1 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Publication Information

1 California Points & Authorities Questions?

Questions?

Technical Questions?

Phone: (800) 223-5297
Fax: (800) 533-1645 or (518) 487-3191
E-Mail: technical.support@lexisnexis.com
Visit Our Web Site: http://www.lexis.com

Editorial Questions?

For questions about the Editorial Content appearing in these volumes or reprint permission, please call:
General_Practice
Andrew D. Watry, J.D. cal.custquest@bender.com at (800) 424-0651 (ext. 3268)
Galen Clayton cal.custquest@bender.com at (800) 424-0651 (ext. 3426)
For assistance with replacement pages, shipments, billing or other customer service matters, please call:
Customer Services Department at (800) 833-9844
Outside the United States and Canada, please call (518) 487-3000
Fax Number (518) 487-3584
Customer Service Website http://www.lexisnexis.com/custserv/
For information on other Matthew Bender publications, please call
Your account manager or (800) 223-1940
Outside the United States and Canada, please call (518) 487-3000

2 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Publication Information

1 California Points & Authorities Cite As

Cite As

Cite this publication as:
[Vol. no.] California Points and Authorities, § [sec. no.] (Matthew Bender)
Because the section you are citing may be revised in a later release, you may wish to photocopy or print out the section for convenient future reference.

3 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Publication Information

1 California Points & Authorities Copyright

Copyright

This publication is designed to provide accurate and authoritative information in regard to the subject matter covered. It is sold with the understanding that the publisher is not engaged in rendering legal, accounting, or other professional services. If legal advice or other expert assistance is required, the services of a competent professional should be sought.

LexisNexis and the Knowledge Burst logo are registered trademarks and Michie is a trademark of Reed Elsevier Properties Inc., used under license. Matthew Bender and the Matthew Bender Flame Design are registered trademarks of Matthew Bender Properties Inc.

Copyright © 2010 Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.
All Rights Reserved.

No copyright is claimed in the text of statutes, regulations, and excerpts from court opinions quoted within this work. Permission to copy material exceeding fair use, 17 U.S.C. § 107, may be licensed for a fee of 25cent(s) per page per copy from the Copyright Clearance Center, 222 Rosewood Drive, Danvers, Mass. 01923, telephone (978) 750-8400.
ISBN 978-0-8205-1186-3
Library of Congress Card Number: 65-3994

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Publication Information

1 California Points & Authorities Publisher's Editorial Staff

Publisher's Editorial Staff

ROB D. BAE, J.D.
Director, Editorial Content and Development

PAUL F. GETCHELL, J.D.

JAMES T. HARDIN, J.D.

ROBIN E. KOBAYASHI, J.D.

ANDREW D. WATRY, J.D.
Legal Editors

GALEN CLAYTON
Editor

KRISTEN FLATHMAN
Manager of Publishing Operations

PAUL SOUSA
Coordinator of Publishing Operations

RODERICK TSANG
Senior Publishing Operations Analyst

KARIN NEWTON
Index Manager

LORI MURPHY
Index Editor

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Publication Information

1 California Points & Authorities Authors

Authors

Volume 1: Contributors
LAWRENCE M. FREISER RUSSELL H. MILLER JULIE A. PARR JOHN J. PILLITIERE BRIAN VAUGHN LISA R. WEISENFELD PHILIP L. WEVERKA
Volume 2: Contributors
DAVID BELL BERYL A. BERTUCCIO DIANE L. KARPMAN ROGER RABB JOANNE EARLS ROBBINS EDITH C. SCHAFFER LISA R. WEISENFELD
Volume 3: Contributors
MICHAEL P. GOLDSTEIN RUSSELL H. MILLER JOHN J. PILLITIERE EDITH C. SCHAFFER BRIAN VAUGHN LISA R. WEISENFELD
Volume 4: Contributors
LAWRENCE M. FREISER JULIE A. PARR JOHN J. PILLITIERE ELISA WEICHEL LISA R. WEISENFELD PHILIP L. WEVERKA
Volume 5: Contributors
JULIE A. PARR LISA R. WEISENFELD
Volume 6: Contributors
LAWRENCE M. FREISER JEFFERY A. HOGGE JULIE A. PARR JOHN J. PILLITIERE ROGER RABB ELISA WEICHEL LISA R. WEISENFELD
Volume 7: Contributors
LAWRENCE M. FREISER PHILIP L. WEVERKA JEFFERY A. HOGGE
Volume 8: Contributors
MARGARET M. MCALLISTER
Volume 9: Contributors
LAWRENCE M. FREISER PHILIP L. WEVERKA JULIE A. PARR WILLIAM H. RYAN
Volume 10: Contributors
LAWRENCE M. FREISER BRIAN D. MCGINTY RUSSELL H. MILLER JULIE A. PARR ROGER RABB WILLIAM H. RYAN JENNIFER G. STOECKLEIN MARIANNE TANCOR LISA R. WEISENFELD
Volume 11: Contributors
JEFFERY A. HOGGE BRIAN D. MCGINTY JULIE A. PARR

JOHN J. PILLITIERE ROGER RABB HILARY A. RHONAN LISA R. WEISENFELD
Volume 12: Contributors
JEFFERY A. HOGGE JOHN J. PILLITIERE ROGER RABB LINDA WALLIMANN ELISA WEICHEL LISA R. WEISENFELD
Volume 13: Contributors
BERYL A. BERTUCIO LAWRENCE M. FREISER JEFFERY A. HOGGE JENNIFER G. STOECKLEIN ELISA WEICHEL
Volume 14: Contributors
LAWRENCE M. FREISER RUSSELL H. MILLER JEANNIE NEWELL ROGER RABB BRIAN VAUGHN LISA R. WEISENFELD PHILIP L. WEVERKA
Volume 15: Contributors
LAWRENCE M. FREISER JEFFERY A. HOGGE WILLIAM H. RYAN JENNIFER G. STOECKLEIN LISA R. WEISENFELD
Volume 16: Contributors
LAWRENCE M. FREISER RUSSELL H. MILLER ROGER RABB JENNIFER G. STOECKLEIN BRIAN VAUGHN ELISA WEICHEL LISA R. WEISENFELD
Volume 17: Contributors
MARGARET M. MCALLISTER JULIE A. PARR ROGER RABB HILARY A. RHONAN LISA R. WEISENFELD
Volume 18: Contributors
LAWRENCE M. FREISER BRIAN D. MCGINTY JULIE A. PARR ROGER RABB JENNIFER G. STOECKLEIN LISA R. WEISENFELD
Volume 19: Contributors
RUSSELL H. MILLER JOHN J. PILLITIERE ROGER RABB LISA R. WEISENFELD
Volume 20: Contributors
JEFFERY A. HOGGE ROBERT B. KAPLAN BRIAN VAUGHN
Volume 21: Contributors
LAWRENCE M. FREISER JEFFERY A. HOGGE MARGARET M. MCALLISTER JULIE A. PARR JOHN J. PILLITIERE EDITH C. SCHAFFER ELISA WEICHEL
Volume 22: Contributors
LAWRENCE M. FREISER JULIE A. PARR ROGER RABB JENNIFER G. STOECKLEIN LINDA WALLIMANN LISA R. WEISENFELD
Volume 23: Contributors
LAWRENCE M. FREISER RUSSELL H. MILLER JEANNIE NEWELL ROGER RABB BRIAN VAUGHN ELISA WEICHEL LISA R. WEISENFELD

6 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Publication Information

1 California Points & Authorities Contributors

Contributors

ALEXANDRA D'ITALIA LAWRENCE M. FREISER RUSSELL H. MILLER JULIE A. PARR JOHN J. PILLITIERE ROGER RABB BRIAN VAUGHN
Contributing Authors

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Publication Information

1 California Points & Authorities Foreword

Foreword

Foreword

Lawyers and judges presently face the giant task of accommodating the law to a mass society characterized by an industrialization ever becoming more complex. Inevitably, in this development, the law, reflecting these changes, grows more complicated and more specialized.

The combination of disconcerting change and exploding specialization imposes new demands upon the attorney; it necessarily makes the presentation of the wide variety of legal motions and proceedings far more difficult; the task of collection of supporting authorities has become more onerous. Yet the task must be accomplished in the context of the increasing speed demanded in a busy law office. Hence the legal profession faces a new and acute need for aid in the presentation of point and authorities.

Thus the design of "Points and Authorities" is to provide for the attorney the applicable decisions and citations required for motions and procedures at the trial level, and, in so doing, to supply the basic material for the preparation of appellate briefs. To make for easier use, the editors have presented the points and authorities in the form of such motions and procedures. These authorities are discussed following the memorandum under the heading "Discussion of Authorities." Additional cases supporting the point, if there are such, and related cases which may prove of assistance in pertinent factual situations are also included under the identifying title "Additional Authorities."

The editors have utilized an exhaustive method of preparation in order to develop the most functional and complete compilation of points and authorities. They have examined literally thousands of memoranda filed in the last few years in courts throughout the state. To this investigation the editors have added the dissecting factor of research and analysis conducted on a mass scale beyond the resources of the private practitioner. From this large utilization of talent they have sought to construct models which exemplify the best form of statement of the point and the most persuasive supportive authority. They set out a terse statement of the legal principles; they follow the statement with the most cogent and recent decisional and statutory substantiation.

The case law has been arranged into a hierarchy of diminishing authority. The writers first cite the recent California Supreme Court case or the recognized "leading" case. Thereafter come the earlier Supreme Court cases, followed by court of appeal cases in the same order. If the editors cite cases which are persuasive only, in each instance the warn the reader of that fact in the "Discussion of Authorities."

Although the requirement for the citation of proper authority to support the advocate's position lies deep in the process of the common law, it has become today, with the mounting complexity of the law, even more important and very frequently the object of statutory command. California Rules of Court require, in appellate court briefs, for example, that each point in a brief appear separately under an appropriate heading, which should be precise and generally descriptive of the subject matter covered (Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 15 (a)). The same rules require that memoranda of points and authorities be submitted in the trial court on pain that the court may construe the absence of such memorandum as an admission by the attorney that the motion or proceeding lacks merit (Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 202(a), 203(a), 203(b), and 239(b) (superior courts), and Rules 502(a), 503(a), 503(b), and 527(b) (municipal courts). Points and authorities are also required on all original proceedings in reviewing courts (Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 56).

The increasing volume and range of motions and procedures that compose the daily grist of the trial judge, which is superimposed upon the growing volume of case authority, imposes new burdens upon counsel. Today's trial and appellate judge bears too heavy a load to indulge counsel in long rambling memoranda; the judge has no time for cumbersome quotation, for inapplicable general principle, for miscited cases.

In most matters the memorandum should be readable and comprehensible in a few moments; in substance, it should be sufficiently descriptive so that its applicability to the issue involved becomes at once apparent; mere abstract statements of the law are of little benefit. Above all, it should be reliable. In summary, a memorandum of points and authorities should separate the issues, state them concisely and accurately, contain short and simply constructed statements of law, and support such statements with accurate citations of statutes and of the best cases in point.

A guide to aid the attorney preparing memoranda of points and authorities has become almost a necessity in these days of an expanding and ever more complex law. The goal of the present set is to provide that guide and fulfill the need. It is the first work of its kind; it should be a valuable addition to California legal literature. Proper use of the set can be a great time-saver to both court and counsel. We welcome it.

MATTHEW O. TOBRINER
1965
Associate Justice,
Supreme Court of California.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

What's New

1 California Points & Authorities Scope

Scope

HIGHLIGHTS

Release 126 November 2010

Loss of Consortium Damages After Anticipated Death of Spouse
The California Supreme Court has held that a plaintiff spouse may recover damages for lost companionship and affection resulting from the anticipated premature death of the spouse.
Deadline for Arbitration Tolled by Commencement of Action
The California Supreme Court has held that the commencement of an action by a party to a controversy within the period of time specified in an arbitration agreement to demand arbitration tolls the time limitations in the agreement.
2010 Legislation, Rules of Court, Regulations, and Latest Cases
This release updates chapters throughout with the changes to California legislation, regulations, and rules of court effective July 1, 2010, and also the latest state and federal case law opinions of 2009 and 2010.

Important new developments are added in other areas of law, including:

ADMINISTRATIVE LAW

Right to Practice Profession is Fundamental Vested Right. In Sandarg v. Dental Board of California (2010) 184 Cal. App. 4th 1434 , the court of appeal held that if an administrative agency revokes a person's license to practice a profession and the person brings a petition for a writ of mandate to restore the license, the trial court must apply its independent judgment to review the facts underlying the administrative decision. See Ch. 195, Public Administrative Law, § 195.12[4][a].

Party Exhausted Remedies by Obtaining Administrative Decision. In Runyon v. Board of Trustees of the California State Univ. (2010) 48 Cal. 4th 760 , the California Supreme Court held that, under Gov. Code § 8547.12, a party is not required to overturn an administrative decision through a petition for writ of mandate before filing a civil action. See Ch. 195, Public Administrative Law, § 195.88.

Exhaustion of Administrative Remedies Not Always Required. In In re Electric Refund Cases (2010) 184 Cal. App. 4th 1490 , the court of appeal held that exhaustion of administrative remedies is not required when to do so would be futile. See Ch. 195, Public Administrative Law, § 195.94.

ALTERNATIVE DISPUTE RESOLUTION

Deadline for Demanding Arbitration Tolled by Commencement of Judicial Action. The Supreme Court in Pearson Dental Supplies, Inc. v. Superior Court (2010) 48 Cal. 4th 665 , held the commencement of a civil action by a party in a controversy, within the period of time specified in an arbitration agreement for a party to the agreement to demand or initiate arbitration, tolls the applicable time limitations contained in the agreement. See Ch. 20, Arbitration: Compelling, § 20.236.

Powers of Arbitrator. In Greenspan v. LADT, LLC (2010) 185 Cal. App. 4th 1413 , the court held when parties incorporate rules that empower an arbitrator to decide issues of arbitrability, that incorporation serves as clear evidence of the parties' intent to delegate such issues to the arbitrator. See Ch. 20, Arbitration: Compelling, § 20.10.

Preservation of Claim Under Insurance Code. In Blankenship v. Allstate Ins, Co. (2010) 186 Cal. App. 4th 87 , an insured was denied a motion to compel arbitration for failure to request arbitration within two years of the accrual of the claim, as required under Ins. Code § 11580.2(i). The insured sought tolling on the basis of his disability of being a minor, but the court ruled that Ins. Code § 11580.2(i) imposes an absolute obligation on the insured to comply with its mandates or else the insured forfeits his claim. See Ch. 20, Arbitration: Compelling, § 20.43.

Attempts to Settle Do Not Necessarily Waive Right to Arbitration, Nor Does Demurrer to Complaint. In Zamora v. Lehman (2010) 186 Cal. App. 4th 1 , the court held attempts to settle the judicial action that do not result in undue delay are not inconsistent with the right to arbitrate; and filing and obtaining a ruling on a demurrer on grounds of the matter lacked specificity or failed to allege the timeliness of the claim is not inconsistent with the right to arbitrate. See Ch. 20, Arbitration: Compelling, § 20.236.

ATTORNEYS

Attorney Signature Recital Not Basis for Tort Liability to Opposing Attorney. The court of appeal held that an attorney who, on behalf of a client, signs a contract that contains a signature recital reading "approved as to form and content" does not by doing so make a representation to the attorney for the other contracting party that may form the basis for tort liability to that other attorney. See Freedman v. Brutzkus (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 1065 , discussed in Ch. 24A, Attorneys at Law: Malpractice, § 24A.21.

Defendant's Presence Out of State Tolls Limitations Period in Legal Malpractice Action. The court of appeal held that under Code Civ. Proc. § 351, if a defendant is out of state when a cause of action against him or her accrues, or after accrual the defendant leaves the state, the running of any statute of limitations is tolled while the defendant is out of state, and this tolling period is applicable to a legal malpractice claim. See Jocer Enterprises, Inc. v. Price (2010) 183 Cal. App. 4th 559 , discussed in Ch. 24A, Attorneys at Law: Malpractice, § 24A.55.

Contingency Fee Agreement Need Not Comply With Rule 3-300 to Create Valid Lien. In Plummer v. Day/Eisenberg, LLP (2010) 184 Cal. App. 4th 38, 45-48, 108 Cal. Rptr. 3d 455 , the court of appeal held that unlike an hourly fee agreement, a contingency fee agreement need not comply with Cal. Rules of Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-300, to create a valid lien on the recovery. See Ch. 25, Attorney's Fees, § 25.40[1].

CIVIL PROCEDURE

Anti-SLAPP -- Plaintiff Has Burden to Prove Commercial Exemption to Anti-SLAPP Statute. In Simpson

Strong-Tie Co., Inc. v. Gore (2010) 49 Cal. 4th 12 , a corporation in the business of designing, manufacturing, and marketing building products, sued an attorney who had arranged for an advertisement to be placed in a newspaper to locate individuals who had purchased galvanized fasteners and connectors manufactured by plaintiff and two other companies, for defamation, trade libel, false advertising, and unfair business practices, seeking compensatory and punitive damages as well as injunctive relief. See Ch. 161, Motions to Strike: Anti -SLAPP, § 161.36.

Anti-SLAPP -- Anti-SLAPP Motion of Employment Screening Company Properly Granted in Action Under Megan's Law Website. In Mendoza v. ADP Screening & Selection Services, Inc. (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 1644 , as part of defendant's preemployment background check on plaintiff, defendant accessed the Megan's Law Website (MLW), and plaintiff's prospective employer decided not to hire him based on information disclosed on MLW, which defendant disclosed to the prospective employer. The Court of Appeal affirmed the trial court's granting of defendant's anti-SLAPP motion, finding that the plain language of Code Civ. Proc. § 425.17(c) did not apply, because the statements by defendant on which plaintiff based his complaint were not made by defendant about its own business or about one of its business competitors, but about plaintiff's presence on MLW. See Ch. 161, Motions to Strike: Anti -SLAPP, § 161.30.

Certification of Products as "Organic" Was Not Protected Activity for Anti-SLAPP Motion. In All One God Faith, Inc. v. Organic & Sustainable Industry Standards, Inc. (2010) 183 Cal. App. 4th 1186, 107 Cal. Rptr. 3d 861 , a soap company sued a trade association, which was in the process of developing a standard to define "organic" differently than federal law and certifying members meeting the standard to advertise their products as organic, alleging that the certification would constitute unfair competition and misleading advertising. With regard to the applicability of Code Civ. Proc. § 425.17(c), it was undisputed that the association's members were in the business of selling goods and the association, as a nonprofit trade association, acted on its members' behalf. See Ch. 161, Motions to Strike: Anti -SLAPP, § 161.36.

Defaults -- Relief From Default Available to In-House Counsel. In Gutierrez v. G & M Oil Co. (2010) 184 Cal. App. 4th 551, 557-565, 108 Cal. Rptr. 3d 864 , the court of appeal held that relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b) is available even if the party's attorney is a corporate officer or in-house counsel. See Ch. 70, Defaults, Default Judgments, and Relief From Judgments and Orders, § 70.54[1].

Judgment -- Judgment Debtor Need Not Continuously Own Property for Homestead Exemption. In Broadway Foreclosure Investments, LLC v. Tarlesson (2010) 184 Cal. App. 4th 931, 936-938, 109 Cal. Rptr. 3d 319 , the court of appeal held that a judgment debtor need only reside at, not own, a property to obtain the benefits of a homestead exemption. See Ch. 112, Homesteads, § 112.20[1].

Summary Judgment -- Plaintiffs Could Not Create Triable Issue of Fact by Contradicting Prior Discovery Responses. In Whitmire v. Ingersoll-Rand Co. (2010) 184 Cal. App. 4th 1078 , the court found that reasonable jurors could not find that plaintiffs had produced sufficient evidence to create a triable issue of fact that the husband was exposed to asbestos-containing materials with enough frequency and regularity as to show a reasonable medical probability that the exposure was a factor in causing his illness. See Ch. 221, Summary Judgments, § 221.20.

Summary Judgments -- Superseding Complaint Renders Motion for Summary Judgment Moot. A form has been added to reflect the holding in State Compensation Insurance Fund v. Superior Court (2010) 184 Cal. App. 4th 1124 , that summary adjudication was not proper when a superseding complaint rendered the defendant's motion moot. See Ch. 221, Summary Judgments, § 221.48.

CLASS ACTIONS

Class Action Under UCL May Not Define Class to Include Persons Who Could Not Have Suffered Injury. In a class action alleging fraudulent business practices in violation of the UCL, not all class members are required to show injury in fact or actual loss of money and property [see In re Tobacco II Cases (2009) 46 Cal. 4th 298 ; see also Bus. &

Prof. Code §§ 17203, 17204, 17535]. However, a court of appeal has held that in such a case, the class definition must not include persons who were not exposed to the alleged fraudulent business practice and could not have lost money or property as a result of the alleged unfair competition. See Pfizer Inc. v. Superior Court (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 622 , covered in Ch. 41, Class and Representative Actions, § 41.02[3].

Class Action Settlement Notice Must Include Unambiguous Class Definition. A court of appeal has held that a trial court reviewing a class action settlement for fairness must ensure that the class definition is unambiguous, so that persons receiving notice of the settlement will be able to determine whether they are members of the class. See Cho v. Seagate Tech. Holdings, Inc. (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 734 , covered in Ch. 41, Class and Representative Actions, § 41.02[5].

CONTEMPT

Order of Indirect Contempt Entered in Absence of Sufficient Initiating Affidavit Is Void. Koehler v. Superior Court (2010) 181 Cal. App. 4th 1153 has reversed a trial court's order of indirect contempt based on the contemner's failure to pay previously ordered sanctions based on several defects in the contempt procedures used by the superior court. For example, the superior court had commenced the contempt proceedings on its own and with no initiating affidavit; in the absence of a sufficient initiating affidavit, the contempt order was void. See Ch. 47, Contempt, §§ 47.07, 47.08, 47.30.

DEBT COLLECTION

Negotiable Instruments -- Promissory Note Between Joint Venturers Is Not Subject to Usury Law. In Junkin v. Golden West Foreclosure Serv., Inc. (2010) 180 Cal. App. 4th 1150 , the court applied the little-used "joint venture exception" to the usury law. In the case of joint venturers, one of whom holds a note made by the other to effectuate their venture, the usury law does not prevent enforcement of the note even though its terms would violate the usury law if the note had been made to memorialize a loan. Since the note is part of a transaction that is not a "loan or forbearance of any money, goods or things in action" [see Cal. Const., art. XV, § 1], the usury law does not apply. For a memorandum supporting the contention that the usury law does not apply because a promissory note between the maker and the holder, see Ch. 166, Negotiable Instruments, § 166.140.

DISCOVERY

Discovery -- U.S. Supreme Court Comments on Privacy Expectations of Employees Using Employer-Provided Communication Devices. Ch. 85A, Discovery: E-Discovery, has been updated to discuss City of Ontario v. Quon (2010) 130 S. Ct. 2619, 177 L. Ed. 2d. 216 , in which the U.S. Supreme Court reversed a Ninth Circuit decision that upheld plaintiff police officers' claims that a search of their text messages violated their Fourth Amendment and California constitutional privacy rights, based on a reasonable expectation of privacy in content of those messages. Although the Court sidestepped the parties' disagreement over the officers' privacy expectation, it offered insight on how the law is responding to personal use of cell phones by employees. See Ch. 85A, Discovery : E-Discovery, § 85A.11.

Discovery -- Subpoena Duces Tecum. Ch. 218, Subpoena, has been updated with discussion of Terry v. SLICO (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 352 , in which the court of appeal held that service of the deposition subpoena on nonparty witness was effective despite absence of a supporting affidavit or declaration. Code Civ. Proc. § 2020.510(b), providing that a deposition subpoena need not be accompanied by an affidavit or declaration showing good cause for the production of the documents and things designated, controlled, preempting Code Civ. Proc. § 1987.5, which provides that service of subpoena duces tecum issued before trial without copy of affidavit is invalid. For discussion, see Ch. 218, Subpoena, § 218.25[2][a]. A new form has been added; see Ch. 218, Subpoena, § 218.40.

EMPLOYMENT

Discharge of Public Employee Who Criticized Superiors Did Not Violate Free Speech. A court of appeal has held that the discharge of a government law librarian for making statements critical of his supervisors did not violate the free-speech clause of the California Constitution [Cal. Const. art. I, § 2(a)]. See Kaye v. Board of Trs. of San Diego County Pub. Law Library (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 48 , discussed in Ch. 36, Civil Service, § 36.28.

University Employees May Sue on Whistleblower-Retaliation Claim After Adverse Decision on Administrative Complaint. The California Supreme Court has held that Gov. Code § 8547.12(c), which authorizes a State University employee to file suit on a whistleblower retaliation claim if the university has not "satisfactorily addressed" the employee's administrative complaint within 18 months, refers to satisfaction of the complaining employee, rather than a good-faith standard for investigation of the complaint. The employee may sue after receiving an adverse administrative decision. See Runyon v. Board of Trs. of Cal. State Univ. (2010) 48 Cal. 4th 760 , covered in Ch. 36, Civil Service, § 36.40[2][d][i].

Public Policy Protects Employee Against Retaliation for Asserting Good Faith, Mistaken Claim for Overtime Pay. A court of appeal has held that the public policy underlying an employer's duty to pay overtime wages protects an employee from termination for making a good-faith but mistaken claim to overtime pay. See Barbosa v. IMPCO Techs. (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 1116 , discussed in Ch. 100, Employer and Employee: Wrongful Termination and Discipline, § 100.51A.

School District That Dismisses Probationary Teacher for Unsatisfactory Performance Must Provide 90-Day Written Notice. A court of appeal has held that a school district dismissing a probationary teacher for unsatisfactory performance must comply with the notice requirements that apply to the dismissal of a permanent employee for unsatisfactory performance. Accordingly, the district must give the teacher, at least 90 calendar days before the notice of dismissal, a written notice specifying the nature of the unsatisfactory performance, with specific instances of behavior to furnish the employee an opportunity to correct the faults and overcome the charge [Educ. Code §§ 44932(a)(4), 44938(b), 44948.3(a)]. See Achene v. Pierce Joint Unified Sch. Dist. (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 757 , discussed in Ch. 211, Schools: Certification, Dismissal, and Related Employment Issues, § 211.39[2][b].

INSURANCE

Insurance Policy Rescission Based on Concealment. In Carolina Cas. Ins. Co. v. RDD, Inc. (N.D. Cal. 2010) 685 F. Supp. 2d 1052 , the court granted summary judgment to the insurer for rescission of an employment practices liability policy, because the insured failed to disclose in the application that one employee resigned because of sexual harassment. See Ch. 120, Insurance, § 120.250[4][d].

Alleged Patent Infringement Constitutes Advertising Injury. In Hyundai Motor America v. National Union Fire Ins. Co. (9th Cir. 2010) 600 F.3d 1092 , the Ninth Circuit held, after applying a contextual analysis to the facts, that infringement of a patented advertising method on the insured automobile manufacturer's website constituted a "misappropriation of advertising ideas" and hence, an advertising injury covered in the CGL policy. See Ch. 120, Insurance, § 120.50[4][a].

Insurer's Failure to Investigate and Advise Claimant Supports Bad Faith Verdict. In Amerigraphics, Inc. v. Mercury Cas. Co. (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 1538 , the insurer of a printing and design company acted in bad faith with respect to claims for flood damage, by failing to promptly investigate the claim and failing to advise the insured of potential available coverage, among other things. See Ch. 120, Insurance, § 120.184[4][a].

SCHOOLS

Field Trip Immunity May be Extended to Host School. The court of appeal held that immunity for field trips provided by Educ. Code § 35330 is not limited to the school district in which the injured student is enrolled, but extends to any school district that is a significant participant in conducting the field trip, such as a district that hosts the field trip at its facilities. See Sanchez v. San Diego County Office of Education (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 1580 , discussed in Ch. 210, Schools: Actions by Students, § 210.22.

Factual Issues Remained on School District's Liability for Sexual Assault of Second-Grade Student. The court of appeal held that triable issues of fact existed as to whether a school district breached its duty of care when supervising elementary school children during a voluntary, on-campus, after-school playground program, and whether any such breach proximately caused the sexual assault of a second-grade student by other students in an unlocked storage shed. See J.H. v. Los Angeles Unified School Dist. (2010) 183 Cal. App. 4th 123 , discussed in Ch. 210, Schools: Actions by Students, § 210.27.

Police Presence Does Not Change Standard for Reasonableness of Search of Student. In In re K.S. (2010) 183 Cal. App. 4th 72 , a high school vice-principal searched the pants of a student after being informed by a police officer that the student possessed Ecstasy pills hidden in a slit in his pants. The vice-principal made an independent decision to conduct the search in the presence of two police officers, but did not ask either officer to conduct the search. The court found that the reasonableness standard of New Jersey v. TLO and In re William G. applied because the police role in the search of the student was at all times clearly subordinate to the role of the vice-principal, who made the decision to search and conducted the search. See Ch. 210, Schools: Actions by Students, § 210.24.

STATUTORY INTERPRETATION

Principles of Statutory Construction Apply to Constitutional Provisions. In Greene v. Marin County Flood Control & Water Conservation Dist. (2010) 49 Cal. 4th 277 , the California Supreme Court has held that Cal. Const., art. XIII D, § 6, which requires voter approval for new or increased property-related fees, does not incorporate the secret-ballot requirements applicable to elections under Cal. Const., art. II, § 7. In construing the constitutional provisions, the Court applied principles of constitutional interpretation that are similar to those governing statutory construction. See Ch. 217, Statutory Interpretation, § 217.22.

TORTS

Amendment Permitted When Justification for Failure to Comply With Civ. Code § 1714.10 Is Alleged. The court of appeal held that a trial court may permit amendment of a complaint after sustaining a demurrer based on failure to comply with Civ. Code § 1714.10, which requires a prefiling order to file a complaint alleging a conspiracy between attorney and client, when the plaintiff appears able to allege that the attorney was not providing legal representation at the time of the alleged conspiratorial conduct, or when plaintiff appears able to allege that the attorney's acts went beyond the performance of a professional duty to serve the client and involved a conspiracy to violate a legal duty in furtherance of the attorney's financial gain. See Central Concrete Supply Co., Inc. v. Bursak (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 1092 , discussed in Ch. 46, Conspiracy, §§ 46.28, 46.51.

Attorney With Valid Charging Lien May Pursue Conversion Action When Proceeds Are Wrongfully Withheld. The court of appeal held that an attorney may maintain an action for conversion against any party who wrongfully withholds or disburses funds subject to a valid attorney's lien. See Plummer v. Day/Eisenberg, LLP (2010) 184 Cal. App. 4th 38 , discussed in Ch. 51, Conversion, § 51.22.

Withdrawn Code Civ. Proc. § 998 Offer Revives Last Rejected Offer. In One Star, Inc. v. STAAR Surgical Co. (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 1082, 1093-1095, 102 Cal. Rptr. 3d 195 , the court of appeal held that if a Code Civ. Proc. § 998 offer is withdrawn by a party before its statutory expiration, the withdrawing party's right to cost shifting under Code Civ. Proc. § 998 is determined by the last rejected Code Civ. Proc. § 998 offer. See Ch. 60, Costs, § 60.17.

Stare Decisis Not Important Right Affecting Public Interest. In Serrano v. Stefan Merli Plastering Co. (2010) 184 Cal. App. 4th 178, 186-190, 108 Cal. Rptr. 3d 777 , the court of appeal held that pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, the fact that an appellate decision was published did not make it of public interest for purposes of recovering attorney's fees from an opposing party. See Ch. 60, Costs, § 60.361.

To Recover Fees, Parties Is Not "Opposing" When Defending Common Settlement. In McGuigan v. City of San Diego (2010) 183 Cal. App. 4th 610, 624-629, 107 Cal. Rptr. 3d 554 , the court of appeal held that "opposing party" as used in Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 means a party whose position in the litigation was adverse to that of the prevailing party, and that parties defending a settlement between them are no longer opposing. See Ch. 60, Costs, § 60.408.

Prejudgment Interest Not Included When Comparing Compensatory Damages to Punitive Damages. The court of appeal held that prejudgment interest should not be included when comparing compensatory damages to punitive damages. See Amerigraphics, Inc. v. Mercury Casualty Co. (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 1538 , discussed in Ch. 64, Damages: Tort, § 64.141.

Loss of Consortium Damages After Anticipated Death of Spouse Recoverable; Res Judicata May Prevent Recovery of Damages in Subsequent Wrongful Death Suit. The California Supreme Court held that a plaintiff spouse may recover damages for lost companionship and affection resulting from the anticipated premature death of the other spouse, if that premature death is sufficiently certain to occur and is caused by the injuries sustained due to the defendant's wrongful conduct. The Court also held that because the plaintiff spouse brought a loss of consortium action seeking damages for permanent deprivation of companionship and affection, but dismissed the action with prejudice, plaintiff was barred by the res judicata doctrine from seeking the same damages in a subsequent action. See Boeken v. Philip Morris USA, Inc. (2010) 48 Cal. 4th 788 , discussed in Ch. 64, Damages: Tort, § 64.44, and Ch. 66, Death and Survival Actions, § 66.27.

Legal Complexity Does Not Establish Probable Cause to Bring Suit. The court of appeal held that a lawyer is not immune from liability for malicious prosecution because the area of law involved in the underlying case was complex and no case law with similar facts established that the claim was untenable. See Franklin Mint Co. v. Manatt, Phelps & Phillips, LLP (2010) 184 Cal. App. 4th 313 , discussed in Ch. 147, Malicious Prosecution and Abuse of Process, § 147.51.

Party Host Had No Duty to Protect Guests From Unknown Assailants. The court of appeal held that the host of a residential party who posted an open invitation to the party on his MySpace page did not owe a duty of care to protect against a third-party criminal assault on party guests, perpetrated by unknown assailants. See Melton v. Boustred (2010) 183 Cal. App. 4th 521 , discussed in Ch. 178, Premises Liability, §§ 178.63, 178.64.

Factual Issues on Dangerousness of Raised Road Median. The court of appeal, in reversing summary judgment that had been granted to a city, held that the city had failed to demonstrate as a matter of law that a raised center divider in a city intersection did not constitute a dangerous condition of public property. The court concluded that the city failed to prove the absence of prior accidents involving the raised center divider at that particular traffic intersection when the city provided evidence only that the city's claims administrator searched its database and found no other claims involving that intersection during the previous five years. See Lane v. City of Sacramento (2010) 183 Cal. App. 4th 1337 , discussed in Ch. 196, Public Entities, § 196.210.

UNFAIR COMPETITION

Reliance Required in Action for Unlawful Business Practices Based on Misrepresentations. The court of appeal held that the actual reliance requirements applicable to fraud-based actions under the UCL apply not just to actions under the fraudulent business practices category of the statute, but also to actions brought under the unlawful business practices category if based on alleged misrepresentations. See Hale v. Sharp Healthcare (2010) 183 Cal. App. 4th 1373 , and Durell v. Sharp Healthcare (2010) 183 Cal. App. 4th 1350 , discussed in Ch. 235, Unfair Competition, § 235.63.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 1 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS

1-1 California Points & Authorities 1.syn

AUTHOR: Evelio M. Grillo, Esq., Editorial Consultant

§ 1.syn Synopsis to Chapter 1: WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS

§ 1.01 Scope

[1] Introduction to Drafting Memoranda and Using This Publication

[2] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

§ 1.02 Governing Law

§ 1.03 Drafting Considerations

[1] Initial Strategic Considerations

[a] Consider Immediate Goals and Overall Case Strategy

[b] Consider the Audience: The Law and Motion Judge

[c] Stipulate to Routine, Undisputed, or Unimportant Issues

[d] Remember the Limits of Oral Argument

[2] General Writing Considerations

[a] Begin With an Outline

[b] Focus on Strengths

[c] Argue in an Adversarial Style

[d] Use Clear and Concise Writing

[3] Drafting the Argument

[a] Introductory Elements: Summary of Argument and Statement of Facts

[b] Main Issue Headings in the Argument

[c] The Argument

[d] Refuting Opposing Argument

[e] The Conclusion

[4] Considerations in Specific Proceedings

[a] Demurrers

[b] Summary Judgment Motions

[c] TRO's and Injunctions

[d] Motions in Limine

[e] Motions for New Trial or JNOV

§ 1.04 When Memoranda Are Required or Needed

[1] Supporting Memoranda Usually Required

[a] Use of Supporting Memoranda Generally

[b] Memorandum Required to Support Demurrer or Notice of Motion

[c] Memorandum Required to Support Motion for New Trial

[d] Memorandum Required to Support Petition for Writ

[e] Memorandum Required to Support Ex Parte Application

[f] References to Commonly Used Procedural Points and Authorities

[2] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Reply Memoranda

[4] Time for Serving and Filing Memoranda

§ 1.05 Format Requirements

[1] Page Length Limits

[a] In General

[b] Summary Judgment or Adjudication

[c] Procedure for Filing Longer Memorandum

[2] General Paper and Format Requirements

[3] Requirements for First Page; Caption

[4] Tables of Both Contents and Authorities Usually Required

[5] Requirements Relating to Argument and Discussion

[a] Introduction and Summary of Argument

[b] Statement of Facts

[c] Statement of Law, Evidence, and Argument

[6] Declarations, Exhibits, and Other Evidentiary or Legal Attachments

[a] Evidentiary Attachments

[i] Evidence Generally Necessary to Support Memorandum

[ii] References to Declarations and Exhibits

[iii] Declarations and Affidavits

[iv] Exhibits

[v] Facts Subject to Judicial Notice

[b] Legal Attachments

[7] Citation Requirements

[a] Case Citation Format

[b] Citation Style: The Bluebook or The California Style Manual

[c] Rules Affecting Citability of Cases

[8] Attaching or Combining the Memorandum With Other Papers

[9] Proposed Orders

§ 1.06 Using This Publication

[1] Purpose and Scope of Publication

[2] Using Forms to Draft Memoranda

[a] Basic Structure of Memorandum

[b] Select Relevant Forms

[c] Methods for Finding Relevant Forms for Selection

[d] Recommended Method for Assembling Selected Forms

[3] Completing the Draft Memorandum

[a] Completing the Argument

[b] Completing the Remaining Components of the Memorandum

[4] Using This Publication to Draft Trial or Appellate Briefs

§§ 1.07-1.09 [Reserved]

§ 1.10 Skeletal Form of Memoranda

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Elements of Memorandum

[a] Caption or Title

[b] Tables of Contents and Authorities

[c] Introduction and Summary of Argument

[d] Statement of Facts

[e] Argument

[f] Conclusion

[g] Signature Block

[4] Related Memoranda

§ 1.11 Ex Parte Application for Leave to File Memorandum in Excess of Page Limits

[1] FORM

[2] Use of Form

[3] Requirements for Ex Parte Applications in General

Evelio M. Grillo, Esq.,
Editorial Consultant n*

FOOTNOTES:
(n2)Footnote *. Mr. Grillo, a graduate of Harvard Law school and a civil litigation expert in San Francisco, helped to draft the statewide law and motion rules adopted in 1997 as a member of the State Bar Committee on Rules and Procedures of Court, 1993-1996. He is currently a judge in the Alameda Superior Court. Judge Grillo has reviewed the chapter, adding both his substantive and practical insight. The chapter, written by this publication's coordinating editor, is, in § 1.03, adapted in part from a former version of the chapter written by Raymond L. Ocampo, former Director of Legal Writing and Research at Hastings College of the Law, San Francisco, and former counsel for Oracle Corporation.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 1 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS
I. INTRODUCTION

1-1 California Points & Authorities § 1.01

AUTHOR: Evelio M. Grillo, Esq., Editorial Consultant

§ 1.01 Scope

[1] Introduction to Drafting Memoranda and Using This Publication

This is the introductory chapter to the publication, designed for the all litigation practitioners, from those having substantial experience to those having little or none. Section 1.03, discussing drafting considerations and strategies, is intended to provide a broad overview of law and motion strategy and drafting considerations and will be useful either as a refresher for experienced counsel, or as a starting point for those who have only occasionally appeared in law and motion proceedings or have drafted a memorandum or brief.

Sections 1.04 and 1.05 provide detailed discussion of all relevant technical requirements. Section 1.04 addresses when memoranda are required or recommended. Section 1.05 discusses the format requirements governing content, page limits, citation style, reference to exhibits, and all other aspects of format.

Section 1.06 provides an important guideline for understanding how best to use the other chapters in this publication as a tool in both researching and drafting memoranda and briefs.

Section 1.10 sets out a basic, "skeletal" form for use in beginning or completing a draft memorandum. It provides the overall structure of caption, tables, summary of argument, statement of facts, argument, conclusion, and signature block.

Section 1.11 provides a form of ex parte application, for use in obtaining leave to file a memorandum in excess of the page limits imposed by Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(d).

[2] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion and forms relating to preparing and filing motions generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 372, Motions and Orders (Matthew Bender). For discussion and coverage relating to memoranda, similar in scope to this chapter but also including coverage of service and filing requirements and a Research Guide, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 417, Points and Authorities (Matthew Bender).

Other general procedural chapters in that publication include:

- Discussion and forms relating to the general use of affidavits or declarations in support of noticed motions: Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations .

- Alternative forms of captions and introductions: Ch. 108, Captions and Introductions .

- Detailed general discussion of the format requirements governing not only memoranda, but all pleadings and papers filed in trial courts: Ch. 123, Complaints and Cross Complaints .

- Discussion and forms relating to fax service and filing of papers: Ch. 264, Fax Filing and Service of Papers .

- Discussion and forms for use in applications for orders shortening or extending time: Ch. 524, Shortening and Extension of Time .

Chapters in that publication with discussion and forms relating to particular motions, demurrers, and petitions in which memoranda are used include the following:

- Ch. 38, Reference .

- Ch. 125, Consolidation, Severance, and Coordination of Actions .

- Ch. 136, Continuances .

- Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees .

- Ch. 190, Discovery: Scope, Regulation, and Timing .

- Ch. 191, Discovery: Privileges and Other Discovery Limitations .

- Ch. 192, Discovery: Sanctions for Discovery Misuse .

- Ch. 193, Discovery: Depositions .

- Ch. 194, Discovery: Interrogatories .

- Ch. 195, Discovery: Inspection of Tangible Evidence .

- Ch. 196, Discovery: Requests for Admissions .

- Ch. 197, Discovery: Physical and Mental Examinations .

- Ch. 198, Discovery: Exchange of Expert Witness Information .

- Ch. 199, Discovery: Preservation of Evidence .

- Ch. 200, Discovery: Review of Discovery Orders .

- Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .
- Ch. 303, Injunctions .
- Ch. 314, Interpleader .
- Ch. 318, Judgments .
- Ch. 323, Jurisdiction: Personal Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances .
- Ch. 324, Jurisdiction: Subject Matter Jurisdiction .
- Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition .
- Ch. 371, Motions After Trial .
- Ch. 373, Motions in Limine .
- Ch. 374, Motions to Reconsider and Renewed Motions .
- Ch. 375, Motions to Strike .
- Ch. 389, Nonsuit and Motions for Judgment .
- Ch. 486, Receivers .
- Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers .
- Ch. 537, Summary Judgment .
- Ch. 571, Venue .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProceduresPleading & PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProceduresPleading & PracticeMotion PracticeOpposing MemorandaCivil ProceduresPleading & PracticeMotion PracticeSupporting MemorandaCivil ProceduresPleading & PracticePleadingsComplaintsRequirementsCivil ProceduresAppealsBriefs

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 1 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS
I. INTRODUCTION

1-1 California Points & Authorities § 1.02

AUTHOR: Evelio M. Grillo, Esq., Editorial Consultant

§ 1.02 Governing Law

The form and content of supporting and opposing memoranda are governed primarily by Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113 [see also Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 3.1110 (general format), 3.1300 (time for filing and serving papers), and 3.1302 (place and manner of filing)].

Additional requirements governing papers generally are set out in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.100-2.119.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadings

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 1 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS
I. INTRODUCTION

1-1 California Points & Authorities § 1.03

AUTHOR: Evelio M. Grillo, Esq., Editorial Consultant

§ 1.03 Drafting Considerations

[1] Initial Strategic Considerations

[a] Consider Immediate Goals and Overall Case Strategy

Law and motion practice is expensive and should be used judiciously. The expenditure of attorney time and court resources, and the sum of client costs may easily become disproportionate to the importance of the litigation when motions are filed without careful consideration of their objectives and necessity.

Thus, counsel should decide on the objectives of a motion before it is filed, and how those objectives fit into the overall strategy of a given case. Every motion should be filed or responded to as part of the overall litigation strategy in the particular case, rather than as a matter of habit or routine. Similarly, opposition to a motion should not be automatic but should be considered in light of the benefit to the client of either opposing the motion or stipulating to the relief requested.

Strategic considerations will always vary depending on the case, but in all casescounsel should carefully weigh the costs and benefits of making or opposing a motion. Consideration of possible negative outcomes may, for example, include one or more of the following:

- Will an argument asserted in a memorandum filed now only serve to undermine the client's position later in the litigation?

- Will a demurrer force the opposing party's attorney to educate himself or herself in the case, and result in a pleading more difficult to contest in the long run?

- Will a summary judgment motion force opposing counsel to organize more thoroughly and earlier for trial?

PRACTICE TIP:

Avoiding Sanctions. An all too common practice by some counsel is to file or oppose a motion to "wear down" an opponent with limited resources. For example, when moving counsel files a motion of questionable strategic significance or legal basis with the expectation that by doing so, opposing counsel will have to expend time and resources to oppose the motion and will eventually capitulate. The practice of filing or opposing of a motion solely for the purpose of harassment, delay, or for the purpose of increasing the opposition's costs or attorney's fees may subject both attorney and client to sanctions [see, e.g., Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7 (sanctions for papers presented to court for improper purpose or that are not warranted under law or facts)]. For detailed discussion and forms on this topic, see Ch. 207, Sanctions , and California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 510, Sanctions (Matthew Bender)]. Evelio M. Grillo, Esq.

For more particular strategic considerations, relating to selected specific procedures, see § 1.03[4].

[b] Consider the Audience: The Law and Motion Judge

The hearing of law and motion matters in many counties is reserved for one judge, and lawyers in such counties have an excellent opportunity to become acquainted with the predilections of the judge who will hear all of their motions. Although an attorney will obtain some advantage by learning of a certain judges' idiosyncrasies, such information generally is not available except through word of mouth or experience. Any disadvantage due to unfamiliarity with a particular judge's style can be overcome adopting a style of advocacy focuses on the following consideration:

- Forceful argument that the client's case as an advocate, and not as an apologist. [see also § 1.03[1][c]].

- Clear and concise argument. Judges are required to read and assess innumerable memoranda in the course of a day and react positively to clarity and brevity.

- Creative argument when the circumstances call for it. Boilerplate arguments never impress an experienced judge and are ineffective.

PRACTICE TIP:

Study Your Judge. Understanding the law and motion judge enables counsel to prepare a more effective written presentation.

Several methods exist for learning the law and motion judge's judicial philosophy, consistent with the rules of professional responsibility:

- Attend law and motion hearings. There is no substitute for the direct experience of appearing before the judge. Observing the techniques and mis-steps of other lawyers may yield a wealth of information, and if counsel observes enough motions before the same judge, a discernible pattern may emerge.

- Speak to colleagues about the judge. Although a judge's reputation may be colored by the experiences of your colleagues, most of the time the judge's reputation contains a germ of truth and may be well deserved and extremely accurate.

- Attend professional functions such as bar lunches or seminars at which the judge will be speaking. Specific questions can be asked at that time.

- Review and observe the local law and motion rules. The local rules are often drafted with substantial input by the judge who hears law and motion matters. When arguing in the law and motion department you are a guest in the judge's house. Honor the house rules.

[c] Stipulate to Routine, Undisputed, or Unimportant Issues

Judges abhor being bothered with and having to decide routine matters that should be the subject of stipulation between counsel, and clients should not have to pay for making, or opposing, a motion that could have been avoided through stipulation. The most common example of routine matters that should be agreed on by stipulation is an extension of time to respond to a pleading.

As judges are generally liberal in granting extensions and other routine forms of relief when the circumstances warrant an extension, counsel should avoid forcing an opponent to seek relief on a routine matter unless a particularly good reason exists for declining a stipulation. Even then, a lawyer should consider granting a very limited extension or other limited relief rather than insisting on strict compliance with a deadline.

PRACTICE TIP:

Protect Your Record of Stipulations. One common mistake made by counsel is failing to protect their record when requesting or agreeing to routine relief from opposing counsel. A written request, e.g., for and extension, and the confirming letter will become the record in the event of a dispute regarding that request. Do not make the mistake of authoring a confirming letter which does not accurately represent the agreement between counsel, and never misrepresent the course of conversations between counsel. Doing so may precipitate a war of confirming letters which may become part of the record before the law and motion judge. Such an exchange between counsel is a sign of inexperience and only serves to irritate the court. Always be polite in your written exchanges with opposing counsel, and never resort to name-calling or invective, no matter how cathartic it may seem at the time. In the event you encounter counsel who seeks to draw you into a discourteous and unprofessional war of words, politely decline counsel's invitation by letter, advise counsel that you will seek relief from the court, and then do so. Evelio M. Grillo, Esq.

Counsel who routinely contest even the most simple requests, such as moving a hearing date when an unavoidable conflict arises in opposing counsel's schedule, may well find that the negative impression of such conduct, on both the law and motion judge and opposing counsel, is ultimately more detrimental than beneficial, both to the client in the case at hand and counsel's reputation. Routine administrative matters, calendaring and scheduling matters should not be utilized to gain a tactical advantage over opposing counsel.

Furthermore, opposing a motion for an improper purpose, or when not warranted under the law or on the facts (such as contesting a fact that is clearly not subject to reasonable dispute), may result in sanctions under Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7 if the complaint or petition in the matter was filed after January 1, 1995 [see Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7(i) (operative effect of Code Civ. Proc. 128.7); see also Code Civ. Proc. § 128.5 (sanctions for actions or tactics arising from a complaint filed or proceeding initiated on or before December 31, 1994)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Be Professional and Courteous. In addition to saving time and money, granting routine courtesies to opposing counsel facilitates the smooth resolution of litigation in the following ways:

- Shows good faith by the party granting the courtesy.
- Reserves the party reciprocal good will and courtesy.

- If an extension has been granted, makes it easier for the party granting the extension to obtain relief when the extended time limit is not met by the opposition.

- Opens the dialogue between opposing counsel, thereby facilitating communication that may lead to agreement on other routine and facilitate settlement discussions.

[d] Remember the Limits of Oral Argument

Most judges base their decisions on the papers, not on oral argument. Many law and motion departments even make and post tentative rulings before the scheduled hearing. Time is therefore better spent on drafting the memorandum than on preparation for oral argument in law and motion. Brilliant oral argument cannot revive a poorly drafted, logically inconsistent written argument.

PRACTICE TIP:

Preparing for Oral Argument. This chapter focuses on drafting memoranda as distinguished from related issues such as serving and filing memoranda (see § 1.01) and oral argument, if any. Nevertheless, counsel who do not have extensive oral argument experience should keep the following considerations in mind when preparing for oral argument:

- Do not repeat or read from the written argument. If you are sure that the Court has had time to review your pleadings, it may be more advisable to state that you have covered the issues in the papers and are prepared to submit on them unless the judge has particular questions. In any event be brief and simple.

- Listen carefully to the judge's questions; judges do not like to have to repeat themselves and careful listening to the judge's questions will provide clues as to the issues the judge considers important.

- Avoid distracting the judge, and never stretch the truth, evade a question, or otherwise antagonize the judge; you may be before the judge again.

- Be fully prepared. Anticipate and even rehearse the tough questions.

- Stay focused on your objective in the proceeding (and your overall case strategy) [see § 1.03[1][a]].

- Acting calm and confident can help you gain or retain these qualities.

[2] General Writing Considerations

[a] Begin With an Outline

The object of a memorandum is to persuade the judge of the merits of your client's position, through concise, forceful and logical argument. Sound logic requires good organization. A logical progression of argument leads the judge to the conclusion presented by your memorandum.

Organization can sometimes be difficult when an attorney conducts exhaustiveresearch first and then attempts to organize the results. Usually the more effective method is to begin by preparing a rough outline, before conducting any extensive research. This will force the attorney to concentrate on identifying and organizing the major issues from the outset, and will focus, and may reduce the need for additional research.

The outline should, of course, be revised as dictated by the results of research. In any event, it will provide the framework for easy drafting once research is completed.

PRACTICE TIP:

Use Your Facts to Focus Your Research. One common mistake made when drafting a supporting or opposing memorandum is to begin and complete research without giving due deference to the factual basis for the motion.

Preparing a memorandum without first considering the evidentiary basis for the motion often results in a memorandum with scant factual support, or one that may even harm the client's case later in the litigation. Supporting declarations and affidavits should be developed in tandem with ongoing legal research. By working on the factual statement and developing supporting declarations and other evidentiary bases before research is conducted, your resulting memorandum will be more tightly written and more effective. Declarations that are created as an afterthought, especially in an effort to force the facts to fit a preconceived legal argument, stick out like a sore thumb and may be contradicted by more concrete facts developed through later discovery.

Once the facts are properly developed and considered, the forms in this publication are designed to be used to "jump-start" the process of research and drafting a complete memorandum, as discussed in more detail in § 1.06. Evelio M. Grillo, Esq.

[b] Focus on Strengths

A memorandum for a particular party should highlight or focus on that party's strongest arguments. The party's strongest points should be emphasized with regard to each issue of the argument. Counsel's goal should be a focused attack on or defense of the issues where it will do the most good, as distinguished from a scattered, comprehensive discussion of all possible issues. Although obviously no major argument should be ignored, a memorandum of points and authorities is not a bar exam. Do not focus on arguments based more on equity or policy grounds to the exclusion of the strongest legal and factual arguments.

Note that argument should always proceed in a logical order leading to the conclusion [see § 1.03[3][b]]. Thus, the strongest arguments need not be placed first, but should be given emphasis in their proper, logical order.

[c] Argue in an Adversarial Style

Both advisory and adversary legal writing involve argument and persuasion, but they differ in the attorney's relation to the audience. In an advisory opinion letter or office memorandum, the attorney writes as an advisor, weighing all factors. In adversary writing, his or her role changes from adviser to advocate. Instead of neutrally analyzing both sides, the attorney writing a memorandum should use a forceful, adversarial style in arguing the one side of his or her client. The attorney should write as if he or she is convinced of the legal correctness and essential justice of the views espoused in the argument. He or she will thus add belief to his or her opinion, and in turn lend greater force to the argument [see also discussion in § 1.03[1][b]].

[d] Use Clear and Concise Writing

In memoranda, the attorney's audience is the judge, and, to a lesser extent, opposing counsel, that is, legal professionals who understand both law, the adversarial process, and the strategy of persuasion. They are best reached by argument that is not only adversarial but also clear and concise [see also discussion in § 1.03[1][b]]. Clarity, brevity, and precision are critical; such writing is not only more persuasive, but also required by memorandum page limits [see § 1.05[1]] and the judge's limited time. Brevity follows clarity and precision. Clarity and precision are best accomplished by carefully editing of the initial and subsequent drafts, to clarify any ambiguous or uncertain steps in the argument and to eliminate redundant passages, "throat clearing" phrases, and other unnecessary verbiage.

Concise writing in this sense does not, however, mean that the attorney should make any assumptions on the part of his or her audience. A persuasive memorandum will explain the basis for each step of the argument that leads logically to the conclusion.

The tone of the memorandum is again governed by consideration of the audience; it should be politely formal as distinguished from the more familiar tone of advisory writing.

In other respects, the style and tone of the memorandum should conform to common sense and basic rules of good writing. For example:

- The tone should appear knowledgeable and reasonable, not strident or dogmatic; the argument should rely on logical rather than emotional persuasion.

- Positive, direct assertions are always more effective than neutral statements. Active verbs have more persuasive force than passive verbs.

[3] Drafting the Argument

[a] Introductory Elements: Summary of Argument and Statement of Facts

The first thing the judge will want is a proper context within which to place the argument, that is:

- A brief summary of argument that both identifies the issues and briefly argues their proper resolution under the law. This Summary of Argument, or Questions Presented, is most simply a compilation of the Main Issue headings in the main argument, followed by the heading for the conclusion. For framing these headings, see § 1.03[3][e].

- A statement of all material and relevant facts, whether based on pleadings or evidence, to provide an evidentiary basis for the judge's ruling and the human side of the litigation, that is, to provide a sense of where justice and policy lies. The statement of facts also provides the preliminary point of reference for understanding the thrust of the argument later to come.

PRACTICE TIP:

Drafting the Statement of Facts. All facts material and relevant to the motion should be included in the memorandum, even those facts more favorable to the opposing party. Of critical importance is phrasing the description of facts in the most favorable manner. For example, an attorney may employ strong verbs, concrete nouns, and reemphasis of favorable details to highlight favorable facts, but use weaker verbs, abstract nouns, and a deemphasis of details to downplay unfavorable facts. Minimizing the impact of unfavorable facts and emphasizing the impact of favorable facts, must be subtle, so as to retain an overall tone of impartiality. In the statement of facts a judge wants all relevant factual information, and his or her confidence in your presentation may be undermined by an overly strident and partisan statement of facts. Reserve overt adversarial language for the main argument.

In most instances, counsel should preface the summary of argument and statement of facts with a very brief introduction, usually no more than one or two sentences, to provide a very basic initial orientation to the pleading before the judge, e.g., "This is a general demurrer by Defendant Doe to Plaintiff's causes of action for invasion of privacy and intentional infliction of emotional distress." The introduction, however brief, helps the judge to focus on the matter before the court.

The Introduction, Summary of Argument, and Statement of Facts is followed by the main argument, consisting of Main Issue headings and detailed argument following each heading [see respectively § 1.03[3][e] and [f]]. For further discussion of the basic structure and elements of a memorandum, see §§ 1.05[5] and 1.06[2][a].

[b] Main Issue Headings in the Argument

The main argument in a memorandum consists of a series of main issue headings, each followed by paragraphs of detailed argument that support its conclusory statement. The main issue headings, like those in the forms of this publication, should be presented as follows:

- Headings should be graphically highlighted from the rest of argument for easy reference, by use of boldface type, all-capital letters, or underlining, etc.

- Headings should be phrased assertively and argumentatively, so that the issue is identified and a favorable resolution of the issue argued in the same statement, e.g., The Court Should Sustain Defendant's Demurrer Because the Complaint Fails to State Facts Constituting a Misrepresentation Within the Meaning of Civil Code Section 1710. An effective argumentative heading summarizes the argument following and provides a convenient reference for the judge, who may not have time to read the entire argument. Argumentative phrasing is more forceful and has more persuasive impact than merely declarative headings.

- Headings should be placed in a series that logically leads the judge to the final conclusion. Just the argument under each heading should logically compel the conclusion stated in that heading, so too the headings should compel the argument's conclusion.

Note that, in a more complex memorandum, it may be necessary to utilize argumentative subheadings in order to organize most logically and forcefully the argument under a main heading.

[c] The Argument

Following each heading are paragraphs providing the detailed text of the argument. For convenience, each paragraph is referred to here as a "point" or "point paragraph." In writing the point paragraphs, which are the heart of the memorandum, the following considerations are paramount:

- Support Each Point With Authority. Each statement of law must be supported by citation to the best possible authority, whether statute, rule, or case law. The forms in this publication all conform to this requirements, setting out "point paragraphs" or statements of law supporting by primary source authority [see also § 1.04[7], for discussion regarding citation requirements and the citability of case law]. Secondary source authority, such as restatements or treatises, should be relied on only as additionalsupport for primary authority, or as a last resort when there is no primary authority on point.

- Present Points in Logical Progression Leading to the Conclusion of the Main Issue Heading. Each point paragraph should be positioned so that the entire series of paragraph are steps leading logically and progressively to the conclusion stated in the Main Issue heading [see § 1.03[3][b]]. The argument should demonstrate that the conclusion is sound, and indeed, necessary, irrespective of the opposition's best argument [see also discussion in § 1.03[3][d]].

- Discuss Each Point And Link the Law Favorably to Your Facts. Each point paragraph must include discussion that applies the statement of law to the facts. This should be done by reference to the statement of facts [see § 1.03[3][a]] and to any attached declarations or exhibits. Just as obviously, the law and facts must be discussed in argument that demonstrates how the law applies favorably to the facts and supports the ultimate conclusion of the Main Issue heading [see § 1.03[3][b]].

- Show That a Ruling in Your Favor Will Satisfy Legal Precedent, Justice, Policy, and Practical Concerns. The attorney's argument should assist the judge in reaching a favorable decision, by articulating clearly all possible reasons why a favorable decision is the right decision. Thus, the attorney should include all the reasons the judge could be expected to provide in a written statement of decision in favor of the attorney's client. While the foremost reason is the logical application of legal precedent, the attorney should also articulate reasons why a favorable decision will produce a just result consistent with policy or practical concerns. When presenting arguments based on justice and policy, the attorney should consider carefully what is appropriate and what is overreaching or irrelevant. If the equities of the case are unfavorable, the attorney may have to argue against natural sympathy or apparent justice, as for example, by downplaying immediate equity in favor of more distant but ultimately more important policy goals.

[d] Refuting Opposing Argument

In a memorandum, the attorney must discuss opposing argument, unfavorable facts, and contrary authority so that they may be distinguished, explained, or refuted. Unfavorable facts or authority should not, however, receive equal treatment; through proper emphasis and organization the attorney should consistently highlight the attorney's own argument and conclusion.

One effective way to deal with opposition while emphasizing one's own position is to "surround" the opposition. In other words, with regard to each issue, the attorney begins a section with his or her own argument, then acknowledges and refutes the opposition in the middle, and concludes with his or her own argument.

Refuting the opposition may take a number of forms, including the following:

- A comparison of the weight of authority on each side.
- Interpretation of a rule or analysis of the policies behind it.
- Distinguishing the facts of the case so as to avoid unfavorable application of a rule of law.
- Conceding issues that are relatively unimportant, or which cannot be effectively refuted, in order to focus on strengths.
- Distinguishing the opposition's legal authorities.

The attorney should attempt to provide more than one basis for refuting the opposition, and when possible, provide the judge with as many avenues to support a favorable decision.

In a supporting memorandum, refuting the opposition requires anticipating and possibly acknowledging the opposing party's arguments, without providing the opposition with ammunition to undermine the supporting memorandum. A reply memorandum may be utilized to deal with opposing argument not addressed in the supporting memorandum.

In the case of an opposing memorandum, the attorney has the disadvantage of being "on the defensive," and having to respond to issues and argument not completely of his or her own choosing. In this situation it is sometimes effective to rephrase more favorably the issues stated by the moving party. It is also important to avoid the stance of mere negativity. Argument, including argument responsive to the moving party's brief, should be phrased in positive terms. The attorney should also advance any new argument that may undermine the moving party's position.

An attorney in the position of responding to a supporting memorandum should also consider whether the motion involves an issue of sufficient importance that it requires concerted opposition in light of his or her overall case strategy. Motions are often made without informing the opposition in advance of filing. Orders are sought regarding matters that an opposing lawyer might have agreed to if asked. In this situation, it may be strategically preferable to stipulate to the motion [see Linsk v. Linsk (1969) 70 Cal. 2d 272, 276-278, 74 Cal. Rptr. 544, 449 P.2d 760 (giving examples of matters to which attorneys may and may not stipulate)].

Alternatively, rather than filing direct opposition, the attorney may find it more advantageous to file a counter motion and seize the initiative. For example, in amotion for change of venue, the opposing party may agree on the basic argument that the venue should be changed, but countermove for a forum different from that proposed by the moving party [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 396b, 397].

[e] The Conclusion

At the end of the memorandum, the attorney should include a conclusion section. The conclusion should be a succinct summary of the relief requested or opposed, and the reason why the relief should be granted or denied.

[4] Considerations in Specific Proceedings

[a] Demurrers

The most common ground for demurrer is the general demurrer, that is, the failure of the complaint or cross complaint to state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action. The main advantage of the demurrer is that it permits the demurring party to object at an early stage in the proceedings to the sufficiency of the opposing party's legal theories. Thus, a defendant may be able to eliminate certain causes of action or narrow the grounds for the plaintiff's action before the defendant files an answer. The defendant can also force the plaintiff to amend the complaint to further determine the plaintiff's theories before an answer is filed and before discovery is conducted.

The disadvantages to demurring may outweigh the advantages, however, even when a complaint is technically demurrable. The demurrer will educate opposing counsel and will require opposing counsel to concentrate and focus on the action. Since leave to amend is usually granted, plaintiff's counsel is given the opportunity to cure any defects in the action early in the proceedings.

When one is considering whether to demur or not to demur, one should consider the alternatives such as an answer, a motion to strike, or a motion for summary judgment later in the proceedings. Discovery is an alternative procedure that should also be considered.

When writing the memorandum in support of a demurrer, one should be as specific and organized as possible. For example, one should demur to specific causes of action in a complaint that alleges several breach of contract theories; if one were to attack the entire complaint, the demurrer might be overruled if only one of several causes of action is valid.

The party opposing the demurrer should state the facts of the complaint as facts, rather than stating that facts are "alleged." One need only state once that the allegations of the complaint are presumed true for purposes of the demurrer; after that has been stated, the facts can thus be stated as facts rather than qualified with the term "alleged." It may also be useful at times to quote particular allegations to ensure that the judge reads those portions of the pleading that demonstrate a cause of action is sufficiently stated. Finally, the party opposing demurrer should always conclude by a statement to the effect leave to amend is not needed, since the demurrer should be overruled, but in the event it is sustained, the court should grant leave to amend.

See also the references in § 1.04[1][d].

[b] Summary Judgment Motions

Although the valid purpose of the summary judgment motion is to obtain a judgment prior to trial, or to eliminate issues from trial, a summary judgment motion may also be used for discovery. The moving party sometimes makes this motion in order to discover the theories of the opposing party before trial. By moving for summary judgment, the opposition is required to set forth the nature of the dispute and the facts and theories precluding summary judgment, and the moving party obtains this information regardless of the outcome of the motion. Note, however, that a motion made solely for this purpose is arguably subject to sanctions [see Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7].

The party moving for summary judgment should be careful in the memorandum and supporting pleadings to meet all of the special procedural requirements for summary judgment. This is important particularly because summary judgment requires the entry of judgment without a trial and therefore prevents a party from having his or her day in court. For detailed discussion of the procedure to be followed on motions for summary judgment, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 537, Summary Judgment (Matthew Bender).

Summary judgment motions are based on extrinsic evidence such as declarations. Thus, citations to the factual record are critical in the memorandum. Critical passages should be quoted rather than paraphrased even though the actual material (e.g., deposition transcript) will accompany the memorandum of points and authorities.

The opposing party has a decision to make with respect to emphasis and detailed discussion in his or her memorandum in opposition to the motion. He or she can be surgically precise and attack the adequacy of the showing, or can set forth more than is required to defeat the motion to ensure the motion's defeat. Most attorneys are concerned about not firing all of their shots, but if the moving party's showing is inadequate, as sometime occurs in summary judgment motions, then the lawyer should be confident that a few well-placed facts and arguments may be sufficient to defeat the motion. Proffering all of your evidence in opposition to a summary judgment motion enables the moving party to determine the position of the opposing party and will enable the moving party to have used summary judgment for discovery purposes to meet the moving party's burden of proof.

Thus, the opposing party should write confidently, but write technically, eitherto show the inadequacy of the showing or provide the evidentiary bases for raising genuine issues of material fact so as to defeat the summary judgment motion.

[c] TRO's and Injunctions

A party seeking injunctive relief bears a heavy burden, and consequently it is necessary for that party to prepare well-written moving papers, particularly a well-written supporting memorandum. The heavy burden exists because the moving party must show a likelihood of success in order to obtain injunctive relief. The moving party is also usually under severe time pressure. Finally, the moving party must convince the judge that the requested injunctive relief is more "prohibitory" (thou shall not) than "mandatory" (thou shall). California courts have limited the issuance of mandatory preliminary injunctions to extreme cases while permitting injunctive relief in prohibitory cases [see, e.g., Alvarez v. Eden Township Hosp. Dist. (1961) 191 Cal. App. 2d 309, 312, 12 Cal. Rptr. 661]. The moving party must therefore anticipate opposition by taking care to request relief in prohibitory rather than mandatory terms.

Perhaps the most important part of the memorandum in support of injunctive relief is the statement of facts. The statement of facts must demonstrate to the judge the necessity for the injunctive relief being requested. Thus, the statement of facts must be extremely persuasive in and of itself, and be based on competent extrinsic evidence in the form of declarations, affidavits, and other evidence.

The equitable considerations should be stressed by the moving party, and the statement of facts should be arranged to stress the equities in favor of the moving party. The inadequacy of the legal remedy should be stressed and the fact that the injury is irreparable should be demonstrated. In demonstrating that the injury is irreparable, it is helpful to anticipate the alternatives to injunctive relief and to negate the adequacy of such alternatives.

The party opposing the injunctive relief should take special care to write an affirmative statement of facts, not just "no, that did not happen." The opposition should attack the specific equitable grounds set forth by the moving party by showing the adequacy of the legal remedies or by showing the different alternatives to injunctive relief. In appropriate circumstances, the opposing party should attempt the boomerang effect; if the moving party has anticipated alternatives to injunctive relief and attempted to negate those alternatives, the opposing party can suggest that the anticipation of those alternatives by the moving party suggests their viability.

Finally, the opposing party should attack the evidentiary basis of the moving papers. The opposing party may do so in the body of the opposing memorandum; if the attack on the evidentiary basis is extensive, a summary can be set forth in the body of the memorandum and an appendix may be added in which the objections are further detailed.

See also references to related memoranda in § 1.04[1][d].

[d] Motions in Limine

A motion in limine a motion made just prior to trial and is used to ensure either that particular evidence is admitted or particular evidence is excluded or not referred to during the trial. The motion is often used to ensure that extremely prejudicial evidence is excluded or not referred to by opposing counsel. The other major reason for making a motion in limine is to ensure that particularly important evidence is admitted at the trial. A motion in limine would enable a party seeking the admission of particular evidence to better weigh the settlement value of a particular case. If the judge indicates that the evidence, which is important to the moving party, will not be admitted at trial, the party may lower his or her expectations and thus may be induced to settle.

Most motions in limine can be anticipated since the key evidence in the case should be apparent to counsel on both sides. Whenever the admissibility or excludability of particular evidence is in question, and whenever such evidence is critical to the outcome of the case, a motion in limine is likely. Both parties should be aware of the possibility of making a motion in limine, and both parties should be anticipating the opposition to such a motion, particularly since the motions are normally made just before trial, and little time exists then for preparing written memoranda.

The memorandum in support of the motion in limine should be drafted to enable the trial judge to orient himself or herself to the nature of the case as well as to the specific evidence problem. The moving party thus has an opportunity to educate the trial judge at the outset of the trial or just before the trial; the opportunity, however, can be disastrous if the moving party overstates his or her case. For example, if the moving party states that the admission of particular evidence is necessary for plaintiff's case, then the plaintiff is inviting the judge's belief that the case is not viable if the evidence is excluded. Such a mistake can have the consequence of opening the door for the judge's thinking that a judgment notwithstanding the verdict may be appropriate in the event the jury rules in favor of the plaintiff.

PRACTICE TIP:

Motions in Limine Distinguished With Regard to Memoranda and Oral Argument. As discussed in § 1.03[1][d], in most motion proceedings, the memoranda play a key role while oral argument is comparatively rare. By contrast, memoranda submitted in support of a motion in limine are generally brief and to the point, usually consisting of no more than two or three pages, and judges deciding such motions usually rely heavily on oral argument. Thus, when presenting a motion in limine it is important both to have a concise written presentation of the motion, and also to be prepared to persuasive oralargument. Evelio M. Grillo, Esq.

See also discussion in § 1.04[1][c].

[e] Motions for New Trial or JNOV

A memorandum supporting a motion for new trial or judgment notwithstanding the verdict is often based on a memoranda for summary judgment filed earlier during the proceedings or the trial brief. Such motions may also be based on a motion in limine aimed at excluding particular evidence. Evidence actually admitted or excluded at trial will usually be included in the posttrial memorandum.

A major difficulty in writing a memorandum in support of a posttrial memorandum is injecting a fresh approach to the writing. The person writing the memorandum should review it with this in mind.

The opposing party should state the case affirmatively and positively. The usual memorandum in opposition to a substantive posttrial motion states that the verdict is supported by the evidence, that the defendant is ignoring all such evidence, and that the defendant is ignoring the standard of law that requires that all reasonable inferences should be viewed in favor of the winning party.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeOpposing MemorandaCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeSupporting MemorandaCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentMotions for Summary JudgmentWritten MotionsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New TrialsCivil ProcedureAppealsBriefsCriminal Law & ProcedurePretrial Motions & ProceduresGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 1 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS
I. INTRODUCTION

1-1 California Points & Authorities § 1.04

AUTHOR: Evelio M. Grillo, Esq., Editorial Consultant

§ 1.04 When Memoranda Are Required or Needed

[1] Supporting Memoranda Usually Required

[a] Use of Supporting Memoranda Generally

A supporting memorandum is required now in almost all proceedings in which a motion, application, or petition may be made or opposed by any party in an action. See § 1.04[1][b] -[e] for discussion of the proceedings in which they are required, and see § 1.04[1][f] for an illustrative list of common proceedings requiring or needing supporting memoranda, with cross-references relating to those proceedings.

A supporting memorandum is strongly recommended in those instances in which it is not required. For example, an oral motion at trial does not require a supporting memorandum. Usually time and circumstance preclude the preparation of one. In some instances, however, an oral motion is easily anticipated and will greatly benefit from the advanced preparation and submission of a memorandum. The most common example is a motion in limine, made immediately before trial regarding evidentiary issues. While a motion in limine is often made without a supporting memorandum, the motion can usually be anticipated by the moving party and can involve issues critical to his or her case. In such a case it may be useful to prepare a supporting memoranda to support oral argument. For further discussion of motions in limine, see § 1.03[4][d] and California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 373, Motions in Limine (Matthew Bender).

PRACTICE TIP:

Prepare Memorandum Whenever Time Permits. Even when not required, a supporting memorandum, when brief and to-the-point, may nevertheless be effectual in proceedings such as an oral motion. One or two pages citing the authority under which the motion is being made may be a big help to the Court. Consider drafting memoranda for important proceedings in which they are not required, when the proceedings are anticipated or time otherwise allows preparation.

[b] Memorandum Required to Support Demurrer or Notice of Motion

One of the main rules regarding supporting memorandum is set out in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113, requiring a supporting memorandum to accompany any notice of motion [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 3.1113(a); see also Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1112(a) (papers filed in support of motion must, at least, consist of the motion itself, notice of hearing on the motion, and a memorandum in support of motion or demurrer)].

The requirements of Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113, as well as the other requirements set out in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1100 et seq., apply generally to all civil law and motion proceedings, as defined in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 3.1103, and also to discovery conducted in family law and probate proceedings [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1100].

Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1103 defines "law and motion" to include the following:

- Proceedings on application before trial for an order, except for causes arising under the Welfare and Institutions Code, the Probate Code, the Family Code, or Code Civ. Proc., §§ 527.6, 527.7, and 527.8 (injunctive relief from harassment, domestic violence, gang violence, and violence to employees) [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1103(a)(1)].

- Proceedings on application for an order regarding enforcement of judgments, attachment, appointment of receivers, obtaining or setting aside default judgments, writs of review, mandate, and prohibition, petitions to compel arbitration, and enforcement of arbitration awards [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1103(a)(2)].

As noted above, the requirement of submitting a supporting memorandum under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(a), applies when filing a demurrer or a"notice of motion." A notice of motion is required in the following instances under Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(a):

(1) Notice of application and hearing for a writ of attachment under Code Civ. Proc. § 484.040.

(2) Notice of application and hearing for claim and delivery under Code Civ. Proc. § 512.030.

(3) Notice of hearing for claim of exemption under Code Civ. Proc. § 706.105.

(4) Motion to quash summons under Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(b).

(5) Motion for determination of a good-faith settlement under Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6.

(6) Hearing for discovery of a peace officer's personnel records under Evid. Code § 1043.

(7) Notice of hearing of a third-party claim under Code Civ. Proc. § 720.320.

(8) Motion for an order to attend a deposition more than 150 miles from deponent's residence under Code Civ. Proc. § 2025.260.

(9) Notice of hearing of application for relief under Gov. Code § 946.6.

(10) Motion to set aside default or default judgment and for leave to defend action pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 473.5.

(11) Motion to expunge notice of pendency of action pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 405.30.

(12) Motion to set aside default or default judgment and for leave to amend pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 585.5.

(13) Any other proceeding under the Code of Civil Procedure in which notice is required and no other time or method is prescribed by law or by court or judge.

For further discussion of when a notice of motion is required, the requirements applicable to such motions, and a general forms of noticed motion, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 372, Motions and Orders (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to demurrers, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings (Matthew Bender) [see also Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgments on the Pleadings , for memoranda relating specifically to demurrers].

The absence of a memorandum except when exempted under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1114(a), may be construed by the court as an admission that the motion or demurrer is not meritorious and cause for its denial and, in the case of a demurrer, as a waiver of all grounds not supported [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(a)]. Local trial court rules should be consulted for possible additional effects for failure to file. For example, a local court may have discretion, if it chooses not to deny the matter on its merits, either to place the matter off calendar or to allow a continuance [see, e.g., Los Angeles Co. Super. Ct. Rules, Rule 9.5].

[c] Memorandum Required to Support Motion for New Trial

Although motions for a new trial are excluded from the requirements of Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(a) (discussed in § 1.04[1][b]), a party seeking a new trial is nevertheless required to file a supporting memorandum within 10 days of filing the notice of intention to move for a new trial [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1600(a)]. For discussion and forms relating to motions for a new trial, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 371, Motions After Trial (Matthew Bender) [see also Ch. 155, Motions After Trial , for memoranda relating specifically to demurrers].

Absent a memorandum in support of a motion for new trial, the court may deny the motion without a hearing on the merits [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1600(b)].

[d] Memorandum Required to Support Petition for Writ

The requirement that a memorandum be filed in support of a petition for a writ of mandate, prohibition, or review may reasonably be inferred from the fact that such petitions are subject to the requirements of Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1100 et seq., including Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(a) (discussed in § 1.04[1][b]) [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1103(a)(2) and discussion in § 1.04[1][b]], and from statutory references and requirements that render such petitions essentially equivalent to a "notice of motion" [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1003 ("motion" as application for an order), 1088, 1089, 1090, 1107 (all referring to petition as "motion" or "application" and including minimum notice requirements)].

[e] Memorandum Required to Support Ex Parte Application

A supporting memorandum must be included with an ex parte application [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1201].

A memorandum was not previously required with respect to an ex parte application, as distinguished from a noticed motion. It is arguable that this new requirement is different than the requirement of a memorandum in support of a noticed motion or demurrer. The difference, arguably, is based on the difference between a noticed motion and an ex parte application. The latter are generally allowed only in exceptional circumstances, either because of some emergency or because the matter is so routine a more expensive hearing on noticed motion is unnecessary [see, e.g., Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1202(c) (requiring ex parte application to be supported by declaration with competent facts based on personal knowledge showing irreparable harm, immediate danger, or some other statutorybasis for ex parte relief rather than relief after a hearing on noticed motion)]. In other words, it is arguable that an extensive memorandum is not required, because either the exigent circumstances preclude its timely preparation, or the routine nature of the matter at hand renders it unnecessary.

For further discussion and forms relating to ex parte applications in general, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 372, Motions and Orders (Matthew Bender).

[f] References to Commonly Used Procedural Points and Authorities

As noted in § 1.04[1][a]-[e], supporting memoranda are required in a majority of motion proceedings. The proceedings in which they are more commonly used, together with references to memoranda relating to those proceedings, are as follows:

- Pretrial Motions on the Pleadings. These include:
  - Motions to dismiss for lack of jurisdiction (see Ch. 132, Jurisdiction: Personal Jurisdiction and Inconvenient Forum and Ch. 133, Jurisdiction: Subject Matter Jurisdiction).
  - Demurrers or motions for judgment on the pleadings (see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings , and § 1.06[4][a]).
  - Motions to strike (see Ch. 160, Motions to Strike).
  - Motions for leave to amend or supplement pleadings (see Ch. 16, Amended and Supplemental Pleadings).
  - Motions relating to cross complaints (see Ch. 61, Cross Complaints).
- Pretrial Motions for Disposition Without Trial. These include:
  - Motions for summary judgment and summary adjudication (see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments , and § 1.06[4][b]).
  - Motions for involuntary dismissal based on delay in prosecution of the action (see Ch. 90, Dismissal).
  - Motions to dismiss, exclude evidence, or adjudicate certain issues as a sanction (see Ch. 82, Discovery: Sanctions for Discovery Misuse , and Ch. 207, Sanctions).
- Pretrial Motions to Preserve Assets or Status Quo. These include:
  - Motions relating to attachment, receivers, and similar provisional relief (see, e.g., Ch. 23, Attachment ; Ch. 40, Claim and Delivery ; and Ch. 200, Receivers).
  - Motions for injunctive relief (see Ch. 116, Injunctions ; see also discussion in § 1.04[1][c] and § 1.06[4][c]).
  - Motions for security for costs (see Ch. 60, Costs).
- Discovery Motions. These include a wide variety of motions under the Discovery Act (Code Civ. Proc. § 2016.010 et seq.), including motions to compel or limit discovery, motions relating to the taking, recording, and distribution of depositions, motions relating to expert witness lists and expert witness, motions for discovery to preserve evidence, and motions for sanctions for noncompliance with discovery orders. See

- Ch. 80, Discovery: Scope, Regulation, and Timing
- Ch. 81, Discovery: Privileges and Other Discovery Limitations
- Ch. 82, Discovery: Sanctions for Discovery Misuse
- Ch. 83, Discovery: Depositions
- Ch. 84, Discovery: Interrogatories
- Ch. 85, Discovery: Production or Inspection of Tangible Evidence
- Ch. 86, Discovery: Requests for Admissions
- Ch. 87, Discovery: Physical and Mental Examinations
- Ch. 88, Discovery: Exchange of Expert Witness Information
- Ch. 89, Discovery: Preservation of Evidence
- Ch. 89A, Discovery: Review of Discovery Orders

- Other Motions Relating to the Parties or Action. These, usually pretrial, motions include:

  - Motions to interplead or intervene (see Ch. 123, Interpleader , and Ch. 124, Intervention).
  - Motions to change venue (see Ch. 238, Venue).
  - Motions to add parties (see Ch. 168, Parties).
  - Motions to sever, consolidate, or coordinate causes of action (see Ch. 45, Consolidation, Severance, and Coordination of Actions).
  - Motion to certify, or decertify, a class (see Ch. 41, Class and Representative Actions).
  - Motions to advance, continue, or stay the action (see Ch. 180, Pretrial Proceedings , Ch. 48, Continuance of Proceedings , and Ch. 10, Abatement and Survival of Actions).

