrative Director has adopted regulations implementing the medical provider networks statutes, including regulations that establish procedures for making medical provider network modifications. The medical provider network statutes speak in terms of "economic profiling," which is defined as any evaluation of a particular physician, provider, medical group, or individual practice association based in whole or in part on the economic costs or utilization of services associated with medical care provided or authorized by that person or entity. The medical provider network statutes also set forth provisions for initial medical evaluation and independent medical review. [Note: For a summary of a worker's right to control medical treatment when there is no medical provider network in place, see summary highlight of amended Labor Code § 4600, below.]

Two-Year Temporary Disability Cap. In amending Labor Code § 4656, the legislature has provided that, for injuries occurring on or after April 19, 2004, temporary disability payments are limited to 104 compensable weeks within a period of two years from the date of the first payment, with exceptions specified for certain injuries and conditions to allow payment of temporary disability to be extended to 240 compensable weeks within five years from the date of injury.

Return-to-Work Program. In amending Labor Code § 139.48, effective July 1, 2004, the legislature has eliminated the payment of wage reimbursement and premium reimbursement from the program, made reimbursements under the program available for an eligible employer only, as defined, and provided that the Return-to-Work Fund will consist of certain penalties and transfers made by the Administrative Director from the Workers' Compensation Administration Revolving Fund.

Permanent Disability. In amending Labor Code § 4650, the legislature has provided that, for injuries occurring on or after April 19, 2004, timely payment of permanent disability indemnity, based on a reasonable estimate of the amount due, is to be commenced, regardless of whether the extent of permanent disability can be determined at the date on which the first payment is due. In amending Labor Code §§ 4658 and 4660, and in enacting Labor Code § 4658.1, the legislature has added a schedule for converting permanent disability ratings for injuries occurring on or after the effective date of the revised permanent disability schedule to be adopted by the Administrative Director, no later than January 1, 2005, pursuant to amended Labor Code § 4660. For compensable claims arising before April 30, 2004, the schedule set out in Labor Code § 4658 does not apply to the determination of permanent disabilities when there has been either a comprehensive medical-legal report or a report by a treating physician, indicating the existence of permanent disability, or when the employer is required to provide the notice required by Labor Code § 4061 to the injured worker. Newly enacted Labor Code § 4658.1 contains provisions regarding the offer of regular, modified, or alternative work and its effect on permanent disability payments. In amending Labor Code § 4660, the legislature has placed various requirements on the Administrative Director regarding periodic revisions of the schedule for the determination of the percentage of permanent disability. In determining the percentages of permanent disability, account must be taken of the nature of the physical injury or disfigurement, the occupation of the injured employee, and his or her age at the time of the injury, with consideration being given to an employee's diminished future earning capacity. For purposes of this statute, the "nature of the physical injury or disfigurement" must incorporate the descriptions and measurements of physical impairments and the corresponding percentages of impairments published in the American Medical Association (AMA) Guides to the Evaluation of Permanent Impairment (5th Edition). For compensable claims arising before January 1, 2005, the schedule as revised by legislation during the 2003-2004 Regular and Extraordinary Sessions will apply to the determination of permanent disabilities when there has been either no comprehensive medical-legal report or no report by a treating physician indicating the existence of permanent disability, or when the employer is not required to provide the notice required by Labor Code § 4061 to the injured worker [see State Compensation Ins. Fund v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2007) 146 Cal. App. 4th 1311, 1314-1316, 53 Cal. Rptr. 3d 568 (court of appeal, annulling WCAB decision that applied 1997 permanent disability rating schedule, held that WCAB's decision was not supported by substantial evidence, since 12/15/2004 single-sentence report by treating physician stating physician's belief that permanent disability was within reasonable medical probability as result of employee's 7/21/2004 industrial injury was not followed by any other treating physician's report that provided reasoning to support physician's 12/15/2004 conclusion, and medical opinion is not substantial evidence if it does not indicate reasoning behind physician's opinion)].

The Appeals Board in an en banc opinion held that an employee did not carry his burden of demonstrating that adoption of the 2005 Permanent Disability Rating Schedule by the Administrative Director was arbitrary and capricious or inconsistent with Lab. Code § 4660(b)(2). Thus, the employee failed to rebut the presumptive validity of the 2005 Schedule. The Board pointed out that an administrative regulation is presumptively valid and that, if there is a reasonable basis for it, a reviewing court will not substitute its judgment for that of the administrative body. The role of the reviewing court is limited to inquiring into the legality, rather than the wisdom, of the challenged regulation. The evidentiary record in the reviewing court, when it evaluates the validity of a regulation, is limited to the rulemaking record. Extra-record evidence should not be admitted, the only exception being evidence that existed before the agency made its decision but that could not, in the exercise of reasonable diligence, be presented to the agency before its decision was made so that it could be considered and included in the administrative record. In the present case, the Board found that, although some evidence admitted at the trial existed before the Administrative Director made her decision to adopt the 2005 Schedule, no showing was made that, even with the exercise of reasonable diligence, this evidence could not have been submitted to the Administrative Director before her decision was made. Thus, no basis was established to consider this extra-record evidence. Moreover, said the Board, even on the assumption that such evidence was properly in the record, the Board en banc had already held in Costa v. Hardy Diagnostic [Costa v. Hardy Diagnostic (2006) 71 Cal. Comp. Cases 1797 (Appeals Board en banc opinion)] that Senate hearing testimony of both the Administrative Director and an expert witness indicated that empirical data from the 2003 RAND Interim Report were, as mandated by Lab. Code § 4660(b)(2), used in formulating the 2005 Schedule, that the employee in that case had failed to meet his burden of proving the invalidity of 2005 Schedule because he had failed to demonstrate that the actions of the Administrative Director in adopting the 2005 Schedule were arbitrary, capricious, or not reasonably necessary to effectuate the purpose of, or were inconsistent with, Lab. Code § 4660, and that the Administrative Director's reasons for not pursuing a "crosswalk" study, which would correlate the disability ratings assigned under the 1997 Schedule to those assigned under the new 2005 Schedule, were neither arbitrary nor capricious [Boughner v. Comp USA (2008) 73 Cal. Comp. Cases 854, 859-869 (Appeals Board en banc opinion)] .

The Appeals Board has issued four en banc opinions interpreting the third sentence of Lab. Code § 4660(d), the latter two of which rescinded the preceding two.

In April 2007, the Appeals Board en banc, with three Commissioners dissenting, rescinded its prior en banc decision [see Baglione v. Hertz Car Sales (2007) 72 Cal. Comp. Cases 86 (Appeals Board en banc opinion) (majority held that existence of pre-2005 comprehensive medical report, regardless of whether report indicated existence of permanent disability, required use of 1997 schedule)], from which three Commissioners had also dissented, and held that, for compensable claims arising before January 1, 2005, in order for the 1997 schedule for rating permanent disabilities to apply, pursuant to Lab. Code § 4660(d), the existence of permanent disability must be indicated in either a pre-2005 comprehensive medical-legal report or a pre-2005 report from a treating physician, and that, otherwise, the 2005 permanent disability rating schedule applied. The Board's en banc majority found that the legislature's denomination of SB 899, which amended Lab. Code § 4660(d), as an "urgency statute" that sought to provide relief from the state's workers' compensation crisis "at the earliest possible time" supported the majority's view that the 1997 schedule applied in the presence of a pre-2005 comprehensive medical-legal report only when that report indicated the existence of permanent disability. Also, in the majority's view, in light of Lab. Code § 4660(d)'s declaration that the schedule "shall promote consistency, uniformity and objectivity," no rationale existed for delaying the use of the 2005 schedule merely because a comprehensive medical-legal report had issued. The majority added that, although the reference to a "comprehensive medical-legal report" was not directly antecedent to the phrase "indicating the existence of permanent disability" in Lab. Code § 4660(d), the language and the need to consider the obvious purpose of that statute required the Board to look beyond the mere order of words to the underlying intent of the statute. Finally, said the Board majority, the fact that Lab. Code § 4658(d)(4), in addressing the same topic as the relevant clause in Lab. Code § 4660(d), had virtually identical language, except that it contained a comma and Lab. Code § 4660(d) did not, did not indicate a different legislative intent and, thus, did not defeat implementation of the 2005 schedule [Baglione v. Hertz Car Sales (2007) 72 Cal. Comp. Cases 444, 448-452 (Appeals Board en banc opinion) , writ den. sub nom. Baglione v. W.C.A.B. (2008) 73 Cal. Comp. Cases 250, 254].

Also in April 2007, the Board en banc, with three Commissioners dissenting, rescinded its prior en banc decision [see Pendergrass v. Duggan Plumbing (2007) 72 Cal. Comp. Cases 95 (Appeals Board en banc opinion) (majority held that employer's duty to provide notice required by Lab. Code § 4061 arose with first payment of temporary disability indemnity, so that, if first date of compensable temporary disability occurred prior to 1/1/2005, 1997 schedule applied)], from which three Commissioners had also dissented, and held that, for compensable claims arising before January 1, 2005, only if the last payment of temporary disability indemnity was made for any period of temporary disability ending before that date would the 1997 schedule for rating permanent disabilities apply to determine the extent of permanent disability, pursuant to Lab. Code § 4660(d), because Lab. Code § 4061 required the employer to provide an injured employee with notice regarding permanent disability "[t]ogether with the last payment of temporary disability indemnity," and that, otherwise, the 2005 permanent disability rating schedule applied. The Board's en banc majority found that the "plain language" of Lab. Code §§ 4660(d) and 4061 stated that the employer's obligation to provide notice did not arise until the actual last payment of temporary disability indemnity, which in the present case had been made in July 2005. Finally, said the Board majority, the legislature's denomination of SB 899, which amended Lab. Code § 4660(d), as an "urgency statute" that sought to provide relief from the state's workers' compensation crisis "at the earliest possible time" supported the majority's view [Pendergrass v. Duggan Plumbing (2007) 72 Cal. Comp. Cases 456, 460-463 (Appeals Board en banc opinion) , writ den. sub nom. Pendergrass v. W.C.A.B. (2008) 73 Cal. Comp. Cases 304, 309] .

Subsequently, the court of appeal followed these en banc decisions of the Board [Costco Wholesale Corp. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2007) 151 Cal. App. 4th 148, 153-157, 59 Cal. Rptr. 3d 611 ; Zenith Insurance Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2007) 153 Cal. App. 4th 461, 465-466, 62 Cal. Rptr. 3d 683 ; Energetic Painting and Drywall, Inc. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2007) 153 Cal. App. 4th 633, 636-639, 63 Cal. Rptr. 3d 210 ; Vera v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 996, 1003-1008, 65 Cal. Rptr. 3d 151 ; Tanimura & Antle v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 1489, 1494-1496, 69 Cal. Rptr. 3d 127] .

The court of appeal, relying on Costco Wholesale Corp. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2007) 151 Cal. App. 4th 148, 59 Cal. Rptr. 3d 611 , held that a pre-2005 comprehensive medical-legal report must indicate the existence of permanent disability to satisfy the Lab. Code § 4660(d) exception to application of the 2005 Permanent Disability Rating Schedule and, rejecting another court of appeal's decision in Vera v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 996, 65 Cal. Rptr. 3d 151 , held that the employee's condition need not be permanent and stationary for a treating physician's report or a comprehensive medical-legal report to indicate the existence of permanent disability. The court of appeal remanded the case for the Appeals Board to determine whether a qualified medical evaluator's April 2004 report or the treating physician's 2004 reports constituted substantial evidence indicating the existence of permanent disability, as required by State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2007) 146 Cal. App. 4th 1311, 53 Cal. Rptr. 3d 568 [Genlyte Group, LLC v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2008) 158 Cal. App. 4th 705, 716-724, 69 Cal. Rptr. 3d 903 ; see Zenith Insurance Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2008) 159 Cal. App. 4th 483, 494-499, 71 Cal. Rptr. 3d 724 (following Genlyte to hold that employee's condition need not be permanent and stationary for treating physician's report or comprehensive medical-legal report to indicate existence of permanent disability); Lewis v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 696, 700, 85 Cal. Rptr. 3d 661 (following Genlyte and Zenith to hold that comprehensive medical-legal report or treating physician's report need not state that injured worker's condition has reached permanent and stationary status to indicate existence of permanent disability within meaning of Lab. Code § 4660(d), when treating physician's 12/17/2004 report stated that employee could not "return to his usual and customary job duties" and that "[v]ocational rehabilitation efforts are indicated," and court of appeal remanded matter to WCAB to determine whether treating physician's report was substantial evidence "indicating the existence of permanent disability")].

The Appeals Board en banc has held that the AMA Guides portion of the 2005 Permanent Disability Rating Schedule is rebuttable, that it is rebutted by showing that an impairment rating based on the Guides would result in a permanent disability award that would be inequitable, disproportionate, and not a fair and accurate measure of the employee's permanent disability, and that, when an impairment rating based on the Guides has been rebutted, the Appeals Board may make an impairment determination that considers medical opinions that are not based or are only partially based on the Guides. The Board en banc found that the Guides itself recognizes its limitations, indicates that it should not necessarily be the sole determinant of work impairment, and allows other factors to be considered. Moreover, said the Board, the Guides does not measure work impairment and recognizes that it is merely a first step for measuring work impairment. Therefore, the Board concluded, factors outside the Guides may be considered, including the impact of the injury on the employee's ability to perform work activities, and the Guides allows the evaluating physician, through exercise of his or her judgment, to modify the impairment rating [Almaraz v. Environmental Recovery Services; Guzman v. Milpitas Unified School District (2009) 74 Cal. Comp. Cases 201, 211-217, 233, 239-245 (Appeals Board en banc opinion)] . Subsequently, the Appeals Board en banc held that its above-discussed en banc decision on the issue of rebutting the AMA Guides portion of the 2005 Permanent Disability Rating Schedule constituted a "final" order, granted the defendant's petition for reconsideration in Almaraz, granted reconsideration on its on motion in Guzman, allowed the parties in Guzman a specified time to file briefs on the merits, allowed any interested persons or entities a specified time to file amicus curiae briefs on the issues addressed by its en banc opinion, and allowed each counsel a specified time to file a reply brief that responds to all of the amicus briefs [Almaraz v. Environmental Recovery Services; Guzman v. Milpitas Unified School District (2009) 74 Cal. Comp. Cases 470, 471-475 (Appeals Board en banc opinion)] .

Finally, in September 2009, the Appeals Board en banc, reconsidering its decision in Almaraz/Guzman, discussed above, and stating that "we clarify and modify our en banc decision of February 3, 2009," held, in a 4-3 decision, that (1) the language of Lab. Code § 4660(c), which provides that "the schedule ... shall be prima facie evidence of the percentage of permanent disability to be attributed to each injury covered by the schedule," unambiguously means that a permanent disability rating established by the 2005 Schedule is rebuttable, (2) the burden of rebutting a scheduled permanent disability rating rests with the party disputing that rating, (3) one method of rebutting a scheduled permanent disability rating is to successfully challenge one of the component elements of that rating, such as the injured employee's whole person impairment under the AMA Guides, and (4) when determining the injured employee's whole person impairment, it is not permissible to go outside the four corners of the AMA Guides, but a physician may utilize any chapter, table, or method in the AMA Guides that most accurately reflects the injured employee's impairment. Moreover, the Board now specifically rejected the "inequitable, disproportionate, and not a fair and accurate measure of the employee's permanent disability" standard set forth in its February 2009 opinion. It added that its present decision does not permit a physician to utilize any chapter, table, or method in the AMA Guides simply to achieve a desired result, e.g., a whole person impairment that would result in a permanent disability rating based directly or indirectly on any schedule in effect prior to 2005, that a physician's opinion regarding an injured employee's whole person impairment under the Guides must constitute substantial evidence, that the opinion must set forth facts and reasoning that justify it, and that a physician's whole person impairment opinion that is not based on the AMA Guides does not constitute substantial evidence [Almaraz v. Environmental Recovery Services; Guzman v. Milpitas Unified School District (2009) 74 Cal. Comp. Cases 1084, 1085-1087, 1114 (Appeals Board en banc opinion) , pet. for writ of rev. filed sub nom. Milpitas Unified School District v. W.C.A.B. (Guzman) 10/16/2009]. The three dissenting commissioners would have affirmed the February en banc decision. They disagreed with the majority's view that a party may never go outside the AMA Guides to rebut a scheduled permanent disability rating. In the dissenters' view, long-standing California case law is clear that a scheduled permanent disability rating may be rebutted if it is shown that the scheduled rating would result in a permanent disability award that would be inequitable, disproportionate, and not a fair and accurate measure of the employee's permanent disability. Moreover, they suggested, the legislative shift from diminished ability to compete in the open labor market to the focus on whole person impairment under the AMA Guides and diminished future earning capacity is irrelevant to the question of what standard is used to rebut a scheduled permanent disability rating [

Almaraz v. Environmental Recovery Services; Guzman v. Milpitas Unified School District (2009) 74 Cal. Comp. Cases 1084, 1116, 1118 (Appeals Board en banc opinion) (Brass, Caplane, and Moresi, Comms., dissenting)].

On the same day that it decided Almaraz/Guzman, discussed above, the Appeals Board en banc decided another case in which it held that the diminished future earning capacity (DFEC) portion of the 2005 Permanent Disability Rating Schedule is rebuttable, since Lab. Code § 4660(c) provides that the 2005 Schedule is merely "prima facie evidence of the percentage of permanent disability to be attributed to each injury." The DFEC portion of the 2005 Schedule ordinarily is not rebutted, the Board cautioned, by establishing the percentage to which the injured employee's future earning capacity has been diminished, because, generally, an employee's DFEC percentage is not tantamount to his or her percentage of permanent disability. Nor is the DFEC portion of the 2005 Schedule ordinarily rebutted by taking two-thirds of the injured employee's estimated diminished future earnings, then comparing the resulting sum to the permanent disability money chart to approximate a corresponding permanent disability rating. Rather, the Board stated, in the usual case, the DFEC portion of the 2005 Schedule may be rebutted in a manner consistent with Lab. Code § 4660, including Lab. Code § 4660(b)(2) and the RAND data to which Lab. Code § 4660(b)(2) refers. According to the Board, such a DFEC rebuttal approach consists, in essence, of: (1) obtaining two sets of wage data (one for the injured employee and one for similarly situated employees), generally through the Employment Development Department; (2) doing some simple mathematical calculations with that wage data to determine the injured employee's individualized proportional earnings loss; (3) dividing the employee's whole person impairment rating by his proportional earnings loss to obtain a ratio; and (4) seeing if the ratio falls within certain ranges of the ratios in Table A of the 2005 Schedule. If it does, determination of the employee's DFEC adjustment factor relates back to the 2005 Schedule, but, if it does not, then a non-complex formula is used to perform additional calculations to determine the individualized DFEC adjustment factor [Ogilvie v. City and County of San Francisco (2009) 74 Cal. Comp. Cases 248, 255-274 (Appeals Board en banc opinion)] . Commissioner Caplane dissented, stating that she would hold that the 2005 Schedule is rebutted when a party proves that the employee's diminished future earning capacity is disproportionate to the rating under the 2005 Schedule, and that she would further hold that, once the 2005 Schedule is rebutted, the permanent disability rating is the percentage loss of future earning capacity [Ogilvie v. City and County of San Francisco (2009) 74 Cal. Comp. Cases 248, 281 (Appeals Board en banc opinion) (Caplane, Comm., dissenting)]. Subsequently, the Appeals Board en banc held that its above-discussed en banc decision on the issue of rebutting the diminished future earning capacity portion of the 2005 Permanent Disability Rating Schedule constituted a "final" order, granted both parties' petitions for reconsideration, allowed any interested persons or entities a specified time to file amicus curiae briefs on the issues addressed by its en banc opinion, and allowed each counsel a specified time to file a reply brief that responds to all of the amicus briefs [Ogilvie v. City and County of San Francisco (2009) 74 Cal. Comp. Cases 478, 479-482 (Appeals Board en banc opinion)] .

Finally, in September 2009, the Appeals Board en banc, reconsidering its decision in Ogilvie, discussed above, and stating that "we clarify the holdings reached in our en banc decision of February 3, 2009," held that (1) the language of Lab. Code § 4660(c), which provides that "the schedule... shall be prima facie evidence of the percentage of permanent disability to be attributed to each injury covered by the schedule," unambiguously means that a permanent disability rating established by the Schedule is rebuttable, (2) the burden of rebutting a scheduled permanent disability rating rests with the party disputing that rating, and (3) one method of rebutting a scheduled permanent disability rating is to successfully challenge one of the component elements of that rating, such as the injured employee's diminished future earning capacity adjustment factor, which may be accomplished by establishing that the individualized adjustment factor most accurately reflects the injured employee's diminished future earning capacity. However, stated the Board, any individualized diminished future earning capacity adjustment factor must be consistent with Lab. Code § 4660(b)(2), the RAND data to which it refers, and the numeric formula adopted by the Administrative Director in the 2005 Schedule. Moreover, any evidence presented to support a proposed individualized diminished future earning capacity adjustment factor must constitute substantial evidence on which the Board may rely, and, even if this rebuttal evidence is legally substantial, the Board as trier-of-fact may still determine that the evidence does not overcome the diminished future earning capacity adjustment factor component of the scheduled permanent disability rating [Ogilvie v. City and County of San Francisco (2009) 74 Cal. Comp. Cases 1127, 1129, 1130 (Appeals Board en banc opinion) , pet. for writ of rev. filed 10/7/2009]. Commissioner Caplane dissented, adopting and incorporating by reference her dissent to the Board's February 2009 decision, and stating that she still disagreed with the majority's restrictions on the nature and scope of the evidence a party may offer in rebuttal, noting specifically her view that Lab. Code § 4660 does not limit the evidence a party may present to rebut a prima facie correct permanent disability rating established by the 2005 Schedule [Ogilvie v. City and County of San Francisco (2009) 74 Cal. Comp. Cases 1127, 1164-1166 (Appeals Board en banc opinion) (Caplane, Comm., dissenting)].

Apportionment. In repealing, then adding a new version of, Labor Code § 4663, and in adding Labor Code § 4664, the legislature has recast the statutory treatment of the apportionment of permanent disability, including placement of new responsibilities on physicians who prepare reports addressing the issue of permanent disability due to claimed industrial injury. The new statute provides, among other things, that apportionment of permanent disability is to be based on causation; specifically, the employer is liable for only the percentage of permanent disability directly caused by the injury arising out of and occurring in the course of employment. Any physician who prepares a report addressing the issue of permanent disability due to a claimed industrial injury must in that report address the issue of causation of the permanent disability. An employee who claims an industrial injury must, upon request, disclose all previous permanent disabilities or physical impairments. If the applicant has received a prior award of permanent disability, it will be conclusively presumed that the prior permanent disability exists at the time of any subsequent industrial injury. This presumption is a presumption affecting the burden of proof. The accumulation of all permanent disability awards issued with respect to any one region of the body in favor of one individual employee cannot exceed 100 percent over the employee's lifetime unless the employee's injury or illness is conclusively presumed to be total in character.

In May 2007, the California Supreme Court resolved the uncertainty, generated by conflicting court of appeal opinions, regarding whether the language of Lab. Code § 4663(c), plus the language of Lab. Code § 4664(a), meant that the so-called apportionment "Formula A" adopted by the Supreme Court in Fuentes [Fuentes v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1976) 16 Cal. 3d 1, 128 Cal. Rptr. 673, 547 P.2d 449] , pursuant to which the percentage of disability attributable to the new injury is calculated by subtracting the old permanent disability rating from the new permanent disability rating, then consulting the table for the award due this difference, remained the proper method for calculating apportionment. Injured employees had argued that statutory changes made by SB 899 mandated the use of "Formula C," rejected by th e Supreme Court in Fuentes, pursuant to which the dollar award for the new injury is calculated as if apportionment were not an issue, then the dollar award of the old injury is subtracted. The Supreme Court found that neither the plain language of relevant portions of SB 899 nor the legislative history of that bill evidenced any legislative intent to abandon "Formula A" [Brodie v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2007) 40 Cal. 4th 1313, 1323-1332, 57 Cal. Rptr. 3d 644, 156 P.3d 1100] .

Penalties. In enacting a new version of Labor Code § 5814, effective June 1, 2004, and which is applicable to all injuries, regardless of whether the injury occurs before, on, or after the effective date of the statute, the legislature has provided, among other things, that when payment of compensation has been unreasonably delayed or refused, either prior to or subsequent to the issuance of an award, the amount of the payment unreasonably delayed or refused will be increased up to 25 percent or $10,000, whichever is less. If, however, a potential violation of this statute is discovered by the employer prior to an employee claiming a penalty under it, the employer, within 90 days of the date of the discovery, may pay a self-imposed penalty in the amount of 10 percent of the amount of the payment unreasonably delayed or refused, along with the amount of the payment delayed or refused, in lieu of the 25 percent or $10,000 penalty. No action may be brought to recover penalties that may be awarded under this statute more than two years from the date the payment of compensation was due. In enacting Labor Code § 5814.6, the legislature has provided that any employer or insurer that knowingly violates Labor Code § 5814 with a frequency that indicates a general business practice is liable for administrative penalties not to exceed $400,000.

Burden of Proof--Preponderance of the Evidence. The legislature has amended Labor Code § 3202.5 to provide that all parties and lien claimants must meet the evidentiary burden of proof on all issues by a preponderance of evidence in order that all parties are considered equal before the law, and has redefined "preponderance of the evidence" as "that evidence that, when weighed with that opposed to it, has more convincing force and greater probability of truth."

Alternative Dispute Resolution--Collective Bargaining and Labor-Management Agreements. In amending Labor Code §§ 3201.5 and 3201.7, the legislature has provided that alternative dispute resolution procedures in collective bargaining agreements in construction-related industries and in labor-management agreements for any employer or groups of employers that meet certain requirements may allow the parties to negotiate for the delivery of medical benefits and disability compensation to employees who are eligible for group health benefits and non-occupational disability benefits through their employer.

Vocational Rehabilitation Reinstated for Injuries Before January 1, 2004. In reenacting Labor Code § 139.5, the legislature has reinstated vocational rehabilitation for injuries occurring before January 1, 2004. The reenacted statute will remain in effect only until January 1, 2009, and as of that date is repealed, unless a later-enacted statute, that is enacted before January 1, 2009, deletes or extends that date.

Medical Billing and Provider Fraud --Reporting-- Immunity From Civil Action. In amending Labor Code § 3823, the legislature has provided that no party, reporting in good faith what is believed to be a fraudulent claim made by a medical care provider, is subject to any civil liability.

Right to Request Qualified Medical Examination--Disputed Permanent Disability Rating. In amending Labor Code § 4061, the legislature has recastthe provisions governing the right of either party to request a qualified medical evaluation in the event of a disputed permanent disability rating.

Objections to Medical Determinations. In amending Labor Code § 4062, the legislature has recast the provisions governing objections by either the employee or the employer to a treating physician's determination of any medical issue not covered by Labor Code § 4060 or 4061 and not subject to the utilization review process pursuant to Labor Code § 4610.

Comprehensive Medical-Legal Evaluations. In amending Labor Code § 4060, the legislature has recast the basic provisions governing entitlement to medical evaluations when compensability of an injury is disputed.

Comprehensive Medical Evaluations--Rights of Unrepresented Employee. In amending Labor Code § 4062.1 by adding new subsections (b)-(e), the legislature has spelled out the procedures to be used when either party seeks appointment of a qualified medical evaluator and the employee is not represented by an attorney. As of April 19, 2004, unrepresented employees must now select a Qualified Medical Examiner from a panel of three medical evaluators to resolve claim disputes. There are also time limits to make the request, to select a medical evaluator from the panel, and to make an appointment.

Comprehensive Medical Evaluations--Rights of Represented Employee. In repealing Labor Code § 4062.2 and adding new Labor Code § 4062.2, the legislature has spelled out the procedures to be used when a comprehensive medical evaluation is required to resolve any dispute arising out of an injury or a claimed injury occurring on or after January 1, 2005, either party seeks appointment of an agreed medical evaluator, and the employee is represented by an attorney. If, however, an Agreed Medical Evaluator is not used, then the parties may request a panel of three Qualified Medical Examiners from which an Agreed Medical Evaluator can be selected. There are also time limits to make the request, to select a medical evaluator from the panel, and to make an appointment.

Panel Qualified Medical Evaluators and Agreed Medical Evaluators--Information and Communication. In adding Labor Code § 4062.3, the legislature has spelled out the rules regarding information to be provided to, as well as communications with, Qualified Medical Examiners selected from a panel and Agreed Medical Evaluators.

Failure of Qualified Medical Evaluator to Complete Timely Evaluation. In amending Labor Code § 4062.5, the legislature has outlined the consequences for the parties of a Qualified Medical Examiner's failure to complete a timely medical evaluation.

Educational Materials to Train Physicians and Other Providers. In adding Labor Code § 4062.8, the legislature has instructed the Administrative Director to prepare educational materials to be used in training physicians and other providers in relevant aspects of workers' compensation law.

Treating Physician Presumption of Correctness Repealed. In repealing Labor Code § 4062.9, the legislature has deleted the provision that gave a presumption of correctness to the findings of a treating physician or chiropractor who had been designated by an injured worker as his or her personal physician prior to the industrial injury.

Worker's Choice of Physician --No Medical Network-- Predesignation of Personal Physician. The legislature has amended Labor Code § 4600 to provide that, unless the employer or the employer's insurer has established a medical provider network as provided for in Labor Code § 4616, an industrially injured worker has the right to select his or her own physician after 30 days from the date on which the injury is reported to the employer. If an employee has notified his or her employer in writing before the date of injury that he or she has a personal physician, the employee has the right to be treated by that physician from the date of injury if the employer provides either nonoccupational group health coverage in a health care service plan or nonoccupational health coverage in a group health plan or a group health insurance policy.

Medical Treatment--Itemization--Amounts to Be Paid. In amending Labor Code § 4603.2, the legislature has specified that, in general, payments for medical treatment are to be made at reasonable maximum amounts in the official medical fee schedule in effect on the date of service. The legislature has made further amendments throughout Labor Code § 4603.2, including that payment to an employee-selected physician or physician designated by the employer must be made within 45 working days (60 working days if the employer is a governmental entity) after receipt of each separate itemization of medical services provided, together with any required medical reports and any written authorization for services that may have been received by the physician.

Medical Treatment Utilization Schedule--Rebutting Presumption of Correctness. In amending Labor Code § 4604.5, the legislature has provided that, upon adoption of this schedule by the Director, the recommended guidelines set forth in it are to be presumptively correct on the issue of extent and scope of medical treatment. The presumption is rebuttable and may be controverted by a preponderance of the scientific medical evidence establishing that a variance from the guidelines is reasonably required to cure or relieve the employee from the effects of his or her injury. The presumption created is one affecting the burden of proof. These recommended guidelines are to reflect practices that are evidence and scientifically based, nationally recognized, and peer-reviewed. For all injuries not covered by the Occupational Medicine Practice Guidelines or the official utilization schedule after adoption, authorized treatment is to be in accordance with other evidence-based medical treatment guidelines generally recognized by the national medical community and that are scientifically based.

Medical Treatment Reasonably Required to Cure or Relieve. The legislature amended Labor Code § 4600 to provide that medical treatment "reasonably required to cure or relieve the injured worker from the effects of his or her injury" means treatment that is based on the guidelines adopted by the Administrative Director pursuant to Labor Code § 5307.27 or, prior to the adoption of those guidelines, the updated American College of Occupational and Environmental Medicine's Occupational Medicine Practice Guidelines.

Evidence--Medical Treatment Utilization Guidelines. In amending Labor Code § 5703, the legislature has authorized the WCAB to receive medical treatment utilization guidelines as evidence.

Medical Treatment Utilization Schedule--Occupational Therapy. In amending Labor Code § 4604.5, the legislature has provided that an employee is entitled to no more than 24 occupational therapy visits per industrial injury.

Filing of Claim Form and Employer's Obligation for Medical Treatment. In amending Labor Code § 5402, the legislature has specified that the employer must provide medical treatment within one working day of the filing of a claim form by an employee and must continue to provide the treatment until the date the claim is accepted or rejected. Until that date, liability for medical treatment is limited to $10,000. Treatment so provided does not give rise to a presumption of liability on the part of the employer.

Medical and Hospital Liens--Lien Filing Fee. The legislature amended Labor Code § 4903.05 to provide that a filing fee of $100 is to be charged for each initial lien filed by health care providers, or on behalf of providers, pursuant to Labor Code § 4903(b). Effective July 1, 2006, however, the legislature repealed Lab. Code § 4903.05, thereby abolishing the filing fee [see Stats. 2006, ch. 69, § 25; see also § 577.262].

Injury and Illness Prevention Program. The legislature amended Labor Code § 6401.7 to provide that insurers must conduct a review and provide a written report of the injury and illness prevention program of each of its insureds with an experience modification of 2.0 or greater within six months of the commencement of the initial insurance policy term. The reviewer must be or work under the direction of a licensed California Professional engineer, certified safety professional, or a certified industrial hygienist.

Labor Code Private Attorneys General Act. The legislature amended Labor Code § 2699 to provide that the statute does not apply to the recovery of administrative and civil penalties in connection with workers' compensation laws as contained in Division 1, Dept. of Industrial Relations, and Division 4, Workers' Compensation and Insurance, including, but not limited to, Labor Code § 129.5 (audit penalties) and Labor Code § 132a (discrimination against injured workers).

Workers' Compensation Funds--Employer Surcharges. In amending Labor Code § 62.5, the legislature has clarified uncertainties generated by apparently conflicting provisions in different pieces of 2003 legislation and provided that theWorkers' Compensation Administration Revolving Fund, the Uninsured Employers Benefits Trust Fund, and the Subsequent Injuries Benefits Trust Fund are to be financed exclusively be surcharges levied by the Administrative Director against employers.

Workers' Compensation Insurance Rates. In enacting Labor Code § 138.65, the legislature has provided for a study of the effects of legislative reform on workers' compensation insurance rates and for the Governor and the Insurance Commissioner to make recommendations as to the appropriateness of regulating insurance rates. The legislation requires that the study be submitted by January 1, 2006.

This chapter discusses proceedings under California's workers' compensation law to recover compensation for work-related injury, illness or death. In addition, the chapter discusses the exclusive remedy principle and its exceptions, as well as third-party actions.

The legal background (contained in Part II of this chapter) begins by discussing the general purpose, scope, and coverage of workers' compensation law and time limitations on proceedings under that law [see §§ 577.10 -577.25].

Subpart A discusses proceedings for the adjudication of workers' compensation claims before the Workers' Compensation Appeals Board and addresses the following topics:

- Workers' compensation procedures that are preliminary to initiation of proceedings before the Appeals Board, such as initial attorney consulations and the requirements as to attorney's fees, fee agreements, and attorney's fees disclosure statements; initial notice requirements for employees and employers; and the benefits to be provided by the employer on notification of an injury, including procedures applicable to permanent disability benefits [see §§ 577.40 -577.46].

- Mandatory and voluntary arbitration of workers' compensation disputes [see §§ 577.60 -577.70].

- Proceedings for adjudication of claims, including procedures for initiation of a proceeding [see §§ 577.80 -577.90]; captions, verification, service, and filing of papers with the Workers' Compensation Appeals Board [see §§ 577.100 -577.108]; stipulations and requests for awards [see §§ 577.120 -577.122]; compromise and release agreements [see §§ 577.130 -577.134]; prehearing proceedings [see §§ 577.140 -577.157]; hearings [see §§ 577.170 -577.182]; findings and awards [see §§ 577.190 -577.195]; reconsideration [see §§ 577.210 -577.212]; supplemental proceedings [see §§ 577.220 -577.225]; payment, commutation, and enforcement of awards [see §§ 577.240 -577.247]; and lien claims [see §§ 577.260 -577.265].

- Judicial review of Appeals Board decisions [see §§ 577.280 -577.294].

Subpart B discusses the exclusive remedy principle of workers' compensation law and exceptions to that principle which allow injured employees to maintain civil actions against their employers [see §§ 577.310 -577.321].

Subpart C discusses third party actions, including the effect of employer negligence on the liability of third parties, the allocation of third-party judgments, and the subrogation rights of employers [see §§ 577.330 -577.336].

Part IV of this chapter contains forms for use in workers' compensation proceedings and in civil actions against employers or third parties. Subpart A includes the following workers' compensation forms:

- Forms for filing workers compensation claims, and obtaining information regarding employee injuries [see §§ 577.370 -577.376].

- Forms used to initiate proceedings before the Appeals Board, including Applications for Adjudication of Claim in disability and death cases [see §§ 577.390 -577.401].

- Forms used in the discovery process, including subpoenas and a petition to compel an employee to submit to a medical examination [see §§ 577.410 -477.413].

- Forms used to obtain permanent disability ratings [see §§ 577.420 -577.423].

- Forms used to join and dismiss parties to a workers' compensation proceeding [see §§ 577.430 -577.431].

- Forms used to dismiss or substitute attorneys [see §§ 577.440 -577.441].

- Forms used to dismiss workers' compensation claims for inactivity or at the request of a party [see §§ 577.450 -577.453].

- Forms used to settle workers' compensation claims, including Compromise and Release Agreements and informational guidelines for submission of settlement documents [see §§ 577.460 -577.463].

- Forms used for stipulations and request for awards [see §§ 577.470 -577.471].

- Forms used in the resolution of lien claims [see §§ 577.480 -577.482].

- Forms used in pre-hearing proceedings and hearings, including pre-trial conference statements and a request for an expedited hearing [see §§ 577.490 -577.492].

- Forms used after an award is issued, including a form to request a certified copy of award, to petition for reconsideration, and to reopen a claim [see §§ 577.500 -577.503].

- Form of a petition for writ of review [see § 577.510].

Subpart B contains the following forms for use in civil actions:

- Forms of complaints for damages [see §§ 577.520 -577.525].

- Forms of affirmative defenses [see §§ 577.530 -577.532].

- Forms for use in securing liens against third-party judgments and obtaining credit against compensation liability [see §§ 577.540 -57.542].

1. General Principles of Workers' Compensation Law

51-577 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 577.10

§ 577.10 Governing Law

[1] In General

Workers' compensation and insurance are governed by Cal. Const., art. XIV, § 4, Division 4 of the Labor Code (Lab. Code § 3200 et seq.), and 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10300 et seq. Workers' compensation and insurance for state employees not otherwise covered are governed by Division 4.5 of the Labor Code (Lab. Code § 6100 et seq.). Division 4 does not apply to employers or employments engaged in interstate commerce or to employees injured while they are so engaged, except insofar as they are permitted to apply under the federal constitution or laws [Lab. Code § 3203].

Compensation proceedings are governed generally by Lab. Code § 5300 et seq. and by 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10300 et seq. The rules relating to workers' compensation matters adopted by the Administrative Director of the Division of Workers' Compensation are set forth in 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9710 et seq. and 10100 et seq. Judicial review is governed by Lab. Code §§ 5950-5956 and by Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.495. Third-party actions are governed by Lab. Code §§ 3850-3865. Finally, rules of the Court Administrator, 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10210-10297, became effective on November 17, 2008.

Several federal laws also provide workers' compensation for injury to or death of members of various classes of employees. Examples are the Federal Employers' Liability Act (45 U.S.C. § 51 et seq.), the Longshore and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act (33 U.S.C. § 901 et seq.), the Jones Act (46 U.S.C. § 688), the Death on the High Seas Act (46 U.S.C. § 761 et seq.), the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act (43 U.S.C. § 1331 et seq.), the Federal Employees' Compensation Act (5 U.S.C. § 8101 et seq.), the Defense Base Act (42 U.S.C. § 1651 et seq.), and the War Hazards Compensation Act (42 U.S.C. § 1701 et seq.). There may be some situations in which a particular worker will come under the protection of both the California workers' compensation law and a federal act [see Duong v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1985) 169 Cal. App. 3d 980, 981-984, 215 Cal. Rptr. 609 (land-based shipyard worker injured while repairing vessel docked on navigable waters held subject to both California law and Longshore and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act, 33 U.S.C. § 901 et seq.)]. Employees of private contractors on federal lands or buildings are, however, covered by the workers' compensation law of the state in which the land or buildings are situated in some circumstances [see 40 U.S.C. § 3172].

[2] Applicability of 1989 and 1990 Amendments

In 1989, the Legislature enacted the Margolin-Bill Greene Workers' Compensation Reform Act of 1989 [1989 Stats., chs. 892, 893], which made numerous significant changes in the workers' compensation law and related provisions of the Labor Code, particularly workers' compensation procedure. These changes apply only to injuries occurring on or after January 1, 1990, unless a specific statutory provision provides otherwise [see 1989 Stats., ch. 893, § 6]. Thus, many proceedings, including some proceedings commenced after January 1, 1990, will continue to be governed by provisions of the Labor Code (and related administrative regulations) as they existed prior to the 1989 amendments if they involve injuries that occurred before January 1, 1990. Thus, when handling any workers' compensation proceeding, counsel must be careful to ascertain both:

- The date of injury (that is, whether it occurred before or after January 1, 1990), and

- Whether the particular provision(s) of the Labor Code relied on by counsel were amended by 1989 Stats., ch. 892 or 893.

In those instances in which a statutory provision or regulation has been affected by the 1989 legislation, this article discusses both the current law and the prior law. It also discusses the 1990 "cleanup" legislation [see 1990 Stats., ch. 1550].

For discussion of the what constitutes the date of injury for purposes of workers' compensation law, see § 577.14[3][c].

Chapter 577 WORKERS' COMPENSATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Administrative Actions
1. General Principles of Workers' Compensation Law

51-577 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 577.11

§ 577.11 Nature and Purpose of Law

The California workers' compensation law is designed to impose on employers the burden of injuries caused by work-related accidents while protecting workers from the special risks of employment [Laeng v. Workmen's Comp. Appeals Bd. (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 771, 782, 100 Cal. Rptr. 377, 494 P.2d 1] . The touchstone of the workers' compensation system is industrial injury that results in occupational disability or death [Livitsanos v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 744, 752, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 808, 828 P.2d 1195] . A compensable injury is an injury that causes disability or the need for medical treatment, and compensable injuries may be physical, emotional, or both, so long as they are disabling [see Livitsanos v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 744, 752-753, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 808, 828 P.2d 1195] . The workers' compensation system is designed, however, to compensate only for such disability or need for treatment that is occupationally related [Livitsanos v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 744, 753, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 808, 828 P.2d 1195] . The basic purpose of the system is to compensate for a disabled worker's diminished ability to compete in the open labor market, and not to compensate for every work-related injury [Livitsanos v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 744, 753, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 808]. Thus, it is theoretically possible to incur a work-related injury that results in no compensable industrial disability under the workers' compensation system [Livitsanos v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 744, 754, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 808, 828 P.2d 1195] .

Pursuant to the plenary power the California Constitution has granted to the Legislature to create and enforce a complete system of workers' compensation under Cal. Const., art. XIV, § 4, the Legislature has created a statutory scheme requiring all employers to secure the payment of workers' compensation to injured employees, either by obtaining insurance coverage of their liability or by obtaining a certificate of consent to self-insure issued by the Director of Industrial Relations. The right to workers' compensation benefits is entirely statutory and is not derived from the common law [DuBois v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 382, 388, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 523, 853 P.2d 978] .

At its inception, a principal purpose of the law was to eliminate the three common law defenses that had prevented recovery for injuries received on the job:

- Contributory negligence;
- Assumption of risk; and
- Fault of a fellow employee.

Employees were relieved of these defenses and given the certainty of financial and other benefits whenever the "conditions of compensation" were established [see Lab. Code § 3600 and discussion under § 577.23]. In exchange, employers were given an exemption from civil actions for damages [see Shoemaker v. Myers (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 1, 16, 276 Cal. Rptr. 303, 801 P.2d 1054 (under workers' compensation law, employee is afforded relatively swift and certain payment of benefits to cure or relieve effects of industrial injury without having to prove fault, but, in exchange, gives up the wider range of damages potentially available in tort); Hisel v. County of Los Angeles (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 969, 974-975, 238 Cal. Rptr. 678 (tracing legislative history of workers' compensation law); see also, discussion under subpart B, § 577.310 et seq.].

The basic purpose of the law is to ensure that a worker who sustains injury in the course of employment, regardless of the fault of any party, and those who depend on the worker for support, will have adequate means of support while the worker is unable to work, and that the injured worker will be furnished with the medical and other remedial treatment required to cure and relieve him or her from the effects of the injury. The policy of the law is to accomplish substantial justice in all cases expeditiously, inexpensively, and without incumbrance of any character [Cal. Const., art. XIV, § 4; see City etc. of San Francisco v. Workmen's Comp. App. Bd. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 1001, 1010, 88 Cal. Rptr. 371, 472 P.2d 459] . In sum, the purposes of the workers' compensation law are several [S.G. Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Department of Industrial Relations (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 341, 354, 256 Cal. Rptr. 543, 769 P.2d 399] :

- To ensure that the cost of industrial injuries will be part of the cost of goods rather than a burden on society;
- To guarantee prompt, limited compensation for an employee's work injuries, regardless of fault, as an inevitable cost of production;
- To spur increased industrial safety; and
- In return, to insulate the employer from tort liability for his or her employees' injuries.

To these ends, the workers' compensation law is to be construed liberally [Lab. Code § 3202; see Martinez v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1976) 15 Cal. 3d 982, 987, 127 Cal. Rptr. 150, 544 P.2d 1350 ; In-Home Supportive Services v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 720, 733, 199 Cal. Rptr. 697] . The rule of liberal construction applies to all aspects of the workers' compensation law [LeBoeuf v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1983) 34 Cal. 3d 234, 241, 193 Cal. Rptr. 547, 666 P.2d 989] .

Chapter 577 WORKERS' COMPENSATION
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Administrative Actions
1. General Principles of Workers' Compensation Law

51-577 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 577.12

§ 577.12 Administration of Law

[1] In General

The California workers' compensation law is administered by the Division of Workers' Compensation in the Department of Industrial Relations [see Lab. Code §§ 19, 56]. Prior to 1990, the division was called the Division of Industrial Accidents, and prior to 1966, the Industrial Accident Commission administered the law. Within the division, the Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (WCAB) exercises the judicial functions of adjudicating claims, whereas the other functions of the division are administered by the division's administrative director and court administrator [see Lab. Code §§ 110, 111, 123, 123.5, 127, 127.5, 127.6, 138.1, 3200].

The administrative director appoints the workers' compensation judges [see Lab. Code §§ 123, 123.5(a)] and is authorized to appoint a California licensed attorney as counsel to the division [Lab. Code § 117].

The Administrative Director has promulgated ethical standards to which the workers' compensation law judges (WCJ's) must adhere. Among the topics covered by these standards are: gifts, honoraria, and travel; disclosure requirements; disqualification; restriction on investments; financial interests in educational programs; duty to report ethics violations; an ethics advisory committee with investigatory powers; investigation and action by the Administrative Director or Court Administrator [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 9720.1-9723].

[2] Division of Workers' Compensation

The Division of Workers' Compensation is required to make available to employees, employers, and other interested parties information, assistance, and advice to assure the proper and timely furnishing of benefits and to assist in the resolution of disputes on an informal basis [Lab. Code § 5450; see 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 9921-9929]. The informal procedure is set forth in Lab. Code §§ 5451-5455.

[3] Workers' Compensation Appeals Board

[a] Jurisdiction

The jurisdiction of the WCAB is set forth in Lab. Code §§ 5300-5305 [see Marcus v. Workmen's Comp. Appeals Bd. (1973) 35 Cal. App. 3d 598, 602, 111 Cal. Rptr. 101] . The following must be instituted before the WCAB, and may not be instituted elsewhere:

- Proceedings for recovery of workers' compensation, or concerning any right or liability arising out of or incidental to the proceedings.

- Proceedings for enforcement against an employer or an insurer of any liability for compensation imposed on him, her, or it by Lab. Code § 3200 et seq. in favor of an injured employee, an injured employee's dependents, or any third person.

- Proceedings for determination of any question as to the distribution of workers' compensation among dependents or other persons.

- Proceedings for determination of any question as to who are dependents of any deceased employee or what persons are entitled to any benefit under the compensation provisions of Lab. Code § 3200 et seq.

- Proceedings for obtaining any order that the WCAB is authorized to make pursuant to Lab. Code § 3200 et seq.

- Proceedings for determination of any other matter over which jurisdiction is vested by Lab. Code § 3200 et seq. in the Division of Workers' Compensation, including the administrative director and the WCAB.

A superior court does not have subject matter jurisdiction over an action to enjoin the WCAB from enforcing provisions of the Workers' Compensation Act [Lab. Code § 5955; Greener v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 1028, 1034, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 539, 863 P.2d 784] . A party who is aggrieved by an order of the WCAB applying the workers' compensation law to that party may seek relief by filing a petition for review of the WCAB's order with the Court of Appeal or the Supreme Court, or by filing a petition for a writ of mandate with the Court of Appeal or the Supreme Court if the criteria for extraordinary relief under Code of Civil Procedure Section 1085 are satisfied [Greener v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 1028, 1046, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 539, 863 P.2d 784] . See § 577.280 et seq., for a discussion of judicial review.

Courts must resolve any reasonable doubts as to jurisdiction in favor of the WCAB [Gilford v. State Compensation Ins. Fund (1974) 41 Cal. App. 3d 828, 831, 833-834, 116 Cal. Rptr. 615] .

For further discussion of the exclusive nature of the jurisdiction of the WCAB, see subpart B, § 577.310 et seq.

[b] Power to Punish for Contempt

The WCAB and its members may issue all necessary process in proceedings for contempt in like manner and to the same extent as courts of record [Lab. Code § 134; see Crawford v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 156, 164, 259 Cal. Rptr. 414 ; Morton v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 924, 928, 238 Cal. Rptr. 651 ; Rowen v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1981) 119 Cal. App. 3d 633, 639, 639 n.5,174 Cal. Rptr. 185 ; Marcus v. Workmen's Comp. Appeals Bd. (1973) 35 Cal. App. 3d 598, 602-605, 111 Cal. Rptr. 101] . Accordingly, the WCAB must follow the applicable provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure pertaining to contempt (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1209-1222) [Crawford v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 156, 164, 259 Cal. Rptr. 414 ;

Morton v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 924, 928, 238 Cal. Rptr. 651 ; Rowen v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1981) 119 Cal. App. 3d 633, 643, 174 Cal. Rptr. 185] . When the contempt is not committed in the WCAB's presence, the WCAB must proceed by way of order to show cause supported by affidavit [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1211, 1212] or declaration under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5], and the alleged contemner is entitled to appear before and be heard by the WCAB [Crawford v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 156, 164, 259 Cal. Rptr. 414 ; Morton v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 924, 928, 238 Cal. Rptr. 651] . Moreover, there is no right to reconsideration of a contempt order under Lab. Code § 5900 [Morton v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 924, 927 n.1, 238 Cal. Rptr. 651] .

Judicial review of a finding of contempt by the WCAB may be had by filing a petition for a writ of certiorari or, in the case of a jail sentence, a writ of habeas corpus, addressed in either instance to the appropriate court of appeal [Rowen v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1981) 119 Cal. App. 3d 633, 637, 174 Cal. Rptr. 185 ; Marcus v. Workmen's Comp. Appeals Bd. (1973) 35 Cal. App. 3d 598, 601 n.3, 111 Cal. Rptr. 101] . Prohibition is also an appropriate remedy to restrain threatened contempt proceedings by the WCAB, if the WCAB is acting without or in excess of jurisdiction [see Crawford v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 156, 171-172, 259 Cal. Rptr. 414] . For discussion of when the WCAB may direct and order a workers' compensation judge to issue necessary process in proceedings for direct and hybrid contempt, see*§ 577.145[b]*.

For further discussion of contempt and for forms that may be adapted for use in contempt proceedings before the WCAB, as well as for forms for use in securing judicial review of a contempt adjudication, see Ch. 135, Contempt .

[c] Disciplinary Powers Over Representatives of Parties

After a hearing, the WCAB may remove, deny, or suspend the privilege of a person to represent any party in any proceeding before the WCAB or workers' compensation judges for a violation of Lab. Code §§ 4900-4909.1 (discussed under § 577.242) or for other good cause [Lab. Code § 4907]. Lab. Code § 4907, by its terms, applies to attorneys, but this application was held unconstitutional under the separation of powers doctrine (Cal. Const., art. III, § 3) [Hustedt v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1981) 30 Cal. 3d 329, 335-346, 178 Cal. Rptr. 801, 636 P.2d 1139 ; see Katz v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1981) 30 Cal. 3d 353, 357, 178 Cal. Rptr. 815, 636 P.2d 1153] .

[d] Establishment of Uniform Procedures and Forms

The court administrator is required to establish uniform district office procedures, uniform forms, and uniform time of court settings for all district offices of the Appeals Board. No district office or workers' compensation judge may require forms or procedures other than as established by the court administrator. A workers' compensation judge who violates this requirement may be subject to disciplinary proceedings [Lab. Code § 5500.3(a)]. The Appeals Board is required to establish uniform court procedures and uniform forms for all other proceedings of the Board. No district office or workers' compensation judge may require forms or procedures other than as established by the Board [Lab. Code § 5500.3(b)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Administrative Actions
1. General Principles of Workers' Compensation Law

45-577 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 577.12A

§ 577.12A Electronic Adjudication Management System

[1] Using EAMS; General Characteristics

As DWC moves toward eventual use of electronic forms, the various DWC units are now referred to as "product delivery units" [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10210(bb)]. The units are abbreviated as follows: Adjudication Unit "ADJ"; Disability Evaluation Unit "DEU"; Subsequent Injuries Benefits Trust Fund "SIF"; Uninsured Employers' Benefits Trust Fund "UEF"; Vocational Rehabilitation "VOC"; and Retraining and Return to Work Unit "RSU." For each product delivery unit, there is an area in EAMS in which the case management information related to that product delivery unit is stored. That area is called the "product delivery case." "INT" is the integrated case, which is the umbrella for the individual product delivery cases for each unit residing in EAMS. External users are being integrated into EAMS, meaning that attorneys and other interested parties will have much of their contact with DWC via EAMS. Once the shift to fully electronic forms is accomplished, each attorney or other interested party, in order to access EAMS, must have taken a computer-based training course. Upon passing this course, the participant will receive a user name and a password. Access to EAMS will be through a link to be added to the DIR/DWC website.

Clicking on the EAMS link from the DIR/DWC website will lead to the EAMS page, from which various functions may be performed:

- The General-Public-Search link that will appear on the EAMS page will allow a user to search for basic case information, such as the first and last names of an injured worker, the worker's date of birth, and the case number.

- Links to eForms will be provided, with forms grouped by unit area (e.g., ADJ, UEF, DEU), each of which may be filled out online and submitted electronically. Among the eForms to be available through EAMS will be Application for Adjudication of Claim, Compromise and Release, Declaration of Readiness to Proceed, Notice of Request for Allowance of Lien, Petition to Terminate Liability for Temporary Disability Indemnity, and Stipulations With Request for Award.

- The logon-to-EAMS link will lead to the EAMS logon page, through which information will be accessible to only those persons who have received an appropriate EAMS account, which will presumably include all representatives of injured workers, employers, or lien claimants.

Having selected the logon-to-EAMS link, the user will be led to the search page. This page will function as an EAMS home page. From it, the user may search by any field on the page, e.g., participant name, case number, worker's date of birth. With the search results, the user has the ability to sort the cases, by case number, injured worker, date of injury, and several other data categories.

The EAMS user will need to become familiar with some new terminology. For example, the "primary client" means the injured worker, and "Legacy Case ID" means the number previously used by the specific DWC unit (ADJ, DEU, SIF, VOC, RSU, UEF) to refer to the case. Under EAMS, a case will have one master number that will not change among the units. Another new term is the "product delivery case home page," also accessed via the search page. From the product delivery case home page, the user may navigate to items such as the case calendar or case events, which is the EAMS case history. If, for example, a case has a hearing scheduled, the user will see that hearing on the calendar, much like meetings noted on a Microsoft Outlook calendar. [Note: There will be a separate "product delivery case home page" for each type of case (ADJ, VOC, DEU, etc.).] The case home page contains details such as the "product name," i.e., the EAMS case type (ADJ, DEU, etc.); the "case reference," i.e., the EAMS case number; and the case status.

Another new concept with which attorneys and other participants in the workers' compensation system will need to become familiar is that of the "integrated case." This is the umbrella that contains the product delivery cases such as ADJ or UEF. The user will click on the Case Reference hyperlink to view a case. The integrated case contains information common to the product delivery cases, such as information about the injured worker, the employer, etc. From the integrated case, it will be possible to access the various product delivery cases via the Case Reference hyperlinks mentioned above. To access documents for a case, the user will click on the case type hyperlink in the Case Documents section. All case documents will be stored in EAMS, and case participants will be able to search for and access documents in their cases by Case ID, Case Type, Document Date, or Author.

EAMS will allow case files to be prepared more quickly, the number of human errors to be decreased, fewer resources to be used in the process, and the viewing of files to be done from the user's own office. For example, on the "Check In Check Out Documents" page, a list of case documents will appear. Once the user has located the document sought, it can be viewed by clicking on the document hyperlink. Thus, trips to a DWC District Office for the purpose of viewing case documents will be eliminated. Moreover, any changes that need to be made to a given document may be made online, followed by electronic submission of the new version to DWC.

With the proper access rights, a user is able to modify personal information in EAMS, including mailing address, e-mail address, and phone number. Again, no trip to a District Office or even a mailed letter will be required.

On the "Request for Action" page, an attorney will have the ability to request that DWC perform an action on one of his or her cases. The attorney may request an order taking the case off calendar, a rehabilitation conference change, or a continuance. When requesting an action, the user will be required to input the case type, the case ID, and the user's first and last names. For example, if requesting a continuance, the user will select Continuance from a dropdown list, enter the case number, the user's first and last name, then add "good cause" in the Reason box, informing DWC of the situation. When the user then clicks the Submit button, the Continuance request will be sent to the in-box of a DWC worker. The in-box will show that worker what activities he or she needs to perform.

[2] Case Names, Case Index, and Adjudication Files

An index of all cases filed with a district office will be maintained in EAMS under the name of the person claimed to have been injured or the identification assigned to that person, whether or not that person is an applicant. Reference to the case will be by the name of the injured person and the case number [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10215].

All cases filed on and after November 17, 2008, are required to be maintained by DWC in an electronic format in EAMS. All paper documents properly filed in such cases must be scanned into the EAMS adjudication file, then destroyed anytime more than 30 business days after filing [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10216(a)].

All case opening documents are required to be given a case number by the district office when no case number has been previously assigned for the injured worker for the alleged date of injury. The parties must be notified of the case number by their preferred method of service, which may include U.S. Mail, fax, or e-mail [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10216(b)].

If a case number has been previously assigned by DWC, a new case number will be assigned when a document is filed, as follows: the prefix "ADJ" will replace the previously assigned three-letter prefix (e.g., "OAK") and precede the assigned case number [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10216(c)].

Except as provided in 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10273 (retention, return, and destruction of records and exhibits), DWC is required to maintain a paper adjudication file until it is converted to an electronic adjudication file. If, however, a paper adjudication file is maintained on or after November 17, 2008, an electronic adjudication file must also be created, and any documents filed thereafter must be maintained electronically in EAMS, in accordance with 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10216(c) [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10216(d); see above].

A paper adjudication file or a portion of a paper adjudication file may be converted to an electronic adjudication file by DWC at any time. If a paper adjudication file is completely scanned into EAMS, DWC must notify the parties to the case of the change in how the file is maintained, and the paper adjudication file may then be destroyed anytime more than 30 business days after the issuance of the notification [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10216(e)].

[3] Official Participant Record and Duty to Furnish Correct Address

DWC is required to maintain an official participant record for each adjudication file, which must contain the names of all parties and lien claimants and their attorneys or hearing representatives [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10217(a)].

In order to ensure that case parties and documents are accurately associated to the correct electronic adjudication file, uniform names for claims administrators' offices and representatives' offices are required to be used when filing documents in EAMS. These names are assigned by DWC [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10217(b)]. DWC will maintain a list on its website of uniform names and mailing addresses and preferred method of service for claims administrators' offices and representatives' offices [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10217(b)(1)]. Additions for new claims administrators' offices and representatives' offices and changes of name, location or address, telephone number, fax number, e-mail address, or preferred method of service must be registered by the entity requesting the change with the Central Registration Unit [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10217(b)(2); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10210(f) (Central Registration Unit is unit within DWC that maintains website list of uniform names and addresses)]. The entity requesting the change must fax or e-mail a letter on letterhead with a signature from an authorized individual requesting the change to DWC's Central Registration Unit within five business days of any change. The entity must also advise all parties of any change of name, mailing address, or telephone number by furnishing the current information within five business days of any change [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10217(b)(2)(A); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10217(b)(2)(B) (fax number for Central Registration Unit is: 1 (888) 822-9309, and e-mail address for Central Registration Unit is: cru@dir.ca.gov); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10217(b)(2)(C) (new uniform name or address and preferred method of service will be posted by Central Registration Unit within 10 business days of receipt of request)].

Except as required in the preceding paragraph, every party and every lien claimant having an interest in an active case pending before the district office or WCAB must advise the district office and all parties of any change of mailing address and telephone numbers by furnishing the current information within five business days of any change [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10217(c)]. Similarly, every lien claimant that has filed a lien in a case pending in a district office must advise all parties within five business days of any change in the identity and/or telephone number of the person with authority to resolve the lien by furnishing the correct name and daytime telephone number of that person to the interested parties, and must advise DWC of any such change after a declaration of readiness is filed [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10217(d)]. Finally, every party and lien claimant having an interest in an inactive case must advise all other known parties, lien claimants, attorneys, and hearing representative within five business days of any change of address (which must include any change of mailing address and telephone numbers) by furnishing the correct and current address and/or number, and must advise DWC of any such change within five business days if there is an outstanding award of further medical treatment or if there is continuing jurisdiction pursuant to Lab. Code §§ 5410, 5803, and 5804 [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10217(e)].

[4] Designated Preferred Method of Service

Claims administrators' offices [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10210(g) ("claims administrator's office" defined)] and representatives' offices [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10210(dd) ("representative's office" defined)] may designate first-class mail, electronic mail, or fax as their preferred method of service for receiving documents from the district office and the Appeals Board. The designated method of service must be the same for all active cases for that claims administrator's office or representative's office. A party, a lien claimant, or an attorney or other representative for a party or a lien claimant who does not designate a preferred method of service will be served by first-class mail [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10218(a)].

Represented parties, lien claimants, or attorneys or other representatives for parties or lien claimants may agree among themselves that any method of service may be used for receiving documents among the parties to the agreement. If such an agreement is made, service pursuant to the agreement constitutes valid service. Absent such an agreement, service between these parties or entities must be made by first-class mail [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10218(b)].

Service by or on an unrepresented injured worker, unrepresented dependent, or unrepresented uninsured employer must be made by first-class mail [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10218(c)].

[5] Failure to Comply With Court Administrator's Rules

If a document is not filed in compliance with the Court Administrator's rules, because it does not comply with either the procedural requirements or with the place of filing requirements, the Court Administrator may in his or her discretion take the following actions [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10222(a)]:

- Correct the defect and file the document.

- Notify the filer that the document is not accepted for filing by service of a Notice of Document Discrepancy. This Notice must state the discrepancy and the date of the attempted filing, and provide the filer with 15 business days from service to cure the discrepancy. If the document is corrected within 15 business days, or at a later date upon a showing of good cause, it will be deemed filed on the original date the document was submitted.

The following documents are not to be filed with the district office or the Appeals Board, except as a non-duplicative supporting exhibit or by order of a WCJ or the Board. Documents improperly submitted will not be accepted for filing or deemed filed and will not be acknowledged and may be discarded [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10222(b)]:

- Letters to opposing parties or counsel.

- Subpoenas.
- Notices of taking deposition.
- Medical appointment letters.
- Proofs of service ordered pursuant to 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10500.
- Medical reports, except as required by 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10233.
- Copies of any decision of any federal or state court opinion otherwise available.
- Copies of any decision of the Appeals Board or a WCJ that is otherwise available.
- Duplicate medical and medical-legal reports.
- No diagnostic imaging as defined in Lab. Code § 139.3(b)(1) is to be transmitted to the district office or the Appeals Board unless it is ordered.

No document is to be sent by electronic mail or by fax directly to the district office or the Appeals Board. If a document is sent by electronic mail or fax directly to the district office, it will not be accepted for filing or deemed filed, will not be acknowledged, and may be discarded unless otherwise ordered by the WCJ or the Appeals Board [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10222(c)].

Failure to comply with the rules of the Court Administrator will be deemed a bad faith action or tactic that is frivolous or solely intended to cause unnecessary delay unless that failure results from mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10211].

[6] Corrective Measures for Misfiled or Misdirected Documents Into the Case Management System

DWC may perform document substitution on filed documents, repair scanned documents, and move documents to other adjudication files [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10223(a); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10210(a) ("adjudication file" defined)].

A document substitution may occur when a technical problem of readability and/or legibility exists with a filed document. The filer may seek a substitution of the document by filing a petition to substitute. The proposed document for substitution must be appended to a petition to substitute. If the petition to substitute is granted, the proposed document for substitution will replace the document that was unreadable or illegible [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10223(b)].

A document repair may occur when a document scanned into an electronic adjudication file by DWC fails to reflect the original paper document. DWC may repair the document so that the scanned image accurately reflects the original paper document. DWC may repair a document at any time, or a party may request that a document be repaired. EAMS will retain as viewable the original document for those who have access to the electronic file [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10223(c)].

A document may be moved when a document originally scanned by DWC is filed into the wrong electronic file [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10223(d)].

Documents that are in the process of being substituted or repaired will not be moved [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10223(e)].

DWC will provide notice to all parties of moved, substituted, or repaired documents within 15 business days [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10223(f)].

[7] Extended System Unavailability

If, for any reason, there is a technical failure of EAMS for longer than 24 hours, the Court Administrator, in his or her discretion, may declare that EAMS is unavailable for an extended period of time [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10225(a)]. After issuing a declaration of extended system unavailability, the Court Administrator must issue an order that includes, but is not limited to [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10225(b)]:

- Requiring that the district office or the Appeals Board serve all documents by first-class mail.
- Providing that filed documents be maintained in temporary paper adjudication files.
- Providing that the time for performing any action, whether by the parties or by the district office, be extended by a specified period or until EAMS is declared to be operational.
- Requiring or allowing any other actions or remedies, as deemed appropriate under the circumstances.

The Court Administrator must post the declaration of extended system unavailability on DWC's website, if the website remains operational, and at every district office and the office of the Appeals Board [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10225(c)].

Any declaration of extended unavailability remains in effect until the Court Administrator issues a subsequent declaration that EAMS is operational [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10225(d)].

DWC will maintain on its website a list of all technical failures of EAMS that last longer than 24 hours [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10225(e)].

EAMS will be backed up daily pursuant to the State of California's information technology standards [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10225(f)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Administrative Actions
1. General Principles of Workers' Compensation Law

51-577 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 577.13

§ 577.13 Employer's Liability for Workers' Compensation Benefits

[1] Basis for Liability

Liability for injury is based not on any act or omission of the employer but on the existence of the relationship that the employee bears to the employment [Bell v. Industrial Vangas, Inc. (1981) 30 Cal. 3d 268, 277, 179 Cal. Rptr. 30, 637 P.2d 266] . Determination of whether there is a sufficient relationship to impose liability cannot be determined simply from technical contractual or common law conceptions of employment and must be resolved by reference to the history and purposes of the workers' compensation law [Laeng v. Workmen's Comp. Appeals Bd. (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 771, 777-778, 100 Cal. Rptr. 377, 494 P.2d 1 ; see County of Los Angeles v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1981) 30 Cal. 3d 391, 397, 179 Cal. Rptr. 214, 637 P.2d 681 ; In-Home Supportive Services v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 720, 728, 199 Cal. Rptr. 697] . For a full discussion of what constitutes an employment relationship for purposes of workers' compensation law, see § 577.22.

[2] Extent of Liability

[a] Disability and Medical Treatment

The workers' compensation laws provide for a variety of benefits to injured employees, although the benefits are limited in comparison to tort damages. Benefits include compensation for temporary disability (Lab. Code §§ 4650, 4650.5, 4652, 4653), permanent disability (Lab. Code §§ 4061 (operative for injuries occurring on and after January 1, 1991), 4062 (operative for injuries occurring on and after January 1, 1991), 4650, 4658-4660), and medical care (Lab. Code §§ 4600-4614.1). The separate statutory treatment of these benefits serves different legislative goals.Employer liability for medical and surgical services is provided in major part to facilitate the worker's speedy recovery and to maximize his or her productive employment. Temporary disability indemnity is intended primarily to substitute for the worker's lost wages, in order to maintain a steady stream of income. Permanent disability indemnity has a dual function: to compensate both for actual incapacity to work and for physical impairment of the worker's body, which may or may not be incapacitating [Buhlert Trucking v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 1530, 1535, 247 Cal. Rptr. 190] . For discussion of benefits for medical treatment, temporary disability, and permanent disability, see discussion under § 577.45.

[b] Death Benefits

The death of an injured employee does not affect the employer's liability under Lab. Code § 4600 et seq. (relating to medical and hospital treatment) or Lab. Code § 4650 et seq. (relating to disability payments), but neither temporary nor permanent disability payments may be made for any period of time subsequent to the employee's death. Any accrued and unpaid compensation must be paid to the dependents or, if there are no dependents, to the deceased employee's personal representative or heirs or other persons entitled to it, without administration [Lab. Code § 4700]. A survivor's entitlement to a deceased employee's accrued and unpaid compensation does not diminish a survivor's entitlement to full statutory death benefits [Lab. Code § 4702(a), (c)].

The liability of the employer for burial expenses and death benefits is provided for in Lab. Code § 4701. The death benefit allowed is set forth in Lab. Code § 4702, the death benefit payable in cases of one total dependent and additional partial dependents or two or more total dependents, in Lab. Code § 4703, the amount and duration of death benefits payable when there are totally dependent minor children, in Lab. Code § 4703.5, the WCAB's power to adjust the allocation, in Lab. Code § 4704, and the payment of accrued benefits when a dependent beneficiary dies, in Lab. Code § 4706. Payments to the Department of Industrial Relations when the employee dies without dependents is covered in Lab. Code § 4706.5 [see Atlantic Richfield Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1982) 31 Cal. 3d 715, 727, 182 Cal. Rptr. 778, 644 P.2d 1257] .

The court of appeal has held that Lab. Code § 4702(a)(6)(B), which provides that, when a worker without dependents suffers a fatal industrial injury, the employer must pay $250,000 to the deceased worker's estate as a workers' compensation death benefit, is unconstitutional because the constitutional enabling provision, Cal. Const., art. XIV, § 4, does not identify estates as a class of beneficiaries entitled to workers' compensation death benefits, but rather identifies only three classes of beneficiaries of workers' compensation benefits, workers, dependents, and the State of California [Six Flags, Inc. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2006) 145 Cal. App. 4th 91, 93-94, 51 Cal. Rptr. 3d 377]. Subsequently, the court of appeal annulled an Appeals Board order requiring an employer to pay a full $125,000 death benefit to the Death Without Dependents Unit pursuant to Lab. Code § 4706.5(a), when the court found that the employer had paid a deceased employee's mother/heir death benefits of $104,208 pursuant to Lab. Code § 4702(a)(6)(B). The employer had ceased such payments following the decision in Six Flags, discussed above. Because death benefits were paid to the decedent's heir pursuant to Lab. Code § 4702(a)(6)(B) before it was declared unconstitutional, the Death Without Dependents Unit was not entitled to be paid any death benefit [City of Los Angeles v. Workers' Comop. Appeals Bd. (Foster) (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 134, 146151, 101 Cal. Rptr. 3d 513].

The person to whom the death benefit is paid for the use of several beneficiaries must apply it in compliance with the findings and directions of the WCAB [Lab. Code § 4705]. Special provisions apply when the deceased employee was a member of the Public Employees' Retirement System [see Lab. Code §§ 4707, 4708], to dependents of a deceased peace or law enforcement officer, an officer or employee of the Department of Corrections or the Department of Youth Authority, or a firefighter [see Lab. Code § 4709], and to the assassination of an elected public official [see Lab. Code §§ 4720-4728].

[3] Employer's Obligation to Secure Payment of Compensation

Every employer other than the State of California is required to secure the payment of workers' compensation [Lab. Code § 3700]. No part of thecost may be charged against the employee [see Lab. Code §§ 3751, 3752; Muffett v. Royster (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 289, 301 n.6, 195 Cal. Rptr. 73 ; Ralphs Grocery Co. v. Superior Court (2003) 112 Cal. App. 4th 1090, 1101-1102 (employee stated cause of action in alleging that employer violated Lab. Code § 3751 by including workers' compensation costs incurred by store as one element in calculation of employee incentive bonus)]. For example, Lab. Code § 3751 has been held to bar freight transportation companies from requiring independent contractor truck owners/operators to pay the costs of their own workers' compensation insurance, when the parties had elected under Lab. Code § 4150 to come under the workers' compensation law's compensation provisions, which include Lab. Code § 3751 [Albillo, et al. v. Intermodal Container Services, Inc.; Montoya v. W.C.A.B. (2003) 114 Cal. App. 4th 190, 197-207, 8 Cal. Rptr. 3d 350] . Payment must be secured by the employer's:

- Being insured for workers' compensation liability by an insurer authorized to write this kind of insurance in California [Lab. Code § 3700(a)]; or

- Securing a certificate of consent to self-insure either as an individual employer or as one employer in a group of employers [Lab. Code § 3700(b), (c); see Self-Insurers' Security Fund v. ESIS, Inc. (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 1148, 1156, 251 Cal. Rptr. 693] .

An employer can secure the payment of compensation on employees provided to the employer through an agreement with another employer, by entering into a valid and enforceable agreement with the other employer under which the other employer agrees to obtain, and does obtain, workers' compensation coverage for those employees [Lab. Code § 3602(d)]. In such cases, both employers will be considered to have secured the payment of compensation [Lab. Code § 3602(d)]. Employers who comply with this rule will not be subject to civil, criminal, or other penalties for failure to provide workers' compensation coverage or tort liability in the event an employee is injured, but may, in the absence of compliance, be subject to all three [Lab. Code § 3602(d)].

The means by which a private self-insurer provides compensation is detailed in Lab. Code § 3701. The statutory obligation to secure payment commences with the inception of employer status, and the duty must be discharged before the necessity for payment of any award arises [Self-Insurers' Security Fund v. ESIS, Inc. (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 1148, 1156, 251 Cal. Rptr. 693] . An employer who does not purchase insurance or qualify as a self-insurer is illegally uninsured, and numerous penalties and consequences may flow from this illegality [Self-Insurers' Security Fund v. ESIS, Inc. (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 1148, 1157, 251 Cal. Rptr. 693 ; see discussion under § 577.13[4]].

[4] Failure to Secure Payment of Compensation

[a] Criminal and Civil Penalties

The failure to secure the payment of compensation by one who knew, or because of his or her business knowledge or experience should be reasonably expected to have known, of the obligation to do so is a misdemeanor [Lab. Code § 3700.5; see Muffett v. Royster (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 289, 300 n.5, 195 Cal. Rptr. 73] . Furthermore, an injured employee or a deceased employee's dependents (as well as a "qualified alien" and his or her dependents) may sue an uninsured employer for damages for the injury or death as if the workers' compensation law did not apply [Lab. Code § 3706; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 15740(b); see discussion in subpart B, § 577.312[2]; see also § 577.522[1]].

One court of appeal, with a strong dissent, has held that, since the duty to secure the payment of compensation is imposed on employers, the word "one," as used in Lab. Code § 3700.5, means an employer; and that the behavior proscribed by Lab. Code § 3700.5 is confined to the employer's nonfeasance, or, in certain instances, the nonfeasance of those who control the employer by virtue of their shareholder or parent status, and cannot be expanded to impose liability on one who does not already possess a duty under the statutory scheme to secure the payment of compensation; that is, the statute does not extend to officers and managing employees of a corporate employer [Self-Insurers' Security Fund v. ESIS, Inc. (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 1148, 1156, 1158-1159, 251 Cal. Rptr. 693] . The same court further held that the purpose of Lab. Code § 3700.5 is to secure the payment of compensation in the first instance, that prosecution under this statute would occur only when an employer was illegally uninsured, and that, once the obligation to secure payment of compensation is satisfied, Lab. Code § 3700.5 does not apply to punish employers and their managers for inaccurately estimating liabilities or otherwise submitting incomplete annual reports, the penalties and remedies for which are provided for in other statutes [Self-Insurers' Security Fund v. ESIS, Inc. (1988) 204 Cal. App.

In addition to any other remedies provided by law, the Director of Industrial Relations may enforce a judgment against an uninsured employer by nonjudicial foreclosure of property not subject to Code Civ. Proc. § 703.010 et seq. (exemptions) [see Lab. Code § 3716.3]. Furthermore, if an employer has failed to secure compensation as required by Lab. Code § 3700, the Director must issue a stop order prohibiting the use of labor by that employer until the employer complies with Lab. Code § 3700 [Lab. Code § 3710.1; see Lab. Code § 3710.3 (transmission of stop order to Public Utilities Commission (PUC) or the Department of Motor Vehicles, whichever has jurisdiction over the affected carrier); see also Pub. Util. Code §§ 1033.8(a), 5285.5(a), 5378.7(a) (PUC's authority to investigate and impose appropriate penalties, including suspension of operating authoritywhen Director has issued stop order to carrier regulated by PUC)]. An employer may protest the issuance of a stop order according to the procedures set forth in Lab. Code § 3710.1.

The court of appeal has held that a penalty assessed against an employer for failure to have workers' compensation coverage would not be set aside, when the insurer had notified the employer that coverage would be canceled unless all past-due premiums were made by a specified date, the employer paid only a portion of that premium, so that on the date of the penalty assessment the employer had no coverage in effect, and the fact that, subsequently, coverage was reinstated retroactively to include the date of the penalty assessment could not rewrite history to establish that the lapse had not occurred and to invalidate the penalty assessment [Leo's Assocs., Inc. v. Department of Indus. Relations (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 628, 631-632, 15 Cal. Rptr. 3d 594] .

[b] Uninsured Employers Benefits Trust Fund

Except for certain residential employees [see Lab. Code §§ 3351(d), 3715(a), (b)], the employee or the deceased employee's dependents may also apply to the Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (WCAB) for an award of workers' compensation benefits. If the WCAB awards benefits and the employer neither pays the award nor furnishes a bond to secure payment of the award, the award will be paid from the Uninsured Employers Benefits Trust Fund [see Lab. Code §§ 3715, 3716; see also Lab. Code § 5106 (order for lump-sum payment of present worth of benefits to be paid in future installments)]. The fund may pay the claimant only such benefits allowed, however, recognizing proper liens on them that would have accrued against an employer properly insured for workers' compensation liability, and is not liable for any penalties or interest on any awards [Lab. Code § 3716.2; see Duncan v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 294, 300-304, 82 Cal. Rptr. 3d 664 (limitation of liability specified by Lab. Code § 3716.2 precludes imposition of sanction against UEBTF pursuant to Lab. Code § 5813 for bad-faith actions or tactics that are frivolous or intended solely to cause unnecessary delay)]. Alternatively, the Director of Industrial Relations, as administrator of the fund, may resolve the claim for benefits by compromise and release or stipulated findings and award if the WCAB has jurisdiction over the employer and the employer has been given notice and an opportunity to object [see Lab. Code § 3715(e)].

The UEBTF may not be joined in any proceedings unless a legal person or entity has been identified as an illegally uninsured employer in an application and special notice of lawsuit and that employer has been served with the application and special notice of lawsuit in the manner provided for service of summons in the Code of Civil Procedure [Rea v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 625, 644-652, 25 Cal. Rptr. 3d 828 ; see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 415.10, 415.20, 415.30, 415.40, 415.50].

A findings and award of compensation benefits that is the subject of a demand on the fund, or an approved compromise and release or stipulated findings and award entered into by the Director of Industrial Relations pursuant to Lab. Code § 3715(e), or a decision and order of the rehabilitation unit of the Division of Industrial Accidents (now the Division ofWorkers' Compensation) [see Lab. Code § 110(c)] that has become final, constitutes a liquidated claim for damages against the employer in the amount ascertained and fixed by the WCAB. The WCAB must certify the same to the Director who may then institute a civil action against the employer or obtain a judgment against the employer pursuant to Lab. Code § 5806 (entry of judgment by superior court clerk in conformity with certified copy of WCAB's order, decision or award filed with court by any party affected by it) [Lab. Code § 3717(a)]. In an action like this, the total amount of the award, including interest, other penalties, and attorney's fees granted by the award, must be sought, and recovery of awarded benefits in excess of the amounts paid the claimant by the fund must be paid over to the injured employee or the employee's representative as the case may be [Lab. Code § 3716.2; see also Self-Insurers' Security Fund v. ESIS, Inc. (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 1148, 1157-1158, 251 Cal. Rptr. 693 (discussing foregoing, as well as additional, penalties and tracing statutory history); Lab. Code § 3716.4 (when final judgment is entered under Lab. Code § 3716.2 against carrier regulated by Public Utilities Commission (PUC) or Department of Motor Vehicles, Director may transmit copy of judgment to PUC or the Department of Motor Vehicles, whichever has jurisdiction over the affected carrier, with complaint requesting that the carrier's certificate of public convenience and necessity or permit be immediately revoked); Pub. Util. Code §§ 1033.8(b), (c), 5285.6(b), (c), 5379.7(b), (c) (procedures when PUC receives complaint from Director)].

An uninsured employer's obligation to reimburse the Uninsured Employers Benefits Trust Fund for an award of workers' compensation benefits that the UEBTF paid to an injured employee is not an excise tax for purposes of federal bankruptcy law and is, therefore, dischargeable in bankruptcy proceedings [George v. Uninsured Employers Fund (9th Cir. 2004) 361 F.3d 1157, 1162-1164] .

In one case a plaintiff against whose property a lien had been filed by the UEF [now called the UEBTF] sued individual employees of the UEF to recover damages, alleging a federal civil rights claim and several state law claims. The trial court found that the federal claim was barred by the statute of limitations and that, on the state claims, the defendants were immune from suit. The case had arisen when an employee of another employer (not the plaintiff), who was using the plaintiff's contractor's license number without the plaintiff's consent, was injured. That employer had no workers' compensation insurance. The UEF paid benefits to the injured employee, then filed a lien on the plaintiff's residence. The court of appeal ruled that the plaintiff's federal civil rights claim was barred by the statute of limitations and that the state-law claims were barred by the California Government Claims Act, specifically by Gov. Code § 821.6 [Javor v. Taggart (2002) 98 Cal. App. 4th 795, 799-800, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 174] .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Administrative Actions
1. General Principles of Workers' Compensation Law

51-577 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 577.14

§ 577.14 General Definitions

[1] Compensation

As used in the workers' compensation law, "compensation" includes every benefit or payment conferred by that law on an injured employee, or on his or her dependents in the event of the employee's death, without regard to negligence [Lab. Code § 3207; see Adams v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1976) 18 Cal. 3d 226, 231, 133 Cal. Rptr. 517, 555 P.2d 303 ; Knopfer v. Flournoy (1973) 34 Cal. App. 3d 318, 320, 109 Cal. Rptr. 892] .

[2] Dependency

[a] In General

For purposes of awarding benefits for the death of a covered employee, dependency is defined as reliance on another person for total or partial support. Total dependents are those who at the time of injury are supported solely by the decedent or who have a legal right to look to the decedent for their entire support. Partial dependents are those who at the time of the injury are partially supported by the decedent or who have a legal right to look to the decedent for partial support, but have some means of support other than the deceased's contributions [see Mendoza v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1976) 54 Cal. App. 3d 820, 823-824, 127 Cal. Rptr. 173] .

No person is a dependent of any deceased employee unless, in good faith, he or she is a member of the family or household of the employee, or unless the person bears to the employee the relation of husband or wife, child, posthumous child, adopted child, stepchild, grandchild, father or mother, father-in-law or mother-in-law, grandfather or grandmother, brother or sister, uncle or aunt, brother-in-law or sister-in-law, or nephew or niece [Lab. Code § 3503; see Donovan v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1982) 138 Cal. App. 3d 323, 328-329, 187 Cal. Rptr. 869 (mere occupation of same residence does not confer status of dependency under Lab. Code § 3503)]. In allowing death benefits, the Legislature is not limited to dependents with a legal or moral claim to support from the deceased employee, but may, as it has done, extend the benefit to those whose maintenance has been voluntarily and gratuitously assumed by the employee [Wings West Airlines v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1047, 1051, 232 Cal. Rptr.

Dependency is determined as of the date of the employee's injury [Lab. Code §§ 3501, 3502; see Wings West Airlines v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1047, 1051, 232 Cal. Rptr. 343 ; Donovan v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1982) 138 Cal. App. 3d 323, 329 n.6, 187 Cal. Rptr. 869 ; Roblyer v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1976) 62 Cal. App. 3d 574, 580, 133 Cal. Rptr. 246] . In cases involving cumulative injuries, the "time of injury" set forth in Lab. Code § 3502 has the same meaning as the "date of injury" set forth in Lab. Code § 5412 [Department of the California Highway Patrol v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1995) 33 Cal. App. 4th 1828, 1836, 40 Cal. Rptr. 2d 188] .

[i] Children

A child under 18 years of age, or a child of any age found by any trier of fact, whether contractual, administrative, regulatory, or judicial, to be physically or mentally incapacitated from earning, is conclusively presumed to be wholly dependent for support on a deceased employee-parent with whom the child was living at the time of the injury resulting in the parent's death or for whose maintenance the parent was legally liable at the time of the injury resulting in the parent's death, if there is no surviving totally dependent parent [Lab. Code § 3501(a); see Arp v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1977) 19 Cal. 3d 395, 410, 138 Cal. Rptr. 293, 563 P.2d 849] .

[ii] Spouses

For injuries occurring on or after January 1, 1990, a spouse to whom a deceased employee is married at the time of death is conclusively presumed to be wholly dependent for support on the deceased employee if the surviving spouse earned $30,000 or less in the 12 months immediately preceding the death [Lab. Code § 3501(b)].

[c] Actual Dependency

In all other cases, questions of entire or partial dependency and questions as to who are dependents and the extent of their dependency are determined in accordance with the facts as they exist at the time of the employee's injury [Lab. Code § 3502].

Actual dependency in fact, as opposed to presumptive dependency, is determined by the support actually given by the deceased and the extent of the dependent's reliance on that support [see Mendoza v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1976) 54 Cal. App. 3d 820, 824, 127 Cal. Rptr. 173 (partial dependency on income of deceased siblings established)]. For example, in a case requiring a determination of when parents should be considered "partial dependents" of their adult children living at home, for purposes of recovering death benefits, the court concluded that the deceased adult child had to have been providing a net financial benefit to the household, deducting first those costs attributable solely to the deceased. In that case, the adult child had been paying his parents $150 per month. Unrebutted testimony indicated that the monthly cost of the child's food exceeded this amount. Thus, said the court, the child's monthly payment, while making him less dependent on them, did not make them dependent on him. Expressing the same point another way, the court noted that, following the child's death, the household's monthly food bill decreased by more than the $150 that the child had been contributing to the household income. Consequently, the parents were not eligible to receive death benefits [Smith v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 560, 568-570, 117 Cal. Rptr. 2d 420] .

[3] Injury and Compensability

[a] In General

As used in the workers' compensation law, "injury" includes any injury or disease arising out of the employment [Lab.

Code § 3208; see J. T. Thorp, Inc. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1984) 153 Cal. App. 3d 327, 332-333, 200 Cal. Rptr. 219] . The term includes:

- any disease that may be infectious, contagious, or the product or aggravation of a discogenic disease [Chavez v. Workmen's Comp. Appeals Bd. (1973) 31 Cal. App. 3d 5, 11, 106 Cal. Rptr. 853] ;

- illnesses such as heart disease that may result from the cumulative effect of each day's strain [Chavez v. Workmen's Comp. Appeals Bd. (1973) 31 Cal. App. 3d 5, 8-10, 12 n.6, 106 Cal. Rptr. 853] ;

- a psychoneurotic injury caused by the work environment [Baker v. Workmen's Comp. Appeals Bd. (1971) 18 Cal. App. 3d 852, 861, 96 Cal. Rptr. 279] ; and

- a psychiatric injury sustained in the course of the worker's employment [see Cooper v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1985) 173 Cal. App. 3d 44, 48-49, 218 Cal. Rptr. 783 ; see also discussion under § 577.140[3][d]].

A number of statutes define "injury" to include certain illnesses or disabilities that manifest themselves during employment with respect to specified workers [see Lab. Code §§ 3212, 3213; see also Lab. Code § 3208.05 ("injury" includes a reaction to or a side effect arising from health care provided by an employer to a health care worker that is intended to prevent the development or manifestation of any bloodborne disease, illness, syndrome, or condition recognized as occupationally incurred by Cal/OSHA, the Federal Centers for Disease Control, or other appropriate governmental entities)].

The California Supreme Court has stated that a compensable injury is an injury that causes disability or the need for medical treatment when the disability or need for medical treatment is occupationally related, and that a compensable injury may be physical, emotion, or both, so long as the injury is disabling [Livitsanos v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 744, 752-753, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 808, 828 P.2d 1195] .

[b] Specific Versus Cumulative Injuries

An injury may be either "specific," occurring as the result of one incident or exposure that causes disability or the need for medical treatment, or "cumulative," occurring as repetitive mentally or physically traumatic activities extending over a period of time, the combined effect of which causes disability or the need for medical treatment [Lab. Code § 3208.1; see Bassett-McGregor v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 1102, 1110, 252 Cal. Rptr. 868 ; J. T. Thorp, Inc. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1984) 153 Cal. App. 3d 327, 332-333, 200 Cal. Rptr. 219 ; Chavez v. Workmen's Comp. Appeals Bd. (1973) 31 Cal. App. 3d 5, 7-9, 11, 106 Cal. Rptr. 853] .

An employee who suffers from a cumulative injury may invoke the rights and benefits provided under the workers' compensation laws if the cumulative effects of the repetitive events result in a compensable injury, i.e., one resulting in lost wages or the need for medical treatment [Western Growers Ins. Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 227, 234, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 26] . Under Lab. Code § 3208.1, an injury causing a need for medical treatment is compensable even in the absence of disability [Western Growers Ins. Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 227, 236, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 26] .

In any given case, there can be more than one injury, either specific or cumulative, or a combination of both, arising from the same event or from separate events. The number and nature of the injuries sustained are questions of fact for the WCJ or the WCAB. For example, one exposure may result in two distinct injuries, posing a question of fact for the WCJ or the WCAB. The nature and number of injuries suffered are determined by the events leading to the injury, the employee's medical history, and the medical testimony received [Western Growers Ins. Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 227, 234-235, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 26 (stating that employee who suffered nervous breakdown, and also developed ulcer, as result of work-related stress would have two distinct injuries from one exposure)].

[c] Date of Injury

[i] In General

Determining the date of injury is important because the date of injury is one of the events that may commence the running of the statute of limitations for recovery of medical or disability benefits [see Lab. Code §§ 5404, 5405, 5407; see also § 577.25[2]]. The date of injury is also relevant to determination of the applicability of those statutes amended and enacted by 1989 Stats., chs. 892 and 893, and the corresponding regulations [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10100-10137], which apply only to injuries occurring on or after January 1, 1990 [see discussion under § 577.10].

[ii] Specific Injuries

The date of injury is the date during the employment on which the alleged incident or exposure occurred for the consequences of which compensation is claimed [Lab. Code § 5411].

[iii] Cumulative Injuries

In cases of occupational diseases or cumulative injuries, however, the date of injury is the date on which the employee first suffered disability from the disease or injury and either knew, or in the exercise of reasonable diligence should have known, that the disability was caused by his or her present or prior employment [Lab. Code § 5412; see Lab. Code § 3208.1; see also Bassett-McGregor v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 1102, 1110, 252 Cal. Rptr. 868 ; J. T. Thorp, Inc. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1984) 153 Cal. App. 3d 327, 336, 341-342, 200 Cal. Rptr. 219 ; Hanna v. Workmen's Comp. Appeals Bd. (1973) 32 Cal. App. 3d 719, 722, 108 Cal. Rptr. 227] . Thus, for the purpose of the statute of limitations, the date of a cumulative injury requires concurrence of two elements [see Bassett-McGregor v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 1102, 1110, 252 Cal. Rptr. 868] :

- Compensable disability; and
- Knowledge of causation by the employment.

[iv] Knowledge of Injury

Whether the employee knew, or in the exercise of reasonable diligence should have known, that the disability was caused by the employment is a question of fact. The employer has the burden of proof on this issue, and the burden is not sustained merely by showing that the employee knew he or she had some symptoms [Chambers v. Workmen's Comp. App. Bd. (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 556, 559, 72 Cal. Rptr. 651, 446 P.2d 531 ; City of Fresno v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1985) 163 Cal. App. 3d 467, 471, 209 Cal. Rptr. 463] .

With respect to when the employee knew or should have known that his or her disability was industrially caused, the Court of Appeal for the Fifth Appellate District has concluded, based on prior case law and other authorities, that an applicant will not be charged with knowledge that his or her disability is job-related without medical advice to that effect, unless the nature of the disability and the applicant's training, intelligence, and qualifications are such that the applicant should have recognized the relationship between the known adverse factors involved in the employment and his or her disability [City of Fresno v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1985) 163 Cal. App. 3d 467, 473, 209 Cal. Rptr. 463] .

Division Two of the Court of Appeal for the Fourth Appellate District, however, characterizing the foregoing rule as "a bit overly expansive" in light of prior case law, said that the absence of a medical opinion confirming causation by the employment is but one important circumstance to be considered together with other circumstances in determining in a particular case whether the applicant should reasonably have known that his or her injury was industrially caused [Nielsen v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 918, 929-930, 210 Cal. Rptr. 843] . In a subsequent case, the Court of Appeal for the Fifth Appellate District noted the conflict between City of Fresno and Nielsen, but concluded that, under the standards of either case, substantial evidence supported the WCAB's determination in the case before it that the applicant knew, or in the exercise of reasonable diligence should have known, that the applicant's disability was work related more than one year prior to filing her claim for cumulative disability [Bassett-McGregor v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 1102, 1111-1113, 252 Cal. Rptr. 868] .

[v] Date of Injury Versus Fact of Injury

The date of injury and the fact of injury are not equivalent, and it is therefore possible to find that an employee has sustained a cumulative industrial injury or occupational disease without making a finding as to the date of injury when the injury has caused no temporary or permanent disability, but has resulted in a need for medical treatment [J. T. Thorp, Inc. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1984) 153 Cal. App. 3d 327, 340, 200 Cal. Rptr. 219] .

With respect to cumulative injuries, if the "date of injury" as determined pursuant to Lab. Code § 5412 is on or after January 1, 1990, the parties and counsel must comply with the workers' compensation law as revised by 1989 Stats., chs. 892 and 893, and the corresponding regulations [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10100-101370], and must use any applicable new forms promulgated by the Division of Workers' Compensation and the WCAB. The revised provisions govern, regardless of the fact that the conditions that caused the injury may have predated January 1, 1990.

[d] Psychiatric Injuries

[i] Causation; Actual Events of Employment

For injuries occurring on or after January 1, 1990, a psychiatric injury is compensable under the workers' compensation law if [Lab. Code § 3208.3(a), (b)].

- It is a mental disorder that causes disability or the need for medical treatment;

- It is diagnosed pursuant to procedures promulgated by the Administrative Director pursuant to Lab. Code § 139.2(j)(4), or, until those procedures are promulgated, it is diagnosed using the terminology and criteria of the American Psychiatric Association's Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders, Third Edition-Revised, or the terminology and diagnostic criteria of other psychiatric diagnostic manuals generally approved and accepted nationally by practitioners in the field of psychiatric medicine; and

- The employee demonstrates by a preponderance of the evidence that actual events of employment were responsible for at least 10 percent of the total causation from all sources contributing to the psychiatric injury (if the injury occurred prior to July 16, 1993) or that the actual events of employment were predominant as to all causes combined of the psychiatric injury (if the injury occurred on or after July 16, 1993).

In the case of employees whose injuries occurred on or after July 16, 1993, as the result of being a victim of a violent act or from direct exposure to a significant violent act, the employee is required to demonstrate by a preponderance of the evidence that actual events of employment were a "substantial cause" of the injury, meaning at least 35 to 40 percent of the causation from all sources combined [Lab. Code § 3208.3(b)(2), (3)]. It was the intent of the Legislature in enacting Lab. Code § 3208.3 to establish a "new and higher threshold of compensability" for psychiatric injury under the workers' compensation law [Lab. Code § 3208.3(c)]. Thus, the phrase "predominant as to all causes" in Lab. Code § 3208.3(b)(1), requires that the work-related cause of an employee's psychiatric injury be greater than 50 percent of the entire set of causal factors [Dept. of Corrections v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1999) 76 Cal. App. 4th 810, 816, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 716] .

The court of appeal has held that an employee's psychiatric injury satisfied the standard for compensability set forth in Lab. Code § 3208.3(b)(1) only if it was proven that events of employment were predominant as to all causes combined of the psychiatric disability taken as a whole. The court found that the legislative history of the statute indicated that the Appeals Board's award of benefits, even though the AME had found that the employee's overall psychiatric injury was only 35-percent industrially caused but stated that one of three separate diagnoses was caused exclusively by industrial factors, was contrary to the legislature's intention [Sonoma State University v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 500, 504-506, 48 Cal. Rptr. 3d 330] .

The statutory language has been held applicable to a psychiatric injury claimed as a compensable consequence of a precipitating physical injury, and the precipitating physical injury has been held to constitute an actual event of employment. That is, a consequential psychiatric injury is compensable if and only if it is more than half attributable to the physical industrial injury [Lockheed Martin Corp. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 1237, 1249, 117 Cal. Rptr. 2d 865] .

In one case, the court of appeal annulled and remanded the Appeals Board's award of benefits to an employee for work-related psychiatric injury, when it found that only one of the four factors relied on by the Board, namely, the employee's daily interactions with angry customers of his employer, fell within the definition of actual events of employment in Lab. Code § 3208.3(b)(1), while the other three factors, namely, the downsizing of the employer, the loss of value of the employer's stock owned by the employee, and the employee's concern about his employer's future and his retirement funds, did not fall within the definition of actual events of employment. The court concluded that a reasonable probability existed that, but for the error, the Board would not have concluded that actual events of the employee's employment were predominant as to all causes combined of psychiatric injury [Pacific Gas & Electric v. W.C.A.B. (Bryan) (2004) 114 Cal. App. 4th 1174, 1182-1184, 8 Cal. Rptr. 3d 467] .

In another case, the court of appeal held that an employee did not suffer psychiatric injury AOE/COE as a result of actual events of employment that were predominant as to all causes combined, when it found that substantial evidence supported the Appeals Board's factual findings that the employee's supervisor and co-workers did not persecute or harass her and that it was the employee who caused a stressful work environment by being rude, inflexible, easily upset, and demeaning toward other employees. Moreover, said the court of appeal, the fact that the employee subjectively misperceived as harassment the disdainful reaction of her co-workers to her mistreatment of them did not entitle her to workers' compensation benefits for psychiatric injury, since the disdainful reactions of co-workers to the employee's abusive conduct toward them were neither "actual events of employment" nor the "predominant" cause of the employee's psychiatric injury. Rather, the predominant cause of the employee's injury was the employee herself, through her intentional abuse of her co-workers, whereas the "actual events of employment" language of Lab. Code § 3208.3(b)(1) required the employee to establish objective evidence of harassment, persecution, or other basis for the alleged psychiatric injury [Verga v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2008) 159 Cal. App. 4th 174, 183-189, 70 Cal. Rptr. 3d 871].

The California Supreme Court has held the provisions of Lab. Code § 3208.3 inapplicable to members of the California Public Employees' Retirement System (PERS). In this case, a public employee's application for disability retirement, alleging cumulative workplace trauma, including psychiatric injury, had been approved without a finding as to whether the psychiatric injury was industrial in character. The employee petitioned the Appeals Board, pursuant to Gov. Code § 21166, for a finding of fact on that issue, since public employee disability retirement benefits based on industrial injury are substantially higher than those based on non-industrial injury. Gov. Code § 21166 mandates that in such situations theAppeals Board use "the same procedure as in workers' compensation hearings" to "determine whether the disability is industrial." The Court held that this language merely directs the Appeals Board to use its fact-finding apparatus, including rights of notice, hearing, and representation by counsel, to make this determination. The statutory language does not, said the Court, direct the Appeals Board to apply workers' compensation substantive law, specifically not Lab. Code § 3208.3's high threshold for finding a psychiatric injury to be industrial. Rather, Gov. Code § 20046's lower threshold of disability, "as a result of injury or disease arising out of and in the course of ... employment," governs [Pearl v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2001) 26 Cal. 4th 189, 194-198, 109 Cal. Rptr. 2d 308, 26 P.3d 1044 ; see also Abraham v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2003) 113 Cal. App. 4th 1082, 1087-1089, 6 Cal. Rptr. 3d 820 (superior court had no jurisdiction to review Appeals Board decision when Board jurisdiction was invoked, pursuant to Gov. Code § 21166, for determination as to whether disability of public safety employee, member of Public Employees Retirement System, was industrial)].

[ii] Six-Month Rule

Notwithstanding any other provision of the workers' compensation law, workers' compensation will not be paid for a psychiatric injury related to a claim against an employer unless the employee has been employed by that employer for at least six months. The six months of employment need not be continuous [Lab. Code § 3208.3(d)]. The six-month minimum employment period of Lab. Code § 3208.3(d) does not apply, however, if the psychiatric injury is caused by a sudden and extraordinary employment condition [Matea v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 1435, 1447-1450, 51 Cal. Rptr. 3d 314 (employee met his burden of establishing that he suffered psychiatric injury as result of sudden and extraordinary employment condition, making psychiatric injury compensable even though it occurred during first six months of employment, when court of appeal found that lumber falling into aisle and onto employee's leg was such uncommon, unusual, and totally unexpected event that it would naturally be expected to cause psychic disturbances even in diligent and honest employee)]. Lab. Code § 3208.3(d) may not be construed to authorize an employee or the dependents of an employee to bring an action at law or equity for damages against an employer for a psychiatric injury, when those rights would not exist pursuant to the exclusive remedy doctrine [see Lab. Code § 3602] in the absence of the amendment of Lab. Code § 3208.3 by 1991 Stats., ch. 115 [Lab. Code § 3208.3(d)].

The court of appeal has held that the rule regarding six months of employment applies to all claims of injury to the psyche (other than those subject to the statutory exception of having been caused by "a sudden and extraordinary employment condition"), including those claimed to have arisen out of physical industrial injuries [Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2003) 112 Cal. App. 4th 1435, 1441-1443, 5 Cal. Rptr. 3d 822] .

[iii] Post-Termination Claims

When the claim for compensation is filed after notice of termination of employment or layoff, including voluntary layoff, and the claim is for an injury occurring on or after July 16, 1993, and prior to the time of the notice, no compensation is payable unless the employee demonstrates by a preponderance of the evidence that actual events of employment werepredominant as to all causes combined of the psychiatric injury and that one or more of the following conditions exist [Lab. Code § 3208.3(e)]:

- Sudden and extraordinary events of employment were the cause of the injury.

- The employer has notice of the psychiatric injury prior to the notice of termination or layoff.

- The employee's medical records compiled prior to notice of termination of layoff contain evidence of treatment of the psychiatric injury.

- On a finding of sexual or racial harassment by any trier of fact, whether contractual, administrative, regulatory, or judicial.

- Evidence that the date of injury is subsequent to the date of the notice of termination or layoff, but prior to the effective date of the termination or layoff.

A notice of termination or layoff that is not followed within 60 days by a termination or layoff is not subject to the provisions, discussed above, and these provisions do not apply until receipt of a later notice of termination or layoff. The issuance of frequent notices of termination or layoff to an employee is considered a bad faith personnel action and makes the foregoing provisions inapplicable to the employee [Lab. Code § 3208.3(g)].

[iv] Good Faith Personnel Actions

No compensation is payable by an employer for a psychiatric injury that was substantially caused by a lawful, nondiscriminatory, good faith personnel action. The burden of proof rests with the party asserting the issue [Lab. Code § 3208.3(h)].

The Court of Appeal has interpreted this statutory language in a manner that allows for an employer's mistake. The employer had demoted an employee as part of an employer-wide reduction in force and after the employee's supervisor had led him to believe that his demotion might be avoidable. The court held that the correct legal standard is whether the employer made and carried out a regular and routine personnel decision with subjective good faith and whether the employer's actions were objectively reasonable. Here, the demotion was shown to have been justified by the employer's fiscal concerns and not to have been the product of an unlawful animus toward the employee, even if the employer had made mistakes in carrying out the demotion and attempting to protect the employee from demotion [City of Oakland v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2002) 99 Cal. App. 4th 261, 267-270, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 873] .

In a case involving an employee who alleged psychiatric injury caused by allegations against him of racial discrimination against a fellow employee and by the employer's subsequent investigation of those allegations, the Court of Appeal concluded that the WCAB's finding that the investigation did not constitute a lawful, nondiscriminatory, good faith personnel action was not supported by substantial evidence. The court noted that the employer's investigation was mandated by law, that racial discrimination in employment is prohibited by both state and federal law, that the prohibition against workplace racial discrimination is a fundamental public policy, and that the employer's duty to prevent harassment and discrimination is affirmative and mandatory. That the employer was later, after investigating the racial discrimination claim, unable to substantiate the accusation did not remove the investigation from the realm of good faith employer personnel actions. There was no evidence, said the court, of an arbitrary or unlawful motive for the employer's investigation. Nor was there any evidence of an intent to mislead, deceive, or defraud or of collusion or unlawful design by an employee of the employer in the investigation [Northrop Grumman Corp. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2002) 103 Cal. App. 4th 1021, 1035-1037, 127 Cal. Rptr. 2d 285] .

[e] Multiple and Successive Injuries

When disability, need for medical treatment, or death results from the combined effects of two or more injuries, whether specific, cumulative, or both, all questions of fact and law must be separately determined with respect to each injury, including, but not limited to, the apportionment between the injuries of liability for disability benefits, the cost of medical treatment, and any death benefit [Lab. Code § 3208.2; see Lab. Code § 5303; see also Aetna Cas. & Surety Co. v. Workmen's Comp. Appeals Bd. (1973) 35 Cal. App. 3d 329, 332-343, 110 Cal. Rptr. 780 ; Chavez v. Workmen's Comp. Appeals Bd. (1973) 31 Cal. App. 3d 5, 9-10, 106 Cal. Rptr. 853] . For example, if an employee becomes disabled, is off work, and then returns to work and again becomes disabled, there is a question of fact as to whether the new disability is due to the old injury or to the new and separate injury [Western Growers Ins. Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 227, 234, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 26] .

The purpose of Lab. Code §§ 3208.2 and 5303 is to preclude the cumulation of injuries subject to separate statutory remedies in a single claim so as to escape the bar of the statute of limitations (discussed under § 577.25) [Wilkinson v. Workers' Comp Appeals Bd. (1977) 19 Cal. 3d 491, 501-502 n.5, 138 Cal. Rptr. 696, 564 P.2d 848 ; Buhlert Trucking v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 1530, 1539, 247 Cal. Rptr. 190] . Lab. Code §§ 3208.2 and 5303 are unrelated to the substantive law of apportionment governed by Lab. Code §§ 4663 and 4750 [4750 repealed in 2004], which govern liability for permanent disability caused by successive injuries [see Wilkinson v. Workers' Comp Appeals Bd. (1977) 19 Cal. 3d 491, 501-502 n.5, 138 Cal. Rptr. 696, 564 P.2d 848 ; Buhlert Trucking v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 1530, 1535, 1538, 247 Cal. Rptr. 190 ; but see Benson v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2007) 72 Cal. Comp. Cases 1620, 1622, 1634-1635 (Appeals Board en banc opinion) (rule established by Wilkinson v. W.C.A.B., which provided that injured worker who, while employed by same employer, sustained two separate injuries to same part of body, which became permanent and stationary at same time, was entitled to receive combined award of permanent disability, is no longer generally applicable because inconsistent with post-SB 899 requirement that apportionment be based on causation, and in light of current versions of Lab. Code §§ 4663(a) and (c) and 4664(a), as explained by Brodie v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2007) 40 Cal. 4th 1313, 57 Cal. Rptr. 3d 644, 156 P.3d 1100 , Appeals Board must now determine and apportion to cause of disability for each industrial injury, meaning that all potential causes of disability, whether from current industrial injury, prior or subsequent industrial injury, or prior or subsequent nonindustrial injury or condition, must be taken into consideration), aff'd sub nom. Benson v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2009) 170 Cal. App. 4th 1535, 1549-1560, 89 Cal. Rptr. 3d 166 ; see also Schmidt v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 1458, 1463, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 279 (apportionment under Lab. Code § 4663 requires that part of disability would have resulted from normal progress of underlying nonindustrial disease)].

Lab. Code § 3208.2 applies to the combination of injuries, not to periods of disability. Thus, if an employee has two periods of disability, i.e., the inability to work, but these two periods are connected by a continuous need for medical treatment caused by a single work-related cumulative injury, the two periods of disability are not considered distinct, and a WCJ does not impermissibly merge the two periods in violation of § 3208.2 [Western Growers Ins. Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 227, 236-237, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 26] .

If the applicant has received a prior award of permanent disability, it is conclusively presumed that the prior permanent disability exists at the time of any subsequent industrial injury [Lab. Code § 4664(b); see Lab. Code § 4663(d) (employee who claims industrial injury required, upon request, to disclose all previous permanent disabilities or physical impairments); see also § 577.46[3][c] (physician who prepares report addressing issue of permanent disability due to claimed industrial injury must in that report address issue of causation of permanent disability)]. This presumption is a presumption affecting the burden of proof [Lab. Code § 4664(b)].

The court of appeal has held that the Appeals Board correctly determined that, pursuant to Lab. Code § 4664(b), an employee was not entitled to prove that he was medically rehabilitated from a prior permanent disability when he sustained a subsequent industrial injury, when the court found that the legislature intended the statute's presumption to be conclusive, not rebuttable, notwithstanding the second sentence in the statute, which states that this presumption affects the burden of proof. The court annulled the decision of the Appeals Board and held that the Board incorrectly determined that the employee had the burden of disproving overlap between the current permanent disability and the previous disability in order to establish his claim to permanent disability benefits. Rather, found the court, the employer, while able to rely, pursuant to Lab. Code § 4664(b), on the conclusive presumption that the employee's permanent disability that was the subject of the prior award existed at the time of the subsequent industrial injury, nonetheless had the burden of proving overlap in order to establish its right to apportionment of the employee's permanent disability [Kopping v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 1099, 1106-1115, 48 Cal. Rptr. 3d 618] .

In 2006, the legislature amended Lab. Code § 4663 to provide that the statute's apportionment provisions do not apply to injuries or illnesses covered under Lab. Code §§ 3212 through 3213.2 [Lab. Code § 4663(e)]. Moreover, in adding this provision to the statute, the legislature stated that its intent was that this act be construed as declaratory of existing law [Stats. 2006, ch. 836, § 2].

Since April 19, 2004, the accumulation of all permanent disability awards issued with respect to any one region of the body in favor of one individual employee cannot exceed 100 percent over the employee's lifetime, unless the employee's injury or illness is conclusively presumed to be total in character pursuant to Lab. Code § 4662 [Lab. Code § 4664(c)(1)]. As used in this statute, the regions of the body are [Lab. Code § 4664(c)(1)]:

- (A) Hearing.
- (B) Vision.
- (C) Mental and behavioral disorders.
- (D) The spine.
- (E) The upper extremities, including the shoulders.
- (F) The lower extremities, including the hip joints.
- (G) The head, face, cardiovascular system, respiratory system, and all other systems or regions of the body not listed in (A) through (F).

Nothing in this statute is to be construed to permit the permanent disability rating for each individual injury sustained by an employee arising from the same industrial accident, when added together, to exceed 100 percent [Lab. Code § 4664(c)(2)].

SB 899, effective April 19, 2004, contained Section 47, which stated that SB 899 "shall not constitute good cause to reopen or rescind, alter, or amend any existing order, decision, or award." The court of appeal has held that there was no "existing order, decision, or award" in the case before the court, within the meaning of Section 47 of SB 899, and that the legislature intended Section 47's language to be consistent with the general rule that statutory rights end during litigation with repeal or amendment of the statute unless appeals were exhausted and a final judgment existed. The court held that reopening in workers' compensation generally refers to reopening orders, decisions, or awards for new and further disability under Lab. Code § 5410 and that the Section 47 language incorporated the language of good cause needed under the Appeals Board's continuing jurisdiction to rescind, alter, or amend an order, decision, or award under Lab. Code §§ 5803 and 5804. Lab. Code §§ 5410, 5803, and 5804, said the court, normally apply to orders, decisions, or awards that are beyond the reconsideration period or when appeals have been exhausted and the decision is final and no longer pending, and applying apportionment under new Lab. Code §§ 4663 and 4664 in the present case did not reopen, rescind, alter, or amend a previous "existing order, decision, or award" of permanent disability. Thus, the employee's claims were pending and not final judgments, making Lab. Code §§ 5410, 5803, and 5804 irrelevant, and application of SB 899 was not precluded by Section 47 [Kleemann v. W.C.A.B. (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 274, 285-288, 25 Cal. Rptr. 3d 448] .

Another court of appeal, following Kleemann, affirmed an Appeals Board order that had remanded the case to the WCJ for the purpose of determining the applicability of SB 899, which had been enacted 10 days after the WCJ's order denying apportionment, when the employer petitioned for reconsideration of the WCJ's order in light of SB 899. The court of appeal held that an Appeals Board determination was not "final" for purposes of considering apportionment under SB 899 until the Board had issued a final judgment and the appellate process had been exhausted, which had not occurred in the present case, so that the language of Section 47 of SB 899 that SB 899 "shall not constitute good cause to reopen or rescind, alter, or amend any existing order, decision, or award of the Workers' Compensation Appeals Board" was no barrier to applying SB 899's apportionment provisions to the present case [Marsh v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2005) 130 Cal. App. 4th 906, 912-916, 30 Cal. Rptr. 3d 598] . Both Kleemann and Marsh were followed in another case in which the court of appeal held that repeal of former Lab. Code § 4663 was effective immediately on enactment of SB 899 on April 19, 2004, and that new Lab. Code §§ 4663 and 4664 were applicable to any case still pending, such as the present case, except those cases that were finally concluded, subject only to the Appeals Board's continuing jurisdiction under Lab. Code §§ 5803 and 5804. The court of appeal found that the language of Section 47 of SB 899, stating that SB 899 "shall not constitute good cause to reopen or rescind, alter, or amend any existing order, decision, or award," essentially tracked the continuing jurisdiction language of Lab. Code §§ 5803 and 5804. Continuing jurisdiction to reopen a case was different, said the court of appeal, from the Appeals Board's reconsideration of a "final" order of the Board or a WCJ. The court of appeal found that it could presume that the Legislature, inusing the language quoted above, was intentionally referring to the Board's continuing jurisdiction authority under Lab. Code §§ 5803 and 5804 [Rio Linda Union School District v. W.C.A.B. (Scheftner) (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 517, 525-532, 31 Cal. Rptr. 3d 789] .

In May 2007, the California Supreme Court resolved the uncertainty, generated by conflicting court of appeal opinions, regarding whether the language of Lab. Code § 4663(c), plus the language of Lab. Code § 4664(a), meant that the so-called apportionment "Formula A" adopted by the Supreme Court in Fuentes [Fuentes v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1976) 16 Cal. 3d 1, 128 Cal. Rptr. 673, 547 P.2d 449] , pursuant to which the percentage of disability attributable to the new injury is calculated by subtracting the old permanent disability rating from the new permanent disability rating, then consulting the table for the award due this difference, remained the proper method for calculating apportionment. Injured employees had argued that statutory changes made by SB 899 mandated the use of "Formula C," rejected by the Supreme Court in Fuentes, pursuant to which the dollar award for the new injury is calculated as if apportionment were not an issue, then the dollar award of the old injury is subtracted. The Supreme Court found that neither the plain language of relevant portions of SB 899 nor the legislative history of that bill evidenced any legislative intent to abandon "Formula A" [Brodie v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2007) 40 Cal. 4th 1313, 1323-1332, 57 Cal. Rptr. 3d 644, 156 P.3d 1100] .

[f] Excluded Injuries

The workers' compensation law relates to medical and/or occupational injuries, that is, to personal injuries, and to those risks to which the employee is exposed by the fact of being employed in the industry. Hence, the word "injury," as used in that law, does not include, for example, such things as damage to reputation as the result of slander [Howland v. Balma (1983) 143 Cal. App. 3d 899, 904, 192 Cal. Rptr. 286] . Nor does the law provide compensation for intentional infliction of emotional distress when no allegation of physical disability is made [McGee v. McNally (1981) 119 Cal. App. 3d 891, 895, 174 Cal. Rptr. 253 ; Renteria v. County of Orange (1978) 82 Cal. App. 3d 833, 840-842, 147 Cal. Rptr. 447] . If physical injury or disability results as well as emotional distress, however, the workers' compensation law provides the exclusive remedy for the employee [see Hollywood Refrigeration Sales Co. v. Superior Court (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 754, 758-759, 210 Cal. Rptr. 619 ; Ankeny v. Lockheed Missile & Space Co. (1979) 88 Cal. App. 3d 531, 533-536, 151 Cal. Rptr. 828 ; Lab. Code § 3208.3 (psychiatric injuries compensable under workers' compensation law); see also Cole v. Fair Oaks Fire Protection Dist. (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 148, 151, 157 n.9, 160, 162, 233 Cal. Rptr. 308, 729 P.2d 743 ; Valenzuela v. State of California (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 916, 919, 922-924, 240 Cal. Rptr. 45 ; Gates v. Trans Video Corp. (1979) 93 Cal. App. 3d 196, 204-206, 155 Cal. Rptr. 486] . For discussion of the exclusive nature of workers' compensation remedies, see § 577.310 et seq.

Language in the Supreme Court's decision in Cole v. Fair Oaks Fire Protection Dist. (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 148, 233 Cal. Rptr. 308, 729 P.2d 743 , suggests a distinction between emotional distress resulting in "disability," which is covered by workers' compensation, and emotional distress not resulting in disability. One court of appeal has concluded that the Court in Cole adopted an "alternative action theory," under which courts are required to analyze whether a tort action is authorized. Under this analysis, tort recovery is permitted if the tort plaintiff did not sustain "personal injury" within the meaning of the workers' compensation statute. If he or she did sustain "personal injury," tort recovery is denied if the injury "arose out of employment," but is otherwise permitted even if the injury is a type of harm covered by workers' compensation [Jones v. Los Angeles Community College Dist. (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 794, 805, 244 Cal. Rptr. 37] .

[4] Temporary Disability

The term "temporary disability" means an impairment of bodily function caused by industrial injury, reasonably expected to be completely curedor materially improved with proper medical attention [see Western Growers Ins. Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 227, 235, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 26 ; Chavira v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 463, 473, 286 Cal. Rptr. 600] . Temporary disability may either be partial, when the employee is able to earn some income during the healing period, or total, when the injury renders the employee unable to earn any income during that period [Herrera v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1969) 71 Cal. 2d 254, 257, 78 Cal. Rptr. 497, 455 P.2d 425 ; see Lab. Code §§ 4653-4657 (standards of payment for partial and total temporary disability)]. Temporary disability benefits are primarily intended to replace lost earnings [Western Growers Ins. Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 227, 235, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 26] . If an employee has two discrete periods of temporary disability, they are not merged into a single disability, but are treated as separate entitlements to benefits [Western Growers Ins. Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 227, 235-236, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 26] . For discussion of temporary disability benefits, see § 577.45[3] .

[5] Permanent Disability

A permanent disability is one that causes impairment of earning capacity or of normal use of a member, or results in a competitive handicap in the open labor market [Sidders v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 613, 628, 252 Cal. Rptr. 304 ; Franklin v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1978) 79 Cal. App. 3d 224, 237, 145 Cal. Rptr. 22 ; see Lab. Code § 4660(a)].

A disability is considered permanent when the employee has reached maximal improvement, meaning his or her condition is well stabilized, and unlikely to change substantially in the next year with or without medical treatment [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10152; Western Growers Ins. Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 227, 235, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 26] . If applied to a progressive occupational disease, however, the foregoing definition is inadequate. The reference to "maximum improvement" obviously refers to the more classical concept of "injury," which envisions a traumatic incident resulting in corporal injury with a period of healing to a point of greatest improvement. The term did not envision an insidious, progressive disease process that results from a remote, undramatic work exposure and is of little or no use in determining the status of such a condition [General Foundry Service v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 331, 335, 228 Cal. Rptr. 243, 721 P.2d 124] .

A disability cannot be both permanent and temporary at the same time. If a disability changes from temporary to permanent, the permanent disability is considered a new and further disability [Western Growers Ins. Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 227, 235, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 26] . Whether a disability is permanent or temporary is a question of fact [Western Growers Ins. Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 227, 236, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 26] .

Permanent disability may be either partial or total [see Lab. Code § 4662 (specific permanent disabilitites conclusively presumed total)]. Permanent disability benefits are intended to compensate an injured employee both for actual incapacity to work, and for the physical impairment suffered by the employee [Western Growers Ins. Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 227, 235, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 26] . For discussion of permanent disability benefits, see § 577.45[4].

§ 577.16 Employer's Bankruptcy

If an illegally uninsured employer petitions for bankruptcy after an employee has filed a claim for compensation benefits, an automatic stay goes into effect, barring any creditor from taking any action to collect [see 11 U.S.C. § 362(a)(1)]. Relief from the automatic stay in bankruptcy is, however, generally granted, on request, for workers' compensation proceedings [Ortiz v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1992) 4 Cal. App. 4th 392, 397, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 484] . Relief from the stay may be obtained either by stipulation with counsel or by motion before the bankruptcy court [Ortiz v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1992) 4 Cal. App. 4th 392, 397, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 484] .

An action before the WCAB to obtain judgment against an uninsured employer, which is a prerequisite to the UEBTF's obligation to pay benefits, is not barred by the bankruptcy discharge injunction. Moreover, in such situations no bankruptcy court order is necessary for the WCAB action to proceed [In re Munoz (9th Cir. 2002) 287 B.R. 546, 550, 554-556] .

§ 577.17 Serious and Willful Misconduct

[1] By Employee

When an employee's injury is caused by his or her own serious and willful misconduct, the compensation otherwise recoverable is reduced one half, except when [Lab. Code § 4551; see also 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10440]:

- The injury results in death or permanent disability of 70 percent or more;

- The injury is caused by the employer's failure to comply with any law or safety order of the Division of Occupational Safety and Health relating to the safety of places of employment; or

- The injured employee is under 16 years of age at the time of injury.

The reduction in compensation is not enforceable, valid, or binding in any respect until the WCAB has so determined by its findings and award [Lab. Code § 4552; see 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10440-10445 (relating to pleading allegations of serious and willful misconduct); §§ 577.394, 577.395].

The standard of serious and willful misconduct is the same for an employee as it is for an employer [Hawaiian Pineapple Co., Ltd. v. Ind. Acc. Com. (1953) 40 Cal. 2d 656, 664, 255 P.2d 431] . Serious and willful conduct is something more than negligence, or even gross negligence. It involves conduct of a quasi-criminal nature and the intentional doing of something either with the knowledge that it is likely to result in serious injury, or with a wanton and reckless disregard of its possible consequences [Mercer-Fraser Co. v. Industrial Acci. Com. (1953) 40 Cal. 2d 102, 117, 251 P.2d 955] . For discussion of the time limitations on proceedingsto reduce compensation on the ground of the employee's serious and willful misconduct, see § 577.25[2][e]. For discussion of the effect on compensation of an employer's serious and willful misconduct, see [2], below.

[2] By Employer

[a] In General

The amount of compensation otherwise recoverable is increased one half, together with costs and expenses not in excess of $250, when an employee is injured by reason of the serious and willful misconduct of any of the following [Lab. Code § 4553]:

- The employer or the employer's managing representative;
- If the employer is a partnership, one of the partners or a managing representative or general superintendent of the partnership; or
- If the employer is a corporation, an executive, managing officer, or general superintendent of the corporation.

Negligence of any degree, including gross negligence, does not constitute serious and willful misconduct [Mercer-Fraser Co. v. Industrial Acci. Com. (1953) 40 Cal. 2d 102, 117, 251 P.2d 955] . The employer must know of the dangerous condition, know that the probable consequences of its continuance will involve serious injury to an employee, and deliberately fail to take corrective action [Johns-Manville Sales Corp. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1979) 96 Cal. App. 3d 923, 933, 158 Cal. Rptr. 463] . When the employer's misconduct involves concealment of dangers in the workplace or a deliberate failure to assure that the workplace is safe, Lab. Code § 4553 is the sole remedy for the additional compensation, and an action at law for damages is barred [Johns-Manville Products Corp. v. Superior Court (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 465, 474, 165 Cal. Rptr. 858, 612 P.2d 948 ; see also subpart B, § 577.310 et seq.].

An increase in workers' compensation benefits due under Lab. Code § 4553 applies not only to compensation indemnity benefits, but to every benefit or payment conferred by the provisions of the Workers' Compensation Act, including non-indemnity benefits such as vocational rehabilitation, medical treatment payments and medical-legal fees [Ferguson v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1995) 33 Cal. App. 4th 1613, 1624-1626, 39 Cal. Rptr. 2d 806] . So long as an award for increased compensation calculated on the basis of all compensation received by the injured worker does not provide the injured worker more than is necessary to compensate the worker for all damages he or she sustained as a result of the willful misconduct of the employer, the award does not constitute punitive damages and is, therefore, not constitutionally excessive [Ferguson v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1995) 33 Cal. App. 4th 1613, 1624-1626, 39 Cal. Rptr. 2d 806] .

For discussion of the time limitations on proceedings to increase compensation on the ground of the employer's serious and willful misconduct, see § 577.25[2][e] . For a form of application for adjudication alleging serious and willful misconduct of an employer, see § 577.396. For discussion of the effect on compensation of an employee's serious and willful misconduct, see [1], above.

[b] Willfully Uninsured Employer

When an employer has willfully failed to secure the payment of compensation, the amount of compensation recoverable by an injured employee, or by his or her dependents in the event of the employee's death, is increased by 10 percent [Lab. Code § 4554]. The failure to secure the payment of compensation as required by statute is prima facie evidence of willfulness [Lab. Code § 4554]. An employee is not, however, entitled to a 10 percent increase in the amount of damages recovered from the employer in a civil action pursuant to Lab. Code § 3706 [Leung v. Chinese Six Companies (1992) 2 Cal. App. 4th 801, 806-807, 3 Cal. Rptr. 2d 593 ; see also discussion in subpart B, § 577.312[2]].

§ 577.18 Unlawful Discrimination

[1] Against Injured Employee

No employer may discharge, threaten to discharge, or in any way discriminate against an employee because the employee has filed or made known his or her intention to file a claim for compensation with his or her employer or an application for adjudication with the WCAB, or has received a rating, award, or settlement. An employer engaging in such discrimination is guilty of a misdemeanor, and the employee's compensation is increased by one half, but in no event more than $10,000, together withcosts and expenses not in excess of $250. In addition, the employee is entitled to reinstatement and reimbursement for lost wages and work benefits caused by the acts of the employer [Lab. Code § 132a(1)]. Lab. Code § 132a reflects a broad policy against discrimination, and therefore an employer who discriminates against an injured employee may be guilty of a violation of that section without violating any of its specific prohibitions [Judson Steel Corp. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 658, 667, 150 Cal. Rptr. 250, 586 P.2d 564] .

An injured worker discriminated against because of disability from a work related injury may bring a claim before the WCAB under Lab. Code § 132a as well as an action in state court seeking remedies under the Fair Employment and Housing Act and common-law wrongful discharge theory [City of Moorpark v. Superior Court (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1143, 1156, 1161, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 445 (overruling Portillo v. G. T. Price Products, Inc. (1982) 131 Cal. App. 3d 285, 182 Cal. Rptr. 291); see also subpart B, § 577.310 et seq.]. The statute serves a remedial function by providing some compensation to an employee who suffersdiscrimination as a result of an employment-related injury, and is to be liberally construed, as required by Lab. Code § 3202 [Judson Steel Corp. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 658, 668, 150 Cal. Rptr. 250, 586 P.2d 564 ; see Crown Appliance v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2004) 115 Cal. App. 4th 620, 9 Cal. Rptr. 3d 415 (finding that employer discriminated against employee in violation of Lab. Code § 132a, when evidence showed that employer believed employee was faking disability, that employer wanted to dismiss employee since employee returned to work on light duty, that employer's evidence of customer complaints against employee was not persuasive, and that employer terminated employee in retaliation for filing workers' compensation claim)].

The California Supreme Court has held that an employee made no prima facie showing of violation of Lab. Code § 132a when his employer refused to pay him temporary disability indemnity for time spent away from work attending medical treatment appointments, when the employee was permanent and stationary after his industrial injury, had returned to work, and received a medical treatment award. Moreover, the employee failed to show a right to prevent his employer from requiring him to use his sick leave and/or vacation leave while attending these medical appointments [Department of Rehabilitation v. W.C.A.B. (Lauher) (2003) 30 Cal. 4th 1281, 1297, 1301, 135 Cal. Rptr. 2d 665, 70 P.3d 1076] . However, the court of appeal, in a slightly different fact situation, held that an employer had discriminated against its employee, in violation of Lab. Code § 132a, by requiring the employee, who had returned to work following industrial injuries, to use earned vacation time rather than sick leave to attend medical appointments needed to care for those industrial injuries, while permitting employees with non-industrial injuries to use their sick leave for medical appointments. The court pointed out that local government entities (City of Santa Barbara in this case) and unions may not create policies that discriminate against their industrially injured employees to their detriment [Andersen v. W.C.A.B. (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 1369, 1376-1380, 57 Cal. Rptr. 3d 839] .

The court of appeal has held that an employee did not make a prima facie showing of discrimination in violation of Lab. Code § 132a in the following situation: The employee sustained an industrial injury to his neck and was taken off work by his treating physician. The reports and releases to return to work from the treating physician and the agreed medical evaluator received by the employer were unclear and ambiguous regarding the employee's ability to return to his usual and customary duties. When the agreed medical evaluator resolved that question in his 12/1/2006 deposition by testifying that he thought that the employee could probably perform his usual and customary job, the employer returned the employee to work on 1/8/2007. Because the employee presented no evidence that the employer treated him disadvantageously as a consequence of the industrial nature of his injury, as compared with how the employer treated any non-industrially injured employee, he failed to satisfy the test established in Department of Rehabilitation v. W.C.A.B. (Lauher), discussed above, for making a prima facie showing of discrimination [Gelson's Markets v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (Fowler) (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 201, 209-210, 101 Cal. Rptr. 3d 548].

Proceedings for increased compensation pursuant to Lab. Code § 132a(1) must be instituted by filing an appropriate petition with the WCAB within one year from the discriminatory act or date of termination. The WCAB has full power, authority, and jurisdiction to try and determine finally all matters specified under Lab. Code § 132a, subject only to judicial review; except that it has no jurisdiction to try and determine a misdemeanor charge against the employer. In such a case, the WCAB may refer, and any worker may complain of, suspected violations of the criminal misdemeanor provisions of Lab. Code § 132a to the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement, or directly to the office of the public prosecutor [Lab. Code § 132a; see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10447 (relating to pleadings in proceedings under Lab. Code § 132a)].