- Post-Order or Post-Judgment Motions. These include:

  - Motions to reconsider an order (see Ch. 158, Motions to Reconsider and Renewed Motions).
  - Motions for a new trial or for judgment notwithstanding the verdict (see Ch. 155, Motions After Trial).

- Motions to tax or strike a memorandum of costs, or motions relating to the entitlement or determination of the amount of an award of attorney's fees (see Ch. 60, Costs).

- Motions for interest (see Ch. 121, Interest).

- Motions to amend or correct a judgment (see Ch. 131, Judgments).

- Motions for relief from a default, default judgment or judgment (see Ch. 70, Defaults, Default Judgments, and Relief From Judgments and Orders).

- Writ Petitions. These include:

  - Petitions to review interlocutory orders by writ of mandate or prohibition (see Ch. 150, Mandate and Prohibition).

  - Other petitions for review of contempt orders, administrative decisions, etc. (see Ch. 205, Review (Certiorari), Writ of , and Ch. 195, Public Administrative Law; see also Ch. 47, Contempt , and Ch. 110, Habeas Corpus).

[2] Opposing Memoranda

Opposing memoranda are generally permitted, but not required.

Even though not expressly required, an opposing memorandum is itself the opposition to a motion, demurrer, or petition. No other opposing paper, aside from any appropriate attachments, is necessary. Opposing memoranda are therefore strongly recommended [see Los Angeles Co. Super. Ct. Rules, Rule 9.15 (failure to file opposition creates inference that motion or demurrer is meritorious)]. If the moving party has filed a supporting memorandum, an opposing memorandum is essential absent a deliberate decision not to oppose the proceeding. Even when no supporting memorandum has been filed, a brief opposing memorandum is appropriate to argue that court should exercise its discretion to deny the motion or demurrer [see § 105.04[1][a] and [b], for discussion of effect of failure to file a required supporting memorandum].

If a party has decided not to oppose a matter, that party should, as a courtesy to the court, file and serve a statement of nonopposition on or before the date on which any written opposition is due.

[3] Reply Memoranda

Reply memoranda are generally permitted, but not required. Reply memoranda have a much more limited function than supporting or opposing memoranda and should not be abused. Generally they are appropriate only in situations such as the following:

- When the opposing papers raised facts or legal issues not mentioned in the supporting memorandum. These should include some explanation for the omission.

- When new law or facts relevant to the proceeding have come to the attention of the moving party only after the supporting memorandum was filed. Again, explanation for omission of the material from the supporting memorandum should be supplied when necessary. In this situation it will usually be necessary to allow the opposing party time to prepare a response to such new law or facts.

[4] Time for Serving and Filing Memoranda

The general deadlines for serving and filing memoranda in most noticed motion proceedings are governed by Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b) [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1300]:

- Supporting memoranda, together with other moving and supporting papers, must be served and filed at least 16 court days before the hearing; the moving and supporting papers served must be a copy of the papers filed or to be filed.

- Opposing memoranda must be filed and a copy served on each party at least 9 court days before the hearing.

- Reply memoranda, when submitted, must be filed and a copy served on each party at least five court days before the hearing.

Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b) also specifies the allowable extensions of time when service of moving papers is by mail, FAX, or express mail, and requires as well that service of opposing and reply papers must be by means reasonably calculated to ensure delivery by the close of the next business day after filing.

Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b) does not apply to all proceedings in which memoranda are used, and counsel should check for the possible application of different service and filing requirements in specific proceedings [see, e.g., Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(a), (b) (service and filing requirements in proceedings forsummary judgment or summary adjudication)]. For further discussion of service and filing requirements generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 372, Motions and Orders (Matthew Bender).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeOpposing MemorandaCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeSupporting MemorandaCivil ProcedurePartiesInterventionMotions to InterveneCivil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsMotionsCivil ProcedureAppealsBriefs

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 1 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS
I. INTRODUCTION

1-1 California Points & Authorities § 1.05

AUTHOR: Evelio M. Grillo, Esq., Editorial Consultant

§ 1.05 Format Requirements

[1] Page Length Limits

[a] In General

The general page limits, which apply to the vast majority of memoranda, that is, those filed in trial court "law and motion" proceedings (discussed in § 1.04[1][b]), are as follows [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(d)]:

- An opening or responding memorandum may not exceed 15 pages, except in a summary judgment or summary adjudication motion (discussed in § 1.05[1][b]).

- A reply or closing memorandum may not exceed 10 pages.

- These page limits do not take into account exhibits, declarations, attachments, a table of contents, a table of authorities, or the proof of service. [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(d)]. If the memorandum includes a table of contents and table of authorities, the caption page also appears to be excluded in calculating the page length of the memorandum. The pagination requirements applicable to memoranda that include such tables provide that the caption page is not to be numbered, the tables are to be numbered separately using lowercase Roman numerals, and the consecutive numbering of the memorandum itself in Arabic numerals is to begin on the first page of the text [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(h) and discussion in § 1.05[2]].

A memorandum that exceeds the page limitations of Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(d), will not be rejected for filing on the ground that it is too long. However, the court has discretion to refuse to consider such a memorandum; if the court so decides, its minutes or order must so indicate [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 3.1113(d), 3.1300(d)].

[b] Summary Judgment or Adjudication

In a summary judgment or summary adjudication motion, no opening or responding memorandum may exceed 20 pages [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(d)]. Otherwise the general limits and exceptions apply [see § 1.05[1][a] and § 1.05[1][c]].

[c] Procedure for Filing Longer Memorandum

A party may apply to the court at least 24 hours before the memorandum is due for leave to file a longer memorandum. The application must state reasons why the argument cannot be made within the page limitations [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(e)].

Although the application is ex parte, the applicant must provide written notice of the application to other parties [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(e)]. Although the application is expressly excepted from the requirement of a personal appearance by the applicant [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1207], other requirements applicable to ex parte application generally must be observed [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1200 et seq.].

An applicant should, if possible, make the application sufficiently in advance so that the memorandum may be brought within applicable page limits if the application is denied. Counsel should also avoid any temptation to circumvent the page-limit requirements by way of utilizing any format "sleight of hand," in lieu of an application or in the event an application is denied. Such practices are obvious to the courts and create a highly negative impression [see Marriage of Green (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 14, 28, 261 Cal. Rptr. 294 (appellate brief deemed an "insult" to the court when it included an unpaginated "Introduction," and unpaginated "exhibits" that contained discussion which was properly a part of the brief, and also contained an excessive use of single-spaced footnotes that also included discussion and text that was properly part of the brief)]. See also the discussion in § 1.03[2][d], relating to concise writing a brevity as a drafting consideration.

For further discussion and a form of application for leave to file a memorandum in excess of applicable page limits, see § 1.11.

[2] General Paper and Format Requirements

The format of a memorandum is subject to the general format requirements applicable generally to papers filed in trial courts [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.100 et seq.], as well the general format requirement applicable generally to law and motion proceedings under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1110 [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 3.1100, 3.1113(a)].

The general requirements of Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 2.100-2.119, include the following:

- Recycled paper must be used for all original papers and all copies of papers, documents, and exhibits, whether filed or served on other parties. The attorney, party, or other person filing or serving a document certifies, by the act of filing or service, that the document was produced on paper purchased as recycled [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.101; see Pub. Res. Code § 42202; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1.6 (defining recycled paper)].

- The paper must be typewritten or printed, or prepared by a photocopyingor other duplicating process that will produce clear and permanent copies equally legible to printing. It must also use a type size not smaller than 12 points. The paper used must be opaque and unglazed, white or unbleached, of standard quality not less than 20-pound weight and 81/2 by 11 inches in size [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 2.103, 2.104].

- Papers presented for filing must have two prepunched normal-size holes, centered 21/2 inches apart and 5/8 of an inch from the top of the paper [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.1115].

- Only one side of the paper is to be used. The lines on each page must be double or one and one-half spaced, and the lines must be consecutively numbered. Descriptions of real property may be single-spaced, and quotations, footnotes, and footers may be single-spaced on unnumbered lines if they otherwise comply generally with the spacing requirements of Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111 [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 2.102, 2.107, 2.108; see § 1.05[3] for discussion of requirements of Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111].

- Pages are to be numbered consecutively at the bottom, and each paper is to consist entirely of original pages without riders, firmly bound together at the top [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 2.109, 2.113; see also Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1110(c) (bound papers to be numbered consecutively)]. Note, however, that if a memorandum includes a table of contents and table of authorities, it must be paginated as follows notwithstanding any other rule: the caption page or pages is not to be numbered, the pages of the tables are to be numbered consecutively using lowercase Roman numerals starting on the first page of the tables, and the pages of the text of the memorandum are to be numbered consecutively using Arabic numerals starting on the first page of the text [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(h)].

- Each page must have a footer in the bottom margin, below the page number and separated by a printed horizontal line, which sets out the title of the paper or some clear and concise abbreviation [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.110(a), (b) (also providing two examples of abbreviations: "Complaint" and "XYZ Corp.'s Motion for Summary Judgment")]. The title or abbreviated title given in the footer must be in at least 10-point type [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.110(c)].

- Exhibits may be fastened to pages of the specified size, and when prepared by a machine copying process, must be equal to typewritten material in legibility and permanency of image [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.114].

The general requirements of Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1110, include the following:

- Reference to Previously Filed Papers. Any paper previously filed must be referred to by date of execution and title [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 3.1110(d)].

- Binding of Papers. All pages of the memorandum and each exhibit must be attached together at the top by a method that permits pages to be easily turned and the entire content of each page to be read [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1110(e)].

- Exhibits. If the memorandum has exhibits, each must be separated by a hard 81/2 by 11 inch sheet with hard paper or plastic tabs extending below the bottom of the page, bearing the designation of the exhibit. An index to exhibits must be provided. Pages from a single deposition and associated exhibits must be designated as a single exhibit. Exhibits in a foreign language must be accompanied by an English translation, certified under oath by a qualified interpreter [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1110(f), (g)].

For additional general requirements that apply to first page of a pleading or paper to be filed in a trial court, including the first page of a memorandum, see § 1.05[3].

Note that local rules relating to pleadings, demurrers, ex parte applications, motions, discovery, provisional remedies, and form and format of papers are expressly superseded by the statewide rules of court [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.20(a)].

[3] Requirements for First Page; Caption

The first page of the memorandum of points and authorities, if prepared as a separate document, must be in the following form [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111]:

- In the space commencing 1 inch from the top of the page with line 1, to the left of the center of the page, the name, office address or, if none, residence address or mailing address (if different), telephone number, fax number and e-mail address (if available), and State Bar membership number of the attorney for the party in whose behalf the paper is presented, or of the party if he or she is appearing in person. The inclusion of a fax number or e-mail address on any document does not constitute consent to service by fax or e-mail unless otherwise provided by law.

- In the first 2 inches of space between lines 1 and 7 to the right of the center of the page, a blank space for the use of the clerk.

- On line 8, at or below 3 1/3 inches from the top of the paper, the title of the court.

- Below the title of the court, in the space to the left of the center of thepage, the title of the case. In the title of the case on each initial complaint or cross-complaint, the name of each party must commence on a separate line beginning at the left margin of the page. On any subsequent pleading or paper, it is sufficient to provide a short title of the case (1) stating the name of the first party on each side, with appropriate indication of other parties, and (2) stating that a cross-action or cross-actions are involved (e.g., "and Related Cross-action"), if applicable.

- To the right of and opposite the title, the number of the case.

- Below the number of the case, the nature of the paper and, on all complaints and petitions, the character of the action or proceeding. In a case having multiple parties, any answer, response, or opposition must specifically identify the complaining, propounding, or moving party and the complaint, motion, or other matter being answered or opposed.

- Below the nature of the paper or the character of the action or proceeding, the name of the judge and department, if any, to which the case is assigned.

- Below the nature of the paper or the character of the action or proceeding, the word "Referee:" followed by the name of the referee, on any paper filed in a case pending before a referee appointed under Code of Civil Procedure section 638 or 639.

- On the complaint, petition, or application filed in a limited civil case, below the character of the action or proceeding, the amount demanded in the complaint, petition, or application, stated as follows: "Amount demanded exceeds $10,000" or "Amount demanded does not exceed $10,000," as required by Government Code section 72055.

- In the caption of every pleading and every other paper filed in a limited civil case, the words "Limited Civil Case," as required by Code of Civil Procedure section 422.30(b).

- If a case is reclassified by an amended complaint, cross-complaint, amended cross-complaint, or other pleading under Code of Civil Procedure section 403.020 or 403.030, the caption must indicate that the action or proceeding is reclassified by this pleading. If a case is reclassified by stipulation under Code of Civil Procedure section 403.050, the title of the stipulation must state that the action or proceeding is reclassified by this stipulation. The caption or title must state that the case is a limited civil case reclassified as an unlimited civil case, or an unlimited civil case reclassified as a limited civil case, or other words to that effect.

In addition, the first page must specify immediately below the case number [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1110(b)]:

- The date, time, and location, if ascertainable, of any scheduled hearing and the name of the hearing judge, if ascertainable.
- The nature or title of any attached document other than an exhibit.
- The date of filing of the action.
- The trial date, if set.

If a party wishes to appear by telephone, the phrase "Telephone Appearance" must be placed below the title of the moving or opposing papers [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.670(d); for detailed discussion of this type of appearance, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 372, Motions and Orders (Matthew Bender)].

For sample form of caption conforming to these requirements, for use at the beginning of the first page of memorandum of points and authorities that is to be filed as a separate document, see the skeletal form of a memorandum set out in § 1.10.

[4] Tables of Both Contents and Authorities Usually Required

A memorandum longer than 10 pages must include a table of contents and table of authorities [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(f)].

Any table of authorities should list, in alphabetical order, federal cases first, and then state cases. The page or pages on which each case is cited should appear directly opposite each case name in the table. Cases should be followed by statutes, also in alphabetical order by code title, with federal statutes preceding state statutes. Secondary sources, such as law review articles, treatises, or textbooks, should be included after statutes. This order is not, however, established in stone or by rule: it is accepted practice, for example, to cite the more relevant state authority before federal authority in memoranda filed in state trial courts. The tabling of statutory authority prior to case authority is also sometimes used, as it is the more logical arrangement of primary authority. For citation style of the table of authorities, see § 1.05[7].

For a sample skeletal form including tables of contents and authorities, which may be modified for use in drafting such tables, see § 1.10.

[5] Requirements Relating to Argument and Discussion

[a] Introduction and Summary of Argument

Although not required by statute, it is usually a good idea to include an introduction of one to two sentences in the memorandum. The introduction helps the court focus on which parties' brief the court is reading, the nature of the motion, and whether the brief is supporting or opposing the pending motion. Anexample of a simple introduction would be as follows: "This memorandum is submitted on behalf of plaintiff Jones and against defendant Smith in support of plaintiff Jones' Motion for Summary Judgment."

A memorandum filed in a trial court civil law and motion proceeding, which exceeds 15 pages, must include an opening summary of argument [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(f)]. Unless the memorandum is unusually short, a summary to preview the issues is good practice in any event; a summary of argument will necessarily include the memorandum's conclusions and requests for relief, which are not elsewhere required to the stated in the memorandum.

PRACTICE TIP:

Open With Introduction and Summary of Argument. The placement of the "opening" argument is not precisely specified by the rules. The best course is the obvious one: place the "opening" summary at the very beginning, before the initial statement of facts. This opening "issue context" will assist the reader in sifting quickly through the following statement of facts [see § 1.05[5][b]] and point the way leading to the reader's agreement with the memorandum's conclusions.

[b] Statement of Facts

A memorandum filed in a trial court civil law and motion proceeding must contain a statement of facts [Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 3.1113(b)]. The facts must come from any source that the court may accept as evidence in the particular proceeding. For example, memoranda supporting or opposing a demurrer may cite pleaded facts or facts subject to judicial notice, while those supporting or opposing a motion for summary judgment may cite facts set out in declarations or exhibits submitted in the proceeding, verified pleaded facts, or facts subject to judicial notice [see discussion in §§ 1.05[5][c] and 1.05[6]].

PRACTICE TIP:

Be Concise But Accurate. The statement should be concise, since it is to be followed by argument with citation to authority that will further explicate the most relevant facts and link them to the memorandum's legal conclusions. It should nevertheless accurately and completely set out all important facts and sufficient additional facts.

The statement of facts should be dispassionate, yet blend the favorable facts with unfavorable, in a manner that will subtly elicit agreement with the interpretation of facts most favorable to the memorandum's conclusions. Thus, favorable facts should be given emphasis and "woven" with any important unfavorable facts. A well-fashioned statement of facts will not mislead the reader, but will encourage the reader to follow the interpretation given to salient facts in the following argument (see § 1.05[5][c]).

See also comments in §§ 1.03[1][a] and 1.03[3][a].

[c] Statement of Law, Evidence, and Argument

A memorandum filed in a trial court civil law and motion proceeding must contain a concise statement of the law, evidence, and arguments relied on, and a discussion of the statutes, cases, and textbooks cited in support of the position advanced [Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 3.1113(b)]. In other words, a memorandum must include a statement and discussion of the legal authorities that support the memorandum's conclusions, linked by argument to evidence (see statement of facts discussed in § 1.05[5][b]), which, again, supports the memorandum's conclusions.

PRACTICE TIP:

Use Numbered Primary Headings With Lettered Secondary Discussion. Depending on the complexity of the issues presented and the length of the memorandum, the statement of law, evidence, and argument may be organized in any number of ways. One clear, recommended method of organization is as follows:

- Provide primary headings or paragraphs that are strong, affirmative statements supporting the party's position. These should be consecutively numbered using Arabic numbers.

- After each primary heading or paragraph, provide more detailed sections stating points of law, evidence, and argument that, taken together, support the primary paragraph. These should be consecutively designated with capital letters.

Forms in this publication facilitate drafting a memorandum as recommended above; each form has a single primary heading or paragraph (which is therefore not numbered in the form) followed by consecutively lettered secondary paragraphs (i.e., points of law and cited authority to which facts and argument need to be added).

When drafting a memorandum, primary paragraphs selected from the forms should be numbered consecutively as appropriate, and secondary sections should be re-lettered as necessary when adding, deleting, or reorganizing secondary paragraphs selected from the forms.

For further comments and discussion relating to preparing the argument, see § 1.03[3][b] -[d]. For discussion of preparing the argument portion of a memorandum by selecting and tailoring the forms in this publication, see § 1.06.

[6] Declarations, Exhibits, and Other Evidentiary or Legal Attachments

[a] Evidentiary Attachments

[i] Evidence Generally Necessary to Support Memorandum

A memorandum supporting a motion, demurrer, petition, etc., is normally accompanied by some form of evidence on which the motion or other application is based, usually in the form of affidavits or declarations under penalty of perjury setting forth evidentiary facts. If a memorandum refers to evidence that is not yet before the court, a copy of such evidence, usually in the form of an affidavit or declaration, must accompany the memorandum [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1010; see also Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b)].

While evidentiary facts are usually set out in an affidavit or declaration, they may also be set out in documentary evidence, presented as an exhibits that are authenticated by an affidavit or declaration attached to the exhibit, or in discovery products similarly authenticated (e.g., deposition testimony and interrogatories). Evidentiary facts may also be matters subject to judicial notice. When submitting evidence discussed in a memorandum of points and authorities, counsel must be cognizant of the foundational requirements for the court to consider the evidence, as well as the limitations on the Court's consideration of particular forms of evidence.

PRACTICE TIP:

Develop Evidence for Motion First. One of the common problems encountered by counsel when preparing a memorandum is to prepare legal arguments first before the evidentiary basis of the motion is fully understood. Except in cases of very simple motions which require very little evidentiary support, counsel should attempt to develop the evidence for the motion before expending substantial time and effort on drafting the legal argument section of the points and authorities. A brilliant legal argument, without supporting facts, will not prevail over a less complex, straight forward legal argument supported by one or two critical facts. Prepare the legal argument section of the memorandum with due consideration to the evidence available to support the motion. Evelio M. Grillo, Esq.

Note that some motions may not be supported by extrinsic evidence (for example, a demurrer, a motion for judgment on the pleadings under Code Civ. Proc. § 438, or a statutory motion to strike under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 435-437): in these instances the supporting or opposing memorandum must rely on pleadings or judicially noticed matters.

[ii] References to Declarations and Exhibits

References in a memorandum to a declaration, affidavit, or exhibit must include the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(l)].

[iii] Declarations and Affidavits

An affidavit is (1) a written declaration under oath made without notice to the adverse party [Code Civ. Proc. § 2003]; (2) one of the three modes of taking the testimony of a witness [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2002(1)]; and (3) expressly authorized for use "on a motion" [Code of Civ. Proc. § 2009]. A declaration under penalty of perjury may be used in lieu of an affidavit [Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]. For all practical purposes, declarations under penalty of perjury have replaced affidavits as the mode of presenting the evidence of a witness on a motion. For discussion and forms relating to affidavits and declarations generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations (Matthew Bender).

For requirements concerning the attachment of declarations and affidavits, see § 1.05[8].

[iv] Exhibits

Evidentiary exhibits may accompany a memorandum. Exhibits usually set out documentary evidence such as a contract central to the action. In most instances the exhibit will require authentication by declaration attached to the exhibit.

PRACTICE TIP:

Using Documentary Evidence. One common mistake made when submitting documentary evidence to the court in support of a factual statement in a memorandum is to attach the exhibit, or to submit it with an attorney declaration which inadequately authenticates the document. When submitting the document in support of the factual proposition asserted in a memorandum, provide sufficient foundation and authentication to overcome any evidentiary objections so that the court may properly consider the evidence in conjunction with your motion. Evelio M. Grillo, Esq.

Discovery products may also be used, in addition to documentary evidence, to support factual propositions asserted in a memorandum. Discovery products include responses to interrogatories, requests for admissions, deposition testimony, and documents obtained through discovery. Discovery products are, like documentary evidence, presented as exhibits that must be authenticated by an attorney or other declaration when being presented to the court. It is not enough for counsel simply to attach interrogatory responses or deposition testimony to abrief without the appropriate authentication.

For format requirements applicable to exhibits, see § 1.05[2].

[v] Facts Subject to Judicial Notice

If a memorandum relies on evidence or matters that subject to judicial notice, such judicial notice must be requested in a separate document that lists the specific items for which notice is requested, and the document must comply with the requirements of Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1306(c) [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(m)]. For further discussion of the requirements of Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1306(c) and a form of request for judicial notice, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

PRACTICE TIP:

Judicial Notice. Evidentiary material, such as statutes or pleadings, of which the party wishes the court to take judicial notice should be attached to the motion in some admissible form (for example, certified copies from the court or authenticated by declaration). Alternatively, the party requesting judicial notice should provide copies of the evidentiary material to the court and each party and arrange for the original documents to be in the courtroom at the time of hearing [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1306(c)].

Judicial notice can be a formidable device to present evidence to the court when the evidence presented meets the statutory requirement for judicial notice. Facts which are subject to dispute are not subject to judicial notice and are poor candidates for inclusion in an request for judicial notice. Conversely, prior judgments, prior verified complaints, and certified copies of deeds and other official government actions, when incorporated into a request for judicial notice, provide a sound evidentiary basis for a motion. Do not attempt to use judicial notice to present facts which are not properly judicially noticeable.

One good practice in complex law and motion matters is for counsel to include copies with any request for judicial notice of any relevant pleadings, papers, or orders in the proceedings. By incorporating such copies with the request, the court will be able to rely on the request for judicial notice rather than rummaging through five or ten volumes of files attempting to locate the documents cited in a memorandum of points and authorities. Evelio M. Grillo, Esq.

[b] Legal Attachments

If a memorandum cites to a court opinion in either of the following situations, a copy of the opinion must be attached to the memorandum and furnished to the court and other parties [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.1115(c)]:

- When the opinion is an unpublished opinion by the Court of Appeal or by an appellate department of the superior court, but is nevertheless citable under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.1115(b) [see § 1.05[7] [c] for discussion of these limited exceptions].

- When the opinion is by any court but is available only in a computer-based source of decisional law.

The copy should be attached and tabbed as an exhibit as required by Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1111(f) (discussed in § 1.05[2]).

In addition [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(j)]:

- If a California case is cited before the time that it is published in the Advance Sheets of the Official Reports, a copy of that case must be attached and tabbed as an exhibit pursuant to Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1110(f) (discussed in § 1.05[2]).

- If any authority is cited other than California cases, statutes, constitutional provisions, or state or local rules, a copy of this authority must be attached to the memorandum and tabbed as an exhibit under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1110(f) (discussed in § 1.05[2]).

Note that the requirements of Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(j) require attached copies of not only of non-California authority, but also any California authority not expressly mentioned, such as ordinances, regulations, or other unusual matter.

[7] Citation Requirements

[a] Case Citation Format

A citation to case law must include the volume and page number of the official court reporter and the year of decision; no other citations are required [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(c)]. Practitioners should not take this requirement too literally, however, even if it is construed merely to provide that citation to other reporters are not required. For one thing, the required case citation styles, discussed in § 1.05[7][b], must be considered. In particular, "point-pages," the specific pages of a case opinion that contain the language for which the case is cited, should always be included in a case citation. Judges, Justices, and court attorneys may be greatly inconvenienced if these are not provided.

PRACTICE TIP:

Priority in Citing Case Authority. In citing cases, it is most effective and economical to follow these guidelines:

- Cite to the highest legal authority that is binding and supports the party's position.

- Cite to the most recent case for a particular legal proposition. If the highest authority for the proposition is not a recent one, cite that authority and alower but more recent authority to show the proposition remains valid.

- Cite cases from the appellate district in which the action is pending when possible because authority from the district in which any appeal will be heard will likely be more persuasive to the trial judge.

- Avoid string citations when one case is dispositive. A string of citations dealing with a single legal proposition may be useful only when contrary authority exists among various appellate courts. Listing the pertinent cases with explanation acknowledges contrary cases and indicates the weight of authority for a proposition.

- Cite all relevant legal authority, even that which may not necessarily be favorable to one's position [see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 5-200]. Acknowledge contrary legal authority by distinguishing those cases on the facts or on the law. These cases will likely be identified either in the opposing papers or by the court's research attorneys. Thus, to ignore contrary cases will lead to losing credibility with the court.

- Verify that the cited case law is current and valid. The easiest way to do this is to check the status of all cases cited in Shepard's California Citations, or the Shepard's volume for the relevant jurisdiction, just before filing the memorandum of points and authorities.

- Avoid excessive use of headnotes. Do not rely exclusively on case headnotes or treatise interpretations of a case, because headnotes and treatises can be wrong and do not give the reader the full context of the decision.

[b] Citation Style: The Bluebook or The California Style Manual

The style of citation used in a memorandum, whether citing to cases, statutes, or other authority, must conform to one or the other of the following, at the option of the party filing the document [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(i)]:

- The California Style Manual (4th ed. 2000). This manual, developed and published by the Reporter of Decisions for the state courts, is the citation style used in all opinions filed by the California appellate courts.

- The most recent edition of The Bluebook; A Uniform System of Citation (Harvard Law Review Ass'n 18th ed. 2005). This is the most commonly used citation manual nationwide.

Either of the two styles, once chosen, must be used consistently throughout the memorandum [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(i)].

CAUTION:

Modify Citations in This Publication as Necessary. Note the citation styles in this publication do not conform strictly to either The Bluebook or The California Style Manual, although the publication's newer citation style conforms to the style of The Bluebook with few exceptions (such as the placement of the date in case citations). Thus, counsel are advised always to check and modify, as appropriate, the citations found in the forms of this publication, so that they conform to the chosen style of either The Bluebook or The California Style Manual.

[c] Rules Affecting Citability of Cases

With certain exceptions discussed below, an unpublished opinion may not be cited or relied on by a court or a party in any other action or proceeding [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.1115(a)]. Unpublished opinions include those that have been superseded by a grant of review, rehearing, or other action (unless the Supreme Court orders publication) [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.1100(d); see also Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 8.264, 8.268, 8.500 (relating to finality, rehearing, and review)].

Unpublished opinions also include decisions of the court of appeal or the appellate departments of the superior court that have been certified by those courts for publication [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.1105(b), (c) (when opinions of these courts may be certified for publication)], but which the Supreme Court has subsequently "decertified" or ordered not to be published notwithstanding the certification by the lower reviewing court [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.1105(d)(2)].

By "depublishing" or "decertifying" a court of appeal opinion, the Supreme Court lets the decision stand with regard to the parties but eliminates its precedential value. The Supreme Court has exercised this power with increasing frequency. Although the decertification of an opinion is not supposed to be a reflection of the court's opinion regarding the correctness of the decision or statements in the opinion [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.1125(d)], its increasing use of decertification orders does appear to be an expedient method of shaping the development of case law without adding to the Court's burdened docket.

The Court's power to decertify court of appeal opinions is virtually unlimited. Cal. Const., Art. VI, § 14, provides simply that court of appeal opinions shall be published "as the Supreme Court deems appropriate," whereas Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.1105(e)(2), provides, "The Supreme Court may order that an opinion certified for publication is not to be published or that an opinion not certified is to be published. The Supreme Court may also order publication of an opinion, in whole or in part, at any time after granting review" [see also Gov. Code § 68902 (publication of court of appeal opinions as Supreme Court "may deem expedient")].

Factors such as the workload of the court, or the potential embarrassment of alitigant, lawyer, judge, or other person should not affect the determination of whether to publish an opinion [Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 8.1105(d)].

Most importantly, while a request that the Court consider the decertification of any court of appeal decision must be made within 30 days after that decision becomes final with regard to the court of appeal [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.1125(a)(4)], there is no comparable time limit on the Court's power to decertify an opinion on its own motion [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.1105(e)(2)]. Consequently, the Supreme Court has sometimes ordered the decertification of court of appeal opinions long after they have become final and have been published initially in the advance sheets of the official reports. Therefore, when relying on recently published court of appeal decisions, it is crucial to check their subsequent history to determine that the case has not been decertified. One convenient method of checking subsequent history is through the Subsequent History Table that appears in the most recently published Official Advance Sheet of the California Reports.

The few instances in which an unpublished opinion may be cited are when the opinion is relevant under the doctrines of law of the case, res judicata, or collateral estoppel, or when the opinion is relevant to a criminal or disciplinary action or proceeding because it states reasons for a decision affecting the same defendant or respondent in another such action or proceeding [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.1115(b)]. A copy of any citable unpublished opinion must be furnished to the court and all parties by attaching it to the document in which it is cited or, if the citation is to be made orally, by letter within a reasonable time in advance of citation [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.1115(c)].

[8] Attaching or Combining the Memorandum With Other Papers

To the extent practicable, a supporting memorandum and declarations must be attached to the notice of motion [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(k)].

A supporting memorandum may be combined in a single document with the motion or demurrer itself, with the notice of hearing on the motion or demurrer, or with both [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1112(c)]. If a supporting memorandum is combined with a motion or demurrer and the notice of hearing, the caption of the combined document must specify the supporting memorandum as one of the separate items included in the combined document [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1112(c)]. In this instance, declarations and affidavits would then be attached to the combined document, to the extent practicable, under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(k).

PRACTICE TIP:

Combining the Memorandum With the Motion and Notice of Motion. Before the adoption of former Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 312 in 1997 [now see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1112], the common practice was to file a notice of motion with a supporting memorandum and supporting declarations (if applicable); in most instances the notice of motion was also considered to be the written motion as well. The notice of motion and supporting memorandum were commonly combined or attached, together with any supporting declarations. Now, rather than prepare the motion and notice of motion (or hearing) as separate documents, it is likely that most practitioners will combine the two as permitted under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1112(c). Under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1112(c) and Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(k), practitioners may then either combine or attach the supporting memorandum with the motion and notice of motion, although it appears that supporting declarations must be prepared as separate documents to be attached if practicable. Combining the memorandum with the motion and notice of motion should prove to be a common practice so long as practitioners take care to use an appropriate caption that specifies all combined elements. Evelio M. Grillo, Esq.

If a supporting memorandum is prepared as a separate document, it much conform to the caption requirements discussed in § 1.05[3].

For a skeletal form of memorandum prepared as a separate document, see § 1.10.

[9] Proposed Orders

If a party prepares a proposed order or judgment, it must be lodged and served with, but not attached to, a supporting memorandum and other moving papers [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(n)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeOpposing MemorandaCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeSupporting MemorandaCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentSupporting MaterialsMemoranda of LawCivil

ProcedureAppealsBriefsGovernmentsCourtsRule Application & Interpretation

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 1 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS
I. INTRODUCTION

1-1 California Points & Authorities § 1.06

AUTHOR: Evelio M. Grillo, Esq., Editorial Consultant

§ 1.06 Using This Publication

[1] Purpose and Scope of Publication

This is primarily a publication of forms that are intended to be used to assemble quickly all the basic elements and points of law needed for a particular memorandum. In other words, it is designed to provide a timesaving "jump start" toward fashioning a completed memorandum that is tailored to the specific situation at hand.

The forms of this publication focus on legal issues, both procedural and substantive, that are most likely to arise in adversarial proceedings in which memoranda are required or desirable. Thus, this publication is not intended to provide an exhaustive discussion of the law on each topic covered. A thorough legal background for each topic, as well as the practice forms for motions, demurrers, etc., that memoranda are used to support or oppose, are found in the companion publication to this one: California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

PRACTICE TIP:

Useful Secondary Purpose of This Publication. The comments and discussion following each form include a discussion of authorities.This discussion summarizes concisely but thoroughly the case law authority cited in the form. Researchers may use these discussions very effectively, in lieu of the shorter and frequently misleading summaries of California case law found in case digests, annotated codes, and similar other publications. The topical organization of this publication permits easy access to these case discussions. If using the CD-ROM version of this publication, a researcher has the capability to immediately "jump" from the discussion of authorities to complete opinion of a cited case, or even to the cited point page of a case.

[2] Using Forms to Draft Memoranda

[a] Basic Structure of Memorandum

The necessary elements of a memorandum of points and authorities are listed below in their recommended order [see § 1.03[2][a] for further discussion of the recommended order and § 1.05 for discussion of the format requirements relating to each of the elements]:

- The Caption or Title on the first page of the memorandum.

- The Tables of Contents and Authorities (required when memorandum exceeds 10 pages under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(f)).

- The Introduction

- The Opening Summary of Argument (always recommended but required when memorandum exceeds 15 pages under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(f)).

- The Summary or Statement of Facts [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(b)].

- The Argument; under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(b), this is described as "a concise statement of the law, evidence, and arguments relied on, and a discussion of the statutes, cases, and textbooks in support of the position advanced."

- The Conclusion; that is, a concise statement of the ruling sought from the court based on the argument presented.

- The Signature Block.

[b] Select Relevant Forms

As mentioned in § 1.06[1], this publication is mainly one of forms that may be used to draft memoranda. The forms are essentially "building blocks," for use in assembling quickly all the basic elements and points of law needed for a particular memorandum. These "building block" forms include:

- Outline or "Skeletal" Form. This form sets out the basic elements in the required format, for use in constructing the framework or outline for the body of the memorandum. It includes a the caption or heading; instruction for placement and drafting of the table of contents and table of authorities, if any; instruction for placement and drafting the summary of argument, statement of facts, argument, and conclusion; and a signature block. This form is set out in § 1.10. The other "argument" forms in this publication (discussed below), particularly those relating to a specific procedural context, may also include a more specific caption and signature block.

- The "Argument" Forms: Main and Secondary Points of Law With Supporting Authorities. The forms in the remaining chapters of this publication include two major components: (1) a single main point or heading and (2) one or more secondary paragraph that each include a point of law supported by citation to case law or other authority. The secondary point paragraph or paragraphs, taken together, support the argumentative conclusion of the main heading. In many instances the secondary point paragraphs of a form will include "optional" points that may be suited to a particular case but will not always be necessary or relevant. For further discussion of how to complete a draft argument that was started by using these forms, see §§ 1.03[3][b] -[d] and 1.05[5][c].

Whenever possible, the publication provides argument forms setting out both the "supporting" and "opposing" points of view for a given issue. That is, they present whatever argument may be given that will either support or oppose a specific ruling, based on analysis of the existing relevant authorities and the particular facts of the case. Whenever a form has one or more other forms that may be used to express a contrary point of view, a reference to these forms is included in the form's comments, so that users may examine argument that may be expected from the opposing party.

Thus, the form selection process when preparing a particular memorandum is essentially twofold:

- The "skeletal" form in § 1.10 of this chapter may be used to piece together quickly an outline for the memorandum: the caption or title, and the beginnings of the tables, if needed, summaries of argument and fact, the conclusion, and closing signature block.

- The remaining chapters of the publication may then be searched for "argument" forms that are relevant to the particular procedural or substantive points of law that need to be addressed in the memorandum.For discussion of various aids for finding relevant "argument" forms, see § 1.06[2][c].

For discussion of how to assemble the forms, once they are selected, see § 1.06[2][d].

[c] Methods for Finding Relevant Forms for Selection

This publication has the following aids for finding the relevant forms for drafting argument that includes all the procedural and substantive issues that need to be addressed in a particular memorandum:

- CD-ROM Searches. In the CD-ROM version of this publication, appearing on Authority(R), relevant forms may be located simply by using the "search" mode and typing in key search terms.

- Publication Tables of Contents and Chapter Synopses. This publication has topical chapters arranged in alphabetical order. Volume 1 include lists of all the chapters, both (1) in the alphabetical order in which they appear, and (2) grouped under general topical headings such as "Business," "Civil Procedure," etc. Each chapter, in turn, has its forms grouped according to subtopics, unless the topic of the chapter is itself very short and specialized. There is a synopsis at the beginning of each chapter that lists all the forms to be found in that chapter, under their subtopical headings, if any. The CD-ROM version of this publication, appearing on Authority(R), also has a "contents" mode, which may be used to quickly view greater or lesser detail in the publication's table of contents.

- Index. The final volume of the publication includes an index with complete topical entries for each form.

- Tables of Cases and Statutes. The final volume of the publication also include tables of cases and statutes, with references to forms in which these listed authorities are cited. Thus, if the user is looking for a form relating to a particular case or statute, it may be found quickly through these tables.

- Form Comments. The comments to each form include cross-references to related or opposing forms.

[d] Recommended Method for Assembling Selected Forms

When all relevant forms have been selected, the "argument" forms should be copied or placed in their proper positions within the "skeletal" form set out in § 1.10, that is, within the main body or argument portion of the memorandum [see discussion of "skeletal" and "argument" forms in § 1.06[2][b]].

Alternatively, the argument portion of the memorandum may be assembled first, and the other components added later in their proper positions. To determine the proper location or order of the memorandum's components, see discussion of the basic structure of a memorandum in and refer to the skeletal outline form in § 1.10.

In either case, the argument forms are then assembled to form the initial draft of the legal argument to be presented. They should be organized to comprise a series of argumentatively styled main points that are arranged logically to lead to and support the conclusion of the memorandum, that is, the particular ruling of the court being sought by the party filing the memorandum.

Each main point is, in turn, supported by secondary point paragraphs and their authorities, together with additional discussion that shows how the particular facts relate to these points.

PRACTICE TIP:

Easy Assembly Using Authority(R) Version. The CD-ROM version of this publication on Authority(R) provides an easy medium for assembling the forms of this publication into a draft of the main body of a memorandum. A user may simply create a word processing file, open and search this publication, then "copy" and "paste" the selected forms into the word processing document.

[3] Completing the Draft Memorandum

[a] Completing the Argument

Once the argument forms have been arranged in logical order to lead to the conclusion of the memorandum, the argument portion of the memorandum must be completed by adding discussion that shows the relationship between the points of law stated and the facts of the particular case.

- In completing the argument portion of the memorandum, the user should consult the Comments of the selected forms. These often provide tips on how to add factual discussion to the points of law.

- Users should also consult the Discussion of Authorities of selected forms. These summarize the cited authorities and may be useful, for example, in relating the facts of the case to similar facts in case law authorities that were decided favorably, or in distinguishing the facts of the case from facts in case law authorities that were not decided favorably.

PRACTICE TIP:

Complete Summary or Statement of Facts Before Drafting Argument. It is important to develop fully, if not complete, the Summary of Facts before completing the argument portion of the memorandum. This not onlyprovides a proper focus for researching and drafting the argument, but precludes a situation in which the facts ultimately to not support adequately the argument presented. It also makes it to add factual discussion to the argument, as the statement of facts will provides a convenient reference point for all the necessary facts and the proper references to these facts in the supporting declarations, exhibits, pleadings, etc. After the argument is completed, the statement of facts may be reviewed and modified if necessary. For further discussion regarding the statement of facts, see §§ 1.03[3][a] and 1.05[5][c].

For further discussion relating to drafting the argument portion of the memorandum, see §§ 1.03[3][b] -[d] and 1.05[5][c].

[b] Completing the Remaining Components of the Memorandum

When the Argument portion of the memorandum is completed (see § 1.06[3][a]), the remaining components of the memorandum, as discussed in § 1.06[2][a] and as set out in the skeletal outline form in § 1.10, should then be completed:

- The first-page Caption or Title and last-page signature block should be completed if they have not been completed already.

- A Table of Contents should be added if required; if it has already been prepared, it should be checked and modified if necessary to add correct pagination and any omitted elements, once the memorandum is completed.

- Cited authorities may be copied to build the Table of Authorities if such a table is required.

- The Summary or Statement of Facts should be added if it has not already been prepared.

- The Conclusion should be added.

- The Summary of Argument may be easily constructed after completion of the Argument and Conclusion, simply by compiling the main point headings in the Argument and the Conclusion and then modifying this compilation as desired.

For detailed discussion of drafting requirements and strategies to be considered in completing a memorandum, see generally §§ 1.03 and 1.05.

[4] Using This Publication to Draft Trial or Appellate Briefs

With appropriate modification, the forms in this publication may be used in drafting trial or appellate briefs, in addition to their use in drafting memoranda of points and authorities.

The basic elements of an appellate brief are essentially the same as those of a memorandum [see also § 1.06[2][a]]:

- A statement of the facts.

- An "assignment of errors" or "questions presented" section, which is essentially and functionally a summary of argument that identifies the issues, argues their resolution, and leads to a conclusion. As in a memorandum, this section usually consists of the headings used in the main argument together with the conclusion.

- The main argument, which includes concise, argumentative headings, argument in regular paragraphs (arguing relevant law in relation to the evidence admitted at trial or found in the appellate record), and a statement of conclusion calling for a favorable ruling from the court.

A trial brief functions differently that either a memorandum or appellate brief. The latter are designed to seek or oppose a specific ruling or request for relief based on a fixed record of evidence provided to the court, whether in the form of affidavits, exhibits, evidence subject to judicial notice, or the record of a prior court proceeding. Trial briefs, by contrast, are generally not supported by evidence per se, but are submitted to the trial judge shortly before or at the commencement of trial to provide that judge with a "road map" of the trial, summarizing the evidence that is the judge should anticipate being presented, alerting the judge to the legal and evidentiary issues that he or she should expect to arise during the trial, and, optimally, guiding and persuading the judge with respect to all the rulings or findings that he or she will be expected to decide during the trial. Still, a trial brief has elements similar to a memorandum:

- An introduction describing the nature of the action.

- A detailed discussion of anticipated evidence and evidentiary issues.

- A discussion of the law applicable to the resolution of the legal issues, which, in a jury trial, are sometimes tied to the jury instructions requested in the case.

PRACTICE TIP:

Preparation of Trial Brief. Although the trial brief is usually not required, it is recommended. It enhances the credibility of the attorney; he or she appears organized to the judge. In addition, it assists counsel in persuading the judge of the correctness of his or her client's position, and may serve as a basis for posttrial memoranda.

Although the basic components are very similar, a memorandum is often shorter and more routine, or less innovative, than a brief. The function of anygiven memorandum is usually less critical than a brief, particularly an appellate brief. A civil appeal is a major undertaking in itself, usually involving more work and requiring more imaginative argument than a memorandum. A good but novel argument may also receive more attention from a reviewing court as distinguished from a trial court, since the former has more latitude in considering broader questions of law and policy. An appellate brief's argument will therefore usually have more breadth and innovation than a memorandum, in proportion with the greater significance of the questions and the higher level of the court.

An appellate brief, in particular, will also require a different argument than that presented at the trial court level involving the same issues. The applicable standard of review on appeal determines the focus of argument in an appellate brief, just as the burden of proof at the trial court level will determine the focus of argument in a trial brief.

Format requirements also differ, particularly for appellate briefs [cf. discussion in § 1.06 and Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.200 et seq. (rules governing appellate briefs)].

Thus, the forms in this publication should be modified accordingly when used in a trial or appellate brief rather than in a memorandum. Similarly, portions of an appellate brief adapted from an earlier memorandum should be modified to present argument consistent with the standards applicable on review.

For detailed discussion of drafting requirements of appellate briefs, together with skeletal forms and sample appellate briefs, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 40, Appeal: An Overview (Matthew Bender).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeOpposing MemorandaCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeSupporting MemorandaCivil ProcedureAppealsBriefs

16 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 1 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS
I. INTRODUCTION

1-1 California Points & Authorities §§ 1.07-1.09

AUTHOR: Evelio M. Grillo, Esq., Editorial Consultant

[Reserved]

§§ 1.07[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 1 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS
II. FORMS

1-1 California Points & Authorities § 1.10

AUTHOR: Evelio M. Grillo, Esq., Editorial Consultant

§ 1.10 Skeletal Form of Memoranda

[1] FORM Skeletal Form of Memoranda

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	MEMORANDUM _____ [specify, e.g., IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR JUDGMENT ON THE PLEADINGS]
Plaintiff,	)
vs.	)
_____ [name],	)	[TELEPHONE APPEARANCE]
Defendant.	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	[Hearing Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

[ADD table of contents and table of authorities after first page, either if desired or if memorandum exceeds 10 pages; see §§ 1.06[2][a], 1.06[4]]

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Page

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES ..... _____

I. SUMMARY OF ARGUMENT ..... _____

II. STATEMENT OF FACTS ..... _____

III. ARGUMENT

[Set out Issue Main Headings (see §§ 1.06[2][a] and 1.06[2][b]), e.g., as follows:]

A. A MOTION FOR JUDGMENT ON THE PLEADINGS IS PROPER TO RAISE THE BAR OF THE STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS AND MAY BE MADE AT ANY TIME BEFORE FINAL JUDGMENT IS ENTERED ..... _____

B. THE COMPLAINT SHOWS ON ITS FACE THAT THIS ACTION IS BARRED BY THE STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS ..... _____

IV. CONCLUSION

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES

Page

Cases

[LIST cases in alphabetical order and page(s) on which they appear]

Statutes

[LIST statutes in alphabetical order by code and page(s) on which they appear]

Texts

[LIST texts cited and page(s) on which they appear]

Law Reviews

[LIST law reviews or journals cited and page(s) on which they appear]

[ADD opening summary of argument if desired or if memorandum exceeds 15 pages; see §§ 1.06[2][a], 1.06[5][a],[b], 1.06[3][a]]

I. SUMMARY OF ARGUMENT

[SUMMARIZE the arguments set forth in the memorandum: one method is to compile or adapt the Main Issue Headings and the Conclusion; see §§ 1.06[2][a], 1.06[a], 1.06[3][a]]

II. STATEMENT OF FACTS

_____ [State all relevant and material facts; see §§ 1.06[2][a], 1.06[b], 1.06[3][a]]

III. ARGUMENT

[SET FORTH each Main Issue Heading, with paragraphs under each arguing the law and facts relevant to that issue, anticipating and refuting the major opposing arguments. Forms from other chapters in this publication should be assembled here as appropriate. See §§ 1.06, 1.06[c], 1.06[3][b] -[d]]

IV. CONCLUSION

[SET FORTH concluding heading and brief summary of argumentative conclusions with request for favorable ruling from the court. See §§ 1.06[3][b], 1.06[3][e]]

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Use of Form

This skeletal form in § 1.10[1] outlines the form and content of a supporting memorandum. With appropriate modifications, it may be used by the moving party to support a petition or application or as a reply memorandum, or by the opposing party to challenge a motion, petition, or application.

As discussed in § 1.06[2] and [3], the form is designed to be used in conjunction with forms selected from the remaining chapters in this publication, as needed, which relate to the specific procedural and substantive issues to be addressed in the argument portion of the memorandums. For detailed discussion on how to use this form in combination with other forms in this publication, see generally § 1.06.

For detailed discussion of the format requirements with which the skeletal form complies, see generally § 1.05. For strategic considerations in drafting the body of the memorandum, see § 1.03. For discussion of when a supporting, opposing, or reply memorandum is required or recommended, see § 1.04.

[3] Elements of Memorandum

[a] Caption or Title

The caption in this form should be modified as necessary to indicate the specific motion or proceeding to which it relates and to indicate, if necessary, that the memorandum is an opposing or reply memorandum rather than a supporting memorandum, etc. Note that many of the forms in this publication, relating to specific procedural contexts, include more specifically tailored captions that may be substituted for the caption in this form.

A caption is included only if the memorandum is served and filed separately. In actual practice this will occur most frequently in the case of opposing or reply memoranda. Supporting memoranda may, and often are, combined with or attached to a notice of motion and motion (or demurrer, petition, or other application). In this situation, the caption of that notice of motion or other primary document will include a reference to the attached memorandum, and the caption in this form may be omitted. In its place, the first page of the memorandum need only be identified with a title describing its nature as an attachment, e.g., MEMORANDUM SUPPORTING DEMURRER TO SECOND AMENDED COMPLAINT, or even, simply, SUPPORTING MEMORANDUM.

For discussion of format requirements relating to the caption, see § 1.06[3]; see also general discussion in § 1.06[2] and [3][b].

[b] Tables of Contents and Authorities

Tables of Contents and Authorities are required if the memorandum exceeds 10 pages [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(f)], and may be desirable in any event. For further discussion relating to these elements, see §§ 1.05[4] and 1.06[2][a], [3][b]. For discussion of rules relating to citation, which should be followed in the Table of Authorities as well as in the Argument, see § 1.05[7].

[c] Introduction and Summary of Argument

A brief introduction is always recommended [see discussion in § 1.05[5][a]]. If it is, "Introduction" should be added to table of contents of the skeletal form.

An opening summary of argument is required if the memorandum exceeds 15 pages [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(f)], and is recommended in any case. For further discussion relating to this element, see §§ 1.03[3][a], 1.05[5][a], and § 1.06[2][a], [3][b].

[d] Statement of Facts

An statement of facts is required in all memoranda [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(b)]. For further discussion relating to this element, see §§ 1.03[3][a], 1.05[5][b], and 1.06[2][a], [3][b].

A statement of facts must refer to, and be based upon, evidence competent or legally cognizable in the proceeding to which the memorandum applies. In the case of a demurrer or similar challenge to the pleadings, the facts must be based on the allegations in the pleading or facts subject to judicial notice. In the case of other motions, evidence is usually supplied by declarations, affidavits, documents, deposition transcripts, and matter subject to judicial notice. For discussion relating to the attachment to the memorandum of such declarations, exhibits, and requests for judicial notice, see § 1.05[6].

[e] Argument

A memorandum must include argument, that is, the required concise statement of the law, evidence, and argument relied on, as well as the required discussion of the statutes, cases, and textbooks cited in support of the position advanced [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(b)].

The Argument portion is, of course, the heart of the memorandum. The remaining forms in this publication are designed to used in compiling and drafting all the necessary legal issues, authorities relied upon, and their discussion. The argument is then completed by adding discussion that refers to the facts of the case and links them favorably to the points of law and authorities that have been selected. For detailed discussion on selecting and using other forms in this publication to draft and complete the argument, see § 1.06[2] and [3][a]. For detailed discussion of the requirements and other considerations relating to the drafting of the argument, see §§ 1.03[3][b] -[d] and 1.05[5][c].

[f] Conclusion

The conclusion is essentially the end of the Argument portion, discussed in § 1.10[3][e]. For further discussion of this element, see §§ 1.03[3][e], 1.05[5][c], and 1.06[2][a], [3].

[g] Signature Block

The signature block should be modified as necessary. Note that many of the forms in this publication relating to specific procedural contexts will also include signature blocks that may used in lieu of the one set out in this form.

[4] Related Memoranda

As discussed in § 1.10[2] and [3][e], this form is designed to be used with any of the other forms in this publication, which should be selected to draft the argument portion of the memorandum based on the specific procedural and substantive issues that need to be addressed in the memorandum. For discussion of how to select and combine other relevant forms with this form, see § 1.06[2].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 1 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS
II. FORMS

1-1 California Points & Authorities § 1.11

AUTHOR: Evelio M. Grillo, Esq., Editorial Consultant

§ 1.11 Ex Parte Application for Leave to File Memorandum in Excess of Page Limits

[1] FORM Ex Parte Application for Leave to File Memorandum in Excess of Page Limits

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	EX PARTE APPLICATION FOR LEAVE TO FILE MEMORANDUM IN EXCESS OF PAGE LIMITATION, SUPPORTING DECLARATION(S) of _____ [name(s)], AND PROPOSED ORDER
vs.	)
_____ [name],	)
Defendant.	)
	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	[Hearing Judge: _____]
		Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

APPLICATION

_____ [Identify party, e.g., Defendant] _____ [name] hereby applies for an order, pursuant to California Rules of Court, Rule 3.1113(e), granting leave to file a memorandum in _____ [ purpose of memorandum, e.g., support of motion to dismiss for lack of jurisdiction] that is in excess of _____ [specify page limitation, e.g., 15] pages in length.

[EITHER, if proposed memorandum is attached]

The memorandum that _____ [identify party, e.g., defendant] seeks leave to file consists of _____ [specify number, e.g., 22] pages, and is attached as an exhibit to the declaration of _____ [name of declarant attorney] in support of and attached with this application.

[OR, if proposed memorandum is unavailable to present for evaluation]

_____ [Identify party, e.g., Defendant] seeks leave to file a memorandum not exceeding _____ [specify number of pages anticipated, e.g., 22] pages in length.

[CONTINUE]

This application is made on the grounds that good cause exists to permit a longer memorandum and is based on the attached declaration of _____ [name of declarant attorney].
Dated: _____

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

SUPPORTING DECLARATION OF _____ [name]

I, _____ [name], declare:

1. I am _____ [identify declarant, e.g., an attorney at law duly admitted to practice before all the courts of the State of California and the attorney of record herein for _____ (moving party) or other statement as appropriate].

2. _____ [State facts showing reasons why the argument cannot be made within the page limit, e.g., The argument in support of defendant's motion to dismiss for lack of jurisdiction is an issue of first impression in this jurisdiction. An adequate analysis of this issue requires discussion of numerous authorities both inside and outside California. Unless the court grants leave to file a memorandum of points and authorities in support of this motion that exceeds 15 pages, defendant will be denied the opportunity to present to the court a complete analysis of an issue central to the entire action.

[3. A copy of the drafted memorandum is attached hereto and made a part hereof].

4. On _____ [date], I provided written notice to _____ [name], attorney for _____ [specify party, e.g., plaintiff] of _____ [specify moving party, e.g., defendant's] intention to make this application at the time noted above, _____ [specify facts demonstrating means of written notice, e.g., as set forth in the attached proof of personal service].

5. California Rules of Court, Rule 3.1113(e) provides the basis for granting ex parte relief as requested in this application, rather than setting this matter for hearing on notice motion.

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of California that the foregoing is true and correct.
Dated: _____

_____ [signature]

_____ [name of declarant]

POINTS AND AUTHORITIES

Pursuant to the provisions of California Rules of Court, Rule 3.1113(e), the court, for good cause shown, may grant leave to file a memorandum of points and authorities in excess of the page limits otherwise applicable under that rule.

PROPOSED ORDER

[EITHER, if proposed memorandum is attached]

Good cause appearing, IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that:

The application of _____ [identify party, e.g., defendant] for leave to file the memorandum attached to the declaration of _____ [name of declarant attorney] in support of this application is GRANTED.

[OR, if the proposed memorandum is unavailable for the court's evaluation]

Good cause appearing, IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that:

The application of _____ [identify party, e.g., defendant] for leave to file a memorandum in _____ [specify purpose of memorandum, e.g., support of motion to dismiss for lack of jurisdiction] that is in excess of _____ [specify number, e.g., 15] pages is GRANTED; and

The memorandum may not exceed _____ [leave blank for court to fill in or specify number of pages anticipated, e.g., 22] pages in length.
Dated: _____

_____ [signature]

Judge of the _____ Court

[2] Use of Form

This form of application is for use to seek an order granting leave to file a memorandum in excess of the page limitations prescribed by Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(d) [see also Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1200 et seq. (requirement for ex parte applications)]. For discussion of the ex parte procedure for obtaining leave to file a longer memorandum, see § 1.05[1][c].

The form includes a declaration is for use in setting forth facts supporting ex parte application for leave to file a memorandum in excess of page limitations [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(e)].

The form, in both the application and declaration, sets forth alternative paragraphs depending on whether the proposed memorandum is available for the court's evaluation. A court is more likely to grant an application for leave to file an existing memorandum, which presumably represents the party's best efforts to present its position in as few pages as possible, than an application for leave to file a memorandum of undetermined length not yet in existence. Therefore, when possible, counsel should attach as an exhibit the proposed memorandum.

The form contains within the same document a form of order granting the application. If the application is denied, the court may elect either to cross out the existing language on the proposed order and insert the word "DENIED" or the like, or to rely on its own record of minute order denying the application.

If the application is granted, the applying party must give notice to all other parties [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1019.5(a)].

[3] Requirements for Ex Parte Applications in General

Ex parte applications are governed generally by Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1200 et seq.

An ex parte application must be in writing and must include the following [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1201]:

- An application containing the case caption and stating the relief requested.

- A declaration in support of the application.

- A declaration, competent and based on personal knowledge, regarding the notice provided to other parties pursuant to Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1204. Under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 3.1203(a), 3.1204(b), a party seeking an ex parte order must notify all parties no later than 10:00 a.m. the court day before the ex parte appearance, absent a showing of exceptional circumstances. The declaration must show the date, time, and manner that notice was given, the party informed, the relief sought, any response, and whether opposition is expected. Alternatively, it must state reasons why notice should not be required.

- Memorandum.

- A proposed order.

Moreover, the declarations must include competent testimony based on personal knowledge of irreparable harm, immediate danger, or any other statutory basis for granting ex parte relief rather than setting the matter for hearing on noticed motion [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 3.1201, 3.1202(c)].

The declaration in the form set out in § 1.11[1] includes statements showing that written notice was provided as required under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 3.1203, 3.1204, and also that Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(e) provides the basis for granting ex parte relief rather than setting the matter for hearing on noticed motion. This would appear to satisfy both the requirement for a declaration re notice under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1201 and the requirement of showing a"statutory basis" for ex parte relief under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1202(c).

The brief statement of the court's authority to grant leave under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(e), set out in the form under the heading "Memorandum" would, in addition, appear to satisfy the requirement for "Memorandum" under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1201. As discussed in § 1.04[1][e], this requirement arguably requires only a brief recitation of applicable authorities as opposed to a full-blown "memorandum." In this case, Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113 expressly provides for ex parte relief, and the matter is relatively routine, such that it is one of the few such situations in which an ex parte application may be considered without any personal appearance [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1207]. Thus, it appears to be a suitable situation for which a brief statement of the applicable authority will satisfy the requirement of "memorandum" under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1201.

For detailed discussion of all requirements under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1200 et seq. governing ex parte applications in general, together with a general form of ex parte application, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 372, Motions and Orders (Matthew Bender).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
Chapters 2 through 9 RESERVED

1-2 California Points & Authorities Chapters 2 through 9

RESERVED

Chapters 2RESERVED

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 10 ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS

1-10 California Points & Authorities 10.syn

§ 10.syn Synopsis to Chapter 10: ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS

§ 10.01 Scope of Chapter

§ 10.02 Governing Statutes

§ 10.03 Points and Authorities in Separate Trial Proceeding

§ 10.04 Definitions and Terminology

§ 10.05 Grounds for Abatement

§ 10.06 Raising Abatement Issue

[1] By Demurrer or Answer

[2] By Amended Answer

[3] By Supplemental Answer

[4] Against Defendant

§ 10.07 Trial of Plea in Abatement

§ 10.08 Motion for Separate Trial of Plea in Abatement

[1] Time and Manner of Motion

[2] Ruling on Motion

§ 10.09 Page Limits on Points and Authorities

§ 10.10 Related Pleadings and Practice Forms

§ 10.11 Related Points and Authorities

§§ 10.12-10.29 [Reserved]

§ 10.30 Supporting Motion for Separate Trial of Special Defense Constituting Ground of Abatement to Prosecution of Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 597]--Another Action Pending [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(c)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Interlocutory Judgment

[c] Alternative to Abatement

[d] Raising Objection

[e] Waiver of Objection

[f] Prior Pending Foreign Action

[g] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[h] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Another Action Pending as Ground of Objection

[b] Ground for Abatement

[c] Prior Action Seeks Different Remedy

[d] Basis of Rule

[e] Separate Trial Authorized

[f] Purpose of Separate Trial

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Ground for Abatement

§ 10.31 Supporting Motion for Separate Trial of Special Defense Constituting Ground of Abatement to Prosecution of Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 597]--Lack of Legal Capacity to Sue [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(b)]--Plaintiff Required to Sue Through Guardian or Conservator of Estate or Guardian Ad Litem [Code Civ. Proc. § 372]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Hearing

[c] Emancipated Minor

[d] Exceptions Pertaining to Minors

[e] Effect of Failure to Appoint Guardian Ad Litem

[f] Raising Objection Against Plaintiff; Waiver

[g] Raising Objection Against Defendant

[h] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[i] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Requirement That Plaintiff or Cross Complainant Appear Through Legal Representative

[b] Person for Whom Conservator May Be Appointed

[c] Person Required to Sue by Legal Representative as Lacking Capacity to Sue Individually

[d] Lack of Legal Capacity to Sue as Ground for Objection

[e] Lack of Capacity to Sue as Ground of Abatement

[f] Separate Trial Authorized

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Person Required to Sue by Legal Representative as Lacking Capacity to Sue Individually

§ 10.32 Supporting Motion for Separate Trial of Special Defense Constituting Ground of Abatement to Prosecution of Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 597]--Lack of Legal Capacity to Sue [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(b)]--Failure to File and Publish Fictitious Business Name Statement [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17910, 17917, 17918]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Hearing

[c] Nature of Objection; Subsequent Compliance

[d] Raising Objection

[i] By Demurrer

[ii] By Answer

[e] Waiver of Objection

[f] Motion to Dismiss

[g] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[h] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Filing and Publication of Statement Required

[b] Effect of Failure to Comply With Statutes

[c] Ground for Abatement

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Ground for Abatement

§ 10.33 Supporting Motion for Separate Trial of Special Defense Constituting Ground of Abatement to Prosecution of Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 597]--Lack of Legal Capacity to Sue [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(b)]--Party's Corporate Powers, Rights, and Privileges Have Been Suspended for Failure to File Required Information Statement [Corp. Code §§ 1502 and 2205(b)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Hearing

[c] Defending the Motion

[d] Raising Objection

[e] Waiver of Objection

[f] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[g] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Suspension of Domestic Corporation's Corporate Powers, Rights, and Privileges

[b] Lack of Capacity to Sue

§ 10.34 Supporting Motion for Separate Trial of Special Defense Constituting Ground of Abatement to Prosecution of Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 597]--Lack of Legal Capacity to Sue [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(b)]--Party's Corporate Powers, Rights, and Privileges Have Been Suspended, or Exercise of Party's Corporate Powers, Rights, and Privileges in This State Have Been Forfeited, for Nonpayment of Taxes [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301] or Failure to File Required Tax Return [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301.5]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Hearing

[c] Defending the Motion

[d] Raising Objection

[e] Waiver of Objection

[f] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[g] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Suspension of Domestic Corporation's Corporate Powers, Rights, and Privileges

[b] Forfeiture of Foreign Corporation's Corporate Powers, Rights, and Privileges

[c] Lack of Capacity to Sue

[d] Plea in Abatement

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Lack of Capacity to Sue

[b] Plea in Abatement

§ 10.35 Supporting Motion for Separate Trial of Special Defense Constituting Ground of Abatement to Prosecution

of Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 597]--Lack of Legal Capacity to Sue [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(b)]--Foreign Corporation Suing on Intrastate Business Without Having Obtained Certificate of Qualification [Corp. Code §§ 2105, 2203(c)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Hearing

[c] Certificate of Qualification

[d] Raising Objection

[e] Waiver of Objection

[f] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[g] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Certificate of Qualification Required

[b] Nonqualified Corporation Lacks Capacity to Sue

[c] Ground of Abatement

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Ground of Abatement

§ 10.36 Supporting Motion for Separate Trial of Special Defense Constituting Ground of Abatement to Prosecution of Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 597]--Defect of Parties [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(d)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Alternative to Separate Trial

[c] Hearing

[d] Defect or Misjoinder of Parties

[e] Raising Objection

[f] Waiver of Objection

[g] Abatement of Action

[i] On Ground of Defect of Parties

[ii] Misjoinder of Parties

[h] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[i] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Defect of Parties as Ground for Objection

[b] Plea in Abatement

§ 10.37 Supporting Motion for Separate Trial of Special Defense Constituting Ground of Abatement to Prosecution of Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 597]--Action Is Premature [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Hearing

[c] Raising Objection; Waiver

[d] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Nonexistence of Cause of Action as Ground for Objection

[b] Premature Action

[c] Plea in Abatement

§ 10.38 Supporting Motion [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1003, 1010] for Stay of Action on Ground of Another Action Pending [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(c)] in Another Jurisdiction

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Nature of Stay

[c] Factors Considered on Motion

[d] Court Order

[e] Alternative Procedure to Motion for Stay

[f] Action Pending in Foreign Country

[g] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[h] Related Points an Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Motion to Stay--Action Pending in Federal Court

[b] Motion to Stay--Action Pending in Court of Sister State

[c] Power of Court to Stay Action

[d] Purpose of Rule

[e] Denial of Motion as Abuse of Discretion

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Motion to Stay

[i] Action Pending in Court of Sister State

§ 10.39 Opposing Motion for Separate Trial of Special Defense Constituting Ground of Abatement to Prosecution of Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 597]--Ground of Abatement No Longer Exists

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Discretion of Court to Deny Motion

[b] Failure of Defense--Another Action Pending--Other Action No Longer Pending

[c] Failure of Defense--Lack of Legal Capacity to Sue--Fictitious Business Name Statutes Complied With

[d] Failure of Defense--Lack of Legal Capacity to Sue--Corporate Powers Revived

[e] Failure of Defense--Premature Action--Ground No Longer Exists

[f] Waiver of Plea in Abatement by Delay

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Failure of Defense--Action No Longer Pending

[b] Failure of Defense--Lack of Legal Capacity to Sue--Fictitious Business Name Statutes Complied With

[c] Failure of Defense--Lack of Legal Capacity to Sue--Corporate Powers Revived

[d] Failure of Defense--Premature Action--Ground No Longer Exists

§ 10.40 Opposing Motion for Stay of Action on Ground of Another Action Pending in Court in Another Jurisdiction--Exercise of Discretion Requires Denial of Motion

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] When Abatement Exists as Matter of Right

[b] Motion to Stay Invokes Judicial Discretion

[c] Factors to Be Considered by Court Militating Against Stay

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Motion to Stay Invokes Judicial Discretion

[b] Factors to Be Considered by Court Militate Against Stay

§§ 10.41-10.59 [Reserved]

§ 10.60 Supporting Motion for Order Substituting Personal Representative for Deceased Party [Code Civ. Proc. § 377.31 or 377.41]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Effect of Prior Proceedings on Substituted Party

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Absent Substitution, Judgment Will be in Excess of Jurisdiction

[b] Survival Action Not Defeated by Joinder With Nonsurvival Action

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Absent Substitution, Judgment Will be in Excess of Jurisdiction

§ 10.61 Supporting Motion for Order Substituting Transferee of Interest in Pending Action or Proceeding in Place of Transferor [Code Civ. Proc. § 368.5]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Transferee's Option

[i] Action Permitted to Proceed in Transferee's Name

[ii] Action Proceeding in Transferee's Name

[c] Nature of Motion

[d] Supplemental Pleading

[e] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Transferee as Entitled to Substitution

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Transferee as Entitled to Substitution

§ 10.62 Opposing Motion for Order Substituting Representative for Deceased Party [Code Civ. Proc. § 377.31 or 377.41]--Proceeding to Change Marital Status Does Not Survive Death of Spouse

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Requirement That Cause of Action Survive

[b] Nonsurvivable Causes

[c] Dissolution of Marriage Proceeding Does Not Survive

[d] Proceeding for Annulment Does Not Survive

[e] Nonsurvivable Cause Abates on Party's Death

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Dissolution of Marriage Proceeding Does Not Survive

§ 10.63 Opposing Motion for Order Substituting Transferee of Interest in Pending Action or Proceeding in Place of Transferor [Code Civ. Proc. § 368.5]--Basic Purpose of Transfer Was Unlawful

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Denial of Motion

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Substitution of Transferee Not Required

[b] Substitution of Parties Is in Court's Discretion

[c] Substitution Should be Denied if Purpose of Transfer Was Unlawful

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Substitution of Transferee Is in Court's Discretion

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 10 ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

1-10 California Points & Authorities § 10.01

§ 10.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter contains memoranda of points and authorities that may be submitted in support of a motion for a separate trial of the plea in abatement that there is another action pending between the same parties on the same cause [see § 10.30], that plaintiff lacks legal capacity to sue [see §§ 10.31 -10.35], that there is a defect of parties [see § 10.36], and that the action is premature [see § 10.37]. A memorandum of points and authorities in opposition to the motion for use where the ground of abatement no longer exists is included [see § 10.39]. Also included is a memoranda of points and authorities supporting [see § 10.38] and opposing [see § 10.40] a motion to stay the action on the ground that another action is pending between the same parties on the same cause in another jurisdiction.

This chapter also contains memoranda of points and authorities supporting and opposing a motion for an order substituting a deceased party's personal representative for the deceased party [see §§ 10.60, 10.62] and for an order substituting the transferee of an interest in a pending action or proceeding for the transferor [see §§ 10.61, 10.63].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProceduresPleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProceduresPleading & PracticeMotion PracticeOpposing MemorandaCivil ProceduresPleading & PracticeMotion PracticeSupporting MemorandaCivil ProceduresPartiesSubstitutionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProceduresPretrial MattersSeparate TrialsCivil ProceduresAppealsBriefs

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 10 ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

1-10 California Points & Authorities § 10.02

§ 10.02 Governing Statutes

The nonabatement of actions and proceedings by reason of the death or disability of a party or by the transfer of an interest in them is provided for in Code Civ. Proc. §§ 368.5 (transfer of interest), 375 (disability), and 377.21 (death). The survival of causes of action in favor of or against deceased persons is provided for in Code Civ. Proc. §§ 377.10-377.50. Authority for the substitution of parties on death, disability, or transfer of an interest in a pending action or proceeding is contained in Code Civ. Proc. §§ 368.5, 375, 377.30-377.33, and 377.40-377.41. Procedures for substituting parties pending an appeal are found in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.36(a) [see also Hollaway v. Scripps Memorial Hospital (1980) 111 Cal. App. 3d 719, 724 n.1, 168 Cal. Rptr. 782 ; Erickson v. Boothe (1949) 90 Cal. App. 2d 457, 459, 203 P.2d 122].

Separate trial of pleas in abatement or pleas in bar is governed by Code Civ. Proc. § 597. A motion to stay a California action on the ground that another action is pending between the same parties on the same cause in another jurisdiction is nonstatutory and is governed by case law [see § 10.38[2]].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeSupporting MemorandaCivil ProcedurePartiesSubstitutionsDeath of PartyCivil ProcedurePartiesSubstitutionsIncompetencyCivil ProcedurePartiesSubstitutionsMotions for SubstitutionCivil ProceduresPretrial MattersSeparate Trials

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 10 ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

1-10 California Points & Authorities § 10.03

§ 10.03 Points and Authorities in Separate Trial Proceeding

As is discussed in § 10.07[1], a ground of abatement may be raised by demurrer or answer. If it is raised by answer, the proper procedure to try the issue is by a separate trial of the issue under Code Civ. Proc. § 597. The points and authorities for pleas in abatement are for use in separate trial proceedings. Points and authorities supporting and opposing demurrers raising a particular ground of abatement are found in Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

The points and authorities in support of the motion for separate trial should be distinguished from the points and authorities in support of the special defense itself. The scope of the hearing on the motion pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 597 is whether or not the special defense pleaded is one for which a separate trial is available and, if it is, whether in the discretion of the court, a separate trial should be permitted. The points and authorities supporting the substantive defense should be reserved until there is a separate trial.

Thus, the opposing points and authorities in this chapter may be used to show that there is nothing to try, as for example, the ground of abatement which existed the action was commenced or the motion was filed no longer exists [see § 10.39]. On the other hand, other chapters in this publication should be consulted if, for example, the ground of abatement pleaded never existed and its nonexistence is subject to proof. For example, if the special defense pleaded is another action pending, plaintiff may oppose the motion for separate trial by enumerating the essential elements of that defense and then, by invoking judicial notice of the court's records and file in the other action, show that one or more of the essential elements is absent. Points and authorities that may be adapted for such use are included in Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

Nevertheless, it is recommended that counsel should have with him or her at the hearing on the motion for separate trial any evidence necessary to establish the defense of the particular ground of abatement and be prepared to present it should the judge so require. If there is no dispute as to the facts and, hence, nothing to be tried, the court may dispose of the defense at that hearing and deny the motion. That is, if it appears as a matter of law, for example, that there is another action pending between the same parties on the same cause, the court would enter the interlocutory judgment required by Code Civ. Proc. § 597. On the other hand, if it appears that there are disputed fact questions to be tried, for example, a dispute as to the identity of the parties or the identity of the issues, requiring admission of extrinsic evidence, a separate trial would normally be ordered.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProceduresPleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsDemurrersCivil ProceduresPleading & PracticePleadingsAnswersCivil ProceduresPartiesSubstitutionsMotions for SubstitutionCivil ProceduresPretrial MattersSeparate Trials

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 10 ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

1-10 California Points & Authorities § 10.04

§ 10.04 Definitions and Terminology

The words "abate," "abatement," and their variants are not defined by California statutes [Burnand v. Irigoyen (1943) 56 Cal. App. 2d 624, 628, 133 P.2d 1], although they appear in several of them [see, e.g., Civ. Code §§ 3484 (abatement of a nuisance), Code Civ. Proc. § 385 (an action or proceeding does not abate by the death)].

The term "abatement" in California has been used historically with reference to certain dilatory pleas by which an objection is made to the place, mode, or time of asserting a claim or cause of action. But the courts have not been consistent in their use of the term. Some courts have said that abatement means to put an end to the lawsuit [see, e.g., Kelley v. Upshaw (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 179, 186-187, 246 P.2d 23 ; Simmons v. Superior Court (1950) 96 Cal. App. 2d 119, 123, 214 P.2d 844], whereas other courts have used the term to mean a suspension of the action [see, e.g., Tyrone v. Kelley (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 1, 14, 106 Cal. Rptr. 761, 507 P.2d 65 , quoting from Kadota Fig Ass'n v. Case-Swayne Co. (1946) 73 Cal. App. 2d 796, 804, 167 P.2d 518]. The term appears today, with respect to pleas in abatement, to be used more in this latter sense than in the former, thereby entitling the plaintiff to apply for a continuance to take the necessary steps to correct the ground of abatement. It would appear that the action will be terminated only if the matter of abatement cannot readily be corrected (for example, the action is premature) or it can be easily corrected but plaintiff declines to take the steps necessary to correct it.

The term "plea in abatement" referred to the first pleading permitted at common law. It did not challenge the merits of plaintiff's claim, but only the place, mode, or time it was asserted. A "plea in bar" also did not dispute the merits of plaintiff's claim but, unlike pleas in abatement, did raise defenses which would finally dispose of the action, such as the defenses of the statute of limitations or the statute of frauds [see generally Clark on Code Pleading (2d ed), §§ 78, 95; Witkin, California Procedure (2d ed), Vol 3, Pleading, § 951].

Neither pleas in abatement nor pleas in bar, as they were known at common law, are known in California practice. The only pleadings allowed in civil actions today are complaints, demurrers, answers, and cross complaints [Code Civ. Proc. § 422.10]. Nevertheless, the same kinds of objections that were raised by common-law pleas in abatement and pleas in bar may be raised today by demurrer or answer and a ruling on them obtained prior to trial of the action on the merits [see discussion in §§ 10.07 -10.08]. The procedure is substantially the same whether the special defense raised is in the nature of a plea in abatement or a plea in bar, but since this chapter is limited in scope to those defenses in the nature of common-law pleas in abatement, no further mention, other than incidentally, will be made of pleas in bar.

The term "plea in abatement" (as well as "plea in bar") continues to be used in California to describe the substance, purpose, and effect of a pleading, motion, order, or judgment, that is, to describe an objection to the place, mode, or time of asserting a claim without disputing its justness [see Kelley v. Upshaw (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 179, 186, 246 P.2d 23 ; Nevills v. Shortridge (1905) 146 Cal. 277, 278, 79 P. 972 ; Ostrowski v. Miller (1964) 226 Cal. App. 2d 79, 87, 37 Cal. Rptr. 790].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProceduresPleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsDemurrersCivil ProceduresPleading & PracticePleadingsAnswersCivil ProceduresPartiesSubstitutionsMotions for SubstitutionCivil ProceduresPretrial MattersSeparate Trials

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 10 ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

1-10 California Points & Authorities § 10.05

§ 10.05 Grounds for Abatement

The grounds for abatement of actions are many and varied. The common grounds today, as at common law, are the objections set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(b)-(d), as follows: (1) the person who filed the pleading does not have the legal capacity to sue [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(b); see §§ 10.31 -10.35]; (2) there is another action pending between the same parties on the same cause [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(c); see § 10.30]; (3) there is a defect (nonjoinder) of parties [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(d); see § 10.36]; and (4) there is a misjoinder of parties [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(d); see § 10.36[2]]. They are not, however, exclusive. Other defenses have been and may be recognized by the courts as dilatory. Another common ground of abatement not expressly mentioned in Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10 is that the action is premature [see § 10.37].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesCapacity of PartiesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderMisjoinderCivil ProcedurePartiesSubstitutionsDeath of PartyCivil ProcedurePartiesSubstitutionsMotions for SubstitutionCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersSeparate Trials

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 10 ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

1-10 California Points & Authorities § 10.06

§ 10.06 Raising Abatement Issue

[1] By Demurrer or Answer

The Code of Civil Procedure provides only two methods of raising issues that were raised by the common-law pleas in abatement, namely, by demurrer or by answer. If the ground for abatement appears on the face of the complaint or cross complaint, or from matter of which the court must or may take judicial notice [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.70; Evid. Code §§ 451, 452], the plea in abatement should be taken by demurrer on one of the grounds listed in Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10 [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(a); see also, e.g., Follansbee v. Benzenberg (1954) 122 Cal. App. 2d 466, 475, 265 P.2d 183]. If the ground for abatement does not appear on the face of the pleading, whether or not it would appear from judicially noticed matter, the objection may be taken by answer [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(b)], either by denying the material allegations of the complaint, if any, which negate the ground for abatement [see Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(1)] or, where the abatement issue cannot be raised by simple denial, by alleging the ground as an affirmative defense [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 431.30(b)(2), 590(2)]. If not taken by demurrer or answer, the objection is normally deemed waived [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.80(a)].

It should be noted that special demurrers, including those on the ground of abatement, are not allowed in limited civil cases [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 91(a), (d), 92(c)].

[2] By Amended Answer

Should the defendant or cross defendant fail to take the objection by demurrer or answer and the ground for objection existed the answer to the complaint or cross complaint was filed, it would appear that the proper procedure would be for the defendant or cross defendant to amend the answer "of course" to set up the defense if the time to do so has not expired [see Code Civ. Proc. § 472] or, ifthe time to amend "of course" has expired, to serve and file a noticed motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1005, 1005.5, 1010] for leave to file an amended answer or an amendment to the answer [see Code Civ. Proc. § 473(a)] to set up the special defense.

[3] By Supplemental Answer

If the ground of abatement does not come into existence until after the pleadings are filed, as for example, the corporate powers, rights, and privileges of a domestic corporation plaintiff are suspended, or the exercise of the corporate powers, rights, and privileges of a foreign corporation plaintiff in this state are forfeited, for nonpayment of any tax, penalty, or interest, or failure to file a required tax return [see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 23301 (tax, penalty, or interest), 23301.5 (tax return); and § 10.34] after the answer has been filed and plaintiff consequently lacks legal capacity to prosecute the action, the proper way to raise the abatement issue would appear to be by noticed motion for leave to file a supplemental answer under Code Civ. Proc. § 464 to plead plaintiff's lack of legal capacity to sue. The defense has, however, been raised in other manners [see discussion in § 10.34[2]].

[4] Against Defendant

The objection that a party lacks capacity to sue may be raised against a defendant as well. Replications (replies to answers) are not permitted in civil actions in California and lack of capacity to defend is not one of the objections listed in Code Civ. Proc. § 430.20 which may be taken by a demurrer to the answer. Since the issue is not one which can be raised by "answer," it does not come within the operation of Code Civ. Proc. § 597, authorizing a separate trial of that "defense." Hence, the abatement issue would, in this situation, have to be raised in some other manner, as for example, by a motion by plaintiff for summary judgment [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c] or by a motion to strike the answer to the complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 435-437] on the ground its filing is not authorized or, where the suspension occurs after the pleadings are filed, by an objection at trial to the introduction of any evidence by defendant on the ground its corporate powers have been suspended and that, consequently, it may not defend against the action.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProceduresPleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsDemurrersCivil ProceduresPleading & PracticePleadingsAnswersCivil ProceduresPartiesCapacity of PartiesGeneral OverviewCivil ProceduresPartiesSubstitutionsMotions for SubstitutionCivil ProceduresPretrial MattersSeparate Trials

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 10 ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

1-10 California Points & Authorities § 10.07

§ 10.07 Trial of Plea in Abatement

Where an objection constituting a ground of abatement is taken by demurrer [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10, 430.30(a); and discussion in § 10.07[1]], the hearing on the demurrer constitutes a trial of the issues of law so raised [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 589, 591]. If the objection is taken by answer [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(1), (2)], the court on its own motion or on motion of any party may order a separate trial of that defense [Code Civ. Proc. § 597]. There is, however, no requirement that a special defense be heard in advance of the other issues in the case and, hence, a plea in abatement may be heard either before the trial of other issues or along with the trial of other issues [Kubon v. Kubon (1958) 51 Cal. 2d 229, 232, 331 P.2d 636 ; Healy v. Stationers Corp. (1964) 228 Cal. App. 2d 601, 603, 39 Cal. Rptr. 679].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProceduresPleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsDemurrersCivil ProceduresPleading & PracticePleadingsAnswersCivil ProceduresPartiesCapacity of PartiesGeneral OverviewCivil ProceduresPretrial MattersSeparate Trials

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 10 ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

1-10 California Points & Authorities § 10.08

§ 10.08 Motion for Separate Trial of Plea in Abatement

[1] Time and Manner of Motion

Code Civ. Proc. § 597 fails to state or in what manner the motion by a party for separate trial of special defenses is to be made. It has been suggested that the motion should be on notice in advance of trial or at the trial judge's informal pretrial conference in chambers before trial, and that the last feasible time for making the motion is just before the drawing of the jury in a jury trial ["1959 Institute for California Judges--Panel Discussion, Part I: Preliminary Matters and Trial Proceedings," 47 Cal. L Rev 703, 708-709 (1959)]. It has been suggested that it is likely, however, that an oral motion made immediately before impanelment of the jury would not be well received, and the better time to arrange for a separate trial is at the pretrial conference [see California Civil Procedure During Trial (Cal. CEB 1960), ch 9, Order of Proof, § 9.14], assuming, of course, that one is held.

[2] Ruling on Motion

Code Civ. Proc. § 597 is permissive only and the trial court may deny the motion for separate trial, in which case the special defense may be tried at the trial of the case on the merits [Kubon v. Kubon (1958) 51 Cal. 2d 229, 232-233, 331 P.2d 636].

If the motion is granted, a separate trial of the special defense will be ordered [Code Civ. Proc. § 597].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProceduresPleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsDemurrersCivil ProceduresPleading & PracticePleadingsAnswersCivil ProceduresPartiesCapacity of PartiesGeneral OverviewCivil ProceduresPretrial MattersSeparate Trials

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 10 ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

1-10 California Points & Authorities § 10.09

§ 10.09 Page Limits on Points and Authorities

Generally, a memorandum must not exceed 15 pages, or, in the case of a motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication, 20 pages. A reply or closing memorandum may not exceed 10 pages [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(d)]. Any party desiring to file a longer memorandum must obtain leave of court [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(d)]. For further discussion of the page limitations under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113, and of other basic format requirements of memoranda, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs, § 1.01[5].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsDemurrersCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAnswersCivil ProcedurePartiesCapacity of PartiesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentMotions for Summary JudgmentWritten MotionsCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentSupporting MaterialsMemoranda of LawCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersSeparate Trials

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 10 ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

1-10 California Points & Authorities § 10.10

§ 10.10 Related Pleadings and Practice Forms

For a procedural guide for use on a motion for separate trial of a special defense and forms of notice of motion for separate trial, an order granting the motion, an interlocutory judgment abating proceedings, and judgments of dismissal, as well as forms of demurrers, affirmative defenses, and related papers on the grounds of (1) lack of legal capacity to sue, (2) another action pending, (3) nonjoinder or misjoinder of parties, and (4) failure to state a cause of action in that the action is premature, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 3, Abatement of Actions (Matthew Bender). For forms of demurrers to complaints on all the grounds enumerated in Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings (Matthew Bender). For forms of demurrers raising the bar of the statute of limitations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions (Matthew Bender).

For forms of notices of motion for leave to file an amended pleading, an amendment to the pleading, or a supplemental pleading, forms of amended pleadings, and related forms, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 21, Amended and Supplemental Pleadings (Matthew Bender)

For a form of petition for a writ of prohibition to restrain proceedings in a second action in California there is a prior action pending between the same parties on the same cause in another California court which has assumed jurisdiction over the action, and a form of petition for writ of mandate on the same ground where the prior action is pending in a non-California court, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 3, Abatement of Actions (Matthew Bender).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProceduresPleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsDemurrersCivil ProceduresPartiesCapacity of PartiesGeneral OverviewCivil ProceduresPartiesJoinderMisjoinderCivil ProceduresPretrial JudgmentsJudgment on the PleadingsCivil ProceduresPretrial MattersSeparate Trials

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 10 ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

1-10 California Points & Authorities § 10.11

§ 10.11 Related Points and Authorities

For memoranda of points and authorities supporting and opposing demurrers on all the grounds listed in Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10 (demurrer to complaint or cross complaint), see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

For points and authorities supporting a motion for separate trial of the special defense that the action is barred by the statute of limitations and supporting and opposing a demurrer to a complaint on that ground, see Ch. 143, Limitation of Actions .

For memoranda of points and authorities supporting and opposing a motion for leave to file an amended or supplemental pleading, see Ch. 16, Amended and Supplemental Pleadings .

For memoranda of points and authorities supporting and opposing motions to strike complaints and motions for summary judgment on the various grounds related to the legal capacity of a corporation to sue, see Ch. 52, Corporations, § 52.20 et seq.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsDemurrersCivil ProcedurePartiesCapacity of PartiesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial JudgmentsJudgment on the PleadingsCivil ProcedurePretrial MattersSeparate Trials

32 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 10 ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

1-10 California Points & Authorities §§ 10.12-10.29

[Reserved]

§§ 10.12[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 10 ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. Pleas in Abatement

1-10 California Points & Authorities § 10.30

§ 10.30 Supporting Motion for Separate Trial of Special Defense Constituting Ground of Abatement to Prosecution of Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 597]--Another Action Pending [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(c)]

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Separate Trial of Special Defense Constituting Ground of Abatement to Prosecution of Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 597]--Another Action Pending [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(c)]

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR SEPARATE TRIAL OF SPECIAL DEFENSE IN ABATEMENT
vs.	)
_____ [name],	)	Date: _____
Defendant.	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	Judge: _____
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
		Trial Date: _____

_____

A MOTION FOR SEPARATE TRIAL OF THE SPECIAL DEFENSE PLEADED IN THE ANSWER THAT THERE IS ANOTHER ACTION PENDING BETWEEN THE SAME PARTIES ON THE SAME CAUSE SHOULD BE GRANTED SINCE TO GRANT THE MOTION WOULD SAVE USELESS LABOR AND EXPENSE OTHERWISE SPENT IN LITIGATING THE OTHER ISSUES IN THE CASE IF THE PLEA IN ABATEMENT PROVES MERITORIOUS.

A. Another Action Pending as Ground of Objection. A party against whom a _____ [complaint or cross complaint] has been filed may object to it by answer on the ground there is another action pending between the same parties on the same cause of action (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10(c), 430.30(b)).

B. Ground for Abatement. The pendency of a prior action based on the same cause and contested by the same parties and considered in the same jurisdiction is ground for abatement of the second action (Lawyers Title Ins. Corp. v. Superior Court (1984) 151 Cal. App. 3d 455, 458, 199 Cal. Rptr. 1 ; Hanrahan v. Superior Court (1947) 81 Cal. App. 2d 432, 435, 184 P.2d 157).

[Optional] C. Prior Action Seeks Different Remedy. The fact that the prior action seeks a different remedy does not prevent abatement of the second action the remedy sought in the second action could also be obtained by filing a cross-complaint in the prior action (Lawyers Title Ins. Corp. v. Superior Court (1984) 151 Cal. App. 3d 455, 459-460, 199 Cal. Rptr. 1).

D. Basis of Rule. The basis of the rule as to prior pending actions is to prevent two actions between the same parties involving the same subject matter from proceeding independently of each other (Simmons v. Superior Court (1950) 96 Cal. App. 2d 119, 124-125, 214 P.2d 844).

E. Separate Trial Authorized. When the answer pleads that another action is pending on the same cause of action, the court may, on its own motion or on motion of a party, proceed to the trial of this special defense before the trial of any other issue in the case (Code Civ. Proc. § 597; Hanrahan v. Superior Court (1947) 81 Cal. App. 2d 432, 436, 184 P.2d 157).

F. Purpose of Separate Trial. The purpose of a separate trial of a special defense is to avoid the labor and expense involved in litigating the other issues the special defense proves meritorious (see Neff v. New York Life Ins. Co. (1947) 30 Cal. 2d 165, 175, 180 P.2d 900 ; Leonard v. Flynn (1891) 89 Cal. 535, 540, 26 P. 1097 (overruled by implication on another point in Pollard v. Harlow (1903) 138 Cal. 390, 391-393, 71 P. 454)).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a motion for separate trial of the special defense [Code Civ. Proc. § 597] that there is another action pending between the same parties on the same cause [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(c)]. This is by far the most common ground of abatement, based on the unnecessary multiplicity of actions and on the assumption that the first suit affords an adequate remedy and that the second thus annoys and harasses the defendant [Lindsay v. Stewart (1887) 72 Cal. 540, 542, 14 P. 516 ; Simmons v. Superior Court (1950) 96 Cal. App. 2d 119, 124, 214 P.2d 844 ; see also Conservatorshipof Pacheco (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 171, 175-176, 273 Cal. Rptr. 522 ; California Union Ins. Co. v. Trinity River Land Co. (1980) 105 Cal. App. 3d 104, 109, 163 Cal. Rptr. 802].

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

This form is for use only to abate the second action. Pendency of the second action is never a ground for abatement of the first action [California Union Ins. Co. v. Trinity River Land Co. (1980) 105 Cal. App. 3d 104, 108, 109, 163 Cal. Rptr. 802 ; Hagan v. Fairfield (1961) 194 Cal. App. 2d 240, 246, 247, 16 Cal. Rptr. 14].

[b] Interlocutory Judgment

If the defense of another action pending or a demurrer based on another action pending is sustained (and no other special defense is sustained), an interlocutory, appealable judgment is entered in favor of the defendant pleading the defense to the effect that no trial of other issues shall be had until the final determination of the other action [Code Civ. Proc. § 597; Lawyers Title Ins. Corp. v. Superior Court (1984) 151 Cal. App. 3d 455, 459, 199 Cal. Rptr. 1].

The purpose of the interlocutory judgment is to permit the trial court to retain jurisdiction over the subsequent action so that a final determination is had in the prior pending action the court will be empowered to determine the issues in the subsequent suit. If a judgment on the merits is rendered in the first action, the party asserting the plea in abatement should be granted leave to amend the answer to plead the res judicata effect of the judgment in bar of the subsequent action [Lord v. Garland (1946) 27 Cal. 2d 840, 851, 168 P.2d 5].

[c] Alternative to Abatement

When both actions are pending in the same court, the court may in an appropriate case order them consolidated [see Shuffer v. Board of Trustees (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 208, 217-218, 221, 136 Cal. Rptr. 527 ; see also Mobil Oil Corp. v. Superior Court (1978) 79 Cal. App. 3d 486, 493, 145 Cal. Rptr. 17 ; Karp v. Dunn (1964) 229 Cal. App. 2d 192, 196, 40 Cal. Rptr. 96] or, if they are not pending in the same court, coordinated under the rather complicated procedure set out in Code Civ. Proc. §§ 404-404.8. For discussion and forms for use in consolidation and coordination proceedings, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 125, Consolidation, Severance, and Coordination of Actions (Matthew Bender).

[d] Raising Objection

The objection that there is another action pending between the same parties on the same cause [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(c)] may be raised by demurrer if the ground appears from the face of the complaint or cross complaint or from matters of which the court must or may take judicial notice [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(a); California Union Ins. Co. v. Trinity River Land Co. (1980) 105 Cal. App. 3d 104, 108, 163 Cal. Rptr. 802 ; see also Code Civ. Proc. § 430.70 and Evid. Code §§ 451-453 (judicial notice)] or by answer if the ground of objection does not appear from the face of the complaint or cross complaint, whether or not it would appear from judicially noticed matter [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(b)]. If the objection is taken by affirmative defense in the answer [see Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)], the defense, to be sufficient, must allege all the essential facts necessary to be proved to sustain it [California Trust Co. v. Gustason (1940) 15 Cal. 2d 268, 273, 101 P.2d 74 ; Scheeline v. Moshier (1916) 172 Cal. 565, 570, 158 P. 222]. Of course, the defense of another action pending is not available unless the parties, issues, and causes of action are the same [Hayworth v. City of Oakland (1982) 129 Cal. App. 3d 723, 728 fn. 2, 181 Cal. Rptr. 214].

If the objection that there is another action pending between the same parties on the same cause can be established by the allegations of the complaint or cross complaint together with matter of which the court must or may take judicial notice, the better, if not required, practice would be to raise the objection by demurrer. On the other hand, if the objection cannot be so established or if there are disputed fact questions as to the identity of the parties or issues, the objection should be raised by answer followed by a motion for separate trial of that defense [see Lord v. Garland (1946) 27 Cal. 2d 840, 849-850, 168 P.2d 5].

[e] Waiver of Objection

Failure to raise, by demurrer or answer, the objection of another action pending is deemed a waiver of it [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.80(a); Martin v. Pacific S.W. Royalties (1940) 41 Cal. App. 2d 161, 171, 106 P.2d 443 ; see also Hayworth v. City of Oakland (1982) 129 Cal. App. 3d 723, 728 fn. 2, 181 Cal. Rptr. 214].

The defense of another action pending may also be waived by failure to present it within a reasonable time, by pursuing a course inconsistent with it, or by obtaining a continuance without calling the court's attention to the plea [see, e.g., San Martin v. Superior Court (1959) 169 Cal. App. 2d 14, 18, 336 P.2d 618 ; Bank of America v. Cohen (1937) 21 Cal. App. 2d 510, 512, 69 P.2d 875].

[f] Prior Pending Foreign Action

Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(c), authorizing an objection to the complaint or cross complaint on the ground that another action is pending, does not require that the prior action be pending in a California court. Since a California court may take judicial notice of the records of any court of record of the United States or any state of the United States [see Evid. Code § 452(d)], and must do so if a proper request is made [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.70; Evid. Code §§ 11, 453], the objection that another action is pending in a foreign jurisdiction may be raised by demurreras well as by answer. Regardless of whether the objection is raised by demurrer or answer, the defendant has the right to have the subsequent action suspended only if the prior action is pending in a California state court [see Code Civ. Proc. § 431.10(c); Thomson v. Continental Ins. Co. (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 738, 746-747, 59 Cal. Rptr. 101, 427 P.2d 765]. If the prior action is pending in a foreign jurisdiction, the issue is one of comity rather than one of right and the trial court has discretion whether to suspend or stay the California action and may consider several factors which require the consideration of evidence other than judicially noticed matters. Thus, the better, if not required, practice is to take the objection by answer and seek a separate determination of that defense. Such a determination may be made under Code Civ. Proc. § 597, since the provision authorizes a separate trial of the special defense pleaded in the answer that another action is pending on the same cause of action, and does not limit the action to one pending in a California court. The practice, however, has been to make a non-statutory motion for a stay. Points and authorities that may be used to support and oppose such a motion are set out in §§ 10.38 and 10.40.

[g] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms of an affirmative defense that another action is pending, a notice of motion for separate trial of a special defense, an order granting the motion, an interlocutory judgment abating the action, a petition for writ of prohibition to restrain proceedings in the second action where both actions are pending in California, and a petition for writ of mandate to dismiss an action or stay proceedings where the prior action is pending in another state, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 3, Abatement of Actions (Matthew Bender).

For forms of demurrers on the ground of another action pending, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 3, Abatement of Actions and Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings (Matthew Bender).

[h] Related Points and Authorities

For memoranda of points and authorities supporting and opposing a demurrer on the ground of another action pending, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Another Action Pending as Ground of Objection

Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(c) provides that the party against whom a complaint or cross complaint has been filed may object, by demurrer or answer as provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30, to the pleading on the ground that there is another action pending between the same parties on the same cause of action.

Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(b) provides that any ground for objection (listed in Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10) to a complaint or cross complaint does not appear on the face of the pleading, the objection may be taken by answer.

[b] Ground for Abatement

In Lawyers Title Ins. Corp. v. Superior Court (1984) 151 Cal. App. 3d 455, 199 Cal. Rptr. 1 , an action for damages, defendant moved for abatement under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10(c) and 597 based on a pending action for declaratory relief that defendant had brought prior to plaintiffs' commencement of the action for damages. The trial court denied defendant's motion, and defendant sought review by petition for a writ of prohibition. In granting the writ, the reviewing court stated that the pendency of another action arising out of the same transaction is a ground for abatement of the second action. The court held that such ground was established in defendant's favor, because it was undisputed that there was an action filed by defendant for declaratory relief still pending plaintiffs, the real parties in interest, filed their action for damages, and that both actions involved the same parties and arose out of the same transaction (151 Cal. App. 3d 455, 458, 459-460).

Hanrahan v. Superior Court (1947) 81 Cal. App. 2d 432, 184 P.2d 157 , was a proceeding in prohibition to restrain a trial court from proceeding with an action on the ground that another prior action was pending between the same parties on the same cause. Although a peremptory writ of prohibition was denied on the ground that petitioner had failed to first seek relief in the trial court, the court of appeal said that it is well settled in California that the pendency of a prior action based on the same cause, contested by the same parties, and considered in the same jurisdiction is ground for abatement of the second action (81 Cal. App. 2d 432, 435). The court stated that petitioner could obtain that relief from the trial court by alleging that ground in his answer to the complaint in the second action under former Code Civ. Proc. § 433 (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(b)), and then by having the issue tried first under Code Civ. Proc. § 597 (81 Cal. App. 2d 432, 436).

[c] Prior Action Seeks Different Remedy

The facts and procedural background of Lawyers Title Ins. Corp. v. Superior Court (1984) 151 Cal. App. 3d 455, 199 Cal. Rptr. 1 , are discussed in § 10.30[3][b]. In granting the writ of prohibition to stay the second action, the court of appeal rejected the plaintiffs' argument that the second action should not be abated because they would not be entitled to receive any monetary relief in the prior action for declaratory relief. The court noted that, while abatement is not appropriate the first action cannot afford the relief sought in the second action, there was no obstacle in this case to preclude their filing a cross-complaint for damages in the prior action and thus secure a determination of all issues (151 Cal. App. 3d 455, 459-460).

[d] Basis of Rule

Simmons v. Superior Court (1950) 96 Cal. App. 2d 119, 214 P.2d 844 , was a proceeding in prohibition (treated as a proceeding in mandate) to restrain a superior court from proceeding further with an action pending final determination of an action between the same parties on the same cause pending in the court of a sister state. Defendant's motion to stay the California action was denied. In issuing a writ of mandate commanding the trial court to stay the action pending final determination of the sister state action, the court of appeal said that the rule which forbids a later action in the same state between the same parties involving the same subject matter rests on principles of wisdom and justice, to prevent vexation, oppression, and harassment, to prevent unnecessary litigation, to prevent a multiplicity of suits, and in short to prevent two actions between the same parties involving the same subject matter from proceeding independently of each other (96 Cal. App. 2d 119, 124-125).

[e] Separate Trial Authorized

Code Civ. Proc. § 597 in pertinent part provides that the answer pleads that another action is pending on the same cause of action the court may, either on its own motion or on motion of any party, proceed to the trial of such special defense before the trial of any other issue in the case.

Hanrahan v. Superior Court (1947) 81 Cal. App. 2d 432, 184 P.2d 157 , is discussed in § 10.30[3][b]. In denying a writ of prohibition to restrain the trial court from proceeding with an action which was sought on the ground that another prior action was pending between the same parties on the same cause, the court of appeal pointed out to the petitioner that in the cases cited to support the issuance of the writ, the lower court had been asserting jurisdiction and actually performing acts in regard to the subject matter of the action or proceeding. The court noted that here petitioner had sought no relief in the lower court and that the court had done nothing, nor threatened to do anything, in the action. It further noted that under Code Civ. Proc. § 597, petitioner could have had the issue of another action pending first tried and that, therefore, petitioner had a plain, speedy, and adequate remedy which required denial of the application for the writ.

[f] Purpose of Separate Trial

Neff v. New York Life Ins. Co. (1947) 30 Cal. 2d 165, 180 P.2d 900 , involved the application of Code Civ. Proc. § 597 to a plea in bar. This was an action to recover disability benefits under an insurance policy and premiums paid on the policy after the disability arose. The complaint showed on its face that the action was barred by the statute of limitations and failed to allege facts which would estop defendant from pleading it. Defendant's objection at trial to the introduction of any evidence by plaintiff on the ground of the bar of the statute was sustained after plaintiff had made an offer of proof, and judgment was entered for defendant. On appeal, plaintiff contended he was entitled under Code Civ. Proc. § 597 to a separate trial of the statute of limitations issue. The Supreme Court rejected this contention on the ground that the statute did not apply to a situation where it could be clearly seen, both from plaintiff's pleading and from his comprehensive offer of proof, that he could not present a cause of action not barred by the statute of limitations, that is, there was nothing to try. Therefore, the Court affirmed the judgment. The Court said that Code Civ. Proc. § 597 states a procedural rule which authorizes the trial court in proper cases to avoid an unjustifiable expenditure of time in the trial of issues relating to the merits of an action it appears after the trial of the special defense that plaintiff in any event could not recover (30 Cal. 2d 165, 175).

Leonard v. Flynn (1891) 89 Cal. 535, 26 P. 1097 (overruled by implication on another point in Pollard v. Harlow (1903) 138 Cal. 390, 391-393 [see Lawrence v. Maloof (1967) 256 Cal. App. 2d 600, 603, 64 Cal. Rptr. 233]), was an action to recover possession of land. In his answer defendant denied the allegations of the complaint, alleged title to the land in himself, and, as affirmative defenses, set up the bar of the statute of limitations, that another action was pending between the same parties on the same cause, title by adverse possession, and an equitable estoppel against plaintiff. The trial court found in accordance with the affirmative defenses and plaintiff appealed from the subsequent judgment for defendant. In reversing the judgment on the ground that none of the defenses was supported by the evidence, the Supreme Court nevertheless said that in a case where, in addition to the defense of abatement by reason of the pendency of another action, the defendant relies on other defenses, which go directly to the merits of the cause, it would seem to be the better practice for the trial court to require the defendant to present his evidence on his plea in abatement at the opening of his defense; if it were proven to be meritorious, it would in many cases save much useless labor and great expense in litigating other defenses (89 Cal. 535, 540). It should be noted that while Leonard was decided prior to the enactment of Code Civ. Proc. § 597, authorizing a separate trial of the defense, its rationale about saving labor and expense appears still to be valid.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Ground for Abatement

Mobil Oil Corp. v. Superior Court (1978) 79 Cal. App. 3d 486, 145 Cal. Rptr. 17 , was a mandate proceeding by which petitioner sought to compel the trial court to vacate its order staying an unlawful detainer proceeding commenced by petitioner as the lessor against its lessee and to enter an order denying the motion to stay. Real party in interest (the lessee) had commenced a prior action against petitioner to establish his alleged right to continue to operate a service station on the premises leased from petitioner. The lessee's demurrer to the unlawful detainercomplaint on the ground, among others, that there was another action, pending was overruled, but his subsequent motion to stay on that ground was granted. Although the court of appeal held that the trial court abused its discretion in granting the motion to stay since the parties to the unlawful detainer proceeding and the prior pending action were not in the same relationship (79 Cal. App. 3d 486, 490, 493) and issued a peremptory writ of mandate (79 Cal. App. 3d 486, 495-496), it characterized the plea of another action pending as a matter of abatement (79 Cal. App. 3d 486, 493).

Other cases pointing out that the plea of another action pending is a plea in abatement or ground for abatement include: Perry v. Jordan (1949) 34 Cal. 2d 87, 90, 207 P.2d 47 ; Lord v. Garland (1946) 27 Cal. 2d 840, 844, 846-848, 850, 851, 854, 168 P.2d 5 ; Wulfjen v. Dolton (1944) 24 Cal. 2d 891, 897, 151 P.2d 846 ; Chapman v. Moore (1907) 151 Cal. 509, 511, 91 P. 324 ; Shuffer v. Board of Trustees (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 208, 217, 136 Cal. Rptr. 527 ; Williams v. California (1976) 62 Cal. App. 3d 960, 964, 133 Cal. Rptr. 539 ; Colvig v. RKO Gen., Inc. (1965), 232 Cal. App. 2d 56, 73, 42 Cal. Rptr. 473 .

Bescos v. Bank of America (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 378, 129 Cal. Rptr. 2d 423 was a proceeding in which the appellant sought rescission of a lease agreement, restitution of all consideration paid, and penalties from a bank. Appellant also filed a second suit against the bank, which was dismissed after the trial court sustained without leave to amend the bank's demurrer on the ground that the first case was pending and involved the same matter between the parties. The trial court sustained the bank's demurrer to the second case without leave to amend and dismissed the action on the ground that a case was pending which involved the same matter "between the same parties." The court of appeal held that the trial court properly sustained the demurrer. A review of the pleading in the second case disclosed the same parties and the same transaction, included the additional theories of liability of conspiracy and fraud and a request to enjoin the bank from perpetrating certain alleged acts. The additional theories were not considered "different wrongs" that gave rise to different primary rights, but rather different ways of committing the same wrongs (105 Cal. App. 4th 378, 392).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 10 ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. Pleas in Abatement

1-10 California Points & Authorities § 10.31

§ 10.31 Supporting Motion for Separate Trial of Special Defense Constituting Ground of Abatement to Prosecution of Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 597]--Lack of Legal Capacity to Sue [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(b)]--Plaintiff Required to Sue Through Guardian or Conservator of Estate or Guardian Ad Litem [Code Civ. Proc. § 372]

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Separate Trial of Special Defense Constituting Ground of Abatement to Prosecution of Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 597]--Lack of Legal Capacity to Sue [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(b)]--Plaintiff Required to Sue Through Guardian or Conservator of Estate or Guardian Ad Litem [Code Civ. Proc. § 372]

[Caption. See § 10.30[1].]

THE COURT SHOULD GRANT THE MOTION FOR SEPARATE TRIAL OF THE SPECIAL DEFENSE PLEADED IN THE ANSWER THAT _____ [PLAINTIFF or CROSS COMPLAINANT] LACKS LEGAL CAPACITY TO SUE IN HIS/HER INDIVIDUAL CAPACITY BECAUSE THE PLEA IS A GROUND OF ABATEMENT AND TO GRANT THE MOTION WOULD SAVE USELESS LABOR AND EXPENSE OTHERWISE SPENT IN LITIGATING THE OTHER ISSUES IN THE CASE IF THE DEFENSE PROVES MERITORIOUS.

A. Requirement That _____ [Plaintiff or Cross Complainant] Appear Through Legal Representative. A[n] _____ [minor or incompetent person or person for whom a conservator has been appointed] must appear in an action either by a guardian or conservator of his or her estate or by a guardian ad litem appointed by the court in which the action is pending (Code Civ. Proc. § 372(a) [if a minor, add: Fam. Code § 6601]).

[Optional] B. Person for Whom Conservator May Be Appointed. The term "incompetent" person, as used in Section 372 of the Code of Civil Procedure, includes a person for whom a conservator may be appointed (Code Civ. Proc. § 372(a)).

C. Person Required to Sue by Legal Representative as Lacking Capacity to Sue Individually. A[n]

_____ [minor or incompetent person or person for whom a conservator has been appointed] lacks legal capacity to maintain an action in his or her individual capacity (see In re Marriage of Higgason (1973) 10 Cal. 3d 476, 484, 110 Cal. Rptr. 897, 516 P.2d 289 (disapproved on another point in In re Marriage of Dawley (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 342, 352, 131 Cal. Rptr. 3, 551 P.2d 323); Parker v. Bowron (1953) 40 Cal. 2d 344, 351, 254 P.2d 6).

D. Lack of Legal Capacity to Sue as Ground for Objection. A party against whom a _____ [complaint or cross complaint] has been filed may object to the pleading by answer on the ground that the party filing the pleading lacks legal capacity to sue (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10(b), 430.30(b)).

E. Lack of Capacity to Sue as Ground of Abatement. The objection that plaintiff lacks legal capacity to sue is a ground of abatement (Tingley v. TimesMirror Co. (1907) 151 Cal. 1, 13 ; Wilson v. Mattei (1927) 84 Cal. App. 567, 576, 258 P. 453 ; see Hydrotech Systems, Ltd. v. Oasis Waterpark (1991) 52 Cal. 3d 988, 994 n.4, 277 Cal. Rptr. 517, 803 P.2d 370 (dicta)).

F. Separate Trial Authorized. When the answer sets up any defense not involving the merits of the cause of action alleged but constituting a ground of abatement to its prosecution, the court may, on its own motion or on the motion of any party, proceed to the trial of the special defense before the trial of any other issue in the case (Code Civ. Proc. § 597).

G. Purpose of Separate Trial. [See § 10.30[1], Paragraph E.]
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a motion for separate trial of the special defense [Code Civ. Proc. § 597], pleaded in the answer either by denying the relevant allegations of the complaint or cross complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(1)] or by alleging, as an affirmative defense [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)], that plaintiff or cross complainant is a minor, an incompetent person, or a person for whom a conservator has been appointed who is not appearing by a guardian or conservator of the estate or by a guardian ad litem [Code Civ. Proc. § 372], and, hence, lacks legal capacity to sue [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(b)]. A minor is any person under the age of 18 [Fam. Code § 6500].

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Hearing

Counsel should have with him or her at the hearing any evidence necessary to sustain the defense of lack of legal capacity to sue and be ready to present it should the judge so request. If there is no dispute as to the facts and, hence, nothing to be tried, it would appear that the court would dispose of the defense at the hearing of the motion for separate trial and deny the motion. That is, if it appears that plaintiff or cross complainant is a person required to appear by a guardian or conservator of the estate or guardian ad litem and has not done so, the court would: (1) appoint a guardian ad litem and direct the filing of an amended complaint or cross complaint to allege the appointment and show that plaintiff or cross complainant is appearing by a guardian ad litem; (2) if the party has a guardian or conservator of his or her estate, direct that the party appear by the guardian or conservator and that the pleading be amended to show this fact; or (3) continue the hearing to allow the party sufficient time within which to make formal application for appointment of a guardian ad litem and direct the filing of an amended pleading after appointment to show the fact of appointment and that the party is appearing by a guardian ad litem. Of course, if there are disputed fact questions to be tried, for example, whether or not plaintiff or cross complainant is a person for whom a conservator may be appointed, that is, whether or not the party is incompetent within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 372, a separate trial would normally be ordered.

[c] Emancipated Minor

An emancipated minor [see Fam. Code § 7002] is considered as being over the age of majority for the purpose of his or her capacity to sue and be sued in his or her own name [Fam. Code § 7050(e)(4)]. Such a minor need not, therefore, appear in an action or proceeding by a guardian of his or her estate or a guardian ad litem [see Jolicoeur v. Mihaly (1971) 5 Cal. 3d 565, 582 fn. 12, 96 Cal. Rptr. 697, 488 P.2d 1 (persons who were minors under former Civ. Code § 25 (now see Fam. Code § 6500), but of voting age, held entitled to sue in their own right without appointment of guardian ad litem to enforce their voting rights under 26th Amendment to United States Constitution, which had emancipated them with respect to voting)].

[d] Exceptions Pertaining to Minors

A minor 12 years of age or older may appear in court without a guardian, counsel, or guardian ad litem to request or to oppose a request for any of the following [see Code Civ. Proc. § 372(b)]:

- An injunction or temporary restraining order or both to prohibit harassment pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 527.6.

- An injunction or temporary restraining order or both against violence or a credible threat of violence in the workplace pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8.

- A protective order pursuant to the Domestic Violence Prevention Act (Fam. Code § 6200 et seq.).

- A protective order pursuant to Fam. Code §§ 7710 and 7720 (protective orders under the Uniform Parentage Act).

Notwithstanding Code Civ. Proc. § 372(a), a minor may appear in court without a guardian ad litem in the following proceedings if the minor is a parent of the child who is the subject of the proceedings:

- Family Court proceedings pursuant to Fam. Code § 7600 et seq. [Code Civ. Proc. § 372(c)(1)(a)];

- Dependency proceedings pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 200 et seq. [Code Civ. Proc. § 372(c)(1)(b)];

- Guardianship proceedings for a minor child pursuant to Prob. Code § 1500 et seq. [Code Civ. Proc. § 372(c)(1)(c)];

- Any other proceedings concerning child custody, visitation, or support [Code Civ. Proc. §

372(c)(1)(d)].

If the court finds that the minor parent is unable to understand the nature of the proceedings or to assist counsel in preparing the case, the court must, upon its own motion or upon a motion by the minor parent or the minor parent's counsel, appoint a guardian ad litem [Code Civ. Proc. § 372(c)(2)].

[e] Effect of Failure to Appoint Guardian Ad Litem

The absence of a guardian ad litem, where required by statute, is not ajurisdictional defect in the fundamental sense. While the failure of the court to appoint a guardian ad litem may constitute an act in excess of jurisdiction, the failure may be waived since a judgment rendered in the absence of a guardian ad litem is not void but merely voidable [White v. Renck (1980) 108 Cal. App. 3d 835, 838-840, 166 Cal. Rptr. 701 , criticized on another ground in Pham v. Wagner Litho Machinery Co. (1985) 172 Cal. App. 3d 966, 971-972, 218 Cal. Rptr. 476].

[f] Raising Objection Against Plaintiff; Waiver

Where the ground of objection that plaintiff or cross complainant lacks legal capacity to sue [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(b)] appears from the face of the complaint or cross complaint or from any matter of which the court must or may take judicial notice [see Evid. Code §§ 451, 452], the objection on that ground may be taken by demurrer [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(a)]. Where the ground of objection does not appear from the face of the complaint or cross complaint, whether or not it would appear from judicially noticed matter, the objection may be taken by answer [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(b)].

On raising the objection by amended or supplemental answer, see the discussion in § 10.07.

The failure to take the objection by demurrer or answer that plaintiff or cross complainant lacks legal capacity to sue normally constitutes a waiver of it [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.80(a)].

[g] Raising Objection Against Defendant

If the defendant is a minor, an incompetent person, or a person for whom a guardian has been appointed who is not appearing by a guardian or conservator of the estate or guardian ad litem, plaintiff may object to the defendant's lack of capacity to defend by moving for the appointment of a guardian ad litem for him or her [see Code Civ. Proc. § 373(c)]. It is to plaintiff's advantage to do so because a minor not so represented has an absolute right to disaffirm any judgment against him or her. This right continues throughout the defendant's minority until barred by laches after reaching the age of majority [see Garbutt v. Campbell (1955) 130 Cal. App. 2d 167, 168-169, 278 P.2d 508 (order setting aside default against minor defendant and permitting defendant to answer affirmed); Keane v. Penha (1946) 76 Cal. App. 2d 693, 697, 173 P.2d 835 (order setting aside default and default judgment against minor affirmed); see also Fam. Code § 6710 (disaffirmance by minor of contract)]. A judgment made and entered without the appointment of a guardian ad litem against an incompetent who is not appearing by a guardian or conservator of his or her estate may be vacated in a proceeding for that purpose if no innocent purchaser has acquired rights under the judgment [Briggs v. Briggs (1958) 160 Cal. App. 2d 312, 319, 325 P.2d 219].

[h] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a form of affirmative defense that a plaintiff minor is not appearing by a guardian or conservator of his or her estate or a guardian ad litem and a form of notice of motion for separate trial of a special defense in abatement, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 3, Abatement of Actions (Matthew Bender).

[i] Related Points and Authorities

For memoranda of points and authorities supporting a demurrer to the complaint on the ground that plaintiff does not have legal capacity to sue in that the action is by the guardian, rather than the ward by his or her guardian, or that the action on behalf of the ward is prosecuted by a foreign personal representative not qualified as such in this state, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Requirement That Plaintiff or Cross Complainant Appear Through Legal Representative

Code Civ. Proc. § 372 in pertinent part provides that a minor, an incompetent person, or a person for whom a conservator has been appointed is a party, such person "shall" appear either by a guardian or conservator of the estate or by a guardian ad litem appointed by the court in which the action or proceeding is pending, or by a judge thereof, in each case.

Fam. Code § 6601 provides that a minor may enforce his or her rights by civil action or other legal proceedings in the same manner as a person of full age, except that a guardian must conduct the same.

[b] Person for Whom Conservator May Be Appointed

Code Civ. Proc. § 372(a), provides that where reference is made "in this section" to "incompetent person," the reference is deemed to include "a person for whom a conservator may be appointed."

[c] Person Required to Sue by Legal Representative as Lacking Capacity to Sue Individually

In re Marriage of Higgason (1973) 10 Cal. 3d 476, 110 Cal. Rptr. 897, 516 P.2d 289 (disapproved on another ground in In re Marriage of Dawley (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 342, 352, 131 Cal. Rptr. 3, 551 P.2d 323), was a proceeding for dissolution of marriage. The proceeding was brought on behalf of the wife, who was under conservatorship, by and through her guardian ad litem. The trial court denied the husband's motions for spousal support, division of community property, and payment of attorney's fees and costs, and granted the wife's petition forinterlocutory dissolution of marriage. In affirming the judgment of dissolution but reversing it in all other respects, the Supreme Court held that the proceeding could be brought on behalf of a spouse under conservatorship by and through his or her guardian ad litem, provided it is established that the spouse is capable of exercising a judgment, and expressing a wish, that the marriage be dissolved on account of irreconcilable differences and has done so (10 Cal. 3d 476, 483). The Court said that, under the terms of Code Civ. Proc. § 372, an incompetent person is a party to an action he or she must appear either by a guardian [now guardian or conservator] of the estate or by a guardian ad litem appointed by the court in which the action is pending. The Court added that had the wife, being under conservatorship, attempted to prosecute the action in her individual capacity, Code Civ. Proc. § 372 could have been raised against her right to bring it (10 Cal. 3d 476, 484).

Parker v. Bowron (1953) 40 Cal. 2d 344, 254 P.2d 6 , involved a plaintiff who lacked standing, rather than legal capacity, to sue, but in distinguishing the two kinds of plaintiffs, the Supreme Court said that incapacity is merely a legal disability, such as infancy or insanity, which deprives a party of the right to come into court (40 Cal. 2d 344, 351).

[d] Lack of Legal Capacity to Sue as Ground for Objection

Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(b) provides that the party against whom a complaint or cross complaint has been filed may object, by demurrer or answer as provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30, to the pleading on the ground that the person who filed the pleading does not have the legal capacity to sue.

Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(b) provides that any ground for objection (set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10) to a complaint or cross complaint does not appear on the face of the pleading, the objection may be taken by answer.

[e] Lack of Capacity to Sue as Ground of Abatement

Tingley v. Times Mirror (1907) 151 Cal. 1, 89 P. 1097 , was an action for libel in which defendant's motion, made during trial, to file an amended answer to set up pleas in abatement, including the plea that plaintiff lacked legal capacity to sue because she had not joined her husband as a party plaintiff, as then required by statute, was denied. Defendant, after trial, appealed from the judgment for plaintiff. In affirming the judgment and holding that the trial court did not err in denying the motion since it was untimely made, the Supreme Court said that the pleas of which defendant sought to avail itself by amendment were pleas in abatement (151 Cal. 1, 13).

Wilson v. Mattei (1927) 84 Cal. App. 567, 258 P. 453 , was an action on an open book account and common counts for the reasonable value of materials furnished and labor performed pursuant to contracts, which were not, however, pleaded. From a judgment for plaintiff, defendant appealed contending among other things that plaintiff lacked capacity to sue because he had failed to submit the dispute to arbitration as provided in the contract. Although the court of appeal held that defendant had waived this defense by failure to plead it, modified the judgment, and affirmed it as modified, it said that a defense based on the incapacity of a plaintiff to sue is regarded as a plea in abatement (84 Cal. App. 567, 576) .

In Hydrotech Systems, Ltd. v. Oasis Waterpark (1991) 52 Cal. 3d 988, 277 Cal. Rptr. 517, 803 P.2d 370 , plaintiff, a New York corporation, brought suit for fraud and breach of contract. The defendants demurred on multiple grounds, including the failure of the complainant to allege that the plaintiff held a California contractor's license. The trial court sustained the demurrer and dismissed the complaint against all but one defendant. On plaintiff's appeal, the court of appeal reversed as to the cause of action for fraud, and affirmed dismissal in all other respects. Plaintiff sought review in the Supreme Court.

In the Supreme Court, the plaintiff argued that Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031 should not apply to bar an unlicensed nonresident to sue on an isolated transaction in California under exceptional circumstances or to bar actions for fraud. Before addressing those issues, the Supreme Court noted, on an issue not before it on the appeal, that the complaint did not need to allege the plaintiff's capacity to sue and that lack of capacity does not appear on the face of the complaint, it cannot be raised by demurrer, but is a special plea in abatement (52 Cal. 3d 988, 994 n.4). The Court then went on to reverse in part and affirm in part, holding that § 7031 barred all the alleged causes of action (52 Cal. 3d 988, 997, 1002).

[f] Separate Trial Authorized

Code Civ. Proc. § 597 in pertinent part provides that the answer sets up any defense not involving the merits of plaintiff's cause of action but constituting a ground of abatement to its prosecution, the court may, "either upon its own motion or upon the motion of any" party, proceed to the trial of such special defense or defenses before the trial of any other issue in the case.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Person Required to Sue by Legal Representative as Lacking Capacity to Sue Individually

Cases quoting the rule from Parker v. Bowron (1953) 40 Cal. 2d 344, 351, 254 P.2d 6 , discussed in § 10.31[3][c], include: Tinsley v. Palo Alto Unified School Dist. (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d 871, 883, 154 Cal. Rptr. 591 ; and Oakland Mun. Improvement League v. Oakland (1972) 23 Cal. App. 3d 165, 170, 100 Cal. Rptr. 29 .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 10 ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. Pleas in Abatement

1-10 California Points & Authorities § 10.32

§ 10.32 Supporting Motion for Separate Trial of Special Defense Constituting Ground of Abatement to Prosecution of Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 597]--Lack of Legal Capacity to Sue [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(b)]--Failure to File and Publish Fictitious Business Name Statement [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17910, 17917, 17918]

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Separate Trial of Special Defense Constituting Ground of Abatement to Prosecution of Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 597]--Lack of Legal Capacity to Sue [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(b)]--Failure to File and Publish Fictitious Business Name Statement [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17910, 17917, 17918]

[Caption. See § 10.30[1].]

THE COURT SHOULD GRANT THE MOTION FOR SEPARATE TRIAL OF THE SPECIAL DEFENSE PLEADED IN THE ANSWER THAT _____ [PLAINTIFF or CROSS COMPLAINANT] LACKS LEGAL CAPACITY TO SUE BECAUSE OF HIS/HER/ITS FAILURE TO HAVE FILED AND PUBLISHED A FICTITIOUS BUSINESS NAME STATEMENT, AS REQUIRED BY STATUTE, BECAUSE THE PLEA IS A GROUND OF ABATEMENT AND TO GRANT THE MOTION WOULD SAVE USELESS LABOR AND EXPENSE OTHERWISE SPENT IN LITIGATING THE OTHER ISSUES IN THE CASE IF THE SPECIAL DEFENSE PROVES MERITORIOUS.

A. Filing and Publication of Statement Required. Every person who regularly transacts business in this state for profit under a fictitious business name is required to file and publish a fictitious business name statement (Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17910, 17917(a)).

[Optional] B. "Person" Defined. As used in the fictitious business name statutes (Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17900-17930), the word "person" includes individuals, limited liability companies, partnerships and other associations, and corporations (Bus. & Prof. Code § 17902).

C. Prohibition Against Maintenance of Action. No person transacting business under a fictitious business name contrary to the provisions of Sections 17900-17930 of the Business and Professions Code[, or his or her or its assignee], may maintain any action on or on account of any _____ [contract made or transaction had] in the fictitious business name in any court of this state until the fictitious business name statement has been executed, filed, and published as required by these sections (Bus. & Prof. Code § 17918).

D. Lack of Legal Capacity to Sue as Ground for Objection. [See § 10.31[1], Paragraph D.]

E. Effect of Failure to Comply With Statutes. A person who is required to comply with the provisions of Sections 17900-17930 of the Business and Professions Code and has failed to do so lacks legal capacity to maintain an action on account of any _____ [contract made or transaction had] in the fictitious business name (Kadota Fig Ass'n v. Case-Swayne Co. (1946) 73 Cal. App. 2d 796, 798, 801-805, 167 P.2d 518).

F. Ground for Abatement. The failure of plaintiff to file and publish a fictitious business name statement required to do so by statute is a ground for abatement (Tyrone v. Kelley (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 1, 13-14, 106 Cal. Rptr. 761, 507 P.2d 65 ; Rudneck v. Southern Cal. Metal & Rubber Co. (1920) 184 Cal. 274, 281, 193 P. 775).

G. Separate Trial Authorized. [See § 10.31[1], Paragraph F.]

H. Purpose of Separate Trial. [See § 10.30[1], Paragraph E.]
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a motion for separate trial of the special defense [Code Civ. Proc. § 597], pleaded in the answer either by denying the relevant allegations of the complaint or cross complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(1)] or by alleging it as an affirmative defense [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)], that plaintiff is a person transacting business under a fictitious business name, that the contract or transaction sued on was made or had in the fictitious business name, and that plaintiff has failed to file and publish the fictitious business name statement required by Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17910 and 17917, respectively, and, hence, lacks legal capacity to sue [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(b); Bus. & Prof. Code § 17918].

When appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Hearing

Counsel should have with him or her at the hearing any evidence necessary to sustain the defense of lack of legal capacity to sue and be ready to present it should the judge so request. If there is no dispute as to the facts and, hence, nothing to be tried, it would appear that the court would dispose of the defense at the hearing of the motion for separate trial and deny the motion. That is, if it appears that plaintiff or cross complainant is not a person or entity required to file and publish a fictitious business name statement and has not done so or that, if it is so required and has not done so, the action is not on a contract made or transaction had in the fictitious business name, the court would so rule and deny the motion. Conversely, if it appears that plaintiff or cross complainant is requiredto file and publish a fictitious business name statement and has not done so and that the action is on a contract made or transaction had in the fictitious business name, the court would, on application of the plaintiff or cross complainant, grant a continuance to enable plaintiff to comply with Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17910 and 17917 [see discussion in § 10.32[2][c]].

On the other hand, if there are fact issues to be tried, it would appear that the court would order a separate trial of the special defense.

[c] Nature of Objection; Subsequent Compliance

An objection to the maintenance of an action on the ground plaintiff has not complied with Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17910 and 17917 by filing and publishing the fictitious business name statement is a mere matter of abatement pending trial, which has the result of suspending the trial until the statutes are complied with. It is not jurisdictional. Moreover, Bus. & Prof. Code § 17918 does not prohibit the commencement of the action, but only its maintenance "until the fictitious business name statement has been executed, filed, and published." Hence, before an action is finally dismissed on that ground, plaintiff should, prior to the trial, be given an opportunity to comply with the statutes if he, she, or it so desires [Kadota Fig Ass'n v. Case-Swayne Co. (1946) 73 Cal. App. 2d 796, 804, 805, 167 P.2d 518 (involving predecessor statutes); see also Tyrone v. Kelley (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 1, 14, 106 Cal. Rptr. 761, 507 P.2d 65 ; Rudneck v. Southern Cal. Metal & Rubber Co. (1920) 184 Cal. 274, 282, 193 P. 775].

[d] Raising Objection

[i] By Demurrer

When the objection that plaintiff or cross complainant lacks capacity to sue appears from the face of the complaint or cross complaint, or from any matter of which the court is required to or may take judicial notice [see Evid. Code §§ 451, 452], the objection on that ground may be taken by a demurrer to the pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10(b), 430.30(a); see § 10.07].

Despite the fact that the failure of plaintiff to have complied with Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17910-17917 would not likely have appeared on the face of the complaint, courts nevertheless have permitted a demurrer on the ground of lack of legal capacity to sue the complaint shows that plaintiff or cross complainant is a person required to file and publish a fictitious name statement but is silent as to whether the statement has in fact been filed and published. Trial courts have frequently entertained such demurrers, and the appellate courts have assumed or stated by way of dictum that a demurrer is proper in such a case [see, e.g., Sweeney v. Stanford (1885) 67 Cal. 635, 636, 8 P. 444 ; Rivers v. Beadle (1960) 183 Cal. App. 2d 691, 700-701, 7 Cal. Rptr. 170 ; Kadota Fig Ass'n v. Case-Swayne Co. (1946) 73 Cal. App. 2d 796, 800, 167 P.2d 518 ; Pleaters' & Stitchers' Ass'n v. Davis (1934) 140 Cal. App. 403, 406, 35 P.2d 401 ; Spreckels v. Grace Darling Hosp. Ass'n (1915) 28 Cal. App. 646, 648, 153 P. 718]. For a memorandum of points and authorities in support of a demurrer on this ground, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

[ii] By Answer

Where the complaint fails to allege compliance with Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17910-17917, but shows that plaintiff is required to comply, the better procedure for raising the objection that plaintiff lacks legal capacity to maintain the action is by setting it up as an affirmative defense in the answer [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)] and then moving the court, on notice, for a trial of this special defense before trial on the merits [Code Civ. Proc. § 597].

If the plaintiff alleges both that plaintiff is transacting business under a fictitious business name and compliance that plaintiff has complied with Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17910-17917, the issue may be raised by answer admitting that plaintiff is doing business under a fictitious business name but denying compliance with the statutes, where such is the fact. It is not necessary in such case to plead noncompliance affirmatively [see Rudneck v. Southern Cal. Metal & Rubber Co. (1920) 184 Cal. 274, 280-281, 193 P. 775 ; Sweeney v. Stanford (1885) 67 Cal. 635, 636, 8 P. 444]. Again, a motion for separate trial of this issue under Code Civ. Proc. § 597 is proper.

On raising the issue by amended or supplemental answer, see § 10.07.

[e] Waiver of Objection

The failure to raise the objection that plaintiff lacks legal capacity to sue [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(b)] by demurrer [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(a)] or answer [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(b)] normally constitutes a waiver of it [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.80(a); see also Kadota Fig Ass'n v. Case-Swayne Co. (1946) 73 Cal. App. 2d 796, 805, 167 P.2d 518 (grounds for mere abatement of an action as waivable)].

[f] Motion to Dismiss

It has been held that the issue of noncompliance with the fictitious business name statutes is properly presented by averment in the answer by way of affirmative defense that plaintiff failed to file and publish the required statement coupled with a motion to dismiss on the same ground [Andrews v. Glick (1928) 205 Cal. 699, 700-701, 272 P. 587] . It should be noted, however, that this ground is not among those specified by the Code of Civil Procedure as proper for dismissal [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 581-581d] unless the issue has been presented in some proper manner (as by demurrer), there has been a ruling on it in favor of the defendant (as by sustaining the demurrer), and plaintiff has failed to amend the complaint within the time allowed to allege compliance or, where necessary to doso, has failed to secure a continuance to allow time for compliance with the statutes.

[g] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a form of affirmative defense that plaintiff has failed to comply with the fictitious business name statutes and hence lacks legal capacity to sue and for forms of notice of motion for separate trial, order granting the motion, and judgment, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 3, Abatement of Actions (Matthew Bender).

For forms of demurrers on the same ground, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 3, Abatement of Actions and Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings (Matthew Bender).

[h] Related Points and Authorities

For a memorandum of points and authorities in support of a demurrer to a complaint on the ground that plaintiff has failed to file and publish the fictitious business name statement as required by statute and hence lacks legal capacity to sue, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Filing and Publication of Statement Required

Bus. & Prof. Code § 17910 in pertinent part provides that every person who regularly transacts business in this state for profit under a fictitious business name "shall" file a fictitious business name statement in accordance with Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17910-17918 not later than 40 days from the time he or she commences to transact the business.

Bus. & Prof. Code § 17917(a) provides that within 30 days after a fictitious business name statement has been filed, the registrant must cause a statement in the form prescribed by Bus. & Prof. Code § 17913(a) to be published pursuant to Gov. Code § 6064 in a newspaper of general circulation in the county in which the registrant's principal place of business is located or, if there is no such newspaper in that county, then in a newspaper of general circulation in an adjoining county, and if the registrant does not have a place of business in this state, the notice is to be published in a newspaper of general circulation in Sacramento County.

[b] Effect of Failure to Comply With Statutes

Kadota Fig Ass'n v. Case-Swayne Co. (1946) 73 Cal. App. 2d 796, 167 P.2d 518 , was an action on a written agreement for an accounting and for money received. Defendants' demurrer on the ground plaintiff had failed to file and publish the fictitious business name certificate (now statement) as required by former Civ. Code §§ 2466 and 2468 [now Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17910, 17917] and, hence, lacked legal capacity to sue, was sustained without leave to amend, and the action was dismissed. Although the court of appeal held that it was error to have sustained the demurrer without leave to amend (73 Cal. App. 2d 796, 803) and that plaintiff should, before the action is finally dismissed on the foregoing ground, be given an opportunity to comply with the statutes if it so desired (73 Cal. App. 2d 796, 805), the court held that the demurrer for lack of legal capacity to sue was properly sustained (73 Cal. App. 2d 796, 801-803).

[c] Ground for Abatement

Tyrone v. Kelley (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 1, 106 Cal. Rptr. 761, 507 P.2d 65 , was an action to recover a fee for finding a lender which committed itself to loan defendants up to a specified sum for a construction project. On the fourth day of trial, defendants, over plaintiff's objection, moved to amend their answer to raise as a third affirmative defense plaintiff's failure to have filed a certificate that he was doing business under a fictitious business name as required by former Civ. Code § 2466 [now Bus. & Prof. Code § 17910]. The trial court reserved ruling on the motion but on the last day of trial denied defendants' motion for nonsuit made on the same ground, ruling that the failure to file the certificate was a mere matter of abatement and not a jurisdictional defect. From a judgment for plaintiff, defendants appealed. In affirming the judgment on the ground, among others, that a judgment on the merits should not be reversed where a plea in abatement is raised for the first time during trial (9 Cal. 3d 1, 14), the Supreme Court, quoting from Kadota Fig Ass'n v. Case-Swayne Co. (1946) 73 Cal. App. 2d 796, 804, 167 P.2d 518 , discussed in § 10.32[3][b] stated the rule that an objection to the maintenance of an action on the ground plaintiff has not complied with the provisions of former Civ. Code §§ 2466 and 2468 [now Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17910, 17917] by filing and publishing the certificate (now statement) required is a mere matter of abatement pending the trial, which has the result of suspending the trial until the statute is complied with (9 Cal. 3d 1, 13-14).

Rudneck v. Southern Cal. Metal & Rubber Co. (1920) 184 Cal. 274, 193 P. 775 , was an action by a partnership to recover the purchase price for certain material sold and delivered to the defendant. Plaintiffs alleged compliance with former Civ. Code §§ 2466 and 2468 [now Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17910, 17917], but this allegation was denied in the answer. At trial, plaintiffs proved that it had filed the fictitious business name certificate (now statement) but introduced no evidence with respect to its publication. Judgment was for plaintiffs, and defendant appealed. The Supreme Court, in reversing the judgment on the single issue of the publication by plaintiffs of their certificate, pointed out that failure to comply with the fictitious business name statutes was but a matter of abatement (184 Cal. 274, 281).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Ground for Abatement

The factual background of Kadota Fig Ass'n v. Case-Swayne Co. (1946) 73 Cal. App. 2d 796, 167 P.2d 518 , is discussed in § 10.32[3][b]. In reversing the judgment of dismissal with directions to the trial court to grant plaintiff a reasonable time within which to amend its complaint if it so desired, the court of appeal said that an objection to the maintenance of an action on the ground that plaintiff has not complied with the provisions of Civ. Code §§ 2466 and 2468 [repealed; now Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17910, 17917] by filing and publishing the certificate (now statement) required thereby, is a mere matter of abatement pending the trial, which has the result of suspending the trial until the statute is complied with, the objection is not jurisdictional (73 Cal. App. 2d 796, 804).

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 10 ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. Pleas in Abatement

1-10 California Points & Authorities § 10.33

§ 10.33 Supporting Motion for Separate Trial of Special Defense Constituting Ground of Abatement to Prosecution of Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 597]--Lack of Legal Capacity to Sue [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(b)]--Party's Corporate Powers, Rights, and Privileges Have Been Suspended for Failure to File Required Information Statement [Corp. Code §§ 1502 and 2205(b)]

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Separate Trial of Special Defense Constituting Ground of Abatement to Prosecution of Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 597]--Lack of Legal Capacity to Sue [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(b)]--Party's Corporate Powers, Rights, and Privileges Have Been Suspended for Failure to File Required Information Statement [Corp. Code §§ 1502 and 2205(b)]

[Caption. See § 10.30[1].]

THE COURT SHOULD GRANT THE MOTION FOR SEPARATE TRAIL OF THE SPECIAL DEFENSE PLEADED IN THE ANSWER THAT THE _____ [PLAINTIFF'S or CROSS-COMPLAINANT'S] CORPORATE POWERS HAVE BEEN SUSPENDED FOR FAILURE TO FILE THE REQUIRED INFORMATION STATEMENT WITH THE SECRETARY OF STATE AND DEPRIVES IT OF LEGAL CAPACITY TO SUE, AND TO GRANT THE MOTION WOULD SAVE USELESS LABOR AND EXPENSE OTHERWISE SPENT IN LITIGATING THE OTHER ISSUES IN THE CASE IF THE SPECIAL DEFENSE PROVES MERITORIOUS.

A. Suspension of Domestic Corporation's Corporate Powers, Rights, and Privileges. The corporate powers, rights, and privileges of a domestic corporation may be suspended for failure to file the Information Statement with the Secretary of State required by Corporations Code Sections 1502 and 2205(b).

B. Lack of Capacity to Sue. A corporation that has its powers suspended or forfeited under Corporations Code Sections 1502 and 2205(b) for failure to file the required Information Statement lacks the legal capacity to prosecute or defend a civil action during the period of suspension (see Palm Valley Homeowners Assn., Inc. v. Design MTC (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 553, 560, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 350).

C. Lack of Legal Capacity to Sue as Ground for Objection. [See § 10.31[1], Paragraph D.]

D. Plea in Abatement. [See § 10.34[1], Paragraph D.]

E. Separate Trial Authorized. [See § 10.31[1], Paragraph F.]

F. Purpose of Separate Trial. [See § 10.30[1], Paragraph F.]
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a motion for separate trial of the special defense [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)] that plaintiff's or cross-complainant's corporate powers have been suspended for failure to file the required information statement with the Secretary of State within 90 days after the filing of its original articles and annually thereafter [Corp Code §§ 1502 and 2205(b)], and that it therefore lacks legal capacity to sue [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(b)].

This form is intended primarily to provide points and authorities relating to the assertion of this defense in the procedural context of a plea in abatement, and thus, the authorities relating to the substantive law of suspension and revivor are not set forth or discussed in their entirety in this form. For further discussion and additional points and authorities that may, in an appropriate case, be combined with these points and authorities, see Ch. 52, Corporations .

This form contains authority relating only to suspension of a domestic corporation for failure to file the required information statement [Corp Code §§ 1502 and 2205(b) (application to domestic corporations)].

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law state. Include the date the corporation was initially filed with the Secretary of State, the dates by which the corporation failed to file the information statement, and information from the Secretary of State certificate indicating the suspension of the corporation's powers.

[b] Hearing

Counsel should bring to the hearing any evidence that will establish the suspension of plaintiff's corporate powers. For example, a copy of the Secretary of State's certificate of the fact of suspension. Corp. Code § 2205 may be attached to the declaration [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009, 2015.5] supporting the motion if not already attached to the answer, and the certificate itself offered in evidence at the hearing if so requested by the judge. If the fact of suspension is admitted or not contested by the corporation, it would appear that the court would, at the hearing of the motion for separate trial, normally rule on the effect of the defense on the action, because the issue is a matter of law and there would be no facts to try at a separate trial of the special defense that plaintiff or cross complainant lacks legal capacity to sue.

[c] Defending the Motion

If the corporation's corporate powers were suspended but have been revived [Corp. Code § 2205 (discussed in Ch. 52, Corporations)], the corporation should be prepared to offer in evidence at the hearing the certificate of revivor from the Secretary of State [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305a].

If plaintiff's or cross complainant's corporate powers have not yet been revived but the corporation has applied for revivor or intends to do so [see Corp. Code § 2205(d)], the corporation should seek a continuance to allow it time to secure the certificate of revivor.

Even if the objection that a party's corporate powers have been suspended is sustained, the party should, before the action is dismissed or other adverse ruling is made, be given an opportunity of filing the information statement and reinstating the corporation if it manifests a willingness to do so [see Welco Constr., Inc. v. Modulux, Inc. (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 69, 70, 120 Cal. Rptr. 572 (suspension for failure to pay taxes)]. The granting of a continuance for such purpose is proper [Welco Constr., Inc. v. Modulux, Inc. (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 69, 70, 120 Cal. Rptr. 572 (suspension for failure to pay taxes)].

[d] Raising Objection

The objection that plaintiff's or cross complainant's corporate powers have been suspended, that is, that the corporation lacks legal capacity to sue [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(b)] may be raised by demurrer if the ground of objection appears from the face of the corporation's pleading or from matter of which the court must or may take judicial notice [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(a); see also Code Civ. Proc. § 430.70 and Evid. Code §§ 451-453 on judicial notice] or by answer if the ground of objection does not appear from the face of the pleading, whether or not it would appear from judicially noticed matter [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(b)], by alleging it as an affirmative defense [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(b)(2)]. While the fact of suspension would not normally appear from the face of the pleading, it would seem the court could take judicial notice of the fact of suspension pursuant to either Evid. Code § 452(c), authorizing the court to take judicial notice of the official acts of the executive department of any state, or Evid. Code § 452(h), authorizing the court to take judicial notice of facts and propositions that are not reasonably subject to dispute and are capable of immediate and accurate determination by resort to sources of reasonably indisputable accuracy [see People v. Terry (1974) 38 Cal. App. 3d 432, 439, 113 Cal. Rptr. 233 (judicial notice of death certificate)]. On raising the issue by amended or supplemental answer and suggested procedures for raising the objection, see § 10.07.

Notwithstanding the foregoing, the issue of suspension of corporate powers for failure to file the required information statement can be raised other than by demurrer [Palm Valley Homeowners Assn., Inc. v. Design MTC (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 553, 560, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 350 (motion to strike pleadings and for sanctions against attorneys for the corporation)]. For cases where the issue of suspension or forfeiture for failure to pay taxes, see discussion in § 10.34[2][d].

[e] Waiver of Objection

The failure to object by demurrer or answer to a party's lack of legal capacity to sue normally constitutes a waiver of the objection [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.80(a)]. But an objection based on the suspension of corporate powers is not waived so long as those powers remain suspended [see Gar-Lo, Inc. v. Prudential Sav. & L. Ass'n (1974) 41 Cal. App. 3d 242, 244, 116 Cal. Rptr. 389] and may be asserted so long as the corporation is under the disability [Diverco Constructors v. Wilstein (1970) 4 Cal. App. 3d 6], provided a judgment on the merits has not been entered and become final [Traub Co. v. Coffee Break Service, Inc. (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 368, 369, 57 Cal. Rptr. 846, 425 P.2d 790 ; see also Peacock Hill Ass'n v. Peacock Lagoon Constr. Co. (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 369, 371-372, 105 Cal. Rptr. 29, 503 P.2d 285 (explaining the holding in Traub)].

[f] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a form of affirmative defense that plaintiff's corporate powers have been suspended for forfeited for failure to pay taxes and for a form of notice of motion for separate trial, a form of order granting the motion, and a form of judgment, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 3, Abatement of Actions (Matthew Bender).

[g] Related Points and Authorities

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to additional aspects of the substantive law of suspension and revivor of corporate powers, rights, and privileges for nonpayment of taxes or failure to file returns, set forth in the context of motions supporting and opposing summary judgment, see Ch. 52, Corporations . That chapter also contains points and authorities relating to voidability of a contract entered into by a corporation during the period of suspension or forfeiture.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Suspension of Domestic Corporation's Corporate Powers, Rights, and Privileges

Corp. Code § 1502 requires that every corporation file, within 90 days after filing its original articles and annually thereafter, a statement containing all of the following: the names and complete business or residence addresses of its incumbent directors; the number of vacancies on the board, if any; the names and complete business or residence addresses of its chief executive officer, secretary, and chief financial officer; the street address of its principal executive office, or principal place of business if its principal business office is located in another state; the mailing address of the corporation, if different from the street address of its principal executive office; a statement of the general type of business that constitutes the principal business activity of the corporation, and a statement identifying its agent for service of process.

Corp. Code § 2204 describes the process for imposition of the financial penalty for failure to file the information statement. If the corporation fails to file the information statement, the Secretary of State shall mail a notice of delinquency, advising the corporation of the monetary penalty imposed by Rev. & Tax. Code § 19141 for failure to timely file the required statement. If the corporation does not file the informationstatement within 60 days after the mailing of this notice, the Secretary of State certifies the name of the corporation to the Franchise Tax Board, who assesses a financial penalty under Rev. & Tax. Code § 19141.

Corp. Code § 2205 describes the suspension process. If a corporation fails to file a required information statement and also did not file an information statement in the previous 24 months, and was certified for penalty pursuant to Corp. Code § 2204, it is subject to suspension. In such a case, the Secretary of State mails a notice to the corporation informing the corporation that its corporate powers, rights, and duties will be suspended after 60 days if it fails to file the information statement. If the corporation does not file the information statement within that 60 day period, the Secretary of State notifies the Franchise Tax Board of the suspension and mails a notice of suspension to the corporation. Thereupon, the corporate rights, powers, and privileges of the corporation are suspended, except for the purpose of amending the articles of incorporation to set forth a new name, and for the purpose of filing the information statement. If the corporation files a new information statement, the Secretary of State certifies that fact to the Franchise Tax Board, and the corporation will then be relieved from suspension, so long as there is no other suspension also pending under Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301 or 23301.5.

[b] Lack of Capacity to Sue

In Palm Valley Homeowners Assn., Inc. v. Design MTC (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 553, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 350 , Design MTC, a corporation, was a subcontractor named as a defendant in a construction defects lawsuit. In March 1997, the corporation's attorneys learned that the corporation had been suspended for failure to file the information statement required by Corp. Code § 1502 but failed to notify the court or opposing counsel but instead continued to participate in the litigation, including participating in discovery and filing a summary judgment motion in July 1998. In August, 1998, plaintiff's investigator learned of the corporation's suspended status and plaintiff's attorney brought the problem to the attention of the corporation's attorney and the court. The court granted an order shortening time for plaintiff's motion to strike Design MTC's answer and took Design MTC's summary judgment motions off calendar. The court also imposed sanctions, after a noticed hearing, against Design MTC's attorneys, in excess of $14,000 for discovery abuse under Code Civ. Proc. § 2023 and Code Civ. Proc. § 128.5 (frivolous actions taken in bad faith). The sanctions were based on the corporation's attorneys engaging in litigation on behalf of their client while knowing their client was a suspended corporation. The firm appealed from the sanctions order, which was affirmed on appeal (85 Cal. App. 4th 553, 556-558).

Attorneys for the corporation argued that a suspension for failure to file the required information statement should not carry the same consequences as a suspension for failure to pay taxes. Cases analyzing corporate suspensions for failure to pay taxes have noted that one of the purposes of such a suspension is to pressure the suspended corporation to pay its taxes; the attorneys argued that since this public policy purpose did not apply in this case, and it was reasonable for them to believe that a suspension for failing to file an information statement would not preclude corporate access to the courts. The court disagreed, holding, in effect, that "suspended" means "suspended," and held that, "[g]iving the benefit of any doubt to the firm ... we think it inescapable that any reasonable attorney reviewing the relevant statutes would entertain a strong suspicion that Design MTC was disqualified from exercising any powers, including the right to resort to the courts in litigation" (85 Cal. App. 4th 553, 562).

The court analyzed the governing statutes as follows: Corp. Code § 1502 provides that every corporation must file a statement every two years containing such information as the corporation's current directors, the number of board vacancies, if any, the current officers, and the name and address of a person in the state, designated to receive service of legal process upon the corporation. Corp. Code § 2204 provides that, if a corporation fails to file its required information statement under Corp. Code § 1502, the Secretary of State shall give notice of the delinquency; 60 days after notice of the delinquency, the Secretary of State must certify the name of the corporation to the Franchise Tax Board, and the Franchise Tax Board imposes a penalty upon the corporation.

If a corporation fails to file a statement under Corp. Code § 1502, fails to file a statement for 24 months, and has been assessed a penalty under Corp. Code § 2204 during that 24-month period, then the corporation is subject to suspension under Corp. Code § 2205. The Secretary of State must notify the corporation that "its corporate powers, rights, and privileges" will be suspended after an additional 60 days, if it fails to file a statement under Corp. Code § 1502. If the corporation fails to comply within 60 days, the Secretary of State certifies to the Franchise Tax Board that the corporation is suspended, and mails a notice to the suspended corporation. "[T]hereupon, except for the purpose of amending the articles of incorporation to set forth a new name, the corporate powers, rights, and privileges of the corporation are suspended" [Corp. Code, § 2205(c)].

Corp. Code § 2205(d) provides that, notwithstanding the suspension, the corporation is empowered to file a statement under Corp. Code § 1502; if it does so, the Secretary of State "shall certify that fact to the Franchise Tax Board and the corporation may thereupon be relieved from suspension" unless it is also suspended by the Franchise Tax Board for nonpayment of taxes. Before Corp. Code § 2205 was amended in 1999, it provided that the Secretary of State must certify the suspended corporation's compliance with Corp. Code § 1502 to the Franchise Tax Board, and that the corporation may "thereupon, in accordance with Section 23305a of the Revenue and Taxation Code , be relieved from suspension ... ." (italics added; see Stats. 1999, ch. 1000, § 23). The italicized language was in effect at the time of all the events herein.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 10 ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. Pleas in Abatement

1-10 California Points & Authorities § 10.34

§ 10.34 Supporting Motion for Separate Trial of Special Defense Constituting Ground of Abatement to Prosecution of Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 597]--Lack of Legal Capacity to Sue [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(b)]--Party's Corporate Powers, Rights, and Privileges Have Been Suspended, or Exercise of Party's Corporate Powers, Rights, and Privileges in This State Have Been Forfeited, for Nonpayment of Taxes [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301] or Failure to File Required Tax Return [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301.5]

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Separate Trial of Special Defense Constituting Ground of Abatement to Prosecution of Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 597]--Lack of Legal Capacity to Sue [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(b)]--Party's Corporate Powers, Rights, and Privileges Have Been Suspended, or Exercise of Party's Corporate Powers, Rights, and Privileges in This State Have Been Forfeited, for Nonpayment of Taxes [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301] or Failure to File Required Tax Return [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301.5]

[Caption. See § 10.30[1].]

[EITHER]

THE COURT SHOULD GRANT THE MOTION FOR SEPARATE TRIAL OF THE SPECIAL DEFENSE PLEADED IN THE ANSWER THAT THE _____ [PLAINTIFF'S or CROSS COMPLAINANT'S] CORPORATE POWERS HAVE BEEN SUSPENDED FOR _____ [NONPAYMENT OF TAXES and/or FAILURE TO FILE A REQUIRED TAX RETURN] BECAUSE THE SUSPENSION OF A DOMESTIC CORPORATION'S CORPORATE POWERS DEPRIVES IT OF LEGAL CAPACITY TO SUE AND TO GRANT THE MOTION WOULD SAVE USELESS LABOR AND EXPENSE OTHERWISE SPENT IN LITIGATING THE OTHER ISSUES IN THE CASE IF THE SPECIAL DEFENSE PROVES MERITORIOUS.

A. Suspension of Domestic Corporation's Corporate Powers, Rights, and Privileges. The corporate powers, rights, and privileges of a domestic taxpayer may be suspended for failure to timely pay any tax, penalty, or interest, or any portion of it due and payable under Revenue and Taxation Code Section 19001 et seq. (payments and assessments under franchise and income tax laws) or under Revenue and Taxation Code Section 23001 et seq. (Bank and Corporation Tax Law) or any liability, or portion of it, due and payable under Revenue and Taxation Code Section 19131 (penalties and additions to tax under franchise and income tax laws), or to file a tax return required by the Bank and Corporation Tax Law (Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 23301 (tax and liability), 23301.5 (tax return)).

[OR]

THE COURT SHOULD GRANT THE MOTION FOR SEPARATE TRIAL OF THE SPECIAL DEFENSE PLEADED IN THE ANSWER THAT THE EXERCISE OF THE _____ [PLAINTIFF'S or CROSS COMPLAINANT'S] CORPORATE POWERS, RIGHTS, AND PRIVILEGES IN THIS STATE HAVE BEEN FORFEITED FOR _____ [NONPAYMENT OF TAXES and/or FAILURE TO FILE A REQUIRED TAX RETURN] BECAUSE THE FORFEITURE OF A FOREIGN CORPORATION'S CORPORATE POWERS, RIGHTS, AND PRIVILEGES IN THIS STATE DEPRIVES IT OF LEGAL CAPACITY TO SUE, AND TO GRANT THE MOTION WOULD SAVE USELESS LABOR AND EXPENSE OTHERWISE SPENT IN LITIGATING THE OTHER ISSUES IN THE CASE IF THE SPECIAL DEFENSE PROVES MERITORIOUS.

A. Forfeiture of Foreign Corporation's Corporate Powers, Rights, and Privileges. The corporate powers, rights, and privileges of a foreign taxpayer in this state may be forfeited for failure to timely pay any tax, penalty, or interest, or any portion of it due and payable under Revenue and Taxation Code Section 19001 et seq. (payments and assessments under franchise and income tax laws) or under Revenue and Taxation Code Section 23001 et seq. (Bank and Corporation Tax Law) or any liability, or potion of it, due and payable under Revenue and Taxation Code Section 19131 (penalties and additions to tax under franchise and income tax laws), or to file a tax return required by the Bank and Corporation Tax Law (Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 23301 (tax and liability), 23301.5 (tax return)).

[CONTINUE]

B. Lack of Capacity to Sue. A corporation that has its powers suspended or forfeited under Revenue and Taxation Code Section 23301 or 23301.5 for failure to pay taxes or other liabilities or to file returns lacks the legal capacity to prosecute or defend a civil action during the suspension or forfeiture (see Reed v. Norman (1957) 48 Cal. 2d 338, 343, 309 P.2d 809 ; Sade Shoe Co. v. Oschin &Snyder (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 1509, 1512 ; Alhambra-Shumway Mines, Inc. v. Alhambra Gold Mine Corp. (1957) 155 Cal. App. 2d 46, 49-50, 317 P.2d 649).

C. Lack of Legal Capacity to Sue as Ground for Objection. [See § 10.31[1], Paragraph D.]

D. Plea in Abatement. The defense that plaintiff's corporate powers have been suspended for nonpayment of taxes and that it, therefore, lacks legal capacity to sue, is a plea in abatement (see Traub Co. v. Coffee Break Serv., Inc. (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 368, 370, 57 Cal. Rptr. 846, 425 P.2d 790 ; Sade Shoe Co. v. Oschin & Snyder (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 1509, 266 Cal. Rptr. 619 ; Welco Constr., Inc. v. Modulux, Inc. (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 69, 72, 120 Cal. Rptr. 572).

E. Separate Trial Authorized. [See § 10.3[1], Paragraph F.]

F. Purpose of Separate Trial. [See § 10.30[1], Paragraph F.]
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a motion for separate trial of the special defense [Code Civ. Proc. § 597], pleaded in the answer [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)], that plaintiff's or cross complainant's corporate powers have been suspended for nonpayment of taxes [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301] and/or failure to file a tax return [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301.5] and that it therefore lacks legal capacity to sue [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(b)].

This form is intended primarily to provide points and authorities relating to the assertion of this defense in the procedural context of a plea in abatement, and thus, the authorities relating to the substantive law of suspension and revivor are not set forth or discussed in their entirety in this form. For further discussion and additional points and authorities that may, in an appropriate case, be combined with these points and authorities, see Ch. 52, Corporations , in this publication.

This form contains authority relating only to suspension of a domestic corporation's powers or forfeiture of the powers of a foreign corporation qualified to do business in California. Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 23301 and 23301.5 do not apply to foreign corporations that are required by Corp. Code § 2105 to qualify to do intrastate business in California unless they have in fact qualified with the Secretary of State [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301.6]. If the corporation is required to qualify but has not done so, the points and authorities in § 10.35 will provide the basis for the defense and plea in abatement.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Hearing

Counsel should have with him or her at the hearing any evidence that will establish the suspension or forfeiture of plaintiff's corporate powers. For example, a copy of the Secretary of State's certificate of the fact of suspension [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23302(c); see discussion in § 10.34[3][a]] may be attached to the declaration [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009, 2015.5] supporting the motion if not already attached to the answer, and the certificate itself offered in evidence at the hearing if so requested by the judge. If the fact of suspension or forfeiture is admitted or not contested by the corporation, it would appear that the court would, at the hearing of the motion for separate trial, normally rule on the effect of the defense on the action, because that is a matter of law and there would be no facts to try at a separate trial of the special defense that plaintiff or cross complainant lacks legal capacity to sue.

[c] Defending the Motion

If the corporation's corporate powers were suspended or forfeited but have been revived [see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 23305-23305.2 (discussed in Ch. 52, Corporations)], the corporation should be prepared to offer in evidence at the hearing the certificate of revivor from the Franchise Tax Board [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305a (discussed in Ch. 52, Corporations)].

If plaintiff's or cross complainant's corporate powers have not yet been revived but the corporation has applied for revivor [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305] or intends to do so, the corporation should seek a continuance to allow it time to secure the certificate of revivor.

Even if the objection that a party's corporate powers have been suspended or forfeited is sustained, the party should, before the action is dismissed or other adverse ruling is made, be given an opportunity of paying the taxes and reinstating the corporation if it manifests a willingness to do so [see Reed v. Norman (1957) 48 Cal. 2d 338, 344, 309 P.2d 809 ; Welco Constr. Inc. v. Modulux, Inc. (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 69, 70, 120 Cal. Rptr. 572]. The granting of a continuance for such purpose is proper [see Schwartz v. Magyar House, Inc. (1959) 168 Cal. App. 2d 182, 184, 335 P.2d 487 (leading case); see also Welco Constr., Inc. v. Modulux, Inc. (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 69, 70, 120 Cal. Rptr. 572 ; Old Fashion Farms v. Hamrick (1967) 253 Cal. App. 2d 233, 235, 61 Cal. Rptr. 254] .

[d] Raising Objection

The objection that plaintiff's or cross complainant's corporate powers have been suspended or forfeited, that is, that the corporation lacks legal capacity to sue [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(b)], may be raised by demurrer if the ground of objection appears from the face of the corporation's pleading or from matter of which the court must or may take judicial notice [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(a); see also Code Civ. Proc. § 430.70 and Evid. Code §§ 451-453 on judicial notice] or by answer if the ground of objection does not appear from the face of the pleading, whether or not it would appear from judicially noticed matter [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(b)], by alleging it as an affirmative defense [see Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)]. While the fact of suspension or forfeiture would not normally appear from the face of the pleading, it would seem the court could take judicial notice of the fact of suspension pursuant to either Evid. Code § 452(c), authorizing the court to take judicial notice of the official acts of the executive department of any state, or Evid. Code § 452(h), authorizing the court to take judicial notice of facts and propositions that are not reasonably subject to dispute and are capable of immediate and accurate determination by resort to sources of reasonably indisputable accuracy [see People v. Terry (1974) 38 Cal. App. 3d 432, 439, 113 Cal. Rptr. 233 (judicial notice of death certificate)]. On raising the issue by amended or supplemental answer and suggested procedures for raising the objection, see § 10.07.