In a case not originating in the workers' compensation system, an employee's claim alleging wrongful termination in retaliation for filing a workers' compensation claim failed because the employer terminated the employee's employment for a legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason, i.e., management's loss of confidence in the employee. The court of appeal found that the employer made a statistical showing that it did not discharge employees for filing workers' compensation claims, and that, when, as here, the employee relies solely on temporal proximity in response to the employer's evidence of a non-retaliatory reason for termination, the employee does not create a triable issue as to pretext [Arteaga v. Brink's, Inc. (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 327, 356-357, 77 Cal. Rptr. 3d 654] .

In another case not originating in the workers' compensation system, an employer's policy regarding "cash out" payments of excess accumulated vacation hours to sheriff's deputies who were not on Lab. Code § 4850 leave as a result of industrial injuries, as opposed to its policy regarding such payments to deputies who were on such leave, was held by the court of appeal to discriminate against the latter group in violation of Lab. Code §§ 4850 and 132a. Any deputy who accumulated more than 320 hours of vacation time could defer the hours in excess of 320 to the following year. If those excess hours were not used by the end of that year, the employer paid the deputy for them. Generally, if this "cash out" payment took place during the deputy's final compensation measurement period (the period used to determine the deputy's salary for purposes of retirement benefits), the "cash out" payment was pensionable income, i.e., part of the calculation of the deputy's salary for purposes of retirement benefits. However, the employer would not "cash out" deferred excess hours of a deputy who had been on Lab. Code § 4850 leave at any time during the deferral year. Rather, such a deputy's excess hours remained in his or her account, and such a deputy who retired in the year following the Lab. Code § 4850 leave never had an opportunity to "cash out" or use those hours. Instead, such a deputy was compensated for those hours at retirement, but this compensation was not pensionable income. Thus, a deputy who accumulated excess vacation hours, but who had never been injured on duty, and a deputy who retired after taking leave due to a non-job-related injury, might collect more in retirement benefits than a deputy who retired after having suffered an industrial injury, even if all of these deputies had the same employment history in terms of rank, years of experience, etc. [Los Angeles County Professional Peace Officers' Association v. County of Los Angeles (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 63, 67-72, 80 Cal. Rptr. 3d 572] .

[2] Against Witness

If an employer discharges, threatens to discharge, or in any manner discriminates against an employee because the employee testified or made known his or her intentions to testify in another employee's case before a WCJ, the employer is guilty of a misdemeanor, and the employee is entitled to reinstatement and reimbursement for lost wages and work benefits caused by the acts of the employer [Lab. Code § 132a(3)].

Proceedings for lost wages and work benefits must be instituted by filing an appropriate petition with the WCAB within one year from the discriminatory act or date of termination. The WCAB has full power, authority, and jurisdiction to try and determine finally all matters specified under Lab. Code § 132a.

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Administrative Actions
1. General Principles of Workers' Compensation Law

51-577 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 577.19

§ 577.19 Fraudulent Workers' Compensation Claims

[1] In General

The Legislature has declared that workers' compensation fraud harms employers by contributing to increasingly high costs of workers' compensation insurance and self-insurance, and harms employees by undermining the perceived legitimacy of all workers' compensation claims. The Legislature has also declared its intent to prevent workers' compensation insurance fraud, thereby reducing costs, assisting in restoring confidence and faith in the workers' compensation system, and facilitating expedient and full compensation for employees injured at the workplace [see Ins. Code § 1871(d), (e)].

It is unlawful to do any of the following [Ins. Code § 1871.4(a)]:

- Make or cause to be made any knowingly false or fraudulent material statement or material representation for the purpose of obtaining or denying any compensation, as defined in Lab. Code § 3207.

- Present or cause to be presented any knowingly false or fraudulent written or oral material statement in support of, or in opposition to, any claim for compensation for the purpose of obtaining or denying any compensation, as defined in Lab. Code § 3207.

- Knowingly assist, abet, solicit, or conspire with any person who engages in an unlawful act under Ins. Code § 1871.4.

- Make or cause to be made any knowingly false or fraudulent statements with regard to entitlement to benefits with the intent to discourage an injured worker from claiming benefits or pursuing a claim.

- Make or cause to be made any knowingly false or fraudulent material statement or material representation for the purpose of obtaining or denying any of the benefits or reimbursement provided in the Return-to-Work Program established under Lab. Code § 139.48.

- Make or cause to be made any knowingly false or fraudulent material statement or material representation for the purpose of discouraging an employer from claiming any of the benefits or reimbursement provided in this Return-to-Work Program.

For purposes of Ins. Code § 1871.4, the term "statement" includes but is not limited to any notice, proof of injury, bill for services, payment for services, hospital or doctor records, X rays, test results, medical-legal expense as defined in Lab. Code § 4620, other evidence of loss, injury, or expense, or payment [Ins. Code § 1871.4(a)]. An employee's false statements and misrepresentations made on deposition are sufficient to support a conviction pursuant to the statute [People v. Post (2001) 94 Cal. App. 4th 467, 475-476, 114 Cal. Rptr. 2d 356] .

The court of appeal, affirming the trial court's order pursuant to an employee's anti-SLAPP motion that struck the employer's complaint that alleged the employee's filing of a fraudulent workers' compensation claim, held that the employer failed to demonstrate a probability that it would prevail on the merits of its fraud claim because the employer could not establish either of two elements of a cause of action for fraud, justifiable reliance or resulting damages. The employer argued that justifiable reliance was shown by its forwarding of the employee's workers' compensation claim to its insurer, but the court of appeal found that the employer was required to do so both by law and by insurance policy provisions, not because it relied on the employee's alleged fraud. Similarly, when the employer argued that it was damaged in the form of increased premiums, the court of appeal found such an argument premature because the employee's workers' compensation claim had not yet been adjudicated. Finally, the court of appeal found sound policy considerations supporting its conclusions, in that permitting an employer to bring a civil action for fraud against an employee while a workers' compensation proceeding was pending could have a chilling effect on the employee's exercise of the right to file a workers' compensation claim [Leegin Creative Leather Products, Inc. v. Diaz (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 1517, 1523-1527, 33 Cal. Rptr. 3d 139] .

It is also illegal for a firm, corporation, partnership, association, or any person acting in his or her individual capacity as a public or private employee, to solicit, accept, or refer any business to any individual or entity with the knowledge that, or with reckless disregard for whether, the individual or entity for or from whom the solicitation or referral is made, or the individual or entity who is solicited or referred, intends to violate Penal Code § 550 or Ins. Code § 1871.4 [Penal Code § 549].

As of March 6, 2005, an insurer or self-insured employer must provide the following notice, in both English and Spanish, to an injured worker on or with a check for temporary disability benefits [Ins. Code § 1871.8 (Stats. 2004, ch. 2 (4th ext. session) (operative January 1, 2005; effective March 6, 2005))]:

WARNING:
You are required to report to your employer or the insurance company any money that you earned for work during the time covered by this check, and before cashing this check. If you do not follow these rules, you may be in violation of the law and the penalty may be jail or prison, a fine, and loss of benefits.

[2] Enforcement of Anti-Fraud Laws

Ins. Code § 1871.4 is enforced by the Department of Insurance's Fraud Division [Ins. Code § 1872; see also Ins. Code §§ 1872.3 (powers of Fraud Division), 1872.83(a) (Division required to forward names of fraud suspects licensed under Business and Professions Code to appropriate disciplinary body), 1872.95 (Medical Board, Board of Chiropractic Examiners, and State Bar must designate employees to investigate and report on possible fraudulent activities relating to workers' compensation)]. The exchange of information between insurers and district attorneys, the office of the Attorney General, the Department of Insurance, the Department of Industrial Relations, and licensing agencies is governed by the Workers' Compensation Insurance Fraud Reporting Act, Ins. Code § 1877 et seq. In order to facilitate such exchange of information, it has been held that insurers are absolutely privileged under Civ. Code § 47 to report workers' compensation insurance fraud [Fremont Compensation Insurance Co. v. Superior Court of Orange County (1996) 44 Cal. App. 4th 867, 875-877, 52 Cal. Rptr. 2d 211] .

The court of appeal has held that a civil action for violation of Ins. Code § 1871.7(b) arising from fraudulent acts made unlawful by Penal Code § 550(a)(10) did not violate the exclusive remedy provision of the workers' compensation law. Moreover, said the court, a preponderance of the evidence was the appropriate standard of proof for liability under Ins. Code § 1871.7, since the court found no constitutional, statutory, or decisional law that imposed a burden to show liability by clear and convincing evidence [People v. Thompson (2006) 136 Cal. App. 4th 24, 29-31, 37-38, 38 Cal. Rptr. 3d 677] .

[3] Criminal and Civil Penalties

Violation of Ins. Code § 1871.4 (discussed in [1], above) is punishable by imprisonment in county jail for one year, or in the state prison for two, three, or five years, or by a fine not exceeding $150,000 or double the value of the fraud, whichever is greater, or by both imprisonment and fine [Ins. Code § 1871.4(b); see also Ins. Code § 1871.4(c) (enhancement for prior convictions); People v. Webb (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 688, 693-694, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 259] . Restitution must be ordered, including restitution for any medical evaluation or treatment services obtained or provided [Ins. Code § 1871.4(b)]. The court must determine the amount of restitution and the person or persons to whom the restitution must be paid [Ins. Code § 1871.4(b)]. A person convicted under this section may be charged the costs of investigation at the discretion of the court [Ins. Code § 1871.4(b)].

A conviction pursuant to Ins. Code § 1871.4 that materially affects the basis of an order, decision, or award of the WCAB is sufficient grounds for a reconsideration of that order, decision, or award [Lab. Code § 5803.5]. Ins. Code § 1871.4 may not be construed to preclude the applicability of any other provision of criminal law that applies or may apply to any transaction [Ins. Code § 1871.4(d)].

Following a workers' compensation fraud conviction, an employee who seeks to receive or retain workers' compensation benefits is barred from retaining or receiving any compensation which stems directly from the fraudulent representation [Ins. Code § 1871.5; Tensfeldt v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 116, 123-124, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 691] . However, whether the employee is barred from receiving all workers' compensation benefits following a fraud conviction must be determined on a case-by-case basis, depending on the nature of the employee's misrepresentation. To receive further workers' compensation benefits after a fraud conviction requires [Tensfeldt v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 116, 125, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 691] :

- An actual, otherwise compensable, industrial injury;

- Substantial medical evidence supporting an award of compensation not stemming from the fraudulent misrepresentation for which the employee was convicted; and

- That the employee's credibility is not completely destroyed so as to make the employee unbelievable with regard to any disputed issues in the compensation case.

An employee who is convicted for fraud because of a lie about the statutory compensability of an injury is precluded by Ins. Code § 1871.5 from receiving or retaining all workers' compensation benefits, because the fraudulent misrepresentation is material to establishing an industrial injury and to entitlement to any benefits under the Labor Code [Tensfeldt v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 116, 124, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 691] . On the other hand, an employee who has been convicted of fraud may be able to retain or receive some compensation in the same workers' compensation proceeding if it is shown that the compensation is not owed as a result of his or her unlawful conduct [see Tensfeldt v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 116, 125, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 691] . For example, a worker convicted of fraudulent misrepresentation in the acquisition of medically required special footwear, and ordered by the court to make restitution, was barred from receiving only future reimbursement for further purchases of shoes. Moreover, when the worker failed to make restitution as ordered, a credit sought by the defrauded insurer against other medical treatment was held an impermissible bar of benefits not directly emanating from the fraud [Farmers Insurance Group v. W.C.A.B. (Sanchez) (2002) 104 Cal. App. 4th 684, 690-691, 128 Cal. Rptr. 2d 353] .

In addition to the criminal penalties set forth in Ins. Code § 1871.4, Lab. Code § 3820 provides civil money penalties for workers' compensation fraud.

§ 577.20 Consideration for Referral for Benefits

[1] In General

Lab. Code § 3215 provides that, except as otherwise permitted by law, it is a crime for any person acting individually or through his or her employees or agents to offer, deliver, receive, or accept any rebate, refund, commission, preference, patronage, dividend, discount, or other consideration, whether in the form of money or otherwise, as compensation orinducement for referring clients or patients to perform or obtain workers' compensation services or benefits [Lab. Code § 3215; see also Lab. Code § 3218 (criminal penalty for violation); Ins. Code § 1871.7 (civil penalty for use of runners or cappers to procure clients to perform or obtain workers' compensation services or benefits, or to procure clients to perform workers' compensation services or obtain benefits under an insurance contract)].

This prohibition does not, however, prevent an attorney or law firm from the following [Ins. Code § 750.5]:

- Dividing fees for legal services with a lawyer under circumstances expressly permitted by Rule 2-200 of the Rules of Professional Conduct of the State Bar.

- Offering or giving an incidental nonmonetary gift or gratuity to a person who has made a recommendation resulting in the employment of the attorney or law firm, provided that the gift or gratuity was not offered in consideration of any promise, agreement, or understanding that the gift or gratuity would be forthcoming or that referrals would be made or encouraged in the future.

- Offering or giving a bonus to an employee who has made a referral or recommendation resulting in the employment of the attorney or law firm, provided that the bonus was not offered in consideration of any promise, agreement, or understanding that the bonus would be forthcoming or that referrals or recommendations would be made or encouraged in the future.

In addition, the prohibition does not apply to the recommendation of professional employment when the recommendation is not prohibited by the State Bar Rules of Professional Conduct [Lab. Code § 3217(a)]. Similarly, it does not prohibit a public defender or assigned counsel from making known his or her availability as a criminal defense attorney to persons unable to afford legal counsel, whether or not those persons are in custody [Lab. Code § 3217(b)], nor does it preclude an attorney or law firm from providing persons or entities with legal services without charge or for a lawfully agreed upon attorney fee [Lab. Code § 3217(e)]. Finally, Lab. Code § 3215 does not prohibit a workers' compensation insurer from offering an employer discounted rates based on the employer securing health or disability insurance from an affiliate of the insurer [Lab. Code § 3217(f)].

[2] Criminal and Civil Penalties

Lab. Code § 3219(a) provides that, except as otherwise permitted by law, any person acting individually or through his or her employees or agents, who offers or delivers any rebate, refund, commission, preference, patronage, dividend, discount, or other consideration to any adjuster of claims for compensation, as compensation, inducement, or reward for the referral or settlement of any claim, is guilty of a felony [Lab. Code § 3219(a)(1)]. It further provides that, except as otherwise permitted by law, any adjuster of claims for compensation who accepts or receives any rebate, refund, commission, preference, patronage, dividend, discount, or other consideration, as compensation, inducement, or reward for the referral or settlement of any claim, is guilty of a felony [Lab. Code § 3219(a)(2)].

Lab. Code § 3219(b) provides that any contract for professional services secured by any medical clinic, laboratory, physician, or other health care provider in this state in violation of Ins. Code § 1871.4 or Lab. Code §§ 3215 or 3219(a) is void [Lab. Code § 3219(b)]. In any action against the provider, any judgment must include an order divesting the medical clinic, laboratory, physician, or other health care provider, and the owners and operators thereof, of any fees and other compensation received under the void contract. The judgment may also include an order prohibiting the person from further participation in any manner in the entity in which that person directly or indirectly owned or operated for a time period that the court deems appropriate [Lab. Code § 3219(b)].

§ 577.21 Advertising

[1] False and Misleading Advertising

[a] In General

In 1992, the Legislature enacted the Workers' Compensation Truth in Advertising Act, the purpose of which is to assure truthful and adequate disclosure of all material and relevant information in advertising that solicits persons to file workers' compensation claims or to engage or consult an attorney or a medical care provider or clinic to consider a workers' compensation claim [see Lab. Code §§ 5430, 5431]. The implementing regulations specify that they do not apply to attorneys, physicians, government agencies, labor and charitable organizations, or non-profit tax-exempt bar associations whose primary business or purpose is other than providing workers' compensation services. However, they do apply to advertisers who may also be subject to attorney or physician workers' compensation advertising laws because they advertise with or for an attorney or physician [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9821(a)-(c)]. The regulations may not be construed to obviate or lessen the obligations of attorneys or physicians under Lab. Code §§ 5430-5434, or under other provisions of law [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9821(a)].

An "advertisement" is any form of communication in writing, photograph or picture, electronic broadcasting or transmission, that solicits any person

- To file a workers' compensation claim;
- To use any workers' compensation services [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9820(k)]; or
- To engage or consult counsel or a medical care provider or clinic to consider a workers' compensation claim.

The form of advertisement may include, but is not limited to, advertising by newspaper, magazine, circular, form letter, publication, billboard, card, label, placard, transit advertisement, business card, envelope, book, list, directory, radio, motion picture, video, television, or electronic mail [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9820(b)]. Any such advertisements must contain a notice that making a false or fraudulent workers' compensation claim is a felony subject to up to five years in prison or a fine of up to $50,000 or double the value of the fraud, whichever is greater, or by both imprisonment and fine [Lab. Code § 5432; see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9823(b)]. Advertising by or on behalf of a non-attorney advisor or representative whose right to practice before the WCAB is suspended or revoked is completely prohibited [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9825], as is advertising by or on behalf of a person who does not hold a valid, active license to provide medical goods or services for which a license is required [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9827]. An advertisement for a workers' compensation non-attorney advisor or representative must identify the advertiser as a non-attorney by including a notice to that effect [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9824]. An advertisement by or on behalf of one whose license to practice law in California is suspended or revoked must include a similar notice [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9826].

Liability does not attach to third parties who merely disseminate false and misleading advertisements. This includes the following [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9820(c)]:

- A publisher, printer, distributor, or circulator of a written medium;
- An operator of a broadcasting station, movie, or video production company;
- The operator of premises where advertisements are displayed; or
- An employee of anyone listed in items (1)-(3).

Any advertisement or other device designed to produce leads based on a response from a person to file a workers' compensation claim or to engage or consult an attorney or a medical care provider or clinic must disclose that an agent may contact the person if that is the fact. In addition, an individual who makes contact with a person as a result of acquiring that person's name from a lead-generating device must disclose that fact in the initial contact with that person [Lab. Code § 5433(a)]. The use of a name that is deceptive or misleading to solicit persons to file compensation claims is also prohibited, as is the use of misleading words, initials, letters, symbols, or other devices in advertisements [Lab. Code § 5433(b)-(f); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9823(d)-(f)]. Finally, advertisements may not imply that the reader, listener, or viewer may lose a right, privilege, or benefits under federal, state, or local law if he or she fails to respond to the advertisement [Lab. Code § 5433(g)].

[b] Criminal and Civil Penalties

The Administrative Director is responsible for investigating violations of the Act and regulations [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9833]. To this end, he or she may issue orders to provide advertising-related information [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9834] and compliance orders [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9835]. Anyone aggrieved by an order issued by the director may request a hearing, which will be held in accordance with the Administrative Procedure Act [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9837]. In addition to issuing compliance orders, the director may institute civil proceedings against any person for violation of the Act or regulations, or may refer any violation for civil, criminal, or professional disciplinary proceedings to others having jurisdiction. The director has discretion to pursue any or all available remedies [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9836].

[2] Advertising Legal Services

In 1993, the Legislature enacted laws regarding advertising of legal services for obtaining workers' compensation benefits. Under the statute, any individual, firm, corporation, partnership, organization, or association that prints, displays, publishes, distributes, or broadcasts any advertising that purports to provide legal services for obtaining workers' compensation benefits must include the name of at least one attorney associated with the individual, firm, corporation, partnership, organization, or association in all such advertising [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5499.30(a)]. For purposes of this provision, "legal services" includes any service that refers potential clients to any attorney [Bus. & Prof.

Code § 5499.30(b)]. A violation of this provision is a misdemeanor, punishable by imprisonment in the county jail for up to one year or by a fine of up to $10,000, or both [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5499.30(c)].

In 1994, the Legislature enacted several laws regulating the advertising of legal services in general. In particular, Bus. & Prof. Code § 6158 provides that, with regard to advertisements by electronic media, the message as a whole may not be false, misleading, or deceptive, and the message as a whole must be factually substantiated. 1. General Principles of Workers' Compensation Law

§ 577.22 Employment Relationships

[1] In General

Coverage for work-related injuries is predicated on defined employment relationships, which are generally to be found not in the definition of employer but in the definitions of employee. That is, an "employee," as defined by specified employment relationships, is one who is entitled to workers' compensation coverage for an injury occurring in the course of the specified employment [In-Home Supportive Services v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 720, 727, 199 Cal. Rptr. 697] .

The term "employer" is defined as follows [Lab. Code § 3300]:

- The State of California and every state agency;
- Each county, city, district, and all public and quasi-public corporations and public agencies therein;
- Every person, including any public service corporation, that has any natural person in its service; and
- The legal representative of any deceased employer.

The term "employee" is broadly defined in Lab. Code § 3351. Lab. Code §§ 3351 and 3351.5 specify several classes of persons as included within the definition of employee. Exclusions are set forth in Lab. Code § 3352. The court of appeal has held that Lab. Code §§ 3351(d) and 3352(h) were the only relevant statutes for defining "employee" when the issue was whether an injured worker was a residential employee of the homeowners. The court stated that Lab. Code § 3715(b), relied on by the Appeals Board in the present case, was inapplicable, since that statute applied to only uninsured homeowners, whereas the homeowners in the present case were insured. Thus, the injured worker was not an "employee" and was not entitled to workers' compensation benefits [Cal. State Auto. Ass'n Inter-Ins. Bureau v. W.C.A.B. (Hestehauge) (2006) 137 Cal. App. 4th 1040, 1044-1048, 40 Cal. Rptr. 3d 743] . In addition, the law contains a number of statutes defining various employment relations as excluded from or included in the law [see Lab. Code §§ 3352.94, 3358-3371; Graczyk v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1986) 184 Cal. App. 3d 997, 1003-1004, 229 Cal. Rptr. 494 ; see also Penal Code §§ 4017, 4017.5; Parsons v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1981) 126 Cal. App. 3d 629, 634, 179 Cal. Rptr. 88 (jail inmates)]. An employee excluded from compensation benefits under Lab. Code § 3352 retains his or her right to maintain a civil action for damages against his or her employer [Graczyk v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1986) 184 Cal. App. 3d 997, 1003-1004, 229 Cal. Rptr. 494] .

For the purposes of the workers' compensation law, an employment relationship may exist prior to establishment of an employer-employee relationship in the contractual or common law sense [see Laeng v. Workmen's Comp. Appeals Bd. (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 771, 774, 100 Cal. Rptr. 377, 494 P.2d 1 (person injured while participating in "tryout" for employment)] or after the employer-employee relationship has been terminated [see Gates v. Trans Video Corp. (1979) 93 Cal. App. 3d 196, 202, 155 Cal. Rptr. 486 (discharged worker sustained injury while leaving jobsite)]. This does not apply, however, to a person merely calling at employment premises to inquire about the availability of employment, even though, if there were work, hiring would be a virtual certainty [State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1976) 59 Cal. App. 3d 647, 654-655, 130 Cal. Rptr. 831] .

[2] Special Employees

The employee of one employer may become the special employee of another employer so as to insulate the special employer from tort liability for injury to the employee, relegating the employee to the exclusive remedy provisions (Lab. Code § 3602(a)) of the workers' compensation law [see Kowalski v. Shell Oil Co. (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 168, 174-179, 151 Cal. Rptr. 671, 588 P.2d 811 ; Johnson v. Berkofsky-Barret Productions, Inc. (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 1067, 1074-1075, 260 Cal. Rptr. 67 ; Barajas v. USA Petroleum Corp. (1986) 184 Cal. App. 3d 974, 983-985, 229 Cal. Rptr. 513] . An employer can secure the payment of compensation on employees provided to the employer through an agreement with another employer, by entering into a valid and enforceable agreement with the other employer under which the other employer agrees to obtain, and does obtain, workers' compensation coverage for those employees [Lab. Code § 3602(d)]. In such cases, both employers will be considered to have secured the payment of compensation [Lab. Code § 3602(d)]. Employers who comply with this rule will not be subject to civil, criminal, or other penalties for failure to provide workers' compensation coverage or tort liability in the event an employee is injured, but may, in the absence of compliance, be subject to all three [Lab. Code § 3602(d)].

[3] Independent Contractors

[a] Defined

Independent contractors are not covered by the workers' compensation law. "Independent contractor" is defined as any person who renders service for a specified recompense for a specified result, under the control of his or her principal as to the result only and not as to the means by which it is accomplished [Lab. Code § 3353; see S. G. Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Department of Industrial Relations (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 341, 349, 256 Cal. Rptr. 543, 769 P.2d 399] .

[b] Right to Control Work Test

Although the common law "control-of-work" test is included in the statutory definition of independent contractor [see Lab. Code § 3353, discussed under [a], above], the test must be applied in compensation cases with deference to the purposes of the workers' compensation law. The nature of the work and the overall arrangement between the parties must be examined to determine whether they come within the history and fundamental purposes of that law [S.G. Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Department of Industrial Relations (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 341, 353-354, 256 Cal. Rptr. 543, 769 P.2d 399 ; see discussion under § 577.11].

The workers' compensation law intends comprehensive coverage of injuries in employment and accomplishes this goal by defining "employment" broadly in terms of "service to an employer" and by including a general presumption that any person "in service to another" is a covered "employee." The express exclusion of "independent contractors" is purposeful and has a limited but important function; it recognizes those situations in which the goals of the workers' compensation law are best served by imposing the risk of "no-fault" work injuries directly on the provider, rather than the recipient, of a compensated service. This obviously is the case, for example, when the provider of service has the primary control over work safety, is best situated to distribute the risk and cost of injury as an expense of his or her own business, and has independently chosen the burdens and benefit of self-employment. This is the balance to be struck when deciding whether a worker is an employee or an independent contractor for the purposes of the workers' compensation law [S.G.Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Department of Industrial Relations (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 341, 354, 256 Cal. Rptr. 543].

A business entity may not avoid its statutory obligations under the workers' compensation law by carving up its production process into minute steps, and then asserting that it lacks "control" over the exact means by which one such step is performed by the responsible workers [S.G. Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Department of Industrial Relations (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 341, 357, 256 Cal. Rptr. 543, 769 P.2d 399] .

[c] Other Factors to Be Considered

Although the right to control work details is the "most important" or "most significant" consideration, several "secondary" indicia of the nature of a service relationship have been endorsed [S. G. Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Department of Industrial Relations (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 341, 350, 256 Cal. Rptr. 543, 769 P.2d 399] . For example, strong evidence in support of an employment relationship is the right to discharge at will, without cause [S.G. Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Department of Industrial Relations (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 341, 350, 256 Cal. Rptr. 543, 769 P.2d 399 (citing Tieberg v. Unemployment Ins. App. Bd. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 943, 949, 88 Cal. Rptr. 175, 471 P.2d 975 , and Empire Star Mines Co. v. Cal. Emp. Com. (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 33, 43, 168 P.2d 686 , both involving unemployment insurance)].

Additional factors to be considered in deciding whether a worker is an employee or an independent contractor for the purposes of the workers' compensation law include those derived principally from Restatement (Second) of Agency § 220, as follows [S.G. Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Department of Industrial Relations (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 341, 351, 354, 256 Cal. Rptr. 543, 769 P.2d 399 (adding that, generally, the individual factors cannot be applied mechanically as separate tests, the factors are intertwined, and their weight often depends on particular combinations)]:

- Whether the one performing services is engaged in a distinct occupation or business;
- The kind of occupation, with reference to whether, in the locality, the work is usually done under the direction of a principal or by a specialist without supervision;
- The skill required in the particular occupation;
- Whether the principal or the worker supplies the instrumentalities, tools, and the place of work for the person doing the work;
- The length of time for which the services are to be performed;
- The method of payment, whether by the time or by the job;
- Whether or not the work is a part of the regular business of the principal; and
- Whether or not the parties believe they are creating the relationship of employer-employee.

The factors that must be established to prove independent contractor status in the case of a worker performing services for which a license is required under Bus. & Prof. Code § 7000 et seq. (Contractors' State License Law) are set forth in Lab. Code § 2750.5 [see State Compensation Ins. Fund v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 5, 9-10, 219 Cal. Rptr. 13, 706 P.2d 1146 ; Truesdale v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 608, 614-618, 235 Cal. Rptr. 754 ; Germann v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1981) 123 Cal. App. 3d 776, 783-784, 176 Cal. Rptr. 868] , and are also a helpful means of identifying the employee/contractor distinction generally [S.G. Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Department of Industrial Relations (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 341, 351, 351 n.5, 354, 256 Cal. Rptr. 543, 769 P.2d 399] .

In addition, other jurisdictions have developed a six-part test to determine independent contractorship in light of the remedial purposes of the legislation, taking into account the "right to control the work," as well as factors similar to those set forth in Restatement (Second) of Agency § 220 and in Lab. Code § 2750.5. There are many points of similarity between these various tests, and all are logically pertinent to the inherently difficult determination of whether a provider of service is an employee or an excluded independent contractor for purposes of the workers' compensation law [S.G. Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Department of Industrial Relations (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 341, 354-355, 256 Cal. Rptr. 543, 769 P.2d 399] .

The court of appeal has held that the exemption from the contractor's license requirement contained in Bus. & Prof. Code § 7049 for construction or maintenance work incidental to "clearing or other work upon the land in rural districts for fire prevention purposes" meant that the trial court erred in ruling that the defendant was an employee as a matter of law pursuant to Lab. Code § 2750.5. The defendant, who was sued in civil court by the family of another worker whose death he was alleged to have negligently caused, had argued to the trial court that he was a fellow employee of the decedent and that, therefore, workers' compensation was the exclusive remedy. The court of appeal remanded the case for further proceedings on the question of fact of whether the defendant was an employee or an independent contractor [Moehring v. Thomas (2005) 126 Cal. App. 4th 1515, 1520-1525, 25 Cal. Rptr. 3d 118] .

In another case, the court of appeal, affirming the trial court's order denying plaintiff's petition for a writ of mandate, held that substantial evidence supported the determination by the Department of Industrial Relations that drivers for plaintiff courier service were functioning as employees rather than as true independent contractors. The court of appeal found that the question of the hiree's status must be considered in light of the history and remedial and social purposes of the Workers' Compensation Act, which are: (1) to ensure that the cost of industrial injuries will be part of the cost of goods rather than a burden on society; (2) to guarantee prompt, limited compensation for an employee's work injuries, regardless of fault, as an inevitable cost of production; (3) to spur increased industrial safety; and (4) in return, to insulate the employer from tort liability for employees' injuries. The court of appeal followed S.G. Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Department of Industrial Relations [(1989) 48 Cal. 3d 341, 256 Cal. Rptr. 543, 769 P.2d 399] , in finding that the functions performed by drivers (pick-up and delivery of papers and packages and driving in between) did not require a high degree of skill, that these functions constituted an integral heart of plaintiff's courier service business, that, by obtaining clients in need of this service and providing workers to conduct it, plaintiff retained all "necessary" control over the operation as a whole, and that these circumstances were enough to find an employment relationship for purposes of the Workers' Compensation Act, even in the absence of plaintiff's exercise of control over the details of work and with plaintiff being more concerned with the results of the work than with the means of its accomplishment [JKH Enterprises, Inc. v. Department of Industrial Relations (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 1046, 1059-1066, 48 Cal. Rptr. 3d 563] . In a subsequent case, the opposite result was reached when the court of appeal affirmed the trial court's judgment that the plaintiffs, representatives of a class of parcel and message drivers/deliverers, were independent contractors, not the defendant's employees. The court held that the trial court's jury instructions properly placed the burden on the defendant of rebutting the Lab. Code § 3357 presumption that the plaintiffs were the defendant's employees and properly instructed the jury as to the factors to consider in resolving whether the plaintiffs were independent contractors. Moreover, said the court, the plaintiffs had not carried the burden of demonstrating that the trial court abused its discretion in declining to amend the class definition, since the plaintiffs failed to demonstrate that any trial court error in rulings regarding the class definition was sufficiently prejudicial to warrant reversal. Finally, the plaintiffs failed to carry the burden of demonstrating any evidentiary error when it failed even to identify specific testimony that was allegedly erroneously admitted [Cristler v. Express Messenger Systems (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th

Similarly, the court of appeal, affirming the trial court judgment denying an employer's petition for writ of administrative mandamus, held that the administrative record supported the conclusion that newspaper carriers were employees for purposes of the workers' compensation law, not independent contractors. Thus, the employer's workers' compensation insurer correctly classified the carriers as employees for purposes of the employer's workers' compensation policy. The court of appeal followed the analysis set forth in S.G. Borello & Sons v. Department of Industrial Relations [(1989) 48 Cal. 3d 341, 256 Cal. Rptr. 543, 769 P.2d 399] to find that the employer had the right to control the manner and means of the newspaper carriers' work, that various other Borello indicia demonstrated that the newspaper carriers were employees, and that the employer had failed to carry its burden of proving that the carriers were independent contractors [Antelope Valley Press v. Steve Poizner as Insurance Commissioner (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 839, 842-843, 852-856, 75 Cal. Rptr. 3d 887].

In a case not involving workers' compensation benefits, the court of appeal held that the Superior Court correctly denied an employers' association's requested declaratory relief to invalidate a precedential decision by the Unemployment Insurance Appeals Board (UIAB) that upheld an Employment Development Department (EDD) assessment of unemployment insurance employer contributions and penalties against a courier service, when the EDD had found that drivers for the courier service were employees, not independent contractors. The court of appeal found that California courts and administrative agencies were all authorized to apply the comprehensive and overlapping tests regarding employment status stated in Borello [S.G. Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Department of Industrial Relations (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 341, 256 Cal. Rptr. 543, 769 P.2d 399] and that the reasoning of Borello, which arose in a workers' compensation context, applied equally to analysis of tax-related issues, such as employer contributions, requiring an employment determination [see Unemp. Ins. Code § 621(b)]. The court added that there was nothing in the record or in the UIAB's decision to suggest that there was no proper basis under the Unemployment Insurance Code's provisions for liability for employer assessments, independent of any liberal construction of the Code regarding benefits, or that there was any undue focus in the present case on employee protection, as opposed to employer rights. Finally, the court found that, contrary to the employer association's contentions, Air Couriers International v. Employment Development Department [Air Couriers International v. Employment Development Department (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 923, 59 Cal. Rptr. 3d 37] was correctly decided when it concluded that an employer had no basis to argue that the legal standards set forth in Borello were inapplicable in the unemployment insurance context [Messenger Courier Association of the Americas v. California Unemployment Insurance Appeals Board (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 1074, 1089-1096, 96 Cal. Rptr. 3d 797].

The determination of employee or independent-contractor status is one of fact if dependent on the resolution of disputed evidence or inferences. If the evidence is undisputed, the question becomes one of law. The label placed by the parties on their relationship is not dispositive, and subterfuges are not countenanced [S.G. Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Department of Industrial Relations (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 341, 349, 256 Cal. Rptr. 543, 769 P.2d 399 (ruling that migrant harvesters of grower's cucumber crop were employees and not independent contractors, although written contract between harvesters and grower expressly provided that harvesters were independent contractors and not employees)].

[4] Presumptions

[a] Employee Status

Any person rendering services for another, other than as an independent contractor, or unless expressly excluded from coverage under the workers' compensation law, is presumed to be an employee [Lab. Code § 3357; see Laeng v. Workmen's Comp. Appeals Bd. (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 771, 777, 100 Cal. Rptr. 377, 494 P.2d 1] .

[b] Work for Which License Is Required

[i] In General

There is also a rebuttable presumption affecting the burden of proof that a worker performing services for which a license is required pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 7000 et seq. (Contractors' State License Law), or who is performing those services for a person who is required to obtain such a license, is an employee rather than an independent contractor [Lab. Code § 2750.5; see State Compensation Ins. Fund v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 5, 8-12, 15-16, 219 Cal. Rptr. 13, 706 P.2d 1146 ; Campos Food Fair v. Superior Court (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 965, 967, 238 Cal. Rptr. 685 ; Blew v. Horner (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1380, 1384, 232 Cal. Rptr. 660] .

[ii] Contractor's License

Any person performing any function or activity for which a contractor's license is required must hold a valid contractor's license as a condition of having independent contractor status [Lab. Code § 2750.5]. Thus, courts have held that a person lacking the requisite license may not be an independent contractor [State Compensation Ins. Fund v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 5, 15, 291 Cal. Rptr. 13, 706 P.2d 1146 ; Blew v. Horner (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1380, 1384, 232 Cal. Rptr. 660] .

In cases in which a contractor has represented to a principal that he or she is licensed, however, the contractor may be estopped to assert employee status [see Chin v. Namvar (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 994, 1006-1009, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 294 (plaintiff, injured while performing painting services at shopping center owned by defendants, and who brought suit alleging causes of action for unfair competition, various Labor Code violations, wrongful termination, and negligence, was independent contractor, not employee of defendants, since Lab. Code § 2750.5, which creates rebuttable presumption that unlicensed person who performs work requiring license is employee, not independent contractor, was irrelevant because statute's presumption of employee status may be rebutted only as to persons who hold valid contractor's license, which plaintiff did not at time of injury, and trial court did not improperly impose on plaintiff burden of proving that he was employee but rather chose to believe defendants' evidence that plaintiff was independent contractor, with substantial evidence supporting trial court's finding that plaintiff was estopped to assert that he was employee because he had misrepresented himself to defendants as licensed contractor); see also State Compensation Ins. Fund v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 5, 16, 219 Cal. Rptr. 13, 706 P.2d 1146 (stating that mere failure of contractor to disclose to prospective employer that he or she is unlicensed is an insufficient basis for finding estoppel)]. But this does not apply to the employee of an unlicensed contractor because estoppel is an equitable doctrine and will not be applied against one who is blameless [Nick Hagopian Drywall v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 767, 772, 251 Cal. Rptr. 455] . Thus, if asubcontractor, for example, is unlicensed, workers' compensation liability for the subcontractor's employees will be imposed on the general contractor as a matter of law [Nick Hagopian Drywall v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 767, 772, 251 Cal. Rptr. 455 ; Rinaldi v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 571, 574, 242 Cal. Rptr. 895] . In addition, the employee of an unlicensed subcontractor will be presumed to be an employee of the general contractor without regard to the fact that the unlicensed subcontractor was independently insured for workers' compensation [Neighbours v. Buzz Oates Enterprises (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 325, 327-330, 333-334, 265 Cal. Rptr. 788] .

The presumption of Lab. Code § 2750.5 supplements rather than overrides the statutory definitions of employee and independent contractor. Therefore, although an unlicensed contractor who performs work for which a license is required cannot be an independent contractor, he or she may not be an employee either, if any of the statutory exclusions to workers' compensation coverage are applicable [Furtado v. Schriefer (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 1608, 1617, 280 Cal. Rptr. 16 ; see Lab. Code § 3352 (exclusions to workers' compensation law)]. For example, an unlicensed contractor was deemed to be an employee under Lab. Code § 2750.5 for the purposes of pursuing a civil tort action against an allegedly negligent homeowner, even though he had not met the minimum hours required by Lab. Code § 3352(h) to be eligible for workers' compensation benefits [Rosas v. Dishong (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 815, 821-823, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 339] . Similarly, the court of appeal, reversing the trial court's dismissal of the plaintiff's tort action alleging the defendant's negligence, held that the plaintiff, injured while repairing the defendant's roof, was the defendant's employee pursuant to

Lab. Code § 2750.5, which operated to allow the plaintiff's lawsuit, despite the fact that the plaintiff, by virtue of Lab. Code § 3352(h), was not an employee of the defendant for workers' compensation purposes, when the court of appeal found that the plaintiff was not a licensed roofing contractor and, therefore, not an independent contractor [Mendoza v. Brodeur (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 72, 79-81, 47 Cal. Rptr. 3d 310] .

The court of appeal has also held that an injured worker, employed by an unlicensed contractor to repair a homeowner's roof, and who had not worked on that job for the statutorily required number of hours to qualify as an employee ofthe homeowner, nevertheless remained an employee of the contractor for purposes of assigning liability for the injury. Thus, the worker was eligible to receive benefits from the Uninsured Employers Fund [now called the Uninsured Employers Benefits Trust Fund] and to pursue tort remedies against the contractor in civil court [Cedillo v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2003) 106 Cal. App. 4th 227, 232, 236-237, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 581] .

The California Supreme Court has held that an injured worker of an unlicensed contractor hired to trim a homeowner's tree could not maintain a civil tort action against the homeowner that was grounded on the homeowner's alleged violation of CalOSHA tree-trimming safety regulations [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 3421, 3427]. The Court concluded that the regulations did not apply because the work in question fell within the "household domestic service" exception to the requirements of the California Occupational Safety and Health Act [Fernandez v. Lawson (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 31, 36-38, 1 Cal. Rptr. 3d 422, 71 P.3d 779 ; see Lab. Code § 6303(b)]. The injured worker had previously filed a workers' compensation claim against the homeowner, which the homeowner's insurer had denied on the ground that the worker had not fulfilled the statutory hours-worked and wages-earned requirements to enable him to fall within thestatutory definition of an "employee" eligible for benefits [Fernandez v. Lawson (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 31, 34-35, 1 Cal. Rptr. 3d 422, 71 P.3d 779 ; see Lab. Code §§ 3351(d), 3352(h)]. Having decided the CalOSHA issue, the Court specifically did not reach the other issue in the case: whether the worker may be estopped from denying the contractor's independent contractor status because of any licensing misrepresentations on the part of the contractor [Fernandez v. Lawson (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 31, 38-39, 1 Cal. Rptr. 3d 422, 71 P.3d 779] .

The interplay between contractor licensing requirements and the workers' compensation law is sometimes rather complicated. California law provides that persons performing certain services are required to obtain a contractor's license [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7000-7172]. A condition precedent to the issuance, reinstatement, reactivation, renewal, or continued maintenance of such a license is that the applicant or licensee have on file a Certificate of Workers' Compensation Insurance or Certification of Self-Insurance [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7125(a)]. This requirement for certification of workers' compensation insurance does not apply, however, to an applicant or a licensee who files a statement with the Contractors State License Board that he or she does not employ any person in any manner so as to become subject to the workers' compensation laws [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7125(b)] and, effective January 1, 2007, does not hold a Class C-39 roofing contractor license, as defined in 16 Cal. Code Reg. § 832.39. For any license that, on January 1, 2007, is active and includes a C-39 classification in addition to any other classification, the registrar of the Contractors State License Board is required, in lieu of the automatic license suspension otherwise required, to remove the C-39 classification from the license unless a valid Certificate of Workers' Compensation Insurance or Certification of Self-Insurance is received by the registrar prior to the operative date of this requirement, January 1, 2007 [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7125(e)]. These provisions addressed specifically to Class C-39 roofing contractor licenses remain in effect only until January 1, 2011, when they are repealed, unless a later-enacted statute, enacted before that date, deletes or extends the date [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7125(f)]. The same sunset provision applies to the requirement, effective January 1, 2007, that an insurer who issues a workers' compensation insurance policy to a roofing contractor holding a C-39 license perform an annual payroll audit for the contractor. The insurer may impose a surcharge on each policy holder so audited in an amount necessary to recoup the reasonable costs of conducting the audit [Ins. Code § 11665(a), (c)]. The failure of a licensee required to do so to maintain workers' compensation insurance results in the automatic suspension of the license by operation of law [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7125.2(a)]. As noted at the beginning of this subsection, California workers' compensation law provides that any person performing any function or activity for which a license is required pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code, Div. 3, Ch. 9 (commencing with § 7000) must hold a valid contractor's license as a condition of having independent contractor status [Lab. Code § 2750.5].

In one case, the court of appeal was called upon to resolve an issue of liability involving the interplay of these statutory provisions. A company hired an independent contractor to paint one of the company's buildings. The contractor was licensed and had filed the required statement that he had no employees, thereby exempting himself from coverage pursuant to the workers' compensation laws. However, the contractor hired an employee to help paint the company's building, and this employee was injured in the course of performing the job. The employee applied for workers' compensation benefits, which were paid by the Uninsured Employers Fund (UEF) [now called the Uninsured Employers Benefits Trust Fund (UEBTF)]. The UEF then argued that, because the contractor had hired an employee, thereby rendering himself ineligible for continued exemption from the requirement that he maintain workers' compensation insurance, his contractor's license was, ipso facto, automatically suspended by operation of law, pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 7125.2(a). Consequently, argued the UEF, the contractor was in fact an employee of the hiring company whose building was being painted, as was the injured employee, with the resultthat the hiring company should be held liable to reimburse the UEF for workers' compensation benefits it had paid to the injured employee [Smith v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 117, 120-122, 116 Cal. Rptr. 2d 728] .

The court of appeal, however, pointed to other provisions of Bus. & Prof. Code § 7125.2(a), specifically, to the requirements that the license board "notify any licensee who fails to maintain workers' compensation that his or her license shall be automatically suspended 30 days from the date of the notice" and that the board "provide the licensee with an additional notice that informs the licensee of thesuspension date, the cause for suspension, and reinstatement procedures" [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7125.2(a)]. Because these notices were not sent to the contractor in this case, the contractor remained a licensed independent contractor, albeit one in violation of California's workers' compensation laws, at the time of the employee's injury. Consequently, the hiring company was not the injured employee's employer and was not liable for reimbursing the UEF [Smith v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 117, 124-125, 129, 116 Cal. Rptr. 2d 728] .

In another case, the court of appeal held that the plaintiff, as an unlicensed contractor, could not sue for payment for work that required a license and that the homeowner defendants properly recovered the compensation they had paid to the plaintiff for work that required a license. The court found that, prior to the plaintiff's work for the defendants, the plaintiff's contractor's license had been automatically suspended, pursuant to Lab. Code § 7125.2(a)(2), for failure to obtain workers' compensation insurance, not, pursuant to Lab. Code § 7125.2(a)(1), for failure to maintain workers' compensation insurance. Suspension of a license for failure to obtain workers' compensation insurance does not require the notice from the registrar of contractors that is required for suspension of license for failure to maintain workers' compensation insurance. In any event, the court conclusively presumed that the plaintiff had failed to carry his burden in the trial court to prove lack of notice [Wright v. Issak (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 1116, 1121-1123, 58 Cal. Rptr. 3d 1] .

In a wrongful death action brought by a deceased worker's parents, the California Supreme Court held that homeowners neither had nor breached any statutory duty of care owed to a deceased worker under Penal Code § 385(b), which provides that "[a]ny person who either personally or through an employee or agent, or as an employee or agent of another, operates ... or moves any tools ... [or] equipment ... within six feet of a high voltage overhead conductor is guilty of a misdemeanor." The Court found that the worker for an unlicensed contractor, who, through his own conduct, breached the duty of care embodied in Penal Code § 385(b) and was killed while trimming trees on the defendant homeowners' property, was not one of the class of persons for whose protection the statute was adopted. Moreover, said the Court, the homeowners had no control over the manner in which the unlicensed contractor or his workers performed their job. Finally, even if the homeowners were deemed to be the deceased worker's employers pursuant to Lab. Code § 2750.5, Penal Code § 385(b) did not give rise to any special standard of conduct or duty of care owed by them to the deceased worker to ensure that the tree trimming work would not result in his death or injury. The Court concluded that the plaintiffs' wrongful death suit was grounded in the common-law tort of negligence and was properly submitted to the jury based on evidence of the homeowners' allegedly negligent acts or omissions that may have caused or contributed to the deceased worker's fatal injuries, and the trial court properly refused to instruct on Penal Code §

385(b) and the plaintiffs' negligence per se theory [Ramirez v. Nelson (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 908, 917-920, 80 Cal. Rptr. 3d 728, 188 P.3d 659] .

[iii] Medical License

There is also a rebuttable presumption affecting the burden of proof that a physician and surgeon, licensed pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 500 et seq. (healing arts), who enters into a contract for the performance of health services on behalf of a licensed primary care clinic, as defined in Health & Safety Code § 1204(a)(1), is an independent contractor rather than an employee, but this does not authorize the employment of a physician and surgeon to provide professional services when the employment would violate any other provision of law [Lab. Code § 2750.6].

[5] Aliens/Undocumented Workers

Aliens are included in the statutory definition of "employee" under the workers' compensation law [Lab. Code § 3351(a)]. An "undocumented worker" is an employee who has neither a "green card," that is, a United States Permanent Resident card, nor a work visa [see 8 U.S.C. § 1324a(a)(1)(A), (a)(2), (h)(3) ("unauthorized alien")]. Although illegally employed, such workers are entitled to workers' compensation benefits when injured [Lab. Code § 3351 (defining employee as "every person in the service of an employer ... whether lawfully or unlawfully employed ...")]. The legislature has declared that all protections, rights, and remedies available under state law, except any reinstatement remedy prohibited by federal law, are available to all individuals regardless of immigration status who have applied for employment, or who are or who have beenemployed, in California [Lab. Code § 1171.5(a)]. For purposes of enforcing state labor and employment laws, a person's immigration status is irrelevant to the issue of liability, and in proceedings or discovery undertaken to enforce those state laws no inquiryis permitted into a person's immigration status except when the person seeking to make this inquiry has shown by clear and convincing evidence that the inquiry is necessary in order to comply with federal immigration law [Lab. Code § 1171.5(b)]. In enacting this statute, the legislature declared that its provisions are declaratory of existing law [Lab. Code § 1171.5(c)].

The court of appeal has held that a worker, who at the time of injury was an illegal alien who had obtained his job by showing the employer false Social Security and green cards, was an employee entitled to workers' compensation benefits, excluding reinstatement and back pay. The court found that, by virtue of Lab. Code § 1171.5, neither the Federal Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986 nor Hoffman Plastic Compounds v. NLRB [Hoffman Plastic Compounds v. NLRB (2002) 535 U.S. 137, 122 S. Ct. 1275, 152 L. Ed. 2d 271] preempted California from providing workers' compensation coverage to a worker who was unlawfully employed. The court also held that the worker was an "employee" within Lab. Code § 3351(a), when it found that, contrary to the employer's contention, there was no language in the statute to indicate that the legislature intended the statutory inclusion of a person "unlawfully employed" within the definition of "employee" to be limited to a person unlawfully employed by virtue of the employer's guilt in hiring the person in violation of federal law, and that, alternatively, since the employer did not prove that the worker was not an employee for purposes of workers' compensation law, the court assumed that the employer did not comply with federal requirements, so that the employer's own definition of "unlawfully employed" had been met. Finally, the court held that the Ins. Code § 1871.4 provision that it is unlawful to make knowingly false or fraudulent statements for the purpose of obtaining workers' compensation benefits did not preclude the worker from receiving workers' compensation benefits, since there was no evidence of the worker's having been convicted of fraud, as required by the statute, and since the worker was not required to be a lawfully documented alien to be an employee entitled to workers' compensation benefits, and since it was employment, not a compensable injury, that the worker obtained as a direct result of the use of fraudulent documents [Farmer Brothers Coffee v. W.C.A.B. (Ruiz) (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 533, 537-544, 35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 23] .

When an employer offers modified or alternative work to an injured employee that meets the conditions of Lab. Code § 4644(a)(5), (6), or (7), then subsequently learns that the employee cannot lawfully perform modified or alternative work due to the employee's immigration status, the employer is not required to provide vocational rehabilitation services [8

Cal. Code Reg. § 10131(d)]. An undocumented employee is not entitled to vocational rehabilitation benefits when the employee is unable to return to work solely because of immigration status and is not precluded from returning to work due to disability, since an employee who was legally entitled to work in the United States would not be entitled to vocational rehabilitation benefits in the absence of permanent disability [Del Taco v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2000) 79 Cal. App. 4th 1437, 1442-1443, 94 Cal. Rptr. 2d 825 (providing undocumented worker with greater benefits than those available to legal workers violates equal protection clause of United States Constitution)].

The court of appeal has held in a civil action for medical malpractice that the trial court should have excluded from the trial all reference to the plaintiff's immigration status, when the plaintiff was not seeking damages for loss of earnings or earning capacity. The plaintiff's immigration status was neither relevant to any issue in the case nor admissible to attack the plaintiff's credibility. Moreover, the court held that the trial judge's remarks during a motion in limine hearing impugning the character of undocumented immigrants and discussing the plaintiff's residency status were highly inflammatory, gave the appearance of preconceived ideas based on stereotypes about undocumented aliens, were not fair, did not give the appearance of fairness, and would lead a reasonable person to doubt the trial judge's impartiality or the fairness of the proceedings. The appellate court reversed the judgment for the defendant and remanded for retrial, directing the presiding judge of the superior court to reassign the matter to a different judge [Hernandez v. Paicius (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 452, 456-463, 468, 134 Cal. Rptr. 2d 756] .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Administrative Actions
1. General Principles of Workers' Compensation Law

51-577 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 577.23

§ 577.23 Conditions of Compensation Liability

[1] In General

An employer is liable for workers' compensation benefits without regard to negligence for any injury sustained by an employee arising out of and in the course of the employment, and for the death of any employee if the injury proximately causes death, when specified "conditions of compensation" are satisfied [Lab. Code § 3600(a)]. The employer's liability for benefits is in lieu of any other liability to any person, except as discussed in subpart B, § 577.310 et seq. [see Lab. Code §§ 3600(a), 3602, 3706, 4558]. The "conditions of compensation" are the following:

- At the time of the injury both the employer and the employee were subject to the compensation provisions of the workers' compensation law, the employee was performing service growing out of and incidental to the employment and was acting within the course of the employment, and the injury was proximately caused by the employment either with or without negligence [Lab. Code § 3600(a)(1)-(3)];

- The injury was not caused by the injured employee's intoxication byalcohol or unlawful use of a controlled substance, was not intentionally self-inflicted, did not arise out of an altercation in which the injured employee was the initial physical aggressor [see Mathews v. Workmen's Comp. Appeals Bd. (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 719, 726-728, 100 Cal. Rptr. 301, 493 P.2d 1165] , and was not caused by the commissionof a felonious act by the injured employee for which he or she has been convicted [Lab. Code § 3600(a)(4), (5), (7), (8)]; and

- The injury did not arise out of voluntary participation in any off-duty recreational, social, or athletic activity not constituting part of the employee's work-related duties, except when these activities were a reasonable expectancy of, or were expressly or impliedly required by, the employment [Lab. Code § 3600(a)(9); see Hughes Aircraft Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1983) 149 Cal. App. 3d 571, 573-575, 196 Cal. Rptr. 904 ; Mason v. Lake Dolores Group (2004) 117 Cal. App. 4th 822, 832-838, 11 Cal. Rptr. 3d 914 (question of whether employee was on duty or off duty at time of injury is not ultimate test for whether injury was covered by compensation bargain and thus subject to exclusive remedy rule, but rather ultimate test is whether injury arose out of and in course of employment, and "reasonable expectancy" requirement of Lab. Code § 3600(a)(9) is simply one subset of ultimate issue of whether injury arose out of and in course of employment)].

In the case of claims for death benefits, the employee must not have deliberately and willfully caused his or her own death [Lab. Code § 3600(a)(6)].

[2] Proximate Causation

The phrase "proximately caused by the employment," as used in the statute, has been held to merely elaborate on the general requirement that the injury arise out of the employment and means only that the injury must be employment-caused or connected in the sense that there be a cause-and-effect relationship between the employment and the injury. All that Lab. Code § 3600 requires is that the employment be one of the contributing causes without which the injury would not have occurred [see Maher v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 729, 734 n.3, 190 Cal. Rptr. 904, 661 P.2d 1058 ; Cooper v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1985) 173 Cal. App. 3d 44, 49, 218 Cal. Rptr. 783] . However, in one case a psychiatric injury suffered by a worker as a result of workplace gossip about her extramarital affair with a coworker was held, as a matter of law, not to have arisen out of employment. A finding of industrial injury is proper, said the court, only when the employment plays an "active" or "positive" role in the development of the psychological condition. An injury that grows out of a personal grievance between the injured employee and a third party does not arise out of the employment if the injury occurred merely by chance during working hours at the place of employment or if the employer's premises do not place the injured employee in a peculiarly dangerous position. In other words, gossip about an individual's personal life is not part of the employment relationship [Atascadero Unified School District v. W.C.A.B. (Geredes) (2002) 98 Cal. App. 4th 880, 884-885, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 239] .

[3] Post-Termination Claims

Except for psychiatric injuries, if the claim for compensation is filed after notice of termination or layoff, including voluntary layoff, and the claim is for an injury occurring on or after July 16, 1993 and prior to the time of the notice, no compensation is payable unless the employee demonstrates by a preponderance of the evidence that one or more of the following conditions apply [Lab. Code § 3600(a)(10)]:

- The employer has notice of the injury prior to the notice of termination or layoff.

- The employee's medical records, compiled prior to the notice of termination or layoff, contain evidence of the injury.

- The date of injury, as specified in Lab. Code § 5411, is subsequent to the date of the notice of termination or layoff, but prior to the effective date of the termination or layoff.

- The date of injury, as specified in Lab. Code § 5412, is subsequent to the date of the notice of termination or layoff.

This rule applies only to employer initiated separations, and does not apply to employees who resign from their employment [CJS Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 294, 298, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 109] .

A notice of termination or layoff that is not followed within 60 days by that termination or layoff is not subject to the foregoing provisions, and these provisions do not apply until receipt of a later notice of termination or layoff. The issuance of frequent notices of termination or layoff to an employee is considered a bad faith personnel action and makes these provisions inapplicable to the employee [Lab. Code § 3600(a)(10)].

1. General Principles of Workers' Compensation Law

51-577 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 577.24

§ 577.24 Arising Out of and in the Course of Employment

[1] In General

To be compensable, an injury must both arise out of the employment and occur in the course of employment [see Lab. Code § 3600; Cooper v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1985) 173 Cal. App. 3d 44, 48, 218 Cal. Rptr. 783 ; Rogers v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1985) 172 Cal. App. 3d 1195, 1199, 218 Cal. Rptr. 662] . "Course of employment" generally refers to the time and place of the injury, whereas "arise out of employment" refers to a causal connection between the employment and the injury [Maher v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 729, 733-734, 190 Cal. Rptr. 904, 661 P.2d 1058 ; Rogers v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1985) 172 Cal. App. 3d 1195, 1200, 218 Cal. Rptr. 662] .

The phrase "in the course of employment" is frequently defined as such service as the employee is expected to render, when it occurs within the period of his or her employment, at a place where the employee may reasonably be for that purpose, and while the employee is engaged in fulfilling his or her duties or in doing something necessarily incident to them. The phrase ordinarily refers to the time, place, and circumstances under which the accident occurs [Westbrooks v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 249, 252, 252 Cal. Rptr. 26 , quoting Griffin v. Industrial Acci. Com. (1937) 19 Cal. App. 2d 727, 732-733, 66 P.2d 176] . The determination whether injury-causing conduct was in the course of employment is necessarily decided on a case-by-case basis, taking into account the particular circumstances of the case, and both the WCAB and the courts are required to liberally interpret and apply the workers' compensation law in favor of conferring benefits on the injured employee. When the material facts of a case are not disputed, that determination is treated as a question of law [Westbrooks v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 249, 252-253, 252 Cal. Rptr. 26] .

In one case, the court of appeal held that an employee's death was not the result of an industrial injury, when the court found that the decedent, an accountant with a CPA license employed by the City of Los Angeles, died from injuries received from a fall while attending a CPA convention in Atlantic City, New Jersey. Neither the commercial traveler doctrine nor the special mission exception applied, said the court. The employer did not require the decedent to have a CPA license, and traveling to attend the convention for CPA credit was not expressly or impliedly authorized by the decedent's employment contract. Moreover, the employer did not benefit from CPA licensure, and the employer provided the training it considered necessary for its accountants. The employer motivated or encouraged CPA licensure as a personal achievement by bonus salary only, not as an incentive to improve an accountant's ability to do the job [City of Los Angeles v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 78, 68 Cal. Rptr. 3d 343].

[2] Burden of Proof

The applicant for compensation has the burden of proving by a preponderance of the evidence that his or her injury arose both out of and in the course of employment [Lundberg v. Workmen's Comp. App. Bd. (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 436, 439, 71 Cal. Rptr. 684, 445 P.2d 300 ; Rogers v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1985) 172 Cal. App. 3d 1195, 1199, 218 Cal. Rptr. 662 (citing Lab. Code §§ 3202.5, 3600, and 5705)]. All parties are required to meet the evidentiary burden of proof on all issues by a preponderance of the evidence in order that all parties be considered equal before the law [Lab. Code § 3202.5 ("preponderance of the evidence" as "that evidence that, when weighed with that opposed to it, has more convincing force and the greater probability of truth.")]. Nevertheless, the workers' compensation law must be liberally construed in the employee's favor [see Lab. Code § 3202], and all reasonable doubts as to whether the injury arose out of the employment are to be resolved in favor of the employee [Garza v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1970) 3 Cal. 3d 312, 317, 90 Cal. Rptr. 355, 475 P.2d 451 ; Ferreira v. Workmen's Comp. Appeals Bd. (1974) 38 Cal. App. 3d 120, 125, 112 Cal. Rptr. 232 ; see Westbrooks v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 249, 253, 252 Cal. Rptr. 26] .

[3] Employee Misconduct

Employee misconduct, whether negligent, willful, or even criminal, does not necessarily preclude recovery under workers' compensation law. In the absence of an applicable statutory defense [see discussion under § 577.23], such misconduct will bar recovery only when it constitutes a deviation from the scope of employment. In determining whether misconduct takes an employee outside the scope of his or her employment, a distinction must be made between an unauthorized departure from the course of employment and the performance of a duty in an unauthorized manner. Injury occurring during the course of the former conduct is not compensable. The latter conduct, although it may in some instances constitute serious and willful misconduct resulting in a reduction of the employee's benefits [see Lab. Code § 4551], does not take the employee outside the course of his or her employment [Westbrooks v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 249, 253, 252 Cal. Rptr. 26 (fact that bus driver was convicted of reckless driving while on assigned run for his employer did not take him outside course of employment so as to deprive him of workers' compensation benefits for emotional injury sustained in near-accident resulting from that reckless driving)]. For discussion of the effect of an employee's serious and willful misconduct, see § 577.17[1] .

[4] Acts Personal to Employee

The employee need not have been rendering service to the employer at the time of the injury in order to recover compensation. Acts that are necessary to the life, comfort, and convenience of the employee, though strictly personal, are incidental to the service rendered, and an injury sustained in their performance arises out of and in the course of the employment. This rule includes the majority of an employee's acts on the employer's premises, such as eating lunch, getting a drink of water, smoking tobacco where not forbidden by the employer, "attending to the wants of nature," changing to or from working clothes, and many others. Such acts, although not themselves representing the rendition of service, are reasonably incidental thereto, and are considered to be acts for the mutual benefit and convenience of the employer and employee [Dixon v. Ford Motor Co. (1975) 53 Cal. App. 3d 499, 504-505, 125 Cal. Rptr. 872 ; see Todd v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 757, 760, 243 Cal. Rptr. 925 ; State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Workmen's Comp. App. Bd. (1967) 67 Cal. 2d 925, 927-928, 64 Cal. Rptr. 323, 434 P.2d 619 ; Duncan v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1983) 150 Cal. App. 3d 117, 120, 197 Cal. Rptr. 474] .

The "personal comfort doctrine" described above does not apply, however, to cases that come within the scope of Lab. Code § 3600(a)(9), excluding from workers' compensation coverage injuries arising out of voluntary participation in any off-duty recreational, social, or athletic activity not constituting part of the employee's work-related duties, except when these activities are a reasonable expectancy of, or are expressly or impliedly required by, the employment [Todd v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 757, 760, 243 Cal. Rptr. 925] . The court of appeal has noted that the question of whether an employee was on duty or off duty at the time of injury is not the ultimate test for whether the injury was covered by the compensation bargain and thus subject to the exclusive remedy rule. Rather, the ultimate test is whether the injury arose out of and in the course of the employment. Moreover, said the court, the "reasonable expectancy" requirement [see Lab. Code § 3600(a)(9)] is simply a subset of the ultimate issue, namely, whether the injury arose out of and in the course of the employment [see Lab. Code § 3600(a)(2), (3)]. The court found that the employee's injury did not arise out of or occur in the course of the employment, since the employee was engaging in an activity for his own enjoyment, using a water slide, that was specifically forbidden to employees by company policy and of no benefit to the employer [Mason v. Lake Dolores Group (2004) 117 Cal. App. 4th 822, 832-838, 11 Cal. Rptr. 3d 914] .

On the other hand, the court of appeal held that a police officer's physical training injury, even though occurring while he was on vacation, was a compensable injury because his training was, pursuant to Lab. Code § 3600(a)(9), "a reasonable expectancy of ... the employment." The court found that the officer was injured on December 30, 2005, near the end of a three-mile run while on vacation in Wyoming. He was a member of his employer's SWAT team and was training for a physical fitness test to be administered in January 2006, which he was required to pass to retain his status as a SWAT team member. That test included a half-mile run. The court concluded that both requirements of Ezzy v. W.C.A.B. [Ezzy v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1983) 146 Cal. App. 3d 252, 194 Cal. Rptr. 90] were satisfied, i.e., the officer believed that his employer expected him to train for the test while on vacation, and this belief was objectively reasonable [Tomlin v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 1423, 1425-1426, 1428-1432, 76 Cal. Rptr. 3d 672].

For purposes of determining whether to grant or deny a workers' compensation claim, if an employee is injured or killed by a third party in the course of the employee's employment, no personal relationship or personal connection will be deemed to exist between the employee and the third party based only on a determination that the third party injured or killed the employee solely because of the third party's personal beliefs relating to his or her perception of the employee's race, religious creed, color, national origin, age, gender, disability, sex, or sexual orientation [Lab. Code § 3600(c)].

[5] Emergency Efforts on Behalf of Employer

Emergency efforts to save the employer's property from fire, theft, or other hazards are within the course of employment, and the fact that the rescue effort takes place outside of working hours does not detract from its work-connected status [Martinez v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1976) 15 Cal. 3d 982, 986, 127 Cal. Rptr. 150, 544 P.2d 1350] . Thus, an employee injured while visiting work on her day off when helping fellow employees hold up a collapsing shelf, thereby protecting her employer's property, was injured in the course of employment [Wright v. Beverly Fabrics, Inc. (2002) 95 Cal. App. 4th 346, 348, 115 Cal. Rptr. 2d 503] .

[6] Going and Coming Rule

[a] In General

One of the rules fashioned by the courts over the years to aid in determining whether an injury occurred within the "course of employment" is the "going and coming" rule. Broadly stated, the rule prohibits compensation for injuries received by an employee while traveling to and from work. Courts have reasoned that the employment relationship is suspended during this period and, therefore, injuries occurring when an employee is engaged in off-duty travel, off the employer's premises, are not within the "course of employment" for purposes of the Workers' Compensation Law [

Parks v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 585, 588-589 n.4, 190 Cal. Rptr. 158, 660 P.2d 382 ; see Southern California Rapid Transit Dist., Inc. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 158, 166, 151 Cal. Rptr. 666, 588 P.2d 806 ; Hinojosa v. Workmen's Comp. Appeals Bd. (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 150, 157, 104 Cal. Rptr. 456, 501 P.2d 1176] .

The "going and coming" rule applies to an employee who voluntarily participates in alternative commute programs sponsored by governmental entities, unless the employee is paid a salary to compensate for those periods of travel [Lab. Code § 3600.8(a)]. An employer's reimbursement of employee expenses or subsidization of costs related to an alternative commute program is not considered payment of a salary [Lab. Code § 3600.8(b); see also Rev. & Tax. Code § 17149]. If an employee's salary is not based on the hours the employee works, payment of his or her salary is not considered compensation for the period of travel, absent a written agreement [Lab. Code § 3600.8(b)]. Vanpool programs may provide workers' compensation benefits to employees who participate in an alternative commute program by riding in a vanpool, if the vanpool vehicle is owned by the employer (or by the State if the State is the employer) [Lab. Code § 3600.8(d)].

Any alternative commute program provided, sponsored, or subsidized by an employer to comply with any trip reduction mandates of an air quality management district or local government is considered a program mandated by a governmental entity [Lab. Code § 3600.8(b)]. A "governmental entity" is any local jurisdiction authorized to enact air pollution or congestion management controls, including regional air districts, air quality management districts, and congestion management agencies [Lab. Code § 3600.8(c)].

The "going and coming" rule has been widely criticized and, because of its harshness, the courts have carved out numerous exceptions [see Perez v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 60, 63, 199 Cal. Rptr. 280] . The principal exceptions are discussed below.

Although not, strictly speaking, falling under the heading of the "going and coming" rule or its exceptions, injuries incurred by an employee en route to or from a medical appointment to obtain treatment for an industrial injury are compensable, as long as the employee is traveling a reasonable distance, within a reasonable geographic area, to or from that appointment. Determinations of the reasonableness of the geographic area limitation and of the distance the employee travels are made on a case-by-case basis, considering all of the relevant circumstances. Thus, in one case an employee sustained industrial injuries in 2003 and 2005 for which she received ongoing medical treatment. In 2007 she drove approximately 130 miles from her home to visit her mother. Within minutes of leaving her mother's home to drive 136 miles to keep a medical appointment for treatment of her industrial injuries, she sustained serious injuries in an automobile accident. The court of appeal held that her new injuries occurred outside the reasonable geographic area of her employer's risk for incurring compensability liability for such injuries [Esquivel v. W.C.A.B. (2009) 178 Cal. App. 4th 330, 333-334, 344-345, 100 Cal. Rptr. 3d 380].

[b] Exceptions to Rule

[i] Special Risk Exception

Under the special risk exception, the employee is entitled to compensation for injuries sustained within the field of that risk if:

- "But for" the employment the employee would not have been at the location where the injury occurred; and
- The risk is distinctive in nature or quantitatively greater than risks common to the public.

The principle applies when the employee is entering or leaving the employer's premises. But the fact that the accident happens on a public road and that the danger is one to which the general public is likewise exposed does not preclude the existence of a causal relationship between the accident and the employment if the danger is one to which the employee, by reason of and in connection with his or her employment, is subjected peculiarly or to an abnormal degree [Parks v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 585, 589-590, 190 Cal. Rptr. 158, 660 P.2d 382 ; see Lefebvre v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1980) 106 Cal. App. 3d 745, 750, 165 Cal. Rptr. 246] .

[ii] Special Mission or Errand Exception

The special mission or the special errand exception has been defined as a business journey undertaken by an employee at the specific request of the employer. An injury suffered by an employee while performing such a special mission or errand is compensable [Southern California Rapid Transit Dist., Inc. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 158, 166, 151 Cal. Rptr. 666, 588 P.2d 806 ; see Guest v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 670, 672-674, 87 Cal. Rptr. 193, 470 P.2d 1] . The exception exists any time an injury is sustained by an employee performing a special mission for his or her employer. Thus, an injury sustained by an employee during his or her regular commute is compensable if the employee was also performing a special mission for the employer [Perez v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 60, 65, 199 Cal. Rptr. 280 , adding that the rationale for the going and coming rule has in effect been abandoned in the special mission cases)]. By contrast, a police officer injured on his day off while traveling from home to the courthouse where he was to testify under subpoena about police matters was barred from workers' compensation benefits by the "going and coming rule," the court holding that the special mission exception did not apply, since testifying was not extraordinary in relation to the officer's routine duties [City of San Diego v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 1385, 1388-1389, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 510] . Similarly, the court of appeal held that an employee's injury was not industrial since the accident occurred after the business portion of the trip was complete and while the employee and his wife were engaged in non-industrial sightseeing in Italy. The court found that there was no continuing or resumed business purpose at the time of the accident and that the employee was neither a commercial traveler nor on a special mission for the employer at the time of the accident [Fleetwood Enterprises, Inc. v. W.C.A.B. (Moody) (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 1316, 1323-1331, 37 Cal. Rptr. 3d 587] .

In a case not involving workers' compensation, the court of appeal, reversing the trial court's grant of summary judgment to the defendant employer, held that the employer had failed to show that there were no triable issues of material fact as to whether its employee was acting within the course and scope of his employment at the time of an automobile accident causing injuries to the plaintiffs. The facts were as follows: The defendant employee was vice president of anti-piracy Internet operations of Warner Brothers. He attended a three-day business conference in Sunnyvale, California, sponsored by one of his employer's anti-piracy vendors. His employer approved the trip and paid for the employee's airfare, hotel, and airport parking. After leaving the conference, the employee flew back to Burbank Airport, where he retrieved his car from the airport parking lot. On his way home, he drove around the studio complex where his office was located without stopping and took his normal route home until he was involved in the automobile collision that gave rise to the present cause of action. The court of appeal found that the employee's attendance at the out-of-town business conference may be considered a special errand/special mission, and that, when the employee intended to drive home from this errand/mission, the errand/mission was not concluded simply because the employee drove his regular commute route. Rather, the errand/mission was concluded only when the employee returned home or deviated from the errand/mission for personal reasons. In short, the business conference could be found to be a special errand/mission that had not yet concluded at the time of the accident, and the fact that the employee coincidentally passed his office on his return route home was immaterial since he did not stop at the office and intended to return home from the airport [Jeewarat v. Warner Brothers Entertainment, Inc. (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 427, 431, 436-439, 98 Cal. Rptr. 3d 837].

[iii] Commercial Traveler Exception

The commercial traveler exception is similar to the special errand exception in that it applies to injuries incurred in the course of a business journey undertaken by an employee at the specific request of the employer, but it connotes a wider range of activity and applies in those cases in which the employee's work entails travel away from the employer's premises [see Hartford Acc. & Indem. Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1982) 132 Cal. App. 3d 796, 805, 183 Cal. Rptr. 440 ; IBM Corp. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1978) 77 Cal. App. 3d 279, 282, 142 Cal. Rptr. 543] . Common examples would include a traveling salesperson and other employees whose job requires their traveling to places other than the employer's place of business [see Hartford Acc. & Indem. Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1982) 132 Cal. App. 3d 796, 805, 183 Cal. Rptr. 440 ; IBM Corp. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1978) 77 Cal. App. 3d 279, 280-282, 142 Cal. Rptr. 543] .

The commercial traveler is regarded as acting within the course of his or her employment during the entire period of travel on the employer's business, except when a distinct departure on a personal errand is shown. Thus, for example, a commercial traveler who obtains treatment for a preexisting non-occupational medical condition is not acting within the course of employment, and any secondary injury sustained while undergoing such treatment is noncompensable [LaTourette v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 644, 655-656, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 217, 951 P.2d 1184] . The employee's acts in traveling and in procuring food and shelter, however, are all incidents of the employment, and, when injuries are sustained during the course of such activities, the workers' compensation law applies [Wiseman v. Industrial Acci. Com. (1956) 46 Cal. 2d 570, 572, 297 P.2d 649 ; see IBM Corp. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1978) 77 Cal. App. 3d 279, 280-282, 142 Cal. Rptr. 543] .

The court of appeal has held that the "commercial traveler rule" of workers' compensation law could not be incorporated into the respondeat superior doctrine of civil tort law. Thus, the plaintiff in a civil tort actioncould not join the alleged tortfeasor's employer as a defendant when the alleged tort occurred while the employee was engaged in an activity not occurring within the scope of his employment, as would be required for invocation of the respondeat superior doctrine, even though the employee was a commercial traveler within workers' compensation law at the time of allegedly committing the alleged tort [Sunderland v. Lockheed Martin Aeronautical Systems Support Co. (2005) 130 Cal. App. 4th 1, 10-12, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 665] .

[c] Meal Breaks

Compensation for injuries sustained during uncompensated meal breaks away from the employer's premises is usually denied under the aegis of the "going and coming" rule; the employer-employee relationship is considered suspended during that period because the employer does not pay for the employee's services and the employee provides no benefits in return [McFadden v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 279, 281-282, 249 Cal. Rptr. 778 ; see Mission Ins. Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1978) 84 Cal. App. 3d 50, 56-57, 148 Cal. Rptr. 292] .

The rule is different, however, when the employee is compensated during the lunch break. In those situations, it is reasonable to infer that, by such an arrangement, the employer has impliedly agreed that service will continue during such period, and this is true whether the employee is salaried or paid at an hourly rate [McFadden v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 279, 282, 249 Cal. Rptr. 778 ; see also Duncan v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1983) 150 Cal. App. 3d 117, 119-121, 197 Cal. Rptr. 474] . For example, in McFadden, the court held that a salaried salesman who was injured while returning to work from an off-premises lunch with his supervisor and a coemployee at which business had been discussed was entitled to workers' compensation benefits because of the following [McFadden v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 279, 283, 249 Cal. Rptr. 778] :

- The salesman was salaried;
- He was authorized to take unscheduled lunch breaks;
- On numerous occasions, he had lunch, at which business was discussed, with his coemployees;
- His supervisor frequently joined them for lunch; and

- His employer had never notified him that his salary did not cover his meal periods and was not apportioned over the entire work day, which was from 8:30 a.m. until 4:30 or 5:00 p.m.

The McFadden court noted that it did not decide the broader issue of whether salaried employees are always entitled to workers' compensation benefits for injuries sustained during any break period [see McFadden v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 279, 283 n.2, 249 Cal. Rptr. 778] .

In another case, an employee who was injured in a traffic accident during an authorized lunch break was held to have been injured in the course and scope of her employment, when she was compensated on a commission basis, and continued to accrue commissions during her authorized lunch break [Wood Pontiac Cadillac v. Superior Court (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 810, 812-814, 6 Cal. Rptr. 2d 924] .

[7] Bunkhouse Rule

The bunkhouse rule renders injuries to an employee who is required to live on the employer's premises compensable under workers' compensation. Under the rule, if an employment contract contemplates, or the nature of the employment requires, an employee to reside on the employer's premises, the employee is entitled to workers' compensation for injuries received during the reasonable and anticipatible use of the premises [Crawford v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 1265, 1268, 230 Cal. Rptr. 425] .

In most situations in which the rule has been applied, sleeping on the premises was either required by the employer in order that the employer might more adequately avail himself or herself of the employee's services at any time, or as an extra compensation supplied to the employee in addition to the primary consideration of wages or salary paid [Crawford v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 1265, 1268, 230 Cal. Rptr. 425] .

In one case, the court of appeal held that the exclusive remedy rule of Lab. Code § 3602(a) barred the plaintiffs' civil action against the defendant for negligence and failure to make a house habitable for human occupation. The court found that the plaintiffs husband and wife lived in a ranch house owned by the defendant as an "employment benefit" of the husband's job as a park ranger employed by defendant. The plaintiff husband was injured when, attempting to get up from the bathroom floor of the house, where he had been observing leaking pipes while "on all fours," he slipped and fell. The bunkhouse rule, said the court, provides that, when an employee is injured while living on the employer's premises, the course-of-employment requirement of Lab. Code § 3600(a) is satisfied if the employment contract contemplates, or work necessity requires, the employee to reside on the employer's premises, which was true in the present case. Moreover, the employment and the injury must be linked in some causal fashion to satisfy the arising-out-of-employment requirement of Lab. Code § 3600(a), and an injury occurring in employer-furnished housing in the course of employment ordinarily arises out of employment, which was true in the present case [Vaught v. State of California, Department of Parks and Recreation (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 1538, 1544-1549, 69 Cal. Rptr. 3d 605].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Administrative Actions
1. General Principles of Workers' Compensation Law

51-577 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 577.25

§ 577.25 Time Limitations

[1] In General

Limitations on proceedings for compensation are set forth in Lab. Code § 5400 et seq. (discussed below), which must be liberally construed in favor of the employee [see Bland v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1970) 3 Cal. 3d 324, 330-331, 90 Cal. Rptr. 431, 475 P.2d 663 ; City of Fresno v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1985) 163 Cal. App. 3d 467, 471, 209 Cal. Rptr. 463] . These provisions do not apply, however, to further claims by the same person against the same defendants for the same injury if a timely claim for benefits was filed. The right to present further claims is governed by Lab. Code §§ 5803-5805 (discussed in § 577.220 et seq.) [Lab. Code § 5404; see J. T. Thorp, Inc. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1984) 153 Cal. App. 3d 327, 343, 200 Cal. Rptr. 219] .

The purpose of a statute of limitations for filing of claims is to cause an early submission of controversies while it is possible to obtain competent evidence concerning the alleged injury and its effects and, thus, to afford protection against false claims or those based on remote and unsatisfactory speculation as to the cause of a disability manifesting itself long after the accident [Sidders v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1988) 205 Cal. App.3d 613, 620, 252 Cal. Rptr. 304 ; see also Bassett-McGregor v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 1102, 1115, 252 Cal. Rptr. 868] .

An injured employee has a statutory duty to provide his or her employer with notice of the injury [see Lab. Code § 5400]. Similarly, the employer must provide the injured employee with certain information relating to the employee's rights under the workers' compensation law [see Lab. Code § 5401]. For a discussion of these requirements, and the effect on the statute of limitations of an employer's failure to comply with them, see § 577.40 et seq.

[2] Proceedings to Collect Compensation

[a] In General

The time within which a proceeding to collect benefits may be commenced is one year from (a) the date of injury, or (b)

the expiration of any period covered by payment under Lab. Code §§ 4650-4663 (disability payments), or (c) the date any benefits provided for in Lab. Code §§ 4600-4614.1 (medical and hospital treatment) were last furnished [Lab. Code § 5405; see J. T. Thorp, Inc. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1984) 153 Cal. App. 3d 327, 333-334, 340-341, 200 Cal. Rptr. 219 ; Sidders v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 613, 619, 252 Cal. Rptr. 304] . The purpose of (b) and (c), above, is to protect the injured employee from being lulled into a sense of security by voluntary payments of benefits until the time to commence formal proceedings has expired [Kaiser Foundation Hospitals v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1977) 19 Cal. 3d 329, 333, 137 Cal. Rptr. 878, 562 P.2d 1037] .

Because the three points of time specified in Lab. Code § 5405 at which the period of limitation starts to run are in the alternative, the defendant, to defeat the applicant's claim on the ground the action is barred by lapse of time, must prove that the time starting from any and all three of the points designated has elapsed [City etc. of San Francisco v. Workmen's Comp. App. Bd. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 1001, 1014, 88 Cal. Rptr. 371, 472 P.2d 459 ; Colonial Ins. Co. v. Industrial Acci. Com. (1945) 27 Cal. 2d 437, 441, 164 P.2d 490] .

[b] Cumulative Injury

Liability for occupational disease or cumulative injury claims filed or asserted on or after January 1, 1981, is limited to those employers who employed the employee during a period of one year immediately preceding either the date of injury or the last date on which the employee was employed in an occupation exposing him or her to the hazards of the disease or injury, whichever occurs first [Lab. Code § 5500.5(a); see J. T. Thorp, Inc. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1984) 153 Cal. App. 3d 327, 337-338, 200 Cal. Rptr. 219] . These time restrictions do not limit the period of recovery for a cumulative injury; rather, they reduce the burden placed on the entire compensation system of allocating costs among employers [Flesher v. Worker's Comp. Appeals Bd. (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 322, 327-328, 152 Cal. Rptr. 459, 590 P.2d 35] . If no employer during the foregoing periods is insured for workers' compensation coverage or an approved alternative, liability will be imposed on the last year of employment exposing the employee to the hazards of occupational disease or cumulative injury for which there is an insured employer [see Lab. Code § 5500.5(a)].

Any employer held liable under an occupational disease or cumulative injury award may, within one year after issuance of the award, institute proceedings before the WCAB for the purpose of determining an apportionment of liability or right of contribution under the award [Lab. Code § 5500.5(e)]. The statute of limitations begins to run when the initial award of benefits is issued, even if the initial award is not a final award determining the employee's entitlement to all benefits [see Rex Club v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 1465, 1474, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 393] .

Special provisions relating to liability for occupational disease or cumulative injury that results from exposure solely during employment by certain residential owners or occupants are set forth in Lab. Code § 5500.6.

The date of injury in cases of occupational diseases or cumulative injuries is the date on which the employee first suffered disability from such a disease or injury and either knew, or in the exercise of reasonable diligence should have known, that the disability was caused by his or her present or prior employment [Lab. Code § 5412; Western Growers Ins. Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 227, 238-239, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 26 (holding that employee first suffered disability in 1985 when he was hospitalized and that employee's testimony established that in 1985 he believed his problems were work related)].

In one case, an employee's application for benefits resulting from asbestosis was timely when there was no substantial evidence that the employee had a ratable permanent disability before filing the application, even though he had been hospitalized four years earlier for a respiratory infection, at which time his doctor told him he had asbestosis but also noted that the employee was able to perform his work and normal activities without limitations [Chavira v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 463, 474-476, 286 Cal. Rptr. 600] . Moreover, even assuming the employee had a permanent disability that could have been tentatively rated more than one year before he filed the application, the evidence did not support the WCAB's finding that the employee knew or reasonably should have known he had a permanent disability [see Chavira v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 463, 475-476, 286 Cal. Rptr. 600] .

Apportioning liability for cumulative trauma injuries, pursuant to Lab. Code § 5500.5, requires either compensable temporary disability or permanent disability to satisfy the disability requirement of Lab. Code § 5412. Because actual wage loss is required for temporary disability, modified work alone is not a sufficient basis for compensable temporary disability, but it may indicate permanent impairment of earning capacity, especially if the worker is never able to return to the original job duties. Medical treatment alone is not disability, but it may be evidence of compensable permanent disability, as may a need for modified work. These are questions for the trier of fact to determine and may require expert medical opinion [State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (Rodarte) (2004) 119 Cal. App. 4th 998, 1005-1006, 14 Cal. Rptr. 3d 793] .

If the WCJ finds that the employee suffered one continuous cumulative injury, then, under the terms of Lab. Code § 5500.5, the insurance carrier who provided coverage during the one-year period immediately preceding the date of injury or the date of last exposure, whichever occurs first bears full responsibility for the payment of workers' compensation benefits [Western Growers Ins. Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 227, 240-241, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 26] .

[c] Vocational Rehabilitation Benefits

In 2003 the legislature abolished the workers' compensation vocational rehabilitation program, repealing Lab. Code §§ 139.5, 4635-4647, and 5405.5 [see Stats. 2003, ch. 635, §§ 14, 14.3, 16]. In its place, the legislature created a "supplemental job displacement benefit" for specified workers who are permanently partially disabled, to be used for retraining. The new system applies only to injuries occurring on or after January 1, 2004 [see § 577.45[2A]].

In 2004, the legislature reenacted one of the statutes it had repealed in 2003, Lab. Code § 139.5, reinstating vocational rehabilitation. However, the reenacted statute applies only to injuries occurring before January 1, 2004, and it will remain in effect only until January 1, 2009, and as of that date is repealed, unless a later-enacted statute, that is enacted before January 1, 2009, deletes or extends that date [Lab. Code § 139.5(k), (l)]. Various other vocational rehabilitation statutes, e.g., Lab. Code §§ 4642, 4644(d), (e), and 5405.5, once cross-referred to in former Lab. Code § 139.5 but repealed in 2003, are also cross-referred to in the reenacted Lab. Code § 139.5 and are now identified with the designation "former." Thus, although the issue may be further clarified by administrative and judicial action, it now appears that the statutory law on vocational rehabilitation applicable to pre-2004 injuries is confined to Lab. Code § 139.5, those "former" statutes to which it cross-refers, and those statutes not repealed in 2003. For example, the 2002 amendment to former Lab. Code § 4646, which allowed settlement of prospective vocational rehabilitation benefits, has not been reenacted, while Lab. Code § 5100.6, forbidding such settlements, was never repealed and, thus, remains in force. As a consequence of these legislative developments, at least some of the discussion in this subsection regarding time limitations applicable to vocational rehabilitation benefits applies only to pre-2004 injuries.

Except as otherwise provided in Lab. Code § 4644 (termination of employer's liability for vocational rehabilitation services) and Lab. Code § 5410 (discussed in § 577.222[4]), the period within which an employee may request vocational rehabilitation benefits provided by Lab. Code §§ 4635-4647 is one year from the date of the last finding of permanent disability by the WCAB, or one year from the date that the WCAB approved a compromise and release of other issues [Lab. Code § 5405.5; see also Lab. Code § 139.5(f) (time within which an employee may request vocational rehabilitation services is set forth in Lab. Code §§ 5405.5, 5410, and 5803)]. Therefore, although Lab. Code § 5410 establishes a limitation period of five years from the date of the injury, Lab. Code § 5405.5 operates to provide that an initial request for vocational rehabilitation may be made after that time if the request is filed within one year from the last finding of permanent disability or approval of a compromise and release of other issues [Sanchez v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 346, 354-355, 266 Cal. Rptr. 21 ; Youngblood v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 764, 772, 265 Cal. Rptr. 211 ; see O'Loughlin v. Workers' Comp. Appeals

Bd. (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 1518, 1521-1524, 272 Cal. Rptr. 499 (holding that Lab. Code § 5405.5 applies to injuries occurring before enactment date)]. Once rehabilitation entitlement has been adjudicated, further requests for rehabilitatin must be made within the five-year period [Youngblood v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 764, 773, 265 Cal. Rptr. 211] .

If the applicant timely raises the issue of entitlement to vocational rehabilitation in the initial application for adjudication and the issue is still pending, the employee's failure to file a formal request for rehabilitation benefits with the WCAB within five years after the date of injury does not prevent an award of rehabilitation benefits [Vasquez v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1991) 226 Cal. App. 3d 867, 872-873, 277 Cal. Rptr. 102 ; see Lab. Code §§ 5405.5, 5410].

It has been held that an employee's telephone call to his or her employer's claims adjuster requesting vocational rehabilitation benefits constitutes a "request" for vocational rehabilitation benefits under Lab. Code § 5405.5, and that a written request is not required [Visalia School District v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (Hernandez) (1995) 40 Cal. App. 4th 1211, 1228, 47 Cal. Rptr. 2d 696] . However, in one case, a request for rehabilitation benefits following the approval of a compromise and release agreement was deemed to be an initial request subject to the limitations period of Lab. Code § 5405.5 and not a supplemental request subject to the five-years-from-the-date-of-injury limitations period of Lab. Code § 5410, despite the applicant's having placed a check mark next to "rehabilitation" in the application form filed for adjudication of claim immediately following his injury [Roberts v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1992) 33 Cal. App. 4th 631, 635-638, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 576] . It was undisputed that the applicant had not pursued a claim for rehabilitation benefits prior to the issuance of the order approving the compromise and release, and that the applicant's entitlement to those benefits had not previously been adjudicated [Roberts v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 631, 637-638, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 576] . Whether or not an applicant indicates in an application filed with the WCAB that rehabilitation is a disputed issue is irrelevant [Roberts v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 631, 638, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 576] .

[d] Proceeding to Collect Death Benefits

[i] In General

Except when death is from asbestosis or, in some cases, an HIV-related disease (discussed below), the period within which a proceeding to collect death benefits under Lab. Code § 4700 et seq. may be commenced is one year from [Lab. Code § 5406].

- The date of death when death occurs within one year from the date of injury;

- The date any benefits under Lab. Code § 4550 et seq. (compensation) were last furnished when death occurs more than one year after the date of injury; or

- The date of death when death occurs more than one year after the date of injury and compensation benefits have been furnished.

No such proceeding may be commenced more than one year after the date of death nor more than 240 weeks from the date of injury [Lab. Code § 5406; see Johnson v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 964, 972, 88 Cal. Rptr. 202, 471 P.2d 1002 ; Ruiz v. Industrial Acci. Com. (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 409, 411-414, 289 P.2d 229] .

Under Lab. Code § 5406, no claim can ever accrue to an adult dependent for benefits from an industrially caused death that occurs more than 240 weeks after the date of injury [Massey v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 674, 677, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 825, 854 P.2d 117] . The 240-week filing period is not tolled prior to the employee's death for a minor claimant by Lab. Code § 5408 (no limitation of time runs against minor absent appointment of guardian, conservator of the estate, or trustee). Under Lab. Code § 5406, if the injured employee dies more than 240 weeks from the date of injury, no death benefit claim can arise even though the claimant is a minor at the time of injury and files a claim within 240 weeks of the employee's death [Massey v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 674, 681-684, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 825, 854 P.2d 117] .

For purposes of the accrual of a dependent's claim for death benefits, the date of injury may depend on the claimant's knowledge of the industrial nature of the injury that caused the employee's death [Massey v. Workers'Comp. Appeals Bd. (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 674, 678 n.1, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 825, 854 P.2d 117] .

[ii] Death From Asbestosis

In the case of the death of an asbestos worker or firefighter from asbestosis, the period within which proceedings for the collection of death benefits under Lab. Code § 4700 et seq. may be commenced is one year from the date of death [Lab. Code § 5406.5]. The limitations period of Lab. Code § 5406.5 is tolled, however, until the dependent of the deceased asbestos worker knows, or in the exercise of reasonable diligence should know, that the worker's death was caused by the employment [Clark v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 684, 696, 281 Cal. Rptr. 485] . "Asbestosis" means any pathology, whether or not combined with preexisting pathology, that results in disability or need for medical treatment from inhalation of asbestos fibers [Lab. Code § 4402(a)]. For a definition of asbestos and discussion of its effects, see General Foundry Service v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 331, 335-336 n.2, 228 Cal. Rptr. 243, 721 P.2d 124 ; J. T. Thorp, Inc. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1984) 153 Cal. App. 3d 327, 330 n.1, 200 Cal. Rptr. 219 .

[iii] Death From HIV-Related Disease

In the case of the death of health care workers, public safety employees, and certain correctional peace officers from an HIV-related disease, the period within which proceedings may be commenced for the collection of death benefits under Lab. Code § 4700 et seq. is one year from the date of death, providing that [Lab. Code § 5406.6(a)]:

- A report of the injury or exposure was made to the employer or to a governmental agency authorized to administer industrial injury claims within one year of the date of the injury;

- The worker complied with the requisite notice provisions and the claim has not been finally determined to be noncompensable; or

- The employer provided, or was ordered to provide workers' compensation benefits for the injury prior to the date of death.

"Health care worker" means an employee who has direct contact, in the course of his or her employment, with blood or other bodily fluids contaminated with blood, or with other bodily fluids identified by the Division of Occupational Safety and Health as capable of transmitting HIV, who is either [Lab. Code § 5406.6(b)].

- Employed by a provider of health care under Civ. Code § 56.05, including but not limited to registered nurses, licensed vocational nurses, certified nurses aides, clinical laboratory technologists, dental hygienists, physicians, janitors or houskeeping workers; or

- Who provides direct patient care.

[e] Serious and Willful Misconduct

[i] By Employer

A proceeding to collect increased compensation under Lab. Code § 4553 on the ground of the employer's serious and willful misconduct may be commenced within 12 months from the date of injury. This period is not extended by payment of compensation, agreement for payment, or the filing of an application for compensation benefits under other provisions of the workers' compensation law [Lab. Code § 5407]. For discussion of Lab. Code § 4553, see § 577.17[2].

After the one-year period allowed by the statute, additional employers (such as, in this case, a special employer) may not be joined in a claim for serious and willful misconduct timely commenced against another employer (here, the general employer), unless the employee was ignorant of the identity of the late-filed-against employer until after the running of the statute [McGee Street Productions v. W.C.A.B. (Peterson) (2003) 108 Cal. App. 4th 717, 725-726, 133 Cal. Rptr. 2d 813] .

[ii] By Employee

A proceeding to reduce compensation on the ground that the injury was caused by the serious and willful misconduct of the employee under Lab. Code § 4551 may be commenced within 12 months from the date of injury. This limitation does not apply, however, if the employee has commenced proceedings for increased compensation on the ground of serious and willful misconduct of the employer [Lab. Code § 5407.5]. For discussion of Lab. Code § 4551, see § 577.17[1].

[3] Minors and Incompetents

If an injured employee or any of a deceased employee's dependents is under 18 years of age or incompetent at any time when any right or privilege accrues to the employee or dependent under the workers' compensation law, a guardian or conservator of the estate appointed by the court, or a guardian ad litem or trustee appointed by the WCAB, may, on behalf of the employee or dependent, claim and exercise any right or privilege with the same force and effect as if no disability existed [Lab. Code § 5408; see also discussion under § 577.81].

No time limitation runs against any person under 18 years of age or any incompetent unless and until a guardian, conservator of the estate, or trustee is appointed [Lab. Code § 5408; see Fogarty v. Dept. of Indus. Relations (1928) 206 Cal. 102, 104-105, 273 P. 791 ; Roblyer v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1976) 62 Cal. App. 3d 574, 579, 133 Cal. Rptr. 246 (dependency must be determined as of date of injury in case involving death benefit claim of dependent who was a minor at time injury was sustained and an adult when injured employee died); see also Fisher v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1976) 62 Cal. App. 3d 924, 929, 133 Cal. Rptr. 471 (same)].

The WCAB may determine the fact of minority or incompetency of any injured employee and may appoint a trustee to receive and disburse compensation payments for the benefit of the minor or incompetent and his or her family [Lab. Code § 5408].

[4] Tolling of Statute on Submission to Information and Assistance Officer

Submission of any matter to an information and assistance officer of the Division of Workers' Compensation (formerly the Division of Industrial Accidents) [see § 577.12[2]] tolls any applicable statute of limitations for the period that the matter is under consideration by the officer and for 60 days following the issuance of his or her recommendation [Lab. Code § 5454].

[5] As Affirmative Defense

The running of the period of limitation is an affirmative defense and operates to bar the employee's remedy and not to extinguish his or her right [Lab. Code § 5409]. The burden of proving that the action is barred rests on the defendant employer [Colonial Ins. Co. v. Industrial Acci. Com. (1945) 27 Cal. 2d 437, 440, 164 P.2d 490] . The defense may, therefore, be waived, and failure to present it prior to the submission of the cause for decision is a sufficient waiver [

Lab. Code § 5409].

§ 577.41 Consultation With Attorney

[1] Disclosure Statement

An employee may consult an attorney prior to notifying his or her employer of an injury, or at any time subsequent to notification. When the employee consults an attorney with respect to an injury occurring on or after January 1, 1990, counsel is required, at the initial consultation, to furnish the employee with a written disclosure statement relating to attorney's fees [Lab. Code § 4906(e); 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10134, 10135]. The form must be signed by the employee and his or her attorney, and the attorney must provide copies to the employee and to the employer, or to the employer's insurer or third-party administrator, if either is known, within 15 days of execution of the form by the employee and attorney [Lab. Code § 4906(e); 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10134, 10135.1].

For a disclosure statement form, see § 577.370[1].

[2] [Reserved]

[3] Fees and Fee Agreements

No charge, claim, or agreement for attorney's fees pertaining to a workers' compensation claim is enforceable, valid, or binding in excess of a reasonable amount. The WCAB may determine what constitutes a reasonable amount [Lab. Code §§ 4903(a), 4906(a)]. Therefore, an attorney or agent may not demand or accept any fee from an employee or dependent of an employee for the purpose of representing the employee or dependent in any proceeding of the Division of Workers' Compensation, the WCAB, or any appellate procedure related to such proceedings, until the amount of the fee is approved or set by the WCAB [Lab. Code § 4906(b) (governing injuries occurring on or after January 1, 1990)]. Additionally, every fee agreement must be submitted to the WCAB for approval within 10 days after it is made [Lab. Code § 4906(c) (governing injuries occurring on or after January 1, 1990)].

In one case, the court of appeal, affirming an Appeals Board order denying reconsideration of the WCJ's finding that a written attorney's fee agreement between an employee and his attorney was not binding, held that the legislature, in Lab. Code § 4906, has spoken clearly and decisively that attorney's fees in workers' compensation cases cannot exceed an amount that is "reasonable" and that the Appeals Board is the final arbiter of reasonableness in all cases. The court found that the fee agreement stated that SB 899 reduced permanent disability benefits, that the law firm could no longer afford to offer representation under Appeals Board attorney's fee guidelines, that the agreement was an attempt to draft around current policies under Lab. Code § 4906, "which are believed to be outdated," and that the parties, therefore, "agree that the fee will be set at $225 per hour to be paid out of permanent disability or 12% of the permanent disability award whichever is less." The agreement, stated the court, purported to override the Appeals Board's authority by guaranteeing that the attorney will receive fees according to a specified formula at the outset of the case, prior to and irrespective of any subsequent determination of reasonableness by the Board. To the extent that the agreement purported to "draft around" Lab. Code § 4906 by depriving the Board of its statutory authority to fix attorney fees, it conflicted with state law and was not enforceable. After services had been rendered, said the court, the WCJ may approve, increase, or reduce the fees provided for in the agreement, taking into consideration the factors listed in Lab. Code § 4906(d), 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10775, and the Appeals Board Policy and Procedure Manual [Vierra v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 1142, 1147-1150, 65 Cal. Rptr. 3d 423] .

In establishing a reasonable attorney's fee, the WCAB will consider the responsibility assumed by the attorney, the care exercised in representing the applicant, the time involved, and the results obtained [Lab. Code § 4906(d) (governing injuries occurring on or after January 1, 1990)]. No fee for legal services may be awarded to a representative who is not an attorney licensed by the California State Bar, except with respect to claims for which an application under Lab. Code § 5501 was filed on or before December 31, 1991, or for which a disclosure form under Lab. Code § 4906 was sent to the employer, or insurer or third-party administrator if either is known, on or before December 31, 1991 [Lab. Code § 4903(a); see also Longval v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1996) 51 Cal. App. 4th 792, 799-803 (Lab. Code § 4903(a), allowing attorney's fees only for attorneys licensed in California, held constitutional)]. For a discussion of liens for attorney's fees, see § 577.261.

§ 577.42 Notice Requirements

[1] Employee's Duty to Notify Employer of Injury or Death

[a] In General

A claim to recover workers' compensation may not be maintained unless, within 30 days after the injury that caused the disability or death occurred, a written notice signed by the injured employee or someone in the employee's behalf, or, in the event of the employee's death, by a dependent or someone in the dependent's behalf, is served on the employer [Lab. Code § 5400].

For injuries occurring prior to January 1, 1990, the notice must state the name and address of the person injured, the time and place where the injury occurred, and the nature of the injury [former Lab. Code § 5401, prior to repeal by Stats. 1989, ch. 892 (governing injuries occurring prior to January 1, 1990)].

[b] Effect of Failure to Provide Notice

Failure to give the notice or any defect or inaccuracy in it is not a bar to recovery if it is found as a fact in the proceedings for collection of the claim that the employer was not in fact misled or prejudiced by it [Lab. Code § 5403; see Kaiser Foundation Hospitals v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 57, 66, 216 Cal. Rptr. 115, 702 P.2d 197] . Moreover, knowledge of the employee's injury obtained from any source by the employer or the employer's managing agent, superintendent, foreman, or other person in authority, or knowledge of the assertion of a claim of injury sufficient to afford the employer opportunity to make an investigation into the facts, is equivalent to service of the notice on the employer [Lab. Code § 5402(a)].

[2] Employer's Duty to Notify Injured Employee of Workers' Compensation Rights

[a] Injuries Occurring Prior to January 1, 1990

For injuries occurring prior to January 1, 1990, on receiving knowledge of the injury, the employer must, unless an application for benefits has been filed, notify the injured employee or, in the case of death, his or her dependents that the employee or dependents may be entitled to benefits under the workers' compensation law [Lab. Code § 5402, prior to amendment by Stats. 1989, ch. 892 (governing injuries occurring prior to January 1, 1990)]. Although the law applicable to injuries occurring prior to January 1, 1990, does not specifically require an employer to provide the employee with a claim form, notice must be within the time period and in the manner prescribed by the regulations of the Administrative Director [Lab. Code § 5402, prior to amendment by Stats. 1989, ch. 892 (governing injuries occurring prior to January 1, 1990)]. The employer should therefore follow the notice procedures for injuries occurring on or after January 1, 1990, as set forth in 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10116-10119. For discussion of these procedures, see [2][b], below.

[b] Injuries Occurring on or After January 1, 1990

For injuries occurring on or after January 1, 1990, within one working day of receiving notice or knowledge of an injury that results in lost time beyond the employee's work shift at the time of injury or results in medical treatment beyond first aid, or of the employee's request, the employer must provide the injured employee or, in the case of death, his or her dependents with a claim form and a notice of potential eligibility for benefits under the workers' compensation law [Lab. Code § 5401(a); see also Lab. Code §§ 138.3, 138.4 (Administrative Director's authority to promulgate regulations regarding notices to be given to injured employees); 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 9812, 9880 (regulations regarding manner and content of notices)].

If the employer's claims administrator obtains knowledge that the employer has not provided a claim form, the administrator must provide one to the employee within three working days of obtaining knowledge that the form was not provided [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10140(b)]. If the administrator cannot determine if the employer has provided the employee with a claim form, the administrator must provide one within 30 days of the date the administrator had knowledge of the claim [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10140(c)].

For purposes of the above requirement, the term "first aid" means any one-time treatment, and any follow-up visit for the purpose of observation, of minor scratches, cuts, burns, splinters, or other minor industrial injury, which do not ordinarily require medical care. This one-time treatment, and follow-up visit for the purpose of observation, is considered first aid even though provided by a physician or registered professional personnel. The term "minor industrial injury" does not include serious exposure to a hazardous substance as defined in Lab. Code § 6302(i) [Lab. Code § 5401(a)].

Insofar as practicable, the notice of potential eligibility for benefits and the claim form are to be a single document and are to instruct the injured employee to fully read the notice of potential eligibility. The form and content of the notice and claim form are to be prescribed by the Administrative Director after consultation with the Commission on Health and Safety and Workers' Compensation. The notice is to be easily understandable and available in both English and Spanish. The content must include, but need not be limited to, the following [Lab. Code § 5401(b)]:

- The procedure to be used to commence proceedings for the collection of compensation.
- A description of the different types of workers' compensation benefits.
- What happens to the claim form after it is filed.
- From whom the employee can obtain medical care for the injury.
- The role and function of the primary treating physician.

- The rights of an employee to select and change the treating physician pursuant to Lab. Code §§ 3550(e) and 4600.

- How to get medical care while the claim is pending.

- The protections against discrimination provided pursuant to Lab. Code § 132a.

- The following written statements:

  - You have a right to disagree with decisions affecting your claim.

  - You can obtain free information from an information and assistance officer of the state Division of Workers' Compensation, or you can hear recorded information and a list of local offices by calling [applicable information and assistance telephone number(s)].

  - You can consult an attorney. Most attorneys offer one free consultation. If you decide to hire an attorney, his or her fee will be taken out of some of your benefits. For names of workers' compensation attorneys, call the State Bar of California at [telephone number of the State Bar of California's legal specialization program, or its equivalent].

[c] Victims of Crime

Employers are required to give any employee who is a victim of a crime that occurred on the employment premises written notice that the employee is eligible for workers' compensation, including psychiatric injuries, that may have resulted from the crime. The notice must be provided, either personally or by first-class mail, within one working day of the crime's occurrence or within one working day of the date that the employer reasonably should have known of the crime [Lab. Code § 3553].

[d] Failure to Give Employee Notice of Workers' Compensation Rights

For all injuries, whenever occurring, if the employer fails to provide the employee with notice of his or her rights under the workers' compensation law, the statute of limitations for filing a claim is tolled, provided the employee would be prejudiced if the statute were not tolled [Kaiser Foundation Hospitals v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 57, 64-65, 67, 216 Cal. Rptr. 115, 702 P.2d 197 ; Sidders v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 613, 621-622, 252 Cal. Rptr. 304] . The tolling ends, however, at such time as the employee gains knowledge of his or her workers' compensation rights [Gonzalez v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 514, 522, 230 Cal. Rptr. 649] . Knowledge by the employee that a claim must be filed will not cease tolling of the statute if the employer fails to notify the employee of the applicable time limits for filing the claim, absent evidence that the employee otherwise knew of the applicable time limits [Galloway v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 880, 887, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 374] .

To avoid tolling of the statute, the employer has the burden not only to assert the running of the statute of limitations, but an affirmative burden to establish either that written notice was given to the employee or that the employee had, in fact, actual notice of his or her workers' compensation rights [Sidders v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 613, 622, 252 Cal. Rptr. 304] .

In one case, the court of appeal followed Kaiser Foundation Hospitals v. W.C.A.B. (Martin) and held that CIGA failed to meet its burden to prove that an employee gained actual knowledge of his potential eligibility for workers' compensation benefits for a 1997 injury more than one year prior to filing his claim. The court found that the employer had breached its statutory duty to notify an unaware employee of his or her workers' compensation rights, tolling the one-year limitations period for filing a claim for benefits until the employee acquired actual knowledge of those rights. The court also found that there was no substantial evidence that the employee was actually aware that his 1997 injury was potentially compensable, and that his employer had, in fact, told him that his 1997 injury was not compensable. The employee's retention of counsel in 1999 to represent him in proceedings regarding a 1996 industrial injury was not evidence of the employee's knowledge of the compensable status of the 1997 injury. Moreover, the employee's attorney's 2002 request for a continuance of the trial regarding the 1996 injury in order to file a claim for the 1997 injury was not evidence that the employee, as opposed to the employee's attorney, had knowledge of the compensable nature of his 1997 injury. Finally, the court held that CIGA's conduct delayed the employee's filing of a claim for the 1997 injury, so that it was estopped to assert the statute of limitations. According to the court, CIGA's failure until May 2003 to admit that it had coverage for the 1997 injury delayed the employee's filing of an application for adjudication of the 1997 injury, making the employee's March 2004 filing of the application for adjudication timely [California Ins. Guarantee Assn. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 853, 856-857, 862-878, 77 Cal. Rptr. 3d 868] .

For discussion of time limitations generally, see § 577.25.

2. Filing a Workers' Compensation Claim--Initial Procedures

51-577 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 577.43

§ 577.43 Filing a Claim Form

[1] Source of Form

The Division of Workers' Compensation provides a claim form for use in filing a claim [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10139; see form in § 577.373[1]]. These forms are available at district offices of the Employment Development Department and the Division of Workers' Compensation, and may also be made available to the employee from other sources [Lab. Code § 5401(a)].

[2] Content of Form

The claim form must contain, prominently stated, the following statement [Lab. Code § 5401.7]:

> Any person who makes or causes to be made any knowingly false or fraudulent material statement or material representation for the purpose of obtaining or denying workers' compensation benefits or payments is guilty of a felony.

The form may, but is not required to, contain the statements required to be displayed by an insurer under Ins. Code §§ 1871.2 and 1879.2 relating to false or fraudulent claims under a contract of insurance [Lab. Code § 5401.7].

[3] Manner of Filing Form

The injured employee or, in the case of death, a dependent of the injured employee or an agent of the employee or dependent must file the completed claim form with the employer [Lab. Code § 5401(c)]. The claim form must be filed with the employer before the injured employee becomes entitled to late payment supplements under Lab. Code § 4650(d) or requests a medical evaluation under Lab. Code § 4061 or 4062 [Lab. Code § 5401(d)]. A claim form is deemed filed when it is personally delivered to the employer or received by the employer by first-class or certified mail [Lab. Code § 5401(c)].

[4] Employer's Duties on Receipt of Claim Form

[a] In General

Within one working day of receipt of a claim form, the employer must date the form and provide a dated copy to the employer's claims administrator and to the employee, dependent, or agent who filed the claim form [Lab. Code § 5401(c); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10140(a)]. The employer must also provide its insurer with a dated copy of the completed form [Lab. Code § 5401(c)].

Within one working day after an employee files a claim form under Lab. Code § 5401, the employer must authorize the provision of all treatment, consistent with the medical treatment utilization schedule under Lab. Code § 5307.27 or the American College of Occupational and Environmental Medicine's Occupational Medicine Practice Guidelines, for the alleged injury and must continue to provide the treatment until the date that liability for the claim is accepted or rejected [Lab. Code § 5402(c)]. Until that date, liability for medical treatment is limited to $10,000 [Lab. Code § 5402(c)]. Treatment so provided does not give rise to a presumption of liability on the part of the employer [Lab. Code § 5402(d)].

An employer's duty to provide timely compensation to an injured worker is not abrogated by an employee's failure to complete and file the claim form [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10137].

[b] Denial of Claim

The claim is deemed denied on the date the written denial notice is personally served or, if the denial notice is mailed, five days after it is placed in the mail if the address is within California, 10 days if the address is outside California but within the United States, and 20 days if the address is outside the United States [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10142]. In order to cease the claim form's tolling of the limitations period, the denial notice must be issued in accordance with the notice regulations [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10142; see 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 9812-9815].

[c] Presumption of Compensability if Liability Not Rejected

If liability is not rejected within 90 days after the filing of the claim form under Lab. Code § 5401, the injury is presumed compensable [Lab. Code § 5402]. Application of the presumption is mandatory when liability is not timely denied, even if the claim is accepted and paid, and denied at a later date [Williams v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 1260, 1265-1266, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 798] .

The Supreme Court has rejected the proposition that this 90-day period, during which the employer's rejection of liability will avoid the presumption of compensability of the employee's injury, begins to run when the employer receives knowledge of an injury or asserted injury, even though no claim form has been filed. Rather, the 90-day period runs only from the date on which the employee files a claim form with the employer. The Court found that this rule was the clear and unambiguous command of Lab. Code § 5402(b) and was manifestly intended to relieve the employer and the insurer from having to investigate and evaluate every possible claim, some of which might never ripen into actual claims for benefits [Honeywell v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 24, 33-35, 24 Cal. Rptr. 3d 179, 105 P.3d 544] . The Court also noted that an employer generally will be estopped to deny that this 90-day period began running before the filing of a claim form only if: (1) the employer, knowing that the employee had suffered or was asserting an industrial injury, refused to provide a claim form or misrepresented the availability of or need for the employee to file a claim form; (2) the employee was actually misled into believing that no claim form was available or necessary and failed to file one for that reason; and (3) because of this reliance, the employee suffered some loss of benefits or setback as to the claim. Finally, the Court stated that the employee need not show that the employer's agents consciously or deliberately set out to prevent or delay the employee's filing of a claim. Rather, the employer's violation, through its negligence, of its duty to provide a claim form and notice of potential eligibility when it learns that an industrial injury has occurred or is being asserted, resulting in the employee's prejudicial reliance, is sufficient to give rise to estoppel [Honeywell v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 24, 37-38, 24 Cal. Rptr. 3d 179, 105 P.3d 544; see Fleetwood Enterprises, Inc. v. W.C.A.B. (Moody) (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 1316, 1323-1331, 37 Cal. Rptr. 3d 587] .

The presumption is rebuttable only by evidence discovered subsequent to the 90-day period [Lab. Code § 5402(b)]. However, one court of appeal has held that the requirement that the employer reject liability within 90 days in order to avoid a presumption of compensability does not require the employer to actually notify the employee of the rejection within that time period so long as the claim itself was rejected within that time frame [Rodriguez v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 1425, 1433, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 713 (noting, however, that failure to provide timely notice may hamper efforts to prove that timely rejection was indeed made)].

[5] Effect of Filing on Statute of Limitations

For injuries occurring on or after January 1, 1994, the filing of the claim form with the employer tolls the time limitations for commencing proceedings for workers' compensation benefits set forth in Lab. Code §§ 5405 and 5406 until the employer denies the claim or the injury becomes presumptively compensable under Lab. Code § 5402(b) [Lab. Code § 5401(d)]. For purposes of this provision, a claim form is deemed filed when it is personally delivered to the employer or mailed to the employer by first-class or certified mail [Lab. Code § 5401(d)].

[6] Dismissal of Claim for Lack of Activity

[a] Injuries Occurring Prior to January 1, 1994

[i] If Claim Denied

If a claim form has been filed prior to January 1, 1994, and the claim is denied by the employer, the claim may be dismissed if there has been no activity for the previous 180 days and if the claims administrator has served notice specifying that the claim will be dismissed by operation of law unless an application for adjudication is filed within 180 days of service of the notice [Lab. Code § 5404.5(a); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10141(a); see § 577.450].

[ii] If Benefits Furnished

If a claim form has been filed prior to January 1, 1994, and benefits have been furnished by the employer, the claim may be dismissed if there has been no activity for the previous 180 days and if the claims administrator has served notice specifying that the claim will be dismissed by operation of law unless an application for adjudication is filed within five years of the date of injury or within one year of the last furnishing of benefits, whichever is later [Lab. Code § 5404.5(b); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10141(b); see § 577.451]. For these purposes, the date of last furnishing of benefits is the later of either [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10141(b)(2)]:

- The last date the employee received medical or rehabilitation services, or

- The last date that payment of any compensation benefit was mailed or personally delivered to the employee or service provider.

[b] Injuries Occurring on or After January 1, 1990, and Before January 1, 1994

When an application for adjudication for an injury occurring on or after January 1, 1990, and before January 1, 1994, has not been filed by any of the parties, an employer or insurer seeking dismissal of a claim form for lack of prosecution must solely utilize the procedures set forth in Labor Code Section 5404.5, discussed above, and must not seek an order of dismissal from the WCAB by filing an application for adjudication, a request for a pre-application determination, or any other petition or request [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10583].

[c] Service of Notice of Dismissal

These notices dismissing inactive claims must be served on the employee pursuant the rules regarding service of summons in the Code of Civil Procedure [Lab. Code § 5404.5(a), (b); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10141(d); see Code Civ. Proc. § 415.10 et seq.(rules of service)]. If the employee is represented by an attorney, the claims administrator must also serve a copy of the notice on the attorney by personal delivery or first class mail. If no Application for Adjudication of Claim has been filed, but the WCAB has assigned a case number to the matter because of pre-application filing, the claims administrator must also serve a copy of the notice on the Appeals Board with proof of service made in accordance with Rule 10975 of the Workers' Compensation Appeals Board's Rules of Practice and Procedure [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10141(d); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10975].

[d] Evidence That Claim Is Active

The occurrence of any of the following during the 180 days before service of notice is evidence that the claim is not inactive, thus precluding dismissal due to inactivity [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10141(e)]:

- The employee has made demand for payment or provision of benefits;
- The claims administrator has knowledge that there are benefits due and unpaid;
- There has been treatment rendered for the industrial injury;
- There has been a medical-legal evaluation of the employee;
- There has been a deposition in regard to the claim; or
- The claims administrator has other knowledge that the employee is actively pursuing the claim.

[e] Jurisdiction of WCAB

These provisions do not limit the jurisdiction of the WCAB [Lab. Code § 5404.5(d)].

§ 577.45 Provision of Benefits

[1] Medical Treatment

[a] In General

An employer is required to provide an injured employee with all medical, surgical, chiropractic, acupuncture, and hospital treatment that is reasonably required to cure or relieve the injury [Lab. Code § 4600(a)]. In 2004, the legislature defined medical treatment "reasonably required to cure or relieve the injured worker from the effects of his or her injury" to mean treatment that is based on the guidelines adopted by the Administrative Director pursuant to Lab. Code § 5307.27 or, prior to the adoption of those guidelines, the updated American College of Occupational and Environmental Medicine's Occupational Medicine Practice Guidelines [Lab. Code§ 4600(b)]. SB 899, the bill that enacted these provisions [see Stats. 2004, ch. 34], also provided that the amendment, addition, or repeal of any law made by SB 899 applied prospectively from the date of SB 899's enactment (April 19, 2004), regardless of the date of injury [see Stats. 2004, ch. 34, § 47]. The court of appeal has held that this provision means that the ACOEM Guidelines apply to determine what is reasonable medical treatment in all cases in which no such determination had been made as of April 19, 2004. The court found that the medical treatment in the case before it was completed almost two months before enactment of SB 899 but that no determination of the reasonableness of that treatment was made until May 2005, when the WCJ found, per stipulation of the parties, that the value of the disputed chiropractic services was $6,430 and that the ACOEM Guidelines were not applicable to the case, following which the Appeals Board denied reconsideration. The court of appeal annulled the Board's decision and remanded the case for further proceedings [Sierra Pacific Industries v. W.C.A.B. (Chatham) (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 1498, 1505-1512, 45 Cal. Rptr. 3d 550] .

The requirement to provide medical treatment includes provision of nursing, medicines, medical and surgical supplies, crutches, and apparatus, including orthotic and prosthetic devices and services [Lab. Code § 4600(a)]. Also included are the following:

- Services provided by licensed physical therapists, chiropractic practitioners, and acupuncturists [Lab. Code § 3209.5];

- Services of licensed marriage, family, and child counselors and clinical social workers, if the injured person is referred by a licensed physician and surgeon, with the approval of the employer, for treatment of a condition arising out of the injury [Lab. Code § 3209.8];

- Services provided by registered psychological assistants who meet the requirements set forth in Bus. & Prof. Code § 2913 [Bus. & Prof. Code § 2913; Bergenstal v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1996) 45 Cal. App. 4th 1272, 1279-1280, 53 Cal. Rptr. 2d 266] ; and

- Any other form of therapy, treatment, or healing practice voluntarily agreed on in writing between the employer and employee [Lab. Code § 3209.7].

Within one working day after an employee files a claim form under Lab. Code § 5401, the employer must authorize the provision of all treatment, consistent with the medical treatment utilization schedule under Lab. Code § 5307.27 or the American College of Occupational and Environmental Medicine's Occupational Medicine Practice Guidelines, for the alleged injury and must continue to provide the treatment until the date that liability for the claim is accepted or rejected [Lab. Code § 5402(c)]. Until that date, liability for medical treatment is limited to $10,000 [Lab. Code § 5402(c)]. Treatment so provided does not give rise to a presumption of liability on the part of the employer [Lab. Code § 5402(d)].

An employer who neglects or refuses to promptly provide medical treatment benefits is liable for the reasonable expense incurred by or on behalf of the employee in providing treatment [Lab. Code § 4600(a)]. The requirement that the employer approve a licensed physician's referral of an employee to a licensed marriage, family, or child counselor or social worker does not preclude reimbursement for self-procured treatment that is found by the WCAB to be otherwise compensable, if the employer has refused to authorize any treatment for the condition arising from the injury that is treated by the counselor or social worker [Lab. Code § 3209.8].

Medical treatment may be provided by a state-licensed physician assistant or nurse practitioner, acting under the review or supervision of a physician and surgeon pursuant to standardized procedures or protocols within their lawfully authorized scope of practice. "Medical treatment" includes the authority of the nurse practitioner or physician assistant to authorize the patient to receive time off from work for a period not to exceed three calendar days if the authority is included in a standardized procedure or protocol approved by the supervising physician. The nurse practitioner or physician assistant may cosign the Doctor's First Report of Occupational Injury or Illness. The treating physician, however, must make any determination of temporary disability and must sign the report [Lab. Code § 3209.10].

Provision of medical and hospital treatment benefits is governed by Lab. Code § 4600 et seq. [see also 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9780 et seq.]. In 1992, the Legislature enacted Lab. Code § 4612, which authorized the Administrative Director to implement a pilot project for a three-year period under which an employer participating in the project would be authorized to contract with a health care service plan to be the exclusive provider of medical, surgical, and hospital treatment for occupational and nonoccupational injuries and illnesses incurred by its employees. In 2001, the Legislature ended these pilot projects by repealing Lab. Code § 4612 [see Stats. 2001, ch. 115 § 24].

If an employee has filed a claim form pursuant to Lab. Code § 5401 (discussed under § 577.42[2][b]), a provider of medical services who has actual knowledge that a claim is pending is prohibited from collecting money directly from the employee for services to cure or relieve the effects of the injury for which the claim was filed, unless the medical provider receives written notice that the employer has rejected liability for the injury and provides the employee with a copy of this notice. A medical provider who violates this prohibition is liable for three times the amount unlawfully collected, plus reasonable attorney's fees and costs [Lab. Code § 3751(b)].

An employer may comply with the requirement to provide medical treatment to its industrially injured employees by contracting with a health care organization certified by the administrative director to provide such medical treatment [Lab. Code §§ 4600.3, 4600.5; see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9779.3 (obligations of employer covered by contract with health care organization)].

Unless the employer or the employer's insurer has established a medical provider network, as provided for in Lab. Code § 4616, after 30 days from the date the injury is reported, the employee may be treated by a physician of his or her own choice or at a facility of his or her own choice within a reasonable geographic area [Lab. Code § 4600(c)].

If an employee has notified his or her employer in writing prior to the date of injury that he or she has a personal physician, the employee has the right to betreated by that physician from the date of injury, if the employer provides either non-occupational group health coverage in a health care service plan, licensed pursuant to Health & Safety Code § 1340 et seq. (the Knox-Keene Health Care Service Plan Act of 1975) or non-occupational health coverage in a group health plan or a group health insurance policy as described in Lab. Code § 4616.7 (medical provider networks) [Lab. Code § 4600(d)(1); see [d], below].

A personal physician must be the employee's regular physician and surgeon, licensed pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 2000 et seq., must be the employee's primary care physician who has previously directed the medical treatment of the employee and retains the employee's medical records, including his or her medical history, and must agree to be predesignated. "Personal physician" includes a medical group, if the medical group is a single corporation or partnership composed of licensed doctors of medicine or osteopathy, that operates an integrated multispecialty medical group providing comprehensive medical services predominantly for nonoccupational illnesses and injuries [Lab. Code § 4600(d)(2); see also 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9780(g) ("primary care physician" defined)].

If the employer provides non-occupational health care pursuant to the Knox-Keene Act, and the employer is given timely written notice of the employee's personal physician, all medical treatment, utilization review of medical treatment, access to medical treatment, and other medical treatment issues are governed by the Knox-Keene Act. Disputes regarding the provision of medical treatment must be resolved pursuant to Health & Safety Code § 1374.30 et seq. If the employer provides non-occupational health care, as described in Lab. Code § 4616.7 (medical provider networks), all medical treatment, utilization review of medical treatment, access to medical treatment, and other medical treatment issues are governed by the applicable provisions of the Insurance Code [Lab. Code § 4600(d)(3), (4)].

The insurer may require prior authorization of any non-emergency treatment or diagnostic service and may conduct reasonably necessary utilization review pursuant to Lab. Code § 4610 [Lab. Code § 4600(d)(5)].

An employee is entitled to all medically appropriate referrals by the personal physician to other physicians or medical providers within the non-occupational health plan. An employee is also entitled to treatment by physicians or other medical providers outside of the non-occupational health plan pursuant to standards established in Health & Safety Code § 1367 et seq. [Lab. Code § 4600(d)(6)].

[b] Official Medical Fee Schedule; Contractual Fees

In 2003 the Legislature, seeking to control rising costs of medical treatment in the workers' compensation system, repealed former Lab. Code § 5307.1, which had authorized official medical fee schedules, and enacted a new Lab. Code § 5307.1, creating a different, and statutorily more complex, regime of official medical fee schedules [Stats. 2003, ch. 639, §§ 34, 35].

Under the new system, the Administrative Director, after public hearings, is required to adopt and revise periodically an official medical fee schedule that establishes reasonable maximum fees paid for medical services (other than physician services), drugs and pharmacy services, health care facility fees, home health care, and all other treatment, care, services, and goods described in Lab. Code § 4600(a) and provided pursuant to this new official medical fee schedule statute [Lab. Code § 5307.1(a); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 9789.10-9789.111]. Except for physician services, all fees are to be in accordance with the fee-related structure and rules of the relevant Medicare and Medi-Cal payment systems, provided that employer liability for medical treatment, including issues of reasonable ness, necessity, frequency, and duration, are to be determined in accordance with Lab. Code § 4600 [Lab. Code § 5307.1(a)].

Commencing January 1, 2004, and continuing until the time the Administrative Director adopted an official medical fee schedule in accordance with the fee-related structure and rules of the relevant Medicare payment systems, maximum reasonable fees were to be 120 percent of the estimated aggregate fees prescribed in the relevant Medicare payment system for the same class of services before application of inflation factors [Lab. Code § 5307.1(a); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 9789.20-9789.24 (inpatient hospital fee schedule, definitions, and payments for inpatient services); see also 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 9789.20(c), 9789.111(b) (regulations effective for inpatient hospital admissions with dates of discharge on or after July 1, 2004, while services for discharges after January 1, 2004, but before July 1, 2004, governed by "emergency" regulations that were effective on January 2, 2004, with bills for services with date of admission on or before December 31, 2003, reimbursed in accordance with 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9792.1)]. Pharmacy services and drugs were to be subject to the requirements of this statute, whether furnished through a pharmacy or dispensed directly by the practitioner pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 4024(b) [Lab. Code § 5307.1(a)]. For pharmacy services and drugs that were not otherwise covered by a Medicare fee schedule payment for facility services, the maximum reasonable fees were 100 percent of fees prescribed in the relevant Medi-Cal payment system [Lab. Code § 5307.1(a); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9789.40; see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9789.111(d) (regulation for pharmacy effective for services rendered after January 1, 2004)].

Within the limits provided by Lab. Code § 5307.1, the rates or fees established are to be adequate to ensure a reasonable standard of services and care for injuredemployees [Lab. Code § 5307.1(f)]. In order to comply with these standards, the Administrative Director may adopt different conversion factors, diagnostic-related group weights, and other factors affecting payment amounts from those used in the Medicare payment system, provided estimated aggregate fees do not exceed 120 percent of the estimated aggregate fees paid for the same class of services in the relevant Medicare payment system [Lab. Code § 5307.1(b); see, e.g., 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 9789.23, 9789.24 (hospital composite factors and specific outlier factors, and diagnosis related groups, relative weights, and geometric length of stay)].

Notwithstanding any other provisions of the fee schedules statute, the maximum facility fee for services performed in an ambulatory surgical center, or in a hospital outpatient department, may not exceed 120 percent of the fee paid by Medicare for the same services performed in a hospital outpatient department [Lab. Code § 5307.1(c); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 9789.30-9789.38 (hospital outpatient departments and ambulatory surgical centers: definitions, adoption of standards, applicability of fee schedule, determination of maximum reasonable fee, election for high cost outlier, and federal Medicare regulations incorporated); see also 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9789.32(a) (regulations apply to maximum allowable fees for emergency room visits and surgical procedures rendered on or after July 1, 2004); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9789.111(c) (services rendered after January 1, 2004, but before July 1, 2004, governed by "emergency" regulations that were effective on January 2, 2004)].

The Appeals Board en banc has held, pursuant to Kunz [see Kunz v. Patterson Floor Coverings, Inc. (2002) 67 Cal. Comp. Cases 1588, 1598-1599 (Appeals Board en banc opinion)] , that an outpatient surgery center lien claimant (or any medical lien claimant) has the burden of proving that its charges are reasonable. Moreover, held the Board, the outpatient surgery center lien claimant's billing, by itself, does not establish that the claimed fee is reasonable, so that, even in the absence of rebuttal evidence, a lien need not be allowed in full if it is unreasonable on its face. Any evidence relevant to reasonableness may be offered to support or rebut the lien. That evidence is not limited to fees accepted by other outpatient surgery centers in the same geographic area for services provided. In the case before the Board, the employee underwent surgery on her right wrist at the lien claimant's facility on April 9, 2002, for which the lien claimant billed $23,529, of which the employer had paid $1,667.66, leaving a claimed balance of $21,861.34. At the lien trial, the lien claimant offered no evidence that its billed amount was reasonable. The employer presented extensive rebuttal evidence that the billed amount was not reasonable, including evidence that the Official Medical Fee Schedule for inpatient providers of the same services in the geographical area of the lien claimant would be $5,690.80, and that Lab. Code § 5307.1(c) and the Official Medical Fee Schedule pertaining to outpatient surgery center fees, which went into effect on January 1, 2004, i.e., after the date on which the lien claimant provided its services, would allow $1,770.34 as a reasonable fee. The Board found that this statute and fee schedule provided some measure of reasonableness, when considered in light of the evidence presented [Tapia v. Skill Master Staffing (2008) 73 Cal. Comp. Cases 1338, 1342-1346 (Appeals Board en banc opinion)] .

If the Administrative Director determines that a medical treatment, facility use, product, or service is not covered by a Medicare payment system, the Director is to establish maximum fees for that item, provided that the maximum fee paid is not to exceed 120 percent of the fees paid by Medicare for services that require comparable resources. If the Director determines that a pharmacy service or drug is not covered by a Medi-Cal payment system, the Director is to establish maximum fees for that item, provided, however, that the maximum fee paid is not to exceed 100 percent of the fees paid by Medi-Cal for pharmacy services or drugs that require comparable resources [Lab. Code § 5307.1(d); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 9789.50, 9789.60, 9789.70 (maximum reasonable fees for pathology and laboratory services, durable medical equipment, prosthetics, orthotics, miscellaneous supplies and services, and ambulance services); see also 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9789.111(e), (f), (g) (regulations for pathology and laboratory, durable medical equipment, prosthetics, orthotics, and supplies, and ambulance services effective for services rendered after January 1, 2004)].

Prior to the adoption by the Administrative Director of a medical fee schedule pursuant to the fee schedules statute, for any treatment, facility use, product, or service not covered by a Medicare payment system, including acupuncture services, or, with regard to pharmacy services and drugs, for a pharmacy service or drug that is not covered by a Medi-Cal payment system, the maximum reasonable fee paid was not to exceed the fee specified in the official medical fee schedule in effect on December 31, 2003 [Lab. Code § 5307.1(e)].

The official medical fee schedule is to be adjusted to conform to any relevant changes in the Medicare and Medi-Cal payment systems no later than 60 days after the effective date of those changes, providing various, specified conditions are met [Lab. Code § 5307.1(g)(1); see Lab. Code § 5307.1(g)(2) (duties of Administrative Director with respect to changes in fee schedule); Lab. Code § 5307.1(g)(3) (definitions of terms relevant tochanges in fee schedule); see, e.g., 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9789.20(d) (inpatient hospital fee schedule to be adjusted to conform to relevant changes in Medicare payment schedule within 60 days); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9789.36 (regulations governing hospital outpatient departments and ambulatory surgical centers to be adjusted to conform to relevant changes in Medicare payment system); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9789.110 (update of regulations to reflect changes in Medicare payment system)].

Nothing in Lab. Code § 5307.1 is to prohibit an employer or insurer from contracting with a medical provider for reimbursement rates different from those prescribed in the official medical fee schedule [Lab. Code § 5307.1(h); see also Lab. Code § 5307.11 (discussed below)].

Except as provided in Lab. Code § 4626, the official medical fee schedule does not apply to medical-legal expenses, as that term is defined by Lab. Code § 4620 [Lab. Code § 5307.1(i)].

The following Medicare payment system components became part of the official medical fee schedule only on January 1, 2005 [Lab. Code § 5307.1(j)]:

- Inpatient skilled nursing facility care.

- Home health agency services.

- Inpatient services furnished by hospitals that are exempt from the prospective payment system for general acute care hospitals.

- Outpatient renal dialysis services.

Notwithstanding the provisions of Lab. Code § 5307.1(a), for the calendar years 2004 and 2005, the existing official medical fee schedule rates for physician services were to remain in effect, but these rates were to be reduced by five percent. The Administrative Director could reduce fees of individual procedures by different amounts, but in no event was the Director to reduce the fee for a procedure that was currently reimbursed at a rate at or below the Medicare rate for the same procedure [Lab. Code § 5307.1(k); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 9789.10, 9789.11 ("physician services" defined and payment rates set forth); see also 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9789.111(a) (regulations for physician services effective for services rendered on or after July 1, 2004, with services rendered after January 1, 2004, but before July 1, 2004, governed by "emergency" regulations that were effective on January 2, 2004). The Administrative Director's reduction of the maximum allowable reimbursement amount is set forth in 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9789.11(b), and three tables of physician services fees (one for services rendered between July 1, 2004, and January 13, 2005, inclusive, one for services rendered between January 14, 2005, and May 13, 2005, inclusive, and one for services rendered on or after May 14, 2005), all of which set forth each individual procedure code with its corresponding relative value, conversion factor, percentage reduction calculation, and maximum reimbursable fee, are incorporated by reference in 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9789.11(c). The tables ("Table A") may be obtained from the Division of Workers' Compensation website: www.dir.ca.gov/DWC/OMFS9904.htm].

Also notwithstanding the provisions of Lab. Code § 5307.1(a), the Administrative Director, commencing January 1, 2006, is to have the authority, after public hearings, to adopt and revise, no less frequently than biennially, an official medical fee schedule for physician services. If the Director fails to adopt an official medical fee schedule for physician services by January 1, 2006, the existing official medical fee schedule rates for physician services is to remain in effect until a new schedule is adopted or the existing schedule is revised [Lab. Code § 5307.1(l)].

The Administrative Director is required to contract with an independent consulting firm to analyze whether there is adequate access to quality health care and products for injured workers. If the Director determines that there is insufficient access, he or she may make appropriate adjustments to medical and facilities' fees. When there has been a determination that substantial access problems exist, the Director may, in accordance with the notification and hearing requirements of Lab. Code § 5307.1, adopt fees in excess of 120 percent of the applicable Medicare payment system fee for the applicable services or products [Lab. Code § 5307.2].

The Official Medical Fee Schedule applies to all covered medical services provided, referred, or prescribed by physicians, as defined in Lab. Code § 3209.3, regardless of the type of facility in which the medical services are performed, including clinic and hospital-based physicians working on a contract basis. The schedule does not apply to inpatient medical services provided by employees of a health facility [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9790.1 ("inpatient," "health facility," and "medical services" defined); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9792.1 (reimbursement for inpatient medical services)], medical-legal expenses authorized under Lab. Code § 4621, and medical expenses payable pursuant to 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9795. Nothing in the schedule precludes any hospital, as defined in Health & Safety Code § 1250, from charging and collecting a facility fee for the use of its emergency or operating rooms [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9791]. The report of the primary treating physician is payable in accordance with the schedule [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9785(i)].

The schedule consists of the procedures, procedure numbers, descriptions, instructions, and unit values adopted by the Administrative Director, effective January 1, 1994 [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9791.1]. For services provided on or after January 1, 1994, the conversion factors to be applied to unit values in the schedule are set forth in 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9792 [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9792].

A health care provider or health facility licensed pursuant to Health and Safety Code § 1250, and a contracting agent, employer, or carrier may contract for reimbursement rates different from those in the fee schedule adopted and revised pursuant to Lab. Code § 5307.1. In the event of such a contract, the medical fee schedule does not apply to the contracted reimbursement rates. Except as provided in Lab. Code § 5307.1(b), the official medical fee schedule establishes maximum reimbursement rates for all medical services for injuries provided by a health care provider or health care facility, other than those specified in contracts subject to this statute [Lab. Code § 5307.11].

Payment of physicians by employers, requirements governing the review of physicians' submitted bills, disputes regarding payments, and penalties and liabilities for late payments are governed by statute [see Lab. Code § 4603.2].

[c] Medical Treatment Utilization Schedule and Utilization Review Process

As required by statute [see Lab. Code § 5307.27], the Administrative Director, in consultation with the Commission on Health and Safety and Workers' Compensation, has adopted, after public hearings, a medical treatment utilization schedule [8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 9792.20-9792.23]. This schedule incorporates the evidence-based, peer-reviewed, nationally recognized standards of care recommended by the Commission pursuant to Lab. Code § 77.5, and it addresses, the frequency, duration, intensity, and appropriateness of all treatment procedures and modalities commonly performed in workers' compensation cases [Lab. Code § 5307.27; see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9792.20 (d), (j), (I), (k) (defining, respectively, "evidence-based," "peer reviewed," "nationally recognized," "scientifically based")].

Upon adoption of this schedule by the Director, the recommended guidelines set forth in it are presumptively correct on the issue of extent and scope of medical treatment and diagnostic services addressed in the schedule for the duration of the medical condition [Lab. Code § 4604.5(a); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9792.22(a)]. The presumption, which is a presumption affecting the burden of proof, is rebuttable and may be controverted by a preponderance of the scientific medical evidence establishing that a variance from the guidelines is reasonably required to cure or relieve the injured worker from the effects of his or her injury [Lab. Code § 4604.5(a); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9792.22(a)]. These recommended guidelines reflect practices that are evidence- and scientifically based, nationally recognized, and peer-reviewed [Lab. Code § 4604.5(b)]. Moreover, they are designed to assist providers by offering an analytical framework for the evaluation and treatment of injured workers and to help those who make decisions regarding the medical treatment of injured workers understand what treatment has been proven effective in providing the best medical outcomes to those workers, in accordance with Lab. Code § 4600 [Lab. Code § 4604.5(b); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9792.21(b)].

The Administrative Director has adopted and incorporated by reference the following medical treatment guidelines into the medical treatment utilization schedule [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9792.21(a)]:

1. The American College of Occupational and Environmental Medicine's Occupational Medicine Practice Guidelines (ACOEM Practice Guidelines), Second Edition (2004) [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9792.20(b) ("ACOEM Practice Guidelines" defined), (g) ("medical treatment guidelines" defined)].

2. Acupuncture medical treatment guidelines, which supersede the ACOEM Practice Guidelines, Second Edition, relating to acupuncture, except for shoulder complaints [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9792.21(a)(2) (details regarding permitted acupuncture treatment)].

Notwithstanding the medical treatment utilization schedule or the guidelines set forth in the American College of Occupational and Environmental Medicine's Occupational Medicine Practice Guidelines, for injuries occurring on and after January 1, 2004, an employee is entitled to no more than 24 chiropractic, 24 occupational therapy, and 24 physical therapy visits per industrial injury [Lab. Code § 4604.5(d)(1)]. These limitations of Lab. Code § 4604.5(d)(1) do not apply when an employer authorizes, in writing, additional visits to a health care practitioner for physical medicine services [Lab. Code § 4604.5(d)(2)].

The court of appeal has upheld the constitutionality of Lab. Code § 4604.5(d)'s limitation to 24 chiropractic treatment visits per industrial injury. The court found that Cal. Const., art. XIV, § 4, vested the legislature with "plenary power" to create a "complete system of workers' compensation." This grant of power, the court noted, neither restricted the legislature's ability to limit the number of chiropractic treatments for which the workers' compensation system must be financially responsible nor expanded an injured worker's constitutional rights to include entitlement to receive unlimited treatments. Moreover, the statutory exception allowing an employer to authorize chiropractic services in excess of 24 treatments did not constitute an unconstitutional delegation of legislative power, and, because an employer's decision to remove the 24-visit cap was not tethered to any factual or legal dispute requiring adjudication, due process under either the state or the federal constitution was not implicated. Finally, because the legislature's decision to reduce the unlimited availability of chiropractic treatments was rationally related to alleviating the perceived crisis in skyrocketing workers' compensation costs, the employee's rights to equal protection of the law were not violated [Facundo-Guerrero v. W.C.A.B. (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 640, 646-656, 77 Cal. Rptr. 3d 731] .

For all conditions or injuries not addressed by the medical treatment utilization schedule, authorized treatment and diagnostic services are to be in accordance with other evidence-based medical treatment guidelines generally recognized by the national medical community and that are scientifically based [Lab. Code § 4604.5(e); 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 9792.8(a)(2), 9792.22(b); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9792.22(c) (for conditions or injuries not otherwise covered by medical treatment utilization schedule)]. Treatment may not be denied on the sole basis that the condition or injury is not addressed by the medical treatment utilization schedule. In this situation, the claims administrator must authorize treatment if such treatment is in accordance with other scientifically and evidence-based, peer-reviewed, medical treatment guidelines that are nationally recognized by the medical community, in accordance with 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9792.22(b), (c), and pursuant to the utilization review standards in 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 9792.6-9792.10 [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9792.21(c); see also 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9792.23 (creation of medical evidence evaluation advisory committee to provide recommendations on matters concerning medical treatment utilization schedule)].

In addition to having created the medical treatment utilization schedule, discussed above, the legislature has mandated that every employer establish a utilization review process in compliance with Lab. Code § 4610, either directly or through its insurer or an entity with which an employer or insurer contracts for these services [Lab. Code § 4610(b)]. For purposes of this statute, "utilization review" means utilization review or utilization management functions that prospectively, retrospectively, or concurrently review and approve, modify, delay, or deny, based in whole or in part on medical necessity to cure and relieve, treatment recommendations by physicians, as defined in Lab. Code § 3209.3, prior to, retrospectively, or concurrent with the provision of medical treatment services pursuant to Lab. Code § 4600 [Lab. Code § 4610(a); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9792.6(s) (utilization review does not include determinations of work-relatedness of injury or disease, or bill review for purpose of determining whether medical services were accurately billed)].

Each utilization review process is to be governed by written policies and procedures, which must ensure that decisions based on the medical necessity to cure and relieve of proposed medical treatment services are consistent with the schedule for medical treatment utilization adopted pursuant to Lab. Code § 5307.27 [Lab. Code § 4610(c); see above]. Prior to adoption of that schedule, these policies and procedures are to be consistent with the recommended standards set forth in the American College of Occupational and Environmental Medicine's Occupational and Environmental Medical Practice Guidelines [Lab. Code § 4610(c); see above]. These policies and procedures, and a description of the utilization process, must be filed with the Administrative Director and disclosed by the employer to employees, physicians, and the public upon request [Lab. Code § 4610(c). Upon request by the public, the claims administrator must make available the complete utilization review plan, consisting of the policies and procedures, and a description of the utilization review process. The claims administrator may make these available through electronic means. If a member of the public requests a hard copy of the utilization review plan, the claims administrator may charge reasonable copying and postage expenses related to disclosing the complete utilization review plan. Such charge must not exceed $0.25 per page plus actual postage costs. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9792.7(d)].

The regulations adopted pursuant to Lab. Code § 4610 provide that the utilization review process is to cover treatment rendered on or after January 1, 2004, regardless of date of injury, and that each utilization review process is to be set forth in a utilization review plan that must contain [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9792.7(a); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9792.6(r)

("utilization review plan" means written plan filed with Administrative Director pursuant to Lab. Code § 4610, setting forth policies and procedures and description of utilization process)]:

1. The name, address, phone number, and medical license number of the employed or designated medical director, who holds an unrestricted license to practice medicine in California issued pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 2050 or 2450.

2. A description of the process whereby requests for authorization are reviewed, and decisions on such requests are made, and a description of the process for handling expedited reviews [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9792.6(o)] ("request for authorization" means written confirmation of oral request for specific course of proposed medical treatment pursuant to Lab. Code § 4610(h) or written request for specific course of proposed medical treatment; oral request for authorization must be followed by written confirmation of request within 72 hours, and both written confirmation of oral request and written request must be set forth on "Doctor's First Report of Occupational Injury or Illness," Form DLSR 5021 [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14006] or on Primary Treating PhysicianProgress Report, DWC Form PR-2, in 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9785.2, or in narrative form containing same information required in PR-2 form, and, if narrative format is used, document must be clearly marked at top that it is request for authorization); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9792.6(b) ("authorization" means assurance that appropriate reimbursement will be made for approved specific course of proposed medical treatment to cure or relieve effects of industrial injury pursuant to Lab. Code § 4600, subject to provisions of Lab. Code § 5402); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9792.6(g) ("expedited review" means utilization review conducted when injured worker's condition is such that he or she faces imminent and serious threat to his or her health, including, but not limited to, potential loss of life, limb, or other major bodily function, or when normal time frame for decision-making process would be detrimental to injured worker's life or health or could jeopardize his or her permanent ability to regain maximum function)].

3. A description of the specific criteria utilized routinely in the review and throughout the decision-making process, including treatment protocols or standards used in the process. A description of the personnel and other sources used in the development and review of the criteria, and methods for updating the criteria.

4. A description of the qualifications and functions of the personnel involved in decision-making and implementation of the utilization review plan.

5. A description of the claims administrator's practice, if applicable, of any prior authorization process, including but not limited to, when authorization is provided without the submission of the request for authorization.

The complete utilization review plan, consisting of the policies and procedures, and a description of the utilization review process, must be filed by the claims administrator, or by the external utilization review organization contracted by the claims administrator to perform the utilization review, with the Administrative Director. In lieu of filing the utilization review plan, the claims administrator may submit a letter identifying the external utilization review organization contracted to perform the utilization review functions, provided that the utilization review organization has filed a complete utilization review plan with the Administrative Director. A modified utilization review plan must be filed with the Administrative Director within 30 calendar days after the claims administrator makes a material modification to the plan [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9792.7(c)].

If an employer, insurer, or other entity requests medical information from a physician in order to determine whether to approve, modify, delay, or deny requests for authorization, the employer is to request only the information reasonably necessary to make the determination [Lab. Code § 4610(d)]. The employer, insurer, or other entity must employ or designatea medical director who holds an unrestricted California license to practice medicine, who is to ensure that the process by which the employer or other entity reviews and approves, modifies, delays, or denies requests by physicians prior to, retrospectively, or concurrent with the provision of medical treatment services, complies with statutory and regulatory requirements [Lab. Code § 4610(d); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9792.7(b)(1); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9792.6(c) ("claims administrator" is self-administered workers' compensation insurer, insured employer, self-administered self-insured employer, self-administered legally uninsured employer, self-administered joint powers authority, third-party claims administrator, or other entity subject to Lab. Code § 4610; claims administrator may utilize entity contracted to conduct its utilization review responsibilities); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9792.6(n) ("prospective review" means any utilization review conducted, except for utilization review conducted during inpatient stay, prior to delivery of requested medical services); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9792.6(p) ("retrospective review" means utilization review conducted after medical services have been provided and for which approval has not already been given); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9792.6(d) ("concurrent review" means utilization review conducted during inpatient stay)]. No person other than a licensed physician who is competent to evaluate the specific clinical issues involved in the medical treatment services (and when these services are within the scope of the physician's practice) requested by the physician may modify, delay, or deny requests for authorization of medical treatment for reasons of medical necessity to cure and relieve [Lab. Code § 4610(e); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9792.7(b)(2); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9792.9(f)]. The only exception to this rule is that a non-physician reviewer may be used to initially apply specified criteria to requests for authorization for medical services. A non-physician reviewer may approve requests for authorization of medical services. A non-physician reviewer may discuss applicable criteria with the requesting physician, should the treatment for which authorization is sought appear to be inconsistent with the criteria. In such instances, the requesting physician may voluntarily withdraw a portion or all of the treatment in question and submit an amended request for treatment authorization, and the non-physician reviewer may approve the amended request for treatment authorization. Additionally, a non-physician reviewer may reasonably request appropriate additional information that is necessary to render a decision, but in no event may this process exceed the time limitations imposed by the regulations [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9792.7(b)(3); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9792.9(b)(1), (b)(2), (c) (utilization review process time frame requirements). Any time beyond the time specified in these paragraphs is subject to the provisions of 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9792.9(g)(1)(A)-(C) (grounds for extending time frames). 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9792.7(b)(3). For a full discussion of utilization review process time frames, see below].

Regardless of whether an employer has established a medical provider network or entered into a contract with a health care organization, an employer that authorizes medical treatment may not rescind or modify that authorization after the medical treatment has been provided based on that authorization for any reason, including, but not limited to, the employer's subsequent determination that the physician who provided the treatment was not eligible to treat that injured employee. If the authorized medical treatment consists of a series of treatments or services, the employer may rescind or modify the authorization only for the treatments or services that have not already been provided [Lab. Code § 4610.3(a)].

The coverage of this statute has been restricted in the following ways [Lab. Code § 4610.3(b)-(d)]:

> 1. The statute is not to be construed to expand or alter the benefits available under, or the terms and conditions of, any contract, including, but not limited to, existing medical provider network and health care organization contracts.
> 2. The statute is not to be construed to impact the ability of the employer to transfer treatment of an injured employee into a medical provider network or health care organization. This statement is declaratory of existing law.
> 3. The statute is not to be construed to establish that a provider of authorized medical treatment is the physician primarily responsible for managing the injured employee's care for purposes of rendering opinions on all medical issues necessary to determine eligibility for compensation.

The statute spells out the criteria or guidelines to be used in the utilization review process to determine whether to approve, modify, delay, or deny medical treatment services [see Lab. Code § 4610(f); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9792.8(a)(2), (3); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9792.9(a), (j)]. Similarly, the statute sets forth the requirements that must be met in determining whether to approve, modify, delay, or deny requests by physicians prior to, retrospectively, or concurrent with the provisions of medical treatment services to employees [see Lab. Code § 4610(g); § 9792.9(b)(2), (3), (c), (e), (g)(2), (3), (4), (j), (k), (l); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9792.6(o)].

Every employer, insurer, or other entity subject to this statute must maintain telephone access for physicians to request authorization for health care services [Lab. Code § 4610(h); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9792.9(h)].

If the request for authorization of medical treatment is not approved, or if the request for authorization for medical treatment is approved in part, any dispute must be resolved in accordance with Lab. Code § 4062 [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9792.10(a)(1)]. An objection to a decision disapproving in whole or in part a request for authorization of medical treatment must be communicated to the claims administrator by the injured worker or the injured worker's attorney in writing within 20 days of receipt of the utilization review decision. The 20-day time limit may be extended for good cause or by mutual agreement of the parties [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9792.10(a)(2)]. Nothing in the regulation precludes the parties from participating in an internal utilization review appeal process on a voluntary basis, provided the injured worker and, if the injured worker is represented by counsel, the injured worker's attorney have been notified of the 20-day time limit to file an objection to the utilization review decision in accordance with Lab. Code § 4062 [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9792.10(a)(3)]. Additionally, the injured worker or the injured worker's attorney may file an Application for Adjudication of Claim, and a Request for Expedited Hearing, DWC Form 4, in accordance with the relevant regulations [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10252(b)(1), 10400, 10408 (requests for expedited hearings)] and request an expedited hearing and decision on his or her entitlement to medical treatment, if the request for medical treatment is not authorized within the time limitations set forth in 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9792.9, or when there exists a bona fide dispute as to entitlement to medical treatment [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9792.10(a)(4)].

The Appeals Board en banc has held that the utilization review time deadlines of Lab. Code § 4610(g)(1) are mandatory. A defendant that fails to meet the mandatory deadlines is precluded from using the utilization review procedure. If a defendant undertakes an untimely utilization review procedure, any report it obtains is not admissible in evidence with respect to the particular medical treatment dispute in question, and any report it obtains cannot be forwarded to an AME or QME if Lab. Code § 4062(a) procedures are timely pursued [Sandhagen v. Cox & Cox Construction, Inc. (2004) 69 Cal. Comp. Cases 1452, 1456-1460 (Appeals Board en banc opinion)] .

The Supreme Court has held that, when deciding whether to approve or deny an injured employee's request for medical treatment, the employer must conduct utilization review pursuant to Lab. Code § 4610 and that the employer may not, as an alternative to utilization review, elect to dispute the request for medical treatment pursuant to Lab. Code § 4062. The latter statute, said the Court, permits only employees to use its provisions to object to employers' decisions regarding treatment requests. The Court found that the legislature's intent regarding employers' use of Lab. Code § 4062 to dispute treatment requests "could not be more clear," and that the historical evolution of treatment request and review processes, as exemplified by omnibus reforms enacted in SB 228, effective January 1, 2004, and SB 899, effective April 19, 2004, further demonstrates the legislature's intent that Lab. Code § 4610 govern employers' review [State Compensation Ins. Fund v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 230, 233-234, 236-237, 239-245, 79 Cal. Rptr. 3d 171, 186 P.3d 535] .

The following requirements must be met prior to a concurrent review decision to deny authorization for medical treatment and to resolve disputes [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9792.10(b)]:

> 1. In the case of concurrent review, medical care may not be discontinued until the requesting physician has been notified of the decision and a care plan has been agreed on by the requesting physician that is appropriate for the medical needs of the injured employee. In addition, the non-physician provider of goods or services identified in the request for authorization, and for whom contact information has been included, must be notified in writing of the decision modifying, delaying, or denying a request for authorization that is not to include the rationale, criteria, or guidelines used for the decision.

2. Medical care provided during a concurrent review must be medical treatment that is reasonably required to cure or relieve from the effects of the industrial injury.

The statute establishes procedures by which the Administrative Director is authorized to assess administrative penalties for failures by an employer, insurer, or other entity subject to the statute to meet any requirement under it [Lab. Code § 4610(i)] These administrative penalties are not deemed to be an exclusive remedy for the Administrative Director [Lab. Code § 4610(i); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9792.11(b); see also 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 9792.12-9792.15 (administrative penalties)].

An employee is not entitled to an increase in compensation under Lab. Code § 5814 for unreasonable delay in the provision of medical treatment for periods of time necessary to complete the utilization review process in compliance with Lab. Code § 4610 [Lab. Code § 4610.1]. An increase under Lab. Code § 5814 is appropriate, however, when an employer has unreasonably delayed or denied medical treatment due to an unreasonable delay in completion of the utilization review process set forth in Lab. Code § 4610 [Lab. Code § 4610.1].

[d] Medical Provider Networks

[i] Creation and Approval of Medical Provider Network

In 2004, the legislature created medical provider networks as part of the year's major changes in workers' compensation law. The statutory scheme provides that as of January 1, 2005, an insurer or employer (for purposes of the medical provider networks statutes, "employer" means a self-insured employer, the Self-Insurer's Security Fund, a group of self-insured employers pursuant to Lab. Code § 3700(b) and as defined by 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 15201(s), a joint powers authority, or the state) [Lab. Code § 4616.5; see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9767.1(a)(7)] may establish or modify a medical provider network for the provision of medical treatment to injured employees [Lab. Code § 4616(a)(1)]. The network must include physicians primarily engaged in the treatment of occupational injuries and physicians primarily engaged in the treatment of nonoccupational injuries, with the goal being at least 25 percent of physicians primarily engaged in the treatment of nonoccupational injuries [Lab. Code § 4616(a)(1)]. The Administrative Director is instructed to encourage the integration of occupational and nonoccupational providers [Lab. Code § 4616(a)(1)]. The number of physicians in the medical provider network must be sufficient to enable treatment for injuries or conditions to be provided in a timely manner [Lab. Code § 4616(a)(1)]. Moreover, the provider network is required to include an adequate number and type of physicians, as described in Lab. Code § 3209.3, or other providers, as described in Lab. Code § 3209.5, to treat common injuries experienced by injured employees, based on the type of occupation or industry in which the employee is engaged, and the geographic area where the employees are employed [Lab. Code § 4616(a)(1)].

Medical treatment for injuries must be readily available at reasonable times to all employees [Lab. Code § 4616(a)(2)]. With respect to availability and accessibility of treatment, the Administrative Director is instructed to consider the needs of rural areas, specifically those in which health facilities are located at least 30 miles apart [Lab. Code § 4616(a)(2)].

The Administrative Director has considered the needs of rural areas in the regulation promulgated on the subject of access standards for medical provider networks [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9767.5]. A medical provider network must have at least three physicians of each specialty expected to treat common injuries experienced by injured employees based on the type of occupation or industry in which the employee is engaged and within the access standards provided in the regulation. In addition, a medical provider network must have a primary care physician and a hospital for emergency health care services or if separate from such a hospital, a provider of all emergency health care services, within 30 minutes or 15 miles of each covered employee's residence or workplace. Finally, a medical provider network must have providers of occupational health services and specialists within 60 minutes or 30 miles of a covered employee's residence or workplace [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9767.5(a)-(c); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9767.5(d) (alternative standards of accessibility)].

The medical provider network must have a written policy for arranging or approving non-emergency medical care for: (1) an employee authorized by the employer to temporarily work or travel for work outside the service area when the need for medical care arises; (2) a former employee whose employer has ongoing workers' compensation obligations and who permanently resides outside the service area; and (3) an injured employee who decides to temporarily reside outside the service area during recovery. This policy must provide such employees with the choice of at least three physicians outside the service area who either have been referred by the employee's primary treating physician within the medical provider network or have been selected by the employer. In addition to physicians within the network, the employee may change physicians among the referred physicians and may obtain a second and a third opinion from the referred physicians. The referred physicians must be located within the access standards described above. Nothing in this paragraph precludes an employer from having a written policy that allows an employee outside the service area to choose his or her own provider for non-emergency medical care [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9767.5(e)].

For non-emergency services, the medical provider network must ensure that an appointment for initial treatment is available within three business days of receipt of a request for treatment within the network. For non-emergency specialist services to treat common injuries experienced by the covered employees based on the type of occupation or industry in which the employee is engaged, the medical provider network must ensure that an appointment is available within 20 business days of receipt of a referral to a specialist within the network [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9767.5(f), (g)].

If the primary treating physician refers the employee to a type of specialist not included in the medical provider network, the employee may select a specialist from outside the network [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9767.5(h)].

The employer must have a written policy to allow an injured employee to receive emergency health care services from a medical service or hospital provider who is not a member of the medical provider network [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9767.5(i)].

To create a medical provider network, the employer or insurer must submit a plan to the Administrative Director for approval, which the Administrative Director must give if he or she determines that it meets the statutory requirements [Lab. Code § 4616(b); 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 9767.2-9767.4, 9767.13]. If the Administrative Director does not act on the plan within 60 days of its submission, it will be deemed approved [Lab. Code § 4616(b); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9767.2(a)]. The plan cannot structure physician compensation in order to achieve the goal of reducing, delaying, or denying medical treatment or restricting access to medical treatment [Lab. Code § 4616(c)]. However, if the employer or insurer meets the statutory requirements, the Administrative Director may not withhold approval or disapprove an employer's or insurer's medical provider network based solely on the selection of providers [Lab. Code § 4616(d)]. (The statutes and regulations specify requirements for approval of a health care organization certified pursuant to Lab. Code § 4600.5, a health care service plan licensed pursuant to the Knox-Keene Health Care Service Plan Act of 1975, and a group disability insurance policy as defined in Ins. Code § 106(b) as a medical provider network. Lab. Code § 4616.7(a)-(c); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9767.3. Any Taft-Hartley health and welfare fund is deemed approved for purposes of these statutes if it has a reasonable number of physicians with competency in occupational medicine, as determined by the Administrative Director. Lab. Code § 4616.7(d).) In developing a medical provider network, an employer or insurer has the exclusive right to determine the members of the network [Lab. Code § 4616(d)].

All treatment provided by members of the network must be in accordance with the medical treatment utilization schedule established pursuant to Lab. Code § 5307.27 or the American College of Occupational Medicine's Occupational Medicine Practice Guidelines, as appropriate [Lab. Code § 4616(e); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9767.6]. No person other than a licensed physician who is competent to evaluate the specific clinical issues involved in the medical treatment services, when these services are within the scope of the physician's practice, may modify, delay, or deny requests for authorization of medical treatment [Lab. Code § 4616(f)].

In one case, the court of appeal held that the defendant, State Compensation Insurance Fund (SCIF), had denied the plaintiff, Palm Medical Group (Palm), admission into its preferred provider network in violation of the common-law fair procedure doctrine. The court found that the record included ample evidence to support the jury's finding that SCIF "possessed power so substantial over the market for the treatment of occupational injuries in the Fresno area in 2001-2002 that the failure to admit an ordinary, competent medical provider to its [PPN] would significantly impair that provider's ability to practice occupational medicine in the Fresno area" and, therefore, that SCIF owed Palm a duty of fair procedure in acting on its application to SCIF's preferred provider network. According to Palm's salespeople, approximately six of every 10 businesses solicited in Fresno were insured by SCIF. Also, in 2002, 61 percent of the total written premiums received by SCIF in Fresno County came from employers participating in its preferred provider network program. In July 2002 SCIF informed Palm that it had "significant concerns with [Palm's] prior and current performance and [could not] consider them for admission into the PPN at [that] time." The court stated that the common-law doctrine of fair procedure protects against arbitrary decisions by private organizations, including decisions to expel or exclude qualified persons without acting in a manner that is substantively rational and procedurally fair, that the doctrine applies primarily to decisions affecting membership in private organizations that affect the public interest, particularly when there are "substantial economic ramifications" from exclusion, and that the obligation to comply with the common-law right to fair procedure arises only when an organization, such as SCIF, possesses power so substantial that denial of membership significantly impairs the ability of an ordinary, competent physician to practice medicine o r a medical specialty in a particular geographic area, thereby affecting an important, substantial economic interest. The court concluded that the jury properly awarded Palm $1,131,000 in damages, but that Palm was not entitled to an injunction compelling its admission to SCIF's preferred provider network since that network has been replaced by a medical provider network, of which Palm was a member [Palm Medical Group, Inc. v. State Compensation Insurance Fund (2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 206, 210, 218-228, 74 Cal. Rptr. 3d 266].

[ii] Economic Profiling of Providers

The medical provider network statutes and regulations speak in terms of "economic profiling," which they define as any evaluation of a particular physician, provider, medical group, or individual practice association based in whole or in part on the economic costs or utilization of services associated with medical care provided or authorized by that person or entity [Lab. Code § 4616.1(c); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9767.1(a)(5)]. An insurer or employer that offers a medical provider network and that uses economic profiling must file with the Administrative Director a description of any policies and procedures related to the economic profiling being utilized [Lab. Code § 4616.1(a)]. The filing must describe how these policies and procedures are used in utilization review, peer review, incentive and penalty programs, and in provider retention and termination decisions [Lab. Code § 4616.1(a); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9767.11]. The insurer or employer must provide a copy of the filing to an individual physician, provider, medical group, or individual practice association [Lab. Code § 4616.1(a)]. The Administrative Director is required to make each insurer's or employer's filing available to the public upon request [Lab. Code § 4616.1(b)]. However, the Administrative Director may not publicly disclose any information determined by him or her to be confidential pursuant to state or federal law [Lab. Code § 4616.1(b)].

[iii] Continuity of Care and Completion of Treatment by Terminated Providers

An insurer or employer that offers a medical provider network plan must notify each employee in writing about the use of the network, 30 days prior to the implementation of an approved network, at the time of hire, or when an existing employee transfers into the network, whichever is appropriate to ensure that the employee has received the initial notification. The notification must also be sent to an employee at the time of injury. The notification(s) must be written in English and Spanish. The initial written notification is to include the following information [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9767.12(a)]:

1. How to contact the person designated by the insurer or employer to be the network contact for employees. The employer or insurer must provide a toll free telephone number if the network's service area includes more than one area code.

2. A description of network services.

3. How to review, receive, or access the network provider directory. Nothing precludes an insurer or employer from initially providing employees with a regional area listing of network providers in addition to maintaining and making available its complete provider listing in writing. If the provider directory is also accessible on a website, the URL address must be listed.

4. How to access initial care and subsequent care, and what the access standards are under 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9767.5.

5. How to access treatment if: (1) the employee is authorized by the employer to temporarily work or travel for work outside the network's geographical service area: (2) a former employee whose employer has ongoing workers' compensation obligations permanently resides outside the service area; and (3) an injured employee decides to temporarily reside outside the service area during recovery.

6. How to choose a physician within the network.

7. What to do if an employee has trouble getting an appointment with a provider within the network.

8. How to change a physician within the network.

9. How to obtain a referral to a specialist within the network or outside the network, if needed.

10. How to use the second and third opinion process.

11. How to request and receive an independent medical review.

12. A description of the standards for transfer of ongoing care into the network and a notification that a copy of the policy must be provided to an employee upon request.

13. A description of the continuity of care policy and a notification that a copy of the policy must be provided to an employee upon request.

At the time of the selection of the physician for a third opinion, the employee must be notified about the Independent Medical Review process. This notification must be written in English and Spanish [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9767.12(b); see [iv], [v], below].

Employees must be notified 30 days prior to a change of the medical provider network. If the network operator is an insurer, a copy of the notification must be served on the insured employer. This notification must be written in English and Spanish [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9767.12(c)].

An insurer or employer that arranges for care for injured employees through a medical provider network must file a written continuity of care policy with the Administrative Director for approval [Lab. Code § 4616.2(a)]. Similarly, any revision of the continuity of care policy must be filed for approval if it makes a material change to the policy [Lab. Code § 4616.2(b)]. In addition, the insurer or employer must provide to all employees entering the workers' compensation system notice of its written continuity of care policy and information regarding the process for an employee to request a review under the policy, and must provide, on request, a copy of the written policy to an employee [Lab. Code § 4616.2(c)].

If the employee's injury or illness does not meet the conditions set forth in items 1-4 in the list below, the employee may be transferred into the network for medical treatment. Until the injured employee is transferred into the network, the employee's physician may make referrals to providers within or outside the network. Nothing in this regulation precludes an insurer or employer from agreeing to provide medical care with providers outside of the network [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9767.9(a)-(c)].

If an employee is being treated for an occupational injury or illness by a physician or provider prior to coverage of a medical provider network, and the employee's physician or provider becomes a provider within the network that applies to the employee, the insurer or employer must inform the employee and his or her physician or provider that his or her treatment is being provided by his or her physician or provider under the provisions of the network [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9767.9(d)].

The insurer or employer must provide for the completion of treatment for employees who are being treated outside of the network for an occupational injury or illness that occurred prior to the coverage of the network and whose treating physician is not a provider within the network, including employees who pre-designated a physician and do not fall within Lab. Code § 4600(d), for the following conditions [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9767.9(e)]:

> 1. An acute condition. For purposes of this regulation, an acute condition is a medical condition that involves a sudden onset of symptoms due to an illness, injury, or other medical problem that requires prompt medical attention and that has a duration of less than 90 days. Completion of treatment must be provided for the duration of the acute condition.
> 2. A serious chronic condition. For purposes of this regulation, a serious chronic condition is a medical condition due to a disease, illness, catastrophic injury, or other medical problem or medical disorder that is serious in nature and that persists without full cure or worsens over 90 days and requires ongoing treatment to maintain remission or prevent deterioration. Completion of treatment must be provided for a period of time necessary, up to one year: (A) to complete a course of treatment approved by the employer or insurer; and (B) to arrange for transfer to another provider within the network, as determined by the insurer or employer. The one-year period for completion of treatment starts from the date of the injured employee's receipt of the notification [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9767.9(f)] of the determination that the employee has a serious chronic condition.
> 3. A terminal illness. For purposes of this regulation, a terminal illness is an incurable or irreversible condition that has a high probability of causing death within one year or less. Completion of treatment must be provided for the duration of a terminal illness.
> 4. Performance of a surgery or other procedure that is authorized by the insurer or employer as part of a documented course of treatment and has been recommended and documented by the provider to occur within 180 days from the network coverage effective date.

If the employer or insurer decides to transfer the employee's medical care to the network, the insurer or employer must notify the employee of the determination regarding the completion of treatment and the decision to transfer medical care into the network. The notification is to be sent to the employee's residence, and a copy of the letter must be sent to the employee's primary treating physician. The notification must be written in English and Spanish and use layperson's terms to the maximum extent possible [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9767.9(f)].

If the employee disputes the medical determination under this regulation, the employee must request a report from the employee's primary treating physician that addresses whether the employee falls within any of the conditions set forth in items 1-4, above. The treating physician must provide the report to the employee within 20 calendar days of the request. If the treating physician fails to issue the report, then the determination made by the employer or insurer will apply [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9767.9(g); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9767.9(f)].

If the employer or insurer or the employee objects to the medical determination by the treating physician, the dispute regarding the medical determination made by the treating physician concerning the transfer of care is to be resolved pursuant to Lab. Code § 4062 [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9767.9(h)].

If the treating physician agrees with the insurer's or employer's determination that the employee's medical condition does not meet the conditions set forth in items 1-4, above, the transfer of care will go forward during the dispute resolution process. If the treating physician does not agree with the insurer's or employer's determination that the employee's medical condition does not meet the conditions set forth in items 1-4, above, the transfer of care will not go forward until the dispute is resolved [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9767.9(i), (j)].

As part of its continuity of care policy, an insurer or employer that offers a medical provider network must, at the request of an injured employee, provide the completion of treatment in certain situations by a terminated provider [Lab. Code § 4616.2(d)(1)]. Specifically, the completion of treatment must be provided by a terminated provider to an injured employee who, at the time of the contract's termination, was receiving services from that provider, subject to coverage through the workers' compensation system, for [Lab. Code § 4616.2(d)(2), (3)]:

1. An acute condition [see Lab. Code § 4616.2(d)(3)(A) ("An acute condition is a medical condition that involves a sudden onset of symptoms due to an illness, injury, or other medical problem that requires prompt medical attention and that has a limited duration." The relevant regulation provides that an acute condition, as referred to in this statute, has a duration of less than 90 days. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9767.10(b))], for which completion of treatment must be provided for its duration.

2. A serious chronic condition [see Lab. Code § 4616.2(d)(3)(B) ("A serious chronic condition is a medical condition due to a disease, illness, or other medical problem or medical disorder that is serious in nature and that persists without full cure or worsens over an extended period of time or requires ongoing treatment to maintain remission or prevent deterioration." The relevant regulation provides that an extended period of time, as referred to in this statute with regard to a serious and chronic condition, has a duration of at least 90 days. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9767.10(c))], for which completion of treatment must be provided for a period of time (not to exceed 12 months from the contract termination date) necessary to complete a course of treatment and to arrange for a safe transfer to another provider, as determined by the insurer or employer in consultation with the injured employee and the terminated provider and consistent with good professional practice.

3. A terminal illness [see Lab. Code § 4616.2(d)(3)(C) ("A terminal illness is an incurable or irreversible condition that has a high probability of causing death within one year or less")], for which completion of treatment must be provided for its duration.

4. Performance of a surgery or other procedure authorized by the insurer or employer as part of a documented course of treatment and has been recommended and documented by the provider to occur within 180 days of the contract's termination date.

The medical provider network's continuity of care policy must include a dispute resolution procedure that contains the following requirements [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9767.10(d)]:

1. Following the employer's or insurer's determination of the employee's medical condition, the employer or insurer must notify the covered employee of the determination regarding the completion of treatment and whether or not the employee will be required to select a new provider from within the network. The notification must be sent to the covered employee's residence, with a copy to the employee's primary treating physician. The notification is to be written in English and Spanish and use layperson's terms to the maximum extent possible.

2. If the terminated provider agrees to continue treating the injured covered employee in accordance with Lab. Code § 4616.2, and if the employee disputes the medical determination, the employee must request a report from the employee's primary treating physician that addresses whether the employee falls within any of the conditions set forth in Lab. Code § 4616.2(d)(3); an acute condition; a serious chronic condition; a terminal illness; or a performance of a surgery or other procedure that is authorized by the insurer or employer as part of a documented course of treatment and has been recommended and documented by the provider to occur within 180 days of the contract's termination date. The treating physician must provide the report to the covered employee within 20 calendar days of the request. If the treating physician fails to issue the report, the determination made by the employer or insurer, referred to in paragraph 1, above, will apply.

3. If the employer or insurer or employee objects to the medical determination by the treating physician, the dispute regarding that medical determination concerning the continuity of care is to be resolved pursuant to Lab. Code § 4062.

4. If the treating physician agrees with the employer's or insurer's determination that the employee's medical condition does not meet the conditions set forth in Lab. Code § 4616.2(d)(3), the employee must choose a new provider from within the medical provider network, during the dispute resolution process.

5. If the treating physician does not agree with the employer's or insurer's determination that the employees medical condition does not meet the conditions set forth in Lab. Code § 4616.2(d)(3), the employee is to continue to treat with the terminated provider until the dispute is resolved.

The insurer or employer may require the terminated provider whose services are continued beyond the contract termination date to agree in writing to be subject to the same contractual terms and conditions that were imposed on the provider prior to termination [Lab. Code § 4616.2(d)(4)(A)]. If the terminated provider does not agree to comply or does not comply with these contractual terms and conditions, the insurer or employer is not required to continue the provider's services beyond the contract termination date [Lab. Code § 4616.2(d)(4)(A)].

Unless otherwise agreed by the terminated provider and the insurer or employer, the services rendered by the terminated provider are to be compensated at rates and methods of payment similar to those used by the insurer or employer for currently contracting providers providing similar services who are practicing in the same or a similar geographic area as the terminated provider [Lab. Code § 4616.2(d)(4)(B)]. The insurer or provider is not required to continue the services of a terminated provider if the provider does not accept these payment rates [Lab. Code § 4616.2(d)(4)(B)].

An insurer or employer must ensure that the requirements regarding continued employment of terminated providers are met [Lab. Code § 4616.2(d)(5)].

The statute does not require an insurer or employer to provide for completion of treatment by a provider whose contract with the insurer or employer has been terminated or not renewed for reasons relating to a medical disciplinary cause or reason [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 805(a)(6)], or fraud or other criminal activity, and nothing in the statute precludes an insurer or employer from providing continuity of care beyond the statutory requirements [Lab. Code § 4616.2(d)(6), (7)].

[iv] Injured Employee's Rights in Medical Provider Network

When the injured employee notifies the employer of the injury or files a claim for workers' compensation with the employer, the employer must arrange an initial medical evaluation and begin treatment as required by Lab. Code § 4600 and in compliance with the access standards set forth in 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9767.5 [Lab. Code § 4616.3(a); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9767.6(a); see [i], above]. In fact, within one working day after an employee files a claim form under Lab. Code § 5401, the employer or insurer must provide for all treatment consistent with guidelines adopted by the Administrative Director pursuant to Lab. Code § 5307.27 or, prior to the adoption of these guidelines, the American College of Occupational and Environmental Medicine's Occupational Medicine Practice Guidelines (ACOEM). For all injuries not covered by the ACOEM guidelines or guidelines adopted by the Administrative Director, authorized treatment must be in accordance with other evidence-based medical treatment guidelines generally recognized by the national medical community and that are scientifically based. The Administrative Director incorporates by reference the American College of Occupational and Environmental Medicine's Occupational Medicine Practice Guidelines (ACOEM), 2nd Edition (2004), published by OEM Press. A copy may be obtained from OEM Press, 8 West Street, Beverly Farms, Massachusetts 01915 (www.oempress.com). The employer or insurer must provide for the treatment with medical provider network providers for the alleged injury and must continue to provide the treatment until the date that liability for the claim is rejected. Until that date, liability for the claim is limited to $10,000 [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9767.6(b), (c)]. The employer must notify the employee of his or her right to be treated by a physician of his or her choice after the first visit from the medical provider network, and the method by which the list of participating providers may be accessed by the employee [Lab. Code § 4616.3(b); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9767.6(d)]. Moreover, the regulation makes clear that, at any time after the initial medical evaluation with a network physician, the employee may select a physician of his or her choice from within the network [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9767.6(e)]. Selection by the injured employee of a treating physician and any subsequentphysicians must be based on the physician's specialty or recognized expertise in treating the particular injury or condition in question [Lab. Code § 4616.3(d)(1); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9767.7(e)]. Treatment by a specialist who is not a member of the medicalprovider network may be permitted on a case-by-case basis if the medical provider network does not contain a physician who can provide the approved treatment and the treatment is approved by the employer or the insurer [Lab. Code § 4616.3(d)(2)]. The employer or insurer is not entitled to file a Petition for Change of Treating Physician, as set forth in 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9786, if an employee is treating with a physician within the network [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9767.6(f)].

If an injured employee disputes either the diagnosis or the treatment prescribed by the treating physician, the employee may seek the opinion of another physician in the medical provider network [Lab. Code § 4616.3(c)]. If the injured employee disputes the diagnosis or treatment prescribed by the second physician, the employee may seek the opinion of a third physician in the medical provider network [Lab. Code § 4616.3(c)]. When an employee seeks the opinion of a second or a third physician, the statutes do not indicate which physician, first, second, or third, will subsequently provide treatment, when the second or the third physician either agrees or disagrees with the first. The regulation provides, however, that during this process, the employee is required to continue his or her treatment with the treating physician or a physician of his or her choice within the network [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9767.7(a)].

If the employee disputes either the diagnosis or the treatment prescribed by the primary treating physician or the treating physician, it is the employee's responsibility to: (1) inform the insurer or employer that he or she disputes the treating physician's opinion and requests a second opinion (the employee may notify the person designated by the employer or insurer either in writing or orally); (2) select a physician or specialist from a list of available network providers; (3) make an appointment with the second opinion physician within 60 days; and (4) inform the insurer or employer of the appointment date. It is the insurer's or employer's responsibility to (1) provide a regional area listing of network providers and/or specialists to the employee for his or her selection based on the specialty or recognized expertise in treating the particular injury or condition in question and inform the employee of his or her right to request a copy of the medical records that will be sent to the second opinion physician; (2) contact the treating physician, provide a copy of the medical records or send the necessary medical records to the second opinion physician prior to the appointment date, and provide a copy of the records to the employee on request; and (3) notify the second opinion physician in writing that he or she has been selected to provide a second opinion and the nature of the dispute, with a copy to the employee. If the appointment is not made within 60 days of receipt of the list of the available network providers, the employee will be deemed to have waived the second opinion process with regard to this disputed diagnosis or treatment of this treating physician [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9767.7(b)].

If, after reviewing the employee's medical records, the second opinion physician determines that the employee's injury is outside the scope of hisor her practice, the physician must notify the insurer or employer and the employee, so that the insurer or employer can provide a new list of network providers and/or specialists to the employee for his or her selection based on the specialty or recognized expertise in treating the particular injury or condition in question [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9767.7(c)].

If the employee disagrees with either the diagnosis or treatment prescribed by the second opinion physician, the employee may seek the opinion of a third physician within the network. It is the employee's responsibility to: (1) inform the insurer or employer that he or she disputes the treating physician's opinion and requests a third opinion (the employee may notify the person designated by the employer or insurer either in writing or orally); (2) select a physician or specialist from a list of available network providers; (3) make an appointment with the third opinion physician within 60 days; and (4) inform the insurer or employer of the appointment date. It is the insurer's or employer's responsibility to (1) provide a regional area listing of network providers and/or specialists to the employee for his or her selection based on the specialty or recognized expertise in treating the particular injury or condition in question and inform the employee of his or her right to request a copy of the medical records that will be sent to the third opinion physician; (2) contact the treating physician, provide a copy of the medical records or send the necessary medical records to the third opinion physician prior to the appointment date, and provide a copy of the records to the employee on request; and (3) notify the third opinion physician in writing that he or she has been selected to provide a third opinion and the nature of the dispute, with a copy to the employee. If the appointment is not made within 60 days of receipt of the list of the available network providers, the employee will be deemed to have waived the third opinion process with regard to this disputed diagnosis or treatment of this treating physician [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9767.7(d)].

At the time of the selection of the physician for a third opinion, the medical provider network contact (MPN Contact) [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9768.1(a)(14) ("medical provider network contact" means individual(s) designated by insurer or employer in employee notification who is responsible for answering employees' questions about medical provider network and is responsible for assisting employee in arranging for independent medical review)] must notify the employee about the independent medical review process and provide the employee with an Independent Medical Review Application form [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9768.10 (mandatory form)]. The MPN Contact is to fill out the "MPN Contact Section" of the form and list the specialty of the treating physician and an alternative specialty, if any, that is different from the specialty of the treating physician [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9768.9(a); see also [v], below].

If, after reviewing the employee's medical records, the third opinion physician determines that the employee's injury is outside the scope of his or her practice, the physician must notify the insurer or employer and theemployee, so that the insurer or employer can provide a new list of network providers and/or specialists to the employee for his or her selection based on the specialty or recognized expertise in treating the particular injury or condition in question [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9767.7(e)].

The second and third opinion physicians must each render his or her opinion of the disputed diagnosis or treatment in writing and offer alternative diagnosis or treatment recommendations, if applicable. Any recommended treatment must be in accordance with Lab. Code § 4616(e). The second and third opinion physicians may order diagnostic testing if medically necessary. A copy of the written report must be served on the employee, the insurer or employer, and the treating physician within 20 days of the date of the appointment or receipt of the results of the diagnostic tests, whichever is later [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9767.7(f)].

The employer or insurer must permit the employee to obtain the recommended treatment within the network. The employee may obtain the recommended treatment by changing physicians to the second opinion physician, third opinion physician, or other network physician [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9767.7(g)].

[v] Independent Medical Review Process

If, after the third physician's opinion, the treatment or diagnostic service remains disputed, the injured employee may request independent medical review regarding the disputed treatment or diagnostic service [Lab. Code § 4616.4(b); 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 9767.7(h), 9768.9(b). The statutes contain no provision regarding responsibility for payment for an independent medical review]. The standard to be utilized for independent medical review is identical to that contained in the medical treatment utilization schedule established in Lab. Code § 5307.27, or the American College of Occupational and Environmental Medicine's Occupational Medicine Practice Guidelines, as appropriate [Lab. Code § 4616.4(b)]. Employers and insurers are required by regulation to pay for the services of the independent medical reviewers [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9768.15(a)].

The Administrative Director is required to contract with individual physicians or an independent medical review organization to perform independent medical reviews [Lab. Code § 4616.4(a)(1); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9768.4 (independent medical reviewer contract application procedures); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9768.5 (physician contract application form); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9768.6 (Administrative Director's action on contract application submitted by physician)]. Only physicians licensed pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code Ch. 5 may be independent medical reviewers [Lab. Code § 4616.4(a)(2)].

The Administrative Director has the following obligations regarding the independent medical reviewers or those within the review organization do all of the following [Lab. Code § 4616.4(a)(3)]:

1. Ensure that the medical professionals are appropriately credentialed and privileged [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9768.3 (qualifications of independent medical reviewers)].

2. Ensure that the reviews provided by the medical professionals are timely, clear, and credible, and that reviews are monitored for quality on an ongoing basis [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9768.8 (removal of physicians from independent medical reviewer list)].

3. Ensure that the method of selecting medical professionals for individual cases achieves a fair and impartial panel of medical professionals who are qualified to render recommendations regarding the clinical conditions consistent with the medical utilization schedule established pursuant to Lab. Code § 5307.27 or the American College of Occupation and Environmental Medicine's Occupational Medicine Practice Guidelines.

4. Ensure the confidentiality of medical records and the review materials, consistent with the requirements of this independent medical review statute and applicable state and federal law.

5. Ensure the independence of the medical professionals retained to perform the reviews through conflict-of-interest policies and prohibitions, and ensure adequate screening for conflicts of interest [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9768.2 (conflicts of interest); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9768.1(a)(5) ("material familial affiliation" defined); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9768.1(a)(6) ("material financial affiliation" defined); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9768.1(a)(7) ("material professional affiliation" defined)].

Medical professionals selected by the Administrative Director or the independent medical review organizations to review medical treatment decisions must be physicians, as defined in Bus. & Prof. Code Ch. 5, who meet the following minimum requirements [Lab. Code § 4616.4(a)(4); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9768.3 (qualifications of independent medical reviewers)]:

1. The medical professional must be a clinician knowledgeable in the treatment of the employee's medical condition, knowledgeable about the proposed treatment, and familiar with guidelines and protocols in the area of treatment under review.

2. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the medical professional must hold a nonrestricted license in any state and, for physicians, a current certification by a recognized American medical specialty board in the area or areas appropriate to the condition or treatment under review.

3. The medical professional must have no history of disciplinary action or sanctions, including, but not limited to, loss of staff privileges or participation restrictions taken or pending by any hospital, government, or regulatory body.

Applications for independent medical review are to be submitted to the Administrative Director on a one-page form provided by him or her entitled "Independent Medical Review Application" [Lab. Code § 4616.4(c); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9768.9(b); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9768.10 (mandatory independent medical review application form)]. At the time of the selection of the physician for a third opinion, the medical provider network contact (MPN Contact) [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9768.1(a)(9) ("medical provider network contact" means individual(s) designated by insurer or employer in employee notification who is responsible for answering employees' questions about medical provider network and is responsible for assisting employee in arranging for independent medical review)] must notify the employee about the independent medical review process and provide the employee with an Independent Medical Review Application form. The MPN Contact is to fill out the "MPN Contact Section" of the form and list the specialty of the treating physician and an alternative specialty, if any, that is different from the specialty of the treating physician [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9768.9(a)]. The employee completes the "employee section" of the form, indicates on the form whether he or she requests an in-person examination or record review, and may list an alternative specialty, if any, that is different from the specialty of the treating physician [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9768.9(b)]. The form contains a signed release from the injured employee, or a person authorized pursuant to law to act on behalf of the injured employee, authorizing the release of medical and treatment information [Lab. Code § 4616.4(c); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9768.10]. The injured employee may provide any relevant material or documentation with the application [Lab. Code § 4616.4(c); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9768.11(a) (employee may furnish any relevant medical records or additional materials, with copy to MPN Contact)]. The Administrative Director or the independent medical review organization is to assign the independent medical reviewer [Lab. Code § 4616.4(c)]. Within 10 business days of receiving the independent medical review applicationform, the Administrative Director is to select an independent medical reviewer with an appropriate specialty. The Administrative Director's selection is to be based on the specialty of the treating physician, the alternative specialties listed by the employee and the MPN Contact, and the information submitted with the application [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9768.9(c)].

If the employee requests an in-person examination, the Administrative Director must randomly select a physician from the panel of available independent medical reviewers, with an appropriate specialty, who has an office located within 30 miles of the employee's residence, to be the independent medical reviewer. If there is only one physician with an appropriate specialty within that distance, that physician must be selected to be the independent medical reviewer. If there is nophysician with an appropriate specialty within that distance, the Administrative Director is to search in increasing five-mile increments, until one physician is located. If there is no available physician with this appropriate specialty, theAdministrative Director may choose another specialty based on the information submitted [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9768.9(d)].

If the employee requests a record review, the Administrative Director must randomly select a physician with an appropriate specialty from the panel of available independent medical reviewers. If there is no physician with an appropriate specialty, the Administrative Director may choose another specialty based on the information submitted [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9768.9(e)].

The Administrative Director is required to send written notification of the name and contact information of the independent medical reviewer to the employee, the employee's attorney, if any, the MPN Contact, and the independent medical reviewer. In addition, the Administrative Director must send a copy of the completed independent medical review application to the independent medical reviewer [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9768.9(f)].

The employee, MPN Contact, or the selected independent medical reviewer may object within 10 calendar days of receipt of the name of the independent medical reviewer to the selection if there is a conflict of interest [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9768.2]. If the independent medical reviewer determines that he or she does not practice the appropriate specialty, he or she is to withdraw within 10 calendar days of receipt of the notification of selection. If this conflict is verified or the independent medical reviewer withdraws, the Administrative Director must select another independent medical reviewer from the same specialty. If there is no available physician with the same specialty, the Administrative Director may select an independent medical reviewer with another specialty based on the information submitted and in accordance with the procedure set forth above for an in-person examination or for a record review [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9768.9(g)].

If the employee requests an in-person exam, the employee must contact the independent medical reviewer within 60 calendar days of receiving the reviewer's name to arrange an appointment. If the employee fails to contact the independent medical reviewer within this time frame for an appointment, the employee will be deemed to have waived the independent medical reviewer process with regard to this disputed diagnosis or treatment of this treating physician. The independent medical reviewer must schedule an appointment with the employee within 30 calendar days of the request for an appointment, unless all parties agree to a later date. The independent medical reviewer must notify the MPN Contact of the appointment date [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9768.9(h)].

The employee must provide written notice to the Administrative Director and the MPN Contact if the he or she decides to withdraw the request for an independent medical review [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9768.9(i)].

During this process, the employee is required to remain within the MPN for treatment [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9768.9(j); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9767.6].

Following receipt of the application for independent medical review, the employer or insurer must provide the assigned independent medical reviewer with all information that was considered in relation to the disputed treatment or diagnostic service, including a copy of all correspondence from, and received by, any treating physician who provided a treatment or diagnostic service to the injured employee in connection with the injury, and a complete and legible copy of all medical records and other information used by the physicians in making a decision regarding the disputed treatment or diagnostic service [Lab. Code § 4616.4(d)]. A copy of the documents must be sent to the employee [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9768.11(a)].

After receiving relevant information and documents, the independent medical reviewer conducts a physical examination of the injured employee at the employee's discretion [Lab. Code § 4616.4(e)]. If an in-person examination is requested and if a special form of transportation is required because of the employee's medical condition, it is the obligation of the MPN Contact to arrange for it. The MPN Contact is to furnish transportation and arrange for an interpreter, if necessary, in advance of the in-person examination. All reasonable expenses of transportation are to be incurred by the insurer or employer [see Lab. Code § 4600]. Except for the in-person examination itself, the independent medical reviewer is to have no ex parte contact with any party. Except for matters dealing with scheduling appointments, scheduling medical tests, and obtaining medical records, all communications between the independent medical reviewer and any party must be in writing, with copies served on all parties [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9768.11(a)].

The reviewer may order any diagnostic tests necessary to make his or her determination [Lab. Code § 4616.4(e)]. However, if requiring further tests, the reviewer must notify the MPN Contact within one working day of the appointment. All tests must be consistent with the medical treatment utilization schedule adopted pursuant to Lab. Code § 5307.27 or, prior to the adoption of this schedule, the ACOEM guidelines, and for all injuries not covered by the medical treatment utilization schedule or the ACOEM guidelines, in accordance with other evidence-based medical treatment guidelines generally recognized by the national medical community and that are scientifically based [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9768.11(b)]. The independent medical reviewer must not request the employee to submit to an unnecessary exam or procedure. If a test duplicates a test already given, the independent medical reviewer must, in his or her report, provide justification for the duplicative test [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9768.11(c)].

If the employee fails to attend an examination with the independent medicalreviewer and fails to reschedule the appointment within five business days of the missed appointment, the independent medical reviewer is to perform a review of the records and make a determination based on those records [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9768.11(d)].

Using the medical treatment utilization schedule established pursuant to Lab. Code § 5307.27, or the American College of Occupational and Environmental Medicine's Occupational Medicine Practice Guidelines, as appropriate, and taking into account any reports and information provided, the reviewer is to determine whether the disputed health care service was consistent with Lab. Code § 5307.27 or the American College of Occupational and Environmental Medicine's Occupational Medicine Practice Guidelines, as appropriate, based on the specific medical needs of the injured employee [Lab. Code § 4616.4(e); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9768.11(i). The regulation adds that, for injuries not covered by the medical treatment utilization schedule or by the ACOEM guidelines, the treatment rendered is to be in accordance with other evidence-based medical treatment guidelines that are generally recognized by the national medical community and scientifically based.].

The statute provides that the independent medical reviewer then issues, within 30 days of the examination of the injured employee, or within less time as prescribed by the Administrative Director, a written report to the Administrative Director, in layperson's terms to the maximum extent practicable, containing his or her analysis and determination as to whether the disputed health care service was consistent with the standards set forth in the above paragraph [Lab. Code § 4616.4(f)]. At present, the Administrative Director has prescribed that the independent medical reviewer serve the report on the Administrative Director, the MPN Contact, the employee, and the employee's attorney, if any, within 20 days after the in-person examination or completion of the record review [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9768.11(e)]. The analysis must cite the injured employee's medical condition, the relevant documents in the record, and the relevant findings associated with the documents or any other information submitted to the reviewer in order to support the determination [Lab. Code § 4616.4(g)]. To these general statutory requirements, the relevant regulation elaborates a specific list of items to be included in the independent medical reviewer's report. These are [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9768.12(a)]:

1. The date of the in-person examination or record review.

2. The patient's complaint(s).

3. A listing of all information received from the parties reviewed in preparation of the report or relied on for the formulation of the physician's opinion.

4. The patient's medical history relevant to the diagnostic services, diagnosis, or medical treatment.

5. Findings on record review or in-person examination.

6. The independent medical reviewer's diagnosis.

7. The physician's opinion whether or not the proposed treatment or diagnostic services are appropriate and indicated. If the proposed treatment or diagnostic services are not appropriate orindicated, any alternative diagnosis or treatment recommendation consistent with the medical treatment utilization schedule is to be included.

8. An analysis and determination whether the disputed health care service is consistent with the medical treatment utilization schedule established pursuant to Lab. Code § 5307.27 or, prior to the adoption of this schedule, the ACOEM guidelines. For injuries not covered by the medical treatment utilization schedule or by the ACOEM guidelines, an analysis and determination whether the treatment rendered is in accordance with other evidence-based medical treatment guidelines that are generally recognized by the national medical community and scientifically based.

9. The signature of the physician.

An independent medical reviewer must serve with each report the following executed declaration made under penalty of perjury [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9768.12(c)]:

"I declare under penalty of perjury that this report is true and correct to the best of my knowledge and that I have not violated Labor Code Section 139.3."

If the disputed health care service has not been provided and the independent medical reviewer certifies in writing that an imminent and serious threat to the health of the injured employee may exist, including, but not limited to, serious pain, the potential loss of life, limb, or major bodily function, or the immediate and serious deterioration of the injured employee, the report must be expedited and rendered within three days of the examination by the independent medical reviewer [Lab. Code § 4616.4(f); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9768.11(f)]. The statute provides that the deadlines for analyses and determinations involving both regular and expedited reviews may be extended by the Administrative Director for up to three days in extraordinary circumstances or for good cause [Lab. Code § 4616.4(f)]. However, the Administrative Director's regulation provides that, subject to approval by the Administrative Director, reviews that are not expedited may be extended for up to three business days in extraordinary circumstances or for good cause [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9768.11(g)]. Extensions for good cause must be granted for medical emergencies of the independent medical reviewer or the independent medical reviewer's family, death in the independent medical reviewer's family, or natural disasters or other community catastrophes that interrupt the independent medical reviewer's office operations [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9768.11(h)].

The independent medical reviewer is forbidden to treat or offer to provide medical treatment for that injury or illness for which he or she has done an independent medical review evaluation for the employee unless a medical emergency arises during the in-person examination [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9768.11(j)].

Payment for the services of the independent medical reviewers is to be made by the employer or the insurer. The fee is to be based on the Official Medical Fee Schedule using confirmatory consultation codes (99271 through 99275 for in-person examinations or 99271 through 99273 for evaluations not requiring an in-person examination), 99080 for reports, and 99358 for record reviews, and any other appropriate codes or modifiers. An independent medical reviewer may not accept any additional compensation from any source for his or her services as a reviewer except for services provided to treat a medical emergency that arose during an in-person examination [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9768.15].

Neither the employee nor the employer nor the insurer has any liability for payment for the independent medical review that was not completed within the required time frames unless the employee and the employer each waives the right to a new independent medical review and elects to accept the original evaluation [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9768.11(k)].

The Administrative Director must immediately adopt the determination of the independent medical reviewer and promptly issue a written decision to the parties [Lab. Code § 4616.4(h)]. The decision must be issued within five business days of receipt of the report [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9768.16(a)].

The parties may appeal the Administrative Director's written decision by filing a petition with the Workers' Compensation Appeals Board and serving a copy on the Administrative Director, within 20 days after receipt of the decision [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9768.16(b)].

The statute provides that, if the determination of the independent medical reviewer finds that the disputed treatment or diagnostic service is consistent with Lab. Code § 5307.27 or the American College of Occupational and Environmental Medicine's Occupational Medicine Practice Guidelines, the injured employee may seek the disputed treatment or diagnostic service from a physician of his or her choice from within or outside the medical provider network [Lab. Code § 4616.4(i)]. The relevant regulation, however, appears to treat the issue somewhat differently. It provides that, if the independent medical reviewer agrees with the diagnosis, diagnostic service, or medical treatment prescribed by the treating physician, the employee must continue to receive medical treatment from physicians within the MPN [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9768.17(a)]. If the independent medical reviewer does not agree with the disputed diagnosis, diagnostic service, or medical treatment prescribed by the treating physician, the employee may seek medical treatment with a physician of his or her choice either within or outside the MPN. If the employee chooses to receive medical treatment with a physician outside the MPN, the treatment is limited to the treatment recommended by the independent medical reviewer or the diagnostic service recommended by the independent medical reviewer [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9768.17(b)]. Treatment outside the medical provider network must be provided consistent with Lab. Code § 5307.27 or theAmerican College of Occupational and Environmental Medicine's Occupational Practice Guidelines [Lab. Code § 4616.4(i); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9768.17(c)]. For injuries not covered by the medical treatment utilization schedule or by the ACOEM guidelines, the treatment rendered must be in accordance with other evidence-based medical treatment guidelines that are generally recognized by the national medical community and scientifically based [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9768.17(c)]. The employer is liable for the cost of any approved medical treatment in accordance with Lab. Code § 5307.1 or 5307.11 [Lab. Code § 4616.4(i); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9768.17(d)].

No additional examinations may be ordered by the Appeals Board, and no other reports are admissible to resolve any controversy arising out of the medical provider networks statutes [Lab. Code § 4616.6].

[2] Vocational Rehabilitation

IMPORTANT NOTE: The WCAB en banc has held that: (1) repeal of Lab. Code § 139.5 terminated any rights to vocational rehabilitation benefits or services pursuant to orders or awards that were not final before January 1, 2009; (2) no saving clause was adopted to protect vocational rehabilitation rights in cases still pending on or after January 1, 2009; (3) vocational rehabilitation statutes that were repealed in 2003 do not continue to function as "ghost statutes" on or after January 1, 2009; (4) effective January 1, 2009, the WCAB lost jurisdiction over non-vested and inchoate vocational rehabilitation claims, but the WCAB continues to have jurisdiction under Lab. Code §§ 5502(b)(3) and 5803 to enforce or terminate vested rights; and (5) subject matter jurisdiction over non-vested and inchoate vocational rehabilitation claims cannot be conferred by waiver, estoppel, stipulation, or consent [Weiner v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2009) 74 Cal. Comp. Cases 736, 737, 742-758 (Appeals Board en banc opinion)] .

With regard to the specified exceptions, the WCAB stated, "We conclude that sections 5502(b)(3) and 5803 give the WCAB jurisdiction to conduct hearings and make determinations regarding the enforcement or termination of vested vocational rehabilitation rights." That is, "... where an injured employee has vested vocational rehabilitation rights, the WCAB may conduct a hearing to enforce or terminate those rights." A right is "vested" when it is the subject of a final order. An order is "final" when it is no longer subject to appeal, because either the appeals have been exhausted or the time for filing appeals has expired [Weiner v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2009) 74 Cal. Comp. Cases 736, 754, 755 (Appeals Board en banc opinion)].

Subsequently, the WCAB en banc, denying the employee's petition for reconsideration of the WCAB's prior en banc decision in the same case, Weiner v. Ralphs Co., held now that, even if the WCAB assumed that some vocational rehabilitation maintenance allowance was indisputably due to the employee prior to January 1, 2009, this does not mean that the employee's right to this vocational rehabilitation maintenance allowance had vested. The WCAB pointed out that a statutory right vests through a final order or award, that no final order or award of vocational rehabilitation maintenance allowance was made in the present case, and that repeal of Lab. Code § 139.5 extinguished the employee's right to such an award [Weiner v. Ralphs Co. (2009) 74 Cal. Comp. Cases 958, 962-964 (Appeals Board en banc opinion) , pet. for writ of rev. filed 9/28/2009].

A court of appeal has followed Weiner v. Ralphs Co. and held that an October 2008 WCAB decision that affirmed the WCJ's January 2008 award of vocational rehabilitation benefits to an employee was not a "final" decision, so that the employee lost all rights to vocational rehabilitation benefits as of the January 1, 2009, repeal of Lab. Code § 139.5 [Beverly Hilton Hotel v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 1597, 1604-1611, 99 Cal. Rptr. 3d 50].

[a] Eligibility

In 2003 the legislature abolished the workers' compensation vocational rehabilitation program, repealing Lab. Code §§ 139.5, 4635-4647, and 5405.5 [see Stats. 2003, ch. 635, §§ 14, 14.3, 16]. In its place, the legislature created a "supplemental job displacement benefit" for specified workers who are permanently partially disabled, to be used for retraining. The new system, discussed in § 577.45[2A], applies only to injuries occurring on or after January 1, 2004.

In 2004, the legislature reenacted one of the statutes it had repealed in 2003, Lab. Code § 139.5, reinstating vocational rehabilitation. However, the reenacted statute applies only to injuries occurring before January 1, 2004, and it will remain in effect only until January 1, 2009, and as of that date is repealed, unless a later-enacted statute, that is enacted before January 1, 2009, deletes or extends that date [Lab. Code § 139.5(k), (l)]. Various other vocational rehabilitation statutes, e.g., Lab. Code §§ 4642, 4644(d), (e), and 5405.5, once cross-referred to in former Lab. Code § 139.5 but repealed in 2003, are also cross-referred to in the reenacted Lab. Code § 139.5 and are now identified with the designation "former." Thus, although the issue may be further clarified by administrative and judicial action, it now appears that the statutory law on vocational rehabilitation applicable to pre-2004 injuries is confined to Lab. Code § 139.5, those "former" statutes to which it cross-refers, and those statutes not repealed in 2003. For example, the 2002 amendment to former Lab. Code § 4646, which allowed settlement of prospective vocational rehabilitation benefits, has not been reenacted, while Lab. Code § 5100.6, forbidding such settlements, was never repealed and, thus, remains in force. As a consequence of these legislative developments, at least some of the existing materials in this chapter on vocational rehabilitation will continue to be relevant for some time with respect to pre-2004 injuries.

An injured employee is eligible for vocational rehabilitation benefits under the following circumstances [Lab. Code § 4635(a) (governing injuries occurring on or after January 1, 1990); see also former 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10003 (regulation governing pre-1990 injuries was repealed, effective December 27, 1996)]:

- The employee's expected permanent disability as a result of the injury, whether or not combined with the effects of a prior injury or disability, permanently precludes, or is likely to preclude, the employee from engaging in his or her usual occupation or the position in which he or she was engaged at the time of the injury; and

- The employee can reasonably be expected to return to suitable gainful employment through the provision of vocational rehabilitation services.

Once an injured employee's eligibility for vocational rehabilitation is determined, the employee's vocational feasibility must be determined by a qualified rehabilitation representative [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10124.1, 10127.3; Admin. Guideline § 8-30-03].

For discussion of compromise and release agreements concerning vocational rehabilitation benefits, see § 577.131[2].

[b] Rehabilitation Unit

The Rehabilitation Unit, which is established within the Division of Workers' Compensation, Office of Benefit Determination, is responsible for implementation and enforcement of vocational rehabilitation plans, as well as for development of rules and regulations to expedite and facilitate identification, notification, and referral of industrially injured employees to vocational rehabilitation services [Lab. Code § 139.5(a); see Lab. Code § 4635 et seq.; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10122 et seq.; see also Lab. Code § 139.5(g) (offer of job within state service to specified state employees at same or similar salary and in same or similar geographic location as prima facie offer of vocational rehabilitation)].

[c] Cap on Expenses for Injuries on or After January 1, 1994

For injuries occurring on or after January 1, 1994, there is a $16,000 cap on vocational rehabilitation services incurred after the employee's request for such services, exclusive of temporary disability payments [Lab. Code § 139.5(c)]. An injured worker's right to continued receipt of vocational rehabilitation maintenance allowance benefits is dependent on his or her regular and consistent attendance at, and participation in, a vocational rehabilitation training program [Lab. Code § 139.5(c)].

[2A] Supplemental Job Displacement Benefits

[a] Nature of and Eligibility for Benefits

In 2003 the legislature abolished the workers' compensation vocational rehabilitation program, repealing Lab. Code §§ 139.5, 4635-4647, and 5405.5 [see Stats. 2003, ch. 635, §§ 14, 14.3, 16]. In its place, the legislature created a "supplemental job displacement benefit" for specified workers who are permanently partially disabled, to be used for retraining. The new system, discussed below, applies only to injuries occurring on or after January 1, 2004. Consequently, the existing materials in this chapter on vocational rehabilitation will continue to be relevant for some time with respect to pre-2004 injuries [see § 577.45[2]].

For injuries occurring on or after January 1, 2004, if the injury causes permanent partial disability and the injured employee does not return to work for the employer within 60 days of the termination of temporary disability, the injured employee is eligible for a supplemental job displacement benefit in the form of a nontransferable voucher for education-related retraining or skill enhancement, or both, at state-approved or accredited schools, as follows [Lab. Code § 4658.5(a), (d)]:

- Up to $4,000 for permanent partial disability awards of less than 15 percent.
- Up to $6,000 for permanent partial disability awards between 15 and 25 percent.
- Up to $8,000 for permanent partial disability awards between 26 and 49 percent.
- Up to $10,000 for permanent partial disability awards between 50 and 99 percent.

The voucher may be used for payment of tuition, fees, books, and other expenses required by the school for retraining or skill enhancement. No more than 10 percent of the voucher moneys may be used for vocational or return-to-work counseling. The Administrative Director is to adopt regulations governing the form of payment, direct reimbursement to the injured employee upon presentation to the employer of appropriate documentation and receipts, and any other matters necessary to the proper administration of the supplemental job displacement benefit [Lab. Code § 4658.5(b)].

Within 10 days of the last payment of temporary disability, the employer must provide to the employee, in the form and manner prescribed by the Administrative Director, information that provides notice of rights under this statute. This notice must be sent by certified mail [Lab. Code § 4658.5(c); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10133.51; see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10133.52 (mandatory form)].

The employer is not liable for the supplemental job displacement benefit if the employer meets either of the following conditions [Lab. Code§ 4658.6; see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10133.53 (notice of offer of modified or alternative work)]:

- Within 30 days of the termination of temporary disability indemnity payments, the employer offers, and the employee rejects, or fails to accept, in the form and manner prescribed by the Administrative Director, modified work, accommodating the employee's work restrictions, lasting at least 12 months.

- Within 30 days of the termination of temporary disability indemnity payments, the employer offers, and the employee rejects, or fails to accept, in the form and manner prescribed by the Administrative Director, alternative work meeting all of the following conditions:

  - The employee has the ability to perform the essential functions of the job provided.

  - The job provided is in a regular position lasting at least 12 months.

  - The job provided offers wages and compensation that are within 15 percent of those paid to the employee at the time of injury.

  - The job provided is within reasonable commuting distance of the employee's residence at the time of injury.

[b] Dispute Resolution

For injuries occurring on or after January 1, 2004, when there is a dispute regarding the supplemental job displacement benefit, the employee or the claims administrator may request the Administrative Director to resolve the dispute [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10133.54(a), (b)]. The party requesting the Administrative Director to resolve the dispute must [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10133.54(c)]:

1. Complete Form DWC-AD 10133.55 "Request for Dispute Resolution Before the Administrative Director."

2. Clearly state the issue(s) and identify supporting information for each issue and position.

3. Attach all pertinent documents.

4. Submit the original request and all attached documents to the Administrative Director and serve a copy of the request and all attached documents on all parties.

5. Sign and date the proof of service section of Form DWC-AD 10133.55 "Request for Dispute Resolution before the Administrative Director."

The opposing party has 20 calendar days from the date of the proof of service of the Request to submit the original response and all attached documents to the Administrative Director and serve a copy of the response and all attached documents on all parties [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10133.54(d)]. The Administrative Director or his or her designee may request additional information from the parties [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10133.54(e)].

The Administrative Director or his or her designee must issue a written determination and order based solely on the request, response, and any attached documents within 30 calendar days of the date the opposing party's response and supporting information is due. If the Administrative Director or his or her designee requests additional information, the written determination must be issued within 30 calendar days from the receipt of the additional information. In the event no decision is issued within 60 calendar days of the date the opposing party's response is due or within 60 calendar days of the Administrative Director's receipt of the requested additional information, whichever is later, the request will be deemed to be denied [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10133.54(f)].

Either party may appeal the determination and order of the Administrative Director by filing a written petition together with a Declaration of Readiness to Proceed pursuant to W.C.A.B. Rules § 10250 with the local district office of the Appeals Board within 20 calendar days of the issuance of the decision or within 20 days after a request is deemed denied pursuant to the preceding paragraph. The petition must set forth the specific factual and/or legal reason(s) for the appeal. A copy of the petition and a copy of the Declaration of Readiness to Proceed must be concurrently served on the Administrative Director [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10133.54(g)].

[c] Training Vouchers

For injuries occurring on or after January 1, 2004, an employee is eligible for the supplemental job displacement benefit when [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10133.56(a), (b)]:

1. The injury causes permanent partial disability; and

2. Within 30 days of the termination of temporary disability indemnity payments, the claims administrator does not offer modified or alternative work in accordance with Lab. Code § 4658.6; and

3. Either the injured employee does not return to work for the employerwithin 60 days of the termination of temporary disability benefits; or

4. In the case of a seasonal employee, when the employee is unable to return to work within 60 days of the termination of temporary disability benefits because the work season has ended, the injured employee does not return to work on the next available work date of the next work season.

When the above requirements have been met, the claims administrator must provide a nontransferable voucher for education-related retraining or skill enhancement, or both, to the employee within 25 calendar days from the issuance of the permanent partial disability award by the WCJ or the Appeals Board [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10133.56(c)]. The voucher mustbe issued to the employee, allowing direct reimbursement to the employee upon the employee's presentation to the claims administrator of documentation and receipts or as a direct payment to the provider of the education-related training or skill enhancement and/or to the VRTWC. The voucher must indicate the appropriate level of money available to the employee in compliance with Lab. Code § 4658.5 [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10133.56(d), (e); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10133.57 (mandatory voucher form)]. The voucher must certify that the school is approved, and, if outside of California, approval is required similarly to the Bureau for Private Postsecondary and Vocational Education (BPPVE) [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10133.56(g); see [d], below]. The claims administrator must issue the reimbursement payments to the employee or direct payments to the VRTWC and the training providers within 45 calendar days from receipt of the completed voucher, receipts, and documentation [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10133.56(h)].

[d] State Approved or Accredited Schools

Private providers of education-related retraining or skill enhancement selected to provide training as part of a supplemental job displacement benefit must be one of the following [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10133.58(b)]:

1. Approved by the Bureau for Private Postsecondary and Vocational Education (www.bppve.ca.gov), or a California state agency that has an agreement with the Bureau for the regulation and oversight of non-degree-granting private postsecondary institutions.

2. Accredited by one of the Regional Associations of Schools and Colleges authorized by the United States Department of Education.

3. Certified by the Federal Aviation Administration.

Any training outside of California must be approved by an agency in that state similar to the Bureau for Private Postsecondary and Vocational Education [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10133.58(c)].

[e] Vocational and Return to Work Counselors

For injuries occurring on or after January 1, 2004, the Administrative Director must maintain a list of Vocational and Return to Work Counselors (VRTWC) who perform the work of assisting injured employees. A VRTWC who meets the qualifications specified by regulation [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10133.50(a)(15) ("A person or entity capable of assisting a person with a disability with development of a return to work strategy and whose regular duties involve the evaluation, counseling and placement of disabled persons. A VRTWC must have at least an undergraduate degree in any field and three or more years full time experience in conducting vocational evaluations, counseling and placement of disabled adults.")] must apply to the Administrative Director to be included on the list throughout the year. The list must be reviewed and revised on a yearly basis and must be made available on the website www.dir.ca.gov or upon request [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10133.59(a), (b)]. The injured employee may select a Vocational and Return to Work Counselor whenever the assistance of such a person is needed to facilitate an employee's vocational training or return to work in connection with the supplemental job displacement benefit [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10133.59(c)]. The injured employee is responsible for providing the VRTWC with any necessary medical reports. However, a claims administrator must provide a VRTWC with any medical reports, including permanent and stationary medical reports, upon an employee's written request and a signed release waiver. The VRTWC must communicate with the injured employee regarding the evaluation [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10133.59(d), (e)].

[f] Termination of Claims Administrator's Liability for Supplemental Job Displacement Benefit

For injuries occurring on or after January 1, 2004, the claims administrator's liability to provide a supplemental job displacement voucher ends if either (1) or (2) in the following list occurs [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10133.60]:

1. The claims administrator offers modified or alternative work to the employee, meeting the requirements of Lab. Code § 4658.6, on DWC-AD Form 10133.53 "Notice of Offer of Modified or Alternative Work." If the claims administrator offers modified or alternative work to the employee for 12 months of seasonal work, the offer must meet the following requirements:

   a. The employee was hired on a seasonal basis prior to injury.

   b. The offer of modified or alternative work is on a similar seasonal basis to the employee's previous employment.

2. The maximum funds of the voucher have been exhausted.

[3] Temporary Disability Indemnity

[a] Injuries Occurring Prior to January 1, 1990

If an injury occurring prior to January 1, 1990, causes temporary disability, adisability payment must be made for one week in advance as wages on the fourth day after the injured employee leaves work as a result of the injury [Lab. Code § 4650, prior to amendment by Stats. 1989, ch. 892 (governing injuries occurring prior to January 1, 1990)]. Except as provided by Lab. Code § 4650.5 (relating to injuries to certain state employees resulting from acts of criminal violence), no disability payment is recoverable for the disability suffered during the first three days after the employee leaves work as a result of the injury [Lab. Code § 4652, prior to amendment by Stats. 1989, ch. 892 (governing injuries occurring prior to January 1, 1990)]. If the injury causes disability of more than 21 days or necessitates hospitalization, however, the disability payment must bemade from the first day the injured employee leaves work or is hospitalized as result of the injury [Lab. Code § 4650, prior to amendment by Stats. 1989, ch. 892 (governing injuries occurring prior to January 1, 1990)].

Subsequent payments must be made at least twice a month, unless otherwise ordered by the WCAB [Lab. Code § 4651, prior to amendment by Stats. 1989, ch. 892 (governing injuries occurring prior to January 1, 1990)].

[b] Injuries Occurring on or After January 1, 1990

For injuries occurring on or after January 1, 1990, if an injury causes temporary disability and liability for the injury has not been previously denied, the employer must make the first payment of temporary disability indemnity no later than 14 days after knowledge of the injury and disability. On that date, the total amount of indemnity then due must be paid. [Lab. Code § 4650(a)]. Subsequent payments must be made every two weeks on the day designated with the first payment [Lab. Code § 4650(c)]. The employer is subject to a penalty for failing to make timely payments unless it continues the employee's wages under a salary continuation plan as defined in Lab. Code § 4650(g) [see Lab. Code § 4650(d)].

Except as provided in Lab. Code § 4650.5 (injuries to certain state employees resulting from criminal acts of violence), temporary disability indemnity is not available for disability suffered during a "waiting period," which consists of the first three days after the employee leaves work as a result of the injury. If temporary disability continues for more than 14 days or if the employee is hospitalized as an inpatient for treatment required by the injury, however, temporary disability indemnity will be payable from the date of disability. In calculating the waiting period, the day of the injury is included unless the employee was paid full wages for that day [Lab. Code § 4652].

Aggregate disability payments for a single injury occurring on or after January 1, 1979, and prior to April 19, 2004 (the effective date of Lab. Code § 4656(c)), causing temporary partial disability are not to extend for more than 240 compensable weeks within a period of five years from the date of the injury [Lab. Code § 4656(b)].

For injuries occurring on or after April 19, 2004, aggregate disability payments for a single injury causing temporary disability may not extend for more than 104 compensable weeks within two years from the date of commencement of temporary disability payment [Lab. Code § 4656(c)(1)]. However, for an employee who suffers from certain injuries or conditions, i.e., acute and chronic hepatitis B or C, amputations, severe burns, human immunodeficiency virus (HIV), high-velocity eye injuries, chemical burns to the eyes, pulmonary fibrosis, or chronic lung disease, aggregate disability payments for a single injury occurring on or after April 19, 2004, may extend to 240 compensable weeks within five years from the date of injury [Lab. Code § 4656(c)(2)].

The court of appeal has held that the one year of industrial disability leave payable to state employees under Gov. Code §§ 19869-19877.1 falls within the ambit of the two-year limitation on aggregate temporary disability payments in Lab. Code § 4656(c)(1). The court found that Gov. Code § 19870(a) provides that industrial disability leave "means temporary disability as defined in" the Labor Code workers' compensation provisions, and that the two-year limitation on payment of temporary disability benefits in Lab. Code § 4656(c)(1) does not restrict itself to only temporary disability benefits payable under the Workers' Compensation Act or the Labor Code, since it more broadly applies to "

[a]ggregate disability payments for a single injury" [Brooks v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 1522, 1527-1538, 75 Cal. Rptr. 3d 277 (emphasis in original)].

In another case involving the same statute, but with a different result, the court of appeal held that, for purposes of determining the two-year limitation period on temporary disability indemnity, temporary disability payments commenced when a school district paid its injured employee her normal wages under Ed. Code § 44043. The employee sustained an industrial injury in June 2004. The first disability payment was made in February 2005. In February 2007 the employer sought an order terminating further liability for temporary disability. The parties stipulated that 85.71 weeks of the employer's payments were made pursuant to Ed. Code § 44043, which directs a school district to pay the normal wage of an injured employee receiving temporary disability benefits by supplementing those temporary disability benefits with the employee's accrued leave time. Thus, stated the court of appeal, entitlement to Ed. Code § 44043 benefits is contingent on payment of workers' compensation temporary disability benefits, so that the date on which temporary disability payments commence can be no later than the date of the first payment under Ed. Code § 44043 [Mt. Diablo Unified School District v. W.C.A.B. (Rollick) (2003) 165 Cal. App. 4th 1154, 1158-1161, 81 Cal. Rptr. 3d 597] .

When independent injuries result in concurrent periods of temporary disability, the 104-week, two-year limitation of Lab. Code § 4656(c)(1) likewise runs concurrently. For example, in one case the employee suffered industrial injuries on February 23, 2005, and April 13, 2005. The employee was unable to work only after the second injury, but both injuries contributed to the employee's becoming temporarily disabled at that time. The court of appeal held that the employee was entitled to two periods of temporary disability and that, to determine the impact of Lab. Code § 4656 in a case involving multiple injuries, the evidence must be examined to determine whether any periods of temporary disability are distinct and independent, staggered, or entirely overlapping. In the present case, the court found that the employee's period of temporary disability for the first injury ran from April 14, 2005, through September 12, 2006, when that first injury became permanent and stationary, and that the employee's period of temporary disability for the second injury ran from April 14, 2005, until it was exhausted under the 104-week limitation of Lab. Code § 4656, completely overlapping the period of temporary disability for the first injury. Since the employer began paying temporary disability benefits on April 26, 2005, the employee was entitled to temporary disability benefits until April 26, 2007 [Foster v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 1505, 1511-1513, 75 Cal. Rptr. 3d 272].

[c] Notice Required With Last Payment of Temporary Disability Indemnity

For injuries occurring on and after January 1, 1991 [see Lab. Code § 4067.5], the employer is required to provide, together with the last payment of temporary disability indemnity, in a form prescribed by the administrative director pursuant to Lab. Code § 138.4, one of the following notices to the employee [Lab. Code § 4061(a)]:

- Either notice that no permanent disability indemnity will be paid because the employer alleges the employee has no permanent impairment or limitations resulting from the injury or notice of the amount of permanent disability indemnity determined by the employer to be payable. The notice must include information concerning how the employee may obtain a formal medical evaluation pursuant to Lab. Code § 4061(c) or (d) (discussed under § 577.46[3]) if he or she disagrees with the position taken by the employer. The notice must be accompanied by the form prescribed by the Administrative Director for requesting assignment of a panel of qualified medical evaluators, unless the employee is represented by an attorney. If the employer determines permanent disability indemnity is payable, the employer must advise the employee of the amount determined payable, the basis on which the determination was made, and whether there is need for continuing medical care; or

- Notice that permanent disability indemnity may be or is payable, but that the amount cannot be determined because the employee's medical condition is not yet permanent and stationary. The notice must advise the employee that his or her medical condition will be monitored until it is permanent and > stationary, at which time the necessary evaluation will be performed to determine the existence and extent of permanent impairment and limitations for the purpose of rating permanent disability and to determine the need for continuing medical care, or at which time the employer will advise the employee of the amount of permanent disability indemnity the employer has determined to be payable. If an employee isprovided with this notice, and the employer later takes the position that the employee has no permanent impairment or limitations resulting from the injury, or later determines permanent disability indemnity is payable, the employer must, within 14 days of the des payable, the employer must, within 14 days of the determination to take this position, provide the employee with the notice specified above.

Each of the foregoing notices must describe the administrative procedures available to the injured employee and advise the employee of his or her right to consult an attorney or an information and assistance officer [Lab. Code § 4061(b)]. The notice must contain the following language [Lab. Code § 4061(b)]:

> Should you decide to be represented by an attorney, you may or may not receive a larger award, but, unless you are determined to be ineligible for an award, the attorney's fee will be deducted from any award you might receive for disability benefits. The decision to be represented by an attorney is yours to make, but it is voluntary and may not be necessary for you to receive your benefits.

[4] Permanent Disability Benefits

[a] In General

If the injury causes permanent disability, the first payment must be made within 14 days after the date of last payment of temporary disability indemnity. When the last payment of temporary disability indemnity has been made pursuant to Lab. Code § 4656(c) (maximum period for temporary disability payments for injuries occurring on and after April 19, 2004), and regardless of whether the extent of permanent disability can be determined at that date, the employer nevertheless must commence the timely payment of permanent disability indemnity and continue to make these payments until the employer's reasonable estimate of permanent disability indemnity due has been paid, and if the amount of permanent disability indemnity due has been determined, until that amount has been paid [Lab. Code § 4650(b)].

If, within 60 days of a disability becoming permanent and stationary, an employer does not offer the injured employee regular work, modified work, or alternative work, in the form and manner prescribed by the Administrative Director, for a period of at least 12 months, each disability payment remaining to be paid to the injured employee from the date of the end of the 60-day period will be increased by 15 percent [Lab. Code § 4658(d)(2)].

If, within 60 days of a disability becoming permanent and stationary, an employer offers the injured employee regular work, modified work, or alternative work, in the form and manner prescribed by the Administrative Director, for a period of at least 12 months, and regardless of whether the injured employee accepts or rejects the offer, each disability payment remaining to be paid from the date the offer was made will be decreased by 15 percent [Lab. Code § 4658(d)(3)(A)].

If the regular work, modified work, or alternative work is terminated by the employer before the end of the period for which disability payments are due, the amount of each of the remaining disability payments will be increased by 15 percent [Lab. Code § 4658(d)(3)(B)]. An employee who voluntarily terminates employment is not eligible for this increase in payment [Lab. Code § 4658(d)(3)(B)].

None of the provisions of the preceding three paragraphs applies to an employer that employs fewer than 50 employees [Lab. Code § 4658(d)(2), (3)(B)].

The court of appeal has held that, because the issues identified in the pretrial conference statement, together with the parties' stipulations, clearly alerted the WCJ that Lab. Code § 4658(d) was in issue, there was no basis for failing to apply the entire formula contained in that provision. The court found that in the pretrial conference statement the parties stipulated that the permanent disability benefits that the employer was already paying to the employee included a 15 percent increase pursuant to Lab. Code § 4658(d), and that, by checking the boxes on the pretrial conference form labeled "Permanent Disability" and "Apportionment," the parties conveyed their intention that the WCJ calculate the award for permanent disability benefits under the applicable formula and the facts presented, including Lab. Code § 4658(d) [Bontempo v. W.C.A.B (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 689, 701-704, 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 229] .

For compensable claims arising before April 30, 2004, the above schedule does not apply to the determination of permanent disabilities when there has been either a comprehensive medical-legal report or a report by a treating physician, indicating the existence of permanent disability, or when the employer is required to provide the notice required by Lab. Code § 4061 to the injured worker [Lab. Code § 4658(d)(4)]. (In view of Lab. Code § 4658(d)(1), the need for this provision is not apparent. Moreover, its existence appears to raise the question of which schedule applies to claims arising between April 30, 2004, and the effective date of the revised permanent disability schedule to be adopted by the Administrative Director, which is to be no later than January 1, 2005 [see Lab. Code § 4660(e)].)

"Regular work" means the employee's usual occupation or the position in which the employee was engaged at the time of injury and that offers wages and compensation equivalent to those paid to the employee at the time of injury, and located within a reasonable commuting distance of the employee's residence at the time of injury [Lab. Code § 4658.1(a)].

"Modified work" means regular work modified so that the employee has the ability to perform all the functions of the job and that offers wages and compensation that are at least 85 percent of those paid to the employee at the time of injury, and located within a reasonable commuting distance of the employee's residence at the time of injury [Lab. Code § 4658.1(b)].

"Alternative work" means work that the employee has the ability to perform, that offers wages and compensation that are at least 85 percent of those paid to the employee at the time of injury, and that is located within a reasonable commuting distance of the employee's residence at the time of injury [Lab. Code § 4658.1(c)].

For the purpose of determining whether wages and compensation are equivalent to those paid at the time of injury, the wages and compensation for anyincrease in working hours over the average hours worked at the time of injury are not to be considered [Lab. Code § 4658.1(d)].

For the purpose of determining whether wages and compensation are equivalent to those paid at the time of injury, actual wages and compensation are to be determined without regard to the minimums and maximums set forth in Lab. Code § 4451 et seq. [Lab. Code § 4658.1(e)].

The condition that regular, modified, or alternative work be located within a reasonable distance of the employee's residence at the time of injury may be waived by the employee [Lab. Code § 4658.1(f)]. The condition will be deemed to be waived if the employee accepts the regular, modified, or alternative work and does not object to the location within 20 days of being informed of the right to object [Lab. Code § 4658.1(f)]. The condition will be conclusively deemed to be satisfied if the offered work is at the same location and the same shift as the employment at the time of injury [Lab. Code § 4658.1(f)].

The Disability Evaluation Unit, under the direction and authority of the Administrative Director, will issue permanent disability ratings as required, utilizing the Schedule for Rating Permanent Disabilities adopted by the Administrative Director. The Disability Evaluation Unit prepares the following kinds of rating determinations: formal, summary, consultative, and informal [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10150].

Reports of permanent disability rating specialists are deemed evidence only with regard to the relation between the disability described and the percentage of permanent disability but not to the existence of the disability [8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10167(b), 10602].

[b] Formal Rating Determinations

Formal rating determinations are prepared by the Disability Evaluation Unit on request of the WCAB or a WCJ [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10156]. Formal rating determinations prepared by disability evaluators are deemed to constitute evidence only as to the relation between the disability or impairment standard(s) described and the percentage of permanent disability [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10158].

[c] Informal Ratings

If no application for adjudication of claim (discussed under § 577.80 et seq.) has been filed and the parties wish to obtain a rating on the basis of medical reports, the Disability Evaluation Unit will issue an informal rating upon the joint request of the parties, or at the request of an information and assistance officer (discussed in § 577.12[2]), providing the necessary information [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10167(a)]. The request must be submitted on forms and in a manner prescribed by the administrative director [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10167(a); see § 577.420[1]]. All medical reports pertaining to the case must be submitted with the request [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10167(a)].

The Unit will issue the informal rating, which will contain a statement that the informal rating is not a finding, award, order or decision of the Appeals Board, or evidence as to the existence of the factors of disability [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10167(b)]. If the rating indicates a life pension or if provision for future medical treatment is indicated, the Unit will forward a copy of the rating to the information and assistance officer for the purpose of obtaining a stipulated award, or for other action as may be appropriate [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10167(c)]. Self-ratings prepared by the employer are not acceptable substitutes for informal ratings prepared by the Unit [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10167(d)].

[d] Summary Rating Determinations

[i] In General

Summary rating determinations are prepared by the Disability Evaluation Unit upon receipt of a properly prepared request [8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10160 (unrepresented workers), 10160.5 (represented workers)]. The components of such a request differ depending on whether the injured worker is represented by an attorney [see [ii], [iii] below].

Once a summary rating determination has been issued to the parties, neither party is permitted to communicate with the Qualified Medical Evaluator. Any dispute with the summary rating or the evaluation on which it is based must be resolved by filing a request for reconsideration of a summary rating with the Administrative Director [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10164(a); see § 577.46[3][f]].

If the qualified medical evaluator's comprehensive evaluation indicates apportionment of the permanent disability, a summary rating determination may not be made until a WCJ reviews the medical evaluation to determine if the apportionment is inconsistent with the law. The determination of the WCJ is not admissible in any judicial proceeding [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10162(a)].

[ii] Represented Employee

When an injured employee is represented by an attorney, a person requesting a summary rating must complete DWC-AD Form 101 (DEU), Request for Summary Rating Determination [see § 577.422[1]] and submit it to a Qualified or Agreed Medical Evaluator, as appropriate, together with all medical reports and medical records concerning the case. Once the medical evaluator has completed the evaluation report, he or she must submit the report together with the completed DEU Form 101 to the appropriate office of the Disability Evaluation Unit specified on the form and serve copies on the party requesting the evaluation [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10160.5(b)].

Notwithstanding the provisions of the preceding paragraph, a represented party who is uncertain as to the need for the expertise of a disability rater may wait to request a summary rating determination until after receiving the report of the Qualified Medical Evaluator or Agreed Medical Evaluator. If, after receiving the evaluator's report, a party determines that a summary rating is needed, he or she must file the Request for Summary Rating Determination of Qualified Medical Evaluator's Report and the medical report with the DEU office designated by the Administrative Director and must immediately serve a filed copy of the Summary Rating Determination on the other party [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10160.5(c)].

In either case, the DEU will prepare a summary rating determination when it has received the completed Request and the evaluator's report [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10160.5(a)]. If a case is settled prior to receipt of a summary rating that has been requested, the requesting party must notify the DEU office of the settlement [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10160.5(d)].

If the agreed on medical evaluator or qualified medical evaluator apportions the permanent disability, the Disability Evaluation Unit will issue a summary rating determination "before apportionment" [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10162(d)].

[iii] Unrepresented Employee

When an injured worker is not represented by an attorney, the insurance carrier or self-insurer must provide the worker with DWC-AD Form 100 (DEU), Employee's Disability Questionnaire [see § 577.421[1]] before the worker attends his or her scheduled examination by the Qualified Medical Evaluator. The worker will be instructed in the prescribed form and manner for completing the questionnaire. The worker will then give the completed form to the medical evaluator at the time of the examination [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10160(b)].

Also prior to the injured workers' scheduled examination by the Qualified Medical Evaluator, the insurance carrier, self-insurer, or injured worker must complete DWC-AD Form 101 (DEU), Request for Summary Rating Determination [see § 577.422[1]] and send it to the medical evaluator, with a copy served on the opposing party, together with all medical reports and medical records relating to the case [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10160(c)]. The form must include the address of the appropriate Disability Evaluation Unit. A list of the Unit's offices with their respective areas of jurisdiction is available from the Unit on request [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10160(c)].

When a summary rating determination has been requested, the evaluator must submit the completed DWC-AD Form 100 (DEU) and DWC-AD Form 101 (DEU), together with the formal medical evaluation of the workers' condition and a document cover sheet and a separator sheet, pursuant to 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10232(b) (these sheets to be served on only the Disability Evaluation Unit), to the office of the Disability Evaluation Unit designated on the DWC-AD Form 101 (DEU), with a copy to the parties [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10160(d)]. Once the Unit has received the completed DWC-AD Form 100 (DEU) and DWC-AD Form 101 (DEU) and the formal medical evaluation by the Qualified Medical Evaluator, the Unit will prepare a summary rating determination [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10160(a)]. No formal medical evaluation will be considered received until the completed DWC-AD Form 100 (DEU) and DWC-AD Form 101 (DEU) and the medical evaluation are received in the office of the Disability Evaluation Unit having jurisdiction over the employee's area of residence. Any requests received without all the required documents will be returned to the sender [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10160(e)].

When the injury has occurred on or after January 1, 1994, a summary rating determination may also be made for an unrepresented worker based on a report of the primary treating physician [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10160.1(a); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9785 (reports of primary treating physician)]. To request a summary rating determination based on the report of the primary treating physician, the carrier, self-insured employer, or employee must send a completed

DWC-AD Form 102 (DEU), Request for Summary Rating Determination of Primary Treating Physician's Report [see § 577.423[1]], along with a copy of the primary treating physician's report, if the report has not already been filed in EAMS, to the Disability Evaluation Unit [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10160.1(b)]. A filed copy of the request and the report must also be served on the non-requesting party, along with proof of service [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10160.1(c)].

[e] Consultative Rating Determinations

Consultative rating determinations may be requested for the purpose of determining the ratable significance of factors, reviewing proposed Compromise and Release Agreements for adequacy, determining commuted values, resolving occupational questions, or any other matters within the expertise of the disability evaluators [see § 577.424, for form]. These rating determinations are not admissible in judicial proceedings [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10166(b)].

The Disability Evaluation Unit will prepare consultative rating determinations at the request of the WCAB, WCJs, WCJs pro tempore, Settlement Conference Referees, Arbitrators, and Information and Assistance Officers [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10166(a)]. The Unit may also prepare consultative rating determinations on receipt of reasonable requests from employers, injured workers, or their respective representatives. A request is not considered reasonable when an insurance carrier or self-insurer seeks a rating determination for the purpose of terminating its liability or for negotiating a Compromise and Release settlement when the injured worker is not represented by an attorney. Consultative rating determinations cannot be used as a substitute for summary rating determinations [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10166(c)].

In all cases, the person requesting a consultative rating determination must provide the Disability Evaluation Unit with the injured workers' occupation and age at the time of injury [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10166(d)].

No consultative rating determination will be provided in cases in which an Application for Adjudication of Claim has been filed with the WCAB without prior written authorization of the WCAB, a WCJ, WCJ pro tempore, Settlement Conference Referee, Arbitrator, or Information and Assistance Officer. In cases inwhich an application has been filed, the disability evaluator may require that any request be accompanied by the WCAB file [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10166(e)].

[5] Return-to-Work Program

[a] Term and Scope of Program

Commencing July 1, 2004 [Lab. Code § 139.48(h); see Lab. Code § 139.48(a)(2) (statute to be implemented to extent funds are available); see also [d], below], and, unless otherwise continued by legislative action, sunsetting on January 1, 2009 [Lab. Code § 139.48(i)], this program is intended to promote the early and sustained return to work of employees following work-related injuries or illness [Lab. Code §§ 139.47, 139.48(a)(1); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10119(d)]. Its major features include creation of the Workers' Compensation Return-to-Work Fund, subject to appropriation by the legislature, from which an employer will be reimbursed, subject to various conditions and limitations, for wages, workplace modification expenses, and workers' compensation insurance premiums, when an employee returns to modified or alternative work, as defined in Lab. Code § 4644(a)(5) and (6), during the period the employee is temporarily disabled. The Administrative Director has adapted regulations to carry out the program [see Lab. Code §§ 139.47, 139.48, 139.49; 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10116-10133.58]. The details of the program are outlined in [b]-[f], below.

[b] Obligations of Director of Industrial Relations

The Director of Industrial Relations is required to establish and maintain a program to encourage, facilitate, and educate employers to provide early and sustained return to work after occupational injury or illness. The program is to do both of the following [see Lab. Code § 139.47]:

- Develop educational materials and guides, in easily understandable language in both print and electronic form, for employers, health care providers, employees, and labor unions. These materials are to address issues including, but not limited to, early return to work, assessment of functional abilities and limitations, development of appropriate work restrictions, job analysis, worksite modifications, assistive equipment and devices, and available resources.

- Conduct training for employee and employer organizations and health care providers concerning the accommodation of injured employees and the prevention of reinjury.

[c] Employer Reimbursement

Upon submission by an eligible employer of documentation in accordance with regulations [see Lab. Code § 139.48(f); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10120 (Form DWC-AD 10128, Request for Reimbursement of Accommodation Expenses for Injuries on or After July 1, 1004); see also Lab. Code § 139.48(e)(1) ("eligible employer" means any employer, except state or employer that is one of state's political subdivisions eligible to become permissibly self-insured pursuant to Lab. Code § 3700(c), who employs 50 or fewer full-time employees on date of injury); [d], below], the Administrative Director is to pay the workplace modification expense reimbursement allowed under the program [Lab. Code § 139.48(b); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10119].

The Administrative Director is to reimburse an eligible employer for expenses incurred to make workplace modifications to accommodate the employee's return to modified or alternative work, as follows [Lab. Code § 139.48(c); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10119(f), (g); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10116.9(g) ("modified work" means regular work modified so that employee has ability to perform all functions of job and that offers wages and compensation that are at least 85 percent of those paid to employee at time of injury, and located within reasonable commuting distance of employee's residence at time of injury); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10116.9(a) ("alternative work" means work (1) offered either by employer who employed injured worker at time of injury, or by another employer when previous employment was seasonal work, (2) that employee has ability to perform, (3) that offers wages and compensation that are at least 85 percent of those paid to employee at time of injury, and (4) that is located within reasonable commuting distance of employee's residence at time of injury); see also 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10116.9(n) ("regular work" means employee's usual occupation or position in which employee was engaged at time of injury and that offers wages and compensation equivalent to those paid to employee at time of injury, and located within reasonable commuting distance of employee's residence at time of injury); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10116.9(o) ("seasonal work" means employment as daily hire, project hire, or annual season hire)]:

- The maximum reimbursement to an eligible employer for expenses to accommodate each temporarily disabled injured worker is one thousand two hundred fifty dollars ($1,250).

- The maximum reimbursement to an eligible employer for expenses to accommodate each permanently disabled worker who is a qualified injured worker is two thousand five hundred dollars ($2,500). If the employer received reimbursement under paragraph 1, the amount of the reimbursement under paragraph 1 and this paragraph is not to exceed two thousand five hundred dollars ($2,500).

- The modification expenses must be incurred in order to allow a temporarily disabled worker to perform modified or alternative work within physician-imposed temporary work restrictions, or to allow a permanently disabled worker who is an injured worker to return to sustained modified or alternative employment [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10119(f)(2) ("sustained modified or alternative work" is work anticipated to last at least 12 months)] with the employer within physician-imposed permanent work restrictions.

- Allowable expenses may include physical modifications to the worksite, equipment, devices, furniture, tools, or other necessary costs for accommodation of the employee's restrictions.

An eligible employer seeking reimbursement must submit a "Request for Reimbursement of Accommodation Expenses" (Form DWC-AD 10120) within 90 calendar days from the date of the expenditure for which the employer is seeking reimbursement. As a condition to reimbursement, the expenditure must not have been paid for or covered by the employer's insurer or any source of funding other than the employer. Upon a showing of good cause, the filing date may be extended. The employer must attach to its request copies of all pertinent medical reports that contain the work restrictions being accommodated, any other documentation supporting the request, and all receipts for accommodation expenses. Requests should be sent to the mailing address for the Division of Workers' Compensation Return to Work Program listed in the website of the Division of Workers' Compensation at: http://www.dir.ca.gov/dwc/dwc_home_page.htm [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10119(h)].

The Administrative Director or his or her designee is required to review each Request for Reimbursement of Accommodation Expenses and within 60 business days provide the employer with one of the following [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10119(i)]:

- That the request has been approved, together with a check for the reimbursement allowed, and an explanation of the allowance, if less than the maximum amounts set forth in the statute.

- That the request has been denied, with an explanation of the basis for denial.

- That the request is deficient or incomplete and indicating what clarification or additional information is necessary.

An eligible employer may appeal the Administrative Director's notice under 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10119(i)(1) and (2) by filing a "Petition Appealing Administrative Director's Reimbursement Allowance" setting forth the basis of the appeal. The petition must be filed within 20 days from the date of the issuance of the Administrative Director's notice [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10294(a); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10119(k)].

If an application for adjudication has been previously filed, the petition appealing the Administrative Director's notice must be filed at the district office having venue, and the case number assigned to the application for adjudication will be assigned to the petition. If an application for adjudication has not been previously filed, an application must be filed together with the petition, and venue must be determined in accordance with Lab. Code § 5501.5 and 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10409 [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10294(b)].

A "Petition Appealing Administrative Director's Reimbursement Allowance" must be accompanied by a declaration of readiness [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10294(c)].

A copy of the petition must be concurrently served on the Administrative Director [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10294(d)].

This section does not create a preference in employment for injured employees over noninjured employees. It is unlawful for an employer to discriminatorily terminate, lay off, demote, or otherwise displace an employee in order to return an industrially injured employee to employment for the purpose of obtaining the reimbursement set forth in Lab. Code § 139.48(c) [Lab. Code § 139.48(d)].

For purposes of this section, "employee" means a worker who has suffered a work-related injury or illness on or after July 1, 2004 [Lab. Code § 139.48(e)(2); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10119(a)].

[d] Regulations and Funding

Among the regulations the Administrative Director was required to adopt to carry out the return-to-work program was a regulation containing a prioritization scheme to cover a situation in which budget funds are insufficient to implement the workplace modification expense reimbursement provided for by the statute [Lab. Code § 139.48(f); see [c], above]. Pursuant to this directive, the Administrative Director has provided that, in the event that there are insufficient funds in the Return to Work Fund to fully reimburse an employer or employers for workplace modification expenses as required by the statute, the Administrative Director will utilize the following priority list in establishing the amount of reimbursement or whether reimbursement is allowed, in order of decreasing priority [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10119(j)]:

- Employers who have not previously received any reimbursement under this program.

- Employers who have not previously received any reimbursement under this program for the employee who is the subject of the request.

- Employers who are seeking reimbursement for accommodation required in returning a permanently disabled employee to sustained modified or alternative work.

- Employers who are requesting reimbursement for accommodation required by a temporarily disabled employee.

The Workers' Compensation Return-to-Work Fund is created as a special fund in the State Treasury. The fund consists of all penalties collected pursuant to Lab. Code § 5814.6 and transfers made by the Administrative Director from the Workers' Compensation Administration Revolving Fund established pursuant to Lab. Code § 62.5. The fund is to be administered by the Administrative Director. Moneys in the fund may be expended by the Administrative Director, upon appropriation by the legislature, only for purposes of implementing the return-to-work program [Lab. Code § 139.48(g); see Stats. 2002, ch. 6, § 86 (intent of legislature is that all reimbursement expended for return-to-work program be funded from annual premium tax, collected under Rev. & Tax Code § 12201, directly attributable to compensation benefit rates and amounts set forth in Rev. & Tax Code); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10119(e)].

[e] Offer of Work; Adjustment of Permanent Disability Payments

As part of the return-to-work program, the Administrative Director has promulgated an additional regulation that applies only to injuries occurring on or after January 1, 2005, and to the following employers [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10117(a)]:

1. Insured employers who employed 50 or more employees at the time of the most recent policy inception or renewal date for the insurance policy that was in effect at the time of the employee's injury.

2. Self-insured employers who employed 50 or more employees at the time of the most recent filing by the employer of the Self-Insurer's Annual Report that was in effect at the time of the employee's injury.

3. Legally uninsured employers who employed 50 or more employees at the time of injury.

Within 60 calendar days from the date that the condition of an injured employee with permanent partial disability becomes permanent and stationary [8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 9813.2, 10117(b); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10116.9(l) ("permanent and stationary" defined)]:

1. If an employer does not serve the employee with a notice of offer of regular work, modified work, or alternative work [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10116.9(n) ("regular work" means employee's usual occupation or position in which employee was engaged at time of injury and that offers wages and comp ensation equivalent to those paid to employee at time of injury, and located within reasonable commuting distance of employee's residence at time of injury); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10116.9(g) ("modified work" means regular work modified so that employee has ability to perform all functions of job and that offers wages and compensation that are at least 85 percent of those paid to employee at time of injury, and located within reasonable commuting distance of employee's residence at time of injury); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10116.9(a) ("alternative work" means work (1) offered either by employer who employed injured worker at time of injury, or by another employer when previous employment was seasonal work; (2) that employee has ability to perform; (3) that offers wages and compensation that are at least 85 percent of those paid to employee at time of injury; and (4) that is located within reasonable commuting distance of employee's residence at time of injury)] for a period of at least 12 months, each payment of permanent partial disability remaining to be paid to the employee from the date of the end of the 60 day period is to be paid in accordance with Lab. Code § 4658(d)(1) and increased by 15 percent.

2. If an employer serves the employee with a notice of offer of regular work, modified work, or alternative work for a period of at least 12 months, and in accordance with the requirements set forth in paragraphs 3 and 4, below, each payment of permanent partial disability remaining to be paid from the date the offer was served on the employee is to be paid in accordance with Lab. Code § 4658(d)(1) and decreased by 15 percent, regardless of whether the employee accepts or rejects the offer.

3. The employer must use Form DWC-AD 10133.53 to offer modified or alternative work, or Form DWC-AD 10003 to offer regular work. The claims administrator may serve the offer of work on behalf of the employer.

4. The regular, alternative, or modified work that is offered by the employer pursuant to paragraph 2, above, must be located within a reasonable commuting distance of the employee's residence at the time of the injury, unless the employee waives this condition. This condition will be deemed to be waived if the employee accepts the regular, modified, or alternative work, and does not object to the location within 20 calendar days of being informed of the right to object. The condition will be conclusively deemed to be satisfied if the offered work is at the same location and the same shift as the employment at the time of injury.

If the claims administrator relies on a permanent and stationary date contained in a medical report prepared by the employee's treating physician, QME, or AME, but there is subsequently a dispute as to an employee's permanent and stationary status, and there has been a notice of offer of work served on the employee, the claims administrator may withhold 15 percent from each payment of permanent partial disability remaining to be paid from the date the notice of offer was served on the employee until there has been a final judicial determination of the date that the employee is permanent and stationary pursuant to Lab. Code § 4062 [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10117(c)].

1. When there is a final judicial determination that the employee is permanent and stationary on a date later than the date relied on by the employer in making its offer of work, the employee must be reimbursed any amount withheld up to the date a new notice of offer of work is served on the employee.

2. When there is a final judicial determination that the employee is not permanent and stationary, the employee must be reimbursed any amount withheld up to the date of the determination.

3. The claims administrator is not required to reimburse permanent partial disability benefit payments that have been withheld pursuant to this provision during any period for which the employee is entitled to temporary disability benefit payments.

If the employee's regular work, modified work, or alternative work, offered by the employer and accepted by the employee, is terminated prior to the end of the period for which permanent partial disability benefits are due, the amount of each remaining permanent partial disability payment from the date of the termination is to be paid in accordance with Lab. Code § 4658(d)(1), as though no decrease in payments had been imposed, and increased by 15 percent. An employee who voluntarily terminates his or her regular work, modified work, or alternative work is not eligible for this 15 percent increase in permanent partial disability payments [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10117(d)].

Nothing in this regulation prevents the parties from settling or agreeing to commute the permanent disability benefits to which an employee may be entitled. However, if the permanent disability benefits are commuted by a WCJ or the Appeals Board pursuant to Lab. Code § 5100, the commuted sum will account for any adjustment that would have been required by this regulation if payment had been made pursuant to Lab. Code § 4658 [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10117(e)].

When the employer offers regular, modified, or alternative work to the employee that meets the conditions of this regulation and subsequently learns that the employee cannot lawfully perform regular, modified, or alternative work, the employer is not required to provide the regular, modified, or alternative work [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10117(f)].

If the employer offers regular, modified, or alternative seasonal work to the employee, the offer must meet all of the following requirements [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10117(g); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10116.9(o) ("seasonal work" means employment as daily hire, project hire, or annual season hire)]:

1. The employee was hired for seasonal work prior to injury.

2. The offer of regular, modified, or alternative seasonal work is of reasonably similar hours and working conditions to the employee's previous employment, and the one-year requirement may be satisfied by cumulative periods of seasonal work.

3. The work must commence within 12 months of the date of the offer.

4. The offer meets the conditions set forth in this section.

2. Filing a Workers' Compensation Claim--Initial Procedures

51-577 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 577.46

§ 577.46 Medical-Legal Evaluations

[1] Report of Treating Physician

The treating physician primarily responsible for managing the injured worker's care, or the physician designated by the treating physician, must, in accordance with rules promulgated by the Administrative Director, render opinions on all medical issues necessary to determine eligibility for compensation [Lab. Code § 4061.5; see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9785]. If there is more than one treating physician, a single report must be prepared by the physician primarily responsible for managing the injured worker's care that incorporates the findings of the various treating physicians [Lab. Code § 4061.5].

On determining that a treating physician's report contains opinions that are the result of conjecture, are not supported by adequate evidence, or indicate bias, the WCAB must so notify the Administrative Director in writing [Lab. Code § 4068(a)]. If the Administrative Director believes that any treating physician's reports show a pattern of unsupported opinions, the Director must notify the treating physician's licensing body [Lab. Code § 4068(b)].

[2] Medical Evaluation to Determine Compensability of Injury

[a] In General

When a dispute exists over the compensability of any injury, that is, when injury to some part of the body is not accepted as compensable by the employer, neither the employer nor the employee is liable for any comprehensive medical-legal evaluation [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9793(c); see also 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 9794(a)(2), 9793(f), (1) (reimbursement allowed for cost of follow-up and supplemental medical-legal evaluation reports)] performed by other than the treating physician, except as provided in Lab. Code § 4060. However, reports of treating physicians shall be admissible [Lab. Code § 4060(a), (b)]. If a medical evaluation is required to determine compensability at any time after the filing of the claim form, and the employee is represented by an attorney, a medical evaluation to determine compensability is to be obtained only by the procedure provided in Lab. Code § 4062.2 [Lab. Code § 4060(c); see [3][a], below].

[b] Unrepresented Employees

If a medical evaluation is required to determine compensability at any time after the claim form is filed, and the employee is not represented by an attorney, the employer must provide the employee with notice either that the employer requests a comprehensive medical evaluation to determine compensability or that the employer has not accepted liability and the employee may request a comprehensive medical evaluation to determine compensability. Either party may request a comprehensive medical evaluation to determine compensability. The evaluation is to be obtained only by the procedure provided in Lab. Code § 4062.1 [Lab. Code § 4060(d); see [3][b], below].

Each notice mentioned in the preceding paragraph must describe the administrative procedures available to the injured employee and advise the employee of his or her right to consult an information and assistance officer or an attorney [Lab. Code § 4060(e)(1)]. It must contain the following language: "Should you decide to be represented by an attorney, you may or may not receive a larger award, but, unless you are determined to be ineligible for an award, the attorney's fee will be deducted from any award you might receive for disability benefits. The decision to be represented by an attorney is yours to make, but it is voluntary and may not be necessary for you to receive your benefits" [Lab. Code § 4060(e)(1)]. The notice must be accompanied by the form prescribed by the Administrative Director for requesting the assignment of a panel of qualified medical evaluators [Lab. Code § 4060(e)(2)].

[3] Medical Evaluation When Parties Do Not Agree to Permanent Disability Rating or Need for Continuing Medical Care

[a] QME Panel Requests

IMPORTANT NOTE: For some time, the law was unclear as to the procedure to be followed in such cases when the injury has occurred in the interval between April 19, 2004 (the date of enactment of the present versions of Lab. Code §§ 4061 and 4062.2), and January 1, 2005. However, the court of appeal, in a pair of companion cases, has shed some light on the issue. In the first case, the court held that the pre-April 19, 2004, version of either Lab. Code § 4061 or 4062 applied when a medical evaluation of a represented employee was required to resolve a dispute arising out of an injury occurring before January 1, 2005. The court found that the plain language of the post-April 19, 2004, Lab. Code § 4062.2 limited its applicability to injuries occurring on or after January 1, 2005, and that it would be illogical to allow a vacuum in which an employer would have no right to have a medical evaluation performed. Moreover, said the court, this conclusion was consistent with § 47 of SB 899 (the major workers' compensation legislation that became law on April 19, 2004), which stated that SB 899 applied prospectively from the date of SB 899's enactment, regardless of the date of injury, unless otherwise specified, and SB 899's Lab. Code § 4062.2 did otherwise specify, confining its applicability to injuries occurring on or after January 1, 2005 [Nunez v. W.C.A.B. (2006) 38 Cal. Rptr. 3d 914]. In the second case, the court held that, for the reasons set forth in the first case, Nunez, the medical evaluation and reporting procedure of pre-SB 899 Lab. Code § 4062 applied to represented cases with a date of injury prior to January 1, 2005. Additionally, the court held that Lab. Code § 4050 could not be utilized to circumvent the medical evaluation and reporting procedure of pre-SB 899 Lab. Code § 4062, and that Lab. Code § 5701 should not be utilized to order a medical evaluation that appears to violate pre-SB 899 Lab. Code § 4062 and that may generate a report that is inadmissible at trial [Cortez v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2006) 136 Cal. App. 4th 596, 601-602, 38 Cal. Rptr. 3d 922] .

The relevant regulations provide that, when an injured employee is not represented by an attorney and either the employee or the claims administrator requests a QME panel pursuant to Lab. Code § 4062.1, the request is to be submitted on the mandated form [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 105 (Request for QME Panel under Lab. Code § 4062.1)]. The claims administrator or, if none, the employer must provide Form 105 along with the Attachment to Form 105 (How to Request a Qualified Medical Evaluator if You Do Not Have an Attorney) to the unrepresented employee by means of personal delivery or by first class or certified mail [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 30(a)].

Requests for a QME panel in a represented case with a date of injury on or after January 1, 2005, or in which represented parties agree to obtain a panel of QMEs pursuant to the process in Lab. Code § 4062.2, are to be submitted on the mandated form [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 106 (Request for QME Panel under Lab. Code § 4062.2)]. The party requesting a QME panel must: (1) identify the disputed issue that requires a comprehensive medical-legal report to be resolved; (2) attach a copy of the written proposal, naming one or more physicians to be an AME, that was sent to the opposing party once the dispute arose; (3) designate a specialty for the QME panel requested; (4) state the specialty preferred by the opposing party, if known; and (5) state the specialty of the treating physician. In represented cases with dates of injury prior to January 1, 2005, and only upon the parties' agreement to obtain a QME panel pursuant to Lab. Code § 4062.2, the party requesting a QME panel must submit QME Form 106 in compliance with the above requirements and provide written evidence of the parties' agreement. Once such a panel in a represented case with a date of injury prior to January 1, 2005, is issued, the parties are bound by the timelines and process in Lab. Code § 4062.2 [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 30(b)].

If a request form is incomplete, or improperly completed, so that a QME panel selection cannot properly be made, the form will be returned to the requesting party with an explanation of why the QME panel selection could not be made. The Medical Director also may delay issuing a new QME panel, if necessary, until he or she receives additional reasonable information requested from a party or both parties needed to resolve the panel request. Reasonable information includes, but is not limited to, whether a QME panel previously issued to the injured employee was used [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 30(c)].

After a claim form has been filed, the claims administrator or, if none, the employer may request a panel of QMEs only as provided in Lab. Code § 4060 to determine whether to accept or reject a claim within the 90-day period for rejecting liability [see Lab. Code § 5402(b)] and only after providing evidence of compliance with the relevant statutes [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 30(d)(1); see Lab. Code §§ 4062.1, 4062.2].

Once the claims administrator or, if none, the employer has accepted as compensable an injury to any body part in the claim, a request for a panel QME may be filed based only on a dispute arising under Lab. Code § 4061 or 4062 [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 30(d)(2)].

When an injury or illness claim of an employee has been denied entirely by the claims administrator or, if none, by the employer, only the employee may request a panel of QMEs, as provided in Lab. Code §§ 4060(d) and 4062.1, if unrepresented, or as provided in Lab. Code §§ 4060(c) and 4062.2, if represented [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 30(d)(3)].

After the 90-day period for denying liability [see Lab. Code § 5402(b)] has expired, a request from the claims administrator or, if none, from the employer for a QME panel to determine compensability will be issued only upon presentation of: (1) a finding by a WCJ that the presumption of compensability [see Lab. Code § 5402(b)] has been rebutted; and (2) an order by the WCJ that a QME panel should be issued to determine compensability. The order must also specify the residential or, if applicable, the employment-based zip code from which to select QMEs and either the medical specialty of the panel or which party may select the medical specialty [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 30(d)(4)].

If the request form is submitted by or on behalf of an employee who no longer resides in California, the geographic area of the QME panel selection within the state must be determined by agreement between the claims administrator or, if none, the employer and the employee. If no agreement can be reached, the geographic area of the QME panel selection will be determined for an unrepresented employee by the employee's former residence in the state and for a represented employee by the office of the employee's attorney [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 30(e)].

To compile a panel list of three independent QMEs randomly selected from the specialty designated by the party holding the legal right to request a QME panel, the Medical Director must exclude from the panel, to the extent feasible, any QME who is listed by another QME as a business partner or as having a shared specified financial interest [8 Cal.

Code Reg. § 30(f); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 1, 29 (specified financial interests)].

The panel request in a represented case must be sent to the Medical Unit address on QME Form 106 by first class mail. The Medical Unit will not accept panel requests in represented cases delivered in person by a party, the party's attorney, any other person, or by other commercial courier or delivery services [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 30(g)].

[b] Specialist Designation

The time periods specified in Lab. Code §§ 4062.1(c) and 4062.2(c), respectively, for selecting an evaluator from a QME panel and for scheduling an appointment, will be tolled whenever the Medical Director asks a party for additional information needed to resolve the panel request. These time periods will remain tolled until the date the Medical Director issues either a new QME panel or a decision on the panel request [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 30(h); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 30.5 (in QME panel selection process, Medical Director required to use type of specialist(s) indicated by requestor)].

[c] QME Panel Selection

When requested by an employee or employer pursuant to Lab. Code § 4062.1, the Medical Director is required to assign a three-member panel of qualified medical evaluators within five working days after receiving a request for a panel, and must notify the employee of the physicians selected for the panel. If a panel is not assigned within 15 working days, the employee has the right to obtain a medical evaluation from any QME of his or her choice [Lab. Code § 139.2(h)]. The panel must be selected at random from the appropriate specialty identified by the party who holds the legal right to designate the specialty, requested by the employee on the form, with consideration given to the proximity of the QME's office to the employee's residence [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 31(a); see Lab. Code § 139.2(d) (requirements for proximity of QMEs to employee's residence)]. Once the panel has been selected, a selection form will be sent to the employee with (1) the names, addresses, and phone numbers of three physicians and a summary of each one's medical background; (2) the name and address of the employee and the name of the claims administrator; (3) a statement advising the employee that he or she is entitled to receive transportation expenses and temporary disability for each day necessary for the examination; and (4) the following statement in a clear and conspicuous location and type [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 107 (IMC Form 107--panel selection form); Lab. Code § 139.2(h)]:

> You have the right to consult with an information and assistance officer at no cost to you prior to selecting the doctor to prepare your evaluation, or you may consult with an attorney. If your claim eventually goes to court, the judge will consider the evaluation prepared by the doctor you select to decide your claim.

Any physician who has served as the employee's primary treating physician or secondary physician and who is chosen for that employee's panel, must disqualify him or herself, and either party may request a replacement [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 31(c)]. The Medical Director is required to exclude from the panel selection process any QME who has informed him or her that he or she is unavailable [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 31(b); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 33 (unavailability of QME)].

For a panel to be issued in a selected specialty, there must be at least five active QMEs in the specialty at the time the panel selection is requested. If fewer than five QMEs are active in a requested specialty, the Medical Director must contact the party who holds the legal right to designate the specialty for an alternative specialty selection [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 31(d)].

[d] QME Panel Selection Disputes in Represented Cases

When the Medical Director receives two or more panel selection forms pursuant to Lab. Code § 4062.2 on the same day and the forms designate different physician specialties for the QME panel, the Medical Director will use the following procedures [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 31.1(a)]:

1. If one party requests the same specialty as that of the treating physician, the panel will be issued in the specialty of the treating physician unless the Medical Director is persuaded by supporting documentation provided by the requestor that explains the medical basis for the requested specialty.

2. If no party requests a panel in the specialty of the treating physician, the Medical Director will select a specialty appropriate for the medical issue in dispute and issue a panel in that specialty.

3. Upon request by the Medical Director, the party requesting the panel will provide additional medical records to assist the Medical Director in determining the appropriate specialty.

If a party in a represented case wishes to request a QME panel pursuant to Lab. Code § 4062.2 in a specialty other than the specialty of the treating physician, the party must submit with the panel request form any relevant documentation supporting the reason for requesting a different specialty [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 31.1(b)].

If the Medical Director is unable to issue a QME panel in a represented case within 30 calendar days of receiving the request, either party may seek an order from a WCJ that a QME panel be issued. Any such order must specify the specialty of the QME panel or the party to be designated to select the specialty [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 31.1(c)].

If the employee is represented and the parties have completed the conferring and striking processes described in Lab. Code § 4062.2(c), the represented employee must schedule the appointment with the physician selected from the QME panel. If the represented employee fails to do so within 10 business days of the date a QME is selected from the panel, the claims administrator may arrange the appointment and notify the employee and the employee's attorney [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 31.1(d)].

[e] Scheduling Appointment With Panel QME

An unrepresented employee must, within 10 days of having been furnished with the relevant form, select a QME from the panel list, contact the QME to schedule an appointment, and inform the claims administrator of the QME selection and the appointment [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 31.3(a)].

Neither the employer, the claims administrator, nor any other representative of the employer is permitted to discuss the selection of the QME with an unrepresented employee who has the legal right to select the QME [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 31.3(b)].

If, within 10 days of the issuance of a QME panel, the unrepresented employee fails to select a QME from the panel or fails to schedule an appointment with the selected QME, the claims administrator may schedule an appointment with a panel QME, only as provided in Lab. Code § 4062.1(c), and must notify the employee of the appointment, as provided in that statute [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 31.3(c)].