Notwithstanding the foregoing, the objection that a plaintiff's or cross complainant's corporate powers have been suspended or forfeited for nonpayment of taxes has been raised in a variety of ways other than by demurrer or by answer and motion for separate trial of that defense. For example, it has been raised by motion for summary judgment [see Gar-Lo, Inc. v. Prudential Sav. & L. Ass'n (1974) 41 Cal. App. 3d 242, 243, 116 Cal. Rptr. 389], on a motion to dissolve a writ of attachment [A.E. Cook Co. v. K S Racing Enterprises, Inc. (1969) 274 Cal. App. 2d 499, 500, 79 Cal. Rptr. 123], by a challenge at trial of plaintiff's standing to prosecute the action [Welco Constr., Inc. v. Modulux, Inc. (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 69, 70, 120 Cal. Rptr. 572], by an objection at trial to the introduction of any evidence by plaintiff [Old Fashion Farms v. Hamrick (1967) 253 Cal. App. 2d 233, 234, 61 Cal. Rptr. 254], by a motion to dismiss the corporation's appeal [Peacock Hill Ass'n v. Peacock Lagoon Constr. Co. (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 369, 370-371, 105 Cal. Rptr. 29, 503 P.2d 285], and on appeal from a judgment [Rooney v. Vermont Inv. Corp. (1973) 10 Cal. 3d 351, 359, 110 Cal. Rptr. 353, 515 P.2d 297].

[e] Waiver of Objection

The failure to object by demurrer or answer to a party's lack of legal capacity to sue normally constitutes a waiver of the objection [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.80(a)]. But an objection based on the suspension of corporate powers is not waived so long as those powers remain suspended [see Gar-Lo, Inc. v. Prudential Sav. & L. Ass'n (1974) 41 Cal. App. 3d 242, 244, 116 Cal. Rptr. 389] and may be asserted so long as the corporation is under the disability [Diverco Constructors, Inc. v. Wilstein (1970) 4 Cal. App. 3d 6, 12, 85 Cal. Rptr. 851], provided a judgment on the merits has not been entered and become final [Traub Co. v. Coffee Break Serv., Inc. (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 368, 369, 57 Cal. Rptr. 846, 425 P.2d 790 ; see also Peacock Hill Ass'n v. Peacock Lagoon Constr. Co. (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 369, 371-372, 105 Cal. Rptr. 29, 503 P.2d 285 (explaining the holding in Traub); Witkin, California Procedure (2d ed.), vol. 3, §§ 72, 73, 956].

[f] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a form of affirmative defense that plaintiff's corporate powers have been suspended or forfeited for failure to pay taxes and for a form of notice of motion for separate trial, a form of order granting the motion, and a form of judgment, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 3, Abatement of Actions (Matthew Bender).

[g] Related Points and Authorities

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to additional aspects of the substantive law of suspension and revivor of corporate powers, rights, and privileges for nonpayment of taxes or failure to file returns, set forth in the context of motions supporting and opposing summary judgment, see Ch. 52, Corporations . That chapter also contains points and authorities relating to voidability of a contract entered into by a corporation during the period of suspension or forfeiture.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Suspension of Domestic Corporation's Corporate Powers, Rights, and Privileges

Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301 provides that, except for the purposes of filing an application for exempt status or amending the articles of incorporation as necessary either to perfect that application or to set forth a new name, the corporate powers, rights, and privileges of a domestic taxpayer may be suspended, and the exercise of the corporate powers, rights, and privileges of a foreign taxpayer in this state may be forfeited, if any of the following conditions occur:

(a) If any tax, penalty, or interest, or any portion thereof, that is due and payable under Chapter 4 (commencing with Section 19001) of Part 10.2 (payments and assessments under franchise and income tax laws), or under "this part" (the Bank and Corporation Law, Rev. & Tax. Code § 23001 et seq.), either at the time the return is required to be filed or on or before the 15th day of the ninth month following the close of the income year, is not paid on or before 6 p.m. on the last day of the 12th month after the close of the taxable year.

(b) If any tax, penalty, or interest, or any portion thereof, due and payable under Chapter 4 (commencing with Section 19001) of Part 10.2 (payments and assessments under franchise and income tax laws), or under "this part" (the Bank and Corporation Law, Rev. & Tax. Code § 23001 et seq.), upon notice and demand from the Franchise Tax Board, is not paid on or before 6 p.m. on the last day of the 11th month following the due date of the tax.

(c) If any liability, or any portion thereof, which is due and payable under Article 7 (commencing with Section 19131) of Chapter 4 of Part 10.2 (penalties and additions to tax under franchise and income tax laws), is not paid on or before 6 p.m. on the last day of the 11th month following the date that the tax liability is due and payable.

Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301.5 provides that, except for the purposes of filing an application for exempt status or amending the articles of incorporation as necessary either to perfect that application or to set forth a new name, the corporate powers, rights, and privileges of a domestic taxpayer may be suspended, and the exercise of the corporate powers, rights, and privileges of a foreign taxpayer in this state may be forfeited, if a taxpayer fails to file a tax return required by "this part" (i.e., the Bank and Corporation Tax Law, Rev. & Tax. Code § 23001 et seq.).

Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 23301 and 23301.5 apply only to a foreign corporation that has qualified to do business in California, but a taxpayer required under Corp. Code § 2105 to qualify is not deemed to have done so unless the taxpayer has in fact qualified with the Secretary of State [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301.6 (discussed in Ch. 52, Corporations)].

[b] Forfeiture of Foreign Corporation's Corporate Powers, Rights, and Privileges

See discussion in § 10.30[3][a].

[c] Lack of Capacity to Sue

Reed v. Norman (1957) 48 Cal. 2d 338, 309 P.2d 809 , was a derivative action by a corporate stockholder for the dissipation by defendant directors and officers of corporate assets. From a judgment for defendants, plaintiff appealed. Defendants moved to dismiss the appeal on the ground, among others, that the corporation's right to engage in litigation had been suspended for failure to pay the state franchise tax under Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301. Although the Supreme Court held that under the circumstances of the case it would be inequitable to permit Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301 to be used as a shield for protecting allegedly dishonest corporate officials and denied the motion to dismiss, it stated the general rule that a corporation may not prosecute or defend an action or appeal from an adverse judgment while its corporate rights are suspended for failure to pay taxes (48 Cal. 2d 338, 343).

In Sade Shoe Co. v. Oschin & Snyder (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 1509, 266 Cal. Rptr. 619 , the plaintiff was suspended shortly after the cause of action accrued. The plaintiff then filed its return, paid its taxes, and filed a domestic stock statement. The Secretary of State informed plaintiff the penalty for failing to timely file the statement would be waived and that the Franchise Tax Board would be instructed to waive the penalty. This was expected to take about 90 days. Shortly thereafter, while owing the state $90.85 in penalties and interest, the plaintiff filed the complaint against the defendant. Nearly two years later the statute of limitations ran on the cause of action, and two and a half years after that, the defendant moved for summary judgment on the ground the statute of limitations had expired during plaintiff's suspension. Ten days later, plaintiff obtained a certificate of revivor, and 12 days later plaintiff opposed the summary judgment motion. The motion was granted, and plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The plaintiff argued that it had substantially complied with the requirements to obtain a revivor of its corporate powers before the statute of limitations expired, and that it would be inequitable to dismiss the action. The court first stated that a corporation which has its powers suspended pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 23301 and 23301.5 lacks the legal capacity to prosecute or defend a civil action during its suspension (217 Cal. App. 3d 1509, 1512). From that it followed that the statute of limitations continues to run on an action filed by a corporation while its powers are suspended (217 Cal. App. 3d 1509, 1513). Thus, plaintiff's complaint had been ineffective to commence the action or toll the statute of limitations, which expired before the plaintiff had obtained the certificate of revivor (217 Cal. App. 3d 1509, 1513). The court further held that the plaintiff had not substantially complied with the requirements for revivor (217 Cal. App. 3d 1509, 1516), and therefore, affirmed.

Alhambra-Shumway Mines, Inc. v. Alhambra Gold Mine Corp. (1957) 155 Cal. App. 2d 46, 317 P.2d 649 , involved an action commenced in 1951 by a California corporation against a Nevada corporation to cancel a lease. During trial, plaintiff discovered that the defendant had forfeited its powers for failure to pay taxes. The parties stipulated that a certificate of suspension or forfeiture as of August 1, 1950 might be received in evidence, and the plaintiff moved to strike pleadings and enter defendant's default. The court denied the motion and entered judgment for the defendant. Plaintiff filed intention to move for new trial and filed a corrected certificate showing defendant's rights to transact business were forfeited on August 1, 1950 and had not been revived. At the hearing on the motion, the defendant produced a certificate of revivor. The motion was denied, and plaintiff appealed.

On appeal, the court noted that a corporation may not prosecute or defend an action, nor appeal from an adverse judgment while its corporate rights are suspended for failure to pay taxes (155 Cal. App. 2d 46, 49-50). Recognizing thatthe cases on which it relied dealt with suspension of domestic corporations, the court then held that the same principles applied a foreign corporation had forfeited its powers (155 Cal. App. 2d 46, 50). Finding that the defendant corporation's powers were not revived before the judgment was entered, the court reversed (155 Cal. App. 2d 46, 51).

[d] Plea in Abatement

Traub Co. v. Coffee Break Serv., Inc. (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 368, 57 Cal. Rptr. 846, 425 P.2d 790 , was an appeal from the denial of cross defendants' motion to vacate and set aside a final judgment in favor of cross complainant, a California corporation, on the ground that before entry of judgment and continuously to the time of the motion, cross complainant's corporate powers had been suspended for failure to pay corporate taxes [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301] levied pursuant to the Bank and Corporation Tax Law. The cross complaint was filed in February 1960. Cross complainant's corporate powers were suspended on December 1, 1961. Judgment on the cross complaint was entered in August 1963. Cross defendants' motion was made in September 1964 and denied on October 29, 1964. Cross complainant's corporate powers were reinstated [see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 23305, 23305a] on November 12, 1964. Cross defendants urged that the judgment was void for lack of jurisdiction. In affirming the order on the ground the judgment was not void and hence not subject to "the collateral attack attempted" (66 Cal. 2d 368, 369), the court said that a plea of lack of capacity of a corporation to maintain an action by reason of a suspension of its corporate powers for nonpayment of its taxes is a plea in abatement (66 Cal. 2d 368, 370). The court disapproved any contrary views expressed in Belle Vista Inv. Co. v. Hassen (1964) 227 Cal. App. 2d 837, 39 Cal. Rptr. 184 (66 Cal. 2d 368, 372).

The facts and procedural background of Sade Shoe Co. v. Oschin & Snyder (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 1509, 266 Cal. Rptr. 619 , are discussed in § 10.34[3][c]. The primary issue was whether revivor could be affected by substantial compliance even though the corporation had not paid penalties and interest. In discussing the matter, the court of appeal noted that the defense of suspension is a plea in abatement and thus must be strictly construed against the party asserting it (217 Cal. App. 3d 1509, 1515).

Welco Constr., Inc. v. Modulux, Inc. (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 69, 120 Cal. Rptr. 572 , was an action by a domestic corporation whose corporate powers had been suspended, about two months before the action was filed, for nonpayment of corporate franchise taxes. On the date set for trial, defendant challenged plaintiff's standing to prosecute the action because of the suspension. Plaintiff's motion for a continuance for the purpose of reviving the corporation was granted, and a certificate of revivor was obtained. Defendant's motion to amend the answer to plead the statute of limitations, which had not run the action was filed but had run before the certificate of revivor was issued, was granted and its subsequent motion for nonsuit was granted on the ground the action was barred by the statute of limitations. Plaintiff appealed from the subsequent judgment for defendant. The court of appeal affirmed the judgment. Although it recognized the rule that procedural steps taken in an action or proceeding by a suspended corporation may be validated retroactively by a certificate of revivor, it held that this rule did not, under Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305a, apply to prejudice any substantive defense, such as the bar of the statute of limitations, which accrued during the period of suspension (47 Cal. App. 3d 69, 71). In the course of its opinion, the court, quoting from Traub Co. v. Coffee Break Serv. Inc. (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 368, 370, 57 Cal. Rptr. 846, 425 P.2d 790 , restated the rule that a plea of lack of capacity of a corporation to maintain an action by reason of a suspension of corporate powers for nonpayment of taxes is a plea in abatement (47 Cal. App. 3d 69, 72).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Lack of Capacity to Sue

Timberline Inc. v. Jaisinghani (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 1361, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 4 involved a suspended corporation that filed an application to renew a judgment under Code Civ. Proc. § 683.110. The clerk renewed the judgment. Defendant, on receiving notice that the judgment had been renewed, filed a motion in the trial court to vacate the renewal of judgment based on the corporation having been suspended and not being entitled to enjoy the state court's powers. The trial court denied the motion to vacate, and defendant appealed.

The court of appeal reversed, directing the trial court to vacate its order denying the motion and to enter a new order granting the motion. The court held that the renewal of an unsatisfied judgment is an invalid act if attempted by a suspended corporation that has not taken the necessary action to revive itself (54 Cal. App. 4th 1361, 1368). The court noted that a suspended corporation cannot prosecute or defend an action, appeal from an adverse judgment, or seek a writ of mandate. The court, however, also noted that a corporation's status only comes to light during litigation, the normal practice is for the trial court to grant a short continuance to enable a suspended corporation to effect reinstatement (by paying back taxes, interest and penalties) to defend itself in court (54 Cal. App. 4th 1361, 1366). Moreover, the court pointed out cases which hold the effect of a corporation reviving itself by payment of delinquent taxes is to retroactively legitimize the corporation's prior acts (54 Cal. App. 4th 1361, 1366-1367).

[b] Plea in Abatement

Duncan v. Sunset Agricultural Minerals (1969) 273 Cal. App. 2d 489, 78 Cal. Rptr. 339 , which involved a corporate defendant whose corporate powers had been suspended, restates the rule that a plea of lack of capacity of a corporation to maintain an action by reason of a suspension of corporate powers for nonpayment of taxes is a plea in abatement.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 10 ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. Pleas in Abatement

1-10 California Points & Authorities § 10.35

§ 10.35 Supporting Motion for Separate Trial of Special Defense Constituting Ground of Abatement to Prosecution of Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 597]--Lack of Legal Capacity to Sue [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(b)]--Foreign Corporation Suing on Intrastate Business Without Having Obtained Certificate of Qualification [Corp. Code §§ 2105, 2203(c)]

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Separate Trial of Special Defense Constituting Ground of Abatement to Prosecution of Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 597]--Lack of Legal Capacity to Sue [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(b)]--Foreign Corporation Suing on Intrastate Business Without Having Obtained Certificate of Qualification [Corp. Code §§ 2105, 2203(c)]

[Caption. See § 10.30[1].]

A MOTION FOR SEPARATE TRIAL OF THE SPECIAL DEFENSE PLEADED IN THE ANSWER THAT _____ [PLAINTIFF or CROSS COMPLAINANT] LACKS LEGAL CAPACITY TO SUE ON INTRASTATE BUSINESS BECAUSE IT HAS FAILED TO SECURE A CERTIFICATE OF QUALIFICATION FROM THE CALIFORNIA SECRETARY OF STATE SHOULD BE GRANTED BECAUSE THE PLEA IS A GROUND OF ABATEMENT AND TO GRANT THE MOTION WOULD SAVE USELESS LABOR AND EXPENSE OTHERWISE SPENT IN LITIGATING THE OTHER ISSUES IN THE CASE IF THE SPECIAL DEFENSE PROVES MERITORIOUS.

A. Certificate of Qualification Required. A foreign corporation is prohibited from transacting intrastate business in California without having first obtained a certificate of qualification from the California Secretary of State (Corp. Code § 2105(a)).

B. Nonqualified Corporation Lacks Capacity to Sue. A foreign corporation that transacts intrastate business in this state without having complied with Section 2105 of the Corporations Code may not maintain any action or proceeding on any intrastate business, commenced before compliance (Corp. Code § 2203(c)).

C. Lack of Capacity to Sue as Ground for Objection. [See § 10.31[1], Paragraph D.]

D. Ground of Abatement. The failure of a foreign corporation to have obtained a certificate of qualification to transact intrastate business in California is a ground of abatement in any action by it on that intrastate business (see Corp. Code § 2203(c); Home Owners' Loan Corp. v. Gordon (1939) 36 Cal. App. 2d 189, 192, 97 P.2d 845).

E. Separate Trial Authorized. [See § 10.31[1], Paragraph F.]

F. Purpose of Separate Trial. [See § 10.30[1], Paragraph F.]
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a motion for separate trial of the special defense [Code Civ. Proc. § 597], pleaded in the answer [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)], that plaintiff or cross complainant, a foreign corporation, lacks legal capacity to maintain the action [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(b)] on intrastate business because of its failure to have obtained a certificate of qualification from the California Secretary of State [Corp. Code §§ 2105, 2203(c)].

This form is intended primarily to provide points and authorities relating to the assertion of this defense in the procedural context of a plea in abatement, and thus the authorities detailing the substantive law relating to the qualification requirements to do intrastate business are neither set forth nor discussed in their entirety in this form. For further discussion and additional points and authorities regarding the qualification requirements to do intrastate business, see Ch. 52, Corporations . This form may be expanded to address a particular situation by addition of points and authorities from Ch. 52, Corporations .

Note also that in many situations an evidentiary hearing will be necessary to determine whether the extent of intrastate business is sufficient to require the foreign corporation to obtain a certificate of qualification [see, e.g., Mediterranean Exports, Inc. v. Superior Court (1981) 119 Cal. App. 3d 605, 615, 174 Cal. Rptr. 169 (motion to strike treated as motion for summary judgment); see also Corp. Code § 191(a); Automotriz Del Golfo de Cal. v. Resnick (1957) 47 Cal. 2d 792, 794, 306 P.2d 1 ; Home Owners' Loan Corp. v. Gordon (1939) 36 Cal. App. 2d 189, 192, 97 P.2d 845 (certificate not required of foreign corporation engaging in interstate commerce or of corporations organized under laws of United States)]. Points and authorities describing the extent of intrastate business that requires a certificate may be found in Ch. 52, Corporations .

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Hearing

Counsel should have with him or her at the hearing any evidence necessary to sustain the defense of lack of legal capacity to sue because of plaintiff's failure to have secured a certificate of qualification to do intrastate business in California and be ready to present it should the judge so request. If there is no dispute as tothe facts and, hence, nothing to be tried, it would appear the court would dispose of the defense at the hearing of the motion for separate trial and deny the motion. That is, if it appears that plaintiff or cross complainant is not a foreign corporation required to qualify in California and has not done so or that, if it is required to qualify and has not done so, the action is not on intrastate business, or that it has qualified to do business in California, the court would so rule at that time and deny the motion. Conversely, if it appears that plaintiff or cross complainant is required to qualify and has not done so and that the action is on intrastate business, the court would, on application by the corporation, grant a continuance to enable it to secure a certificate of qualification.

[c] Certificate of Qualification

A foreign corporation [see Corp. Code § 171 (defining foreign corporation)] is prohibited from transacting intrastate business in California without having first obtained a certificate of qualification from the California Secretary of State. To obtain a certificate, the corporation must [Corp. Code § 15] file, on a form prescribed by the Secretary of State, a statement and designation, signed by a corporate officer, stating the following [Corp. Code § 2105(a)]:

(1) Its name and the state or place of its incorporation or organization;

(2) The address of its principal executive office;

(3) The address of its principal office in this state, if any;

(4) The name of an agent on whom process directed to the corporation may be served in California (this designation must comply with the provisions of Corp. Code § 1502(b));

(5) Its irrevocable consent to service of process directed to it on the agent designated and to service of process on the Secretary of the State if the agent so designated or the agent's successor is no longer authorized to act or cannot be found at the address given; and

(6) If the corporation is an insurer which will be subject to the Insurance Code, a statement of that fact.

The statement and designation must have annexed to it a certificate by an authorized public official of the state or place of incorporation to the effect that the corporation is an existing one in good standing in that state or place or, in the case of an association, an officers' certificate stating that it is a validly organized and existing business association under the laws of a specified foreign jurisdiction [Corp. Code § 2105(b)].

Any corporate agent, before it may be designated by a foreign corporation as its agent for service of process, must comply with Corp. Code § 1505 [Corp. Code § 2105(c)].

On payment of the required fees, the Secretary of State will, subject to the provisions of Corp. Code § 2106(b), relating to the corporate name, file the statement and designation prescribed in Corp. Code § 2105 and issue a certificate of qualification stating the date the statement and designation were filed and that the corporation is qualified to transact intrastate business, subject to any licensing requirements otherwise imposed by California laws [Corp. Code § 2106(a)].

[d] Raising Objection

The objection that plaintiff or cross complainant is a foreign corporation suing on intrastate business without having obtained a certificate of qualification from the California Secretary of State [see Corp. Code § 2105] and that it, therefore, lacks legal capacity to sue [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(b); Corp. Code § 2203(c)], may be raised by demurrer if the ground of objection appears from the face of the complaint or cross complaint or from matter of which the court must or may take judicial notice [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(a); see also Code Civ. Proc. § 430.70 and Evid. Code §§ 451-453 on judicial notice; but see Los Angeles Ry. Co. v. Davis (1905) 146 Cal. 179, 180-181, 79 P. 865 (failure to allege affirmatively capacity of corporation to maintain is not ground for general demurrer)]. If the ground of objection does not appear from the face of the complaint or cross complaint, whether or not it would appear from judicially noticed matter, the objection may be taken by answer [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(b)] by alleging it as an affirmative defense [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)] or, if plaintiff or cross complainant has falsely alleged that it is qualified to transact business in California, by denying that allegation [see Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(1)].

[e] Waiver of Objection

Failure to object by demurrer [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(a)] or answer [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(b)] to plaintiff's or cross complainant's lack of legal capacity to sue [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(b)] is declared by Code Civ. Proc. § 430.80(a) to be a waiver of that objection. Thus, it has been held that unless plaintiff foreign corporation's failure to take the required steps to authorize it to do business in this state is put in issue by demurrer or answer, the objection is waived [see H.D. Haley & Co. v. McVay (1924) 70 Cal. App. 438, 441, 233 P. 409 ; see also Bernheim Distilling Co. v. Elmore (1909) 12 Cal. App. 85, 86, 106 P. 720 (failure of plaintiff foreign corporation to file in California Secretary of State's office a certified copy of its articles of incorporation and designation of agent for service of process as required by former statute, held waived by failure to raise it by answer)].

[f] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a form of affirmative defense that plaintiff foreign corporation is suing on intrastate business without having obtained a certificate of qualification, and for forms of notice of motion for separate trial, order granting the motion, andjudgment, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 3, Abatement of Actions (Matthew Bender).

[g] Related Points and Authorities

Ch. 52, Corporations contains memoranda of points and authorities, in the context of motions supporting and opposing summary judgment, relating to additional aspects of the substantive law regarding the capacity of a foreign corporation to maintain an action in California on intrastate business.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Certificate of Qualification Required

Corp. Code § 2105(a) provides that a foreign corporation shall not transact intrastate business without having first obtained from the Secretary of State a certificate of qualification, and that to obtain such certificate it "shall" file, on a form prescribed by the Secretary of State, a statement and designation signed by a corporate officer stating the matters listed in the section.

Corp. Code § 15 defines "shall," as used in the code, as mandatory.

[b] Nonqualified Corporation Lacks Capacity to Sue

Corp. Code § 2203(c) in pertinent part provides that a foreign corporation subject to the provisions of Corp. Code § 2100 et seq. that transacts intrastate business without complying with Corp. Code § 2105 shall not maintain any action or proceeding on any intrastate business so transacted in any court of this state, commenced prior to compliance with Corp. Code § 2105, until it has complied with the provisions thereof.

[c] Ground of Abatement

Corp. Code § 2203(c) prohibits maintenance of an action in any court in this state on intrastate business by a foreign corporation which has failed to comply with Corp. Code § 2105 (to obtain certificate of qualification), the action has been commenced prior to compliance, until plaintiff has (1) complied with the provisions of Corp. Code § 2105, (2) paid the Secretary of State a penalty of $250 in addition to the fees due for filing the statement and designation required by Corp. Code § 2105, and (3) filed, with the clerk of the court in which the action is pending, receipts showing the payment of the fees and penalty and all franchise taxes and any other taxes on business or property in this state that should have been paid for the period during which it transacted intrastate business.

Home Owners' Loan Corp. v. Gordon (1939) 36 Cal. App. 2d 189, 97 P.2d 845 , although holding that plaintiff, as a corporation organized under laws of the United States, was not subject to the then-applicable requirements for qualification of foreign corporations to do intrastate business in California, did comment that a matter of record, such as the failure to obtain qualification, must be alleged positively and not on information and belief and that "This rule is particularly applicable to a pleading in abatement which, being dilatory in nature, is to be strictly construed" (36 Cal. App. 2d 189, 192) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Ground of Abatement

In Bernheim Distilling Co. v. Elmore (1909) 12 Cal. App. 85, 106 P. 720 , the court of appeal affirmed the refusal of the trial court to allow an amendment to the answer to set forth plaintiff foreign corporation's failure to comply with the then-applicable requirements for qualification of foreign corporations to do intrastate business in California. The court noted that the defense was disfavored as a plea in abatement (12 Cal. App. 85, 86) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 10 ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. Pleas in Abatement

1-10 California Points & Authorities § 10.36

§ 10.36 Supporting Motion for Separate Trial of Special Defense Constituting Ground of Abatement to Prosecution of Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 597]--Defect of Parties [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(d)]

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Separate Trial of Special Defense Constituting Ground of Abatement to Prosecution of Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 597]--Defect of Parties [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(d)]

[Caption. See § 10.30[1].]

A MOTION FOR SEPARATE TRIAL OF THE SPECIAL DEFENSE PLEADED IN THE ANSWER THAT THERE IS A DEFECT OF PARTIES _____ [PLAINTIFF or DEFENDANT or CROSS COMPLAINANT or CROSS DEFENDANT] SHOULD BE GRANTED BECAUSE THE PLEA IS A GROUND OF ABATEMENT AND TO GRANT THE MOTION WOULD SAVE USELESS LABOR AND EXPENSE OTHERWISE SPENT IN LITIGATING THE OTHER ISSUES IN THE CASE IF THE SPECIAL DEFENSE PROVES MERITORIOUS.

A. Defect of Parties as Ground for Objection. A party against whom a _____ [complaint or cross complaint] has been filed may object by answer on the ground there is a defect of parties (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10(d), 430.30(b)).

B. Plea in Abatement. The plea that there is a defect, or nonjoinder, of parties is a plea in abatement (Tingley v. Times Mirror (1907) 151 Cal. 1, 12-13, 89 P. 1097).

C. Separate Trial Authorized. [See § 10.31[1], Paragraph F.]

D. Purpose of Separate Trial. [See § 10.30[1], Paragraph F.]
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a motion for separate trial of the special defense [Code Civ. Proc. § 597], pleaded in the answer [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)], that there is a defect of parties [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(d)]. For an alternative proceeding, see discussion in § 10.36[2][b].

When appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

This form does not cover the alleged misjoinder of a party, although misjoinder is discussed in these Comments to the extent necessary to distinguish the two grounds. Any misjoinder of parties would normally appear from the face of the complaint or cross complaint and, hence, the objection on this ground would be taken by demurrer [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(a); Follansbee v. Benzenberg (1954) 122 Cal. App. 2d 466, 474-475, 265 P.2d 183 (alleged misjoinder of plaintiffs); and discussion in § 10.36[2][e]], rather than by answer [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(b)] and motion for separate trial of that defense under Code Civ. Proc. § 597. For forms of demurrer on this ground, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 3, Abatement of Actions , and Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings (Matthew Bender). For memoranda of points and authorities supporting and opposing a demurrer on this ground, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings (Matthew Bender).

[b] Alternative to Separate Trial

Although the defense that there is a defect of parties is a plea in abatement and, hence, a defense for which a separate trial under Code Civ. Proc. § 597 is authorized, it appears that the more common method for obtaining an adjudication of this issue, where the ground of the objection does not appear from the face of the complaint or cross complaint, is to plead the defense in the answer [see Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)] and, then, by noticed motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1005, 1005.5, 1010], move for an order [Code Civ. Proc. § 1003] compelling joinder of the omitted party under Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a). For forms for use on a noticed motion proceeding to obtain an order compelling joinder, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 395, Parties (Matthew Bender). For memoranda of points and authorities supporting and opposing such a motion, see Ch. 168, Parties .

[c] Hearing

Counsel should have with him or her at the hearing any evidence necessary to sustain the defense of nonjoinder and be ready to present it should the judge so request. If there is no dispute as to the facts and, hence, nothing to be tried, it would appear that the court would dispose of the defense at that time. That is, if it appears that the omitted party is not one whose joinder is required under Code Civ. Proc. § 389, the court would so rule and deny the motion for separate trial. Conversely, if it appears that the omitted party is a person described in Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a) and that such person can be joined without depriving the court of jurisdiction over the subject matter of the action, the court would so rule, order both that the person be joined as a party [see Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a)] and that an amended complaint, or amendment to the complaint, be filed to show such joinder, and deny the motion for separate trial. If, however, it appears that the person is one described in Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a) as one who cannot be made a party, the court might either proceed to consider the factors listed in Code Civ. Proc. § 389(b) and then rule on whether the action is to proceed without the omitted party or be dismissed for nonjoinder, or it might order that these issues be determined on a separate trial of the special defense of nonjoinder.

[d] Defect or Misjoinder of Parties

A party against whom a complaint or cross complaint has been filed may object to it on the ground there is a defect (nonjoinder) or misjoinder of parties [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(d)]. The defect or misjoinder may be of a party plaintiff or cross complainant or of a party defendant or cross defendant. Whether there is a defect of parties can be determined only by reference to the compulsory joinder statute [Code Civ. Proc. § 389], defining what persons must be made parties to an action. An objection that there is a misjoinder of parties can be determined only by a reference to both that statute and to the permissive joinder of parties statutes [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 378, 379], defining who may be joined as parties plaintiff or defendant to an action.

As is true with lack of legal capacity to sue, a defect or misjoinder of a party is a ground of abatement [see Tingley v. Times Mirror (1907) 151 Cal. 1, 12-13, 89 P. 1097 ; Witkin, California Procedure (2d ed), Vol. 3, Pleading, § 951; Clark on Code Pleading (2d ed), § 73].

[e] Raising Objection

The objection that there is a defect (nonjoinder) or misjoinder of parties [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(d)] may be taken by demurrer where the ground appears from the face of the complaint or cross complaint or from matters of which the courtmust or may take judicial notice [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(a); see also Code Civ. Proc. § 430.70 and Evid. Code §§ 451-453 on judicial notice] or by answer where the ground of objection does not appear from the face of the pleading, whether or not it would appear from judicially noticed matter [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(b); see also Stratford Irrigation Dist. v. Empire Water Co. (1941) 44 Cal. App. 2d 61, 70, 111 P.2d 957].

[f] Waiver of Objection

Statute provides that the objection that there is a defect or misjoinder of parties [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(d)] is waived if not raised by demurrer or answer [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.80(a)], and this rule normally applies [see Tyrone v. Kelley (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 1, 14, 106 Cal. Rptr. 761, 507 P.2d 65 (nonjoinder of plaintiff) Engineering etc. Corp. v. Longbridge Inv. Co. (1957) 153 Cal. App. 2d 404, 421, 314 P.2d 563 (nonjoinder of defendant); Shahabian v. Najarian (1936) 14 Cal. App. 2d 435, 441-442, 58 P.2d 396 (misjoinder of defendant)].

However, the objection that a person who is determined to be an indispensable party [see Code Civ. Proc. § 389(b)] has not been joined is not waived by failure to take it by demurrer or answer, but, rather, may be taken at any time [see Bank of Cal. v. Superior Court (1940) 16 Cal. 2d 516, 521-523, 106 P.2d 879 ; Fraser-Yamor Agency, Inc. v. Del Norte County (1977) 68 Cal. App. 3d 201, 214, 137 Cal. Rptr. 118].

[g] Abatement of Action

[i] On Ground of Defect of Parties

If a nonjoined person is an indispensable party who cannot be joined, the action will be dismissed [see Code Civ. Proc. § 389(b)]. If the person can be, but has not been, joined, the court is required to order joinder [see Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a)].

[ii] Misjoinder of Parties

A misjoinder of parties will seldom, if ever, result in the abatement of an action or proceeding. First, unless it appears that the interest of a properly named defendant will be adversely affected by the misjoinder of another party, only the improperly joined party may raise the objection of misjoinder [see California Farm & Fruit Co. v. Schiappa-Pietra

(1907) 151 Cal. 732, 744-745, 91 P. 593 (no prejudice to defendant in alleged improper joinder of plaintiffs); Kennedy v. Bank of America (1965) 237 Cal. App. 2d 637, 653, 47 Cal. Rptr. 154 (properly named defendant not adversely affected by alleged misjoinder of other defendants)]. Secondly, if the misjoinder can be corrected by severance of the actions and parties, that may be done [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1048(b)]. Thirdly, if a person who has no interest in the action is joined as a party, the court may, under Code Civ. Proc. § 578, give judgment in favor of a defendant entitled to recover against a defendant who is liable and dismiss the action as to the other parties [Gillespie v. Gouly (1908) 152 Cal. 643, 645, 93 P. 856 (improper joinder of plaintiffs)].

[h] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms of affirmative defenses and demurrers on the ground of nonjoinder and misjoinder of a party plaintiff or defendant, a notice of motion for separate trial, an order granting the motion, and judgment, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 3, Abatement of Actions (Matthew Bender). For alternative forms of demurrers on this ground, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings (Matthew Bender).

For forms for use on a noticed motion proceeding to obtain joinder of an omitted party, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 395, Parties (Matthew Bender).

[i] Related Points and Authorities

For memoranda of points and authorities supporting and opposing a demurrer to a complaint or cross complaint on the ground of defect or misjoinder of parties, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

For memoranda of points and authorities supporting and opposing a noticed motion to compel joinder of an omitted party, see Ch. 168, Parties .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Defect of Parties as Ground for Objection

Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(d) provides that the party against whom a complaint or cross complaint has been filed may object, by demurrer or answer as provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30, to the pleading on the ground that there is a defect of parties.

Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(b) provides that any ground for objection (listed in Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10) to a complaint or cross complaint does not appear on the face of the pleading, the objection may be taken by answer.

[b] Plea in Abatement

Tingley v. Times Mirror (1907) 151 Cal. 1, 89 P. 1097 , was an action for libel, in which defendant's motion during trial to file an amended answer to plead a defect of parties in that plaintiff wife had failed to join her husband as a party plaintiff, as then required by statute, and that plaintiff wife lacked capacity to sue, was denied, and judgment was for plaintiff. In affirming the judgment on the ground the motion was untimely and the trial court, therefore, did not err in denying it, the Supreme Court characterized the above pleas as pleas in abatement (151 Cal. 1, 13-14).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 10 ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. Pleas in Abatement

1-10 California Points & Authorities § 10.37

§ 10.37 Supporting Motion for Separate Trial of Special Defense Constituting Ground of Abatement to Prosecution of Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 597]--Action Is Premature [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)]

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Separate Trial of Special Defense Constituting Ground of Abatement to Prosecution of Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 597]--Action Is Premature [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)]

[Caption. See § 10.30[1].]

A MOTION FOR SEPARATE TRIAL OF THE SPECIAL DEFENSE PLEADED IN THE ANSWER THAT THE ACTION IS PREMATURE SHOULD BE GRANTED SINCE THE PLEA IS A GROUND OF ABATEMENT AND TO GRANT THE MOTION WOULD SAVE USELESS LABOR AND EXPENSE OTHERWISE SPENT IN LITIGATING THE OTHER ISSUES IN THE CASE IF THE SPECIAL DEFENSE PROVES MERITORIOUS.

A. Nonexistence of Cause of Action as Ground for Objection. A party against whom a _____ [complaint or cross complaint] has been filed may object to it by answer on the ground it fails to state a cause of action (see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10(e), 430.30(b)).

B. Premature Action. No cause of action exists where the action is prematurely filed (Bank of Italy etc. Ass'n v. Bentley (1933) 217 Cal. 644, 647-648, 20 P.2d 940).

C. Plea in Abatement. The plea that the action is premature is a plea in abatement (Kelley v. Upshaw (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 179, 186, 246 P.2d 23).

D. Separate Trial Authorized. [See § 10.31[1], Paragraph F.]

E. Purpose of Separate Trial. [See § 10.30[1], Paragraph E.]
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a motion for separate trial of the special defense [Code Civ. Proc. § 597], pleaded in the answer [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)], that the action is premature.

Counsel should add argument linking the points and authorities in this form with the facts of his or her case.

[b] Hearing

Counsel should have with him or her at the hearing any evidence necessary to sustain the defense of prematurity of action. If there is no dispute as to the facts and, hence, nothing to be tried, it would appear that the court would dispose of the defense at that time. That is, if it appears that the action is not premature, the court would so rule and deny the motion for separate trial. Conversely, if it appears that the action is premature, and has not yet matured [see § 10.39], the court would so find, deny the motion for separate trial, and dismiss the action without prejudice.

[c] Raising Objection; Waiver

The objection that the action is premature may be raised by general demurrer [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)], that is, on the ground the complaint or cross complaint fails to state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action in that it appears on the face of the pleading or from judicially noticed matter that the action is premature [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10, 430.30; see also Code Civ. Proc. § 430.70 and Evid. Code §§ 451-453 on judicial notice]. Where the defect does not appear from the face of the complaint or cross complaint, whether or not it would appear from judicially noticed matter, the objection may be taken by answer [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10, 430.30(b)].

While the objection that the pleading fails to state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)] is normally not waived by failure to take it by demurrer or answer [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.80(a)], the objection that the action is premature is waived if not timely raised [see, e.g., Kelley v. Upshaw (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 179, 186-189, 246 P.2d 23 ; State Medical Educ. Bd. v. Roberson (1970) 6 Cal. App. 3d 493, 501, 86 Cal. Rptr. 258].

[d] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a form of affirmative defense and a form of demurrer on the ground the action is premature, a form of notice of motion for separate trial, a form of order granting the motion, and a form of judgment, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 3, Abatement of Actions (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Nonexistence of Cause of Action as Ground for Objection

Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e) provides in pertinent part that the party against whom a complaint or cross complaint has been filed may object, by demurrer or answer as provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30, to the pleading on the ground that the pleading does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action.

Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(b) provides that any ground for objection (listed in Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10) to a complaint or cross complaint does not appear on the face of the pleading, the objection may be taken by answer.

[b] Premature Action

Bank of Italy etc. Ass'n v. Bentley (1933) 217 Cal. 644, 20 P.2d 940 , was an action on a promissory note. The note was secured by a trust deed on real property which was of substantial value and which had not, at the time the action was commenced, been sold under the power of sale provision in the trust deed. Defendants, by way of defense, alleged, among other things, that the note was secured and that the action was premature because at the time the complaint was filed, no cause of action existed. The trial court upheld this contention on the theory that no action may be brought on a note secured by a trust deed unless and until the security is exhausted, and rendered judgment for defendants. The Supreme Court also agreed with the contention (217 Cal. 644, 648). Affirming the judgment (217 Cal. 644, 659), it pointed out that where the security has not been exhausted an action on the note is premature (217 Cal. 644, 650) and that every complaint is predicated on the theory that plaintiff is entitled to judgment at the time of its filing (217 Cal. 644, 658).

[c] Plea in Abatement

Kelley v. Upshaw (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 179, 246 P.2d 23 , was an action on an extension agreement for payment of a promissory note. The note was for $17,900 loaned to defendants Upshaw and was payable at the rate of $200 per week plus interest. Defendants defaulted. Plaintiff entered into an extension agreement executed by defendants Upshaw and defendant Howarth which required immediate payment of $1,200 and payment of the balance of $50 per week plus interest. The agreement provided that plaintiff would accept a specified reduced sum as full payment if paid on or before a specified date. It further provided that in the event of default, the entire balance of the note plus interest was to be due and was to be payable at the rate of $50 per week plus interest. On defendants' subsequent default, plaintiff sued. Following trial and after entry of a minute order in which judgment was ordered against defendants and plaintiff's counsel was directed to prepare findings, defendant Howarth retained an attorney who, in his objections to the findings, took the position that Howarth could not be liable for more than the accrued installments of principal and interest and that plaintiff could not recover future installments which had not yet accrued. Judgment was for plaintiff for accrued principal and interest payable forthwith and for the balance of the note payable at the rate of $50 per week plus interest. The Supreme Court, although it affirmed the judgment on the ground the trial court had correctly distinguished between accrued installments and the total amount provided for in the agreement (39 Cal. 2d 179, 186), characterized defendant Howarth's objection that the action with respect to the unaccrued installments was premature as a dilatory plea, a plea in abatement (39 Cal. 2d 179, 186).

41 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 10 ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. Pleas in Abatement

1-10 California Points & Authorities § 10.38

§ 10.38 Supporting Motion [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1003, 1010] for Stay of Action on Ground of Another Action Pending [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(c)] in Another Jurisdiction

[1] FORM Supporting Motion [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1003, 1010] for Stay of Action on Ground of Another Action Pending [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(c)] in Another Jurisdiction

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORIT-
Plaintiff,	)	IES. IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR STAY OF
vs.	)	ACTION (ANOTHER ACTION PENDING IN AN-
_____ [name],	)	OTHER JURISDICTION)
Defendant.	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	Judge: _____
		Date Action Filed: _____
		Trial Date: _____

_____

A MOTION FOR AN ORDER STAYING AN ACTION SHOULD BE GRANTED WHERE THERE IS ANOTHER ACTION PENDING BETWEEN THE SAME PARTIES ON THE SAME CAUSE IN A COURT OF ANOTHER JURISDICTION AND THE STAY IS NECESSARY TO AVOID A MULTIPLICITY OF SUITS AND TO PREVENT VEXATIOUS LITIGATION.

A. Motion to Stay. A defendant in a California action may move to stay that action if there is another action pending between the same parties on the same cause in a _____ [federal court or court of a sister state] (_____ [if other action is in federal court] Thomson v. Continental Ins. Co. (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 738, 746, 59 Cal. Rptr. 101, 427 P.2d 765 [if in sister state court: Simmons v. Superior Court (1950) 96 Cal. App. 2d 119, 122-123, 214 P.2d 844]).

B. Power of Court to Stay Action. A California court may, where there is another action pending between the same parties on the same cause in the court of another jurisdiction, stay or suspend the action before it while awaiting decision in the first action (Simmons v. Superior Court (1950) 96 Cal. App. 2d 119, 123, 214 P.2d 844).

C. Purpose of Rule. The purpose of the rule permitting a stay of the secondaction if a prior action between the same parties on the same cause is pending in another jurisdiction is to avoid a multiplicity of suits and prevent vexatious litigation, conflicting judgments, confusion, and unseemly controversy between litigants and the courts (Simmons v. Superior Court (1950) 96 Cal. App. 2d 119, 125, 214 P.2d 844).

D. Denial of Motion as Abuse of Discretion. A trial court abuses its discretion in denying a motion to stay a California action on the ground of another action pending between the same parties on the same cause in a court of another jurisdiction where it is shown: (1) the issues raised in the California action can be litigated in the prior pending foreign action; (2) a stay of the California action would impose no hardship on the plaintiff; and (3) the stay is necessary to avoid a multiplicity of actions and to prevent vexation or hardship, or both, to the defendant (Simmons v. Superior Court (1950) 96 Cal. App. 2d 119, 125, 214 P.2d 844).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a nonstatutory motion for an order staying the action on the ground there is another action pending between the same parties on the same cause in a federal court or a court of a sister state.

Counsel should add argument linking the points and authorities in this form with the facts of his or her case. Counsel will have to show that the other pending action is between the same parties on the same cause. That is, he or she will have to make the same showing as is required to support the plea of another action pending between the same parties on the same cause in a California state court. If there is any doubt about the identity of the parties or issues, or as to whether the prior action is "pending," counsel should add to these memorandum points and authorities on the law regarding those issues. Points and authorities that may be adapted for incorporation in this form are included in Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings , § 71.65.

[b] Nature of Stay

A stay of an action is similar to a continuance [Thomson v. Continental Ins. Co. (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 738, 746 fn. 4, 59 Cal. Rptr. 101, 427 P.2d 765], except that a continuance is normally directed to a single court proceeding, such as a hearing or trial, whereas a stay is directed to all court proceedings in a case. A court that stays an action or proceeding retains jurisdiction over the parties and over the cause [Ferreira v. Ferreira (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 824, 841, 109 Cal. Rptr. 80, 512 P.2d 304 (involving application of forum non conveniens doctrine)].

[c] Factors Considered on Motion

A motion for a stay on the ground of another action pending between the same parties on the same cause in a United States federal court or in a court of a sister state is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial court. In exercising its discretion, whether or not to grant the motion, the court will consider the importance of discouraging multiple litigation designed solely to harass an adverse party, the importance of avoiding unseemly conflicts with the courts of other jurisdictions, whether the rights of the parties can best be determined by the court of the other jurisdiction because of the nature of the subject matter, the availability of witnesses, and the stage to which the proceedings in the other court have already advanced [Thomson v. Continental Ins. Co. (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 738, 746-747, 59 Cal. Rptr. 101, 427 P.2d 765 ; see § 10.40]. However, if the other action is pending in a federal court in California and, hence, hardship on the plaintiff in being forced to litigate in a distant state is not a consideration, the strong policy of comity may prevail so as to require a stay of the California action [see Thomson v. Continental Ins. Co. (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 738, 747-748, 59 Cal. Rptr. 101, 427 P.2d 765 ; see also Clark's Fork Reclamation Dist. v. Johns (1968) 259 Cal. App. 2d 366, 369, 66 Cal. Rptr. 370].

[d] Court Order

If the motion for a stay is granted, the court will normally make an order staying the action until further order of the court or until final determination, or termination, of the prior pending action, whichever occurs first. The completion or other termination of the prior pending action removes the bar to the California action which can then proceed, subject to any res judicata plea the defendant may assert by way of amended answer on the basis of any foreign judgment [see Thomson v. Continental Ins. Co. (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 738, 746 fn. 4, 59 Cal. Rptr. 101, 427 P.2d 765].

[e] Alternative Procedure to Motion for Stay

The nonstatutory motion for a stay of a California action the same action is pending in a court of another jurisdiction between the same parties is the only procedure that has been endorsed by California courts to suspend the California action pending a final determination of the prior action [see, e.g., Simmons v. Superior Court (1950) 96 Cal. App. 2d 119, 123, 214 P.2d 844]. Moreover, courts have stated that a prior action is ground for abatement only it is between the sameparties on the same cause and is pending in the same jurisdiction [see, e.g., Colvig v. RKO Gen., Inc. (1965) 232 Cal. App. 2d 56, 70, 42 Cal. Rptr. 473]. Nevertheless, courts have made these statements without citing Code Civ. Proc. § 597 and, apparently, without taking cognizance of the fact that the procedure authorized by Code Civ. Proc. § 597 for a motion for separate trial of the issue that another action is pending would appear to apply, regardless of whether the prior action is pending in a California court or in a court of another jurisdiction. By the terms of Code Civ. Proc. § 597, if the defense that another action is pending or a demurrer based on another action pending is sustained in a separate trial of that issue, the court will enter an interlocutory judgment instead of a judgment of dismissal [see Code Civ. Proc. § 597]. That is, under Code Civ. Proc. § 597, regardless of whether the prior action is pending in a California court or in a court of another jurisdiction, the action is not terminated but is, in effect, stayed until a final determination of the prior action. In view of the rules evolved by the courts and extended by Code Civ. Proc. § 597, there appears to be no need to continue the procedural distinction based on where the prior action is pending, although the distinction remains valid with respect to the showing that is required to support the plea. That is, a stronger showing is required to support the plea where the prior action is pending in another jurisdiction than is required where the prior action is pending in a California state court.

[f] Action Pending in Foreign Country

The pendency of an action in a foreign country is not a bar to the institution of another action between the same parties on the same cause in the California courts, since every country is entirely sovereign and unrestricted in its powers and does not acknowledge the right of any other nation to hinder its own acts and proceedings. Hence, a California court is under no duty to stay an action until determination of an action pending in a foreign country even though the entire controversy might be disposed of by the foreign court. However, as a matter of comity and not of right, a California court is empowered to continue a case if the circumstances warrant it [Pesquera Del Pacifico v. Superior Court (1949) 89 Cal. App. 2d 738, 740-741, 201 P.2d 553].

Pesquera was a proceeding in prohibition by which petitioners sought to restrain a California trial court from proceeding with an action in which they were defendants after the trial court had denied their motion for a continuance made on the ground that there was another action pending in a court of Mexico between the same parties on the same cause. The court of appeal, in denying the writ, did not state the kind of circumstances that would warrant a continuance, or stay, of a California action. But it did point out that the trial court, in denying the motion for a continuance, had found that there was no satisfactory proof or evidence to show that any or all of the issues in the Mexico action were identical with or similar to the issues involved in the California action, that it did not appear that the issue of title to the property in dispute (claims) had been raised or adjudicated in the Mexico action, that it did not appear that the decision of the Supreme Court of Justice of Mexico was res judicata as to any issue or issues presented by the complaint in that action, and that the action could be as conveniently tried in the San Diego court as in the courts of Mexico. The court of appeal said it was apparent the ruling based on these findings was a matter entirely within the discretion of the trial court and it could not say that the denial of the motion was an abuse of discretion [Pesquera Del Pacifico v. Superior Court (1949) 89 Cal. App. 2d 738, 741, 201 P.2d 553]. It would, therefore, appear that the factors a court will consider in ruling on a motion to continue or stay a California action on the ground of another action pending in a foreign country are substantially the same as those it will consider in ruling on a motion to stay where the prior action is pending in a United States court or a court of a sister state. A stronger showing would no doubt be required, however, since the judgments of courts of foreign countries are not protected by the full faith and credit clause (Art IV, § 1) of the U.S. Constitution.

[g] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a form of petition for writ of mandate to compel the trial court to enter its order staying the action on the ground of another action pending in another jurisdiction after the trial court has refused to do so, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 3, Abatement of Actions, § 3.50 et seq. (Matthew Bender).

[h] Related Points an Authorities

For points and authorities in support of petition for writ of mandate to compel the trial court to enter its order staying the action on the ground of another action pending in another jurisdiction after the trial court has refused to do so, see Ch. 150, Mandate and Prohibition .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Motion to Stay--Action Pending in Federal Court

Thomson v. Continental Ins. Co. (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 738, 59 Cal. Rptr. 101, 427 P.2d 765 , was an action by a California resident against two insurance companies and their adjuster for damages for breach of an insurance contract covering property in Texas which had been damaged by winds and vandals, and for an alleged civil conspiracy among the defendants to coerce plaintiff to accept a sum representing only a small fraction of the actual damages. Plaintiff had initially filed suit against these three defendants in the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of California, but that court, on defendants' motion, had ordered the case transferred, for the convenience of witnesses, to the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of Texas. No trial date had as yet been set in the Texasaction. Plaintiff then filed the present action in a California state court. Defendants' motion for dismissal on the ground of forum non conveniens was granted and plaintiff appealed from the judgment of dismissal. In reversing the judgment on the ground that, in the absence of unusual circumstances which did not appear in the case before it, a California court may not dismiss an action on the ground of forum non conveniens if the plaintiff is a California resident, the Supreme Court pointed out that the pendency of the nearly identical action in the federal court in Texas had no bearing on the forum non conveniens question but that it might be a ground for a stay of the California action (66 Cal. 2d 738, 746). The Court, however, declined to intimate any views as to how the trial court should rule on such a request, if made, because the propriety of a stay is a question which must first be addressed to the discretion of the trial judge (66 Cal. 2d 738, 747).

[b] Motion to Stay--Action Pending in Court of Sister State

Simmons v. Superior Court (1950) 96 Cal. App. 2d 119, 214 P.2d 844 , was a proceeding in prohibition, treated as mandate, by which a wife sought to restrain the trial court from proceeding in an action brought against her by her husband. Both parties were residents of Texas. Five days before the husband filed his California action, the wife had filed in a Texas court an action for divorce and for determination of the parties' rights in property, substantially all of which was owned by the wife at the time of marriage. Among the properties acquired after marriage were 1,200 shares of stock in two Texas corporations. This stock had been owned by the wife's son and acquired by her shortly after her marriage. The day the Texas action was filed, the Texas court made an order enjoining the husband from using the stock certificates and appointed a receiver of them and of the seals of the corporations. In the husband's California action, the husband alleged he was the owner of an undivided half interest in the 1,200 shares (which the wife in her Texas action had alleged were her separate property), in United States savings bonds issued to the wife, in bank accounts in the name of the wife, in safe deposit box contents (the safe deposit boxes being in the name of the wife), and in two parcels of California real estate standing of record in the wife's name. He sought a determination of the parties' respective rights in this property. The wife in the California action moved for an order staying further proceedings until final determination of the Texas action, and the motion was denied (96 Cal. App. 2d 119, 122). The petition for writ of prohibition followed. Holding that the trial court had abused its discretion [see § 10.38[3][e]] and in issuing a peremptory writ of mandate directing the trial court to stay all further proceedings until final determination of the Texas action, the court of appeal observed with approval that the wife had properly sought a stay of the California action rather than its abatement, that is, rather than its dismissal (96 Cal. App. 2d 119, 123).

[c] Power of Court to Stay Action

The factual background of Simmons v. Superior Court (1950) 96 Cal. App. 2d 119, 214 P.2d 844 , is discussed in § 10.38[3][b]. The court of appeal, quoting with approval from 1 Am Jur § 39, pp 42, 44, said that although the general rule is that the pendency of a prior suit in one state cannot be pleaded in abatement (meaning termination of action without prejudice) or in bar (meaning termination of action with prejudice) to a subsequent suit in another state even though both suits are between the same parties and on the same cause of action, the court in which the second action is brought may, nevertheless, in its discretion stay or suspend that suit, awaiting decision in the first one, or, influenced by a spirit of comity, may refuse to entertain it, if the same relief can be awarded in the prior suit (96 Cal. App. 2d 119, 123). Quoting with approval from an Oregon case, the court added that it is within the discretion of the court in which the second action is pending to stay the same until after the decision of the first action pending in another state and that the principle of comity between the states calls for the refusal on the part of the courts of this state to proceed to a decision before the termination of the prior action (96 Cal. App. 2d 119, 123-124).

[d] Purpose of Rule

The factual background of Simmons v. Superior Court (1950) 96 Cal. App. 2d 119, 214 P.2d 844 , is discussed in § 10.38[3][b]. The court of appeal explained that the rule which forbids a later action in the same state between the same parties involving the same subject matter rests on principles of wisdom and justice, to prevent vexation, oppression, and harassment, to prevent unnecessary litigation, to prevent a multiplicity of suits, and, in short, to prevent two actions between the same parties involving the same subject matter from proceeding independently of each other (96 Cal. App. 2d 119, 124-125). The court said that it thought there is no distinction in reason or difference in principle between a case where a later action between the same parties involving the same subject matter is commenced in the same state and a case where a later action between the same parties involving the same subject matter is commenced in another state, and that if proceedings should be stayed in the first case mentioned, it is in order to avoid a multiplicity of suits and prevent vexatious litigation, conflicting judgments, confusion, and unseemly controversy between litigants and courts, and that all of this may occur if the later action is commenced in another state, as well as if it is commenced in the same state (96 Cal. App. 2d 119, 125).

[e] Denial of Motion as Abuse of Discretion

The factual background of Simmons v. Superior Court (1950) 96 Cal. App. 2d 119, 214 P.2d 844 , is discussed in § 10.38[3][b]. The court of appeal held that the trial court, under the facts of the case, abused its discretion in not staying, as a matter of comity, further proceedings in the California action until the finaldetermination of the Texas action (96 Cal. App. 2d 119, 125) . The main factors that appeared to influence its decision were: (1) the Texas action and the California action were between the same parties and involved the same subject matter (96 Cal. App. 2d 119, 128); (2) the Texas action would adjudicate all the issues involved in the California action (96 Cal. App. 2d 119, 128, 131), and, in this connection, the Texas court had jurisdiction to adjudicate the issues involved (96 Cal. App. 2d 119, 128), under Texas law it had acquired jurisdiction of the subject matter of the action (96 Cal. App. 2d 119, 128-129), and the Texas court had first assumed and exercised jurisdiction (96 Cal. App. 2d 119, 126-127, 129); (3) a stay of the California action would impose no hardship on the husband (96 Cal. App. 2d 119, 131); (4) the stay was necessary to avoid a multiplicity of actions relating to the same subject matter (96 Cal. App. 2d 119, 130); and (5) it would be both vexatious and a hardship to compel the wife to defend in the California action (96 Cal. App. 2d 119, 126, 128).

Other factors the court considered were: (1) both parties were residents of Texas (96 Cal. App. 2d 119, 131); (2) the corporations whose stock formed part of the property involved had their principal place of business in Texas and had never done business in California (96 Cal. App. 2d 119, 126); (3) the persons who kept the corporate records were in Texas (96 Cal. App. 2d 119, 126); (4) all the witnesses, with the possible exception of the husband, and all the books and records pertaining to the ownership of the property involved and necessary to establish the facts common to both actions, were in Texas (96 Cal. App. 2d 119, 127); (5) the remedy which might be afforded by the Texas court was equally as effective and advantageous as any that might be afforded by the California court (96 Cal. App. 2d 119, 131); (6) the rights of the parties in the property involved in both actions could not properly be determined in the California action until the issues made in the Texas action had been adjudicated (96 Cal. App. 2d 119, 130); (7) the husband's removal of stock certificates from Texas with the apparent purpose of preventing the Texas court from acquiring jurisdiction over them (96 Cal. App. 2d 119, 129-130); (8) the husband's opposition to the wife's repeated efforts to bring the Texas action to an early trial (96 Cal. App. 2d 119, 127); and (9) the husband's assurance to the Texas court in obtaining a continuance of the trial date to a future specified time that no attempt would be made by him to bring the California action on for trial (96 Cal. App. 2d 119, 127).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Motion to Stay

[i] Action Pending in Court of Sister State

In Leadford v. Leadford (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 571, 8 Cal. Rptr. 2d 9 , defendant demurred to plaintiff's complaint on several grounds, including the existence of another action pending between the parties in Pennsylvania. The trial court sustained the demurrer and stayed the action as to the causes of action relating to the pending action (6 Cal. App. 4th 571, 573). The appellate court reversed the ruling staying the action on the ground that the trial court improperly heard the issue on demurrer. When the actions are pending in courts of different states, the determination whether to stay the later-filed action is discretionary, not mandatory, and should be raised by motion, not demurrer (6 Cal. App. 4th 571, 574). A discretionary ruling on whether to stay must take into consideration matters outside the pleadings, such as the seriousness of the threat of multiple and vexatious litigation, the convenience of the parties, the status of the foreign action, and the competing interests of the two forums. Though some evidence of such matters was before the court, they were beyond proper consideration on demurrer (6 Cal. App. 4th 571, 575).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 10 ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. Pleas in Abatement

1-10 California Points & Authorities § 10.39

§ 10.39 Opposing Motion for Separate Trial of Special Defense Constituting Ground of Abatement to Prosecution of Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 597]--Ground of Abatement No Longer Exists

[1] FORM Opposing Motion for Separate Trial of Special Defense Constituting Ground of Abatement to Prosecution of Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 597]--Ground of Abatement No Longer Exists

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)
Plaintiff,	)	NO. _____
vs.	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORIT-
_____ [name],	)	IES IN OPPOSITION TO MOTION FOR SEPAR-
Defendant.	)	ATE TRIAL OF SPECIAL DEFENSE
	)	[Code Civ. Proc. § 597]
	)

_____

A MOTION FOR SEPARATE TRIAL OF THE PLEA IN ABATEMENT THAT _____ [THERE IS ANOTHER ACTION PENDING or PLAINTIFF LACKS LEGAL CAPACITY TO SUE or THE ACTION IS PREMATURE or other] SHOULD BE DENIED IF THE GROUND OF ABATEMENT NO LONGER EXISTS.

A. Discretion of Court to Deny Motion. The court has discretion to grant or deny a motion for separate trial of a plea in abatement (Code Civ. Proc. § 597; Healy v. Stationers Corp. (1964) 228 Cal. App. 2d 601, 603, 39 Cal. Rptr. 679).

B. Failure of Defense. The plea in abatement that _____ [there is another action pending or plaintiff lacks legal capacity to sue _____ (for failure to have complied with the fictitious business name statutes or because its corporate powers have been suspended) or the action is premature or other] fails if the facts on which it is based no longer exist (_____ [select appropriate authority: Collins v. Ramish (1920) 182 Cal. 360, 368, 188 P. 550 (another action pending) or Rudneck v. Southern Cal. Metal & Rubber Co. (1920) 184 Cal. 274, 282, 193 P. 775 (failure to have complied with fictitious business name statutes) or Diverco Constructors, Inc. v. Wilstein (1970) 4 Cal. App. 3d 6, 12, 85 Cal. Rptr. 851 (suspension of corporate powers) or American Alternative Energy Partners II v. Windridge, Inc. (1996) 42 Cal. App. 4th 551, 561, 49 Cal. Rptr. 2d 686 (failure to have filed certificate of limited partnership) or Edwards v. Container Kraft Carton & Paper Supply Co. (1958) 161 Cal. App. 2d 752, 756, 327 P.2d 622 (prematurity of action)]).

[Optional] C. Waiver of Plea in Abatement by Delay. A plea in abatement must be raised by the defendant at the earliest opportunity or it is waived. The proper time to raise a plea in abatement is in the original answer or by demurrer at the time of the answer. It is a technical objection and must be pleaded specifically (Color-Vue, Inc. v. Abrams (1996) 44 Cal. App. 4th 1599, 1604, 52 Cal. Rptr. 2d 443 (such as a lack of capacity to sue)).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a motion for separate trial of a special defense constituting a ground of abatement [Code Civ. Proc. § 597] if the ground of abatement no longer exists.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. The opposing declaration should set forth the probative facts within the declarant's knowledge showing that the ground of abatement no longer exists and should have attached to it appropriate copies of any court orders, certificates, etc., establishing that fact. Appropriately authenticated copies of these papers or documents should be secured for introduction at the hearing on the motion.

[b] Related Points and Authorities

This form may be enhanced with additional points and authorities from Ch. 52, Corporations , relating to the effect of revivor.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Discretion of Court to Deny Motion

Code Civ. Proc. § 597 provides that if the answer raises a plea in abatement, the trial court "may," either on its own motion or on motion of any party, proceed to the trial of such defense before the trial of any other issue in the case.

Healy v. Stationers Corp. (1964) 228 Cal. App. 2d 601, 39 Cal. Rptr. 679 , was a mandate proceeding to enforce plaintiff's right, as a director of a corporation, to inspect the corporation's books and records. The petition was served on March 13, 1963, and filed on March 28, 1963. On March 22, 1963, respondents filed a separate action to have petitioner removed from the board of directors. An alternative writ of mandate was issued by the court on April 4, 1963, ordering respondents to produce the books and records of the corporation for petitioner's inspection or to show cause on April 12, 1963, why they had not done so. On April11, 1963, respondents filed a demurrer to the petition and a motion to abate the action on the petition until there was a final determination of their removal action. The hearing was noticed for April 17, 1963. On April 12, 1963, a hearing was held on the petition for mandate. The trial court, over respondents' plea for abatement asserted in their answer and argued at the hearing, issued the writ ordering inspection to commence on April 16, 1963. On April 26, 1963, the court overruled the demurrer and denied the motion to abate. Respondents appealed, contending that the trial court erred in proceeding with the hearing on the petition the removal action was pending and undisposed of, and that the trial court should have first determined the issue of law raised by the removal action before considering the petition on its merit, evidently relying in part on Code Civ. Proc. § 597. The court of appeal affirmed. With respect to the abatement issue, the court said that since Code Civ. Proc. § 597 provides only that if the answer raises a plea in abatement the court "may," on the motion of either party, proceed to the trial of the special defense before trial of any other issue in the case. It noted that the trial judge presiding in the Writs and Receivers department had made it abundantly clear to respondents' counsel that if he had any evidence to present diverse to petitioner's right to inspect the books, the case would be sent to a trial department for full hearing, but that respondents refused the offer. It concluded that respondents could not complain on appeal that the court abused its discretion in refusing to hear first the plea in abatement (228 Cal. App. 2d 601, 603).

[b] Failure of Defense--Another Action Pending--Other Action No Longer Pending

Collins v. Ramish (1920) 182 Cal. 360, 188 P. 550 , was an action to recover the balance due on a contract for certain tile and marble work in defendant's theater. Before commencing this action, plaintiff had commenced another action against the same defendant on the same cause, had been nonsuited at trial, and had taken an appeal which was pending the present action was commenced and tried. Defendant, in his answer, had pleaded the defense of another action pending, but the trial judge found that plaintiff had abandoned the other action and that it was, therefore, no longer pending. From a judgment for plaintiff, defendant appealed. The Supreme Court held that under Code Civ. Proc. § 1049 an action is deemed to be pending from the time of its commencement until its final determination on appeal, or until the time for appeal has passed, unless the judgment is sooner satisfied, that under this rule the prior action was pending, and that it was immaterial that plaintiff had practically abandoned it (182 Cal. 360, 366). The Court reversed the judgment on the ground the findings were not supported by the evidence. It ordered a new trial limited to the issue of former pending action and on the amount to be allowed defendant for defects in the tile work. The Court nevertheless noted that the prior appeal had been dismissed by it on plaintiff's application and that this fact would be available to plaintiff on the new trial. The Court said that it is thoroughly settled in California that a dismissal of the former action pending at the time of the commencement of the subsequent action made at any time before the trial of the subsequent action, or even before the conclusion of such trial, completely disposes of the plea of former action pending (182 Cal. 360, 368).

[c] Failure of Defense--Lack of Legal Capacity to Sue--Fictitious Business Name Statutes Complied With

The factual background of Rudneck v. Southern Cal. Metal & Rubber Co. (1920) 184 Cal. 274, 193 P. 775 , is discussed in § 10.30[3][c]. In reversing the judgment for plaintiffs for a new trial on the single issue of whether plaintiffs had published the fictitious business name certificate [now statement], as required by former statute [now see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17917], the Supreme Court said that it is settled that it is not necessary that plaintiffs have complied with the statute at the time of the commencement of the action; it is sufficient if they have done so at the time, at least, issue as to the matter of abatement is made. The Court did not hesitate to extend this rule so that it is sufficient if the statute is complied with before trial on the issue, and that the defense fails if it appears at the time of the trial that the matter of abatement no longer exists (184 Cal. 274, 282).

[d] Failure of Defense--Lack of Legal Capacity to Sue--Corporate Powers Revived

Diverco Constructors, Inc. v. Wilstein (1970) 4 Cal. App. 3d 6, 85 Cal. Rptr. 851 , was an action to foreclose mechanics' liens for money allegedly due. On the date set for trial, defendants moved to dismiss the complaint on the ground plaintiff's corporate powers had, on a date after the action had been commenced, been suspended for nonpayment of corporate taxes. In opposition to the motion, plaintiff offered a certificate of revivor from the Franchise Tax Board which showed plaintiff's corporate powers had been reinstated two days before the trial. The trial judge on his own motion ordered the case off calendar for the reason that all action taken by plaintiff following the suspension of its corporate powers was null and void and that until plaintiff again took the necessary steps to bring the case on for trial, plaintiff had no standing in court. The same day, plaintiff filed a motion for an order setting the case for an early trial setting conference and defendants filed opposition. Three days later, defendants for the first time, filed a motion to dismiss the action for want of prosecution under the two-year provision specified in former Code Civ. Proc. § 583 (the five-year period specified in that section had at the time almost expired). The trial court granted plaintiff's motion to set, and the case was set for pretrial conference on a specified date and for trial on a subsequent specified date, which was before expiration of the five-year period. The order stated that it was made without prejudice to a ruling on the pending motion to dismiss for failure to bring the case to trial within two years.The pretrial conference was held on the date specified, while on the same date in a different department the motion to dismiss under former Code Civ. Proc. § 583 was granted and the case was dismissed. Plaintiff's motion for reconsideration was denied, and plaintiff appealed. In reversing the judgment with directions to set the case for trial within 48 days of the filing of the remittitur, the court of appeal said: (1) that suspension of corporate powers is a defense which may be asserted so long as the party-corporation is under disability, but that on revival of its corporate powers the party may proceed with the prosecution or defense of the action, and that, since plaintiff's corporate powers had been revived two days before the motion to dismiss on the ground of suspension was made, the motion was groundless; (2) that plaintiff's actions in the case during the period of suspension were not a nullity; and (3) that the trial judge erred in ordering the case off calendar but should have proceeded with the trial as counsel for both parties were ready. The court further held that the trial court abused its discretion in granting the motion to dismiss for not bringing the case to trial within two years (4 Cal. App. 3d 6, 12-13).

[e] Failure of Defense--Premature Action--Ground No Longer Exists

In American Alternative Energy Partners II v. Windridge, Inc. (1996) 42 Cal. App. 4th 551, 49 Cal. Rptr. 2d 686 , a plaintiff, alleging its status to be a limited partnership, filed a complaint for contract damages. Defendant moved to dismiss the complaint on the ground that plaintiff had not filed a required certificate of limited partnership until after the complaint was filed, and thus lacked capacity to sue at the time of the filing of the complaint. The trial court agreed with defendant's position, and granted the motion for dismissal.

The court of appeal stated that the defendant confused lack of capacity to sue with lack of right to sue, pointing out that incapacity is merely a legal disability, while standing to sue goes to the existence of a cause of action (42 Cal. App. 4th 551, 559). The Corporation Code provides that if a limited partnership is not formed because of noncompliance with the recordation requirement, then the partnership is a general partnership. Furthermore, there is no statute penalizing noncompliance with the recordation requirement by depriving the partnership of its capacity to sue. The court thus concluded that until it complied with the certification requirement, the plaintiff was a general partnership and did not lack capacity to sue (42 Cal. App. 4th 551, 561). The court thus reversed the judgment of dismissal.

Edwards v. Container Kraft Carton & Paper Supply Co. (1958) 161 Cal. App. 2d 752, 327 P.2d 622 , was an action by a former employee to recover damages for malicious prosecution of an injunction action against him by his former employer. Dissatisfied about his earnings with the company and the company's failure to give him certain stock in it, plaintiff had quit and opened his own competing business. The company then sued to enjoin him from soliciting its customers; it made a number of false allegations in its complaint and secured issuance of both a temporary restraining order and a preliminary injunction, which were subsequently discharged. Judgment in that case was for the former employee, who then commenced the present action for malicious prosecution and recovered judgment. On appeal from this latter judgment, the company argued, among other things, that the action had been brought prematurely since it was filed before the time for appeal from the prior judgment had expired. In affirming the judgment, the court of appeal said that prematurity of action is merely ground for abatement and if the ground has ceased to exist before time of trial it cannot then or thereafter prevail (161 Cal. App. 2d 752, 756)

[f] Waiver of Plea in Abatement by Delay

In Color-Vue, Inc. v. Abrams (1996) 44 Cal. App. 4th 1599, 52 Cal. Rptr. 2d 443 , two attorneys sued a corporation for unpaid legal fees, and in a consolidated action, the corporation sued the attorneys for legal malpractice. After the corporation announced that it was ready for trial, the attorneys moved to dismiss the corporation's action on the ground that the corporation had been suspended by the Secretary of State for failure to pay its franchise taxes. The trial court granted the motion to dismiss. One of the attorneys also recovered a default judgment against the corporation on the same ground. Approximately two weeks later, the corporation paid its taxes and obtained a certificate of revivor. The corporation then moved to set aside the dismissal, but the motion was denied.

On appeal, the corporation argued that the trial court abused its discretion in granting the motion to dismiss. The attorneys argued that the corporation was required to prove that it was in good standing as part of its case, and that the corporation was therefore not ready for trial. The court of appeal stated initially that the attorneys were wrong in claiming that the corporation's suspension deprived it of standing to sue, explaining that suspension of corporate powers results in a lack of capacity to sue, not a lack of standing to sue. The court then stated that a plea of lack of capacity of a corporation to maintain an action by reason of a suspension for nonpayment of taxes is a plea in abatement which is not favored in law and is to be strictly construed. The distinction between lack of standing and lack of capacity is significant because a plea in abatement such as lack of capacity must be raised at the earliest opportunity or it is waived (44 Cal. App. 4th 1599, 1604). The court then noted that the attorneys knew several months prior to raising the issue that the corporation had been suspended by the Secretary of State, but did not raise the issue at any of several pretrial hearings. The attorneys' only explanation for this delay was that they had no duty to raise the issue before trial. The court concluded that the plea was waived by unnecessary delay. Although the court recognized that if a corporation announces that it does not intend to pay its taxes, an opposing party might be relieved fromtheir waiver of the defense, but that was not the situation in this case, in which the corporation stated its intention to pay the taxes, paid them, and promptly obtained a certificate of revivor, and was in good standing the judgments were entered (44 Cal. App. 4th 1599, 1605). The court thus reversed the trial court judgment and remanded the matter for further proceedings.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Failure of Defense--Action No Longer Pending

Wood v. Herson (1974) 39 Cal. App. 3d 737, 114 Cal. Rptr. 365 , was an action for specific performance to impose a trust and damages for interference of contract arising out of defendant's purchase of real property at a foreclosure sale. Defendant's motion for summary judgment was granted on the ground all the issues raised in the present case had been adjudicated in a prior unlawful detainer proceeding in which title to the property had been litigated, and, hence, the present action was barred by the doctrine of res judicata. Plaintiff, as defendant in the unlawful detainer proceeding, had appealed from that judgment and the appeal was still pending, although plaintiff had taken no action to pursue it after filing the notice of appeal. In affirming the judgment, the court of appeal said that the former action was only technically "pending" inasmuch as it had apparently been abandoned (39 Cal. App. 3d 737, 747-748), that plaintiff had not on the present appeal raised the issue whether pendency of the former proceeding prevented the judgment from becoming res judicata of the issues of the present case, that the court of appeal had the power to dismiss the prior appeal on its own motion, and that the effect of such an order would be to finally end the former action (39 Cal. App. 3d 737, 748). The court said that a dismissal or discontinuance of the former action at any time before the trial of a subsequent action, or even before the conclusion of such trial, completely removes the objection that a former action is still pending and the judgment would thereby become a conclusive determination of the rights of the parties (citing Collins v. Ramish (1920) 182 Cal. 360, 366-368, 188 P. 550). Therefore, it reasoned that if it reversed the summary judgment in the instant action and dismissed the pending appeal in the former action, a later motion for summary judgment, if made, would necessarily have to be granted thereby promoting a "gross injustice" and unnecessarily lengthening the litigation between the parties (39 Cal. App. 3d 737, 748).

The court in Wood was concerned with the problem of giving res judicata effect to a prior judgment that was not final [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1049], rather than with the defense of another action pending, which neither party had raised. Instead, defendant had moved for summary judgment on the ground that the prior judgment was a bar to prosecution of the present action, and the motion was granted. To this extent, the case differs from Ramish, which the court of appeal cites and which is discussed in § 10.39[3][b]. Had proper procedure been followed, defendant would have pleaded another action pending [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(c)] by demurrer or answer [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10, 430.30(a), (b), 431.30(b)(2)], secured entry of an interlocutory judgment staying the present action on this ground [Code Civ. Proc. § 597; Lord v. Garland (1946) 27 Cal. 2d 840, 850, 168 P.2d 5], secured dismissal of the appeal from the prior judgment [now see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 8.147], and then moved for leave to amend the complaint to set up the affirmative defense of res judicata [Lord v. Garland (1946) 27 Cal. 2d 840, 851, 168 P.2d 5] and for summary judgment on the ground the action had no merit [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c] since it was barred by the doctrine of res judicata [Wood v. Herson (1974) 39 Cal. App. 3d 737, 746, 114 Cal. Rptr. 365]. The same evidence with respect to the issues would, of course, have been required to support the defense of another action pending as was required to support the defense of res judicata, the only difference being that to support the former defense it would have to be shown that the other action was still pending, whereas to support the latter defense it would have to be shown that the judgment in the prior action or proceeding was final.

Since the court noted that plaintiff had apparently abandoned the appeal in the prior case and had not questioned the res judicata effect of the prior judgment on the ground of nonfinality (the unsuccessful attack on the prior judgment was that it went beyond the issues presented by the unlawful detainer proceeding and to that extent was not res judicata), it could have held that defendant had, by failing to urge it, waived the objection that the prior action was still pending and, hence, could not be res judicata of the present action, and dismissed the prior appeal on its own motion [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.147]. Then, by taking judicial notice of the unlawful detainer proceeding [see Evid. Code §§ 452(d), 459], the court affirmed the judgment on the ground it appeared as a matter of law that the present action was barred by the prior final judgment.

Other cases supporting the rule that the plea in abatement of a prior action pending fails if the action is no longer pending include: Rudneck v. Southern Cal. Metal & Rubber Co. (1920) 184 Cal. 274, 282, 193 P. 775 ("It is well settled that a plea by way of abatement of another action pending will be avoided by proof that the other action is no longer pending at the time of trial, although it may have been pending the plea was made"); Colvig v. RKO Gen., Inc. (1965) 232 Cal. App. 2d 56, 71, 42 Cal. Rptr. 473 (where the first action is concluded by judgment or dismissal before the second action is commenced, the plea of another action pending is untenable); Karp v. Dunn (1964) 229 Cal. App. 2d 192, 195, 40 Cal. Rptr. 96 (dismissal of the prior action before any trial of the second action completely disposes of the plea of another action pending); Hall v. Citizens Nat'l Trust & Sav. Bank (1942) 53 Cal. App. 2d 625, 631, 128 P.2d 545 (plea by way of abatement of another action pending will be avoided by proof that other actionis no longer pending at time of trial, though it may have been pending plea was made).

[b] Failure of Defense--Lack of Legal Capacity to Sue--Fictitious Business Name Statutes Complied With

In Tyrone v. Kelley (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 1, 14, 106 Cal. Rptr. 761, 507 P.2d 65 , the Supreme Court noted that the plea in abatement on the basis of the fictitious name statute is properly raised prior to trial, plaintiff may thereafter comply with the statute and then proceed to trial.

[c] Failure of Defense--Lack of Legal Capacity to Sue--Corporate Powers Revived

Peacock Hill Ass'n v. Peacock Lagoon Constr. Co. (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 369, 105 Cal. Rptr. 29, 503 P.2d 285 , involved a motion by plaintiff to dismiss defendant's appeal from an adverse judgment on the ground defendant's corporate powers had been suspended pursuant to Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301 (nonpayment of franchise taxes). In opposition to the motion, defendant filed a declaration accompanied by a receipt from the Franchise Tax Board indicating that defendant had filed its delinquent return, paid the penalty assessment, and applied for a certificate of revivor pursuant to Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305. Subsequently, it filed a certificate of revivor issued by the Franchise Tax Board, indicating that defendant had filed its delinquent return, showing that is had been reinstated and revived to good standing. In denying the motion to dismiss, the Supreme Court, citing cases, pointed out that in a number of situations the revival of corporate powers by the payment of delinquent taxes has been held to validate otherwise invalid prior action (8 Cal. 3d 369, 371), that in Traub Co. v. Coffee Break Serv., Inc. (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 368, 57 Cal. Rptr. 846, 425 P.2d 790 , it cited with approval several court of appeal decisions in which the corporate plaintiff had been allowed to maintain a lawsuit even though it was suspended at the time it filed its complaint, that the appellate courts reasoned that the plea of lack of capacity of a corporation because of its suspension for failure to pay taxes is a plea in abatement which is not favored in law and must be supported by the facts at the time of the plea, and that in each case it was held that revival of the corporate powers before trial was sufficient to permit the corporation to maintain its action (8 Cal. 3d 369, 372). The Court said that the authorities make clear that, as to matters occurring prior to judgment, the revival of corporate powers has the effect of validating the earlier acts and permitting the corporation to proceed with the action, and that the same rule should ordinarily apply to matters occurring subsequent to judgment (8 Cal. 3d 369, 373). The Court concluded that defendant's corporate powers had been revived and that it could proceed with its appeal (8 Cal. 3d 369, 374).

The factual background of Traub Co. v. Coffee Break Serv., Inc. (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 368, 57 Cal. Rptr. 846, 425 P.2d 790 , is discussed in § 10.34[3][d]. In affirming the order denying the motion to vacate and set aside the judgment, the Supreme Court, in the course of its opinion, said that the plea of lack of capacity of a corporation to maintain an action by reason of a suspension of its corporate powers for nonpayment of its taxes [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301] is a plea in abatement which is not favored in the law, is to be strictly construed, and must be supported by facts warranting the abatement at the time of the plea (66 Cal. 2d 368, 370).