[f] QME Replacement Requests

A replacement QME to a panel, or at the discretion of the Medical Director a replacement of an entire panel of QMEs, will be selected at random by the Medical Director and provided upon request whenever any of the following occurs [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 31.5(a)]:

1. A QME on the panel issued does not practice in the specialty requested by the party holding the legal right to request the panel.

2. A QME on the panel issued cannot schedule an examination for the employee within 60 days of the initial request for an appointment, or if the 60-day scheduling limit has been waived [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 33(e)], the QME cannot schedule the examination within 90 days of the date of the initial request for an appointment.

3. The injured worker has changed his or her residence address since the QME panel was issued and prior to the date of the initial evaluation of the injured worker.

4. A physician on the QME panel is a member of the same group practice [see Lab. Code § 139.3] as another QME on the panel.

5. The QME is unavailable [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 33 (unavailability of QME)].

6. The evaluator who previously reported in the case is no longer available.

7. A QME named on the panel is currently, or has been, the employee's primary treating physician or secondary physician [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9785] for the injury currently in dispute.

8. The claims administrator or, if none, the employer and the employee agree in writing, for the employee's convenience only, that a new panel may be issued in the geographic area of the employee's workplace and a copy of the employee's agreement is submitted with the panel replacement request.

9. The Medical Director, upon written request, finds good cause that a replacement QME or a replacement panel is appropriate for reasons related to the medical nature of the injury. For purposes of this subsection, "good cause" is defined as a documented medical or psychological impairment.

10. The Medical Director, upon written request, filed with a copy of the Doctor's First Report of Occupational Injury or Illness (Form DLSR 5021) [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 14006, 14007] and the most recent DWC Form PR-2 ("Primary Treating Physician's Progress Report" [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9785.2] or narrative report filed in lieu of the PR-2, determines after a review of all appropriate records that the specialty chosen by the party holding the legal right to designate a specialty is medically or otherwise inappropriate for the disputed medical issue(s). The Medical Director may request either party to provide additional information or records necessary for the determination.

11. The evaluator has violated the regulation regarding appointment notification and cancellation [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 34], except that the evaluator will not be replaced for this reason whenever the request for a replacement by a party is made more than 15 calendar days from either the date the party became aware of the violation of the regulation or the date the report was served by the evaluator, whichever is earlier.

12. The evaluator failed to meet the deadlines regarding medical evaluation time frames [see Lab. Code § 4062.5; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 38], and the party requesting the replacement objected to the report on the grounds of lateness prior to the date the evaluator served the report. A party requesting a replacement on this ground must attach to the request for a replacement a copy of the party's objection to the untimely report.

13. The QME has a disqualifying conflict of interest [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 41.5].

14. The Administrative Director has issued an order for additional QME evaluation [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10164(c)].

15. The selected medical evaluator, who otherwise appears to be qualified and competent to address all disputed medical issues, refuses to provide, when requested by a party or by the Medical Director, either: (A) a complete medical evaluation [see Lab. Code § 4062.3(i), (j)]; or (B) a written statement that explains why the evaluator believes he or she is not medically qualified or medically competent to address one or more issues in dispute in the case.

16. The QME panel list was issued more than 24 months prior to the date the request for a replacement is received by the Medical Unit, and none of the QMEs on the panel list has examined the injured worker.

When the Medical Director determines that a request made for a QME replacement or QME panel replacement is valid, the time limit for an unrepresented employee to select a QME and schedule an appointment [see Lab. Code § 4062.1(c)] and the time limit for a represented employee to strike a QME name from the QME panel [see Lab. Code § 4062.2(c)] is tolled until the date the replacement QME name or QME panel is issued [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 31.5(b)].

In the event the parties in a represented case have struck two QME names from a panel and subsequently a valid ground arises to replace the remaining QME, none of the QMEs whose names appeared on the earlier QME panel may be included in the replacement QME panel [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 31.5(c)].

[g] Obtaining Additional QME Panel in Different Specialty

Once an AME, an Agreed Panel QME, or a panel QME has issued a comprehensive medical-legal report and a new medical dispute arises, the parties, to the extent possible, must obtain a follow-up evaluation or a supplemental evaluation from the same evaluator [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 31.7(a)].

Upon a showing of good cause that a panel of QME physicians in a different specialty is needed to assist the parties to reach an expeditious and just resolution of disputed medical issues, the Medical Director must issue an additional panel of QME physicians selected at random in the specialty requested. For the purpose of this section, good cause means any of the following [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 31.7(b)]:

1. An order by a WCJ for a panel of QME physicians that also either designates a party to select the specialty or states the specialty to be selected and the residential or employment-based Zip code from which to randomly select evaluators.

2. The AME or QME selected advises the parties and the Medical Director that he or she has completed or will complete a timely evaluation of the disputed medical issues within his or her scope of practice and areas of clinical competence but recommends that a new evaluator in another specialty is needed to evaluate one or more remaining disputed medical conditions, injuries, or issues that are outside of the evaluator's areas of clinical competence, and either the injured worker is unrepresented or the parties in a represented case have been unable to select an AME for that purpose.

3. A written agreement by the parties in a represented case that there is a need for an additional comprehensive medical-legal report by an evaluator in a different specialty, that attempts to select an AME pursuant to Lab. Code § 4062.2 for that purpose have failed, and the specialty that the parties have agreed on for the additional evaluation.

4. In an unrepresented case, that the parties have conferred with an Information and Assistance Officer, have explained the need for an additional QME in another specialty to address disputed issues, and, as noted by the Information and Assistance Officer on the panel request form, have reached agreement in the presence of and with the assistance of the Officer on the specialty requested for the additional QME panel. The parties may confer with the Information and Assistance Officer in person or by conference call.

[h] Consultations

When an acupuncturist has been selected by the injured worker from a three-member panel and an issue of disability is in dispute, the acupuncturist must request a consultation from a QME [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 1(z)] to evaluate the disability issue(s). The acupuncturist will evaluate all other issues as required for a complete evaluation. If requested by the QME acupuncturist to obtain a QME to provide the consulting evaluation, the Medical Director must issue a panel within 15 days of the request in the specialty selected by the QME acupuncturist [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 32(a)].

Except as provided in the preceding paragraph, no QME may obtain a consultation for the purpose of obtaining an opinion regarding permanent disability and apportionment consistent with the requirements of Lab. Code §§ 4660 through 4664 and the AMA Guides [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 32(b)].

For injuries occurring on or after January 1, 1994, a QME may obtain a consultation from any physician as reasonable and necessary pursuant to Lab. Code § 4064(a) [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 32(c)].

Whenever an Agreed Panel QME or a QME determines that a consultation is necessary pursuant and the physician selected for the consultation is not selected by the parties from a QME panel issued by the Medical Director, the referring QME must arrange the consultation appointment and advise the injured employee and the claims administrator or, if none, the employer, and each party's attorney, if any, in writing of the appointment date, time, and place by use of QME Form 110 (QME Appointment Notification Form) [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 32(d)].

The consulting physician must serve the consulting report on the referring QME. On receipt of the consulting physician's report, the referring evaluator must review the report, incorporate it by reference into the referring evaluator's medical-legal report, and comment on the consulting physician's findings and conclusions in the discussion sections of the evaluator's report [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 32(e)].

The referring QME must file the comprehensive medical-legal report within the specified time periods [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 38]. In the event a consulting physician's report has not been received, or will not be received, in time to comply with the time periods, the referring QME must serve the comprehensive medical-legal report timely, and, on receipt of the consulting physician's report, the referring evaluator must, within 15 calendar days of its receipt, issue a supplemental report that incorporates the consulting physician's report by reference and comments on whether and how the findings in the consulting report change the referring evaluator's opinions. The referring evaluator must list, in the report commenting on a consulting physician's report, all reports and information received from each party for the consulting physician, indicate whether each item was forwarded to the consulting physician, and for items not forwarded the reason the referring evaluator determined it was not necessary to do so [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 32(f)].

With the exception of verbal communications between an injured worker and the consulting physician in the course of the consulting examination, all other communications by the parties, as well as any reports and other information from the parties for the consulting physician, if any, must be made in writing directed to only the referring QME, who may forward such communications on to the consulting physician as appropriate. With the exception of deposing the consulting physician if necessary and except as provided in this subdivision, neither party nor a party's attorney may communicate directly with nor send correspondence or records directly to the consulting physician [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 32(g)].

[i] Additional QME Evaluations Ordered by Appeals Board

The Medical Director must issue a panel of QMEs on receipt of an order of a WCJ or the Appeals Board that includes a finding that an additional evaluation is reasonable and necessary to resolve disputed issues under Lab. Code § 4060, 4061, or 4062. The order must specify the residential or employment-based Zip code from which to randomly select evaluators, specify the specialty for the QME panel or designate the party who will select the specialty of the QME panel, and specify who will select a new specialty in the event there are too few QMEs in the specialty initially selected to issue a panel [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 32.6; see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 31(d)].

[j] Appointment Notification and Cancellation

When an appointment for a comprehensive medical evaluation is made with a QME, the QME must complete an appointment notification form [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 110 (QME appointment notification form)]. The completed form must be postmarked or sent by facsimile to the employee and the claims administrator or, if none, the employer within five business days of the date the appointment was made. In a represented case, a copy of the completed form must also be sent to the attorney who represents each party, if known. Failure to comply with this requirement constitutes grounds for denial of reappointment [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 34(a); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 51 (reappointment: failure to comply with time frames)].

The QME must schedule an appointment for a comprehensive medical-legal examination to be conducted only at the medical office listed on the panel selection form. However, on written request by the injured worker and only for his or her convenience, the evaluation appointment may be moved to another medical office of the selected QME if it is listed with the Medical Director as an additional office location [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 34(b)].

The QME must include in the notification whether a Certified Interpreter [see Lab. Code § 5811; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9795.3] is required and specify the language. The interpreter must be arranged by the party who is to pay the cost as provided in Lab. Code § 5811 [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 34(c)].

An evaluator, whether an AME, an Agreed Panel QME, or a QME, may not cancel a scheduled appointment fewer than six business days prior to the appointment date, except for good cause. Whenever cancelling a scheduled appointment, the evaluator must advise the parties in writing of the reason for the cancellation. The Appeals Board retains jurisdiction to resolve disputes among the parties regarding whether an appointment cancellation pursuant to this subdivision was for good cause. The Administrative Director retains jurisdiction to take appropriate disciplinary action against any Agreed Panel QME or QME for violations of this section [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 34(d)].

An Agreed Panel QME or a QME who cancels a scheduled appointment must reschedule the appointment to a date within 30 calendar days of the date of cancellation. The rescheduled appointment date may not be more than 60 calendar days from the date of the initial request for an appointment, unless the parties agree in writing to accept a date beyond the 60-day limit [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 34(e)].

An AME who cancels a scheduled appointment must reschedule the appointment within 60 calendar days of the date of the cancellation, unless the parties agree in writing to accept an appointment date no more than 30 calendar days beyond the 60-day limit [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 34(f)].

Failure to receive relevant medical records [see Lab. Code § 4062.3; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 35 (exchange of information and ex parte communications)] prior to a scheduled appointment does not constitute good cause under this section for the evaluator to cancel the appointment, unless the evaluator is a psychiatrist or psychologist performing an evaluation regarding a disputed injury to the psyche who states in the evaluation report that receipt of relevant medical records prior to the evaluation was necessary to conduct a full and fair evaluation [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 34(g)].

An appointment scheduled with an evaluator, whether an AME, an Agreed Panel QME, or a QME, may not be cancelled or rescheduled by a party or the party's attorney fewer than six business days before the appointment date, except for good cause. When the claims administrator or, if none, the employer, the injured worker, or either party's attorney cancels an appointment scheduled by an evaluator, the cancellation must be made in writing, state the reason for the cancellation, and be served on the opposing party. Oral cancellations must be followed with a written confirming letter faxed or mailed by first class U.S. mail within 24 hours of the verbal cancellation and complying with this section. An injured worker is not liable for any missed appointment fee when an appointment is cancelled for good cause. The Appeals Board retains jurisdiction to resolve disputes regarding whether an appointment cancellation by a party was for good cause [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 34(h)].

The date of cancellation is determined from the date of postmark, if mailed, or from the facsimile receipt date as shown on the recipient's fax copy [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 34(i)].

[k] Compliance by AMEs and QMEs With Administrative Director Evaluation and Reporting Guidelines

Each evaluation examination and report completed pursuant to Lab. Code § 4060, 4061, 4062, 4062.1, 4062.2, 4064, 4067, or 5703.5 must be performed in compliance with all appropriate evaluation procedures [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 35.5(a)].

Each reporting evaluator must state in the body of the comprehensive medical-legal report the date of the examination and the street address at which it was performed. If the evaluator signs the report on any date other than the date on which it was completed, he or she must enter the date on which the report was signed next to or near his or her signature [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 35.5(b)].

The evaluator must address all contested medical issues arising from all injuries reported on one or more claim forms prior to the date of the employee's appointment with the evaluator that are issues within the evaluator's scope of practice and areas of clinical competence. The reporting evaluator must attempt to address each question raised by each party in the issue cover letter sent to the evaluator [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 35.5(c); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 35(a)(3)].

At the evaluator's earliest opportunity, and no later than the date the report is served, the evaluator must advise the parties in writing of any disputed medical issues outside of the evaluator's scope of practice and area of clinical competency in order that the parties may initiate the process for obtaining an additional evaluation, pursuant to Lab. Code § 4062.1 or 4062.2 and these regulations, in another specialty. In the case of an Agreed Panel QME or a panel QME, the evaluator must send a copy of the written notification provided to the parties to the Medical Director at the same time. However, only a party's request for an additional panel, with the evaluator's written notice under this section attached, or an order by a WCJ, will be acted on by the Medical Director to issue a new QME panel in another specialty [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 35.5(d)].

If a new injury or illness is claimed, involving the same type of body part or body system, and the parties are the same, or if either party objects to any new medical issue within the evaluator's scope of practice and clinical competence, the parties must use, to the extent possible, the same evaluator who reported previously [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 35.5(e)].

Unless the Appeals Board or a WCJ orders otherwise or the parties agree otherwise, when a party is legally entitled to depose the evaluator, the evaluator must make himself or herself available for deposition within 120 days of the notice of deposition and, on the request of the unrepresented injured worker, and, when consistent with Lab. Code § 5710, the deposition must be held at the location at which the evaluation examination was performed or at a facility or office chosen by the deposing party not more than 20 miles from the location of the evaluation examination [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 35.5(f)].

When an AME or a QME provides an opinion in a comprehensive medical-legal report on a disputed medical treatment issue, the evaluator's opinion must be consistent with, and apply the standards of, evidence-based medicine [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9792.20 et seq. (medical treatment utilization schedule)]. If the disputed medical treatment, condition, or injury is not addressed by the Medical Treatment Utilization Schedule, the evaluator's medical opinion must be consistent with, and refer to, other evidence-based medical treatment guidelines, peer reviewed studies, and articles, if any, and otherwise explain the medical basis for the evaluator's reasoning and conclusions [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 35.5(g)].

[l] Service of Comprehensive Medical-Legal Evaluation Reports by Medical Evaluators, Including Reports Under Lab. Code § 4061

When an injured worker is represented by an attorney, the evaluator must serve each comprehensive medical-legal evaluation report, follow-up comprehensive medical-legal evaluation report, and supplemental evaluation report on the injured worker, his or her attorney, and the claims administrator or, if none, the employer by completing QME Form 122 [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 122 (AME or QME declaration of service of medical-legal report form)] and attaching QME Form 122 to the report, unless 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 36.5 [see [m], below] applies. If applicable in a claim involving disputed injury to the psyche, the evaluator must comply with the requirements of 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 36.5 [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 36(a); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 36.5, 120, 121)].

When an injured worker is not represented by an attorney, the QME must serve each comprehensive medical-legal evaluation report, follow-up evaluation report, or supplemental report that addresses only disputed issues outside of the scope of Lab. Code § 4061 by completing the questions and declaration of service on QME Form 111 [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 111 (QME findings summary form)] and by serving the report, with QME Form 111 attached, on the injured worker and the claims administrator or, if none, on the employer, unless 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 36.5 applies. If applicable in a claim involving disputed injury to the psyche, the evaluator must comply with the requirements of Admin. Cir. Rule 36.5 [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 36(b); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 36.5, 120, 121].

When the evaluator is serving a medical-legal evaluation report that addresses or describes findings and conclusions pertaining to permanent impairment, permanent disability, or apportionment of an unrepresented injured worker, the evaluator must serve the evaluation report, the completed QME Form 111 [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 111 (QME findings summary form)], DWC-AD Form 100 (DEU) [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10160, 10161 (employee's disability questionnaire)], and DWC-AD Form 101 (DEU) [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10160, 10161 (request for summary rating determination of qualified medical evaluator's report)], with the document cover sheet, DWC-CA form 10232.1 [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10232.1], and separator sheet, DWC-CA Form 10232.2 [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10232.2], as required [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10160(d)(4)], on the local DEU office, at the same time as serving the report, QME Form 111, DWC-AD Form 100 (DEU), and DWC-AD Form 101 (DEU) on the claims administrator or, if none, the employer, and on the unrepresented employee within the required time frames [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 38; see also 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 36.5]. If applicable, in cases involving disputed injury to the psyche, the evaluator must follow the procedures prescribed for such evaluations [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 36(c); see [m], below].

If an evaluation report is completed for an unrepresented employee, in which the QME determines that the employee's condition has not become permanent and stationary as of the date of the evaluation, the parties must request any further evaluation from the same QME if he or she is currently an active QME and available at the time of the request for the additional evaluation. If the QME is unavailable, a new panel may be issued to resolve any disputed issue(s). If the evaluator is no longer a QME, he or she may issue a supplemental report as long as a face-to-face evaluation [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 49(b)] with the injured worker is not required. In no event may a physician who is not a QME or no longer a QME perform a follow-up evaluation on an unrepresented injured worker [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 36(d)].

After a QME has served a comprehensive medical-legal report that finds and describes permanent impairment, permanent disability, or apportionment in the case of an unrepresented injured worker, the QME may not issue any supplemental report on any of those issues in response to a party's request until after the DEU has issued an initial summary rating report, or unless the evaluator is otherwise directed to issue a supplemental report by the DEU, by the Administrative Director, or by a WCJ. A party wishing to request a supplemental report [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10160(f)], based on the party's objection to or need for clarification of the evaluator's discussion of permanent impairment, permanent disability, or apportionment, may do so only by sending the detailed request, within the relevant time limits [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10160(f)], directly to the DEU office where the report was served by the evaluator and not to the evaluator until after the initial summary rating has been issued [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 36(e)].

[m] Service of Comprehensive Medical/Legal Report in Claims of Injury to Psyche

For any evaluation involving a claimed or disputed injury to the psyche, the injured worker must be advised by the evaluator that the employee's copy of the comprehensive medical-legal report, and any follow-up or supplemental reports, from the evaluation may be served either directly on the injured worker or instead on a physician designated in writing by the injured worker prior to leaving the evaluator's office, for the purpose of reviewing and discussing the evaluation report with the injured worker. The evaluator must explain that the designated physician may be, but need not be, the injured worker's primary treating physician in the workers' compensation claim and that the employer will be responsible for payment for one office visit with the designated physician for this purpose [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 36.5(a)].

When injury to the psyche is claimed and in the course of the evaluation the evaluator makes a determination pursuant to Health & Safety Code § 123115(b) that there is a substantial risk of significant adverse or detrimental medical consequences to the injured worker from seeing or receiving a copy of part or all of the evaluation report, which is a mental health record, the evaluator must do all of the following [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 36.5(b)]:

1. Complete QME Form 121 (Declaration Regarding Protection of Mental Health Record).

2. Advise the injured worker that the determination under Health & Safety Code § 123115(b) has been made regarding the evaluation report as a mental health record and that the evaluator may serve the injured worker's copy of the evaluation report on only a person who is a licensed physician [see Lab. Code § 3209.3], whose name the injured worker may designate in writing prior to leaving the evaluator's office, or on the employee's attorney, if any.

3. Permit inspection and copying of the mental health record(s) subject to the Health & Safety Code § 123115(b) determination by a licensed physician only [see Lab. Code § 3209.3] or another health care provider [see Health & Safety Code § 123105(a)].

4. Complete the QME Form 121 (Declaration Regarding Protection of Mental Health Record) and enter the name and address of the physician designated in writing by the injured worker on this form.

5. Attach a completed copy of QME Form 121 to the copy of the evaluation report in the injured worker's medical or medical-legal file.

6. Serve the completed comprehensive medical-legal evaluation report, follow-up medical-legal report, or supplemental medical-legal report(s) subject to the provisions of this section, with the completed QME Form 121 attached, on the licensed physician designated by the injured worker on QME Form 121, on the claims administrator, and on each party's attorney, if any [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 36(a)], and within the relevant time periods [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 38]. If the injured worker designates a physician on QME Form 121 other than the current primary treating physician in his or her workers' compensation claim, the evaluator must also serve a copy of the report with the QME Form 121 attached on the primary treating physician.

7. When the report addresses any permanent impairment, permanent disability, or apportionment and the injured worker is not represented by an attorney, a copy of the report with the completed QME Form 121 attached must also be served on the appropriate office of the DEU, along with the QME Form 111 [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 111 (QME findings summary form)], DWC-AD form 100 (DEU) [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10160, 10161 (employee's disability questionnaire)], and DWC-AD Form 101 (DEU) [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10160, 10161 (request for summary rating determination of qualified medical evaluator's report)], with the document cover sheet, DWC-CA form 10232.1 [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10232.1], and separator sheet, DWC-CA Form 10232.2 [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10232.2], as required [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10160(d)(4)].

8. When the report addresses permanent impairment, permanent disability, or apportionment and the injured worker is represented by an attorney, a copy of the report with the completed QME Form 121 attached must be served with QME Form 122 (AME or QME Declaration of Service of Medical-Legal Report) on the physician designated by the injured worker, the injured worker's attorney, and the claims administrator's attorney or, if none, on the claims administrator.

"Mental health record" for the purposes of this subdivision means a medical treatment or evaluation record created by or received and reviewed by a licensed physician [see Lab. Code § 3209.3], in the course of treating or evaluating the injured worker in a workers' compensation claim, and includes for the purposes of this subdivision, but is not limited to, treatment records and comprehensive medical-legal reports [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 36.5(c)].

On serving the employee's copy of the medical-legal report in compliance with the relevant regulations [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 36.5(b)(6), (7), (8)] on the physician designated by the employee on the QME Form 121 (Declaration Regarding Protection of Mental Health Record), the evaluator's obligation to serve the report on the injured worker [see Lab. Code §§ 139.2(j)(1), 4061(c); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 36] will be deemed satisfied [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 36.5(d)].

Mental health records subject to a determination under Health & Safety Code § 123115(b) and this subdivision must be kept confidential by the claims administrator and all parties' attorneys unless ordered otherwise by a WCJ. When such a mental health record is filed by a party at the Appeals Board, the party filing it must request and obtain a protective order from a WCJ that specifies in what manner the mental health record may be inspected, copied, and entered into evidence [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 36.5(e)].

When the injured worker advises the evaluator that he or she prefers to have the evaluation report served on a designated physician [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 36.5(b)], and the evaluator does not make a determination pursuant to Health & Safety Code § 123115(b), the evaluator must provide QME Form 120 (Voluntary Directive for Alternate Service of Medical-Legal Report) to the injured worker and request the injured worker to complete the form before leaving the evaluator's office [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 36.5(f)].

On receipt by the evaluator of a QME Form 120 completed by the injured worker, the evaluator must attach the original executed QME Form 120 to the original medical-legal report for service on the claims administrator or, if none, on the employer. The evaluator must serve the evaluation report with QME Form 120 attached by completing the questions and the declaration of proof of service on QME Form 111 (Qualified Medical Evaluator's Findings Summary Form). In the case of an unrepresented injured worker, the evaluator must serve the report with the required forms [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 36.5(b)(7)]. In the case of a represented injured worker, the evaluator must serve the report with QME Form 120 attached, by completing the declaration of service on QME Form 122 (AME or QME Declaration of Service of Medical-Legal Report) and serving it with the report [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 36.5(g)].

When an evaluation report is being served on a designated physician with QME Form 120 (Voluntary Directive for Alternate Service of Medical-Legal Report), the evaluator must serve two copies of the medical-legal report with the QME Form 120 attached on the physician designated on the form by the injured worker, at the same time as serving the copies of the medical-legal report on the claims administrator or, if none, on the employer and on the injured worker's attorney, if any. Service of a medical-legal report by an evaluator in compliance with this subdivision satisfies the evaluator's obligation to serve a copy of the report on the employee [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 36.5(h); see Lab. Code §§ 139.2(j)(1), 4061(c); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 36].

The physician designated by the injured worker in writing and listed on QME Form 120 or QME Form 121 need not be limited to the primary treating physician in the disputed workers' compensation claim. As an additional medical treatment expense incurred in the claim [see Lab. Code § 4600], the claims administrator or, if none, the employer, must reimburse the physician designated by the injured worker and listed on either the QME Form 121 (Declaration Regarding Protection of Mental Health Record) or the QME Form 120 (Voluntary Directive for Alternate Service of Medical-Legal Evaluation Report on Disputed Injury to the Psyche), for one office visit, when used, for the purpose of reviewing and discussing the evaluator's report with the injured worker, at the applicable rate [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9789.11 (physician services rendered on or after 7/1/2004)], for an office visit and may include, as appropriate, record review, any necessary face-to-face time during the visit in excess of that specified in the applicable CPT office visit code, and charges for time required to prepare a treatment report pertaining to the office visit, if necessary [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 36.5(i)].

When the comprehensive medical-legal report is served by the evaluator on a physician [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 36.5(f)] with the QME Form 120 (Voluntary Directive for Alternate Service of Medical-Legal Report on Disputed Injury to the Psyche) attached, one of the two copies of the medical-legal report served on the designated physician must be provided to the injured worker by the designated physician during the office visit [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 36.5(j)].

If the injured worker refuses or fails to designate a physician in writing to be listed on either QME Form 120 or QME Form 121, the evaluator must serve the report as appropriate [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 36, 36.5], and within the required time periods [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 38], except that the injured worker's copy of the report that is subject to a finding under Health & Safety Code § 123115(b) must then be served only on the injured worker's attorney, if represented, or, if not represented, on the injured worker's primary treating physician [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 36.5(k)].

[n] Medical Evaluation Time Frames; Extensions for QMEs and AMEs

The time frame for an initial or a follow-up comprehensive medical-legal evaluations report to be prepared and submitted must not exceed 30 days after the QME, Agreed Panel QME, or AME has seen the employee or otherwise commenced the comprehensive medical-legal evaluation procedure. If an evaluator fails to prepare and serve the initial or follow-up report within 30 days and the evaluator has failed to obtain approval from the Medical Director for an extension of time pursuant to this section, the employee or the employer may request a QME replacement [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 31.5]. Neither the employee nor the employer has any liability for payment for the medical evaluation that was not completed within the time frames required under this section unless the employee and the employer both waive the right to a new evaluation and elect to accept the original evaluation in writing or by signing and returning to the Medical Director either QME Form 113 (Notice of Denial of Request For Time Extension) or QME Form 116 (Notice of Late QME/AME Report-No Extension Requested) [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 38(a)].

All requests by an evaluator for extensions of time must be made on Form 112 (QME/AME Time Frame Extension Request). If the evaluation will not be completed on the original due date, the evaluator may request an extension from the Medical Director, not to exceed an additional 30 days. An extension of the time for completing the report will be approved, as follows [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 38(b)]:

1. When the evaluator has not received test results or the report of a consulting physician necessary to address all disputed medical issues in time to meet the initial 30-day deadline, an extension of up to 30 days will be granted.

2. When the evaluator has good cause [see Lab. Code § 139.2(j)(1)(B)], an extension of 15 days will be granted

Not later than five days before the initial 30-day period to complete and serve the report expires, the evaluator must notify the Medical Director, the employee, and the claims administrator or, if none, the employer of the request for an extension by use of QME Form 112 (QME/AME Time Extension Request) [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 38(c)].

The Medical Director must notify the requesting evaluator and the parties of the decision on the extension request by completion of the box at the bottom of QME Form 112 (QME/AME Time Frame Extension Request). If a request for an extension of time is denied, the Medical Director must also send the parties QME Form 113 (Notice of Denial of Request for Time Extension) to be used by each party to state whether the party wishes to request a new evaluator or to accept the late report of the original evaluator [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 38(d)].

When the Medical Director becomes aware that the report of a QME or an AME has not been completed within the required time and no extension of time was requested by the evaluator, the Medical Director must send the parties a Notice of Late QME/AME Report-No Extension Requested (QME Form 116). Each party must complete the form and return it to the Medical Director to indicate whether the party wishes to accept the late report [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 38(e)].

Good cause [see Lab. Code § 139.2(j)(1)(B); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 38(b)(2)] means [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 38(f)]:

1. Medical emergencies of the evaluator or the evaluator's family.

2. Death in the evaluator's family.

3. Natural disasters or other community catastrophes that interrupt the operation of the evaluator's office operations.

Extensions are not to be granted because relevant medical information/records (including Disability Evaluation Form 101 (Request for Summary Determination of Qualified Medical Evaluator's Report)) have not been received. The evaluator must complete the report based on the information available and state that the opinions and/or conclusions may or may not change after review of the relevant medical information/records [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 38(g)].

The time frame for supplemental reports is to be no more than 60 days from the date of a written or electronically transmitted request to the physician by a party. The request for a supplemental report must be accompanied by any new medical records that were unavailable to the evaluator at the time of the original evaluation and that were properly served on the opposing party as required by Lab. Code § 4062.3. An extension of the 60-day time frame for completing the supplemental report, of no more than 30 days, may be agreed to by the parties without the need to request an extension from the Medical Director [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 38(h)].

Evaluators requesting time extensions will be monitored and advised by the Medical Director when such a request appears unreasonable or excessive. Failure to comply with this section may constitute grounds for denial of the QME's request for reappointment [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 38(i)].

[o] Disclosure and Ethical Requirements for QMEs and AMEs

QMEs and AMEs are subject to various disclosure requirements [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 40 (required disclosures to injured workers)], ethical requirements [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 41], and rules regarding conflicts of interest [see Lab. Code § 139.2(o); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 41.5; see also 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 41.6 (procedures after notice of conflict of interest and waivers of conflicts of interest)]. Additionally, the regulations restrict gifts that may be accepted by an evaluator from any "source that handles California workers' compensation matters" [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 41.7].

[p] Methods of Evaluation and Minimum Time Guidelines of Various Disabilities

The regulations specify requirements for evaluating various disabilities [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 43 (psychiatric disability); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 44 (pulmonary disability); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 45 (cardiac disability); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 46 (neuromusculoskeletal disability); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 46.1 (foot and ankle disability); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 47

(immunologic disability)].

Similarly, the regulations specify guidelines for the minimum "face to face time" [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 49(b) ("face to face time" defined)] for evaluating various disabilities [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 49.2 (neuromusculoskeletal evaluation); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 49.4 (cardiovascular evaluation); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 49.6 (pulmonary evaluation); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 49.8 (psychiatric evaluation); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 49.9 (other evaluation)].

[q] Calculation and Service of Permanent Disability Rating by Administrative Director

Within 20 days after receipt, the administrative director will calculate the permanent disability rating according to Lab. Code § 4660 (procedures and schedules for determining permanent disability rating) and serve the rating on the employee and employer by first class mail [Lab. Code § 4061(e); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10165]. At that time, the administrative director will also serve the employee with DEU Form 110, Notice of Options Following Disability Rating [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10165]. The form explains what the rating is and advises the employee of the advantages and disadvantages of opting for a Stipulated Findings and Award or settlement by Compromise and Release. It also includes a specific notice to unrepresented employees that specifies the procedure for requesting administrative review of the rating determination [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10165.5 (form of notice)]. For discussion of the unrepresented employee's right to reconsideration of a rating determination, see [r], below. For discussion of permanent disability rating determinations, see § 577.45[4][d].

Any comprehensive medical evaluation concerning an unrepresented employee that indicates that part or all of an employee's permanent impairment or limitations may be subject to apportionment pursuant to Lab. Code §§ 4663 and 4664 will first be submitted by the Office of BenefitDetermination to a workers' compensation judge who may refer the report back to the medical evaluator for correction or clarification if the judge determines the proposed apportionment is inconsistent with the law [Lab. Code § 4061(f)].

[r] Request for Reconsideration of Rating When Employee Is Unrepresented

Within 30 days after receipt of the rating, if the employee is unrepresented, the employee or employer may request that the administrative director reconsider the recommended rating or obtain additional information from the treating physician or medical evaluator to address issues not addressed or not completely addressed in the original comprehensive medical evaluation or not prepared in accord with the procedures of the Administrative Director promulgated under Lab. Code§ 139.2(j)(2) or (3) [Lab. Code § 4061(g); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10164(a)].

The request must be in writing, must specify the reasons the rating should be reconsidered, and must be accompanied by a copy of the rating, a copy of the comprehensive medical evaluation, proof of service on the other party, and any other information necessary to support the request [Lab. Code § 4061(g); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10164(a)]. Reconsideration will only be allowed for the following reasons [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10164(a); see Lab. Code § 139.2(j)(2), (3)]:

- The summary rating was calculated incorrectly;
- The evaluation failed to address one or more issues, or failed to do so completely; or
- The evaluation was not prepared in accordance with required procedures, including procedures required under the rules promulgated by the Administrative Director. The administrative director is not allowed to consider a supplemental or follow-up evaluation that was requested by a party after a summary rating determination had already been issued as a basis for a request for reconsideration [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10164(b)].

If the administrative director finds that the comprehensive medical evaluation is not complete or is not in compliance with the required procedures, the administrative director must return the report to the treating physician or qualified medical evaluator for appropriate action as the administrative director instructs [Lab. Code § 4061(g)]. If the administrative director determines that an additional evaluation from another Qualified Medical Evaluator is necessary, the matter will be referred to the Executive Medical Director for provision of another Qualified Medical Evaluator [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10164(c)]. On receipt of the treating physician's or qualified medical evaluator's final comprehensive medical evaluation and summary form, the administrative director must recalculate the permanent disability rating according to Lab. Code § 4660 and serve therating, the comprehensive medical evaluation, and the summary form on the employee and employer [Lab. Code § 4061(g)].

[s] Medical Evaluation of Permanent Disability as Condition Precedent to Filing Declaration of Readiness to Proceed

No issue relating to the existence or extent of permanent impairment and limitations resulting from the injury may be the subject of a declaration of readiness to proceed unless there has first been a medical evaluation by a treating physician or an agreed or qualified medical evaluator [Lab. Code § 4061(i)].

[t] Limitations on Informal Evaluation of Permanent Impairment or Need for Continuing Medical Care

Except for evaluations prepared by the treating physician or physicians, no evaluation of permanent impairment and limitations or need for continuing medical care resulting from the injury may be obtained prior to service of the comprehensive medical evaluation on the employee and employer if the employee is unrepresented, or prior to the attempt to select an agreed on medical evaluator if the employee is represented [Lab. Code § 4061(i)]. Evaluations obtained in violation of this prohibition are not admissible in any proceedings before the WCAB [Lab. Code § 4061(i)]. Nevertheless, the testimony, records, and reports offered by the treating physician or physicians who treated the employee for the injury and comprehensive medical evaluations prepared by a qualified medical evaluator selected by an unrepresented employee from a three-member panel are admissible [Lab. Code § 4061(i)].

[4] Objections to Determinations by Treating Physician

If either the employee or the employer objects to a medical determination made by the treating physician concerning any medical issues not covered by Lab. Code § 4060 or 4061 and not subject to Lab. Code § 4610, the objecting party must give written notice of the objection to the other party within 20 days of receipt of the report, if the employee is represented by an attorney, or within 30 days of receipt of the report, if the employee is not represented by an attorney [Lab. Code § 4062(a)]. Employer objections to the treating physician's recommendation for spinal surgery are subject to Lab. Code § 4062(b) and, after denial of the physician's recommendation, in accordance with Lab. Code § 4610 [Lab. Code § 4062(a)]. If the employee objects to a decision made pursuant to Lab. Code § 4610 to modify, delay, or deny a treatment recommendation, the employee must give the employer written notice of the objection within 20 days of receipt of that decision [Lab. Code § 4062(a)]. These time limits may be extended for good cause or by mutual agreement [Lab. Code § 4062(a)]. If the employee is represented by an attorney, a medical evaluation to determinethe disputed medical issue must be obtained as provided in Lab. Code § 4062.2, and no other medical evaluation may be obtained [Lab. Code § 4062(a)]. If the employee is not represented by an attorney, the employer must immediately provide the employee with a form prescribed by the medical director with which to request assignment of a panel of three qualified medical evaluators, the evaluation must be obtained as provided in Lab. Code § 4062.1, and no other medical evaluation may be obtained [Lab. Code § 4062(a)].

The court of appeal, noting that an employer's challenge to an employee's claim of ongoing temporary disability must be made within 20 days of receipt of the physician's report of that disability, has held that the employer's claim of credit against permanent disability payments was allowable only for temporary disability payments made after June 2006, which was the last date for which the employee's treating physician reported that he was temporarily disabled. Any claim of credit for temporary disability payments made prior to that date was foreclosed by Lab. Code § 4062(a).

However, the employer's claim for credit subsequent to June 2006 could not be denied on grounds of that statutory time limit [J.C. Penney Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 818, 829, 96 Cal. Rptr. 3d 469].

The Supreme Court has held that, when deciding whether to approve or deny an injured employee's request for medical treatment, the employer must conduct utilization review pursuant to Lab. Code § 4610 and that the employer may not, as an alternative to utilization review, elect to dispute the request for medical treatment pursuant to Lab. Code § 4062. The latter statute, said the Court, permits only employees to use its provisions to object to employers' decisions regarding treatment requests. The Court found that the legislature's intent regarding employers' use of Lab. Code § 4062 to dispute treatment requests "could not be more clear," and that the historical evolution of treatment request and review processes, as exemplified by omnibus reforms enacted in SB 228, effective January 1, 2004, and SB 899, effective April 19, 2004, further demonstrates the legislature's intent that Lab. Code § 4610 govern employers' review [State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 230, 233-234, 236-237, 239-245, 79 Cal. Rptr. 3d 171, 186 P.3d 535] .

The employer may object to a report of the treating physician recommending that spinal surgery be performed, within 10 days of the receipt of the report [Lab. Code § 4062(b)]. If the employee is represented by an attorney, the parties must seek agreement with each other on a California licensed board-certified or board-eligible orthopedic surgeon or neurosurgeon to prepare a second opinion report resolving the disputed surgical recommendation [Lab. Code § 4062(b)]. If no agreement is reached within 10 days, or if the employee is not represented byan attorney, an orthopedic surgeon or neurosurgeon will be randomly selected by the Administrative Director to prepare a second opinion report resolving the disputed surgical recommendation [Lab. Code § 4062(b)]. Examinations are scheduled on an expedited basis, and the second opinion report must be served on the parties within 45 days of receipt of the treating physician's report [Lab. Code § 4062(b)]. If the second opinion report recommends surgery, the employer must authorize the surgery, and if the second opinion report does not recommend surgery, the employer must file a declaration of readiness to proceed [Lab. Code § 4062(b)]. The employer is not liable for medical treatment costs for the disputed surgical procedure, whether through a lien filed with the Appeals Board or as a self-procured medical expense, or for periods of temporary disability resulting from the surgery, if the disputed surgical procedure is performed prior to the completion of the required second opinion process [Lab. Code § 4062(b)].

The second opinion physician must not have any material professional, familial, or financial affiliation, as determined by the Administrative Director, with any of the following [Lab. Code § 4062(c)]:

1. The employer, his or her workers' compensation insurer, third-party claims administrator, or other entity contracted to provide utilization review services pursuant to Lab. Code § 4610.

2. Any officer, director, or employee of the employer's health care provider, workers' compensation insurer, or third-party claims administrator.

3. A physician, the physician's medical group, or the independent practice association involved in the health care service in dispute.

4. The facility or institution at which either the proposed health care service, or the alternative service, if any, recommended by the employer's health care provider, workers' compensation insurer, or third-party claims administrator, would be provided.

5. The development or manufacture of the principal drug, device, procedure, or other therapy proposed by the employee or his or her treating physician whose treatment is under review, or the alternative therapy, if any, recommended by the employer or other entity.

6. The employee or the employee's immediate family.

The Administrative Director has promulgated detailed regulations governing procedures for obtaining a second opinion when a treating physician recommends spinal surgery [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9788.01(l) ("spinal surgery" defined)], the employer objects, and either the parties cannot agree on a second opinion physician or the employee is unrepresented [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 9788.01-9788.91; see also 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9788.01(k) ("second opinion physician" defined as physician who is randomly selected pursuant to Lab. Code § 4062(b) to render second opinion on treating physician's recommendation of spinal surgery)]. Pursuant to these regulations, an employer who objects to the treating physician's recommendation for spinal surgery must serve the objection, written on a form prescribed by the Administrative Director, and with a copy of the treating physician's recommendation attached, by mail or other rapid means of delivery, on the Administrative Director, the employee, the employee's attorney, if any, and the treating physician within 10 days of receipt of the treating physician's report containing the recommendation [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9788.1(a); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9788.11 (DWC Form 233, Objection to Treating Physician's Recommendation for Spinal Surgery)]. The objection must include the employer's reasons, specific to the injured worker, for the objection to the recommended procedure, and it must include a declaration made under penalty of perjury, in the following form, of the date the report was first received by the employer, employer's insurance carrier, or administrator, the date and time the objection was sent, and the manner in which the objection was sent [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9788.1(a)]:

> I declare under penalty of perjury of the laws of the State of California on (date), that the enclosed physician's report was first received by the employer, insurance carrier, or administrator on (date), and that on (date), I served the enclosed objection on (names of persons served) and on the Administrative Director by (means of service).

The declaration and form must be executed by a principal or employee of the employer, insurance carrier, or administrator, and the employer must serve the original and one photocopy, or two originals, of the objection on the Administrative Director [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9788.1(a)].

The Appeals Board en banc has held that the procedures and timelines governing objections to a treating physician's recommendation for spinal surgery are contained in Lab. Code §§ 4610 and 4062 and in 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 9788.1, 9788.11, and 9792.6(o). These procedures and timelines are [Cervantes v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2009) 74 Cal. Comp. Cases 1336, 1338, 1341-1346, 1351-1355 (Appeals Board en banc opinion)]:

> 1. When a treating physician recommends spinal surgery, the employer must undertake utilization review.
> 2. If the utilization review approves the requested spinal surgery, or if the employer fails to timely complete the utilization review, the employer must authorize the surgery.
> 3. If the utilization review denies the spinal surgery request, the employer may object under Lab. Code § 4062(b), but any objection must comply with 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9788.1 and use the form required by 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9788.11.
> 4. The employer must complete its utilization review process within 10 days of its receipt of the treating physician's report, which must comply with 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9792.6(o), and, if the utilization review denies the requested surgery, any Lab. Code § 4062(b) objection must be made within that same 10-day period.
> 5. If the employer fails to meet the 10-day timelines or comply with 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 9788.1 and 9788.11, the employer loses its right to a second opinion report and must authorize the spinal surgery.

In the same case, the Board en banc also disapproved of Brasher v. Nationwide Studio Fund (2006) 71 Cal. Comp.

Cases 1282 (Appeals Board significant panel decision) to the extent that that case held that: (1) an employer may opt out of utilization review and instead dispute a requested spinal surgery using only the procedure specified in Lab. Code § 4062(b); and (2) if the employer's utilization review denies the spinal surgery, it is the employee who must object under Lab. Code § 4062(a) [Cervantes v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2009) 74 Cal. Comp. Cases 1336, 1338, 1350 (Appeals Board en banc opinion)].

[5] General Procedures Applicable to Comprehensive Medical Evaluations for Injuries Occurring on or After January 1, 1991

[a] Information Provided to Medical Evaluators

Any party may provide to the qualified medical evaluator selected from a panel the records prepared or maintained by the employee's treating physician or physicians and the medical and nonmedical records relevant to determination of the medical issue [Lab. Code § 4062.3(a)]. Information that a party proposes to provide to the selected qualified medical evaluator must be served on the opposing party 20 days before it is provided to the qualified medical evaluator [Lab. Code § 4062.3(b)]. If the opposing party objects to consideration of nonmedical records within 10 days thereafter, the records are not to be provided to the qualified medical evaluator [Lab. Code § 4062.3(b)]. Either party may use discovery to establish the accuracy or authenticity of nonmedical records prior to the evaluation [Lab. Code § 4062.3(b)]. If an agreed medical evaluator isselected, as part of their agreement on an agreed medical evaluator, the parties must agree on what information is to be provided to the agreed medical evaluator [Lab. Code § 4062.3(c)].

In any formal medical evaluation, the agreed medical evaluator or qualified medical evaluator must identify the following [Lab. Code § 4062.3(d)]:

1. All information received from the parties.

2. All information reviewed in preparation of the report.

3. All information relied on in the formulation of his or her opinion.

[b] Communications With Agreed or Qualified Medical Evaluator

All communications with an agreed medical evaluator or a qualified medical evaluator selected from a panel before a medical evaluation must be in writing and served on the opposing party 20 days in advance of the evaluation [Lab. Code § 4062.3(e)]. Any subsequent communication with the medical evaluator must be in writing and served on the opposing party when sent to the medical evaluator [Lab. Code § 4062.3(e)].

Ex parte communication with an agreed medical evaluator or a qualified medical evaluator selected from a panel is prohibited [Lab. Code § 4062.3(f)]. If a party communicates with the agreed medical evaluator or the qualified medical evaluator in violation of the preceding paragraph, the aggrieved party may elect to terminate the medical evaluation and seek a new evaluation from another qualified medical evaluator to be selected according to Lab. Code § 4062.1 or 4062.2, as applicable, or proceed with the initial evaluation [Lab. Code § 4062.3(f); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 35(f)]. The party making the prohibited communication is subject to being charged with contempt before the Appeals Board and will be liable for thecosts incurred by the aggrieved party as a result of the prohibited communication, including the cost of the medical evaluation, additional discovery costs, and attorney's fees for related discovery [Lab. Code § 4062.3(g)]. These rules regarding communications with an agreed medical evaluator or a qualified medical evaluator do not apply to oral or written communications by the employee or, if the employee is deceased, the employee's dependent, in the course of the examination or at the request of the evaluator in connection with the examination [Lab. Code § 4062.3(h)].

[c] Failure to Complete Comprehensive Medical Evaluation in a Timely Manner

If a qualified medical evaluator selected from a panel fails to complete the formal medical evaluation within the time frames established by the Administrative Director pursuant to Lab. Code § 139.2(j)(1), a new evaluation may be obtained upon the request of either party, as provided in Lab. Code § 4062.1 or 4062.2 [Lab. Code § 4062.5]. Neither the employee nor the employer has any liability for payment for the formal medical evaluation that was not completed within the required time frames unless the employee or employer, on forms prescribed by the Administrative Director, each waives the right to a new evaluation and elects to accept the original evaluation even though it was not completed within the required time frames [Lab. Code § 4062.5].

[d] Procedure When Compensation Is Required by Comprehensive Medical Evaluation

If a comprehensive medical evaluation from the treating physician or an agreed medical evaluator or a qualified medical evaluator selected from a three-member panel resolves any issue so as to require the employer to provide compensation, the employer must either commence the payment of compensation or promptly commence proceedings before the WCAB to resolve the dispute for adjudication of claim [Lab. Code §§ 4061(h)(1), 4063].

With respect to a medical evaluation pursuant to Lab. Code § 4061 (discussed under [3][c], above), if the employee and employer agree to a stipulated finding and award as provided under Lab. Code § 5702 or to compromise and release the claim under Lab. Code § 5000 et seq., or, if the employee wishes to commute the award under Lab. Code § 5100 et seq., the WCAB must first determine whether the agreement or commutation is in the best interests of the employee and whether the proper procedures have been followed in determining the permanent disability rating [Lab. Code § 4061(h)(2)].

[e] Liability for Costs of Evaluations and Reports

For injuries occurring on and after January 1, 1991, the employer is liable for the cost of medical evaluations reasonably, actually, andnecessarily incurred, pursuant to Lab. Code § 4060 (compensability of injury disputed), Lab. Code § 4061(c) and (d) (evaluation of permanent disability) or Lab. Code § 4062(a) (evaluation of other disputed medical issues) [Lab. Code § 4064(a)]. Each comprehensive medical-legal evaluation must address all contested medical issues arising from all injuries reported on one or more claim forms [Lab. Code § 4064(a)].

For injuries occurring on or after January 1, 2003, if an unrepresented employee obtains an attorney after the evaluation pursuant to Lab. Code § 4061(d) or § 4062(b) has been completed, the employee is entitled to the same reports at employer expense as an employee who has been represented from the time the dispute arose, and those reports are admissible in any proceeding before the Appeals Board [Lab. Code § 4064(b)].

The employer is not liable for the cost of any comprehensive medical evaluations obtained by the employee other than those authorized by Lab. Code§§ 4060, 4061, 4062 [Lab. Code § 4064(d)]. However, a party is not prohibited from obtaining any medical evaluation or consultation at that party's own expense [Lab. Code § 4064(d)].

Costs of medical evaluations, diagnostic tests, and interpreters' services incidental to the production of a medical report may not be incurred earlier than the date of receipt by the employer, the employer's insurance carrier, or the attorney of record if the employee is represented, of all reports and documents required by the Administrative Director incidental to the services [Lab. Code § 4621(a)]. This provision is not applicable unless there has been compliance with Lab. Code § 4620 [Lab. Code § 4621(a)].

Comprehensive medical-legal evaluations may be performed at any time after the claim form has been filed under Lab. Code § 5401 if the employer has rejected the claim [Lab. Code § 4621(c)]. Except as provided in Lab. Code §§ 4061, 4062, or 4621(c), no comprehensive medical-legal evaluations, except those at the employer's request, may be performed during the first 60 days after the notice of claim has been filed [Lab. Code § 4621(b)]. Neither the employer nor the employee is liable for any expenses incurred for comprehensive medical-legal evaluations performed within this 60-day period [Lab. Code § 4621(b)].

[f] Liability for Attorney's Fees When Employer Files Application for Adjudication Contesting Comprehensive Medical Evaluation

For injuries occurring on and after January 1, 1991, when the employer files an application for adjudication of claim contesting the comprehensive medical evaluation prepared by an agreed medical evaluator, regardless of outcome, the workers' compensation judge or the WCAB must assess the employee's attorney's fees against the employer, subject to Lab. Code § 4906 (reasonableness limitation for legal expenses) [Lab. Code § 4066]. Also subject to Lab. Code § 4906, if an employer files an application for adjudication and the employee is unrepresented at the time the applicationis filed, the employer is liable for any attorney's fees incurred by the employee in connection with the application for adjudication if the employee does not obtain a rebuttal report [Lab. Code § 4064(c)].

[g] Additional Medical Evaluations for Modified Compensation Awards

If the WCAB's jurisdiction is invoked pursuant to Lab. Code § 5803 (WCAB's continuing jurisdiction to modify awards) on the grounds that the effects of the injury have recurred, increased, diminished, or terminated, a comprehensive medical evaluation must be obtained pursuant to Lab. Code § 4061 et seq. [Lab. Code § 4067]. If an agreed on or qualified medical evaluator selected by an unrepresented employee from a three-member panel has previously made a comprehensive medical evaluation of the same or similar issues, the subsequent or additional comprehensive medical evaluation must be conducted by the same agreed on or qualified medical evaluator, unless the workers' compensation judge has made a finding that he or she did not rely on the prior evaluator's comprehensive medical evaluation, any party contested the original medical evaluation by filing an application for adjudication, or the prior evaluator is no longer qualified or readily available to prepare a comprehensive medical evaluation, in which case, Lab. Code § 4061 or 4062, as the case may be, applies as if there had been no prior comprehensive medical evaluation [Lab. Code § 4067].

[h] Presumption That Treating Physician's Findings Are Correct

Effective April 19, 2004, the former presumption of correctness of the findings of an injured employee's personal physician or personal chiropractor has been repealed. This repeal applies to all cases, regardless of the date of injury, but does not constitute good cause to reopen or rescind, alter, or amend any existing order, decision, or award of the Appeals Board [Stats. 2004, ch. 34, §§ 22, 46 (repealing former Lab. Code § 4062.9)].

[i] Determination of Disability Rating When Comprehensive Medical Evaluation Is Contested

Effective January 1, 2003, the legislature has repealed the statutory provision that required the workers' compensation judge or the WCAB to choose between an employer's and an employee's proposed permanent disability rating, whenever either the employer or the employee had obtained an evaluation of the employee's permanent impairment and limitations from a qualified medical evaluator under Lab. Code § 4061, and either party contested the comprehensive medical evaluation of the other party [Stats. 2002, ch. 6, § 55; see former Lab. Code § 4065].

[6] Medical-Legal Fee Schedule

The Administrative Director, as required, has adopted a fee schedule for medical-legal expenses that is prima facie evidence of the reasonableness of fees charged for these expenses [Lab. Code § 5307.6(a); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9795]. A provider may not be paid fees in excess of those set forth in the schedule, unless the provider submits an itemization and explanation of the fee that shows it is both a reasonable fee and that extraordinary circumstances relating to the medical condition being evaluated justify a higher fee [Lab. Code § 5307.6(b)]. In no event may a provider charge a fee in excess of the provider's usual fee [Lab. Code § 5307.6(b)].

An evaluator may not request or accept any compensation from any source for medical-legal expenses if that compensation is in addition to the fees authorized, as described above [Lab. Code § 5307.6(d)]. A provider who violates this prohibition is subject to discipline under Lab. Code § 139.2(k) and to disciplinaryaction by the appropriate licensing board [Lab. Code § 5307.6(d)].

Following the adoption of the medical-legal fee schedule, there has been ongoing controversy over whether a medical-legal evaluator may charge a fee for missed medical appointments scheduled by or on behalf of an injured worker. The current medical fee schedule is silent on fees for missed appointments, and the issue has not yet been resolved by the Legislature or the courts. Regardless of whether expenses associated with missed appointments are properly construed to be medical-legal expenses, medical evaluators are not precluded from requesting or accepting compensation from an insurer, self-insured employer, or third party administrator for this type of expense [DWC Bulletin 94-7].

[1] In General

Arbitration of workers' compensation disputes is governed generally by Lab. Code § 5270 et seq. and 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10997-10999. Reconsideration of arbitrators' decisions or awards is governed by 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10866. Arbitration of disputes concerning liens for expenses incurred by or on behalf of an injured employee as provided in Lab. Code §§ 4600-4614.1 is authorized by Lab. Code § 4903.4. Most of the statutory provisions apply only to injuries occurring on or after January 1, 1990 [see 1989 Stats., ch. 893, § 6; but see Lab. Code § 5275 (arbitration of certain disputes relating to insurance coverage and contribution mandatory regardless of date of injury; voluntary arbitration authorized for all injuries)].

[2] Representation Required

The provisions of Lab. Code § 5270 et seq. governing arbitration of workers' compensation disputes are applicable only when the injured employee or dependent is represented by an attorney [Lab. Code § 5270].

§ 577.61 Disputes Subject to Arbitration

[1] Mandatory Arbitration

Any application for adjudication that lists one or more disputes involving an issue set forth in Lab. Code § 5275(a) must be accompanied by an arbitration submittal form, DWC-CA Form 10297. This form is available at the DIR/DWC website: http://www.dir.ca.gov/dwc/dwc_home_page.htm. The arbitration submittal form must indicate one of the following [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10295(b); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10295(a) (rule applies to injuries occurring on or after January 1, 1990)]:

1. An arbitrator has been selected pursuant to Lab. Code § 5271(a) [see § 577.63[2][a]].

2. An unsuccessful attempt has been made to select an arbitrator, and the Presiding WCJ is requested, pursuant to Lab. Code § 5271(b), to assign a panel of five arbitrators [s ee § 577.63[2][b]].

For discussion of form and content of arbitration submittal forms, see § 577.62.

[2] Voluntary Arbitration

Any issue under Lab. Code § 50 et seq. (Department of Industrial Relations, including Division of Workers' Compensation) or Lab. Code § 3200 et seq. (workers' compensation law) may be submitted for arbitration by agreement of the parties, regardless of the date of injury [Lab. Code § 5275(b)].

At any time, the parties may agree to submit any issue for arbitration pursuant to Lab. Code § 5275(b) by submitting an arbitration submittal form that indicates that the parties have selected an arbitrator pursuant to Lab. Code § 5271(a) and by filing an application for adjudication if one has not been previously filed [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10296(a)].

Within six days of receipt of the arbitration submittal form, the Presiding WCJ must order the issues in dispute submitted for arbitration pursuant to Lab. Code §§ 5272, 5273, 5276, and 5277 [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10296(b)].

If the parties are unable to agree to an arbitrator under Lab. Code § 5271(a), they may agree to follow the procedures for selecting an arbitrator under Lab. Code § 5271(b) and (c), as set forth in 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10295 [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10296(c); see § 577.63[2][b]].

For discussion of procedure for selecting an arbitrator pursuant to Lab. Code § 5271(b), see § 577.63[2]. In no event will arbitration be permitted after testimony has been taken in any proceeding [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10997].

§ 577.63 Arbitrators

[1] Qualifications and List of Eligible Arbitrators

Any attorney who is an active member of the California State Bar is eligible to become an arbitrator if he or she is any of the following [Lab. Code § 5270.5(a)]:

- A certified specialist in workers' compensation, or eligible to become certified;
- A retired workers' compensation judge;
- A retired WCAB member; or
- An attorney who has been certified to serve as a judge pro tempore.

The presiding workers' compensation judge at each district office is required to prepare a list of all eligible attorneys who apply to be placed on the list of eligible arbitrators [Lab. Code § 5270.5(a)].

No attorney may be included in a panel of arbitrators if he or she has served as a judge in any proceeding involving the same case, or has represented, or whose firm has represented, any party in the same case [Lab. Code § 5270.5(b)].

[2] Selection of Arbitrator

[a] Parties in Agreement

The parties to a dispute submitted for arbitration may select to serve as arbitrator any eligible attorney from the list prepared by the presiding workers' compensation judge. However, when the disputed issue involves insurance coverage, the parties may agree to select any attorney as arbitrator [Lab. Code § 5271(a)]. If the parties agree to an arbitrator pursuant to Lab. Code § 5271(a), the presiding workers' compensation judge will, within six days after receipt of the arbitration submittal form, order the issue or issues in dispute submitted for arbitration pursuant to Lab. Code §§ 5272, 5273, 5276, and 5277 [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10295(c)].

[b] Parties Not in Agreement

If the parties cannot agree on an arbitrator, either party may request that the presiding workers' compensation judge assign a panel of five arbitrators selected at random from the list of eligible attorneys [Lab. Code § 5271(b)]. No more than three arbitrators on a five-member panel may be defense attorneys, no more than three may be applicant's attorneys, and no more than two may be retired workers' compensation judges or WCAB members [Lab. Code § 5271(b)].

When the number of parties exceeds one in the capacity of employer and one in the capacity of injured employee or lien claimant, the presiding judge will randomly select two additional arbitrators to add to the panel for each additional party [Lab. Code § 5271(c); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10295(d)]. When the additional party is an employer, injured employee, or lien claimant, one of these additional panelists must be a retired workers' compensation judge or a retired appeals board commissioner. The second additional panelist must be an applicant's attorney when the additional party is an employer, and a defense attorney when the additional party is an injured employee or a lien claimant. For each additional other party, the presiding judge will assign two arbitrators to the panel, in order of rotation from case to case, as follows: a retired workers' compensation judge or retired appeals board commissioner, an applicant's attorney, and a defense attorney [Lab. Code § 5271(c)].

If the arbitration submittal form requests a panel pursuant to Lab. Code § 5271(b), the Presiding WCJ must, within six days of receipt of the form, serve on each of the parties an identical list of five arbitrators selected at random pursuant to Lab. Code § 5271(b). Each party must strike two arbitrators from the list and return it to the Presiding WCJ within six days after service. Failure to timely return the list constitutes a waiver of a party's right to participate in the selection process. If one arbitrator remains, the Presiding WCJ must, within six days of return of the lists from the parties, order the issue or issues submitted for arbitration before the selected arbitrator pursuant to Lab. Code §§ 5272, 5273, 5276 and 5277. If more than one arbitrator remains on the panel, the Presiding WCJ must randomly select an arbitrator from the remaining panelists [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10295(d)].

If the parties to the dispute have stricken all the arbitrators from the panel, the Presiding WCJ must, within six days of receipt of the last of the returned lists, serve on each of the parties to the dispute a new list of five arbitrators and any additional arbitrators required by Lab. Code § 5271(c), selected at random but excluding the names of the arbitrators on the prior list. Each of the parties to the dispute must again strike two arbitrators from the list and return it to the Presiding WCJ within six days after service. This procedure will continue until one or more arbitrators remain on the lists returned to the Presiding WCJ [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10295(e)].

The parties must provide all necessary materials to the arbitrator. Any paper file must remain in the custody of the district office [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10295(f)].

A party may petition the presiding workers' compensation judge to remove a member from the panel pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 170.1 (disqualification of judges for cause), and the presiding judge will assign another eligible attorney to replace any member so removed [Lab. Code § 5271(d); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10998]. For discussion relating to disqualification of panelists and arbitrators, see [3], below.

[3] Disqualification of Arbitrator

After service of a list of panel members pursuant to 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10295, any party may, within six days, petition the presiding workers' compensation judge to remove any member from the panel pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 170.1 (disqualification of judges for cause) [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10998; see Lab. Code § 5271(d)]. If the presiding workers' compensation judge finds cause under Code Civ. Proc. § 170.1, he or she will remove the challenged member or members of the panel and will add to the original list the appropriate number of arbitrators at random to make a full panel. Within six days, the presiding judge will serve the list on the parties [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10998].

If the presiding workers' compensation judge selects an arbitrator pursuant to 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10295, the parties have six days after service of the name of the arbitrator to petition to disqualify that arbitrator pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 170.1. If the presiding workers' compensation judge finds cause, he or she will assign another arbitrator pursuant to Lab. Code § 5271(d)

For discussion of disqualification of judges for cause, see Ch. 317, Judges .

[4] Duties and Responsibilities

Arbitrators have all the statutory and regulatory duties and responsibilities of a workers' compensation judge, as set forth in Lab. Code § 5300 et seq., except the power to order the injured worker to be examined by a qualified medical evaluator pursuant to Lab. Code §§ 5701 and 5703.5, and the power of contempt [Lab. Code § 5272].

§ 577.64 Costs and Compensation Related to Arbitration

[1] In General

In disputes between an employee and an employer, the employer must pay all costs related to the arbitration proceeding, including use of facilities, hearing reporter's per diems, and transcript costs [Lab. Code § 5273(a)].

In all other disputes, the costs of the arbitration proceedings, including the arbitrator's compensation, must be paid as follows [Lab. Code § 5273(b)]:

- By the parties equally, in any dispute between an employer and an insurer or an employer and a lien claimant;

- By the parties equally, in proceedings subject to Lab. Code § 5500.5 (occupational disease or cumulative injury arising out of more than one employment); and

- By the dependents in accordance with their proportionate share of death benefits, if there is no dispute as to the injury causing death.

The costs awarded must be reasonable in amount [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10999].

[2] Resolution of Disputes Over Costs or Fees

Disputes regarding costs or fees for arbitration are within the exclusive jurisdiction of the WCAB and are determined initially by the presiding judge of the district office [Lab. Code § 5273(c)]. Any dispute involving an arbitrator's fee or cost must be resolved by the presiding workers' compensation judge of the appropriate local office or, in his or her absence, the acting presiding workers' compensation judge [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10999].

Any request to resolve a dispute about arbitrator's fees or costs must be accompanied by any written agreement pertaining to arbitrator's fees or costs and a statement that must set forth the nature of the dispute and an itemization of the hours spent in actual arbitration hearing, in preparation for arbitration, and in preparation of the decision. The statement must also include an itemization of the verifiable costs including use of facility, reporters, and transcript preparation [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10999].

[3] Amount of Arbitrator's Fees

An arbitrator's fee must not exceed a reasonable amount. In establishing a reasonable fee, the presiding workers' compensation judge will consider the following [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10999]:

- The responsibility assumed by the arbitrator;
- The arbitrator's experience;
- The number and complexity of the issues being arbitrated;
- The time involved; and
- The expeditiousness and completeness of issue resolution.

The presiding workers' compensation judge of each local office is required to maintain statistics on all arbitration fees awarded pursuant to Lab. Code § 5273(c) including the amount thereof and rationale or basis for the award pursuant to 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10999(a)-(e).

3. Arbitration

51-577 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 577.68

§ 577.68 Arbitrator's Findings and Award

[1] In General

The arbitrator's findings and award must be served on all parties within 30 days of submission of the case for decision [Lab. Code § 5277(a)]. The award must comply with Lab. Code § 5313 (findings by workers' compensation judges and WCAB) and be filed with the WCAB office pursuant to venue rules published by the WCAB [Lab. Code § 5277(b); 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10295(g), 10296(e) (copy of final decision, order, or award from arbitrator, together with copy of record developed as set forth in Lab. Code §§ 5276, 5277, to be filed with Presiding WCJ of district office having venue, and district office to scan copies of arbitrator's decision, order, or award and record into EAMS adjudication file and, after scanning, destroy copies)]. The arbitrator's findings of fact, award, order, or decision has the same force and effect as an award, order, or decision of a workers' compensation judge [Lab. Code § 5277(c)]. For discussion of workers' compensation judge and WCAB findings and awards, see § 577.190 et seq.

Unless all parties agree to a longer period of time, the failure of the arbitrator to submit the decision within 30 days results in forfeiture of the arbitrator's fee and vacates the submission order and all stipulations [Lab. Code § 5277(e)].

When a compromise of a claim or an award is submitted to an arbitrator for approval, the parties must also file with the arbitrator any liens served on the parties [Lab. Code § 4903.1(b)].

[2] Reconsideration

[a] In General

Any final order, decision, or award filed by an arbitrator under Lab. Code §§ 5270-5275 is subject to the reconsideration process set forth in Lab. Code §§ 5900-5911 and 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10840 and 10842 (reconsideration of decisions by workers' compensation judges and WCAB) [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10866]. The parties, respectively, must serve the arbitrator with the petition for reconsideration and the answer [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10866]. When a petition for reconsideration is filed from any final order, decision, or award made by an arbitrator under Lab. Code §§ 5270-5275, the arbitrator must prepare and serve a report on reconsideration as provided in 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10860 and must concurrently forward the file and the original report to the presiding workers' compensation judge. The judge will then promptly forward the file and report to the WCAB [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10866].

For discussion of reconsideration procedure generally, see § 577.210 et seq.

[b] Alternative Dispute Resolution Systems

A petition for reconsideration from an arbitration decision made pursuant to Lab. Code § 3201.5(a)(1) (permitting collective baraining agreements that provide for an alternative dispute resolution system governing disputes between employees and employers), must be filed directly with the WCAB's office in San Francisco within 20 days of service of the final order, decision, or award made and filed by the arbitrator or board of arbitrators [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10865]. A copy of the petition for reconsideration must be served on the arbitrator or board of arbitrators [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10865]. A copy of that portion of the collective bargaining agreement relating to the arbitration and reconsideration process must be submitted by the petitioner [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10865]. On receiving the petition for reconsideration, the arbitrator or board of arbitrators must forward to the WCAB in San Francisco the record of proceedings, including the transcript of proceedings, if any, a summary of testimony if the proceedings were not transcribed, the documentary evidence submitted by each of the parties, and an opinion that sets forth the rationale for the decision as to each contention raised by the petition [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10865].

§ 577.80 Governing Law

The appointment of a guardian ad litem or trustee for a minor or incompetent employee or dependent is governed by Lab. Code §§ 5307.5(a) and 5408 and by 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10402.

Pleadings are governed by Lab. Code §§ 5500, 5500.5, 5501, and 5505, and 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10408, 10250, 10251, 10480, and 10484.

Designation of the parties is governed by Lab. Code § 5503 and 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10364 and 10368. Necessary parties are governed by 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10360 and joinder of parties by 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10372 and 10380. Joinder of parties by the WCAB or a workers' compensation judge (hereinafter WCJ) is governed by Lab. Code § 5307.5(b).

The effect of a defendant's failure to answer or appear is set forth in Lab. Code § 5506 and the dismissal of an application that shows on its face that the applicant is not entitled to compensation is governed by Lab. Code § 5507.

§ 577.81 Guardian ad Litem and Trustee

The WCAB or a WCJ may appoint a trustee or guardian ad litem to appear for and represent any minor or incompetent on the terms and conditions that it deems proper [Lab. Code § 5307.5(a); see discussion under § 577.25[3]; see also form in § 577.398[1]]. The compensation allowed the trustee or guardian for his or her services is fixed by the WCAB or the superior court [Lab. Code § 5307.5(a)].

In one case, the court of appeal held that the Appeals Board had no basis for restricting the compensation of a guardian ad litem and conservator of an incompetent injured worker to non-duplicative care and that the employer, not the estate of the injured worker, should bear the expense. The court found that the parties had agreed in a compromise and release agreement that the guardian was entitled to compensation for duplicative care and that decisional law interpreting Lab. Code § 4600 encompassed care provided by a lay person that might have been done by a professional, including a licensed vocational nurse. In the present case, the care for which the guardian requested compensation from the injured worker's employer did not fall under the duties of a conservator but were rather equivalent to medical treatment. Morever, stated the court, the Board should leave it to the superior court to ensure that the guardian was not compensated for the same care in the conservatorship. Finally, the court found that the guardian was entitled to a penalty assessment under Lab. Code § 5814, for unreasonable delay in the payment of compensation, and attorney's fees pursuant to Lab. Code § 5814.5, for her efforts to obtain the penalty [Hodgman v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2007) 155 Cal. App. 4th 44, 53-55, 65 Cal. Rptr. 3d 687] .

If required by the WCAB, the guardian or trustee must give a bond in the amount determined by the WCAB and in the form and of the character required by law from a guardian appointed by a superior court [Lab. Code § 5307.5(a)]. For a discussion of bonds required from guardians appointed by a superior court, see Ch. 283, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Bonds . For a discussion and forms of bonds and undertakings, see Ch. 538, Suretyship, Bonds, and Undertakings, § 538.40 et seq. The bond must be approved by the WCAB, and the guardian or trustee will not be discharged from liability until he or she files an account with the WCAB or with the superior court and the account is approved [Lab. Code § 5307.5(a)].

§ 577.82 Pleadings

[1] Requirements, In General

The application and the answer are the only pleadings required in a proceeding for adjudication of a workers' compensation claim. Both must be in writing and conform to the forms prescribed by the WCAB's rules of practice and procedure. They must simply but clearly and completely delineate all relevant matters of agreement and all issues of disagreement within the jurisdiction of the WCAB, and provide for the furnishing of any additional information as the WCAB may properly determine is necessary to expedite its hearing and determination of the claim [Lab. Code § 5500]. Except for injuries occurring between January 1, 1990, and January 1, 1994, the filing of an application for adjudication, not the filing of a claim form, establishes jurisdiction of the Appeals Board and commences proceedings for the collection of benefits [Lab. Code § 5500].

[2] Amendment of Pleadings

The pleadings are deemed amended to conform to the stipulations and statement of issues agreed to by the parties on the record. Pleadings may be amended to conform to proof by the WCAB [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10492].

[3] Proper Identification of Parties and Lien Claimants

Whenever any party or lien claimant (or any attorney or other representative for a party or lien claimant) either (i) files any application for adjudication, answer, stipulated findings and award, compromise and release, lien claim, petition or other pleading with the Appeals Board or (ii) states its appearance on the record at any hearing before the Appeals Board (including but not limited to stating its appearance on any pretrial conference statement, appearance sheet, or minutes of hearing), the party or lien claimant, or its attorney or other representative, must comply with the following requirements [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10550]:

- Each party or lien claimant must set forth its full legal name, and each attorney or other representative must set forth the full legal name(s) of the party or parties he, she, or it is representing.

- If an adjusting agent or third-party claims administrator is appearing, it must disclose: (1) whether it is appearing on behalf of an employer, an insurance carrier, or both; (2) the identity or identities of the party or parties it is representing; and (3) if it is representing an insurance carrier, whether the policy includes a high self-insured retention, a large deductible, or any other provision that affects the identity of the entity or entities actually liable for the payment of compensation.

- If an insurance carrier is appearing, it must disclose: (1) whether it is appearing solely on its behalf, or also on behalf the insured employer; and (2) whether its policy includes a high self-insured retention, a large deductible, or any other provision that affects the identity of the entity actually liable for the payment of compensation.

- If a lien claim is being filed or amended, or if a lien claimant is appearing, the lien claimant must state whether it is the original owner of the alleged debt or whether it has purchased the alleged debt from the original owner or some subsequent purchaser.

4. Initiating Proceedings for Adjudication of Claim

51-577 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 577.83

§ 577.83 Application for Adjudication and Answer

[1] Application

[a] By Party in Interest

An application for adjudication of claim may be filed by any party in interest or by the party's attorney or other representative authorized in writing [Lab. Code § 5501]. For injuries occurring on or after January 1, 1990, an application may be filed at any time there is a bona fide dispute after service of the claim form required by Lab. Code § 5401 (discussed under § 577.42[2][b]) [Lab. Code § 5500]. For the WCAB office in which the application should be filed, see discussion in § 577.87[1]. For the filing of papers generally and the manner in which the application for adjudication is served, see discussion under § 577.108[4]. For application for adjudication forms in disability and death cases, see §§ 577.390 -577.393.

A representative who is not an attorney licensed by the State Bar of California must notify the WCAB in writing of that fact [Lab. Code § 5501].

[b] By Lien Claimant

A medical lien claimant that provides medical services to an injured employee may initiate compensation proceedings by filing an application. The injured employee must be named as a party and served with notice but need not take part in the proceedings [Kaiser Foundation Hospitals v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 57, 67, 216 Cal. Rptr. 115, 702 P.2d 197 ; see Lab. Code § 5501; 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10360, 10364]. Also, once an application is filed by an employee, a lien claimant may join the proceeding under Lab. Code § 4903 (discussed under § 577.261). Moreover, a lien claimant may become a party when the applicant's case has been settled by way of a compromise and release, or when the applicant chooses not to proceed with his or her case. Furthermore, a lien claimant may reopen a case within five years after the WCAB's decision under Lab. Code §§ 5410, 5803, 5804 (discussed under § 577.220 et seq.) if there is further disability or good cause shown [Kaiser Foundation Hospitals v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 57, 68 n.11, 216 Cal. Rptr. 115, 702 P.2d 197] .

[c] Separate Application for Each Injury Required

There is but one cause of action for each injury coming within the provisions of the workers' compensation law [Lab. Code § 5303]. A separate application must be filed for each separate injury for which benefits are claimed even though the employer in each case is the same [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10401]. No injury, whether specific or cumulative, shall for any purpose whatsoever, merge into or form a part of another injury, nor shall any award based on a cumulative injury include disability caused by any specific injury or by any other cumulative injury causing or contributing to the existing disability, need for medical treatment, or death [Lab. Code § 5303; see Buhlert Trucking v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 1530, 1537-1539, 247 Cal. Rptr. 190 ; Aetna Cas. & Surety Co. v. Workmen's Comp. Appeals Bd. (1973) 35 Cal. App. 3d 329, 333, 110 Cal. Rptr. 780 ; see also discussion in § 577.14[3] (definition of injury and types of injuries)].

[d] Dismissal of Application That Shows No Right to Compensation

If an application shows on its face that the applicant is not entitled to compensation, the WCAB may, after the applicant has had an opportunity to be heard orally or to submit his or her claim or argument in writing, dismiss the application without any hearing on its own motion or on the motion of the adverse party [Lab. Code § 5507; see § 577.453]. The pendency of the motion or notice of intended dismissal does not, however, unless otherwise ordered by the WCAB, delay the hearing of the application on the merits [Lab. Code § 5507].

[2] Answer

[a] Grounds for Filing

An answer (see forms in §§ 577.394[1], 577.395[1]) may be filed and forthwith served on all adverse parties by any defendant who [Lab. Code § 5505].

- Desires to disclaim any interest in the subject matter of the claim in controversy;
- Considers that the application is in any respect inaccurate or incomplete; or
- Desires to bring any fact, paper, or document to the attention of the WCAB as a defense to the claim or otherwise.

[b] Time for Filing

An answer to each application for adjudication must be filed and served 10 days after service of the declaration of readiness to proceed required by 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10250 or 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10252 [Lab. Code § 5505; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10480].

For discussion of the manner in which the answer may be served, see § 577.108[4].

[c] Appearances

[i] Appearances Required

All parties and lien claimants must appear at all hearings, except as provided below [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10240(a)]:

1. When injury arising out of and in the course of employment is at issue, lien claimants not defined as a party [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10210(y)(3) ("party" means: (1) person claiming to be injured employee or dependent of injured employee; (2) defendant; or (3) lien claimant when either (A) underlying case of injured employee or employee's dependent has been resolved or (B) injured employee or employee's dependent chooses not to proceed with his, her, or their case)] are not required to appear at the mandatory settlement conference or trial, unless otherwise ordered by the WCJ.

2. When liability for the claim has been accepted, lien claimants not defined as a party, with a lien claim of $25,000 or more, must appear or have a representative appear at the mandatory settlement conference or lien conference, unless the appearance is excused by the WCJ.

3. Lien claimants not defined as a party, with liens of less than $25,000, must be available by telephone with settlement authority and must notify defendant(s) of the telephone number at which the defendant may reach them during the mandatory settlement conference or lien conference, although the WCJ may order the appearance of lien claimants not defined as a party, with liens of less than $25,000, at a mandatory settlement conference or lien conference.

4. All lien claimants must appear at trial at which their lien(s) is an issue to be decided.

All parties must have a person available with settlement authority at the mandatory settlement conference or lien conference, although the person with settlement authority need not be present if an attorney or representative who is present can obtain immediate authority by telephone [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10240(b)].

Unless the notice otherwise provides, the applicant must be present at a mandatory settlement conference, as provided in Lab. Code § 5502(e) [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10240(c)].

Appearance at a hearing not covered by this rule is at the discretion of the WCJ [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10240(d)].

[ii] Failure to Appear

When a party or a lien claimant is served with notice of trial pursuant to 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10240 [see [i], above] and fails to appear either in person or by attorney or representative, the WCJ may [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10241(a)]:

1. Dismiss the application after issuing a notice of intention to dismiss pursuant to 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10562.

2. Dismiss the lien claim after issuing a notice of intention to dismiss pursuant to 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10562.

3. Hear the evidence and, after service of the minutes of hearing and summary of evidence that must include notice of intention to submit the case for decision pursuant to 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10562, submit the case for decision.

When a party or a lien claimant is served with notice of a conference or mandatory settlement conference pursuant to 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10240 [see [i], above] and fails to appear at the conference, the WCJ may [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10241(b)]:

1. Dismiss the application after issuing a notice of intention to dismiss pursuant to 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10562.

2. Dismiss the lien claim after issuing a notice of intention to dismiss with or without prejudice pursuant to 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10562.

3. Close discovery and forward the case to the Presiding WCJ to set for trial.

When a party, after notice, fails to appear at either a trial or a conference and good cause is shown for failure to appear, the WCJ may take the case off calendar or may continue the case to a date certain [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10241(c)].

[iii] Appearances in Settled Cases

When the parties represent to the WCJ assigned to the case that a case has been settled, the case will be taken off calendar, and no appearances will be required [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10244].

[iv] Procedures Following Failure to Appear

No default may be taken against a defendant who fails to answer or appear. Rather, the WCAB shall proceed to the hearing of the matter on such terms and conditions as it deems proper [Lab. Code § 5506]. Moreover, a defendant who fails to appear or answer, or who subsequently contends that no service was made on him or her, or who claims to be aggrieved in any other manner by lack of notice of the pendency of the proceeding, may apply to the WCAB for relief in accordance with the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 473, and the WCAB may grant such relief [Lab. Code § 5506].

No right to relief, including the claim that the findings and award of the WCAB or judgment entered thereon are void on their face [see Code Civ. Proc. § 473(d)], will accrue to a defendant who fails to answer or appear in any court unless prior application is made to the WCAB in accordance with Lab. Code § 5506. In no event will any petition to any court be allowed except as prescribed in Lab. Code §§ 5950 and 5951 (petition for writ of review) [Lab. Code § 5506].

For discussion of the relief authorized by Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b) (relief from judgment, dismissal, order, or proceeding taken against party through mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect), and sixth paragraph (relief from void judgment or order), see Ch. 489, Relief from Judgments and Orders .

[3] Demurrers Prohibited

Demurrers, petitions for judgment on the pleadings, and petitions for summary judgment are not allowed. A continuance may be granted, however, on timely request and on such terms as may be reasonable under the circumstances, or may be ordered by the WCAB on its own motion if the pleading is so uncertain, unintelligible, or ambiguous as to render it impossible for the WCAB to understand or act on it, or if any party is prejudiced by omission or ambiguity of necessary allegations sufficient to prevent that party from adequately presenting a cause of action or defense [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10490]. For discussion of continuances generally, see the discussion in § 577.157[2].

[4] Statement to Be Filed With Application or Answer

The employee, the insurer, the employer, and the attorneys for each party must sign and file with the WCAB a statement under penalty of perjury, with the application or answer, that they have not violated Lab. Code § 139.3 (referral to person with whom physician has financial interest unlawful) and that they have not offered, delivered, received, or accepted any rebate, refund, commission, preference, patronage, dividend, discount, or other consideration, whether in the form of money or otherwise, as compensation or inducement for any referred examination or evaluation [Lab. Code § 4906(g)].

Failure to comply with this requirement must result in a refusal by the WCAB to file or process the party's application for adjudication or answer [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10404]. If any of the parties who are required to file a statement are not available, cannot be located, or are unwilling to sign, a declaration under penalty of perjury setting forth in specific detail the reasons the party is not available, cannot be located, or is unwilling to sign, as well as good faith efforts to locate the party, may be filed with the application or answer [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10404]. If the presiding workers' compensation judge, or designee, determines from the facts set forth in the declaration that good cause has been established, he or she may accept the application or answer for filing [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10404]. For purposes of this rule, a compromise and release agreement or stipulations with request for an award is not treated as an application for adjudication [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10404].

§ 577.84 Initiation of Proceeding

[1] Filing

With specified exceptions [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10865, 10953], proceedings for the adjudication of rights and liabilities before the Appeals Board are initiated by filing an Application for Adjudication, a case opening Compromise and Release Agreement, a case opening Stipulations with Request for Award, or a Request for Findings of Fact under 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10405 [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10400(a)]. A case opening Compromise and Release Agreement, a case opening Stipulations With Request for Award, and a Request for Findings of Fact under 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10405 is each an "application" for purposes of invoking the jurisdiction of the Appeals Board, but none of these documents is deemed an application for purposes of Lab. Code § 4064(c) [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10400(b)].

Upon the filing of an initial application, it will be assigned an adjudication case number and a venue [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10400(c)].

When filing an amended application, the applicant must indicate in the box on the application form that it is an "amended" application [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10400(d)].

[2] Service

Upon filing an Application for Adjudication, the filing party or lien claimant must concurrently serve a copy of the application and any accompanying documents on all other parties and lien claimants [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10400(e)].

If the party filing the application is an unrepresented injured employee, an unrepresented dependent of a deceased employee, or a lien claimant or non-attorney representative of a lien claimant who falls within one of the exceptions of 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10228(c)(5)(A)-(C), the Appeals Board [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10400(f)]:

1. Must serve a conformed copy of the application on all parties and lien claimants, including the filing applicant, who are listed either on the application, on the proof of service to the application, or on the address record (if an address record was previously created for an earlier application).

2. If it is an initial application, must concurrently give notification of the assigned adjudication case number and venue.

Such service is deemed service of a conformed copy of the application for purposes of Lab. Code § 5501 [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10400(f)].

For all other parties and lien claimants, the Appeals Board [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10400(g)]:

1. Must serve a conformed copy of the application on the filing party or lien claimant (or, if represented, on the filing party or lien claimant's attorney or other representative).

2. If it is an initial application, must concurrently give notification of the assigned adjudication case number and venue.

Upon receipt of the conformed copy of the application, the filing party or lien claimant (or, if represented, the filing party or lien claimant's attorney or other representative) must forthwith serve a copy of the conformed application on all other parties and lien claimants who are listed on the application or on the proof of service to the application, and, if it is an initial application, concurrently notify all other parties and lien claimants of the assigned adjudication case number and venue [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10400(g)]. Such service is deemed service of a conformed copy of the application for purposes of Lab. Code § 5501 [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10400(g)].

Disclosure of the applicant's social security number is voluntary, not mandatory. A failure to provide a social security number will not have any adverse consequences. Nevertheless, although an applicant is not required by law to provide that number, he or she is encouraged to do so. Social security numbers are used solely for identification and verification purposes in order to administer the workers' compensation system. A social security number will not be disclosed, made available, or otherwise used for purposes other than those specified, except with the consent of the applicant, or as permitted or required by statute, regulation, or judicial order [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10400(h)].

[3] Failure to Comply With Court Administrator's Rules

If a document is not filed in compliance with the Court Administrator's rules, because it does not comply with either the procedural requirements or with the place of filing requirements, the Court Administrator may in his or her discretion take the following actions [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10222(a)]:

- Correct the defect and file the document.

- Notify the filer that the document is not accepted for filing by service of a Notice of Document Discrepancy. This notice must state the discrepancy and the date of the attempted filing, and provide the filer with 15 business days from service to cure the discrepancy. If the document is corrected within 15 business days, or at a later date upon a showing of good cause, it will be deemed filed on the original date the document was submitted.

The following documents are not to be filed with the district office or the Appeals Board, except as a non-duplicative supporting exhibit or by order of a WCJ or the Board. Documents improperly submitted will not be accepted for filing or deemed filed and will not be acknowledged and may be discarded [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10222(b)].

- Letters to opposing parties or counsel.

- Subpoenas.
- Notices of taking deposition.
- Medical appointment letters.
- Proofs of service ordered pursuant to 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10500.
- Medical reports, except as required by 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10233.
- Copies of any decision of any federal or state court opinion otherwise available.
- Copies of any decision of the Appeals Board or a WCJ that is otherwise available.
- Duplicate medical and medical-legal reports.
- No diagnostic imaging as defined in Lab. Code § 139.3(b)(1) is to be transmitted to the district office or the Appeals Board unless it is ordered.

No document is to be sent by electronic mail or by fax directly to the district office or the Appeals Board. If a document is sent by electronic mail or fax directly to the district office, it will not be accepted for filing or deemed filed, will not be acknowledged, and may be discarded unless otherwise ordered by the WCJ or the Appeals Board [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10222(c)].

Failure to comply with the rules of the Court Administrator will be deemed a bad faith action or tactic that is frivolous or solely intended to cause unnecessary delay unless that failure results from mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10211].

[1] Designation

The person applying for compensation benefits is the applicant and the adverse party is the defendant [Lab. Code § 5503].

[2] Joinder of Applicants

Any person in whom any right to relief is alleged to exist may appear, or be joined, as an applicant [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10364]. Any applicant other than the injured employee must join the injured employee as a party, in which case the application must include the employee's address if known or, if not known, a statement of that fact [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10360]. In death cases, all persons who may be dependents must either join or be joined as applicants so that the entire liability of the employer or the insurer may be determined in one proceeding [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10372].

[3] Joinder of Defendants

Any person against whom any right to relief is alleged may be joined as a defendant [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10368]. The applicant may join as a defendant the employer's compensation carrier or file a separate application against it for any portion of the compensation to which he or she is entitled [Lab. Code § 3753; see Royal Globe Ins. Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1978) 84 Cal. App. 3d 287, 292 n.4, 148 Cal. Rptr. 325] . Joinder of employers in occupational disease cases is covered in Lab. Code § 5500.5.

§ 577.87 Venue

[1] In General

The application for adjudication must be filed in one of the following places [Lab. Code § 5501.5(a)]:

(1) The county in which the injured employee or dependent of a deceased employee resides on the date of filing;

(2) The county where the injury allegedly occurred or, in cumulative trauma and industrial disease claims, where the last alleged injurious exposure occurred; or

(3) The county where the employee's attorney maintains his or her principal place of business, if the employee is represented by an attorney.

Written consent of the employee or dependent of a deceased employee to the selected venue site must be filed with the application [Lab. Code § 5501.5(b)]. Further, if the selected venue site is the county where the employee's attorney maintains his or her principal place of business, that attorney must indicate the venue site when he or she forwards the information request form required by Lab. Code § 5401.5 for injuries occurring before January 1, 1994 (discussed under § 577.41[2]). The employer then has 30 days from receipt of the information request form to object to the selected venue site. If the employer does object, the application must be filed pursuant to paragraphs (1) or (2), above [Lab. Code § 5501.5(c)].

If the county selected for filing has more than one WCAB office, the application must be filed at any WCAB office within that county that meets the criteria of (1), (2), or (3), above [Lab. Code § 5501.5(b)]. If there is no WCAB office in any county specified in paragraphs (1), (2), or (3), above, the application must be filed at the WCAB office nearest to one of the following [Lab. Code § 5501.5(d)]:

- The residence of the injured employee or dependent of a deceased employee on the date of filing;

- The place where the injury allegedly occurred, or, in cumulative trauma and industrial disease claims, the last injurious exposure occurred; or

- The location where the employee's attorney maintains his or her principal place of business, unless the employer objects pursuant to Lab. Code § 5501.5(c).

The person or entity filing an initial application for adjudication (or other case opening document) must designate venue and specify whether venue is based on [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10409(a)]:

1. The place of the employee or dependent's residence at the time of filing [Lab. Code § 5501.5(a)(1) or (d)].

2. The place where the injury allegedly occurred or, for cumulative trauma or industrial disease claims, where the last alleged injurious exposure occurred [Lab. Code § 5501.5(a)(2) or (d)].

3. The place where the employee's attorney maintains his or her principal place of business [Lab. Code § 5501.5(a)(3)].

When a Division of Workers' Compensation employee files his or her own application for adjudication or other case opening document, the following provisions apply [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10409(a)]:

- Regardless of the venue designated by the employee, venue is determined as follows:

  - The parties may agree on a venue, subject to the approval of the presiding WCJ.

  - If the parties are unable to agree on a suitable venue, or for any other good cause shown, the presiding WCJ of the district office designated on the application or other case opening document must consult with the Secretary or other Deputy Commissioner of the Appeals Board to determine the appropriate venue, with the Secretary or other Deputy Commissioner issuing the appropriate venue order.

- The Secretary or other Deputy Commissioner of the Appeals Board will assign the case to a WCJ unfamiliar with the employee. When appropriate, a WCJ from a region other than the employee's region will be assigned.

[2] Asbestos-Related Injuries

All applications for asbestos-related injuries must be filed with and heard by either the San Francisco or the Long Beach branch of the WCAB, regardless of the date of injury. No other WCAB office will accept or hold any proceeding concerning these applications [see Memorandum to Presiding WCJs from John A. Merrill, Assistant Chief, Division of Workers' Compensation (July 11, 1990)].

[3] Petition for Change

An applicant or defendant may petition for a change of venue, specifically setting forth the reasons for the change. The petition will be granted for good cause. If the reason for the petition is the convenience of witnesses, the names and addresses of the witnesses and the substance of their testimony must be specifically set forth [Lab. Code § 5501.6].

Pursuant to Lab. Code § 5501.5(c), any employer or insurance carrier listed on an initial application for adjudication may file an objection to a venue selection, based on the employee's attorney's principal place of business under Lab. Code § 5501.5(a)(3), within 30 days after receiving notice of the adjudication case number and venue, stating under penalty of perjury the date when the notice of the adjudication case number and venue was received [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10410].

A petition for change of venue pursuant to Lab. Code § 5501.6 must be filed at the district office with venue. Any objection to a petition for a change of venue must be filed within 10 days of the filing of the petition. The presiding judge of the district office having venue, or his or her designee, must grant or deny the petition for change of venue, or serve notice of a status conference concerning the petition, within 30 days of the filing of the petition [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10411].

When an order changing venue is issued, all further trial level proceedings must be conducted at, and all further trial level orders, decisions, and awards must be issued by, the district office to which venue was changed until another order changing venue is issued [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10412].

§ 577.88 Declaration of Readiness to Proceed

[1] Service and Filing

Applications or petitions may not be placed on calendar for mandatory settlement conferences, status conferences, priority conferences, expedited hearing, or any other hearing unless one of the parties has filed and served a declaration of readiness to proceed in the form prescribed by the Court Administrator. The declaration of readiness must be served on all other parties and lien claimants [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10250(a); see § 577.399[1] (form)].

All declarations of readiness to proceed must state under penalty of perjury that the moving party has made a genuine, good faith effort to resolve the dispute before filing the declarations of readiness to proceed, and must state with specificity those efforts [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10250(b)]. A false declaration or certification by any party, lien claimant, attorney, or representative may give rise to proceedings under Lab. Code § 134 for contempt or Lab. Code § 5813 for sanctions [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10250(c)]. If a party or a lien claimant is represented by an attorney or representative, any declaration of readiness filed on behalf of the party must be executed by the attorney or representative [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10250(d)].

The declaration may be filed with the application for adjudication. An application filed without an accompanying declaration will be placed in inactive status [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10582].

A priority conference must be set upon the filing of a declaration of readiness requesting a priority conference that shows that the applicant is represented by an attorney and that the issues in dispute include employment and/or injury arising out of and in the course of employment [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10254(a)]. Upon a showing of good cause, a WCJ may continue the matter to a status conference. At each priority or status conference, the parties must be prepared to set the matter for trial or to provide a plan to complete discovery [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10254(b)]. To the extent possible, all priority and status conferences in a case are to be conducted by the same WCJ. When discovery is complete, or when the WCJ determines that the parties have had sufficient time to complete reasonable discovery, the case must be set for trial as expeditiously as possible [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10254(c)].

[2] Objection to Declaration

Any objection to a declaration of readiness to proceed must be filed and served within 10 calendar days after service of the declaration. The objection must set forth, under penalty of perjury, specific reason why the case should not be set or why the requested proceedings are inappropriate [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10251(a)].

If a party or lien claimant is represented, the attorney or representative must execute any objection to the declaration of readiness to proceed on behalf of the party. Declarations of readiness to proceed must be reviewed by the Presiding WCJ or any WCJ designated by the Presiding WCJ, who will determine on the basis of the facts stated in the declaration whether the objection should be sustained [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10251(c)].

If a party has received a copy of the declaration of readiness to proceed and has not filed an objection under this rule, that party will be deemed to have waived all objections to proceeding on the issues specified in the declaration, absent extraordinary circumstances [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10251(d)].

[3] False Declaration or Certification

A false declaration or certification filed under this section by any party, lien claimant, attorney, or representative may give rise to proceedings under Lab. Code § 134 for contempt or Lab. Code § 5813 for sanctions [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10251(b)].

[4] Setting for Hearing Other Than as Requested

The WCAB, upon the receipt of a declaration of readiness to proceed, may, in its discretion, set the case for a type of proceeding other than that requested. It may on its own motion set any case for conference or trial [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10420].

§ 577.89 Filing and Service of Physicians' Reports

[1] In General

All medical reports and medical-legal reports filed with the Appeals Board must be filed in accordance with the regulations of the Court Administrator, or as otherwise provided by the Appeals Board rules. Service of all medical reports and medical-legal reports on other parties and lien claimants must be made in accordance with the provisions of this rule [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10608(a)].

After the filing of an Application for Adjudication, if a party or lien claimant is requested by another party or lien claimant to serve copies of medical reports and medical-legal reports relating to the claim, the party or lien claimant receiving the request must serve copies of the reports that are in its possession or under its control on the requesting party or lien claimant within six days of the request, if the reports have not been previously served. The party or lien claimant receiving the request must serve a copy of any subsequently received medical report or medical-legal report within six days of receipt of the report [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10608(b)].

At the time of the filing of a Declaration of Readiness to Proceed or Declaration of Readiness to Proceed to Expedited Hearing, the filing declarant must concurrently serve copies of all medical reports and medical-legal reports relating to the claim that have not been previously served and that are in the possession or under the control of the filing declarant on (1) all other parties, whether or not they have previously requested service; and (2) all lien claimants that have previously requested service. The filing declarant also must serve a copy of any subsequently received medical report or medical-legal report relating to the claim within six days of receipt of the report [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10608(c)].

Within six days after service of any Declaration of Readiness to Proceed or Declaration of Readiness to Proceed to Expedited Hearing, all other parties and lien claimants must serve copies of all medical reports and medical-legal reports relating to the claim that are in their possession or under their control, and that have not been previously served, on (1) all other parties, whether or not they have previously requested service; and (2) all lien claimants that have previously requested service. The other parties and lien claimants also must serve a copy of any subsequently received medical report or medical-legal report relating to the claim within six days of receipt of the report, consistent with (1) and (2) in the preceding sentence [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10608(d)].

If, at any time after the periods specified in 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10608 (b), (c), and (d), discussed above, a lien claimant initiates a request for service of medical reports and medical-legal reports, all parties and other lien claimants must serve the requesting lien claimant with copies of all medical reports and medical-legal reports relating to the claim that are in their possession or under their control, and that have not been previously served, within six days of receipt of the request. The parties and other lien claimants also must serve a copy of any subsequently received medical report or medical-legal report relating to the claim within six days of receipt of the report [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10608(e)].

All medical reports or medical-legal reports relating to the claim that have not been previously served must be served on all other parties and lien claimants upon the filing of a compromise and release or stipulations with request for award, unless the rights and/or liabilities of those parties or lien claimants were previously fully resolved [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10608(f)].

Except as provided by 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10603 (regarding oversized exhibits, diagnostic imagining, physical exhibits, and exhibits on media), medical reports, medical-legal reports, medical records, and other records and documents must be filed only in accordance with the following provisions [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10233(a)]. The provisions in the list, below, apply when a declaration of readiness (other than a declaration of readiness for an expedited hearing) is being filed, including a walk-through declaration of readiness [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10233(b)].

> 1. When filing a declaration of readiness, the filing party or lien claimant must file the report of any agreed medical evaluator, any qualified medical evaluator, and any treating physician that: (A) are then in its possession or control, (B) are relevant to the issue being raised by the declaration of readiness, and (C) have not been filed previously. No other medical reports, medical-legal reports, medical records, or other documents may be filed at that time, unless otherwise ordered by the Appeals Board or a WCJ.
> 2. When filing an objection to a declaration of readiness, or within 10 days of the filing of the declaration of readiness if no objection is timely filed, each opposing party or lien claimant must file the reports of any agreed medical evaluator, any qualified medical evaluator, and any treating physician that: (A) are then in its possession or control, (B) are relevant to the issue being raised by the declaration of readiness, and (C) have not been filed previously. No other medical reports, medical-legal reports, medical records, or other documents may be filed at that time, unless otherwise ordered by the Appeals Board or a WCJ.

The provisions in the list, below, apply when a declaration of readiness for an expedited hearing is being filed [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10233(c)].

> 1. When filing a declaration of readiness for an expedited hearing, the filing party or lien claimant must file the reports of any agreed medical evaluator, any qualified medical evaluator, and any treating physician that: (A) are then in its possession or control, (B) are relevant to the issue being raised by the declaration of readiness, and (C) have not been filed previously. No other medical reports, medical-legal reports, medical records, or other documents may be filed at that time.
> 2. When filing an objection to a declaration of readiness for an expedited hearing, or within 10 days of the filing of the declaration of readiness if no objection is timely filed, each opposing party or lien claimant must file the reports of any agreed medical evaluator, any qualified medical evaluator, and any treating physician that: (A) are then in its possession or control, (B) are relevant to the issue being raised by the declaration of readiness, and (C) have not been filed previously. No other medical reports, medical-legal reports, medical records, or other documents may be filed at that time.

3. All other medical reports, medical-legal reports, medical records, or other documents that are being proposed as exhibits with respect to the issue being raised by the declaration of readiness, and that have not been filed previously, must be filed at the time of trial, unless otherwise ordered by the Appeals Board or a WCJ.

The provisions in the list, below, apply when a compromise and release or a stipulations with request for award is being filed, with the exception that they do not apply when the compromise and release or the stipulations with request for award is being filed on a walk-through basis in accordance with 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10280 [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10233(d)].

1. When filing a compromise and release or a stipulations with request for award, the filing party must file all agreed medical evaluator reports, qualified medical evaluator reports, treating physician reports, any other medical records, or other records (e.g., wage statements) that: (A) are relevant to a determination of the adequacy of the compromise and release or stipulations with request for award, and (B) have not been filed previously.

2. If the compromise and release or the stipulations with request for award is not approved, and the matter is set for a hearing on the adequacy of the proposed settlement, any additional reports, records, or other documents not previously filed that are being proposed as exhibits must be filed at the time of the adequacy hearing, unless otherwise ordered by the Appeals Board or a WCJ.

3. If the compromise and release or the stipulations with request for award is not approved at or after the adequacy hearing, and the matter is set for a mandatory settlement conference or trial, then any additional medical reports, medical-legal reports, medical records, or other documents that are being proposed as exhibits must be filed in the same manner as set forth in 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10233 (g) and (h) [see below].

Excerpted portions of relevant physician, hospital, or dispensary records must be filed in accordance with 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10232 [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10233(e); see § 577.104]. Similarly, excerpted portions of relevant personnel records, wage records and statements, job descriptions, and other business records must be filed in accordance with 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10232 [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10233(f); see § 577.104].

At a mandatory settlement conference, rating mandatory settlement conference, priority conference, or lien conference, all other medical reports, medical-legal reports, medical records, or other documents that are being proposed as exhibits with respect to the issue being raised by the declaration of readiness, and that have not been filed previously, must be filed, but only if the matter is being set for trial, unless otherwise ordered by the Appeals Board or a WCJ [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10233(g)].

At trial, any additional medical reports, medical-legal reports, medical records, or other documents that are being proposed as exhibits with respect to the issue being raised by the declaration of readiness must be filed, unless otherwise ordered by the Appeals Board or a WCJ [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10233(h)].

[2] Content of Medical Reports

The matters that should be included in a physician's report are set forth in 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10606. A failure to set forth these matters will be considered by the workers' compensation judge in weighing this evidence [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10606]. All medical-legal reports must comply with the provisions of Lab. Code § 4628 (responsibilities of physician signing medical-legal report). Except as otherwise provided by the Labor Code and the WCAB's rules, a failure to comply with Section 4628 will not make the report inadmissible, but will be considered in weighing this evidence [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10606].

[3] Form of Medical Evidence

The WCAB favors the production of medical evidence in the form of written reports. Direct examination of a medical witness will not be received at a trial except on a showing of good cause [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10606]. A continuance for rebuttal testimony may be granted [Lab. Code § 5502.5; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10606]. In death cases, the reports of non-examining physicians may be admitted into evidence in lieu or oral testimony [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10606].

[4] Employer-Maintained Records

A written communication from a physician containing any information listed in 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10606 that is contained in any record maintained by the employer as employer is deemed to be a physician's report [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10616]. However, records from an employee assistance program are not required to be filed or served unless ordered by the WCAB [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10616].

[5] Failure to Comply with Requirements

Failure to comply with the requirements concerning disclosure, service, and filing of medical reports may result in the report being deemed inadmissible in evidence [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10622]. If a willful suppression of a medical report is demonstrated, it will be presumed that the findings, conclusions, and opinions contained in the report would be adverse if produced [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10622].

§ 577.90 Consolidatation of Cases

Consolidation of two or more related cases, involving either the same injured employee or multiple injured employees, rests in the sound discretion of the Appeals Board. In exercising that discretion, the Board is required to take into consideration any relevant factors, including but not limited to the following [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10589(a)]:

1. Whether there are common issues of fact or law.

2. The complexity of the issues involved.

3. The potential prejudice to any party, including but not limited to whether granting consolidation would significantly delay the trial of any of the cases involved.

4. The avoidance of duplicate or inconsistent orders.

5. The efficient utilization of judicial resources.

Consolidation may be ordered for limited purposes or for all purposes [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10589(a)].

Consolidation may be ordered by the Appeals Board on its own motion, or may be ordered based on a petition filed by one of the parties. A petition to consolidate must [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10589(b)]:

1. List all named parties in each case.

2. Contain the adjudication case numbers of all the cases sought to be consolidated, with the lowest numbered case shown first.

3. Be filed in each case sought to be consolidated.

4. Be served on all attorneys or other representatives of record and on all non-represented parties in each case sought to be consolidated.

Any order regarding consolidation must be filed in each case to which the order relates [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10589(c)].

If consolidation is ordered, the Appeals Board, in its discretion, may designate one case as the master file for exhibits and pleadings. If a master file is designated, any subsequent exhibits and pleadings filed by the parties and lien claimants during the period of consolidation are to be filed in the master case only. However, all pleadings and exhibit cover sheets filed must include the caption and case number of the master file case, followed by the case numbers of all of the other consolidated cases [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10589(d)].

If a master file has been designated and the consolidated cases are tried, all relevant documentary evidence previously received in an individual case is deemed admitted in evidence in the consolidated proceedings under the master file and is deemed part of the record of each of the several consolidated cases. Evidence received subsequent to the designation of the master file is to be similarly received with like force and effect [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10589(e)].

When cases are consolidated, joint minutes of hearing, summaries of evidence, opinions, decisions, orders, findings, or awards may be used. However, copies must be filed in the record of proceedings of each case [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10589(f)].

Any request or petition to consolidate cases that are assigned to different WCJs in the same district office, or that have not been assigned but are venued at the same district office, must be referred to the Presiding WCJ of that office, whether the cases involve the same injured worker or multiple injured workers [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10260(a)].

Any request or petition to consolidate cases involving the same injured worker that are assigned to WCJs at different district offices, or that have not been assigned but are venued at different district offices, must first be referred to the Presiding WCJs of the district offices to which the cases are assigned. If the Presiding WCJs are unable to agree on where the cases will be assigned for hearing, the conflict will be resolved by the Court Administrator upon referral by one of the presiding judges [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10260(b)].

Any request or petition to consolidate cases involving multiple injured workers that are assigned to WCJs at different district offices, or that have not been assigned but are venued at different district offices, must be referred to the Court Administrator [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10260(c)]. In resolving any request or petition to consolidate cases that are assigned to WCJs at different district offices, or that have not been assigned but are venued at different district offices, the Court Administrator must set the request or petition for a conference regarding the place of hearing. At or after the conference, the Court Administrator must determine the place of hearing and may determine the WCJ to whom the cases will be assigned, giving consideration to the factors set forth in 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10589. In reaching any determination, the Court Administrator may assign a WCJ to hear any discovery motions and disputes relevant to discovery in the action and to report their findings and recommendations to the Court Administrator [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10260(d)]. Any party aggrieved by the determination of the Court Administrator may request proceedings pursuant to Lab. Code § 5310, except that an assignment to a particular WCJ may be challenged only in accordance with the provisions of 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10452 and 10453 [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10260(e)].

§ 577.101 Caption of Papers

Most, but not all, papers filed in connection with a workers' compensation claim are filed with the WCAB and should be captioned accordingly. Common exceptions are the following:

- Requests for informal permanent disability ratings (discussed under § 577.45[4][c]), which are directed to the Division of Workers' Compensation, Office of Benefit Determination [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 9732-9766]; and

- Reports of occupational injury or illness, which, in the case of a self-insured employer, are filed directly with the Department of Industrial Relations, Division of Labor Statistics and Research, and, in the case of an insured employer, are filed with the insurer, which must immediately transmit a copy of the report to the Division of Labor Statistics and Research [see Lab. Code § 6409; 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 14000-14004].

The caption, or heading, of all papers filed with the WCAB should include the WCAB's name, the title of the paper, the name of the injured employee (which may be included in the title of the case), the title of the case (that is, the name of the injured employee or of the applicant if other than the injured employee vs. the name of the employer and of the employer's insurance carrier, if any), and, in the case of pleadings and other papers filed subsequent to the application for adjudication, the WCAB case number [see, e.g., 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10232]. The case is indexed and referred to by the name of the injured employee, whether or not the employee is the applicant [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10215; see § 577.12A[2]].

For a general form of caption, see § 577.400.

A WCAB Data Entry Sheet must accompany all filings in which no case number has been previously assigned. This includes the Application for Adjudication, Compromise and Release Agreement, Stipulations with Requests for Award, petitions seeking recovery under Lab. Code § 132a, and pre-application filings for cases involving injuries between January 1, 1990 and December 31, 1993, in which no case number was previously assigned by the WCAB.

A request for action by the WCAB, other than an application for adjudication, an answer, or a declaration of readiness, must be made by petition, the caption of which must contain the case title and adjudication case number and indicate the type of relief sought [8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10210(z), 10450(a)]. Any previously filed document must not be attached to a petition; any such document that is attached to a petition may be discarded [*8 Cal. 51-577 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 577.104

§ 577.104 Form and Size Requirements of Papers

All documents, except the medical reports of treating physicians, secondary physicians, qualified or agreed medical evaluators, and proposed exhibits, must be filed in accordance with the following standards [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10232(a)]:

1. Only one side of each paper is to be used.

2. All documents must be printed with black ink on white paper that is 81/2 x11 inches and at least 12 pound weight. All margins must be at least one inch and be without typed or handwritten text in any margin.

3. The first page must include a case caption that includes the name of the injured worker or dependent claiming benefits, the name of the employer and the employer's insurer or indicating that the employer is self-insured and a case number, if one has been assigned by the district office. If a case number has been assigned, the number must be preceded by the abbreviation "ADJ."

4. All non-form legal pleadings must contain a heading above the case caption containing the name of the filing attorney and his or her state bar membership number and the attorney's law firm name and address.

5. Except as otherwise provided in this regulation or in 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10228(c), all OCR forms and documents must be printed in Times New Roman, Times, Courier, Palatino, Century Schoolbook, or similar serif font of at least 12 points in size.

6. Except as otherwise provided in 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10228, all text added to the OCR forms must be in capital letters.

7. Response to the request on the OCR forms for social security numbers is optional, not mandatory.

8. A list of body part codes is provided with the document cover sheet form and posted on the DWC website (http://www.dir.ca.gov/forms.html). The codes must be used on OCR forms to describe the part of the body injured.

9. A list of district office codes for place of venue is provided with the document cover sheet form and posted on the DWC website (http://www.dir.ca.gov/forms.html). The codes must be used on OCR forms to describe the district office venue.

10. No single document may exceed 25 pages in length without the prior permission of the Appeals Board or the Presiding WCJ of the district office with venue over the case.

11. The text of a document must be double spaced or one and one-half spaced; however, captions, headings, headers, footnotes, footers, and block quotations must be single spaced.

12. The documents must be flat, without folds and without staples.

13. OCR forms have bar codes at the top of the document. No other documents may have bar codes at the top of the document.

All documents must be filed with document cover sheets and document separator sheets, as follows [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10232(b)]:

1. A completed document cover sheet must be the first page of each individual document or set of documents filed at one time in the same case. The cover sheet provides space for information regarding 15 companion cases. Only the pages filled out need to be filed. A document separator sheet must precede each document within a set of documents.

2. If an individual document includes an attachment, a completed document separator sheet must precede the attachment, and, if an individual document includes multiple attachments, a document separator sheet must precede each individual attachment. A document separator sheet must not be placed between a document and the proof of service for that document. However, when one proof of service is used for multiple documents, a document separator sheet must precede the proof of service.

3. A list of document titles is provided with the document separator sheet form and posted on the DWC website (http://www.dir.ca.gov/forms.html). These document titles must be used on a document separator sheet to describe the attached document.

4. The document separator sheet requires the filer to list the product delivery units [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10210(bb); see also § 577.12A[1], the date of the attached document, and the author of the attached document.

5. The requirements set out in items [1]-[4] in this list do not apply to any unrepresented employees, unrepresented dependents, or unrepresented uninsured employers who do not have ready access to document cover sheets and document separator sheets.

Oversized documents must be filed at only the time of trial in accordance with the provisions of 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10603 [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10232(c)].

If an unrepresented worker, an unrepresented, uninsured employer, or an unrepresented dependent does not have ready access to a computer or a typewriter and compliance with 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10232(a), items 4 and 5 [see above], is not feasible, a hand-printed document may be submitted. Any hand-printed document must be legible and must otherwise comply with 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10232, including the requirements of 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10232(a)(2) regarding margins and text in the margins [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10232(d)].

§ 577.105 Verification

Verification in the manner required for verified pleadings in courts of record is required for petitions for reconsideration and answers to such petitions [Lab. Code §§ 5902, 5905], but is not required for applications for adjudication or answers to applications or other documents filed with the WCAB. Verification by affidavit of pleadings in civil actions in courts of record is governed by Code Civ. Proc. § 446 [see Wings West Airlines v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1047, 1055, 232 Cal. Rptr. 343 (under Code Civ. Proc. § 446, petition by Director of Department of Industrial Relations need not be verified)]. A declaration under penalty of perjury, in lieu of an affidavit, is permissible [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 446, 2015.5], and is usually more convenient than an affidavit.

For forms of verification that may be adapted for use when required on papers filed with the WCAB, see Ch. 572, Verifications .

§ 577.106 Filing Papers

[1] In General

After the filing and processing of an initial application for adjudication of claim or other case-opening document, all documents required or permitted to be filed under the regulations must be filed with the district office of the Appeals Board having venue, except as provided by the rules of the Board, unless otherwise ordered by a WCJ or the Board [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10227(a)].

[2] Manner of Filing Documents

Except as provided by 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10603(a) (regarding oversized exhibits, diagnostic imagining, physical exhibits, and exhibits on media), all documents are to be filed in paper form [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10228(a)].

All paper documents will be scanned into the electronic adjudication file, then destroyed no sooner than 30 business days after filing, unless otherwise provided by these rules or ordered by a WCJ or the Appeals Board. A scanned document will have the same legal effect as a document filed in paper form [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10228(b)].

Each of the following persons or entities must file optical character recognition forms completed by using a computer or typewriter with the exception of OCR forms that are prepared at a hearing or that, for good cause, are filed at trial [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10228(c); see Electronic Adjudication Management System (EAMS) Handbook/Instructional Manual for Optical Character Recognition (OCR) Form Filers, available on the DWC website (http://www.dir.ca.gov/dwc)]:

1. Any attorney representing any party or any lien claimant.

2. Any insurance carrier or any representative of any insurance carrier (including any claims adjustor).

3. Any self-insured employer or any representative of a self-insured employer (including any claims adjustor).

4. Any third-party administrator or any representative of a third-party administrator (including any claims adjustor).

5. Any lien claimant or any representative of any lien claimant, with the exception of: (A) a lien claimant (or a non-attorney representative of a lien claimant) asserting a living expenses lien under Lab. Code § 4903(c); (B) a lien claimant (or a non-attorney representative of a lien claimant) asserting a burial expenses lien under Lab. Code § 4903(d); or (C) a non-governmental lien claimant (or a non-attorney representative of a lien claimant) asserting a spousal or child support expenses lien under Lab. Code § 4903(e).

OCR forms are posted in fillable format on the DWC website: http://www.dir.ca.gov/dwc/forms.html [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10228(d)].

All unrepresented employees, unrepresented dependents, unrepresented uninsured employers, or lien claimants set forth in Item 5 in the list directly above must use OCR forms, where such forms are required, but if they do not have ready access to a computer or a typewriter, printed OCR forms will be available at the district offices, and the information added to the form may be hand-printed in black ink [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10228(e)].

Whenever a party or lien claimant files a document using an OCR form, the party or lien claimant must use the appropriate OCR form required by these rules [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10228(f)].

Except as set forth in 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10228(e) [see above], any OCR form that was not obtained from DWC's website must function with EAMS in an equivalent manner as the DWC form [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10228(g)].

[3] Electronic Filing Exemption for Electronic Filing Trial

If a document is filed with EAMS as part of the electronic filing trial, that document does not need to be filed in compliance with 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10228 and 10232 [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10229].

[4] Time of Filing Documents

A paper document, including one filed by mail (regardless of when posted), is deemed filed on the date it is received, if received prior to 5 p.m. of a court day (i.e., Monday through Friday, except designated state holidays). A paper document received after 5 p.m. of a court day will be deemed filed as of the next court day [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10230(a)].

When a document is filed by mail or by personal service, the Appeals Board or the district office that received the document for filing will affix on it an appropriate endorsement as evidence of receipt. The endorsement may be made by handwriting, hand-stamp, electronic date stamp, or by other means [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10230(b)].

[5] Filing of Copies of Documents

Except as provided by 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10603(a) (regarding oversized exhibits, diagnostic imagining, physical exhibits, and exhibits on media), no "original" business, medical, or other documents may be filed with a district office [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10236(a)]. Rather, only a photocopy or other reproduction of an original document may be filed, and it is presumed that the filed document is an accurate representation of the original document [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10236(b)].

If a party or a lien claimant alleges that a filed document is inaccurate or unreliable, the party alleging that the document is inaccurate or unreliable must state the basis for the objection. The filing party must establish that the document is an accurate representation of the original document [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10236(c)].

A party or a lien claimant that elects to retain the original of an exhibit or proposed exhibit need not retain the original after either (1) the exhibit has been authenticated at trial or (2) a settlement that resolves all pending issues has been approved and all appeals have been exhausted or the time for seeking appellate review has expired [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10236(d)].

For the discussion of the place for filing an application for adjudication of claim, see discussion under § 577.87.

[6] Petitions for Reconsideration or Removal and Subsequent Filings

At any time within 20 days after the service of the order or decision, or of the occurrence of the action in issue, any party may petition for removal, based on one or more of the following grounds [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10843(a)]:

1. The order, decision, or action will result in significant prejudice.

2. The order, decision, or action will result in irreparable harm.

The petitioner must also demonstrate that reconsideration will not be an adequate remedy after the issuance of a final order, decision or award. Failure to file the petition to remove timely constitutes valid ground for dismissing the petition for removal [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10843(a)].

The petition for removal and any answer must be verified on oath in the manner required for verified pleadings in courts of record [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10843(b)].

A copy of the petition for removal must be served forthwith on all parties by the petitioner. Any adverse party may file an answer within 10 days after service. No supplemental petitions, pleadings, or responses will be considered unless requested or approved by the Appeals Board [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10843(c)].

The WCJ may, within 15 days of the filing of the petition for removal, rescind the order or decision in issue, or take action to resolve the issue raised in the petition. If the judge so acts, or if the petitioner withdraws the petition at any time, the petition will be deemed automatically dismissed, requiring no further action by the Appeals Board. The issuance of a new order or decision, or the occurrence of a new action, will recommence the time period for filing a petition for removal, as described above [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10843(d)].

The filing of a petition for removal does not terminate the judge's authority to proceed in a case or require the judge to continue or cancel a previously scheduled hearing, absent direction from the Appeals Board. After a petition for removal has been filed, the WCJ must consult with the presiding WCJ prior to proceeding in the case or continuing or canceling a scheduled hearing [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10843(e)].

Except as otherwise provided by 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10840 or 10865, all documents filed in connection with any petition for reconsideration, petition for removal, petition for disqualification or any other matter pending before the Appeals Board must comply with the requirements of 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10227, 10228, 10230, 10232, 10235, and 10236 [see §§ 577.104, 577.106[1], [2], [4], [5]], including but not limited to the 25-page limitation of 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10232(a)(10) [see § 577.104], except that any supplemental petition or answer allowed by the Appeals Board under 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10848 [see below] may not exceed 10 pages. Any verification, proof of service, exhibit, or document cover sheet filed with the petition or answer is not counted in determining the page limitation [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10845(a)].

On its own motion, or on a clear and convincing showing of good cause, the Appeals Board may allow the filing of a petition, answer, or supplemental petition or answer that does not comply with the provisions set forth in the preceding paragraph, including but not limited to the page limitations. A request to exceed the page limitations must be made by a separate petition, made under penalty of perjury, that specifically sets forth the facts or other reasons why the request should be granted [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10845(b)].

A document that has been sent directly to the Appeals Board by fax or e-mail will not be accepted for filing, unless otherwise ordered by the Appeals Board [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10845(c)].

A petition for reconsideration, removal, or disqualification may be denied or dismissed if it is unsupported by specific references to the record and to the principles of law involved [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10846].

When a petition for reconsideration, removal, or disqualification has been timely filed, supplemental petitions or pleadings or responses other than the answer will be considered only when specifically requested or approved by the Appeals Board. Supplemental petitions or pleadings or responses other than the answer, except as provided by this rule, will be neither accepted nor deemed filed for any purpose and will not be acknowledged or returned to the filing party [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10848].

Service of copies of any petition for reconsideration, removal, or disqualification or any answer thereto must be made, in accordance with 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10505 [see § 577.108[2], [5][a] -[d]], on all parties to the case and on any lien claimant, the validity of whose lien is specifically questioned by the petition, and to any case that has been consolidated therewith pursuant to 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10589 [see §§ 577.90, 577.146]. Failure to file proof of service constitutes valid ground for dismissing the petition [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10850].

[7] Papers That Will Not Be Filed

The following documents are not to be filed with the district office or the Appeals Board, except as a non-duplicative supporting exhibit or by order of a WCJ or the Board. Documents improperly submitted will not be accepted for filing or deemed filed and will not be acknowledged and may be discarded [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10222(b)]:

- Letters to opposing parties or counsel.
- Subpoenas.
- Notices of taking deposition.
- Medical appointment letters.
- Proofs of service ordered pursuant to 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10500.
- Medical reports, except as required by 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10233.
- Copies of any decision of any federal or state court opinion otherwise available.
- Copies of any decision of the Appeals Board or a WCJ that is otherwise available.
- Duplicate medical and medical-legal reports.
- No diagnostic imaging as defined in Lab. Code § 139.3(b)(1) is to be transmitted to the district office or the Appeals Board unless it is ordered.

No document is to be sent by electronic mail or by fax directly to the district office or the Appeals Board. If a document is sent by electronic mail or fax directly to the district office, it will not be accepted for filing or deemed filed, will not be acknowledged, and may be discarded unless otherwise ordered by the WCJ or the Appeals Board [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10222(c)].

Failure to comply with the rules of the Court Administrator will be deemed a bad faith action or tactic that is frivolous or solely intended to cause unnecessary delay unless that failure results from mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10211].

§ 577.107 Duty to Furnish Correct Address

DWC is required to maintain an official participant record for each adjudication file, which must contain the names of all parties and lien claimants and their attorneys or hearing representatives [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10217(a)].

In order to ensure that case parties and documents are accurately associated to the correct electronic adjudication file, uniform names for claims administrators' offices and representatives' offices are required to be used when filing documents in EAMS. These names are assigned by DWC [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10217(b)]. DWC will maintain a list on its website of uniform names and mailing addresses and preferred method of service for claims administrators' offices and representatives' offices [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10217(b)(1)]. Additions for new claims administrators' offices and representatives' offices and changes of name, location or address, telephone number, fax number, e-mail address, or preferred method of service must be registered by the entity requesting the change with the Central Registration Unit [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10217(b)(2); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10210(f) (Central Registration Unit is unit within DWC that maintains website list of uniform names and addresses)]. The entity requesting the change must fax or e-mail a letter on letterhead with a signature from an authorized individual requesting the change to DWC's Central Registration Unit within five business days of any change. The entity must also advise all parties of any change of name, mailing address, or telephone number by furnishing the current information within five business days of any change [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10217(b)(2)(A); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10217(b)(2)(B) (fax number for Central Registration Unit is: 1 (888) 822-9309, and e-mail address for Central Registration Unit is: cru@dir.ca.gov); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10217(b)(2)(C) (new uniform name or address and preferred method of service will be posted by Central Registration Unit within 10 business days of receipt of request)].

Except as required in the preceding paragraph, every party and every lien claimant having an interest in an active case pending before the district office or the Appeals Board must advise the district office and all parties of any change of mailing address and telephone numbers by furnishing the current information within five business days of any change [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10217(c)]. Similarly, every lien claimant that has filed a lien in a case pending in a district office must advise all parties within five business days of any change in the identity and/or telephone number of the person with authority to resolve the lien by furnishing the correct name and daytime telephone number of that person to the interested parties, and must advise DWC of any such change after a declaration of readiness is filed [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10217(d)]. Finally, every party and lien claimant having an interest in an inactive case must advise all other known parties, lien claimants, attorneys, and hearing representative within five business days of any change of address (which must include any change of mailing address and telephone numbers) by furnishing the correct and current address and/or number, and must advise DWC of any such change within five business days if there is an outstanding award of further medical treatment or if there is continuing jurisdiction pursuant to Lab. Code §§ 5410, 5803, and 5804 [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10217(e)].

§ 577.108 Service of Papers

[1] Application for Adjudication

Proceedings before the Appeals Board are initiated by the filing of an Application for Adjudication, a case opening Compromise and Release Agreement, a case opening Stipulations with Request for Award, or a Request for Findings of Fact under 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10405 [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10400(a); but see 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10865, 10953 (exceptions)]. A case opening Compromise and Release Agreement, a case opening Stipulations with Request for Award, and a Request for Findings of Fact under 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10405 is each an "application" for purposes of invoking the jurisdiction of the Appeals Board, but none of these documents is deemed an application for purposes of Lab. Code § 4064(c) [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10400(b)].

When an initial application is filed, it will be assigned an adjudication case number and a venue [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10400(c)]. (When filing an amended application, the applicant must indicate in the box on the application form that it is an "amended" application [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10400(d)].)

The party or lien claimant filing an Application for Adjudication must concurrently serve a copy of the application and any accompanying documents on all other parties and lien claimants [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10400(e)].

If the party filing the application is an unrepresented injured employee, an unrepresented dependent of a deceased employee, or a lien claimant or non-attorney representative of a lien claimant who falls within one of the exceptions of 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10228(c)(5)(A)-(C) [see § 577.106[2]], the Appeals Board [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10400(f)]:

> 3. Must serve a conformed copy of the application on all parties and lien claimants, including the filing applicant, who are listed either on the application, on the proof of service to the application, or on the address record (if an address record was previously created for an earlier application).
> 4. If it is an initial application, must concurrently give notification of the assigned adjudication case number and venue.

Such service is deemed service of a conformed copy of the application for purposes of Lab. Code § 5501 [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10400(f)].

For all other parties and lien claimants, the Appeals Board [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10400(g)]:

3. Must serve a conformed copy of the application on the filing party or lien claimant (or, if represented, on the filing party or lien claimant's attorney or other representative).

4. If it is an initial application, must concurrently give notification of the assigned adjudication case number and venue.

Upon receipt of the conformed copy of the application, the filing party or lien claimant (or, if represented, the filing party or lien claimant's attorney or other representative) must forthwith serve a copy of the conformed application on all other parties and lien claimants who are listed on the application or on the proof of service to the application, and, if it is an initial application, concurrently notify all other parties and lien claimants of the assigned adjudication case number and venue [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10400(g)]. Such service is deemed service of a conformed copy of the application for purposes of Lab. Code § 5501 [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10400(g)].

Disclosure of the applicant's social security number is voluntary, not mandatory. A failure to provide a social security number will not have any adverse consequences. Nevertheless, although an applicant is not required by law to provide that number, he or she is encouraged by the Appeals Board to do so. Social security numbers are used solely for identification and verification purposes in order to administer the workers' compensation system. A social security number will not be disclosed, made available, or otherwise used for purposes other than those specified, except with the consent of the applicant, or as permitted or required by statute, regulation, or judicial order [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10400(h)].

[2] Other Papers Served by Party

The Appeals Board may, in its discretion, designate a party or lien claimant, or their attorney or agent of record, to make service of notices of the time and place of hearing, orders approving compromise and release, awards based on stipulations with request for award, and any interim or procedural orders. In deciding whether to exercise this discretion, the Appeals Board may consider whether service by it would be more efficient and cost-effective because most or all of the parties, lien claimants, attorneys, or agents of record to be served have specified e-mail or fax as their preferred method of service. If discretion is exercised so as to require designated service, the party, lien claimant, attorney, or agent of record designated to make service must retain the proof of service and not file it unless ordered to do so by the Appeals Board [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10500(a); but see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10500(b) (exceptions); see also [3], below].

The following specific rules apply when a document is served by a party, a lien claimant, or their attorney or other agent of record [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10505(a)]. Except when a document is personally served, service of a document must be made by first-class mail or by an alternative method that will effect service that is equivalent to or more expeditious than first-class mail [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10505(b) (acceptable alternative methods limited to express or priority mail or "a bona fide commercial delivery service or attorney service promising delivery within two business days, as shown on the service's invoice or receipt")], unless either of the following applies [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10505(b)]:

1. The party, lien claimant, attorney, or agent being served has previously specified that a designated preferred method of service other than first-class mail may be used for any service, consistent with 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10218 [see § 577.12A[4]].

2. The serving party, lien claimant, attorney, or agent and the receiving party, lien claimant, attorney, or agent previously agreed to some other method of service.

By prior agreement of the parties or lien claimants, or when authorized or requested by the receiving party or lien claimant, service of any document may be made by methods other than the designated preferred method of service [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10505(g)].

The following rule applies when, after serving a document in accordance with 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10505(d), (e), (f) [see [5], below], and/or (g), the serving party or lien claimant (or their attorney or agent of record) subsequently receives notification that the service to one or more parties or lien claimants (or to their attorneys or agents of record) failed [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10505(h)]:

1. When the serving party or lien claimant (or their attorney or agent of record) receives notification of failed service to any intended recipient(s), the server must promptly re-serve the document on the intended recipient(s), using the method of service (i.e., mail, e-mail, fax) best calculated to result in valid service on the intended recipient(s), even if the intended recipient(s) did not previously designate that method as their preferred method of service.

2. The server need not re-serve the document on intended recipients for whom the server did not receive notification of failed service.

3. On re-service, the server must execute a new proof of service in accordance with 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10505(c), (d), (e), and/or (f) [see [5], below], showing re-service on the intended recipient(s).

Except for designated service under 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10500 or as otherwise provided by the rules, service by any party or lien claimant must be made on the attorney(s) or agent(s) of record of each other affected party or affected lien claimant, unless that party or lien claimant is unrepresented, in which event service must be made directly on the party or lien claimant. Except as provided in 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10500, or as otherwise ordered by a WCJ or the Appeals Board, no party or lien claimant is required to serve any document on the injured employee or any dependent(s) of a deceased employee, if the employee or dependent is represented by an attorney or other agent of record [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10510(b)].

Nothing in this rule precludes more comprehensive service, either as ordered by the Appeals Board or in the discretion of the Appeals Board or the parties [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10510(c)].

No document, including letters or other writings, is to be filed by a party or lien claimant with the Appeals Board unless service of a copy is made on all parties, together with the filing of a proof of service as provided in 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10505 [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10324(a)].

[3] Other Papers Served by WCAB

All orders, decisions, findings, awards, minutes of hearing, notices of hearing, correspondence, and any other documents issued by the Appeals Board, including those being served by designated service in accordance with 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10500, must be served on [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10510(a)]:

1. The injured employee or any dependent(s) of a deceased employee, whether or not the employee or dependent is represented by an attorney or other agent of record.

2. Each attorney or other agent of record of the injured employee or any dependent(s) of a deceased employee.

3. Each attorney or other agent of record for any other affected party or affected lien claimant, unless that party or lien claimant is unrepresented, in which event service is to be made directly on the party or lien claimant.

The Appeals Board must serve all parties and lien claimants of record notice of any final order, decision, or award issued by it on a disputed issue after submission. The Board may not designate a party or lien claimant, their attorney, or agent of record to serve any final order, decision, or award relating to a submitted disputed issue [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10500(b)].

If the Appeals Board effects personal service of a document at a hearing or at a walk-through proceeding, the proof of personal service must be made by endorsement on the document, setting forth the fact of personal service, the name(s) of the person(s) served, and the date of service. The endorsement must bear the signature of the person making the service [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10500(c)].