Hall v. Citizens Nat'l Trust & Sav. Bank (1942) 53 Cal. App. 2d 625, 128 P.2d 545 , was an action to enjoin a proposed trustee's sale pursuant to a notice of sale. The action was commenced November 4, 1940. Plaintiff corporation's corporate powers had been suspended June 26, 1930, and were revived November 22, 1940. Certain transactions between the corporate plaintiff and the individual plaintiffs, as well as commencement of the present action, occurred during the period of suspension. Revival occurred subsequent to the filing of the answer in the case but before trial of the cause. From a judgment for plaintiffs, defendants appealed. Although the court of appeal reversed the judgment on the ground of insufficiency of the findings and of the evidence to support the injunction (53 Cal. App. 2d 625, 638-639), the court held, with respect to the abatement issue, that a revival of corporate powers subsequent to the interposition of a plea in abatement raising the question, but before the hearing of the plea, is a sufficient avoidance of the plea (53 Cal. App. 2d 625, 630), that the defense fails if it appears at the time of the trial, and that the matter of abatement no longer exists (53 Cal. App. 2d 625, 631).

[d] Failure of Defense--Premature Action--Ground No Longer Exists

Walter J. Warren Ins. Agency v. Surpur Timber Co. (1967) 250 Cal. App. 2d 99, 58 Cal. Rptr. 143 , was an action on an open book account and an account stated to recover insurance premiums advanced and to be advanced by plaintiff on defendant's behalf. The total amount sought was based in part on an assigned claim of premiums to be advanced for which plaintiff had become liable to pay but which claim was not assigned by the insurance company to plaintiff until after the action had been commenced. The fact of the assignment was incorporated in an amended and a second amended complaint. Judgment was for plaintiff, and defendant appealed contending, among other things, that the action was premature as to the assigned claim. In affirming the judgment, the court of appeal stated that the case called for application of the principle that prematurity of action is merely ground for abatement and if the ground has ceased to exist before time of trial it cannot then or thereafter prevail (250 Cal. App. 2d 99, 105).

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 10 ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. Pleas in Abatement

1-10 California Points & Authorities § 10.40

§ 10.40 Opposing Motion for Stay of Action on Ground of Another Action Pending in Court in Another Jurisdiction--Exercise of Discretion Requires Denial of Motion

[1] FORM Opposing Motion for Stay of Action on Ground of Another Action Pending in Court in Another Jurisdiction--Exercise of Discretion Requires Denial of Motion

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)
Plaintiff,	)
vs.	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORIT-
Defendant.	)	IES IN OPPOSITION TO MOTION FOR STAY OF
	)	ACTION ON GROUND OF ANOTHER ACTION
	)	PENDING IN COURT OF ANOTHER JURISDIC-TION

_____

A MOTION FOR AN ORDER STAYING AN ACTION ON THE GROUND THAT THERE IS ANOTHER ACTION PENDING BETWEEN THE SAME PARTIES ON THE SAME CAUSE IN A COURT OF ANOTHER JURISDICTION SHOULD BE DENIED WHERE THE FACTORS TO BE CONSIDERED BY THE COURT MILITATE AGAINST A STAY.

A. When Abatement Exists as Matter of Right. Abatement of the second action on the ground of another action pending is available as a matter of right only if both suits are predicated on the same cause of action and both suits are pending in the same jurisdiction (Tinney v. Tinney (1963) 211 Cal. App. 2d 548, 552, 27 Cal. Rptr. 239).

B. Motion to Stay Invokes Judicial Discretion. A motion for an order staying an action on the ground that there is another action pending between the same parties on the same cause in a _____ [federal court or court of a sister state] is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial court (Thomson v. Continental Ins. Co. (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 738, 746-747, 59 Cal. Rptr. 101, 427 P.2d 765 ; Farmland Irrigation Co. v. Dopplmaier (1957) 48 Cal. 2d 208, 215, 308 P.2d 732).

C. Factors to Be Considered by Court Militating Against Stay. In exercising its discretion on a motion to stay, the court should consider: (1) the importance of discouraging multiple litigation designed solely to harass an adverse party; (2) the importance of avoiding unseemly conflicts with the courts of other jurisdictions; (3) whether the rights of the parties can best be determined by the court of the other jurisdiction because of the nature of the subject matter, the availability of witnesses, or the stage to which the proceedings in the other court have advanced; and (4) the hardship to the parties. If these issues are resolved in favor of continuing the California action, the motion for a stay should be denied (see Farmland Irrigation Co. v. Dopplmaier (1957) 48 Cal. 2d 208, 215, 308 P.2d 732 ; Tinney v. Tinney (1963) 211 Cal. App. 2d 548, 553, 27 Cal. Rptr. 239 ; see also Thomson v. Continental Ins. Co. (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 738, 746-747, 59 Cal. Rptr. 101, 427 P.2d 765).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a motion for an order staying an action or proceeding on the ground there is another action pending between the same parties on the same cause of action in a court of another jurisdiction [see § 10.38]. The ground of opposition is that on a consideration of the factors involved the proper exercise of judicial discretion requires denial of the motion.

The motion may also be defeated by establishing that one or more of the essential elements of the defense of another action pending is lacking. For points and authorities that may be adapted in such event for inclusion in these points and authorities, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

When appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] When Abatement Exists as Matter of Right

Tinney v. Tinney (1963) 211 Cal. App. 2d 548, 27 Cal. Rptr. 239 , was an action by a husband against his former wife for declaratory relief seeking an adjudication of the rights of the parties in certain Oklahoma properties. The day before their marriage in Arkansas, the parties had executed an antenuptial agreement by which defendant accepted certain benefits in full settlement of her rights of dower, alimony, and every other interest or claim in plaintiff's property and estate. After the marriage the parties accumulated certain property in California and Oklahoma. Subsequently, plaintiff husband secured from a California court an interlocutory decree of divorce on the grounds of adultery and extreme mental cruelty. The community property was awarded to him and defendant was denied alimony orany other relief. The parties, through their respective counsel, had prior to the divorce decree, executed a joint pretrial statement which provided that the community property consisted solely of a residence in Los Angeles, household furniture and furnishings, and two cars. In the subsequent California action, defendant filed an answer setting up a number of affirmative defenses, including the defense that there was another action pending in Oklahoma, and filed a cross complaint (211 Cal. App. 2d 548, 551 fn. 1). The court entered a judgment declaring that plaintiff was the sole owner of the property, that defendant had no interest in it, ordering defendant to execute and file a dismissal with prejudice of the Oklahoma action and to deliver to plaintiff a quitclaim deed to the property, that defendant take nothing by reason of her cross complaint, and that plaintiff recover his costs. Defendant appealed from this judgment, contending, among other things, that the trial court should have abated the action until a determination could be made in the Oklahoma case. In rejecting this contention and affirming the judgment, the court said that abatement on the ground of another action pending between the same parties is available as a matter of right only where both suits are predicated on the same cause of action and both suits are pending in the same jurisdiction (211 Cal. App. 2d 548, 552).

[b] Motion to Stay Invokes Judicial Discretion

Thomson v. Continental Ins. Co. (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 738, 59 Cal. Rptr. 101, 427 P.2d 765 , was an action by a California resident against two insurance companies and an adjustment bureau for damages for breach of insurance contracts covering Texas real property owned by plaintiff and for damages for civil conspiracy. The property had been damaged by wind and vandals. Plaintiff alleged that defendants refused to settle and had entered into a civil conspiracy to coerce plaintiff to accept for his losses a sum representing only a small fraction of the actual damages and that in the course of this conspiracy the insurers canceled their policies with plaintiff and so damaged his reputation in the business community that no company would offer him insurance (66 Cal. 2d 738, 740-741). Plaintiff had originally filed an action on the same cause against the same parties in a federal district court in California which, on defendants' motion, transferred the case to a federal district court in Texas. Plaintiff filed an amended complaint in the Texas court which defendants answered. No trial date had yet been set in that action. In the present California action, defendants' motion to dismiss the action on the ground of forum non conveniens was granted and plaintiff appealed from the judgment of dismissal. The Supreme Court reversed the judgment on the ground that an action by a California resident could not be dismissed on the ground of forum non conveniens in the absence of unusual circumstances, and that such circumstances did not appear in the case (66 Cal. 2d 738, 742-745) . The Court further said that the pendency of the nearly identical action in federal court in Texas had no bearing on the forum non conveniens question presented. It added that such a pending action may be grounds for a stay of the California proceedings but not for a dismissal and that granting a stay in such a case where the issues in the two actions are substantially identical is a matter addressed to the sound discretion of the trial court (66 Cal. 2d 738, 746).

Farmland Irrigation Co. v. Dopplmaier (1957) 48 Cal. 2d 208, 308 P.2d 732 , was an action for declaratory relief with respect to plaintiff's right to manufacture and sell irrigation equipment under a patent license agreement and a declaration of its duties under the royalty provisions of that agreement. The action was by the original licensee's assignee against the licensor-inventor's assignee. Prior to the commencement of this action, defendant had brought another action against plaintiff's assignor in a federal district court in Oregon for an accounting of royalties allegedly due under the license. Plaintiff's motion to intervene in that action was denied and it commenced the present action. Defendant's motion for a stay of the present proceedings pending final judgment in the Oregon action was denied. The case was tried on the merits and a declaratory judgment in favor of plaintiff was entered. Defendant appealed, contending, among other things, that the trial court abused its discretion in denying his motion for a stay. The Supreme Court stated that an action is brought in a court of this state involving the same parties and the same subject matter as an action already pending in a court of another jurisdiction, a stay of the California proceedings is not a matter of right, but within the sound discretion of the trial court (48 Cal. 2d 208, 215). It held that the trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying the motion to stay (48 Cal. 2d 208, 216) and affirmed the judgment (48 Cal. 2d 208, 228).

[c] Factors to Be Considered by Court Militating Against Stay

The factual background of Farmland Irrigation Co. v. Dopplmaier (1957) 48 Cal. 2d 208, 308 P.2d 732 , is discussed in § 10.40[3][b]. In holding that the trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying defendant's motion to stay the action on the ground of another action pending in another state, the Supreme Court said that in exercising its discretion the court should consider the importance of discouraging multiple litigation designed solely to harass an adverse party, and of avoiding unseemly conflicts with the courts of other jurisdictions, and that it should also consider whether the rights of the parties can best be determined by the court of the other jurisdiction because of the nature of the subject matter, the availability of witnesses, or the stage to which the proceedings in the other court have already advanced (48 Cal. 2d 208, 215). The Court then pointed out that (1) the parties to the present action were not identical with those in the Oregon action, (2) plaintiff was not a party to the Oregon action, (3) its attempt to intervene as a party defendant was successfully prevented by defendant, and (4) plaintiff brought the present action not to harass defendant with multiple litigation but to assert interests it claimed would not be adequately represented in the Oregon action. It further held that in deciding whether the representation of plaintiff in theOregon action was an adequate substitute for a present determination of its rights in a California court, the trial court was not bound by the federal court's determination that the representation of plaintiff's assignee was adequate to prevent intervention (48 Cal. 2d 208, 215). The Court added that all the issues in the present action were not involved in the Oregon action, although they would have been had plaintiff's motion to intervene and file a counterclaim raising the additional issues been granted (48 Cal. 2d 208, 216).

The factual background of Tinney v. Tinney (1963) 211 Cal. App. 2d 548, 27 Cal. Rptr. 239 , is discussed in § 10.40[3][a]. The court pointed out that the Oklahoma action was concerned only with a part of the properties involved in the California action and, hence, by implication that the California court was better able to provide more complete relief; it further said that defendant had made no showing whatever of any abuse of discretion on the part of the trial court, failing to suggest that she was unable conveniently to attend the trial in California, that she was unable to produce in California any witnesses or any other evidence that would be available in Oklahoma, or that she was in any way prejudiced. The court concluded that the trial court acted properly within its discretion it chose not to abate or stay the California action (211 Cal. App. 2d 548, 553).

The factual background of Thomson v. Continental Ins. Co. (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 738, 59 Cal. Rptr. 101, 427 P.2d 765 , is discussed in § 10.40[3][b]. In discussing a stay on the ground of another action pending in a court of another jurisdiction but without intimating any views as to how the trial court's discretion should be exercised if a request for a stay were to be made on retrial on the ground that the propriety of a stay is a question which must first be addressed to the discretion of the trial judge (66 Cal. 2d 738, 747), the Court nevertheless quoted the statement regarding factors to be considered from Farmland Irrigation Co. v. Dopplmaier (1957) 48 Cal. 2d 208, 215, 308 P.2d 732 , above (66 Cal. 2d 738, 746-747). The Court also indicated that hardship to the plaintiff in staying the California state court action was a factor to be considered (66 Cal. 2d 738, 747) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Motion to Stay Invokes Judicial Discretion

Leeds v. Superior Court (1965) 231 Cal. App. 2d 723, 42 Cal. Rptr. 151 , was a proceeding seeking a writ of prohibition or mandate to compel the trial court (respondent) to either dismiss or stay proceedings in an action pending in that court on the ground that a prior action was pending in Nevada between petitioner as plaintiff and real parties in interest as defendants concerning substantially the same subject matter as the California action, in which real parties in interest were the plaintiffs and petitioner was defendant. The trial court had denied petitioner's motion to dismiss action or stay proceedings on ground another action pending in Clark County, Nevada. In denying the petition, the court of appeal said that an action is brought in a court of this state involving the same parties and the same subject matter as an action already pending in a court of another jurisdiction, a stay of the California proceedings is not a matter of right, but within the sound discretion of the trial court (231 Cal. App. 2d 723, 724).

The factual background of Tinney v. Tinney (1963) 211 Cal. App. 2d 548, 27 Cal. Rptr. 239 , is discussed in § 10.40[3][a]. In affirming the judgment, the court said that the question of whether a court should stay or abate a proceeding in one state until an action in another state is completed is within the discretion of the trial court (211 Cal. App. 2d 548, 553).

[b] Factors to Be Considered by Court Militate Against Stay

In Gregg v. Superior Court (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 134, 239 Cal. Rptr. 380 , plaintiff janitorial service brought an action for fraud, unfair business practices, and operation of an illegal collection agency against defendant. At the hearing on an order to show cause for a preliminary injunction, defendant moved to stay the matter until related federal proceedings were terminated. Plaintiff was not a party to the related federal proceedings in which his attorney represented 50 plaintiffs in 11 lawsuits against defendant. The trial court granted the motion and did not rule on the preliminary injunction, finding it moot. The court of appeal concluded that the trial court abused its discretion and issued a peremptory writ of mandate directing it to dissolve the stay (194 Cal. App. 3d 134, 139). The court explained that a stay of action pending resolution of related lawsuits is sought, and one action is in state court and the other in federal court, the principle of comity may call for a discretionary refusal of the court to entertain the second suit pending determination of the first-filed action (194 Cal. App. 3d 134, 136). However, the court observed that the principle of priority based on comity applies most strongly the federal and state court actions are in rem or quasi in rem. The main reason for priority disappears the action is purely in personam. The court reiterated that an application for a stay is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial court. However, the court noted that most cases in which a stay was issued involved two related lawsuits between the same or substantially identical parties. Although a stay may be granted the parties are substantially different, the court said those actions have been special proceedings in rem, and are not persuasive authority for an in personam action (194 Cal. App. 3d 134, 137-138). The court found it significant that plaintiff sought personal relief from contracts and damages for fraud and unlawful business practices directed toward him. He had not sought relief in another forum and was not a party to a related action in another forum. Moreover, if he wanted to file an action in federal court he would be required to retain new counsel because his attorney had promised the federal court that he would not file new actions in federal court before the trial in the lead federal case. Thus, the court said the trial court's stay order forced plaintiff to suspend all efforts to seek monetary and injunctive relief (194 Cal. App. 3d 134, 138).

The factual background of Leeds v. Superior Court (1965) 231 Cal. App. 2d 723, 42 Cal. Rptr. 151 , is set forth in § 10.40[4][a]. The court said that in order to justify a stay of proceedings on the ground of another action pending in a court of another jurisdiction, the trial court should consider among other things which court can best determine the matter because of the nature of the subject matter, the availability of witnesses, or the stage to which the proceedings have already advanced. It added the petitioner had failed to show any real prejudice in the trial court's denial of the motion. Quoting from Tinney v. Tinney (1963) 211 Cal. App. 2d 548, 553, 27 Cal. Rptr. 239 , discussed in § 10.40[3][c] the court said that defendant has made no showing whatever of any abuse of discretion on the part of the trial court. She did not suggest that she was unable conveniently to attend the trial in California, that she was unable to produce any witnesses in California or any other evidence that would be available in Oklahoma, or that she was in any way prejudiced. Therefore, the court concluded that the trial court properly acted within its discretion it chose not to abate or stay the action (231 Cal. App. 2d 723, 724).

44 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 10 ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. Pleas in Abatement

1-10 California Points & Authorities §§ 10.41-10.59

[Reserved]

§§ 10.41[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 10 ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS
PART II. FORMS
B. Survival and Continuation of Actions

1-10 California Points & Authorities § 10.60

§ 10.60 Supporting Motion for Order Substituting Personal Representative for Deceased Party [Code Civ. Proc. § 377.31 or 377.41]

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Order Substituting Personal Representative for Deceased Party [Code Civ. Proc. § 377.31 or 377.41]

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR ORDER SUBSTITUTING _____ [PERSONAL REPRESENTATIVE or DECEDENT'S SUCCESSOR IN INTEREST] FOR DECEASED _____ [PLAINTIFF or DEFENDANT or specify other party]
vs.	)
_____ [name],	)
Defendant.	)
	)
	)
	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Dept.: _____
	)	Discovery Cut-Off: _____
	)	Motion Cut-Off: _____
	)	Trial Date: _____

_____

THE COURT SHOULD GRANT THE MOTION TO SUBSTITUTE _____ [name], AS _____ [PERSONAL REPRESENTATIVE or DECEDENT'S SUCCESSOR IN INTEREST], FOR _____ [PLAINTIFF or DEFENDANT or specify other party], WHO DIED WHILE THIS _____ [ACTION or PROCEEDING] WAS PENDING.

A. Nonabatement of Action or Proceeding by Death. A pending _____ [action or proceeding] does not abate by the death of a party if the cause of action survives (Code Civ. Proc. § 377.21).

B. Survival of Cause of Action. A person's cause of action is not lost by reason of that person's death, but survives subject to the applicable limitations period (Code Civ. Proc. § 377.20).

[EITHER, if continuing pending action after plaintiff's death]

C. Continuation of Action or Proceeding. On motion, the court shall allow a pending _____ [action or proceeding] that does not abate to be continued by the _____ [decedent's personal representative or decedent's successor in interest if no personal representative is appointed for the decedent] (Code Civ. Proc. § 377.31).

[OR, if commencing or continuing an action after defendant's death]

C. Survival of Cause of Action. A cause of action against a person is not lost by reason of that person's death, but survives subject to the applicable limitations period (Code Civ. Proc. § 377.20). A cause of action against a decedent that survives may be asserted against the decedent's personal representative or, to the extent provided by statute, against the decedent's successor in interest (Code Civ. Proc. § 377.40).

D. Continuation of Action or Proceeding. On motion, the court shall allow a pending _____ [action or proceeding] against the decedent that does not abate to be continued _____ [against the decedent's personal representative or to the extent provided by statute, against the decedent's successor in interest] (Code Civ. Proc. § 377.41).

[CONTINUE]

[Optional] E. Decedent's Successor in Interest. The "decedent's successor in interest" is the beneficiary of the decedent's estate or other successor in interest who succeeds to a cause of action or a particular item of property that is the subject of a cause of action (Code Civ. Proc. § 377.11).

F. Absent Substitution, Judgment Will be in Excess of Jurisdiction. Rendering judgment for or against a deceased party without first substituting his or her executor or administrator is action in excess of jurisdiction and subject to prevention or annulment by some form of direct attack, such as appeal (Bliss v. Speier (1961) 193 Cal. App. 2d 125, 126-127, 13 Cal. Rptr. 847).

[Optional] G. Survival Action Not Defeated by Joinder With Nonsurvival Action. The fact that a survivable cause of action is joined with an action that does not survive does not defeat its survivability (Poon v. Poon (1966) 244 Cal. App. 2d 746, 754-755, 53 Cal. Rptr. 365 (prior law)).

[Optional] H. Action for Wrongful Death May be Joined with Survival Action. An action under Code of Civil Procedure Section 377.30 may be joined with a wrongful death action under Code of Civil Procedure Section 377.60 arising out of the same wrongful act or neglect (Code Civ. Proc. § 377.62(a)).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

CAUTION:
Despite Code Civ. Proc. § 377.20, certain actions or proceedings do not survive death [see § 10.62].

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a motion for an order substituting the personal representative or, if none, the successor in interest of a deceased party in the decedent's place as plaintiff or defendant [Code Civ. Proc. § 377.31 or 377.41].

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Counsel should show that the party has died and that the person sought to be substituted has been appointed and qualified as the executor or administrator of the deceased party's estate [Campbell v. West (1892) 93 Cal. 653, 656, 29 P. 219, 29 P. 645]. Optional Paragraph E should be used if the action or proceeding is to be commenced or continued by or against the decedent's successor in interest. A successor in interest is broadly defined [see Code Civ. Proc. § 377.11], and may include, among others, persons who collect a decedent's small estate without administration [see Prob. Code § 13107.5]. If the successor in interest is commencing or continuing the decedent's cause of action, the successor in interest must file an affidavit or declaration under penalty of perjury setting forth the basis to his or her status as successor in interest [see Code Civ. Proc. § 377.32(a)].

If Optional Paragraph G is used, counsel should point out that the motion to substitute is directed only to that part of the cause of action that survives. Optional Paragraph H may be used the motion to substitute is brought concurrently with a motion for joinder of a death action based on the same underlying facts. For discussion and forms relating to consolidation of a death action with a survival action for trial, see Ch. 45, Consolidation, Severance, and Coordination of Actions § 45.20 et seq., and Ch. 66, Death and Survival Actions, § 66.90 et seq.

NOTE:
Neither Code Civ. Proc. § 377.31 nor 377.41 indicates whether the motion for substitution should be made on ex parte application or by noticed motion. A number of older cases state that the substitution for a deceased party may be by ex parte application [see, e.g., Campbell v. West (1892) 93 Cal. 653,656, 29 P. 219, 29 P. 645 ; Kittle v. Bellegarde (1890) 86 Cal. 556, 563, 25 P. 55]. However, the better practice, if the motion is made before or after trial, is to proceed by noticed motion. If the party dies during the progress of the trial, the motion will normally be made orally in open court without notice but in the presence of counsel for the adverse party.

[b] Effect of Prior Proceedings on Substituted Party

The personal representative substituted in an action or proceeding for a deceased party takes up the case where his or her predecessor left it. One who is substituted as plaintiff takes the place of the original plaintiff with respect to both the benefits and the burdens of his or her predecessor. A substituted defendant may avail himself or herself of all rulings made and of all exceptions reserved by the original defendant prior to the substitution [Bliss v. Speier (1961) 193 Cal. App. 2d 125, 127, 13 Cal. Rptr. 847 (quoting from 67 C.J.S., Parties, § 89)].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms of notices of motion for substitution, supporting declarations, and orders, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 21, Amended and Supplemental Pleadings (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Absent Substitution, Judgment Will be in Excess of Jurisdiction

Bliss v. Speier (1961) 193 Cal. App. 2d 125, 13 Cal. Rptr. 847 , involved three consolidated actions against an individual and a corporation. In two of the actions, defendants counterclaimed (now cross complained [Code Civ. Proc. § 428.80]) for sums exceeding plaintiffs' demands. After trial but before judgment, the individual defendant died. An executrix of his estate was appointed and qualified but was not substituted into the actions as a party defendant. Judgment was entered awarding defendants $6,850.26 which was the excess of the amount awarded them over the amount awarded plaintiffs. Plaintiffs appealed, claiming the judgments were invalid because they were rendered against a decedent without substitution of his personal representative. In reversing the judgments and remanding the causes for further proceedings, the court of appeal, quoting Witkin California Procedure, p. 399, said that a judgment entered against a defendant who died after jurisdiction over him had been obtained but before judgment is in excess of jurisdiction and subject to prevention or annulment by some form of direct attack (193 Cal. App. 2d 125, 126). The court distinguished those cases, holding under varying circumstances that the claim that a judgment so rendered is void and subject to collateral attack is unsound on the ground that those cases did not apply where the attack on the judgment was direct by appeal (193 Cal. App. 2d 125, 127).

[b] Survival Action Not Defeated by Joinder With Nonsurvival Action

Poon v. Poon (1966) 244 Cal. App. 2d 746, 53 Cal. Rptr. 365 (prior law), was a divorce action by a wife. She also sought in the action to have certain deeds, executed by her to her husband pursuant to a property settlement agreement which she was allegedly induced to sign by the husband's fraud and misrepresentation, set aside and title to the property quieted in her, as well as an accounting. The husband cross complained for divorce. Following the sixth day of trial, the husband killed the wife. The administrator of the wife's estate moved for an order substituting himself as plaintiff in the action, and the motion was denied. The administrator appealed. In reversing the order with directions to the trial court to grant the motion for substitution (244 Cal. App. 2d 746, 755), the court of appeal held that the joinder of causes of action which survive (actions arising out of alleged violation of property rights) with an action which does not survive (divorce action [see § 10.62]) does not defeat the survivability of the former (244 Cal. App. 2d 746, 754-755).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Absent Substitution, Judgment Will be in Excess of Jurisdiction

Downey v. Johnson (1968) 263 Cal. App. 2d 775, 69 Cal. Rptr. 830 , was an eminent domain proceeding to condemn certain parcels of land for a municipal building site. Both the landowner and her son, as conservator of her person and estate, were named defendants. The conservator, a layperson, purported throughout the proceeding to act in propria persona for the conservatee. The conservatee died and her son was appointed her executor, but no substitution of parties was made in the eminent domain proceeding. An interlocutory judgment was entered awarding various sums for specified parcels to the son as executor of the mother's estate. The son appealed in propria persona. The court of appeal reversed the judgment on the ground that it was invalid. It held that the son, neither as conservator nor as executor, was entitled to appear in propria persona and conduct the trial proceedings and that he was not competent to waive any defects in procedure on behalf of the conservatee (263 Cal. App. 2d 775, 778-783). With respect to the failure to have the executor substituted for the decedent as a party defendant, the court, after noting that determination of the legal issues and the trial of the valuation issue all took place after the owner's death, held that, under the circumstances, the judgment was in excess of jurisdiction (263 Cal. App. 2d 775, 783).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 10 ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS
PART II. FORMS
B. Survival and Continuation of Actions

1-10 California Points & Authorities § 10.61

§ 10.61 Supporting Motion for Order Substituting Transferee of Interest in Pending Action or Proceeding in Place of Transferor [Code Civ. Proc. § 368.5]

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Order Substituting Transferee of Interest in Pending Action or Proceeding in Place of Transferor [Code Civ. Proc. § 368.5]

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR ORDER SUBSTITUTING TRANSFEREE OF INTEREST IN PENDING _____ [ACTION or PROCEEDING] FOR TRANSFEROR
vs.	)
_____ [name],	)
Defendant.	)
	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Dept: _____
		Discovery Cut-Off: _____
		Motion Cut-Off: _____
		Trial Date: _____

_____

THE MOTION FOR AN ORDER SUBSTITUTING THE TRANSFEREE OF AN INTEREST IN THIS _____ [ACTION or PROCEEDING] IN THE PLACE OF THE TRANSFEROR SHOULD BE GRANTED.

A. Nonabatement of Action or Proceeding by Assignment. _____ [An action or A proceeding] does not abate by the transfer of an interest in the _____ [action or proceeding] or by any other transfer of an interest (Code Civ. Proc. § 368.5).

B. Substitution of Transferee Authorized. _____ [An action or A proceeding] may, on the transfer of any interest in it, be continued in the name of the original party, or the court may allow the person to whom the transfer was made to be substituted in the place of the transferor (Code Civ. Proc. § 368.5).

C. Transferee as Entitled to Substitution. The transferee of an interest in a pending _____ [action or proceeding] is entitled to be substituted as a party in the place of the transferor (see Ford v. Bushard (1897) 116 Cal. 273, 277, 48 P. 119 ; Macmillan Petroleum Corp. v. Griffin (1950) 99 Cal. App. 2d 523, 526, 222 P.2d 69).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a motion by the transferee or transferor of an interest in a pending action or proceeding for an order substituting the transferee as a party in the place of the transferor [Code Civ. Proc. § 368.5].

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Transferee's Option

[i] Action Permitted to Proceed in Transferee's Name

If, after an action is commenced, the plaintiff transfers his, her, or its interest in the property in controversy, the transferee has the option of allowing the action to continue in the name of the original plaintiff or to be substituted as plaintiff and proceed in his, her, or its own name [Knobloch v. Associated Oil Co. (1915) 170 Cal. 144, 147, 148 P. 938]. If the transferee elects the former alternative, the case may proceed in the original party's name without any further action by the court [Malone v. Big Flat Gravel Mining Co. (1892) 93 Cal. 384, 390, 28 P. 1063 ; Davis v. Rudolph (1947) 80 Cal. App. 2d 397, 401, 181 P.2d 765]. In this case, the court may give judgment according to the conditions existing the case was commenced. The transferee is deemed to have elected to trust the original plaintiff to make over the title in some appropriate manner after the judgment has become final [Knobloch v. Associated Oil Co. (1915) 170 Cal. 144, 147, 148 P. 938 ; see also Haines v. Pigott (1959) 174 Cal. App. 2d 805, 808, 345 P.2d 339]. The same rule applies a defendant transfers his, her, or its interest in the property in controversy during the pendency of the action or proceeding [Malone v. Big Flat Gravel Mining Co. (1892) 93 Cal. 384, 390, 28 P. 1063 ; Bates v. Berry (1923) 63 Cal. App. 505, 509, 219 P. 83]. The same rule also applies the transferring party is an intervenor [see Knapp

Development & Design v. Pal-Mal Properties (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 786, 793, 240 Cal. Rptr. 920].

[ii] Action Proceeding in Transferee's Name

Code Civ. Proc. § 368.5 provides that the court "may allow" the transferee of an interest to be substituted in a pending action or proceeding for the transferor. Although the section does not expressly so state, it appears that a court order is required. "Substantial compliance," however, may be sufficient [Nezik v. Cole (1919) 43 Cal. App. 130, 140, 184 P. 523], and the failure to secure a court order may be waived [see Dougherty v. California Kettleman Oil Royalties, Inc. (1937) 9 Cal. 2d 58, 84-85, 69 P.2d 155] . Thus, in Nezik the court of appeal held that, while there was no order of substitution, the filing of a notice of motion for leave to file an amended and supplemental complaint to allege termination of defendant's corporate existence and to name the corporation's directors at the time of termination as defendants, and the court order granting the motion and giving defendants 20 days from service of the order to plead to the amended and supplemental complaint, constituted substantial compliance with former Code Civ. Proc. § 385 [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 368.5]. In Dougherty, the California Supreme Court held that the assignee waived the objection that there was no order substituting it as the party defendant, which was done by filing an amended and supplemental complaint (to allege the assignment), where the defendant assignor was thereafter dismissed from the case and the assignee both answered the amended and supplemental complaint and filed a cross complaint. The Court, however, at page 85 stated that the more orderly method of procedure was to move for a substitution.

[c] Nature of Motion

Since Code Civ. Proc. § 368.5 fails to expressly require a court order for substitution of parties [see § 10.38[2][d]], it is silent as to whether the application for the order may be made ex parte or should be made by noticed motion. In Ford v. Bushard (1897) 116 Cal. 273, 276, 48 P. 119 , the Supreme Court held that defendants had waived any error that no notice was given for a motion for substitution they filed an answer to the supplemental complaint (to allege the assignment) without objection. In any case, the Court in dictum said that since defendants had made no showing as to how the motion for substitution was made, the Court would presume in favor of the regularity of the proceedings that notice was given. However, in Macmillan Petroleum Corp. v. Griffin (1950) 99 Cal. App. 2d 523, 526, 222 P.2d 69 , the court of appeal, in upholding the validity of an order made on ex parte application substituting the plaintiff's assignee as the plaintiff in the action, said that while it is better practice that a notice be given, there is no requirement that notice of application for substitution of a party plaintiff be given to the defendant. Citing Macmillan, the court of appeal, in Chatten v. Martell (1958) 166 Cal. App. 2d 545, 553, 333 P.2d 364 , applied the rule to the substitution of plaintiffs by the filing of an amended complaint the assignment occurred before the action was commenced. The original complaint had named the assignor as plaintiff. An amended complaint was filed naming the assignee as plaintiff. Defendant's demurrer to the amended complaint was sustained with leave to amend, but his demurrer to the second amended complaint was sustained without leave to amend and the action was dismissed. In reversing the judgment, the court, with respect to notice of substitution, said that in substituting plaintiffs, although it is better practice to give notice, there is no requirement that notice of application for substitution under Code Civ. Proc. § 47 (relating to amended pleadings) be given.

In view of the dictum in Ford and the contrary holdings in Macmillan and Chatten, both of which, however, acknowledged that the better practice would be to proceed by noticed motion, it would appear the noticed motion procedure should be used. The motion for an order of substitution may be combined with a motion to file a supplemental pleading [see Code Civ. Proc. § 464] to allege the transfer [see § 10.61[2][d]].

On the other hand, a motion by one party to have the adverse party's transferee substituted for the adverse party, must, to comport with due process of law, be made on notice [Higgins v. Kay (1914) 168 Cal. 468, 470-473, 143 P. 710].

[d] Supplemental Pleading

Normally, if the court orders the substitution of a transferee for a transferor of an interest in a pending action or proceeding, the filing of a supplemental pleading [see Code Civ. Proc. § 464] is required [see Northern Ry. Co. v. Jordan (1890) 87 Cal. 23, 27-28, 25 P. 273]. Hence, the motion for substitution may be combined with a motion for leave to file a supplemental pleading.

[e] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms of notices of motion for substitution of the transferee of an interest in a pending action or proceeding in place of the transferor, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 21, Amended and Supplemental Pleadings (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Transferee as Entitled to Substitution

Ford v. Bushard (1897) 116 Cal. 273, 48 P. 119 , was an action for damages for breach of a contract regarding the sale of orange trees. One of the plaintiffs died before trial but had, before his death, assigned his interest in the contract to another person. The assignee secured an order substituting her as a party plaintiff in the place of the deceased assignor and granting her leave to file a supplemental pleading to allege the assignment and death. Defendants filed an answer to the supplemental complaint denying the assignment. No evidence with respect to the assignment was presented at trial, and the jury returned a verdict for plaintiffs.Although the Supreme Court reversed the judgment because of plaintiffs' failure at trial to present any evidence showing the assignment, it said that in the case of an alleged assignment of the cause of action, the assignee is entitled to be substituted on a showing of probable cause (116 Cal. 273, 277).

Macmillan Petroleum Corp. v. Griffin (1950) 99 Cal. App. 2d 523, 222 P.2d 69 , involved an appeal from the last in a series of orders made by the trial court in a proceeding to enforce a 13-year-old judgment. Plaintiff, a foreign corporation, had dissolved after the judgment was rendered but several years prior to the enforcement proceeding. It had, however, before dissolving, assigned the judgment to another corporation. The enforcement proceeding was commenced in the name of the dissolved corporation but on ex parte application the assignee corporation was substituted as the party plaintiff. The order appealed from, among other things, vacated the order of substitution. On appeal, defendant sought to uphold this portion of the trial court's order, contending that the order of substitution was invalid because it was made on ex parte application rather than by noticed motion. In rejecting this contention [see discussion in § 10.61[2][c]] and reversing that portion of the order vacating the substitution order, the court of appeal said that an assignee is entitled to be substituted as party plaintiff in the place of the assignor (99 Cal. App. 2d 523, 526).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Transferee as Entitled to Substitution

Northern Ry. Co. v. Jordan (1890) 87 Cal. 23, 25 P. 273 , was an ejectment action by a railway company and an individual. Both plaintiffs and defendants claimed title to the land in question. After action was commenced, the individual plaintiff transferred his interest in the land to another person who was, by court order, substituted for the individual plaintiff. Judgment was for plaintiffs. In reversing the judgment for uncertainty in the description of the land and for plaintiffs' failure to have filed a supplemental complaint to allege the fact of the assignment, the Supreme Court, with respect to the substitution of parties, said that the transferee, having succeeded by transfer to the interest of the individual plaintiff, had a right to be substituted as plaintiff if he desired to do so (87 Cal. 23, 27).

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 10 ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS
PART II. FORMS
B. Survival and Continuation of Actions

1-10 California Points & Authorities § 10.62

§ 10.62 Opposing Motion for Order Substituting Representative for Deceased Party [Code Civ. Proc. § 377.31 or 377.41]--Proceeding to Change Marital Status Does Not Survive Death of Spouse

[1] FORM Opposing Motion for Order Substituting Representative for Deceased Party [Code Civ. Proc. § 377.31 or 377.41]--Proceeding to Change Marital Status Does Not Survive Death of Spouse

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORIT-
Marriage of	)	IES IN OPPOSITION TO MOTION FOR ORDER
Petitioner	)	SUBSTITUTING PERSONAL REPRESENTATIVE
_____ [name],	)	OF DECEASED _____
Respondent	)	[PETITIONER or RESPONDENT]
_____ [name],	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
		Judge: _____
		Date Action Filed: _____
		Trial Date: _____

_____

THE MOTION TO SUBSTITUTE THE _____ [EXECUTOR or ADMINISTRATOR] OF THE DECEASED _____ [PETITIONER or RESPONDENT] SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE A CAUSE OF ACTION TO ALTER THE PARTIES' MARITAL STATUS DOES NOT SURVIVE THE DEATH OF A SPOUSE.

A. Requirement That Cause of Action Survive. Abatement of a pending action or proceeding by the death of a party will not occur only if the cause of action survives (see Code Civ. Proc. § 377.21).

B. Nonsurvivable Causes. Not all causes of action survive death, notwithstanding the broad language of Code of Civil Procedure Section 377.20 (Poon v. Poon (1966) 244 Cal. App. 2d 746, 751 n.3, 53 Cal. Rptr. 365 (prior law; construing former Prob. Code § 573(a), from which Code Civ. Proc. § 377.20 is derived)).

[EITHER]

C. Dissolution of Marriage Proceeding Does Not Survive. A family lawproceeding for dissolution of marriage does not survive the death of either party (In re Marriage of Williams (1980) 101 Cal. App. 3d 507, 510, 161 Cal. Rptr. 808).

[OR]

C. Proceeding for Annulment Does Not Survive. A family law proceeding for a judgment of nullity does not survive the death of either party (Greene v. Williams (1970) 9 Cal. App. 3d 559, 562-564, 88 Cal. Rptr. 261).

[CONTINUE]

D. Nonsurvivable Cause Abates on Party's Death. A cause of action that does not survive death abates on the death of a party (see Poon v. Poon (1966) 244 Cal. App. 2d 746, 753, 53 Cal. Rptr. 365).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a motion for an order substituting the personal representative of a deceased party in the place of the decedent in a pending proceeding for dissolution of marriage or judgment of nullity.

Counsel should add argument linking the points and authorities in this form with the facts of his or her case.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Requirement That Cause of Action Survive

Code Civ. Proc. § 377.21 provides that a pending action or proceeding does not abate by the death or any disability of a party, "if the cause of action survives."

[b] Nonsurvivable Causes

The factual background of Poon v. Poon (1966) 244 Cal. App. 2d 746, 53 Cal. Rptr. 365 , is discussed in § 10.60[3][a]. The court of appeal stated that although former Prob. Code § 573 (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 377.20), following its 1961 amendment, would appear to make all causes of action survive, it was apparent, in view of the fact that divorce actions do not survive the death of either party, that the section did not merit such a broad interpretation (244 Cal. App. 2d 746, 751 n.3).

[c] Dissolution of Marriage Proceeding Does Not Survive

In re Marriage of Williams (1980) 101 Cal. App. 3d 507, 161 Cal. Rptr. 808 , arose out of a wife's marriage dissolution proceeding. The trial court awarded custody of the parties' minor children to the wife pendente lite. Thereafter, because she became critically ill and entered a hospital, her husband moved for an order transferring custody to him. The same day, the wife's mother and brother, claiming custody and visitation rights with respect to the children, moved for an order joining them as parties. Two days later the wife died. The husband's motion was later granted without prejudice to the joinder motion. The husband then moved for dismissal of the proceeding on the ground his wife had died. The joinder motion and motion to dismiss were heard together. The trial court granted the motion to dismiss and denied the joinder motion. The mother and brother appealed. In affirming the order denying the joinder motion on the ground the proceeding had been dismissed, the court of appeal said that divorce is a personal action that does not survive the death of a party, that one of the parties dies, dissolution occurs as a matter of law, that there is nothing left for a court to dissolve or annul, that dissolution by death is final, irrevocable, nonmodifiable, and nonappealable, and that the rule of nonsurvivability, established early in the cases, remains applicable in dissolution proceedings under the Family Law Act (101 Cal. App. 3d 507, 510).

[d] Proceeding for Annulment Does Not Survive

Greene v. Williams (1970) 9 Cal. App. 3d 559, 88 Cal. Rptr. 261 , was an action by the mother of a deceased minor to annul his marriage on the ground of minority. The widow's demurrer to the complaint was sustained without leave to amend, and the action was dismissed. The mother appealed, centering her argument on the existence of a property right to annul the marriage, a right which she claimed survived the child's death. In affirming the judgment, the court of appeal, citing former Civ. Code § 4500 (now see Fam. Code § 310), pointed out that the marriage had already been dissolved by death (9 Cal. App. 3d 559, 562). With respect to the mother's argument, the court acknowledged that there were two possible sources for such a property right: (1) a right in the child itself, which survives the death of the child and passes to the parent; and (2) an independent right in the parent, which continues in existence and remains unaffected by the child's death. With respect to the first, the court said that an adult's cause of action for divorce does not survive the death of the other party and that in the absence of specific legislation the same is true of an adult's cause of action for annulment. It is likewise true, said the court, that an adult's cause of action for divorce or for annulment does not survive his or her own death and that the general rule ofsurvivability of causes of action does not apply to matrimonial cases. The court believed that a minor's right to seek annulment is subject to the same rule, but added that even if the cause of action is considered a right of property, it is one which terminates with death, and since the right expires on the minor's death, nothing survives to pass to the parent, for a successor right of action cannot be longer-lived than the right from which it derives (9 Cal. App. 3d 559, 563). The court further held that the parent has no independent right to secure an annulment after the child's death, because the parent's right to have a minor's marriage annulled is derivative and designed to permit one person to act on behalf of another at a time the latter is presumed incapable of acting prudently in his or her own behalf (9 Cal. App. 3d 559, 563-564).

[e] Nonsurvivable Cause Abates on Party's Death

The factual background of Poon v. Poon (1966) 244 Cal. App. 2d 746, 53 Cal. Rptr. 365 , is discussed in § 10.60[3][a]. The court of appeal held that because a divorce action involving the status of the parties does not survive death, there could be no question but that such an action abates on the death of one of the spouses (244 Cal. App. 2d 746, 753).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Dissolution of Marriage Proceeding Does Not Survive

In re Marriage of Shayman (1973) 35 Cal. App. 3d 648, 111 Cal. Rptr. 11 , was a divorce action by a wife against her husband who answered and cross complained. The cause was tried, and written findings of fact and conclusions of law were filed. The findings set forth the rights of the parties with regard to items of community property, child custody, support, attorneys' fees, and costs. The conclusions of law contained provisions for disposition of these matters in the same form as in a judgment. The document concluded with the statement, "Let judgment be entered accordingly." No judgment was entered. About three weeks later the husband died. The husband's attorney then, by noticed motion, secured entry of an interlocutory judgment nunc pro tunc to the date the findings and conclusions were filed [see Code Civ. Proc. § 669]. The wife appealed, contending the trial court had no jurisdiction to proceed as it did. The court of appeal acknowledged as "true" the rule that the death of a party to a dissolution proceeding abates the cause of action, as the status of the parties is no longer before the court, and that the court loses jurisdiction to make any further determination of property rights, alimony, costs, or attorneys' fees, but held the rule does not apply to prevent entry of a judgment in conformity with a decision which had been issued before death (35 Cal. App. 3d 648, 651). The court reversed the judgment with directions to enter judgment consistent with the decision set forth in the findings of fact and conclusions of law and in the form prescribed by Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1287 (35 Cal. App. 3d 648, 653).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 10 ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS
PART II. FORMS
B. Survival and Continuation of Actions

1-10 California Points & Authorities § 10.63

§ 10.63 Opposing Motion for Order Substituting Transferee of Interest in Pending Action or Proceeding in Place of Transferor [Code Civ. Proc. § 368.5]--Basic Purpose of Transfer Was Unlawful

[1] FORM Opposing Motion for Order Substituting Transferee of Interest in Pending Action or Proceeding in Place of Transferor [Code Civ. Proc. § 368.5]--Basic Purpose of Transfer Was Unlawful

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES IN OPPOSITION TO MOTION FOR ORDER SUBSTITUTING TRANSFEREE OF INTEREST IN PENDING _____ [ACTION or PROCEEDING] FOR TRANSFEROR
vs.	)
_____ [name],	)
Defendant.	)
	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	Judge: _____
		Date Action Filed: _____
		Trial Date: _____

_____

THE MOTION FOR AN ORDER SUBSTITUTING THE TRANSFEREE OF AN INTEREST IN THIS _____ [ACTION or PROCEEDING] FOR THE TRANSFEROR SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE THE BASIC PURPOSE OF THE TRANSFER WAS UNLAWFUL AND SUBSTITUTION WOULD ALLOW THE UNLAWFUL PURPOSE TO BE ACCOMPLISHED.

A. Substitution of Transferee Not Required. In the event an interest in _____ [an action or a proceeding] is transferred the _____ [action or proceeding] may be continued in the name of the original party (Code Civ. Proc. § 368.5).

B. Substitution of Parties Is in Court's Discretion. The court has the discretion to allow or disallow the transferee of an interest in a pending _____ [action or proceeding] to be substituted in the place of the transferor (Code Civ. Proc. § 385(a); see Ruby v. Superior Court (1951) 104 Cal. App. 2d 175, 176, 231 P.2d 868 ; Ruby v. Superior Court (1951) 104 Cal. App. 2d 175, 176, 230 P.2d 860 (prior law; construing former Code Civ. Proc. § 385(a), from which Code Civ. Proc. § 368.5 is derived).

C. Substitution Should Be Denied if Purpose of Transfer Was Unlawful. A substitution of parties should be denied if the transfer was made for an unlawful purpose and to order the substitution would permit the consummation of that purpose (see Ruby v. Superior Court (1951) 104 Cal. App. 2d 175, 176, 231 P.2d 868 ; Ruby v. Superior Court (1951) 104 Cal. App. 2d 175, 176, 230 P.2d 860).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a motion for an order substituting the transferee of an interest in a pending action or proceeding in the place of the transferor.

Counsel should add argument linking the points and authorities in this form with the facts of his or her case.

[b] Denial of Motion

Normally, a motion by the transferee or transferor of an interest in a pending action or proceeding to have the transferee substituted as a party will be granted. But, as shown by this form, the court may deny such a motion if the transfer was made for an unlawful purpose and the substitution would allow consummation of that purpose.

A motion by the adverse party for substitution of the transferee for the transferor may, in the court's discretion, be denied [see, e.g., Alameda County Home Inv. Co. v. Whitaker (1933) 217 Cal. 231, 234 (no abuse of discretion is denying defendant's motion to bring in party succeeding to plaintiff's interest), cert den., 290 U.S. 640, 54 S. Ct. 59, 78 L. Ed. 556] .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Substitution of Transferee Not Required

Code Civ. Proc. § 368.5 provides that an action or proceeding does not abate by the transfer of an interest in the action or proceeding or by any other transfer of an interest. The action or proceeding may be continued in the name of the original party, or the court may allow the person to whom the transfer is made to be substituted in the action or proceeding.

[b] Substitution of Parties Is in Court's Discretion

Code Civ. Proc. § 368.5 in pertinent part provides that the action or proceeding may be continued in the name of the original party or the court "may allow" the person to whom the transfer is made to be substituted in the action or proceeding.

Ruby v. Superior Court of San Francisco (1951) 104 Cal. App. 2d 175 , was an application for a writ of mandate to compel a trial court to substitute a party plaintiff. The alternative writ was denied without opinion and a petition for rehearing filed. In denying the petition for rehearing, the court of appeal said that whether a motion to substitute shall be granted under Code Civ. Proc. § 385 (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 368.5) is discretionary with the trial court (104 Cal. App. 2d 175, 176).

[c] Substitution Should be Denied if Purpose of Transfer Was Unlawful

The procedural background of Ruby v. Superior Court of San Francisco (1951) 104 Cal. App. 2d 175 , is discussed in § 10.63[3][b]. The trial court had, on the motion for substitution, interrogated the alleged assignee, a layperson, and concluded that he was being brought into the case merely to represent the petitioners in the action. In denying the motion for rehearing, the court of appeal held that the trial court was justified in finding that the basic purpose of the assignment was to permit a layperson to practice law, that the finding was supported by the evidence, and that a substitution intended to permit a layperson to practice law should not be permitted (104 Cal. App. 2d 175, 176).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Substitution of Transferee Is in Court's Discretion

Fay v. Steubenrauch (1903) 138 Cal. 656, 72 P. 156 , was an action to foreclose a mortgage executed by one defendant on land subsequently conveyed to the other defendant. After decree of foreclosure and appeal to the Supreme Court, the defendant to whom the land had been conveyed, in turn, conveyed it to one Lund and subsequent to this conveyance died. Lund sought an order substituting him in the case in place of the deceased defendant. Although the Court ordered the substitution on the ground that under the facts shown its discretion would be properly exercised by an order of substitution as prayed for, it said that former Code Civ. Proc. § 385 (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 368.5), providing that the court may allow the person to whom the transfer is made to be substituted in the action or proceeding, is a permissive statute and appeals to the discretion of the court (138 Cal. 656, 657).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 11 ACCORD AND SATISFACTION

1-11 California Points & Authorities 11.syn

§ 11.syn Synopsis to Chapter 11: ACCORD AND SATISFACTION

§ 11.01 Scope of Chapter

§ 11.02 Governing Statutes

§ 11.03 Setting Aside Accord

§ 11.04 Use of This Chapter

§ 11.05 Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

§ 11.06 Related Points and Authorities Chapters

§§ 11.07-11.19 [Reserved]

§ 11.20 Supporting Contention That the Obligation Sued on Was Extinguished by Accord and Satisfaction [Civ. Code § 1521 et seq.]--General Form

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Accord and Satisfaction Extinguishes Original Obligation

[b] Accord Defined

[c] Accord for Performance or Promise

[d] Accord May Be Implied

§ 11.21 Supporting Contention That the Obligation Sued on Was Extinguished by Accord and Satisfaction [Civ. Code § 1521 et seq.]--Partial Payment of Disputed Amount [Civ. Code § 1526(a); Com. Code § 3311]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Tender by Check

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Partial Payment of Disputed Amount Extinguishes Original Obligation

[b] Test for Dispute

[c] Accord and Satisfaction Evidenced by Check

[d] Discharge by Tender of Negotiable Instrument

[e] Accord and Satisfaction by Check Not Abrogated by Commercial Code Section 1308

[f] Creditor's Denial of Intention Ineffective

[g] Creditor or Its Appropriate Agent Knew of Tender

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Test for Dispute

[b] Accord and Satisfaction Evidenced by Check

[c] Creditor's Denial of Intention Ineffective

§ 11.22 Supporting Contention That the Obligation Sued on Was Extinguished by Accord and Satisfaction [Civ. Code § 1521 et seq.]--Something Different Accepted for Original Obligation

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Accord and Satisfaction by Agreement to Accept Something Different

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Accord and Satisfaction by Agreement to Accept Something Different

§ 11.23 Supporting Contention That the Obligation Sued on Was Extinguished by Accord and Satisfaction [Civ. Code § 1521 et seq.]--Part Performance of Liquidated Undisputed Claim

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Part Performance or Payment Accepted in Writing Extinguishes Debt

[b] Obligation Must Be Liquidated and Undisputed

[c] Writing Required for Acceptance

[d] Creditor's Written Acceptance Evidenced by Check

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Part Performance or Payment Accepted in Writing Extinguishes Debt

§ 11.24 Supporting Contention That the Obligation Sued on Was Extinguished by Accord and Satisfaction [Civ. Code § 1521 et seq.]--Promise as Satisfaction

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use Of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Promise as Accord

[b] Promise as Satisfaction Extinguishes Debt

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Promise as Satisfaction Extinguishes Debt

§ 11.25 Supporting Contention That the Obligation Sued on Was Extinguished by Accord and Satisfaction [Civ. Code § 1521 et seq.]--Special Pleading Excused

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Obligee Proves Payment and Circumstances

[b] Accord and Satisfaction Raised by Motion for Summary Judgment

§ 11.26 Supporting Contention That the Obligation Sued on Was Extinguished by Accord and Satisfaction [Civ. Code §§ 1521-1526]--Composition, Extension Agreement, or Release [Civ. Code § 1526(b)-(d)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

§ 11.27 Opposing Contention That the Obligation Sued on Was Extinguished by Accord and Satisfaction [Civ. Code §§ 1521-1526]--Accord Not Valid--General Form

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Rules of Contract Apply

[b] Necessary Elements of Valid Accord

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Rules of Contract Apply

[b] Necessary Elements of Valid Accord

§ 11.28 Opposing Contention That the Obligation Sued on Was Extinguished by Accord and Satisfaction [Civ. Code § 1521 et seq.]--Accord Not Valid--No Meeting of the Minds [Civ. Code § 1526(a); Com. Code § 3311(c)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Meeting of Minds Required

[b] Intention to Agree

[c] Intention From Circumstances

[d] Accord and Satisfaction as Question of Fact

[e] Conditional Tender Must Be Clear

[f] Subsequent Conduct Disproves Accord and Satisfaction

[g] Debtor Did Not Send Check to Appropriate Person or Office

[h] Creditor Tendered Repayment Within 90 Days

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Meeting of Minds Required

[b] Intention to Agree

[c] Accord and Satisfaction as Question of Fact

§ 11.29 Opposing Contention That the Obligation Sued on Was Extinguished by Accord and Satisfaction [Civ. Code § 1521 et seq.]--Accord Not Valid--No Bona Fide Dispute

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Bona Fide Dispute as Consideration

[b] Bona Fide Dispute Required

[c] Honest Dispute Required

[d] Arbitrary Refusal to Pay

[e] No Dispute When Claim Concededly Due

[f] Wages Concededly Due Do Not Extinguish Disputed Claim

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Bona Fide Dispute Required

[b] Honest Dispute Required

[c] No Dispute When Claim Concededly Due

[d] Wages Concededly Due Do Not Extinguish Disputed Claim

§ 11.30 Opposing Contention That the Obligation Sued on Was Extinguished by Accord and Satisfaction [Civ. Code § 1521 et seq.]--Accord Not Executed

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Accord Must Be Executed

[e] Part Performance Not Satisfaction

[3] Additional Authorities

[a] Accord Must Be Executed

[b] Part Performance Not Satisfaction

§ 11.31 Opposing Contention That the Obligation Sued on Was Extinguished by Accord and Satisfaction [Civ. Code § 1521 et seq.]--Accord and Satisfaction Not Specially Pleaded

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Accord and Satisfaction Must Be Pleaded

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Accord and Satisfaction Must Be Pleaded

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 11 ACCORD AND SATISFACTION
PART I. INTRODUCTION

1-11 California Points & Authorities § 11.01

§ 11.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter contains forms for use in supporting [see §§ 11.20 -11.26] and opposing [see §§ 11.27 -11.31] the contention that an obligation sued on was extinguished by accord and satisfaction.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 11 ACCORD AND SATISFACTION
PART I. INTRODUCTION

1-11 California Points & Authorities § 11.02

§ 11.02 Governing Statutes

Accord and satisfaction are governed by Civ. Code §§ 1521-1526. Accord and satisfaction when accomplished by tender of a check or draft in full satisfaction of a disputed debt is governed by both Civ. Code § 1526 and Com. Code § 3311. Com. Code § 1308, which governs reservation of rights in other contracts under the Commercial Code, specifies that it does not apply to an accord and satisfaction.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Commercial Law (UCC)Negotiable Instruments (Article 3)Discharge & PaymentPaymentCommercial Law (UCC)Negotiable Instruments (Article 3)General Provisions & DefinitionsDefinitionsChecksContracts LawPerformanceAccord & Satisfaction

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 11 ACCORD AND SATISFACTION
PART I. INTRODUCTION

1-11 California Points & Authorities § 11.03

§ 11.03 Setting Aside Accord

An accord and satisfaction may be set aside on the grounds of mistake [see, e.g., Bldg. Serv. Emp. Pension Tr. v. Amer. Bldg. Maint. (9th Cir. 1987) 828 F.2d 576, 578 (applying California law)]. For points and authorities relating to mistake as a basis for rescission, see Ch. 92, Duress, Menace, Fraud, Undue Influence, and Mistake .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Contracts LawDefensesAmbiguity & MistakeGeneral OverviewContracts LawPerformanceAccord & Satisfaction

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 11 ACCORD AND SATISFACTION
PART I. INTRODUCTION

1-11 California Points & Authorities § 11.04

§ 11.04 Use of This Chapter

The forms in this chapter set forth substantive authorities supporting and opposing the contention that an obligation has been extinguished by an accord and satisfaction. They may be included as part of a memorandum or in a trial or appellate brief. For discussion of how to use the forms in this chapter to draft a memorandum or a trial or appellate brief, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

The forms in this chapter may be used when an accord and satisfaction has been asserted as an affirmative defense to claims arising from tort or breach of contract. Generally, defendant must specially plead the defense in the answer [Berger v. Lane (1923) 190 Cal. 443, 213 P. 45 ; see § 11.31]. There are, however, certain exceptions [Russell v. Riley & Peterson (1927) 82 Cal. App. 728, 256 P. 557 ; Ramos v. City of Santa Clara (1973) 35 Cal. App. 3d 93, 110 Cal. Rptr. 485 ; see § 11.25] to this general rule. Furthermore, the court may allow an answer to be amended if defendant does not fall within the exceptions and fails to specially plead the defense [Ramos v. City of Santa Clara (1973) 35 Cal. App. 3d 93, 110 Cal. Rptr. 485 ; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 472, 473]. The forms may also be used by defendant in support of a general demurrer to a complaint [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10(e), 430.20(a)] when the complaint shows on its face that the obligation sued on has been extinguished by an accord and satisfaction. They may be used in support of or in opposition to a motion for summary judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c] on the ground that the action has no merit because the undisputed facts show that the obligation sued on has been extinguished by an accord and satisfaction. Other procedures in which the forms can be used are on motion for new trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657] and on a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict [Code Civ. Proc. § 629].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeContent & FormCivil ProcedureAppealsBriefsCommercial Law (UCC)Negotiable Instruments (Article 3)Discharge & PaymentPaymentContracts LawPerformanceAccord & Satisfaction

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 11 ACCORD AND SATISFACTION
PART I. INTRODUCTION

1-11 California Points & Authorities § 11.05

§ 11.05 Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a discussion and forms for use in actions involving accord and satisfaction generally, and for a discussion of the distinction between accord and satisfaction and other affirmative defenses, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 6, Accord and Satisfaction (Matthew Bender). For a discussion and forms for affirmative defenses based on modification, novation, rescission, or lack of one of the essential elements of a contract, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 140, Contracts (Matthew Bender). For a discussion and forms for affirmative defenses based on release, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 520, Settlement and Release (Matthew Bender). For a discussion and forms relating to amendment of pleadings, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 21, Amended and Supplemental Pleadings (Matthew Bender).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsAffirmative DefensesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeContent & FormCivil ProcedureAppealsBriefsContracts LawPerformanceAccord & SatisfactionContracts LawPerformanceNovation

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 11 ACCORD AND SATISFACTION
PART I. INTRODUCTION

1-11 California Points & Authorities § 11.06

§ 11.06 Related Points and Authorities Chapters

For points and authorities relating to actions for breach of contract and to defenses to the formation and enforcement of a contract generally, see Ch. 50, Contracts . For points and authorities relating to the enforcement of an accord agreement generally, see Ch. 214, Specific Performance . For a discussion and forms relating to amendment of pleadings, see Ch. 16, Amended and Supplemental Pleadings .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeContent & FormContracts LawBreachGeneral OverviewContracts LawPerformanceAccord & SatisfactionContracts LawRemediesSpecific Performance

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 11 ACCORD AND SATISFACTION
PART I. INTRODUCTION

1-11 California Points & Authorities §§ 11.07-11.19

[Reserved]

§§ 11.07[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 11 ACCORD AND SATISFACTION
PART II. FORMS

1-11 California Points & Authorities § 11.20

§ 11.20 Supporting Contention That the Obligation Sued on Was Extinguished by Accord and Satisfaction [Civ. Code § 1521 et seq.]--General Form

[1] FORM Supporting Contention That the Obligation Sued on Was Extinguished by Accord and Satisfaction [Civ. Code § 1521 et seq.]--General Form

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE OBLIGATION SUED ON WAS EXTINGUISHED BY ACCORD AND SATISFACTION.

A. Accord and Satisfaction Extinguishes Original Obligation. Acceptance of the consideration of an accord by the creditor extinguishes the obligation and is called satisfaction (Civ. Code § 1523; see also B. & W. Engineering Co. v. Beam (1913) 23 Cal. App. 164, 170, 137 P. 624).

B. Accord Defined. An accord is an agreement to accept, in extinction of an obligation, something different from or less than that to which the person agreeing to accept is entitled (Civ. Code § 1521; Thompson v. Williams (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 566, 571, 259 Cal. Rptr. 518).

C. Accord for Performance or Promise. The terms of the accord may provide either for the performance of an act or the giving of a promise as the consideration for the extinction of the existing obligation (Silvers v. Grossman (1920) 183 Cal. 696, 699, 192 P. 534 ; Everhardy v. Union Finance Co. (1931) 115 Cal. App. 460, 463, 1 P.2d 1024).

[Optional] D. Accord May Be Implied. The agreement of an accord and satisfaction need not be express, but may be implied from the circumstances (Lapp-Gifford Co. v. Muscoy Water Co. (1913) 166 Cal. 25, 32, 134 P. 989 ; Thompson v. Williams (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 566, 571, 259 Cal. Rptr. 518 ; Rankin v. Miller (1960) 179 Cal. App. 2d 133, 139, 3 Cal. Rptr. 496).

[When appropriate, counsel should add points and authorities relating to a particular type of accord and satisfaction (see §§ 11.21 -11.24) and/or points and authorities supporting the contention that the party asserting an accord and satisfaction is excused from specially pleading it (see § 11.25).]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the obligation sued on was extinguished by accord and satisfaction. This form may be used alone or combined with points and authorities relating to a specific type of accord and satisfaction [see §§ 11.21 -11.24].

The argument supported by these points and authorities may be raised by plaintiff in an action to cancel a lien on his or her property if the obligation that was secured by the lien on the property was extinguished by an accord and satisfaction. It may also be raised by defendant as an affirmative defense in an action for damages in tort or for breach of contract.

These points and authorities may be combined, when appropriate, with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue of the extinction of an obligation by accord and satisfaction. If used as an affirmative defense, the accord and satisfaction should generally be specially pleaded in the answer [see § 11.31], but there are exceptions [see § 11.25] to this general rule. The points and authorities set forth in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Counsel should show an agreement supported by consideration to accept something different from, or less than, the original obligation and execution of such an agreement.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a discussion and forms for use in accord and satisfaction generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 6, Accord and Satisfaction (Matthew Bender). For a discussion and forms for affirmative defenses based on modification, novation, rescission or lack of one of the essential elements of a contract, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 140, Contracts (Matthew Bender). For a discussion and forms for affirmative defenses based on payment and settlement and release, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 385, Negotiable Instruments , and Ch. 520, Settlement and Release ; respectively.

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For points and authorities relating to actions for breach of contract and for defenses to the formation and enforcement of a contract generally, see Ch. 50, Contracts . For points and authorities relating to the enforcement of an accord agreement generally, see Ch. 214, Specific Performance .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

For points and authorities attacking the validity of the accord agreement generally, see §§ 11.27 and 11.28.

For points and authorities opposing the contention that the original obligation was extinguished because the accord was not executed, see § 11.30.

For points and authorities opposing the contention that the obligation was extinguished by an accord and satisfaction because the defense was not specially pleaded, see § 11.31.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Accord and Satisfaction Extinguishes Original Obligation

In B. & W. Engineering Co. v. Beam (1913) 23 Cal. App. 164, 137 P. 624 , plaintiff sought to recover the balance of a sum of money alleged to be due on a contract to clear land from defendants. This contract was entered into between plaintiff's assignor and Beam. The contract called for payment of actual cost of work done plus 15 percent commission. Plaintiff alleged the actual cost to be $1,411. Defendants disputed and refused to pay the claim upon the grounds that the contract covenanted that the actual cost of the work would not exceed $1,000 and that the charge for actual work, as made by plaintiff's assignor, included the cost of work and labor not called for by the contract. Defendants sent plaintiff a check for $1,070 with the endorsement "in full settlement of this bill" (23 Cal. App. 164). Plaintiff accepted and cashed the check, used the proceeds, and then sued for the remainder owed under the contract. The action was defended, inter alia, on the ground that the obligation was extinguished by accord and satisfaction. The trial court gave judgment to defendants. Plaintiff appealed on the ground that the evidence did not support the findings on the issue of accord and satisfaction.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment. The court held that the endorsement on the check given to plaintiff clearly showed that plaintiff had full knowledge that the check was given and receipted in full settlement and satisfaction of all claims arising out of the contract in suit (23 Cal. App. 164, 169). The court said that accord and satisfaction means the substitution of a new agreement for, and in satisfaction of, a preexisting agreement between the same parties. It is an agreement whereby one of two parties having a right of action against the other upon a claim arising out of an existing agreement, agrees to accept from the other party something in satisfaction of that right of action different from, and usually less than, that which might be recovered upon the original obligation. The court held that the effect of such an agreement, when executed, was to extinguish the antecedent liability (23 Cal. App. 164, 170).

[b] Accord Defined

The court of appeal in Thompson v. Williams (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 566, 259 Cal. Rptr. 518 , affirmed the trial court's judgment based on a summary judgment in favor of defendant. The award and affirmance were based on a finding that the parties had performed an accord and satisfaction. The court stated that in order to establish the defense of accord and satisfaction defendant must prove that (1) a bona fide dispute existed between the parties, (2) the debtor made clear that the tender was subject to the condition that it be in full satisfaction of the creditor's unliquidated claim, and (3) the creditor clearly understood when accepting the tender that it constituted payment in full of the particular claim in issue. A writing is not essential to an accord and satisfaction, but may be implied (211 Cal. App. 3d 566, 571).

[c] Accord for Performance or Promise

In Silvers v. Grossman (1920) 183 Cal. 696, 192 P. 534 , plaintiff sued to recover damages for injuries received in an automobile accident caused by defendant's negligence. As an affirmative defense, defendant pleaded that plaintiff had agreed in writing to accept $50 in full satisfaction of all claims, and that the money was tendered but plaintiff refused to accept it. The trial court gave judgment for the defendant, finding an accord and satisfaction in plaintiff's promise to accept the $50.

The Supreme Court reversed the judgment. The Court held that the defense of accord and satisfaction was subject to a general demurrer because it was not specially pleaded, and that the trial court's error in overruling the demurrer was prejudicial to plaintiff (183 Cal. 696, 702). The Court further held that the terms of an accord may provide for either the performance of an act or the giving of a promise as the consideration for the extinction of the existing obligation, but that if the promise per se is relied upon, the giving and acceptance of the promise in satisfaction of the preexisting obligation must be averred in the pleadings (183 Cal. 696, 699). The Court found that nowhere in the answer was there an averment of any agreement to accept, in satisfaction of the claim, defendant's mere promise to pay (183 Cal. 696, 700), and that it did not appear from the face of the instrument of agreement whether the claim was actually released in consideration of the promise per se, or whether the agreement was preliminary in nature (183 Cal. 696, 700-701). Therefore, a finding that there was an accord and satisfaction was not supported by the pleadings, and the Court instructed the trial court to sustain the demurrer to defendant's defense with leave to amend (183 Cal. 696, 703).

Everhardy v. Union Finance Co. (1931) 115 Cal. App. 460, 1 P.2d 1024 , was an action for money had and received and for conversion. Defendant alleged that an obligation to deliver 400 shares of stock was extinguished by plaintiff's acceptance of 100 shares of stock and a promise to issue 300 shares when they became available. The trial court held that this was an accord and satisfaction. Plaintiff appealed the trial court's judgment, and the court of appeal affirmed. The appellate court held that the fact that plaintiff received and retained the stock and written promise for a number of months without objection, that she called and thanked defendant's president for their issuance and delivery to her, together with the fact that she told the defendant's secretary that the issuance of the stock to her was all that she wanted, was amply sufficient to support the findings of the trialcourt that plaintiff intended to accept the 100 shares and the promise as a complete accord and satisfaction of the former demand for the 400 shares of capital stock (115 Cal. App. 460, 466).

[d] Accord May Be Implied

Lapp-Gifford Co. v. Muscoy Water Co. (1913) 166 Cal. 25, 134 P. 989 , was an action to recover a balance due upon a contract. Defendant asserted the affirmative defense of accord and satisfaction. Defendant sent plaintiff a check accompanied by a letter that explained that the check represented final payment for work done under the contract. Defendant claimed an accord and satisfaction was effectuated when plaintiff cashed the check. The trial court found that there was no accord and satisfaction and gave judgment for plaintiff.

On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed the judgment. The Court held that an essential element of an accord and satisfaction by tender of a check was that the tender be subject to the condition that an acceptance of the check would be a satisfaction of the obligation in full (166 Cal. 25, 27). The Court found that defendant's letter, accompanying the check, did not state, in clear and unequivocal terms, that the sum tendered was offered as a full settlement (166 Cal. 25, 27-28). The Court said that the term "final payment" could reasonably be construed here to refer to another payment due under the contract, and it found that the check itself contained nothing to indicate that it was intended to operate as a payment in full (166 Cal. 25, 28). The Court cited with approval the opinion of the court of appeal that stated that an accord and satisfaction is the result of an agreement between the parties consummated by a meeting of the minds of the parties, accompanied by sufficient consideration. It stated that the agreement need not be express, but may be implied from circumstances, and that the intention of the parties must be determined from all the circumstances attending the transaction (166 Cal. 25, 32). In this case, the Court found that the evidence justified the trial court's finding that the tender of the check was not subject to the condition that an acceptance of the check would be a satisfaction in full (166 Cal. 25, 28, 33).

See Thompson v. Williams (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 566, 571, 259 Cal. Rptr. 518 , discussed in § 11.20[3][b].

Rankin v. Miller (1960) 179 Cal. App. 2d 133, 3 Cal. Rptr. 496 , was an action to recover money owed under an agreement. The agreement provided that plaintiff would receive a commission on the sale of defendant's property. Defendant conveyed the property without giving plaintiff his commission. Plaintiff filed suit. Defendant then reacquired the property and offered plaintiff a second exclusive contract to sell it in exchange for dropping the suit. Plaintiff refused to drop the suit but accepted the exclusive contract and subsequently, the property was sold and plaintiff was given a commission. Defendant asserted that this was an accord and satisfaction extinguishing the original obligation. The trial court found that there was an accord and satisfaction and gave judgment for defendant. Plaintiff appealed, and the court of appeal affirmed the judgment.

The court of appeal held that an agreement embodying an accord and satisfaction need not be an express agreement, but may be implied from circumstances. The court said than an inference that an agreement was made may be based upon proof of conduct as well as on proof of words, and that the inference to be drawn from the conduct of a person may prevail over the person's statements that are inconsistent with that conduct. The court found that the plaintiff, by his conduct, acquiesced in the desire expressed by the defendant that an accord be reached and that the controversy be settled by the plaintiff's receipt of compensation upon a sale under the new listing, despite his words to the contrary (179 Cal. App. 2d 133, 139).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 11 ACCORD AND SATISFACTION
PART II. FORMS

1-11 California Points & Authorities § 11.21

§ 11.21 Supporting Contention That the Obligation Sued on Was Extinguished by Accord and Satisfaction [Civ. Code § 1521 et seq.]--Partial Payment of Disputed Amount [Civ. Code § 1526(a); Com. Code § 3311]

[1] FORM Supporting Contention That the Obligation Sued on Was Extinguished by Accord and Satisfaction [Civ. Code § 1521 et seq.]--Partial Payment of Disputed Amount [Civ. Code § 1526(a); Com. Code § 3311]

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief. It should be combined with a general form, supporting the contention that the obligation sued on was extinguished by accord and satisfaction (see § 11.20)].

THE OBLIGATION SUED ON WAS EXTINGUISHED BY ACCORD AND SATISFACTION BECAUSE THE OBLIGATION WAS DISPUTED AND THE CREDITOR ACCEPTED PAYMENT OF A SUM LESS THAN THE DISPUTED AMOUNT AS FULL SATISFACTION OF THE ORIGINAL OBLIGATION.

A. Partial Payment of Disputed Amount Extinguishes Original Obligation. When the amount due is in dispute and an agreement has been reached to accept a lesser sum as full payment, and that agreement is fully executed by the payment and acceptance of the lesser sum, the original obligation is extinguished (B. & W. Engineering Co. v. Beam (1913) 23 Cal. App. 164, 175, 137 P. 624).

B. Test for Dispute. It does not matter whether there is a solid foundation for the dispute; the test is whether the dispute is honest or fraudulent (Potter v. Pacific Coast Lumber Co. (1951) 37 Cal. 2d 592, 597, 234 P.2d 16 ; Thompson v. Williams (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 566, 573, 259 Cal. Rptr. 518).

[EITHER]

[Optional] C. Accord and Satisfaction Evidenced by Check. When there is a disputed or unliquidated claim, and the debtor tenders the creditor a check or draft notated with the words "payment in full" or words of similar meaning, in settlement in full discharge of the claim, the creditor's acceptance of the check ordraft constitutes an accord and satisfaction unless the creditor protests by striking out or otherwise deleting the notation or unless acceptance was inadvertent or without knowledge of the notation (Civ. Code § 1526(a); see Potter v. Pacific Coast Lumber Co. (1951) 37 Cal. 2d 592, 597-599, 234 P.2d 16 (notation on accompanying voucher)).

[OR]

[Optional] C. Discharge by Tender of Negotiable Instrument. If a person against whom a claim is asserted proves that (1) that person in good faith tendered an instrument to the claimant as full satisfaction of the claim, (2) the amount of the claim was unliquidated or subject to a bona fide dispute, and (3) the claimant obtained payment of the instrument [and did not tender repayment within 90 days after the instrument was paid], unless Commercial Code Section 3311(c)(1) applies, the claim is discharged if the person against whom the claim is asserted proves that the instrument or an accompanying written communication contained a conspicuous statement to the effect that the instrument was tendered as full satisfaction of the claim (Com. Code § 3311(a), (b), (c)(2)).

[CONTINUE]

[Optional] D. Accord and Satisfaction by Check Not Abrogated by Commercial Code Section 1308. The rule that acceptance of a check tendered in full satisfaction of a debt will act as an accord and satisfaction has not been abrogated by Commercial Code Section 1308, which provides that a party who, with explicit reservation of rights, assents to performance in a manner demanded or offered by the other party does not thereby prejudice the rights reserved (Com. Code § 1308(b); see Connecticut Printers, Inc. v. Gus Kroesen, Inc. (1982) 134 Cal. App. 3d 54, 57-61, 184 Cal. Rptr. 436).

[Optional] E. Creditor's Denial of Intention Ineffective. When a claim is disputed or unliquidated and the tender of a check or draft in settlement of the claim notifies the creditor that the check must be accepted in full discharge of the claim or not at all, the retention and use of that check or draft, other than inadvertently, and without striking out or otherwise deleting the notice on the check that it is intended as full settlement, constitutes an accord and satisfaction; it is immaterial that the creditor protests in any other manner against accepting the tender in full payment (Civ. Code § 1526(a); Potter v. Pacific Coast Lumber Co. (1951) 37 Cal. 2d 592, 597, 234 P.2d 16 ; Thompson v. Williams (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 566, 575, 259 Cal. Rptr. 518).

[Optional] F. Creditor or Its Appropriate Agent Knew of Tender. A claim is discharged if the person against whom the claim is asserted proves that within a reasonable time before collection of the instrument was initiated, the claimant, or an agent of the claimant having direct responsibility with respect to the disputed obligation, knew that the instrument was tendered in full satisfaction of the claim (Com. Code § 3311(d)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the obligation sued on was extinguished by an accord and satisfaction because partial payment was made of a disputed obligation and accepted by the creditor as satisfaction in full. This form should be combined with the general form, supporting the contention that the obligation was extinguished by an accord and satisfaction [see Civ. Code § 1526(a), Com. Code § 3311; see also § 11.20]. The form may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.

The argument supported by these points and authorities may be raised by plaintiff in an action to cancel a lien on his or her property because the obligation that was secured by lien on the property was extinguished by an accord and satisfaction. It may also be raised by defendant as an affirmative defense in an action for damages in tort or for breach of contract.

These points and authorities may be combined, when appropriate, with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue of the extinction of an obligation by accord and satisfaction.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Counsel should show that there was a bona fide dispute as to the amount due under the original obligation. Counsel may show this by demonstrating that there was an honest disagreement over the amount due. Counsel should show that there was an agreement between the parties to accept a lesser payment in satisfaction of the original obligation, and that the lesser sum was paid. This can be done by showing that the obligee gave the obligor a check for a sum less than the disputed original claim on which the words "payment in full" or other words of similar meaning were notated, and that the creditor, knowing of the notation, accepted the check as full satisfaction by cashing the check without striking out the notation that it was tendered in full settlement [see Civ. Code § 1526(a)].

[b] Tender by Check

Two separate provisions govern the tender of checks in full satisfaction of disputed or unliquidated claims: Civ. Code § 1526(a) and Com. Code § 3311 (alternative Optional Paragraphs C). Although arguably the debtor has a greater burden of proof under Com. Code § 3311, especially if the creditor is an organization, the creditor's act of striking out the notation before it negotiates the check will defeat a claim of accord and satisfaction under Civ. Code § 1526(a).The parallel provision under Com. Code § 3311(c)(2) states that, subject to Com. Code § 3311(d) (Paragraph F), the creditor can "undo" the accord and satisfaction by tendering repayment within 90 days after it collected the check [Com. Code § 3311(c)(2)]. This repayment option is not available to a creditor that is an organization which, within a reasonable time before the tender, notified the debtor to send communications concerning disputed debts to a designated person, office, or place [Com. Code § 3311(c)(2)]. Nor is it available, if, before collecting the check, the creditor or its appropriate agent knew the tender was intended as full satisfaction (Paragraph F) [Com. Code § 3311(d)]. Com. Code § 3311 is slightly broader in that it applies to tender of any instrument, while Civ. Code § 1526(a) applies only to checks and drafts. Thus, counsel must chose whichever statute provides the best result in each particular case.

In addition, counsel must evaluate the particular facts of the case bearing on the issue of whether the creditor knew at the time it negotiated the check or instrument that it was intended by the debtor to constitute full payment. Com. Code § 3311(c), (d) and Civ. Code § 1526(a) each address this issue in their own ways [see first alternative Paragraph C, Paragraphs E and F, and § 11.28]. When the creditor is an organization and proves that within a reasonable time before the tender, it sent a conspicuous statement to the debtor that communications concerning disputed debts, including tenders of instruments as full satisfaction of a debt, are to be sent to a designated person, office, or place, the disputed debt will not be discharged unless the instrument or accompanying communication was received by that designated person, office, or place [Com. Code § 3311(c)(1); see § 11.28]. If the particular situation involves such a notice, and the debtor did not send the check to the person, place, or office specified in the notice, but can prove that the creditor, or an agent of the creditor having direct responsibility with respect to the disputed obligation, knew that the instrument was tendered in full satisfaction of the claim before it started collection of the instrument, an accord and satisfaction can still be established under Com. Code § 3311(d) (Paragraph F).

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a discussion and forms for use in actions involving accord and satisfaction generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 6, Accord and Satisfaction (Matthew Bender).

For a discussion and forms for affirmative defenses based on modification, novation, rescission, or lack of one of the essential elements of a contract, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 140, Contracts (Matthew Bender).

For a discussion and forms for an affirmative defense based on release, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 520, Settlement and Release (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For points and authorities relating to actions for breach of contract and for defenses to the formation and enforcement of a contract generally, see Ch. 50, Contracts . For points and authorities relating to the enforcement of an accord agreement generally, see Ch. 214, Specific Performance .

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

For points and authorities opposing the validity of the accord agreement generally, see §§ 11.27 -11.29.

For points and authorities opposing the contention that the original obligation has been extinguished because the accord was not executed, see § 11.30.

For points and authorities opposing the contention that the obligation was extinguished by an accord and satisfaction on the ground that the defense was not specially pleaded, see § 11.31.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Partial Payment of Disputed Amount Extinguishes Original Obligation

The facts and procedural background of B. & W. Engineering Co. v. Beam (1913) 23 Cal. App. 164, 137 P. 624 , are discussed in § 11.20[3][a]. The court of appeal in affirming the trial court's judgment for defendants stated the rule governing accord and satisfaction to be that when an agreement to accept in full payment a sum less than the amount in dispute has been shown to have been fully executed by the payment and acceptance of the lesser sum, the original obligation is thereby extinguished (23 Cal. App. 164, 175). The court held that the defendants had demonstrated an accord and satisfaction by their tender of a conditional check, for a sum less than the amount in dispute, and plaintiff's use of the check. Therefore, the original obligation was extinguished (23 Cal. App. 164, 169).

[b] Test for Dispute

In Potter v. Pacific Coast Lumber Co. (1951) 37 Cal. 2d 592, 234 P.2d 16 , a plaintiff sought to recover the alleged balance due under contracts for the sale of three carloads of lumber. Plaintiff contended that defendants were to pay for all shipping charges since the contract read "F.O.B. mill." Defendants contended that they were only to pay shipping from Portland to the destination. In remitting for the shipments, defendants mailed a check or draft, attached to which was a voucher identifying the shipment for which payment was intended and setting forth the amount of the corresponding invoice, with deductions noted. Printed at the top of each such voucher was the notation, "Payment of sight draft attachedhereto is accepted in full settlement of account stated below, and endorsement thereof will constitute payee's receipt." Plaintiff cashed the checks or drafts after calling defendants and protesting. Plaintiff later wrote defendants seeking additional payments. Defendants pleaded an accord and satisfaction as an affirmative defense to plaintiff's suit to recover any money allegedly due under the contract. The trial court rejected the defense and gave judgment for plaintiff. Defendants appealed, and the Supreme Court reversed the trial court's judgment.

The Court found that there was a dispute between the parties as to defendants' obligation for the shipping charges of the lumber (37 Cal. 2d 592, 598). In so holding, the Court said that it did not matter that there was no solid foundation for the dispute, since the test was whether the dispute was honest or fraudulent (37 Cal. 2d 592, 597).

The facts and procedural background of Thompson v. Williams (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 566, 259 Cal. Rptr. 518 , are discussed in § 11.21[3][f]. In affirming a judgment for defendant based on an accord and satisfaction of a disputed referral fee, the court of appeal cited the passage from Potter v. Pacific Coast Lumber Co. (1951) 37 Cal. 2d 592, 234 P.2d 16 , that it matters not that there is no solid foundation for the dispute because the test is whether the dispute is honest or fraudulent (211 Cal. App. 3d 566, 573). Here, there was no evidence that the dispute between the parties was fraudulent (211 Cal. App. 3d 566, 573).

[c] Accord and Satisfaction Evidenced by Check

The facts and procedural background of Potter v. Pacific Coast Lumber Co. (1951) 37 Cal. 2d 592, 234 P.2d 16 , are discussed in § 11.21[3][b]. In Potter, the Supreme Court reversed the trial court's judgment for plaintiff. The Supreme Court said that the trial court, by rejecting defendants' plea of accord and satisfaction, had found that the voucher attached to each check by defendant company did not inform plaintiff that the check was intended as full payment of the disputed claim and that the plaintiff did not accept the checks as full settlement of the amount due by endorsing them or depositing them for collection. The Court held that these findings were improper when a claim is disputed or unliquidated and the tender of a check or draft in settlement of the claim notified the creditor that the check must be accepted in full discharge of his or her claim or not at all, the retention and use of the check or draft constitute an accord and satisfaction. The law permits a creditor in that situation two alternatives: either reject the tender or accept it in accordance with the condition (37 Cal. 2d 592, 597). In this case, the Court found that the claim was disputed; that the condition imposed upon plaintiff's acceptance of the checks or drafts was clear and unequivocal that payment was intended as full satisfaction of the disputed account; and that plaintiff so understood the explicit terms of the proffered settlement. Therefore, the Court held that plaintiff's acceptance, endorsement, and cashing of the checks or drafts was an acceptance of the condition and amounted to an agreement that the claims be thereby compromised and settled (37 Cal. 2d 592, 598-599, 603).

[d] Discharge by Tender of Negotiable Instrument

Com. Code § 3311 was added by Stats. 1992, ch. 914, § 6. "Instrument" within the meaning of Division 3 of the Commercial Code means negotiable instrument, which includes checks, drafts, notes, money orders, cashier's check, teller's check, traveler's checks, demand draft, and all other unconditional promises or orders to pay a fixed amount of money [Com. Code § 3104]. Thus, this alternative may be available when the instrument is not a check or draft, which are the only ones addressed by Civ. Code § 1526.

Com. Code § 3311(a) and (b) provide the basic criteria for discharge. However, if an institutional creditor ("claimant" in Commercial Code parlance) had previously notified the debtor to address correspondence regarding the obligation to a particular person, office, or place, no accord will result unless the tender was made to that person, office, or place [Com. Code § 3311(c)(1); see § 11.28], or that person or some other appropriate agent of the creditor knew of the tender [Com. Code § 3311(d); see Optional Paragraph F].

Com. Code § 3311(c)(2) provides that the obligation is not discharged if the claimant, whether or not an organization, proves that within 90 days after payment of the instrument, the claimant tendered repayment of the amount of the instrument to the person against whom the claim is asserted. However, this paragraph does not apply if the claimant is an organization that sent a statement complying with subparagraph (A) of paragraph (1), set forth in § 11.28. In addition, subdivision (c) is subject to subdivision (d) [Paragraph F]. Thus, this repayment exception will not apply if the debtor can establish that the creditor or its appropriate agent knew of the tender. If the creditor did tender repayment, counsel should omit the bracketed phrase in the second Optional Paragraph C and use Paragraph F as well.

[e] Accord and Satisfaction by Check Not Abrogated by Commercial Code Section 1308

The Commercial Code provides that a party that with explicit reservation of rights performs or promises performance or assents to performance in a manner demanded or offered by the other party does not thereby prejudice the rights reserved [Com. Code § 1308(a)]; however, this does not apply to an accord and satisfaction [Com. Code § 1308(b)].

Subdivision (a) of Com. Code § 1308 was originally enacted as Com. Code § 1207. Until the exception in subdivision (b) was added in 1992, Connecticut Printers, Inc. v. Gus. Kroesen, Inc. (1982) 134 Cal. App. 3d 54, 184 Cal. Rptr. 436 , was the only California case to consider whether former Com. Code § 1207 abrogated the common law rule stated in Potter v. Pacific Coast Lumber Co. (1951) 37 Cal. 2d 592, 234 P.2d 16 [see Paragraph C].

In Connecticut Printers, Inc. v. Gus Kroesen, Inc. (1982) 134 Cal. App. 3d 54, 184 Cal. Rptr. 436 , plaintiff sought to recover interest due and owing on a debt. Defendant tendered a check to plaintiff notated as representing payment in full for all obligations owed by defendant. Defendant claimed that plaintiff's deposit of the check was an acceptance that constituted an accord and satisfaction. Plaintiff claimed its intent not to accept the check as full payment was designated by a notation on the check that payment was accepted without prejudice and subject to final determination of amount due, in accordance with former Com. Code § 1207, and therefore deposit of the check did not constitute an accord and satisfaction. The trial court granted summary judgment for defendant, and plaintiff appealed. The court of appeal reversed.

The court of appeal reversed the summary judgment and remanded the case for further proceedings. The court found that former Com. Code § 1207, which provided that a party who with explicit reservation of rights assents to performance in a manner offered by the other party does not thereby prejudice the rights reserved, did not abrogate the common law rule stated in Potter v. Pacific Coast Lumber Co. (1951) 37 Cal. 2d 592, 597, 234 P.2d 16 (discussed in § 11.21[3][c]), that when a claim is disputed or unliquidated and the tender of a check or draft in settlement of the claim is of such character as to give the creditor notice that it must be accepted in full discharge of the claim or not at all, retention and use of that check or draft constitute an accord and satisfaction, and it is immaterial that the creditor protests against accepting the tender in full payment (134 Cal. App. 3d 54, 57, 61). The court reasoned that principles of law and equity apply unless explicitly displaced by particular provisions of the Commercial Code. The common law rule regarding accord and satisfaction was not explicitly displaced by former Com. Code § 1207 because that section related to contracts generally and the common law rule relates only to checks or draft tendered in full settlement of creditor's claim (134 Cal. App. 3d 54, 58). The court observed, however, that the rule of the Potter case applies only when there is a bona fide dispute between the parties and that the record in this case was insufficient to determine whether there was a bona fide dispute. The court therefore remanded the case to the trial court for resolution of that issue and for any other appropriate further proceedings (134 Cal. App. 3d 54, 61).

[f] Creditor's Denial of Intention Ineffective

The facts and procedural background of Potter v. Pacific Coast Lumber Co. (1951) 37 Cal. 2d 592, 234 P.2d 16 , are discussed in § 11.21[3][b]. The Supreme Court, in reversing the trial court's decision, held that plaintiff's cashing of the conditional check extinguished the original obligation despite plaintiff's argument that the conduct of both parties after the receipt and cashing of the drafts indicated that neither of them intended that the prior acceptance by plaintiff of the drafts was in full settlement of the claim. Plaintiff pointed to his oral protests and letters seeking additional payment. The Court said that these simply show that plaintiff did not willingly assent to the condition of full settlement accompanying the three remittances, but the defendants remained firm in their intention that the checks be in full satisfaction of the claim (37 Cal. 2d 592, 599-600). The Court held that it is immaterial that the creditor protests against accepting the tendered check as full payment, for in that case the law permits but two alternatives: either reject or accept in accordance with the condition (37 Cal. 2d 592, 597).

Thompson v. Williams (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 566, 259 Cal. Rptr. 518 , was a dispute between attorneys over a referral fee. A contingency matter was settled and a $450,000 attorney's fee was paid to defendant. Plaintiff claimed $150,000, but defendant stated he would only pay $114,000. After having cashed two checks from defendant totaling $114,000, plaintiff sued defendant for the remainder. Judgment for defendant was affirmed. Plaintiff based the claim to the additional money on the fact that plaintiff and defendant discussed the payment of the remainder of the referral fee after plaintiff had cashed the two check, arguing that the subsequent conversations demonstrated that neither of the parties intended the payments to be in full satisfaction of plaintiff's claim. The court noted that plaintiff continued to refer cases to defendant and periodically raised the subject of the remainder due of the referral fee that was the subject of this action. Defendant's replies were always noncommittal, such as "we will see" or "I'll think about it." The court characterized plaintiff's repeatedly raising the subject as evidence that he continued to brood over the balance he felt was due him, and that defendant's replies evidenced an attempt not to antagonize a continuing referral source. The court cited Potter v. Pacific Coast Lumber (1951) 37 Cal. 2d 592, 599, 234 P.2d 16 , in concluding that nothing defendant said in response to plaintiff's doleful inquiries amounted to an acknowledgment of a continuing obligation or an admission that additional sums were due (211 Cal. App. 3d 566, 575).

[g] Creditor or Its Appropriate Agent Knew of Tender

Com. Code § 3311(c) is subject to Com. Code § 3311(d). Com. Code § 3311(d) is for use to establish discharge (1) against an organizational claimant that contends it had given the debtor notice to direct correspondence and payments regarding the obligation to a particular person, place, or office [see Com. Code § 3311(c)(1) (set forth in § 11.28)] and the debtor did not comply with that notice, or (2) when the creditor tendered repayment within 90 days after receiving payment of the check. Discharge can still be proved under Com. Code § 3311(d) if the debtor shows that the appropriate person within claimant's organization knew that the instrument was tendered in full satisfaction. The debtormust establish that the creditor or its agent knew of the tender before it initiated collection of the instrument.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Test for Dispute

The facts and procedural background of B. & W. Engineering Co. v. Beam (1913) 23 Cal. App. 164, 137 P. 624 , are discussed in § 11.20[3][a]. The court of appeal, in affirming the trial court's decision that the money paid to, and accepted by, defendant constituted an accord and satisfaction, held that there must be a bona fide dispute (23 Cal. App. 164, 170). The court said it was not required, however, that in order to validate an executed agreement of accord and satisfaction, such as in the present case, that the circumstances of the transaction upon which it is founded should affirmatively show that there was room for an honest dispute, and that it did not matter that there was no solid foundation for the dispute. The court held that the test was whether the dispute was honest or fraudulent. If honest, the court held that the dispute affords a basis for an accord between the parties, the execution of which is the satisfaction (23 Cal. App. 164, 170-171).

[b] Accord and Satisfaction Evidenced by Check

In California Bean Growers' Assn. v. Rindge L. & N. Co. (1926) 199 Cal. 168, 248 P. 658 , plaintiff brought an action to recover liquidated damages for breach of a marketing agreement. Defendant counter-claimed for the difference between the alleged value of his crop and the amount he received from plaintiff on account thereof. The trial court entered judgment for plaintiff, and defendant appealed. The Supreme Court held that the question of recoupment or damages to defendant could not be considered in this action because the account was settled by an accord and satisfaction (199 Cal. 168, 180). The Court found that after defendant complained that plaintiff's charges were excessive and demanded a settlement, plaintiff sent him two checks. The first, in November, was accompanied by a letter stating that the check represented, with a noted exception, a final settlement of defendant's account. The second, in February, covering the noted exception, was endorsed with the statement "this amount represents the final settlement of your account." Defendant cashed both checks. The Court held that this was sufficient to support the finding of the trial court to the effect that there was an account stated between the parties and an accord and satisfaction (199 Cal. 168, 181).

Creighton v. Gregory (1904) 142 Cal. 34, 75 P. 569 , was an action to recover the balance owed under a contract to purchase oranges. There was a dispute between the parties as to whether defendant was obligated to purchase unmerchantable oranges. The parties entered into an oral agreement, modifying the original contract, under which defendant would take the damaged oranges at a reduced rate. At time of payment, plaintiff refused to accept the lesser sum. Defendant subsequently sent a check to plaintiff for the lesser sum, which inadvertently was not signed. Plaintiff went to defendant, had him sign the check, then proceeded to cash the check and use the funds. The trial court held that this constituted an accord and satisfaction, extinguishing the original contract obligation.

The Supreme Court affirmed. It held that the admitted findings of facts showed that there was a dispute between the parties as to what was due under the contract, that there was an acceptance by plaintiff of less than that to which he was entitled, and that this acceptance extinguished the obligation and constituted satisfaction. The Court held that the intention of the parties must be determined from all the circumstances attending the transaction, and that the legal effect of the conduct of the parties was for the court to pronounce. The Court said that from the evidence it was reasonable to infer that defendant would not have parted with the check had plaintiff not led him to suppose that it ended their dealings under the contract (142 Cal. 34, 42).

Connecticut Printers, Inc. v. Gus Kroesen, Inc. (1982) 134 Cal. App. 3d 54, 184 Cal. Rptr. 436 , is discussed in § 11.21[3][e].

Besco Enterprises, Inc. v. Carole, Inc. (1969) 274 Cal. App. 2d 42, 78 Cal. Rptr. 645 , was an action to recover for merchandise that was returned to defendant. Defendant pleaded that an accord and satisfaction had extinguished any claims. The trial court held that there was an accord and satisfaction because defendant had tendered a check in an amount less than the amount in dispute on the condition that plaintiff accept it as payment in full, and plaintiff had retained the check. The court of appeal reversed, noting that cashing the check or its certification is an act of dominion sufficient to constitute an acceptance of the conditions and an accord and satisfaction. It said that when the check is retained for an unreasonable length of time without protest as to its being in full payment, even though uncashed, this also may constitute an accord and satisfaction (274 Cal. App. 2d 42, 44). In the present case, the plaintiff protested against the check being full payment and held it, but did not cash it. Based on these facts, the court refused to imply an accord and satisfaction on the rationale that there was no duty to return the check once notice of its refusal was given, unless such a return was demanded (274 Cal. App. 2d 42, 45).

[c] Creditor's Denial of Intention Ineffective

Acadia, California, Ltd. v. Herbert (1960) 54 Cal. 2d 328, 5 Cal. Rptr. 686, 353 P.2d 294 , was an action for damages and declaratory relief, arising out of defendant's failure to deliver water as called for under agreements modified by the acceptance of a conditional check. Defendant originally delivered pressurized water, but plaintiffs became dissatisfied with the amount of pressure and entered into negotiations with defendant to increase it. They offered to prepay waterrentals up to $1,000 to cover the installation of an additional tank. After defendant installed the second tank to increase the pressure, he requested a check from plaintiffs for payment. Plaintiffs sent one check which was refused, then sent another stating that its acceptance would confirm the understanding that the delivery of water with the then-existing facilities would be continued. Defendant cashed this check but contended that the original agreement was not modified thereby. The trial court gave judgment for plaintiff, and the Supreme Court affirmed.

The Court held that defendant's denial of an intention to modify the agreement was ineffective. The Court stated that when something to which the offeree is not unconditionally entitled is tendered to him upon stated conditions and he exercises dominion over it, he is bound by the conditions even though he informs the offeror that he rejects them. When he can rightfully exercise dominion over the thing tendered only if he accepts the conditions, he will not be permitted to avoid the conditions by asserting that his conduct was tortious. The Court held that since the check was tendered on condition that the delivery of household water pressurized by the improved facilities would be continued so as to insure an adequate water supply for plaintiffs, defendant's acceptance of the check bound him to give the service for which the check was intended (54 Cal. 2d 328, 336)

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 11 ACCORD AND SATISFACTION
PART II. FORMS

1-11 California Points & Authorities § 11.22

§ 11.22 Supporting Contention That the Obligation Sued on Was Extinguished by Accord and Satisfaction [Civ. Code § 1521 et seq.]--Something Different Accepted for Original Obligation

[1] FORM Supporting Contention That the Obligation Sued on Was Extinguished by Accord and Satisfaction [Civ. Code § 1521 et seq.]--Something Different Accepted for Original Obligation

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief. It should be combined with a general form, supporting the contention that the obligation sued on was extinguished by accord and satisfaction (see § 11.20).]

THE OBLIGATION SUED ON WAS EXTINGUISHED BY ACCORD AND SATISFACTION BECAUSE THE CREDITOR ACCEPTED SOMETHING DIFFERENT FROM THE ORIGINAL OBLIGATION AS FULL SATISFACTION FOR THE ORIGINAL OBLIGATION.

Accord and Satisfaction by Agreement to Accept Something Different. An agreement to accept something different from the original obligation, when performed, extinguishes the original obligation (Civ. Code §§ 1521, 1523; see also McAllister v. Drapeau (1939) 14 Cal. 2d 102, 111, 92 P.2d 911).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the obligation sued on was extinguished by an accord and satisfaction because the creditor accepted something different from the original obligation in full satisfaction of that obligation. This form should be combined with a general form, supporting the contention that the original obligation was extinguished by an accord and satisfaction [see § 11.20]. The points and authorities set forth in this form may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

The argument supported by these points and authorities may be raised by plaintiff in an action to cancel a lien on his or her property because the obligation that was secured by the lien was extinguished by an accord and satisfaction. It may also be raised by defendant as an affirmative defense in an action for damages in tort or for breach of contract.

These points and authorities may be combined, when appropriate, with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue of the extinction of an obligation by accord and satisfaction.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Counsel should show that the obligee offered, and the creditor accepted, something different from the original obligation in full satisfaction of the original obligation. The original obligation may be either disputed and unliquidated, or undisputed and liquidated [see B. & W. Engineering Co. v. Beam (1913) 23 Cal. App. 164, 170, 137 P. 624 ; McAllister v. Drapeau (1939) 14 Cal. 2d 102, 111, 92 P.2d 911]. The substitution of something different constitutes consideration for the accord [see San Juan v. St. John's Gas Co. (1904) 195 U.S. 510, 521, 25 S. Ct. 108, 49 L. Ed. 299].

Counsel should not confuse accord and satisfaction by agreement to accept something different in full satisfaction of the original obligation with a novation. The agreement between the parties resembles a novation [Civ. Code § 1531(1)] in that it consists of the substitution of a new obligation for the old one. The distinction is that the parties to an accord and satisfaction are bargaining for performance of the agreement and do not intend that the new agreement itself extinguish the obligation [see Gardiner v. Gaither (1958) 162 Cal. App. 2d 607, 620, 329 P.2d 22].

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a discussion and forms for use in accord and satisfaction generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 6, Accord and Satisfaction (Matthew Bender). For a discussion and forms for affirmative defenses based on modification, novation, rescission, or lack of one of the essential elements of a contract, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 140, Contracts (Matthew Bender). For a discussion and forms for an affirmative defense based on release, see Ch. 520, Settlement and Release . For a discussion and forms foraffirmative defenses based on settlement, see Ch. 385, Negotiable Instruments and Ch. 520, Settlement and Release , respectively.

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For points and authorities relating to actions for breach of contract and for defenses to the formation and enforcement of a contract generally, see Ch. 50, Contracts . For points and authorities relating to the enforcement of an accord agreement generally, see Ch. 214, Specific Performance .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

For points and authorities opposing the validity of the accord agreement generally, see § 11.27. For points and authorities opposing the validity of the accord agreement because there was no meeting of the minds of the parties, see § 11.28.

For points and authorities opposing the contention that the original obligation was extinguished because the accord was not executed, see § 11.30.

For points and authorities opposing the contention that the obligation was extinguished by an accord and satisfaction on the ground that the defense was not specially pleaded, see § 11.31.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Accord and Satisfaction by Agreement to Accept Something Different

McAllister v. Drapeau (1939) 14 Cal. 2d 102, 92 P.2d 911 , was an action to cancel a note and deed of trust and to recover the amounts paid thereunder. Plaintiffs borrowed $11,050 from defendants, signed a promissory note, and secured repayment on the note by giving a first deed of trust on their home. Owing $8,271, plaintiffs defaulted on the note. Since they were in imminent danger of losing their home property by foreclosure, they sought refinancing via the Home Owners Loan Corporation. The corporation offered defendants cash and bonds amounting to $5,850 for the deed of trust. Defendants told plaintiffs that they would accept this offer if plaintiffs executed a note for $1,300, secured by a second trust deed on their home property. Plaintiffs executed the note, then defendants signed an agreement with the corporation to accept the bonds and cash as full settlement of defendants' claim. After defendants received the bonds and cash, plaintiffs contended that their obligation on all notes and deeds of trust were extinguished by accord and satisfaction.

The trial court gave judgment for plaintiffs. Defendants appealed, and the court of appeal affirmed. The appellate court held that by signing the consent, defendants agreed to release their entire claim and that the unqualified agreement constituted a valid release and an accord and satisfaction (14 Cal. 2d 102, 111).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Accord and Satisfaction by Agreement to Accept Something Different

Treadwell v. Himmelmann (1875) 50 Cal. 9 , was an action to recover money owed on a promissory note. Defendant executed a written instrument for his promise to repay $1,000 that he had borrowed from plaintiff. At the time defendant signed the instrument, the parties orally agreed that defendant should procure to himself an assignment of liens against plaintiff's land in order to stop an action pending for payment of assessments secured by the liens. Defendant was to hold the liens and at plaintiff's election enforce the lien for plaintiff's benefit or allow the liens to expire. The procurement and holding of the liens was to fully satisfy the original obligation on the promissory note. Defendant obtained the liens and contended that since plaintiff did not elect to have them enforced before they expired, the accord was satisfied and the obligation to pay the $1,000 extinguished. The trial court refused to admit evidence as to the accord and satisfaction and gave judgment to plaintiff. The Supreme Court reversed and remanded the case for a new trial on the ground that the evidence was improperly excluded. The Court held that the legal effect of the oral agreement was, once the defendant had performed his part, to be regarded as payment in full (50 Cal. 9, 11).

Ransom v. Farish et al. (1854) 4 Cal. 386 , was an action to obtain an entry of satisfaction of a judgment and an injunction. Plaintiff contended that his obligation to satisfy a judgment requiring him to restore possession of property to defendant and pay $1,800 in damages for forcible entry and detainer was extinguished by an accord and satisfaction entered into between defendant and his cotortfeasor. After the original judgment was entered against plaintiff and cotortfeasor, defendant purchased the property from the cotortfeasor at under the market value and found a third party to indemnify his liability on the original judgment. The cotortfeasor promised not to appeal, and defendant promised not to prosecute him on the original judgment. The trial court found that these facts amounted to an accord and satisfaction, extinguishing plaintiff's liability on the original judgment and granted plaintiff an injunction. Defendants appealed. The Supreme Court affirmed, holding that the facts showed an accord and satisfaction of the entire judgment (4 Cal. 386, 387).

Morrison v. Landers (1943) 56 Cal. App. 2d 607, 133 P.2d 34 , was an action to cancel two promissory notes. Plaintiffs had purchased property from defendants and executed two notes securing repayment of the purchase price. One note was held by a bank and the other was held by defendants. Plaintiffs, having troublemaking the monthly payments on both notes, applied for a loan under the Home Owners' Loan Act. Under the Act, the Home Owners' Loan Corporation exchanged bonds for mortgages. Defendants consented to accept bonds and a lien for $740 in exchange for their note. In addition to receiving the bonds and lien from the corporation, defendants had plaintiffs sign two unsecured notes. The trial court gave judgment in favor of plaintiffs, canceling these notes executed by plaintiffs and directed that payments made thereon be credited against the lien. Defendants appealed, and the Supreme Court affirmed the judgment. The Court held the unsecured notes to be invalid. It found that there was an agreement by defendants with the Home Owners' Loan Corporation to accept a second lien and bonds in exchange for the note on plaintiffs' property. Since defendants received the bonds and lien, the Court held that this constituted an accord and satisfaction of all obligations of plaintiffs to defendants, and the debt could not be reinstated by the unsecured notes (56 Cal. App. 2d 607, 613-614).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 11 ACCORD AND SATISFACTION
PART II. FORMS

1-11 California Points & Authorities § 11.23

§ 11.23 Supporting Contention That the Obligation Sued on Was Extinguished by Accord and Satisfaction [Civ. Code § 1521 et seq.]--Part Performance of Liquidated Undisputed Claim

[1] FORM Supporting Contention That the Obligation Sued on Was Extinguished by Accord and Satisfaction [Civ. Code § 1521 et seq.]--Part Performance of Liquidated Undisputed Claim

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief. It should be combined with a general form, supporting the contention that the obligation sued on was extinguished by accord and satisfaction (see § 11.20).]

THE OBLIGATION SUED ON WAS EXTINGUISHED BY ACCORD AND SATISFACTION BECAUSE THE OBLIGOR GAVE PART PERFORMANCE OF THE LIQUIDATED AND UNDISPUTED OBLIGATION AS FULL SATISFACTION OF THE ORIGINAL OBLIGATION AND THE CREDITOR ACCEPTED IN WRITING.

A. Part Performance or Payment Accepted in Writing Extinguishes Debt. Part performance of an obligation, either before or after a breach thereof, when expressly accepted by the creditor in writing, in satisfaction, or rendered in pursuance of an agreement in writing for that purpose, though without new consideration, extinguishes the obligation (Civ. Code § 1524; Schwartz v. California Claim Service (1942) 52 Cal. App. 2d 47, 53-55, 125 P.2d 883).

B. Obligation Must Be Liquidated and Undisputed. Section 1524 of the Civil Code has reference only to an agreement of accord and satisfaction made in cases in which the obligation is neither doubtful nor disputed (B. & W. Engineering Co. v. Beam (1913) 23 Cal. App. 164, 175, 137 P 624).

C. Writing Required for Acceptance. The obligor's acceptance of an accord is required to be in writing in order to extinguish a liquidated claim (Schwartz v. California Claim Service (1942) 52 Cal. App. 2d 47, 53, 125 P.2d 883).

[Optional] D. Creditor's Written Acceptance Evidenced by Check. Endorsement of a check for a lesser amount, tendered as payment in full of a liquidated and undisputed claim, which bears an unequivocal endorsement that the creditor releases the debtor from any and all claims and which clearly states that the check is accepted as a complete discharge of the debt, has the effect of releasing the debtor from such claims and discharging the debt (Petroleum Collections Inc. v. Sulser (1968) 265 Cal. App. 2d Supp. 976, 976-979).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the obligation sued on was extinguished by an accord and satisfaction because partial performance of an undisputed, liquidated obligation was accepted by the creditor in writing as full satisfaction of the original obligation. This form should be combined with the general form, supporting the contention that the obligation was extinguished by an accord and satisfaction [see § 11.20]. The form may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.

The argument supported by these points and authorities may be raised by plaintiff in an action to cancel a lien on his or her property because the obligation that was secured by lien on the property was extinguished by an accord and satisfaction. It may also be raised by defendant as an affirmative defense in an action for damages in tort or for breach of contract.

These points and authorities may be combined, when appropriate, with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue of the extinction of an obligation by accord and satisfaction.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Counsel should show that the obligee partly performed the original obligation and that the creditor accepted this partial performance in writing as full satisfaction of the original obligation. The original obligation must be shown to be liquidated and undisputed.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a discussion and forms for use in accord and satisfaction generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 6, Accord and Satisfaction (Matthew Bender). For a discussion and forms for affirmative defenses based on modification, novation, rescission, or lack of one of the essential elements of a contract, see Ch. 140, Contracts , in that publication. For a discussion and formsfor an affirmative defense based on release, see Ch. 520, Settlement and Release . For a discussion and forms for affirmative defenses based on payment and settlement, see Ch. 385, Negotiable Instruments and Ch. 520, Settlement and Release , respectively.

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For points and authorities relating to actions for breach of contract and for defenses to the formation and enforcement of a contract generally, see Ch. 50, Contracts . For points and authorities relating to the enforcement of an accord agreement generally, see Ch. 214, Specific Performance .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

For points and authorities opposing the validity of the accord agreement generally, see § 11.27. For points and authorities opposing the validity of the accord agreement because there was no meeting of the minds of the parties, particularly if the creditor's acceptance was obtained by fraud or mistake, see § 11.28.

For points and authorities opposing the contention that the original obligation was extinguished because the accord was not executed, see § 11.30.

For points and authorities opposing the contention that the obligation was extinguished by an accord and satisfaction on the ground that the defense was not specially pleaded, see § 11.31.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Part Performance or Payment Accepted in Writing Extinguishes Debt

Schwartz v. California Claim Service (1942) 52 Cal. App. 2d 47, 125 P.2d 883 , involved an action, inter alia, to recover damages for allegedly wrongful execution of, and failure to enter, satisfaction of judgment and permitting execution to remain as a lien on plaintiff's property. Plaintiff offered in writing to pay California Claim Service, Ltd., the judgment creditor and one of the defendants in this action, $15 in full settlement of the judgment. Defendant accepted, and plaintiff paid defendant the $15 by a check endorsed with words indicating it was to be satisfaction in full. Defendant cashed this check, and its attorney delivered a written satisfaction of the judgment to plaintiff. In this suit, plaintiff contended that this offer and acceptance by the judgment debtor constituted an accord and satisfaction, extinguishing any obligations under the judgment. Therefore, an execution issued on the judgment and levy on plaintiff's bank account by defendants was wrongful and malicious. The trial court gave judgment on the pleading in favor of defendants. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal reversed, holding that the facts were sufficient to constitute a valid accord and satisfaction of the judgment debt. The court noted that the former common-law rule was that a liquidated indebtedness presently due could not be discharged by payment of less than the whole sum because an agreement of such nature would lack consideration (52 Cal. App. 2d 47, 52-53). The court observed, however, that Civ. Code § 1524 changed the common-law rule by dispensing with the necessity for a new consideration (52 Cal. App. 2d 47, 53). The statute provides that part performance of an obligation, either before or after a breach thereof, when expressly accepted by the creditor in writing, in satisfaction, or rendered in pursuance of an agreement in writing for that purpose, though without any new consideration, extinguishes the obligation (52 Cal. App. 2d 47, 53). The court said that the satisfaction of judgments for less than their face value was an everyday occurrence, and since every such settlement represents an agreement mutually satisfactory to the parties and fraught with some benefit to each, it should not be the policy of the law to discourage such sensible arrangements under which a creditor can satisfy a judgment for what he or she thinks it is worth, and a debtor can settle it for what he or she can afford to pay (52 Cal. App. 2d 47, 55).

[b] Obligation Must Be Liquidated and Undisputed

The facts and procedural background of B. & W. Engineering Co. v. Beam (1913) 23 Cal. App. 164, 137 P 624 , are discussed in § 11.20[3][a]. In the Beam case, the court of appeal affirmed the trial court's judgment for defendant, finding that the original obligation was extinguished by an accord and satisfaction. In holding that the acceptance of the payment for a sum less than the amount in dispute need not be in writing, the court held that Civ. Code § 1524 had reference only to agreements of release and satisfaction made in cases in which the obligation is neither doubtful nor disputed (23 Cal. App. 164, 174-175).

[c] Writing Required for Acceptance

The facts and procedural background of Schwartz v. California Claim Service (1942) 52 Cal. App. 2d 47, 125 P.2d 883 , are discussed in § 11.23[3][a]. In this action for damages against defendants for failure to enter a satisfaction of judgment, the court of appeal reversed the trial court's judgment for defendants. The court held that the undisputed original obligation, the judgment debt, was extinguished by an accord and satisfaction because Civ. Code § 1524 had eliminated the necessity for consideration in such cases and required only that the creditor's acceptance be in writing. The court found that defendant's acceptance, evidenced by the cashing of the conditional check and the written satisfaction of judgment, was in writing and the original obligation was thereby extinguished (52 Cal. App. 2d 47, 53-56).

[d] Creditor's Written Acceptance Evidenced by Check

Petroleum Collections Inc. v. Sulser (1968) 265 Cal. App. 2d Supp. 976, 265 Cal. App. 2d Supp. 976, 70 Cal. Rptr. 537 , was an action to recover the full amount of an obligation. Defendant sent a check for an amount less than a liquidated and undisputed claim as payment in full of all obligations. The check bore an endorsement stating that by endorsing the check, the creditor released the defendant from any and all claims or liability of any kind as of the date of the check. Plaintiff cashed the check. Defendant contended that plaintiff's cashing of the conditional check constituted an accord and satisfaction. The trial court agreed and dismissed plaintiff's action.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court held that upon reading Civ. Code §§ 1524 and 1541, it was indisputable that the original obligation herein involved was settled and discharged (265 Cal. App. 2d Supp. 976, 976-977). The court held that when the endorsement of a check for a lesser amount, tendered as payment in full of a liquidated and undisputed claim, bears an unequivocal endorsement that the creditor releases the debtor from any and all claims, and clearly states that the check is accepted as a complete discharge of any and all claims, it has the effect of releasing the debtor from such claims and discharging the original debt (265 Cal. App. 2d Supp. 976, 979).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Part Performance or Payment Accepted in Writing Extinguishes Debt

In Russell v. Riley & Peterson (1927) 82 Cal. App. 728, 256 P. 557 , plaintiff filed a complaint for reformation of an agreement, for damages from the alleged breach of that agreement, and for damages by reason of alleged negligence of defendant. In the answer defendant denied the material allegations in both causes of action and pleaded, as a further defense, payment as settlement in full for all claims. Defendant sent a check to plaintiff for $213 that stated it was in full payment of the account. Plaintiff cashed the check. Defendant contended that the cashing of the check by plaintiff constituted payment in full of his obligation under the original contract and any subsequent agreement. The trial court gave judgment for defendant, and plaintiff appealed. The court of appeal affirmed. The court found that plaintiff must and could read the endorsement on the check and that her cashing of the check constituted payment in full of defendant's obligations (82 Cal. App. 728, 735).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 11 ACCORD AND SATISFACTION
PART II. FORMS

1-11 California Points & Authorities § 11.24

§ 11.24 Supporting Contention That the Obligation Sued on Was Extinguished by Accord and Satisfaction [Civ. Code § 1521 et seq.]--Promise as Satisfaction

[1] FORM Supporting Contention That the Obligation Sued on Was Extinguished by Accord and Satisfaction [Civ. Code § 1521 et seq.]--Promise as Satisfaction

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief. It should be combined with a general form, supporting the contention that the obligation sued on was extinguished by accord and satisfaction (see § 11.20).]

THE OBLIGATION SUED ON WAS EXTINGUISHED BY ACCORD AND SATISFACTION BECAUSE THE OBLIGEE PROMISED SOMETHING DIFFERENT FROM, OR LESS THAN, THAT REQUIRED BY THE ORIGINAL OBLIGATION AND THE CREDITOR ACCEPTED THE PROMISE AS FULL SATISFACTION OF THE ORIGINAL OBLIGATION.

A. Promise as Accord. The terms of an accord may provide for the giving of a promise as consideration for the extinction of an existing obligation (Silvers v. Grossman (1920) 183 Cal. 696, 699, 192 P. 534 ; Everhardy v. Union Finance Co. (1931) 115 Cal. App. 460, 463, 1 P.2d 1024).

B. Promise as Satisfaction Extinguishes Debt. An agreement to accept the obligee's promise to pay as satisfaction of a claim extinguishes the original obligation (see Silvers v. Grossman (1920) 183 Cal. 696, 699, 192 P. 534 ; Everhardy v. Union Finance Co. (1931) 115 Cal. App. 460, 466, 1 P.2d 1024).

[2] Comments

[a] Use Of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the obligation sued on was extinguished by an accord and satisfaction because the obligee promised something different from, or less than, that required by the original obligation and the creditor accepted the promise as full satisfaction of the original obligation. This form should be combined with the general form, supporting the contention that the obligation was extinguished by an accord and satisfaction [see § 11.20]. The form may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.

The argument supported by these points and authorities may be raised by plaintiff in an action to cancel a lien on his or her property because the obligation that was secured by lien on the property was extinguished by an accord and satisfaction. It may also be raised by defendant as an affirmative defense in an action for damages in tort or for breach of contract.

These points and authorities may be combined, when appropriate, with pointsand authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue of the extinction of an obligation by accord and satisfaction.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. The factual situation should clearly show that the creditor's acceptance of the promise was in full satisfaction of the original obligation. A creditor's acceptance of the debtor's promise to give something different from, or less than, that originally agreed on, in extinction of the original obligation, should be distinguished from an executory accord, which is a promise by the creditor to accept the debtor's performance at a future date, not the debtor's mere promise to perform in satisfaction of the original obligation.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a discussion and forms for use in accord and satisfaction generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 6, Accord and Satisfaction (Matthew Bender).

For a discussion and forms for affirmative defenses based on modification, novation, rescission, or lack of one of the essential elements of a contract, see Ch. 140, Contracts , in that publication. For a discussion and forms for an affirmative defense based on release, see Ch. 520, Settlement and Release . For a discussion and forms for affirmative defenses based on payment and settlement, see Ch. 385, Negotiable Instruments , and Ch. 520, Settlement and Release , respectively.

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For points and authorities relating to actions for breach of contract and for defenses to the formation and enforcement of a contract generally, see Ch. 50, Contracts . For points and authorities relating to the enforcement of an accord agreement generally, see Ch. 214, Specific Performance .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

For points and authorities opposing the validity of the accord agreement generally, see § 11.27. For points and authorities opposing the validity of the accord agreement because there was no meeting of the minds of the parties, see § 11.28. For points and authorities opposing the validity of the accord agreement because there was no bona fide dispute, see § 11.29.

For points and authorities opposing the extinction of the original obligation because the accord was not executed, see § 11.30. For points and authorities opposing the contention that the obligation was extinguished by an accord and satisfaction on the ground that the defense was not specially pleaded, see § 11.31.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Promise as Accord

The facts and procedural background of Silvers v. Grossman (1920) 183 Cal. 696, 192 P 534 , are discussed in § 11.20[3][c]. Although the Supreme Court reversed the trial court's judgment for failure to plead promise as accord and satisfaction, it held that the terms of an accord may provide for the giving of a promise as the consideration for the extinction of the existing obligation (183 Cal. 696, 699).

The facts and procedural background of Everhardy v. Union Finance Co. (1931) 115 Cal. App. 460, 1 P.2d 1024 , are discussed in § 11.20[3][c]. In Everhardy, the court of appeal affirmed the trial court's decision that an accord and satisfaction, extinguishing defendant's original obligation to issue 400 shares of stock to plaintiff, was effected by plaintiff's acceptance of 100 shares of stock and defendant's promise to issue the rest. The court quoted Silvers v. Grossman (1920) 183 Cal. 696, 192 P 534 , for the rule that the terms of an accord may provide for the giving of a promise as the consideration for the extinction of the existing obligation, and the giving and acceptance of the promise is the execution of the accord (115 Cal. App. 460, 463).

[b] Promise as Satisfaction Extinguishes Debt

The facts and procedural background of Silvers v. Grossman (1920) 183 Cal. 696, 192 P 534 , are discussed in § 11.20[3][c]. The Supreme Court in Silvers reversed the trial court's judgment on the ground that the accord and satisfaction was not supported by the pleading. The Court said that the finding of an accord and satisfaction was not repugnant to it, but held that the giving and acceptance of the promise in satisfaction of the preexisting obligation must be averred in the pleadings. Defendant failed to plead that the promise was given and accepted in full satisfaction of the original obligation (183 Cal. 696, 699).

The facts and procedural background of Everhardy v. Union Finance Co. (1931) 115 Cal. App. 460, 1 P.2d 1024 , are discussed in § 11.20[3][c]. The court of appeal, in affirming the trial court's judgment for defendant, held that plaintiff's acceptance of the 100 shares of stock and defendant's promise to deliver 300 shares when they became available constituted an accord and satisfaction extinguishing defendant's obligation under the original agreement (115 Cal. App. 460, 466).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Promise as Satisfaction Extinguishes Debt

Gardner v. Shreve (1949) 89 Cal. App. 2d 804, 202 P.2d 322 , was an action forbreach of an express contract, and for enforcement of an implied contract. The trial court granted a summary judgment for plaintiff. The court of appeal reversed. Plaintiff had entered a written agreement to take part in defendant's business. When plaintiff did not live up to the terms of the agreement, defendant rescinded the agreement and agreed to refund plaintiff's money. The parties subsequently entered into a written agreement terminating their relationship. Defendant failed to refund the money by the agreed date, and plaintiff instituted a suit to recover the money. After the suit was instituted but before defendant was served with the complaint, defendant sent plaintiff a promissory note agreeing to pay the money owed at a future date. Plaintiff did not return the note but continued with the suit. Defendant then asserted, as defense to the action, that plaintiff had accepted the note as satisfaction for the original obligation. The court of appeal found that defendant in her affidavit had stated an express, executed agreement to give and receive the promissory note as full satisfaction of the original obligation and that such an executed agreement is effective to discharge the original debt, but held that there was a triable issue as to plaintiff's acceptance of the note. Therefore, the case should have gone to trial (89 Cal. App. 2d 804, 808).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 11 ACCORD AND SATISFACTION
PART II. FORMS

1-11 California Points & Authorities § 11.25

§ 11.25 Supporting Contention That the Obligation Sued on Was Extinguished by Accord and Satisfaction [Civ. Code § 1521 et seq.]--Special Pleading Excused

[1] FORM Supporting Contention That the Obligation Sued on Was Extinguished by Accord and Satisfaction [Civ. Code § 1521 et seq.]--Special Pleading Excused

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief. It should be combined with a general form, supporting the contention that the obligation sued on was extinguished by accord and satisfaction (see § 11.20). It may also be combined with any of the specific forms, supporting the contention that the obligation sued on was extinguished by accord and satisfaction (see §§ 11.21 -11.24).]

THE OBLIGATION SUED ON WAS EXTINGUISHED BY AN ACCORD AND SATISFACTION THAT DOES NOT HAVE TO BE SPECIALLY PLEADED BECAUSE _____ [OBLIGEE PROVED PAYMENT AND THE CIRCUMSTANCES UNDER WHICH IT WAS MADE or OBLIGOR RAISED THE DEFENSE BY MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT].

[EITHER]

Obligee Proves Payment and Circumstances. If the plaintiff, as a part of his or her case, proves the payment and the circumstances under which it was made, tending to show an accord and satisfaction, the defendant may rely upon the facts thus shown as an accord and satisfaction, although not pleaded as such by defendant in the answer (Russell v. Riley & Peterson (1927) 82 Cal. App. 728, 736, 256 P. 557).

[OR]

Accord and Satisfaction Raised by Motion for Summary Judgment. Failure to raise the defense of accord and satisfaction in the answer does not of necessity preclude defendant from asserting this defense on a motion for summary judgment (Ramos v. City of Santa Clara (1973) 35 Cal. App. 3d 93, 95, 110 Cal. Rptr. 485).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the obligor may prove that the obligation sued on was extinguished by an accord and satisfaction and that the requirement that an accord and satisfaction be specially pleaded is excused. This form should be combined with the general form, supporting the contention that the obligation was extinguished by an accord and satisfaction [see § 11.20]. It may also be combined with one of the specific forms, supporting the contention that the obligation sued on was extinguished by an accord and satisfaction [see §§ 11.21 -11.24].

The argument supported by these points and authorities may be used by the obligor to oppose a motion by the obligee to exclude evidence of an accord and satisfaction or to support a motion by the obligor for summary judgment. Should the accord and satisfaction fail on the ground that it was not specially pleaded, the obligee can also move to amend the pleadings, for the trial court has the discretion to allow amendment of the pleading at any stage [Ramos v. City of Santa Clara (1973) 35 Cal. App. 3d 93, 95, 110 Cal. Rptr. 485].

These points and authorities may be combined, when appropriate, with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue that an accord and satisfaction need not be specially pleaded. The points and authorities set forth in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Counsel may demonstrate that the accord and satisfaction does not have to be specially pleaded by showing that either the issue of an accord and satisfaction is being raised for the first time in a motion for summary judgment or that the obligee, in presenting his or her case, has proved a payment and its circumstances that tended to show an accord and satisfaction.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a discussion and forms for use in accord and satisfaction generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 6, Accord and Satisfaction (Matthew Bender). For a discussion and forms relating to amendment of pleadings, see Ch. 21, Amended and Supplemental Pleadings .

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion and forms relating to amendment of pleadings, see Ch. 16, Amended and Supplemental Pleadings .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

For points and authorities opposing the contention that the obligation was extinguished by an accord and satisfaction on the ground that the defense was not specially pleaded, see § 11.31.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Obligee Proves Payment and Circumstances

Russell v. Riley & Peterson (1927) 82 Cal. App. 728, 256 P. 557 , was an action for reformation of an agreement, for damages from the alleged breach thereof, and for damages by reason of alleged negligence of defendants. In their answer, defendants denied the material allegations in all causes of action and pleaded payment in full for all claims as a further defense. Plaintiff contended that defendants had not paid in full because defendants had agreed to pay $213 and to put plaintiff's land back in the same condition it was in when defendants went onto it; yet defendants had only paid the $213. She also contended that defendants could not prove an accord and satisfaction on the ground that the check was tendered on the condition that it be accepted in full satisfaction of all claims, since defendants had not pleaded an accord and satisfaction in their answer. The trial court gave judgment for defendants, and the court of appeal affirmed. The court, conceding without deciding that the pleading in the present case did not meet the requirements for pleading the defense of accord and satisfaction, held that the rule requiring an accord and satisfaction to be specially pleaded before it can be availed of as a defense is subject to the exception that if the obligee, as a part of his or her case, proves the payment and circumstances under which it was made, tending to show an accord and satisfaction, the defendant may rely upon the facts thus shown as an accord and satisfaction although it is not pleaded as such in the answer (82 Cal. App. 728, 736 . The court held that in this case, plaintiff had chosen to prove the fact of payment in aid of her own case and the circumstances surrounding the payment; therefore, she had no right to object that all of the facts connected with the payment were shown (82 Cal. App. 728, 736-737).

[b] Accord and Satisfaction Raised by Motion for Summary Judgment

Ramos v. City of Santa Clara (1973) 35 Cal. App. 3d 93, 110 Cal. Rptr. 485 , was an action against a city on a construction contract. Defendant was granted a summary judgment in its favor on the ground that plaintiff's claims against defendant were barred by a provision in the contract to the effect that the acceptance of final payment under the contract constituted a release of all claims.

Plaintiff appealed from the judgment. The court of appeal affirmed. Plaintiff claimed that the city was precluded from asserting the defense of release or accord and satisfaction because they failed to plead the defenses in their answer. The court noted that plaintiff had pointed out that the affirmative defenses of accord and satisfaction must be specially pleaded in order to raise them as issues, but said that it did not follow that failure to raise the defense of accord and satisfaction in the answer of necessity precluded asserting this defense on a motion for summary judgment. The court pointed out that plaintiff did not object to the motion at the time it was made, on the ground that the defense of accord and satisfaction had not been raised in the answer, and that plaintiff did not argue on appeal that the defense took him by surprise or prejudiced him in any way.

It explained that the trial court has discretion to allow amendment of any pleading at any stage of the proceedings, and that liberality is displayed in allowing amendment of answers so that a defendant may assert all defenses available (35 Cal. App. 3d 93, 95-96). The court incorporated this rationale in deciding that since the defense of accord and satisfaction may be decided by summary judgment, provided that there are no triable issues of fact, it was proper for the trial court to permit defendant to raise the issue by motion (35 Cal. App. 3d 93, 96).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 11 ACCORD AND SATISFACTION
PART II. FORMS

1-11 California Points & Authorities § 11.26

§ 11.26 Supporting Contention That the Obligation Sued on Was Extinguished by Accord and Satisfaction [Civ. Code §§ 1521-1526]--Composition, Extension Agreement, or Release [Civ. Code § 1526(b)-(d)]

[1] FORM Supporting Contention That the Obligation Sued on Was Extinguished by Accord and Satisfaction [Civ. Code §§ 1521-1526]--Composition, Extension Agreement, or Release [Civ. Code § 1526(b)-(d)]

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief. It should be combined with a general form, supporting the contention that the obligation sued on was extinguished by accord and satisfaction (see § 11.20).]

THE OBLIGATION SUED ON WAS EXTINGUISHED BY ACCORD AND SATISFACTION BECAUSE THE CREDITOR ACCEPTED A CHECK TENDERED IN CONJUNCTION WITH A(N) _____[_____(COMPOSITION or EXTENSION) AGREEMENT PURSUANT TO SECTION 1526(b) or RELEASE OF CLAIM PURSUANT TO SECTION 1526(c)] OF THE CIVIL CODE.

[EITHER]

A. Composition or Extension Agreement. Notwithstanding Section 1526(a)of the Civil Code, acceptance of a check or draft constitutes an accord and satisfaction if the check or draft is tendered pursuant to a composition or extension agreement between a debtor and its creditors pursuant to which all creditors of the same class are accorded similar treatment, and the creditor receives the check or draft with knowledge of the restriction (Civ. Code § 1526(b)).

[OR]

A. Release of Claim. Notwithstanding Section 1526(a) of the Civil Code, acceptance of a check or draft by a creditor constitutes an accord and satisfaction when the check or draft is issued pursuant to or in conjunction with a release of a claim (Civ. Code § 1526(c)).

[CONTINUE]

[Optional] B. Presumption of Creditor's Knowledge of Composition or Extension Agreement. A creditor shall be conclusively presumed to have knowledge of a restriction to a check tendered pursuant to a composition or extension agreement under Section 1526(b) of the Civil Code if a creditor either (1) has, previous to the receipt of the check or draft, executed a written consent to the composition or extension agreement, or (2) has been given written notice, not less than 15 days nor more than 90 days prior to receipt of the check or draft, that a check or draft will be tendered with a restrictive endorsement and that acceptance and cashing of the check or draft will constitute an accord and satisfaction (Civ. Code § 1526(b)).

[Optional] C. What Constitutes Notice of Composition or Extension Agreement. For purposes of paragraph (2) of Section 1526(b) of the Civil Code, mailing the notice by first-class mail, postage prepaid, addressed to the address shown for the creditor on the debtor's books or such other address as the creditor may designate in writing constitutes notice (Civ. Code § 1526(d)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the obligation sued on was extinguished by an accord and satisfaction because partial payment was made in conjunction with either a composition or extension agreement that met the requirements of Civ. Code § 1526(b) or a release of claim [Civ. Code § 1526(b), (c)]. This form should be combined with the general form, supporting the contention that the obligation was extinguished by an accord and satisfaction [see § 11.20]. Optional Paragraph B is for use if the creditor's knowledge that the check was tendered in accordance with a composition or extension agreement is in issue. Optional Paragraph C is for use if the knowledge issue depends on mailing of notice under Civ. Code § 1526(b)(2).

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue of extinction of an obligation by accord and satisfaction.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should attach a copy of the release, composition agreement, or extension agreement to which the check related.

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

§§ 11.27 -11.31 oppose the validity of the accord and satisfaction. § 11.30 opposes the contention on the ground that the accord and satisfaction was not executed. § 11.31 opposes the contention on the ground that the defense of accord and satisfaction was not specially pleaded.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms relating to accord and satisfaction in general, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 6, Accord and Satisfaction (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to releases and settlements in general, see Ch. 520, Settlement and Release in that publication. For discussion and forms relating to composition agreements, including a form of affirmative defense that a creditor's action against a debtor is barred by a composition agreement, see Ch. 94, Bankruptcy in that publication.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 11 ACCORD AND SATISFACTION
PART II. FORMS

1-11 California Points & Authorities § 11.27

§ 11.27 Opposing Contention That the Obligation Sued on Was Extinguished by Accord and Satisfaction [Civ. Code §§ 1521-1526]--Accord Not Valid--General Form

[1] FORM Opposing Contention That the Obligation Sued on Was Extinguished by Accord and Satisfaction [Civ. Code §§ 1521-1526]--Accord Not Valid--General Form

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief].

THE OBLIGATION SUED ON WAS NOT EXTINGUISHED BY ACCORD AND SATISFACTION, BECAUSE ALL THE ELEMENTS OF A CONTRACT WERE NOT PRESENT. THEREFORE, THE ALLEGED ACCORD WAS NOT VALID.

A. Rules of Contract Apply. Since an accord is an agreement, it is subject to the same rules applicable to other agreements (Sierra & San Francisco P. Co. v. Universal Elec. & Gas Co. (1925) 197 Cal. 376, 387, 241 P 76).

B. Necessary Elements of Valid Accord. Since the discharge of claims by way of accord and satisfaction is dependent on contract, it follows that the elements necessary for valid contracts generally must be present in an accord and satisfaction. Therefore, there must be (1) a proper subject matter, (2) competentparties, (3) a consent or meeting of the minds of the parties, and (4) consideration (Sierra & San Francisco P. Co. v. Universal Elec. & Gas Co. (1925) 197 Cal. 376, 387, 241 P 76).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose the contention that the obligation sued on was extinguished by accord and satisfaction when all the elements necessary for a valid accord are not present. This form opposes §§ 11.20 -11.26. It can be used alone or combined with specific forms opposing the contention that the obligation sued on was extinguished because the accord was not valid [see §§ 11.28, 11.29].

These points and authorities may be combined, when appropriate, with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise an objection to extinction of an obligation by accord and satisfaction. The points and authorities set forth in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Counsel should show that one or more of the elements necessary for a valid accord are missing. If counsel is opposing the contention that the obligation sued on was extinguished by an accord and satisfaction because the minds of the parties did not meet, making the accord invalid, this form should be combined with the specific form on that point [see § 11.28]. If counsel is opposing the contention that the obligation sued on was extinguished by an accord and satisfaction because there was no consideration and the facts show that a partial payment was made on a liquidated or undisputed claim, then this form may be combined with the specific form opposing the contention that the obligation sued on was extinguished by an accord and satisfaction on the ground that there was no bona fide dispute [see § 11.29].

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a discussion and forms for use in accord and satisfaction generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 6, Accord and Satisfaction (Matthew Bender). For a discussion and forms relating to the lack of one or more of the essential elements of a contract, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 140, Contracts (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For points and authorities relating to actions for breach of contract and for defenses to the formation and enforcement of a contract generally, see Ch. 50, Contracts .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Rules of Contract Apply

Sierra & San Francisco P. Co. v. Universal Elec. & Gas Co. (1925) 197 Cal. 376, 241 P 76 , was an action for the balance due for electrical energy furnished by the plaintiff to the defendant. Defendant had agreed to buy from plaintiff all of the electrical energy that might be required by it in the regular course of business for a period of eight years in excess of that which might be generated in its own plant. Subsequently, plaintiff tried to get defendant to take all of its power from plaintiff. An agreement was reached in which defendant agreed to shut down its steam plant and plaintiff agreed to operate its steam plant seven days a week and to base its service charge on a lesser rate. Six months later, plaintiff rescinded this agreement because changing conditions necessitated an increased rate. Defendant continued to pay the lesser amount under the terms of the modified agreement, and plaintiff filed suit for the difference between the service charge based on the lower rate and the service charge based on the regular rate. Defendant alleged in his answer that the original agreement was extinguished, inter alia, by plaintiff's cashing of checks sent by defendant and accompanied by vouchers which stated that the checks constituted payment in full. The trial court held that there had been no accord and satisfaction and gave judgment for plaintiff.

The Supreme Court affirmed the trial court's judgment. The Court found that the Railroad Commission had jurisdiction over public utilities by virtue of the Public Utilities Act. By the terms of this act, the utility company was required to file the contract with the Railroad Commission. Once filed, the rates and charges specified therein become the established and only lawful rates that the plaintiff could charge or receive (197 Cal. 376, 381-382). The Court noted that because an accord is an agreement, it is subject to the same rules applicable to other agreements and that the essentials necessary for valid contracts must be present. The Court held that an accord and satisfaction could not be implied in this case because plaintiff could not lawfully accept the checks tendered by defendant (197 Cal. 376, 387). Therefore, the Court held that the court below was correct in finding and concluding that there was no accord and satisfaction because the checks could not be regarded as subject to the conditions recited by defendant, and the element of consideration for the agreement of accord was lacking (197 Cal. 376, 388).

[b] Necessary Elements of Valid Accord

The facts and procedural background of Sierra & San Francisco P. Co. v. Universal Elec. & Gas Co. (1925) 197 Cal. 376, 241 P. 76 , are discussed in § 11.27[3][a]. The Supreme Court, in affirming the trial court's decision, held that the discharge of claims by way of accord and satisfaction is dependent uponcontract and that it followed that the essentials necessary for valid contracts generally must be present in a contract of accord and satisfaction. The Court, therefore, held that a valid accord requires: (1) a proper subject matter, (2) competent parties, (3) a consent or meeting of the minds of the parties, and (4) consideration (197 Cal. 376, 387).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Rules of Contract Apply

Dobinson v. McDonald (1891) 92 Cal. 33, 27 P. 1098 , was an action to recover the balance owed on commission for the sale of property. The parties had agreed that plaintiffs were to act as sole agents for the sale of defendant's property and receive a commission of $5,000 even if defendant sold the property himself. Before the agreement expired, defendant told plaintiffs that he wished to withdraw the property from the market. Plaintiffs agreed to surrender the original agreement to defendant for $1,000. When plaintiffs learned that the property had already been sold at the time the offer was made by defendant, they sued for the remainder owed on the commission. The trial court gave judgment to plaintiffs, and defendant appealed. The Supreme Court affirmed the judgment. The Court stated that accord agreements were subject to all the rules applicable to other agreements. Thus, the Court said that if the consent of the plaintiffs thereto was obtained through fraud exercised by defendant, plaintiffs had the right to rescind the agreement. The Court held that the false statement by defendant to plaintiffs, that he had not sold the property at the time he offered to give them $1,000 for a surrender of their agreement, constituted fraud and that plaintiffs were entitled to a rescission of the agreement. Therefore, the Court held that the facts found by the trial court fully sustained the judgment (92 Cal. 33, 37).

[b] Necessary Elements of Valid Accord

See Thompson v. Williams (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 566, 571, 259 Cal. Rptr. 518 , discussed in § 11.20.

In Moving Picture Machine Operators Union v. Glasgow Theaters, Inc. (1970) 6 Cal. App. 3d 395, 86 Cal. Rptr. 33 , plaintiffs sought to recover payments owed to a pension fund, claiming that a dispute regarding when payment should begin was settled by a compromise. The trial court, finding that no payments were ever made under this agreement, gave judgment to plaintiffs for the amount that defendants conceded they owed to plaintiffs. The court of appeal affirmed, holding that there was no accord and satisfaction because the accord had not been executed (6 Cal. App. 3d 395, 404). In so holding, the court said that since an accord signifies an agreement between the parties, the primary principles of the law of contracts are necessarily applicable, that is, proper subject matter, competent parties, mutual consent, and consideration (6 Cal. App. 3d 395, 403).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 11 ACCORD AND SATISFACTION
PART II. FORMS

1-11 California Points & Authorities § 11.28

§ 11.28 Opposing Contention That the Obligation Sued on Was Extinguished by Accord and Satisfaction [Civ. Code § 1521 et seq.]--Accord Not Valid--No Meeting of the Minds [Civ. Code § 1526(a); Com. Code § 3311(c)]

[1] FORM Opposing Contention That the Obligation Sued on Was Extinguished by Accord and Satisfaction [Civ. Code § 1521 et seq.]--Accord Not Valid--No Meeting of the Minds [Civ. Code § 1526(a); Com. Code § 3311(c)]

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief. It should be combined with a general form, opposing the contention that the obligation sued on was extinguished by accord and satisfaction because the accord was not valid (see § 11.27).]

THE OBLIGATION SUED ON WAS NOT EXTINGUISHED BY ACCORD AND SATISFACTION, BECAUSE THERE WAS NO MEETING OF THE MINDS OF THE PARTIES. THEREFORE, THE ACCORD WAS NOT VALID.

A. Meeting of Minds Required. An accord and satisfaction is the result of an agreement between the parties and must be consummated by a meeting of the minds of the parties (Lapp-Gifford Co. v. Muscoy Water Co. (1913) 166 Cal. 25, 32, 134 P. 989).

B. Intention to Agree. There is no accord unless the parties agree that the obligation is extinguished (Cline v. Zappettini (1955) 131 Cal. App. 2d 723, 729, 281 P.2d 35).

C. Intention From Circumstances. The intention of the parties regarding the accord agreement must be determined from all the circumstances attending the transaction (Lapp-Gifford Co. v. Muscoy Water Co. (1913) 166 Cal. 25, 32, 134 P. 989).

D. Accord and Satisfaction as Question of Fact. Whether an agreement amounts to an accord and satisfaction is a question of intention of the parties and a question for the trier of fact to decide (Conderback Inc. v. Standard Oil Co. (1966) 239 Cal. App. 2d 664, 680, 48 Cal. Rptr. 901).

[Optional] E. Conditional Tender Must Be Clear. The debtor must make it clear that acceptance of what he or she tenders is subject to the condition that it shall be in full satisfaction (see Civ. Code § 1526(a); Potter v. Pacific Coast Lumber Co. (1951) 37 Cal. 2d 592, 597, 234 P.2d 16).

[Optional] F. Subsequent Conduct Disproves Accord and Satisfaction. The acceptance and cashing of a check, tendered subject to the condition that it is in full satisfaction of all claims, does not constitute an accord and satisfaction when the giving and acceptance of the check is followed by such conduct of both parties so as to clearly show that they did not consider the check a final settlement of the debt (Owens v. Noble (1946) 77 Cal. App. 2d 209, 215, 175 P.2d 241).

[Optional] G. Creditor Struck Out Notation on Check. When a claim isdisputed or unliquidated and a check or draft is tendered by the debtor in settlement thereof in full discharge of the claim, and the words "payment in full" or other words of similar meaning are notated on the check or draft, the acceptance of the check or draft does not constitute an accord and satisfaction if the creditor protests against accepting the tender in full payment by striking out or otherwise deleting that notation (Civ. Code § 1526(a)).

[Optional] H. Check Cashed Inadvertently. When a claim is disputed or unliquidated and a check or draft is tendered by the debtor in settlement thereof in full discharge of the claim, and the words "payment in full" or other words of similar meaning are notated on the check or draft, the acceptance of the check or draft does not constitute an accord and satisfaction if the acceptance of the check or draft was inadvertent or without knowledge of the notation (Civ. Code § 1526(a)).

[Optional] I. Debtor Did Not Send Check to Appropriate Person or Office. Subject to Commercial Code Section 3311(d), a claim is not discharged if the claimant is an organization and proves that (A) within a reasonable time before the tender, the claimant sent a conspicuous statement to the person against whom the claim is asserted that communications concerning disputed debts, including an instrument tendered as full satisfaction of a debt, are to be sent to a designated person, office, or place, and (B) the instrument or accompanying communication was not received by that designated person, office, or place (Com. Code § 3311(c)(1)).

[Optional] J. Creditor Tendered Repayment Within 90 Days. Subject to Commercial Code Section 3311(d), a claim is not discharged if the claimant, whether or not an organization, proves that within 90 days after the instrument tendered as full satisfaction was paid, the claimant tendered repayment of the amount of the instrument to the person against whom the claim is asserted (Com. Code § 3311(c)(2)).

CAUTION:

The case authority on which this form is based, particularly those cases involving checks, may have been qualified by Civ. Code § 1526(a) [Stats. 1987, ch. 1268], set forth in Optional Paragraphs G and H. Now that Civ. Code § 1526(a) specifies that protest by the creditor means striking out or otherwise deleting the notation that the check is full settlement, it is not clear whether other protests are sufficient to avoid an accord and satisfaction.

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose the contention that the obligation sued on was extinguished by accord and satisfaction because the minds of the parties had not met. This form should be combined with the general form, opposing the contention that the obligation sued on was extinguished by an accord and satisfaction because the accord was not valid [see § 11.27]. This form opposes §§ 11.20 -11.26.

There are now two provisions that govern tender of checks in full satisfaction of disputed or unliquidated claims: Civ. Code § 1526(a) and Com. Code § 3311. For comparison of their various provisions, see § 11.21[2][b]. Optional Paragraphs G and H in this form are for use when proceeding under Civ. Code § 1526(a). Optional Paragraphs I and J are applicable when proceeding under Com. Code § 3311. Also, both Paragraphs I and J may be defeated if creditor knew at the time it collected the check that the check had been tendered in full satisfaction [see Com. Code § 3311(d) (set forth in § 11.21)].

These points and authorities may be combined, when appropriate, with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue that an obligation was not extinguished by an accord and satisfaction.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Counsel should show that the minds of the parties had not met and that there was no intention to accept something different from, or less than, the original obligation as satisfaction for the original obligation. This may be done by showing, for example, that the obligor did not make it clear to the creditor that what he or she was tendering was subject to the condition it be accepted in full satisfaction of the original obligation, and that the creditor's acceptance of the item was agreement to the condition and extinguished the original obligation. It can also be done by showing that the subsequent conduct of the parties showed an intention that the tender was not satisfaction in full.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a discussion and forms for use in accord and satisfaction generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 6, Accord and Satisfaction (Matthew Bender).

For a discussion and forms relating to the lack of one of the essential elements of a contract, particularly meeting of the minds of the parties, see Ch. 140, Contracts in that publication.

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For points and authorities relating to actions for breach of contract and to defenses to the formation and enforcement of contracts generally, see Ch. 50, Contracts .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Meeting of Minds Required

The facts and procedural background of Lapp-Gifford Co. v. Muscoy Water Co. (1913) 166 Cal. 25, 134 P. 989 , are discussed in § 11.20[3][d]. In affirming the trial court's decision that there was no accord and satisfaction, the Supreme Court held that an accord and satisfaction is the result of an agreement between the parties and must be consummated by a meeting of the minds of the parties (166 Cal. 25, 32) . The Court held that the parties in this case had not reached a meeting of the minds; therefore, there was no accord and satisfaction (166 Cal. 25, 28) .

[b] Intention to Agree

Cline v. Zappettini (1955) 131 Cal. App. 2d 723, 281 P.2d 35 , was an action brought by an attorney for declaratory relief, seeking a determination of his rights under a contingent fee employment contract. The attorney defended two actions for defendant. Defendant paid the contingent fee for only one action by sending a check accompanied by a letter stating that the check was as per agreement dated April 1, 1952. The attorney informed defendant that he objected to any reduction in his fees and that he was filing a suit for his fee. Defendant acknowledged that he owed the amount sent by check and said that whatever happened the attorney should keep the check. The check was then certified. Defendant asserted the affirmative defense of accord and satisfaction to the attorney's suit for fees. The trial court gave judgment for the attorney, and defendant appealed. The court of appeal affirmed. The court held that the parties must agree that the obligation is extinguished or there is no accord, but it also noted the exception that when an offer by the debtor is on condition that the remittance be taken in full payment and the creditor accepts with knowledge of the condition, there is an accord and satisfaction even if the creditor states that he is not accepting the check in full satisfaction. The court held that this rule was not applicable to the facts in this case because defendant's statements to plaintiff obviated any condition attached to the checks, and that since the parties had not agreed that the obligation was extinguished, there was no accord and satisfaction (131 Cal. App. 2d 723, 729).

[c] Intention From Circumstances

The facts and procedural background of Lapp-Gifford Co. v. Muscoy Water Co. (1913) 166 Cal. 25, 134 P. 989 , are discussed in § 11.20[3][d]. The Supreme Court affirmed the trial court's judgment and held that there was no accord and satisfaction because the parties did not intend the check to operate as a payment in full (166 Cal. 25, 28). The Court said that the intention of the parties must be determined from all the circumstances attending the transaction (166 Cal. 25, 32).

[d] Accord and Satisfaction as Question of Fact

Conderback Inc. v. Standard Oil Co. (1966) 239 Cal. App. 2d 664, 48 Cal. Rptr. 901 , was an action to recover the balance of money allegedly due on a contract to construct and maintain a fair exhibit. Plaintiff sent defendant several invoices. Defendant paid all, but contended that it agreed to pay on the last invoice only on the condition it receive assurance that this payment was final, and it claimed plaintiff gave such assurance by the letter plaintiff sent. Plaintiff, however, contended that no condition was affixed to the payment, that the letter was signed on the assumption that it referred to the finality of the particular billing, and that defendant made subsequent payments thus indicating it did not intend this to be in full satisfaction of the contract debt. The trial court entered judgment for the plaintiff. Defendant appealed.

The court of appeal modified and affirmed the judgment. The court held that the question whether an agreement amounts to an accord and satisfaction is one of the intentions of the parties and is therefore a question of fact (239 Cal. App. 2d 664, 680). The court held that the jury could reasonably conclude from the evidence that the parties herein did not agree that the payment was final. Therefore, the original obligation was not extinguished by an accord and satisfaction (239 Cal. App. 2d 664, 682).

[e] Conditional Tender Must Be Clear

Civ. Code § 1526(a) describes the words "payment in full," or other words of similar meaning, as a clear notation on a check tendered by a debtor in settlement and full discharge of a disputed claim [see Civ. Code § 1526(a)].

The facts and procedural background of Potter v. Pacific Coast Lumber Co. (1951) 37 Cal. 2d 592, 234 P.2d 16 , are discussed in § 11.21[3][c]. The Supreme Court reversed the trial court's holding that there was no accord and satisfaction effected by tender of the conditional check. In finding an accord and satisfaction, the Court held that the debtor had fulfilled the requirement of making it clear that acceptance of what he tenders is subject to the condition that it be in full satisfaction, by the notation on the voucher stating that "payment of sight draft attached hereto is accepted in full settlement of account stated below, and endorsement thereof will constitute payee's receipt" (37 Cal. 2d 592, 597, 598-599).

[f] Subsequent Conduct Disproves Accord and Satisfaction

Owens v. Noble (1946) 77 Cal. App. 2d 209, 175 P.2d 241 , was an action for a partnership accounting. Defendants alleged that the partnership was dissolved and denied that any money was due to plaintiff. They alleged, however, that there had never been an accounting. The trial court gave judgment for plaintiff. Defendants appealed, and the court of appeal affirmed. On appeal, the courtinterpreted defendants' contentions as possibly being an assertion of accord and satisfaction. The court found that an accord and satisfaction was not specifically pleaded as generally required. The court went on to hold that it was an essential element of accord and satisfaction by tender of check that the tender is subject to the condition that the acceptance of the check is satisfaction in full. The court said that this condition was not shown by the mere fact that the debtor accompanied the check with an account showing a balance equal to the amount of the check and held that it was disproved when the giving and acceptance of the check was followed by such conduct of both parties as to clearly show that they did not consider the check a final settlement of the debt (77 Cal. App. 2d 209, 215). The court found that the subsequent actions of plaintiff, in objecting to the check as payment in full, and of the defendants, in discussing with plaintiff what additional property he was to take and in admitting to plaintiff's attorney that there was still property within their possession in which plaintiff had an interest, made it apparent that at the time the check was tendered it did not represent the full amount owed to plaintiff (77 Cal. App. 2d 209, 214-215).

[g] Debtor Did Not Send Check to Appropriate Person or Office

Com. Code § 3311 was added by Stats. 1992, ch. 914, § 6. For discussion of what constitutes an "instrument" under Division 3, see § 11.21[3][d].

Com. Code § 3311(c) is limited by Com. Code § 3311(d), which is set forth in § 11.21, Paragraph F.

[h] Creditor Tendered Repayment Within 90 Days

The repayment option provided by Com. Code § 3311(c)(2) is not available to an organizational claimant that sent a statement complying with subparagraph (A) of paragraph (1) [see Optional Paragraph I]. Nor will tender of repayment defeat an accord and satisfaction if the creditor, or its appropriate agent, knew at the time it collected the check that the check was tendered in full satisfaction [see Com. Code § 3311(d), set forth in § 11.21, Paragraph F].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Meeting of Minds Required

Dunlap v. Bellah (1960) 184 Cal. App. 2d 579, 7 Cal. Rptr. 766 , was an action to quiet title to real property. In acquiring the real property at issue in this case, plaintiff assumed an obligation to make payments on a promissory note for the purchase price of the property, which was secured by a second deed of trust on the real property and by a chattel mortgage on the fixtures therein. Plaintiff contended that defendants had divested themselves of any interest in the subject real property by virtue of an accord and satisfaction resulting from negotiations between the parties when defendants accepted $4,600 as settlement of the debt. Defendants contended that the agreement reached related only to the fixtures and that a release had been given only for the chattel mortgage on the fixtures. The trial court entered judgment for plaintiff, and defendant appealed. The court of appeal affirmed.

The court inferred from statements made by defendants and from the lack of any objection by defendants for over eight years that the payment tendered by plaintiff was to satisfy the debt on the promissory note releasing both the chattel mortgage on the fixtures and the second deed of trust, and that defendants intended to settle the account. The court therefore held that there was a meeting of the minds and that an accord and satisfaction had been effected releasing plaintiff of all obligations to defendants (184 Cal. App. 2d 579, 587).

[b] Intention to Agree

Kinkle v. Fruit Grower's Supply Co. (1944) 63 Cal. App. 2d 102, 146 P.2d 8 , was an action to recover the balance due under a contract for cutting and hauling logs. Plaintiff discovered that defendant was erroneously measuring the logs cut under the contract and called defendant's attention to that fact. The superintendent of defendant's corporation then assured plaintiff that any differences in measurements that might exist would be adjusted. Defendant subsequently sent payment by check for the logs, based on the incorrect measurements, saying that the payment represented payment in full. Plaintiff cashed the check. At trial, defendant contended that plaintiff's cashing of the check constituted an accord and satisfaction of his obligation to pay the actual amount owed for the logs. The trial court rendered judgment in favor of plaintiff. Defendant appealed, and the court of appeal affirmed the judgment. The court said that whether or not the acceptance and cashing of the conditional check amounted to an accord and satisfaction depended on the mutual intention of the respective parties inferred from the circumstances of the transaction and the conduct of the parties (63 Cal. App. 2d 102, 112). The court found that the plaintiff did not intend the check to be the full and final settlement of defendant's account because plaintiff relied on defendant's assurance that the errors would be adjusted, and defendant's failure to measure the logs according to contract requirement constituted constructive fraud or at least mistake, making any accord agreement invalid (63 Cal. App. 2d 102, 112-115).

Whepley Oil Company v. Associated Oil Company (1935) 6 Cal. App. 2d 94, 44 P.2d 670 , was an action to recover the balance due as a royalty from an oil lease. The lease provided that plaintiff was to receive one eighth of the proceeds from the sale of gasoline produced on the lease holding, less the cost of manufacturing and operating costs estimated at 65 percent. Shortly after the lease agreement was entered into, defendant entered into a contract with a third company whereby the company agreed to process the oil and give defendant 50 percent of the gross. Plaintiff claimed that its royalty payment should be based onthe 50 percent received by defendant, not the 35 percent that was estimated as profit. Defendants asserted the affirmative defense of accord and satisfaction because plaintiff had accepted payment based on the lower percentage. The trial court entered judgment for plaintiff, and defendant appealed. The court of appeal affirmed. The court held that there must be a meeting of the minds of the contracting parties for an accord and satisfaction to come into existence. In this case, the court found that plaintiff, at first, had no knowledge that defendant was receiving more than 35 percent as a profit and that once plaintiff discovered this, he promptly advised defendant that he was taking the position that he was entitled to receive a royalty based on the 50 percent and made a request that the controversy be submitted to arbitrators as provided in the lease agreement (6 Cal. App. 2d 94, 113). Therefore, the court held that the minds of the parties had not met, that the accord was not valid, and that the original obligation was not extinguished (6 Cal. App. 2d 94, 112-113).

[c] Accord and Satisfaction as Question of Fact

The facts and procedural background of Owens v. Noble (1946) 77 Cal. App. 2d 209, 175 P.2d 241 , are discussed in § 11.28[2][f]. In affirming the trial court's finding that there was no accord and satisfaction, the court held that whether or not an agreement amounts to an accord and satisfaction is a question of fact. Here the court found that the trial court decided that by their subsequent conduct, the parties to the agreement did not intend the check to be satisfaction of the original obligation (77 Cal. App. 2d 209, 214-215).

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 11 ACCORD AND SATISFACTION
PART II. FORMS

1-11 California Points & Authorities § 11.29

§ 11.29 Opposing Contention That the Obligation Sued on Was Extinguished by Accord and Satisfaction [Civ. Code § 1521 et seq.]--Accord Not Valid--No Bona Fide Dispute

[1] FORM Opposing Contention That the Obligation Sued on Was Extinguished by Accord and Satisfaction [Civ. Code § 1521 et seq.]--Accord Not Valid--No Bona Fide Dispute

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief. It should be combined with a general form, opposing the contention that the obligation sued on was extinguished by accord and satisfaction because the accord was not valid (see § 11.27).]

THE OBLIGATION SUED ON WAS NOT EXTINGUISHED BY ACCORD AND SATISFACTION, BECAUSE THE OBLIGATION WAS UNLIQUIDATED AND THERE WAS NO BONA FIDE DISPUTE BETWEEN THE PARTIES. THEREFORE, THERE WAS NO CONSIDERATION TO SUPPORT THE ACCORD, AND THE ACCORD WAS NOT VALID.

A. Bona Fide Dispute as Consideration. To constitute a good consideration for a settlement by way of compromise, there must have been an actual bona fide difference or dispute between the parties regarding their legal rights (Berger v. Lane (1923) 190 Cal. 443, 451, 213 P. 45).

B. Bona Fide Dispute Required. For the principle of accord and satisfaction to apply in disposition of an unliquidated claim, there must be a bona fide dispute between the parties (Potter v. Pacific Coast Lumber Co. (1951) 37 Cal. 2d 592, 597, 234 P.2d 16 ; Berger v. Lane (1923) 190 Cal. 443, 447-448, 213 P. 45).

C. Honest Dispute Required. The dispute or controversy should be founded in good faith. Without an honest dispute, an agreement to take a lesser amount in payment for the unliquidated claim is without consideration and void (Berger v. Lane (1923) 190 Cal. 443, 448, 213 P. 45).

[Optional] D. Arbitrary Refusal to Pay. An arbitrary refusal to pay is not a bona fide dispute (Kelly v. David D. Bohannon Organization (1953) 119 Cal. App. 2d 787, 792, 260 P.2d 646).

[Optional] E. No Dispute When Claim Concededly Due. When payment is admittedly due and owing, the alleged accord and satisfaction must fail because it is not supported by any consideration (Western Concrete Structures Co. v. James I. Barnes Constr. Co. (1962) 206 Cal. App. 2d 1, 8, 23 Cal. Rptr. 506).

[Optional] F. Wages Concededly Due Do Not Extinguish Disputed Claim. The principle that an accord and satisfaction may be consummated by the payee's cashing of a check bearing a restrictive endorsement that notifies the payee that it must be accepted in full settlement of a disputed claim or not at all does not apply to a claim for wages conceded by the employer to be due (Sullivan v. Del Conte Masonry Co. (1965) 238 Cal. App. 2d 630, 633, 48 Cal. Rptr. 160).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that the obligation sued on was extinguished by an accord and satisfaction when there was no bona fide dispute between the parties. This form should be combined with the general form, opposing the contention that the obligation sued on was extinguished by an accord and satisfaction because the accord was not valid [see § 11.27]. This form opposes the contention that the obligation was extinguished by an accord and satisfaction based on partial payment of a disputed claim [see § 11.21].

These points and authorities may be combined, when appropriate, with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue that an obligation was not extinguished by an accord and satisfaction.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Counsel should show that there was no dispute over the amount owed. This may be demonstrated by showing, forexample, that the dispute was arbitrarily created by one of the parties [see, e.g., Berger v. Lane (1923) 190 Cal. 443, 213 P. 45].

Optional Paragraph D should be used when the amount of the obligation is known to both parties, but one arbitrarily refuses to pay.

Optional Paragraph E can be used when an accord and satisfaction is alleged by the payment of part of a concededly due amount, subject to the condition that it be accepted as satisfaction in full of the entire amount. It can also be used when an accord and satisfaction is alleged to extinguish separate claims by payment of a concededly due claim. Optional Paragraph F should be used when a concededly due payment for wages is tendered, subject to the condition that it be accepted in full satisfaction of a disputed amount, and this is alleged to constitute an accord and satisfaction.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a discussion and forms for use in accord and satisfaction generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 6, Accord and Satisfaction (Matthew Bender).