If the Appeals Board serves a document by mail, the proof of mail service must be made by endorsement on the document, setting forth the fact of mail service on the persons or entities listed on the official address record who have not designated e-mail or fax as their preferred method of service. The endorsement must state the date of mail service and bear the signature of the person making the service [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10500(d)].

If the Appeals Board electronically serves a document through EAMS on persons or entities listed on the official address record who have designated e-mail or fax as their preferred method of service, the record of electronic service maintained in EAMS constitutes proof of service by the Board [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10500(e)].

When an application for adjudication, stipulation with request for award, or compromise and release is filed in a death case in which there is a bona fide issue as to partial or total dependency, the filing party must serve copies of the documents on the Department of Industrial Relations, Death Without Dependents Unit [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10501].

[4] Manner of Service

Service of any notice, order, or decision required by the workers' compensation law to be served on any person before, during, or after the institution of any proceeding before the WCAB may be made in the manner provided by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1010-1020 unless otherwise directed by the WCAB. In the latter event, the document must be served in accordance with the WCAB's direction or order [Lab. Code § 5316].

WCAB regulations provide that service of any document may be made by mail or personal service. Service of any document may be made by facsimile transmission by agreement of the parties or lien claimants, or when authorized or requested by the receiving party or lien claimant [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10505].

If a document is served by mail, fax, e-mail, or any method other than personal service, the period of time for exercising or performing any right or duty to act or respond is extended by [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10507(a)]:

- Five calendar days from the date of service, if the physical address of the party, lien claimant, attorney, or other agent of record being served is within California.

- Ten calendar days from the date of service, if the physical address of the party, lien claimant, attorney, or other agent of record being served is outside of California but within the United States.

- Twenty calendar days from the date of service, if the physical address of the party, lien claimant, attorney, or other agent of record being served is outside the United States.

For purposes of this rule, "physical address" means the street address or post office box of the party, lien claimant, attorney, or other agent of record being served, as reflected in the official address record at the time of service, even if the method of service actually used was fax, e-mail, or other agreed-upon method of service [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10507(b); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10217; see also § 577.12A[3] (official participant record and duty to furnish correct address)].

This rule applies whether service is made by the Appeals Board, a party, a lien claimant, or an attorney or other agent of record [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10507(c)].

If the last day for exercising or performing any right or duty to act or respond falls on a weekend, or on a holiday for which the offices of the Appeals Board are closed, the act or response may be performed or exercised on the next business day [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10508].

For discussion of service by mail in civil actions, see Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers .

When a district office of the WCAB maintains mailboxes for outgoing documents and allows consenting parties, lien claimants, and attorneys to obtain their documents from their mailboxes, documents so obtained are deemed to have been served on the party, lien claimant, or attorney by mail on the date of service specified on the document [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10506].

The WCAB may, in the cases mentioned in the Code of Civil Procedure [see Code Civ. Proc. § 415.50], order service to be made by publication of notice of time and place of hearing. If service is ordered to be made by publication, the date of the hearing may be fixed at more than 30 days from the date of filing the application [Lab. Code § 5316].

[5] Proof of Service

[a] Personal Service

If a document is personally served by a party or lien claimant, the proof of personal service must be made by endorsement on the document, setting forth the fact of personal service, the name(s) of the person(s) served, and the date of service, and by the signature of the person making the service [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10505(c)].

[b] Service by Mail

If a document is served by a party or lien claimant by mail on persons listed on the official address record who have designated mail as their preferred method of service, who have failed to make any designation, or who have previously agreed to accept mail service in accordance with 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10505(g), the proof of mail service may be made by: (1) affidavit or declaration of service; (2) written statement endorsed on the document served and signed by the party making the statement; or (3) letter of transmittal. The proof of service must set forth the names and addresses of persons served, the fact of service by mail, the date of service, and the address(es) to which mailing was made [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10505(d)].

[c] Service by E-Mail

If a document is served by a party or lien claimant by e-mail on persons listed on the official address record who have designated e-mail as their preferred method of service, or who have previously agreed to accept e-mail service in accordance with 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10505(g), the proof of e-mail service must state [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10505(e)]:

1. The e-mail address of the person making the e-mail service.

2. The date of the e-mail service.

3. The name(s) and e-mail address(es) of the person(s) served.

4. That the document was served by e-mail and that there was no report of any error or delay in the transmission of the e-mail.

Absent evidence to the contrary, service by e-mail is deemed complete at the time of transmission, unless a document is re-served in accordance with 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10505(h) [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10505(e)].

[d] Service by Fax

If a document is served by a party or lien claimant by fax on persons listed on the official address record who have designated fax as their preferred method of service, or who have previously agreed to accept fax service in accordance with 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10505(g), the proof of fax service must state [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10505(f)]:

1. The sending fax machine telephone number of the person making the fax service.

2. The date and time of the fax service.

3. The name and the fax machine telephone number of the person served.

4. That the document was served via fax transmission and that the transmission was reported as complete and without error.

Absent evidence to the contrary, service by fax is deemed complete at the time of transmission, unless a document is re-served in accordance with 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10505(h) [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10505(f)].

The filing of a stipulation with a request for an award initiates a proceeding for the adjudication of rights and liabilities before the WCAB [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10400]. When a compromise and release agreement or stipulations with request for an award is filed as an application for adjudication, it must be accompanied by a copy of the claim form for injuries occurring on or after January 1, 1990 [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10400].

§ 577.123 WCAB Action on Stipulation

The WCAB may either base its findings and award on the stipulation of the parties, or set the matter for hearing and take further testimony or make the further investigation necessary to enable it to determine the matter in controversy [Lab. Code § 5702; see Draper v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 502, 507-508, 195 Cal. Rptr. 248 (stipulation not adequately reflecting applicant's disability should not be accepted by WCJ as basis for award)]. A stipulation does not have to be based on evidence to be binding on the parties. Thus, although the WCAB has discretion to reject factual stipulations, the discretion does not permit the WCAB to reject a stipulation solely on the ground that it is not supported by the evidence, absent good cause [County of Sacramento v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2000) 77 Cal. App. 4th 1114, 1121, 92 Cal. Rptr. 2d 290 (court of appeal reversed WCAB's action setting aside stipulation because it was not based on evidence, and held that stipulation could not be set aside absent good cause); but see Turner Gas Co. v. Workmen's Comp. Appeals Bd. (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 286, 290, 120 Cal. Rptr. 663 (WCAB has discretion to reject stipulation and base its decision on the evidence presented at hearing)]. No finding may be made contrary to a stipulation of the parties on an issue, however, without providing the parties with notice and an opportunity to present evidence on the issue [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10497].

§ 577.124 Resolution of Liens

Before issuance of an award that resolves a case based upon the stipulations of the parties, if there remain any liens that have not been resolved or withdrawn, the parties must make a good-faith attempt to contact the lien claimants and resolve their liens. A good-faith attempt requires at least one contact of each lien claimant by telephone or letter [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10888]. After issuing an award that resolves a case based upon the stipulations of the parties, if there remain any liens that have not been resolved or withdrawn, the workers' compensation judge must set the case for a lien conference, issue a 10-day notice of intention to order payment of any such lien in full or in part, or issue a 10-day notice of intention to disallow any such lien [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10888]. Upon a showing of good cause, the workers' compensation judge may once continue a lien conference to another lien conference [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10888]. If a lien cannot be resolved at a lien conference, the workers' compensation judge must set the case for trial [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10888].

An agreement to "pay, adjust, or litigate" a lien, or its equivalent, or an award leaving a lien to be adjusted, is not a resolution of the lien [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10888].

§ 577.130 Governing Law

Compromise and release agreements generally are governed by Lab. Code §§ 5000-5004, 5100.6, and compromise of occupational disease and cumulative injury claims is governed by Lab. Code § 5005. Settlement and release of claims against third-party tortfeasors is governed by Lab. Code §§ 3859-3861 (discussed in subpart C § 577.330 et seq.). Agreements to release by compromise claims against the Subsequent Injuries Benefits Trust Fund are governed by Lab. Code § 4754.5.

§ 577.131 Right to Compromise and Release From Liability

[1] In General

No contract, rule, or regulation can exempt an employer from liability for compensation fixed by the workers' compensation law, but this does not impair the right of the interested parties to compromise any liability claimed to exist on account of injury or death [Lab. Code § 5000(a)]. Nor does it confer on an injured employee's dependents any interest that the employee may not release by compromise or for which the employee, or his or her estate, is in the event of such compromise accountable to dependents [Lab. Code § 5000(b); see Sumner v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 965, 967, 191 Cal. Rptr. 811, 663 P.2d 534 ; Johnson v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 964, 969-972, 88 Cal. Rptr. 202, 471 P.2d 1002] .

[2] Vocational Rehabilitation Benefits

In 2003 the legislature abolished the workers' compensation vocational rehabilitation program, repealing Lab. Code §§ 139.5, 4635-4647, and 5405.5 [see Stats. 2003, ch. 635, §§ 14, 14.3, 16]. In its place, the legislature created a "supplemental job displacement benefit" for specified workers who are permanently partially disabled, to be used for retraining. The new system applies only to injuries occurring on or after January 1, 2004 [see § 577.45[2A]].

In 2004, the legislature reenacted one of the statutes it had repealed in 2003, Lab. Code § 139.5, reinstating vocational rehabilitation. However, the reenacted statute applies only to injuries occurring before January 1, 2004, and it will remain in effect only until January 1, 2009, and as of that date is repealed, unless a later-enacted statute, that is enacted before January 1, 2009, deletes or extends that date [Lab. Code § 139.5(k), (l)]. Various other vocational rehabilitation statutes, e.g., Lab. Code §§ 4642, 4644(d), (e), and 5405.5, once cross-referred to in former Lab. Code § 139.5 but repealed in 2003, are also cross-referred to in the reenacted Lab. Code § 139.5 and are now identified with the designation "former." Thus, although the issue may be further clarified by administrative and judicial action, it now appears that the statutory law on vocational rehabilitation applicable to pre-2004 injuries is confined to Lab. Code § 139.5, those "former" statutes to which it cross-refers, and those statutes not repealed in 2003. For example, the 2002 amendment to former Lab. Code § 4646, which allowed settlement of prospective vocational rehabilitation benefits, has not been reenacted, while Lab. Code § 5100.6, forbidding such settlements, was never repealed and, thus, remains in force. As a consequence of these legislative developments, at least some of the discussion in this subsection applies only to pre-2004 injuries.

With respect to injuries occurring prior to January 1, 1990, the Labor Code provides that the WCAB may not permit the settlement of prospective compensation or indemnity payments or other benefits to which an employee is entitled under rehabilitation [Lab. Code § 5100.6]. The WCAB has held, however, that settlement of prospective rehabilitation benefits is permissible if there exists a good faith issue, which, if resolved against the employee, would defeat his or her claim to all workers' compensation benefits [Thomas v. Sports Chalet, Inc. (1977) 42 Cal. Comp. Cases 625, 632-633] . Prior to approving the agreement, the WCAB must make a finding that such a good faith issue exists [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10870; see State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1983) 148 Cal. App. 3d 649, 652-653, 196 Cal. Rptr. 169] .

In 1989, the Legislature adopted Lab. Code § 4646, and codified the WCAB's holding in Thomas v. Sports Chalet. For injuries occurring on or after January 1, 1990, settlement of prospective vocational rehabilitation services is not permitted pursuant to Lab. Code § 5000 et seq. unless a workers' compensation judge finds that there are good faith issues that, if resolved against the employee, would defeat the employee's right to all compensation under the workers' compensation law [Lab. Code § 4646(a)]. However, in 2002 the legislature amended Lab. Code § 4646 to provide that an employer and a represented employee may agree to settle the employee's right to prospective vocational rehabilitation services with a one-time payment to the employee of not more than $10,000 for the employee's use in self-directed vocational rehabilitation. The settlement agreement must be submitted to, and approved by, the Vocational Rehabilitation Unit upon a finding that the employee has knowingly and voluntarily agreed to relinquish his or her rehabilitation rights. The Rehabilitation Unit may disapprove the settlement agreement only upon a finding that receipt of rehabilitation services is necessary to return the employee to suitable gainful employment [Lab. Code § 4646(b); see Lab. Code § 4644(a)(8)]. Prior to entering into any such settlement agreement, the attorney for a represented employee must fully disclose and explain to the employee the nature and quality of the rights and privileges being waived [Lab. Code § 4646(c)]. The court of appeal has held that these amendments are procedural in nature and thus apply to injuries occurring prior to January 1, 2003, the date on which the amendments went into effect, as well as to injuries occurring after that date [Pebworth v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2004) 116 Cal. App. 4th 913, 917-919, 10 Cal. Rptr. 3d 832] .

If a qualified injured worker signs a compromise and release that states he or she is not interested in receiving vocational rehabilitation services and the agreement does not release any claim to rehabilitation benefits, the workers' compensation judge is not required to make such a finding [see Cisneros v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1995) 41 Cal. App. 4th 759, 767, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 655] .

For discussion of vocational rehabilitation benefits, see § 577.45[2].

For a form for settlement of prospective vocational rehabilitation services, see § 577.464.

51-577 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 577.132

§ 577.132 Compromise and Release Agreements

[1] Form and Contents of Agreement

The required form and contents of the agreement are set forth in Lab. Code §§ 5003 (disability case) and 5004 (death case). Every compromise and release agreement must comply with these provisions and conform to the form provided by the WCAB [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10874; see forms in §§ 577.460 -577.462.]

For informational guidelines for submission of compromise and release agreements, see § 577.463.

[2] Filing Agreement

A copy of the compromise agreement signed by both parties must forthwith be filed with the WCAB [Lab. Code § 5002]. The filing of the agreement initiates the proceeding and constitutes the filing of an application for adjudication of rights and liabilities that may, in the WCAB's discretion, be set for hearing, reserving to the parties the right to put in issue facts that might otherwise have been admitted in the agreement [8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10400, 10878]. When a compromise of claim is submitted to the WCAB, an arbitrator, or a settlement conference referee for approval, the parties must also file with the WCAB, arbitrator, or settlement conference referee any liens served on the parties [Lab. Code § 4903.1(b)]. According to the DWC/WCAB Policy & Procedural Manual, parties may obtain approval of settlements by following a "walk-through" procedure established by each local office of the Board [DWC/WCAB Policy & Procedural Manual Index No. 6.7.4.1].

[3] Service of Agreement on Lien Claimants

If a lien claim is on file with the WCAB, or a party has been served with a lien, when the agreement is filed, a copy of the agreement must be served on the lien claimant by the parties [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10886; see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10505]. No lien claim will be disallowed or reduced unless the lien claimant has been given notice and an opportunity to be heard [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10886; see also discussion under § 577.261].

In a case of first impression, a court of appeal held that a medical lien claimant was denied due process and the right to a fair trial when it was not served with defense medical reports prior to trial and denied the right to cross-examine and make objections at trial. The court further held that the denial of the right to a fair trial as to the lien claimant was reversible per se. As stated by the court, a medical lien claimant has the right to participate in a workers' compensation hearing, must be served with notice of all hearings, and must be informed of the scope and purpose of any hearing that may affect its rights or liabilities [Beverly Hills Multispecialty Group, Inc. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 789, 803, 805-806, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 293] .

[3A] Resolution of Liens

Before issuance of an order approving compromise and release that resolves a case, if there remain any liens that have not been resolved or withdrawn, the parties must make a good-faith attempt to contact the lien claimants and resolve their liens. A good-faith attempt requires at least one contact of each lien claimant by telephone or letter [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10888]. After issuing an order approving compromise and release that resolves a case, if there remain any liens that have not been resolved or withdrawn, the workers' compensation judge must set the case for a lien conference, issue a 10-day notice of intention to order payment of any such lien in full or in part, or issue a 10-day notice of intention to disallow any such lien [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10888]. Upon a showing of good cause, the workers' compensation judge may once continue a lien conference to another lien conference [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10888]. If a lien cannot be resolved at a lien conference, the workers' compensation judge must set the case for trial [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10888].

An agreement to "pay, adjust, or litigate" a lien, or its equivalent, or an award leaving a lien to be adjusted, is not a resolution of the lien [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10888].

[4] WCAB Approval of Agreement Required

No release of liability or compromise agreement is valid unless approved by the WCAB or a WCJ [Lab. Code § 5001; see Draper v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 502, 506-507, 195 Cal. Rptr. 248 ; Kampner v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1978) 86 Cal. App. 3d 376, 378 n.2, 150 Cal. Rptr. 222 ; but see Lab. Code §§ 5272 (arbitrators and WCJs have same general statutory and regulatory duties and responsibilities), 5502(e)(2) (settlement conference referees have authority to approve compromise and release agreements at settlement conferences)]. The effect of this requirement is to make every compromise invalid until it is approved [see Sumner v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 965, 971, 191 Cal. Rptr. 811, 663 P.2d 534 ; Johnson v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 964, 973, 88 Cal. Rptr. 202, 471 P.2d 1002] .

[5] WCAB Action on Agreement

[a] Adequacy of Agreement

On the filing of the agreement and its approval, the WCAB may, without notice, on its own motion or on the application of either party, enter its award based on the agreement [Lab. Code § 5002]. The WCAB must inquire into the adequacy of the agreement, however, and may set the matter for hearing to take evidence when necessary to determine whether the agreement should be approved or disapproved or issue findings and awards [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10882; see Johnson v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 964, 973, 88 Cal. Rptr. 202, 471 P.2d 1002] . If a hearing is held with the agreement used as an application, the defendants have available to them all defenses that were available as of the date the agreement was filed. The WCAB may thereafter either approve the agreement or disapprove it and issue findings and award after the hearing has been held and the matter submitted for decision [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10878].

According to the DWC/WCAB Policy & Procedural Manual, a WCJ is required to communicate his or concerns about the adequacy of a proposed settlement in writing or by telephone before setting the issue for hearing. If no response is received within 15 days, the matter will be added to the WCJ's regular calendar; if an inadequate response is received, an order setting forth the missing evidence and suspending action will issue and be served on all parties and their representatives, and a conference will be set within 30 days if the missing evidence is not received [DWC/WCAB Policy & Procedural Manual Index No. 6.7.4.1].

Agreements that provide for payment of less than the full amount of compensation due or to become due and that undertake to release the employer from all future liability will be approved only when it appears that a reasonable doubt exists as to the rights of the parties or that approval is in the best interest of the parties [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10870].

[b] Proof of Service

Lab. Code § 3761 provides that if the employer notifies its compensation insurer, in writing, that, in the employer's opinion, no compensation is payable to an employee, at the employer's written request to the WCAB, the WCAB may approve a compromise and release agreement or stipulation that provides compensation to the employee only if there is proof of service on the employer by the insurer of notice of the time and place of the hearing at which the agreement or stipulation is to be approved [Lab. Code § 3761(b)]. The notice must be given to the employer at its last known address at least 15 days prior to the WCAB action, and proof of this service must be filed with the Appeals Board [Lab. Code § 3761(b)]. The insurer's failure to provide the required notice will not prohibit the WCAB from approving the compromise and release agreement or stipulation, but the WCAB must order the insurer to pay the employer's reasonable expenses under Lab. Code § 5813 [Lab. Code § 3761(b)].

If the insurer has attached a declaration to the compromise and release agreement or stipulations with request for an award that it has complied with the provisions of Lab. Code § 3761, the WCAB may approve the compromise and release or stipulations with request for an award without a hearing or further proceedings [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10875]. If the WCAB or a workers' compensation judge has approved a compromise and release or stipulations with request for an award and the insurer has failed to show proof of service pursuant to Lab. Code § 3761(b), the WCAB or workers' compensation judge must award expenses under Lab. Code § 5813 on the employer's request and after giving notice and an opportunity to be heard to the insurer [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10875].

[6] Rescission of Agreement

A compromise and release agreement that has not been submitted to the WCAB for approval is neither valid nor binding on the parties [see Lab. Code § 5001]; therefore, a party may apparently withdraw from such an agreement at will. The WCAB may take into account any payment made to the employee, however, pursuant to the agreement in fixing the amount of compensation to paid [see Lab. Code § 4909].

[7] Reconsideration of Order Approving Agreement

An order approving a compromise and release agreement is subject to reconsideration on the same basis as any other final substantive order [see Argonaut Ins. Exchange v. Industrial Acci. Com. (1958) 49 Cal. 2d 706, 710-711, 321 P.2d 460] . If the time for reconsideration is past, a party seeking rescission may file a petition to reopen, on a showing of good cause [see Silva v. Industrial Acci. Com. (1924) 68 Cal. App. 510, 514-515] . For a discussion of reconsideration and petitons to reopen generally, see § 577.240 et seq.

[8] Effect of Compromise and Release on Non-Workers' Compensation Claims

The California Supreme Court has held that the standard language of the preprinted WCAB Form 15 [see § 577.460[1]], used in settling workers' compensation claims, releases only those claims within the scope of the workers' compensation system and does not apply to claims asserted in separate civil actions [Claxton v. Waters (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 367, 376, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 246, 96 P.3d 496] . Moreover, extrinsic evidence is not admissible to show that the preprinted form applies also to claims outside the workers' compensation system, since allowing such evidence would, said the Court, unduly burden the courts and create a trap for the unwary worker, while disallowing such extrinsic evidence would not be unfair to the parties [Claxton v. Waters (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 367, 377-378, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 246,

96 P.3d 496] . The Court also held that considerations of fairness and public policy required that the holdings in Claxton be applied prospectively only, i.e., to cases involving execution of the preprinted workers' compensation release form after finality of the Court's decision [Claxton v. Waters (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 367, 378-379, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 246, 96 P.3d 496] . The Court distinguished Claxton from Jefferson v. Department of Youth Authority, decided two years earlier, in which it had held that when an employee has knowledge of a potential claim against the employer at the time of executing a general release in a workers' compensation proceeding, but has not yet initiated litigation of that claim, the employee has the burden of expressly excepting the claim from the release. Absent this exception, and absent contrary extrinsic evidence, a court will enforce general language, such as was found in the compromise and release and attachment in the case before the Court, releasing all claims, including civil claims [Jefferson v. California Department of Youth Authority (2002) 28 Cal. 4th 299, 310, 121 Cal. Rptr. 2d 391, 48 P.3d 423] . In Claxton, the Court explained that it was the existence of an attachment to the preprinted form that led to the result in Jefferson, whereas no such attachment existed in Claxton [Claxton v. Waters (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 367, 376, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 246, 96 P.3d 496] . The Jefferson Court distinguished the factual configuration of the case before it from the facts existing in various court of appeal cases [Lopez v. Sikkema (1991) 229 Cal. App. 3d 31, 36-39, 280 Cal. Rptr. 7 ; Asare v. Hartford Fire Ins. Co. (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 856, 864-865,2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 452 ; Delaney v. Superior Fast Freight (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 590, 599, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 33] . In Jefferson the Court was ruling on a broadly worded agreement that expressly released "all claims and causes of action" relating to an injury and that included an attachment establishing the parties' intent to include civil claims within the scope of the release. In this situation, the Court held that the employee was barred from bringing a civil action under the California Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA) [see Gov. Code § 12900 et seq.] for damages relating to the same events that resulted in the injury [Jefferson v. CaliforniaDepartment of Youth Authority (2002) 28 Cal. 4th 299, 301, 121 Cal. Rptr. 2d 391, 48 P.3d 423] . The Court pointed out that in Asare v. Hartford Fire Ins. Co. extrinsic evidence established the parties' intent not to settle an FEHA action, whereas in Jefferson there was no such extrinsic evidence. Similarly, said the Court, in Lopez v. Sikkema and Delaney v. Superior Fast Freight there was no attachment to the compromise and release that made clear the parties' intent to settle civil claims in addition to workers' compensation claims. Moreover, the civil actions were already pending in those cases at the time the parties executed their workers' compensation settlements, whereas Jefferson had not filed her FEHA action when she executed the compromise and release, and the Youth Authority had no basis for assuming she intended to do so. In conclusion, the Court expressly neither approved nor disapproved the holdings in Lopez and Delaney [Jefferson v. California Department of Youth Authority (2002) 28 Cal. 4th 299, 309-310, 121 Cal. Rptr. 2d 391, 48 P.3d 423] . The various court of appeal cases that preceded Jefferson should be read with the Supreme Court's comments in mind. The Claxton Court noted that Asare, Lopez, and Delaney are not to be followed to the extent that they allow the admission of extrinsic evidence to try to show that the release extends to claims outside the workers' compensation system [Claxton v. Waters (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 367, 379 n. 2, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 246, 96 P.3d 496] .

In another case, decided prior to Claxton v. Waters, the court of appeal, reversing the trial court's grant of an employer's motion for summary judgment, held that settlement of an employee's workers' compensation claim via a document that included language agreeing "to settle any and all claims" did not so clearly operate to settle that same employee's FEHA civil action arising from the same alleged work-related incidents as to support dismissal of the employee's civil action via summary judgment, pursuant to Jefferson. The court of appeal found that extrinsic evidence was more than sufficient to establish the existence of a triable issue of fact concerning the parties' intent when the workers' compensation claim was settled, which extrinsic evidence included the facts that (1) the employee/applicant had two attorneys, one representing her in the workers' compensation action, the other representing her in the civil action, (2) the civil action was not mentioned in the compromise and release, (3) both the employer's workers' compensation lawyer and the WCJ, not merely the employee's workers' compensation attorney, conceded that the civil action was not discussed at any time during their negotiations, (4) the employee/applicant had no intent to include the civil action in the settlement of her workers' compensation case, since, at the time of that settlement, the employer's offer to settle the civil action for more than $1,000,000 was still open, and (5) after the workers' compensation settlement was signed, sealed, and paid, the employer again offered to settle the civil action for $1,100,000 plus the employee's attorney's fees, leaving no doubt in the court of appeal's mind that neither the workers' compensation attorneys nor their clients intended to include the civil action in the settlement of the workers' compensation claim [Mitchell v. Union Central Life Ins. Co.

(2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 1331, 1341-1342, 13 Cal. Rptr. 3d 732] . In light of subsequently decided Claxton v. Waters, which discussed and did not criticize Mitchell, it appears that the Mitchell court reached the right result.

In this connection, it should be noted that the court of appeal has followed Jefferson in concluding that an employee's release of her workers' compensation claim against her employer, which released "all claims and causes of action" against the employer, included the release of the employee's civil action under FEHA, when the FEHA action had been filed prior to execution of the release but the employer had not yet been notified of that action [Kohler v. Interstate Brands Corp. (2002) 103 Cal. App. 4th 1096, 1099-1102, 127 Cal. Rptr. 2d 366] . In light of Claxton, the continued viability of this holding appears doubtful.

§ 577.133 Occupational Disease or Cumulative Injury Case

In the case of a claim for occupational disease or cumulative injury [see Lab. Code § 5500.5], the employee and any employer or its insurance carrier may enter into a compromise and release agreement settling all or any part of the employee's claim, including a part of the employee's claim against any employer, but the agreement does not bar recovery from any one or all of the remaining employers or insurance carriers for the periods of exposure not so released [Lab. Code § 5005].

When approved by the WCAB or "referee" (now workers' compensation judge), the agreement is a total release as to the employer or insurance carrier for the portion or portions of the claim released [Lab. Code § 5005]. In approving the agreement, the WCAB or referee must determine the adequacy of the agreement as it shall then reflect the potential liability of the released exposure after apportionment, but need not make a final actual determination of the potential liability of the employer or employers for that portion of the exposure being released [Lab. Code § 5005].

In any case in which a compromise and release agreement of a portion of a claim has been made and approved, the employee may elect to proceed as provided in Lab. Code § 5500.5 against any one or more of the remaining employers, or against an employer for that portion of its exposure not so released. In any such proceeding, that portion of liability attributable to the portion or portions of the exposure released will be assessed and deducted from the liability of the remaining defendant or defendants. No such defendant, however, can receive credit for any moneys paid by way of compromise and release in excess of the liability actually assessed against the released employments, and the employee will not receive any further benefits from the released employments for any liability assessed to them above what was paid by way of compromise and release [Lab. Code § 5005].

Subsequent injuries payments are governed by Lab. Code §§ 4751-4755. These sections do not, however, impair the right of the Attorney General or the Department of Industrial Relations to release by compromise any claims brought against the Subsequent Injuries Benefits Trust Fund [Lab. Code § 4754.5].

To be valid, any compromise and release agreement must be approved by the WCAB, but Lab. Code §§ 5000-5004, discussed above, do not apply [Lab. Code § 4754.5].

§ 577.140 Governing Law

Investigations and hearings before the WCAB or a workers' compensation judge (hereinafter WCJ) are governed by the workers' compensation law and by the WCAB's Rules of Practice and Procedure [Lab. Code § 5708]. The WCAB's power to issue process is governed by Lab. Code § 134. Attachment is governed by Lab. Code §§ 5600-5603; removing and restoring cases to the active calendar by 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10562 and 10582; joinder and dismissal of parties by Lab. Code §§ 5307.5(b) and 5500.5(b) and by 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10380 and 10570; dismissal of applications for adjudication by Lab. Code § 5507 and 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10562, 10582, and 10780; medical examinations by Lab. Code §§ 4050-4056; autopsies by Lab. Code §§ 5706 and 5707; assignment of cases and powers of WCJ's by Lab. Code §§ 3715, 5309, and 5310 and 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10346 and 10348; disqualification of WCJ's by Lab. Code § 5311 and 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10452; subpoenas, subpoenas duces tecum, and witness fees by Lab. Code Reg. § 10322; mandatory settlement conferences by Lab. Code § 5502(e); and substitution and dismissal of attorneys and agents by 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10774. Hearings are governed generally by Lab. Code §§ 5700-5710 and by 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10541-10593, and expedited hearings governed by Lab. Code § 5502(b) and 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10252, 10252.1.

Arbitration of workers' compensation disputes is governed generally by Lab. Code §§ 4903.4, 5270 et seq., and 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10997-10999 and is discussed in § 577.60 et seq.

The WCAB or any of its members may issue writs or summonses, warrants of attachment, and warrants of commitment, in like manner and to the same extent as courts of record [Lab. Code § 134]. The process so issued extends to all parts of California and may be served by any persons authorized to serve process of courts of record or any person designated for that purpose by the WCAB or any of its members. The person executing process will receive compensation allowed by the WCAB, which may not exceed the fees prescribed by law for similar services [Lab. Code § 134]. Fees prescribed by law for service of process are set forth in Gov. Code §§ 26721 (sheriffs), 27821 (constables), 71266 (marshals and constables). The fees are paid in the same manner as witness fees [Lab. Code § 134; see discussion under § 577.148].

§ 577.142 Attachment

In any case mentioned in Code Civ. Proc. § 415.50 (service by publication) or in which the employer failed to secure the payment of compensation (see discussion in § 577.13[3]), the WCAB may, on the filing of an application by or on behalf of an injured employee, his or her dependents, or any other party in interest, order the clerk of the superior court to issue writs of attachment authorizing the sheriff to attach the defendant's property as security for the payment of any compensation that may be awarded [Lab. Code §§ 5600, 5602]. The amount of the attachment is fixed by the WCAB and may not exceed the greatest probable award against the defendant in the matter [Lab. Code § 5600].

A writ of attachment may not be ordered if it appears from the application or supporting affidavit that the employer was, at the time of the injury, insured against workers' compensation liability [Lab. Code § 5602]. Moreover, if, at any time after the attachment is levied, it appears that the employer was insured and the requisites for dismissing the employer from the proceeding and substituting the insurer as defendant are established, the WCAB must forthwith discharge the attachment [Lab. Code § 5602]. In levying attachments, preference must be given to the employer's real property [Lab. Code § 5603].

Attachment procedures in workers' compensation proceedings are governed by the general civil attachment provisions set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 481.010 et seq., and the WCAB has the powers and duties of a court under those provisions [see Lab. Code § 5601]. For a discussion of Code Civ. Proc. § 481.010 et seq. and forms that may be adapted for use in proceedings under the workers' compensation law, see Ch. 62, Attachment .

§ 577.143 Inactive Cases

[1] Removing and Restoring Cases to Calendar

In cases concerning injuries occurring prior to January 1, 1990, or on or after January 1, 1994, applications for adjudication filed without an accompanying declaration of readiness to proceed [see § 577.399] will be placed in inactive status. Further, any case that is set for hearing may be removed from the active calendar by an order taking off calendar [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10582]. The WCAB may take any case off calendar when a party served with notice of trial fails to appear at the trial [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10562; see discussion under § 577.173]. Cases in off-calendar status may be restored to the active calendar on the filing and service of a properly executed declaration of readiness to proceed [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10582].

[2] Dismissal for Failure to Activate Case

Unless a case is activated for hearing within one year after the filing of the application for adjudication or the entry of an order taking it off calendar, the case may be dismissed after notice and opportunity to be heard. Dismissal may be entered at the request of an interested party or on the WCAB's own motion for lack of prosecution. A case may be dismissed after issuance of a 10-day notice of intention to dismiss and an opportunity to be heard, but not by an order with a clause rendering the order null and void if an objection showing good cause is filed [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10582; see § 577.453].

At least 31 days before filing a petition to dismiss, a defendant must mail to the applicant and, if represented, the applicant's attorney or agent a letter stating his or her intention to file the petition 30 days after the date of the letter unless the applicant or his or her attorney or agent shows in writing some good reason for not dismissing the case. A copy of the letter and of any reply must be attached to the petition to dismiss, and a copy of the petition must be served on all parties and lien claimants [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10582].

After the application for adjudication has been filed, the WCAB, or a WCJ may order the joinder of additional parties necessary for the full adjudication of the case [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10380; see Lab. Code § 5307.5(b)]. The procedure for joinder on request of any interested party of employers not named in the application for adjudication in occupational disease cases is set forth in Lab. Code § 5500.5(b). A party not present or represented at the time of joinder must be served with copies of the order of joinder, the application, minutes of hearing and summary of evidence, medical reports, and other documents as directed in the order of joinder. The WCAB may designate the party or parties who are to make service [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10380]. For a petition to join an omitted employer in a cumulative injury action, see § 577.430[1].

Improper or unnecessary parties may be dismissed by interlocutory or interim order [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10570; see § 577.431].

§ 577.145 Workers' Compensation Judges

[1] Assignment of Cases to Workers' Compensation Judge

Cases are assigned to WCJs as provided in 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10346 [see Lab. Code § 5310]. On the agreement of the parties, on the application of either, or on its own motion, and with or without notice, the appeals board may direct and order a WCJ [Lab. Code § 5309(a), (b)]:

- To try the issues in any proceeding before it, whether of fact or of law, and make and file a finding, decision, or award based on the issues; or

- To hold hearings and ascertain facts that are necessary for enabling the WCAB to determine any proceeding, for making any order, decision, or award, or for the board's information.

[2] Powers of Workers' Compensation Judge

[a] In General

The WCJ has full power, jurisdiction, and authority to hear and determine all issues of fact and law presented in any case regularly assigned for trial and to issue such interim, interlocutory, and final orders and such findings, decisions, and awards as may be necessary to the full adjudication of the case, including the fixing of the amount of the bond required in Lab. Code § 3715 (bond required of employer who failed to secure payment of compensation) [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10348].

[b] To Punish for Contempt and to Issue Process

The WCAB may, in accordance with its adopted rules of practice and procedure and on the agreement of the parties, on the application of either, or on its own motion, and with or without notice, direct and order a WCJ to issue writs or summons, warrants of attachment, warrants of commitment, and all necessary process in proceedings for direct and hybrid contempt, in a like manner and to the same extent as courts of record [Lab. Code § 5309(c); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10348]. "Hybrid contempt" means a charge of contempt that arises from events occurring in the immediate presence of the WCJ for reasons that occur outside the presence of the WCJ [Lab. Code § 5309(c)].

The amendment of Lab. Code § 5309 to add the foregoing subdivision (c) is apparently the Legislature's response to the holdings in Morton v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 924, 238 Cal. Rptr. 651 , and Marcus v. Workmen's Comp. Appeals Bd. (1973) 35 Cal. App. 3d 598, 111 Cal. Rptr. 101 , which had limited the exercise of the contempt power to the WCAB and its members [see Lab. Code § 134], and is indicative of the Legislature's intent that the WCAB have and exercise the contempt power of a court of record to protect its process in adjudicating workers' compensation claims [Crawford v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 156, 171 n.8, 259 Cal. Rptr. 414] . The WCJ may issue contempt orders only for willful misconduct. A finding of contempt is not an appropriate sanction for failure to appear at a workers' compensation conference or hearing, without evidence that the attorney violated an order to appear by the WCJ [see Code of Civ. Proc. § 1209; Runnion v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th 277, 286, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 105] .

[c] Disqualification of Workers' Compensation Judge

[i] In General

Any party to a proceeding may object to a particular WCJ on any of the grounds specified in Code Civ. Proc. § 641 (grounds of objection to referee in civil cases), and the objection will be heard and disposed of by the WCAB [Lab. Code § 5311]. The proceeding to disqualify is initiated by filing a petition for disqualification supported by an affidavit or declaration under penalty of perjury stating in detail the facts establishing the grounds for disqualification [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10452].

For discussion of Code Civ. Proc. § 641 and forms that may be adapted for use to object to a WCJ, see Ch, 38, Reference .

[ii] Petitions to Disqualify and for Reassignment

The requirements regarding when a petition to disqualify must be filed and the manner of its determination are set forth in 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10452. A petition for disqualification must be referred to the WCJ from whose decisions or actions relief is sought [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10860].

Provisions governing petitions for automatic reassignment to another WCJ when a party or attorney believes that he or she cannot have a fair, expeditious, inexpensive, unencumbered, or impartial trial before the WCJ before whom the case is pending or to whom it is assigned, and the procedure to be followed, are set forth in 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10453.

[iii] WCAB's Action on Petition to Disqualify

The WCJ must prepare a report containing a statement of the contentions raised by the petition, a specific response to the allegations, and the action recommended on the petition [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10860]. The WCJ must send the report and the WCAB file to the WCAB within 15 days after the petition is filed unless the WCAB grants an extension of time [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10860]. At the same time the report is sent to the WCAB, the WCJ must serve a copy of the report on the parties and any lien claimant, the validity of whose lien is specifically affected by the petition for disqualification [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10860].

Any order disqualifying a WCJ under Lab. Code § 5311 may be made only by the WCAB [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10340(f)].

§ 577.146 Consolidation of Cases

Consolidation of two or more related cases, involving either the same injured employee or multiple injured employees, rests in the sound discretion of the Appeals Board. In exercising that discretion, the Board is required to take into consideration any relevant factors, including but not limited to the following [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10589(a)]:

1. Whether there are common issues of fact or law.

2. The complexity of the issues involved.

3. The potential prejudice to any party, including but not limited to whether granting consolidation would significantly delay the trial of any of the cases involved.

4. The avoidance of duplicate or inconsistent orders.

5. The efficient utilization of judicial resources.

Consolidation may be ordered for limited purposes or for all purposes [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10589(a)].

Consolidation may be ordered by the Appeals Board on its own motion, or may be ordered based on a petition filed by one of the parties. A petition to consolidate must [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10589(b)]:

1. List all named parties in each case.

2. Contain the adjudication case numbers of all the cases sought to be consolidated, with the lowest numbered case shown first.

3. Be filed in each case sought to be consolidated.

4. Be served on all attorneys or other representatives of record and on all non-represented parties in each case sought to be consolidated.

Any order regarding consolidation must be filed in each case to which the order relates [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10589(c)].

If consolidation is ordered, the Appeals Board, in its discretion, may designate one case as the master file for exhibits and pleadings. If a master file is designated, any subsequent exhibits and pleadings filed by the parties and lien claimants during the period of consolidation are to be filed in the master case only. However, all pleadings and exhibit cover sheets filed must include the caption and case number of the master file case, followed by the case numbers of all of the other consolidated cases [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10589(d)].

If a master file has been designated and the consolidated cases are tried, all relevant documentary evidence previously received in an individual case is deemed admitted in evidence in the consolidated proceedings under the master file and is deemed part of the record of each of the several consolidated cases. Evidence received subsequent to the designation of the master file is to be similarly received with like force and effect [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10589(e)].

When cases are consolidated, joint minutes of hearing, summaries of evidence, opinions, decisions, orders, findings, or awards may be used. However, copies must be filed in the record of proceedings of each case [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10589(f)].

Any request or petition to consolidate cases that are assigned to different WCJs in the same district office, or that have not been assigned but are venued at the same district office, must be referred to the Presiding WCJ of that office, whether the cases involve the same injured worker or multiple injured workers [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10260(a)].

Any request or petition to consolidate cases involving the same injured worker that are assigned to WCJs at different district offices, or that have not been assigned but are venued at different district offices, must first be referred to the Presiding WCJs of the district offices to which the cases are assigned. If the Presiding WCJs are unable to agree on where the cases will be assigned for hearing, the conflict will be resolved by the Court Administrator upon referral by one of the presiding judges [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10260(b)].

Any request or petition to consolidate cases involving multiple injured workers that are assigned to WCJs at different district offices, or that have not been assigned but are venued at different district offices, must be referred to the Court Administrator [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10260(c)]. In resolving any request or petition to consolidate cases that are assigned to WCJs at different district offices, or that have not been assigned but are venued at different district offices, the Court Administrator must set the request or petition for a conference regarding the place of hearing. At or after the conference, the Court Administrator must determine the place of hearing and may determine the WCJ to whom the cases will be assigned, giving consideration to the factors set forth in 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10589. In reaching any determination, the Court Administrator may assign a WCJ to hear any discovery motions and disputes relevant to discovery in the action and to report their findings and recommendations to the Court Administrator [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10260(d)]. Any party aggrieved by the determination of the Court Administrator may request proceedings pursuant to Lab. Code § 5310, except that an assignment to a particular WCJ may be challenged only in accordance with the provisions of 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10452 and 10453 [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10260(e)].

[1] Issuance

The WCAB and each of its members, its secretary, assistant secretaries, and WCJ's may issue subpoenas for the attendance of witnesses and the production of papers, books, accounts, documents, and testimony in any inquiry, investigation, hearing, or proceeding in any part of California [Lab. Code § 130]. The WCAB must issue subpoenas [see § 577.410] and subpoenas duces tecum [see § 577.411] on request in accordance with the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1985 and 1987.5 and Gov. Code § 68097.1 [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10530]. Subpoenas and subpoenas duces tecum must be on forms prescribed and approved by the WCAB, and for injuries occurring on or after January 1, 1990, must contain, in addition to the requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 1985, an affidavit that a claim form has been duly filed pursuant to Lab. Code § 5401(d) [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10530]. A notice to appear or produce in lieu of a subpoena or subpoena duces tecum in accordance with Code Civ. Proc. § 1987 is, however, permissible [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10532]. For forms of notices to appear or produce that may be adapted for use in workers' compensation proceedings, see Ch. 535, Subpoena .

[2] Recordings and Reproductions of Destroyed Originals

If records or other documentary evidence have been recorded or reproduced using the methods described in Evid. Code § 1551 (lost or destroyed writings) and the original records destroyed, the film, legible print, or electronic recording must be produced in response to a subpoena duces tecum [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10534].

[3] Service on Medical Witness

A subpoena requiring the appearance of a medical witness must be served not less than 10 days before the time the witness is required to appear and testify [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10537].

[4] Personal Records

Any party who subpoenas any records in connection with a workers' compensation proceeding must, concurrently with the service of the subpoena on the person who has possession of the records, send a copy of the subpoena to all parties of record in the proceeding [Lab. Code § 4055.2].

[5] Employment Records

Any party who subpoenas employment records of an employee which are maintained by his or her current or former employer must notify the employee by delivering a copy of the subpoena, the affidavit supporting the issuance of the subpoena, and a specified notice that the records are being subpoenaed [Code Civ. Proc. § 1985.6].

[6] Records, Files, and Proceedings of WCAB

The records, files, and proceedings of the WCAB must not be taken from its offices either by informal request or in response to a subpoena duces tecum or any order issued out of any other court or tribunal. Except as precluded by Civ. Code § 1798.24 (disclosure of information under Information Practices Act of 1977) or Gov. Code § 6254 (exemption from disclosure of particular records), certified copies of portions of the records desired by litigants will be delivered on payment of the fees as provided in the Rules of the Administrative Director. [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10322].

[7] Judicial Enforcement

[a] Petition to Compel

If a witness refuses to obey a subpoena issued by the WCAB or a WCJ, the WCAB or the WCJ before whom the testimony is to be given or produced may petition the superior court of the county in which the proceeding is pending for an order compelling the witness to attend and testify or produce the papers before the WCAB [Lab. Code § 132].

The petition must set forth the following:

- Due notice was given of the time and place of attendance of the witness, or the production of the papers;
- The witness was subpoenaed in the prescribed manner; and
- The witness failed and refused to obey the subpoena, or refused to answer questions propounded to him or her in the course of the proceeding.

The court will then issue an order directing the witness to appear before the court at a time (not more than 10 days from the date of the order) and place fixed in the order and show cause why he or she has not complied with the subpoena. A copy of the order must be served on the witness [Lab. Code § 132].

[b] WCAB's Action on Petition to Compel

If it appears to the court that the subpoena was regularly issued and that the witness was legally bound to comply with it, the court will enter an order that the witness appear before the WCAB or the WCJ at a time and place fixed in the order, and testify or produce the required papers, and on failure to obey the order, the witness will be treated as in contempt of court [Lab. Code § 132].

The foregoing remedy is cumulative and does not impair or interfere with the power of the WCAB or its members to enforce the attendance of witnesses and the production of papers, and to punish for contempt in the same manner and to the same extent as courts of record [Lab. Code § 132; see discussion under § 577.12[3][b]].

§ 577.148 Witness Fees

A witness who appears by order of the WCAB, any of its members, or a WCJ is entitled to receive, if demanded, the same fee and mileage allowed by law to a witness in civil cases [Lab. Code § 131]. The fees allowed a witness in civil cases are set forth in Gov. Code § 68093 and Evid. Code § 1563. Payment of the fee is governed by Lab. Code § 131. The fee required to be paid medical examiners appointed by the WCAB or agreed to by the parties when subpoenaed for cross examination is set forth in 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10536.

§ 577.149 Depositions

[1] In General

In any investigation or hearing before the WCAB, the WCAB, a WCJ, or any party may require the deposition of witnesses residing in or outside of California to be taken in the manner prescribed for like depositions in superior court civil actions, and, to that end, attendance of witnesses and the production of records may be required. Depositions may be taken outside California before any officer authorized to administer oaths [Lab. Code § 5710(a)]. The manner of taking depositions in civil actions is set forth in Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2025.010-2025.620. For a discussion of these provisions and forms that may be adapted for use in workers' compensation proceedings, see Ch. 193, Discovery: Depositions .

[2] Costs and Fees

If the employer or its insurance carrier requests that a deposition be taken of an injured employee or any person claiming benefits as a dependent of an injured employee, the deponent is entitled to receive the following, in addition to all other benefits [Lab. Code § 5710(b)]:

- All reasonable expenses of transportation, meals, and lodging incident to the deposition;
- Reimbursement for any loss of wages incurred during attendance at the deposition;
- A copy of the transcript of the deposition without cost;
- A reasonable allowance for attorney's fees for the deponent, if represented by an attorney licensed by the State Bar of California; and
- A reasonable allowance for interpreter's fees for the deponent if interpretation services are needed and provided by a language interpreter certified or deemed certified under Gov. Code §§ 11513

(inoperative 7/1/95 and repealed 1/1/96 per sunset legislation in Stats. 1993, ch. 701) or 68566 [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9795.3(a)(3)].

The attorney's fee referred to in above is allowed at the discretion of the WCAB, which fixes the amount of the fee. The fee must be paid by the employer or the employer's insurer [Lab. Code § 5710(b)]. A non-attorney hearing representative who represents an employee at a deposition under the supervision of a licensed attorney may receive attorney's fees if the hearing representative's qualifications and the extent of the attorney's supervision is documented. The fees, however, should be awarded at a lower hourly rate than those awarded to licensed attorneys [99 Cents Only Stores v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2000) 80 Cal. App. 4th 644, 649-651, 95 Cal. Rptr. 2d 569] .

§ 577.150 Sexual Harassment or Assault Cases

For injuries occurring on or after January 1, 1994 arising out of alleged conduct constituting sexual harassment, sexual assault, or sexual battery, any party seeking discovery concerning the applicant's sexual conduct with any person other than the defendant, whether consensual or nonconsensual or prior or subsequent to the alleged act complained of, must establish specific facts showing good cause for the discovery [Lab. Code § 3208.4]. These facts must be established on a noticed motion to the WCAB, and may not be made or considered at an ex parte hearing [Lab. Code § 3208.4].

The procedures set forth in Evid. Code § 783 must be followed if evidence of the applicant's sexual conduct is offered to attack his or her credibility [Lab. Code § 3208.4]. Opinion evidence, evidence of reputation, and evidence of specific instances of the applicant's sexual conduct with any person other than the defendant, is not admissible by the defendant to prove consent by or the absence of injury to the applicant, unless the injury alleged by the applicant is in the nature of loss of consortium [*Lab. X rays may not be transmitted to the WCAB except under a specific order directing their production [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10608(f)]. On order of the WCAB or a WCJ, a party must forthwith transmit all X rays to the person designated in the order [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10618]. Additionally, on reasonable request of a party, X rays in the possession or subject to the control of an adverse party or lien claimant must be made available for examination by the requesting party or persons designated by that party at a time or place convenient to the persons to make the examination [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10618; see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10622 (penalty for refusing or preventing examination of X ray)].

X rays may be subpoenaed only when they are relevant to pending issues and there is a present and bona fide intent to offer them in evidence. X rays produced in violation of this provision will be ordered returned to their original custodian at the expense of the party causing them to be produced [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10618].

§ 577.154 Prehearing Motions

The WCJ to whom the case has been assigned may issue interim and interlocutory orders necessary to the adjudication of the case [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10348]. Requests for orders are made by petition, the caption of which must contain the title and number of the case and indicate the type of relief sought [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10450]. As a matter of practice, however, motions before trial are frequently in the form of letter requests.

If the particular motion involves a controversy between the parties, the WCJ may wait until the hearing to grant or deny the interlocutory order. Interlocutory orders are entered on the minutes of the hearing and become the order of the WCAB when they are filed [8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10566(c), 10570].

§ 577.155 Dismissals

[1] In General

Except as provided in 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10562 (failure to appear) and 10582 (inactive cases), and unless good cause to the contrary appears, orders of dismissal of claim forms for injuries occurring on or after January 1, 1990, and before January 1, 1994, and orders of dismissal of applications for adjudication for injuries occurring before January 1, 1990, or on or after January 1, 1994, must be issued forthwith if requested by the employee [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10780]. All other orders of dismissal of applications for adjudication for injuries occurring before January 1, 1990, or on or after January 1, 1994, must be issued only after service of a notice of intention, allowing at least 15 days for the adverse parties to show good cause to the contrary, and not by an order with a clause rendering the order null and void if an objection showing good cause is filed [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10780].

For a petition for dismissal form, see § 577.453[1]. For a request for dismissal by the employee form, see § 577.452[1]. For discussion of mandatory settlement conferences generally, see § 577.157[1].

[2] Failure to Comply With Notice Requirement

Failure to comply with the 15-day notice requirement deprives the adverse parties of an adequate opportunity to present their objections and violates their due process rights; thus, any order of dismissal entered by a workers' compensation judge who fails to comply with the notice requirement must be vacated [Fortich v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 1449, 1450-1454, 285 Cal. Rptr. 222] .

[3] Grounds for Dismissal

An application may be dismissed, for example, by the WCAB after notice and opportunity to be heard as follows:

- When the applicant was served with a notice of trial but failed to appear [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10562];

- When the application shows on its face that the applicant is not entitled to compensation [Lab. Code § 5507 (discussed in § 577.83[1][d])];

- With respect to proceedings relating to injuries occurring before January 1, 1990, or on or after January 1, 1994, on the WCAB's own motion or on request of an interested party when the case has not been timely activated [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10582 (discussed in § 577.143[2])]; and

- When a party who has been served with notice of a mandatory settlement conference pursuant to Lab. Code § 5502(e) fails to appear at the conference [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10562; see also discussion in § 577.157[5]].

§ 577.156 Compelling Medical Examination or Autopsy

An employee is required, on the written request of his or her employer, to submit at reasonable intervals to examination by a practicing physician, provided and paid for by the employer, and to submit to examination at reasonable intervals by any physician selected by the Administrative Director of the Division of Workers' Compensation, the WCAB, or a WCJ [Lab. Code § 4050]. If the employee, after written request of the employer, fails or refuses to submit to or obstructs in any way the examination, his or her right to begin or maintain a workers' compensation proceeding is suspended [Lab. Code § 4053]. If the employee fails or refuses to submit to or obstructs in any way the examination after direction by the WCAB or a referee of the board, his or her right to disability payments accruing during the period of refusal or obstruction is barred [Lab. Code § 4054]. For a form of petition for an order to compel an employee to submit to a medical examination, see § 577.412[1].

An autopsy on the body of a deceased employee who dies as a result of industrial injuries may be ordered by the WCAB, subject to the consent of the dependents who have custody of the body [Lab. Code §§ 5706, 5707]. If the dependents, or a majority of them, having the custody of the body refuse to allow the autopsy, it shall not be performed. In such a case, on the hearing of any application for compensation, there is a disputable presumption that the injury or death was not due to causes entitling the claimants to death benefits under the workers' compensation law [Lab. Code § 5707]. For a form of petition for an order directing an exhumation and autopsy, see § 577.413[1].

§ 577.157 Settlement Conference

[1] When Required

For all applications filed on and after January 1, 1991 (regardless of the date of injury), a mandatory settlement conference must be conducted not less than 10 nor more than 30 days after the filing of the declaration of readiness to proceed [Lab. Code § 5502(e)(1)].

A priority conference must be set upon the filing of a declaration of readiness requesting a priority conference that shows that the applicant is represented by an attorney and that the issues in dispute include employment and/or injury arising out of and in the course of employment [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10254(a)]. Upon a showing of good cause, a WCJ may continue the matter to a status conference. At each priority or status conference, the parties must be prepared to set the matter for trial or to provide a plan to complete discovery [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10254(b)]. To the extent possible, all priority and status conferences in a case are to be conducted by the same WCJ. When discovery is complete, or when the WCJ determines that the parties have had sufficient time to complete reasonable discovery, the case must be set for trial as expeditiously as possible [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10254(c)].

[2] Continuances

Continuances of settlement conferences are not favored, but may be granted by a WCJ on any terms as are just on a showing of good cause [Lab. Code § 5502.5]. When determining a request for a continuance, the WCJ will take into consideration the complexity of the issues, the diligence of the parties, and the prejudice incurred on the part of any party as a result of granting or denying a continuance [Lab. Code § 5502.5].

[3] Qualifications of Referee

The settlement conference must be conducted by a workers' compensation judge or by a referee who is eligible to be either a WCJ or an arbitrator [Lab. Code § 5502(e)(2); see Lab. Code §§ 123.5(a) (qualifications of WCJs), 5270.5 (qualifications of arbitrators)]. Settlement conference referees are employed by the administrative director and are supervised in the performance of their judicial duties by the presiding workers' compensation judge [see Lab. Code § 5502(e)(2)].

[4] Conference Statement; Discovery; and Evidence

If the claim is not resolved at the mandatory settlement conference, the parties must file a pretrial conference statement (see §§ 577.491[1], 577.492[1]) noting the specific issues in dispute, each party's proposed permanent disability rating, and listing the exhibits, and disclosing witnesses. Discovery closes on the date of the conference [Lab. Code § 5502(e)(3)]. Lab. Code § 5502(e)(3) further provides that "[e]vidence not disclosed or obtained thereafter shall not be admissible unless the proponent of the evidence can demonstrate that it was not available or could not have been discovered by the exercise of due diligence prior to the settlement conference." Although the preceding language is not entirely clear, this restriction on admissibility apparently refers to evidence that was not disclosed at the settlement conference or that was discovered after the conference.

The court of appeal has held admissible at trial the testimony of a vocational rehabilitation counselor developed as a consequence of meetings between the counselor and the injured employee, all of which took place following closure of discovery at the mandatory settlement conference. At the conference, the employee had identified the counselor as an expert trial witness. The court held that this was sufficient to comply with Lab. Code § 5502, stating that "discovery," as used in the statute, referred to pretrial processes undertaken to obtain information about an opposing party's case in preparation for trial, not to the collection and organization of information about one's own case. Thus, the statutory discovery restriction was not implicated in the present case [Grupe Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 977, 985-988, 34 Cal. Rptr. 3d 98] .

[5] Appearance Required at Conference

All parties and lien claimants must appear at all hearings, except as provided below [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10240(a)]:

> 1. When injury arising out of and in the course of employment is at issue, lien claimants not defined as a party [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10210(y)(3) ("party" means: (1) person claiming to be injured employee or dependent of injured employee; (2) defendant; or (3) lien claimant when either (A) underlying case of injured employee or employee's dependent has been resolved or (B) injured employee or employee's dependent chooses not to proceed with his, her, or their case)] are not required to appear at the mandatory settlement conference or trial, unless otherwise ordered by the WCJ.
> 2. When liability for the claim has been accepted, lien claimants not defined as a party, with a lien claim of $25,000 or more, must appear or have a representative appear at the mandatory settlement conference or lien conference, unless the appearance is excused by the WCJ.
> 3. Lien claimants not defined as a party, with liens of less than $25,000, must be available by telephone with settlement authority and must notify defendant(s) of the telephone number at which the defendant may reach them during the mandatory settlement conference or lien conference, although the WCJ may order the appearance of lien claimants not defined as a party, with liens of less than $25,000, at a mandatory settlement conference or lien conference.
> 4. All lien claimants must appear at trial at which their lien(s) is an issue to be decided.

All parties must have a person available with settlement authority at the mandatory settlement conference or lien conference, although the person with settlement authority need not be present if an attorney or representative who is present can obtain immediate authority by telephone [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10240(b)].

Unless the notice otherwise provides, the applicant must be present at a mandatory settlement conference, as provided in Lab. Code § 5502(e) [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10240(c)].

Appearance at a hearing not covered by this rule is at the discretion of the WCJ [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10240(d)].

If a party served with notice of a mandatory settlement conference fails to appear at the conference, the workers' compensation judge may dismiss the application for adjudication after issuing 10 days' notice of intention to dismiss [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10562]. Alternatively, the workers' compensation judge may close discovery and forward the case to the presiding workers' compensation judge to set the case for trial [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10562]. If a party, after notice, fails to appear at a conference, and on a showing of good cause for the failure to appear, the workers' compensation judge may take the case off calendar or may continue the case to a date certain [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10562].

When a lien claimant served with notice of a conference fails to appear at the conference in person or by attorney or representative, and fails to have a person with settlement authority available by telephone, the workers' compensation judge may dismiss the lien claim after issuing a 10-day notice of intention to dismiss with or without prejudice, or may close discovery and forward the case to the presiding worker's compensation judge to set for trial [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10562(d)].

[6] Conduct of Mandatory Conference

[a] In General

At the conference, the workers' compensation judge has authority to resolve the dispute, including the authority to inquire into the adequacy and completeness, including provision for lien claims, of compromise and release agreements or stipulations with request for award or orders, and to issue orders approving compromise and release agreements or awards or orders based on approved stipulations [Lab. Code § 5502(e)(2); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10353(a)]. The workers' compensation judge may also make orders and rulings regarding admission of evidence and discovery matters, including admission of offers of proof and stipulations of testimony when appropriate and necessary for resolution of the dispute, and may submit and decide the dispute on the record pursuant to the agreement of the parties. However, the workers' compensation judge may not hear sworn testimony at any conference [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10353(a)].

Subject to the provisions of Lab. Code § 5502(e)(1) (time limitations for settlement conference), the workers' compensation judge may temporarily adjourn a conference to a time certain to facilitate a specific resolution of the dispute [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10353(b)].

[b] Pre-Trial Statement

If the dispute cannot be resolved, the parties must file, at the mandatory settlement conference, a joint pretrial statement setting forth the issues and stipulations for trial, witnesses, exhibits, and the proposed permanent disability rating [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10353(c)]. The parties may modify their proposed ratings only when evidence, relevant to the proposed ratings, and disclosed or obtained after the mandatory settlement conference, becomes admissible under Lab. Code § 5502(e)(3) [Lab. Code § 5502(e)(2); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10353(c)].

[c] Summary of Proceedings

A summary of the conference proceedings, including the joint pretrial statement and the disposition, must be filed by the workers' compensation judge in the record of the proceedings on a form prescribed and approved by the WCAB and must be served on the parties [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10353(c)].

[7] Hearing Date When Dispute Unresolved by Settlement Conference

If the dispute is not resolved, the regular hearing must be held within 75 days after the declaration of readiness to proceed was filed [Lab. Code § 5502(e)(1)].

§ 577.158 Walk-Through Documents

A "walk-through" document is a document that is presented to a WCJ for immediate action. Notwithstanding the provisions of 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10250 (relating to the filing of declarations of readiness) and 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10544 (relating to notices of hearing), the following provisions govern walk-through documents [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10280(a)].

Each district office will have a designee of the Presiding WCJ available to assign walk-through cases from 8:00 a.m. to 11:00 a.m. and 1:00 p.m. to 4:00 p.m. on court days [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10280(b)].

The following documents may be submitted on a walk-through basis [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10280(c)]:

1. Compromise and releases.

2. Stipulations with request for award.

3. Petitions for attorney's fees for representation of the applicant in vocational rehabilitation.

4. Petitions for attorney's fees for representation of the applicant at a deposition.

5. Petitions to compel attendance at a medical examination or deposition.

The following procedures are to be followed for filing walk-through documents [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10280(d)]:

1. A walk-through settlement document (i.e., a compromise and release or a stipulations with request for award), and all supporting medical reports and other supporting documents not previously filed, must be filed directly with the WCJ at the date and time of the walk-through. The party presenting the walk-through settlement must use the appropriate form, document cover sheet, and document separator sheet. Permanent and stationary medical or medical-legal reports must be indicated as such. In addition, each walk-through settlement document (i.e., a compromise and release or a stipulations with request for award) must be accompanied by a proof of service showing that the settlement document was served on all other parties to the settlement, on any defendant not executing the settlement who may be liable for the payment of additional compensation, and on all lien claimants whose liens have not been resolved. A case opening settlement document being submitted for a walk-through must be submitted no later than noon of the court day before any action on the walk-through, and must be designated as a walk-through document. All documents in support of the settlement document must be submitted at the walk-through with the assigned WCJ.

2. A walk-through petition (i.e., a petition for vocational rehabilitation attorney's fees, a petition for deposition attorney's fees, or a petition to compel attendance at a medical examination or deposition) and all other documents relating to the walk-through petition, including any supporting documentation, must be filed directly with the WCJ at the date and time of the walk-through. The party presenting the walk-through petition must use the appropriate form, document cover sheet, and document separator. In addition, at the date and time of the walk-through, the party filing the walk-through petition must file a proof of service directly to the WCJ, as follows:

A. For a petition for attorney's fees for representation of the applicant in vocational rehabilitation, a proof of service showing service on the injured worker and the defendant alleged to be liable for paying the fees.

B. For a petition for attorney's fees for representation of the applicant at a deposition, a proof of service showing service on the injured worker and the defendant alleged to be liable for paying the fees.

C. For a petition to compel attendance at a medical examination or deposition, a proof of service showing service on the injured worker, the injured worker's attorney, and all defendants.

When appearing for the walk-through proceeding, the party filing the walk-through document must appear before the district office staff person designated by the Presiding WCJ to assign the walk-through document to a WCJ. The filing party must then appear before the assigned judge. If the assigned judge is unavailable for any reason, the filing party must then proceed to the Presiding WCJ for possible reassignment to another judge [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10280(e)].

A WCJ who is presented with a walk-through settlement document will approve it, disapprove it, suspend action on it, or accept it for later review and action. If a WCJ is presented with so many walk-through settlement documents that review of them will interfere with the cases scheduled before him or her for hearing, the judge may refer the walk-through settlement to the Presiding WCJ for possible reassignment to another WCJ [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10280(f)].

A walk-through document may be acted on only by a WCJ at the district office that has venue. If an injured worker has existing cases at two or more district offices that have venue, a walk-through document may be filed at any office having venue over an existing case that is a subject of the walk-through document. An existing case is a case that has been filed and assigned a case number prior to the filing of the walk-through document [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10280(g)].

A walk-through document may be acted on by any WCJ except as follows [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10280(h)]:

1. If a judge has taken testimony, any walk-through document in that case must be acted on by the judge who took testimony if that judge works at the district office to which the case is assigned, unless the presiding judge allows it to be acted on by another judge.

2. If a judge has reviewed a document and declined to approve it, a walk-through document in that case must be acted on by the same judge, if that judge works at the district office to which the case is assigned, unless the presiding judge allows it to be acted on by another judge.

A WCJ who is presented with a walk-through petition for attorney's fees or petition to compel attendance must issue an order in compliance with 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10349 [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10280(i)].

§ 577.159 Emergency Petitions for Stay

A party may present to the Presiding WCJ of the district office having venue a petition to stay an action by another party pending a hearing [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10281(a)].

Each district office will have a designee of the Presiding WCJ available to assign petitions for stay from 8:00 a.m. to 11:00 a.m. and 1:00 p.m. to 4:00 p.m. on court days [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10281(b)].

A party who walks through a petition to stay an action must provide notice to the opposing party or parties no later than 10:00 a.m. of the immediately preceding court day. This notice must (1) state with specificity the nature of the relief to be requested by the petition to stay; and (2) state the date, time, and place that the petition to stay will be presented. A copy of the petition to stay must be attached to the notice. The notice may be given by either fax or e-mail. If notice by fax or e-mail fails, or if an opposing party's fax number or e-mail address are unknown, notice must be given in the manner best calculated to expeditiously and timely advise the opposing party of the information set forth in this paragraph, including notice by phone or by overnight mail or delivery service. First-class mail may not be used for notice of a petition to stay an action [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10281(c)].

A petition to stay an action must be accompanied by a declaration regarding notice, stating under penalty of perjury (1) the notice given, including the date, time, manner, and name of the party informed; (2) the relief sought; and (3) whether opposition is expected. In addition, if the petitioner was unable to give timely notice to the opposing party, the declaration under penalty of perjury also must state that the petitioner in good faith attempted to inform the opposing party but was unable to do so, specifying the efforts made to inform the opposing party [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10281(d)].

Upon the receipt of a proper petition to stay an action, the Presiding WCJ or his or her designee must, in his or her discretion, either (1) deny the petition; (2) grant a temporary stay and set the petition for a formal hearing; or (3) set the petition for a formal hearing, without either denying the petition or granting a temporary stay [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10281(e)].

9. Hearings

51-577 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 577.172

§ 577.172 Time for Hearing

[1] In General

A hearing must be held not less than 10 days or more than 60 days after the date the declaration of readiness to proceed is filed, unless the issue or issues concerned require an expedited hearing or settlement conference pursuant to Lab. Code § 5502(b), (c), (e) [Lab. Code § 5502(a)]. When a claim form has been filed for an injury occurring between January 1, 1990, and January 1, 1994, an application for adjudication must accompany the declaration of readiness to proceed [Lab. Code § 5502(a)]. If the notice of hearing is served by publication, the hearing date may be fixed at more than 30 days from the date the application was filed [Lab. Code § 5316]. For a discussion of expedited hearings, see [3], below. For a discussion of settlement conferences, see § 577.157.

The hearing provisions set forth in Labor Code § 5502 do not apply in cases involving the Director of the Department of Industrial Relations in his or her capacity as administrator of the Uninsured Employers Benefits Trust Fund, unless proof of service, as specified in Labor Code § 3716(d)(1), has been filed with the WCAB and provided to the Director, valid jurisdiction has been established over the employer, and the Fund has been joined [Lab. Code § 5502(f)]. The provisions in Lab. Code § 5502 apply irrespective of the date of injury [Lab. Code § 5502(g)].

[2] Continuances

Continuances of hearings or expedited hearings (discussed under [3], below) are not favored, but may be granted by a WCJ on any terms as are just on a showing of good cause [Lab. Code § 5502.5; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10243]. When determining a request for a continuance, the WCJ will take into consideration the complexity of the issues, the diligence of the parties, and the prejudice incurred on the part of any party as a result of granting or denying a continuance [Lab. Code § 5502.5].

According to the DWC/WCAB Policy & Procedural Manual, a conflict between a scheduled hearing and an attorney's court appearance elsewhere will not constitute good cause for a continuance unless the attorney provides notice of the conflict within 10 days, permitting another case to be substituted. Likewise, failure to be prepared, failure to complete discovery, failure to complete medical evaluations despite the allowance of reasonable time to do so, and failure to have the requisite settlement authority do not constitute good cause to continue a case [DWC/WCAB Policy & Procedural Manual Index No. 6.7.4.1].

Cases that cannot be heard by the assigned WCJ because the WCJ is engaged in another trial will not automatically be continued, but will be referred to the Presiding Judge for possible reassignment to another WCJ who has time to hear the case that day. However, upon agreement, a case can be continued to another day when the originally assigned WCJ will be available, provided the order is served on all parties and representatives [DWC/WCAB Policy & Procedural Manual Index No. 6.7.4.1].

[3] Expedited Hearing Procedure

The Court Administrator has established, as required by Lab. Code § 5502(b), a uniform priority calendar for issues requiring an expedited hearing and decision. In cases in which expedited hearing procedures apply, the hearing must be held, and a determination as to the rights of the parties made and filed, within 30 days after the declaration of readiness to proceed is filed [Lab. Code § 5502(b)].

When injury to any part or parts of the body is accepted as compensable by the employer, a party is entitled to an expedited priority hearing and decision upon the filing of an application for adjudication of claim and a declaration of readiness to proceed pursuant to 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10250 establishing a bona fide, good faith dispute as to any of the following [Lab Code § 5502(b); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10252(a); see § 577.490 (required form for declaration of readiness to proceed to expedited hearing (trial))]:

1. The employee's entitlement to medical treatment pursuant to Lab. Code § 4600.

2. The employee's entitlement to, or the amount of, temporary disability indemnity payments.

3. The employee's entitlement to vocational rehabilitation services, or the termination of an employer's liability to provide these services to an employee.

4. The employee's entitlement to compensation from one or more responsible employers when two or more employers dispute liability as among themselves.

An expedited hearing may be set upon request when injury to any part or parts of the body is accepted as compensable by the employer and the issues include medical treatment or temporary disability for a disputed body part or parts [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10252(b)].

A WCJ assigned to a case involving a disputed body part or parts may redesignate the expedited hearing as a mandatory settlement conference, receive a pretrial conference statement pursuant to Lab. Code § 5502(e)(3), close discovery, and schedule the case for trial on the issues presented, if the WCJ determines, in consultation with the Presiding WCJ, that the case is not appropriate for expedited determination [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10252(c)].

Grounds for the redesignation of an expedited hearing includes, but is not limited to, cases in which the direct and cross-examination of the applicant will be prolonged, or in which there are multiple witnesses who will offer extensive testimony [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10252(d)].

The parties are expected to submit for decision all matters properly in issue at a single trial and to produce all necessary evidence, including witnesses, documents, medical reports, payroll statements, and all other matters considered essential in the proof of a party's claim or defense [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10252(e)].

The Court Administrator has established a priority conference calendar for cases in which the employee is represented by an attorney and the issues in dispute are employment or injury arising out of employment or in the course of employment. The conference is to be conducted by a workers' compensation judge within 30 days after the declaration of readiness to proceed. If the dispute cannot be resolved at the conference, a trial will be set as expeditiously as possible, unless good cause is shown why discovery is not complete, in which case status conferences are to be held at regular intervals. The case will be set for trial when discovery is complete or the workers' compensation judge determines that the parties have had sufficient time in which to complete reasonable discovery. A determination as to the right of the parties must be made and filed within 30 days after the trial [Lab. Code § 5502(c); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10254].

§ 577.173 Notice of Hearing and Failure to Appear

[1] Notice

The WCAB generally serves notice of the time and place of the hearing on all parties and lien claimants and their attorneys or other agents of record by mail at their addresses of record or by personal service [see Lab. Code §§ 5316, 5504; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10544]. However, the WCAB may, in its discretion, designate a party or lien claimant to make service of notice of the time and place of hearing [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10500].

The notice must also include a statement explaining the right to have an interpreter present, at the claim's administrator's expense, if the applicant does not proficiently speak or understand English [8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 9795.2, 9795.3(a)(4)]. The WCAB must serve the notice not less than 10 days before the date of hearing, except when notice is waived, a different time is expressly agreed to by all parties and concurred in by the WCAB, or the proceedings involve a claim against the Subsequent Injuries Benefits Trust Fund [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10544].

[2] Failure to Appear

When a party served with notice of trial fails to appear at trial either in person or by attorney or representative, the WCAB may dismiss the application for adjudication after issuing 10 days' notice of intention to dismiss, or may hear evidence and, after service of minutes of hearing and summary of evidence, which must include a 10-day notice of intention to submit, make decision that is just and proper [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10562]. If a party, after notice, fails to appear at a trial, and on a showing of good cause for the failure to appear, the workers' compensation judge may take the case off calendar or may continue the case to a date certain [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10562].

When a lien claimant served with notice of a trial fails to appear, the workers' compensation judge may dismiss the lien claim after issuing a 10-day notice of intention to dismiss with or without prejudice, or may hear the evidence and, after service of the minutes of hearing and summary of evidence that must include a 10-day notice of intention to submit, make a decision that is just and proper, or may defer the issue of the lien and submit the case on the remaining issues [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10562(e)]. If the workers' compensation judge defers a lien issue, upon the issuance of his or her decision on the remaining issues, the judge must issue a 10-day notice of intention to order payment of the lien in full or in part, or issue a 10-day notice of intention to disallow the lien, or continue the lien issue to a lien conference [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10562(f)].

However, a WCJ may order that the issues in a case be bifurcated and tried separately, upon a showing of good cause [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10560].

§ 577.175 Hearings in Cases Involving Uninsured Employers Benefits Trust Fund, Subsequent Injuries Benefits Trust Fund, or Death Without Dependents

Cases involving the Uninsured Employers Benefits Trust Fund or the Subsequent Injuries Benefits Trust Fund as a party, or involving death without dependents, may only be heard for conference, mandatory settlement conference, standby conference, or rating calendar at the district WCAB office located in San Francisco, Los Angeles, Van Nuys, Anaheim, Sacramento, or San Diego, except for good cause shown and with the Administrative Director's consent [Lab. Code § 3714(a)]. For these cases,the presiding judge of the WCAB located in the cities specified may permit a conference, in which no testimony will be taken, to be conducted by telephone conference call among the parties and their attorneys of record who do not reside in the county in which the WCAB is located [Lab. Code § 3714(b)].

Any filings of documents necessary for the proceedings may be served on the WCAB and the parties by facsimile machine, but, if so served, must also be served, as required by regulation, on the WCAB and the parties within five working days [Lab. Code § 3714(c)]. These provisions are effective for a period of two years commencing on the date the Administrative Director certifies that the rearrangement of judicial resources and conference call facilities required by these provisions are in place [Lab. Code § 3714(d)].

§ 577.176 Qualified Interpreters

[1] Definition

For purposes of these requirements, "qualified interpreter" means a language interpreter certified, or deemed certified, pursuant to Article 8 (commencing with Section 11435.05) of Chapter 4.5 of Part 1 of Division 3 of Title 2 of, or Gov. Code § 68566 [Lab. Code §§ 4600, 5811(b); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9795.1(f)].

[2] Entitlement

When, at the request of the employer, the employer's insurer, the administrative director, the WCAB, or a workers' compensation judge, an employee submits to an examination by a physician and the employee does not proficiently speak or understand the English language, he or she is entitled to the services of a qualified interpreter in accordance with conditions and a fee schedule prescribed by the Administrative Director [Lab. Code § 4600(f); see former 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9795.3(b) (fees for interpreter services provided before April 1, 1997); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9795.3 (operative December 30, 1996) (fees for interpreter services provided on or after April 1, 1997); see also 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9795.4(c)]. These services must be provided by the employer [Lab. Code § 4600(f)].

The notice of a hearing, deposition, or other setting must include a statement explaining the employee's right to have an interpreter present if he or she does not proficiently speak or understand English. When a party is designated to serve notice, it is that party's responsibility to include the statement in the notice [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9795.2].

[3] Fees

The employer's claims administrator may also be required to pay for interpreter fees in settings determined by the WCAB to be reasonable and necessary to determine the validity and extent of injury to an employee [see Lab. Code § 5811(b)]. Such settings specifically include depositions ofinjured employees and dependents seeking benefits, appeals board hearings, arbitrations, formal and informal rehabilitation conferences, conferences with information and assistance officers to assist in resolving disputes between injured employees and claims administrators, and comprehensive medical-legal evaluations including any follow-up or supplemental evaluations [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9795.3(a)].

It is the responsibility of any party producing a witness requiring an interpreter to arrange for the presence of a qualified interpreter [Lab. Code § 5811(b)]. For injuries occurring before January 1, 1994, interpreter fees that are reasonably, actually, and necessarily incurred must be allowed as a cost, provided they are in accordance with the Administrative Director's fee schedule [Lab. Code § 5811(b); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10564]. Recovery must be allowed in the amount charged by the interpreter unless proof of unreasonableness is entered by the party contesting the reasonableness of the charge, or the charge is manifestly unreasonable [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10564]. For injuries occurring on or after January 1, 1994, interpreter's fees that are reasonably, actually, and necessarily incurred must be allowed as provided by Lab. Code §§ 4600, 5710, and 5811, as amended July 16, 1993 [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10564]. Interpreter's fees as defined in Lab. Code § 4620, which are reasonably, actually, and necessarily incurred as provided in Lab. Code § 4621, must be allowed in accordance with the Administrative Director's fee schedule [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10564; see former 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9795.3(b), (d) (applicable to interpreter services provided before April 1, 1997); 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 9795.3(b), (d) (operative December 30, 1996) (fees for interpreter services provided on or after April 1, 1997); 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 9795.3(c), (e); *see also 8 Cal. § 577.176A Devices to Assist the Hearing Impaired

In any administrative hearing of a public agency, when a party, witness, attorney, judicial employee, judge, juror, or other participant is hearing impaired, the individual who is hearing impaired, on his or her request, is to be provided with a functioning assistive listening system or a computer-aided transcription system. Any individual requiring this equipment must give advance notice of his or her need to the appropriate court or agency at the time the hearing is set or not later than five days before the hearing [Civ. Code § 54.8(a)]. "Individual who is hearing impaired" means an individual with a hearing loss, who, with sufficient amplification or a computer-aided transcription system, is able to fully participate in the proceeding [Civ. Code § 54.8(j)].

Assistive listening systems include, but are not limited to, special devices that transmit amplified speech by means of audio-induction loops, radio frequency systems (AM or FM), or infrared transmission. Personal receivers, headphones, and neck loops must be available on request by individuals who are hearing impaired [Civ. Code § 54.8(b)]. If a computer-aided transcription system is requested, sufficient display terminals must be provided to allow the individual who is hearing impaired to read the real-time transcript of the proceeding without difficulty [Civ. Code § 54.8(c)].

A sign must be posted in a prominent place indicating the availability of, and how to request, an assistive listening system and a computer-aided transcription system. Notice of the availability of the systems must be posted with notice of trials [Civ. Code § 54.8(d)].

In any administrative hearing of a public agency, in which the individual who is hearing impaired is a party, witness, attorney, judicial employee, judge, juror, or other participant, and has requested use of an assistive listening system or computer-aided transcription system, the proceedings are not to commence until the system is in place and functioning [Civ. Code § 54.8(i)]. In no case is this statute to be construed to prescribe a lesser standard of accessibility or usability than that provided by Title II of the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 and federal regulations adopted pursuant to that act [Civ. Code § 54.8(k)].

Oral testimony, objections, and rulings must be taken down in shorthand by a competent phonographic reporter, but, unless otherwise ordered by a commissioner, a deputy commissioner, or a presiding WCJ, testimony taken at the hearing will not be transcribed except on the request of a party accompanied by the prescribed fee [Lab. Code § 5708; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10740]. The manner of making the request and deposit of the fee, as well as the proscription against making photographic copies of a transcript from the board file except on payment of the amount prescribed by law for a copy of the transcript, are set forth in 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10740.

Stenographic reporters' notes or electronic sound recording of testimony must be retained for a period of six years after the taking of them and thereafter may be destroyed or otherwise disposed of [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10273(f)].

[1] Rules of Evidence

The WCAB and WCJs are not bound by the common law or statutory rules of evidence and procedure in conducting hearings and investigations, but may make inquiry, through oral testimony and records, in the manner that is best calculated to ascertain the substantial rights of the parties and carry out justly the spirit and provisions of the workers' compensation law [Lab. Code § 5708]. Consequently, no order, decision, award, or rule will be invalidated because of the admission into the record, and use as proof of any fact in dispute, of any evidence not admissible under the common law or statutory rules of evidence and procedure. Nor will an order, decision, award, or rule be invalidated by any informality in the manner of taking testimony [Lab. Code § 5709].

[2] Form of Evidence

Reports, publications, and other writings that may be received in evidence are listed in Lab. Code § 5703. The admissibility of certified copies of reports and records of any governmental agency in lieu of the originals is authorized by 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10604. The extent to which permanent disability evaluation reports constitute evidence is set forth in 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 9750 and 10602. Physicians' reports and waiver of the right to cross examine a physician on his or her report are governed by 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10606-10616 and 10622. Rules applicable to X rays are set forth in 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10618. Use of hospital and physicians' records are governed by 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10626, and the service of copies of documents, including videotapes, to be offered into evidence is governed by 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10601. The admissibility of optical image reproductions, photostatic, microfilm, microcard, miniature photographic, and other photographic copies or reproductions of writings preserved as business records is governed by 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10605. Similarly, the presumption of the accuracy of a printed representation of images stored on a video or digital medium, including the rules regarding attacks on and support of that presumption, are set forth in 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10605.

The filing of a document does not signify its receipt in evidence, and, except for the documents listed in 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10750 (discussed under § 577.182), only those documents that have been received in evidence will be included in the record of proceedings on the case [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10600].

[3] Procedure on Evidence Taken Without Notice

Transcripts or summaries of testimony taken without notice and copies of all reports and other matters added to the record, other than during the course of an open hearing, must be served on the parties to the proceeding. Unless it is otherwise expressly provided, the parties shall be allowed 10 days after service of such testimony and reports to produce evidence in explanation or rebuttal or to request further proceedings before the case will be deemed submitted for decision [see Lab. Code § 5704; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10580].

[4] Return of Exhibits

Any party filing an original document or other pieces of evidence pursuant to 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10603(a) (regarding oversized exhibits, diagnostic imagining, physical exhibits, and exhibits on media) must, at the time of filing, either (1) arrange for the return of the document or evidence, at the filing party's sole expense, at the conclusion of all proceedings and appeals, or (2) be deemed by not making such arrangements to have consented to destruction, without notice, of the document or other evidence at the conclusion of all proceedings and appeals [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10273(e)].

§ 577.179 Burden of Proof and Affirmative Defenses

[1] In General

The burden of proof rests on the party or lien claimant holding the affirmative of the issue [Lab. Code § 5705]. The following are affirmative defenses, and the burden of proof rests on the employer to establish them [Lab. Code § 5705]:

- The injured person was an independent contractor or otherwise excluded from the protection of the workers' compensation law, if there is proof that the injured person was at the time of injury actually performing service for the alleged employer [see Germann v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1981) 123 Cal. App. 3d 776, 781-782, 176 Cal. Rptr. 868 ; Johnson v. Workmen's Comp. Appeals Bd. (1974) 41 Cal. App. 3d 318, 321, 115 Cal. Rptr. 871 ; see also S.G. & Sons, Inc. v. Department of Industrial Relations (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 341, 349, 256 Cal. Rptr. 543, 769 P. 2d 399 ; discussion under § 577.22[3]].

- The injury was caused by the employee's intoxication by alcohol or unlawful use of a controlled substance as defined in Health & Safety Code § 11007 [see Lab. Code § 3600(a)(4) (injury not caused by intoxication or unlawful use of controlled substance is condition of compensation)].

- The injury was caused by the employee's willful misconduct [see Lab. Code § 4551 (compensation reduced if injury caused by employee's serious and willful misconduct)].

- The disability was aggravated by the employee's unreasonable conduct [see Lab. Code § 4056 (no compensation payable for disability aggravated by employee's unreasonable refusal to submit to medical treatment or surgery)].

- The employer was prejudiced by the employee's failure to give notice as required by Lab. Code §§ 5400 and 5401 (notice of injury or death), discussed under § 577.42[1].

[2] Preponderance of the Evidence

All parties are required to meet the evidentiary burden of proof on all issues by a preponderance of the evidence in order that all parties be considered equal before the law [Lab. Code § 3202.5; see also Lab. Code § 3202 (requiring that workers' compensation law be liberally construed in favor of injured workers)]. "Preponderance of the evidence" means that evidence that when weighed with that opposed to it, has more convincing force and the greater probability of truth. When weighing the evidence, the test is not the relative number of witnesses, but the relative convincing force of the evidence [Lab. Code § 3202.5; see Rogers v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1985) 172 Cal. App. 3d 1195, 1199, 218 Cal. Rptr. 662] .

[3] Proof of Industrial Causation--Reasonable Probability

The employee has the burden or proving the industrial causation of his or her injury by a "reasonable probability." This burden manifestly does not require the employee to prove causation by a scientific certainty. The WCAB is bound to uphold a claim in which the proof of industrial causation is reasonably probable, although not certain or convincing, and even though the exact causal mechanism is unclear or even unknown [Rosas v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 1692, 1700-1705, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 778] .

Code Reg. § 10566* [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10566]. The summary need not be filed, however, on waiver by the parties, or on issuance of a stipulated order, decision, or award [*8 Cal. 51-577 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 577.191

§ 577.191 Findings and Award, Order, or Decision

[1] Filing and Content

The WCAB or WCJ must, within 30 days after a case is submitted, make and file findings on all facts involved in the controversy along with an award, order, or decision stating the determination as to the rights of the parties [Lab. Code § 5313; see Industrial Indemnity Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1983) 145 Cal. App. 3d 480, 485, 193 Cal. Rptr. 471] . The 30-day period runs from the date of submission of the application for decision, and the provisions requiring the decision within the 30-day period are mandatory and not merely directive [Lab. Code § 5800.5]. Every order, decision, or award, other than an order merely appointing a trustee or guardian, must contain a determination of all issues presented for determination by the WCAB prior thereto and not theretofore determined. Any issue not so determined will be deemed decided adversely as to the party in whose interest the issue was raised [Lab. Code § 5815].

Orders, findings, decisions, and awards issued by a WCJ are deemed to be the orders, findings, decisions, and awards of the WCAB unless reconsideration is granted [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10348]. For a petition for certified copy of an award, see form in § 577.500[1].

[2] Summary of the Evidence

A summary of the evidence received and relied on and the reasons or grounds on which the determination was made, together with the findings, order, decision, or award, must be served on all parties to the proceedings [Lab. Code § 5313; see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10782]. Service may be made as provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 1010 et seq. (discussed in Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers), unless otherwise directed by the WCAB [Lab. Code § 5316].

In one case, the court of appeal held that it was mandatory for a WCJ to provide a summary of the trial evidence under Lab. Code § 5313 and 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10566 and that a failure to submit such a summary mandated that the matter be returned to the WCJ to prepare and submit one. The court found that the arbitrator in the case before it did not prepare a summary of the evidence and that arbitrators had the same duties and responsibilities as WCJs. The WCJ's summary of the evidence was a required document to accompany petitions for writ of review under Cal. Rules of Ct.,

Rule 8.494(a)(1)(B), because the court of appeal needed a summary to evaluate whether substantial evidence supported the Appeals Board's decision. Therefore, failure of the arbitrator to include a summary of the evidence required annulment of the Appeals Board decision that affirmed the arbitrator's findings on Lab. Code § 3366(a) issues, even absent the arbitrator's summary of the evidence, and remand of the matter to the arbitrator to prepare such a summary. Moreover, the Appeals Board's consideration of the existing evidence, absent a summary, was not justified, using any of three standards: the demurrer standard, the state of the decision standard, or the substantial compliance standard [Sharareh v. W.C.A.B. (2007) 156 Cal. App. 4th 189, 192-195, 67 Cal. Rptr. 3d 147] .

[3] Compensation Awarded

The WCAB in its award may fix and determine the total amount of compensation to be paid and specify the manner of payment, or may fix and determine the weekly disability payment to be made and order its payment during continuance of the disability [Lab. Code § 5801]. If it is proved that an injury has been suffered for which the employer would be liable to pay compensation had disability resulted from it, but it is not proved that any disability has resulted, the WCAB may, instead of dismissing the application, award nominal disability indemnity if it appears that disability is likely to result at a future time [Lab. Code § 5802].

[4] Filing Liens With WCAB

When an award is submitted to the WCAB for approval, the parties must file with the WCAB any liens served on the parties [Lab. Code § 4903.1(b)].

51-577 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 577.193

§ 577.193 Interest and Costs

All awards of the WCAB carry interest at the same rate as judgments in civil actions [Lab. Code § 5800; see Myers v. Workmen's Comp. Appeals Bd. (1971) 20 Cal. App. 3d 120, 122 n.1, 97 Cal. Rptr. 400 ; Myers v. Workmen's Comp. Appeals Bd. (1969) 2 Cal. App. 3d 621, 626, 83 Cal. Rptr. 427 ; see also Code Civ. Proc. § 685.010(a) (interest on judgments)]. Interest runs from the date the award is made and filed as to amounts that are payable forthwith and, with respect to installment payments, the date each installment becomes due and payable [Lab. Code § 5800].

With respect to an award of lost wages and benefits, the California Supreme Court has held that the WCAB may and must, when the criteria of Civ. Code § 3287 are met, add interest from the dates such wages and benefits would have become due had the employer not acted in violation of Lab. Code § 132a. The Court stated that although Lab. Code § 132a does not itself expressly authorize the addition of prejudgment interest to an award of backpay, Civ. Code § 3287 requires such interest on damages due on a particular date, including awards of backpay, when they are certain or capable of being made certain by calculation. The Court found that neither Lab. Code § 5800 nor any other provision of the Labor Code precluded the addition of interest to such an award. Moreover, the addition of interest would serve the remedial purpose of Lab. Code § 132a [Currie v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2001) 24 Cal. 4th 1109, 1119, 17 P.3d 749] .

Costs as between the parties may be allowed by the WCAB [Lab. Code § 5811(a)]. The court of appeal has held that the Appeals Board has discretion to award costs, pursuant to Lab. Code § 5811, for a vocational rehabilitation expert's report, regardless of whether the report is admissible. The court found that nothing in the language of that statute suggests that the Board's discretion is circumscribed by rules of admissibility. Inadmissible reports, the court pointed out, might be valuable in preparing for a hearing or to further settlement negotiations. Finally, the court stated that Costa v. Hardy Diagnostic [Costa v. Hardy Diagnostic (2007) 72 Cal. Comp. Cases 1492 (Appeals Board en banc opinion)] reflects a legislative policy to accord the Board discretion to evaluate whether the costs of a vocational rehabilitation consultant's report are reasonable and necessary, based on the facts of the case [Barr v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 163, 176, 179, 181, 78 Cal. Rptr. 3d 732] .

§ 577.194 Sanctions

[1] Bad Faith Actions or Tactics

With regard to all applications for adjudication that are filed on or after January 1, 1994 [see Lab. Code § 5813(c)], the WCAB may order a party, the party's attorney, or both, to pay any reasonable expenses, including attorney's fees and costs, incurred by another party as a result of bad faith actions or tactics that are frivolous or solely intended to cause unnecessary delay [Lab. Code § 5813(a)]. In addition, the WCAB, in its sole discretion, may order additional sanctions of up to $2,500 to be transmitted to the General Fund [Lab. Code § 5813(a)]. The determination of sanctions must be made after written application by the party seeking sanctions or on the WCAB's own motion [Lab. Code § 5813(b)].

For purposes of imposing sanctions, a "bad faith action or tactic" is one that results from a willful failure to comply with a statutory or regulatory obligation, or from a willful intent to disrupt or delay the WCAB's proceedings [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10561]. A "frivolous bad faith action or tactic" is one that is done for an improper motive or is indisputably without merit [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10561]. Violations subject to the provisions of Lab. Code § 5813 include, but are not limited to the following [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10561]:

- Failure to appear or appearing late at a conference or trial will be deemed a bad faith action or tactic solely intended to cause unnecessary delay if a reasonable excuse is not offered or the offending party has demonstrated a pattern of such conduct.

- Filing a pleading, petition, or legal document will be deemed a bad faith action or tactic that is frivolous or solely intended to cause unnecessary delay unless there is some reasonable justification for filing the document.

- Failure to timely serve evidentiary documents, including but not limited to medical reports pursuant to 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10608, will be deemed a bad faith action or tactic that is frivolous or solely intended to cause unnecessary delay unless that failure resulted from mistake, inadvertence, or excusable neglect.

- Failing to comply with the WCAB's rules or an order of the WCAB, including a discovery order, will be deemed a bad faith action or tactic that is frivolous or solely intended to cause unnecessary delay unless the failure results from mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect.

[2] Imposition of Sanction

With regard to applications filed on or after January 1, 1994, the WCAB may order the payment of sanctions, as provided in Lab. Code § 5813, on its own motion or on the filing of a petition pursuant to 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10450 [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10561]. Before issuing such an order, the alleged offending party or attorney must be given notice and an opportunity to be heard [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10561]. The WCAB must not impose a monetary sanction pursuant to Lab. Code § 5813 if the person subject to the sanction acted with reasonable justification or other circumstances make imposition of the sanction unjust [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10561]. The limitation of liability specified by Lab. Code § 3716.2 precludes imposition of a sanction against the Uninsured Employers Benefits Trust Fund pursuant to Lab. Code § 5813 for bad-faith actions or tactics that are frivolous or intended solely to cause unnecessary delay [Duncan v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 294, 300-304, 82 Cal. Rptr. 3d 664] .

Code §§ 5803* (continuing jurisdiction of WCAB) and 5804 (prohibiting rescission, alteration, or amendment of award after five years from date of injury) [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10858].

[2] After Filing of Petition for Reconsideration

After a petition for reconsideration has been timely filed, a WCJ may, within 15 days following the date of filing of the petition for reconsideration, amend or modify the order, decision, or award, or rescind the order, decision, or award and conduct further proceedings. Further proceedings must be initiated within 30 days after the order of rescission. The time for filing a petition for reconsideration under Lab. Code § 5903 runs from the filing of the new, amended, or modified decision [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10859].

After the 15-day period following the filing of the petition for reconsideration has elapsed, a WCJ may not make any order in the case or correct any error until the WCAB has denied or dismissed the petition for reconsideration or issued an order after reconsideration [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10859].

11. Reconsideration of Findings and Awards

51-577 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 577.212

§ 577.212 Reconsideration on Petition of Aggrieved Person

[1] Time for Filing Petition

Any person aggrieved directly or indirectly by a final order, decision, or award of the WCAB or of a WCJ may, within 20 days after service of the order, decision, or award, petition the WCAB for reconsideration in respect to any matters determined or covered by the order, decision, or award [Lab. Code §§ 5900(a), 5903; see Nestle Ice Cream Co. v. W.C.A.B. (Ryerson) (2007) 146 Cal. App. 4th 1104, 1108-1111, 53 Cal. Rptr. 3d 340 (when WCJ, in response to employee's request, amended award by increasing awarded amounts of retroactive temporary disability payments and vocational rehabilitation maintenance allowance, court of appeal held that employer's subsequent petition for reconsideration, timely filed as to amended award, but untimely as to original award, was timely filed, since WCJ's amended award effected substantial and material change in award and involved exercise of judicial function); Scott v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1981) 122 Cal. App. 3d 979, 984, 176 Cal. Rptr. 267 ; Hartford Acc. & Indem. Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1978) 86 Cal. App. 3d 1, 3, 149 Cal. Rptr. 878 ; § 577.501].

[2] Manner of Filing and Service

[a] Filing

A petition for reconsideration (see § 577.501[1]) from a final order, decision, or award must be filed at the WCAB district office from which the order, decision, or award issued. A petition for reconsideration from a final order, decision, or award issued by the WCAB at its main office in San Francisco must be filed at the San Francisco office [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10840].

Unless otherwise ordered by the WCAB, filing suspends the affected order, decision, or award with respect to the parties to the petition for a period of 10 days. The WCAB may, however, on terms and conditions that it orders, stay, suspend, or postpone the order, decision, or award during the pendency of the reconsideration [Lab. Code § 5910].

[b] Service

The petitioner must forthwith serve a copy of the petition on all adverse parties and on any other persons designated by the WCAB [Lab. Code § 5905]. The WCAB requires that copies of the petition be served on all parties to the case, on a lien claimant if the validity of the claimant's lien is specifically questioned by the petition, and on all parties to any case that has been consolidated with the case pursuant to 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10589 [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10850]. Failure to file proof of this service constitutes a valid ground for dismissing the reconsideration petition [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10850]. On a finding that the party to be served was subsequently served and was not prejudiced by the late service, however, the WCAB need not dismiss the petition for failure to have served it in a timely manner [Wings West Airlines v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1047, 1054-1055, 232 Cal. Rptr. 343] .

[3] Final Orders

An order, decision, or award of the WCAB or a WCJ is final for purposes of a petition for reconsideration if it determines any substantive right or liability of those involved in the case. To be final, an order need not resolve all issues or represent a final determination of benefits. The term does not include intermediate procedural orders or discovery orders, but it does include orders dismissing a party, rejecting an affirmative defense, granting commutation, terminating liability, and other orders affecting substantive issues [Rymer v. Hagler (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 1171, 1180, 260 Cal.Rptr. 76] . In addition, whether or not an employer has provided workers' compensation coverage is a substantive issue and determines the forum for the dispute and the penalties to be imposed [Rymer v. Hagler (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 1171, 1180, 260 Cal. Rptr. 76 ; see Lab. Code §§ 3706, 3715; see also § 577.13[4], and [2], below].

[4] Grounds

Reconsideration may only be sought on the following grounds [Lab. Code § 5903]:

- The WCJ or WCAB acted without or in excess of its powers;

- The order, decision, or award was procured by fraud [see Royal Globe Ins. Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1978) 84 Cal. App. 3d 287, 293 n.5, 148 Cal. Rptr. 325] ;

- The findings of fact are not justified by the evidence [see Gillette v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1971) 20 Cal. App. 3d 312, 320-322, 97 Cal. Rptr. 542, 893] ;

- The petitioner has discovered new material evidence that petitioner could not, with reasonable diligence, have discovered and produced at the hearing [see Royal Globe Ins. Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1978) 84 Cal. App. 3d 287, 292-293, 148 Cal. Rptr. 325 (evidence in question was not newly discovered)]; or

- The order, decision, or award is not supported by the findings of fact [see Michon v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1971) 15 Cal. App. 3d 917, 923-925, 93 Cal. Rptr. 476] .

[5] Answer to Petition

Any adverse party may file a verified answer within 10 days after service of the petition [Lab. Code § 5905]. The answer must be filed with at the WCAB district office from which the order, decision, or award issued. An answer to a petition for reconsideration from a final order, decision, or award issued by the WCAB at its main office in San Francisco must be filed at the San Francisco office [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10840]. Copies of documents that have already been received in evidence or that have already been made part of the WCAB's legal file must not be attached as exhibits to an answer to a petition for reconsideration [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10842]. Documents attached in violation of this rule may be detached from the answer and discarded [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10842].

[6] Supplemental Petitions

When a petition for reconsideration has been timely filed, supplemental petitions, pleadings, or responses other than the answer must be considered by the WCAB only if specifically requested or approved by the WCAB [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10848]. Supplemental petitions, pleadings, or responses other than the answer, that are not requested or approved by the WCAB, are neither accepted nor deemed filed for any purpose, and are not acknowledged or returned to the filing party [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10848].

[7] Referral to Workers' Compensation Judge

Petitions for reconsideration will be referred to the WCJ from whose decision relief is sought. The WCJ will prepare a report containing the information specified in 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10860, within 15 days after the petition was filed (unless the WCAB grants an extension) submit the report and the case file to the WCAB, and at the same time serve a copy of it on the parties and any lien claimant whose lien is specifically questioned by the petition for reconsideration [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10860].

[8] Denial of Petition by Inaction

The petition is deemed denied by the WCAB unless it is acted on within 60 days from the date it was filed [Lab. Code § 5909].

[9] Action of WCAB on Filing of Petition or Granting Reconsideration

[a] In General

On the filing of a petition for reconsideration, or on the WCAB's decision to grant reconsideration on its own motion, the WCAB may, with or without further proceedings and with or without notice, affirm, rescind, alter, or amend the order, decision, or award on the basis of the evidence previously submitted in the case, or may grant reconsideration and direct the taking of additional evidence. Notice of the time and place of any hearing on reconsideration must be given to the petitioner and adverse parties and to other persons as the WCAB orders [Lab. Code § 5906].

[b] Without Further Hearing

If, at time it grants reconsideration, the WCAB determines that no sufficient reason exists for taking further testimony, the WCAB may affirm, rescind, alter, or amend the order, decision, or award and may, without further proceedings, notice, or hearing, enter its findings, order, decision, or award based on the record in the case [Lab. Code § 5907].

[c] After Hearing

After taking additional evidence and considering all the facts, the WCAB may affirm, rescind, alter, or amend the original order, decision, or award. An order, decision, or award made following reconsideration that affirms, rescinds, alters, or amends the original order, decision, or award must be made by the WCAB but does not affect any right or the enforcement of any right arising from or by virtue of the original order, decision, or award, unless the WCAB so orders [Lab. Code § 5908(a)].

If the WCAB rescinds or reduces an order, decision, or award on the grounds that it was procured by fraud [see Lab. Code § 5903(b)], the WCAB must, if the employer is insured, refer the case to the Bureau of Fraudulent Claims [see Ins. Code § 1872 et seq.], or, if the employer is self-insured, to the district attorney of the county in which the fraud occurred [Lab. Code § 5908(b)].

[d] Form and Content of Decision

Any decision of the WCAB granting or denying a petition for reconsideration or affirming, rescinding, altering, or amending the original findings, orders, decision, or award following reconsideration must [Lab. Code § 5908.5; see Lab. Code § 115; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10340(a)-(c); see also Painter v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1985) 166 Cal. App. 3d 264, 268-271, 212 Cal. Rptr. 354 ; City of Fresno v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1985) 163 Cal. App. 3d 467, 470, 209 Cal. Rptr. 463] :

- be made by the WCAB and not by a WCJ,
- be in writing, signed by a majority of the WCAB members assigned to the case, and
- state the evidence relied on and specify in detail the reasons for the decision.

The purpose of Lab. Code § 5908.5 is to apprise the parties of the grounds for the WCAB's decision, to assist the reviewing court to ascertain the principles relied on by the WCAB, to help the WCAB avoid careless or arbitrary action, and to make the right of appeal or of seeking review more meaningful [Yavitch v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1983) 142 Cal. App. 3d 64, 69, 190 Cal. Rptr. 793 ; see Cal-Nat Airways, Inc. v. Workmen's Comp. App. Bd. (1968) 268 Cal. App. 2d 93, 97, 73 Cal. Rptr. 815] . For discussion of judicial review, see § 577.280 et seq.

[e] Referral for Proceedings on Reconsideration

If reconsideration is granted and the case referred to a WCJ for proceedings on reconsideration, the WCJ will, on conclusion of the proceedings, prepare and serve on the parties a summary of evidence received in the proceedings after reconsideration was granted [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10862]. Unless otherwise instructed by the panel before which a case is pending, the WCJ may rule on requests for postponement or continuance of further hearing, join additional parties, dismiss unnecessary parties when not opposed by any other party to the case, make all interlocutory or procedural orders that are agreed to by all parties, issue subpoenas, rule on motions for discovery, rule on all evidentiary motions and objections, and make all other rulings necessary to expedite and facilitate the trial and disposition of the case [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10862]. The WCJ may not, however, order a medical examination, obtain a recommended disability evaluation, make an order taking the case off calendar, or make an order approving or disapproving a compromise and release [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10862].

§ 577.221 Continuing Jurisdiction of WCAB

The WCAB has continuing jurisdiction over all its orders, decisions, and awards under the workers' compensation law and the decisions and orders of the vocational rehabilitation unit established within the Office of Benefit Determination under Lab. Code § 139.5. At any time, after the the parties in interest are provided with notice and an opportunity to be heard, the WCAB may, for good cause shown, rescind, alter, or amend any order, decision, or award. This power includes the right to review, grant or regrant, diminish, increase, or terminate, within the limits prescribed by the workers' compensation law, any compensation awarded, on the grounds that the disability of the person in whose favor the award was made has recurred, increased, diminished, or terminated [Lab. Code § 5803; see Bland v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1970) 3 Cal. 3d 324, 329, 90 Cal. Rptr. 431, 475 P.2d 663 ; Draper v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 502, 507, 195 Cal. Rptr. 248] .

Any order, decision, or award rescinding, altering or amending a prior order, decision, or award has the same effect as an original order, decision, or award [Lab. Code § 5805].

§ 577.222 Petition to Reopen

[1] Showing Good Cause

Petitions invoking the continuing jurisdiction of the WCAB must set forth specifically and in detail the facts relied on to establish good cause for reopening [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10455]. A variety of factors and circumstances may constitute the requisite good cause. For example, good cause may be established by the following:

- Newly discovered evidence that could not have been produced at the original hearing and that indicates a more extensive disability than that recognized by the original findings;

- A subsequent clarification by a reviewing court of the applicable law that indicates that an employee was originally entitled to a different award than that given; or

- Any factor or circumstance unknown at the time the original award or order was made that renders the previous findings inequitable [LeBoeuf v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1983) 34 Cal. 3d 234, 241-242, 193 Cal. Rptr. 547, 666 P.2d 989] .

Moreover, if an injured worker filed for and received a disability award that did not mention rehabilitation benefits because the worker did not initially seek them, a subsequent petition to reopen the award for the purpose of including them is, as a matter of law, supported by good cause [Bekins Moving & Storage Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1982) 137 Cal. App. 3d 665, 672-673, 187 Cal. Rptr. 226] .

[2] Scope of Reconsideration on Reopening

In a petition to reopen (see § 577.502[1]), an injured employee need not request any particular classification of compensation in order to vest the WCAB with jursidiction to reconsider the entire case [Bland v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1970) 3 Cal. 3d 324, 331, 90 Cal. Rptr. 431, 475 P.2d 663] . The WCAB does not have the power, however, to find that there was no employment after an award has been made that determined there was employment, if the time to petition for rehearing or reconsideration or review of the award has expired or if the petition has been determined [Lab. Code § 5804].

Although Lab. Code §§ 5803 and 5804, discussed above, refer to a petition and notice and opportunity to be heard, they do not direct that the petition be filed before the WCAB itself or that it take any particular form, and various documents filed with the Unit may be considered as petitions to reopen. Moreover, in view of the fact that in the area of rehabilitation benefits the Rehabilitation Unit of the Division of Workers' Compensation (formerly the Bureau of Rehabilitation) operates under the appellate supervision of the WCAB [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10014, 10293], a rehabilitation request filed with the unit may be considered as a petition to reopen within the contemplation of Lab. Code §§ 5803 and 5804 [Bekins Moving & Storage Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1982) 137 Cal. App. 3d 665, 671-672, 187 Cal. Rptr. 226] . The court of appeal has held that the Rehabilitation Unit's granting of an employer's request to terminate liability for rehabilitation services had no effect on the Appeals Board's continuing jurisdiction to act on the employee's timely petition, filed with the Board, to reopen and reinstate vocational rehabilitation [Martino v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2002) 103 Cal. App. 4th 485, 490, 126 Cal. Rptr. 2d 812] .

[3] Time to File Petition and Counterpetition

A petition to reopen may be filed by a party in interest within five years from the date of injury. Any counterpetition seeking other relief and raisingissues in addition to those raised by the original petition may be filed by the adverse party within 30 days of the original petition [Lab. Code § 5804].

Neither Lab. Code § 5804 nor 5410 (discussed under [4], below) defines "date of injury." The term is defined, however, in Lab. Code § 5411 for injuries other than occpational disease or cumulative injury and in Lab. Code § 5412 for occupational disease and cumulative injury cases (see discussion under § 577.14[3][c]). In cumulative injury and occupational disease cases, the Lab. Code § 5412 definition of date of injury is to be used to determine the date of the injury under Lab. Code §§ 5410 and 5804 [Palmer v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 1241, 1243, 1249, 237 Cal. Rptr. 800] . Under Lab. Code § 5412, the date of injury is the date on which the employee first suffered disability and either knew or, in the exercise of reasonable diligence, should have known that the disability was caused by the employment.

[4] New or Further Disability

[a] WCAB's Jurisdiction Over Claims--Five-Year Statute of Limitations

Although Lab. Code §§ 5803-5805, discussed above appear on their face to confer continuing jurisdiction over all classes of supplemental claims, courts have held that supplemental claims for new and further disability and vocational rehabilitation benefits are governed by Lab. Code § 5410, not by Lab. Code §§ 5803-5805 [see J. T. Thorp, Inc. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1984) 153 Cal. App. 3d 327, 335, 335 n.12, 200 Cal. Rptr. 219] .

Under Lab. Code §§ 5410, 5803-5805, once an employee files a claim for compensation against an employer for an injury, the WCAB's jurisdiction to award additional compensation arising out of the same injury (even if styled "new and further disability") from that employer is limited to five years from the date of injury [see Nickelsberg v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 288, 300, 285 Cal. Rptr. 86, 814 P.2d 1328 ; J. T. Thorp, Inc. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1984) 153 Cal. App. 3d 327, 335, 200 Cal. Rptr. 219] . The five-year limitation period expresses a legislative concern for certainty and finality in the determination of compensation benefit obligations [Nickelsberg v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 288, 299, 285 Cal. Rptr. 86, 814 P.2d 1328] .

Lab. Code § 5410 provides that nothing contained in Lab. Code §§ 5400-5412 (discussed under § 577.25) bars the right of an injured worker to institute proceedings for the collection of compensation, (including vocational rehabilitation services for injuries occurring on or after January 1, 1990), within five years after the date of the injury if the proceedings are based on specified grounds. For injuries occurring prior to January 1, 1990, these grounds are that the original injury has caused new andfurther disability or the need for vocational rehabilitation benefits [Lab. Code § 5410 prior to amendment by Stats. 1989, ch. 892]. Lab. Code 5410 does not extend the limitation provided in Lab. Code § 5407 (discussed under § 577.25[2][e]) [Lab. Code § 5410].

The WCAB does not have jurisdiction to award temporary disability indemnity, for example, more than five years after the date of the original injury for new and further disability resulting from surgery related to the original injury, even when an award of further medical treatment has been made [Nickelsberg v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 288, 293-294, 285 Cal. Rptr. 86, 814 P.2d 1328] . Thus, when an employee who had been awarded temporary and permanent disability indemnity and further medical treatment for an industrial injury petitioned to reopen the award more than nine years after the injury based on new and further temporary total disability resulting from surgery related to the injury, the California Supreme Court held that amendments to Labor Code Section 4656 (providing for no maximum period for awarding temporary disability benefits resulting in period of total disability) did not give the WCAB jurisdiction to award temporary total disability indemnity for indefinite time periods for further surgical procedures to persons originally awarded further medical treatment [Nickelsberg v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 288, 293-301, 285 Cal. Rptr. 86, 814 P.2d 1328] . As a result, the employee's petition was time-barred by Labor Code Sections 5804 and 5410 [Nickelsberg v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 288, 301-302, 285 Cal. Rptr. 86, 814 P.2d 1328] . However, the court of appeal has held that the Appeals Board had jurisdiction to order additional temporary disability benefits more than five years after the date of injury when the employee filed a timely petition to reopen and his new and further disability commenced within five years of the date of his injury. The court found that the employee's petition to reopen alleged a change in his condition and requested further temporary disability benefits, and it was not error for the WCJ to award temporary disability benefits commencing more than five years after the date of injury because there had been no need to award benefits earlier since the employer was making voluntary temporary disability payments until then [Sarabi v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2007) 151 Cal. App. 4th 920, 925-928, 60 Cal. Rptr. 3d 189] .

[b] Invoking Jurisdiction

Jurisdiction of the WCAB under Lab. Code § 5410 is invoked by a petition setting forth specifically and in detail the facts relied on to establish new and further disability. If no prior application for adjudication has been filed, jurisdiction is invoked by the filing of an original application for adjudication [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10458].

[c] WCAB's Continued Jurisdiction to Enforce Previous Awards

Despite the five-year limitation on its continuing jurisdiction under Lab. Code §§ 5804 and 5410, the WCAB possesses inherent power, as in the case of any court, to enforce a previous order, decision, or award, independent of any limitations of time [Nickelsberg v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 288, 297, 285 Cal. Rptr. 86, 814 P.2d 1328] .

Code §§ 4651.3, 5410.1*].

§ 577.224 Vocational Rehabilitation Appeals

In 2003 the legislature abolished the workers' compensation vocational rehabilitation program, repealing Lab. Code §§ 139.5, 4635-4647, and 5405.5 [see Stats. 2003, ch. 635, §§ 14, 14.3, 16]. In its place, the legislature created a "supplemental job displacement benefit" for specified workers who are permanently partially disabled, to be used for retraining. The new system applies only to injuries occurring on or after January 1, 2004 [see § 577.45[2A]].

In 2004, the legislature reenacted one of the statutes it had repealed in 2003, Lab. Code § 139.5, reinstating vocational rehabilitation. However, the reenacted statute applies only to injuries occurring before January 1, 2004, and it will remain in effect only until January 1, 2009, and as of that date is repealed, unless a later-enacted statute, that is enacted before January 1, 2009, deletes or extends that date [Lab. Code § 139.5(k), (l)]. Various other vocational rehabilitation statutes, e.g., Lab. Code §§ 4642, 4644(d), (e), and 5405.5, once cross-referred to in former Lab. Code § 139.5 but repealed in 2003, are also cross-referred to in the reenacted Lab. Code § 139.5 and are now identified with the designation "former." Thus, although the issue may be further clarified by administrative and judicial action, it now appears that the statutory law on vocational rehabilitation applicable to pre-2004 injuries is confined to Lab. Code § 139.5, those "former" statutes to which it cross-refers, and those statutes not repealed in 2003. For example, the 2002 amendment to former Lab. Code § 4646, which allowed settlement of prospective vocational rehabilitation benefits, has not been reenacted, while Lab. Code § 5100.6, forbidding such settlements, was never repealed and, thus, remains in force. As a consequence of these legislative developments, at least some of the discussion in this subsection regarding vocational rehabilitation appeals applies only to pre-2004 injuries.

Appeals from decisions of the DWC's Rehabilitation Unit must be commenced as follows [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10293(a)]:

1. If an application for adjudication is already on file, by filing and serving a declaration of readiness and a petition setting forth the reason for the appeal.

2. If no application for adjudication is on file, by filing and serving an application for adjudication, a declaration of readiness, and a petition setting forth the reason for the appeal.

The party appealing the Rehabilitation Unit decision and the party opposing the appeal must file and serve any documents that the parties deem relevant that have not already been filed in the Rehabilitation Unit case file [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10293(b)].

If an application for adjudication has not been previously filed, venue must be designated and determined in accordance with Lab. Code § 5501.5 and 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10409. If an application for adjudication has been previously filed, the petition appealing a decision of the Rehabilitation Unit must be filed at the district office having venue, and the case number assigned to the application for adjudication will be assigned to the petition [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10293(c)].

A petition appealing a decision of the Rehabilitation Unit must be filed within 20 days from the date of the issuance of the Rehabilitation Unit decision 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10293(d)].

§ 577.225 Notice of Compensation Due; Appeal of Notice

When, as the result of an audit by the Administrative Director [see Lab. Code § 129(a)], it is determined that any compensation, interest, or penalty is due and unpaid to an employee or dependent, the director may initiate a process culminating in the issuance and service on the employer's claims administrator a Notice of Compensation Due detailing the amounts due and unpaid and ordering the amounts to be paid to the person entitled to them [Lab. Code § 129(c); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10110]. The issuance of the notice may be appealed by filing an Appeal of Notice of Compensation Due with the WCAB and serving a copy on the injured worker or dependent within 15 days of service of the notice [8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10115, 10291].

Failure to pay or appeal a Notice of Compensation Due within 15 days of receipt may subject the claims administrator to administrative penalty [Lab. Code § 129.5(a)(1); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10111(c)(1) (penalty related to injuries on or after January 1, 1990, and before January 1, 1994), 10111.1(c)(1) (penalty related to injuries on or after January 1, 1994)]. If the claims administrator is a third-party administrator, it is jointly and severally liable with the subject of the audit (whether the employer or insurer) for any administrative penalty. Otherwise the claims administrator is solely liable [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10112].

Payment and assignment of claims for compensation or compensation awarded are governed by Lab. Code §§ 4900-4909.1 and 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10770-10772. Payment of temporary and permanent disability is governed in Lab. Code §§ 4650-4663, payment of death benefits is governed by Lab. Code §§ 4700-4709, payment of public official death benefits is governed by Lab. Code §§ 4720-4728, and payment of subsequent injuries payments is governed by Lab. Code §§ 4751-4755.

Special provisions relating to California Highway Patrol members and certain other state law enforcement personnel are set forth in Lab. Code §§ 4800-4810 [see Knopfer v. Flournoy (1973) 34 Cal. App. 3d 318, 319-322, 109 Cal. Rptr. 892] , and special provisions relating to city police and firefighters, sheriffs, and other specified public safety personnel are set forth in Lab. Code §§ 4850-4855.

The issuance of certified copies of the findings and award, entry of judgment, stay of execution, and satisfaction of judgment are governed by Lab. Code §§ 5806-5809 and 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10820-10832.

A claim for compensation, or any award or judgment entered on the claim, has the same preference over the other debts of the employer or the employer's estate and of the insurer that is given by law to wage claims [Lab. Code § 4908; see Code Civ. Proc. § 1204 (preference for certain wage claims)]. The preference is for the entire amount of the compensation to be paid, but this does not impair the lien of any previous award [Lab. Code § 4908].

§ 577.242 Nonassignability of Claim or Compensation

Except as provided in Lab. Code § 96 (assignment of claims or awards to Labor Commissioner), no claim for compensation is assignable before payment [Lab. Code § 4900]. Except as provided in Lab. Code § 4900 et seq. (payment and assignment of compensation and compensation claims), no claim for compensation or compensation awarded, adjudged, or paid is subject to being taken for the debts of the party entitled to it [Lab. Code § 4901]. Moreover, no compensation, whether awarded or voluntarily paid, shall be paid to any attorney at law or in fact or other agent, but shall be paid directly to the claimant entitled to it unless otherwise ordered by the WCAB. No payment made to any attorney at law or in fact or other agent in violation of the foregoing provision will be credited to the employer [Lab. Code § 4902; *see Knopfer v. Flournoy (1973) 34 Cal. 51-577 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 577.243

§ 577.243 Payment of Compensation

[1] Not Due or Pending Dispute

In the absence of an agreement to the contrary, no payment, allowance, or benefit received by an injured employee during the period of his or her incapacity, or by a deceased employee's dependents, which by the terms of the workers' compensation law was not then due and payable or while there was any dispute or question concerning the right to compensation, is an admission of liability for compensation on the part of the employer. Additionally, the acceptance of the payment, allowance, or benefit does not operate as a waiver of any right or claim that the employee or dependents have against the employer. The payment, allowance, or benefit, however, may be taken into account by the WCAB in fixing the amount of compensation to be paid [Lab. Code § 4909].

[2] Pursuant to Order

Payment of compensation in accordance with the order and direction of the WCAB discharges the employer for all claims for that compensation [Lab. Code § 3603].

[3] To Injured Minor

Compensation owed to an injured minor may be paid to the minor until his or her parent or guardian gives the employer or the employer's insurance carrier written notice that the parent or guardian claims it. Compensation paid to the injured minor prior to receipt of the written notice releases the employer and its carrier in full for the amount paid, and the minor cannot disaffirm the payment on appointment of a guardian or on coming of age [Lab. Code § 3605].

[4] Penalties for Delay or Nonpayment

[a] In General

As of June 1, 2004 [Lab. Code § 5814(i)], and applicable to all injuries, without regard to whether the injury occurs before, on, or after that date [Lab. Code § 5814(h)], when payment of compensation has been unreasonably delayed or refused, either prior to or subsequent to the issuance of an award, the amount of the payment unreasonably delayed or refused is to be increased by up to 25 percent or up to $10,000, whichever is less [Lab. Code § 5814(a)]. (Former Lab. Code § 5814, providing for a 10-percent penalty on "the full amount of the order, decision, or award," became inoperative on June 1, 2004, and, as of January 1, 2005, is repealed, unless a later-enacted statute, which becomes operative on or before January 1, 2005, deletes or extends the dates on which it becomes inoperative and is repealed [Former Lab. Code § 5814(b)].) In any proceeding under Lab. Code § 5814, the Appeals Board is to use its discretion to accomplish a fair balance and substantial justice between the parties [Lab. Code § 5814(a); see Kerley v. Workmen's Comp. Appeals Bd. (1971) 4 Cal. 3d 223, 227, 230, 93 Cal. Rptr. 192, 481 P.2d 200 (only satisfactory excuse for delay as genuine doubt from medical or legal standpoint as to liability for benefits); Jensen v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 244, 247-249, 216 Cal. Rptr. 33 (same); cf. Smith v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 1451, 1454-1457, 231 Cal. Rptr. 364 (distinguishing Kerley, rejecting Jensen, and holding 22-day delay based on misunderstanding of correct amount of compromise and release was not unreasonable); State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1209, 1217, 1219-1220, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 528 (disapproving Jensen to extent it suggests that inadvertent delay is per se unreasonable, and holding solitary instance of human error, which was quickly corrected upon discovery (i.e., within seven days), was not unreasonable in light of no evidence in record that SCIF had history of improperly processing claimant's benefit payments or that SCIF failed to provide sufficient number of adjusters to handle caseload or otherwise configured its office or business practices in such a way that errors were likely or probable); County of San Luis Obispo v. W.C.A.B. (Barnes) (2001)92 Cal. App. 4th 869, 876-879, 112 Cal. Rptr.2d 246 (in determining reasonableness of delay, court should considertotality of circumstances, balancing fairness between parties, and here inadvertent delay held reasonable when employer had paid employee's medical benefits for 25 years, late quarterly penalty check was sent as soon as error was discovered, no timetable existed in agreement between employee and employer for quarterly penalty payments, employer had no history of late payments or of institutional neglect, employee did not notify employer that check had not arrived within usual time frame, and award of penalty (in excess of $40,000) would upset balance of fairness, constitute windfall to employee, and be out of proportion to employer's conduct (late payment in amount of $97.87))].

The court of appeal has held that the present version of Lab. Code § 5814, which became operative on June 1, 2004, applies to all injuries in cases pending on that date, including injuries that occurred prior to that date, when the court found that the legislature intended the new statute to apply retroactively, and that the language of Section 47 of SB 899, the bill that enacted the present version of Lab. Code § 5814, to the effect that "The amendment, addition, or repeal of any provision of law ... shall not constitute good cause to reopen or rescind, alter, or amend any existing order, decision, or award" simply stated the rule that statutory changes do not apply to cases in which appeals have been exhausted and there is a final judgment, making Section 47 inapplicable to the present pending case, since the employee appealed the Appeals Board's decision, the appellate process had not yet been exhausted, and there was no final judgment [Green v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 1426 ; see McCarthy v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2006) 135 Cal. App. 4th 1230 (following Green)].

The Appeals Board en banc has held that the amount of a penalty under Lab. Code § 5814(a) is discretionary and should be determined upon consideration of various factors, including, but not necessarily limited to [Ramirez v. Drive Financial Services (2008) 73 Cal. Comp. Cases 1324, 1329-1330 (Appeals Board en banc opinion)] :

1. Evidence of the amount of the payment delayed.

2. Evidence of the length of the delay.

3. Evidence of whether the delay was inadvertent and promptly corrected.

4. Evidence of whether there was a history of delayed payments or, instead, whether the delay was a solitary instance of human error.

5. Evidence of whether there was any statutory, regulatory, or other requirement (e.g., an order or a stipulation of the parties) providing that payment was to be made within a specified number of days.

6. Evidence of whether the delay was due to the realities of the business of processing claims for benefits or the legitimate needs of administering workers' compensation insurance.

7. Evidence of whether there was institutional neglect by the defendant, such as whether the defendant provided a sufficient number of adjusters to handle the workload, provided sufficient training to its staff, or otherwise configured its office or business practices in a way that made errors unlikely or improbable.

8. Evidence of whether the employee contributed to the delay by failing to promptly notify the defendant of it.

9. Evidence of the effect of the delay on the injured employee.

In the case before it, the Board found that the employee's claim for cumulative trauma injury to various body parts was settled by way of an order approving a compromise and release, pursuant to which the employer was to pay the employee $57,000, plus $3,000 as settlement of prospective vocational rehabilitation services. The compromise and release provided that all penalty issues were waived if the employer made payment within 30 days. The employer was five days late in making its payments to the employee, whose attorney notified the employer of the late payments by multiple letters and requested penalties. The employer, without any penalty award, paid the employee penalties of $5,700 and $300. The WCJ found that no further penalties were owed for late payments but offered no explanation as to why he thought the penalties paid by the employer were appropriate penalty amounts under the "fair balance and substantial justice" test of Lab. Code § 5814(a). The Board stated that the overriding consideration in determining what penalty amount to assess should be whether the penalty imposed would serve the purposes sought to be accomplished by Lab. Code § 5814, which are both penal (providing an incentive to employers and insurers to pay benefits promptly) and remedial (ameliorating economic hardship on the injured employee that results from delay in provision of benefits). The Board remanded the matter, instructing the WCJ to explain the reasons for his penalty determination [Ramirez v. Drive Financial Services (2008) 73 Cal. Comp. Cases 1324, 1328-1331 (Appeals Board en banc opinion)] .

If a potential violation of Lab. Code § 5814 is discovered by the employer before an employee claims a penalty under the statute, the employer, within 90 days of the date of the discovery, may pay a self-imposed penalty in the amount of 10 percent of the amount of the payment unreasonably delayed or refused, along with the amount of that payment [Lab. Code § 5814(b)]. This self-imposed penalty will be in lieu of the penalty in the amount of the lesser of 25 percent or $10,000 [Lab. Code § 5814(b)]. The court of appeal has held that the employer may avail itself of this provision, regardless of whether the employee discovered the potential violation of Lab. Code § 5814 before the employer did, so long as the employee has not claimed a penalty before the employer discovers the potential violation, and the employer then timely pays the self-imposed penalty. Moreover, the court held that the provision's application is not limited to situations in which the employer learns of the potential violation through its own investigation rather than through an employee's or a third person's investigation [New United Motors Manufacturing, Inc. v. W.C.A.B. (Gallegos) (2006) 141 Cal. App. 4th 1533, 1538-1539, 47 Cal. Rptr. 3d 200] .

Upon the approval of a compromise and release, findings and awards, or stipulations and orders by the Appeals Board, it will be conclusively presumed that any accrued claims for penalty have been resolved, regardless of whether a petition for penalty has been filed, unless the claim for penalty is expressly excluded by the terms of the order or award [Lab. Code § 5814(c)]. Upon the submission of any issue for determination at a regular trial hearing, it will be conclusively presumed that any accrued claim for penalty in connection with the benefit at issue has been resolved, regardless of whether a petition for penalty has been filed, unless the issue of penalty is also submitted or is expressly excluded in the statement of issues being submitted [Lab. Code § 5814(c)].

The payment of any increased award pursuant to Lab. Code § 5814(a) will be reduced by any amount paid under Lab. Code § 4650(d) on the same unreasonably delayed or refused benefit payment [Lab. Code § 5814(d)].

No unreasonable delay in the provision of medical treatment will be found when the treatment has been authorized by the employer in a timely manner and the only dispute concerns payment of a billing submitted by a physician or medical provider as provided in Lab. Code § 4603.2 [Lab. Code § 5814(e)].

Nothing in Lab. Code § 5814 may be construed to create a civil cause of action [Lab. Code § 5814(f)].

No action may be brought to recover penalties that may be awarded under Lab. Code § 5814 more than two years from the date the payment of compensation was due [Lab. Code § 5814(g)].

Any employer or insurer that knowingly violates Lab. Code § 5814 with a frequency that indicates a general business practice is liable for administrative penalties not to exceed $400,000 [Lab. Code § 5814.6(a)]. These penalty payments are to be imposed by the Administrative Director, who may impose a penalty under either this statute or Lab. Code § 129.5(e) [Lab. Code § 5814.6(a), (b)].

For form of petition for penalties, see § 577.505[1].

[b] Purpose and Application of Penalty

The purpose of the penalty is to help the employee obtain promptly the cure or relief to which he or she is entitled and to compel the employer to provide it in timely fashion. The penalty has been applied to virtually all types of benefits, including temporary and permanent disability indemnity, interest on an award, and amounts awarded as reimbursement of medical-legal costs [Adams v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1976) 18 Cal. 3d 226, 229, 133 Cal. Rptr. 517, 555 P.2d 303] . The penalty has even been applied when an employer unreasonably delayed the payment of industrial disability leave to which an injured state employee was entitled under Gov. Code § 19869 et seq. [State of California v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1996) 44 Cal. App. 4th 128, 146, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 606] .

Lab. Code § 5814 is both a remedial and a penalty statute. The remedial aspect is to facilitate the injured employee's return to work as quickly as possible. The penal aspect is to compel the employer to comply with the law fully and promptly [DuBois v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 382, 396, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 523, 853 P.2d 978] .

[c] Penalty Assessed Against Amount Unreasonably Delayed

The penalty under Lab. Code § 5814 is assessed against "the amount of thepayment unreasonably delayed or refused" [Lab. Code § 5814(a)]. This marks a significant departure from the former rule that assessed thepenalty against "the full amount of the order, decision, or award" [former Lab. Code § 5814(a) [Rhiner v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1993) 4 Cal. 4th 1213, 1227-1228, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 129, 848 P.2d 244 ; Gallamore v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 815, 826, 153 Cal. Rptr. 590, 591 P.2d 1242 ; see Avalon Bay Foods v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1165, 1176-1177, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 552 (dictum that medical treatment transportation benefits were an element of overall medical treatment benefits)]. In computing the full amount of benefits awarded in a particular class, voluntary, timely preaward payments as well as all future awards were included [Rhiner v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1993) 4 Cal. 4th 1213, 1225-1227, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 129, 848 P.2d 244 ; Consani v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1991) 227 Cal. App. 3d 12, 24-25, 277 Cal. Rptr. 619] .

[d] Multiple Penalties

Between January 1, 2003, and June 1, 2004, Lab. Code § 5814 provided that multiple penalties were not to be awarded for repeated delays in making a series of payments due for the same type or specie of benefit unless there had been a legally significant event between the delay and the subsequent delay in payments of the same type or specie of benefits [former Lab. Code § 5814(a)]. No such language appears in the version of Lab. Code § 5814 that became operative on June 1, 2004. Moreover, as discussed in [c], above, whereas the pre-June 1, 2004, version of the statute assessed the penalty against "the full amount of the order, decision, or award" [former Lab. Code § 5814(a)], the post-June 1, 2004, version assesses the penalty against only "the amount of the payment unreasonably delayed or refused" [Lab. Code § 5814(a)]. The extent to which these legislative changes have affected the jurisprudence developed by California courts and the Appeals Board on the issue of when multiple and successive penalties may be awarded remains to be seen. On the one hand, questions of type or specie of benefit have presumably become irrelevant, since penalties are now assessed against simply the amount of the payment unreasonably delayed or refused. On the other hand, when, for example, several disability payments are unreasonably delayed due to a single error on the paying party's part, the courts and the Appeals Board may still interpret the statute as requiring something akin to the pre-June 1, 2004, mandate for "a legally significant event between the delay and the subsequent delay in payments" before imposing multiple penalties. Indeed, such a reading of the current statute may find support in the statute's admonition to the Appeals Board to use, in proceedings pursuant to Lab. Code § 5814, "its discretion to accomplish a fair balance and substantial justice between the parties" [Lab. Code § 5814(a)].