For a discussion and forms relating to the essential elements of a contract such as consideration, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 140, Contracts (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For points and authorities relating to actions for breach of contract and to defenses to the formation and enforcement of a contract generally, see Ch. 50, Contracts .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Bona Fide Dispute as Consideration

Berger v. Lane (1923) 190 Cal. 443, 213 P. 45 , was an action to recover the balance of commission owed pursuant to a written contract to sell land. Plaintiff contended that defendant had agreed in writing to pay a commission of 5 percent of the sale price and that this was a fixed and definite sum. Defendant contended that there was a dispute over the amount of commission due and over who was to pay it. He further contended that his tender of a check to plaintiff with a letter stating, "I enclose my check as your commission for sale of lot as agreed upon at time of sale and as part of terms of sale," amounted to an accord and satisfaction extinguishing the original obligation, and he pleaded this as an affirmative defense. The trial court, deciding that the case made by defendant established an accord and satisfaction of a preexisting claim, gave judgment of nonsuit.

In reversing the decision of the trial court, the Supreme Court found that there was no bona fide dispute between the parties. Therefore, the check tendered on the condition that it be accepted in full satisfaction of the original debt and cashed by the creditor did not extinguish the original debt. The Court said that the compromise of a disputed or doubtful claim was in itself a good consideration. It held that without a bona fide dispute, as here, the accord was not supported by consideration and thus was void (190 Cal. 443, 450-451).

[b] Bona Fide Dispute Required

The facts and procedural background of Potter v. Pacific Coast Lumber Co. (1951) 37 Cal. 2d 592, 234 P.2d 16 , are discussed in § 11.21[3][c]. The Supreme Court, reversing the trial court's judgment for plaintiff, held that there was a valid accord and satisfaction extinguishing the original obligation. The Court held that for the principle of accord and satisfaction to apply in disposition of an unliquidated claim, there must be a bona fide dispute between the parties (37 Cal. 2d 592, 597). The Court found that there was a bona fide dispute between the parties involved in this suit (37 Cal. 2d 592, 602).

The facts and procedural background of Berger v. Lane (1923) 190 Cal. 443, 213 P. 45 , are discussed in § 11.29[3][a]. The Supreme Court, in reversing the trial court's judgment of nonsuit, held that there was no accord and satisfaction extinguishing the original debt because there was no bona fide dispute. The Court held that the conditional check would satisfy the obligation only if the amount due was in dispute (190 Cal. 443, 447). The Court found that defendant had arbitrarily refused to pay and that therefore, there was no dispute. Thus, the original obligation was not extinguished (190 Cal. 443, 448).

[c] Honest Dispute Required

The facts and procedural background of Berger v. Lane (1923) 190 Cal. 443, 213 P. 45 , are discussed in § 11.29[3][a]. In deciding that there was no accord and satisfaction extinguishing the original debt, the Supreme Court reversed the trial court's judgment of nonsuit. The Court held that there was no bona fide dispute between the parties. The Court said that although it is not necessary that the dispute or controversy be well founded, it is necessary that it be founded in good faith. It held that without an honest dispute, an agreement to take a lesser amount in payment for the unliquidated claim is without consideration and void, and held that an arbitrary refusal to pay, based on the mere pretense of the debtor and made for the obvious purpose of exacting terms that were inequitable and oppressive, was not such an honest dispute as would satisfy the requirement of the rule (190 Cal. 443, 448). The Court held that since testimony offered by plaintiff related to the honesty of the dispute, it should have been heard, and therefore, the Court ruled that the nonsuit was erroneously granted (190 Cal. 443, 453).

[d] Arbitrary Refusal to Pay

Kelly v. David D. Bohannon Organization (1953) 119 Cal. App. 2d 787, 260 P.2d 646 , was an action to recover the balance due for services rendered under a contract. The contract provided that plaintiff's services be compensated at specific rates. Defendant contended that when it let plaintiff go, it tendered a check endorsed with the statement that it was payment in full of all claims. Defendant further contended that when plaintiff cashed the check, the original obligation was extinguished by an accord and satisfaction. The trial court entered judgment for plaintiff, and defendant appealed. The court of appeal affirmed the trial court's holding. The court of appeal held that an accord and satisfaction must be predicated upon a bona fide dispute. An arbitrary refusal to pay, based on the mere pretense of the debtor made for the obvious purpose of exacting terms that are inequitable and oppressive, is not such a dispute as will satisfy the requirements of the rule. It said that a person cannot create a dispute sufficient as a consideration for a compromise by a mere refusal to pay an undisputed claim, since that would be extortion and not compromise (119 Cal. App. 2d 787, 792). The court held that substantial evidence supported the finding that there was no bona fide dispute. Therefore, there could be no accord and satisfaction (119 Cal. App. 2d 787, 793, 795).

[e] No Dispute When Claim Concededly Due

Western Concrete Structures Co. v. James I. Barnes Constr. Co. (1962) 206 Cal. App. 2d 1, 23 Cal. Rptr. 506 , was an action for breach of contract and for payment for services or materials furnished. Plaintiff submitted two invoices to defendant. Defendant paid one and returned the other accompanied by a letter of transmittal that stated that the remittance was to be payment in full for services to date, and that the second invoice was an unwarranted and unauthorized charge. The check itself was endorsed with a notation stating that its acceptance acknowledged payment in full of all moneys due to date and canceled the second invoice. Defendant claimed that this constituted an accord and satisfaction barring plaintiff's claim to payment of the second invoice. The trial court gave judgment for plaintiff. Defendant appealed. The court of appeal affirmed, holding that there was no dispute regarding either the fact of the obligation as stated in the first invoice, which was paid by defendant's check, or the amount that defendant was obliged to pay thereunder. Since formation of an accord and satisfaction requires consideration, and since the payment here was admittedly due and payable, the court held that payment by defendant was payment of the exact amount on an undisputed obligation and not consideration for an accord and satisfaction of a separate disputed claim (206 Cal. App. 2d 1, 8).

[f] Wages Concededly Due Do Not Extinguish Disputed Claim

In Sullivan v. Del Conte Masonry Co. (1965) 238 Cal. App. 2d 630, 48 Cal. Rptr. 160 , an action was brought seeking an accounting and payment of money due under an employment agreement. Defendant contended that an accord and satisfaction had been effected by his tender of a check to plaintiff endorsed as payment in full of all money owing, which plaintiff cashed. The trial court gave judgment for plaintiff. Defendant appealed, and the court of appeal affirmed. The court held that the principle that an accord and satisfaction may be consummated by the giving of a check bearing a restrictive endorsement, notifying the payee that it must be accepted in full settlement of a disputed claim or not at all, and the cashing of the check by the payee did not apply to a claim for wages concededly due. It held that Lab. Code § 206 applied to employee wages and required that upon termination of an employee's services the employer was bound to pay the employee all wages conceded to be due and could require no condition in connection with payment. Therefore, plaintiff's agreement to accept less was void (238 Cal. App. 2d 630, 633).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Bona Fide Dispute Required

In Edgar v. Hitch (1956) 46 Cal. 2d 309, 294 P.2d 3 , an agreement was made for defendant to buy and for plaintiff to sell hay. Despite a prior discussion of defendant's asking price, no purchase price was mentioned when the agreement was made. Plaintiff contended that the purchase price discussed was $42.50 per ton, while defendant contended that the price discussed was $32.50 per ton. Defendant paid plaintiff by check, bearing a notation that this constituted payment in full for all hay bought. Plaintiff retained the check, demanded additional payment, and instituted this suit. The trial court gave judgment for plaintiff. Defendant appealed. The Supreme Court noted that there was testimony supporting the view that there was no bona fide dispute between the parties because defendant had been informed of plaintiff's asking price before entering into the agreement, and there was evidence that defendant's insistence on a lower price was not the result of a genuine misunderstanding but merely an attempt to get away with paying less than the amount originally agreed upon (46 Cal. 2d 309, 311-312). The Court said that the trial court could have properly found that the defendant had not proved his defense of accord and satisfaction, but the Court reversed the judgment because the trial court did not make an express finding rejecting defendant's plea of accord and satisfaction (46 Cal. 2d 309, 312-313).

Security First National Bank v. Rospaw (1951) 107 Cal. App. 2d 220, 237 P.2d 76 , was an action to recover the principal sum owed on a written promissory note. Defendant denied that the sum was due and payable because there was a contemporaneous oral agreement that the note was to be effective only during the lifetime of the payee. The trial court granted plaintiff's motion for judgment on the pleadings on the grounds that the answer failed to raise any issue of fact or to statea defense. Defendant appealed. The court of appeal held that the facts pleaded did not show an accord and satisfaction and affirmed the judgment of the trial court. The court held that an agreement of accord and satisfaction presupposes a prior controversy concerning the relative rights of the parties under the preexisting agreement, and a right of action must have already accrued on the old obligation for a new agreement to constitute an accord and satisfaction (107 Cal. App. 2d 220, 223-224).

The facts and procedural background of B. & W. Engineering Co. v. Beam (1913) 23 Cal. App. 164, 137 P 624 , are discussed in § 11.20[3][a]. In affirming the judgment for defendant, the court of appeal held that an agreement of accord and satisfaction presupposes a prior controversy concerning the relative rights of the parties under the preexisting agreement, and that before a dispute concerning a claim for money alleged to be due under an existing contract can be made the basis of an agreement of accord and satisfaction, it must be shown that the dispute was bona fide (23 Cal. App. 164, 170).

[b] Honest Dispute Required

The facts and procedural background of B. & W. Engineering Co. v. Beam (1913) 23 Cal. App. 164, 137 P 624 , are discussed in § 11.20[3][a]. On appeal, plaintiff contended that the facts of the transaction showed that defendant's claim could not have been honestly disputed and the finding of accord and satisfaction was not established by the evidence as a matter of law. The court of appeal disagreed and affirmed the trial court's judgment. The court said that it was not required that the circumstances of the transaction on which the dispute was founded affirmatively show that there was room for an honest dispute. It said that the rule was that if a debt or claim was disputed at the time of payment, the payment of a part of the whole debt is good satisfaction when accepted, and it did not matter that there was no solid foundation for the dispute. The court held that the test in such a case was whether the dispute was honest or fraudulent. It said the dispute, if honest, affords a basis for an accord between the parties, which the law favors, and the execution of which is the satisfaction (23 Cal. App. 164, 170-171).

[c] No Dispute When Claim Concededly Due

MacIsaac & Menke Co. v. Cardox Corp. (1961) 193 Cal. App. 2d 661, 14 Cal. Rptr. 523 , was an action to recover reasonable costs for additional work performed under a written subcontract, modified by an executed oral agreement. Defendants contended that if liable under the modified contract, their liability was limited to $8,991 by reason of a writing signed by plaintiff that acknowledged receipt of $6,139 as payment in full of all sums due plaintiff other than the sum of $8,991, over which there was a dispute. The trial court entered judgment for plaintiff for $15,623, which the court found to be the reasonable value of plaintiff's work. The court of appeal affirmed the judgment and rejected defendants' contention. The court found that the receipt was not supported by any consideration because the payment of $6,139 was admittedly due and owing. The court therefore held that the alleged accord and satisfaction failed for lack of consideration (193 Cal. App. 2d 661, 671).

Rued v. Cooper (1897) 119 Cal. 463, 51 P 704 , was an action to recover a large amount of money advanced for the purpose of buying, carrying, and selling shares of stock in mining corporations for plaintiff, upon margin, under a contract for that purpose. Defendants pleaded that plaintiff accepted a lesser sum than that advanced, together with shares of stock, as full payment, settlement, and satisfaction of the claim. The trial court found that there was an accord and satisfaction and gave judgment for defendants. Plaintiff appealed, and the Supreme Court reversed the judgment. The Court found that the payment of the money was of a sum conceded to be due under the terms of the contract. It held that payment of a part of the whole debt is not a good satisfaction even if accepted, unless the amount of the claim is disputed. In this case, the Court found that there was no dispute or controversy, and hence no agreement to accept something different from, or less than, that to which plaintiff was legally entitled; therefore, there was no accord (119 Cal. 463, 467).

[d] Wages Concededly Due Do Not Extinguish Disputed Claim

Reid v. Overland Machined Products (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 203, 10 Cal. Rptr. 819 , 359 P.2d 251 , was an action for an accounting for wages and commissions allegedly earned pursuant to a written employment contract. Defendant contended that its obligation was extinguished by accord and satisfaction because plaintiff cashed checks that were made conditional as payment in full. The trial court found that there was no accord and satisfaction and gave judgment for plaintiff. Defendant appealed.

The Supreme Court held that the trial court correctly ruled that there was no accord and satisfaction but reversed the judgment because of errors in the admission and exclusion of evidence. In its holding, the Court said that ordinarily the conditional payment of either an amount concededly owed, or an amount in excess of that concededly owed, is sufficient consideration for a settlement of a bona fide disputed claim, and an offer and acceptance of such an amount given in full payment for the disputed claim therefore discharges the debt (55 Cal. 2d 203, 207). The Court held that this rule does not apply in the case of wages because Lab. Code § 206 requires an employer to pay without consideration all wages concededly due and expressly precludes an employer from coercing a settlement of disputed claims by offering a conditional payment. Since the checks tendered by defendant were for wages concededly due and conditioned on the release of all additional liability, no accord and satisfaction could result, because such an agreement would violate state law. Plaintiff therefore was entitled to recover on the contract (55 Cal. 2d 203, 208).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 11 ACCORD AND SATISFACTION
PART II. FORMS

1-11 California Points & Authorities § 11.30

§ 11.30 Opposing Contention That the Obligation Sued on Was Extinguished by Accord and Satisfaction [Civ. Code § 1521 et seq.]--Accord Not Executed

[1] FORM Opposing Contention That the Obligation Sued on Was Extinguished by Accord and Satisfaction [Civ. Code § 1521 et seq.]--Accord Not Executed

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE OBLIGATION SUED ON WAS NOT EXTINGUISHED BY ACCORD AND SATISFACTION, BECAUSE THE ACCORD WAS NEVER EXECUTED OR SATISFIED.

A. Accord Must Be Executed. The accord may be binding on the parties, but it does not discharge the obligation it is intended to satisfy until it is executed. Execution alone is satisfaction (Holton v. Noble (1890) 83 Cal. 7, 9, 23 P. 58).

[Optional] B. Part Performance Not Satisfaction. Payment of an amount less than the amount due under an accord agreement does not execute the accord or satisfy the original obligation (see Simmons v. Oullahan (1888) 75 Cal. 508, 508-509, 17 P. 543).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that the obligation sued on was extinguished by accord and satisfaction when the accord was never executed or satisfied. This form opposes §§ 11.20 -11.24.

These points and authorities may be combined, when appropriate, with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise an objection to the extinction of an obligation by accord and satisfaction. The points and authorities set forth in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Counsel may show that the accord agreement was not satisfied by showing that the amount or item agreed on to extinguish the original debt was never tendered, or that what was tendered was only part of what was agreed on.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a discussion and forms for use in accord and satisfaction generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 6, Accord and Satisfaction (Matthew Bender). For a discussion and forms relating to contracts generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 140, Contracts (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For points and authorities relating to actions for breach of contract and for defenses to the formation and enforcement of a contract generally, see Ch. 50, Contracts .

[d] Accord Must Be Executed

Holton v. Noble (1890) 23 P. 58 , was an action to recover rent due on a written lease. Defendants asserted the defense of accord and satisfaction by claiming that the landlord had agreed to extend the time for payment and to accept less than what was due under the lease. The trial court granted a motion of plaintiff for judgment on the pleadings. The Supreme Court affirmed the judgment. The Court held that unless the accord agreement to accept the smaller sum in discharge of the larger was carried out, the obligation to pay the larger sum was never extinguished or discharged; execution alone is satisfaction. Since defendant's answer showed that the agreement was never executed, the original obligation remained unaffected ( ).

[e] Part Performance Not Satisfaction

Simmons v. Oullahan (1888) 75 Cal. 508, 17 P. 543 , was an action for goodssold and delivered. Plaintiff entered into an agreement with defendant to accept one half of the amount due under the contract for the goods delivered. Defendant gave plaintiff an even smaller sum than that agreed on, together with a receipt containing an expression to the effect that the sum paid was his pro rata of the distribution. Defendant contended that this satisfied the accord agreement, thus extinguishing his obligation under the original contract. The trial court gave judgment for plaintiff. Defendant appealed, and the Supreme Court affirmed. The Court held that an accord without full satisfaction was not a bar to an action. It said that a receipt is never conclusive and found that defendant did not pay the amount due under the accord agreement. Therefore, the Court held that the accord was not satisfied and that defendant's debt was not extinguished (75 Cal. 508, 509).

[3] Additional Authorities

[a] Accord Must Be Executed

Moving Picture Machine Operators Union v. Glasgow Theaters, Inc. (1970) 6 Cal. App. 3d 395, 86 Cal. Rptr. 33 , involved an action to recover payments owed by defendant to a pension fund for the benefit of union members. There was a dispute between the parties regarding the date on which payments were to begin. This dispute was settled by an oral agreement with a compromise date reached by counsel for both parties. The agreement was ratified by the parties but subsequently repudiated by defendant. No payments were made. Plaintiff claimed that this constituted an accord and satisfaction. Following the filing of the suit, defendant admitted it owed plaintiff $1,209. The trial court held the original written agreement void due to an alteration of a material part and gave judgment for the plaintiff for $1,209. Both defendant and plaintiff appealed. In affirming the judgment, the court of appeal held that it is necessary to show satisfaction as well as an accord, since an accord without satisfaction does not extinguish the original obligation (6 Cal. App. 3d 395, 403). The court found that, although an accord was reached, no money was paid. It therefore held that the accord was not satisfied (6 Cal. App. 3d 395, 404). Since the court held the original obligation void, defendants were held liable only for the amount they conceded to owe plaintiff (6 Cal. App. 3d 395, 406).

Rabinowitz v. Kandel (1969) 1 Cal. App. 3d 961, 81 Cal. Rptr. 897 , involved, inter alia, an action to recover the amount due under a $10,000 promissory note. Defendants asserted the affirmative defense of accord and satisfaction. Defendants claimed that plaintiffs orally agreed to accept an assignment of proceeds from an escrow in full satisfaction of the obligation on the promissory note. They further claimed that the agreement had been satisfied and that defendants' obligation under the promissory note had been extinguished by plaintiffs' acceptance of two notes secured by deeds of trust for $8,000, which were payable to defendants and never assigned by defendants to plaintiffs. Plaintiffs claimed that the two notes had been forwarded as collateral for the promissory note and not as satisfaction of the accord agreement. The trial court entered judgment for defendants. Plaintiffs appealed. The court of appeal reversed the trial court's judgment and held that defendants failed to sustain their burden of proof that there was an accord and satisfaction. The court held that the accord was never executed since the plaintiffs did not receive the proceeds from the escrow (1 Cal. App. 3d 961, 965). It held that the two notes were not satisfaction of the alleged agreement, and no finding was made by the trial court of a second accord that could be satisfied by receipt of the two notes (1 Cal. App. 3d 961, 966).

In Silvers v. Grossman (1920) 183 Cal. 696, 192 P. 534 , the facts and procedural background of which are discussed in § 11.20[3][c], the Supreme Court reversed the trial court's judgment, finding that the satisfaction of the accord was not pleaded. The Court held that an accord alone is insufficient as a defense to an action on the original obligation and that such original obligation is not actually extinguished until there has been an acceptance of the consideration agreed upon, or in other words, satisfaction (183 Cal. 696, 699).

[b] Part Performance Not Satisfaction

Simmons v. Hamilton (1880) 56 Cal. 493 , was an action to recover money from defendants who were jointly indebted to plaintiff on a promissory note. Plaintiff entered a verbal agreement with defendants to accept one fourth of the amount owed on the promissory note from defendant Bicknell and three fourths of the amount owed from defendant Hamilton in the form of a promissory note, secured by a mortgage on real estate in Los Angeles. Defendant Bicknell's portion was accepted by plaintiff, but defendant Hamilton's note was rejected because the mortgage offered to secure payment was on Hamilton's homestead and was not satisfactory to plaintiff. Defendants contended that their obligation under the promissory note was extinguished by an accord agreement. The trial court held that defendants were jointly indebted on the note, and that plaintiff was entitled to judgment upon the note against defendant Hamilton but not against defendant Bicknell. The trial court then issued an order granting a new trial. Defendant Bicknell appealed the order granting a new trial. The Supreme Court held that the trial court had erred in its conclusion of law, for the findings did not support the defense of accord and satisfaction. The Court held that a plea of accord and satisfaction must show an accord that has been executed. The Court found that the verbal agreement was never executed by defendants. It held that although the agreement was performed in part by defendant Bicknell, part performance of a verbal agreement by one or two joint debtors was not an execution by both, and since an unexecuted agreement does not extinguish the obligation of joint debtors, the obligation of defendants was not extinguished (56 Cal. 493, 495).

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 11 ACCORD AND SATISFACTION
PART II. FORMS

1-11 California Points & Authorities § 11.31

§ 11.31 Opposing Contention That the Obligation Sued on Was Extinguished by Accord and Satisfaction [Civ. Code § 1521 et seq.]--Accord and Satisfaction Not Specially Pleaded

[1] FORM Opposing Contention That the Obligation Sued on Was Extinguished by Accord and Satisfaction [Civ. Code § 1521 et seq.]--Accord and Satisfaction Not Specially Pleaded

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT SHOULD NOT BE ALLOWED TO SHOW AN ACCORD AND SATISFACTION, BECAUSE IT WAS NOT SPECIALLY PLEADED AS AN AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE.

Accord and Satisfaction Must Be Pleaded. The person who relies on an accord and satisfaction must plead both (Berger v. Lane (1923) 190 Cal. 443, 447, 213 P. 45 ; Silvers v. Grossman (1920) 183 Cal. 696, 192 P. 534).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose the contention that the obligation sued on was extinguished by an accord and satisfaction because the defense of accord and satisfaction was not specially pleaded. Counsel should note that there are certain exceptions to the requirement that an accord and satisfaction be specially pleaded [see § 11.25].

These points and authorities may be combined, when appropriate, with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise an objection to extinction of an obligation by accord and satisfaction. This would most likely be raised in a motion to exclude evidence, or in either a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict or a motion for new trial when support of plaintiff argues that he or she is entitled to judgment because, although an accord and satisfaction was purportedly proven, it was never pleaded by defendant. The points and authorities set forth in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Counsel should show that the answer does not aver both the accord and satisfaction.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a discussion and forms for use in accord and satisfaction generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 6, Accord and Satisfaction (Matthew Bender). For a discussion and forms relating to contracts generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 140, Contracts (Matthew Bender). For a discussion and forms relating to amendment of pleadings, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 21, Amended and Supplemental Pleadings (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For points and authorities relating to contracts generally, see Ch. 50, Contracts . For a discussion and forms relating to amendment of pleadings, see Ch. 16, Amended and Supplemental Pleadings .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Accord and Satisfaction Must Be Pleaded

The facts and procedural background of Berger v. Lane (1923) 190 Cal. 443, 213 P. 45 , are discussed in § 11.29[3][a]. In reversing the trial court's decision, the Supreme Court found that there was no bona fide dispute and therefore no accord and satisfaction extinguishing the original obligation. In so holding, the Court noted that the defendant relying on an accord and satisfaction must plead and prove both (190 Cal. 443, 447).

The facts and procedural background of Silvers v. Grossman (1920) 183 Cal. 696, 192 P. 534 , are discussed in § 11.20[3][c]. The Supreme Court in Silvers reversed the trial court's judgment for plaintiff and the court's finding of an accord and satisfaction because satisfaction was not pleaded. The Court held that a plea that averts an unexecuted accord fails to state facts sufficient to constitute a defense. It held that if the giving and acceptance of a promise is the execution of the accord, and if the promise per se is relied on, then the giving and acceptance of the promise in satisfaction of the preexisting obligation must be averred in the pleadings (183 Cal. 696, 699).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Accord and Satisfaction Must Be Pleaded

The facts and procedural background of Simmons v. Oullahan (1888) 75 Cal. 508, 17 P. 543 , are discussed in § 11.30[3][b]. In affirming the trial court's judgment for plaintiff, the Supreme Court noted that the defendant who relies on accord and satisfaction must plead and prove the satisfaction as well as the accord (75 Cal. 508, 509).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 12 ACCOUNTING

1-12 California Points & Authorities 12.syn

§ 12.syn Synopsis to Chapter 12: ACCOUNTING

§ 12.01 Scope of Chapter

§ 12.02 When Action for an Accounting Lies

§ 12.03 Common-Law Action of Account Distinguished

§ 12.04 Parties Between Whom Accounting May Be Had

[1] Statutory Authority

[2] Examples as Illustrated by Cases

§ 12.05 Jurisdiction

§ 12.06 Venue

§ 12.07 Stating Action for Accounting

§ 12.08 Procedure

§ 12.09 When Issue Regarding Right to Accounting Arises

§ 12.10 Related Pleadings and Practice Chapters

§ 12.11 Related Points and Authorities Chapters

§§ 12.12-12.19 [Reserved]

§ 12.20 Supporting Contention That Action for Accounting Is Equitable or Transitory or Both

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Action for Accounting as Equitable or Transitory or Both

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Action for Accounting as Equitable or Transitory or Both

§ 12.21 Supporting Contention That Proper County for Trial of Accounting Action Is County of Defendant's Residence [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Defendant as Entitled to Trial of Accounting Action in County of His or Her Residence

[b] Joinder of Local Action With Accounting Action as Not Depriving Defendant of Right to Trial in County of His or Her Residence

[c] Request for Incidental Local Relief as Not Changing Nature of Action for Equitable Relief From Transitory to Local

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Defendant as Entitled to Trial of Accounting Action in County of His or Her Residence

[b] Joinder of Local Action With Accounting Action as Not Depriving Defendant of Right to Trial in County of His or Her Residence

[c] Request for Incidental Local Relief as Not Changing Nature of Action for Equitable Relief From Transitory to

Local

§ 12.22 Opposing Contention That Proper County for Trial of Action Is County of Defendant's Residence [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)]--Incidental Accounting Does Not Affect Venue of Local Action

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Incidental Accounting as Not Changing Nature or Venue of Local Action

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Incidental Accounting as Not Changing Nature or Venue of Local Action

§ 12.23 Opposing Contention That Proper County for Trial of Action Is County of Defendant's Residence [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)]--Action Is Founded on Contract

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Contract Provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a) as Applicable to Actions Involving Accounting Founded on Contract

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Contract Provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a) as Applicable to Actions Involving Accounting Founded on Contract

§§ 12.24-12.39 [Reserved]

§ 12.40 Supporting Contention That Accounting Does Not Lie--No Accounting Is Necessary or Remedy at Law Is Adequate

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Accounting Necessary or Remedy at Law Is Adequate

[b] Right to Accounting as Required to Be Shown

[c] Accounting as Not Required When Need or Right Is Not Shown

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] No Accounting Necessary or Remedy at Law Is Adequate

§ 12.41 Supporting Contention That No Cause for Accounting Exists--Account Settled by Agreement of Parties

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Accounting After Account Settled

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] No Accounting After Account Settled

§ 12.42 Supporting Contention That No Cause for Accounting Exists--No Accounting Necessary When Sum Sued for Is Certain

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Complaint Seeks Recovery of Sum Certain

[b] All Facts Necessary to Calculate Sum Sought Are or Can Be Alleged

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Complaint Seeks Recovery of Sum Certain

§ 12.43 Supporting Contention That No Cause for Accounting Exists--No Accounting Necessary When Items Are Not in Dispute

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Items Not in Dispute

§ 12.44 Supporting Contention That No Cause for Accounting Exists--No Right to Accounting in Absence of Misconduct or Breach of Fiduciary Duty by Defendant

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Right to Accounting in Absence of Misconduct or Breach of Fiduciary Duty by Defendant

§ 12.45 Opposing Contention That No Cause for An Accounting Exists--Cause for Accounting Sufficiently

Alleged; Specification of Sum as Minimum Amount Due as Surplusage

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Necessary Allegations

[b] Specification of Sum as Minimum Amount Due as Surplusage

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Necessary Allegations

[b] Specification of Sum as Minimum Amount Due as Surplusage

§ 12.46 Opposing Contention That No Cause for An Accounting Exists--Fiduciary Relationship and Duty to Account Exist

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Fiduciary Relationship and Duty to Account Exist

§ 12.47 Opposing Contention That No Cause for an Accounting Exists--Complicated Accounts Rendering Action at Law Impractical

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Complicated Accounts Rendering Action at Law Impractical

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Complicated Accounts Rendering Action at Law Impractical

§§ 12.48-12.59 [Reserved]

§ 12.60 Supporting Contention That Action Is Barred by Statute of Limitations--Accounting Is Ancillary to Main Action, Which Is Barred

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Nature of Right Sued on as Determining Which Statute of Limitations Applies

[b] Accounting Ancillary to Main Action

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Nature of Right Sued on as Determining Which Statute of Limitations Applies

§ 12.61 Opposing Contention That Action Is Barred by Statute of Limitations--Action for Accounting May Be Commenced at Any Time Within Four Years After It Accrues [Code Civ. Proc. § 343]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Action for Accounting as Governed by Code Civ. Proc. § 343

[b] Code Civ. Proc. § 343 as Applying to Actions Seeking an Accounting When Duty to Account Arises From Fiduciary Relationship of Parties

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Code Civ. Proc. § 343 as Applying to Actions Seeking an Accounting When Duty to Account Arises From Fiduciary Relationship of Parties

§§ 12.62-12.79 [Reserved]

§ 12.80 Supporting Contention That Trial Court's Disposition of Accounting Action Is Improper--Mere Statement of Balance Due Without Ordering Reference

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Mere Statement by Trial Court of Balance Due Without Reference as Insufficient

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Mere Statement by Trial Court of Balance Due Without Reference as Insufficient

§ 12.81 Opposing Contention That Trial Court's Disposition of Accounting Action Is Improper--Account Need Not Be Stated in Accepted Bookkeeping Fashion

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Sufficiency of Account

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 12 ACCOUNTING
PART I. INTRODUCTION

1-12 California Points & Authorities § 12.01

§ 12.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter discusses the nature, jurisdiction, and venue of accounting actions and contains memoranda for use in supporting [see §§ 12.20, 12.21] and opposing [see §§ 12.22, 12.23] the contentions that an action for an accounting is equitable and transitory in nature and that the general venue statute applies.

The chapter also relates to the pleading of a cause of action, and the showing required, for an accounting and contains memoranda supporting [see §§ 12.40 -12.43] and opposing [see §§ 12.45 -12.47] the contention that no cause of action for an accounting is alleged or no right to an accounting is shown.

The chapter contains memoranda for use in supporting [see § 12.60] and opposing [see § 12.61] the contention that an accounting action is barred by the statute of limitations.

This chapter contains memoranda supporting [see § 12.80] and opposing [see § 12.81] the contention that the court's statement of an account is insufficient.

This chapter does not cover references to take an account pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 638 or 639. For memoranda relating to references, see Ch. 201, Reference and Referees .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureVenueGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesEquitable AccountingsElementsCivil ProcedureRemediesEquitable AccountingsPartnershipsGovernmentsLegislationStatutes of LimitationsGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 12 ACCOUNTING
PART I. INTRODUCTION

1-12 California Points & Authorities § 12.02

§ 12.02 When Action for an Accounting Lies

An action for an accounting lies whenever a fiduciary relation exists between the parties and a duty rests on the defendant to render an account [see, e.g., San Pedro Lumber Co. v. Reynolds (1896) 111 Cal. 588, 596-597, 44 P. 309 ; see also § 12.46]. The action also lies in cases in which the accounts involved are so complicated that an ordinary action at law demanding a fixed sum is not practicable [see, e.g., Brea v. McGlashan (1934) 3 Cal. App. 2d 454, 460, 39 P.2d 877 ; see also § 12.47]. However, the mere existence of a complicated accounting relationship is insufficient by itself to permit the maintenance of an action for an accounting. To support an accounting, the plaintiff must prove that the defendant committed some form of misconduct, violated a fiduciary duty, or otherwise owes money to the plaintiff [see Union Bank v. Superior Court (1995) 31 Cal. App. 4th 573, 593-594, 37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 653 ; see also § 12.44].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesEquitable AccountingsElementsCivil ProcedureRemediesEquitable AccountingsPartnershipsCivil ProcedureRemediesEquitable AccountingsTrusts

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 12 ACCOUNTING
PART I. INTRODUCTION

1-12 California Points & Authorities § 12.03

§ 12.03 Common-Law Action of Account Distinguished

An equitable action for an accounting should not be confused with a legal action based on the old common law action of account. The latter action lies against a fiduciary entrusted with property for which he or she is under a present duty to account, and it may be prosecuted as either a legal or an equitable action, jurisdiction of the action being concurrent. When the action is at law, however, the defendant has a right to a jury trial even though the action could have been brought in equity [see Ripling v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County (1952) 112 Cal. App. 2d 399, 403-404, 407-408 (holding that plaintiff's election to obtain a writ of attachment on claim based on express contract and for money had and received constituted election to proceed at law rather than in equity)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsActions in EquityCivil ProcedureRemediesEquitable AccountingsElementsCivil ProcedureRemediesEquitable AccountingsPartnershipsCivil ProcedureRemediesEquitable AccountingsTrustsGovernmentsCourtsCommon Law

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 12 ACCOUNTING
PART I. INTRODUCTION

1-12 California Points & Authorities § 12.04

§ 12.04 Parties Between Whom Accounting May Be Had

[1] Statutory Authority

There is no statute generally authorizing an action for an accounting, although several statutes provide for an accounting by specified persons. The following are examples: Civ. Code § 1158(d) (accounting by custodian of gift to minor); Corp. Code §§ 15021, 15022 (accounting by partners); Lab. Code § 2861 (accounting by employee); Penal Code § 536a (accounting by commission merchant, broker, factor, or consignee to whom property is consigned or entrusted for sale); Prob. Code §§ 8525(b), 10950, 10952 (accounting by administrator or executor of estate); Prob. Code § 2620 et seq. (accounting by guardian or conservator); Prob. Code § 2632 (accounting when guardian or conservator is deceased or incapacitated or has absconded).

[2] Examples as Illustrated by Cases

As illustrated by the cases cited, the following are examples of parties between whom an accounting may be had. The list is not intended to be exhaustive.

- Administrator and person with whom decedent was living [McAllen v. Souza (1937) 24 Cal. App. 2d 247, 74 P.2d 853].

- Agent and principal [San Pedro Lumber Co. v. Reynolds (1896) 111 Cal. 588, 44 P. 309 ; Arbuckle v. Clifford F. Reid, Inc. (1931) 118 Cal. App. 272, 4 P.2d 978 ; Allsopp v. Joshua Hendy Machine Works (1907) 5 Cal. App. 228, 90 P. 39 (disapproved on another point in Jefferson v. J.E. French Co. (1960) 54 Cal. 2d 717, 720, 7 Cal. Rptr. 899, 355 P.2d 643)].

- Charitable corporations [Brown v. Memorial Nat. Home Foundation (1958) 158 Cal. App. 2d 448, 322 P.2d 600 (action by attorney general against two charitable corporations involved in dispute)].

- Client and attorney [Clark v. Millsap (1926) 197 Cal. 765, 242 P. 918].

- Distributee of deceased's estate and alleged converters of estate's assets [Mackay v. Clark Rig Bldg. Co. (1935) 5 Cal. App. 2d 44, 42 P.2d 341].

- Employee and employer [Remme v. Herzog (1963) 222 Cal. App. 2d 863, 35 Cal. Rptr. 586 ; Brea v. McGlashan (1934) 3 Cal. App. 2d 454, 39 P.2d 877].

- Factor and principal [National Bank of New Zealand v. Finn (1927) 81 Cal. App. 317, 253 P. 757].

- Guardian and ward [Trumpler v. Cotton (1895) 109 Cal. 250, 41 P. 1033].

- Husband and wife [Chiarodit v. Chiarodit (1933) 218 Cal. 147, 21 P.2d 562 ; Gunder v. Gunder (1929) 208 Cal. 559, 282 P. 794 ; Ennes v. Ennes (1957) 147 Cal. App. 2d 574, 305 P.2d 622 ; Roy v. Roy (1938) 29 Cal. App. 2d 596, 85 P.2d 223].

- Joint venturers [Stilwell v. Trutanich (1960) 178 Cal. App. 2d 614, 3 Cal. Rptr. 285 ; Nesbitt v. Bruce Eells & Assoc. (1951) 105 Cal. App. 2d 370, 233 P.2d 183 ; Erwing v. Jones (1945) 69 Cal. App. 2d 97, 158 P.2d 265 ; Peardon v. White (1924) 65 Cal. App. 463, 224 P. 263].

- Lessor and lessee [Hollar v. Saline Products, Inc. (1935) 3 Cal. 2d 80, 43 P.2d 273].

- Lodges [Most Worshipful Sons of Light Grand Lodge v. Sons, etc., Lodge (1949) 91 Cal. App. 2d 582, 205 P.2d 722].

- Owner and contractor's surety [National Brass Wks. v. Weeks (1928) 92 Cal. App. 318, 268 P. 412].

- Parties agreeing under Code Civ. Proc. § 638 (reference to take account) [Jackson v. Puget Sound Lumber Co. (1898) 123 Cal. 97, 55 P. 788].

- Partners [Bakewell v. Bakewell (1942) 21 Cal. 2d 224, 130 P.2d 975 ; Middleton v. Finney (1931) 214 Cal. 523, 6 P.2d 938 ; Di Blasi v. Di Blasi (1930) 209 Cal. 753, 290 P. 7 ; Doudell v. Shoo (1911) 159 Cal. 448, 114 P. 579 ; Shirley v. Cook (1953) 119 Cal. App. 2d 220, 259 P.2d 25 ; David v. Goodman (1948) 89 Cal. App. 2d 162, 200 P.2d 568 ; Jackson v. Allen (1921) 55 Cal. App. 257, 203 P. 411].

- Stockholder and president of corporation [Stoll v. Selander (1947) 81 Cal. App. 2d 286, 183 P.2d 935].

- Trustee and beneficiary [Purdy v. Johnson (1917) 174 Cal. 521, 163 P. 893 ; Title Insurance & Trust Co. v. Ingersoll (1910) 158 Cal. 474, 111 P. 360 ; Esslinger v. Cummins (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 517, 523-528, 50 Cal. Rptr. 3d 538 ; Miller v. Miller (1963) 217 Cal. App. 2d 538, 31 Cal. Rptr. 618 ; Estate of McCabe (1950) 98 Cal. App. 2d 503, 220 P.2d 614 ; Estate of McCabe (1948) 87 Cal. App. 2d 430, 197 P.2d 35].

- Trustee and trust settlor, if trust instrument reserves to settlor power to petition court for supervised accounting [Patton v. Sherwood (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 339, 343-344, 61 Cal. Rptr. 3d 289] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Civil ProcedureRemediesEquitable AccountingsElementsCivil ProcedureRemediesEquitable AccountingsPartnershipsCivil ProcedureRemediesEquitable AccountingsTrustsEstate, Gift & Trust LawProbatePersonal RepresentativesDuties & PowersAccountingEstate, Gift & Trust LawTrustsTrusteesDuties & PowersAccounting

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 12 ACCOUNTING
PART I. INTRODUCTION

1-12 California Points & Authorities § 12.05

§ 12.05 Jurisdiction

As shown by the authorities cited in § 12.20, an action for an accounting is equitable in nature. The superior court generally has jurisdiction of these actions [see Cal. Const., Art. VI, § 10]. In a limited civil case, the superior court has jurisdiction to take accounts when necessary to preserve the property or rights of any party to the action [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85, 86(a)(1), (8)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesEquitable AccountingsElementsCivil ProcedureRemediesEquitable AccountingsPartnershipsCivil ProcedureRemediesEquitable AccountingsTrusts

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 12 ACCOUNTING
PART I. INTRODUCTION

1-12 California Points & Authorities § 12.06

§ 12.06 Venue

An action for an accounting is transitory and, under Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a), the defendant is normally entitled to have the action tried in the county of his or her residence [Smith v. Smith (1891) 88 Cal. 572, 577, 26 P. 356 ; see § 12.21]. However, if the right to an accounting is based on contract, then under Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a) and subject to the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 395(b) (discussed below), the action may be tried in the county in which the contract was to be performed when the defendant has contracted to perform the contract in a particular county, in the county in which the contract was entered into, or in the county of the defendant's residence [Gilman v. Nordin (1952) 112 Cal. App. 2d 788, 790, 247 P.2d 394 ; see § 12.23]. The county in which the obligation is incurred is deemed to be the county in which it is to be performed, unless there is a special contract in writing to the contrary [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)]. Code Civ. Proc. § 395(b), referred to above, contains special venue provisions for actions founded on a defendant's obligation for goods, services, loans or extensions of credit intended primarily for personal, family, or household use, other than an obligation described in Civ. Code § 1812.10 (Unruh Retail Installment Sales Act) or 2984.4 (Rees-Levering Motor Vehicle Sales and Finance Act).

If plaintiff seeks other relief in addition to an accounting, it is the main relief sought that determines the character of the action for venue purposes [Neet v. Holmes (1942) 19 Cal. 2d 605, 611-612, 122 P.2d 557 ; see § 12.22].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureVenueGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesEquitable AccountingsElementsCivil ProcedureRemediesEquitable AccountingsPartnershipsCivil ProcedureRemediesEquitable AccountingsTrusts

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 12 ACCOUNTING
PART I. INTRODUCTION

1-12 California Points & Authorities § 12.07

§ 12.07 Stating Action for Accounting

As noted in et seq, an action for an accounting lies whenever a fiduciary relation exists between the parties and a duty rests on the defendant to render an account [see, e.g., San Pedro Lumber Co. v. Reynolds (1896) 111 Cal. 588, 596-597, 44 P. 309 ; see also § 12.46]. The action also lies in cases in which the accounts involved are so complicated that an ordinary action at law demanding a fixed sum would not be practicable [see, e.g., Brea v. McGlashan (1934) 3 Cal. App. 2d 454, 460, 39 P.2d 877 ; see also § 12.47].

A cause of action for an accounting is stated if the facts showing the existence of the relationship that requires an accounting are alleged with the statement that some balance, which cannot be ascertained without an accounting, is due plaintiff [Whann v. Doell (1923) 192 Cal. 680, 684, 221 P. 899 ; see § 12.45].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesEquitable AccountingsElements

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 12 ACCOUNTING
PART I. INTRODUCTION

1-12 California Points & Authorities § 12.08

§ 12.08 Procedure

Except as otherwise provided by law, the court in its discretion regulates the order of proof [Evid. Code § 320]. However, in the case of an action involving an accounting, the right to an accounting must be established before an accounting is in order [Baxter v. Krieger (1958) 157 Cal. App. 2d 730, 732, 321 P.2d 879 ; see § 12.40]. That is, the right to an accounting is a preliminary fact that must normally be established before evidence of the accounting is admissible [see Evid. Code §§ 400, 403]. Once the right to an accounting is shown, the court either proceeds to take the account itself or orders a reference for that purpose [Stoll v. Selander (1947) 81 Cal. App. 2d 286, 294, 183 P.2d 935].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudicial OfficersJudgesDiscretionCivil ProcedureRemediesEquitable AccountingsElementsCivil ProcedureRemediesEquitable AccountingsPartnershipsCivil ProcedureRemediesEquitable AccountingsTrustsEvidenceProcedural ConsiderationsPreliminary QuestionsGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 12 ACCOUNTING
PART I. INTRODUCTION

1-12 California Points & Authorities § 12.09

§ 12.09 When Issue Regarding Right to Accounting Arises

As indicated by the above discussion, the issue regarding a right to an accounting arises first with respect to the pleading seeking an accounting (either a complaint or cross complaint). If the pleading fails to state a cause of action, it is subject to a demurrer, a nonstatutory motion for judgment on the pleadings, or an objection to the introduction of evidence at trial. A memorandum must be filed in support of a demurrer or noticed motion [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(a)]. They may also be required by the court in support of an objection to the introduction of evidence at trial and may, even if not requested by the court, be cited in support of the objection.

The second point at which the issue arises is after the party seeking the accounting has produced his or her evidence at trial. If that evidence is insufficient to establish the party's right to an accounting, the accounting is normally denied. If the court proceeds with an accounting even though the right to it has not been established, counsel may wish to cite points and authorities in support of his or her objection to the accounting or secure permission to file a trial brief on the issue before the accounting is had.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProceduresPleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsDemurrersCivil ProceduresPretrial JudgmentsJudgment on the PleadingsCivil ProceduresRemediesEquitable AccountingsElementsCivil ProceduresRemediesEquitable AccountingsPartnershipsCivil ProceduresRemediesEquitable AccountingsTrusts

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 12 ACCOUNTING
PART I. INTRODUCTION

1-12 California Points & Authorities § 12.10

§ 12.10 Related Pleadings and Practice Chapters

For a discussion of jurisdiction in the California judicial system and forms for use in proceedings challenging jurisdiction, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 324, Jurisdiction: Subject Matter Jurisdiction (Matthew Bender). For a discussion of venue and forms for use in moving to change venue, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 571, Venue (Matthew Bender). For a discussion, procedural guide, and forms of general notices of motion and related papers, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 372, Motions and Orders (Matthew Bender).

For a discussion, procedural guide, and forms of complaints for use in accounting actions, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 7, Accounting, Action For (Matthew Bender). For a discussion, procedural guide, and forms for use in demurring to a complaint or moving for judgment on the pleadings, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings (Matthew Bender). For a discussion of motions for nonsuit and judgment, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 389, Nonsuit and Motions for Judgment (Matthew Bender).

For a discussion of the statutes of limitations and forms relating to the manner of pleading them, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions (Matthew Bender).

For a discussion, procedural guide, and forms of demurrers and motions for judgment on the pleadings, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings (Matthew Bender). For a discussion, procedural guide, and forms of nonsuit and motions for judgment, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 389, Nonsuit and Motions for Judgment (Matthew Bender). For a discussion, procedural guide, and forms for use on motions for summary judgment or for separate trial of the defense that the action is barred by the statute of limitations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 537, Summary Judgment and California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 3, Abatement of Actions, § 3.110 et seq. (Matthew Bender), respectively.

For a discussion, procedural guide, and forms for use on motions for a new trial or to set aside and vacate the judgment, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 371, Motions After Trial, § 371.60 et seq. (Matthew Bender).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionJurisdiction Over ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureVenueGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesEquitable AccountingsElementsCivil ProcedureRemediesEquitable AccountingsPartnershipsCivil ProcedureRemediesEquitable AccountingsTrusts

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 12 ACCOUNTING
PART I. INTRODUCTION

1-12 California Points & Authorities § 12.11

§ 12.11 Related Points and Authorities Chapters

For memoranda supporting and opposing motions to change the place of trial from a court lacking to a court having subject matter jurisdiction, or to change venue, see Ch. 133, Jurisdiction: Subject Matter Jurisdiction , and Ch. 238, Venue, § 238.30 et seq.

For memoranda supporting and opposing a general demurrer to a complaint or a motion for judgment on the pleadings, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

For memoranda for use in proceedings relating generally to the bar of the statute of limitations, see Ch. 143, Limitation of Actions . For forms of memoranda supporting and opposing motions for summary judgment and motions for separate trial of an affirmative defense, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments , and et seq., respectively.

For memoranda supporting and opposing a motion for new trial or a motion to set aside and vacate the judgment, see Ch. 155, Motions After Trial , in this set.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionJurisdiction Over ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsDemurrersCivil ProcedureRemediesEquitable AccountingsElementsCivil ProcedureRemediesEquitable AccountingsPartnershipsCivil ProcedureRemediesEquitable AccountingsTrusts

81 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 12 ACCOUNTING
PART I. INTRODUCTION

1-12 California Points & Authorities §§ 12.12-12.19

[Reserved]

§§ 12.12[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 12 ACCOUNTING
PART II. FORMS
A. Nature, Jurisdiction, And Venue Of Accounting Actions

1-12 California Points & Authorities § 12.20

§ 12.20 Supporting Contention That Action for Accounting Is Equitable or Transitory or Both

[1] FORM Supporting Contention That Action for Accounting Is Equitable or Transitory or Both

[The following may be included in a memorandum supporting or opposing a motion, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

AN ACTION FOR AN ACCOUNTING IS _____ [AN ACTION IN EQUITY or A TRANSITORY ACTION or AN ACTION IN EQUITY AND TRANSITORY].

Action for Accounting as Equitable or Transitory or Both. An action for an accounting is a proceeding in equity and essentially a personal (transitory) action (Neet v. Holmes (1942) 19 Cal. 2d 605, 611, 122 P.2d 557 ; Smith v. Smith (1891) 88 Cal. 572, 577, 26 P. 356).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used in support of a defendant's contention that the action for accounting is equitable or transitory or both.

This form may be combined with a form of memorandum relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue regarding the nature of an action for accounting. For example, the point and authorities set out in this form may be combined with points and authorities establishing that an action for an accounting is governed by the venue provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a) [see § 12.21], or supporting a motion to change venue when the action has been filed in a court in a county other than that in which defendant resides, that is, in an improper court for trial [see Code Civ. Proc. § 397(a)]. This form might also be combined with points and authorities opposing a jury trial or supporting a motion for trial by an advisory jury [see discussion in California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 326A, Jury Verdicts (Matthew Bender)].

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, if it is not entirely clear from the complaint that the action is one for an accounting, counsel should include a discussion of the allegations showing that the action is in fact one for an accounting [see § 12.40 et seq.].

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For forms of notices of motion to change venue or to transfer a case from a court lacking to a court having subject matter jurisdiction, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 571, Venue , Ch. 323, Jurisdiction: Subject Matter Jurisdiction (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For memoranda of points and authorities supporting and opposing a motion to change venue or to transfer a case from a court lacking to a court having subject matter jurisdiction, see Ch. 238, Venue § 238.30 et seq., and Ch. 133, Jurisdiction: Subject Matter Jurisdiction .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Action for Accounting as Equitable or Transitory or Both

In Neet v. Holmes (1942) 19 Cal. 2d 605, 122 P.2d 557 , plaintiffs sued the defendants in Los Angeles County, the county of defendants' residence, for an accounting, a declaration of trust of certain mining property situated in Imperial County, and other relief. Some of the defendants, contending that the causes of action alleged were local in nature and triable in the county in which the mining properties were situated [see Code Civ. Proc. § 392], moved for a change of venue to Imperial County. The motion was denied, and defendants appealed. The Supreme Court affirmed. The Court concluded that the principal relief sought by the complaint was an accounting and held that such an action is a proceeding in equity and is essentially a personal action (Neet v. Holmes (1942) 19 Cal. 2d 605, 611, 122 P.2d 557).

Smith v. Smith (1891) 88 Cal. 572, 26 P. 356 , was an action brought in Tuolumne County against a resident of Merced County to have certain absolute conveyances of real property in Tuolumne County and of real property in Merced County as well as of certain personal property (livestock and equipment), all allegedly given to secure repayment of a debt, declared to be mortgages. Plaintiff also sought a judgment requiring defendant to account for the real property and its rents, issues, and profits, and for the personal property and its proceeds and increase. Defendant's motion for change of venue to the county of his residence was denied, and defendant appealed. The Supreme Court reversed. The Court pointed out that the primary object of the action was for an accounting and held that an action for an accounting is a proceeding in equity and is essentially a personal (i.e., transitory) action (Smith v. Smith (1891) 88 Cal. 572, 577, 26 P. 356).

Note that superior court orders granting or denying a motion to change the place of trial are reviewable by mandate [Code Civ. Proc. § 400]. Thus, the orders involved in the above cases are no longer appealable and would instead be reviewed by mandate. An order in a limited civil case granting or denying a motion to change the place of trial is, however, appealable to the appellate division of the superior court [Code Civ. Proc. § 904.2(c)].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Action for Accounting as Equitable or Transitory or Both

Bardwell v. Turner (1933) 219 Cal. 228, 25 P.2d 978 , was a proceeding by defendants for a writ of supersedeas to stay proceedings in the trial court pending appeal from an order denying their motion for change of venue to the county of their residence in an action for an accounting and to establish the rights of the parties with respect to their interests in and profits from certain oil wells and oil leases. Concluding that the appeal presented a substantial question regarding the nature of the action and ordering the writ issued, the Supreme Court pointed out that an action for an accounting is a proceeding in equity and is essentially a personal action (219 Cal. 228, 230).

In Hays v. Cowles (1943) 60 Cal. App. 2d 514, 141 P.2d 26 , an action for dissolution of a hotel partnership in which plaintiff sought an accounting, the appointment of a receiver, the sale of the partnership property, the liquidation of the partnership affairs, and, after payment of the debts, a division of the proceeds between plaintiff and defendant as their interests might appear, the court of appeal, in reversing an order denying defendant's motion for a change of venue to the county of his residence, stated that it is well settled that an action for an accounting is a proceeding in equity and is essentially a personal action (60 Cal. App. 2d 514, 518).

Note that superior court orders granting or denying a motion to change the place of trial are reviewable by mandate [Code Civ. Proc. § 400]. Thus, the orders involved in the above cases are no longer appealable and would instead be reviewed by mandate. An order in a limited civil case granting or denying a motion to change the place of trial is, however, appealable to the appellate division of the superior court [Code Civ. Proc. § 904.2(c)].

Additional cases stating that an action for an accounting is an action in equity include: San Pedro Lumber Co. v. Reynolds (1896) 111 Cal. 588, 596, 44 P. 309 ; Civic Western Corp. v. Zila Industries, Inc. (1977) 66 Cal. App. 3d 1, 14, 135 Cal. Rptr. 915 ; Estate of Peebles (1972) 27 Cal. App. 3d 163, 166, 103 Cal. Rptr. 560 ; St. James Church v. Superior Court (1955) 135 Cal. App. 2d 352, 359, 287 P.2d 387 ; and Kritzer v. Lancaster (1950) 96 Cal. App. 2d 1, 6, 214 P.2d 407 .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 12 ACCOUNTING
PART II. FORMS
A. Nature, Jurisdiction, And Venue Of Accounting Actions

1-12 California Points & Authorities § 12.21

§ 12.21 Supporting Contention That Proper County for Trial of Accounting Action Is County of Defendant's Residence [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)]

[1] FORM Supporting Contention That Proper County for Trial of Accounting Action Is County of Defendant's Residence [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)]

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

AN ACTION FOR AN ACCOUNTING IS SUBJECT TO THE VENUE PROVISIONS OF SECTION 395(a) OF THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE AND, UNDER THAT SECTION, DEFENDANT IS ENTITLED TO HAVE THE ACTION TRIED IN THE COUNTY OF HIS/HER RESIDENCE.

A. Defendant as Entitled to Trial of Accounting Action in County of His or Her Residence. Since an action for an accounting is a proceeding in equity and is essentially a personal action, Section 395(a) of the Code of Civil Procedure applies and defendant has the right, under this section, to have the action tried in the county of his or her residence (Smith v. Smith (1891) 88 Cal. 572, 577, 26 P. 356).

[Optional] B. Joinder of Local Action With Accounting Action as Not Depriving Defendant of Right to Trial in County of His or Her Residence. A plaintiff cannot deprive a defendant of his or her right to have an action for an accounting tried in the county of his or her residence by uniting in the complaint a local action requiring trial in a different county (Smith v. Smith (1891) 88 Cal. 572, 576-577, 26 P. 356).

[Optional] C. Request for Incidental Local Relief as Not Changing Nature of Action for Equitable Relief From Transitory to Local. When a determination of an estate or interest in land is merely incidental to the determination of a cause for equitable relief, the action is transitory rather than local (Neet v. Holmes (1942) 19 Cal. 2d 605, 611, 122 P.2d 557).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a defendant's contention that the action is for an accounting and that the defendant is entitled to have it tried in the county of his or her residence. Note, however, that if the action is based on contract, then under Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a) an alternative venue applies [see § 12.23].

These points and authorities may be combined with a form of memorandum of points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue regarding the proper county for trial. For example, they may be combined with points and authorities establishing the nature of an action for accounting [see § 12.20] or supporting a motion to change venue when the action has been filed in a court in a county other than that in which defendant resides, that is, in an improper court for trial [see Code Civ. Proc. § 397(a)].

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, if it is not entirely clear from the complaint that the action is one for an accounting, counsel should include a discussion of the allegations showing that the action is in fact one for an accounting [see § 12.40 et seq.].

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For forms of notices of motion to change venue, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 571, Venue (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For memoranda of points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion to change venue, see Ch. 238, Venue § 238.30 et seq.

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in §§ 12.22 and 12.23 may be used to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Defendant as Entitled to Trial of Accounting Action in County of His or Her Residence

The factual background of Smith v. Smith (1891) 88 Cal. 572, 26 P. 356 , is discussed in § 12.20[3][A]. In reversing the order denying defendant's motion for change of venue to the county of his residence, the Supreme Court concluded that the primary object of the action was for an accounting, with a personal judgment against defendant for any excess found on the accounting to have been received by him over (1) his expenses in operating the conveyed property and livestock business and (2) the amount of the indebtedness, in addition to a reconveyance of the property (88 Cal. 572, 577). The Court said that the defendant in an action for an accounting, which is a proceeding in equity and is essentially a personal action, has the right, under former Code Civ. Proc. § 395 [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)], to have the action tried in the county of his or her residence (88 Cal. 572, 577).

[b] Joinder of Local Action With Accounting Action as Not Depriving Defendant of Right to Trial in County of His or Her Residence

The factual background of Smith v. Smith (1891) 88 Cal. 572, 26 P. 356 , is discussed in § 12.20[3][A]. In reversing the order denying defendant's motion for change of venue to the county of his residence, the Supreme Court said that the plaintiff cannot, by uniting in his complaint matters that formed the subject of a personal action with matters that formed the subject of a local action, compel the defendant to have both those matters tried in a county other than that in which he resides. The Court said that it is only when real estate alone is the subject matter of the action that the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 392 (venue of actions relating to real property) can be invoked against a defendant who resides in a county different from that in which the land is situated (88 Cal. 572, 576). The Court pointed out that the "proceeds and increase" of the personal property were treated in the complaint as distinct from the "rents, issues, and profits" of the real estate and that it was under the allegation regarding the proceeds and increase of the personal property that plaintiffs demanded an accounting and asked that they have judgment against defendant for such sum as shall be found to be due on the accounting (88 Cal. 572, 577). The Court held that plaintiff could not deprive defendant of his right under Code Civ. Proc. § 395 [now Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)] to have the action tried in the county of his residence by uniting in the complaint a demand for an accounting of certain rents, issues, and profits alleged to have been received by the defendant from real estate situated in another county and for a judgment requiring defendant to reconvey the real estate, and that unless the cause of action set forth in the complaint falls wholly within te provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 392, or one of the two next succeeding sections, the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 395 prevail (88 Cal. 572, 577-578).

[c] Request for Incidental Local Relief as Not Changing Nature of Action for Equitable Relief From Transitory to Local

The factual background of Neet v. Holmes (1942) 19 Cal. 2d 605, 122 P.2d 557 , is discussed in § 12.20[3][a]. In affirming the order denying the motion for change of venue from the county of defendants' residence to the county in which the real property was situated, the Supreme Court concluded that the principal relief sought by the plaintiffs was (1) an accounting of operations in the leased mining property and in the additional mines located by the defendants, and (2) a judgment, based on the fruits thereof, including title to the additional mines of which the plaintiffs had been deprived by the alleged fraud of the defendants (19 Cal. 2d 605, 611). The Court said that the defendants would be entitled to have the case tried in the county of their residence if the determination of an estate or interest in land was merely incidental to the determination of a cause for equitable relief (19 Cal. 2d 605, 611) and concluded that it was obvious that the action turned principally on the personal obligation, as distinct from the title, and that judgment for any mining properties then not owned by the plaintiffs would follow, if at all, merely as an incident of the judgment establishing the personal obligation (19 Cal. 2d 605, 612).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Defendant as Entitled to Trial of Accounting Action in County of His or Her Residence

The factual background of Neet v. Holmes (1942) 19 Cal. 2d 605, 122 P.2d 557 , is discussed in § 12.20[3][a]. In affirming the order denying defendants' motion for a change of venue to the county in which the real property was situated, the Supreme Court, citing Code Civ. Proc. § 395, said that had the action been brought in Imperial County (the county in which part of the real property was situated), defendants would have been entitled to have it removed to Los Angeles County, the county of their residence (19 Cal. 2d 605, 611).

The factual background of Hays v. Cowles (1943) 60 Cal. App. 2d 514, 141 P.2d 26 , is discussed in § 12.20[4][a]. The court of appeal, in reversing the order denying defendant's motion for a change of venue to the county of his residence, stated that the defendant in an action for an accounting, which is a proceeding in equity and essentially a personal action, has the right under Code Civ. Proc. § 395 [see now Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)] to have the action tried in the county of his or her residence (60 Cal. App. 2d 514, 518).

[b] Joinder of Local Action With Accounting Action as Not Depriving Defendant of Right to Trial in County of His or Her Residence

The factual background of Bardwell v. Turner (1933) 219 Cal. 228, 25 P.2d 978 , is discussed in § 12.20[4][a]. In ordering issuance of a writ of supersedeas, the Supreme Court, after pointing out that an action for an accounting is essentially a personal action, said that if in one complaint allegations and a prayer for relief in causes of action both transitory and local have been united, the defendants are entitled to have the cause tried in the county of their residence (219 Cal. 228, 230).

The factual background of Hays v. Cowles (1943) 60 Cal. App. 2d 514, 141 P.2d 26 , is discussed in § 12.20[4][a]. The court of appeal, in reversing the order denying defendant's motion for a change of venue to the county of his residence, stated that by an unbroken chain of decisions beginning with Smith v. Smith (1891) 88 Cal. 572, 26 P. 356 , it had been definitely established that Code Civ. Proc. § 392 (venue of actions relating to real property) was effective only when real property or the title to real property was the exclusive subject matter of the action, and that when a cause of action for relief in personam was also joined, the defendant was entitled to have the cause transferred to the county of his or her residence (60 Cal. App. 2d 514, 516). The court added that a plaintiff cannot deprive a defendant of his or her right to have the action tried in the county of his or her residence by uniting in the complaint a demand that as a sequence of the litigation the defendant be required also to convey certain real property situated in a county other than the county of defendant's residence (60 Cal. App. 2d 514, 518).

See also All-Cool Alum. etc. Co. v. Superior Court (1964) 224 Cal. App. 2d 660, 36 Cal. Rptr. 769 , a proceeding in mandate arising out of a trial court action in which a local action and a transitory action had been united. The corporate defendant in the action sought writ of mandate compelling the trial court to set aside its order changing venue from the county of the corporation's principal place of business to the county in which the real property was situated. The order was made on the motion of the individual defendants in the case. The court of appeal said that when a local action and a transitory action are combined as separate causes of action in a single complaint, the case must remain in the county of a defendant's residence on the insistence of that defendant, and that the principal place of business of a corporation is its residence for the purpose of determining venue (224 Cal. App. 2d 660, 666). The court quoted the language from Smith v. Smith (1891) 88 Cal. 572, 577, 26 P. 356 , discussed in § 12.21[3][b], and restated the settled general rule that an action must be wholly local in its nature to require it to be brought under former Cal. Const., Art. VI, § 5(repealed in 1966), and Code Civ. Proc. § 392 in the county in which the property that is the subject matter of the action is situated (224 Cal. App. 2d 660, 667, 668).

[c] Request for Incidental Local Relief as Not Changing Nature of Action for Equitable Relief From Transitory to Local

Hammon v. American etc. Mining Co. (1962) 203 Cal. App. 2d 306, 21 Cal. Rptr. 409 , was an action in which plaintiff sought a decree establishing the rights and duties of the parties under a mineral lease; an injunction restraining defendant from conveying, leasing, or encumbering any mineral claims covered by the agreement; an accounting; and judgment for the amount found on trial to be due plaintiff. The action was filed in the county of the principal place of business of defendant, whose motion to have the action transferred to the county in which the realty was situated on the ground the action was local was granted. Plaintiff appealed. The court of appeal reversed. It held that the action was but a single action for the redress of one wrong, that the cause of action rested on breach of contract, that the main relief sought was personal (a money judgment for unpaid royalties), and that the action was transitory and had been filed in the proper county (203 Cal. App. 2d 306, 306-310). The court explained that when the sole or main relief sought consists of a money judgment, and other relief as an incident to that end, the action must be classified as transitory for venue purposes and that even if an action involves realty, it constitutes for venue purposes a transitory action if the main relief sought is a money judgment (203 Cal. App. 2d 306, 309). The court concluded that plaintiff's action for a determination of his rights under the lease and for unpaid royalties due pursuant to it could not be construed to seek relief that was mainly local in nature and that any determination of title to realty could only be incident to recovery under the contract (203 Cal. App. 2d 306, 313).

Note that superior court orders granting or denying a motion to change the place of trial are reviewable by mandate [Code Civ. Proc. § 400]. Thus, the orders involved in the above cases are no longer appealable and would instead be reviewed by mandate. An order in a limited civil case granting or denying a motion to change the place of trial is, however, appealable to the appellate division of the superior court [Code Civ. Proc. § 904.2(c)].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 12 ACCOUNTING
PART II. FORMS
A. Nature, Jurisdiction, And Venue Of Accounting Actions

1-12 California Points & Authorities § 12.22

§ 12.22 Opposing Contention That Proper County for Trial of Action Is County of Defendant's Residence [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)]--Incidental Accounting Does Not Affect Venue of Local Action

[1] FORM Opposing Contention That Proper County for Trial of Action Is County of Defendant's Residence [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)]--Incidental Accounting Does Not Affect Venue of Local Action

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE PROPER VENUE OF THIS ACTION, WHICH IS PRIMARILY LOCAL IN CHARACTER, IS NOT AFFECTED BY THE FACT THAT AN ACCOUNTING MAY BE NECESSARY, AS AN INCIDENT TO THIS ACTION, TO ALLOW PLAINTIFF TO OBTAIN THE FULL RELIEF THAT HE/SHE SEEKS.

Incidental Accounting as Not Changing Nature or Venue of Local Action. When the main relief sought by an action is local in character, neither the character nor venue of the action is changed by the fact that an incidental accounting may be required to provide the plaintiff with complete relief (see Grocers' etc. Union v. Kern etc. Co. (1907) 150 Cal. 466, 471-473, 89 P. 120 ; Dial v. Homestead Land etc., Co. (1919) 39 Cal. App. 479, 481, 179 P. 444).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These point and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a party's contention that an action involving an accounting may be tried only in the county of defendant's residence when the main relief sought in the action is local in nature and the accounting is merely incidental to it.

These point and authorities may be used alone or combined with a form of memorandum of points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue regarding the proper county for trial. For example, they may be used alone to oppose a motion for change of venue of an action brought in the proper county for trial under Code Civ. Proc. § 392 or in combination with other points and authorities to support a motion for change of venue to the county in which all or a part of the real property involved is situated [see Code Civ. Proc. § 397(a)].

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities set out in § 12.21.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For forms of notices of motion to change venue, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 571, Venue (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For memoranda of points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion to change venue, see Ch. 238, Venue § 238.30 et seq.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Incidental Accounting as Not Changing Nature or Venue of Local Action

Grocers' etc. Union v. Kern etc. Co. (1907) 150 Cal. 466, 89 P. 120 , was an appeal from an order denying defendant's motion for change of venue from the City and County of San Francisco to Kern County. Defendant contended that the action was for specific performance of a contract to convey lands in Kern County; that under former Cal. Const., Art. VI, § 5(repealed in 1966), requiring certain actions relating to real property to be commenced in the county in which the real property or some part of it was situated, the superior court of San Francisco had no jurisdiction; that the action should have been commenced in Kern County; and that the action fell within the letter of Code Civ. Proc. § 392(a)(1), relating to venue of actions involving the title or interests in real property. Defendant further argued that former Cal. Const., Art. XII, § 16(repealed in 1972; now see Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5), relating to venue of actions against corporations, was unconstitutional as a denial of equal protection under U.S. Const., Amend. XIV, if construed to deprive defendant of its right to have the action tried in Kern County, a right accorded to natural persons. Plaintiff contended that the action was brought under Code Civ. Proc. § 395 [now Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)], that it was of the class in which real and personal actions are joined in the same complaint, and that under the authority of Smith v. Smith (1891) 88 Cal. 572, 26 P. 356 , discussed in § 12.21[3][a] and [b], San Francisco was the proper place of trial because it was the principal place of business of the corporate defendant and its residence within the purview of Code Civ. Proc. § 395.

In order to determine the true character of the action, the Supreme Court analyzed the allegations of the complaint and concluded that, stripped to its essentials, the action was simply (1) for specific performance of a contract for the sale of land under an allegation that the purchase price had been paid and (2) for an incidental accounting of monies advanced by defendant to plaintiff, and of monies received by defendant from the sale of crops from the land and portions of the land itself, all of which merely went to the issue regarding whether or not the purchase price had been paid (Grocers' etc. Union v. Kern etc. Co. (1907) 150 Cal. 466, 468-472, 89 P. 120). The Court explained that in any action for specific performance when the matter in dispute is the payment or nonpayment of the purchase price, an accounting may be necessary and, if necessary, will be ordered, such being clearly within the power of a court exercising equitable and legal functions. The Court concluded, however, that such an accounting in no way changes the cause of action (Grocers' etc. Union v. Kern etc. Co. (1907) 150 Cal. 466, 472, 89 P. 120). The Court said that, although the proceeding might necessitate an accounting, the relief sought was the conveyance of the land and that, if it should be determined that a payment in excess of the consideration had actually been made, the personal judgment for plaintiff that would follow would be but incidental to the real cause of action and relief sought (Grocers' etc. Union v. Kern etc. Co. (1907) 150 Cal. 466, 472-473, 89 P. 120). Having determined that the character of the action was local, the Supreme Court concluded that it was an action for the determination of a right or interest in real property and that under Code Civ. Proc. § 392(1) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 392(a)), had to be tried in the county in which the land was situated (Grocers' etc. Union v. Kern etc. Co. (1907) 150 Cal. 466, 473-474, 89 P. 120). The Court held that the defendant was therefore entitled under Code Civ. Proc. § 392(1) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 392(a)) to have the place of trial changed to Kern County and reversed the order denying a change of venue (Grocers' etc. Union v. Kern etc. Co. (1907) 150 Cal. 466, 476, 89 P. 120).

Dial v. Homestead Land, etc., Co. (1919) 39 Cal. App. 479, 179 P. 444 , was an action brought in the City and County of San Francisco by a stockholder to compel a reconveyance to defendant corporation of certain real property, alleged to have been transferred by the corporation to defendant bank by fraud. Defendants' motion for change of venue to Lassen County, the county in which the real property was situated, was granted, and plaintiff appealed. In affirming the order, the court of appeal held that the action was in the nature of an action involving real property, which, under Code Civ. Proc. § 392, has to be tried in the county in which the real estate is situated. The court also held that the nature of the action was not changed by the fact that an accounting was prayed for, since the accounting was one to which plaintiff or the corporation could be entitled only on a determination that the corporation was the owner of, and was to be reinvested with the title to, the real estate, and it was therefore a mere incident to the main relief sought (Dial v. Homestead Land, etc., Co. (1919) 39 Cal. App. 479, 480-481, 179 P. 444).

Note that superior court orders granting or denying a motion to change the place of trial are reviewable by mandate [Code Civ. Proc. § 400]. Thus, the orders involved in the above cases are no longer appealable and would instead be reviewed by mandate. An order in a limited civil case granting or denying a motion to change the place of trial is, however, appealable to the appellate division of the superior court [Code Civ. Proc. § 904.2(c)].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Incidental Accounting as Not Changing Nature or Venue of Local Action

State v. Royal Consolidated Min. Co. (1921) 187 Cal. 343, 202 P. 133 , was an action brought in Sacramento County by the State Controller, acting under former Pol. Code § 3773, to secure possession of mining properties situated in Calaveras County and of the rents, issues, and profits derived from them by virtue of a tax deed issued to the state in 1905 by the tax collector of Calaveras County. Judgment was for defendant, and plaintiff appealed. The Supreme Court reversed because of numerous errors by the trial court. The Court had been in doubt as to whether or not the action had been brought in the proper county and had called for argument on the issue. The Court, after consideration of the arguments, held that former Pol. Code § 3773, insofar as it authorized the state to bring an action in the Superior Court of Sacramento County for the possession of real property located in other counties, violated former Cal. Const., Art. VI, § 5 (repealed in 1966), which required certain actions relating to real property to be commenced in the county in which the real property or some part of it was situated, and was consequently unconstitutional. In answering the state's contention that the action was transitory because an accounting was sought, the Court said that on this point it was sufficient to say that the action insofar as it related to rents, issues, and profits was essentially one to quiet title within the meaning of the constitution because the right thereto depended on the issue of title and an adjudication of the right to rents was necessarily determinative of the right to the land itself (187 Cal. 343, 350). The Court added that an action for rents and profits of land in which the right to the title is involved is not a transitory action (187 Cal. 343, 351).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 12 ACCOUNTING
PART II. FORMS
A. Nature, Jurisdiction, And Venue Of Accounting Actions

1-12 California Points & Authorities § 12.23

§ 12.23 Opposing Contention That Proper County for Trial of Action Is County of Defendant's Residence [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)]--Action Is Founded on Contract

[1] FORM Opposing Contention That Proper County for Trial of Action Is County of Defendant's Residence [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)]--Action Is Founded on Contract

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THIS ACTION FOR AN ACCOUNTING IS FOUNDED ON A CONTRACT AND THEREFORE NEED NOT BE TRIED IN THE COUNTY IN WHICH DEFENDANT RESIDES, BUT MAY ALSO BE TRIED IN THE COUNTY _____ [IN WHICH THE CONTRACT WAS TO BE PERFORMED, IF DEFENDANT CONTRACTED TO PERFORM IT IN A PARTICULAR COUNTY, and/or IN WHICH THE CONTRACT WAS ENTERED INTO].

A. Venue of Action Founded on Contract. Subject to the provisions of Section 395(b) of the Code of Civil Procedure, relating to actions founded on an obligation of the defendant for goods, services, loans or extensions of credit intended primarily for personal, family, or household use, other than an obligation described in Section 1812.10 (Unruh Retail Installment Sales Act) or 2984.4 (Rees-Levering Motor Vehicle Sales and Finance Act) of the Civil Code, when a defendant has contracted to perform an obligation in a particular county, either the county where the obligation is to be performed or in which the contract in fact was entered into or the county in which the defendant or any such defendant resides at the commencement of the action is a proper county for the trial of an action founded on the obligation, and the county in which the obligation is incurred is deemed to be the county in which it is to be performed unless there is a special contract in writing to the contrary (Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)).

B. Contract Provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a) as Applicable to Actions Involving Accounting Founded on Contract. An action for an accounting founded on a contract is governed by the contract provisions of Section 395(a) of the Code of Civil Procedure (Gilman v. Nordin (1952) 112 Cal. App. 2d 788, 790, 247 P.2d 394).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a party's contention that an action for accounting may be tried only in the county of defendant's residence when the following facts exist: (1) the action is founded on a contract; (2) the action was not brought in the county of defendant's residence; and (3) the action was brought either in the county where the contract was entered into or, if the defendant contracted to perform the obligation in a county other than where he or she resides or the contract was entered into, where the contract was to be performed.

These points and authorities may be used alone or combined with a form of memorandum of points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue regarding the proper county for trial. For example, they may be used alone to oppose a motion for change of venue to the county of defendant's residence or in combination with other points and authorities supporting or opposing the contention that the action was tried in an improper court.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities set out in § 12.21.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For forms of notices of motion to change venue, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 571, Venue (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For memoranda of points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion to change venue, see Ch. 238, Venue, § 238.30 et seq.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Contract Provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a) as Applicable to Actions Involving Accounting Founded on Contract

Gilman v. Nordin (1952) 112 Cal. App. 2d 788, 247 P.2d 394 , was an appeal from an order denying defendant's motion for a change of venue from the City and County of San Francisco to the county of his residence. The complaint contained four counts. The first alleged an agreement between the parties to be performed in San Francisco forming a partnership with its sole place of business located in San Francisco and breach of the agreement by defendant; it asked for dissolution of the partnership and an accounting. The other counts were on contract and the parties conceded that under these counts defendant was not entitled to a change of venue. In affirming the order denying the motion for change of venue, the court of appeal acknowledged the rule that if a defendant is entitled to a trial in the county of his or her residence on any one of several causes of action in a complaint, he or she is entitled to a change of venue to that county notwithstanding that on all the other causes he or she would not be entitled to such change. The court added, however, that if the first count was founded on an obligation contracted to be performed in San Francisco as alleged, defendant was not entitled under Code Civ. Proc. § 395 to a transfer of the case to the county of his residence (112 Cal. App. 2d 788, 790). The court concluded that the action was founded on contract. It pointed out that plaintiff alleged the partnership contract, its breach by defendant, and asked that the partnership formed by that contract be dissolved. The court explained that in determining the truth of that allegation, the trial court had to determine whether or not there was such a contract; what its terms were; in what respect, if any, did defendant breach it; and whether or not the partnership formed by it should be dissolved. The court also explained that in the accounting the trial court had to determine what the assets of the partnership were, if any, and divide those assets in accordance with the contract (112 Cal. App. 2d 788, 790). Although the complaint alleged neither the place where the contract was entered into nor a "special contract in writing to the contrary" [see Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)], the court held that defendant, since he had failed to deny (and therefore admitted) the allegation that the contract was to be performed in San Francisco, was estopped to deny that the contract had been entered into in San Francisco (112 Cal. App. 2d 788, 792). Since the action had been brought where the contract was to have been performed and presumptively where it was entered into, the court held that defendant was not entitled to a change of venue to the county of his residence. The court said that (under Code Civ. Proc. § 395) the county of a defendant's residence is not a preferred place of trial over the county in which the contract is entered into or is to be performed (112 Cal. App. 2d 788, 793).

Note that superior court orders granting or denying a motion to change the place of trial are reviewable by mandate [Code Civ. Proc. § 400]. Thus, the orders involved in the above cases are no longer appealable and would instead be reviewed by mandate. An order in a limited civil case granting or denying a motion to change the place of trial is, however, appealable to the appellate division of the superior court [Code Civ. Proc. § 904.2(c)].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Contract Provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a) as Applicable to Actions Involving Accounting Founded on Contract

Rudnick v. Delfino (1956) 140 Cal. App. 2d 260, 294 P.2d 983 , was an appeal from an order denying a defendant's motion for change of venue from Kern County to San Bernardino County, the county of his residence. The order was made in an action for dissolution of a limited partnership, for an accounting, and for division and distribution of the partnership assets in which the complaint alleged that the partnership contract was made and entered into in Kern County, although it also asserted the filing of a certificate of limited partnership in San Bernardino County, and that one of the defendants was a resident of Kern County. The court noted that the purpose of the partnership, as shown by its articles, was to acquire and use lands in San Bernardino County for agricultural purposes and stock raising and that its principal place of business was fixed at a city in that county (140 Cal. App. 2d 260, 264). The court, citing Gilman v. Nordin (1952) 112 Cal. App. 2d 788, 790, 247 P.2d 394 (discussed in § 12.23[3][a]) and other cases, pointed out that an action for dissolution of a partnership and an accounting is a transitory action based on the partnership agreement and is controlled as to venue by the contract provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 395 and that, if Kern County was a proper place of trial under any of the three alternatives set forth in that section (county of residence of defendants or some of them, county where contract was entered into, or county where contract was to be performed), the order denying a change of venue had to be affirmed (140 Cal. App. 2d 260, 264). The court concluded that the order denying the motion for a change of venue was justified because one of the named defendants was a resident of Kern County (140 Cal. App. 2d 260, 267).

Note that superior court orders granting or denying a motion to change the place of trial are reviewable by mandate [Code Civ. Proc. § 400]. Thus, the orders involved in the above cases are no longer appealable and would instead be reviewed by mandate. An order in a limited civil case granting or denying a motion to change the place of trial is, however, appealable to the appellate division of the superior court [Code Civ. Proc. § 904.2(c)].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 12 ACCOUNTING
PART II. FORMS
A. Nature, Jurisdiction, And Venue Of Accounting Actions

1-12 California Points & Authorities §§ 12.24-12.39

[Reserved]

§§ 12.24[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 12 ACCOUNTING
PART II. FORMS
B. Pleading And Showing Cause For An Accounting

1-12 California Points & Authorities § 12.40

§ 12.40 Supporting Contention That Accounting Does Not Lie--No Accounting Is Necessary or Remedy at Law Is Adequate

[1] FORM Supporting Contention That Accounting Does Not Lie--No Accounting Is Necessary or Remedy at Law Is Adequate

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

AN ACCOUNTING IS NOT PROPER IN THIS CASE BECAUSE _____ [AN ACCOUNTING IS NOT NECESSARY and/or PLAINTIFF'S REMEDY AT LAW IS ADEQUATE].

A. No Accounting Necessary or Remedy at Law Is Adequate. An action for an accounting will not lie if it appears from the complaint that none is necessary or that there is an adequate remedy at law (St. James Church v. Superior Court (1955) 135 Cal. App. 2d 352, 359, 287 P.2d 387).

B. Right to Accounting as Required to Be Shown. Before an accounting is in order, the right to it must first be established (Baxter v. Krieger (1958) 157 Cal. App. 2d 730, 732, 321 P.2d 879).

C. Account as Not Required When Need or Right Not Shown. An accounting may be dispensed with if no need or right to one is shown (Baxter v. Krieger (1958) 157 Cal. App. 2d 730, 732, 321 P.2d 879).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a defendant's contention that no cause for an accounting is stated or shown because an accounting is unnecessary or because plaintiff has an adequate remedy at law.