Prior to the January 1, 2003, introduction of the requirement of "a legally significant event between the delay and the subsequent delay" to justify imposition of multiple penalties, the law regarding multiple penalties hadbeen set forth in a series of cases. Pursuant to this case law, multiple penalties were permitted only when delay or nonpayment of benefits was attributable to separate and distinct acts [Gallamore v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 815, 824, 153 Cal. Rptr. 590, 591 P.2d 1242 ; Christian v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1997) 15 Cal. 4th 505, 509, 936 P.2d 115 (reaffirming holding in Gallamore and concluding that employer's unreasonable termination of temporary disability benefits was a single act and did not become a separate and distinct act supporting additional penalties each time a benefit check should have been paid after the initial termination); see § 577.504, for discussion of notice required when seeking multiple penalties]. Similarly, when an employer or a carrier made one late benefit payment and failed to include interest in that payment, only a single penalty could be imposed under Lab. Code § 5814 [California Highway Patrol v. W.C.A.B. (Erebia) (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 1201, 1206-1207, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 118] .

Since the preceding paragraphs were written, one court of appeal has held that agreed medical evaluator opinions and a stipulation may each result in liability under the new Lab. Code § 5814 and may each qualify as a separate, legally significant event, and that the legislature did not eliminate multiple increases in compensation for conduct occurring either before or after the award, as long as the events were "separate and distinct" under Christian. The court of appeal remanded to the Appeals Board for determination of whether compensation owed pursuant to the opinions of the agreed medical evaluators and compensation owed pursuant to a stipulation were unreasonably delayed under the new Lab. Code § 5814 [Green v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 1426, 1443-1445, 26 Cal. Rptr. 3d 527] .

The Appeals Board en banc held that, although, under Lab. Code § 5814(a), a successive penalty may be awarded for an unreasonable delay in making a prior penalty payment, it should not be awarded when the employer had genuine doubt as to its liability or when there has been no legally significant intervening event. The Board found that, in the case before it, a significant possibility existed that, when the employer made penalty payments of $5,700 and $300, i.e., 10 percent of $57,000 and $3,000, respectively (the two payments it had agreed to make via compromise and release, and which it was five days late in making), it could have had genuine doubt from a legal standpoint regarding its liability for more than it paid, since there had been no order or award directing it to pay more than 10 percent. Indeed, there had been no order or award directing it to pay any penalty at all. Remanding the matter, the Board instructed the WCJ to decide whether a successive penalty would be justified [Ramirez v. Drive Financial Services (2008) 73 Cal. Comp. Cases 1324, 1331-1332 (Appeals Board en banc opinion)] .

Lab. Code § 5814 makes no provision for any deductions or credits for payments made by the employer, including a deduction or credit for the employer's timely preaward payments [Rhiner v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1993) 4 Cal. 4th 1213, 1225-1227, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 129, 848 P.2d 244] .

[e] Uninsured Employers Benefits Trust Fund

The Uninsured Employers Benefits Trust Fund (UEBTF) is exempt from payment of the penalty under Lab. Code § 5814 by virtue of Lab. Code § 3716.2, which provides that the UEBTF is not liable for any penalties, including penalties for its own unreasonable delay in paying benefits to an injured employee with whom it has stipulated to pay benefits [DuBois v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 382, 398-399, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 523, 853 P.2d 978] .

If payment of compensation was unreasonably delayed or refused prior to the issuance of an award, and the Administrative Director has provided discretionarycompensation pursuant to Lab. Code § 4903.3 (payment from Uninsured Employers Benefits Trust Fund), the WCAB will award the Administrative Director a penalty to be paid by the employer in the amount of 10 percent of the compensation provided by the director. This penalty is in addition to the penalty imposed by Lab. Code § 5814 [Lab. Code § 5814.1].

[f] Self-Insured Employers

When an employer that has secured the payment of compensation pursuant to Lab. Code § 3700(c) (self-insured public entity) unreasonably delays or refuses payment of compensation subsequent to the issuance of an award, the WCAB will, in addition to increasing the order, decision or award pursuant to Lab. Code § 5814, award reasonable attorney's fees incurred in enforcing payment of the compensation awarded [Lab. Code § 5814.5].

A self-insured employer's excess coverage policy provision that excluded indemnification for "payments made by the Insured in excess of benefits regularly required by the Workers Compensation Law if such excess payments are required because ... the Insured violated or failed to comply with any Workers Compensation Law" applied to exclude indemnification for Lab. Code § 5814 penalties paid by the employer [General Reinsurance Corp. v. St. Jude Hospital (Ballard) (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 1097, 1103-1108, 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 540] .

§ 577.244 Commutation of Compensation to Lump Sum

The WCAB may, when it makes its award or at any time thereafter, on its own motion on notice, or on noticed application of either party [see § 577.503], commute the compensation payable to a lump sum and order it to be paid forthwith or at some future time if [Lab. Code § 5100]:

- The commutation is necessary for the protection of the person entitled to it, or for the best interest of the applicant;
- The commutation will avoid inequity and will not cause undue expense or hardship to the applicant;
- The employer has sold or otherwise disposed of the greater part of his or her assets or is about to do so; or
- The employer is not a resident of California.

The procedure to be followed is set forth in Lab. Code §§ 5101-5106. This does not apply, however, to compensation payable from the Subsequent Injuries Benefits Trust Fund under Lab. Code § 4751 [Lab. Code § 5100.5] or prospective compensation, indemnity payments, or other benefits to which the employee is entitled under the rehabilitation provisions [Lab. Code § 5100.6].

In determining what is in the best interest of the applicant, the WCAB will consider the applicant's general financial condition, including withoutlimitation the applicant's ability to live without periodic indemnity payments and to discharge debts incurred prior to the date of injury [Lab. Code § 5100(a)].

§ 577.245 Enforcement of Awards

On the request of a complaining party, the WCAB may issue an order to show cause directing the employer or insurance carrier to appear and show cause why the WCAB's order, decision, or award has not been complied with [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10832 (repealed October 21, 1996, and inoperative November 1, 1996, per 1996 revisions to regulations); see Betancourt v. Workmen's Comp. App. Bd. (1971) 16 Cal. App. 3d 408, 410-413, 94 Cal. Rptr. 9 (mandate as proper remedy to compel issuance of order)]. Despite the five-year limitation on its continuing jurisdiction under Lab. Code §§ 5804 and 5410, the WCAB possesses inherent power, as in the case of any court, to enforce a previous order, decision, or award, independent of any limitations of time [Nickelsberg v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 288, 297, 285 Cal. Rptr. 86, 814 P.2d 1328] .

§ 577.246 Execution

[1] Certified Copy of Award and Entry of Judgment

Certified copies of findings and awards or other final orders may be issued by the WCAB for the purpose of having judgment entered and execution issued by the clerk of the superior court. A certified copy will be issued, however, only on written request of a person entitled to benefits under the award or by his or her attorney or authorized representative and payment of the fee [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10820]. Any party affected thereby may file a certified copy of the findings and order, decision, or award of the WCAB with the clerk of the superior court of any county, who must immediately issue judgment in conformity therewith. The words "any party affected thereby" include the Uninsured Employers Benefits Trust Fund, which is entitled to have judgment entered not only against the uninsured employer but also against any person who is a parent or substantial shareholder of the employer [Lab. Code § 5806]. For procedure and forms for use in executing on a judgment, see Ch. 254, Executions and Enforcement of Judgments, § 254.40 et seq.

[2] Stay of Execution

The WCAB or any of its members may for good cause stay execution of a judgment entered on an order, decision, or award and may impose terms and conditions on the stay [Lab. Code § 5808]. A certified copy of the order is then filed with the clerk entering judgment. If a certified copy of the order, decision, or award and findings has not been issued, the WCAB or any of its members may order the certified copy to be withheld with the same forceand under the sameconditions as it might issue a stay of execution had the certified copy been issued and judgment entered on it [Lab. Code § 5808; see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10825].

Before staying execution or issuing an order withholding issuance of a certified copy of an order, decision, or award, the WCAB in its discretion may require the filing of a bond from an approved surety equivalent to twice the probable amount of liability in the case [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10825(a)]. For discussion and forms of bonds, see Ch. 538, Suretyship, Bonds, and Undertakings, § 538.40 et seq.

[3] Liens Created by Recording Judgment

Liens on real property arising from lump-sum money judgments entered pursuant to the workers' compensation law are created by recording an abstract of the judgment as provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 697.310 or, if the money judgment is for payment in installments, by recording a certified copy of the judgment as provided by Code Civ. Proc. § 697.320. Except as provided in the workers' compensation law, these liens are governed by the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. §§ 697.310 (lump-sum judgments) and 697.320 (installment judgments) [Code Civ. Proc. § 697.330(a)]. For discussion of those provisions, see Ch. 318, Judgments, § 318.90 et seq.

When a judgment is satisfied in fact, other than on an execution, the WCAB may, on motion of either party or on its own motion, order the entry of satisfaction of the judgment. The clerk will enter satisfaction of judgment only on the filing of a certified copy of the WCAB's order [Lab. Code § 5809].

§ 577.261 Kinds of Liens Allowed and Reimbursement

[1] In General

The WCAB must determine and allow as a first lien against any sum to be paid as compensation the amount of compensation, including the cost of medical treatment, provided by the Director of Industrial Relations from the Uninsured Employers Benefits Trust Fund pursuant to Lab. Code § 4903.3 [Lab. Code § 4903.3]. If more than one lien is allowed, the WCAB may determine the priorities, if any, between them [Lab. Code § 4903].

The following liens against compensation may be determined and allowed by the WCAB:

(1) A reasonable attorney's fee for legal services pertaining to a workers' compensation claim before the WCAB or any of the appellate courts, and reasonable disbursements in connection therewith, but no fee for legal services may be awarded to a representative who is not an attorney licensed by the California State Bar, except with respect to claims for which an application under Lab. Code § 5501 was filed on or before December 31, 1991, or for which a disclosure form under Lab. Code § 4906 was sent to the employer, or insurer or third-party administrator if either is known, on or before December 31, 1991 [Lab. Code § 4903(a); see also Lab. Code § 4906; Longval v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1996) 51 Cal. App. 4th 792, 799-803 (Lab. Code § 4903(a), allowing attorney's fees only to attorneys licensed in California, held constitutional)];

(2) The reasonable expense of required medical treatment for the injury and, to the extent the employee is entitled to reimbursement under Lab. Code § 4621, medical-legal expenses as provided in Lab. Code §§ 4620-4628 [Lab. Code § 4903(b); see also Lab. Code §§ 4903.4 (resolution of disputes regarding liens by arbitration), 4906(a); Zenith Ins. Co. v. W.C.A.B. (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 373, 376-377, 41 Cal. Rptr. 3d 380 (Appeals Board's awards to lien claimants, outpatient medical treatment centers, were not supported by substantial evidence, because lien claimants, in order to establish their right to reimbursement, bore initial burden of proving they were properly licensed or accredited, and they had not carried this burden)];

(3) The reasonable value of the employee's or dependents' living expenses subsequent to the injury [Lab. Code § 4903(c); see Prudential Insurance Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 776, 780, 151 Cal. Rptr. 537, 588 P.2d 239 (purpose of this lien is to protect persons who advance credit or loan money to dependents for necessary living expenses)];

(4) The deceased employee's reasonable burial expenses not to exceed the amount specified in Lab. Code § 4701 (liability of employer for burial expenses and death benefits) [Lab. Code § 4903(d)];

(5) The reasonable living expenses of the injured employee's spouse, minor children, or both subsequent to the date of injury, if the employee hasdeserted or is neglecting his or her family [Lab. Code § 4903(e)];

(6) Unemployment compensation disability benefits paid under or pursuant to the Unemployment Insurance Code in those cases when, pending a determination under the workers' compensation law, there was uncertainty whether such benefits were payable under the workers' compensation law or the Unemployment Insurance Code [Lab. Code § 4903(f); see Lab. Code §§ 3865, 4903.2 (attorney's fees), 4904 (determination of amount of lien, effect ofdetermination, payment); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10772; California-Western States Life Ins. Co. v. Industrial Acci. Com. (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 257, 262-266, 28 Cal. Rptr. 872, 379 P.2d 328] ;

(7) Unemployment compensation benefits and extended duration benefits paid to the injured employee for the same day or days for which he or she received, or was entitled to receive, temporary total disability indemnity payments [Lab. Code § 4903(g); see Lab. Code §§ 3865, 4903.2 (attorney's fees), 4904 (determination of amount of lien, effect of determination, payment); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10772; California-Western States Life Ins. Co. v. Industrial Acci. Com. (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 257, 262-266, 28 Cal. Rptr. 872, 379 P.2d 328] ;

(8) The amount of family temporary disability insurance benefits paid to the injured employee pursuant to the Unemployment Insurance Code for the same days for which the employee is entitled to receive temporary total disability benefits, as this lien is allowed by Lab. Code § 4904(b)(3) [Lab. Code § 4903(h)];

(9) The amount of indemnification granted pursuant to Gov. Code § 13950 et seq. (victims of crime) [Lab. Code § 4903(i)]; and

(10) The amount of compensation, including expenses of medical treatment, and recoverable costs paid by the Asbestos Workers' Account pursuant to the provisions of Lab. Code § 4401 et seq. [Lab. Code § 4903(j)].

For notice and request for allowance of lien form, see § 577.480. See also §§ 577.481[1], 577.482[1] for forms used when liens are reduced or settled.

[2] Asbestos Workers

With respect to asbestos workers, it should be noted that the provisions of Lab. Code §§ 4401-4418 that provide for the payment of workers' compensation asbestos workers' benefits from the Asbestos Workers Account were repealed by their own terms on January 1, 1989. As of that date, all payments from the fund were terminated and the state had no further obligation to pay asbestos workers' benefits. The authority of the Asbestos Workers' Account under Lab. Code

§§ 4401-4418 to recover the benefits and costs paid to asbestos workers prior to January 1, 1989, however, continue until the benefits and costs have been recovered [Lab. Code § 4418]. Therefore, the WCAB apparently may still determine and allow a lien filed by the Asbestos Workers' Account to recover moneys expended for compensation benefits [see Lab. Code § 4414 (filing of lien by Account)].

[3] Reimbursement for Benefits or Services Provided in Award or Approval of Compromise and Release Agreement

Before issuing an award or approval of any compromise of claim, the WCAB, arbitrator, or settlement conference referee must determine, on thebasis of the liens filed pursuant to Lab. Code § 4903.1(b) or discussed under (c), [§ 577.262], whether any benefits have been paid or services provided by a health care provider, a health care service plan, a group disability policy, including a loss of income policy, a self-insured employee welfare benefit plan, or a hospital service contract, and its award or approval must provide for reimbursement for benefits paid or services provided under such plans as set forth in Lab. Code § 4903.1(a)(1)-(4) [Lab. Code § 4903.1(a)].

When a Medi-Cal lien filed by the Department of Human Services is settled as part of a compromise and release agreement, recovery on the lien is limited to an amount derived from applying Welf. & Inst. Code § 14124.72, 14124.76, or 14124.78, whichever is less [Welf. & Inst. Code § 14124.785]. However, when the Medi-Cal lien is not included in the compromise and release, it may, like any other successfully litigated lien in this situation, be recovered in its full amount [Boehm & Associates v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2003) 108 Cal. App. 4th 137, 150152, 133 Cal. Rptr. 2d 396 (medical provider in this situation who has received payment under Medi-Cal is entitled to file lien for services but may recover on lien only after reimbursing any fees paid by Medi-Cal)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

14. Liens Against Compensation

51-577 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 577.262

§ 577.262 Procedure for Claiming

Unless the lien claimant is excepted by 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10228(c)(5)(A)-(C) [see § 577.106[2]], any lien claimant under Lab. Code § 4903 or 4903.1 [see [1], [2], above] must file its lien in writing using an optical character recognition (OCR) lien form approved by the Appeals Board or electronically as approved by the Administrative Director or the Court Administrator [see § 577.480[1]]. Lien claimants excepted by 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10228(c)(5)(A)-(C) [see § 577.106[2]] may file a lien using a non-optical character recognition form, provided that it is in the same format and contains the same information as the corresponding OCR form approved by the Appeals Board [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10770(a)].

All lien claims filed must be accompanied by (1) a full statement or itemized voucher supporting the lien and justifying the right to reimbursement; and (2) a proof of service [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10770(b)].

All liens, along with the full statement or itemized voucher supporting the lien, must be concurrently served as follows [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10770(c)]:

1. The injured worker (or, if deceased, the worker's dependent(s)) must be served, unless (A) the worker or dependent is represented by an attorney or other agent of record, in which event service may be made solely on the attorney or agent of record; or (B) the underlying case of the worker or dependent(s) has been resolved. For purposes of this rule, the underlying case will be deemed to have been resolved if any of the following has occurred:

i. In a stipulated findings and award or in a compromise and release agreement, a defendant has agreed to hold the worker or dependent(s) harmless from the specific lien claim being filed and has agreed to pay, adjust, or litigate that lien.

ii. A defendant had written notice of the lien in accordance with Lab. Code § 4904(a) before the lien was filed and, in a stipulated findings and award or in a compromise and release agreement, that defendant has agreed to hold the worker or dependent harmless from all lien claims and has agreed to pay, adjust, or litigate all liens.

iii. The application for adjudication of claim filed by the worker or the dependent(s) has been dismissed, and the lien claimant is filing or has filed a new application.

iv. The worker or the dependent(s) choose(s) not to proceed with his, her, or their case.

2. Any employer(s) or insurance carrier(s) that are parties to the case must be served, unless the employer(s) or insurance carrier(s) is/are represented by an attorney or other agent of record, in which event service may be made solely upon the attorney(s) or other agent(s) of record.

Service of a lien on a party constitutes notice to it of the existence of the lien.

The Appeals Board will not accept for filing a lien that does not bear an adjudication case number previously assigned by the Board for the injury, unless the lien claimant is also filing an initial (case opening) application in accordance with 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10770.5 [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10770(d)].

The lien claimant must provide the name, mailing address, and daytime telephone number of a person who will be available at the time of all conferences and trials, and who will have authority to resolve the lien on behalf of the lien claimant [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10770(e)].

After a lien has been filed, the lien claimant must file any amendments to the lien, together with a full statement or itemized voucher supporting the amendment, and serve the amended lien in accordance with the service provisions set forth above. When filing an amended lien, the lien claimant must indicate on the box set forth on the lien form that it is an "amended" lien. For purposes of this rule, an "amended" lien includes (1) a lien that is for or includes additional services or charges for the same injured employee for the same date or dates of injury; (2) a lien that reflects a change in the amount of the lien based on payments made by the defendant; or (3) a lien that has been corrected for clerical or mathematical error. A subsequent lien claim that adds an additional adjudication case number or numbers is an "amended" lien with respect to the adjudication case number(s) originally listed [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10770(f)].

Within five business days after a lien has been resolved or withdrawn, the lien claimant must notify the Appeals Board, the party defendant(s), and the worker or dependent(s) (except as provided in subsection (c), discussed above) [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10770(g)].

The lien claimant must be notified by the Appeals Board when any hearing is scheduled, whether or not the hearing directly involves the lien [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10770(h)].

Inclusion of the injured employee's Social Security number on a lien form is voluntary, not mandatory. A failure to provide a Social Security number will not have any adverse consequences. Nevertheless, although a lien claimant is not required by law to include the employee's social security number, lien claimants are encouraged to do so because this will facilitate the processing and filing of the lien claim. Social security numbers are used solely for identification and verification purposes in order to administer the workers' compensation system. A social security number will not be disclosed, made available, or otherwise used for purposes other than those specified, except with the consent of the employee, or as permitted or required by statute, regulation, or judicial order [8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10770(i)].

In 2003 the legislature enacted, and in 2004 amended, Lab. Code § 4903.05, establishing a filing fee of $100 for medical liens. Liens filed by the Veterans Administration, the Medi-Cal program, and public hospitals were excepted from the requirement [see Stats. 2003, ch. 639, § 33; Stats. 2004, ch. 34, § 39]. Effective July 1, 2006, however, the legislature repealed Lab. Code § 4903.05, thereby abolishing the filing fee [see Stats. 2006, ch. 69, § 25]. According to the Division of Workers' Compensation, the intent of requiring a filing fee was to share costs of the workers' compensation system, which was otherwise funded entirely by employers, and to stop medical providers from filing unnecessary liens when reimbursement for their services was not in doubt. However, the cost of filing the liens was being passed through to employers, and the number of liens filed did not decrease. At the same time, the DWC had to process the liens and related filing fees, which did not positively impact the system or the settling of claims, but instead created a process that was inefficient and took DWC staff away from other duties. It is assumed that the regulation promulgated pursuant to former Lab. Code § 4903.05 will be repealed or amended [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10250].

In an apparent attempt to address some of the problems that gave rise to the now-being-repealed Lab. Code § 4903.05, the legislature enacted Lab. Code § 4903.6, effective July 1, 2006. This statute provides that, except as necessary to satisfy the statute of limitations governing the filing of liens for medical treatment expenses and medical-legal expenses [see Lab. Code § 4903.5], no such lien claim or application for adjudication may be filed until the expiration of one of the following [Lab. Code § 4903.6(a); see Lab. Code § 4903(b) (authorizing payment of liens for medical treatment expenses and medical-legal expenses)]:

- Sixty days after the date of acceptance or rejection of liability for the claim, or expiration of the time provided for investigation of liability pursuant to Lab. Code § 5402(b), whichever date is earlier.

- The time provided for payment of medical treatment bills pursuant to Lab. Code § 4603.2.

- The time provided for payment of medical-legal expenses pursuant to Lab. Code § 4622.

No declaration of readiness to proceed may be filed for a medical expenses lien or a medical-legal expenses lien until the underlying case has been resolved or when the employee chooses not to proceed with his or her case [Lab. Code § 4903.6(b)].

The Appeals Board is required to adopt reasonable regulations to ensure compliance with Lab. Code § 4903.6, and it is instructed to take any further steps that may be necessary to enforce the regulations, including, but not limited to, impositions of sanctions pursuant to Lab. Code § 5813 [Lab. Code § 4903.6(c)].

The prohibitions of Lab. Code § 4903.6 do not apply to lien claims, applications for adjudication, or declarations of readiness to proceed filed by or on behalf of the employee, or to the filings by or on behalf of the employer [Lab. Code § 4903.6(d)].

In 2002, the legislature enacted a statute of limitations governing the filing of lien claims [see Stats. 2002, ch. 6, § 70].

Effective January 1, 2003, no lien claim for expenses as provided in Lab. Code § 4903(b) may be filed after whichever is the latest date among the following [Lab. Code § 4903.5(a)]:

- Six months from the date on which the Appeals Board or a workers' compensation administrative law judge issues a final decision, findings, order (including an order approving compromise and release), or award, on the merits of the claim.

- Five years from the date of the injury for which the services were provided.

- One year from the date the services were provided.

Notwithstanding these time limits, any health care provider, health care service plan, group disability insurer, employee benefit plan, or other entity providing medical benefits on a nonindustrial basis, may file a lien claim for expenses as provided in Lab. Code § 4903(b) within six months after the person or entity first has knowledge that an industrial injury is being claimed [Lab. Code § 4903.5(b)].

The injured worker is not liable for any underlying obligation if a lien claim hasnot been filed and served within the allowable period. Except when the lien claimant is the applicant as provided in Lab. Code § 5501, a lien claimant may not file a declaration of readiness to proceed in any case until the case-in-chief has been resolved [Lab. Code § 4903.5(c)].

This section does not apply to civil actions brought under the Cartwright Act (Bus. & Prof. Code, Div. 7, Part 2, Ch. 2), the Unfair Practices Act (Bus. & Prof. Code, Div. 7, Part 2, Ch. 4), or the federal Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organization Act (18 U.S.C. Ch. 96) based on concerted action with other insurers that are not parties to the case in which the lien or claim is filed [Lab. Code § 4903.5(d)].

[1] In General

If written notice is given to the insurer or uninsured employer of the nature and extent of any claim that is allowable as a lien, the claim is a lien against any amount thereafter payable as compensation, subject to the determination of the amount and approval of the lien by the WCAB [Lab. Code § 4904].

[2] Employment Development Department Liens

If the Employment Development Department (EDD) serves an insurer or employer with a lien claim, the insurer or employer must provide the EDD with written notice of commencing disability indemnity payments. The notice must be provided as soon as possible, but in no event later than 15 working days after the payments commence. Further, the insurer or employer must notify the EDD, in writing, within 10 working days of filing with the WCAB an application for adjudication, a stipulated award, or a compromise and release [Lab. Code § 4904].

After a lien has been filed, the lien claimant must continue to serve amendments to it on the parties. Amendments must be filed only upon the filing of a declaration of readiness, compromise and release, or stipulations with request for award or order, or upon receipt of a notice of hearing. An amendment to a lien filed at any other time, and any attachments to such an amendment, will not be filed and may be discarded by the WCAB. If a lien has been filed electronically, upon the filing of a declaration of readiness, compromise and release, or stipulations with request for award or order, or upon receipt of a notice of hearing, the lien claimant must file a full statement or itemized voucher supporting the lien unless the lien claimant advises in writing, or electronically, that the lien has been resolved or withdrawn [*8 Cal. 51-577 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 577.265

§ 577.265 Payment of Lien

The WCAB may order the amount of any lien claim, as determined and allowed by it, to be paid directly to the person entitled, either in a lump sum or in installments [Lab. Code § 4904]. The payment of liens does not affect the commencement of immediate payments on any balance of the award to the injured claimant when an installment payment for his or her disability has been determined [Lab. Code § 4904.1].

[1] Order to Pay Claim When No Lien Requested

When it appears that a lien should be allowed, had it been duly requested by the party entitled to it, the WCAB may, without any request for the lien having been made, order the payment of the claim to be made directly to the person entitled, in the same manner and with the same effect as though the lien had been regularly requested. The award constitutes a lien against unpaid compensation due at the time the award is served [Lab. Code § 4905].

[2] Compromise and Release Agreements

The WCAB may approve a compromise and release agreement on all other issues and may defer to subsequent proceedings determination ofa lien claimant's entitlement to reimbursement if the defendant agrees to pay the amount subsequently determined to be due under the lien claim [Lab. Code § 4904]. For discussion and forms concerning compromise and release generally, see § 577.130 et seq. and §§ 477.460 -577.462.

15. Judicial Review

§ 577.281 Manner of Review and Jurisdiction

Judicial review is by writ of review [see Lab. Code §§ 5810, 5950, 5952]. Jurisdiction to issue such writs is in the California Supreme Court and courts of appeal [Lab. Code § 5955; see Cal. Const., art. XIV, § 4; Lab. Code §§ 5910, 5950]. No new or additional evidence can be introduced on such review and the cause must be heard on the WCAB's certified record [Lab. Code § 5951].

A superior court does not have subject matter jurisdiction over an action to declare provisions of the Workers' Compensation Act invalid and to enjoin the WCAB from enforcing those provisions [Lab. Code § 5955; Greener v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 1028, 1034, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 539, 863 P.2d 784] . Only the Courts of Appeal and the Supreme Court have jurisdiction to entertain challenges to the constitutional validity of provisions of the workers' compensation law [Greener v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 1028, 1046, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 539, 863 P.2d 784] . Similarly, the superior court has no jurisdiction to review Appeals Board decisions, invoked pursuant to Gov. Code § 21166, to determine the industrial nature of the disability of a public safety employee who is a member of the Public Employees Retirement System. Rather, appeals of such decisions must be taken to the court of appeal or the Supreme Court, as in workers' compensation cases generally [Abraham v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2003) 113 Cal. App. 4th 1082, 1087-1089, 6 Cal. Rptr. 3d 820] . A party who is aggrieved by an order of the WCAB applying the workers' compensation law to that party may seek relief by filing a petition forreview of the WCAB's order with the Court of Appeal or the Supreme Court, or by filing a petition for a writ of mandate with the Court of Appeal or the Supreme Court if the criteria for extraordinary relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 1085 are satisfied [Greener v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 1028, 1046, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 539, 863 P.2d 784] .

15. Judicial Review

51-577 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 577.282

§ 577.282 Scope of Review

Judicial review is limited to determining whether [Lab. Code § 5952; see Braewood Convalescent Hospital v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1983) 34 Cal. 3d 159, 164, 193 Cal. Rptr. 157, 666 P.2d 14] :

- The WCAB acted without or in excess of its powers;
- The order, decision, or award was procured by fraud;
- The order, decision, or award was unreasonable;
- The order, decision, or award was not supported by substantial evidence; or
- The findings of fact, if any, support the order, decision, or award.

In making these determinations, the court may not hold a trial de novo, take evidence, or exercise its independent judgment on the evidence [Lab. Code § 5952].

The WCAB's findings and conclusions on questions of fact are conclusive and final and are not subject to review so long as, based on the entire record, the are supported by substantial evidence. Questions of fact include ultimate facts and the findings and conclusions of the WCAB [Lab. Code § 5953]. However, the reviewing court is not bound to accept the WCAB's findings if the findings are unreasonable [Rouseyrol v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 1476, 1483, 286 Cal. Rptr. 250] . Moreover, a reviewing court is not bound by the WCAB's conclusions on questions of law. When a compensation award is based on an erroneous interpretation of law, it will be annulled by the reviewing court [Save Mart Stores v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 720, 723, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 597] .

The filing of a petition, or the pendency of a review proceeding, does not automatically stay or suspend operation of the WCAB's order, rule, decision, or award, but the court may, on the giving of an appropriate undertaking as required by Lab. Code §§ 6000-6002, stay or suspend its operation in whole or in part on the terms and conditions that it directs [Lab. Code § 5956].

Moreover, the WCAB may by order direct that no certified copy of the final order, decision, or award be issued. This order has the same effect as an order staying execution [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10825]. When a party intending to file for a writ of review requests a stay of execution or withholding issuance of a certified copy of the order, decision, or award that is the subject of the party's complaint, the request will ordinarily be granted, conditioned on the filing of a bond from an approved suretyequivalent to twice the probable amount of liability in the case [*8 Cal. Any such fee is in addition to the amount of compensation otherwise recoverable and must be paid as part of the award by the party liable to pay the award [Lab. Code § 5801; see Nelson & Sloan v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1978) 79 Cal. App. 3d 51, 53, 144 Cal. Rptr. 614] . Moreover, under Lab. Code § 5811(a), providing that in all proceedings before the Workers' Compensation Appeals Board costs as between the parties may be allowed by the board, the board is authorized to award reasonable costs, including printing costs, incurred by an injured employee in answering a petition for a writ of review filed by a compensation carrier which is summarily denied by the reviewing court [Johnson v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1984) 37 Cal. 3d 235, 242, 207 Cal. Rptr. 857, 689 P.2d 1127 (disapproving contrary dictum in Employers Mut. Liab. Ins. Co. v. Workmen's Comp. Appeals Bd. (1975) 46 Cal. App. 3d 104, 108 n.2, 120 Cal. Rptr. 48)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Civil Actions Against Employer--Exclusive Remedy Principle

51-577 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 577.311

§ 577.311 Workers' Compensation as Exclusive Remedy in Employee Injury Cases

[1] Scope of Principle

As a general rule, if all the conditions of compensation have been met, workers' compensation is the exclusive remedy for employment-related injuries [Lab. Code §§ 3601, 3602; see Lab. Code § 3600(a); see also the General Introduction under Conditions of Compensation Liability]. This principle provides tort immunity for the employer of an injured worker for any injury that is within the scope of workers' compensation coverage [Lab. Code § 3602(a); see Logan v. Masters (1981) 120 Cal. App. 3d 145, 147, 174 Cal. Rptr. 465 ; see also Shoemaker v. Myers (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 1, 15, 276 Cal. Rptr. 303, 801 P.2d 1054 (basis for workers' compensation and the exclusive remedy provisions is an injury sustained during and arising out of the course of employment)]. The employer's workers' compensation insurance carrier stands in the employer's shoes, and may invoke the exclusive remedy defense [Continental Casualty Co. v. Superior Court (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 156, 159, 235 Cal. Rptr. 260 ; see Lab. Code § 3850(b); see also discussion under § 577.312].

[2] Application of Principle

This immunity applies to an action for damages arising from the industrial injury brought by any person on any theory [Lab. Code § 3600(a); see Salin v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (1982) 136 Cal. App. 3d 185, 190-193, 185 Cal. Rptr. 899 (and cases cited therein)]. Also as a general rule, suits against coemployees are also barred by the exclusive remedy principle in the same manner as suits against employers [Lab. Code § 3601(a)]. There are, however, express statutory exceptions to the exclusive remedy principle [see Lab. Code §§ 3601, 3602(b), discussed in §§ 577.312, 577.317].

The fact that either the employer or the employee also occupied another or dual capacity prior to or at the time of the employee's industrial injury does not negate the operation of the exclusive remedy principle [Lab. Code § 3602(a)]. This statutory rule negates the common-law "dual capacity" doctrine, under which an employer who would otherwise be shielded from tort liability by the exclusive remedy principle became liable in tort to an employee if the employer occupied a second capacity that conferred obligations independent of those imposed by the employment relationship [see, e.g., Power Fabricating, Inc. v. State Compensation Ins. Fund (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 1446, 1453-1454, 84 Cal. Rptr. 3d 770]. An employee may, however, be permitted to bring an action at law for damages against the employer when the employer's dual capacity did not exist at the time of the injury, but rather arose after the injury.

For example, an employee of a medical center who was injured on the job and who was treated for these injuries at the center was held entitled to bring a malpractice action against her employer and the treating physician, since the employer's dual capacity did not exist until after the injury [Sturtevant v. County of Monterey (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 758, 764-767, 279 Cal. Rptr. 161] . Similarly, an action by an injured employee against the employer for negligent spoliation of evidence (no longer a recognized tort in California, see § 577.313[5]) was not barred by Lab. Code § 3602(a) because the second or dual capacity that the employer allegedly occupied when it lost the evidence came into existence after, not prior to or at the time of, the employee's injury [Coca-Cola Bottling Co. v. Superior Court (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 1273, 1292-1293, 286 Cal. Rptr. 855] .

The exclusive remedy principle does not apply to an action against a third party whose conduct is alleged to have been a cause of the employee's injury [see Lab. Code § 3852, discussed in Subpart C, § 577.330 et seq.].

[3] Burden of Proof

As a general rule, the employer-defendant has the burden of pleading and proving as an affirmative defense that the Workers' Compensation Act is a bar to an employee's civil action [Popejoy v. Hannon (1951) 37 Cal. 2d 159, 173-174, 231 P.2d 484 ; Green v. City of Oceanside (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 212, 224, 239 Cal. Rptr. 470 ; Iverson v. Atlas Pacific Engineering (1983) 143 Cal. App. 3d 219, 224, 191 Cal. Rptr. 696 ; Power Fabricating, Inc. v. State Compensation Insurance Fund (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 1446, 1453-1454, 84 Cal. Rptr. 3d 770]. Failure to plead the exclusive remedy principle as an affirmative defense results in a waiver of that defense [Green v. City of Oceanside (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 212, 224, 239 Cal. Rptr. 470] . However, if the complaint affirmatively alleges facts indicating coverage by the workers' compensation laws and fails to allege additional facts negating application of the exclusive remedy principle, no civil action will lie and the complaint is subject to demurrer [Colombo v. State of California (1991) 3 Cal. App. 4th 594, 599, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 567 ; Halliman v. Los Angeles Unified School Dist. (1984) 163 Cal. App. 3d 46, 50, 209 Cal. Rptr. 175 (allegation in complaint that plaintiff was defendant's employee, that accident occurred during work hours and on work premises, and that plaintiff was acting with scope of employment)].

For a form for an affirmative defense alleging that an action is barred by the exclusive remedy principle, see § 522.530[1].

51-577 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 577.312

§ 577.312 Exceptions to Exclusive Remedy Principle Permitting Suit Against Employer

[1] In General

An employee or his or her dependents may avoid the application of the Workers' Compensation Act and bring a tort action against the employer only if the action falls within an exception to the exclusive remedy principle. The exclusive remedy principle may be avoided by showing one or more of the following:

- That the employer of the injured worker was uninsured [see Lab. Code § 3706, discussed under [2], below].

- That one or more of the conditions to compensation have not been met, and thus, the injury is of a type that is outside of the application of workers' compensation law [see Lab. Code § 3602(c), discussed in [3], below; Shoemaker v. Myers (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 1, 14-15, 276 Cal. Rptr. 303, 801 P.2d 1054 (exclusive remedy principle as applicable only in the case of personal injury or death sustained in and arising out of course of employment); see also Lab. Code § 3600(a)(1)-(10), discussed under § 577.23].

- That the employee's injury or death falls within one of the four express statutory exceptions to the exclusive remedy principle that apply to insured employers and injuries within the scope of workers' compensation [see Lab. Code §§ 3602(b), 4558, discussed under [2], below].

- That the action involves conduct by an employer that violates fundamental public policy or is otherwise outside the scope of the "compensation bargain" [see City of Moorpark v. Superior Court of Ventura County (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1143, 1152-1153 Gantt v. Sentry Insurance (1992) 1 Cal. 4th 1083, 1101, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 874, 824 P.2d 680 ; Shoemaker v. Myers (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 1, 16, 276 Cal. Rptr. 303, 801 P.2d 1054 ; see also § 577.315[2]]. The court of appeal has relied on City of Moorpark to support the view that the workers' compensation laws do not provide the exclusive remedy for a plaintiff pleading a Fair Employment and Housing Act claim for physical damages as a result of an employer's unlawful business practice, as defined by Gov. Code § 12940(m), of failing to provide reasonable accommodation for the plaintiff's nonindustrial disability from polio. Such an unlawful business practice, said the court, was not part of the compensation bargain. Moreover, the public policies enacted in the Fair Employment and Housing Act precluded a finding that workers' compensation was the exclusive remedy for the plaintiff's claim [Bagatti v. Department of Rehabilitation (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 344, 356-357, 364-367, 118 Cal. Rptr. 2d 443] . On the other hand, in a civil action by an injured agricultural laborer against his employer (a licensed farm labor contractor), the court of appeal has held that the California Farm Labor Contractors Act, Lab. Code § 1682 et seq., does not provide an exception to the exclusive remedy rule of the workers' compensation laws [Ruiz v. Cabrera (2002) 98 Cal. App. 4th 1198, 1199, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 320] .

In one case, the exclusive remedy rule was held not to bar a civil action between an injured workers' union and the employer in which the union sought to compel the employer to arbitrate the worker's return to work under terms of the collective bargaining agreement. Such an action, the court held, is an equitable action to compel specific performance of the contract and is thus not an "action at law" pursuant to Lab. Code § 3602(a) that would be prohibited by the exclusive remedy rule. The worker was seeking arbitration on the claim for her salary for the period when she was allegedly no longer suffering the disabling effects of an industrial injury and was able to work, but denied the right to work guaranteed in the collective bargaining agreement. This, said the court, was not a workers' compensation issue. The worker was also seeking arbitration of her demand to be returned to work, and the court noted that a return to work is not one of the workers' compensation benefits available by statute to which the exclusive remedy rule would apply [Amalgamated Transit Union, Local 1277 v. Amalgamated Transit Union Local 1277 (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 673, 682-684, 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 207] .

[2] Civil Action Against Uninsured Employer

[a] In General

If an employer has failed to secure the payment of workers' compensation, any injured employee (or his or her dependents) may bring an action at law against the employer for damages as if the Workers' Compensation Act did not apply [Lab. Code § 3706]. A copy of the complaint must be served on the Uninsured Employers Benefits Trust Fund [Lab. Code § 3708.5]. In addition, the plaintiff may also file for workers' compensation benefits to be paid from the Fund [Lab. Code § 3715; see discussion under § 577.13[4]]. Jurisdiction of the superior court to try claims of an employee against his or her employer for damages under Lab. Code § 3706 arises only when payment of compensation is not secured. Under the exclusivity provisions of the workers' compensation law, this is true even though, in some instances, a particular worker may have a better claim in a state civil action [Rymer v. Hagler (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 1171, 1177, 260 Cal. Rptr. 76] .

A failure to secure compensation refers to a failure by the employer to obtain insurance or to be self-insured, as required by Lab. Code § 3700 [see § 577.13[3]]. No such action may be brought simply because the employer or its insurer has denied payment. In the civil action, the plaintiff must plead and prove a violation of Lab. Code § 3700, which sets forth employer insurance requirements [Campos Food Fair v. Superior Court (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 965, 968, 238 Cal. Rptr. 685] . That is, the employee has the burden of showing that there was no workers' compensation coverage [Rymer v. Hagler (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 1171, 1178, 260 Cal. Rptr. 76] . However, if the plaintiff does not allege an employment relationship, a defendant who is found to be an employer must show that compensation was secured [Muffett v. Royster (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 289, 299, 195 Cal. Rptr. 73] .

In any action against an uninsured employer, principles of fault apply [see Logan v. Masters (1981) 120 Cal. App. 3d 145, 148, 174 Cal. Rptr. 465] . However, except in the case of certain household employees, it is presumed that the injury to the employee directly resulted from and grew out of the negligence of the employer. The burden of proof is on the employer to rebut this presumption. Comparative negligence, either of the employee or of a coemployee, and assumption of the risk are not defenses to the action, regardless of the provision of any contract [Lab. Code § 3708; see Logan v. Masters (1981) 120 Cal. App. 3d 145, 174 Cal. Rptr. 465] . The statutory presumption that the employee's injury was due to the uninsured employer's negligence does not extend, however, to a presumption that the employee's claimed injury arose in the course of employment. Rather, an employee seeking damages from an uninsured employer has the same burden of proof as an employee seeking workers' compensation benefits, i.e., the employee bears the burden of proving that the injury was sustained in the course of employment. Thus, if an injury arising from the employment is shown, it is presumed to have resulted from the employer's negligence, and the employer is then required to rebut that presumption to avoid liability [Huang v. L.A. Haute (2003) 106 Cal. App. 4th 284, 289-291, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 619] . For discussion of comparative negligence generally, see Ch. 380, Negligence , and Levy, Golden & Sacks, California Torts, ch. 4 (Matthew Bender).

It is no defense that the employer did not intentionally fail to secure payment [Hicks v. Ocean Shore Railroad, Inc. (1941) 18 Cal. 2d 773, 787, 117 P.2d 850] . The fact that an employer pays the employee's medical bills and wages during disability or otherwise compensates the employee does not bar a suit for damages if the employer was not properly secured prior to the injury [see Coffin v. Bloodworth (1938) 28 Cal. App. 2d 522, 524, 82 P.2d 953] . In a case of dual employment, if one employer is insured and the other is not, the injured employee (or his or her dependents) may obtain a workers' compensation award jointly and severally against both employers and still maintain an action at law against the uninsured employer [Strickland v. Foster (1985) 165 Cal. App. 3d 114, 118-119, 211 Cal. Rptr. 305 ; for further discussion of dual employment, see § 577.22[2]].

The court of appeal has held that, in a plaintiff's personal injury action filed under Lab. Code § 3706, the employer's liability is determined under rules of pleading and proof that differ significantly from those of a common-law personal injury action. Consequently, this statute creates a statutory cause of action for personal injuries subject to the three-year statute of limitations in Code of Civ. Proc. § 338(a) [Valdez v. Himmelfarb (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 1261, 1269-1270, 51 Cal. Rptr. 3d 195] .

For a form for a complaint for use in a civil action against an uninsured employer, see § 577.522[1].

[b] Attachment of Employer's Property

At any time on or after the institution of the action, the plaintiff may attach the property of the employer, in an amount fixed by the court, to secure the payment of any judgment that is ultimately obtained. The provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure generally govern the issuance of and proceedings on the attachment [Lab. Code § 3707; see Ch. 62, Attachment].

[c] Judgment

Any compensation awarded, paid, or secured by the employer must be credited against the judgment. The court must allow the amount of any compensation paid from the Uninsured Employers Benefits Trust Fund as a first lien against the judgment. There is also a similar lien against any proceeds of settlement, either before or after judgment. The judgment must include a reasonable attorney's fee fixed by the court [Lab. Code § 3709].

The amount of the judgment may not be increased by 10 percent for the employer's failure to insure pursuant to Lab. Code § 4554, because thatsection provides for an increase only in the amount of "compensation" payable and not in the amount of "damages" payable pursuant to a civil action under Lab. Code § 3706 [Leung v. Chinese Six Companies (1992) 2 Cal. App. 4th 801, 806-807] .

[d] Employees of Unlicensed and Uninsured Subcontractors

Although an injured employee of an unlicensed and uninsured subcontractor is covered by a general contractor's workers' compensation insurance under the provisions of Lab. Code § 2750.2, the uninsured subcontractor may, nevertheless, be liable in tort to the injured employee pursuant to Lab. Code § 3706 [Hernandez v. Chavez Roofing, Inc. (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1092, 1094-1095, 286 Cal. Rptr. 919 ; Cedillo v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2003) 106 Cal. App. 4th 227, 232, 236-237, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 581] .

[3] Civil Action if Conditions of Compensation Have Not Been Met

[a] In General

In all cases in which the conditions of compensation of Lab. Code § 3600 do not concur, the liability of the employer is the same as if there were no workers' compensation law [Lab. Code § 3602(c); see Lab. Code § 3600(a)(1)-(10) (conditions of compensation), discussed under § 577.23].

[b] Excluded Employment

[i] In General

One of the conditions of compensation is that both the employer and employee be subject to workers' compensation provisions [Lab. Code § 3600(a)(1)]. Thus, if the particular employment is excluded from workers' compensation requirements under Lab. Code § 3352, the exclusive remedy principle does not bar a civil action against the employer based on common law tort principles [see Mantonya v. Bratlie (1948) 33 Cal. 2d 120, 124, 199 P.2d 677 ; Graczyk v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1986) 184 Cal. App. 3d 997, 1003-1004, 229 Cal. Rptr. 494] . For discussion of employers and employees covered and excluded from coverage under the workers' compensation law, see § 577.22.

For a form for a complaint by an employee whose employment is excluded from workers' compensation coverage alleging injury due to the employer's negligence, see § 577.523[1]. For a form for an affirmative defense alleging the negligence of the plaintiff in such an action, see § 577.532.

[ii] Contributory and Comparative Negligence

Such an action, by one whose employment is outside the scope of workers' compensation, is subject to Lab. Code §§ 2800 and 2801 [Devens v. Goldberg (1948) 33 Cal. 2d 173, 176-177, 199 P.2d 943 ; see Logan v. Masters (1981) 120 Cal. App. 3d 145, 147, 174 Cal. Rptr. 465] . Lab. Code § 2800 simply states that an employer is liable for negligence to an employee, negligence that for most employment is remedied exclusively by workers' compensation. However, Lab. Code § 2801 is a special rule of employee "contributory negligence" that predates the adoption in California of principles of comparative negligence [see Li v. Yellow Cab Co. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 804, 828-829, 119 Cal. Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d 1226] . Under this rule, the fact that the employee has been guilty of contributory negligence does not bar recovery if the employee's negligence was slight and that of the employer was gross in comparison. However, damages may be diminished in proportion to the employee's negligence [Lab. Code § 2801]. The effect of the adoption of comparative negligence on this statute has not been resolved. If the statute is not affected by comparative negligence, it would appear that the defense of contributory negligence would bar an action if the employee's negligence were deemed to be greater than that of the employer.

There is also a conclusive presumption that the employee was not guilty of contributory negligence in any case in which the violation of any law enacted for the safety of employees contributed to the employee's injury [Lab. Code § 2801]. The employer also cannot assert the defenses of express or implied assumption of risk and of coemployee negligence [Lab. Code § 2801(a), (b)]. The court of appeal has held, however, that ski resort employees who are exempt from workers' compensation coverage under Lab. Code § 3352(f) are not also exempt from assumption of risk under Lab. Code § 2801, because the latter statute bars employers from raising assumption of risk as a defense in negligence actions by employees only when the employee has been injured in the course of employment. The court found that the legislature, by virtue of it use of the phrase "the course of his employment as such" in Lab. Code § 2801, contemplated a more restrictive concept of course of employment in that statute than in the workers' compensation statutes, only the latter of which include off-duty recreational activities if they are a reasonable expectancy of employment [Vine v. Bear Valley Ski Co. (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 577, 587-590, 13 Cal. Rptr. 3d 370] .

No contract or regulation may exempt the employer from the provisions of Lab. Code § 2801 [Lab. Code § 2801]. Any contract or agreement, express or implied, made by any employee to waive these rights is null and void [see Lab. Code § 2804].

[c] Injury Outside Scope of Employment

The employee must be performing service growing out of or incidental to the employment and acting within the course of the employment as another condition to receiving compensation through the operation of the exclusive remedy principle [Lab. Code § 3600(a)(2)]. Thus, an employeemay bring a civil action against the employer for an injury incurred due to the employer's negligence but while the employee was outside of the scope of employment [Seymour v. Setzer Forest Products, Inc. (1954) 124 Cal. App. 2d 608, 610-611, 268 P.2d 1084 (employee was on premises on his own time before shift began); but see Wright v. Beverly Fabrics, Inc. (2002) 95 Cal. App. 4th 346, 357, 115 Cal. Rptr. 2d 503 (employee's civil negligence suit against her employer barred because workers' compensation law was exclusive remedy, when employee was injured while visiting work on her day off and helping fellow employees hold up collapsing shelf)]. For discussion of the covered scope of employment under the workers' compensation law, see § 577.24.

B. Civil Actions Against Employer--Exclusive Remedy Principle

51-577 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 577.313

§ 577.313 Civil Action for Non-Disabling or Non-Compensable Injuries

[1] Physical Injury

Generally, compensability of an injury is not one of the conditions of compensation that triggers workers' compensation coverage under Lab. Code § 3600(a). Thus, the fact that a particular physical industrial injury is not of a kind that is compensable under workers' compensation law does not avoid the exclusive remedy principle pursuant to Lab. Code § 3602 and permit a civil action. For example, even if a particular injury results in little or no occupational handicap and therefore is subject to little or no permanent disability rating, it does not bring the injury outside of the exclusive remedy principle [Williams v. State Compensation Ins. Fund (1975) 50 Cal. App. 3d 116, 121-123, 123 Cal. Rptr. 812 (sexual dysfunction)].

[2] Emotional Distress

Emotional injuries that cause disability are generally compensable under workers' compensation law [see Livitsanos v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 744, 753-754, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 808, 828 P.2d 1195 ; Lab. Code § 3208.3]. Even if an employee suffers emotional distress that is not disabling, and thus not compensable, the exclusive remedy doctrine will nevertheless bar a civil actions seeking damages for that distress unless the distress is caused by employer actions that contravene fundamental public policy or are otherwise outside the risks inherent in the employment relationship [Livitsanos v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 744, 754-755, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 808, 828 P.2d 1195] . For further discussion, see § 577.315[2].

[3] Defamation

It has been held that injury to reputation is not the kind of injury contemplated under the workers' compensation system, and that therefore an action for defamation by an employee against his or her employer isnot barred by the exclusive remedy principle [Howland v. Balma (1983) 143 Cal. App. 3d 899, 902-905, 192 Cal. Rptr. 286 ; see Shoemaker v. Myers (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 1, 16, 276 Cal. Rptr. 303, 801 P.2d 1054 (citing Howland with apparent approval); see also Livitsanos v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 744, 757, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 808, 828 P.2d 1195 (assuming, without deciding, that certain defamatory remarks in the employment context may be subject to workers' compensation, the seriousness of the allegations in plaintiff's complaint raised issue of whether defendants' conduct was outside the scope and normal risks of employment, and court of appeal directed to address this issue on remand)].

Communications about an employee made by the employee's supervisor to other managers within the organization were presumed to be privileged communications under Civ. Code § 47(c) and, thus, the employee's cause of action against the supervisor for slander per se was properly dismissed when the employee did not meet the burden of defeating this privilege [Kacludis v. GTE Sprint Communications Corp. (N.D. Cal. 1992) 806 F. Supp. 866, 872] . However, it was held that an employee was entitled to bring a defamation action against her employer when the employer had falsely told other employees that she was stealing money from the company and had worked out a deal with the company's health insurer to receive her health insurance benefits to the detriment of other employees [Davaris v. Cubaleski (1993) 12 Cal. App. 4th 1583, 1590-1591, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 330] .

[4] Contract Damages

At least one court has held that when an employee sues an employer for breach of contract, and the same conduct also caused an injury compensable under the workers' compensation law, the employee will be precluded from recovering only those damages caused by the compensable injury [Pichon v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 488, 500, 260 Cal. Rptr. 677] . However, as workers' compensation provides for lost wages for the period of disability, and there is therefore a substantial risk of double recovery in these cases, the amount of workers' compensation paid must be set off from the contract damages [Pichon v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 488, 501, 260 Cal. Rptr. 677] .

In a different context, the court of appeal held that a petition for writ of mandate filed by a public school employee, seeking differential pay and reinstatement under Ed. Code §§ 44977 and 44987.1, not tort damages for a work-related injury, was not preempted by the exclusivity provisions of workers' compensation law [Veguez v. Governing Board of the Long Beach Unified School District (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 406, 417-418, 25 Cal. Rptr. 3d 526] .

[5] Spoliation of Evidence

Following two landmark decisions by the California Supreme Court, the tort of intentional spoliation of evidence no longer exists in California, evenif the alleged spoliator is not a party to the litigation [Cedars-Sinai Medical Center v. Superior Court (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1, 17-18, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 248, 954 P.2d 511 ; Temple Community Hospital v. Superior Court (1999) 20 Cal. 4th 464, 478, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 852, 976 P.2d 223] . Thus, an employee has no remedy against his or her employer for spoliation of evidence relevant to a third-party action. Although the Supreme Court did not address the tort of negligent spoliation of evidence in either of its decisions, it appears very unlikely that this is still a viable theory of recovery given the Court's refusal to recognize the even more egregious conduct-- intentional spoliation--as a basis for tort recovery.

Prior court of appeal decisions have held that the exclusive remedy rule does not bar an employee's tort claim against an employer for negligent spoliation of evidence, since the claim involves an injury to property interests, rather than to the person [see Coca-Cola Bottling Co. v. Superior Court (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 1273, 1285-1287, 286 Cal. Rptr. 855 ; Gomez v. Acquistapace (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 740, 748-752, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 821] .

PRACTICE TIP:

Preservation of Evidence. Although employers and insurance carriers are no longer liable in tort for the intentional spoliation of evidence, defense attorneys would be wise to counsel their clients to preserve any evidence which may be useful in a third-party action. If such evidence is destroyed or damaged, an injured worker's case against a third-party may be significantly weakened, in turn, diminishing the employers opportunity to receive credit or reimbursement for workers' compensation benefits paid to the employee.

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Civil Actions Against Employer--Exclusive Remedy Principle

51-577 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 577.314

§ 577.314 Civil Action Against Employer for Injury Also Within Workers' Compensation Coverage

[1] In General

Lab. Code § 3602(b), as amended in 1982, sets forth three express circumstances under which an employee may bring a civil action against an insured employer for an industrial injury that is also within the scope of workers' compensation coverage [Lab. Code § 3602(b); see discussion below]:

- For the employer's willful assault;
- For the employer's fraudulent concealment of the injury or its relation to the employment; and
- In certain products liability cases.

A fourth express statutory exception involves a failure to install or the removal of a guard on a power press [Lab. Code § 4558; discussed below].

These exceptions represent codifications of some of the previous judicially created exceptions to the exclusive remedy principle [see, e.g., Johns-Manville Products Corp. v. Superior Court (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 465, 165 Cal. Rptr. 858, 612 P.2d 948 (fraudulent concealment of asbestosis)]. Other judicially created exceptions that were not expressly codified in the 1982 amendments [see, e.g., Ramey v. General Petroleum Corp. (1959) 173 Cal. App. 2d 386, 343 P.2d 787 (alleged fraudulent concealment by employer of third-party tortfeasor's culpability for injury until after statute of limitations had run as to third party)] may no longer be valid [see Lab. Code § 3602(a) (only exceptions to exclusive remedy doctrine are those set forth in Lab. Code §§ 3602(b), 3706, and 4558); see also Continental Casualty Co. v. Superior Court (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 156, 162, 235 Cal. Rptr. 260 (stating that statute implies that no other exceptions exist)].

[2] Willful Assault

[a] In General

The exclusive remedy principle does not apply if the employee's injury was proximately caused by a willful physical assault by the employer [Lab. Code § 3602(b)(1)]. In cases decided before the willful-assault exception was statutory, it has been held that the exclusive remedy principle does not apply in the case of an assault committed against an employee by a partner when the employer is a partnership [see Magliulo v. Superior Court (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 760, 767-780, 121 Cal. Rptr. 621] , or in the case of an assault committed by an officer of a labor union [see Meyer v. Graphic Arts International Union (1979) 88 Cal. App. 3d 176, 178, 151 Cal. Rptr. 597 (characterizing officer as agent of union)].

For a form for a complaint against an employer for willful assault, see § 577.524[1].

[b] Assault by Co-employee

In the case of an assault committed by a coemployee, employer liability must be predicated on the employer's positive misconduct constituting ratification of the assault [Iverson v. Atlas Pacific Engineering (1983) 143 Cal. App. 3d 219, 227-228, 191 Cal. Rptr. 696 ; see Lab. Code § 3601(b)]. At least one court has reaffirmed this rule as still valid under the statutory expression of the exception [Hart v. National Mortgage & Land Co. (1987) 189 Cal. App. 3d 1420, 1432, 235 Cal. Rptr. 68] . Thus, the exception to the exclusivity rule contained in Lab. Code § 3602(b)(1), does not authorize civil actions against employers for injury resulting from willful assaults by co-employees based on a theory of respondeat superior, when there is no employer ratification of the co-employee's conduct [Fretland v. County of Humboldt (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 1478, 1491, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 359] .

Additionally, one court of appeal has held that a covered employer cannot be sued by employees for negligent or reckless failure to provide adequate security on the employer's premises, despite knowledge of the potential danger [Arendell v. Auto Parts Club, Inc. (1994) 29 Cal. App. 4th 1261, 1265, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 83 (failure allegedly resulted in assault and kidnapping against two employees perpetrated by non-employee third parties)].

[3] Fraudulent Concealment

[a] In General

The exclusive remedy principle does not apply if the employee's injury is aggravated by the employer's fraudulent concealment of the existence of the injury and its connection with the employment. In such a case, the employer's liability is limited to those damages proximately caused by the aggravation. The burden of proof respecting apportionment of damages between the injury and any subsequent aggravation is on the employer [Lab. Code § 3602(b)(2)]. This statute codifies the holding of Johns-Manville v. Superior Court, in which the California Supreme Court refused to invoke the exclusive remedy principle to bar an action alleging that the employer had fraudulently concealed from its employees its knowledge of the harmful health effects of exposure to asbestos [see Johns-Manville ProductsCorp. v. Superior Court (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 465, 165 Cal. Rptr. 858, 612 P.2d 948] . Punitive damages may also be recovered [McDonald v. Superior Court (1986) 180 Cal. App. 3d 297, 300-303, 225 Cal. Rptr. 394 ; see also Transport Indemnity Co. v. Aerojet General Corp. (1988) 202 Cal. App. 3d 1184, 1186-1191, 249 Cal. Rptr. 463 (holding employer's aggravation of injuries by fraudulent concealment is not necessarily a willful act within meaning of Ins. Code § 533, and as not necessarily releasing insurer from duty to defend or indemnify employer in civil action by employee for aggravation of injury caused by employer's fraudulent concealment of nature and extent of work-induced injuries)].

For a form of complaint for use against an employer alleging fraudulent concealment of injury and its connection with employment, see § 577.525[1].

[b] Affirmative Misrepresentation Not Required

An affirmative misrepresentation is not required; fraudulent concealment encompasses the failure of the employer to reveal pertinent information to the employee. However, the plaintiff must establish the employer's actual knowledge of the information [Foster v. Xerox Corp. (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 306, 309-312, 219 Cal. Rptr. 485, 707 P.2d 858 ; see Palestini v. General Dynamics Corp. (2002) 99 Cal. App. 4th 80, 89-90, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 741 (following Foster in holding that employee seeking to state cause of action need only "in general terms" plead facts that if found true by trier of fact establish existence of three essential elements under Lab. Code § 3602(b)(2), i.e., (1) employer knew that plaintiff had suffered work-related injury, (2) employer concealed that knowledge from plaintiff, and (3) plaintiff's injury was aggravated as result of concealment, and that in determining whether allegations in complaint are legally sufficient trial court must liberally construe pleading with view to achieving substantial justice between parties); see also Ashdown v. Ameron International Corp. (2000) 83 Cal. App. 4th 868, 881, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 20 (fraudulent concealment exception to exclusive remedy rule did not apply to claims stemming from decedent's asbestos related injury and death, when there was no evidence indicating employers knew decedent had asbestos-related disease); Santiago v. Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 1318, 1334, 274 Cal. Rptr. 576 (trial court properly instructed jury that actual knowledge is required for action under Lab. Code § 3602, and did not err in failing to instruct as to constructive knowledge, imputed knowledge, and reckless misrepresentation); Hughes Aircraft Co. v. Superior Court of Orange County (1996) 44 Cal. App. 4th 1790, 1797, 52 Cal. Rptr. 2d 514 (employer's prior knowledge of its unsafe work environment was insufficient to establish that employer had actual prior knowledge of employee's injuries as required under Lab. Code § 3602)].

For example, when the employer established by uncontroverted evidence that the employee had known for years about the possible health problems arising from exposure to asbestos and other chemicals used in the course of his work, and when there was nothing in the record to suggest that the employer withheld any information relevant to the employee's condition from him, the employee was not entitled, as a matter of law, to bring a civil action against the employer pursuant to Lab. Code § 3602(b)(2) [Davis v. Lockheed Corp. (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 519, 522-523, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 233 ; see Jensen v. Amgen, Inc. (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 1322, 1326-1327, 129 Cal. Rptr. 2d 899] .

[c] Statute of Limitations

The fraudulent concealment is regarded as a separate injury from the contraction of the injury in the first instance. Thus, the applicable statute of limitations is not tolled for the purposes of the civil action for fraudulent concealment by the filing of an application for workers' compensation benefits for the injury itself [Aerojet General Corp. v. Superior Court (1986) 177 Cal. App. 3d 950, 954-957, 223 Cal. Rptr. 249] .

[4] Products Liability

The exclusive remedy principle does not apply if the employee's injury or death was proximately caused by a defective product that was manufactured by the employer and sold, leased, or otherwise transferred for valuable consideration to an independent third person, and the product is thereafter provided for the employee's use by a third person [Lab. Code § 3602(b)(3)]. This statute represents a legislative preservation of one aspect of the otherwise-discarded dual capacity doctrine [see Lab. Code § 3602(a) (eliminating dual capacity doctrine in all but above limited products liability circumstances)]. This exception to the exclusive remedy rule was held to be inapplicable in a case in which the employee came into contact with an allegedly defective product as the primary objective of her job, and not as a consumer. In essence, the employee was not provided with the product for her use, but rather it was her job to perform tasks using the product [Behrens v. Fayette Manufacturing Co. (1992) 4 Cal. App. 4th 1567, 1574-1575, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 264] .

[5] Power Press Guard

[a] Removal of or Failure to Install Guard

An employee (or his or her dependents in the case of death) may bring an action at law for damages against the employer if the employee's injury or death is proximately caused by the employer's knowing removal of, or knowing failure to install, a point-of-operation guard on a power press. The removal of or failure to install the guard must have been specifically authorized by the employer under conditions known by the employer to create a probability of serious injury or death [Lab. Code § 4558(b); see Lab. Code §§ 3600(a), 3602(a); see also Watters Associates v. Superior Court (1990)218 Cal. App. 3d 1322, 1325, 267 Cal. Rptr. 696 (temporary machine operator trainee injured because of unguarded power press may not maintain cause of action against employment agency that placed him in job, as he did not allege that employment agency removed or authorized removal of guard; Lab. Code § 4558 as applicable only to employers who directly authorize removal of guard and general agency allegation as insufficient to support cause of action)].

An employee who brings a civil action pursuant to Lab. Code § 4558 may not also allege other causes of action such as negligence and strict liability that require a lesser standard of proof to establish liability [Award Metals, Inc. v. Superior Court (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 1128, 1131, 279 Cal. Rptr. 459] .

[b] Actual Knowledge Required

It appears that the Legislature used the word "known" in Lab. Code § 4558 in the sense of actual awareness. Nothing in that section indicates that the courts may impute knowledge to or impose constructive knowledge on the employer [Saldana v. Globe-Weis Systems Co. (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 1505, 1516-1517, 285 Cal. Rptr. 385] . Moreover, that section does not encompass situations in which the employer does not know of any danger at the time the employer replaces a guard initially installed by the manufacturer, and is subsequently negligent in failing to maintain the replacement guard, since the statute requires that the employer know of the potential danger in removing or replacing the guard at the time the employer actually removes or replaces it [Saldana v. Globe-Weis Systems Co. (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 1505, 1519, 285 Cal. Rptr. 385] . Finally, Lab. Code § 4558 does not apply to an employer's mere act of removing the manufacturer's guard and replacing it with a new guard, without regard to the employer's state of mind in doing so [Saldana v. Globe-Weis Systems Co. (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 1505, 1519-1520, 285 Cal. Rptr. 385] .

The employer is not civilly liable absent proof that the manufacturer designed, installed, required, or otherwise provided by specification for the attachment of the guards and conveyed knowledge of that fact to the employer [Lab. Code § 4558(c); see Jones v. Keppeler (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 705, 710-713, 279 Cal. Rptr. 168 (employer held not liable under Lab. Code § 4558 when information about guard was provided by previous owner of machine and by manufacturer of control system added as modification to machine but was not provided by original manufacturer); Swanson v. Matthews Products, Inc. (1985) 175 Cal. App. 3d 901, 906-907, 221 Cal. Rptr. 84 (proof that press did not meet federal occupational safety standards irrelevant if manufacturer did not communicate specification to employer); see also E. W. Bliss Co. v. Superior Court (1989) 210 Cal. App. 3d 1254, 1259, 258 Cal. Rptr. 783 (mandate proceeding arising out of an action by an employee injured by a punch press against his employer and the manufacturer and seller of the press, in which the court construed Lab. Code § 4558(d), which prohibits any action for contribution or indemnity by any defendant against the employer, but allows a defendant to seek contribution after the employee secures a judgment against the employer pursuant to Lab. Code § 4558 and fails to discharge his or her comparative share of judgment)].

[c] Definitions

[i] Guard

The term "guard," as used in Lab. Code § 4558, includes the myriad types of apparatus available to keep workers' hands outside the point of operation, and is not a term of art [Bingham v. CTS Corp. (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 56, 65, 282 Cal. Rptr. 161] . A point of operation guard is "removed" for purposes of Lab. Code § 4558 when it is rendered dysfunctional or unavailable for use by the operator for the particular task assigned [Bingham v. CTS Corp. (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 56, 68, 282 Cal. Rptr. 161] .

[ii] Power Press

The term "power press," as used in Lab. Code § 4558, means any material-forming machine that utilizes a die designed for use in the manufacture of other products. Thus, under the statutory definition, a machine such as a printing press, that does not form materials to be used in the manufacture of other products does not constitute a "power press" [McCoy v. Zahniser Graphics, Inc. (1995) 39 Cal. App. 4th 107, 111, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 871] . Similarly, a material-forming machine that does not use a "die" does not satisfy the definition of a "power press" [Graham v. Hopkins (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 1483, 1487-1489, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 82] .

Affirming the earlier court of appeal decisions defining the term "die" [see Ceja v. J. R. Wood, Inc. (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 1372, 1377, 242 Cal. Rptr. 531 ; Graham v. Hopkins (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 1483, 1487-1489, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 82] , the California Supreme Court described a "die" as a tool that imparts some version of its own shape to material by pressing or impacting against or through the material, in a punching, stamping, or extruding motion. Thus, the Court held that a V-notching tool which formed material by cutting along its surface in the manner of a blade was not a die under Labor Code § 4558 [Rosales v. Depuy Ace Medical Co. (2000) 22 Cal. 4th 279, 285, 92 Cal. Rptr. 2d 465, 991 P.2d 1256] .

The question of whether a machine is a "power press" within the meaning of Lab. Code § 4558(a)(4) is one for the jury [Islas v. D & G Manufacturing Co., Inc. (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 571, 577580, 15 Cal. Rptr. 3d 559] .

[d] Employer as Manufacturer

An employer who designs, manufactures, and installs its own power presses is considered to be a "manufacturer" for purposes of Lab. Code § 4558. In an action against an employer-manufacturer of a power press for failure to install a point-of-operation guard, the injured employee must prove that the employer's design of the press provided for a guard that was later removed or never installed, or, alternatively, that one was required to protect against a known risk of serious injury, but was deliberately omitted by the employer from the design fabrication or assembly of the machine. An employer may be liable even if the design of the press did not provide for attachment of a guard, as long as a guard was required to protect against a known risk of serious injury and the press was capable of functioning with the required guard [Flowmaster, Inc. v. Superior Court (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 1019, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 666] .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Civil Actions Against Employer--Exclusive Remedy Principle

51-577 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 577.315

§ 577.315 Termination, Discipline, and Related Conduct

[1] Civil Action Generally Preempted

Workers' compensation is generally an employee's exclusive remedy for emotional or physical injuries that result from employer misconduct that is a "normal part of the employment relationship," such as demotions, promotions, criticism of work practices, and friction in grievance negotiations [Cole v. Fair Oaks Fire Protection Dist. (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 148, 160-161, 233 Cal. Rptr. 308, 729 P.2d 743] .

Termination of employment, and the events leading up to termination, are also deemed a "normal part" of the employment relationship for purposes of the exclusive remedy doctrine [Shoemaker v. Myers (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 1, 17-19, 276 Cal. Rptr. 303, 801 P.2d 1054 ; see Horn v. Bradco Internat., Ltd. (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 653, 662-665, 283 Cal. Rptr. 721 ; Jenkins v. Family Health Program (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 440, 450, 262 Cal. Rptr. 798 ; Pichon v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 488, 496, 260 Cal. Rptr. 677] . In such cases, the exclusive remedy doctrine cannot be avoided by allegations that the injury resulted from intentional conduct of the employer or that the employer's conduct was unfair, outrageous, harassing, or intended to cause emotional distress [Cole v. Fair Oaks Fire Protection Dist. (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 148, 160, 233 Cal. Rptr. 308, 729 P.2d 743 ; see Shoemaker v. Myers (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 1, 15, 276 Cal. Rptr. 303, 801 P.2d 1054] . However, it has been held that an employee's damages for emotional distress resulting from the employer's misrepresentations made to induce the employee to enter the employment relationship, were not a consequence of a normal part of that relationship or a risk reasonably encompassed within the compensation bargain. In making these misrepresentations (regarding the employer's financial stability, its future plans to relocate its operations, and the prospective employee's promotion in the corporate ranks), the employer stepped out of its proper role as an employer, engaging in behavior that is not a normal part of the employment relationship. Thus, the exclusive remedy rule did not bar the employee's civil damages for emotional distress [Lenk v. Total-Western, Inc. (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 959, 971-973, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 34] .

An employer does not step out of its proper role as an employer by discussing with an employee the form the termination will take, as, for example, the ramifications of a voluntary as opposed to an involuntary retirement [Horn v. Bradco Internat., Ltd. (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 653, 663, 283 Cal. Rptr. 721] . Any statements by the employer that an involuntary resignation could reflect negatively on future job references are deemed to be a normal and inherent part of the employment relationship and therefore within the exclusive remedy provisions of the compensation system [Horn v. Bradco Internat., Ltd. (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 653, 664-665, 283 Cal. Rptr. 721] .

The employer's motivation for its conduct is irrelevant; thus, the fact that the employer's conduct may have been motivated by its desire to extract a waiver from the employee of his or her right to sue for wrongful termination does not remove the injury from the workers' compensation system [Horn v. Bradco Internat., Ltd. (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 653, 664, 283 Cal. Rptr. 721] . Moreover, the exclusive remedy rule is applicable even when part of the employer's alleged wrongful conduct occurs after the termination, since the temporal sequence of events is not the conclusive test of whether the injury arose out of the employment relationship [Horn v. Bradco Internat., Ltd. (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 653, 663-664, 283 Cal. Rptr. 721] .

[2] Exceptions to General Rule

[a] Violation of Public Policy

The exclusive remedy doctrine will not apply if the employer's conduct contravenes fundamental public policy [Gantt v. Sentry Insurance (1992) 1 Cal. 4th 1083, 1100-1101, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 874, 824 P.2d 680] .

For example, in Gantt, the employee was allegedly terminated in retaliation for testifying truthfully before the Department of Fair Employment and Housing in support of a coworker's claim of sexual harassment. The public policy that was allegedly violated by the employer was the prohibition set forth in Gov. Code § 12975 against obstructing an official investigation of sexual harassment. The Court noted that when an employer's decision to discharge an employee results from an animus that violates the fundamental policy of this state proscribing any interference in the official investigation of sexual harassment, this misconduct cannot, under any reasonable viewpoint, be considered a normal part of the employment relationship or a risk reasonably encompassed within the compensation bargain [Gantt v. Sentry Insurance (1992) 1 Cal. 4th 1083, 1100-1101, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 874, 824 P.2d 680] .

See also, Operating Engineers Local 3 v. Johnson (2003) 110 Cal. App. 4th 180, 184-192, 1 Cal. Rptr. 3d 552 (worker's civil cause of action against her employer for invasion of privacy was not barred by exclusive remedy rule when worker's supervisor reprimanded worker and disseminated information about reprimand to other employees who had no reason to know this information, thereby violating worker's right of privacy conferred by California Constitution and thus contrary to fundamental public policy); Phillips v. Gemini Moving Specialists (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 563, 571-574, 577, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 29 (wrongful discharge action based on termination for complaining of illegal wage withholding was proper based on wage protections found in various Labor Code provisions and Code Civ. Proc. § 487.020, and recovery of emotional distress damages was not preempted by exclusive remedy provision); Maynard v. City of San Jose (9th Cir. 1994) 37 F.3d 1396, 1405-1406 (claims under California law for intentional and negligent infliction of emotional distress caused by personnel moves are not preempted by California workers' compensation statute when claims implicate fundamental public policy considerations embodied in Gov. Code § 12940(f) and Lab. Code § 1102.5, which prohibit retaliatory discrimination); Shoemaker v. Myers (1992) 2 Cal. App. 4th 1407, 1418-1419, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 203 (employee's cause of action against employer for wrongful discharge was not preempted by workers' compensation law when employee alleged that he was terminated in retaliation for exercising his right to counsel under Public Safety Officers Procedural Bill of Rights Act (Gov. Code § 3300 et seq.)); City of Moorpark v. Superior Court (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1143, 1148, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 445 (injured worker not precluded from bringing claim before WCAB under Lab. Code § 132a and action in state court seeking remedies under FEHA and common-law wrongful discharge theory when disability discrimination at issue violated public policy).

In one case, the court of appeal reached a contrary result when it held that the workers' compensation exclusive remedy provisions applied to an industrial injury, including the plaintiff's emotional distress as a result of that injury, that followed an allegedly unlawful demotion because of the plaintiff's age, in violation of public policy and the Fair

Employment and Housing Act, when the court found that evidence demonstrated that the alleged discriminatory act was not a "substantial factor" in causing the subsequent industrial injury [Huffman v. Interstate Brands Cos. (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 679, 692-700, 17 Cal. Rptr. 3d 397] .

For further discussion of civil actions for wrongful termination in violation of public policy, see Ch. 249, Employment Law: Termination and Discipline .

[b] Employer Conduct Outside the Compensation Bargain

[i] In General

The exclusive remedy doctrine does not apply if the employer's conduct does not constitute "a risk reasonably encompassed within the compensation bargain" [Shoemaker v. Myers (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 1, 16, 276 Cal. Rptr. 303, 801 P.2d 1054 ; see Livitsanos v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 744, 757, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 808, 828 P.2d 1195 (case remanded to court of appeal to determine whether defendants' conduct was "a normal part of the employment relationship" when plaintiff alleged that defendants had engaged in a campaign of outrageous and harassing conduct resulting in his wrongful termination, which included falsely claiming that plaintiff embezzled money from the company and tried to sabotage its product and forcing plaintiff to sell his independent distribution company, which had been distributing the company's product, under threat of retaliation if he refused); City of Moorpark v. Superior Court (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1143, 1152-1153, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 445 ; Hart v. National Mortgage & Land Co. (1987) 189 Cal. App. 3d 1420, 1427-1432, 235 Cal. Rptr. 68 (employer's harassment, assault, and battery through obscene gestures and acts held not be "normal" part of relationship)].

[ii] Whistleblowing

Although the full scope of this exception awaits further definition by the courts, it appears that statutory causes of action that protect employees against various types of discrimination or retaliation are deemed to be not "within the compensation bargain." In Shoemaker, for example, the Supreme Court held that a civil action alleging a violation of a statute that protected governmental "whistleblowers" from discipline and discharge and expressly allowed a civil damages action for such violations [see former Gov. Code § 19683] was outside the scope of the compensation bargain and constituted a statutory exception to the exclusive remedy provisions [Shoemaker v. Myers (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 1, 22-23, 276 Cal. Rptr. 303, 801 P.2d 1054] .

[iii] Discrimination in Violation of the Fair Employment and Housing Act

Several courts of appeal have held that the exclusive remedy principle of the workers' compensation law does not bar a statutory employment discrimination action by an employee who alleges that he or she suffered physical, mental, or emotional injury resulting from violations of the Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA) [Gov. Code § 12900 et seq.], which prohibits discrimination on the basis of sex, sexual orientation, race, ancestry, color, marital status, medical condition, national origin, physical handicap, religion, age over 40 years, or pregnancy [see Gov. Code §§ 12940, 12941, 12945].

The courts have reasoned that the workers' compensation law and the FEHA are designed to remedy different evils, and the Legislature did not intend that the objectives of the civil rights statutes would be defeated by the bar of the exclusive remedy principle of the workers' compensation law.The FEHA must be liberally construed to achieve its purposes [see Gov. Code § 12993], and its purpose is to provide effective remedies to eliminate discriminatory practices [Jones v Los Angeles Community College Dist. (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 794, 804, 807-808, 244 Cal. Rptr. 37 (race discrimination); see Gov. Code § 12920; see also Goldman v. Wilsey Foods, Inc. (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 1085, 1095-1096, 265 Cal. Rptr. 294 (religious discrimination); Meninga v. Raley's, Inc. (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 79, 91, 264 Cal. Rptr. 319 (sex discrimination); Watson v. Department of Rehabilitation (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 1271, 1286-1287 (age and race discrimination)].

In City of Moorpark v. Superior Court (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1143, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 445 , the Supreme Court held that discrimination based on a work-related physical disability, which was outside the compensation bargain, is not subject to the exclusive remedy of Lab. Code § 132a. The employee, an administrative secretary, was terminated after she sustained an industrial knee injury. The employer stated that the employee's residual disability from her industrial injury prevented her from performing essential job functions. However, she apparently was able to perform her job duties and was willing to return to work. The Court held that Lab. Code § 132a is not an injured worker's exclusive remedy for discrimination based on a work related disability and, thus, does not preclude injured workers from bringing claims before the WCAB under Lab. Code § 132a and actions in state court seeking remedies under the Fair Employment and Housing Act and common-law wrongful discharge theory [City of Moorpark v. Superior Court (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1143, 1147-1149, 1161, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 445 ; see Green v. State of California (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 254, 262-264, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 390, 165 P.3d 118 (FEHA requires employee to prove that he or she is "qualified individual" when alleging discrimination on grounds of disability, meaning that plaintiff's burden of proving actionable discrimination on basis of disability includes proof that he or she has ability to perform essential duties of position with reasonable accommodation); see also Fretland v. County of Humboldt (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 1478, 1484-1486, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 359] .

Based on the holding in City of Moorpark, an employee's emotional distress claims seeking damages for work-related injury discrimination are not barred by the exclusivity rule since such discrimination is not a normal risk of the compensation bargain [Fretland v. County of Humboldt (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 1478, 1492, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 359] .

In one case, the court of appeal reached a contrary result when it held that the workers' compensation exclusive remedy provisions applied to an industrial injury, including the plaintiff's emotional distress as a result of that injury, that followed an allegedly unlawful demotion because of the plaintiff's age, in violation of the Fair Employment and Housing Act and of public policy, when the court found that evidence demonstrated that the alleged discriminatory act was not a "substantial factor" in causing the subsequent industrial injury [Huffman v. Interstate Brands Cos. (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 679, 692-700, 17 Cal. Rptr. 3d 397] .

For discussion of civil actions under the FEHA, see Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination .

[iv] False Imprisonment

The California Supreme Court has held that false imprisonment committed by an employer against an employee is always outside of the compensation bargain; therefore, an action based on such a claim is not barred by the exclusive remedy provisions of the workers' compensation law [Fermino v. Fedco, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 701, 723-724, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 18, 872 P.2d 559] . In Fermino, an employee brought a civil action for false imprisonment alleging that her employer accused her of theft, threatened to have her arrested, held her against her will for over one hour, and interrogated her until she became hysterical. The Supreme Court reversed the trial court's decision sustaining the employer's demurrer to plaintiff's complaint. In doing so, the Court found that, although reasonable attempts to investigate an employee's theft are a normal part of the employment relationship entitled to the protection of the exclusivity rule, an employer's actions that go beyond the bounds of reasonble interrogation and detention and thereby constitute false imprisonment, are not entitled to such protection [see Fermino v. Fedco, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 701, 723-724, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 18, 872 P.2d 559] .

[v] No Exception for Reckless, Negligent or Criminally Negligent Conduct

In applying the California Supreme Court's Fermino analysis, one court of appeal stressed that there is no "beyond the compensation bargain" exception for employer behavior that is merely negligent or reckless [Arendell v. Auto Parts Club, Inc. (1994) 29 Cal. App. 4th 1261, 1265, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 83 (exclusivity doctrine barred action against employer for negligent or reckless failure to provide adequate security on its premises, despite knowledge of potential danger)].

Another court applied the same analysis to find that even conduct which could be construed as criminally negligent, including involuntary manslaughter caused by unsafe working conditions, is not beyond the compensation bargain [Vuillemainroy v. American Rock & Asphalt, Inc. (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 1280, 1285-1286, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 269] . Similarly, a court has held that an employer's conduct of providing employees with a hazardous chemical substance to clean a film processing laboratory, concealing known unsafe working conditions, and violating environmental safety regulations was within the compensation bargain, making workers' compensation benefits the employees' exclusive remedy [Gunnell v. Metrocolor Laboratories, Inc. (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 710, 714, 112 Cal. Rptr. 2d 195] .

[c] Retaliation for Claiming Workers' Compensation Benefits

Lab. Code § 132a is not the exclusive remedy for discrimination due to disability from work related injury [City of Moorpark v. Superior Court (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1143, 1158, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 445 (overruling Portillo v. G. T. Price Products, Inc. (1982) 131 Cal. App. 3d 285, 182 Cal. Rptr. 291)]. As pointed out by the Court, Lab. Code § 132a is contained in Division 1 of the Labor Code, and the plain language of the exclusive remedy provisions of the workers' compensation law apparently limits those provisions to those set forth in Division 4 of the Labor Code. The Court reasoned that remedies that the Legislature placed in other divisions of the Labor Code are simply not subject to the workers' compensation exclusive remedy provisions [City of Moorpark v. Superior Court (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1143, 1154-1155, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 445] .

B. Civil Actions Against Employer--Exclusive Remedy Principle

51-577 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 577.316

§ 577.316 Exceptions to Exclusive Remedy Principle Permitting Suit Against Coemployee

[1] In General

If the conditions of compensation set forth in Lab. Code § 3600(a) concur [see § 577.23], the right to recover workers' compensation benefits is the sole remedy of an injured employee against a coemployee acting within the scope of his or her employment [Lab. Code § 3601(a)]. This exclusive remedy principle is subject to two exceptions [Lab. Code § 3601(a)(1), (2)]:

- If the injury or death is proximately caused by the willful and unprovoked physical act of aggression of the other employee.

- If the injury or death is proximately caused by the intoxication of the other employee.

If either of the exceptions apply, the injured employee (or his or her dependents in the case of death), in addition to recovering compensation benefits from the employer, has a right to bring an action at law for damages against the other employee as if workers' compensation law did not apply [Lab. Code § 3601(a)].

[a] Employer Liability for Act of Coemployee

In no event, neither by legal action nor by agreement, may the employer be held vicariously liable, directly or indirectly, for damages awarded against, or for a liability incurred by, the other employee [Lab. Code § 3601(b)]. However, the employer may be held directly liable for a willful physical assault under Lab. Code § 3602(b)(1) as a joint participant if its conduct constitutes subsequent ratification of the act of the coemployee [Iverson v. Atlas Pacific Engineering (1983) 143 Cal. App. 3d 219, 227-228, 191 Cal. Rptr. 696] .

[b] Employee Liability for Injury or Death of Coemployee

No employee may be held liable, directly or indirectly, to his or her employer for an injury to or the death of a coemployee unless the injured employee (or the dependents) obtains a recovery against the coemployee [Lab. Code § 3601(c)].

[c] Willful and Unprovoked Physical Act of Aggression

The "willful and unprovoked physical act of aggression" requirement of Lab. Code § 3601(a)(1) does not require conduct that would constitute a battery; that is, there need not be physical contact. One who by physical conduct first places another in reasonable fear of bodily harm may be liable under the exception [Iverson v. Atlas Pacific Engineering (1983) 143 Cal. App. 3d 219, 225, 191 Cal. Rptr. 696 ; see Mathews v. Workmen's Comp. Appeals Bd. (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 719, 727, 100 Cal. Rptr. 301, 493 P.2d 1165] . The trial court may properly instruct the jury that the plaintiff must prove that the co-worker had intent to injure the plaintiff [Torres v. Parkhouse Tire Service, Inc. (2001) 26 Cal. 4th 995, 1003-1006, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 564, 30 P.3d 57] . Allegations based on such an act may also be sufficient to state a cause of action for intentional infliction of emotional distress [Iverson v. Atlas Pacific Engineering (1983) 143 Cal. App. 3d 219, 229-231, 191 Cal. Rptr. 696] .

[2] Injuries Caused by Acts Outside Coemployee's Scope of Employment

The coemployee exclusive remedy principle applies only to tortious conduct of a coemployee that is "within the scope of his or her employment" [Lab. Code § 3601(a)]. The scope of employment of a coemployee is not coterminous with the "course-of-employment" standard that entitles the injured employee to workers' compensation. Thus, the injured employee may be acting within the course of his or her employment, and therefore entitled to workers' compensation [see Lab. Code § 3600(a)(2)], even though the tortfeasor employee is found not to be within the scope of his or her employment for purposes of the exclusive remedy principle [see Saala v. McFarland (1965) 63 Cal. 2d 124, 128-130, 45 Cal. Rptr. 144, 403 P.2d 400 (injured employee was within course of employment while in employer's parking lot after shift had ended, while coemployee who struck her with his car while also leaving work was outside scope of his employment)].

One court has held that the coemployee's "scope of employment" is coterminous with the standard by which it would be determined whether the employer was vicariously liable for the acts of the employee to a nonemployee third person under the doctrine of respondeat superior [see Brittell v. Young (1979) 90 Cal. App. 3d 400, 402-407, 153 Cal. Rptr. 387 (injured employee who was arriving for meeting was within course of employment; coemployee who was on premises but working on own vehicle after work was also within scope of employment)].

Lab. Code § 3602(a), as amended in 1982, which sharply limited the application of the dual capacity doctrine with respect to employers [see § 577.311], does not protect coemployees from civil liability; but coemployees do enjoy the immunity created by Lab. Code § 3601, which expressly immunizes them for acts within the scope of their employment [Hendy v. Losse (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 723, 737-738, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 543, 819 P.2d 1] .

The California Supreme Court has held that the 1982 amendment of Lab. Code § 3602 confirms that there can be no judicially created dual capacity exceptions to the immunity from civil liability granted to coemployees [Hendy v. Losse (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 723, 737-738, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 543, 819 P.2d 1] . Thus, a physician who was employed by a professional football team to provide treatment to players injured in the course of their employment by the team was protected from a malpractice suit by the statutory immunity of Lab. Code § 3601, since the physician was acting within the scope of his employment when he diagnosed and treated the plaintiff whose injury was proximately caused by his employment by the team [Hendy v. Losse (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 723, 738-739, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 543, 819 P.2d 1.]

However, if a coemployee provides medical services other than those contemplated by the employee's employment and in so doing is not acting for the employer, he or she no longer enjoys the immunity from suit provided by Lab. Code § 3601 for acts that are within the scope of employment [Hendy v. Losse (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 723, 741, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 543, 819 P.2d 1 (disapproving contrary holding in Hoffman v. Rogers (1972) 22 Cal. App. 3d 655, 99 Cal. Rptr. 455)].

§ 577.317 Exceptions to Exclusive Remedy Principle Permitting Suit Against Insurer

[1] Insurer's Liability for Deceitful and Intentional Practices

[a] Pre-1982 Statutory Amendments

The inclusion of the employer's workers' compensation insurer within the scope of those protected by the exclusive remedy principle arises from the statutory exclusion of the insurer as a third party against whom a civil action may be filed [Lab. Code §§ 3850(b), 3852 ("employer" includes insurer for purposes of third-party subrogation action, which may be filed against person other than employer); see Jablonski v. Royal Globe Ins. Co. (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 379, 385-386, 251 Cal. Rptr. 160] . Prior to the 1982 amendments to the exclusive remedy provisions of workers' compensation law [see Lab. Code §§ 3600-3602], the California Supreme Court held that a compensation insurer forfeited its immunity from civil suit for intentional torts if it engaged in deceitful conduct in investigating an injured employee's claim. In so holding, the Court stated that by embarking on a deceitful course of conduct, the insurer was abandoning its proper role within the framework of the workers' compensation system. Therefore, in so acting, the insurer became a person other than the employer and was subject to civil suit [Unruh v. Truck Insurance Exchange (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 616, 629-631, 102 Cal. Rptr. 815, 498 P.2d 1063] .

[b] Post-1982 Statutory Amendments

[i] No Express Exception to Exclusive Remedy Principle

Under the 1982 amendments, no express exception to the exclusive remedy principle was preserved by statute for intentional and deceitful insurance practices [see Lab. Code § 3602(b)]. Several courts are of the opinion that no common-law exceptions to the exclusive remedy principle remain valid except those specifically preserved by statute [see Continental Casualty Co. v. Superior Court (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 156, 162, 235 Cal. Rptr. 260 (stating that statute implies that no other exceptions exist); see also Lab. Code § 3602(a); Cole v. Fair Oaks Fire Protection Dist. (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 148, 153-155, 233 Cal. Rptr. 308, 729 P.2d 743 ; but see Hart v. National Mortgage & Land Co. (1987) 189 Cal. App. 3d 1420, 1431, 235 Cal. Rptr. 68 (finding cause of action for intentionally inflicted emotional distress still permitted under some circumstances despite lack of statutory preservation)].

[ii] Effect of Amendments

One court has reaffirmed the holding of Unruh under current law without discussion of any possible effect of the 1982 amendments. The court held that allegations of the insurer's fraudulent denial of the existence of a workers' compensation policy, and allegations that the insurer destroyed the policy, stated causes of action for fraud and spoliation of evidence that were not preempted by the exclusive remedy principle. The court stated that the exclusive remedy principle does not apply if the acts alleged are in themselves fraudulent, deceitful, outrageous, perfidious, or so extreme or abnormal as to fit in the class of misconduct considered in Unruh. Such conduct falls outside the permissible boundary of protected behavior by a compensation carrier [Jablonski v. Royal Globe Ins. Co. (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 379, 387-391, 391 n.6, 251 Cal. Rptr. 160 (also noting that standard is not identical with that applicable to tort of intentional infliction of emotional distress); see Everfield v. State Comp. Ins. Fund (1981) 115 Cal. App. 3d 15, 18, 171 Cal. Rptr. 164] .

To the extent that the exception of Unruh is still valid, it does not apply to mere negligence in the conduct of an investigation or handling of a claim [Unruh v. Truck Insurance Exchange (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 616, 627-629, 102 Cal. Rptr. 815, 498 P.2d 1063] . Delay in payment or other conduct related to the improper processing of a claim does not cause the insurer to lose its exclusivity defense [see Jablonski v. Royal Globe Ins. Co. (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 379, 388, 251 Cal. Rptr. 160 (and cases cited therein); see also Mitchell v. Scott Wetzel Services, Inc. (1991) 227 Cal. App. 3d 1474, 1480-1481, 278 Cal. Rptr. 474 (action by injured employee against self-insured employer's workers' compensation administrator alleging perjury before WCAB and misrepresentation regarding benefit checks and availability of rental car as within exclusive jurisdiction of workers' compensation system)].

The exclusive remedy principle is also not negated simply because the injured employee alleges that the insurer's conduct violates the Insurance Code [Jablonski v. Royal Globe Ins. Co. (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 379, 392, 251 Cal. Rptr. 160 (rejecting argument that exclusive remedy principle did not apply to cause of action for unfair insurance claims practices under Ins. Code § 790.03(h))]. It has also been held that Unruh does not apply to a self-insured employer for acts done in the course of investigating a compensation claim [Gallo Glass Co. v. Superior Court (1983) 148 Cal. App. 3d 485, 488-490, 196 Cal. Rptr. 23] .

In Marsh & McLennan, Inc. v. Superior Court [(1989) 49 Cal. 3d 1, 259 Cal. Rptr. 733, 774 P.2d 762] , in the course of holding that the California workers' compensation system preempts a private cause of action by an injured worker against an independent claims administrator of his self-insured employer for the delay or refusal to pay compensation benefits and that the exclusive jurisdiction over such matters is in the Workers' Compensation Appeals Board, the Supreme Court affirmed its holding in Unruh.

The Court pointed out that in Unruh it had carved out a narrow exception to the appeals board's exclusive jurisdiction over the claims of an injured employee against her employer's insurance carrier by allowing the employee to bring an action against the insurer for assault and intentional infliction of emotional distress based on the tortious acts of the insurer's private investigator because the insurer's misconduct was so extreme and outrageous that it had in fact stepped out of its role as an insurer and could, therefore, be held liable under Lab. Code § 3852 as a person other than the employer [see also Lab. Code § 3850(b) (defining "employer" as used in the workers' compensation law as including "insurer")]. The Court added that in Unruh it had also noted that the workers' compensation law did not preclude the plaintiff from bringing a separate suit against the insurer's investigator, since investigators are neither employers nor insurers under the workers' compensation law [Marsh & McLennan, Inc. v. Superior Court (1989) 49 Cal. 3d 1, 6-7, 259 Cal. Rptr. 733, 774 P.2d 762] .

An injured worker's civil action against his employer's workers' compensation insurer for malicious prosecution of an insurance fraud criminal complaint against the worker has been held not barred by the exclusive remedy rule of workers' compensation law. An allegation that the insurer acted with malice amounts to an allegation that the insurer stepped out of its role in processing workers' compensation claims and, thus, places the insurer's act of reporting alleged insurance fraud outside the compensation bargain [Mosby v. Liberty Mutual Insurance Co. (2003) 110 Cal. App. 4th 995, 999, 1004-1006, 2 Cal. Rptr. 3d 286] .

Similarly, a workers' compensation insurer for an employee leasing company was held to have engaged in breach of contract, insurance bad faith, and fraud when it denied coverage to an injured employee working for the contractor to whom the leasing company had leased employees [Diamond Woodworks, Inc. v. Argonaut Insurance Co. (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 1020, 1030-1049, 135 Cal. Rptr. 2d 736] .

[2] Insurer's Liability to Medical Providers for Mishandling Lien Claims

Economic injuries sustained by medical providers to their businesses resulting from failure to receive full and timely payment on their lien claims from insurance carriers fall within the scope of the exclusivity provisions. However, medical providers may bring civil actions against insurers for acts by the insurers that fall outside the scope of the compensation bargain, thereby violating public policy [Vacanti v. State Compensation Ins. Fund (2001) 24 Cal. 4th 800, 814, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 562, 14 P.3d 234 ; see also Marsh & McLennan, Inc. v. Superior Court (1989) 49 Cal. 3d 1, 6, 259 Cal. Rptr. 733, 774 P.2d 762 ; Unruh v. Truck Ins. Exch. (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 616, 629-631, 102 Cal. Rptr. 815, 498 P.2d 1063] .

In Vacanti v. State Compensation Ins. Fund, a group of medical providers sued various workers' compensation insurers, claiming that the insurers conspired to put them out of business by intentionally mishandling their lien claims before the Appeals Board. The providers alleged causes of actions for: (1) abuse of process; (2) fraud; (3) violations of the Cartwright Act; (4) RICO violations; (5) conspiracy to violate RICO; (6) intentional and negligent interference with ongoing businesses; (7) intentional and negligent interference with contractual and prospective economic relations; and (8) violations of the unfair compensation law (UCL). The California Supreme Court concluded that the exclusive remedy provisions barred some, but not all, of the claims brought by the providers [Vacanti v. State Compensation Ins. Fund (2001) 24 Cal. 4th 800, 823-828, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 562, 14 P.3d 234] .

In analyzing this issue of first impression, the Court first determined that the alleged injury underlying all of the medical providers' causes of action was collateral to or derivative of a compensable workplace injury since the providers' lien claims were to recover compensation for medical services provided to injured workers. Therefore, the injury fell within the ambit of the exclusive remedy rule [Vacanti v. State Compensation Ins. Fund (2001) 24 Cal. 4th 800, 811, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 562, 14 P.3d 234] . The Court next considered whether there were any applicable exceptions to the exclusivity rule which would allow the providers to pursue their causes of action, based on conduct by the insurers which fell outside the scope of the employment bargain and violated public policy. After reviewing the acts and motives giving rise to the providers' claims, the Court concluded that the abuse of process and fraud claims did not fall within any exception, because the insurers' acts and motives were closely connected to normal insurer activity--the processing and payment of medical lien claims--and fell within the risks contemplated by the compensation bargain [Vacanti v. State Compensation Ins. Fund (2001) 24 Cal. 4th 800, 823-824, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 562, 14 P.3d 234] . In contrast, however, the Court found that the providers' Cartwright Act and RICO claims were not barred by the exclusivity doctrine because the acts and motives giving rise to these claims, by their very nature, fell outside the compensation bargain [Vacanti v. State Compensation Ins. Fund (2001) 24 Cal. 4th 800, 825-827, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 562, 14 P.3d 234] . With regard to tortious interference with business relations and violations of the UCL, the Court concluded that the claims were barred to the extent that they focused on the individual misdeeds of each individual insurer because such misconduct was connected with normal insurer activity. However, the claims were not precluded to the extent they were predicated on the conspiratorial misconduct of the insurers [Vacanti v. State Compensation Ins. Fund (2001) 24 Cal. 4th 800, 827-828, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 562, 14 P.3d 234] .

Although he concurred with the disposition and much of the reasoning of the majority opinion, Justice Werdegar determined that the exclusivity provisions did not apply to health care providers and, therefore, it was unnecessary to consider the application of exceptions [Vacanti v. State Compensation Ins. Fund (2001) 24 Cal. 4th 800, 829, 102

Cal. Rptr. 2d 562, 14 P.3d 234] .

In a civil action that arose out of successful attempts by the California Insurance Guarantee Association and numerous insurers and employers to have the Appeals Board consolidate many different medical lien claims in order to obtain a determination from the Board as to whether Premier Medical Management Systems, Inc., was improperly representing treating physicians in Appeals Board proceedings, Premier and five affiliated treating physicians sued the insurers and employers, alleging various tort and statutory causes of action based on claims that the defendants were engaged in anti-competitive activity. The gravamen of the complaint was that, after Premier submitted the plaintiff physicians' bills to the defendants for payment and filed liens in numerous workers' compensation cases before the Appeals Board, the defendants collectively conspired to contest, delay, and avoid payment of those bills and liens [Premier Med. Mgmt. Sys., Inc. v. Cal. Ins. Guarantee Ass'n (2006) 136 Cal. App. 4th 464, 468-470, 39 Cal. Rptr. 3d 43] . The defendants argued that the complaint was an anti-SLAPP (Strategic Lawsuit Against Public Participation) lawsuit because it was based entirely on the defendants' constitutional right to petition the Appeals Board [see Code of Civ. Proc. § 425.16]. The court of appeal agreed with the defendants, finding that the anti-SLAPP statute applied because the defendants had shown that the plaintiffs' complaint related to activity that was a protected activity, i.e., the right to petition the Appeals Board and litigate lien claims before the Board, and that the defendants had a probability of prevailing on the plaintiffs' complaint, based on the applicability of the Noerr-Pennington doctrine that parties who petition the government for redress are generally immune from antitrust liability. Consequently, the court of appeal reversed the trial court's order denying the defendants' special motion to strike the complaint [Premier Med. Mgmt. Sys., Inc. v. Cal. Ins. Guarantee Ass'n (2006) 136 Cal. App. 4th 464, 472-480, 39 Cal. Rptr. 3d 43 ; see Eastern R. Presidents Conf. v. Noerr Motor Freight, Inc. (1961) 365 U.S. 127, 81 S. Ct. 523, 5 L. Ed. 2d 464 ; United Mine Workers v. Pennington (1965) 381 U.S. 657, 85 S. Ct. 1585, 14 L. Ed. 2d 626] .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Civil Actions Against Employer--Exclusive Remedy Principle

51-577 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 577.318

§ 577.318 Effect of Exclusive Remedy Doctrine on Tort Actions by Employee's Relatives and Heirs

[1] In General

If the conditions of compensation exist, the employer's liability to pay compensation is "in lieu of any other liability whatsoever to any person" [Lab. Code § 3600(a); see Williams v. Schwartz (1976) 61 Cal. App. 3d 628, 634, 131 Cal. Rptr. 200] . Thus, any action by any person that arises from an injury to an employee sustained in the course of employment is barred by the exclusive remedy principle [Soil Engineering Construction, Inc. v. Superior Court (1982) 136 Cal. App. 3d 329, 332-333, 186 Cal. Rptr. 209] .

[2] Wrongful Death

The exclusive remedy principle applies to wrongful death actions in the same manner as it does to the underlying injury causing death [see Lab. Code §§ 3600-3602]. Thus, if a tortious act causing death falls within the exclusive remedy principles of workers' compensation law, an action for wrongful death will be barred, whether or not the parties suffering damages as a result of the "wrongful death" are entitled to benefits under workers' compensation law based on their status as dependents of the deceased worker [see Soil Engineering Construction, Inc. v. Superior Court (1982) 136 Cal. App. 3d 329, 332-333, 186 Cal. Rptr. 209 ; see also Lab. Code §§ 4700-4709 (governing availability of death benefits)].

A wrongful death action against an employer who is not a covered employer under workers' compensation is specifically preserved by statute [see § 577.312[2]]. If death, whether happening instantaneously or otherwise, results from an injury to an employee caused by the want of ordinary or reasonable care of an employer or of any officer, agent, or servant of the employer, the personal representative of the employee has a right of action against the employer, and may recover damages for and on behalf of the surviving spouse, children, dependent parents, and dependent brothers and sisters, in order of precedence as stated. No more than one such action may be brought [Lab. Code § 2803].

Lab. Code § 2803 provides a more restrictive remedy than that provided under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 377.60-377.62, the general wrongful death statutes. First, under Lab. Code § 2803, in the absence of a surviving spouse and children, the action may only be brought by dependent parentsand siblings, whereas a wrongful death action may be brought by any person entitled to succeed to the decedent's property by intestate succession (if there is no surviving spouse, child, or issue of a deceased child) [compare Lab. Code § 2803 with Code Civ. Proc. § 377.60(a)]. These persons are not required to be dependent on the decedent to maintain a wrongful death action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 377.60(a)]. Furthermore, certain additional classes of dependents (beyond parents and siblings) are eligible to bring a wrongful death action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 377.60(b), (c)]. In those cases in which an exception to the exclusive remedy doctrine exists, it appears that any person entitled to bring an action under the general wrongful death statute may do so, regardless of the limitations set forth in Lab. Code § 2803 [see Gonsalves v. Petaluma etc. Ry. Co. (1916) 173 Cal. 264, 266-268, 159 P. 724 (construing similar former statutes)].

The Supreme Court has held that a Medi-Cal lien could not be asserted against a wrongful death action, when the damages recoverable by the plaintiff in that action did not and could not include compensation for medical services provided to the decedent by Medi-Cal. The Court found that in California a wrongful death action is a cause of action in favor of the heirs as beneficiaries, based on their own independent pecuniary injury suffered by the loss of a relative. Thus, it is distinct from any action that the deceased might have maintained, had he or she survived, so that the damages awarded in a wrongful death action are for harm done to the survivors, not to the deceased [Fitch v. Select Products Co. (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 812, 819-822, 115 P.3d 1233] .

For a form of complaint based on wrongful death, see Ch. 181, Death and Survival Actions .

[3] Loss of Consortium

Actions against an employer to recover damages for loss of consortium are barred if they are based on an injury to an employee that is within the exclusive coverage of workers' compensation [Santiago v. Employee Benefits Services (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 898, 906, 214 Cal. Rptr. 679 ; Casaccia v. Green Valley Disposal Co. (1976) 62 Cal. App. 3d 610, 612, 133 Cal. Rptr. 295] . Similarly, actions by a nonemployee for infliction of emotional distress that are based on a tortious act of an employer towards an employee are not permitted as long as the harm to the employee is within the exclusive jurisdiction of the Workers' Compensation Act [Williams v. Schwartz (1976) 61 Cal. App. 3d 628, 632-634, 131 Cal. Rptr. 200] .

[4] Fetal Injury

The exclusive remedy provisions of the workers' compensation law do not apply to independent fetal injuries caused by an employer's negligent conduct towards a pregnant employee [Snyder v. Michael's Stores, Inc. (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 991, 994, 1005, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 476, 945 P.2d 781] .In Snyder v. Michael's Stores, Inc., the California Supreme Court overruled an earlier decision in which a court of appeal applied the "derivative injury rule" to hold that workers' compensation was the only remedy available to an injured fetus because the child's prenatal injury flowed or derived from the injury to the mother [see Bell v. Macy's California (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 1442, 1443, 1445, 261 Cal. Rptr. 447] . The Court criticized the appellate court's application of the "derivative injury rule," finding that fetal injuries are not necessarily derivative of the mother's injuries, but may be separate and distinct, entitling the fetus to an independent claim.

The Court explained that, generally, a business is civilly liable to an independent third party, including the unborn child of a non-employee, whom is injured as a result of the businesses negligent conduct [see Civ. Code § 43.1]; there is nothing to indicate a legislative intent that prenatal injuries to the children of employee's be treated any differently. The Court concluded that the exclusive remedy doctrine does not bar civil claims for independent injuries sustained by the unborn child of an employee [Snyder v. Michael's Stores, Inc. (1997)16 Cal. 4th 991, 997-1000, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 476, 945 P.2d 781] .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Civil Actions Against Employer--Exclusive Remedy Principle

51-577 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 577.319

§ 577.319 Dual Remedies

[1] In General

If the exclusive remedy principle does not apply, the remedies of workers' compensation and civil damages are cumulative and not alternative [Burnelle v. Continental Can Co., Inc. (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 315, 320, 238 Cal. Rptr. 253 ; see Lab. Code § 3600(b); but see Hollywood Refrigeration Sales Co. v. Superior Court (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 754, 757-758, 210 Cal. Rptr. 619 (decided under prior law but after 1982 enactment of statute, noting that issue of whether workers' compensation and tort damages are ultimately cumulative or alternative is essentially unsettled)].

If an employee (or his or her dependents) receives workers' compensation and also secures a judgment for or settlement of civil damages under an exception to the exclusive remedy principle, workers' compensation benefits are to be credited against the tort judgment or settlement. The employer is also relieved of the obligation to pay further workers' compensation up to the net amount of the judgment or settlement, or up to the portion of the judgment that has been satisfied [Lab. Code § 3600(b)]. Compensation includes sums received by the employee prior to a final adjudication of the workers' compensation claim and sums received by the employee in the form of an award following a final adjudication of the workers' compensation claim [Burnelle v. Continental Can Co., Inc. (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 315, 320, 238 Cal. Rptr. 253] .

Dual remedies with setoff principles are also statutorily authorized in an action against an uninsured employer [see Lab. Code § 3709]. For further discussion, see § 577.312[2].

[2] Jurisdiction and Res Judicata

[a] In General

In many cases, it is not clear whether the conditions of workers' compensation exist or whether an exception to the exclusive remedy principle applies. Thus, the employee must decide whether to pursue dual remedies simultaneously or to elect one remedy to pursue first. If any doubt exists, it is proper to protect against the running of the statute of limitations by filing both a civil action and an application for workers' compensation benefits [Dixon v. Ford Motor Co. (1975) 53 Cal. App. 3d 499, 502 n.*, 125 Cal. Rptr. 872] .

The civil courts and the WCAB have concurrent jurisdiction to determine jurisdiction [Busick v. Workmen's Comp. Appeals Bd. (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 967, 976, 104 Cal. Rptr. 42, 500 P.2d 1386] . If an exception to the exclusive remedy principle applies, the injured worker's remedies are cumulative [Burnelle v. Continental Can Co., Inc. (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 315, 320, 238 Cal. Rptr. 253 ; see Lab. Code § 3600(b); but see Hollywood Refrigeration Sales Co. v. Superior Court (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 754, 757-758, 210 Cal. Rptr. 619 (decided under prior law but after 1982 enactment of statute, noting that issue of whether workers' compensation and tort damages are ultimately cumulative or alternative is essentially unsettled); for discussion, see [1], above].

[b] If Remedies Are Cumulative

If workers' compensation and civil remedies are cumulative, a determination in one forum is not subject to merger and bar under the doctrine of res judicata [Burnelle v. Continental Can Co., Inc. (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 315, 320, 238 Cal. Rptr. 253] .

[c] If Remedies Are Not Cumulative

If remedies are not cumulative, the tribunal assuming jurisdiction retains it to the exclusion of all other tribunals. Once a tribunal determines that is has jurisdiction over the case, jurisdiction becomes exclusive, and the final determination regarding jurisdiction is res judicata before the other tribunal with regard to the same parties [Busick v. Workmen's Comp. Appeals Bd. (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 967, 976, 104 Cal. Rptr. 42, 500 P.2d 1386 ; Scott v. Industrial Acci. Com. (1956) 46 Cal. 2d 76, 81, 293 P.2d 18] . A party may obtain an order preventing the second tribunal from acting pending determination by the first tribunal of the jurisdictional question [Busick v. Workmen's Comp. Appeals Bd. (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 967, 976, 104 Cal. Rptr. 42, 500 P.2d 1386 ; Taylor v. Superior Court (1956) 47 Cal. 2d 148, 151, 301 P.2d 866] . For a form for an affirmative defense to a civil action alleging that the WCAB has already assumed exclusive jurisdiction, see § 577.531[1].

[d] Res Judicata Effect of Determination by WCAB That Injury Compensable Under Workers' Compensation

A determination by the WCAB that the conditions of compensation exist and that an injury is compensable under workers' compensation is res judicata as to that issue in a civil action based on the same injury. Thus, if the right to bring the civil action is based on a noncompensable injury, the action is barred by the prior determination of compensability. In addition, a compromise settlement approved by the WCAB has the same force and effect as a judgment made after a full hearing and is entitled to full res judicata effect [Hollywood Refrigeration Sales Co. v. Superior Court (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 754, 759, 210 Cal. Rptr. 619] . However, to preclude an action, the compromise settlement must include the determination that all of the claims released are compensable under workers' compensation law; if it does not do so, res judicata principles do not preclude relitigation of the issue [Lopez v. Sikkema (1991) 229 Cal. App. 3d 31, 40-44, 280 Cal. Rptr. 7 (compromise and release approved by WCAB, which did not clearly determine that all claims were compensable under workers' compensation law, did not preclude tort action based on employer's conduct outside compensation bargain; triable issue of fact remained regarding scope of release)].

The fact that the compromise and release sets forth the nature of the injury suffered does not, by itself, support the conclusion that all claims arising from that injury were covered by the settlement [Lopez v. Sikkema (1991) 229 Cal. App. 3d 31, 44, 280 Cal. Rptr. 7 (triable issue of fact remained regardless of whether settlement was intended to cover claims for civil rights violation and intentional physical injury)]. A WCAB decision has no res judicata effect on matters that are unnecessary to the determination [Young v. Libbey-Owens Ford Co. (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 1037, 1042-1043, 214 Cal. Rptr. 400] .

[e] Effect of Determination That Employee Sought Unavailable Remedy

If a civil judgment or WCAB determination is rendered for the employer because the employee has sought a remedy that is not available to him or her, that judgment or determination does not bar a proceeding in the proper tribunal for a proper remedy [see Busick v. Workmen's Comp. Appeals Bd. (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 967, 974, 104 Cal. Rptr. 42, 500 P.2d 1386] .

[3] Tolling of Statute of Limitations

The filing of a claim for workers' compensation effectively tolls the statute of limitations for the purposes of a later tort claim based on the same facts [Elkins v. Derby (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 410, 412, 115 Cal. Rptr. 641, 525 P.2d 81] . However, the filing of a claim for workers' compensation does not toll an action against an employer for aggravation of an injury resulting fromthe employer's fraudulent concealment of the cause of the injury [Aerojet General Corp. v. Superior Court (1986) 177 Cal. App. 3d 950, 955-957, 223 Cal. Rptr. 249 ; see § 577.314[3]].

B. Civil Actions Against Employer--Exclusive Remedy Principle

51-577 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 577.320

§ 577.320 Employer's Duty and Proof of Negligence

[1] In General

In a civil action by an employee against an employer under any exception to the exclusive remedy principle, principles of fault apply. If the alleged wrong is negligence, the employer's obligation is simply to use reasonable care, which is that degree of care that one of ordinary prudence in the same line of business would be expected to exercise to secure his or her own safety in doing the work [Hall v. Burton (1962) 201 Cal. App. 2d 72, 80, 19 Cal. Rptr. 797] .

An employer must exercise ordinary and reasonable care to provide safe tools, machinery, and appliances. To establish a breach of this duty, it must be shown that the employer either had actual knowledge of any defect or should have discovered the defect in the exercise of reasonable care [Hall v. Burton (1962) 201 Cal. App. 2d 72, 80, 19 Cal. Rptr. 797] . The employer also has a continuing duty of careful inspection at reasonable intervals [Hall v. Burton (1962) 201 Cal. App. 2d 72, 80, 19 Cal. Rptr. 797] .

The employer has a duty to warn the employee of any dangers connected with the work of which the employer is aware, or that might be discovered with proper care, and of which the employee might reasonably be expected to be unaware. This duty is particularly true with regard to an inexperienced employee. However, no warning is necessary if the danger should be obvious to the employee. An experienced employee may be assumed to be aware of the ordinary dangers of the work, even if they are not apparent to one unfamiliar with the work [Baez v. Southern Pacific Co. (1962) 210 Cal. App. 2d 714, 717, 26 Cal. Rptr. 899] .

The exclusive remedy rule bars an employee's civil tort action against his or her employer for aggravation of pre-existing illness resulting from negligent diagnostic treatment voluntarily provided by the employer, regardless of the cause of the pre-existing illness. For example, when an employer administered regular hearing tests as an ongoing condition of employment to determine whether the noise to which the employee was exposed on the job had adversely affected his hearing, the employer's failure to notify the employee of a test result that indicated a possible brain tumor (whose genesis had nothing to do with the employee's job) until the tumor had caused permanent injury to the employee was held to constitute an industrial injury subject to the exclusive remedy rule [Weber v. United Parcel Service, Inc.

[2] Admissibility of Occupational Safety Statutes

California's occupational safety statutes [Lab. Code § 6300 et seq.] are admissible and may be considered in a personal injury or wrongful death action between an employee and employer [see Lab. Code § 6304.5]. The Supreme Court has held that Lab. Code § 6304.5, as amended effective January 1, 2000, allows plaintiffs to use Cal-OSHA provisions to show duty or standard of care to the same extent as any other regulation or statute, whether the defendant is the plaintiff's employer or a third party [Elsner v. Uveges (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 915, 927-928, 935-936, 22 Cal. Rptr. 3d 530, 102 P.3d 915] . The Court held, moreover, that these amendments to Lab. Code § 6304.5 were not applicable to litigation arising from an injury that occurred prior to their effective date, January 1, 2000, when the Court found that the amendments created a new standard of care for the defendant and shifted the burden of proof to the defendant [Elsner v. Uveges (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 915, 937-940, 22 Cal. Rptr. 3d 530, 102 P.3d 915 (holding also that trial court's rulings that made amendments applicable to this litigation did not constitute harmless error)].

[3] Injury Caused by Negligence of Coemployee

In the case of injury caused by the negligence of a coemployee, the employer's lack of ordinary care may be shown by retention of an unfit employee after the employer has knowledge of the employee's unfitness, or by the employer's failure to use due diligence in selecting an employee who, as it happens, is unfit [Gier v. Los Angeles C. E. R. Co. (1895) 108 Cal. 129, 133, 41 P. 22] .

[4] Actions Against Uninsured Employers

In an action against an uninsured employer, there is a rebuttable presumption of employer negligence [Lab. Code § 3708]. For discussion, see § 577.312[2] . Special rules of comparative negligence also apply in actions against uninsured employers and actions by employees whose employment is excluded from workers' compensation coverage [see Lab. Code §§ 2801, 3708]. For discussion, see §§ 577.312[2], [3] .

51-577 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 577.321

§ 577.321 Interrelationship Between Exclusive Remedy Doctrine and Americans With Disabilities Act (ADA)

[1] Federal Preemption

The interrelationship between the exclusive remedy doctrine in the California Workers' Compensation Act and the federal Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) [see 42 U.S.C. § 12101 et seq.] is not altogether settled at this point. However, a case of first impression from the United States District Court, Northern District of California, has held that theexclusive remedy doctrine is preempted by the ADA [see Wood v. County of Alameda (N.D. Cal. 1995) 875 F. Supp. 659, 665] .

In Wood v. County of Alameda, the plaintiff suffered an injury on the job in 1992, became disabled, and filed for workers' compensation benefits under California law. When plaintiff was cleared by her physician to return to work, she was not returned to her formerly held position or a comparable position with her employer. Plaintiff alleged that the defendant employer's actions represented a denial of "reasonable accommodation" to a "qualified individual with a disability" in violation of the ADA. The defendant argued that plaintiff was barred from bringing the ADA claim on the ground that California's Workers' Compensation Act provided the sole remedy for such claims [Wood v. County of Alameda (N.D. Cal. 1995) 875 F. Supp. 659, 660-661] .

The court followed the analytical framework set forth in Adams Fruit Co. v. Barrett (1990) 494 U.S. 638, 642, 110 S. Ct. 1384, 108 L. Ed. 2d 585 :

- Does the federal statute explicitly or implicitly indicate that Congress intended the statute to defer to state law in situations like the one at issue?

- If it does not, do preemption principles mandate that all or part of the state law be denied effect in light of Congress's intent in enacting the federal law?

The court recognized that "[i]n either case, the issue turns on the language of the statute and, where the language is not dispositive, on the intent of Congress as revealed in the history and purposes of the statutory scheme" [Wood v. County of Alameda (N.D. Cal. 1995) 875 F. Supp. 659, 662] .

[2] Application of Analysis to Determine That Exclusive Remedy Doctrine Preempted

In applying the first part of the Adams Fruit analysis, the court found that the language of the ADA in 42 U.S.C. § 12101(b) that it does not "limit or invalidate" certain state laws basically meant that it does not excuse defendants from fulfilling their parallel obligations under other compatible state laws. Thus, the court found that Congress did not intend the ADA to defer to the California workers' compensation law at issue here. The court further noted that, unlike the War Hazards Compensation Act in which Congress has expressed clearly its intent to limit the availability of a federal remedy when the claimant has received workers' compensation benefits related to the same injury, the court believed that, had Congress intended the ADA to defer to circumstances like those presented in the instant case, it would have so stated [Wood v. County of Alameda (N.D. Cal. 1995) 875 F. Supp. 659, 662-664] .

In applying the second part of the Adams Fruit analysis, the court found that the exclusive remedy doctrine of the California Workers' Compensation Act is preempted by the ADA. The court stated that, under the Supremacy Clause contained in Article VI of the Constitution, which provides that state law is preempted to the extent it actually conflicts with federal law or when the state law stands as an obstacle to the accomplishment of the full purposes and objectives of Congress, giving effect to the exclusive remedy doctrine in the state statute in a manner that limits the availability of federal remedies would clearly stand as an obstacle to the accomplishment of Congress' stated purpose in enacting the ADA to provide a national mandate for the elimination of discrimination against the disabled, to establish strong and consistent standards addressing such discrimination, and to ensure that the federal government plays a central role in remedying this discrimination [Wood v. County of Alameda (N.D. Cal. 1995) 875 F. Supp. 659, 664-665] .

The court limited its holding in Wood, however, providing that only the exclusive remedy doctrine, and not the substantive protections, of the California Workers' Compensation Act is preempted by the ADA. As stated by the court, Congress intended plaintiffs to have the benefit of both federal and state causes of action to the extent that the two are compatible. When, as here, they are not wholly compatible, preemption principles clearly require that those parts (and only those parts) of the state law that hinder the accomplishment of federal objectives be denied effect [Wood v. County of Alameda (N.D. Cal. 1995) 875 F. Supp. 659, 665-666] .

[1] Employee

As used in Lab. Code §§ 3850-3864, "employee" includes the person injured and any other person to whom a claim accrues by reason of the injury or death of the person injured [Lab. Code § 3850(a)].

[2] Employer

The term "employer" includes the employer's compensation carrier and the Self-Insurer's Security Fund when the employer's compensation obligations have been assumed pursuant to Lab. Code § 3743 (insolvent self-insurer) [Lab. Code § 3850(b), (c); see Chase Chemical Co. v. Hartford Accident & Indemnity Co. (1984) 159 Cal. App. 3d 229, 237, 205 Cal. Rptr. 469 ; *Johnson v. PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Third-Party Actions

51-577 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 577.332

§ 577.332 Actions Against Third-Party Tortfeasor

[1] In General

A claim for workers' compensation benefits does not affect the injured employee's claim or right of action or of that of his or her heirs for all damages proximately resulting from the injury or death against any person other than the employer [Lab. Code § 3852]. Hence, notwithstanding the recovery of workers' compensation benefits, the injured employee, or the employee's heirs in the event of the employee's death, are free to sue a third-party tortfeasor for all the damages sustained as a result of the employee's injury or death [see Rodgers v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1984) 36 Cal. 3d 330, 334, 204 Cal. Rptr. 403, 682 P.2d 1068 ; Associated Construction & Engineering Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 829, 833, 150 Cal. Rptr. 888, 587 P.2d 684 ; see also complaint for damages in § 577.520[1]].

Moreover, except to the extent the rule has been modified by statute (see Civ. Code § 3333.1(a), (b), exempting negligent health care providers from any duty to reimburse employers or their carriers for workers' compensation benefits paid as a result of the negligence of the health care providers) and Barme v. Wood (1984) 37 Cal. 3d 174, 180-182, 207 Cal. Rptr. 816, 689 P.2d 446 , upholding the legal validity of Civ. Code § 3333.1; see also Graham v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1989) 210 Cal. App. 3d 499, 501, 504, 258 Cal. Rptr. 376 , and discussion under [12], below) any employer, or its compensation carrier, who pays or becomes obligated to pay compensation, or who pays or becomes obligated to pay salary in lieu of compensation, or who pays or becomes obligated to pay an amount to the Department of Industrial Relations pursuant to Lab. Code § 4706.5 (payment when deceased employee left no dependents), may likewise make a claimor bring an action against the third person [Lab. Code § 3852; see § 577.521].

Thus, under Lab. Code § 3852, both the employee and the employer, except as noted above, may sue a third party who may be responsible for the employee's injuries [Buell v. CBS, Inc. (1982) 136 Cal. App. 3d 823, 825, 186 Cal. Rptr. 455] . In addition, in the event of the employee's death, his or her heirs may sue for wrongful death under former Code Civ. Proc. § 377 (now Code Civ. Proc. §§ 377.60-377.62). However, a wrongful death action under former Code Civ. Proc. § 377 (now Code Civ. Proc. §§ 377.60-377.62) is in no way a claim derived from the decedent via the survival of a claim the decedent may have had and, being original rather than derivative in nature, is independent of the employer's or its insurance carrier's action for recovery of funds paid out under Lab. Code § 3852 [Eli v. Travelers Indemnity Co. (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 901, 904-905, 235 Cal. Rptr. 704] . The court of appeal has held that, pursuant to Lab. Code § 3852, a workers' compensation carrier stated a cause of action against alleged third-party tortfeasors for recoupment of death benefits the carrier paid to a deceased employee's survivor, who was an actual dependent of the employee but who had no standing to bring a wrongful death action against the alleged tortfeasors. The court held that the carrier's right to sue was not limited to its status as subrogee of the survivor and that the wrongful death statute, with its limited standing provisions, was irrelevant in determining the carrier's right to sue [Fremont Comp. Ins. Co. v. Sierra Pine, Ltd. (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 389, 394-401, 17 Cal. Rptr. 3d 80] .

[1A] Attorney's Duty to Advise Regarding Possible Third Party Action

Failure by an attorney representing an employee in a workers' compensation proceeding to timely advise the employee that he or she may have a viable personal injury action against third parties may constitute malpractice or negligence. The elements of a cause of action in tort for professional negligence are: (1) the duty of the professional to use such skill, prudence, and diligence as other members of the profession commonly possess and exercise; (2) a breach of that duty; (3) a proximate causal connection between the negligent conduct and the resulting injury; and (4) actual loss or damage resulting from the professional's negligence [Budd v. Nixen (1971) 6 Cal. 3d 195, 200, 98 Cal. Rptr. 849, 491 P.2d 433] . As part of the third element--proof that any loss suffered by plaintiff was proximately caused by defendant's negligence--plaintiff must prove that the third party action would have resulted in a favorable judgment and that at least some portion of that judgment would have been collectible [Campbell v. Magana (1960) 184 Cal. App. 2d 751, 754, 8 Cal. Rptr. 32] . Thus, plaintiff's failure in the malpractice action to present any evidence regarding the collectibility of some portion of a judgment in the third party action will defeat the malpractice action [Garretson v. Miller (2002) 99 Cal. App. 4th 563, 571-573, 121 Cal. Rptr. 2d 317] .

[2] Purpose of Law

The purpose of Lab. Code § 3850 et seq. is to insure, first, that, regardless of whether it is the employee or the employer who sues the third party, both the employee and the employer recover their due, and, second, that, as far as possible, the third party need defend only one lawsuit [Board of Administration v. Glover (1983) 34 Cal. 3d 906, 912, 196 Cal. Rptr. 330, 671 P.2d 834 ; County of San Diego v. Sanfax Corp. (1977) 19 Cal. 3d 862, 872, 140 Cal. Rptr. 638, 568 P.2d 363] .

[3] Nature of Law

The claim of the employer and its compensation carrier against the third-party tortfeasor derive from the injured employee's claim against the tortfeasor for damages for personal injuries. In their own right, the employer and its carrier possess no claims of their own against the tortfeasor, since the tortfeasor has committed no wrong against them. Only because they have carried part of the costs of the injured person's losses do they acquire claims against the tortfeasor as subrogees to the injured person's claims for damages for personal injuries [Board of Administration v. Glover (1983) 34 Cal. 3d 906, 915, 196 Cal. Rptr. 330, 671 P.2d 834 ; see Breese v. Price (1981) 29 Cal. 3d 923, 928-931, 176 Cal. Rptr. 791, 633 P.2d 987 ; Mendenhall v. Curtis (1980) 102 Cal. App. 3d 786, 791-794, 162 Cal. Rptr. 569 ; see also § 577.520]. Thus, although employer and employee actions are interchangeable, substantively as well as procedurally, Lab. Code § 3282 does not enlarge the tort remedy of a compensation carrier beyond that of the injured employee [Eli v. Travelers Indemnity Co. (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 901, 904, 235 Cal. Rptr. 704] .

[4] Applicability of Substantive Tort Law

Lab. Code § 3850 et seq. governing employer and employee actions against third parties, does not define the substantive law that determines whether an employee or an employer will in fact recover. Instead, the substantive law that governs employer and employee actions is usually the general tort law. As applied in cases involving employee and employer third-party claims, however, the general tort law works in parallel with the procedures that the Legislature has set up in Lab. Code §§ 3850-3864.

Substantively, as well as procedurally, employer and employee actions are interchangeable. Hence, regardless of who brings an action, it is essentially the same lawsuit. Thus, the employee's general damage claim, whether prosecuted by the employee personally or by the employee's employer or its insurance carrier on the employer's behalf, is solely one in tort for personal injuries arising out of the negligence of the third-party tortfeasor, and the tort liability of the third-party tortfeasor remains the same [County of San Diego v. Sanfax Corp. (1977) 19 Cal. 3d 862, 873-875, 140 Cal. Rptr. 638, 568 P.2d 363 ; Finney v. Manpower, Inc. (1981) 123 Cal. App. 3d 1066, 1070, 177 Cal. Rptr. 74] . For a discussion of the substantive tort law that applies and forms of complaints that may be used by an employee to sue a third-party tortfeasor for damages or adapted for use by the employer to recover workers' compensation or death benefits it has paid because of the third party's tort, see the appropriate chapter in this publication, for example, Ch. 362, Mental Suffering and Emotional Distress , Ch. 380, Negligence , and Ch. 460, Products Liability .

[5] Survival of Action

The death of the employee or of any other person does not abate any right of action established by Lab. Code § 3850 et seq. [Lab. Code § 3851].

[6] Joinder and Consolidation

If the action is brought by either the employer or the employee, the other may, at any time before trial on the facts, join as party plaintiff or must consolidate his or her action, if brought independently [Lab. Code § 3853; see County of San Diego v. Sanfax Corp. (1977) 19 Cal. 3d 862, 872, 140 Cal. Rptr. 638, 568 P.2d 363 ; Johnson v. De Santos (1983) 148 Cal. App. 3d 566, 570, 196 Cal. Rptr. 145 ; see also San Diego Unified Port Dist. v. Superior Court (1988) 197 Cal. App. 3d 843, 846, 243 Cal. Rptr. 163] .

[7] Intervention

Under Lab. Code § 3853, the employer or employee may also intervene in the other's action [Associated Construction & Engineering Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 829, 833, 150 Cal. Rptr. 888, 587 P.2d 684 ; County of San Diego v. Sanfax Corp. (1977) 19 Cal. 3d 862, 872, 140 Cal. Rptr. 638, 568 P.2d 363 ; San Diego Unified Port Dist. v. Superior Court (1988) 197 Cal. App. 3d 843, 846, 243 Cal. Rptr. 163 ; Buell v. CBS, Inc. (1982) 136 Cal. App. 3d 823, 825 n.2, 186 Cal. Rptr. 455 ; see Code Civ. Proc. § 387 and § 577.521].

The right to intervene before trial commences is unconditional [Buell v. CBS, Inc. (1982) 136 Cal. App. 3d 823, 825 n.2, 186 Cal. Rptr. 455] . However, since one of the purposes of intervention is to avoid delay in litigation [State Compensation Ins. Fund v. Selma Trailer & Manufacturing Co. (1989) 210 Cal. App. 3d 740, 754-755, 258 Cal. Rptr. 545] , when an employee's third-party action has been dismissed for failure to effect timely service of the summons, the employee may not intervene in the action maintained by the employer's compensation carrier, who had intervened in the employee's action [Bishop v. Silva (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 1317, 1324-1327, 285 Cal. Rptr. 910] . Similarly, when an employee's action has been dismissed for failure to diligently prosecute the action, the employee is not permitted to intervene in the employer's independent subrogation action [Fairmont Ins. Co. v. Frank (1996) 42 Cal. App. 4th 457, 460, 49 Cal. Rptr. 2d 670] .

As noted above, under Lab. Code § 3853, an employer has an unconditional right to intervene in the employee's third-party action at any time before a trial on the facts. When the employer makes a pretrial motion to be joined as a party, the employer has, as a matter of law, satisfied the "upon timely application" requirement of Code Civ. Proc. § 387, which governs intervention in general. Thus, the trial court erred in refusing an employer's pretrial request to intervene in an employee's action when, although the employee and the third party had settled, there still remained for trial the insurance carrier's complaint to recover the amount of compensation benefits it had paid to the employer [Mar

v. Sakti Internat. Corp. (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 1780, 1784-1785, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 388] .

[8] Statute of Limitations

A complaint by the employee against the third-party tortfeasor for damages for personal injuries must be filed within two years from the date the injury was sustained [see Code Civ. Proc. § 335.1]. A complaint against the third-party tortfeasor by the employer to recover compensation benefits paid is subject to the same period of limitation; that is, it must be filed within the statutory limitations period from the date of the employee's injury and not from the date workers' compensation benefits were paid [County of San Diego v. Sanfax Corp. (1977) 19 Cal. 3d 862, 868-886, 140 Cal. Rptr. 638, 568 P.2d 363] .

However, a complaint in intervention filed in the employee's action is timely, even if filed after the running of the statute of limitations, if the statute had not yet run at the time the employee's complaint was filed and the complaint in intervention is filed before trial [see Lab. Code § 3853; see also County of San Diego v. Sanfax Corp. (1977) 19 Cal. 3d 862, 885, 140 Cal. Rptr. 638, 568 P.2d 363] . This is also true with respect to a complaint in intervention filed by the employee in a prior timely filed action by the employer or its insurance carrier [see State Compensation Ins. Fund v. Selma Trailer & Manufacturing Co. (1989) 210 Cal. App. 3d 740, 754-755, 258 Cal. Rptr. 545 ; Buell v. CBS, Inc. (1982) 136 Cal. App. 3d 823, 826, 186 Cal. Rptr. 455 ; Jordan v. Superior Court (1981) 116 Cal. App. 3d 202, 206-211, 172 Cal. Rptr. 30 ; State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Matulich (1942) 55 Cal. App. 2d 528, 529-530, 131 P.2d 21] .

[9] Effect of Delay in Prosecution

Delay in prosecuting the third-party action may result in the involuntary dismissal of the complaint [see generally Code Civ. Proc. §§ 581, 583.110-583.430; see also Ch. 212, Dismissal] and of the complaint in intervention. Lab. Code § 3853, which permits the filing of a complaint in intervention, does not qualify or eliminate the intervenor's obligation to pursue his or her claim diligently from the beginning [State Compensation Ins. Fund v. Selma Trailer & Manufacturing Co. (1989) 210 Cal. App. 3d 740, 755, 258 Cal. Rptr. 545] . Because the complaint and the complaint in intervention are essentially the same lawsuit, the intervenor may rely on the plaintiff's exercise of due diligence, but if the plaintiff failed to exercise diligence, then the intervenor must demonstrate the exercise of diligence from the date the complaint was filed, not the date the complaint in intervention was filed, to avoid involuntary dismissal of the complaint in intervention for delay in prosecution [State Compensation Ins. Fund v. Selma Trailer & Manufacturing Co. (1989) 210 Cal. App. 3d 740, 755, 258 Cal. Rptr. 545] .

The rule does not operate inflexibly and perhaps unjustly as would be the case if the plaintiff's delays and conduct were imputed to the intervenor or vice-versa. Rather, the plaintiff and the intervenor will each be judged on his or her own actions and conduct in pursuing the litigation [State Compensation Ins. Fund v. Selma Trailer & Manufacturing Co. (1989) 210 Cal. App. 3d 740, 756, 258 Cal. Rptr. 545 (affirming judgment dismissing compensation carrier's complaint and employee's complaint in intervention for lack of diligent prosecution in bringing action to trial within three years (now two years) from date complaint was filed); see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410, 583.420(a)(2)].

[10] Service of Complaint on Nonfiling Employee or Employer

If either the employee or the employer institutes a third-party action, he or she must give to the other a copy of the complaint by personal service or certified mail, and proof of service must be filed in the action [Lab. Code § 3853; see § 577.521].

[11] Proof of Damages

[a] Actions Prosecuted by Employer

If the action is prosecuted by the employer alone, evidence of any amount that the employer has paid or become obligated to pay because the employee's injury or death is admissible, and the expenditures or liability are considered as proximately resulting from the injury or death in addition to any other items of damage proximately resulting therefrom [Lab. Code § 3854]. This does not mean, however, that the employer can recover from the alleged third-party tortfeasor workers' compensation benefits paid when the jury finds that the tortfeasor's negligence was not the proximate cause of any injury to the employee [Mendenhall v. Curtis (1980) 102 Cal. App. 3d 786, 791-794, 162 Cal. Rptr. 569 ; see Breese v. Price (1981) 29 Cal. 3d 923, 928-931, 176 Cal. Rptr. 791, 633 P.2d 987 ; see also § 577.520]. The employer may also not recover from the third-party tortfeasor increased workers' compensation insurance premiums and resulting lost profits, as these are not "compensation" within the meaning of Lab. Code § 3852 [Fischl v. Paller & Goldstein (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 1299, 1304-1305, 282 Cal. Rptr. 802] .

[b] Actions Prosecuted or Joined By Employee

If the employee joins in or prosecutes the action, either evidence of the amount of disability indemnity or death benefit paid or to be paid by the employer or evidence of the loss of earning capacity by the employee is admissible, but not both [Lab. Code § 3855; see Slayton v. Wright (1969) 271 Cal. App. 2d 219, 234, 76 Cal. Rptr. 494] . Proof of all other items of damage to either the employer or the employee proximately resulting from the injury or death is admissible and is part of the damages [Lab. Code § 3855].

[12] Medical Practitioner As Third-Party Tortfeasor--Limitation on Employer's Right to Reimbursement or Credit

Civ. Code § 3333.1 abrogates the collateral source rule in medical malpractice actions [Graham v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1989) 210 Cal. App. 3d 499, 501, 504, 258 Cal. Rptr. 376] . It provides that:

- In an action against a health care provider for personal injuries based on professional negligence, the defendant, if he or she so elects, may introduce evidence of any amount payable as a benefit to the plaintiff as a result of the personal injury pursuant to, among other things, any workers compensation act [Civ. Code § 3333.1(a)]; and

- No source of collateral benefits introduced pursuant to Civ. Code § 3333.1(a) shall recover any amount against the plaintiff, nor shall it be subrogated to the rights of the plaintiff against a defendant [Civ. Code § 3333.1(b)].

Under Civ. Code § 3333.1, the employer's right to reimbursement under Lab. Code § 3852 for compensation benefits paid from amounts recovered by the worker in an action against a third-party medical practitioner is barred [Graham v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1989) 210 Cal. App. 3d 499, 505-506, 258 Cal. Rptr. 376 (quoting from Miller v. Sciaroni (1985) 172 Cal. App. 3d 306, 310-312, 218 Cal. Rptr. 219)]. Furthermore, Civ. Code § 3333.1 overrides the employer's right under Lab. Code §§ 3858 and 3861 to a credit of any such recovery against its liability for workers' compensation when an employee settles, rather than tries, his or her medical malpractice action and the evidence establishes that the employee and third party deducted the amount of the employee's workers' compensation benefits from the settlement [Graham v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1989) 210 Cal. App. 3d 499, 501, 506-508, 258 Cal. Rptr. 376] .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Third-Party Actions

51-577 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 577.333

§ 577.333 Employer's Recovery in Third-Party Action

[1] In General

An employer who makes a claim or brings an action against a third-party tortfeasor may recover in the same suit, in addition to the total amount of compensation, damages for which he or she was liable including all salary, wage, pension, or other emolument paid to the employee or to his or her dependents [Lab. Code § 3852; see discussion under § 577.332[11]]. The employer or its carrier may not, however, recover any damages in excess of those recoverable by the employee [San Diego Unified Port Dist. v. Superior Court (1988) 197 Cal. App. 3d 843, 847, 243 Cal. Rptr. 163] .

The respective rights against the third person of the heirs of an employee claiming under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 377.60-377.62 (wrongful death action) and of the employer claiming pursuant to Lab. Code § 3852 will be determined by the court [Lab. Code § 3852]. Were it not for Lab. Code § 3852, a court would have no interest or reason to involve itself in the determination of the competing claims. But by mandating that the respective rights against the third person of the heirs of an employee claiming under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 377.60-377.62 and an employer claiming pursuant to Lab. Code § 3852 shall be determined by the court, Lab. Code § 3852 makes manifest that neither claim is to have "priority" over the other as a matter of law. Rather, the court is required to ascertain the damages to which each claimant is entitled and then to apportion the total award accordingly [Eli v. Travelers Indemnity Co. (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 901, 905, 235 Cal. Rptr. 704] . In this regard, it is to be noted that Lab. Code § 3856 (discussed under § 577.335[2]), allowing the employer a lien on the employee's recovery, does not apply to the heirs' recovery in a wrongful death action [Eli v. Travelers Indemnity Co. (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 901, 906, 235 Cal. Rptr. 704] .

[2] Effect of Employee's Concurrent Negligence

The employer can never recover more from the third party than the amount representing the third party's proportional share of the responsibility for the injury. Thus, if the third party and the employee are each found 50 percent responsible for the employee's injuries and the employer is found to be without fault, the employer-insurer's recovery from the third party is limited to half of the total amount of damages found to have been suffered by the employee [Finney v. Manpower, Inc. (1981) 123 Cal. App. 3d 1066, 1071, 177 Cal. Rptr. 74] .

[3] Effect of Employer's Concurrent Negligence

[a] In General

If the employee's injury was caused by the concurrent negligence of a third party and the employer, the employer's claim for reimbursement is limited to the amount that exceeds the employer's percentage share of the employee's total recovery according to the principles of comparative negligence [Associated Construction & Engineering Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 829, 842, 150 Cal. Rptr. 888, 587 P.2d 684 ; see Rodgers v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1984) 36 Cal. 3d 330, 334-335 , 204 Cal. Rpr 403, 682 P.2d 1068 ; Del Monte Corp. v. Superior Court (1982) 127 Cal. App. 3d 1049, 1052-1053, 179 Cal. Rptr. 855] .

To prevent double recovery, the amount of workers' compensation benefits paid up to the time of trial is deducted from the employee's recovery of economic damages [see Civ. Code § 1431.2] against the third party, to the extent that those benefits do not exceed the employer's proportionate share of responsibility under comparative fault principles [see Torres v. Xomox Corp. (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 1, 25-37, 42, 56 Cal. Rptr. 2d 455 ; Scalice v. Performance Cleaning Systems (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 221, 225-238, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 711 ; Rosales v. Thermex-Thermatron, Inc. (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 187, 197-198, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 861] . After deducting those amounts, the third party is jointly and severally liable for all of the employee's "economic damages," as defined by Proposition 51 [see Civ. Code § 1431.2], such as damages for medical expenses and lost wages [see DaFonte v. Up-Right, Inc. (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 593, 600, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 238, 828 P.2d 140 ; Associated Construction & Engineering Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 829, 842-843 n.9, 150 Cal. Rptr. 888, 587 P.2d 684] . Under Proposition 51, however, the third party's liability to the employee for "non-economic damages," such as damages for mental suffering and emotional distress, is limited to the third party's proportionate share of those damages as determined under comparative fault principles [DaFonte v. Up-Right, Inc. (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 593, 600-604, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 238, 828 P.2d 140 ; see Civ. Code § 1431.2].

For further discussion of comparative fault principles and the effect on Proposition 51 on those principles, see Ch. 300, Indemnity and Contribution, § 300.90 et seq., and Ch. 380, Negligence .

[b] Raising Issue of Concurrent Negligence--Procedure

The California Courts of Appeal are split on the issue of whether an employer and carrier may be brought into an employee's lawsuit by a third-party defendant's cross-complaint for declaratory relief [compare Difko Admin. (US) Inc. v. Superior Court (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 126, 134-135, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 291 , C.J.L. Construction, Inc. v. Universal Plumbing (1993) 18 Cal. App. 4th 376, 391-392, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 360 , and State of California v. Superior Court (1998) 60 Cal. App. 4th 659, 664-665, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 256 , with Del Monte Corp. v. Superior Court (1982) 127 Cal. App. 3d 1049, 1053-1055, 179 Cal. Rptr. 855] . One line of cases holds that a third-party defendant who wishes to establish the concurrent negligence of an employer that is not a party to the employee's lawsuit may do so by pleading the issue as an affirmative defense to the employee's complaint, but may not join the employer by way of cross-complaint [Difko Admin. (US) Inc. v. Superior Court (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 126, 134-135, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 291 ; C.J.L. Construction, Inc. v. Universal Plumbing (1993) 18 Cal. App. 4th 376, 391-392, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 360 ; see also State of California v. Superior Court (1998) 60 Cal. App. 4th 659, 664-665, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 256] .

The other line of authority holds that if the employer and carrier are not parties to the employee's action and there is a justiciable issue as to the concurrent negligence or fault of the employer, the third-party defendant may bring the employer into the lawsuit by cross complaint for declaratory relief as to the third-party defendant's right to have any judgment against him or her reduced by the amount of compensation benefits paid up to the amount of the employer's proportionate share of fault [Del Monte Corp. v. Superior Court (1982) 127 Cal. App. 3d 1049, 1054-1055, 179 Cal. Rptr. 855] . Until this issue is resolved, attorneys should exercise caution when raising the claim of concurrent employer negligence. It is always wise to plead the claim as an affirmative defense since this is a proper procedure for establishing employer negligence under both lines of cases.

[c] Determination of Issue

Once the issue of the employer's concurrent negligence is raised, the trier of fact should determine the employer's degree of fault. The court should then deduct the employer's percentage share of the employee's total recovery from the third party's liability up to the amount of the workers' compensation benefits assessed against the employer. Correspondingly, the employer should be denied any claim of reimbursement, or any lien under Lab. Code § 3856(b) (discussed under § 577.335[2]), to the extent that his or her contribution would then fall short of his or her percentage share of responsibility for the employee's total recovery [Associated Construction & Engineering Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 829, 842, 150 Cal. Rptr. 888, 587 P.2d 684 ; see Rodgers v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1984) 36 Cal. 3d 330, 335, 204 Cal. Rptr. 403, 682 P.2d 1068] . In such case, the employer may seek reimbursement or credit (discussed under § 577.335[4]) only for the amount by which his or her compensation liability exceeds his or her proportional share of the injured employee's recovery [Kramer v. Cedu Foundation, Inc. (1979) 93 Cal. App. 3d 1, 7, 155 Cal. Rptr. 552] .

Workers' compensation benefits previously paid by the employer must be included in calculating the employer's credit threshold, and the employer's credit threshold must be reduced by any amounts the employer receives by way of lien settlement from the third party [Southern Cal. Edison Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 766, 771-772, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 265] .

[d] Effect of Third Party's Failure to Raise Issue

If, in an action by the employee against the third party, the defendant does not have the employer joined and neither introduces nor offers any evidence bearing on the concurrent negligence of the employer or show that the negligence, if any, proximately caused the injury or death, a judgment for plaintiff, without reduction by the amount of compensation benefits paid, will be affirmed [De Cruz v. Reid (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 217, 223, 70 Cal. Rptr. 550, 444 P.2d 342 ; Curtis v. State of California ex rel. Dept. of Transportation (1982) 128 Cal. App. 3d 668, 683-685, 180 Cal. Rptr. 843] .

C. Third-Party Actions

51-577 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 577.334

§ 577.334 Allocation of Judgment in Third-Party Action

[1] Action by Employer Alone

If the action is prosecuted by the employer alone, the court must first order paid from any judgment for damages recovered the reasonable litigation expenses incurred in the preparation and prosecution of the action, together with a reasonable attorney's fee that shall be based solely on the services rendered by the employer's attorney in effecting recovery both for the benefit of the employer and the employee. After payment of these expenses and attorney's fee, the court shall apply out of the amount of the judgment an amount sufficient to reimburse the employer for the amount of his or her expenditure for compensation together with any amounts to which he or she may be entitled as special damages under Lab. Code § 3852 and shall order any excess paid to the injured employee or other person entitled to it [Lab. Code § 3856(a); see County of San Diego v. Sanfax Corp. (1977) 19 Cal. 3d 862, 872-873, 140 Cal. Rptr. 638, 568 P.2d 363 ; Walsh v. Woods (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1273, 1277, 232 Cal. Rptr. 629 (apportionment of attorney fee)].

[2] Action by Employee Alone

If the action is prosecuted by the employee alone, the court must first order paid from any judgment for damages recovered the reasonable litigation expenses incurred in preparation and prosecution of the action, together with a reasonable attorney's fee that shall be based solely on the services rendered by the employee's attorney in effecting recovery both for the benefit of the employee and the employer [Lab. Code § 3856(b); see Quinn v. State of California (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 162, 169-176, 124 Cal. Rptr. 1, 539 P.2d 761 (apportionment of attorney's fee); Walsh v. Woods (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1273, 1277, 232 Cal. Rptr. 629 (same)]. After the payment of these expenses and attorney's fee, the court will allow the employer a lien against the judgment for reimbusement of compensation benefits paid as provided in Lab. Code § 3856(b) (discussed under § 577.335[2]).

[3] Action by Both Employee and Employer

When the employer intervenes in an employee's third-party action, the employer's status is akin to that of a subrogee. Thus, the employer's right to recover workers' compensation benefits paid to the employee derives from and does not extend beyond the employee's tort remedy against the third party. Although the employer and employee are entitled to verdicts and judgments setting forth their respective rights, the damages awarded must be segregated between them to prevent a double recovery against the third party. In general, the employer may recover the amount of compensation benefits paid, but the amount of its judgment may not exceed the total amount of tort damages suffered by the employee.

The employee is entitled to have the jury determine his or her total tort damages, but may recover only a net judgment for the difference, if any, between the total tort damages and the workers' compensation benefits received. To prevent a double recovery, the trial court may instruct the jury to segregate the types of damage as between the employee and the employer, awarding to the employer only those tort damages not recoverable by the employer. Alternatively, the jury may be instructed on the types of tort damages to which the employee may be entitled, and then given a special verdict form that requires it to find whether the defendant was negligent, whether the negligence was the proximate cause of the employee's injuries, what the employee's total tort damages are, without taking into account his or her receipt of compensation benefits, and what the reasonable amount of benefits paid by the employer were. Thereafter, the court will enter individual judgments on the special verdict for the amounts to which the employee and the employer are entitled [Demkowski v. Lee (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 1251, 1258-1259, 284 Cal. Rptr. 919] .

An employer is not entitled to a right to reimbursement under Lab. Code § 3856(c) if it begins as a party plaintiff, but later chooses to abstain and file for a lien on the judgment prior to trial. Lab. Code § 3856(c) applies only if the action is prosecuted both by the employee and the employer. If the employer remains a formal party to the proceedings, its right to reimbursement must be expressly set forth in both the verdict and in the judgment obtained by the employee against the third party; however, this is unnecessary if its interests are protected by a lien on the judgment [Manthey v. San Luis Rey Downs Enterprises, Inc. (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 782, 787-788, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 265] .

[4] Litigation Expenses and Attorney's Fees

[a] Entitlement and Amount

The amount of reasonable litigation expenses and the amount of attorney's fees under Lab. Code § 3856(a)-(c) are fixed by the court. When the employer and employee are respresented by separate attorneys, they may propose to the court, for its consideration and determination, the amount and division of the expenses and fees [Lab. Code § 3856(d)].

An insurer is subrogated not only to an employer's right of action against a third party, but also to the employer's additional rights and liabilities. Thus, if the employer and the third-party tortfeasor have a prior contractual agreement in which the prevailing party has a right to attorney's fees from the other party in the event of litigation, the insurance carrier who brings a claim for reimbursement directly against the alleged tortfeasor is liable for the third-party's attorney's fees under the contract to the same extent as would be the employer [Employers Muttal Liability Ins. Co. v. Tutor-Saliva Corp. (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 632, 640, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 851, 951 P.2d 420] .

[b] Payment From Judgment

If the action is prosecuted by both the employee and the employer, in a single action or in consolidated actions, and they are represented by the same agreed attorney or by separate attorneys, the court must first order paid from any judgment for damages recovered, the reasonable litigation expenses incurred in the preparation and prosecution of the action or actions, together with reasonable attorney's fees based solely on the services rendered for the benefit of both parties if they are represented by the same attorney, and, if they are respresented by separate attorneys, based solely on the service rendered in each instance by the attorney in effecting recovery for the benefit of the party represented [Lab. Code § 3856(c); see Walsh v. Woods (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1273, 1277-1278, 232 Cal. Rptr. 629 (when each party is represented by separate attorney, award of fees to each attorney as based, not on services benefitting both parties, but on service rendered in each instance by attorney in effecting recovery for benefit of party represented)]. After the payment of these expenses and attorney's fees, the court shall apply out of the amount of the judgment for damages an amount sufficient to reimburse the employer for the amount of his or her expenditures for compensation together with any other amounts to which he or she may be entitled as special damages under Lab. Code § 3852 [Lab. Code § 3856(c)].

However, when the employee and the employer settle the action against the third-party tortfeasor for a sum that is less than the employer's reimbursable compensation costs, so that the employee recovers nothing from the settlement, and the employee has a contingency fee agreement with his or her attorney, the employee's attorney is entitled to no fee out of the settlement proceeds, and the employee owes no attorney's fees [Draper v. Aceto (2001) 26 Cal. 4th 1086, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 61, 33 P.3d 479] .

[5] Release of Employer by Satisfaction of Third-Party Judgment

After payment of the litigation expenses and attorney's fees fixed by the court pursuant to Lab. Code § 3856 and payment of the employer's lien, the employer shall be relieved from the obligation to pay further compensation to or on behalf of the employee up to the entire amount of the balance of the judgment, if satisfied, without any deduction. No satisfaction of the judgment in whole or in part shall be valid without giving the employer notice and a reasonable opportunity to perfect and satisfy his or her lien [Lab. Code § 3858; see § 577.335[4]].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Third-Party Actions

51-577 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 577.335

§ 577.335 Other Employer Remedies

[1] In General

Instead of suing the third-party tortfeasor, the employer may

- File an application for a lien against the employee's judgment in the employee's action against the tortfeasor [Lab. Code § 3856 (discussed in [2], below); see also San Diego Unified Port Dist. v. Superior Court (1988) 197 Cal. App. 3d 843, 849, 243 Cal. Rptr. 163] ;

- Enter into a settlement with the third-party tortfeasor and the employee [Lab. Code §§ 3859, 3860 (see discussions in *§ 577.130*et seq., and [3], below)]; and

- Apply to the Workers' Compensation Appeals Board for a credit against compensation liability of the amount recovered by the employee by settlement or after judgment [Lab. Code § 3861 (discussed under [4], below); see Rodgers v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1984) 36 Cal. 3d 330, 334, 204 Cal. Rptr. 403, 682 P.2d 1068 ; Associated Construction & Engineering Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 829, 833, 150 Cal. Rptr. 888, 587 P.2d 684 ; County of San Diego v. Sanfax Corp. (1977) 19 Cal. 3d 862, 872-873, 140 Cal. Rptr. 638, 568 P.2d 363] .

[2] Employer's Lien

[a] Entitlement

When judgment is rendered in favor of the employee in an action against the third-party tortfeasor prosecuted by the employee alone, after payment of the expenses and attorney's fees (discussed under § 577.334[2]), the court, on application of the employer or its carrier, must allow as a first lien against the amount of the judgment the amount of the employer's expenditure for compensation together with any amount to which he or she may be entitled as special damages under Lab. Code § 3852 [Lab. Code § 3856(b); see also § 577.540[1], for form of a notice of motion to secure lien against third-party judgment].

Moreover, the court must, on further application at any time before the judgment is satisfied, allow as a further lien the amount of any expenditures of the employer for compensation subsequent to the original order [Lab. Code § 3857; see also [4][b], below]. Under Lab. Code § 3857, above, and Lab. Code § 3858 (discussed under [5], below), an employer can apply for a lien in the employee's pending third-party action at any time before satisfaction of judgment. Thus, an application for a lien can be made after the statute of limitations has barred the employer from bringing an independent action or after the entry of judgment has barred the employer from intervening [California Workers' Damages Practice, Reimbursement, § 4.32 Burrow v. Pike (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 384, 395, 235 Cal. Rptr. 408 (quoting Peyrat, California Workers' Damages Practice, Reimbursement, § 4.32)].

However, if the third-party tortfeasor has raised as a defense in the lawsuit that the employer's negligence contributed to the employee's injuries, the employer's mere filing of a lien is insufficient to protect its claim for reimbursement [Aetna Casualty & Surety Co. v. Superior Court (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 1502, 1509, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 301] . For the effect of the employer's concurrent negligence on his or her lien, see § 577.333[3][c].

[b] Enforcement

Any employer entitled to and who has been allowed and perfected a lien on the judgment or award in favor of an employee against a third party for damages occasioned to the same employer by payment of compensation, expenses of medical treatment, and any other charges under the Workers' Compensation Law, may enforce payment of the lien against the third party, or, in case the damages recovered by the employee have been paid to the employee, against the employee to the extent of the lien, in the manner provided for enforcement of money judgments generally [Lab. Code § 3862; Burrow v. Pike (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 384, 395, 235 Cal. Rptr. 408] . For discussion and forms for use in enforcing money judgments, see Ch. 254, Executions and Enforcement of Judgments, § 254.40 et seq.

[c] Amount of Lien

An employer's workers' compensation lien claim may not exceed the amount of damages the employee recovers from the third-party tortfeasor. In general, the employer may recover the amount of workers' compensation benefits paid, but the amount of the employer's judgment may not exceed the total amount of tort damages suffered by the employee. The employee is entitled to have the jury determine his or her total tort damages, but may recover only a net judgment for the difference between the tort damages and the workers' compensation benefits received [Crampton v. Takegoshi (1993) 17 Cal. App. 4th 308, 320, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 284 , rev'd on other grounds, Phelps v. Stostad (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 23, 34, 65 Cal. Rptr. 2d 360, 939 P.2d 760] .

[d] Purchase of Lien by Third-Party

If the employer has filed a lien claim on any judgment, recovery, or settlement in the injured employee's third-party action, and subsequently sells the lien to the third party, the workers' compensation benefits paid to the employee represent a lien as to the third party and not a right to reimbursement under Lab. Code § 3856(c). When the third-party tortfeasor purchases the employer's compensation lien, it steps into the shoes of the employer and gains no greater rights than those originally owned by the employer [Manthey v. San Luis Rey Downs Enterprises, Inc. (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 782, 786-787, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 265] . Until a judgment is entered, the third party merely holds an expectancy, and if the employee fails to obtain a judgment in his or her favor, the lien simply "evaporates" [Manthey v. San Luis Rey Downs Enterprises, Inc. (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 782, 787, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 265] .

[3] Settlement of Claim

[a] Restrictions on Right to Settle

[i] Notice and Consent Requirements

No release or settlement of any claim as to either the employee or the employer is valid without the written consent of both. Proof of service filed with the court is sufficient in any action or proceeding in which such approval is required by law [Lab. Code § 3859(a)]. Moreover, no release or settlement under Lab. Code §§ 3850-3864, with or without suit, is valid or binding as to any party thereto without notice to both the employer and the employee, with opportunity to the employer to recover the amount of compensation it has paid or become obligated to pay and any special damages to which it may be entitled under Lab. Code § 3852, and opportunity to the employee to recover all damages he or she has suffered and with provision for determination of expenses and attorney's fees as provided in Lab. Code § 3860 [Lab. Code § 3860(a); see San Diego Unified Port Dist. v. Superior Court (1988) 197 Cal. App. 3d 843, 849, 243 Cal. Rptr. 163] . Thus, in one case the court of appeal, reversing the trial court's summary judgment in favor of the alleged third-party tortfeasor, held that, pursuant to Lab. Code §§ 3853, 3859, and 3860(a), when the employer fails to adequately notify its employee of its subrogation lawsuit and proposed settlement involving an alleged third-party tortfeasor and fails to obtain the employee's consent to settlement of that suit, and when the settling alleged third-party tortfeasor, prior to settlement, was or reasonably should have been aware of the possibility of the employee's claim for damages against the tortfeasor, the alleged tortfeasor cannot use the mere settlement and dismissal of the employer's subrogation action to bar the employee from maintaining an action for damages against the alleged tortfeasor. However, the employee's action for damages against the alleged tortfeasor must account for any workers' compensation benefits paid to the employee, or to be paid, so as to preclude double recovery for the employee and double liability for the tortfeasor. The court of appeal found that the employer did not serve by personal service or certified mail the statutorily-required copy of the employer's complaint against the alleged tortfeasor, the employee never gave the statutorily-required consent to the employer's settlement of its action against the alleged tortfeasor, and the alleged tortfeasor, prior to settlement, was or reasonably should have been aware of the possibility of the employee's claim for damages [McKinnon v. Otis Elevator Co. (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 1125, 1128, 1131-1137, 57 Cal. Rptr. 3d 723] .

[ii] Settlement Without Employer's Consent

An employee may settle and release any claim he or she may have against a third party without the consent of the employer, but the settlement or release shall be subject to the employer's right to proceed in accordancewith Lab. Code § 3852 to recover the compensation it has paid [Lab. Code § 3859(b); see Associated Construction & Engineering Co. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 829, 837-840, 150 Cal. Rptr. 888, 587 P.2d 684 ; San Diego Unified Port Dist. v. Superior Court (1988) 197 Cal. App. 3d 843, 849, 243 Cal. Rptr. 163] . Except as provided in Lab. Code § 3859, the entire amount of the settlement, with or without suit, is subject to the employer's full claim for reimbursement for compensation that it has paid or become obligated to pay and any special damages to which it may be entitled under Lab. Code § 3852, together with expenses and attorney's fees, if any, subject to the limitations set forth in Lab. Code § 3860 [Lab. Code § 3860(b)].

The purpose of Lab. Code § 3859(b) and the introductory phrase in Lab. Code § 3860(b) ("Except as provided in Section 3859") is to permit an employee to segregate his or her own damage claim against a third party from the employer's claim against that third party for reimbursement for workers' compensation benefits paid. The employee thus is permitted to settle his or her own claim for a sum exclusive of amounts already received in the form of a workers' compensation award without jeopardizing the employer's subrogation right. This exception to the rule requiring an employer's consent to an employee's settlement is a limited one; the settlement is free from the employer's claim for reimbursement only when the settlement is exclusive of the amount of workers' compensation benefits paid by the employer [Board of Administration v. Glover (1983) 34 Cal. 3d 906, 913-914, 196 Cal. Rptr. 330, 671 P.2d 834 ; but see Ellis v. Wells Manufacturing, Inc. (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 312, 317, 264 Cal. Rptr. 648 (lien by workers' compensation carrier on settlement between employee and third party as improper even though settlement included workers' compensation benefits paid to employee, as employer's negligence was alleged by third party and not litigated, and settlement provided that employee would hold third party harmless against any claim by employer)].

The employee's failure to secure the employer's consent prior to settling the claim with the third-party tortfeasor and executing a general release in the tortfeasor's favor may subject the settlement to the employer's claim for reimbursement of compensation benefits paid. It may also subject the third-party tortfeasor, who was, or reasonably should have been, aware of the possibility of the employer's claim and who failed to notify the employer of the settlement and obtain its consent, to liability under Lab. Code § 3850 et seq. [see Board of Administration v. Glover (1983) 34 Cal. 3d 906, 914-919, 196 Cal. Rptr. 330, 671 P.2d 834 ; American Home Assurance Co. v. Hagadorn (1996) 48 Cal. App. 4th 1898, 1907, 56 Cal. Rptr. 2d 536 (employer had right to maintain action against employee for breach of duty to notify employer of third-party settlement); see also Insurance Co. of North America v. T.L.C. Lines, Inc. (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 90, 101-102, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 542 (third-party tortfeasor's good-faith settlement and release of liability extinguished workers' compensation insurer's right to seek reimbursement from tortfeasor)].

[b] Division of Settlement

[i] Amount of Expenses and Attorney's Fees

The amount of expenses and attorney's fees shall, on settlement of suit, or on any settlement requiring court approval, be set by the court. In all other cases these amounts shall be set by the Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (WCAB). When the employer and the employee are represented by separate attorneys they may propose to the court or the appeals board, for consideration and determination, the amount and division of the expenses and fees [Lab. Code § 3860(f)].

Lab. Code § 3860(f) does not specify the time in which the WCAB must rule on the amount of attorney's fees and expenses, and does not require that the applicant raise the issue in any specified way. Hence, when the employer's compensation carrier petitions the WCAB for credit against its compensation liability for the amount of the worker's settlement of his or her third-party action, the amount of the credit is necessarily placed in issue. If the evidence presented establishes the amounts of the worker's attorney's fees and expenses in the third-party action, those amounts should be deducted from the worker's gross recovery to reach the amount of credit to be allowed [see Griffith v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 1260, 1263-1264, 257 Cal. Rptr. 813] .

[ii] Payment of Expenses and Attorney's Fees if Settlement Effected by Either Employer's or Employee's Attorney

If the settlement is effected with or without suit solely through the efforts of either the employee's or employer's attorney, but not both, then, prior to the reimbursement of the employer as provided in Lab. Code § 3860(b), there shall be deducted from the amount of the settlement the reasonble expenses incurred in effecting the settlement, including costs of suit, if any, together with a reasonable attorney's fee to be paid to the attorney for his or her services in securing and effecting settlement for the benefit of both the employer and the employee [Lab. Code 3860(c), (d); see Quinn v. State of California (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 162, 169-176 n.20, 124 Cal. Rptr. 1, 539 P.2d 761 (involving apportionment of attorney's fee under Lab. Code § 3856, discussed under § 577.334[4], but disapproving following cases involving Lab. Code § 3860: Fuchs v. Western Oil Fields Supply (1972) 25 Cal. App. 3d 728, 102 Cal. Rptr. 74 ; Moreno v. Venturini (1969) 1 Cal. App. 3d 286, 81 Cal. Rptr. 551 ; Johnson v. L.D.S. Trucking Co. (1967) 254 Cal. App. 2d 496, 62 Cal. Rptr. 501)]. When the employee's attorney alone effects third-party settlement, the attorney is entitled to an award of attorney's fees, even if the employer participates in the litigation and its reimbursement claim exceeds the amount of the settlement [Luque v. Herrera (2000) 81 Cal. App. 4th 558, 563, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 853] .

In contradistinction to the situation involving an award of attorney's fees following a jury trial that resulted in a judgment, payment of whose total included the employer's lien amount, it was error for the trial court, in calculating fees for an employee's attorney, to include the amount of the employer's workers' compensation lien, which the employer assigned to the third party as part of the settlement between them and which the third party then gave up the right to enforce against the employee as part of the settlement between them. Similarly, it was error for the trial court to award the employee's attorney's fees based on the total settlement achieved among the employee, the employer, and the third party without addressing the issue of whether that settlement was obtained solely through the efforts of the employee's attorney [Manriquez v. Adams (2003) 108 Cal. App. 4th 340, 346-348, 133 Cal. Rptr. 2d 449] .

In one case not involving workers' compensation insurance, the California Supreme Court held that, although the made-whole rule applies in the medical payments insurance context, and the insured must be made whole as to all damages proximately caused by the injury, liability for attorney's fees is not included under the made-whole rule, but is instead subject to the equitable apportionment rule. In this case, the insured settled a claim for damages, arising from an automobile accident, against a third party for $6,000, which sum represented her total damages. The insured incurred approximately $2,000 in attorney's fees in obtaining that settlement. The insurer paid the insured $1,000 under her insurance policy's medical payments provision. The policy required the insured to reimburse the insurer for monies she recovered from a third party that duplicated her recovery under her policy. The insured reimbursed the insurer in the amount of $600, arrived at by subtracting attorney's fees of $400 (the insurer's pro rata share of the total attorney's fees of $2,000) from the $1,000 in medical payments the insured received from the insurer. The Court held that the insured was not entitled to withhold reimbursement from the insurer on the grounds that she had not been reimbursed for 100 percent of the attorney's fees she incurred [21st Century Insurance Co. v. Superior Court of San Diego County; Silvia Quintana, Real Party in Interest (2009) 47 Cal. 4th 511, 527-528, 98 Cal. Rptr. 3d 516, 213 P.3d 972].

[iii] Payment of Expenses and Attorney's Fees if Settlement Effected by Both Employer's and Employee's Attorney

When both the employer and the employee are represented by the same agreed attorney or by separate attorneys in effecting a settlement, prior to reimbursement of the employer as provided in Lab. Code § 3860(b), there shall be deducted from the amount of the settlement the reasonable expenses incurred by both the employer and the employee or on behalf of either, including costs of suit, if any, together with reasonable attorney's fees to be paid to the respective attorneys for the employer and the employee, based on the respective services rendered in securing and effecting settlement for the benefit of the party represented.

If both parties are represented by the same attorney, by agreement, the attorney's fee shall be based on the services rendered for the benefit of both [Lab. Code § 3860(e)]. According to the California Supreme Court's interpretation of Labor Code § 3860(e), when the employer and employee are separately represented by attorneys who each actively participate in achieving a settlement, the fees awarded to the employer's attorney and the employer's pro rata share of other litigation costs must be deducted from the amount paid to the employer out of the settlement proceeds as reimbursement for its workers' compensation expenses, rather than being paid out of the employee's share of the proceeds [Summers v. Newman (1999) 20 Cal. 4th 1021, 1035-1036, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 303, 978 P.2d 1225] .

Interpreting the provisions of Lab. Code § 3860, the court of appeal has held that equitable apportionment of settlement funds between the employee and the employer is not allowed, even when the funds are insufficient to fully reimburse the employer and pay the employee for pain and suffering and other losses not covered by workers' compensation [Gapusan v. Jay (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 734, 742, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 250] . In such a case, the employer is entitled to full reimbursement for compensation paid pursuant to Lab. Code § 3860(b). Portions of a settlement allocated to a claim independent of the employee's claim, such as a claim for loss of consortium by an employee's wife, are not subject to an employer's claim for credit or reimbursement [Gapusan v. Jay (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 734, 742-743, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 250] .

[4] Credit Against Employer's Liability

[a] In General

The appeals board must allow, as a credit to the employer to be applied against his or her liability for compensation, the amount of any recovery by the employee, either by settlement or after judgment, as has not theretofore been applied to the payment of expenses or attorney's fees pursuant to Lab. Code §§ 3856, 3858, and 3860, or has not been applied to reimburse the employer [Lab. Code § 3861; see Associated Construction & Engineering Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 829, 833-840, 150 Cal. Rptr. 888, 587 P.2d 684 ; see also Lab. Code § 3858, discussed under [5], above; § 577.542].

Thus, an employer who has not completely paid compensation benefits to the employee may receive a credit before the appeals board for money obtained in a third-party judgment in the employee's favor [Del Monte Corp. v. Superior Court (1982) 127 Cal. App. 3d 1049, 1052, 179 Cal. Rptr. 855] . Portions of a settlement allocated to a claim independent of the employee's claim, such as a claim for loss of consortium by an employee's wife, are not subject to an employer's claim for credit [Gapusan v. Jay (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 734, 742-743, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 250] . For the effect on the employer's right to a credit of the employer's concurrent negligence, see § 577.333[3][c], and § 577.542.

The court of appeal has held that, pursuant to Lab. Code § 3861, an employer was entitled to credit against future workers' compensation benefits to be paid to an employee in the amount of the net settlement of the employee's action against a third-party tortfeasor, paid to the employee by CIGA. The court found that the employee sustained an industrial injury at the hands of the third party tortfeasor, that the employer had provided the employee with $74,408.79 in workers' compensation benefits, and that the employee's lawsuit against the third party tortfeasor was settled for $50,000, with the employer releasing its lien against workers' compensation benefits already paid to the employee. With the employer claiming credit against its liability for future workers' compensation benefits up to $50,000, the court found that CIGA was obligated under Ins. Code §§ 1063.1(c)(1) and 1063.2(a) to pay the settlement, regardless of whether the employer was entitled to credit, that CIGA's assets were unaffected by grant or denial of the credit to the employer, and that, if credit were denied, the employee would be in a better position than if the third party tortfeasor's insurer had remained solvent [Baur v. Workers' Comp. appeals Bd. (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 1260, 1264-1267, 98 Cal. Rptr. 3d 493].

[b] Credit and Lien Distinguished

The employer's right to a credit and right to a lien are separate and distinct. The lien allows the employer to be reimbursed for money already paid, whereas the credit is taken against sums that may become due in the future. The employer loses the credit right only through express waiver or settlement and not by mere satisfaction of a lien claim [State Compensation Ins. Fund v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1982) 130 Cal. App. 3d 933, 938 n.2, 182 Cal. Rptr. 171 ; see Hodge v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1981) 123 Cal. App. 3d 501, 511-512, 176 Cal. Rptr. 675] .

§ 577.336 Nonliability of Employer to Indemnify Tortfeasor

If an action by the employee, the employer, or both jointly against the third person results in judgment against the third person or settlement by the third person, the employer has no liability to reimburse or hold the third person harmless on the judgment or settlement in absence of a written agreement to do so executed prior to the injury [Lab. Code § 3864]. The legislative purpose in enacting Lab. Code § 3864 was to eliminate the employer's liability for implied indemnity in the absence of a written agreement, because implied indemnity imposed a greater burden on the employer than was contemplated under the workers' compensation system [Chase Chemical Co. v. Hartford Accident & Indemnity Co. (1984) 159 Cal. App. 3d 229, 237, 205 Cal. Rptr. 469] .

The Legislature enacted Lab. Code § 3864 because the doctrine of implied indemnity imposed a greater burden on the employer than was contemplated under the workers' compensation system [Up-Right, Inc. v. Van Erickson (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 579, 582, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 34] . Without this section, the employer's protection of a limit on the economic consequences of claims made under the system could be easily circumvented [Up-Right, Inc. v. Van Erickson (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 579, 582, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 34] . When a third-party defendant files a cross complaint for indemnity against the employer, the cross complaint must allege the existence of a written indemnity agreement or it will be subject to demurrer [Up-Right, Inc. v. Van Erickson (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 579, 582-584, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 34] .

If the existence of such an agreement is not alleged, Lab. Code § 3864 precludes a third party from filing a cross-complaint, even if there is a showing that the employer was concurrently negligent in causing the employee's injuries [State of California v. Superior Court (1998) 60 Cal. App. 4th 659, 664-665, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 256] . Moreover, a third party is not excused from the requirement of a written indemnity agreement under Lab. Code § 3864 by allegations that the employer engaged in criminal conduct by violating the child labor laws, since such criminal conduct by the employer will not render workers' compensation inapplicable [Up-Right, Inc. v. Van Erickson (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 579, 583-584, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 34] .

[2] Multiple Employers

When an employee has more than one employer, one employer held liable in tort to the employee may be considered a "third party" under Lab. Code § 3864 with respect to the others. For example, the temporary employer of a worker injured because of an unguarded power press may not seek indemnity from the employment agency that placed the worker in the job. If the worker successfully meets the requisites for Lab. Code § 4558 (exception to exclusivity rule of workers' compensation for power press guard injuries) [see discussion under § 577.314[5]], the employer will be considered a third party liable in tort to the employee but barred by Lab. Code § 3864 from seeking indemnity from the employment agency. If the employee cannot meet the requisites for Lab. Code § 4558, the civil action will be barred, and there will be nothing to support the indemnity action against the agency [Watters Associates v. Superior Court (1991) 227 Cal. App. 3d 1341, 1344, 278 Cal. Rptr. 417] .

§ 577.356 Decisions

[1] In General

Lab. Code § 3751 bars freight transportation companies from requiring independent contractor truck owners/operators to pay costs of their own workers' compensation insurance, when parties had elected under Lab. Code § 4150 to come under workers' compensation law's compensation provisions, which include Lab. Code § 3751. Albillo, et al. v. Intermodal Container Services, Inc.; Montoya v. W.C.A.B. (2003) 114 Cal. App. 4th 190, 197-207, 8 Cal. Rptr. 3d 350

WCAB as duty-bound to interpret and apply all aspects of workers' compensation law, especially Labor Code provisions and its own regulations, liberally in favor of worker consistent with underlying policy of pervasive and abiding solicitude for worker. Hansen v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 717, 722, 259 Cal. Rptr. 506

Person who suffers work-related injury as required generally to seek relief within workers' compensation system, and all proceedings as required to be before WCAB, which operates under rules of procedure and evidence substantially different from those in superior court, all of which are liberally construed in favor of workers' claims; intent of this special forum as being to compensate worker quickly and its jurisdiction as controlling, even though worker might have better claim against employer in civil action brought in superior court. Potter v. Arizona So. Coach Lines, Inc. (1988) 202 Cal. App. 3d 126, 131, 248 Cal. Rptr. 284

Workers' compensation law as implementing mandate of Cal. Const., art. XIV, § 4, that Legislature create "complete system" of compensation for injury or death to employee incurred in course of employment; since source of this law is statutory, rights and liabilities of parties as required to be predicated on statutes and cases that interpret them. Buhlert Trucking v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 1530, 1533, 247 Cal. Rptr. 190

Workers' compensation law as compensating employees for injuries arising out of unsafe work place conditions, including enhanced compensation under Lab. Code § 4553 in cases involving serious and willful employer misconduct. Jones v. Los Angeles Community College Dist. (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 794, 804, 244 Cal. Rptr. 37

Workers' compensation system as not avoided by direct contract, and subterfuges designed to avoid workers' compensation laws as not countenanced; hence, contract between alleged employer and employee as unable to affect true relationship of parties to it or to place employee in different position from that which he or she actually held. Truesdale v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 608, 614, 235 Cal. Rptr. 754 (contract falsely designating worker as independent contractor)

WCAB as having approved citation of writ-denied summaries published in California Compensation Cases, and, accordingly, courts as permitting citation of California Compensation Cases and as occasionally citing them in published opinions. Wings West Airlines v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1047, 1053 n.4, 232 Cal. Rptr. 343

California workers' compensation law as statutory system enacted pursuant to constitutional grant of plenary power to Legislature to establish complete and exclusive system of workers' compensation (Cal. Const., art. XIV, § 4); law as expression and valid exercise of police power. Graczyk v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1986) 184 Cal. App. 3d 997, 1002, 229 Cal. Rptr. 494

Right to workers' compensation benefits as wholly statutory and not derived from common law; statutory right as exclusive of all other statutory and common law remedies and as substituting new system of rights and obligations for common law rules governing liability of employers for injuries to their employees; rights, remedies, and obligations as resting on status of employer-employee relationship, rather than on contract or tort. Graczyk v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1986) 184 Cal. App. 3d 997, 1002-1003, 229 Cal. Rptr. 494

[2] Affirmative Defenses

Finding of intentional injury under Lab. Code § 3600(a)(5), requires proof that employee deliberately intended to injury himself or herself; employee who injured hand when he intentionally struck wall was not barred from receiving benefits under Lab. Code § 3600(a)(5), when there was no evidence employee intended to injure himself. Smith v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2000) 79 Cal. App. 4th 530, 533, 94 Cal. Rptr. 2d 186

Employer as precluded from raising as a defense under Lab. Code § 4056 plaintiff's refusal to submit to medical treatment when, at the time plaintiff's injuries were discovered, there was no admitted or adjudicated industrial injury and no tender of medical treatment by employer. See Thompson v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1994) 25 Cal. App. 4th 1781, 1787-1788, 31 Cal. Rptr. 2d 242

Lab. Code § 3708 as expressly abolishing common-law defense of contributory negligence in workers' compensation proceedings. Thompson v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1994) 25 Cal. App. 4th 1781, 1787-1788, 31 Cal. Rptr. 2d 242

Employer asserting affirmative defense of employee's intoxication is proximate cause or substantial factor in employee's injury or death. Smith v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1981) 123 Cal. App. 3d 763, 773, 176 Cal. Rptr. 843

[2A] Aliens/Undocumented Workers

Worker, who at time of injury was illegal alien who had obtained job by showing employer false Social Security and green cards, was employee entitled to workers' compensation benefits, excluding reinstatement and back pay. Farmer Brothers Coffee v. W.C.A.B. (Ruiz) (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 533, 537-544, 35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 23

Undocumented employee is not entitled to vocational rehabilitation benefits when employee is unable to return to work solely because of immigration status, since providing undocumented worker with greater benefits than those available to legal workers violates equal protection clause of the United States Constitution. Del Taco v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2000) 79 Cal. App. 4th 1437, 1442-1443, 94 Cal. Rptr. 2d 825

In civil action for medical malpractice, trial court should have excluded from trial all reference to plaintiff's immigration status, when plaintiff was not seeking damages for loss of earnings or earning capacity, since plaintiff's immigration status was neither relevant to any issue in case nor admissible to attack plaintiff's credibility. Hernandez v. Paicius (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 452, 456-463, 468, 134 Cal. Rptr. 2d 756

[3] Appeals Board

Legislature as having vested all judicial powers under Workers' Compensation Act in WCAB (Lab. Code § 111); WCAB as authorized to exercise judicial power in all disputes arising under Workers' Compensation Act as a constitutional court subject to general legal principles that circumscribe and regulate judgment of all judicial tribunals and in general as having inherent power to control its practice and procedure to prevent frustration, abuse, or disregard of its process. Crawford v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 156, 164, 259 Cal. Rptr. 414

[4] Applications for Adjudication of Claim

WCAB abused its discretion by finding that applicant did not sustain industrial injury based on facts that medical evidence did not support finding of specific injury and applicant did not amend specific injury claim to include cumulative injury, when evidence supported finding of cumulative injury and employer had early knowledge of potential cumulative injury claim despite employees failure to amend pleadings. Beckstead v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1997) 60 Cal. App. 4th 787, 792, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 254

Amendment to original application to substitute cumulative-injury claim for specific-injury claim as proper and as not constituting new and different cause of action so as to subject amended claim to bar of statute of limitations when disability is the same and both claims arose from same set of facts. Bassett-McGregor v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 1102, 1116, 252 Cal. Rptr. 868

Inadvertent defect in application as ignored when defendant is not prejudiced by it. Brennfleck v. Workmen's Comp. App. Bd. (1968) 265 Cal. App. 2d 738, 742-743, 71 Cal. Rptr. 525

[5] Apportionment

Language of Lab. Code § 4663(c), plus language of Lab. Code § 4664(a), meant that so-called apportionment "Formula A" adopted by Supreme Court in Fuentes v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1976) 16 Cal. 3d 1, 128 Cal. Rptr. 673, 547 P.2d 449 , pursuant to which percentage of disability attributable to new injury is calculated by subtracting old permanent disability rating from new permanent disability rating, then consulting table for award due this difference, remained proper method for calculating apportionment, and statutory changes made by SB 899 did not mandate use of "Formula C," rejected by Supreme Court in Fuentes, pursuant to which dollar award for new injury is calculated as if apportionment were not issue, then dollar award of old injury is subtracted. Brodie v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2007) 40 Cal. 4th 1313, 1323-1332, 57 Cal. Rptr. 3d 644, 156 P.3d 1100

AMA Guides portion of 2005 Permanent Disability Rating Schedule is rebuttable, and it is rebutted by showing that impairment rating based on Guides would result in permanent disability award that would be inequitable, disproportionate, and not fair and accurate measure of employee's permanent disability. Almaraz v. Environmental Recovery Services; Guzman v. Milpitas Unified School District (2009) 74 Cal. Comp. Cases 201, 211-217, 233,

239-245 (Appeals Board en banc opinion) , recon. granted Almaraz v. Environmental Recovery Services; Guzman v. Milpitas Unified School District (2009) 74 Cal. Comp. Cas. 478, 479-482 (Appeals Board en banc opinion)

Diminished future earning capacity portion of 2005 Permanent Disability Rating Schedule is rebuttable, since Lab. Code § 4660(c) provides that 2005 Schedule is merely "prima facie evidence of percentage of permanent disability to be attributed to each injury." Ogilvie v. City and County of San Francisco (2009) 74 Cal. Comp. Cases 248, 255-274 (Appeals Board en banc opinion) , recon. granted Ogilvie v. City and County of San Francisco (2009) 74 Cal. Comp. Cases 478, 479-482 (Appeals Board en banc opinion)

Appeals Board en banc has specifically rejected "inequitable, disproportionate, and not a fair and accurate measure of the employee's permanent disability" standard set forth in its previous en banc opinion in same case. Almaraz v. Environmental Recovery Services; Guzman v. Milpitas Unified School District (2009) 74 Cal. Comp. Cases 1084, 1085-1087, 1114 (Appeals Board en banc opinion) , pet. for writ of rev. filed sub nom. Milpitas Unified School District v. W.C.A.B. (Guzman) 10/16/2009

Appeals Board en banc has held that any individualized diminished future earning capacity adjustment factor must be consistent with Lab Code § 4660(b)(2), RAND data to which it refers, and numeric formula adopted by Administrative Director in 2005 Schedule. Oglevie v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2009) 74 Cal. Comp. Cases 1127, 1129, 1130 (Appeals Board en banc opinion) , pet. for writ of rev. filed 10/7/2009

Rule of Wilkinson v. W.C.A.B. (1977) 19 Cal. 3d 491 , which provided that injured worker who, while employed by same employer, sustained two separate injuries to same part of body, which became permanent and stationary at same time, was entitled to receive combined award of permanent disability, is no longer generally applicable because inconsistent with post-SB 899 requirement that apportionment be based on causation, and in light of current versions of Lab. Code §§ 4663(a) and (c) and 4664(a), as explained by Brodie v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2007) 40 Cal. 4th 1313 , Appeals Board must now determine and apportion to cause of disability for each industrial injury, meaning that all potential causes of disability, whether from current industrial injury, prior or subsequent industrial injury, or prior or subsequent nonindustrial injury or condition, must be taken into consideration. Benson v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2007) 72 Cal. Comp. Cases 1620, 1622, 1634-1635 (Appeals Board en banc opinion) , aff'd sub nom. Benson v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. [2009) 170 Cal. App. 4th 1535, 1549-1560, 89 Cal. Rptr. 3d 166

Pursuant to Lab. Code § 4664(b), employee was not entitled to prove that he was medically rehabilitated from prior permanent disability when he sustained subsequent industrial injury, when court of appeal found that legislature intended statute's presumption to be conclusive, not rebuttable, notwithstanding second sentence in statute, which states that this presumption affects burden of proof, and court annulled decision of Appeals Board and held that Board incorrectly determined that employee had burden of disproving overlap between current permanent disability and previous disability in order to establish his claim to permanent disability benefits, but court found that employer, while able to rely, pursuant to Lab. Code § 4664(b), on conclusive presumption that employee's permanent disability that was subject of prior award existed at time of subsequent industrial injury, nonetheless had burden of proving overlap in order to establish its right to apportionment of employee's permanent disability. Kopping v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 1099, 1106-1115, 48 Cal. Rptr. 3d 618

There was no "existing order, decision, or award" in case before court of appeal, within meaning of § 47 of SB 899, and Legislature intended § 47's language that SB 899 "shall not constitute good cause to reopen or rescind, alter, or amend any existing order, decision, or award" to be consistent with general rule that statutory rights end during litigation with repeal or amendment of statute unless appeals were exhausted and final judgment existed. Kleemann v. W.C.A.B. (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 274, 285-288, 25 Cal. Rptr. 3d 448

Appeals Board determination was not "final" for purposes of considering apportionment under SB 899 until Board had issued final judgment and appellate process had been exhausted, which had not occurred in present case, so that language ofSection 47 of SB 899 that SB 899 "shall not constitute good cause to reopen or rescind, alter, or amend any existing order, decision, or award of the Workers' Compensation Appeals Board" was no barrier to applying SB 899's apportionment provisions to present case. Marsh v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2005) 130 Cal. App. 4th 906, 912-916, 30 Cal. Rptr. 3d 598

Submission orders and orders closing discovery, issued prior to effective date of SB 899, April 19, 2004, were not "existing" orders that could not be reopened due to prohibition set forth in Sec. 47 of SB 899, so that SB 899's repeal of former apportionment statutes, Lab. Code §§ 4663, 4750, and 4750.5, and enactment of new apportionment statutes, Lab. Code §§ 4663 and 4664, applied to present case. Rio Linda Union School District v. W.C.A.B. (Scheftner) (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 517, 525-532, 31 Cal. Rptr. 3d 789

Apportioning liability for cumulative trauma injuries, pursuant to Lab. Code § 5500.5, requires either compensable temporary disability or permanent disability to satisfy disability requirement of Lab. Code § 5412. State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (Rodarte) (2004) 119 Cal. App. 4th 998, 1005-1006, 14 Cal. Rptr. 3d 793

Under Lab. Code § 4750.5 [repealed in 2004], an "unrelated noncompensable injury" is a disabling event which, if work related, would be compensable; the word "solely" has been interpreted to incorporate the existing rules applicable to the apportionment of successive disabilities. Fresno Unified School Dist. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2000) 84 Cal. App. 4th 1295, 1308, 1311, 101 Cal. Rptr. 2d 569

Doctor's report that apportioned applicant's permanent disability based upon incorrect legal theory, was insufficient to support WCAB's apportionment. Martins v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1995) 40 Cal. App. 4th 1090, 1094-1095, 47 Cal. Rptr. 2d 386

Lab. Code § 4750.5 [repealed in 2004] not applicable in permitting apportionment of applicant's permanent disability to her pregnancy or her unemployment since neither condition constituted a "non-compensable injury" within the meaning of the statute; in enacting Lab. Code § 4750.5 [repealed in 2004], Legislature intended to make distinction between compensable and noncompensable injuries, rather than to expand meaning of "injury" to include conditions and circumstances not relevant in apportionment. Ashley v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1995) 37 Cal. App. 4th 320, 328-329, 43 Cal. Rptr. 2d 589

[6] Arising Out of and in Course of Employment

Although illegal conduct in performance of job-related act will not preclude finding that resulting disability is service-connected, illegal activity wholly unrelated to worker's duties as outside scope of employment. Traub v. Board of Retirement (1983) 34 Cal. 3d 793, 799, 195 Cal. Rptr. 681, 670 P.2d 335

Police officer's physical training injury, even though occurring while he was on vacation, was compensable injury because his training was, pursuant to Lab. Code § 3600(a)(9), "a reasonable expectancy of ... the employment." Tomlin v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 1423, 1425-1426, 1428-1432, 76 Cal. Rptr. 3d 672

Employee's death was not result of industrial injury, when court found that decedent, accountant with CPA license employed by City of Los Angeles, died from injuries received from fall while attending CPA convention in Atlantic City, New Jersey, since employer did not require decedent to have CPA license, and traveling to attend the convention for CPA credit was not expressly or impliedly authorized by decedent's employment contract. City of Los Angeles v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 78

Court of appeal affirmed award of workers' compensation benefits to police officer who was exposed to benzene during his employment and contracted kidney cancer during his employment, holding, pursuant to Lab. Code § 3212.1, that employer failed to rebut presumption that cancer was industrial injury when it established merely absence of medical evidence that benzene had been shown to cause kidney cancer. City of Long Beach v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2005) 126 Cal. App. 4th 298, 314-321, 23 Cal. Rptr. 3d 782

Ski resort employees who are exempt from workers' compensation coverage under Lab. Code § 3352(f) are not also exempt from assumption of risk under Lab. Code § 2801, because latter statute bars employers from raising assumption of risk as defense in negligence actions by employees only when employee has been injured in course of employment, and legislature, by virtue of it use of phrase "course of his employment as such" in Lab. Code § 2801, contemplated more restrictive concept of course of employment in that statute than in workers' compensation statutes, only latter of which include off-duty recreational activities if they are reasonable expectancy of employment. Vine v. Bear Valley Ski Co. (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 577, 587-590, 13 Cal. Rptr. 3d 370

Question of whether employee was on duty or off duty at time of injury is not ultimate test for whether injury was covered by compensation bargain and thus subject to exclusive remedy rule, but rather ultimate test is whether injury arose out of and in course of employment, and "reasonable expectancy" requirement of Lab. Code § 3600(a)(9) is simply one subset of ultimate issue of whether injury arose out of and in course of employment. Mason v. Lake Dolores Group, L.L.C. (2004) 117 Cal. App. 4th 822, 832-838, 11 Cal. Rptr. 3d 914

Employee who suffered fatal heart attack at home after telephoning her employer day before she was to return to work following seven-month periodof disability, was not acting in course of her employment since she was off-duty, off-premises, and not performing services incidental to her employment when she suffered heart attack; phone call made by employee just before heart attack to inform her employer that she would be working part-time schedule, did not bring employee within course of employment. Ralphs Grocery Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 647, 651, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 161

Evidence supported conclusion that probationary sergeant's severe depression caused by his being unable to perform his job duties resulted in suicide and that suicide was compensable since it was the proximate result of injury arising out of and in the course of employment. Chu v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 1176, 1185, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 221

Test for whether an injury arises out of and in the course of employment under workers' compensation law is broader than test for scope of employment under respondeat superior doctrine. Bailey v. Filco, Inc. dba Filco Discount Centers (1996) 48 Cal. App. 4th 1552, 1562, 56 Cal. Rptr. 2d 333

Lab. Code § 3212.1 as requiring firefighter to establish reasonable causal link between industrial exposure to carcinogens and stomach cancer; although not required to prove proximate cause under statute, firefighter as required to show logical connection between injury and exposure. Riverview Fire Protection Dist. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1994) 23 Cal. App. 4th 1120, 1125, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 601

Emotional distress injuries caused by termination of employment as arising out of and in the course of employment, and therefore compensable under workers' compensation law. Jenkins v. Family Health Program (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 440, 450, 262 Cal. Rptr. 798 ; Pichon v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 488, 495-496, 260 Cal. Rptr. 677

Employee misconduct, whether negligent, willful, or even criminal, as not necessarily precluding recovery of workers' compensation benefits; in absence of applicable statutory defense, such misconduct as barring recovery only when it constitutes deviation from scope of employment. Westbrooks v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 249, 253, 253 n.4, 252 Cal. Rptr. 26 (also noting that compensation is precluded by Lab. Code § 3600(a)(8) when injury is caused by commission of felonious act by injured employee for which he or she has been convicted)

WCAB as having erred in denying bus driver's claim for benefits for emotional injury arising out of accident that occurred while driver was on assigned run on ground that driver's reckless driving, for which he was convicted, took him outside course of his employment. Westbrooks v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 249, 251, 254, 252 Cal. Rptr. 26

Generally, employee injured outside workplace and ordinary working hours as not entitled to workers' compensation benefits. Luna v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 77, 80, 244 Cal. Rptr. 596

For purposes of workers' compensation law, "in course of employment" as generally referring to time and place of injury and meaning that injured must be engaged in work he or she has been hired to perform, and "arise out of employment" as referring to causal connection between injury and employment. West American Ins. Co. v. California Mutual Ins. Co. (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 314, 321, 240 Cal. Rptr. 540 (distinguishing terms as used in workers' compensation law from terms as used under doctrine of respondeat superior and in private liability insurance law)

To be compensable under Lab. Code § 3600, injury as required not only to be sustained in course of employment and during performance of service, but also to be one arising out of and proximately caused by employment; requirement that injury arise out of and be proximately caused by employment as referring to causal connection between employment and injury. Gonzalez v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 514, 518, 230 Cal. Rptr. 649

If there is no real dispute as to facts, question of whether injury was suffered in course of employment as one of law. Gonzalez v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 514, 519, 230 Cal. Rptr. 649

Statutory requirements that injury occur in course of employment and arise out ofemployment (Lab. Code §§ 3370, 3600) as conjunctive, and both as required to be satisfied for injury to be compensable. Crawford v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 1265, 1268, 230 Cal. Rptr. 425

Whether assault on employee by third person arises out of and in course of employment as dependent on whether assault was connected with employment or without any relation to it. Rogers v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1985) 172 Cal. App. 3d 1195, 1200, 218 Cal. Rptr. 662 ; Western Airlines v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1984) 155 Cal. App. 3d 366, 369, 202 Cal. Rptr. 74 ; California State Polytechnic University v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1982) 127 Cal. App. 3d 514, 518, 179 Cal. Rptr. 605 ; Murphy v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1978) 86 Cal. App. 3d 996, 998-1002, 150 Cal. Rptr. 561

"Arising out of and in course of employment" test used in workers' compensation law as less restrictive than "scope of employment" test used in respondeat superior doctrine. Wank v. Richman & Garrett (1985) 165 Cal. App. 3d 1103, 1110-1111, 211 Cal. Rptr. 919

[7] Asbestos

Discussion of asbestos and its effects. General Foundry Service v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 331, 335-336 n.2, 228 Cal. Rptr. 243, 721 P.2d 124

Mesothelioma and asbestosis as separate and distinct diseases resulting in separate and distinct disabilities; survivors of deceased employee entitled to a later date of injury for mesothelioma for purposes of calculating rate of death benefits. Chevron U.S.A., Inc. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 1265, 1271-1273, 268 Cal. Rptr. 699

[8] Athletes

Under Lab. Code § 3352, term "employee," as used in workers' compensation law, as excluding (1) any person, other than regular employee, participating in sports or athletics who receives no compensation for such participation other than use of athletic equipment, uniforms, transportation, travel, meals, lodgings, or other expenses incidental thereto (Lab. Code § 3352(g), added in 1965); and (2) any student participating as an athlete in amateur sporting events sponsored by any public agency, public or private nonprofit college, university, or school, who receives no remuneration for such participation other than use of athletic equipment, uniforms, transportation, travel, meals, lodgings, scholarships, grants-in-aid, or other expenses incidental thereto (Lab. Code § 3352(k), added in 1981); 1981 legislation as retroactive; hence, student of California State University injured while playing varsity college football in 1978 as not an employee within meaning of workers' compensation law, and as not entitled to workers' compensation. Graczyk v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1986) 184 Cal. App. 3d 997, 1002-1009, 229 Cal. Rptr. 494

[9] Athletic, Social, or Recreational Activities

Evidence did not support finding that police officer subjectively believed that his employer expected him to engage in occasional pickup game of basketball, and, even if there were evidence of officer's subjective belief, that belief would not have been objectively reasonable. City of Stockton v. W.C.A.B. (Jenneiahn) (2006) 135 Cal. App. 4th 1513, 1525-1526, 38 Cal. Rptr. 3d 474

Injury suffered by applicant while participating in basketball game after work was not compensable under Lab. Code § 3600(a)(9), since there was insufficient evidence to indicate that applicant reasonably believed that he was expected to participate in game, or that participation was expressly or impliedly required by his employment. Tensfeldt v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 116, 126-127, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 691

Highway patrol officer's belief that practicing the long jump while at home was a reasonable expectancy of her employment, was reasonable as a matter of law, since long jump was a required element of annual physical fitness test administered by employer. Kidwell v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1995) 33 Cal. App. 4th 1130, 1139, 39 Cal. Rptr. 2d 540

"Reasonable expectancy of employment" test under Lab. Code § 3600(a)(9), providing that employee is not entitled to workers' compensation for injury sustained while voluntarily participating in off-duty recreational or athletic activities unless activities are reasonable expectancy of, or are expressly or impliedly required by, employment, as legal question consisting of two elements: (1) whether employee subjectively believes his or her participation in activity is expected by employer and (2) whether that belief is objectively reasonable. Taylor v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 211, 215, 244 Cal. Rptr. 643 ; Wilson v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 902, 905-906, 239 Cal. Rptr. 719 ; Childers v. Shasta Livestock Auction Yard, Inc. (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 792, 816, 235 Cal. Rptr. 641 (plaintiff's participation in drinking alcoholic beverages at job site held a reasonable expectancy of employment, and under facts of case, that belief that worker's participation in drinking was expected by employer was objectively reasonable); Aetna Casualty & Surety Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 922, 930, 232 Cal. Rptr. 257

When employer expects employees to participate in recreational or athletic activities to maintain certain standards of physical fitness necessary for performance of their work, employer as able to limit its liability for workers' compensation to injuries sustained in designated and preapproved athletic activities. Taylor v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 211, 215-216, 244 Cal. Rptr. 643 (distinguishing Wilson v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 902, 239 Cal. Rptr. 719)

Employee injured while voluntarily participating in basketball game on employer's premises during uncompensated lunch break when there was no substantial evidence that employee reasonably believed he was expected to participate, that participation was expressly or impliedly required by employment, or that employer required, encouraged, or sponsored activity, although employer condoned it, as not entitled to workers' compensation. Todd v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 757, 759-760, 243 Cal. Rptr. 925

Failure of employer to post required notice regarding provisions of Lab. Code § 3600(a)(9), relating to voluntary off-duty recreational, social, or athletic activity, as not resulting in liability that would not otherwise exist. Todd v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 757, 761, 243 Cal. Rptr. 925

Injury to policeman incurred off-duty while running to keep himself in physical condition to pass tests required by city to remain member of police department's special emergency reaction team as arising out of and in course of employment and hence compensable under workers' compensation law. Wilson v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 902, 904, 239 Cal. Rptr. 719

Former Lab. Code § 3600(a)(8) [now see Lab. Code § 3600(a)(9)], excluding liability of employer for workers' compensation when injury arises out of voluntary participation in off-duty recreational, social, or athletic activity not constituting part of the employee's work-related duties, except when these activities are a reasonable expectancy of, or are expressly or impliedly required by, the employment, as inapplicable to detective employed by county sheriff's office who was injured while engaged in softball game between sheriffs' departments of neighboring counties when, at time of injury, detective was on standby duty and engaged in activity at place to which his employer had consented. Gonzalez v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 514, 519-521, 230 Cal. Rptr. 649

To qualify for compensation for injury sustained in off-duty activities, employee as required not only to satisfy burden of proving subjective belief that participation in off-duty activities was expected by employer [see Lab. Code § 3600(a)(9)] but also to show subjective belief was reasonable. Meyer v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1984) 157 Cal. App. 3d 1036, 1042-1044, 204 Cal. Rptr. 74

[10] Attorney's Fees

Written attorney's fee agreement between employee and his attorney was not binding to extent that it purported to "draft around" Lab. Code § 4906 by depriving Appeals Board of its statutory authority to fix attorney fees, making it in conflict with state law and unenforceable. Vierra v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 1142, 1147-1150, 65 Cal. Rptr. 3d 423

Lab. Code § 5710(b)(4), allowing deposition attorney's fees only to attorney's licensed in California, is constitutional since it is rationally related to the state's goal of eliminating fraudulent workers' compensation claims. Longval v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (Amaral) (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 1056, 1066-1068

WCAB erred by applying rule in Goler v. W & J Sloane Co. in awarding attorney's fee's to applicant's attorney who provided services that significantly increased the benefits received by applicant; WCAB should have also considered factors listed in WCAB Rule 10775 (8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10775) in awarding attorney's fees. Wheeler & Beaton v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1995) 40 Cal. App. 4th 389, 396-397, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 581

Workers' compensation judge and WCAB as properly denying attorney's fee awarded pursuant to stipulation that fee be paid from "far end of the award," when no accrued but unpaid disability indemnity payments were due to employee at time of his death. Price v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 959, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 831

WCAB, in awarding attorney's fees, as required to adequately consider and discuss the criteria listed in 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10775 and in its own guidelines on attorney's fees. Lawrence Drasin & Associates v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 1564, 1573, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 215

WCAB as required to base attorney's fee on the amount of all benefits obtained for the applicant through the attorney's efforts. Lawrence Drasin & Associates v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 1564, 1572-1573, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 215

Statement that an award of attorney's fees is reasonable under the circumstances given the time, effort, and skill expended by the applicant's attorney on the applicant's behalf and the result ultimately achieved as not constituting either a statement of the evidence relied on by the WCAB nor a specification of the reasons for the WCAB's decision. Lawrence Drasin & Associates v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 1564, 1572, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 215

Attorneys as entitled to a careful appraisal of the value of the services rendered, and fees should not be fixed by the WCAB solely to save applicants from expense or be so low that competent attorneys will be discouraged from accepting employment in workers' compensation matters. Lawrence Drasin & Associates v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 1564, 1572, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 215

Request for commutation of attorney's fees in a workers' compensation case as required to be first addressed to the WCAB and not to the appellate court. Lawrence Drasin & Associates v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 1564, 1569 n.2, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 215

[11] Average Earnings

Post injury earnings as significant to computation of average earnings, insofar as they illuminate earning capacity at earlier date. Goytia v. Workmen's Comp. Appeals Bd. (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 660, 662, 100 Cal. Rptr. 136, 493 P.2d 864

Average weekly earnings calculated by applying Lab. Code § 4453(c)(4) when employee's regular employment as attorney made him maximum wage earner for purposes of calculating his temporary and permanent disability indemnity benefits but who was injured AOE/COE while on jury duty, which employment paid nominal sum only, when court of appeal held that fact of having been injured while on jury duty did not justify paying employee benefits computed at less than maximum rate of pay. County of San Joaquin v. W.C.A.B. (Davis) (2007) 147 Cal. App. 4th 1459, 1464-1468, 55 Cal. Rptr. 3d 152

"Average weekly earning capacity" under Lab. Code § 4453(c)(4), providing for disability indemnity based on employee's average weekly earning capacity, as not limited to actual earnings; although due consideration as required to be given to his or her actual earnings from all sources and employments, other relevant factors required to be considered as being applicant's history of earnings before injury, postinjury earnings, ability to work, age, health, skill, education, and opportunities to work. Elliot v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Board (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 1497, 1502-1503, 242 Cal. Rptr. 601

Average weekly earnings under Lab. Code § 4453(a), (d), as actual earnings of full-time employee at time of injury when amount fairly reflects earning capacity; however, if there is specific demonstrable evidence that injured employee would, but for injury, have received increased earnings, average earnings as computed on basis of earning capacity. Toccalino v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1982) 128 Cal. App. 3d 543, 560, 180 Cal. Rptr. 427

Average earnings as prediction of what employee's earnings would have been had he or she not been injured. State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1976) 59 Cal. App. 3d 647, 655, 130 Cal. Rptr. 831

[12] Awards

Award of compensation as including right to interest, to have judgment on award entered in superior court, to obtain judgment lien, and to enforce judgment by execution. Myers v. Workmen's Comp. Appeals Bd. (1969) 2 Cal. App. 3d

621, 626, 83 Cal. Rptr. 427

[13] Bunkhouse Rule

Exclusive remedy rule of Lab. Code § 3602(a) barred plaintiffs' civil action against defendant for negligence and failure to make house habitable for human occupation, when court found that plaintiffs husband and wife lived in ranch house owned by defendant as "employment benefit" of husband's job as park ranger employed by defendant and that plaintiff husband was injured when, attempting to get up from bathroom floor of house, where he had been observing leaking pipes while "on all fours," he slipped and fell. Vaught v. State of California, Department of Parks and Recreation (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 1538, 1544-1549, 69 Cal. Rptr. 3d 605

Bunkhouse rule was inapplicable to an injured worker who worked as a cook at a ski resort and resided in apartments owned by her employer; since the worker was injured while skiing on her day off, she was expressly precluded from recovering workers' compensation benefits under Lab. Code § 3352(f). Northstar at Tahoe v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1996) 42 Cal. App. 4th 1481, 1485, 50 Cal. Rptr. 2d 475

Bunkhouse rule as specific application of statutory requirements that injury arise out of and in course of assigned employment [Lab. Code § 3600] and hence inapplicable to state prisoner [see Penal Code § 2601(i); Lab. Code § 3370] injured while off-duty at forestry conservation camp where he lived and worked while serving his sentence, because his living on premises was result of his custodial status as a prisoner. Crawford v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 1265, 1268-1269, 230 Cal. Rptr. 425

Employee as having burden of proving that injury was sustained in course of employment. Lundberg v. Workmen's Comp. App. Bd. (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 436, 439, 71 Cal. Rptr. 684, 445 P.2d 300

Once presumption of employment comes into play, burden as shifting to employer to establish that injured person was independent contractor or otherwise excluded from workers' compensation coverage; in addition to relying on specific exclusion to rebut presumption of employee status, alleged employer as permitted to seek to prove that essential contract of hire required under definition of employee in Lab. Code § 3351 is absent. Barragan v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 637, 642-643, 240 Cal. Rptr. 811

Burden of proving that claimant for workers' compensation was an independent contractor rather than an employee as on alleged employer under Lab. Code § 5705. Truesdale v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 608, 613, 235 Cal. Rptr. 754

[15] Civil Action

When doubt exists whether death or injury was sustained in course of employment, claimant's filing of civil action to protect against running of statute of limitations together with filing of application for workers' compensation as proper. Dixon v. Ford Motor Co. (1975) 53 Cal. App. 3d 499, 502, 125 Cal. Rptr. 872

[16] Claim Procedure

Employee's knowledge that claim must be filed will not cease tolling of statute of limitations if employer fails to notify employee of applicable time limits, absent evidence that employee otherwise knew of applicable time limits.

Galloway v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 880, 888, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 374

[17] Clerical Errors

Regardless of lapse of time or finality of judgment, court as able, on its own motion, to correct clerical error in judgment even if error was made by court and consisted of failure to provide for reservation of jurisdiction; similarly, Rehabilitation Bureau as able to correct clerical error in its order (order erroneously stated that worker's case was closed on grounds worker declined rehabilitation instead of stating that rehabilitation was suspended while worker sought medical treatment). Poole v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 694, 697, 259 Cal. Rptr. 564

Appeals board or workers' compensation judge as able to correct clerical error at any time and without necessity for further hearings, notwithstanding lapse of statutory period for filing petition for reconsideration. Toccalino v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1982) 128 Cal. App. 3d 543, 558, 180 Cal. Rptr. 427

[18] Compensation

Burial expenses as compensation under Lab. Code §§ 3207, 4701 (death benefits), and Lab. Code § 4707 (benefits payable on death of member of Public Employees' Retirement System) as excepting such expenses from any prohibition against payment of workers' compensation benefits when amount of such benefits is less than total death allowance paid to widow or minor children of deceased worker under Public Employees' Retirement Law. Jones v. Kaiser Industries Corp. (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 552, 557 n.7, 237 Cal. Rptr. 568, 737 P.2d 771

Under worker's compensation law, injured employee as not, in ordinary case, entitled to greater compensation than wages would have been had worker not been injured. Herrera v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1969) 71 Cal. 2d 254, 259, 78 Cal. Rptr. 497, 455 P.2d 425

Portion of workers' compensation lump sum settlement proceeds received by injured worker/spouse during marriage is community property, if attributable to disability or pension payments owed during marriage or to medical expenses paid with community funds, and such settlement's proceeds are injured spouse's separate property, if intended to compensate for injured spouse's diminished earning capacity and/or medical expense after marriage has ended. Raphael v. Bloomfield (2003) 113 Cal. App. 4th 617, 621-627, 6 Cal. Rptr. 3d 583

Worker who was awarded partial permanent disability compensation for industrial back injury, entered vocational rehabilitation on-the-job training program, and sustained further back injury while engaged in program, as entitled to receive compensation for permanent disability resulting from cumulative injury not at rate in effect on date of original injury but at rate in effect at time of rehabilitation injury; any hardship to insurer in paying indemnity at higher rate as outweighed by employer's rehabilitation duties and public policy of securing maximum rehabilitation benefits to injured employee. Trevino v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 1012, 1016, 255 Cal. Rptr. 162

Person injured while on job as entitled to compensation under workers' compensation law, not because of any act or omission of employer, but because employment relationship exists. Barragan v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 637, 642, 240 Cal. Rptr. 811

[19] Compromise and Release Agreement

[a] In General

Compromise and release agreement that recited that employee had "sustained injury arising out of and in the course of his employment to 1) Back 2) Psyche," and that further recited that the employee "releases and forever discharges said employer from all claims and causes of action, whether now known or ascertained, or which may hereafter arise or develop as a result of said injury," as not precluding employee from pursuing civil claim against employer for emotional distress resulting from discrimination based on employee's sexual orientation; form release executed by parties that made no specific reference to potentially independent civil rights or remedies as releasing only those claims that traditionally fall within scope of workers' compensation system. Delaney v. Superior Fast Freight (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 590, 599, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 33

Compromise and release executed in workers' compensation proceeding as not barring, as a matter of law, employee's subsequent civil action against employer, three related entities, and coemployee for discrimination under Fair Employment and Housing Act (Gov. Code § 12900 et seq.), when release did not mention discrimination claims, even though parties' attorneys were aware of them. Asare v. Hartford Fire Ins. Co. (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 856, 863, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 452

Compromise and release agreement executed by surviving family members of agricultural worker shot and killed during strike as ambiguous regarding whether it released employer from liability for civil damages not compensable under workers' compensation law; absent express language, employer as not released as matter of law for civil damages. Lopez v. Sikkema (1991) 229 Cal. App. 3d 31, 39, 280 Cal. Rptr. 7

Compromise and release by settlement of workers' compensation claims as not eliminating worker's right to pursue other remedies for invasion of other interests in other forums, absent specific provision to that effect; workers' compensation compromise and release for emotional injuries arising from employer's action does not bar employee's claim for breach of implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing in wrongfully terminating employee. Ortiz v. Bank of America Nat. Trust and Sav. Ass'n (9th Cir. 1987) 824 F.2d 692, 694, 695-696

WCAB as restricted to approving or disapproving compromise and release agreement as a whole. Burbank Studios v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1982) 134 Cal. App. 3d 929, 936-937, 184 Cal. Rptr. 879

Workers' compensation and tort releases distinguished. Sumner v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 965, 971, 191 Cal. Rptr. 811, 663 P.2d 534 ; Johnson v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 964, 973, 88 Cal. Rptr. 202, 471 P.2d 1002 ; City of Anaheim v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1982) 128 Cal. App. 3d 200, 206, 180 Cal. Rptr. 132

[b] Constitutionality

Barring death benefits pursuant to compromise and release [Lab. Code § 5000(b)] as not depriving dependents of constitutional right, because contingent rights to such benefits derive exclusively from statute. Sumner v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 965, 969-970, 191 Cal. Rptr. 811, 663 P.2d 534

Although Lab. Code § 5000(b), providing that dependents have no interest in injured employee's claim, which employee may not release by compromise, does not deny due process or equal protection of laws, dismissal of application for death benefits before responsive pleadings have been filed as precipitous when affirmative defense of release has not yet been raised and might be avoided. Johnson v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 964, 974-975, 88 Cal. Rptr. 202, 471 P.2d 1002

Lab. Code § 5000(b), conferring on injured employee power to compromise dependents' claims to death benefits, as not denying dependent due process of law or equal protection of laws. Sumner v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 965, 969-970, 191 Cal. Rptr. 811, 663 P.2d 534 ; Johnson v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 964, 970-972, 88 Cal. Rptr. 202, 471 P.2d 1002

[c] Effect

Standard language of preprinted WCAB Form 15, used in settling workers' compensation claims, releases only those claims within scope of workers' compensation system and does not apply to claims asserted in separate civil actions, and extrinsic evidence is not admissible to show that preprinted form applies also to claims outside workers' compensation system. Claxton v. Waters (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 367, 376-378, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 246, 96 P.3d 496

Effect of compromise and release agreement on civil claims, when agreement contains attachment arguably relevant to civil claims, depends on whether employee has knowledge of potential claim against employer at time of executing general release in workers' compensation proceeding, but has not yet initiated litigation of that claim, in which case employee has burden of expressly excepting claim from release, and, absent this exception and absent contrary extrinsic evidence, court will enforce agreement's general language, releasing all claims, including civil claims. Jefferson v. California Department of Youth Authority (2002) 28 Cal. 4th 299, 310, 121 Cal. Rptr. 2d 391, 48 P.3d 423

Settlement of employee's workers' compensation claim via document that included language agreeing "to settle any and all claims" did not so clearly operate to settle that same employee's FEHA civil action arising from same alleged work-related incidents as to support dismissal of employee's civil action via summary judgment, pursuant to Jefferson v. California Department of Youth Authority. Mitchell v. Union Central Life Ins. Co. (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 1331, 1341-1342, 13 Cal. Rptr. 3d 732

Court of appeal followed Jefferson v. California Department of Youth Authority in concluding that employee's release of her workers' compensation claim against her employer, which released "all claims and causes of action" against employer, included release of employee's civil action under FEHA, when FEHA action had been filed prior to execution of release but employer had not yet been notified of that action. Kohler v. Interstate Brands Corp. (2002) 103 Cal. App. 4th 1096, 1099-1102, 127 Cal. Rptr. 2d 366

Appeals Board had insufficient medical evidence to determine whether res judicata effect of employee's compromise and release agreement for two pulmonary injuries due to asthma barred applicant's subsequent claim of injury due to asbestos exposure. General Dynamics Corp. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 624, 631, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 907

Order approving compromise and release agreement as final judgment entitled to full res judicata effect when WCAB's jurisdiction to rescind, alter, or amend terminates on expiration of five years after date of injury. Smith v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 1160, 1169-1170, 214 Cal. Rptr. 765

Compromise and release agreement as determinative of rights of parties in dispute. Burbank Studios v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1982) 134 Cal. App. 3d 929, 935, 184 Cal. Rptr. 879

Payment of compromise and release approved by WCAB as terminating liability of employer and insurance carrier on account of injury involved, including any liability for increased disability, unless order approving agreement is vacated for legal cause. City of Anaheim v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1982) 128 Cal. App. 3d 200, 206, 180 Cal. Rptr. 132

Obvious purpose of Lab. Code §§ 3859, 3860 as being to protect subrogation rights to which employer is legally entitled. Garrett v. Shenson Meat Co. (1970) 5 Cal. App. 3d 69, 75-76, 85 Cal. Rptr. 65

Compromise and release agreement between insurance carrier and employee covering ordinary compensation benefits as not defeating employee's claim for additional benefits predicated on serious and willful misconduct of employer. Ray v. Industrial Acci. Com. (1956) 146 Cal. App. 2d 393, 397, 303 P.2d 793

Compromise and release as releasing employer and its insurance carrier from liability but as having no effect on employee's right of action for malpractice for new and aggravated injury inflicted by physician in negligently treating employee's industrial injury. Smith v. Coleman (1941) 46 Cal. App. 2d 507, 513, 116 P.2d 133

[d] Setting Aside Agreement

Compromise and release agreement once approved as subject to being set aside only for good cause on petition to reopen demonstrating agreement was result of fraud, mistake, duress, or undue influence. Draper v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 502, 507, 195 Cal. Rptr. 248

Incompetency of employee at time of execution of compromise and release as ground for setting aside agreement. Sun Indem. Co. v. Industrial Acci. Com. (1948) 85 Cal. App. 2d 171, 173, 176-177, 181, 192 P.2d 765

[e] Subsequent Injury

Compromise and release agreement with regard to injury sustained at work as not barring claim for benefits for subsequent injury sustained in rehabilitation program in which worker participated because of first injury. Rodgers v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 567, 575-576, 214 Cal. Rptr. 303

[f] Vocational Rehabilitation Benefits

Despite Lab. Code § 5100.6 (prohibiting settlement of rehabilitation benefits), employer's mandatory duty to provide rehabilitation benefits [Lab. Code § 139.5(c)] as subject to compromise and release when serious and good faith issue exists as to validity of claim that, if resolved against applicant, would result in denial of all benefits. State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1983) 148 Cal. App. 3d 649, 652, 196 Cal. Rptr. 169

[20] Contempt Proceedings

[a] In General

Legislature as having vested all judicial powers under Workers' Compensation Act in WCAB, including power to issue all necessary process in proceedings for contempt. Crawford v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 156, 164, 259 Cal. Rptr. 414 (citing Lab. Code §§ 111, 134)

[b] Acts Constituting Contempt

Inexcusable failure to comply with rule of practice and procedure adopted by WCAB pursuant to statutory authorization pertaining to orderly conduct of proceedings before WCAB, such as 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10606, relating to medical reports, as constituting unlawful interference with WCAB's proceedings within meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 1209 and hence as constituting contempt. Crawford v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 156, 169, 259 Cal. Rptr. 414

[c] Indirect Contempt

Affidavit for indirect contempt as not required to state all facts on which WCAB relied in deciding to issue order to show cause regarding contempt, but as required only to make prima facie showing of elements of contempt; elements of contempt as being that court made lawful order, person cited for contempt had knowledge or notice of order, and person was able to comply, yet willfully disobeyed order; support for order to show cause re contempt as permitted to be provided by combination of documents, and supporting documents as required only to make prima facie showing of contemptuous conduct. Crawford v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 156, 169-170, 259 Cal. Rptr. 414

Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1211.5, defect or imperfection in form that does not prejudice substantial right of accused on merits as not affecting trial, order, judgment, or other proceeding; order or judgment of conviction as not to be set aside for pleading error in affidavit or statement of facts, unless, after examining entire case, including evidence, court finds that error complained of has resulted in miscarriage of justice. Crawford v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 156, 169-170, 259 Cal. Rptr. 414

[d] Nature of Proceeding

Although contempt proceedings are quasi-criminal in nature, purpose of such proceedings as being to protect dignity, authority, or process of court or tribunal and to provide court or tribunal with means of controlling its proceedings; thus, WCAB as having inherent power to exercise reasonable control over all proceedings before it to ensure orderly administration of justice, to maintain its dignity and authority, and to punish acts that embarrass or obstruct it in discharge of its duties. Crawford v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 156, 165, 259 Cal. Rptr. 414

[e] Procedure

In proceedings for contempt, WCAB as required to follow applicable provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 1209 et seq., and, when alleged contempt is not committed in WCAB's presence, contempt proceedings as being in nature of indirect contempt; in such case, WCAB as required to proceed by way of order to show cause supported by affidavit [Code Civ. Proc. § 1212], and alleged contemner as entitled to appear before and be heard by WCAB. Crawford v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 156, 164

[f] Statutes of Limitations

Neither Penal Code § 802 (imposing one-year limitation on prosecution of offense not punishable by death or imprisonment in state prison) nor Code Civ. Proc. § 340 (imposing one-year limitation on action on statute for forfeiture or penalty to people of this state) as applying to contempt proceeding by WCAB against medical doctor for willful violation of 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10606 (requiring physician who submits medical report in workers' compensation case to disclose name of any person other than reporting physician who participated in taking medical history); whether WCAB loses jurisdiction of proceeding by passage of time as question of fact dependent on whether delay in prosecution was unreasonable and to contemner's prejudice, and contemner as having burden of demonstrating that delay was unreasonable and prejudiced his or her defense. Crawford v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 156, 165-167, 259 Cal. Rptr. 414

[21] Contract of Hire

Contract for hire was formed in California under Lab. Code §§ 3600.5 and 5305 when professional baseball player signed contract in California accepting offer from out of state team, and approval of baseball Commissioner was a condition subsequent to employment. Bowen v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 15, 26-27, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 95

Consideration other than wages as supporting contract of hire within meaning of Lab. Code § 3351 (defining "employee"). Morales v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 283, 289, 230 Cal. Rptr. 575

[21A] Costs

Appeals Board has discretion to award costs, pursuant to Lab. Code § 5811, for vocational rehabilitation expert's report, regardless of whether report is admissible. Barr v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 173, 176, 179, 181, 78 Cal. Rptr. 3d 732

[22] Credit Against Compensation

Discussion of extent to which city fireman's disability pension, partially funded by employer, can be offset against workers' compensation. Symington v. City of Albany (1971) 5 Cal. 3d 23, 26, 28-33, 95 Cal. Rptr. 206, 485 P.2d 270

Employer's challenge to employee's claim of ongoing temporary disability must be made within 20 days of receipt of physician's report of that disability, so that in present case employer's claim of credit against permanent disability payments was allowable only for temporary disability payments made after June 2006, which was last date for which employee's treating physician reported that he was temporarily disabled, and any claim of credit for temporary disability payments made prior to that date was foreclosed by Lab. Code § 4062(a). J.C. Penney Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 818, 829, 96 Cal. Rptr. 3d 469

Pursuant to Lab. Code § 3861, employer was entitled to credit against future workers' compensation benefits to be paid to employee in amount of net settlement of employee's action against third-party tortfeasor, paid to employee by CIGA, when CIGA was obligated under Ins. Code §§ 1063.1(c)(1) and 1063.2(a) to pay settlement, regardless of whether employer was entitled to credit, and, since CIGA's assets were unaffected by grant or denial of credit to employer, if credit were denied, employee would be in better position than if third party tortfeasor's insurer had remained solvent. Baur v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 1260, 1264-1267, 98 Cal. Rptr. 3d 493

Employer as entitled to credit pursuant to Lab. Code § 4909 against employee's permanent disability indemnity when employee received benefits under employer's sickness and accident disability plan; employer's committee as determining that plan benefits were of same character and function as workers' compensation benefits and obligating plan to provide all benefits contemplated by workers'compensation law. Appleby v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 184, 192-193, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 375

If industrially injured public safety worker entitled to leave at full salary for up to one year in lieu of temporary disability payments under Lab. Code § 4850 receives earnings from self-employment during leave, employer as entitled to credit such earnings against its obligation to pay full salary. Kosowski v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 632, 634, 216 Cal. Rptr. 280

[23] Death Benefits

Because employer had paid deceased employee's mother/heir death benefits pursuant to Lab. Code § 4702(a)(6)(B), before ceasing such payments following decision in Six Flags, Inc. v. W.C.A.B. that declared that statute unconstitutional, Death Without Dependents Unit was not entitled to be paid any death benefit. City of Los Angeles v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 134, 146151, 101 Cal. Rptr. 3d 513

Lab. Code § 4702(a)(6)(B), which provides that, when worker without dependents suffers fatal industrial injury, employer must pay $250,000 to deceased worker's estate as workers' compensation death benefit, is unconstitutional because constitutional enabling provision, Cal. Const., art. XIV, § 4, does not identify estates as class of beneficiaries entitled to workers' compensation death benefits. Six Flags, Inc. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2006) 145 Cal. App. 4th 91, 93-94, 51 Cal. Rptr. 3d 377

Employer as required to pay death benefits to Department of Industrial Relations under Lab. Code § 4706.5 only when deceased employee left no dependents, total or partial. Atlantic Richfield Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1982) 31 Cal. 3d 715, 727, 182 Cal. Rptr. 778, 644 P.2d 1257 (disapproving Department of Industrail Relations v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1979) 94 Cal. App. 3d 72, 79, 156 Cal. Rptr. 183); Travelers Ins. Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1982) 138 Cal. App. 3d 244, 246, 187 Cal. Rptr. 838)

Lab. Code § 4707 as precluding award under workers' compensation law of death benefit to decedent's minor child when decedent's widow received special death benefit under Gov. Code § 21363 and former Gov. Code § 21364 (now Gov. Code § 21541) (Public Employees' Retirement Law). Department of Corrections v. Workers Comp. Appeals Bd. (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 197, 204, 152 Cal. Rptr. 345, 589 P.2d 853

Deceased employee's grandchild qualifying as "totally dependent minor child" as entitled to special death benefit under Lab. Code § 4703.5; grandchild as having resided with grandparents since birth and employee's widow as having continued to support grandchild after employee's death. State Compensation Ins. Fund v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 1645, 1650-1651, 24 Cal. Rptr. 2d 67

Dependent's right to statutory death benefits under workers' compensation law as not derived from rights of deceased employee, but as independentand severable from employee's claim for disability compensation. Berkebile v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1983) 144 Cal. App. 3d 940, 944, 193 Cal. Rptr. 12

[24] Declaration of Readiness

WCAB as having erred in reversing decision of WCJ setting aside Rehabilitation Bureau's decision terminating workers' compensation applicant's rehabilitation benefits without hearing and in reinstating bureau's decision based on procedural technicality that worker's declaration of readiness did not meet formal requirements for filing appeal from bureau decision; workers' compensation pleadings and proceedings as informal and not to be utilized to preclude WCAB jurisdiction in view of Cal. Const., art. XIV, § 4, and Lab. Code § 3202, mandating that workers' compensation laws be liberally construed in favor of affording substantial justice to injured workers. Rivera v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 1452, 1456, 236 Cal. Rptr. 28

[25] Dependents

Dependent's right to statutory death benefits as not derived from rights of deceased employee, but as independent and severable from employee's claim for disability compensation; amount of death benefits as fixed by statute and as not varying with employee's earnings; size of benefits as depending on relationship and extent of dependency. Wings West Airlines v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1047, 1051, 232 Cal. Rptr. 343

True test of dependency in fact as not whether dependent was compelled to rely on deceased employee's contributions for bare necessities of life, but whether dependent relied on contributions for support according to his or her accustomed mode of living; rule of liberal construction as not to be used to relieve party from meeting evidentiary burden of proving dependency by preponderance of the evidence. Wings West Airlines v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1047, 1051-1052, 232 Cal. Rptr. 343

Mere promise of future support as not, as a rule, a basis for a dependency finding, except when circumstances indicate a bona fide assumption of responsibility for support without opportunity to make contributions prior to the injury. Wings West Airlines v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1047, 1052, 232 Cal. Rptr. 343

WCAB as erring in failing to make finding as to dependency status of live-in associate and alleged dependent of deputy district attorney who had been found to be 100 percent disabled and died following short hospitalization caused by suicide attempt because person who is found not to be dependent is not entitled to any award. Donovan v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1982) 138 Cal. App. 3d 323, 328, 187 Cal. Rptr. 869

Burden of proof as to dependency of deceased workers' parents as on state when parents and state maintain conflicting positions on whether parents were dependent, and therefore beneficiaries, because state recovers benefits if there are no dependents. State of California v. Workers' Co. Appeals Bd. (1980) 101 Cal. App. 3d 673, 678, 161 Cal. Rptr. 821

[b] Partial Dependents

Computing amount of award to partial dependent pursuant to Lab. Code § 4702 when both spouses were employed prior to death of one spouse. Atlantic Richfield Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1982) 31 Cal. 3d 715, 719-723, 182 Cal. Rptr. 778, 644 P.2d 1257

For parents to be considered "partial dependents" of adult children living at home, deceased adult child had to have been providing net financial benefit to household, so that when unrebutted testimony indicated monthly cost of adult child's food exceeded child's contribution to household, child's monthly payment, while making him less dependent on parents, did not make them dependent on him, with consequence that parents were not eligible to receive death benefits. Smith v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 560, 568-570, 117 Cal. Rptr. 2d 420

In computing death benefits to partially dependent surviving spouse under Lab. Code § 4702, expenses related to the community's standard of living as relevant, whereas expenses personal to decedent as not relevant; decedent's food, clothing, and transportation costs related to employment as spent for benefit of community and properly apportioned to community and support of surviving spouse rather than to personal use. Lynch v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 594, 598-599, 210 Cal. Rptr. 589

Partial dependents as receiving death benefits only when decedent's only dependents are partial dependents; total dependents as receiving entire death benefit to exclusion of partial dependents, who receive nothing. Travelers Ins. Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1982) 138 Cal. App. 3d 244, 247, 187 Cal. Rptr. 838

[c] Putative Spouse

Putative spouse as entitled to widow's benefits under Lab. Code §§ 4702 and 3503. Neureither v. Workmen's Comp. App. Bd. (1971) 15 Cal. App. 3d 429, 433-435, 93 Cal. Rptr. 162 ; Brennfleck v. Workmen's Comp. Appeals Bd. (1970) 3 Cal. App. 3d 666, 672, 84 Cal. Rptr. 50 ; Brennfleck v. Workmen's Comp. App. Bd. (1968) 265 Cal. App. 2d 738, 743, 71 Cal. Rptr. 525

[26] Disability Defined

Disability, under workers' compensation law, as connoting an inability to work. Herrera v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1969) 71 Cal. 2d 254, 257, 78 Cal. Rptr. 497, 455 P.2d 425

Temporary total disability and temporary partial disability distinguished, and payment for each. Herrera v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1969) 71 Cal. 2d 254, 257, 78 Cal. Rptr. 497, 455 P.2d 425 ; Moore v. American United Life Ins. Co. (1984) 150 Cal. App. 3d 610, 629, 197 Cal. Rptr. 878

Disability as meaning an impairment of bodily functions that results in impairment of earning capacity. J. T. Thorp, Inc. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1984) 153 Cal. App. 3d 327, 336, 200 Cal. Rptr. 219

Disability as having two elements: (1) actual incapacity to perform tasks usually encountered in one's employment and wage loss resulting therefrom and (2) physical impairment of body. J. T. Thorp, Inc. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1984) 153 Cal. App. 3d 327, 336 n.14, 200 Cal. Rptr. 219 (citing Perry v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1977) 66 Cal. App. 3d 887, 890, 136 Cal. Rptr. 309)

Permanent disability in workers' compensation as disability that causes impairment of earning capacity, impairment of normal use of member, or competitive handicap in open labor market. Winn v. Board of Pension Commissioners (1983) 149 Cal. App. 3d 532, 539, 197 Cal. Rptr. 111

[27] Discovery

Parties' duty to disclose all available evidence at MSC supersedes WCAB's duty to develop record, so that employee's attorney's tactical decision at MSC not to disclose certain medical records deprived WCAB of power to order WCJ to admit those records. Telles Transport, Inc. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (Zuniga) (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 1159, 112 Cal. Rptr. 2d 540

WCJ was permitted to develop record by admitting evidence obtained after trial and, thus, not disclosed pursuant to Lab. Code § 5502(d)(3), when due process required that such evidence be admitted in the interest of substantial justice to rebut unanticipated trial testimony. Kuykendall v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2000) 79 Cal. App. 4th 396, 399, 406, 94 Cal. Rptr. 2d 130

WCAB abused its discretion by admitting doctor's report and allowing witness to testify at trial, when neither were disclosed at MSC and employee provided no explanation for failing to disclose evidence; absence of prejudice to opposing party does not affect admissibility of undisclosed evidence under Lab. Code § 5502(d)(3); parties' duty to disclose evidence under Lab. Code § 5502(d)(3) can not be circumvented by WCAB's duty to develop record under Lab. Code §§ 5701 or 5906. San Bernardino Community Hospital v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 928, 932-935, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 516

WCJs have authority under Lab. Code § 5310 to hear discovery disputes and make orders regarding such disputes. Allison v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 654, 664, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 915

Employee did not entirely waive doctor/patient privilege by filing workers' compensation claim for cumulative injury to her wrists from February 1996 through June 1997; WCJ's discovery order allowing employee to be questioned regarding her hospitalization history prior to 1965 violated doctor/patient privilege and was overbroad. Allison v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 654, 661, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 915

WCJ improperly violated mandatory requirement under Lab. Code § 5502(d)(3) that discovery be closed at MSC by allowing record to remain open so employee could obtain supplemental QME report; supplemental report obtained after MSC was inadmissible and Board's temporary disability award based on report was annulled. County of Sacramento v. Worker's Comp. Appeals Bd. (1999) 68 Cal. App. 4th 1429, 1433-1434, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 266

[28] Discrimination Against Injured Workers, Claimants, Participants

Employee made no prima facie showing of violation of Lab. Code § 132a when his employer refused to pay him temporary disability indemnity for time spent away from work attending medical treatment appointments, when employee was permanent and stationary after his industrial injury, had returned to work, and received medical treatment award, and when employee failed to show right to prevent his employer from requiring him to use sick leave and/or vacation leave while attending these medical appointments. Department of Rehabilitation v. W.C.A.B. (Lauher) (2003) 30 Cal. 4th 1281, 1297, 1301, 135 Cal. Rptr. 2d 665, 70 P.3d 1076

WCAB may and must, when criteria of Civ. Code § 3287 are met, add interest from the dates such wages and benefits would have become due had the employer not acted in violation of Lab. Code § 132a; although Lab. Code § 132a does not itself expressly authorize addition of prejudgment interest to award of backpay, Civ. Code § 3287 requires such interest on damages due on a particular date, including awards of back pay, when they are certain or capable of being made certain by calculation. Currie v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2001) 24 Cal. 4th 1109, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 392, 17 P.3d 749

Employee did not make prima facie showing of discrimination in violation of Lab. Code § 132a, when employee sustained industrial injury and was taken off work by his treating physician, and reports and releases to return to work from treating physician and agreed medical evaluator were unclear and ambiguous regarding employee's ability to return to his usual and customary duties. Gelson's Markets v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (Fowler) (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 201, 209-210, 101 Cal. Rptr. 3d 548

Employee's claim alleging wrongful termination in retaliation for filing workers' compensation claim failed because employer terminated employee's employment for legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason, i.e., management's loss of confidence in employee. Arteaga v. Brink's, Inc. (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 327, 356-357, 77 Cal. Rptr. 3d 654

Employer's policy regarding "cash out" payments of excess accumulated vacation hours to sheriff's deputies who were not on Lab. Code § 4850 leave as result of industrial injuries, as opposed to its policy regarding such payments to deputies who were on such leave, held to discriminate against latter group in violation of Lab. Code §§ 4850 and 132a. Los Angeles County Professional Peace Officers' Association v. County of Los Angeles (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 63, 67-72, 80 Cal. Rptr. 3d 572

Employer discriminated against its employee, in violation of Lab. Code § 132a, by requiring employee, who had returned to work following industrial injuries, to use earned vacation time rather than sick leave to attend medical appointments needed to care for those industrial injuries, while permitting employees with non-industrial injuries to use their sick leave for medical appointments. Andersen v. W.C.A.B. (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 1369, 1376-1380, 57 Cal. Rptr. 3d 839

Employer discriminated against employee in violation of Lab. Code § 132a, when evidence showed that employer believed employee was faking disability, that employer wanted to dismiss employee since employee returned to work on light duty, that employer's evidence of customer complaints against employee was not persuasive, and that employer terminated employee in retaliation for filing workers' compensation claim. Crown Appliance v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2004) 115 Cal. App. 4th 620, 9 Cal. Rptr. 3d 415

Lab. Code § 132a is not exclusive remedy for discrimination due to disability from work related injury. City of Moorpark v. Superior Court (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1143, 1156, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 445, 959 P.2d 752 (overruling Portillo v. G. T. Price Products, Inc. (1982) 131 Cal. App. 3d 285, 182 Cal. Rptr. 291 , and other cases that held Lab. Code § 132a was exclusive remedy for disability discrimination)

Injured workers discriminated against because of disability from work related injury may bring claims before Workers' Compensation Appeals Board under Lab. Code § 132a and actions to state court seeking remedies under Fair

Employment and Housing Act and common-law wrongful discharge theory. City of Moorpark v. Superior Court (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1143, 1158, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 445, 959 P.2d 752 (overruling Portillo v. G. T. Price Products, Inc. (1982) 131 Cal. App. 3d 285, 182 Cal. Rptr. 291)

Employer's termination of employee's seniority rights and, ultimately, his employment because of employee's absence from his job as result of industrial injury as unlawful discrimination within meaning of Lab. Code § 132a, thus triggering application of increased award provisions of Lab. Code § 4553. Judson Steel Corp. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 658, 661-662, 666-668, 150 Cal. Rptr. 250, 586 P.2d 564

Employer as not permitted to defend discriminatory employment practice proscribed by Lab. Code § 132a (discrimination against employee for filing or making known intention to file workers' compensation claim) on basis of provisions of collective bargaining agreement. Judson Steel Corp. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 658, 665 n.5, 150 Cal. Rptr. 250, 586 P.2d 564

WCAB as properly concluding that licensee of residential care facility was employee's employer for purposes of Lab. Code § 132a liability when licensee failed to object to its status as employer despite being served with applications, notices, liens and orders and having previously stipulated tobeing the employer; management company that began operating facility after employee's termination as not liable for Lab. Code § 132a remedies because, although management company participated in WCAB proceedings, record did not disclose information regarding circumstances of management transfer or whether management company knew of employee's pending claim at time of transfer. Superior Care Facilities v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 1015, 1023, 1029, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 918

Reinstatement of employee under Lab. Code § 132a as probationary rather than permanent as proper when no finding that employee performed or could perform job duties up to standards required by employer and no finding that, but for employee's injury, she would have successfully completed probationary period; Board's refusal to award lost wages and benefits as proper when no finding that employee sought or was ready, willing, and able to maintain employment. Dyer v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 1376, 1384-1386, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 30

Public employer's failure to award safety incentive bonus to worker due to time lost on account of work-related injury as not illegal discrimination in violation of Lab. Code § 132a (prohibiting discrimination against workers injured in course of their employment); Gov. Code § 19994.20, under which safety incentive program was adopted and which provides for implementation of accident prevention incentive award programs the purpose of which is to reduce number of on-the-job injuries to, and use of sick leave by, state employees, as dealing only with state employees and their collective bargaining agreements, and, being the more specific statute, as prevailing over Lab. Code § 132a in any conflict between them. Stemler v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 577, 581-582, 251 Cal. Rptr. 364

Lab. Code § 132a, prohibiting discrimination by employers against workers who are injured in course and scope of their employment, as serving remedial function by providing compensation to aggrieved worker for discrimination incurred as result of worker's work-related injury; employer as not permitted to discharge employee absent from job as result of work-related injury. Potter v. Arizona So. Coach Lines, Inc. (1988) 202 Cal. App. 3d 126, 131, 133, 248 Cal. Rptr. 284

Construction of Lab. Code § 132a (policy opposing discrimination against workers injured in course and scope of their employment). St. Cyr v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 468, 471-473, 243 Cal. Rptr. 1

Penalty petition for discrimination under Lab. Code § 132a (policy opposing discrimination against workers injured in course and scope of their employment) filed within one year from termination date, as opposed to date of notice of termination, as timely. St. Cyr v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 468, 473, 243 Cal. Rptr. 1

"Discriminate" as meaning to act or to fail to act (when there is a duty to do so), with consequence that some adverse result ensues. Leamon v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 1409, 1417, 235 Cal. Rptr. 912

Before employer's action against industrially injured employee may be deemed discriminatory under Lab. Code § 132a, employer as required to have beenaware of fact of industrial injury at time of its action. Leamon v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 1409, 1414, 235 Cal. Rptr. 912

Although Lab. Code § 132a prohibits discrimination against employee based on employee's industrial disability or receipt of workers' compensation award, WCAB's award to employee, consisting of additional service credits and increased compensation, on asserted basis that employer discriminated against employee in that it refused to grant additional pension service credits for years during which she did not work as result of injury, as preempted by federal Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA) (29 U.S.C. §§ 1001-1461) and federal regulations promulgated pursuant thereto (see 29 C.F.R. § 2530.200b-2(a)(2)), which provide that employer may refuse pension service credits for year during which employee actually worked less than 1000 hours for variety of reasons, including employee's industrially caused disability. Pacific Bell v. Workers' Comp. Appeals. Bd. (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 1603, 1605-1606, 1614-1615, 231 Cal. Rptr. 484

[29] Dismissals

Circumstances under which dismissal is permitted. Roth v. Workmen's Comp. Appeals Bd. (1971) 20 Cal. App. 3d 452, 458-460, 97 Cal. Rptr. 605

[30] Employees

Extending workers' compensation coverage to persons not within general definition of "employee" on terms different from those generally provided, as not violating state constitutional provisions regarding classification when reasonable basis for distinctions may be found. Mathews v. Workmen's Comp. Appeals Bd. (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 719, 739, 100 Cal. Rptr. 301, 493 P.2d 1165

College student, injured while enrolled in animal husbandry class and working for non-profit foundation on commercial cattle breeding project, was not employee, because student had paid college for class credit, did not receive wages (but shared in profits of project), project was created exclusively for educational purpose, and student was not rendering service for college. Land v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2002) 102 Cal. App. 4th 491, 496-497, 125 Cal. Rptr. 2d 432

Juror was considered an "employee" of defendant County within the meaning of the Workers' Compensation Act, since the County exercised a degree of control over the juror's work environment and benefitted from the juror's services, thereby giving the County responsibility to insure against injuries the juror may have sustained while providing services to the County. Waggener v. County of Los Angeles (1995) 39 Cal. App. 4th 1078, 1083, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 141

Doorman as employee of condominium homeowners' association but not of individual homeowners who had no ability to control or discharge him or otherwise exercise the control of an employer over an employee. Holmes v. Roth (1992) 11 Cal. App. 4th 931, 936-937, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 315

No special test, fact, or circumstance as existing that conclusively defines "employee" for all purposes; question of whether worker is an employee within meaning of workers' compensation law as one of mixed law and factto be proved like any other question; question as one of fact when facts are in dispute and as one of law only when but one inference can reasonably be drawn from facts. Spradlin v. Cox (1988) 201 Cal. App. 3d 799, 806, 247 Cal. Rptr. 347

Although person who renders service to another is presumed to be "employee" [see Lab. Code § 3357], presumption as overcome if essential contract of hire, express or implied, is not present. Spradlin v. Cox (1988) 201 Cal. App. 3d 799, 807, 247 Cal. Rptr. 347

Question of whether person is employee as one of fact, of mixed law and fact, or of law only; if facts are undisputed, question as one of law and court of appeal may independently review those facts to determine correct answer. Barragan v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 637, 642, 240 Cal. Rptr. 811

Whether worker is an employee within meaning of Workers' Compensation Law as mixed question of law and fact to be proved like any other question; whether worker is employee as question of fact when facts are in dispute and as question of law only when but one inference can reasonably be drawn from facts. Gigax v. Ralston Purina Co. (1982) 136 Cal. App. 3d 591, 599, 186 Cal. Rptr. 395

When facts of employment are not disputed, whether worker is within covered employment relationship as question of law. In-Home Supportive Services v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 720, 729, 199 Cal. Rptr. 697 ; Johnson v. Workmen's Comp. Appeals Bd. (1974) 41 Cal. App. 3d 318, 320, 115 Cal. Rptr. 871

[31] Employment Contract

Traditional features of employment contract as being (1) consent of parties, (2) consideration for services rendered, and (3) control by employer over employee; although these common law contract requirements are not to be rigidly applied, consensual relationship between worker and alleged employer as nevertheless indispensable prerequisite to existence of employment contract under Lab. Code § 3551. Spradlin v. Cox (1988) 201 Cal. App. 3d 799, 807, 247 Cal. Rptr. 347 ; Barragan v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 637, 643, 240 Cal. Rptr. 811 (noting that other cases have held that control by employer is most important factor in establishing employment relation for purposes of workers' compensation law)

[32] Employment Relationship

Superior Court correctly denied employers' association's requested declaratory relief to invalidate precedential decision by Unemployment Insurance Appeals Board that upheld Employment Development Department (EDD) assessment of unemployment insurance employer contributions and penalties against courier service, when EDD had found that drivers for courier service were employees, not independent contractors. Messenger Courier Association of the Americas v. California Unemployment Insurance Appeals Board (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 1074, 1089-1096, 96 Cal. Rptr. 3d 797

Administrative record supported conclusion that newspaper carriers were employees for purposes of the workers' compensation law, not independent contractors, pursuant to analysis set forth in S.G. Borello & Sons v. Department of Industrial Relations. Antelope Valley Press v. Steve Poizner as Insurance Commissioner (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 839, 842-843, 852-856, 75 Cal. Rptr. 3d 887

Plaintiff, injured while repairing defendant's roof, was defendant's employee pursuant to Lab. Code § 2750.5, which operated to allow plaintiff's lawsuit alleging defendant's negligence, despite fact that plaintiff, by virtue of Lab. Code § 3352(h), was not employee of defendant for workers' compensation purposes, when court of appeal found that plaintiff was not licensed roofing contractor and, therefore, not independent contractor. Mendoza v. Brodeur (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 72, 79-81, 47 Cal. Rptr. 3d 310

Lab. Code §§ 3351(d) and 3352(h) were only relevant statutes for defining "employee" when issue was whether injured worker was residential employee of homeowners, because Lab. Code § 3715(b), relied on by Appeals Board in present case, was inapplicable, since that statute applied to only uninsured homeowners, whereas homeowners in present case were insured, so that injured worker was not "employee" and was not entitled to workers' compensation benefits. Cal. State Auto. Ass'n Inter-Ins. Bureau v. W.C.A.B. (Hestehauge) (2006) 137 Cal. App. 4th 1040, 1044-1048, 40 Cal. Rptr. 3d 743

Injured worker of unlicensed contractor hired to trim homeowner's tree could not maintain civil tort action against homeowner that was grounded on homeowner's alleged violation of Cal-OSHA tree-trimming safety regulations. Fernandez v. Lawson (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 31, 36-38, 1 Cal. Rptr. 3d 422, 71 P.3d 779

Injured worker, employed by unlicensed contractor to repair homeowner's roof, and who had not worked on that job for statutorily required number of hours to qualify as employee of homeowner, nevertheless remained employee of contractor for purposes of assigning liability for injury, so that worker was eligible to receive benefits from Uninsured Employers Fund [now called theUninsured Employers Benefits Trust Fund] and to pursue tort remedies against contractor in civil court. Cedillo v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2003) 106 Cal. App. 4th 227, 232, 236-237, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 581

Newspaper carrier injured in traffic accident while delivering newspapers was considered employee entitled to workers' compensation benefits when employer, as a matter of law, failed to demonstrate that carrier was independent contractor excluded from coverage. Gonzalez v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1996) 46 Cal. App. 4th 1584, 1594, 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 308

Taxicab company as employer of injured cabdriver for purposes of workers' compensation notwithstanding agreement between driver and company that purportedly established a lessor-lessee relationship; company as exercising all necessary control over driver's work and driver as therefore not independent contractor. Yellow Cab Cooperative, Inc. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1991) 226 Cal. App. 3d 1288, 1297-1300, 277 Cal. Rptr. 434

If facts of employment are not disputed, existence of relationship covered by worker's compensation as question of law. Johnson v. Berkofsky-Barret Productions, Inc. (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 1067, 1071, 260 Cal. Rptr. 67

Factors considered in determining whether worker is employee and covered by workers' compensation law. Johnson v. Berkofsky-Barret Productions, Inc. (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 1067, 1072-1073, 260 Cal. Rptr. 67

Question of whether employment relationship exists as generally a question of fact reserved for trier of fact, and this as remaining true if evidence, though not in conflict, permits conflicting inferences; but if neither evidence nor inferences are in conflict, question of whether employment relationship exists as becoming question of law, which may be resolved by summary judgment. Riley v. Southwest Marine, Inc. (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 1242, 1248, 250 Cal. Rptr. 718

Employer-employee relationship as required to exist to bring workers' compensation law into effect; whether or not employment relationship exists as usually one of fact for determination of trier of fact, particularly when facts as to employment relationship are in conflict. Spradlin v. Cox (1988) 201 Cal. App. 3d 799, 806, 247 Cal. Rptr. 347

Although it may be true that provisions of workers' compensation law are to beliberally construed in favor of awarding benefits even when it may be to advantage of particular plaintiff to avoid them and seek remedy at law, courts as generally being more exacting in requiring proof of employment relationship when such relationship is asserted as defense by employer to common law action. Spradlin v. Cox (1988) 201 Cal. App. 3d 799, 807-808, 247 Cal. Rptr. 347

Right to control manner in which worker performed work as preeminent factor in determining existence of employer-employee relationship. Spradlin v. Cox (1988) 201 Cal. App. 3d 799, 808 n.3, 247 Cal. Rptr. 347

Employment relationship as existing between hospital and college student who was performing services for hospital as part of externship program that was required for her degree when objective actions of hospital and student indicated they both intended arrangement whereby student would perform services for hospital in exchange for training and instruction by hospital to enable her to earn her degree; monetary consideration as not required tocreate contract. Barragan v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 637, 643-648, 650-651, 240 Cal. Rptr. 811

Principal test of employment relationship as being whether person to whom service is rendered has right to control manner and means of accomplishing result desired. Truesdale v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 608, 614, 235 Cal. Rptr. 754

[33] Evidence

WCAB as entitled to rely on relevant and considered opinion of a single physician, although in conflict with other medical opinions, as sufficient to constitute substantial evidence of a factual determination. Nash v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 1793, 1810, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 454

WCAB as not entitled to rely on physician's opinion based on inadequate medical history or misunderstanding of legal standards or relevant facts; WCAB as not entitled to disregard portions of physician's testimony that contradicted his or her own opinion. Rosas v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 1692, 1701-1705, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 778

WCAB as having power to direct taking of additional evidence when it grants reconsideration; thus, in determining reconsideration petition in preexisting disease case involving issue of apportionment, WCAB as having authority to decide that the employer has had an adequate opportunity to meet its burden of proof on apportionment and enter an award denying apportionment, or conclude that the record should be developed further on one or more of the apportionment issues and direct the taking of further evidence on apportionment. King v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 1640, 1649, 283 Cal. Rptr. 98 .

Neither WCAB nor court as required to accept opinion of independent medical examiner appointed by WCAB when conflict in medical evidence exists; WCAB and not physician as trier of fact. Robinson v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 784, 792-793, 239 Cal. Rptr. 841

WCAB as permitted to choose between conflicting medical opinions, and relevant and considered opinion of one physician, although inconsistent with other medical opinions, as sufficient to constitute substantial evidence in support of WCAB's decision; WCAB as not permitted, however, to rely on report that is known to be erroneous, is no longer germane, or is based on inadequate medical history or examination. Kyles v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 614, 621, 240 Cal. Rptr. 886

Medical reports and opinions as not substantial evidence if known to be erroneous or based on facts no longer germane, on inadquate medical histories and examinations, or on incorrect legal theories; medical opinion as also failing to support WCAB's finding if based on surmise, speculation,conjecture, or guess. Georgia-Pacific Corp. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1983) 144 Cal. App. 3d 72, 76, 192 Cal. Rptr. 643 ; Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corp. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1983) 141 Cal. App. 3d 778, 785, 190 Cal. Rptr. 560 ; Baptist v. Workers' Comp.

Appeals Bd. (1982) 137 Cal. App. 3d 903, 906, 187 Cal. Rptr. 270

Words of conjecture in medical report as permitted to be construed, in proper contexts, as statements of medical probability, and WCAB as permitted to choose most persuasive among conflicting medical reports. Scott Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1983) 139 Cal. App. 3d 98, 106, 188 Cal. Rptr. 537

WCAB as required to accept as true intended meaning of evidence that is uncontradicted and unimpeached. LeVesque v. Workmen's Comp. App. Bd. (1970) 1 Cal. 3d 627, 639, 83 Cal. Rptr. 208, 463 P.2d 432 ; Erickson v. Workmen's Comp. App. Bd. (1970) 12 Cal. App. 3d 388, 391, 90 Cal. Rptr. 706

Referee (now WCJ) or WCAB as not permitted to leave undeveloped matters that its acquired specialized knowledge should identify as requiring further evidence. W.M. Lyles Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1969) 3 Cal. App. 3d 132, 138, 82 Cal. Rptr. 891

[34] Exclusive Remedy Principles and Exceptions

[a] In General

Worker's civil cause of action against her employer for invasion of privacy was not barred by exclusive remedy rule when worker's supervisor reprimanded worker and disseminated information about reprimand to other employees who had no reason to know this information, thereby violating worker's right of privacy conferred by California Constitution and thus contrary to fundamental public policy. Operating Engineers Local 3 v. Johnson (2003) 110 Cal. App. 4th 180, 184-192, 1 Cal. Rptr. 3d 552

Exclusive remedy rule bars employee's civil tort action against employer for aggravation of pre-existing illness resulting from negligent diagnostic treatment voluntarily provided by employer, regardless of cause of pre-existing illness. Weber v. United Parcel Service, Inc. (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 801, 806-809, 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 412

Exclusive remedy rule does not bar civil action between injured worker's union and employer in which union seeks to compel employer to arbitrate worker's return to work under terms of collective bargaining agreement. Amalgamated Transit Union, Local 1277 v. Amalgamated Transit Union Local 1277 (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 673, 682-684, 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 207

Employee's civil negligence suit against her employer barred because workers' compensation law was exclusive remedy, when employee was injured while visiting work on her day off and helping fellow employees hold up collapsing shelf. Wright v. Beverly Fabrics, Inc. (2002) 95 Cal. App. 4th 346, 357, 115 Cal. Rptr. 2d 503

Public policies enacted in Fair Employment and Housing Act preclude finding that workers' compensation is exclusive remedy for plaintiff pleading claim for physical damages as result of employer's unlawful business practice, as defined by Gov. Code § 12940(m), of failing to provide reasonable accommodation for plaintiff's nonindustrial disability from polio. Bagatti v. Department of Rehabilitation (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 344, 356-357, 364-367, 118 Cal. Rptr. 2d 443

In civil action by injured agricultural laborer against his employer (licensed farm labor contractor), California Farm Labor Contractors Act, Lab. Code § 1682 et seq., does not provide exception to exclusive remedy rule of workers' compensation laws. Ruiz v. Cabrera (2002) 98 Cal. App. 4th 1198, 1202-1203, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 320

Doorman who was employee of condominium homeowners' association but not of individual homeowners as not barred by exclusive remedy rule from bringing civil action against negligent homeowner. Holmes v. Roth (1992) 11 Cal. App. 4th 931, 936-937, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 315

Under workers' compensation law, employee as afforded relatively swift and certain payment of benefits to cure or relieve effects of industrial injury without having to prove fault, but, in exchange, gives up wider range of damages potentially available in tort. Shoemaker v. Myers (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 1, 16, 276 Cal. Rptr. 303, 801 P.2d 1054 ; City of Moorpark v. Superior Court (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1143, 1152, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 445, 959 P.2d 752

Exclusive remedy doctrine as inapplicable when injury is result of conduct that does not "reasonably [come] within the compensation bargain." Shoemaker v. Myers (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 1, 16, 276 Cal. Rptr. 303, 801 P.2d 1054

Worker's claim based on conduct normally occurring in workplace as within exclusive jurisdiction of WCAB. Shoemaker v. Myers (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 1, 15, 276 Cal. Rptr. 303, 801 P.2d 1054 ; Cole v. Fair Oaks Fire Protection Dist. (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 148, 151, 233 Cal. Rptr. 308, 729 P.2d 743

Exclusive remedy provisions of workers' compensation system as designed to provide quick, simple, and readily accessible method of claiming and receiving compensation. Marsh & McLennan, Inc. v. Superior Court (1989) 49 Cal. 3d 1, 6, 259 Cal. Rptr. 733, 774 P.2d 762

Lab. Code §§ 3602, 5300, and 5814 as creating statutory scheme that preempts private causes of action by injured employees against independent insurance claims administrators and adjusters hired by their self-insured employers that unreasonably delay or refuse to pay compensation benefits. Marsh & McLennan, Inc. v. Superior Court (1989) 49 Cal. 3d 1, 10, 259 Cal. Rptr. 733, 774 P.2d 762

Workers' compensation law as not superseding tenured teachers' procedureal entitlements under Education Code. Raven v. Oakland Unified School Dist. (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 1347, 1364-1366, 262 Cal. Rptr. 354 (involving procedural requirements under Educ. Code § 44942 to suspend certifiecated employe or transfer such employee to other duties based on mental illness that renders employee incompetent to perform duties)

Although workers' compensation also provides rehabilitation and disability allowances similar to those afforded by State Teachers' Retirement System, these latter benefits as not falling within exclusive purview of workers' compensation law. Raven v. Oakland Unified School Dist. (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 1347, 1364-1366, 262 Cal. Rptr. 354

Expressed intent of legislative authors of workers' compensation statutes as being that statutory remedy is exclusive remedy against employer for injuries occurring within scope of employment. Riley v. Southwest Marine, Inc. (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 1242, 1258, 250 Cal. Rptr. 718

Legislature's failure to include in workers' compensation law an element of damages recoverable at common law as not subject to judicial correction. Potter v. Arizona So. Coach Lines, Inc. (1988) 202 Cal. App. 3d 126, 131, 248 Cal. Rptr. 284

Workers' compensation law as precluding civil action by former employee and his wife against former employer and supervisor for damages incident to employer's failure to notify of employment termination resulting in employee's loss of right to convert group insurance policy to individual coverage. Potter v. Arizona So. Coach Lines, Inc. (1988) 202 Cal. App. 3d 126, 131-136, 248 Cal. Rptr. 284

Under workers' compensation scheme, employee's remedy against employer for work-related injury as generally exclusively limited to benefits provided by workers' compensation law. Spradlin v. Cox (1988) 201 Cal. App. 3d 799, 806, 247 Cal. Rptr. 347

Injured worker's exclusive remedy for insurer's intentional misconduct in persistent withholding of compensation payments, notwithstanding order by workers' compensation judge to pay, as lying within penalty provisions of workers' compensation law (i.e., Lab. Code § 5814). Stoddard v. Western Employers Ins. Co. (1988) 200 Cal. App. 3d 165, 171-172, 245 Cal. Rptr. 820

When special employment relationship exists between temporary employee and employer, employee's exclusive remedy for job-related injuries as being workers' compensation. Santa Cruz Poultry, Inc. v. Superior Court (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 575, 577, 239 Cal. Rptr. 578

When employee consumes alcohol in scope of his or her employment, employer as liable under doctrine of respondeat superior (Civ. Code § 2338) for injuries proximately caused to members of public by consumption of alcohol and as immunized from liability neither by Civ. Code § 1714 nor by Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602 (generally immunizing furnishers of alcoholic beverages for injuries resulting from alcohol caused accidents); but when injury is to coemployee off employer's premises under circumstances in which workers' compensation would have been barred by going and coming rule but resulted from "special risk" causally related to employment and was sustained within field of that risk, injured coemployee's claim as coming within exclusive remedy provisions of workers' compensation law and tort action by coemployee against employer as barred. Childers v. Shasta Livestock Auction Yard, Inc. (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 792, 798, 800-816, 235 Cal. Rptr. 641

Existence of injury not compensable under workers' compensation as not, without more, abrogating workers' compensation law's exclusive remedy provisions. Spratley v. Winchell Donut House, Inc. (1987) 188 Cal. App. 3d 1408, 1414, 234 Cal. Rptr. 121

[b] Americans With Disabilities Act (ADA)

Exclusive remedy doctrine of California Workers' Compensation Act is preempted by federal Americans With Disabilities Act (42 U.S.C. § 12101 et seq.); plaintiff is allowed to simultaneously pursue workers' compensation claim and federal claim. Wood v. County of Alameda (N.D. Cal. 1995) 875 F. Supp. 659, 665

Third-party seeking to mitigate its damages lacked standing to bring action under the Americans With Disabilities Act against an employer for alleged unlawful discrimination. Ventura County Railway Company, Inc. v. Hadley Auto Transport (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 878, 882, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 362

[c] Assault and Battery

Covered employer was protected from suit by employees for negligent or reckless failure to provide adequate security on employer's premises, despite knowledge of potential danger, although failure allegedly resulted in assault and kidnapping against two employees perpetrated by third parties who were not employees. Arendell v. Auto Parts Club, Inc. (1994) 29 Cal. App. 4th 1261, 1265, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 83

Action brought by security guard against director of hotel security for threatening guard with gun as not barred by exclusive remedy provisions of workers' compensation act, since director's threat constituted physical assault under Lab. Code § 3602. Herrick v. Quality Hotels, Inns & Resorts, Inc. (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 1608, 1616-1617, 24 Cal. Rptr. 2d 203

Plaintiff as required to show that co-employee specifically intended to injure him or her to come within exception to exclusive remedy rule of Lab. Code § 3601(a), which permits a civil action against against co-employee for injuries caused by willful and unprovoked physical act of aggression. Soares v. City of Oakland (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 1822, 1825-1831, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 405

"Willful" assaults under Lab. Code § 3601(a) as not including all common-law batteries, but only those that are specifically intended to injure. Soares v. City of Oakland (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 1822, 1825-1831, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 405

Exclusivity doctrine as not applying to prevent employee's action against employer for assault and battery [see Lab. Code § 3602(b)(1)]; assault as not required to have been personally committed by employer but only ratified by employer. Hart v. National Mortgage & Land Co. (1987) 189 Cal. App. 3d 1420, 1432, 235 Cal. Rptr. 68

Trial court may properly instruct jury that plaintiff must prove co-worker had intent to injure plaintiff, for plaintiff to come within exception of exclusive remedy rule of Lab. Code § 3601(a). Torres v. Parkhouse Tire Service, Inc. (2001) 26 Cal. 4th 995, 1003-1006, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 564, 30 P.3d 57

WCAB properly found that pranks and practical jokes condoned by employer were within co-employee's scope of employment under Lab. Code § 3601, since condoned pranks and jokes were within scope of co-worker's employment, and specific exceptions of Lab. Code § 3601 were inapplicable, co-worker was immune from negligence liability. Oliva v. Heath (1995) 35 Cal. App. 4th 926, 933-934, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 613

Owner of motor vehicle as statutorily liable under Veh. Code § 17150 to employee for injuries sustained as result of co-employee's negligent operation of motor vehicle when co-employee was operating vehicle with owner's permission; owner as not immune from civil liability because co-employee was immune by virtue of Lab. Code § 3601. Galvis v. Petito (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 551, 556-564, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 560

Lab. Code § 3601 as expressly immunizing coemployee from civil liability for acts within the scope of their employment, and 1982 amendment of that statute confirms that there can be no judicially created exceptions to the immunity granted to coemployees. Hendy v. Losse (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 723, 737-738, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 543, 819 P.2d 1

When coemployee is injured off employer's premises under circumstances in which workers' compensation would have been barred by going and coming rule but resulted from "special risk" causally related to employment and was sustained within field of that risk, injured coemployee's claim as coming within exclusive remedy provisions of workers' compensation law and tort action by coemployee against employer as barred. Childers v. Shasta Livestock Auction Yard, Inc. (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 792, 798, 800-816, 235 Cal. Rptr. 641

[e] Contract Damages

Petition for writ of mandate filed by public school employee, seeking differential pay and reinstatement under Ed. Code §§ 44977 and 44987.1, not tort damages for work-related injury, was not preempted by exclusivity provisions of workers' compensation law. Veguez v. Governing Board of the Long Beach Unified School District (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 406, 417-418, 25 Cal. Rptr. 3d 526

Employee who sues for breach of contract when same conduct also caused injury compensable under workers' compensation law as precluded from recovering only those damages caused by the compensable injury; amount of workers' compensation paid as required to be set off from contract damages. Pichon v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 488, 500-501, 260 Cal. Rptr. 677

[f] Discrimination

FEHA requires employee to prove that he or she is "qualified individual" when alleging discrimination on grounds of disability, meaning that plaintiff's burden of proving actionable discrimination on basis of disability includes proof that he or she has ability to perform essential duties of position with reasonable accommodation. Green v. State of California (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 254, 262-264, 65 P.3d 118

Injured workers discriminated against because of disability from work related injury may bring claims before Workers' Compensation Appeals Board under Lab. Code § 132a and actions to state court seeking remedies under Fair Employment and Housing Act and common-law wrongful discharge theory. City of Moorpark v. Superior Court (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1143, 1158, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 445, 959 P.2d 752 (overruling Portillo v. G. T. Price Products, Inc. (1982) 131 Cal. App. 3d 285, 182 Cal. Rptr. 291)

Plaintiff was estopped from claiming that she could perform her work adequately in FEHA age discrimination action against her employer when she had previously obtained a favorable settlement in her workers' compensation case based on her assertion that she was unable to work; employer entitled to summary judgment in FEHA age discrimination case when plaintiff failed to prove all the elements of age discrimination. Rissetto v. Plumbers and Steamfitters Local 343 (1996) 94 F.3d 597, 606

Workers' compensation exclusive remedy provisions applied to industrial injury, including plaintiff's emotional distress as result of that injury, that followed allegedly unlawful demotion because of plaintiff's age, in violation of FEHA and of public policy, when evidence demonstrated that alleged discriminatory act was not "substantial factor" in causing subsequent industrial injury. Huffman v. Interstate Brands Cos. (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 679, 692-700, 17 Cal. Rptr. 3d 397

Reinstatement of employee under Lab. Code § 132a as probationary rather than permanent as proper when no finding that employee performed or could perform job duties up to standards required by employer and no finding that, but for employee's injury, she would have successfully completed probationary period; Board's refusal to award lost wages and benefits as proper when no finding that employee sought or was ready, willing, and able to maintain employment. Dyer v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 1376, 1384-1386, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 30

Statutory discrimination action by employee alleging physical, mental, or emotional injury resulting from racial discrimination by employer as not barred by exclusivity doctrine. Jones v. Los Angeles Community College Dist. (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 794, 804, 807-808, 244 Cal. Rptr. 37 ; see also Goldman v. Wilsey Foods, Inc. (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 1085, 1095-1096, 265 Cal. Rptr. 294 (religious discrimination); Meninga v. Raley's, Inc. (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 79, 91, 264 Cal. Rptr. 319 (sexual discrimination); Watson v. Department of Rehabilitation (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 1271, 1286-1287, 261 Cal. Rptr. 204 (age and racial discrimination)

Injured workers discriminated against because of disability from work related injury may bring claims before the Workers' Compensation Appeals Board under Lab. Code § 132a and actions to state court seeking remedies under Fair Employment and Housing Act and common-law wrongful discharge theory. City of Moorpark v. Superior Court (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1143, 1158, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 445, 959 P.2d 752 (overruling Portillo v. G. T. Price Products, Inc. (1982) 131 Cal. App. 3d 285, 182 Cal. Rptr. 291)

[g] Dual Capacity Doctrine

Hospital employee who sustained nerve injury while voluntarily undergoing treatment by employer pursuant to a protocol put in place by employer for treating employees exposed to blood or other bodily fluids, was barred by exclusive remedy rule from pursuing tort action against employer. Alander v. Vaca Valley Hospital (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 1298, 1304, 1307, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 40

Lab. Code § 3602(a), barring dual capacity doctrine, as inapplicable to coemployees; however, coemployees as expressly immunized from civil liability for acts within the scope of their employment by virtue of Lab. Code § 3601. Hendy v. Losse (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 723, 737-738, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 543, 819 P.2d 1

Employee was permitted to maintain action against her employer under dual capacity doctrine for injuries sustained as result of "slip and fall" while on employer's premises in course of treatment for prior work-related injury, based on theory that employer could be liable under common-law duty of reasonable care owed by landowner to invitee. Weinstein v. St. Mary's Medical Center (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 1223, 1237, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 461

Dual capacity exception did not apply in an action brought by a hospital employee who sustained a nerve injury while voluntarily undergoing treatment by her employer pursuant to a protocol put in place by the employer for treating employee's exposed to blood or other bodily fluids. Alander v. Vaca Valley Hospital (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 1298, 1307, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 40

WCAB as correct in determining that dual capacity exception to rule of exclusivity inapplicable when employee of chiropractic center who sued chiropractic center for injuries received while undergoing chiropractic treatment was patient of center prior to and at time of her injury. Lake v. Lakewood Chiropractic Center (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 47, 53, 24 Cal. Rptr. 2d 358

Lab. Code § 3602(a) as inapplicable to preclude employee's action against employer, when employer's second or dual capacity came into existence after, not prior to or at the time of, the employee's injury. Coca-Cola Bottling Co. v. Superior Court (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 1273, 1292-1293, 285 Cal. Rptr. 183 ; Sturtevant v. County of Monterey (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 758, 761-764, 279 Cal. Rptr. 161

Lab. Code § 3602(a), as amended, abolishing dual capacity doctrine in most cases, as not retroactive. Perry v. Heavenly Valley (1985) 163 Cal. App. 3d 495, 504-505, 209 Cal. Rptr. 771

[h] Emotional Distress

Employee's damages for emotional distress resulting from employer's misrepresentations made to induce employee to enter employment relationship were not consequence of normal part of that relationship or risk reasonably encompassed within compensation bargain; in making these misrepresentations (regarding employer's financial stability, its future plans to relocate its operations, and prospective employee's promotion in corporate ranks), employer stepped out of its proper role as employer, engaging in behavior that is not normal part of employment relationship, so that exclusive remedy rule did not bar employee's civil damages for emotional distress. Lenk v. Total-Western, Inc. (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 959, 971-973, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 34

Workers' compensation was employee's sole remedy for work-related emotional distress under Lab. Code § 3601(a). Gibbs v. American Airlines, Inc. (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 1, 10, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 554

Employee's emotional distress claims seeking damages for alleged work--related injury discrimination were not barred by the exclusivity rule since work--related injury discrimination is not a normal risk of the compensation bargain. Fretland v. County of Humboldt (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 1478, 1492, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 359

Trial court erred in determining that plaintiff's cause of action for intentional infliction of emotional distress was barred by exclusive remedy rule, when evidence created triable issue of fact as to whether reasonable person would have found working conditions created by defendant to be intolerable, and as to whether conduct experienced by plaintiff was outrageous. Kovatch v. California Casualty Management Co., Inc. (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 1256, 1277-1278, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 217

Emotional distress damages may be recovered as part of compensatory damages if plaintiff has cause of action for wrongful termination in violation of public policy or wrongful termination in violation of express statute. Phillips v. Gemini Moving Specialists (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 563, 577, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 29

Claims under California law for intentional and negligent infliction of emotional distress caused by personnel moves were not preempted by California workers' compensation statute when claims implicated fundamental public policy considerations embodied in Gov. Code § 12940(f) and Lab. Code § 1102.5, which prohibit certain retaliatory discrimination. Maynard v. City of San Jose (9th Cir. 1994) 37 F.3d 1396, 1405-1406

In action by three firefighters against city, its fire chief and its city manager for wrongly refusing to grant promotions, defendants waived claim that damages for emotional distress barred by the exclusive remedy provisions of workers' compensation act as defendants failed to raise issue before or during trial. Lucich v. City of Oakland (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 494, 498, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 450

Exclusive remedy provisions of workers' compensation system as barring civil action for intentional or negligent infliction of emotional distress unless employer's conduct exceeds risks inherent in employment relationship or contravenes public policy. Livitsanos v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 744, 754-755, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 808, 828 P.2d 1195

Workers' compensation law as exclusive remedy for emotional distress resulting from termination of employment, even if employee does not suffer physical injury. Horn v. Bradco Internat., Ltd. (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 653, 665-670, 283 Cal. Rptr. 721

Workers' compensation law as exclusive remedy for emotional distress caused by employer's intentional conduct even if unaccompanied by physical injury, so long as employer's conduct was a normal incident of the employment relationship. Horn v. Bradco Internat., Ltd. (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 653, 665-670, 283 Cal. Rptr. 721

Workers' compensation law as exclusive remedy for claim of negligent infliction of emotional distress resulting from termination of employment, even if no accompanying physical injury or disability alleged. Robomatic, Inc. v. Vetco Offshore (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 270, 274-275, 275 Cal. Rptr. 70

Employee's cause of action for intentional infliction of emotional distress as a result of employment termination as precluded by exclusive remedy of workers' compensation; termination as necessarily arising out of the employment relationship. Jenkins v. Family Health Program (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 440, 450, 262 Cal. Rptr. 798 ; Pichon v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 488, 495-496, 260 Cal. Rptr. 677

Action for intentional infliction of emotional distress against State of California by traffic officer employed by Highway Patrol, who allegedly took disability retirement because of campaign of harassment by superior, as barred by exclusive remedy provisions of workers' compensation law when claim was based on conduct normally occuring in work place and when alleged harassment caused both mental and physical injuries. Valenzuela v. State of California (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 916, 919, 922-924, 240 Cal. Rptr. 45

When misconduct attributed to employer consists of actions that are normal part of employment relationship, such as demotions, promotions, criticism of work practices, and frictions in negotiations as to grievances, employee suffering emotional distress causing disability as unable to avoid exclusive remedy provisions of Labor Code and maintain independent action against employer for intentional infliction of emotional distress by characterizing employer's decisions as manifestly unfair, outrageous, harassing, or intended to cause emotional disturbance resulting in disability; when worker's causes of action are barred by exclusive remedy provisions of workers' compensation law, spouse's causes of action for intentional infliction of emotional distress and loss of consortium as also barred. Shoemaker v.

Myers (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 1, 15, 276 Cal. Rptr. 303, 801 P.2d 1054 ; Cole v. Fair Oaks Fire Protection Dist. (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 148, 160-163, 233 Cal. Rptr. 308, 729 P.2d 743 ; Hart v. National Mortgage & Land Co. (1987) 189 Cal. App. 3d 1420, 1429-1430, 235 Cal. Rptr. 68

Proper test in determining whether workers' compensation is exclusive remedy available to employee alleging intentional infliction of emotional distress as being whether acts complained of were normal part of employment relationship or incidents of employment relationship. Hart v. National Mortgage & Land Co. (1987) 189 Cal. App. 3d 1420, 1429, 235 Cal. Rptr. 68

California's workers' compensation law as not providing sole and exclusive remedy for employee's claim of negligent infliction of emotional distress resulting from wrongful termination of employee's employment when there has been no physical injury because emotional distress without accompanying physical injury or disability is not compensable under Lab. Code § 3600. Robards v. Gaylord Bros., Inc. (9th Cir. 1988) 854 F.2d 1152, 1157-1158 (affirming judgment for plaintiff for damages for breach of implied contract and negligent infliction of emotional distress); see also Miller v. Fairchild Industries, Inc. (9th Cir. 1989) 885 F.2d 498, 510 (actions for negligent and intentional infliction of emotional distress based on termination after settlement negotiations concerning complaints of racial discrimination as permissible when no physical injury or disability alleged).

Action for intentional infliction of emotional distress based on insurer's delay in paying benefits, change in amounts paid, and disobedience to subpoena duces tecum issued by WCAB as barred by exclusivity of workers' compensation remedy. Everfield v. State Comp. Ins. Fund (1981) 115 Cal. App. 3d 15, 18-21, 171 Cal. Rptr. 164

Workers' compensation as employee's exclusive remedy for employer's intentional infliction of emotional distress on employer's premises and while employee was still an employee for workers' compensation purposes when emotional distress that was inflicted resulted in physical disabilities to employee. Gates v. Trans Video Corp. (1979) 93 Cal. App. 3d 196, 201-206, 155 Cal. Rptr. 486

[i] Federal Law; Preemption

Exclusivity provisions of state workers' compensation laws as not precluding federal remedies under the Migrant and Seasonal Agricultural Worker Protection Act (29 U.S.C. § 1801 et seq.). Adams Fruit Co. v. Barrett (1990) 494 U.S. 638, 110 S. Ct. 1384, 108 L. Ed. 2d 585, 597-598

Former employee's claim under Lab. Code § 3602(b)(2) that employer fraudulently concealed fact that her illness was caused by exposure to toxic chemicals in workplace as not preempted by Section 301 of federal Labor Management Relations Act, which provides for federal preemption of state claim if application of law is substantially dependent on analysis of collective bargaining agreement or if claim is founded directly on rights created by such agreement. Lopez v. Continental Can Co., Inc. (9th Cir. [Cal.] 1992) 961 F.2d 147, 148-149

[i.1] Fraudulent Concealment

Reviewing factual conditions employee must prove in civil tort action against employer pursuant to fraudulent concealment exception to exclusive remedy rule. Jensen v. Amgen, Inc. (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 1322, 1326-1327, 129 Cal. Rptr. 2d 899

Employee seeking to state cause of action for fraudulent concealment need only "in general terms" plead facts that if found true by trier of fact establish existence of essential elements under Lab. Code § 3602(b)(2), and in determining whether allegations in complaint are legally sufficient trial court must liberally construe pleading with view to achieving substantial justice between parties. Palestini v. General Dynamics Corp. (2002) 99 Cal. App. 4th 80, 89-90, 120 Cal.

Rptr. 2d 741

[j] Insurer's Duty to Defend

Court of appeal, affirming Superior Court's dismissal of plaintiff employer's civil suit against its insurer, which alleged breach of contract, breach of covenant of good faith and fair dealing, and fraud, for failure to defend plaintiff against employee's civil action for damages, held that plaintiff failed to state cause of action, since employee suffered injury compensable under workers' compensation law and insurer had provided both defense and indemnification to employee's workers' compensation claim, making applicable insurance policy's unambiguous provision that excluded any obligation by insurer to defend civil action against employer by employee who had received workers' compensation benefits for injury that was subject of civil action. Stephenson v. Argonaut Insurance Co. (2004) 125 Cal. App. 4th 962, 969-975, 23 Cal. Rptr. 3d 195

Insurers had no duty to defend or indemnify insured employer under the workers' compensation or employer's liability portions of their policies when insured's claim was based on discrimination and intentional conduct that was excluded from coverage under the policy. General Star Indemnity Co. v. Schools Excess Liability Fund (N.D. Cal. 1995) 888 F. Supp. 1022, 1026-1027

Compensation insurer as having no duty to defend against former employee's civil wrongful termination action when "Workers' Compensation Liability" portion of insurance policy was susceptible of no other objective construction than providing coverage solely for workers' compensation benefits, or claims, proceedings, or suits for such benefits, and not for civil suits for damages; furthermore, civil action involved no potential for damages within the coverage of the policy because superior court has no jurisdiction to award workers' compensation benefits; such award of benefits is exclusively within jurisdiction of WCAB. La Jolla Beach & Tennis Club, Inc. v. Industrial Indemnity Co. (1994) 9 Cal. 4th 27, 41-44, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 100, 884 P.2d 1048 (disapproving Wong v. State Compensation Insurance Fund (1993) 12 Cal. App. 4th 686, 693-696, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1 , to extent it is inconsistent with La Jolla)

Insurer had no duty to indemnify or defend employer against sexual harassment claim, when neither workers' compensation policy nor general liability policy provided coverage for such claim. Michaelian v. State Comp. Ins. Fund (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 1093, 1105-1106, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 133

Workers' compensation insurer had no duty to defend insured employer in civil action based on former employee's claim of defamatory post-termination disparagement of performance when insured failed to show that there was any potential for coverage under the workers' compensation insurance policy. Frank and Freedus v. Allstate Ins. Co. (1996) 45 Cal. App. 4th 461, 473, 52 Cal. Rptr. 2d 678

Employer's liability insurer has no duty to defend employer against suit brought under federal statute by employees and survivors of other employees when liability policy clearly covered only liability arising under California law. Martinez v. SCIF (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 1589, 1593, 1597, 38 Cal. Rptr. 2d 639

Employer's liability insurer has no duty to defend employer against cross-complaints for indemnification brought by additional defendants in suit brought by injured employee alleging intentional concealment and aggravation of injury and intentional infliction of emotional distress, even though insurer defended and eventually settled employee's suit, when insurance policy clearly excluded coverage for bodily injury intentionally caused or aggravated by insured. Reagen's Vacuum Truck Service, Inc. v. Beaver Insurance Company (1995) 31 Cal. App. 4th 375, 388, 37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 89

Insurer has no duty under liability portion of insurance contract to defend insured employer against suit for damages brought by injured former employee when former employee received workers' compensation benefits for emotional distress caused by termination from employment, suit brought against employer alleged sex discrimination, wrongful termination, and related claims, insurance contract clearly stated that insured was not covered under liability portion of policy when underlying claim was covered by workers' compensation, and liability portion of policy clearly excluded coverage for claims based on either wrongful termination or sex discrimination. Transamerica Insurance Company v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County (1994) 29 Cal. App. 4th 1705, 1715, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 259

Compensation insurer as not absolved of its duty to defend insured employer on ground that employee's civil action against employer for wrongful termination was barred by exclusive remedy rule when employee's complaint alleged violations of fundamental and substantial public policies that were excepted from exclusive remedy provisions of Workers' Compensation Act. B & E Convalescent Center v. State Compensation Ins. Fund (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 78, 89-92, 9 Cal. Rptr. 2d 894

Employer's liability portion of compensation insurance policy as requiring insurer to defend employer against employee's civil action when potential for coverage exists or employer has reasonable expectation of coverage given nature and kind of risks covered by policy. B & E Convalescent Center v. State Compensation Ins. Fund (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 78, 92, 9 Cal. Rptr. 2d 894

Compensation insurer as having no duty to defend insured employer for employer's willful acts pursuant to Ins. Code § 533 when employer had intentionally interfered with employee's protected labor union rights and had discriminated against employee on basis of her age, gender, and ethnicity. B & E Convealescent Center v. State Compensation Ins. Fund (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 78, 92-102, 9 Cal. Rptr. 2d 894

[k] Insurance Carriers, Administrators or Adjusters, Actions Against

Defendant, third party administrator, had duty of care to plaintiff, employer bank's excess insurer, plaintiff was third party beneficiary of contract between employer and defendant, and plaintiff was subrogated to employer's rights against defendant. National Union Fire Insurance Co. v. Cambridge Integrated Services Group (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 35, 45-56, 89 Cal. Rptr. 3d 473

In civil action that arose out of successful attempts by California Insurance Guarantee Association and numerous insurers and employers to have Appeals Board consolidate many different medical lien claims in order to obtain determination from Board as to whether Premier Medical Management Systems, Inc., was improperly representing treating physicians in Appeals Board proceedings, Premier and five affiliated treating physicians sued insurers and employers, alleging various tort and statutory causes of action based on claims that defendants were engaged in anti-competitive activity, gravamen of complaint being that, after Premier submitted plaintiff physicians' bills to defendants for payment and filed liens in numerous workers' compensation cases before Appeals Board, defendants collectively conspired to contest, delay, and avoid payment of those bills and liens, defendants argued that complaint was anti-SLAPP (Strategic Lawsuit Against Public Participation) lawsuit because it was based entirely on defendants' constitutional right to petition Appeals Board, and court of appeal agreed with defendants, finding that anti-SLAPP statute applied because defendants had shown that plaintiffs' complaint related to activity that was protected activity, i.e., right to petition Appeals Board and litigate lien claims before Board, and that defendants had probability of prevailing on plaintiffs' complaint, based on doctrine that parties who petition government for redress are generally immune from antitrust liability. Premier Med. Mgmt. Sys., Inc. v. Cal. Ins. Guarantee Ass'n (2006) 136 Cal. App. 4th 464

Superior court had no jurisdiction to decide employee's claim against employer's workers' compensation insurer for allegedly mishandling its lien on employee's third-party settlement; WCAB had exclusive jurisdiction over claim under Lab. Code §§ 3860 and 5800. Hughes v. Argonaut Insurance Co. (2001) 88 Cal. App. 4th 517, 531, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 877

Economic injuries sustained by medical providers to their businesses resulting from failure to receive full and timely payment on their lien claims from insurance carriers fall within the scope of exclusivity provisions; however, medical providers may bring civil actions against insurers for acts by the insurers that fall outside the scope of the compensation bargain, including Cartwright Act and RICO claims, and tortious interference with business relations and violations of the UCL to the extent they are predicated on the conspiratorial misconduct of the insurers. Vacanti v. State Compensation Ins. Fund (2001) 24 Cal. 4th 800, 814, 825-828, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 562, 14 P.3d 234

Delays in making payments to injured worker and changes in amounts of payment as matters exclusively within jurisdiction of WCAB; hence, action by injured worker against independent claims administrator of self-insured employer for delay or refusal to pay compensation benefits as preempted by California's workers' compensation system. Marsh & McLennan, Inc. v. Superior Court (1989) 49 Cal. 3d 1, 7-10, 259 Cal. Rptr. 733, 774 P.2d 762 ("rejecting" contrary holding in Dill v. Claims Admin. Services, Inc. (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 1184, 224 Cal. Rptr. 273)

Fraudulent misrepresentation by compensation carrier and its independent claims administrators that no policy of insurance existed, made for purpose of advancing carrier's economic interest and defeating injured employee's just entitlement, and subsequent intentional destruction of evidence establishing fraud, as constituting type of outrageously reprehensible conduct that falls outside permissible boundary of protected behavior by compensation carrier and subjects tortfeasors to liability in civil action for fraud and intentional spoliation of evidence. Jablonski v. Royal Globe Ins. Co. (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 379, 390-394, 251 Cal. Rptr. 160

Action for damages against self-insured employer's independent claims administrator who unreasonably refused to pay workers' compensation benefitsas barred by exclusive remedy provisions of workers' compensation law; court as having no jurisdiction to hear claim based on delay or refusal to pay workers' compensation benefits, even against third party, except in unusual circumstances when there is intentional, outrageous conduct outside normal scope of duty; mere allegations of emotional distress as not sufficient to trigger this exception. Phillips v. Crawford & Co. (1988) 202 Cal. App. 3d 383, 385-386, 389 n.6, 248 Cal. Rptr. 371

Exclusive remedy provision as constituting bar to civil action by employee against independent claims adjuster of self-insured employer for damages based on delay and failure to pay benefits arising from employee's industrial injury. Mottola v. R. L. Kautz & Co. (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 98, 101, 105-109, 244 Cal. Rptr. 737

Although Lab. Code §§ 3850 and 3852 authorize independent actions against persons other than employer who are liable for damages resulting from injury, employer's insurance carrier as not a person other than employer but stands in employer's shoes and may invoke exclusivity defense when injury is plainly industrial and compensable within system [see Lab. Code § 3850(b)]); hence, employee's action against carrier for (1) negligent failure to make sure employer preserved defective ladder as evidence in employee's third-party product liability lawsuit and (2) negligent failure to notify employee of facts giving rise to third-party liability in time for him to have acted to preserve evidence as barred. Continental Casualty Co. v. Superior Court (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 156, 158-162, 235 Cal. Rptr. 260] .

Workers' compensation as exclusive remedy for refusal of independent adjusting agency, as administrator of employer's compensation program, to pay benefits awarded to injured employee. Santiago v. Employee Benefits Services (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 898, 905, 214 Cal. Rptr. 679

Worker's action against insurance carrier under Ins. Code § 790.03 for failure to pay benefits as within exclusive jurisdiction of WCAB when alleged conduct did not come within exception for outrageous and extreme conduct. Depew v. Hartford Acc. & Indem. Co. (1982) 135 Cal. App. 3d 574, 577-579, 185 Cal. Rptr. 472 ; see Moradi-Shalal v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Companies (1988) 46 Cal. 3d 287, 297-305, 250 Cal. Rptr. 116, 758 P.2d 58 (prospectively abrogating private third-party standing under Ins. Code § 790.03)

Physician employed by professional football team to provide treatment to players injured in course of their employment by team as not protected from malpractice suit by exclusive remedy provisions of Lab. Code § 3602, which applies only to employers; however, physician was immune from such suit by virtue of Lab. Code § 3601, which expressly immunizes coemployees for acts within the scope of their employment, because the physician was acting within scope of his employment when he diagnosed and treated plaintiff whose injury was proximately caused by his employment by the team. Hendy v. Losse (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 723, 737-738, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 543, 819 P.2d 1

Employee injured in industrial accident and further injured by negligence of treating physician as having separate remedies available against employer and physician; jurisdiction of claim against employer for injury and aggravation as within exclusive jurisdiction of WCAB, which has no jurisdiction overaction against physician for malpractice. Nation v. Certainteed Corp. (1978) 84 Cal. App. 3d 813, 816, 817, 149 Cal. Rptr. 62

[m] Peculiar Risk Doctrine

Landowner who hires independent contractor may be liable to contractor's employee injured by undisclosed hazard on hirer's land, even if hirer does not retain control over work, if following conditions are present: (1) landowner knew, or should have known, of latent or concealed preexisting hazardous condition on its property, (2) contractor did not know of, and could not have reasonably discovered, this hazardous condition, and (3) landowner failed to warn contractor about this condition. Kinsman v. Unocal Corp. (2005) 37 Cal. 4th 659, 678-683, 36 Cal. Rptr. 3d 495, 123 P.3d 931

Gov. Code § 815.4 (Government Claims Act) provides statutory basis for public entity potentially to be held liable on retained control theory under Hooker and its progeny, and plaintiff could bring claim on this theory. McCarty v. State of California/Department of Transportation (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 955, 976-979, 79 Cal. Rptr. 3d 777

Privette and Kinsman doctrines applied to issue of liability of hirers of subcontractors for injuries to those who worked for those subcontractors, regardless of whether those injured were employees of subcontractors or independent contractors. Michael v. Denbeste Transp., Inc. (2006) 137 Cal. App. 4th 1082, 1093-1096, 40 Cal. Rptr. 3d 777

Employee of independent contractor may sue hirer of contractor for tort of negligent exercise of retained control, provided hirer's exercise of retained control affirmatively contributed to employee's injuries. Hooker v. Department of Transportation (2002) 27 Cal. 4th 198, 202, 115 Cal. Rptr. 2d 853, 38 P.3d 1081

Hirer of independent contractor is liable in civil action to employee of contractor insofar as hirer's provision of unsafe equipment affirmatively contributed to employee's injury. McKown v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. (2002) 27 Cal. 4th 219, 222, 115 Cal. Rptr. 2d 868, 38 P.3d 1094

California Supreme Court holdings in Privette v. Superior Court (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 689, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 72, 854 P.2d 721 , and Toland v. Sunland Housing Group, Inc. (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 253, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 878, 955 P.2d 504 , extended to bar injured employee of independent contractor from suing contractor's hirer for negligent hiring, with Court citing two related policy considerations in support of its conclusion: (1) rule of workers' compensation exclusivity, which shields independent contractor who pays workers' compensation insurance premiums from further liability to its employees, should apply equally to person hiring contractor because hirer has indirectly paid cost of this coverage inasmuch as it was presumably calculated into contract price; (2) permitting such recovery would give employees of independent contractors unwarranted windfall, something that is denied other workers, i.e., right to recover tort damages for industrial injuries caused by their employer's failure to provide safe working environment. Camargo v. Tjaarda Dairy (2001) 25 Cal. 4th 1235, 1244-1245, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 617, 25 P.3d 1096

General contractor was not liable to injured employee of subcontractor, when court of appeal followed Hooker v. Department of Transportation and found that, even if it could be shown that general contractor retained control over safety conditions at worksite, there was no triable issue of fact that general contractor affirmatively contributed to subcontractor's employee's injuries. Millard v. Biosources, Inc. (2007) 156 Cal. App. 4th 1338, 1348-1349, 68 Cal. Rptr. 3d 177

Neither 1999 amendments to Lab. Code § 6304.5 nor California Supreme Court's analysis of those amendments in Elsner v. Uveges (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 915 , abrogated liability rules established by Privette v. Superior Court and its progeny. Millard v. Biosources, Inc. (2007) 156 Cal. App. 4th 1338, 1349-1352, 68 Cal. Rptr. 3d 177

Policy considerations relied on in Privette and Hooker, which established that hirer of subcontractor whose employee was injured on job as result of subcontractor's negligence was not vicariously liable under peculiar risk doctrine for employee's injuries, were equally applicable to claims against hirer's agent and thus barred civil action against that agent. Ruiz v. Herman Weissker, Inc. (2005) 130 Cal. App. 4th 52, 61-62, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 641

Even assuming, as plaintiff argued, that hirer had nondelegable duties under Public Utilities Code and PUC regulations to ensure safety of premises where employee of independent contractor was fatally injured, hirer's attempt to delegate such duties to agent created no liability on part of that agent. Ruiz v. Herman Weissker, Inc. (2005) 130 Cal. App. 4th 52, 64, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 641

Although hirer of independent contractor remains liable to employee of that contractor who is injured during course of the work when hirer retains control over details of work and its conduct affirmatively contributes to employee's injuries, no evidence in this case showed that hirer's agent asserted authority over independent contractor's crew or instructed them as to what safety procedures to use, so that no evidence showed that hirer's agent affirmatively contributed to contractor's employee's death by some negligent act or omission. Ruiz v. Herman Weissker, Inc. (2005) 130 Cal. App. 4th 52, 65-67, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 641

Defendant homeowners' association, which had contracted with plaintiff's employer for security services, had no liability for injuries received by plaintiff when assaulted on homeowner's premises, since defendant owed plaintiff no duty to restrict access to community's premises or to restrict youth parties within its premises, and plaintiff had assumed risk of injuries he suffered, when undisputed evidence demonstrated that defendant neither required nor expected its unarmed security personnel to confront potentially violent persons, or otherwise place themselves in danger, and did nothing to alter basic scope of its security guards' "observe and report" responsibilities, so that it could not be held liable for consequences of plaintiff's decision to take action beyond scope of his duties by attempting to arrest assailant, nor could defendant's failure to take affirmative steps to restrict or control juvenile parties within its property be construed as having affirmatively contributed to plaintiff's injuries for purposes of peculiar risk doctrine. Tilley v. CZ Master Assn. (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 464, 482-490, 32 Cal. Rptr. 3d 151

Court of appeal reversed trial court's summary judgment in favor of defendant property owner and held that record showed triable issues of material fact as to whether defendant, who was hirer of plaintiff-employee's employer, breached nondelegable regulatory duty to provide fire extinguishers, pursuant to California Fire Code, and whether such breach affirmatively contributed to plaintiff's injuries. Court of appeal found that plaintiff's lawsuit was not foreclosed by Privette v. Superior Court and its progeny, and found, instead, that 24 Cal. Code Reg. § 7904.4.9.2, applicable to petroleum bulk plant facilities such as defendant's, requiring fire extinguishers within 75 feet of those portions of facility where fires are likely to occur, supported plaintiff's lawsuit. Barclay v. Jesse M. Lange Distributor, Inc. (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 281, 295-301, 28 Cal. Rptr. 3d 242

Court of appeal reversed trial court's summary judgment for hirer and general contractor defendants in civil action by plaintiff, employee of subcontractor, who was injured in fall from ladder while installing sprinkler system in hirer's new building, holding that furnishing and abrupt withdrawal of safety equipment by defendants could be found to constitute negligent performance of voluntary undertaking, affirmatively contributing to plaintiff's injuries and thereby subjecting defendants to liability, when appellate court found that defendants had made no attempt to refute plaintiff's allegations and evidence that defendants had provided, then removed, hydraulic scissor lifts from room in which sprinklers were being installed, resulting in plaintiff's having to use ladder, and had also provided, then removed, suspended anchoring cables to which workers could secure their safety lanyards, resulting in plaintiff's having nothing to which to fasten his safety lanyard, and defendants had presented no evidence precluding finding that they affirmatively contributed to plaintiff's injuries, or affirmatively demonstrating that plaintiff lacked evidence to prove such affirmative contribution, and evidence raised strong possibility, at least, that defendants not only actively contributed to plaintiff's injuries, but actually created situation in which such injuries were likely to occur. Browne v. Turner Construction Co. (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 1334, 1345-1348, 26 Cal. Rptr. 3d 433

Landowner had no duty to employee of employer (premises occupant) for injuries arising from employee's performance of his job on landowner's land, when hazardous conditions were created by functioning of employer's business, and were not danger existing on land independently of employer's activity, and when there was no evidence of landlord-tenant relationship between landowner and employer or of any other legal relationship giving landowner right of access or control, no evidence showing what reasonable inspection would have disclosed, and no evidence that landowner had ability to detect and avoid unreasonable risk of harm to employee. Laico v. Chevron U.S.A., Inc. (2004) 123 Cal. App. 4th 649, 670, 20 Cal. Rptr. 3d 307

Hirer did not affirmatively contribute to employee's injury, and court of appeal rejected injured employee's argument that public policies behind Privette and its progeny did not apply and that hirer should be subject to liability for employee's injury because employee's employer was uninsured against workers' compensation at time of employee's injury, with court pointing out that, although uninsured at time of employee's injury, employer had been so insured and had so informed hirer at time contract of hire was entered. Bell v. Greg Agee Constr., Inc. (2004) 125 Cal. App. 4th 453, 466-468, 23 Cal. Rptr. 3d 33

Court of appeal affirmed summary judgment in favor of general contractor in civil action against general contractor by employee whose employer was hired by general contractor for construction project on which employee was injured, when court found no triable issues of fact on theories of general contractor negligence, general contractor negligent exercise of retained control, or premises liability, and court found Privette v. Superior Court (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 689, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 72, 854 P.2d 721 , and its progeny applied and precluded employee from prevailing on such theories of liability against general contractor. Sheeler v. Greystone Homes, Inc. (2003) 113 Cal. App. 4th 908, 918-922, 6 Cal. Rptr. 3d 683

Although hirer of contractor, having generated hazardous waste that it hired contractor to remove, and which injured employee, had nondelegable duty under hazardous waste statutes [42 U.S.C. § 6901 et seq.; Health & Safety Code § 25100 et seq.] to properly dispose of such waste, nevertheless Privette/Toland doctrine means that generator of hazardous waste is not liable to employee of contractor it hires to dispose of that waste unless generator's conduct affirmatively contributed to employee's injuries. Park v. Burlington Northern Santa Fe Railway Co. (2003) 108 Cal. App. 4th 595, 606-611, 133 Cal. Rptr. 2d 757

Employee of uninsured subcontractor on construction project not permitted to sue property owner, because employee had workers' compensation coverage via Uninsured Employers Fund [now called the Uninsured Employers Benefits Trust Fund] and allowing suit would tend to discourage employers from obtaining coverage, so that rationales of exclusive remedy rule fully applied, nor was suit allowed on grounds that property owner retained control over construction project by virtue of project's defective architectural plans, because alleged defective plans may give rise to action against architect but, in absence of evidence that property owner exercised any retained control over project, exclusive remedy doctrine applied to foreclose employee's suit against owner. Lopez v. C.G.M. Development, Inc. (2002) 101 Cal. App. 4th 430, 444-446, 124 Cal. Rptr. 2d 227

Widow's civil negligence action against property owner and general contractor of construction project on which her husband, employee of subcontractor, had been killed, presented triable issues of fact on whether defendants each had general duty of care to protect public roadway for persons traveling on it (and on which her husband had been killed), whether each of defendants breached this duty, and whether these breaches caused decedent's fatal injury. Ray v. Silverado Constructors (2002) 98 Cal. App. 4th 1120, 1123, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 251

Liability for accidental death of independent contractor's employee could not be imposed on hirer/general contractor under theory of retained control when general contractor's failure was not shown to have affirmatively contributed to creation or persistence of hazard causing decedent's death. Villafana v. Camco Pacific Construction Co. (2001) 91 Cal. App. 4th 189, 197-198, 110 Cal. Rptr. 2d 170

Subcontractor's employee barred from pursuing an action against general contractor based upon contractor's failure to require subcontractor to take safety precautions, when general contractor's failure did not affirmatively contribute to creation or continued existence of dangerous condition causing injury to the subcontractor's employee. Kinney v. CSB Construction, Inc. (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 28, 39, 103 Cal. Rptr. 2d 594

Employee of subcontractor injured on construction project who received workers' compensation benefits for injury was barred from pursuing civil action for same injury against employer, construction project manager, and construction project owner. Zamudio v. City and County of San Francisco (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 445, 455, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 664

Privette v. Superior Court (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 689, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 72, 854 P.2d 721 , precludes application of peculiar risk doctrine to employees of independent contractors who are injured through the negligence of the contractor even when the hirer fails to provide in the contract, or in some other manner, that special precautions be taken to avert the peculiar risks of the work. Toland v. Sunland Housing Group, Inc. (1998) 18 Cal.4th 253, 267, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 878, 955 P.2d 504

Supreme Court's decision in Privette v. Superior Court (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 689, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 72, 854 P.2d 721 , does not abrogate California law that hirer of an independent contractor may be liable to independent contractor's employee for hirer's own negligence. Grahn v. Tosco Corp. (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 1373, 1389

Indemnification agreement in which contractor agreed to indemnify person who hired independent contractor against liability under peculiar risk doctrine did not create basis for exception to rule in Privette v. Superior Court (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 689, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 72, 854 P.2d 721 , that person who hires independent contractor is not liable for workplace injuries sustained by contractor's employees. Redfeather v. Chevron USA, Inc. (1997) 57 Cal. App. 4th 702, 705, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 159

Employee of independent contractor who sued property owner and property lessee for injuries sustained when trench in which he was working collapsed was precluded from recovering under the peculiar risk doctrine pursuant to Privette v. Superior Court, even though independent contractor was hired by property lessor rather than owner. Lopez v. University Partners (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 1117, 1125, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 359

Under California Supreme Court's decision in Privette v. Superior Court (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 689, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 72, 854 P.2d 721 , government was not liable to independent contractor's employee for negligent failure to supervise the precautions taken by independent contractor or for failure to take precautions itself; government not entitled to summary judgment when evidence indicated that it could be liable to employee of independent contractor for failure to correct known dangerous condition. Yanez v. United States of America (9th Cir. 1995) 63 F.3d 870, 875

Excess insurers that provided overlapping coverage for the same risk, equally shared the excess cost of settlement when the plaintiff alleged causes of action against a landowner and general contractor for negligence and peculiar risk. Fire

Insurance Exchange v. American States Insurance Co. (1995) 39 Cal. App. 4th 653, 664-665, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 135

General contractor has no duty to warn employee of independent contractor of obvious dangerous condition; California Supreme Court's holding in Privette v. Superior Court (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 689, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 72, 854 P.2d 721 was not applicable to case involving nondelegable duty. Felmlee v. Falcon Cable TV (1995) 36 Cal. App. 4th 1032, 1038, 1040, 43 Cal. Rptr. 2d 158

California Supreme Court's decision in Privette v. Superior Court (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 689, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 72, 854 P.2d 721 , abrogating peculiar risk doctrine insofar as it allowed employees of independent contractor's to sue employer of contractor, applied retroactively; reversal of trial court's decision applying peculiar risk doctrine was not required by Privette, since judgment against defendant rested on finding of defendant's own negligence, rather than on negligence of subcontractor imputed to defendant under peculiar risk doctrine. Whitford v. Swinerton & Walberg Co. (1995) 34 Cal. App. 4th 1054, 1060, 40 Cal. Rptr. 2d 688

Person who hires independent contractor to perform work that is inherently dangerous as liable in tort under peculiar risk doctrine for damages if contractor's negligent performance of work causes injury to others; this liability as not extending to contractor's employees who must seek recovery from workers' compensation system; peculiar risk doctrine's policies of insuring that injuries caused by contracted work are compensated, that risk of loss for those injuries is spread to person who primarily benefited from work, and that adequate safety measures are taken, as achieved by workers'compensation system. Privette v. Superior Court (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 689, 691-702, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 72, 854 P.2d 721 ; Owens v. Giannetta-Heinrich Construction Co. (1994) 23 Cal. App. 4th 1662, 1667, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 11

Where jury found general contractor responsible for plaintiff's injuries only on theory of vicarious liability, plaintiff's recovery as barred by retroactive application of rule announced by California Supreme Court prohibiting application of peculiar risk doctrine to employee of contractor who seeks recovery of tort damages from person who hired contractor but did not cause injuries; employees of independent contractors may still recover workers' compensation benefits and damages from negligent third parties. Owens v. Giannetta-Heinrich Construction Co. (1994) 23 Cal. App. 4th 1662, 1667-1671, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 11

[n] Power Press Injuries

Question of whether machine is "power press" within meaning of Lab. Code § 4558(a)(4) is one for jury. Islas v. D & G Manufacturing Co., Inc. (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 571, 577580, 15 Cal. Rptr. 3d 559

Exclusive remedy section of Longshore and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act [33 U.S.C. § 905(a)] did not bar shore-based maritime employee's tort action against employer under Lab. Code §§ 3602(a) and 4558, in which employee alleged that his injury was caused by employer's removal of or failure to install guard on power press. Lenane v. Continental Maritime of San Diego, Inc. (1998) 61 Cal. App. 4th 1073, 1089, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 121

Trial court properly set aside summary judgment order in favor of employer issued on basis that Lab. Code § 4558 cause of action was precluded because a guard was not available for model of machine that injured employee, when, after summary judgment was granted, employee discovered evidence indicating that guard was available. Uriarte v. United States Pipe & Foundry Co. (1996) 51 Cal. App. 4th 780, 791, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 332

Trial court granted employer's motion for summary judgment in action by injured employee under power press exception to exclusive remedy doctrine when employee failed to provide evidence that employer was aware that machine was missing point of operation guard. Aguilera v. Henry Soss & Company (1996) 42 Cal. App. 4th 1724, 1731, 50 Cal. Rptr. 2d 477

A printing press is not a "power press" within the meaning of Lab. Code § 4558 because it does not form materials to be used in the manufacture of other products. McCoy v. Zahniser Graphics, Inc. (1995) 39 Cal. App. 4th 107, 111, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 871

Application of power press exception under Lab. Code § 4558(c) requires proof that manufacturer informed employer of need for point of operation guard; existence of hole in pasta machine where safety guard was missing was insufficient to constitute the requisite conveyance of knowledge by the manufacturer. Bryer v. Santa Cruz Pasta Factory (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 1711, 1714-1715, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 750

[o] Premises Liability

Exclusivity doctrine barred action against employer for negligent or reckless failure to provide adequate security on employer's premises, despite knowledge of potential danger. Arendell v. Auto Parts Club, Inc. (1994) 29 Cal. App. 4th 1261, 1265, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 83

Lab. Code § 3602(a) as not barring waitress who received workers' compensation benefits from corporation owning restaurant from bringing third-party premises liability action against owners of property on which restaurant operated, even though property owners owned stock in restaurant; waitress as not employee of property owners. Miller v. King (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 1732, 1733-1734, 24 Cal. Rptr. 2d 284

[p] Spouses of Employees, Independent Actions

When worker's causes of action against employer are barred by exclusive remedy provisions of Labor Code, worker's spouse's causes of action based on physical injury to or disability of worker as also barred. Cole v. Fair Oaks Fire Protection Dist. (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 148, 162-163, 233 Cal. Rptr. 308, 729 P.2d 743

Spouse of injured employee as having no independent civil action against the employer for loss of consortium. Colombo v. State of California (1991) 3 Cal. App. 4th 594, 599, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 567

[q] Uninsured Employers

In plaintiff's personal injury action filed under Lab. Code § 3706, employer's liability is determined under rules of pleading and proof that differ significantly from those of common-law personal injury action, so that this statute creates statutory cause of action for personal injuries subject to three-year statute of limitations in Code of Civ. Proc. § 338(a). Valdez v. Himmelfarb (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 1261, 1269-1270, 51 Cal. Rptr. 3d 195

Workers' compensation insurer's civil action against illegally uninsured employer for reimbursement of award of benefits to employee for cumulative trauma was permitted by Lab. Code § 5500.5(a) as exception to exclusive remedy rule, and jurisdiction of action was not limited to Appeals Board. Graphics Arts Mutual Ins. Co. v. Time Travel Internat., Inc. (2005) 126 Cal. App. 4th 405, 413-415, 23 Cal. Rptr. 3d 864

Statutory presumption that employee's injury was due to uninsured employer's negligence does not extend to presumption that employee's claimed injury arose in course of employment, so that employee seeking damages from uninsured employer has same burden of proof as employee seeking workers' compensation benefits, i.e., burden of proving that injury was sustained in course of employment. Huang v. L.A. Haute (2003) 106 Cal. App. 4th 284, 289-291, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 619

Public entity operating under self-insured workers' compensation program pursuant to a certificate issued under Lab. Code § 3700(c) was not permitted to unilaterally extend its coverage to private entity acting as an agency of public entity. Huffman v. City of Poway (2000) 84 Cal. App. 4th 975, 986, 101 Cal. Rptr. 2d 325

Lab. Code § 3706, providing that, if any employer fails to secure payment of compensation, any injured employee or his or her dependents may bring action at law against such employer as if workers' compensation law did not apply, as one of principal exceptions to workers' compensation law's exclusive remedy rule, and as providing an alternative remedy to injured worker when employer has failed to secure payment of compensation as required by Lab. Code § 3700. Rymer v. Hagler (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 1171, 1177, 260 Cal. Rptr. 76

Jurisdiction of superior court to try claims of employee against his or her employer for damages under Lab. Code § 3706 as arising only when payment of compensation is not secured, even though, in some instances, particular worker may have better claim in state civil action; employee who seeks recovery in civil action against employer for work-related injuries as barred by exclusivity rule unless he or she can establish that employer failed to secure payment of compensation as required by workers' compensation law, and employee as having burden of showing there was no coverage. Rymer v. Hagler (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 1171, 1177-1178, 260 Cal. Rptr. 76

Requirement of Lab. Code § 3700 that private employer in California secure payment of compensation by securing insurance against liability from one or more insurers authorized to write compensation insurance in California or obtaining certificate of self-insurance pursuant to Lab. Code § 3715 as satisfied so as to preclude civil action under Lab. Code § 3706 when insurer is estopped to deny coverage. Rymer v. Hagler (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 1171, 1183-1184, 260 Cal. Rptr. 76

Ruling of workers' compensation judge, after hearing arguments of counsel, denying employee's motion to exclude insurance company from workers' compensation proceeding on ground it was not employer's compensation carrier at time employee was injured, and finding that insurer was employer's compensation carrier on date of injury or was estopped to deny workers' compensation coverage, as deciding issue of coverage; ruling as final order for purposes of collateral estoppel in employee's civil action against employer pursuant to Lab. Code § 3706 for failure to secure payment of compensation, particularly when employee did not seek reconsideration of coverage ruling and dismissed workers' compensation proceeding without making any effort to challenge workers' compensation judge's decision; hence, trial court as having properly granted employer's motion for judgment on pleadings in employee's civil action againsthim. Rymer v. Hagler (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 1171, 1180, 1182, 1183, 260 Cal. Rptr. 76

In statutory action under Lab. Code § 3706, when employer fails to secure payment of workers' compensation as required by Lab. Code § 3700, employee as obligated to both plead and prove violation of Lab. Code § 3700 and employer's failure to carry workers' compensation insurance. Campos Food Fair v. Superior Court (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 965, 968, 238 Cal. Rptr. 685

Defense of comparative negligence as unavailable to employer by virtue of Lab. Code § 3708 in action at law by employee for personal injuries against employer who fails to secure workers' compensation insurance coverage. Logan v. Masters (1981) 120 Cal. App. 3d 145, 148, 174 Cal. Rptr. 465

Decision of WCAB, when final, as res judicata, in subsequent superior action, on issue of insurance. Jones v. Brown (1970) 13 Cal. App. 3d 513, 522, 89 Cal. Rptr. 651

Employer's failure to comply with requirement to carry workers' compensation insurance [Lab. Code § 3700] as not to be inferred if complaint silent on that subject. Singleton v. Bonnesen (1955) 131 Cal. App. 2d 327, 331, 280 P.2d 481

Employer-employee relationship as element of cause of action under Lab. Code § 3706; employee as without rights under that section if employer not subject to workers' compensation and insurance laws. Mantonya v. Bratlie (1948)

33 Cal. 2d 120, 124-125, 199 P.2d 677

Employer's failure to pay compensation as not constituting failure to secure compensation and, therefore, as not giving right of action under Lab. Code § 3706. Pecor v. Norton-Lilly Co. (1931) 111 Cal. App. 241, 243, 295 P. 582

Provision of predecessor to Lab. Code § 3709 for attorney's fees as constitutional. Marshall v. Foote (1927) 81 Cal. App. 98, 103-104, 252 P. 1075

[r] Unlicensed Contractors

Contractor's license is automatically suspended, pursuant to Lab. Code § 7125.2(a)(2), for failure to obtain workers' compensation insurance, whereas, pursuant to Lab. Code § 7125.2(a)(1), suspension of license for failure to maintain workers' compensation insurance requires notice from registrar of contractors. Wright v. Issak (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 1116, 1121-1123, 58 Cal. Rptr. 3d 1

Plaintiff, injured while repairing defendant's roof, was defendant's employee pursuant to Lab. Code § 2750.5, which operated to allow plaintiff's lawsuit alleging defendant's negligence, despite fact that plaintiff, by virtue of Lab. Code § 3352(h), was not employee of defendant for workers' compensation purposes, when court of appeal found that plaintiff was not licensed roofing contractor and, therefore, not independent contractor. Mendoza v. Brodeur (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 72, 79-81, 47 Cal. Rptr. 3d 310

Injured worker, employed by unlicensed contractor to repair homeowner's roof, and who had not worked on that job for statutorily required number of hours to qualify as employee of homeowner, nevertheless remained employee of contractor for purposes of assigning liability for injury, so that worker was eligible to receive benefits from Uninsured Employers Fund [now called the Uninsured Employers Benefits Trust Fund] and to pursue tort remedies against contractor in civil court. Cedillo v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2003) 106 Cal. App. 4th 227, 232, 236-237, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 581

Unlicensed contractor and its employees as matter of law as employees of person hiring work done and unable to maintain civil action against hirer for damages for injuries at workplace but as required to resort to exclusive remedy of workers' compensation. Campos Food Fair v. Superior Court (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 965, 967

[s] Unsafe Workplace

Employer's conduct of providing employees with hazardous chemical substance to clean film processing laboratory, concealing known unsafe working conditions, and violating environmental safety regulations was within compensation bargain, making workers' compensation benefits employees' exclusive remedy. Gunnell v. Metrocolor Laboratories, Inc. (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 710, 714, 112 Cal. Rptr. 2d 195

Workers' compensation as sole remedy for employee injured by employer's failure to provide safe workplace; exclusive remedy provisions of workers' compensation law as not avoided by worker's alleging in tort action against employer fraud in the inducement (misrepresentations by employer of safety precautions taken and to be taken to protect worker from burglars made to induce worker to accept employment after worker had said she did not wish to do so because she feared working alone at night at shop where burglary had recently occurred) when worker sustained injury resulting from employer's alleged fraud, discovered alleged fraud only during employment relationship, and injury (fractured jaw and skull) arose out of and in course of employment relationship. Spratley v. Winchell Donut House, Inc. (1987) 188 Cal. App. 3d 1408, 1412-1413, 234 Cal. Rptr. 121

Failure to assure safe working environment as not creating exception to exclusive remedy provisions of workers' compensation law. Halliman v. Los Angeles Unified School Dist. (1984) 163 Cal. App. 3d 46, 51, 209 Cal. Rptr. 175

[t] Vicarious Liability

Complaint against parent corporation for negligence and wrongful death was subject to demurrer, when it alleged that parent controlled budget of its subsidiary and thereby prevented subsidiary from replacing or repairing dangerous and improperly maintained trash truck that killed decedent employee, for whose death plaintiffs were receiving workers' compensation benefits, since complaint did not allege any independent tort committed by parent, and plaintiffs' claim that parent caused unsafe working conditions by controlling subsidiary's fiscal policies and management decisions was nothing more than claim that parent was responsible for acts or omissions of subsidiary, in which case parent was sheltered by exclusive remedy rule. Waste Mgmt., Inc. v. Superior Court (2004) 119 Cal. App. 4th 105, 111-114, 13 Cal. Rptr. 3d 910

Based on reasoning in Privette, injured employee is barred from pursuing personal injury action against non-negligent member of joint venture or enterprise when another member of joint venture negligently injures employee and provides workers' compensation coverage. Orosco v. Sun-Diamond Corp. (1997) 51 Cal. App. 4th 1659, 1669-1670, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 179

Parent corporation is not liable in tort under theories of alter ego and vicarious liability for actions of subsidiary corporation when heirs of decedent employees of subsidiary corporation brought suit for negligence and premises liability against parent corporation and exclusivity doctrine precluded suit against subsidiary corporation. Doney v. TRW, Inc. (1995) 33 Cal. App. 4th 245, 249-250, 39 Cal. Rptr. 2d 292

[u] Wrongful Death Actions

Medi-Cal lien could not be asserted against wrongful death action, when damages recoverable by plaintiff in that action did not and could not include compensation for medical services provided to decedent by Medi-Cal, since in California wrongful death action is cause of action in favor of heirs as beneficiaries, based on their own independent pecuniary injury suffered by loss of relative, distinct from any action that deceased might have maintained, had he or she survived, so that damages awarded in wrongful death action are for harm done to survivors, not to deceased. Fitch v. Select Products Co. (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 812, 819-822, 115 P.3d 1233

Wrongful death action by parents of minor employee against employer as barred by exclusive remedy doctrine when minor died in automobile accident on way home from work after being required to work beyond statutorily prescribed hours for minors; "special risk" exception to going and coming rule applicable as employer subjected minor to risk of automobile accident due to exhaustion. Johnson v. Stratlaw, Inc. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 1156, 1162-1164, 274 Cal. Rptr. 363

Death action against employer by nondependent heirs of deceased employee as barred by exclusive remedy provisions of workers' compensation law (Lab. Code §§ 3601, 3602); legislative intention in its 1982 amendment of Lab. Code § 3600 and its division of former Lab. Code § 3601 into two sections, one addressed to suits against coemployees [Lab. Code § 3601] and other to actions against employers [Lab. Code § 3602] as intended to accommodate changes in dual capacity doctrine and include new exception for power press accidents and not to overthrow long established principles of law and precedent by permitting actions at law by nondependent heirs, notwithstanding fact that Lab. Code § 3602 makes workers' compensation sole and exclusive remedy of employee or his or her "dependents" against employer. Hisel v. County of Los Angeles (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 969, 972-979, 238 Cal. Rptr. 678 (tracing legislative and case history of relevant code provisions)

Action by widow and minor children of employee of company under contract with United States Army who was killed clearing unexploded ordinance and other debris from former hand grenade range for damages for wrongful death, ultrahazardous substance and activity, and fraud as barred by exclusive remedy provisions of Lab. Code §§ 3600, 3601, and 4553 for work-related injuries and death when harm complained of was not aggravation of work-related injury but injury itself and no facts were adduced indicating that employer intended that employee be injured; moreover, there is no exception to the exclusivity provisions based on "substantial certainty" of harm from employer's misconduct. Stalnaker v. Boeing Co. (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 1291, 1296, 1298-1301, 231 Cal. Rptr. 323

Parent of deceased employee as barred from bringing wrongful death action by Lab. Code §§ 3600 and 3601, even though parent is nondependent and therefore not entitled to recover under workers' compensation law. Seide v. Bethlehem Steel Corp. (1985) 169 Cal. App. 3d 985, 990-991, 215 Cal. Rptr. 629

Workers' compensation as exclusive remedy barring action for wrongful death of employee brought by nondependent heirs and personal representatives of deceased employee. Soil Engineering Construction, Inc. v. Superior Court (1982) 136 Cal. App. 3d 329, 333, 186 Cal. Rptr. 209

[v] Wrongful Discharge

Exclusive remedy provisions of workers' compensation system as not barring court action for tortious discharge in violation of public policy. Gantt v. Sentry Insurance (1992) 1 Cal. 4th 1083, 1101, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 874, 824 P.2d 680 ; City of Moorpark v. Superior Court (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1143, 1155, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 445, 959 P.2d 752

Employee allegedly terminated for questioning employer about illegal payroll deduction stated cause of action for wrongful discharge in violation of public policy based on fundamental and substantial public policy, embodied in various Labor Code provisions and Code Civ. Proc. § 487.020, protecting employee's right to receive his or her wages. Phillips v. Gemini Moving Specialists (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 563, 571-574, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 29

Trial court erred in entering summary judgment against plaintiff on his cause of action for wrongful termination in violation of public policy, when evidence created triable issue of fact as to whether plaintiff was constructively terminated from his employment as result of harassment in violation of fundamental public policy against sexual orientation discrimination. Kovatch v. California Casualty Management Co., Inc. (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 1256, 1275, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 217

Employee had a claim under the California Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA) when he alleged he was terminated due to a non-industrial bone defect, and not because an industrial injury rendered him unfit to work. Jimeno v. Mobil Oil Corp. (9th Cir. 1995) 66 F.3d 1514, 1535

"Litigation specialist" for insurance company as failing to state cause of action for wrongful termination in violation of public policy when he alleged that he was terminated for refusing to artificially inflate case reserves, a practice which he alleged violated Proposition 103; neither Proposition 103 nor any other statute as restricting amount of case reserves an insurer must set aside. Sequoia Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 1472, 1480-1481, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 888

Employee as failing to state cause of action for wrongful termination in violation of public policy when she was terminated for requesting six-month medical leave and public policy allegedly violated was statutory requirement that employer maintain safe and healthful workplace (Lab. Code §§ 6401, 6403); employee's contention that statutes cited by employee support public policy of encouraging proper medical care as rejected by court. Davaris v. Cubaleski (1993) 12 Cal. App. 4th 1583, 1588-1589, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 330

Workers' compensation law as not preempting employee's cause of action against former employer for wrongful termination of employment in violation of the California Fair Employment and Housing Act (Gov. Code § 12900 et seq.), when employee alleged he was discharged in retaliation for his efforts to prevent a subordinate from being sexually harassed. Flait v. North American Watch Corp. (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 467, 475-478, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 522

Generalized statements by supervisor to employee concerning supervisor's intent to assist employee in finding replacement employment as not sufficient to take case out of ambit of workers' compensation because to hold otherwise would exempt all cases of physical or emotional injury resulting from termination from workers' compensation system simply by claiming that employer led employee to believe he or she would not be fired. Kacludis v. GTE Sprint Communications Corp. (N.D. Cal. 1992) 806 F. Supp. 866, 871

Employee's cause of action against employer for tortious discharge against public policy, when employee was allegedly terminated in retaliation for testifying truthfully in official investigation of coworker's sexual harassment claim, as not barred by exclusive remedy provisions of compensation law, because employer's alleged misconduct could not be considered a normal part of the employment relationship or a risk reasonably encompassed within the compensation bargain. Gantt v. Sentry Insurance (1992) 1 Cal. 4th 1083, 1100-1101, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 874, 824 P.2d 680

Termination of employment, and events leading up to termination, as "normal part of the employment relationship" for purposes of the exclusive remedy doctrine; thus, civil action to recover damages for emotional injuries sustained as result of termination of employment, or events leading up to termination, as barred by exclusive remedy doctrine unless the injury is the result of conduct that does not "reasonably [come] within the compensation bargain." Shoemaker v. Myers (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 1, 17-20, 276 Cal. Rptr. 303, 801 P.2d 1054 (holding that violation of former Gov. Code § 19683 (protecting governmental "whistleblowers" from discipline and discharge and expressly allowing civil damages action for such violations) is outside scope of compensation bargain and constitutes statutory exception to workers' compensation exclusive remedy provisions)

Settlement of workers' compensation claim for psychic injuries producing continuing disability for which former employee agreed to release and forever discharge employer from all claims and causes of action known or that might thereafter develop as result of injury as not barring former employee's claim that employer breached covenant of good faith and fair dealing by unfairly and in bad faith depriving employee of right to receive benefits of employment by discharging her; under California doctrine of primary rights, right protected by workers' compensation law as right not to be physically or emotionally injured on the job, whereas right protected by covenant of good faith is right not to be unfairly deprived of benefits of employment; release of claims in workers' compensation settlement as not eliminating right to pursue other remedies for invasion of other interests in other forums, absent a specific provision to that effect. Ortiz v. Bank of America Nat. Trust and Sav. Ass'n (9th Cir. 1988) 852 F.2d 383, 388

[35] Federal Law

Supremacy clause of U.S. Const., art. VI, as not barring state from enforcing its workers' compensation law against private operator of federally owned nuclear production facility under contract to Department of Energy; such application of state law as authorized by 40 U.S.C. § 290 [now 40 U.S.C. § 3172]. Goodyear Atomic Corp. v. Miller (1988) 486 U.S. 174, 176, 182, 182 n.4, 108 S. Ct. 1704, 100 L. Ed. 2d 158 (Ohio law providing for increased workers' compensation award for injuries resulting from employer's violation of state safety regulation)

[36] Federal-State Jurisdiction

California Lab. Code § 3700, which requires employers to maintain workers' compensation coverage, is not preempted by ERISA, the National Labor Relations Act, the Federal Arbitration Act, or the Labor Management Relations Act. Contract Services Network, Inc. v. Aubry (9th Cir. 1995) 62 F.3d 294, 297

California's insistence on a separately administered workers' compensation plan (Lab. Code § 3700) as not relating to ERISA covered plan but rather to plan that is specifically exempt from ERISA regulation and not preempted by ERISA. Barker v. Pick N Pull Auto Dismantlers, Inc. (E.D. Cal. 1993) 819 F. Supp. 889, 894

Exclusive remedy section of Longshore and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act [33 U.S.C. § 905(a)] did not bar shore-based maritime employee's tort action against employer under Lab. Code §§ 3602(a) and 4558, in which employee alleged that his injury was cause by employer's removal of or failure to install guard on power press. Lenane v. Continental Maritime of San Diego, Inc. (1998) 61 Cal. App. 4th 1073, 1089, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 121

Concurrent federal-state jurisdiction over actions for personal injuries occurring in outer continental shelf. Bobbitt v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1983) 143 Cal. App. 3d 845, 848-849, 192 Cal. Rptr. 267

Applicability of maritime law in cases within maritime jurisdiction as exclusive and Industrial Accident Commission (now WCAB) as having no jurisdiction to award compensation in these cases. De Court v. Beckman Instruments, Inc. (1973) 32 Cal. App. 3d 628, 633, 108 Cal. Rptr. 109

[37] Firefighters

Wage premium mandated by federal Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA), 29 U.S.C. § 207(k)(2), was not included as part of firefighter's salary in lieu of disability compensation when firefighter, by virtue of his disability, had not worked number of hours required by FLSA to earn premium. Fenn v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 1292, 1296-1298, 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 878

Fire recruit injured during training was not firefighter within meaning of Lab. Code § 4850 and was excluded from receiving leave of absence benefits under Lab. Code § 4850(b), based on that statute and employer's fire recruit job description. City of Sacramento v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2002) 94 Cal. App. 4th 1304, 1308-1310, 115 Cal. Rptr. 2d 63

Injured paramedic who operated from city fire station, wore firefighter's gear, and had some of same training and duties as firefighters as entitled under Lab. Code § 4850 (city, county, or district firefighters) to leave of absence without loss of salary in lieu of less generous temporary disability benefits, when emergency medical services routinely provided by paramedic were also occasionally performed by firefighters. Charles v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1988) 202 Cal. App. 3d 781, 782-784, 248 Cal. Rptr. 805

[38] Going and Coming Rule; Exceptions

Defendant employer failed to show that there were no triable issues of material fact as to whether its employee was acting within course and scope of his employment at time of automobile accident that injured plaintiffs, when defendant employee had attended three-day, out-of-town business conference, flew back to home airport and retrieved his car from airport parking lot, on his way home drove around studio complex where his office was located without stopping and took his normal route home until he was involved in collision that gave rise to present cause of action, so that employee's attendance at business conference may be considered special errand/special mission, and that, when employee intended to drive home from this errand/mission, errand/mission was not concluded simply because employee drove his regular commute route. Jeewarat v. Warner Brothers Entertainment, Inc. (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 427, 431, 436-439, 98 Cal. Rptr. 3d 837

Employee who, upon leaving her mother's home where she had gone to visit, was injured while driving 136 miles to keep medical appointment for treatment of her industrial injuries, did not suffer new compensable injuries because those injuries were sustained outside reasonable geographic area of her employer's risk for incurring compensability liability for such injuries. Esquivel v. W.C.A.B. (2009) 178 Cal. App. 4th 330, 333-334, 344-345, 100 Cal. Rptr. 3d 380

Employee's injury held not industrial since accident occurred after business portion of trip was complete and while employee and his wife were engaged in non-industrial sightseeing in Italy, and with no continuing or resumed business purpose employee was neither commercial traveler nor on special mission for employer at time of accident. Fleetwood Enterprises, Inc. v. W.C.A.B. (Moody) (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 1316, 1323-1331, 37 Cal. Rptr. 3d 587

"Commercial traveler rule" of workers' compensation law could not be incorporated into respondeat superior doctrine of civil tort law, so that plaintiff in civil tort action could not join alleged tortfeasor's employer as defendant when alleged tort occurred while employee was engaged in activity not occurring within scope of his employment, as would be required for invocation of respondeat superior doctrine, even though employee was commercial traveler within workers' compensation law at time of allegedly committing alleged tort. Sunderland v. Lockheed Martin Aeronautical Systems Support Co. (2005) 130 Cal. App. 4th 1, 10-12, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 665

In civil tort action, defendant's employee held not to have been acting within scope of her employment when she hit plaintiff and his dog with her car on her way into defendant's parking lot, when court found that "premises line" rule, as used in workers' compensation law, did not apply in civil tort cases involving going-and-coming rule for purposes of respondeat superior, that "scope of employment" for purposes of respondeat superior was more restrictive than "arising out of and in course of employment" for workers' compensation, and that premises line rule, developed in context of policies behind workers' compensation, did not fit policy justification for making employers vicariously liable for their employee's torts. Hartline v. Kaiser Foundation Hospitals (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 458, 465-470, 33 Cal. Rptr. 3d 713

Police officer injured on his day off while traveling from home to courthouse where he was to testify under subpoena about police matters was barredfrom workers' compensation benefits by "going and coming rule," and special mission exception did not apply, since testifying was not extraordinary in relation to officer's routine duties. City of San Diego v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 1385, 1388-1389, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 510

Special risk exception to going and coming rule was not applicable to employee injured on his way to work since driving on street near employer's facility did not subject employee to distinct or quantitatively greater risk than members of general public would be subjected to while driving on same street. GE Engine Maintenance v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1998) 69 Cal. App. 4th 1528, 1533, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 199

Wrongful death action by parents of minor employee against employer as barred by exclusive remedy doctrine when minor died in automobile accident on way home from work after being required to work beyond statutorily prescribed hours for minors; "special risk" exception to going and coming rule applicable as employer subjected minor to risk of automobile accident due to exhaustion. Johnson v. Stratlaw, Inc. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 1156, 1162-1164, 274 Cal. Rptr. 363

When coemployee is injured off employer's premises under circumstances in which workers' compensation would have been barred by going and coming rule but resulted from "special risk" causally related to employment and was sustained within field of that risk, injured coemployee's claim as coming within exclusive remedy provisions of workers' compensation law and tort action by coemployee against employer as barred. Childers v. Shasta Livestock Auction Yard, Inc. (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 792, 798, 800-816, 235 Cal. Rptr. 641

Going and coming rule, broadly stated, as prohibiting compensation for injuries received while traveling to and from work; rule as subject to numerous exceptions. *Parks v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. Special errand or special mission exception to going and coming rule. Southern California Rapid Transit Dist., Inc. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 158, 166-167, 151 Cal. Rptr. 666, 588 P.2d 806 ; Guest v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 670, 672-674, 87 Cal. Rptr. 193, 470 P.2d 1 ; Felix v. Asai (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 926, 931, 237 Cal. Rptr. 718 (involving injury to third party rather than injury to employee); Childers v. Shasta Livestock Auction Yard, Inc. (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 792, 802, 235 Cal. Rptr. 641 ; Green v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1419, 1422-1425, 232 Cal. Rptr. 465 ; Perez v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 60, 63-64, 199 Cal. Rptr. 280

No exception to going and coming rule applied to on-call employee having status as a peace officer, who carried a gun and pager but was not wearinga uniform when he left house to go to work and was injured in a slip and fall before entering car furnished by employer. State Lottery Com. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 311, 318, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 745

Rule that compensation for injuries sustained during uncompensated meal breaks away from employer's premises is denied under aegis of "going and coming" rule, on ground employer-employee relationship is suspended during that period because employer does not pay for employee's services and employee provides no benefits in return, as inapplicable when employee, whether salaried or paid at hourly rate, is compensated during lunch break; by such arrangement, employer as impliedly agreeing that service will continue during such period and worker as entitled to compensation benefits for any injuries sustained during lunch break. McFadden v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 279, 281-283, 249 Cal. Rptr. 778

Special mission exception to going and coming rule as applicable when employee is requested to perform unusual service or usual service at an odd hour; trip as becoming "special" because bother and effort of trip itself is important part of what employee is being compensated for. Luna v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 77, 82, 244 Cal. Rptr. 596

Uniformed officer on-call exception to going and coming rule as existing when peace officer is injured while engaged in off-duty conduct reasonably directed toward fulfillment of employer's requirements and performed for benefit and advantage of employer; decisions upholding awards on this theory as invariably involving employers who expect to receive benefit of their employees' service during the commute; factors to be considered as including whether (1) express policy or routine practice exists, (2) failure to render services may result in disciplinary measures, (3) employee was in uniform at time of incident, and (4) employer provides on-site accommodation for changing or storing clothing and equipment. Luna v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 77, 83-84, 244 Cal. Rptr. 596

Exception to going and coming rule when employee consumes alcohol in scope of his or her employment, which consumption creates a risk of danger, and that risk was proximate cause of accident and of plaintiff's injuries, even though accident occurred while employee was going home from work. Childers v. Shasta Livestock Auction Yard, Inc. (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 792, 802-803, 235 Cal. Rptr. 641

Commercial traveler exception to going and coming rule. Hartford Acc. & Indem. Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1982) 132 Cal. App. 3d 796, 805, 183 Cal. Rptr. 440

[39] Independent Contractors

In wrongful death action brought by deceased worker's parents, California Supreme Court held that homeowners neither had nor breached any statutory duty of care owed to deceased worker under Penal Code § 385(b), which provides that "[a]ny person who either personally or through an employee or agent, or as an employee or agent of another, operates ... or moves any tools ... [or] equipment ... within six feet of a high voltage overhead conductor is guilty of a misdemeanor," since worker for unlicensed contractor, who, through his own conduct, breached duty of care embodied in Penal Code § 385(b) and was killed while trimming trees on defendant homeowners' property, was not one of class of persons for whose protection statute was adopted. Ramirez v. Nelson (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 908, 917-920, 80 Cal. Rptr. 3d 728, 188 P.3d 659

Lab. Code § 6304.5, as amended effective January 1, 2000, allows plaintiffs to use Cal-OSHA provisions to show duty or standard of care to same extent as any other regulation or statute, whether defendant is plaintiff's employer or third party. Elsner v. Uveges (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 915, 927-928, 935-936, 22 Cal. Rptr. 3d 530, 102 P.3d 915

Court of appeal affirmed the trial court's judgment that plaintiffs, representatives of class of parcel and message drivers/deliverers, were independent contractors, not defendant's employees, when court of appeal held that trial court's jury instructions properly placed burden on defendant of rebutting the Lab. Code § 3357 presumption that plaintiffs were defendant's employees and properly instructed jury as to factors to consider in resolving whether plaintiffs were independent contractors. Cristler v. Express Messenger Systems (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 72, 79-90, 89 Cal. Rptr. 3d 34

Lab. Code § 2750.5, which creates rebuttable presumption that unlicensed person who performs work requiring license is employee, not independent contractor, was irrelevant because statute's presumption of employee status may be rebutted only as to persons who hold valid contractor's license, which plaintiff did not at time of his injury, and substantial evidence supported trial court's finding that plaintiff was estopped to assert that he was employee because he had misrepresented himself to defendants as licensed contractor. Chin v. Namvar (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 994, 1006-1009, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 294

Substantial evidence supported determination by Department of Industrial Relations that drivers for plaintiff courier service were functioning as employees rather than as true independent contractors, and court of appeal found that question of hiree's status must be considered in light of history and remedial and social purposes of Workers' Compensation Act, and court of appeal followed S.G. Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Department of Industrial Relations [(1989) 48 Cal. 3d 341, 256 Cal. Rptr. 543, 769 P.2d 399] , in finding that functions performed by drivers did not require high degree of skill, that these functions constituted integral heart of plaintiff's courier service business, that, by obtaining clients in need of this service and providing workers to conduct it, plaintiff retained all "necessary" control over operation as a whole, and that these circumstances were enough to find employment relationship for purposes of Workers' Compensation Act, even in absence of plaintiff's exercise of control over details of work and with plaintiff being more concerned with results of work than with means of its accomplishment. JKH Enterprises, Inc. v. Department of Industrial Relations (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 1046, 1059-1066, 48 Cal. Rptr. 3d 563

Exemption from contractor's license requirement contained in Bus. & Prof. Code § 7049 for construction or maintenance work incidental to "clearingor other work upon the land in rural districts for fire prevention purposes" meant that trial court erred in ruling that defendant was employee as matter of law pursuant to Lab. Code § 2750.5. Moehring v. Thomas (2005) 126 Cal. App. 4th 1515, 1520-1525, 25 Cal. Rptr. 3d 118

Licensed contractor who had filed required statement that he had no employees, thereby exempting himself from coverage pursuant to workers' compensation laws, and who subsequently hired employee who was then injured in course of employment, did not, ipso facto, suffer suspension of his contractor's license pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 7125.2(a), but instead, by virtue of Bus. & Prof. Code § 7125.2(a), retained license because license board was required to "notify any licensee who fails to maintain workers' compensation that his or her license shall be automatically suspended 30 days from the date of the notice" and must "provide the licensee with an additional notice that informs the licensee of the suspension date, the cause for suspension, and reinstatement procedures," and these notices had not been sent to contractor. Smith v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 117, 124-134, 116 Cal. Rptr. 2d 728

Exclusive remedy doctrine barred plaintiff's civil claims against property owner, when plaintiff was working for contractor hired by property owner who was unlicensed on date of plaintiff's injury and was, therefore, treated as employee of property owner under Lab. Code § 2750.5; fact that contractor was licensed at time he contracted with property owner was not dispositive of plaintiff's employment status when contractor was unlicensed on date of injury. Zellers v. Playa Pacifica, Ltd. (1998) 61 Cal. App. 4th 129, 134-135, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 919

Truck drivers hired by trucking broker are independent contractors as matter of law when truckers (1) had complete control over working conditions, (2) could terminate contracts or be terminated at will, (3) were engaged in distinct occupation and had own trade association, (4) could work for other businesses, (5) made capital investments in providing own trucks, (6) were compensated by job and could refuse any assignment without retribution, and (7) expressly and voluntarily agreed to independent contractor status. State Compensation Insurance Fund v. Brown (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 188, 203, 38 Cal. Rptr. 2d 98

"Peculiar risk" doctrine, which imposes liability on a principal for harm to "others" caused by the negligence of an independent contractor, including the contractor's employees, as not providing a basis for holding a principal liable for injuries suffered by the contractor himself or herself. Torres v. Reardon (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 831, 839-841, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 52

Question of whether a person who is engaged to perform services for another is an employee or an independent contractor as ordinarily a question of fact, but if onlyone inference may be drawn from all of the facts, that question as one of law. Torres v. Reardon (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 831, 838, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 52

Self-employed gardener as independent contractor, as a matter of law, when he was engaged to produce a result and the means by which the result was to be produced were not discussed and were not part of any agreement, the work was performed in the course of the gardener's independently established business in which he customarily engaged, he supplied the equipment, he was not hired by the day or hour but by the job, the work wasnot ordinarily done in the course of the clients' business, the gardener had a substantial investment in his business, and he had employees who assisted him. Torres v. Reardon (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 831, 837-838, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 52

Injured agricultural worker as not employed solely by uninsured crew supervisor who had agreed with grower to prune and harvest growers' almond trees; crew supervisor as not independent contractor due to grower's power of control over performance of work, and injured worker as therefore employee of grower for purposes of workers' compensation. Rinaldi v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1991) 227 Cal. App. 3d 756, 760-765, 278 Cal. Rptr. 105

Lab. Code § 2750.5, creating rebuttable presumption that worker performing services for which contractor's license is required is employee and not independent contractor, as applying to workers' compensation cases, and, regardless of factors contained in Lab. Code § 2750.5(a)-(c), valid contractor's license as necessary condition of independent contractor status; hence, licensed contractor that employed unlicensed subcontractor, who falsely represented to contractor that he had contractor's license, as liable as matter of law to employee of unlicensed subcontractor for workers' compensation benefits for injuries sustained on job, and employee as not estopped to deny subcontractor's independent contractor status. Nick Hagopian Drywall v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 767, 770-773, 251 Cal. Rptr. 455

Licensed general contractor who contracted with homeowners to remodel their home as liable under Lab. Code § 2750.5 for workers' compensation paid by Uninsured Employers Fund [now called the Uninsured Employers Benefits Trust Fund] to injured employee of uninsured subcontractor who had subcontracted to finish job; even if subcontractor, who falsely represented to contractor that he was licensed, was estopped to deny that he was unlicensed and hence able to claim workers' compensation benefits against licensed contractor, subcontractor's employee, who made no misrepresentations and held no license, as not in privity with subcontractor and hence as not estopped to claim workers' compensation benefits for job-related injury against licensed but uninsured contractor. Rinaldi v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 217, 221-227, 244 Cal. Rptr. 637

Uninsured Employers Fund [now called the Uninsured Employers Benefits Trust Fund] as not estopped to claim reimbursement from licensed but uninsured contractor of sums paid under compromise and release to injured employee of unlicensed and uninsured subcontractor who misrepresented his licensed status to contractor. Rinaldi v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 217, 224-227, 244 Cal. Rptr. 637

Illegally unlicensed subcontractor hired as independent contractor to do roofing on construction project as employee of general contractor as matter of law under Lab. Code § 2750.5; subcontractor's employee as employee of general contractor as well and barred by exclusive remedy provisions of workers' compensation law from suing general contractor in tort for injuries sustained on project. Blew v. Horner (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1380, 1383-1390, 232 Cal. Rptr. 660

Workers' compensation liability for employees of unlicensed subcontractor as imposed on general contractor as matter of law, whereas workers' compensation liability of general contractor for employees of licensed subcontractorwho is unlawfully uninsured for workers' compensation as question of fact. Blew v. Horner (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1380, 1390 n.5, 232 Cal. Rptr. 660

Right to control as dominant criterion and most significant test in determining whether worker is employee or independent contractor. Muffett v. Royster (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 289, 302, 195 Cal. Rptr. 73

Tests for determining whether alleged third-party tortfeasor is in fact employee's employer and hence insulated from employee's action for damages by workers' compensation laws as being same in workers' compensation cases as in factors to be considered. Gigax v. Ralston Purina Co. (1982) 136 Cal. App. 3d 591, 599-601, 186 Cal. Rptr. 395

[40] Injuries

Substantial evidence supported WCAB's decision that employee was not injured AOE/COE when, on his way to work as correctional officer for California Department of Corrections, employee stopped to render aid at accident scene and was injured when oncoming car struck truck involved in original accident and truck struck employee, when court of appeal found that employee had no peace officer status outside grounds of prison where he worked, that employee was not on duty at time of injury, and that there was no evidence that employee was paid for stopping to help at accident scene. Pettigrew v. W.C.A.B. (2006) 143 Cal. App. 4th 397, 405-408, 48 Cal. Rptr. 3d 922

Employee who suffers from a psychoneurotic injury arising out of his or her employment as entitled to receive compensation benefits. Save Mart Stores v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 720, 724, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 597

Under workers' compensation law, compensation as awardable for any injury or disease arising out of and in course of employment. Kyles v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 614, 619, 240 Cal. Rptr. 886

Compensable injuries under workers' compensation law as generally falling into one of four categories: (1) specific injuries incurred as result of one incident or exposure in employment, effects of which are realized or realizable; (2) industrial injuries suffered as result of specific incident or exposure that have latent effects; (3) continuous cumulative traumatic injuries suffered as result of number of minor strains over period of time; and (4) cumulative injuries, such as silicosis, resulting from continuous exposure to harmful substance. State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Workmen's Comp. App. Bd. (1969) 1 Cal. App. 3d 812, 817, 82 Cal. Rptr. 102

[41] Insurance Carriers

Insurer's alleged failure to properly investigate third-party responsibility for accident suffered by insured's employee, resulting in allegedly unreasonably low settlement of insurer's claim against third party, causing increase in insured's workers' compensation insurance premiums, did not give rise to cause of action for tortious breach of covenant of good faith and fair dealing or cause of action for breach of contract. Tilbury Constructors, Inc. v. State Comp. Ins. Fund (2006) 137 Cal. App. 4th 466, 474-482, 40 Cal. Rptr. 3d 392

Workers' compensation insurer's civil action against illegally uninsured employer for reimbursement of award of benefits to employee for cumulative trauma waspermitted by Lab. Code § 5500.5(a) as exception to exclusive remedy rule, and jurisdiction of action was not limited to Appeals Board. Graphics Arts Mutual Ins. Co. v. Time Travel Internat., Inc (2005) 126 Cal. App. 4th 405, 413-415

Injured worker's civil action against his employer's worker's compensation insurer for malicious prosecution of insurance fraud criminal complaint against worker is not barred by exclusive remedy rule of workers' compensation law. Mosby v. Liberty Mutual Insurance Co. (2003) 110 Cal. App. 4th 995, 999, 1004-1006, 2 Cal. Rptr. 3d 286

Workers' compensation insurer for employee leasing company held to have engaged in breach of contract, insurance bad faith, and fraud when it denied coverage to injured employee working for contractor to whom leasing company had leased employees. Diamond Woodworks, Inc. v. Argonaut Insurance Co. (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 1020, 1030-1049, 135 Cal. Rptr. 2d 736

Insurer's duty of good faith and fair dealing with insured includes setting reserves at reasonable expectation of claim's value. Lance Camper Mfg. Corp. v. Republic Indemnity Co. (2001) 90 Cal. App. 4th 1151, 1156-1159, 109 Cal. Rptr. 2d 515

Employer was not required to exhaust administrative remedies before bringing a civil action for breach of contract and bad faith challenging the claims handling practices of its workers' compensation insurer. Lance Camper Manufacturing Corp. v. Republic Indemnity Co. of America (1996) 44 Cal. App. 4th 194, 204, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 622

[42] Insurance Fraud

Civil action for violation of Ins. Code § 1871.7(b) arising from fraudulent acts made unlawful by Pen. Code § 550(a)(10) did not violate exclusive remedy provision of workers' compensation law, and preponderance of evidence was appropriate standard of proof for liability under Ins. Code § 1871.7. People v. Thompson (2006) 136 Cal. App. 4th 24, 29-31, 37-38, 38 Cal. Rptr. 3d 677

Court of appeal, affirming trial court's order that struck employer's complaint that alleged employee's filing of fraudulent workers' compensation claim, held that employer failed to demonstrate probability that it would prevail on the merits of its fraud claim because the employer could not establish either of two elements of a cause of action for fraud, justifiable reliance or resulting damages, and court of appeal found that permitting employer to bring civil action for fraud against employee while workers' compensation proceeding was pending could have chilling effect on employee's exercise of right to file workers' compensation claim. Leegin Creative Leather Products, Inc. v. Diaz (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 1517, 1523-1527, 33 Cal. Rptr. 3d 139

Worker convicted of fraudulent misrepresentation in acquisition of medically required special footwear, and ordered by court to make restitution, was barred from receiving only future reimbursement for further purchases of shoes, and when worker failed to make restitution as ordered, credit sought by defrauded insurer against other medical treatment was held impermissible bar of benefits not directly emanating from the fraud. Farmers Insurance Group v. W.C.A.B. (Sanchez) (2002) 104 Cal. App. 4th 684, 690-691, 128 Cal. Rptr. 2d 353

Employee's false statements and misrepresentations made on deposition are sufficient to support a conviction pursuant to Ins. Code § 1871.4(a)(1). People v. Post (2001) 94 Cal. App. 4th 467, 475-476, 114 Cal. Rptr. 2d 356

Workers' compensation insurer was entitled to restitution for losses resulting from employee's fraudulent claim, when employee pled no contest to fraud under Lab. Code § 3207 and Ins. Code § 1871.4(a)(1) and court found insurer was a direct crime victim under Pen. Code § 1202.4. People v. O'Casey (2001) 88 Cal. App. 4th 967, 973, 106 Cal. Rptr. 2d 263

Civil courts have jurisdiction to order restitution in cases of workers' compensation insurance fraud under Ins. Code § 1871.4. People v. Amin (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 58, 64, 101 Cal. Rptr. 2d 756

Employee's intentional concealment of prior injuries for purposes of obtaining workers' compensation benefits was "material" under Ins. Code § 1871.4(a) despite his claim that prior injuries caused no residual disability, when failure to disclose prior injuries misled QMEs into attributing employee's knee condition to industrial causes and effectively precluded employer from raising apportionment as a defense. People v. Gillard (1997) 57 Cal. App. 4th 136, 153, 66 Cal. Rptr. 2d 790

[43] Joint Ventures and Partnerships

No joint enterprise existed between injured employee's employer and various other companies, when other companies had no control over production or sale of employer's goods, did not share profits with employer, and had no ownership interest in employer's assets. Orosco v. Sun-Diamond Corp. (1997) 51 Cal. App. 4th 1659, 1670, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 179

Although employee of joint venture or partnership is employee of each joint venturer or partner, employee of one joint venturer or partner as not, as matter of law, also employee of joint venture or partnership itself or other joint venturers or partners and therefore not limited to his or her workers' compensation remedy in seeking recovery of damages from other joint venturers or partners for injuries sustained on work of joint venture or partnership as result of their negligence. Rogness v. English Moss Joint Venturers (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 190, 191, 193-194, 239 Cal. Rptr. 387

[44] Judicial Review

[a] Effect of Appeals Board Decisions on Appellate Courts

Although WCAB cases denied writ of review by the Court of Appeal are not binding authority on the appellate courts, they are citable authority as to the holding of the WCAB. Ralph's Grocery Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 820, 827, n.7, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 197

Decision of Workers' Compensation Appeals Board reported in California Workers' Compensation Reporter as properly citable authority, especially as indication of contemporaneous interpretation and application of workers' compensation laws. Griffith v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 1260, 1264 n.2, 257 Cal. Rptr. 813

Decisions of Workers' Compensation Appeals Board as not binding on appellate courts, and denial of review by appellate court of board decisions as not necessarily indicating court's agreement with board's decision on issues presented. Leeth v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 1550, 1556 n.5, 231 Cal. Rptr. 468

[b] WCAB Orders

WCAB finding on reconsideration that employee was not entitled to Lab. Code § 5402 presumption of compensability was a "final order" subject to a petition for writ of review because finding conclusively determined a substantial issue central to employee's entitlement to benefits, even though matter was remanded for new trial on all issues. Maranian v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2000) 81 Cal. App. 4th 1068, 1078-1081, 97 Cal. Rptr. 2d 418

Order of Workers' Compensation Appeals Board, following board's granting reconsideration of workers' compensation judge's allowance to employer of credit against its compensation liability for injured employee's recovery in settlement of related medical malpractice action, in which board determined that Civ. Code § 3333.1, abolishing collateral source rule in medical malpractice cases, does not preclude employer from asserting such a credit and in which board remanded case to workers' compensation judge for determination of extent of employer's credit rights, as threshhold determination and as appealable even though case was not final. Graham v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1989) 210 Cal. App. 3d 499, 503, 258 Cal. Rptr. 376

Whether court must entertain review of interim order of appeals board as essentially in hands of board; if board permits reconsideration under Lab. Code § 5900, its subsequent decision is "final" for purposes of appellate review. Kosowski v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 632, 636 n.2, 216 Cal. Rptr. 280

[c] Petitions for Writ of Review

Timely petition for writ of review filed in incorrect appellate district and transferred to proper district after time for filing had lapsed as not requiring dismissal and transferee court as retaining jurisdiction. National Kinney v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1980) 113 Cal. App. 3d 203, 206-209, 169 Cal. Rptr. 801

[d] Prerequisite to Seeking Appellate Review

Although petition for reconsideration is proper when appeals board, in its initial decision on reconsideration, reverses WCJ's decision, such petition is not a prerequisite to seeking writ of review. Lamb v. Workmen's Comp. Appeals Bd. (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 274, 279, fn. 5, 113 Cal. Rptr. 162, 520 P.2d 978

[e] Scope of Review

[i] In General

Appellate court's authority to consider petition for writ of review of decision of WCAB as limited to determining whether evidence, viewed in light of entire record, supports decision; appellate court as not entitled to reweigh evidence or to decide disputed questions of fact; appellate court as not bound to accept WCAB's factual findings if determined to be unreasonable, illogical, improbable, or inequitable when viewed in light of overall statutory scheme; appellate court as entitled to decide questions of statutory interpretation. Western Growers Ins. Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 227, 233, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 26

Contemporaneous administrative construction of statute by Workers' Compensation Appeals Board, as administrative agency charged with its enforcement and interpretation, while not necessarily controlling, as being of great weight; courts as not departing from such construction unless it is clearly erroneous. Griffith v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 1260, 1264, 257 Cal. Rptr. 813

Reviewing court as not bound by decision of Workers' Compensation Appeals Board dealing only with questions of law. Wilson v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 902, 904-905, 239 Cal. Rptr. 719

In workers' compensation proceedings, refusal to allow presentation of relevant evidence as appropriate basis for annulling decision of appeals board. Truesdale v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 608, 612 n.1, 235 Cal. Rptr. 754

In workers' compensation proceeding in which facts would support but one conclusion, issue as a legal one and contrary finding by appeals board as not sustainable. Truesdale v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 608, 613, 235 Cal. Rptr. 754

WCJ's finding adopted by WCAB that applicant's claim for workers' compensation was not barred by going and coming rule as not limiting court's review of decision when finding constitutes conclusion of law based on application of law to substantially undisputed facts. Aetna Casualty & Surety Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 922, 928, 232 Cal. Rptr. 257

Under Lab. Code § 5313 requiring appeals board or referee (now workers' compensation judge) to make and file all findings of fact within 30 days after case submitted, award that fails to make finding on material fact as unable to stand. Industrial Indemnity Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1983) 145 Cal. App. 3d 480, 485, 193 Cal. Rptr. 471

When pertinent facts are not in dispute, whether employee sustained injury in scope of employment as presenting question of law, and reviewing court as not bound by conclusionary findings on issue by appeals board. Perez v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 60, 65, 199 Cal. Rptr. 280 ; C.L. Pharris Sand & Gravel, Inc. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1982) 138 Cal. App. 3d 584, 589, 187 Cal. Rptr. 899

Scope of review of appeals board's interpretation of statute as being whether interpretation was clearly erroneous; interpretation as clearly erroneous when contrary to language of statute. City of Anaheim v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1981) 124 Cal. App. 3d 609, 613, 177 Cal. Rptr. 441

Under Lab. Code § 5053, relating to effect of board's findings and conclusions, award as not disturbed if findings are supported by inferences that may fairly be drawn from evidence, even though evidence is susceptible of opposing inferences. Judson Steel Corp. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 658, 664, 150 Cal. Rptr. 250, 586 P.2d 564

[ii] Statement of Evidence and Reasons for Decision

It is mandatory for WCJ to provide summary of trial evidence under Lab. Code § 5313 and 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10566, and failure to submit such summary mandated that matter be returned to WCJ to prepare and submit one. Sharareh v. W.C.A.B. (2007) 156 Cal. App. 4th 189, 192-195, 67 Cal. Rptr. 3d 147

Failure of appeals board to comply with Lab. Code § 5908.5, requiring board in granting or denying reconsideration to state evidence relied on and specify in detail reasons therefor, as requiring that its decision after reconsideration be annulled. Evans v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 753, 754, 68 Cal. Rptr. 825, 441 P.2d 633 ; see Fairview State Hospital v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1982) 138 Cal. App. 3d 595, 599-600, 188 Cal. Rptr. 51 ; City of Santa Ana v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1982) 128 Cal. App. 3d 212, 219, 180 Cal. Rptr. 125 ; Zozaya v. Workmen's Comp. Appeals Bd. (1972) 27 Cal. App. 3d 464, 470-472, 103 Cal. Rptr. 793 ; Solomon v. Workmen's Comp. Appeals Bd. (1972) 24 Cal. App. 3d 282, 286-287, 100 Cal. Rptr. 899

Lab. Code § 5908.5, requiring appeals board's decision to state evidence relied on and reasons for decision, as not requiring annulment of order when parties were in no doubt as to issue litigated. Albert Van Luit Wallpaper Co. v. Workmen's Compensation Appeals Bd. (1973) 36 Cal. App. 3d 88, 91-92, 111 Cal. Rptr. 247

[iii] Substantial Evidence

Court review of appeals board's award as confined to determining whether award is supported by substantial evidence. Judson Steel Corp. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 658, 664, 150 Cal. Rptr. 250, 586 P.2d 564 ; Jordan v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1985) 175 Cal. App. 3d 162, 164, 220 Cal. Rptr. 554

Challenged finding of appeals board as required to be upheld if supported by substantial evidence in light of entire record. LeVesque v. Workmen's Comp. App. Bd. (1970) 1 Cal. 3d 627, 637, 83 Cal. Rptr. 208, 463 P.2d 432 ; Ferreira v. Workmen's Comp. Appeals Bd. (1974) 38 Cal. App. 3d 120, 124, 112 Cal. Rptr. 232

Substantial evidence as supporting finding of WCJ and WCAB that employee, who suffered recurrent major depression, suffered single compensable injury; appellate court as bound by finding on review. Western Growers Ins. Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 227, 235, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 26

Appeals board's decision as required to state evidence relied on and specify in detail reasons for decision; substantial evidence to support decision as measured on basis of entire record, rather than by simply isolating evidence that supports board and ignoring other relevant facts of record that rebut or explain that evidence; if evidence relied on and reasons stated for decision do not support it, decision as required to be annulled. Bassett-McGregor v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 1102, 1111, 252 Cal. Rptr. 868

Court as not interfering with appeals board's factual findings if they are supported by substantial evidence or by reasonable inferences drawn from testimony adduced. City of Fresno v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1985) 163 Cal. App. 3d 467, 471, 209 Cal. Rptr. 463

In determining whether order, decision, or award is supported by substantial evidence, court as required to consider weight or persuasiveness of all evidence, not just existence of substantial evidence in favor of respondent. Skip Fordyce, Inc. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1983) 149 Cal. App. 3d 915, 920, 197 Cal. Rptr. 626

Opinion of medical expert as not supported by substantial evidence when it was based on surmise, speculation, or conjecture. Baptist v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1982) 137 Cal. App. 3d 903, 906-908, 187 Cal. Rptr. 270

In reviewing appeals board's decision, court as reviewing entire record before appeals board to determine whether decision is supported by substantial evidence. Greenberg v. Workmen's Comp. Appeals Bd. (1974) 37 Cal. App. 3d 792, 798-799, 112 Cal. Rptr. 626

On review of decision of appeals board after board, on reconsideration, set aside referee's (now workers' compensation judge's) decision and made its own finding based on independent examination of record, decision presented for review is that of board rather than of referee, and board's factual determinations as required to be upheld if there is substantial supporting evidence in record. Erickson v. Workmen's Comp. App. Bd. (1970) 12 Cal. App. 3d 388, 391, 90 Cal. Rptr. 706

[f] Waiver of Issues on Appeal

Failure to raise factual issue before workers' compensation judge or appeals board as precluding its consideration on judicial review. Griffith v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 1260, 1265, 257 Cal. Rptr. 813

[45] Jurisdiction

Workers' compensation insurer's civil action against illegally uninsured employer for reimbursement of award of benefits to employee for cumulative trauma was permitted by Lab. Code § 5500.5(a) as exception to exclusive remedy rule, and jurisdiction of action was not limited to Appeals Board. Graphics Arts Mutual Ins. Co. v. Time Travel Internat., Inc. (2005) 126 Cal. App. 4th 405, 413-415

Superior court had no jurisdiction to review Appeals Board decision when Board jurisdiction was invoked, pursuant to Gov. Code § 21166, for determination as to whether disability of public safety employee, member of Public Employees Retirement System, was industrial. Abraham v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2003) 113 Cal. App. 4th 1082, 1087-1089, 6 Cal. Rptr. 3d 820

WCAB had no jurisdiction under Lab. Code § 5500.5 or otherwise, to resolve contribution dispute between city and county agency members of a joint powers agency, when members' rights and obligations were established pursuant to formal joint powers agreement and concept of contribution did not apply. Victor Valley Transit Authority v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2000) 83 Cal. App. 4th 1068, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 235 .

In controversy over payment of medical treatment, WCAB had jurisdiction to determine whether licensed physician may use medical assistants to perform certain services. PM & R Associates v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2000) 80 Cal. App. 4th 357, 364, 94 Cal. Rptr. 2d 887

WCAB had jurisdiction, pursuant to Lab. Code §§ 3600.5 and 5305, to award workers' compensation benefits to professional baseball player injured out-of-state who signed player's contract for out of state team in California, even though the contract was signed by the team outside of California and, as a condition of the contract, the baseball Commissioner had to approve the contract. Bowen v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 15, 26-27, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 95

WCAB had subject matter jurisdiction to award death benefits to daughter of deceased employee killed in airplane crash while working in Wyoming for Wyoming employer, when deceased employee entered into employment contract in California. Janzen v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1998) 61 Cal. App. 4th 109, 117, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 260

WCAB has jurisdiction to determine whether housing authority's chief of police is employee within the meaning of Lab. Code § 4850. Housing Authority v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1998) 60 Cal. App. 4th 1076, 1082, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 738

WCAB does not have subject matter jurisdiction over federally recognized Indian tribe for purposes of enforcing workers' compensation laws. Middletown Rancheria v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1998) 60 Cal. App. 4th 1340, 1356, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 105

Ohio corporation that paid survivors' benefits under California law to family of an employee who was killed while working in California, was entitled to reimbursement from a third-party tortfeasor even though the survivors claimed workers' compensation benefits only in Ohio and State of Ohio did not allow for reimbursement. Dailey v. Dallas Carriers Corp. (1996) 43 Cal. App. 4th 720, 727, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 48

Defendant-employer must plead facts showing that (1) the injury complained of in the tort action occurred at a time when both the plaintiff-employee and the defendant-employer were subject to the provisions of Lab. Code § 3600(a)(1); (2) at the time of the injury, the employee was performing service growing out of and incidental to his or her employment and was acting within the course of that employment; and (3) the injury was proximately caused by the employment, with or without negligence. Coca-Cola Bottling Co. v. Superior Court (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 1273,

When the complaint affirmatively alleges facts indicating workers' compensation coverage, the defendant-employer may demur to the complaint or move for judgment on the pleadings. Coca-Cola Bottling Co. v. Superior Court (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 1273, 1285, 285 Cal. Rptr. 183

Superior court as having jurisdiction over compensation insurer's declaratory relief action concerning whether it had duty to defend or indemnify employer with respect to employee's injury. Aetna Casualty & Surety Co. v. Aceves (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 544, 551-554, 284 Cal. Rptr. 477

Under Lab. Code § 5300(a), (b), WCAB as having exclusive jurisdiction over disputes regarding employee's right to compensation or liability of employer. Marsh & McLennan, Inc. v. Superior Court (1989) 49 Cal. 3d 1, 5, 259 Cal. Rptr. 733, 774 P.2d 762

WCAB as tribunal of limited jurisdiction with no powers beyond those conferred on it by Cal. Const., art. XIV, § 4, and the provisions of the Labor Code. Morton v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 924, 927-928, 238 Cal. Rptr. 651

Although WCAB has no jurisdiction to make an award of Lab. Code § 4850 benefits (payment of salary in lieu of temporary disability payments to city firefighters among others), WCAB as having jurisdiction under Lab. Code § 4851 to determine whether disability referred to in Lab. Code § 4850 arose out of and in course of employment and, in disputed case, to determine when such disability commenced and ceased and amount of benefits to which employee is entitled during period of such disability. Kosowski v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 632, 637, 216 Cal. Rptr. 280

Employment contract of Nevada resident as formed in Nevada when words accepting employment were uttered from Nevada telephone, not when work orders were picked up from union local in California, and WCAB as having no jurisdiction over worker's compensation claim for cumulative injury sustained at Nevada jobsite.

Ledbetter Erection Corp. v. Workers' Comp. App. Bd. (1984) 156 Cal. App. 3d 1097, 1105-1106, 203 Cal. Rptr. 396

Both WCAB and superior court as having concurrent precedential jurisdiction to determine threshold question of subject matter jurisdiction, namely, whether cause comes within exclusive jurisdiction of WCAB. Yavitch v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1983) 142 Cal. App. 3d 64, 70, 190 Cal. Rptr. 793 ; Jones v. Brown (1970) 13 Cal. App. 3d 513, 520, 89 Cal. Rptr. 651

[46] Liens

Outpatient surgery center lien claimant (or any medical lien claimant) has burden of proving that its charges are reasonable, and outpatient surgery center lien claimant's billing, by itself, does not establish that claimed fee is reasonable, so that, even in absence of rebuttal evidence, lien need not be allowed in full if unreasonable on its face. Tapia v. Skill Master Staffing (2008) 73 Cal. Comp. Cases 1338, 1342-1346 (Appeals Board en banc opinion)

Appeals Board's awards to lien claimants, outpatient medical treatment centers, were not supported by substantial evidence, when court of appeal found that lien claimants, in order to establish their right to reimbursement, bore initial burden of proving they were properly licensed or accredited, and that they had not carried this burden in present case. Zenith Ins. Co. v. W.C.A.B. (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 373, 376-377, 41 Cal. Rptr. 3d 380

Recovery from employer or insurer on Medi-Cal lien filed by Department of Human Services is not limited to amount equal to one-half of employee's net recovery. Boehm & Associates v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2003) 108 Cal. App. 4th 137, 150152, 133 Cal. Rptr. 2d 396

Provisions of Lab. Code § 4661.5 applied to lien claimant's Lab. Code § 4903.1 lien for reimbursement of disability payments made to injured employee, entitling lien claimant to reimbursement at the temporary disability rate applicable at the time payments were made rather than at the rate in effect during the actual period of temporary disability. Midas Recovery Services, Inc. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1997) 55 Cal. App. 4th 1321, 1325, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 574

Medical lien claimants were not denied due process by reliance of WCJ and WCAB on reports filed by AME and a specialist appointed by the employer when lien claimants participated fully in lien hearing and were served with the AME's and the specialist's reports before the hearing; WCAB properly disallowed claim by a rehabilitation center for services of an occupational therapy assistant, because therapy assistant not licensed to provide occupational therapy unless it was under direct supervision of a licensed therapist or physician; WCAB properly rejected rehabilitation center's lien claim because center failed to file a fictitious business name statement as required by Bus. & Prof. Code § 17918. Hand Rehabilitation Center v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1995) 34 Cal. App. 4th 1204, 1212-1215, 40 Cal. Rptr. 2d 734

Medical lien claimant as denied due process and right to fair trial when it was not served with defense medical reports prior to trial and denied right to cross-examine and make objections at trial; denial of right to fair trial to lien claimant as reversible per se; medical lien claimant has right to participate in workers' compensation hearing, must be served with noticeof all hearings, and must be informed of scope and purpose of any hearing that may affect its rights or liabilities. Beverly Hills Multispecialty Group, Inc. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 789, 803, 805-806, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 293

WCAB as permitted to allow lien claim for medical and hospital treatment, but as not permitted to reduce amount. Kaiser Foundation Hospitals v. Workmen's Comp. Appeals Bd. (1974) 13 Cal. 3d 20, 28, 117 Cal. Rptr. 678, 528 P.2d 766

County that paid moneys to employee under Aid to Families With Dependent Children program during period when employee was no longer receiving compensation disability payments and when claim for additional compensation benefits was pending and disputed as not entitled to lien on subsequent recovery by employee. Ogdon v. Workmen's Comp. Appeals Bd. (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 192, 208, 113 Cal. Rptr. 206, 520 P.2d 1022

Lien claimant as entitled to seek relief from the consequences of a failure to appear at a hearing on the claim by utilizing a procedure substantially similar to that provided for a relief from default by Code Civ. Proc. § 473. Fox v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1992) 4 Cal. App. 4th 1196, 1205, 6 Cal. Rptr. 2d 252

WCAB as having exclusive jurisdiction over medical liens. Fox v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1992) 4 Cal. App. 4th 1196, 1204, 6 Cal. Rptr. 2d 252

Lab. Code § 4903(b) as broadly interpreted by the courts to authorize reimbursement for most medical services provided to an industrially injured employee, and as limiting the WCAB's discretion to determining whether or not the amount of the lien is reasonable in relation to the medical services rendered to treat the employee's injuries; WCAB as permitted to reduce a physician's fee if it is considered excessive after giving the physician notice and an opportunity to be heard. Fox v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1992) 4 Cal. App. 4th 1196, 1203-1204, 6 Cal. Rptr. 2d 252

Lien against workers' compensation award in favor of insurer for overpayment of uninsured motorist insurance benefits as not authorized under Lab. Code § 4903 and as therefore not permitted. Coltherd v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 455, 461-463, 275 Cal. Rptr. 130

As used in Lab. Code § 4903, relating to liens against workers' compensation, phrase "any sum to be paid as compensation," as meaning any benefit or payment under workers' compensation law and as including both temporary and permanent disability awards; hence, amount of indemnification crime victim receives under victims of violent crime program as allowable lien against both temporary and permanent disability awards. Burnsed v. State Bd. of Control (1987) 189 Cal. App. 3d 213, 218, 234 Cal. Rptr. 316

Even though WCAB has authority to determine amount of living expenses for which injured worker may be allowed lien against workers' compensation award under Lab. Code § 4903(c) and WCAB may award less than that demanded, WCAB as not having power to modify or to compromise order for restitution in criminal proceeding in absence of an agreement. People v. Shelton (1986) 188 Cal. App. 3d 371, 373, 232 Cal. Rptr. 783 (welfare fraud)

Burial expenses paid by third party as required, under Lab. Code § 4903(d), to be awarded to widow subject to lien in favor of third party, and not tobe awarded directly to third party. City and County of San Francisco v. Workmen's Comp. Appeals Bd. (1973) 36 Cal. App. 3d 412, 415, 111 Cal. Rptr. 387

Landlord's lien for employee's unpaid back rent as limited by Lab. Code § 4903(c) to amount of rent due after injury and to amount of rent constituting maintenance for employee and employee's dependents only; WCAB as having no jurisdiction to award any amount for rent due before injury, despite either employee's consent to such arrangement or employee's joint and several liability with others for rent owed. Williams v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1993) 17 Cal. App. 4th 582, 591-593, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 438

[47] Mandatory Settlement Conferences--Disclosure of Evidence

Testimony of vocational rehabilitation counselor developed as consequence of meetings between counselor and injured employee that took place following closure of discovery at mandatory settlement conference, held admissible at trial, when, at conference, employee had identified counselor as expert trial witness, which court of appeal held was sufficient to comply with Lab. Code § 5502. Grupe Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 977, 985-988, 34 Cal. Rptr. 3d 98

Lab. Code § 5502 permits party to call and cross-examine any witness disclosed at mandatory settlement conference, even if witness was only disclosed by other party. Dole Bakersfield v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1998) 64 Cal. App. 4th 1273, 1277, 75 Cal. Rptr. 2d 836

[48] Medical-Legal Evaluations

Pre-April 19, 2004, version of either Lab. Code § 4061 or 4062 applied when medical evaluation of represented employee was required to resolve dispute arising out of injury occurring before January 1, 2005, since plain language of post-April 19, 2004, Lab. Code § 4062.2 limited its applicability to injuries occurring on or after January 1, 2005, and it would be illogical to allow vacuum in which employer would have no right to have medical evaluation performed. Nunez v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2006) 136 Cal. App. 4th 584, 591-593, 38 Cal. Rptr. 3d 914

For reasons set forth in Nunez, medical evaluation and reporting procedure of pre-April 19, 2004, Lab. Code § 4062 applied to represented cases with date of injury prior to January 1, 2005, and Lab. Code § 4050 could not be utilized to circumvent medical evaluation and reporting procedure of pre-April 19, 2004, Lab. Code § 4062, and Lab. Code § 5701 should not be utilized to order medical evaluation that appears to violate pre-April 19, 2004, Lab. Code § 4062 and that may generate report that is inadmissible at trial. Cortez v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2006) 136 Cal. App. 4th 596, 601-602, 38 Cal. Rptr. 3d 922

Physician's disclosures to employee's supervisor regarding employee's treatment violated neither Confidentiality of Medical Information Act nor right to privacy. Garrett v. Young (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 1393, 1406-1412, 1 Cal. Rptr. 3d 134

Employer is not entitled to delayed restitution under Lab. Code §§ 4622 and 4625, or equitable restitution for negotiated and unprotested payments to medical-legal evaluator. American Psychometric Consultants, Inc. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1995) 36 Cal. App. 4th 1626, 1645, 1647, 43 Cal. Rptr. 2d 254

Even absent physician-patient relationship, physician who evaluates workers' compensation claimant at request of defense counsel is liable to claimant for negligence or medical malpractice for injuries incurred during examination. Mero v. Sadoff (1995) 31 Cal. App. 4th 1466, 1478, 37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 769

Distance limitation and worker's physical condition as relevant factors in determining place of defense medical examination of worker under Lab. Code § 4051. Hansen v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 717, 721, 259 Cal. Rptr. 506

[48A] Medical Provider Networks

Defendant insurer denied plaintiff medical services provider admission into its preferred provider network in violation of common-law fair procedure doctrine. Palm Medical Group, Inc. v. State Compensation Insurance Fund (2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 206, 210, 218-228, 74 Cal. Rptr. 3d 266

[49] Medical Treatment Benefits

Constitutionality of Lab. Code § 4604.5(d)'s limitation to 24 chiropractic treatment visits per industrial injury upheld, when court of appeal found that Cal. Const., art. XIV, § 4, vested legislature with "plenary power" to create "complete system of workers' compensation," which neither restricted legislature's ability to limit number of chiropractic treatments for which workers' compensation system must be financially responsible nor expanded injured worker's constitutional rights to include entitlement to receive unlimited treatments. Facundo-Guerrero v. W.C.A.B. (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 640, 646-656, 77 Cal. Rptr. 3d 731

Because SB 899 provided that amendment, addition, or repeal of any law made by SB 899 applied prospectively from date of SB 899's enactment (April 19, 2004), regardless of date of injury, court of appeal held that this provision meant that ACOEM Guidelines applied to determine what is reasonable medical treatment in all cases in which no such determination had been made as of April 19, 2004, so that, since court found that medical treatment in case before it was completed almost two months before enactment of SB 899 but that no determination of reasonableness of that treatment was made until May 2005, when WCJ found, per stipulation of parties, that value of disputed chiropractic services was $6,430 and that ACOEM Guidelines were not applicable to case, following which Appeals Board denied reconsideration, court of appeal annulled Board's decision and remanded for further proceedings. Sierra Pacific Industries v. W.C.A.B. (Chatham) (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 1498, 1505-1512, 45 Cal. Rptr. 3d 550

Employer as liable to provide employee 24-hour attendant care for life under Lab. Code § 4600 once it was established that employee's industrial injurycontributed to need for such care, even though natural progression of employee's preexisting polio would have resulted in need for same level of care if there had been no industrial injury. Rouseyrol v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 1476, 1484-1485, 286 Cal. Rptr. 250

Lab. Code §§ 4600 (medical benefits) and 4601 (services of consulting physician at expense of employer) as precluding apportionment of liability for medical expenses rendered to injured worker, even if expenses were partially made necessary by preexisting injury, whether or not industrially caused. Buhlert Trucking v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 1530, 1534-1535, 247 Cal. Rptr. 190

Compensable injury as rendering employer liable for cost of medical treatment under Lab. Code § 4600; although medical expenses must be reasonably necessary to cure or relieve from effects of industrial injury, no finding of disability, temporary or permanent, as required condition to such recovery. Kyles v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 614, 619-620, 240 Cal. Rptr. 886

Medical treatment and disability indemnity as separate and distinct elements of compensation that fulfill different, though complementary, legislative goals. J. T. Thorp, Inc. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1984) 153 Cal. App. 3d 327, 333, 200 Cal. Rptr. 219

Licensed marriage, family and child counselor without license in clinical psychology as not "physician" within meaning of Lab. Code §§ 3209.3 and 3209.8; therefore, counselor as not subject to civil penalty under Lab. Code § 4628(f) for submitting psychological report regarding claimant without counselor's personal examination of claimant. Stress Care, Inc. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 909, 917, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 426

Lab. Code § 4600 as precluding apportionment of employee's medical treatmentaward except when industrial and non-industrial causes of disability can be easily differentiated and when treatment for non-industrial condition is not necessary to relieve effects of industrial injury. Fisk v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 1078, 1085, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 174

[50] Nature and Purpose of Workers' Compensation

Employee stated cause of action in alleging that employer violated Lab. Code § 3751 by including workers' compensation costs incurred by store as one element in calculation of employee incentive bonus. Ralphs Grocery Co. v. Superior Court (2003) 112 Cal. App. 4th 1090, 1101-1102

Workers' compensation statutes as reflecting legislative compromise between interests of employees and concerns of employers; quid pro quo as existing on both sides; in return for guarantee of compensation, employees as surrendering common-law remedies against their employers for work-related injuries, and reward of employer for securing compensation as being immunity from employee tort suits. Riley v. Southwest Marine, Inc. (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 1242, 1254-1255 n.8, 250 Cal. Rptr. 718

Fundamental policy underlying workers' compensation laws as being that those hiring others to perform services should bear risk of injuries incurred in undertakings; workers' compensation system as differing from tort lawbecause it provides for (1) liability without fault, (2) compulsory insurance, (3) automatic delivery of benefits, (4) limited benefits, and (5) expeditious machinery for resolving disputes. Riley v. Southwest Marine, Inc. (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 1242, 1257-1258, 250 Cal. Rptr. 718

[51] Peace Officers

Employee was not entitled to heart trouble presumption in Lab. Code § 3212 because even if employee, investigator for employer, was police officer of political subdivision, only presumption that applied to that class of employees was hernia presumption, not heart trouble presumption. California Horse Racing Bd. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2007) 153 Cal. App. 4th 1169, 1174-1177, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 222

Employer failed to rebut presumption in Lab. Code § 3212.2 that deceased employee's heart trouble, in form of heart attack stemming from upper respiratory infection, arose out of and in course of his employment as correctional officer, when employer's only evidence regarding decedent's heart trouble was in form of physician's report, which stated "there is nothing specific about the patient's occupation that would lead us to conclude that his viral infection and the secondary myocarditis was occupationally related," and simply pointing out that there was nothing specific about decedent's job that caused his heart attack or put him at greater risk for this condition did not satisfy employer's burden to prove that contemporaneous nonwork-related event was sole cause of decedent's heart attack. Jackson v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 965, 970-972, 35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 256

Lab. Code § 3212.2 presumption of industrial causation with regard to heart trouble applies to members of the Department of Corrections having any custodial duties, not only those whose primary duties consist of the supervision of inmates. Reeves v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2000) 80 Cal. App. 4th 22, 29, 95 Cal. Rptr. 2d 74

University of California police trainee as not entitled to leave of absence without loss of salary pursuant to Lab. Code § 4806, which applies only to officers who have completed training and qualify for active law enforcement. Regents of University of California v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 1101, 1104, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 44

Once operative, presumption of Lab. Code § 3212.5 (heart trouble of specified peace officers manifesting itself during period of service as peace officer as presumed to arise out of and in course of employment) as not rebuttable by showing that heart trouble, in some undetected form, really preexisted employment; when facts giving rise to presumption have been proven at outset, burden of proof negating presumption as falling on employer; to be entitled to presumption, applicant as required first to show disability can be characterized as "heart trouble" within meaning of Lab. Code § 3212.5. Parish v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1989) 210 Cal. App. 3d 92, 97, 258 Cal. Rptr. 287

Term "heart trouble," as used in compensation law, as having rather expansive meaning and as encompassing any affliction to, or additional exertion of, heart caused directly by heart or cardiovascular system or to heart or cardiovascular system through interaction with other afflicted areas of body. Parish v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1989) 210 Cal. App. 3d 92, 97-98, 258 Cal. Rptr. 287

Under Lab. Code § 3600.2(a), peace officer as entitled to workers' compensation benefits if he or she is injured when acting to apprehend law violator or suspected law violator, or to preserve life, property, or peace, even though not acting under immediate direction of employer; peace officer as notentitled to benefits under Lab. Code § 3600.2(a) when officer was injured on way to work by speeding automobile before he could act on thoughts of apprehending its driver. Luna v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 77, 80, 244 Cal. Rptr. 596

[52] Penalties for Delay in Payment

Overriding consideration in determining what penalty amount to assess should be whether penalty imposed would serve purposes sought to be accomplished by Lab. Code § 5814, which are both penal and remedial. Ramirez v. Drive Financial Services (2008) 73 Cal. Comp. Cases 1324, 1329-1330 (Appeals Board en banc opinion)

Although, under Lab. Code § 5814(a), successive penalty may be awarded for unreasonable delay in making prior penalty payment, it should not be awarded when employer had genuine doubt as to its liability or when there has been no legally significant intervening event. Ramirez v. Drive Financial Services (2008) 73 Cal. Comp. Cases 1324, 1331-1332 (Appeals Board en banc opinion)

Employer may avail itself of Lab. Code § 5814(b), regardless of whether employee discovered potential violation of Lab. Code § 5814 before employer did, so long as employee had not claimed penalty before employer discovered potential violation, and employer then timely pays self-imposed penalty, and this provision's application was not limited to situations in which employer learned of potential violation through its own investigation rather than through employee's or third person's investigation. New United Motors Manufacturing, Inc. v. W.C.A.B. (Gallegos) (2006) 141 Cal. App. 4th 1533, 1538-1539, 47 Cal. Rptr. 3d 200

SB 899 version of Lab. Code § 5814 applied to unreasonable delays or refusals to pay compensation that occurred prior to June 1, 2004, operative date of statute. McCarthy v. W.C.A.B. (2006) 135 Cal. App. 4th 1230, 1235-1238, 37 Cal. Rptr. 3d 909

Present version of Lab. Code § 5814, which became operative on June 1, 2004, applies to all injuries in cases pending on that date, including injuries that occurred prior to that date. Green v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 1426, 1437-1443, 26 Cal. Rptr. 3d 527

Agreed medical evaluator opinions and stipulation may each result in liability under the new Lab. Code § 5814 and may each qualify as separate, legally significant event, and legislature did not eliminate multiple increases in compensation for conduct occurring either before or after award, as long as events were "separate and distinct." Green v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 1426, 1443-1445, 26 Cal. Rptr. 3d 527

Lab. Code § 4650 self-imposed penalty applies to accrued as well as periodic temporary and permanent indemnity payments, but not to future indemnity payments that are commuted into lump sum. Rivera v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2003) 112 Cal. App. 4th 1124, 1134-1136, 6 Cal. Rptr. 3d 16

Employer or carrier making one late benefit payment and failing to include interest in that payment incurs only single penalty under Lab. Code § 5814. CaliforniaHighway Patrol v. W.C.A.B. (Erebia) (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 1201, 1206-1207, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 118

In determining reasonableness of delay, court should consider totality of circumstances, balancing fairness between parties, and here inadvertent delay held reasonable when employer had paid employee's medical benefits for 25 years, late quarterly penalty check was sent as soon as error was discovered, no timetable existed in agreement between employee and employer for quarterly penalty payments, employer had no history of late payments or of institutional neglect, employee did not notify employer that check had not arrived within usual time frame, and award of penalty (in excess of $40,000) would upset balance of fairness, constitute windfall to employee, and be out of proportion to employer's conduct (late payment in amount of $97.87). County of San Luis Obispo v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 869, 876-879, 112 Cal. Rptr. 2d 246

Employer's failure to self-assess Lab. Code § 4650 penalty for late payment of temporary disability subjected employer to multiple Lab. Code § 5814 [pre-2004 version] penalties since failure to self-assess penalty was a separate act of misconduct subject to a separate penalty rather than a "single continuous act of misconduct." Moulton v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2000) 84 Cal. App. 4th 837, 844-845, 101 Cal. Rptr. 2d 175

Lab. Code § 5814 penalty was imposed for employer's failure to pay permanent disability advances requested by employee, when employee's failure to pay was allegedly based upon its reliance on outdated authority and found to be unjustified. Rucker v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2000) 82 Cal. App. 4th 151, 159, 97 Cal. Rptr. 2d 852

Lab. Code § 5814 penalty was imposed for defendant's repeated and continuous late payment of permanent disability, when there was no reasonable explanation for delays in payment and no prompt correction of errors, and there was no showing that delays were caused by clerical errors or expected in the normal course of business. Waters v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2000) 80 Cal. App. 4th 652, 664-665, 95 Cal. Rptr. 2d 574

When employer unreasonably delayed paying permanent disability advances under Lab. Code § 139.5 to an injured worker receiving VRMA, Lab. Code § 5814 [pre-2004 version] penalty assessed against full amount of permanent disability benefits, not against VRMA supplemented by permanent disability advances. Kopitske v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 623, 633, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 216

Lab. Code § 5814 [pre-2004 version] penalty applied against all compensable medical benefits paid before and after approval of compromise and release agreement, when defendant unreasonably delayed payment of pharmacy bills for one year; court of appeal reversed WCAB's finding that penalty should only be imposed against medical expenses paid after the compromise and release was approved due to language in the agreement settling all future compensation claims. Neel v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 847, 852, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 353

Insurer was not liable for a penalty for its eight day delay in paying death benefits check, when brief delay was due to clerical error which was promptly corrected and, therefore, was not unreasonable. County of Sacramento v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 726, 733, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 780

Penalty as required to be applied to the full amount of the award for the class of compensation to which the payment was unreasonably delayed or refused, without deduction or credit for any timely preaward payments made by the employer. Rhiner v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1993) 4 Cal. 4th 1213, 1227-1228, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 129, 848 P.2d 244

Only satisfactory excuse for delay in payment of disability benefits, whether prior or subsequent to award, that would relieve employer or carrier from penalty provisions of Lab. Code § 5814 as being genuine doubt from medical or legal standpoint as to liability for benefits. General Foundry Service v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 331, 338, 338 n.4, 228 Cal. Rptr. 243, 721 P.2d 124 ; Kerley v. Workmen's Comp. Appeals Bd. (1971) 4 Cal. 3d 223, 230, 93 Cal. Rptr. 192, 481 P.2d 200 ; Jensen v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 244, 247-248, 216 Cal. Rptr. 33 (repudiating holding in Kampner v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1978) 86 Cal. App. 3d 376, 384, 150 Cal. Rptr. 222 , that each case had to be judged on its own facts to determine whether delay was reasonable); Rohrbach v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1983) 144 Cal. App. 3d 896, 897-898, 901-902, 193 Cal. Rptr. 558 ; cf. Smith v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 1451, 1454-1457, 231 Cal. Rptr. 364 (distinguishing Kerley, rejecting Jensen, and holding 22-day delay based on misunderstanding of to correct amount of compromise and release was not unreasonable)

Injured worker's exclusive remedy for insurer's intentional misconduct in persistent withholding of compensation payments, notwithstanding order by workers' compensation judge to pay, as lying within penalty provisions of workers' compensation law (i.e., Lab. Code § 5814). Stoddard v. Western Employers Ins. Co. (1988) 200 Cal. App. 3d 165, 171-172, 245 Cal. Rptr. 820

Preaward and postaward delinquencies as subject to 10-percent penalty under Lab. Code § 5814 [pre-2004 version], penalty as mandatory despite arguable de minimus nature of amounts involved, and multiple penalties as assessed for successive delays so long as separate and distinct acts of misconduct are involved. Gallamore v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 815, 821-828, 153 Cal. Rptr. 590, 591 P.2d 1242 ; Viegas v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1983) 148 Cal. App. 3d 423, 427, 196 Cal. Rptr. 10

Defendant did not violate Lab. Code § 4651 and no penalty was assessed under Lab. Code § 5814 for unreasonable delay in paying applicant amount due under structured settlement agreement, when defendant immediately issued check to applicant pursuant to agreement and funds became available within three business days of payment period agreed to by parties. State Compensation Insurance Fund v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 1154, 1161, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 448

Employee entitled to award of multiple penalties under Lab. Code §§ 5814 [pre-2004 version], 4650(d) and 4661.5 for employer's unreasonable failure to provide temporary disability benefits and delay in providing such benefits at proper rate, when employee's prior stipulation to lower temporary disability rate did not waivehis right to future statutory increases, employee raised issue of increased rate at two hearings, and employer conceded its failure to timely pay temporary disability benefits and to pay at correct rate; multiple penalties awarded for employer's unreasonable delay in providing medical care, failure to reimburse self-procured expenses, and delay in paying expenses for medication, when employer knew of employee's requests for medical care and medication, medical reports supported these requests, and employee was awarded further medical treatment and reimbursement for self-procured treatment. Mote v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1997) 56 Cal. App. 4th 902, 910-912, 914, 65 Cal. Rptr. 2d 806

Penalty for employer's unreasonable delay in payment of interest on amount of stipulated award was assessed against total award of benefits per class under Lab. Code § 5814 [pre-2004 version], including benefits paid prior to unreasonable failure to pay interest; employer's unreasonable failure to timely pay interest on stipulated award, and subsequent payment of interest at improper rate, constituted single course of conduct resulting in only one penalty assessment. Soto v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1996) 46 Cal. App. 4th 1356, 1363, 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 446

Award of penalty was allowed based on employer's denial of applicant's request for a second change of physician and interruption of temporary disability benefits when, given the clarity of the law in California on the issue of an applicant's right to choose treating physician, the employer could not have reasonably entertained a genuine doubt regarding its obligation to allow applicant to change her choice of treating physicians. Ralphs Grocery Co. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 820, 832, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 197

When there is no reasonable basis for review petition under Lab. Code § 5801, penalty pursuant to Lab. Code § 5814 (unreasonable delay in payment of compensation) as proper under appropriate circumstances without chilling effect on right to petition for writ of review; employer as subject to penaltywhen review petition merely challenged substantiality of evidence to support finding of total disability, raised no substantial legal issue, and was apparently filed and maintained merely to delay effect of award. Klee v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 1519, 1525-1526, 260 Cal. Rptr. 217

Lab. Code § 5814 as providing specific penalty for delay in payment of compensation benefits and, under Lab. Code § 3602, that remedy as exclusive. Soto v. Royal Globe Ins. Co. (1986) 184 Cal. App. 3d 420, 426-427, 429-430, 229 Cal. Rptr. 192 (affirming judgment dismissing complaint by worker and his family against employer's insurance carrier for damages for delayed payment of compensation benefits on theories of (1) intentional infliction of emotional distress, (2) negligent infliction of emotional distress, (3) insurer's alleged violation of Ins. Code § 790.03(h)(5), and (4) breach of implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing; dismissal as to family members further affirmed on additional grounds); see Moradi-Shalal v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Companies (1988) 46 Cal. 3d 287, 297-305, 250 Cal. Rptr. 116, 758 P.2d 58 (prospectively abrogating third-party private standing under Ins. Code § 790.03)

Under Lab. Code § 5814 [pre-2004 version], penalty as imposed on entire amount of benefit withheld, regardless of whether delinquency was preaward or postaward or "de minimus." Toccalino v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1982) 128 Cal. App. 3d 543, 554, 180 Cal. Rptr. 427

Penalty assessed for delay in payment of attorney's fees award as computed as 10 percent of attorney's fees, not 10 percent of total disability award. General Accident Group v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1981) 117 Cal. App. 3d 151, 154, 172 Cal. Rptr. 754 ; State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1981) 117 Cal. App. 3d 143, 149-150, 172 Cal. Rptr. 557

When penalty under Lab. Code § 5814 [pre-2004 version] has been imposed and not paid and another penalty is imposed, second penalty as imposed on entire award, not just on unpaid penalty. Anderson v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1981) 116 Cal. App. 3d 954, 960-961, 172 Cal. Rptr. 398

Successive penalties for unreasonable delay of disability payments under Lab. Code § 5814 [pre-2004 version] as appropriate only in situations of separate, distinct acts of delay or nonpayment, and when prior notice has been given by worker of intent to seek separate penalties. Los Angeles Unified School Dist. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1981) 115 Cal. App. 3d 662, 664-666, 171 Cal. Rptr. 522

Penalty for delay in paying one kind of disability benefit as applicable only to payments of that specific type of disability benefit. Ryerson Concrete Co. v. Workmen's Comp. Appeals Bd. (1973) 34 Cal. App. 3d 685, 687-689, 110 Cal. Rptr. 319 [decided pursuant to pre-2004 version of Lab. Code § 5814]

[53] Permanent Disability Benefits

Because in pretrial conference statement parties stipulated that permanent disability benefits that employer was already paying to employee included 15- percent increase pursuant to Lab. Code § 4658(d), and because, by checking boxes on pretrial conference form labeled "Permanent Disability" and "Apportionment," parties conveyed their intention that WCJ calculate award for permanent disability benefits under applicable formula and facts presented, including Lab. Code § 4658(d). Bontempo v. W.C.A.B [2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 689, 701-704, 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 229