These points and authorities may be combined with a form of memorandum of points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue regarding the propriety of an accounting. For example, when the ground of objection appears from the face of the complaint or from judicially noticed matter, the points and authorities set out in this form may be combined with points and authorities supporting a general demurrer to a complaint for an accounting [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10(e), 430.30(a)], a nonstatutory motion for judgment on the pleadings, or, if the court requires points and authorities, an objection at trial to the introduction of evidence. For a discussion of objections to the introduction of evidence in an accounting action, see Stilwell v. Trutanich (1960) 178 Cal. App. 2d 614, 617-618, 3 Cal. Rptr. 285 .

These points and authorities may also be cited in support of an objection to the taking of an account at trial after the party seeking the accounting has presented his or her evidence and the evidence is insufficient to establish the party's need or right to an accounting. If the evidence fails to establish any cause of action and points and authorities are required or permitted by the court, these points and authorities may be combined with a memorandum of points and authorities in support of a motion for nonsuit [see Code Civ. Proc. § 581c] or a motion for judgment [see Code Civ. Proc. § 631.8].

The point might, however, arise in other contexts, for example, with respect to a determination of the applicable statute of limitations [see §§ 12.60, 12.61].

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a form of general demurrer and a notice motion for judgment on the pleadings, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For memoranda of points and authorities supporting and opposing a general demurrer to a complaint or a motion for judgment on the pleadings, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in §§ 12.45 -12.47 may be used to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Accounting Necessary or Remedy at Law Is Adequate

St. James Church v. Superior Court (1955) 135 Cal. App. 2d 352, 287 P.2d 387 , was a proceeding in mandate by which petitioner, a religious corporation, sought to compel the superior court to assume and exercise jurisdiction over an action in which it was the plaintiff. The action arose out of the retention of monies ($240) received by one of petitioner's trustees as rent for church property pursuant to a one-year lease entered into by the trustee acting as an individual trustee and without the prior knowledge or consent of the other trustees. The action had originally been filed in the superior court, which transferred the case to the municipal court. The municipal court transferred it back to the superior court. The superior court then refused to exercise jurisdiction on the ground that jurisdiction was in the municipal court. The complaint prayed for an injunction permanently enjoining the trustee from collecting the rentals, that the trustee be required to make a true accounting of all monies collected by him, and for a money judgment based on the accounting. Holding that the municipal court did not have jurisdiction of the action for a permanent injunction, the court of appeal ordered the writ issued. It held, however, that the complaint did not state a case for an accounting.

The full amount of the rentals collected by defendant had been alleged in the complaint. The court said that a suit for an accounting does not lie when it appears from the complaint that none is necessary or that there is an adequate remedy at law (135 Cal. App. 2d 352, 359).

[b] Right to Accounting as Required to Be Shown

Baxter v. Krieger (1958) 157 Cal. App. 2d 730, 321 P.2d 879 , was an action by defendants' former salesman for claimed commissions due under an oral employment contract on sales made during the period of employment and for an accounting covering that entire period. The evidence showed that the employment covered a period of some six and one half years, that after an order was shipped plaintiff received a notice of the amount of the commission earned on the particular order by receiving a copy of the order with the commission shown on it, that commission statements accompanied by check were furnished monthly to plaintiff throughout the employment period, and that plaintiff protested cuts in his commission from time to time but received an explanation for them. The trial court found there were no commissions or any monies due by defendants to plaintiff and denied an accounting. Judgment was entered for defendants, and plaintiff appealed contending, among other things, that he was entitled to a full and formal accounting. The court of appeal affirmed. It held that before an accounting is in order, the right to it must be established (157 Cal. App. 2d 730, 732).

[c] Accounting as Not Required When Need or Right Is Not Shown

The factual background of Baxter v. Krieger (1958) 157 Cal. App. 2d 730, 321 P.2d 879 , is discussed in § 12.40[3][b]. In affirming the judgment for defendants, the court of appeal said that an accounting may be dispensed with when, under the evidence, the need or right to one is not shown (157 Cal. App. 2d 730, 732).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] No Accounting Necessary or Remedy at Law Is Adequate

Civic Western Corp. v. Zila Industries, Inc. (1977) 66 Cal. App. 3d 1, 135 Cal. Rptr. 915 , was an action to recover on promissory notes secured by defendant's business property, inventory, and accounts receivable. Summary judgment pursuant to stipulation of the parties was entered granting plaintiff a permanent injunction restraining defendant from preventing or interfering with plaintiff's entrance on defendant's premises to take possession of the collateral. Defendant subsequently filed an answer denying default and cross complained for an accounting, damages for trespass, declaratory relief, to have the permanent injunction declared void, and, by amendment, for forcible entry and forcible detainer. Defendant sought an accounting of the proceeds of accounts receivable assigned by it to plaintiff and alleged that the assignment transactions were so involved and complicated as to require an accounting to determine the financial status of the parties with respect to each other and that the total volume of these transactions was in the area of $2 million. Plaintiff's motion for summary judgment on the cross complaint was granted, and defendant appealed. Although it reversed the judgment with respect to the first three causes of action alleged in the cross complaint, including the action for an accounting, on the ground that there were triable issues of fact with respect to these causes of action, the court of appeal, quoting from St. James Church v. Superior Court (1955) 135 Cal. App. 2d 352, 359, 287 P.2d 387 (discussed in § 12.40[3][a]), said that a suit for an accounting does not lie when it appears from the complaint that none is necessary or that there is an adequate remedy at law (66 Cal. App. 3d 1, 14).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 12 ACCOUNTING
PART II. FORMS
B. Pleading And Showing Cause For An Accounting

1-12 California Points & Authorities § 12.41

§ 12.41 Supporting Contention That No Cause for Accounting Exists--Account Settled by Agreement of Parties

[1] FORM Supporting Contention That No Cause for Accounting Exists--Account Settled by Agreement of Parties

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

AN ACCOUNTING IS NOT PROPER IN THIS CASE BECAUSE THE PARTIES HAVE ALREADY SETTLED THEIR ACCOUNT, AND THERE HAS BEEN NO CHARGE OF FRAUD OR MISTAKE IN CONNECTION WITH THE SETTLEMENT.

No Accounting After Account Settled. In the absence of a charge of fraud or mistake, no cause for an accounting exists after a settlement of the account acquiesced in by plaintiff (see Kinley v. Thelen (1910) 158 Cal. 175, 183, 110 P. 513).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This point and authority may be submitted in support of a defendant's contention that no cause for an accounting is stated because the parties have previously settled their account.

This point and authority may be combined with a form of memorandum of points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue regarding the propriety of an accounting. For example, when the ground of objection appears from the face of the complaint or from judicially noticed matter, the point and authority may be combined with points and authorities supporting a general demurrer to a complaint for an accounting [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10(e), 430.30(a)], a nonstatutory motion for judgment on the pleadings, or an objection at trial to the introduction of evidence if the court requires points and authorities.

This form may also be submitted in opposition to a motion for a reference to take an account [see § 12.40]. The point might also arise in other contexts, for example, with respect to a determination of the applicable statute of limitations [see §§ 12.60 and 12.61].

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the point of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a form of general demurrer and a notice motion for judgment on the pleadings, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For memoranda of points and authorities supporting and opposing a general demurrer to a complaint or a motion for judgment on the pleadings, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in §§ 12.45 -12.47 may be used to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Accounting After Account Settled

Kinley v. Thelen (1910) 158 Cal. 175, 110 P. 513 , was an action for an accounting arising out of an oral "trusteeship" agreement entered into in 1892 between plaintiff and defendants, a bank and an individual. The individual defendant was a director and the cashier and general managing officer of the bank and acted as trustee for both the bank and plaintiff under the trusteeship agreement. Pursuant to the agreement and in consideration of the defendant bank's agreement to make loans to plaintiff from time to time, plaintiff transferred certain securities and conveyed certain real properties located in Texas and California to the trustee, who was to manage the properties, pay taxes, and so forth, and sell the properties as occasion might offer and apply the proceeds to repayment of plaintiff's indebtedness to the bank. The second amended complaint, which detailed the transactions between the parties over a period of several years, alleged, among other things, in or around March 1903 the trustee informed plaintiff that he had not been able to sell the Texas or California lands and reconveyed the properties by quitclaim deed to plaintiff. The plaintiff at the same time executed his renewal note for $6,000, the amount of his remaining indebtedness as represented by the trustee, and delivered to the trustee certain bonds in a coal company as security for plaintiff's unpaid indebtedness. In effect, the complaint alleged that, as a result of the defendant's breach of the trusteeship agreement, plaintiff's Texas and California lands had been lost by foreclosure prior to 1903, that a purported sale by the trustee in April 1906 for $6,000 of stock in defendant bank owned by plaintiff was not bona fide, that defendants retained possession of plaintiff's coal company bonds and notes executed by plaintiff, although plaintiff was not indebted to defendant bank, that plaintiff had demanded an accounting of the trusteeship and all property received under it, and that defendants had refused to provide this. It was alleged that the value of the Texas property was $6,400, the value of the California property was $800, the value of the stock sold for $6,000 was $10,000, and the value of the bonds was $5,000. Defendants' demurrer was sustained, and plaintiff appealed from the subsequent judgment for defendants.

The Supreme Court affirmed. It held that the complaint failed to state any cause of action. The Court specifically held that the complaint did not show grounds for an accounting (158 Cal. 175, 182). With respect to the requested accounting of the transactions prior to March 1903, the Court said that plaintiff's debt had been fixed by the agreement of the parties in 1903 and security for it given; that whatever uncertainty may have existed regarding the earlier dealings of the parties, all doubts were resolved by the giving of the 1903 note; that this transaction constituted a settlement of account between the parties; that plaintiff, after acquiescing in that settlement, could not, in the absence of a charge of fraud or mistake, be permitted to reopen questions that were then closed; that no such charge was made; and that there was no allegation that the trustee's statement concerning the amount of plaintiff's indebtedness was not in fact entirely correct (158 Cal. 175, 182-183).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] No Accounting After Account Settled

In Loupias v. Rosen (1951) 102 Cal. App. 2d 781, 228 P.2d 611 , the court of appeal held that the trial court properly sustained without leave to amend a demurrer to a count seeking dissolution of a partnership, an accounting, and the appointment of a receiver in which plaintiff alleged that a dissolution by agreement had occurred more than two years prior to the filing of the complaint, which merely pleaded an executed contract under which plaintiff had received all the benefits accruing to him, and the complaint did not attack the dissolution agreement on the ground of fraud, deceit, misrepresentation, or other equitable ground, or seek to rescind it, or offer to put the parties in status quo (102 Cal. App. 2d 781, 783, 785).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 12 ACCOUNTING
PART II. FORMS
B. Pleading And Showing Cause For An Accounting

1-12 California Points & Authorities § 12.42

§ 12.42 Supporting Contention That No Cause for Accounting Exists--No Accounting Necessary When Sum Sued for Is Certain

[1] FORM Supporting Contention That No Cause for Accounting Exists--No Accounting Necessary When Sum Sued for Is Certain

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

AN ACCOUNTING IS NOT PROPER IN THIS ACTION BECAUSE THE AMOUNT SOUGHT TO BE RECOVERED BY PLAINTIFF IS A SUM CERTAIN.

A. Complaint Seeks Recovery of Sum Certain. An accounting will not be accorded when the complaint seeks recovery of a sum certain (Tostevin v. Douglas (1958) 160 Cal. App. 2d 321, 329-330, 325 P.2d 130).

[Optional] B. All Facts Necessary to Calculate Sum Sought Are or Can Be Alleged. An accounting will not be accorded when all the facts necessary for the calculation of the amount sought are alleged in the complaint or can be alleged in a supplemental complaint, since the amount is certain and recovery may be had in an action at law (St. James Church v. Superior Court (1955) 135 Cal. App. 2d 352, 359, 287 P.2d 387 ; see Civ. Code § 3538).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a defendant's contention that no cause for an accounting is stated because the amount sought by plaintiff is a sum certain or because all the facts necessary to calculate the account between the parties are or can be alleged in the complaint.

These points and authorities may be combined with a form of memorandum of points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue regarding the propriety of an accounting. For example, when the ground of objection appears from the face of the complaint, the points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities supporting a general demurrer to a complaint for an accounting [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10(e), 430.30(a)], a nonstatutory motion for judgment on the pleadings, or an objection at trial to the introduction of evidence if the court requires points and authorities.

These points and authorities may also be submitted in opposition to a motion for a reference to take an account [see § 12.40 et seq.]. The point might also arise in other contexts, for example, with respect to a determination of the applicable statute of limitations [see § 12.60 and 12.61].

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a form of general demurrer and a notice motion for judgment on the pleadings, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For memoranda of points and authorities supporting and opposing a general demurrer to a complaint or a motion for judgment on the pleadings, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Complaint Seeks Recovery of Sum Certain

Tostevin v. Douglas (1958) 160 Cal. App. 2d 321, 325 P.2d 130 , was an action for declaratory relief and an accounting. Although there were numerous changes in essential averments among the original and subsequently amended verified complaints, the gist of the action was that under an oral agreement entered into in May 1954, defendants employed plaintiff to solicit and procure personnel and material for a series of travelogue television shows at a fixed salary of $50 per week and that defendants repudiated the agreement and refused to be bound by it. Plaintiff prayed for an accounting for all monies to which he was entitled under the agreement and for a judgment in the sum of $7,900 for compensation due under the contract from June 1, 1954, to the date the complaint was filed and for a further judgment in the sum of $50 per week thereafter for as long as defendants received compensation for the showing of the series. Defendants' motion to strike the third amended complaint was granted, and plaintiff appealed from the subsequent judgment of dismissal.

The court of appeal affirmed. With respect to the prayer for an accounting, the court pointed out that plaintiff was to receive a fixed salary of $50 per week to a total sum of $7,900 and that it failed to see why plaintiff needed an accounting, that the amount due was a simple matter of mathematics, and that plaintiff himself alleged it in a sum certain (160 Cal. App. 2d 321, 329). The court said that there is no occasion for an accounting when plaintiff seeks to recover what he alleges in his complaint to be a sum certain to his knowledge (160 Cal. App. 2d 321, 330).

[b] All Facts Necessary to Calculate Sum Sought Are or Can Be Alleged

The factual background of St. James Church v. Superior Court (1955) 135 Cal. App. 2d 352, 287 P.2d 387 , is discussed in § 12.40[3][a]. Although the court of appeal ordered issuance of a writ of mandate compelling the trial court to assume jurisdiction over the action for a permanent injunction, it said, in holding that the complaint failed to state a case for an accounting, that if a complaint sets forth all the facts necessary for the calculation of an account between the parties, recovery may be had in an action at law (135 Cal. App. 2d 352, 359). The court explained that in the case before it clearly appeared that no accounting was necessary, that so far as recovery of monies alleged to have been collected by the defendant was sought, plaintiff had an adequate remedy at law, and that all the facts necessary for the calculation of the amount sought were alleged or could be alleged in a supplemental complaint and the amount was thus certain (135 Cal. App. 2d 352, 359).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Complaint Seeks Recovery of Sum Certain

The factual background of Kinley v. Thelen (1910) 158 Cal. 175, 110 P. 513 , is discussed in § 12.41[3][a]. In affirming the judgment for defendants, the Court said that it first had to ascertain what causes of action were not stated and that the complaint did not show grounds for an accounting (158 Cal. 175, 182). With respect to the sale of the stock, the Court pointed out that the amount of damage sustained was, in effect, a sum certain in that the amount of damage was not unknown to plaintiff, since he alleged that the shares were worth $10,000 and that they were sold for $6,000; hence, if the sale was unauthorized, the damage was $4,000 (158 Cal. 175, 183).

The factual background of Civic Western Corp. v. Zila Industries, Inc. (1977) 66 Cal. App. 3d 1, 135 Cal. Rptr. 915 , is discussed in § 12.40[4][a]. Although the court of appeal reversed the summary judgment for plaintiff on defendant's cross complaint with respect to the first three causes of action, including the action for an accounting, on the ground that triable issues of fact existed, the court of appeal, quoting from St. James Church v. Superior Court (1955) 135 Cal. App. 2d 352, 359, 287 P.2d 387 (discussed below), said that an accounting will not be accorded with respect to a sum that a plaintiff seeks to recover and alleges in his complaint to be a sum certain (66 Cal. App. 3d 1, 14).

The factual background of St. James Church v. Superior Court (1955) 135 Cal. App. 2d 352, 287 P.2d 387 , is discussed in § 12.40[3][a]. Although the court of appeal ordered issuance of a writ of mandate compelling the trial court to assume jurisdiction over the action for a permanent injunction, it said, in holding that the complaint did not state a case for an accounting, that an accounting will not be accorded with respect to a sum that a plaintiff seeks to recover and alleges in his complaint to be a sum certain (135 Cal. App. 2d 352, 359).

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 12 ACCOUNTING
PART II. FORMS
B. Pleading And Showing Cause For An Accounting

1-12 California Points & Authorities § 12.43

§ 12.43 Supporting Contention That No Cause for Accounting Exists--No Accounting Necessary When Items Are Not in Dispute

[1] FORM Supporting Contention That No Cause for Accounting Exists--No Accounting Necessary When Items Are Not in Dispute

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

AN ACCOUNTING IS NOT NECESSARY IN THIS ACTION BECAUSE THE ITEMS OF THE ACCOUNT ARE KNOWN TO PLAINTIFF AND ARE NOT IN DISPUTE.

Items Not in Dispute. No accounting is necessary when the items of an account are not in dispute and are known to plaintiff (Bayer v. Barrett (1932) 127 Cal. App. 305, 310, 15 P.2d 801).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a defendant's contention that no cause for an accounting is stated because the items of the account are known to plaintiff and are not in dispute.

These points and authorities may be combined with a form of memorandum of points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue regarding the propriety of an accounting. For example, when the ground of objection appears from the face of the complaint or from judicially noticed matter, the points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities supporting a general demurrer to a complaint for an accounting [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10(e), 430.30(a)], a nonstatutory motion for judgment on the pleadings, or an objection at trial to the introduction of evidence if the court requires points and authorities.

These points and authorities may also be submitted in opposition to a motion for a reference to take an account [see §§

12.45 -12.47]. The point might also arise in other contexts, for example, with respect to a determination of the applicable statute of limitations [see §§ 12.60 and 12.61].

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a form of general demurrer and a notice motion for judgment on the pleadings, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For memoranda of points and authorities supporting and opposing a general demurrer to a complaint or a motion for judgment on the pleadings, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Items Not in Dispute

Bayer v. Barrett (1932) 127 Cal. App. 305, 15 P.2d 801 was an action by the beneficiaries under a trust deed for an accounting, an adjudication that the trustors under the trust deed were in default, and a judicial sale of the property covered by the trust deed. The trustors had not only defaulted in their monthly payments under the promissory note, but they had also refused to reimburse the plaintiffs for fire insurance premiums and taxes advanced by the latter. The trustors defaulted in the case, and the cause was tried on the issues raised by the complaint and the answer of the trustee. From a judgment for defendants, including those whose defaults had been entered, plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. Relying on the rule of law laid down in a prior appeal in the case, the court held that a beneficiary cannot foreclose an ordinary trust deed and have a judicial sale in lieu of a trustee's sale in the absence of unusual circumstances justifying special equitable relief (127 Cal. App. 305, 309-310). The trustee did not deny that the complaint sufficiently pleaded a case for such relief, but argued that the evidence failed to meet the test and that there was no need for an accounting. The court of appeal agreed, not because the items were all matters capable of easy proof, as argued by the trustee, but because there was no showing that any of the items were in dispute. The court said that the default of the trustors was merely an admission that the items set forth in the complaint were due and correct but that these items were known to plaintiffs and there was, therefore, no need for an accounting (127 Cal. App. 305, 310).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 12 ACCOUNTING
PART II. FORMS
B. Pleading And Showing Cause For An Accounting

1-12 California Points & Authorities § 12.44

§ 12.44 Supporting Contention That No Cause for Accounting Exists--No Right to Accounting in Absence of Misconduct or Breach of Fiduciary Duty by Defendant

[1] FORM Supporting Contention That No Cause for Accounting Exists--No Right to Accounting in Absence of Misconduct or Breach of Fiduciary Duty by Defendant

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

AN ACCOUNTING IS NOT PROPER IN THIS CASE BECAUSE PLAINTIFF HAS FAILED TO _____ [ALLEGE and/or PROVE] THAT DEFENDANT COMMITTED ANY TORT OR OTHER MISCONDUCT OR VIOLATED ANY FIDUCIARY DUTY OWED TO PLAINTIFF, OR THAT DEFENDANT OTHERWISE OWES ANY MONEY TO PLAINTIFF.

A. Right to Accounting as Required to Be Shown. [See § 12.40[1], Paragraph B.]

B. Account as Not Required When Need or Right Not Shown. [See § 12.40[1], Paragraph C.]

C. No Right to Accounting in Absence of Misconduct or Breach of Fiduciary Duty by Defendant. The mere existence of a complicated accounting relationship is insufficient by itself to permit the maintenance of an action for an accounting. To support an accounting, the plaintiff must prove that the defendant committed some form of misconduct, violated a fiduciary duty, or otherwise owes money to the plaintiff (see Union Bank v. Superior Court (1995) 31 Cal. App. 4th 573, 593-594, 37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 653).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a defendant's contention that plaintiff has not sufficiently alleged or proved the right to an accounting because plaintiff has not alleged or proved that defendant committed any tort or other misconduct or violated any fiduciary duty owed to plaintiff, or that defendant otherwise owes any money to plaintiff.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue regarding the propriety of an accounting. For example, if the ground of objection appears from the face of the complaint, the points and authorities in this form may be combined with points and authorities supporting a general demurrer to the complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10(e), 430.30(a)].

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, if the issue arises at the pleading stage, counsel should insert argument showing that plaintiff's complaint fails to allege any facts sufficient to show that defendant committed any tort or other wrongdoing or violated any fiduciary duty owed towards plaintiff, or that defendant otherwise owes a sum of money to plaintiff. If the issue arises on summary judgment, counsel should add argument demonstrating that the affidavits and other evidence submitted in support of and opposition to the motion show as a matter of law that defendant committed no misconduct and violated no duty toward plaintiff that would support an action for an accounting.

Counsel should also add points and authorities supporting his or her contentions regarding plaintiff's failure to allege or prove a tort or other violation of duty towards the plaintiff. For example, if plaintiff based the action for an accounting on defendant's alleged commission of fraud, defendant's counsel should add points and authorities supporting his or her contention that no cause of action for fraud was alleged or proven [see, e.g., Ch. 105, Fraud and Deceit].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Right to Accounting in Absence of Misconduct or Breach of Fiduciary Duty by Defendant

In Union Bank v. Superior Court (1995) 31 Cal. App. 4th 573, 37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 653 , plaintiffs were investors in a limited partnership that leased a medical scanner from a medical leasing company under a complex lease arrangement. Defendant bank had lent money to the leasing company. As security for the loan, the leasing company had assigned to defendant bank the right to repossess the scanner in the event that the limited partnership defaulted on its rental payments. The limited partnership did subsequently default on its rental payments, and the defendant bank repossessed the scanner after it was abandoned by the limited partnership. The plaintiff investors then sued 40 codefendants, including the bank, for various types of alleged negligent and intentional misrepresentation and for an accounting. The defendant bank moved for summary judgment, but the trial court denied the motion. The bank then petitioned for a writ of mandate from the court of appeal, seeking to require the trial court to grant the summary judgment motion.

The court of appeal granted the writ and directed the trial court to grant the defendant's summary judgment motion. The court first held that the evidence submitted by the defendant bank in support of the summary judgment motion was sufficient to shift the burden of proof to plaintiffs under former Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(o)(2) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(p)(2)), and that the facts referred to in the plaintiff's supporting papers were insufficient to create a triable issue as to whether defendant was civilly liable for any misrepresentations on its part. Therefore, plaintiffs had failed to sustain their burden of proving that the various fraud claims had merit (31 Cal. App. 4th 573, 592-593). The court then noted that the sole remaining cause of action was for an accounting. The court observed that the grounds for an accounting alleged in the complaint (breach of fiduciary duty; complicated accounts; and fraud) were proper (31 Cal. App. 4th 573, 593). However, the court noted that it had concluded that there was no basis for a finding of fraud or breach of fiduciary relationship, and plaintiffs had admitted that defendant did nothing wrong in administering the loan or seizing the medical scanner. Hence, the court concluded, defendant had proven that it engaged in no misconduct and, as a result, plaintiffs had no right to an accounting (31 Cal. App. 4th 573, 593-594). The court held that since the defendant owed no money to the plaintiffs and did not deprive them of any money or the lawful use of the scanner, as a matter of law, the accounting action must be dismissed. The court further observed that no California decision holds that the existence of a complicated accounting relationship between parties by itself permits the maintenance of a lawsuit between them when no money is owed and no property must be returned (31 Cal. App. 4th 573, 594).

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 12 ACCOUNTING
PART II. FORMS
B. Pleading And Showing Cause For An Accounting

1-12 California Points & Authorities § 12.45

§ 12.45 Opposing Contention That No Cause for An Accounting Exists--Cause for Accounting Sufficiently Alleged; Specification of Sum as Minimum Amount Due as Surplusage

[1] FORM Opposing Contention That No Cause for An Accounting Exists--Cause for Accounting Sufficiently Alleged; Specification of Sum as Minimum Amount Due as Surplusage

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE COMPLAINT SUFFICIENTLY STATES A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR AN ACCOUNTING BECAUSE IT ALLEGES FACTS SHOWING THE EXISTENCE OF A RELATIONSHIP THAT REQUIRES AN ACCOUNTING AND FURTHER ALLEGES THAT SOME BALANCE, WHICH CANNOT BE ASCERTAINED WITHOUT AN ACCOUNTING, IS DUE PLAINTIFF, [AND THE SPECIFICATION OF A SUM AS THE MINIMUM AMOUNT DUE MAY BE REGARDED AS MERE SURPLUSAGE].

A. Necessary Allegations. A cause of action for an accounting need only state facts showing the existence of the relationship that requires an accounting and the statement that some balance that cannot be ascertained without an accounting is due the plaintiff (Whann v. Doell (1923) 192 Cal. 680, 684, 221 P. 899 ; Brea v. McGlashan (1934) 3 Cal. App. 2d 454, 460, 39 P.2d 877).

[Optional] B. Specification of Sum as Minimum Amount Due as Surplusage. The allegation of a fixed sum as the minimum amount of damages sustained in a complaint that otherwise states a cause of action for accounting does not change the character of the action and may be disregarded as surplusage (San Pedro Lumber Co. v. Reynolds (1896) 111 Cal. 588, 44 P. 309 ; Brea v. McGlashan (1934) 3 Cal. App. 2d 454, 460, 39 P.2d 877).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a party's contention that an action for accounting does not lie. The form sets forth the general point that a cause of action for an accounting need only state facts showing the existence of a relationship that requires an accounting and the statement that some balance that cannot be ascertained without an accounting is due the plaintiff.

These points and authorities may be used alone or combined with a form of memorandum of points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue regarding the propriety of an accounting. For example, they may be used in combination with other points and authorities to oppose a general demurrer to a complaint for an accounting, a motion for judgment on the pleadings, or an objection to the introduction of evidence, or in any other proceeding in which it is contended that no accounting lies. For a discussion of objections to the introduction of evidence in an accounting action, see Stilwell v. Trutanich (1960) 178 Cal. App. 2d 614, 617-618, 3 Cal. Rptr. 285 .

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contentions supported by the points and authorities set out in §§ 12.40 -12.43.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a form of general demurrer and a notice motion for judgment on the pleadings, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For memoranda of points and authorities supporting and opposing a general demurrer to a complaint or a motion for judgment on the pleadings, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Necessary Allegations

Whann v. Doell (1923) 192 Cal. 680, 221 P. 899 , was an action for dissolution of a partnership and an accounting. Plaintiff in her complaint alleged that the partnership was engaged in manufacturing and selling a medicine, that part of the proceeds of the business were invested in certain apartment houses and other described real estate, and that title was taken in defendant's name. Plaintiff prayed that her one-half interest in the real estate be declared, for an accounting of the rents, issues, and profits of the real estate and partnership business, and that the assets of the partnership be distributed and the partnership dissolved. By an amendment to the complaint, plaintiff alleged that the rents and profits of the real estate amounted to $18,844.22. In her answer, defendant alleged that the net receipts from the sale of the medicine was $37,580.08, one half of which she was entitled to receive as wages and not as partnership profits; that plaintiff had paid her $21,629.36 for such wages and living expenses, which were also to be shared equally; and that the living expenses of the plaintiff (her one half) amounted to $6,065, of which she had paid $2,839.32 (being the difference between $21,629.36 and one half of the profits, $37,580.08, to wit, $18,790.04). Defendant admitted that the profits of the real estate were $17,938.25 but claimed the real estate as her own. Trial was before the court without a jury and without a reference or interlocutory decree ordering an accounting. The trial court made specific findings with respect to the claims of the parties, the result of which was a finding to the effect that defendant had been overpaid $2,839.32, and rendered judgment equalizing the division by increasing plaintiff's interest in the partnership property, after directing the payment to her of the money on hand and by directing a sale of the property. Defendant appealed.

The Supreme Court affirmed the judgment. In determining the sufficiency of the complaint, the Court explained that the situation presented by an accounting action is unique in that the issues raised by the pleadings may be only those with relation to the existence of the copartnership or other relationship that requires an accounting and the statement that some balance is due the plaintiff, and that other issues are raised by the account and the exceptions to it, not by the pleadings (192 Cal. 680, 684).

Brea v. McGlashan (1934) 3 Cal. App. 2d 454, 39 P.2d 877 , was an action by a former employee against the owner of a radio station. The complaint was in two counts, the first of which was for an accounting. In this count, plaintiff alleged as follows: (1) she had been orally employed by defendant for a one-year period to solicit radio advertising for defendant and was to be paid 25 percent of the sums paid by the advertisers on contracts for radio advertising that she obtained; (2) she did obtain advertising contracts for defendant; (3) she did not know the amounts paid by the advertisers pursuant to the contracts because defendant refused to tell her; (4) some four months after the employment contract was entered into, defendant refused to recognize plaintiff as his agent or employee; (5) prior to this time she had secured the oral consent of numerous other business concerns to hold themselves in readiness to use time on defendant's radio station under the then current advertising rates; and (6) contrary to the terms of her employment, defendant had ascertained the existence of these oral contracts and solicited and obtained advertising contracts from these business concerns through other agents. Judgment on this count was for plaintiff, and defendant appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. Citing Whann v. Doell (1923) 192 Cal. 680, 684, 221 P. 899 (discussed above), the court said that under our system of pleading, a cause of action for accounting need only state facts showing the existence of the relationship that requires an accounting and the statement that some balance is due the plaintiff (3 Cal. App. 2d 454, 460). The court held that the complaint sufficiently alleged the employment, the manner of compensation, the performance of services showing some compensation to be due, and the fact that the correct amount could not be ascertained without an accounting (3 Cal. App. 2d 454, 460).

[b] Specification of Sum as Minimum Amount Due as Surplusage

San Pedro Lumber Co. v. Reynolds (1896) 111 Cal. 588, 44 P. 309 , was an action by plaintiff against its former agent and employee for the enforcement and foreclosure of a lien on pledged stock and for an accounting to determine the amount for which the lien could be enforced. In its complaint, plaintiff alleged the relationship of the parties and the acts of defendant that constituted mismanagement of plaintiff's business and misappropriation of plaintiff's monies and property. Plaintiff further alleged that it was unable to state the precise amount of the losses sustained by it but, according to information and belief, the aggregate was about $65,000. Plaintiff also alleged that, although the amount of defendant's indebtedness was unsettled, unascertained, and in dispute, the defendant executed to plaintiff's president a written transfer and assignment of specified shares of stock in order to secure repayment. From a judgment for plaintiff, defendant appealed. The Supreme Court affirmed. After holding that the complaint sufficiently stated a cause of action for an accounting, the Court added that the character of the complaint was not changed by the averment that before the commencement of the action an investigation had shown that plaintiff had suffered a loss of "upward of sixty-five thousand dollars" (111 Cal. 588, 597).

The factual background of Brea v. McGlashan (1934) 3 Cal. App. 2d 454, 39 P.2d 877 , is discussed in § 12.45[3][a]. In her complaint for an accounting, plaintiff alleged that because of defendant's breach of the employment contract, plaintiff had sustained damage in the sum of $8,000 or more, and that an accounting was necessary for the exact amount of damages to be ascertained (3 Cal. App. 2d 454, 459). The court of appeal, after holding that the complaint sufficiently alleged a cause of action for an accounting, added that the additional allegation that the amount due was $8,000 was surplusage and that its inclusion did not render the complaint uncertain (3 Cal. App. 2d 454, 460).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Necessary Allegations

Remme v. Herzog (1963) 222 Cal. App. 2d 863, 35 Cal. Rptr. 586 , was an action by an employee against his former employer for an accounting and to recover the percentage of profits due him. Plaintiff was employed as the manager of the business in 1955. It was agreed orally that his compensation was to be one third of the net profits of the business. In 1956, the business was incorporated, and in April 1957, plaintiff and the corporation entered into a written employment contract providing in part that, in lieu of fixed remuneration for services, plaintiff was to receive one third of the net profits and the privilege of drawing $600 per month, which was to be deducted from his share of the net profits. Plaintiff subsequently terminated his employment and filed the action. The trial court granted an accounting and subsequently judgment was entered for plaintiff. Defendants appealed, contending that the trial court improperly granted the accounting because plaintiff did not produce sufficient evidence to show that he was entitled to it.

The court of appeal affirmed. It pointed out that if a plaintiff has a cause of action of which the court has jurisdiction, and it is necessary to have an accounting to determine his rights, it will be done, and that whether or not the facts would have given jurisdiction to a court of equity is of no consequence (222 Cal. App. 2d 863, 865). The court said that a reading of the transcript made it clear, from the great difficulties involved and the disputes between professional accountants as to what in the nature of profits the books of the corporation showed, that this was a proper case to order an account, that it was alleged, and apparently from the whole record the allegation was true, that plaintiff's employer had possession of the books of account from which the amount of profits earned could be ascertained, and that such a situation emphasizes the plaintiff's right to have an accounting (222 Cal. App. 2d 863, 865-866).

Stilwell v. Trutanich (1960) 178 Cal. App. 2d 614, 3 Cal. Rptr. 285 , was an action for an accounting to apportion losses incurred in connection with an alleged joint venture. Plaintiffs appealed a judgment of dismissal entered after defendant's objection at trial to the introduction of evidence was sustained. In reversing the judgment, the court of appeal said that a complaint for an accounting need only state facts showing the nature of the relationship that requires an accounting and that some balance is due the plaintiff, and that any other issues are raised by the account and the exceptions to it, not by the pleadings (178 Cal. App. 2d 614, 620).

Kritzer v. Lancaster (1950) 96 Cal. App. 2d 1, 214 P.2d 407 , was an action against a stockbroker and its salesman for an accounting. The complaint in effect alleged (1) a confidential relationship between the parties; (2) an oral agreement between plaintiff, a 60-year-old man in ill health, and defendants pursuant to which defendants became the trusted agents of plaintiff to handle his money and invest it in sound securities for his benefit; (3) misconduct of defendants who, contrary to the terms of the agreement, bought and sold speculative and unsound securities with plaintiff's money for their own gain and secret profit; and (4) resulting loss to plaintiff, which could not be ascertained without an accounting, the means of which were within the knowledge of defendants (96 Cal. App. 2d 1, 2, 7). Defendants' general demurrer and special demurrer for uncertainty were sustained with leave to amend. Plaintiff elected to stand on his complaint, the action was dismissed, and plaintiff appealed. Holding that the complaint sufficiently stated a cause of action for an accounting, the court of appeal reversed the judgment (96 Cal. App. 2d 1, 7, 9). Quoting from Brea v. McGlashan (1934) 3 Cal. App. 2d 454, 459-460, 39 P.2d 877 (discussed in § 12.45[e][a]), the court said that under our system of pleading, a cause of action for accounting need only state facts showing the existence of the relationship that requires an accounting and the statement that some balance is due plaintiff (96 Cal. App. 2d 1, 7-8).

[b] Specification of Sum as Minimum Amount Due as Surplusage

In Kritzer v. Lancaster (1950) 96 Cal. App. 2d 1, 214 P.2d 407 (discussed in § 12.45[4][a]), plaintiff alleged on information and belief that his total loss exceeded $10,000 and that the amount of secret profits made by defendants exceeded $2,000. The court of appeal, quoting from Brea v. McGlashan (1934) 3 Cal. App. 2d 454, 459-460, 39 P.2d 877 (discussed in § 12.45[3][a]), in effect held that the allegation was surplusage and that the character of the complaint for an accounting was not affected by it (96 Cal. App. 2d 1, 8-9).

93 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 12 ACCOUNTING
PART II. FORMS
B. Pleading And Showing Cause For An Accounting

1-12 California Points & Authorities § 12.46

§ 12.46 Opposing Contention That No Cause for An Accounting Exists--Fiduciary Relationship and Duty to Account Exist

[1] FORM Opposing Contention That No Cause for An Accounting Exists--Fiduciary Relationship and Duty to Account Exist

[The following may be included in a memorandum supporting or opposing a motion, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

AN ACCOUNTING IS PROPER IN THIS ACTION BECAUSE A FIDUCIARY RELATIONSHIP EXISTS BETWEEN THE PARTIES AND A DUTY RESTS ON THE DEFENDANT TO RENDER AN ACCOUNT.

Fiduciary Relationship and Duty to Account Exist. An accounting lies whenever a fiduciary relationship exists between the parties and a duty rests on the defendant to render an account (San Pedro Lumber Co. v. Reynolds (1896) 111 Cal. 588, 596-597, 44 P. 309 ; Esslinger v. Cummins (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 517, 523-528, 50 Cal. Rptr. 3d 538 ; Kritzer v. Lancaster (1950) 96 Cal. App. 2d 1, 6-7, 214 P.2d 407).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in opposition to a party's contention that no accounting lies. The form sets forth the point that an action for an accounting is proper when a fiduciary relationship exists between the parties and the defendant is under a duty to render an account.

This form may be used alone or combined with a memorandum relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue regarding the propriety of an accounting. For example, this form may be used in combination with another form to oppose a general demurrer to a complaint for an accounting, a motion for judgment on the pleadings, or an objection to the introduction of evidence, or in any other proceeding in which it is contended that no accounting lies. For a discussion of objections to the introduction of evidence, see Stilwell v. Trutanich (1960) 178

Cal. App. 2d 614, 617-618, 3 Cal. Rptr. 285 .

In an appropriate case, this form may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the forms set out in §§ 12.40 -12.43.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a form of general demurrer and a notice motion for judgment on the pleadings, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Memoranda

For memoranda supporting and opposing a general demurrer to a complaint or a motion for judgment on the pleadings, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Fiduciary Relationship and Duty to Account Exist

The factual background of San Pedro Lumber Co. v. Reynolds (1896) 111 Cal. 588, 44 P. 309 , is discussed in § 12.45[3][b]. The complaint alleged that defendant had been plaintiff's trusted agent and employee for several years, that he had been defendant's branch manager, and that, as branch manager, his duties included keeping and accounting for all monies and property of the company coming into his hands, overseeing and directing all other company employees at the branch office, furnishing plaintiff from time to time with statements of the accounts, affairs, and property of the company, and paying over to plaintiff all monies received by him for plaintiff. The complaint further alleged that prior to a specified date, defendant had failed to account for or pay over to plaintiff considerable sums of money that had come into his hands for plaintiff's use and benefit, that defendant had appropriated these sums to his own use, that other considerable sums of money had been lost to the company through the dishonesty and embezzlement of other employees as a result of defendant's failure to properly discharge his duty as agent and manager of the business, and that an accounting was necessary to determine the precise amount of the losses. From a judgment for plaintiff, defendant appealed, contending among other things that the complaint did not state a cause of action.

The Supreme Court affirmed. It said the complaint showed that defendant was plaintiff's trusted agent, acting in a fiduciary capacity, and having for a long period of time the entire charge and control of its business at the branch office, and that by various kinds of misconduct, which were specially described, he caused losses and became liable in large sums of money, the true amounts of which could not be ascertained and determined without an accounting by defendant of the administration of his trust. The Court held that this was a sufficient ground for an accounting in equity and that the complaint stated a cause of action (111 Cal. 588, 595). The Court explained that the case presented a fiduciary relation between the parties in the nature of a trust, which brought it especially within equitable remedies (111 Cal. 588, 596). Quoting from Pomeroy's Equity Jurisprudence, § 1421, the Court said that a suit in equity for an accounting is proper when a fiduciary relationship exists between the parties and a duty rests on the defendant to render an account, and that when the relationship is such that a confidence is reposed by the principal in his agent and the matters for which an accounting is sought are peculiarly within the knowledge of the latter, equity will assume jurisdiction (111 Cal. 588, 596-597).

In Esslinger v. Cummins (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 517, 50 Cal. Rptr. 3d 538 , the remainder beneficiary of a trust sent the trustee a written request for trust documents and an accounting covering several years. The trustee provided some information but declined to provide an accounting on the ground that a remainder beneficiary is not entitled to an accounting. The beneficiary then petitioned the probate court for an order compelling the trustee to provide an accounting. The probate court ordered the trustee to prepare and file formal accountings for each of the relevant years. The trustee appealed, and the court of appeal affirmed (144 Cal. App. 4th 517, 528-529) .

The court of appeal acknowledged that a remainder beneficiary, with no right to current trust distributions, generally does not have a right to receive the trustee's annual accounting (see Prob. Code § 16062(a)). However, a remainder beneficiary may make a written request to the trustee for information about the assets, liabilities, receipts, and disbursements of the trust, the acts of the trustee, and the particulars relating to the administration of the trust relevant to the beneficiary's interest, including the terms of the trust (Prob. Code § 16061). If the trustee does not comply with a reasonable request within 60 days, and no report or account had been made within the six months preceding the remainder beneficiary's request, then the remainder beneficiary may petition the court to compel the trustee to report information about the trust or to account (Prob. Code § 17200(b)(7)). The court of appeal concluded that, because the trustee had not complied with the remainder beneficiary's request for information, the beneficiary had standing to seek an accounting, and the probate court had the power to order the trustee to account (144 Cal. App. 4th 517, 523-528) .

The factual background of Kritzer v. Lancaster (1950) 96 Cal. App. 2d 1, 214 P.2d 407 , is discussed in § 12.45[4][a]. The complaint alleged as follows: (1) there was a confidential relationship between plaintiff and defendant salesman; (2) plaintiff reposed great confidence in the salesman's friendship, integrity, and business judgment, particularly with regard to safe investments in corporate securities; (3) this was at all times known to defendants; (4) by an oral agreement defendants became plaintiff's trusted agents to handle and invest his money in sound securities; (5) defendants acted contrary to the terms of the agreement in buying and selling speculative and unsound stocks with plaintiff's money for their own gain and secret profit; and (6) this resulted in loss to plaintiff, the amount of which could not be ascertained without an accounting. The complaint prayed for an accounting of all acts and conduct by defendants with plaintiff's money and stock account and of all transactions conducted by defendants for plaintiff, either as his agent, defendant broker's own principal, or otherwise, that the profits and gains made by defendants therefrom be determined, as well as plaintiff's losses, and that judgment be rendered for such amount as the court may determine is due and payable to plaintiff.

The court of appeal, in reversing the judgment of dismissal, pointed out that an action for an accounting frequently presents a fiduciary relationship between the parties in the nature of a trust, which brings it especially within equitable remedies. The court said that when the allegations of a complaint show that defendant was a trusted agent of the plaintiff, acting in a fiduciary capacity and having for a long period of time the entire charge and control of plaintiff's business, and that by various kinds of misconduct, which are specially described, defendant caused losses and became liable in various sums of money, the true amounts of which cannot be ascertained and determined without an accounting, there is a sufficient ground for an accounting in equity (96 Cal. App. 2d 1, 6-7). The court held that the complaint, liberally construed, sufficiently stated a cause of action in equity for an accounting and was good as against a general demurrer (96 Cal. App. 2d 1, 7). The court also held that the complaint was good as against a special demurrer for uncertainty because, although many of the allegations could have been made more definite and certain, the complaint clearly stated a cause of action for an accounting because it appeared that a relationship existed that required an accounting and that there was something due plaintiff from the defendants (96 Cal. App. 2d 1, 7).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 12 ACCOUNTING
PART II. FORMS
B. Pleading And Showing Cause For An Accounting

1-12 California Points & Authorities § 12.47

§ 12.47 Opposing Contention That No Cause for an Accounting Exists--Complicated Accounts Rendering Action at Law Impractical

[1] FORM Opposing Contention That No Cause for an Accounting Exists--Complicated Accounts Rendering Action at Law Impractical

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

AN ACCOUNTING IS PROPER IN THIS CASE BECAUSE THE ACCOUNTS BETWEEN THE PARTIES ARE COMPLICATED, THEREBY RENDERING AN ACTION AT LAW IMPRACTICAL.

Complicated Accounts Rendering Action at Law Impractical. An action for an accounting may be brought, even though no fiduciary relationship exists between the parties, when the accounts are so complicated that an action at law for a sum certain would be impractical (Civic Western Corp. v. Zila Industries, Inc. (1977) 66 Cal. App. 3d 1, 14, 135 Cal. Rptr. 915 ; see Brea v. McGlashan (1934) 3 Cal. App. 2d 454, 460, 39 P.2d 877).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a party's contention that no accounting lies. The form sets forth the point that an action for an accounting may be brought, even though no fiduciary relationship exists between the parties, when the accounts are so complicated that an action at law for a sum certain would be impractical.

These points and authorities may be used alone or combined with a form of memorandum of points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue regarding the propriety of an accounting. For example, they may be used in combination with other points and authorities to oppose a general demurrer to a complaint for an accounting, a motion for judgment on the pleadings, or an objection to the introduction of evidence, or may be used in any other proceeding in which it is contended that no accounting lies. For a discussion of objections to the introduction of evidence in accounting actions, see Stilwell v. Trutanich (1960) 178 Cal. App. 2d 614, 617-618, 3 Cal. Rptr. 285 .

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contentions supported by the points and authorities set out in §§ 12.40 -12.43.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a form of general demurrer and a notice motion for judgment on the pleadings, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For memoranda of points and authorities supporting and opposing a general demurrer to a complaint or a motion for judgment on the pleadings, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Complicated Accounts Rendering Action at Law Impractical

The factual background of Civic Western Corp. v. Zila Industries, Inc. (1977) 66 Cal. App. 3d 1, 135 Cal. Rptr. 915 , is discussed in § 12.40[4][a]. In reversing the summary judgment for plaintiff on defendant's cross-complaint with respect to the accounting action on the ground that triable issues of fact existed, the court of appeal said that an accounting cause of action is equitable in nature and may be sought when the accounts are so complicated that an ordinary legal action demanding a fixed sum is impracticable (66 Cal. App. 3d 1, 14).

The factual background of Brea v. McGlashan (1934) 3 Cal. App. 2d 454, 39 P.2d 877 , is discussed in § 12.45[3][a]. In affirming the judgment for plaintiff, the court of appeal said that ordinarily no accounting is necessary between an employer and an employee, but that when payment is alleged to be in the form of a percentage of the monies received by the employer, and the complaint alleges that plaintiff does not know what monies have been received through contracts procured by her, an accounting would be the only method of arriving at the amount due (3 Cal. App. 2d 454, 460). The court held that the complaint alleged sufficiently the employment, the manner of compensation, the performance of services showing some compensation to be due, and the fact that the correct amount could not be ascertained without an accounting (3 Cal. App. 2d 454, 460).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Complicated Accounts Rendering Action at Law Impractical

The factual background of Kritzer v. Lancaster (1950) 96 Cal. App. 2d 1, 214 P.2d 407 , is discussed in § 12.45[4][a] and § 12.46[3][a]. Although the court of appeal, in holding that the complaint stated a cause of action for an accounting, rested its decision reversing the judgment on the ground that a confidential relationship was alleged to have existed between the parties, it added that, viewed in the light of the holding in Brea v. McGlashan (1934) 3 Cal. App. 2d 454, 39 P.2d 877 , discussed in § 12.47[3]; the complaint also stated a cause of action. The court then quoted at length from Brea, including the statement that ordinarily no accounting is necessary between an employer and an employee, but that when the payment is alleged to be in the form of a percentage of the monies received by the employer, and the complaint alleges that the plaintiff does not know what monies have been received through contracts procured by her, an accounting would be the only method of arriving at the amount due (96 Cal. App. 2d 1, 7-8).

95 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 12 ACCOUNTING
PART II. FORMS
B. Pleading And Showing Cause For An Accounting

1-12 California Points & Authorities §§ 12.48-12.59

[Reserved]

§§ 12.48[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 12 ACCOUNTING
PART II. FORMS
C. Statute Of Limitations

1-12 California Points & Authorities § 12.60

§ 12.60 Supporting Contention That Action Is Barred by Statute of Limitations--Accounting Is Ancillary to Main Action, Which Is Barred

[1] FORM Supporting Contention That Action Is Barred by Statute of Limitations--Accounting Is Ancillary to Main Action, Which Is Barred

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THIS ACTION FOR AN ACCOUNTING IS BARRED BY THE STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS BECAUSE THE ACCOUNTING SOUGHT IS MERELY ANCILLARY OR INCIDENTAL TO PLAINTIFF'S CAUSE OF ACTION FOR _____ [specify], WHICH IS BARRED BY THE PROVISIONS OF SECTION _____ [specify statute of limitations applicable to main cause of action] OF THE _____ [specify code].

A. Nature of Right Sued on as Determining Which Statute of Limitations Applies. The nature of the right sued on, not the form of action or the relief demanded, determines the applicability of the statute of limitations (Jefferson v. J.E. French Co. (1960) 54 Cal. 2d 717, 718, 7 Cal. Rptr. 899, 355 P.2d 643).

B. Accounting Ancillary to Main Action. When an accounting is merely ancillary to the perfection of the right sued on, the statute of limitations governing the right basically in issue applies (Jefferson v. J.E. French Co. (1960) 54 Cal. 2d 717, 719, 7 Cal. Rptr. 899, 355 P.2d 643).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a defendant's contention that the accounting prayed for is merely ancillary or incidental to the basic right sued on, that the action on the right basically in issue is barred by the statute of limitations governing it, and that the longer statute [Code Civ. Proc. § 343 (four years)] applicable to an action for an accounting does not apply.

These points and authorities may be combined with a form of memorandum of points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to establish the specific statute of limitations that applies to the action in which an ancillary or incidental accounting is sought. For example, when it appears from the face of the complaint or from judicially noticed matter, that the accounting sought is merely incidental to some other cause of action and that the other cause of action is barred by the applicable statute of limitations, the points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities supporting a general demurrer to the complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10(e), 430.30(a)] or a nonstatutory motion for judgment on the pleadings. If the bar of the statute does not appear from the face of the complaint, these points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities supporting a motion for summary judgment [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c], or if the bar of the statute has been pleaded in the answer, a motion for a separate trial of the defense [see Code Civ. Proc. § 597], or if points and authorities are required by the court, a motion for nonsuit [see Code Civ. Proc. § 581c], a motion for judgment [see Code Civ. Proc. § 631.8], or an objection at trial to the introduction of evidence.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For forms of demurrers and a notice of motion for judgment on the pleadings, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings (Matthew Bender). For forms for use on motions for summary judgment or for separate trial of the defense that the action is barred by the statute of limitations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 537, Summary Judgment and Ch. 3, Abatement of Actions, § 3.110 (Matthew Bender), respectively. For general forms for use in proceedings involving statutes of limitations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For memoranda of points and authorities supporting and opposing demurrers and motions for judgment on the pleadings, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings . For memoranda of points and authorities supporting and opposing motions for summary judgment and motions for separate trial of an affirmative defense, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments and Ch. 10, Abatement and Survival of Actions, § 10.30 et seq. For memoranda of points and authorities supporting and opposing proceedings involving the statutes of limitation, see Ch. 143, Limitation of Actions .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case when the accounting sought is not merely incidental to some other action, the points and authorities in § 12.61 may be used to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Nature of Right Sued on as Determining Which Statute of Limitations Applies

Jefferson v. J.E. French Co. (1960) 54 Cal. 2d 717, 7 Cal. Rptr. 899, 355 P.2d 643 , was an action filed on February 2, 1959, to recover a balance due under an oral employment contract by which plaintiff had been employed as a sales manager of defendants' automobile agency at a specified salary, payable monthly, plus 10 percent of the profits, payable annually, and for an accounting. Plaintiff had received all his monthly salary payments and certain sums as his percentage of profits for 1955, 1956, and 1957, but no payments had been made to him on account of profits for 1953, 1954, and 1958. However, before entry of the judgment, plaintiff waived any claim to profits for the two-year period prior to the commencement of the action. Defendants demurred to the complaint on the ground the action was barred by the two-year provision set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 339(1), requiring, with specified exceptions, that an action on a contract, obligation, or liability not founded on an instrument of writing be commenced within two years from the date it accrues. Plaintiff contended that the action was essentially equitable in nature and that such actions are governed by the four-year limitation of Code Civ. Proc. § 343 (four years on action as to which no other limitation is specified). The demurrer was sustained without leave to amend and plaintiff appealed from the subsequent judgment for defendants. The Supreme Court affirmed. The Court concluded that the primary purpose of the action was to recover money under an oral contract and held that the nature of the right sued on, not the form of action or the relief demanded, determines the applicability of the statute of limitations (54 Cal. 2d 717, 718).

[b] Accounting Ancillary to Main Action

The factual background of Jefferson v. J.E. French Co. (1960) 54 Cal. 2d 717, 7 Cal. Rptr. 899, 355 P.2d 643 , is discussed in § 12.60[3][a]. In affirming the judgment for defendants on the ground the action was barred by the two-year statute of limitations applicable to oral contracts (Code Civ. Proc. § 339(1)), the Court held that the accounting sought was merely ancillary to the perfection of plaintiff's right under the oral contract, and that aspect of the action should not operate to avoid the effect of a statute prescribing a period of limitation with respect to the right basically in issue (54 Cal. 2d 717, 719).

Citing the following cases, the Court acknowledged that a number of decisions held or contained language that might be construed to mean that Code Civ. Proc. § 343 is the applicable statute of limitations if an accounting is involved: McArthur v. Blaisdell (1911) 159 Cal. 604, 608, 115 P. 52 ; West v. Russell (1888) 74 Cal. 544, 546-547, 16 P. 392 ; Schaefer v. Berinstein (1960) 180 Cal. App. 2d 107, 132-133, 4 Cal. Rptr. 236 ; People v. Taliaferro (1957) 149 Cal. App. 2d 822, 825, 309 P.2d 48 ; Austin v. Harry E. Jones, Inc. (1939) 30 Cal. App. 2d 362, 368, 86 P.2d 379 ; Swan v. Smith (1929) 102 Cal. App. 541, 544, 283 P. 829 ; Freeman v. Donohoe (1923) 65 Cal. App. 65, 81-85, 223 P. 431 ; and Allsopp v. Joshua Hendy Machine Works (1907) 5 Cal. App. 228, 234, 90 P. 39 . The Court disapproved these cases insofar as they were contrary to the views expressed by it in Jefferson. The Court said that none of the cited decisions considered the problem in the light of the principle that the nature of the right sued on should be determinative rather than matters of form and procedure, that in West, as well as some of the other cases cited, the question of whether Code Civ. Proc. § 343 applied was unimportant because written agreements were involved as to which the applicable period of limitation would in any event have been four years under Code Civ. Proc. § 337, and that this fact may explain the lack of careful consideration of the problem (54 Cal. 2d 717, 719-720).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Nature of Right Sued on as Determining Which Statute of Limitations Applies

The factual background of Tostevin v. Douglas (1958) 160 Cal. App. 2d 321, 325 P.2d 130 , is discussed in § 12.42[3][a]. The complaint was entitled "Complaint for Declaratory Judgment and for an Accounting." The court of appeal, in affirming the judgment of dismissal on the ground the action was barred by the two-year period of limitations in Code Civ. Proc. § 339(1), said that the action was really one to recover an amount due for breach of the terms of an oral agreement and that the nature of the right sued on and not the form of the action, nor the relief demanded, determines the applicability of the statute of limitations (160 Cal. App. 2d 321, 328). Quoting from Bendien v. Solov (1949) 89 Cal. App. 2d 904, 907, 202 P.2d 372 , the court said that there was no merit in plaintiffs' contention that the two-year statute of limitations was inapplicable because the suit was for an accounting. The court held that entitling an action a complaint for an accounting does not change the character of the action and that the character of the action is to be determined not from the relief demanded but from the allegations of the complaint (160 Cal. App. 2d 321, 328).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 12 ACCOUNTING
PART II. FORMS
C. Statute Of Limitations

1-12 California Points & Authorities § 12.61

§ 12.61 Opposing Contention That Action Is Barred by Statute of Limitations--Action for Accounting May Be Commenced at Any Time Within Four Years After It Accrues [Code Civ. Proc. § 343]

[1] FORM Opposing Contention That Action Is Barred by Statute of Limitations--Action for Accounting May Be Commenced at Any Time Within Four Years After It Accrues [Code Civ. Proc. § 343]

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THIS ACTION FOR AN ACCOUNTING IS NOT BARRED BY THE STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS BECAUSE IT [INVOLVES A DUTY TO ACCOUNT ARISING FROM THE FIDUCIARY RELATIONSHIP OF THE PARTIES AND] IS [THEREFORE] GOVERNED BY SECTION 343 OF THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE AND HAS BEEN COMMENCED WITHIN FOUR YEARS AFTER THE CAUSE OF ACTION ACCRUED, AS PERMITTED BY THAT SECTION.

A. Four-Year Statute of Limitations. An action for relief not provided for in Sections 312-342 of the Code of Civil Procedure must be commenced within four years after the cause of action accrues (Code Civ. Proc. § 343).

B. Action for Accounting as Governed by Code Civ. Proc. § 343. Section 343 of the Code of Civil Procedure, prescribing a four-year period of limitation on the commencement of actions, applies to actions for an accounting (Moss v. Moss (1942) 20 Cal. 2d 640, 644, 128 P.2d 526).

[Optional] C. Code Civ. Proc. § 343 as Applying to Actions Seeking an Accounting When Duty to Account Arises From Fiduciary Relationship of Parties. Section 343 of the Code of Civil Procedure, prescribing a four-year period of limitation on the commencement of actions, applies when the duty to account arises from the fiduciary relationship of the parties (Manok v. Fishman (1973) 31 Cal. App. 3d 208, 210-213, 107 Cal. Rptr. 266).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that the action seeking an accounting is barred by some period of limitations less than four years and to establish that the applicable statute of limitations is Code Civ. Proc. § 343, requiring that an action for relief not otherwise specified in Code Civ. Proc. §§ 312-342 be commenced within four years after it accrues.

These points and authorities may be combined with a form of memorandum of points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to establish that the action seeking an accounting is governed by Code Civ. Proc. § 343. For example, if the primary right sued on is the right to an accounting and the accounting is not merely incidental to some other cause of action which is barred by a shorter period of limitation, these points and authorities may be used to oppose any of the proceedings, enumerated in § 12.60[2][a]. Paragraph C should be included when the duty to account arises from the fiduciary relationship of the parties or the accounting is merely ancillary to other relief sought resulting from a breach of the fiduciary relationship.

If the primary right sued on is for an accounting and was commenced more than four years after the action accrued, these points and authorities may be used to support a defendant's contention that the action is barred by the statute of limitations and may be used in combination with points and authorities supporting any of the proceedings enumerated in § 12.60[2][a].

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Action for Accounting as Governed by Code Civ. Proc. § 343

Moss v. Moss (1942) 20 Cal. 2d 640, 128 P.2d 526 , was an action for declaratory relief seeking a determination of plaintiff's obligations to his former wife under a property settlement agreement. Defendant's demurrer to the complaint on the ground, among others, that the action was barred by the statute of limitations, was sustained without leave to amend, and plaintiff appealed. The Supreme Court affirmed. Plaintiff contended that the complaint stated a cause of action for cancellation of the agreement. The Court pointed out that, since there was no statute of limitation expressly governing an action for cancellation of an instrument because of its illegality, the action was governed by Code Civ. Proc. § 343 (four years), and that under that section the action was barred because it had been filed more than 10 years after the cause of action accrued (20 Cal. 2d 640, 644). In support of its holding as to the applicability of Code Civ. Proc. § 343, the Court reiterated the "well settled" rule in California that the four years' limitation of Code Civ. Proc. § 343 applies to all suits in equity not strictly of concurrent cognizance in law and equity and pointed out that the section has been considered applicable to actions for an accounting, among others (20 Cal. 2d 640, 644).

Counsel should note that the Supreme Court, in support of its statement that Code Civ. Proc. § 343 applies to actions for an accounting, cited McArthur v. Blaisdell (1911) 159 Cal. 604, 115 P. 52 , and West v. Russell (1888) 74 Cal. 544, 16 P. 392 . Both these cases are among those disapproved by the Supreme Court in Jefferson v. J.E. French Co. (1960) 54 Cal. 2d 717, 7 Cal. Rptr. 899, 355 P.2d 643 (discussed in § 12.60[3][a], [b]), to the extent that they are contrary to the views expressed in Jefferson. See discussion of Manok v. Fishman (1973) 31 Cal. App. 3d 208, 107 Cal. Rptr. 266 , in.

[b] Code Civ. Proc. § 343 as Applying to Actions Seeking an Accounting When Duty to Account Arises From Fiduciary Relationship of Parties

Manok v. Fishman (1973) 31 Cal. App. 3d 208, 107 Cal. Rptr. 266 , was an action based on an oral partnership agreement for an accounting and declaratory relief. Defendant's demurrer to the complaint, on the ground that the action was barred by the two-year limitation period provided by Code Civ. Proc. § 339(1) for bringing an action on a contract, obligation, or liability not founded on an instrument in writing, was sustained without leave to amend, and plaintiff appealed from the subsequent judgment (order) of dismissal.

The court of appeal reversed. The court, in holding that the action was governed by Code Civ. Proc. § 343, pointed out the following: (1) the general rule is that partners have no right to bring an action at law against one another until partnership affairs are wound up and the balance due between the members is agreed on; (2) prior to that time, the only remedy available to a partner is in equity, seeking an accounting; and (3) under Corp. Code § 15022, a partner has a statutory right to an accounting (a) when wrongfully excluded from the partnership business, (b) when the right to an accounting is based on a contractual provision contained in the partnership agreement, or (c) when it is "just and reasonable" under the circumstances (31 Cal. App. 3d 208, 211).

The court, citing Freeman v. Donohoe (1923) 65 Cal. App. 65, 223 P. 431 , explained that it had long been the rule that the four-year period of limitation set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 343 applied to an action between partners for an accounting (31 Cal. App. 3d 208, 211). The court acknowledged that Freeman as one of the cases disapproved by the Supreme Court in Jefferson v. J.E. French Co. (1960) 54 Cal. 2d 717, 7 Cal. Rptr. 899, 355 P.2d 643 (discussed in § 12.60[3][a] and [b]), to the extent that it was contrary to the views expressed in Jefferson, and the Manok court quoted extensively from the Jefferson case (31 Cal. App. 3d 208, 211-212). In determining what the Supreme Court in Jefferson disapproved of in Freeman, the Manok court noted the following: (1) the Supreme Court's disapproval was localized to pages 81-85 of the Freeman opinion; (2) the discussion in Freeman of the statute of limitations commences on page 79, where the Freeman court pointed out that an action for the settlement of partnership affairs was in substance an action for the enforcement of a trust and for an accounting, which historically had been brought in courts of equity whose function included the enforcement of trusts; (3) pages 81-85 of the Freeman opinion on the other hand include a discussion of some earlier cases which held Code Civ. Proc. § 343 applicable to actions on contracts in which relief in the form of an accounting was sought, contrary to the overruling decision in Jefferson; and (4) it was thus necessary for the Supreme Court in Jefferson to disapprove this part of the Freeman opinion insofar as it was contrary to the views expressed in Jefferson. The Manok court added that the most significant part of the Freeman case was the order made by he Supreme Court when it denied a hearing in that case; this order, published in 65 Cal. App. at page 94 , states that the Supreme Court (1) did not approve that portion of the Freeman opinion which seems to hold that the action may be regarded as on a contract, obligation, or liability founded on an instrument in writing, and (2) was satisfied with the conclusion in Freeman that the statute of limitations applicable to the case was the one prescribed by Code Civ. Proc. § 343. The Manok court held that, inasmuch as Jefferson disapproved only certain language appearing on pages 81-85 of Freeman, it had to regard the language of the Supreme Court itself, appearing at page 94 of Freeman as an authoritative statement of the present law (31 Cal. App. 3d 208, 212).

The Manok court concluded that the original contract by which the partnership allegedly began was not the primary right sued on, but that the action was based on the alleged relationship of the parties carrying on a jointly owned business, and the fiduciary duties that the law imposes on such parties. The court said that the law imposes on such parties obligations arising out of the nature of their fiduciary relationship and that one of these is the duty to account as provided in Corp. Code §§ 15021 and 15022. The court held that this is the primary right that is the basis of the action, and that the action is not governed by the statute relating to actions on a contract, but by the four-year catch-all statute provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 343 (31 Cal. App. 3d 208, 213).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Code Civ. Proc. § 343 as Applying to Actions Seeking an Accounting When Duty to Account Arises From Fiduciary Relationship of Parties

In Schneider v. Union Oil Co. (1970) 6 Cal. App. 3d 987, 86 Cal. Rptr. 315 , plaintiff's complaint set forth five causes of action as follows: (1) to establish plaintiff's status in defendant company as a stockholder, (2) for an ancillary accounting, (3) to quiet title to shares, (4) for declaratory relief, and (5) in the alternative, for damages suffered by reason of defendant's breach of its fiduciary duty. Plaintiff and her father had owned, as joint tenants, shares of stock of defendant corporation. The father, without plaintiff's knowledge, forged her signature on the stock certificate and caused it to be transferred to a third party. After the father's death some 12 years later, plaintiff learned of the transfer and demanded that defendant recognize and confirm her stock ownership and her rights and status as a stockholder, but defendant refused. Defendant's demurrer to the complaint was sustained without leave to amend on the ground that the action was for conversion of shares of stock and barred by the three-year period of limitation prescribed by former Code Civ. Proc. § 338(3) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 338(c)]. Plaintiff appealed from the subsequent judgment of dismissal.

The court of appeal reversed. The court held that the relationship between a corporation and its stockholders is fiduciary in the nature of a trusteeship, that the corporation transferred title to the stock at its peril, and that when a corporation transfers title to stock on a forged or unauthorized endorsement or refuses to transfer title at the demand of the owner, it commits an action that is both one of conversion and a breach of trust and that plaintiff has an election of remedies (6 Cal. App. 3d 987, 992). The court pointed out that the nature and extent of a plaintiff's recovery is substantially different, depending on the remedy chosen. If plaintiff sues for conversion, the damages are measured by the value of the stock as of the date of the wrongful transfer or refusal to transfer, with interest from that time, whereas if plaintiff sues to establish his or her interest in the corporation, plaintiff is entitled to receive a new certificate as evidence of stock ownership, together with all dividends declared thereon from and after the date of the wrongful transfer or refusal to transfer (6 Cal. App. 3d 987, 993). The court held that the action was based on defendant's breach of its fiduciary duty and that the four-year period of limitation under Code Civ. Proc. § 343 applied (6 Cal. App. 3d 987, 993). The court, however, added that even if it regarded the action as one for conversion and applied the three-year period prescribed by former Code Civ. Proc. § 338(3) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 338(c)], plaintiff's action was not barred because the cause of action did not accrue until she acquired knowledge of the defendant's breach of its fiduciary obligation to her (6 Cal. App. 3d 987, 993).

See also Estate of Peebles (1972) 27 Cal. App. 3d 163, 103 Cal. Rptr. 560 , in which the trial court had dismissed an action following an order sustaining a general demurrer to plaintiff's complaint without leave to amend on the ground that the action by an administratrix-with-the-will-annexed seeking recovery of capital allegedly contributed to a partnership by the decedent and for an accounting was barred by the statute of limitations. The administratrix had been appointed more than four years before the complaint was filed. The court of appeal (1) pointed out that an action for an accounting may be subject to the four-year period of limitation provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 343, (2) concluded under the applicable code provisions that the cause of action accrued when the decedent died, (3) held that the estate representative had a maximum of four years, or two years if Code Civ. Proc. § 339, relating to actions on oral contracts, obligations, or liabilities, applied, in which to seek an accounting and had not done so, and (4) affirmed the judgment (27 Cal. App. 3d 163, 166, 169).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 12 ACCOUNTING
PART II. FORMS
C. Statute Of Limitations

1-12 California Points & Authorities §§ 12.62-12.79

[Reserved]

§§ 12.62[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 12 ACCOUNTING
PART II. FORMS
D. Sufficiency Of Account

1-12 California Points & Authorities § 12.80

§ 12.80 Supporting Contention That Trial Court's Disposition of Accounting Action Is Improper--Mere Statement of Balance Due Without Ordering Reference

[1] FORM Supporting Contention That Trial Court's Disposition of Accounting Action Is Improper--Mere Statement of Balance Due Without Ordering Reference

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE TRIAL COURT'S MERE STATEMENT OF THE BALANCE DUE PLAINTIFF, WITHOUT ORDERING A REFERENCE, IS NOT A PROPER DISPOSITION OF THIS ACTION.

Mere Statement by Trial Court of Balance Due Without Reference as Insufficient. In an action seeking an accounting, a statement of the balance due in the trial court's statement of decision, without a reference, is not a proper disposition of the action (see Whann v. Doell (1923) 192 Cal. 680, 684, 221 P. 899 ; ABC Egg Ranch v. Abdelnour (1963) 223 Cal. App. 2d 12, 17, 35 Cal. Rptr. 487).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a party's contention in an action seeking an accounting that the trial court erred in failing to order a reference to take an account or to properly take the account itself.

These points and authorities may be combined with a form of memorandum of points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue as to the propriety of the procedure adopted by the trial court in an action for an accounting in which the trial court failed to order a reference to take an account and merely found or gave judgment for the balance due. For example, the points and authorities may be used in combination with points and authorities supporting a notice of intention to move for a new trial [see Code Civ. Proc. § 657] or a motion to set aside and vacate the judgment [see Code Civ. Proc. § 663].

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the point of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a form of notice of intention to move for a new trial or to set aside and vacate the judgment, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 371, Motions After Trial, § 371.60 et seq. (Matthew Bender)

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For memoranda of points and authorities supporting and opposing a motion for new trial or a motion to set aside and vacate the judgment, see Ch. 155, Motions After Trial, §§ 155.50 et seq. and 155.320 et seq., in this set.

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in § 12.81 may be used to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Mere Statement by Trial Court of Balance Due Without Reference as Insufficient

The factual background of Whann v. Doell (1923) 192 Cal. 680, 221 P. 899 , is discussed in § 12.45[3][a]. After pointing out that the issues raised by the pleadings in an accounting action may be only those with relation to the existence of the relationship that requires an accounting and the statement that some balance is due the plaintiff and that the other issues are raised by the account and the exceptions to it, the Supreme Court said that a statement of the balance due in the findings of the court, without a reference, and without an account or without exceptions being taken to specific items, is not a proper disposition of the action. The reasons given were as follows: (1) the issues between the parties are not framed or disposed of in such manner as to show the method by which the general result is reached; (2) the aggrieved party cannot successfully present his or her grievances to an appellate court because the appellate court must assume in support of the judgment that every controverted fact was determined in favor of the respondent; and (3) even if the appellate court had the disposition and power to reexamine the entire account, the presumption in favor of the action of the trial court as to the contested items would ordinarily render such action wholly nugatory (192 Cal. 680, 684).

Nevertheless, after considering the trial court's findings and the defendant's contentions with respect to them, the Court concluded that each item protested by the defendant had been properly allowed. Consequently, she was not prejudiced on her appeal by the general presumption in favor of a judgment and was not injuriously affected by the method of the trial court, "which might otherwise call for a reversal." The Court therefore affirmed the judgment (192 Cal. 680, 688).

ABC Egg Ranch v. Abdelnour (1963) 223 Cal. App. 2d 12, 35 Cal. Rptr. 487 , was an action for an accounting, dissolution of a partnership, capital contribution by defendant, and distribution of assets under an alleged oral partnership between the parties. The trial court, in its findings of fact, found that the parties had formed a partnership to carry on the business of operating a wholesale egg route, that the profits and losses were to be divided equally, that each party was to make an equal capital contribution, that defendant did not contribute equal capital, that defendant was to receive $100 per week for his services, that the parties had agreed on a named firm to prepare an accounting and audit of the partnership business, and that defendant had drawn more than $100 per week salary as agreed on. The trial court rendered judgment dissolving the partnership as of a specified date, adjudging that plaintiff have title and possession of a truck and that defendant have title to an air conditioning unit purchased by the partnership, awarding plaintiff the sum of $6,635.70, and adjudging that the cost of the audit of $600 be paid one half by each party. Defendant appealed.

The court of appeal reversed with directions to the trial court to vacate the findings and judgment and to reopen the case for the taking of such additional evidence as may be necessary to prepare proper findings. Quoting 38 Cal. Jur. 2d, Partnership § 157, the court said that in an action for an accounting between partners, the findings must set forth the partnership assets, their value, and the capital balances of the partners, although there is no requirement that the assets be particularly described (223 Cal. App. 2d 12, 16). Quoting Davis v. California Motors (1946) 73 Cal. App. 2d 241, 246-247, 166 P.2d 52 , which, in turn, quoted Whann v. Doell (1923) 192 Cal. 680, 684, 221 P. 899 (discussed above), the court said that in the absence of a reference, a mere statement of the balance due in the findings of the court is not a proper disposition of the action (223 Cal. App. 2d 12, 17). The court further set forth the nature of the findings required on the reopening of the case in order for the trial court to comply with the rule set out in § 12.81 (223 Cal. App. 2d 12, 17-19).

The findings of fact referred to in the above discussed cases are no longer required, having been replaced by a statement of decision [see Code Civ. Proc. § 632]. Nevertheless, the rule applied in these cases appears to be equally applicable to statements of decision.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Mere Statement by Trial Court of Balance Due Without Reference as Insufficient

Regalado v. Regalado (1961) 198 Cal. App. 2d 549, 18 Cal. Rptr. 468 , was an action for partition of realty and for an accounting of all income received by defendant as rent for the property and for judgment against defendant for the amount found due plaintiff as her share of the rents. The trial court found that the Regalados owned the property as tenants in common, each owning an undivided one-half interest, that the realty was subject to a deed of trust, that partition could not be made without prejudice to the owners, and that a sale was necessary. It rendered an interlocutory judgment decreeing that the realty be sold and the proceeds applied in a specified manner, including the payment to defendant Regalado of $1,976.42 as reimbursement for principal paid on the trust deed in installments of $79 per month. Defendant appealed, contending among other things, that, with respect to the court's finding that defendant had paid $1,976.42 on the principal of the note secured by the trust deed, it could not be determined how or for what period of time the court found the amount was paid. The court of appeal held that this point was well taken (198 Cal. App. 2d 549, 553). It pointed out that the trial court failed to cast any detailed account, only finding that defendant did pay this sum and was entitled to credit. The appellate court held, under the authority of Whann v. Doell (1923) 192 Cal. 680, 221 P. 899 (discussed in § 12.80[3][a]), that the finding was insufficient since the reviewing court could not ascertain from the record the manner in which the sum was calculated, and it reversed that portion of the interlocutory judgment requiring its payment from the sale proceeds (198 Cal. App. 2d 549, 553, 555).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 12 ACCOUNTING
PART II. FORMS
D. Sufficiency Of Account

1-12 California Points & Authorities § 12.81

§ 12.81 Opposing Contention That Trial Court's Disposition of Accounting Action Is Improper--Account Need Not Be Stated in Accepted Bookkeeping Fashion

[1] FORM Opposing Contention That Trial Court's Disposition of Accounting Action Is Improper--Account Need Not Be Stated in Accepted Bookkeeping Fashion

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE TRIAL COURT'S STATEMENT OF THE ACCOUNT IN THIS ACTION IS ADEQUATE BECAUSE THE CONTROVERTED ITEMS OF THE ACCOUNT AND THEIR DISPOSITION CAN BE INTELLIGENTLY ASCERTAINED FROM _____ [PROCEDURE FOLLOWED and/or THE RECORD]; THE COURT WAS NOT REQUIRED TO STATE THE ACCOUNT IN ACCEPTED BOOKKEEPING FASHION.

Sufficiency of Account. In taking an account, there is no requirement that the trial court state the account in an accepted bookkeeping fashion; rather, any procedure or record from which it can be intelligently ascertained what the issues were as to the controverted items and how these issues were disposed of by the trial court will suffice for the purpose (Whann v. Doell (1923) 192 Cal. 680, 684, 221 P. 899 ; Blase v. Pedlow (1960) 183 Cal. App. 2d 367, 373, 6 Cal. Rptr. 635).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a party's contention that the mere statement by a trial court of the balance due without ordering a reference is an improper disposition of an accounting action. The form sets forth the general points that the trial court in taking an account is not required to state the account in an accepted bookkeeping fashion and that any procedure or record from which it can be intelligently ascertained what the issues were as to the controverted items and how these issues were disposed of by the trial court will suffice for the purpose.

These points and authorities may be combined with a form of memorandum of points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue as to the propriety of an accounting. For example, they may be combined with points and authorities opposing a notice of intention to move for a new trial [see Code Civ. Proc. § 657] or a motion to set aside and vacate the judgment [see Code Civ. Proc. § 663].

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities set out in § 12.80.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the point of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For forms for use on motions for a new trial or to set aside and vacate the judgment, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 371, Motions After Trial § 371.60 et seq. (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For memoranda of points and authorities supporting and opposing a motion for new trial or a motion to set aside and vacate the judgment, see Ch. 155, Motions After Trial §§ 155.50 et seq. and 155.320 et seq.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Sufficiency of Account

The factual background of Whann v. Doell (1923) 192 Cal. 680, 221 P. 899 , is discussed in § 12.45[3][a]. In affirming the judgment, the Supreme Court said that it is obvious that a statement of the balance due in the findings of the court, without a reference, and without an account, or without exceptions being taken to specific items, is not a proper disposition of the action, but that, on the other hand, the contention that an account must be stated in accepted bookkeeping fashion cannot be maintained. The Court said that any procedure or record from which it can be intelligently ascertained what the issues were as to the controverted items and how these issues were disposed of by the trial court will suffice for the purpose, whether the matter appears from the findings, the decree, or a bill of exceptions, showing the controversy and its disposition (192 Cal. 680, 684-685). The Court considered the trial court's findings and appellant's contentions with respect to them and held that under the facts of the case defendant was not prejudiced by the method of trial and decision adopted by the trial court. The Court accordingly affirmed the judgment (192 Cal. 680, 686-688).

Blase v. Pedlow (1960) 183 Cal. App. 2d 367, 6 Cal. Rptr. 635 , was an action for an accounting based on an alleged oral partnership to operate an auto wrecking business and for other relief. The trial court found (1) that plaintiff had been originally employed under an oral agreement to perform certain labor for defendant in her auto towing service and then by oral agreement further employed to manage an auto wrecking business established by defendant and, as compensation for his services, was to be paid a sum equal to one half of the net profits of the business and (2) that full and fair accountings had been made by defendant and accepted by plaintiff during the course of the employment. The trial court concluded that no partnership ever existed between the parties, that plaintiff was not entitled to an accounting, and that plaintiff was entitled to recover nothing in the action. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. Quoting from Davis v. California Motors (1946) 73 Cal. App. 2d 241, 166 P.2d 52 , which in turn quoted from Whann v. Doell (1923) 192 Cal. 680, 684, 221 P. 899 (discussed above), the court said that it was true that in the absence of a reference, a mere statement of the balance due in the findings of the court is not a proper disposition of the action, but that, on the other hand, the contention that an account must be stated in accepted bookkeeping fashion cannot be maintained. Any procedure or record from which it can be intelligently ascertained what the issues were as to the controverted items and how these issues were disposed of by the trial court will suffice for the purpose, whether the matter appears from the findings, the decree, or a bill of exceptions, showing the controversy and the disposition thereof (183 Cal. App. 2d 367, 373). The court of appeal concluded from the record in the case that these requirements had been complied with (183 Cal. App. 2d 367, 373).

The findings of fact referred to in the above discussed cases are no longer required, having been replaced by a statement of decision [see Code Civ. Proc. § 632]. Nevertheless, the rule applied in these cases appears to be equally applicable to statements of decision.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 13 ADVERSE POSSESSION

1-13 California Points & Authorities 13.syn

AUTHOR: Virginia A. Johnson

§ 13.syn Synopsis to Chapter 13: ADVERSE POSSESSION

§ 13.01 Scope of Chapter

§ 13.02 Governing Law

§ 13.03 How to Use the Forms in This Chapter

[1] Page Limits on Points and Authorities

[2] Using the Forms to Build a Draft Memorandum

§ 13.04 Related Discussion and Forms

[1] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[2] Related Points and Authorities

§§ 13.05-13.09 [Reserved]

§ 13.10 Supporting Motion for New Trial in Quiet Title Action--Evidence Insufficient to Establish Adverse Possession

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Grounds for New Trial

[b] Elements Required for Adverse Possession

[c] Burden of Proof

[d] Acts of Occupation Indicating Ownership

[e] Notice to Owner

[f] Offer to Buy

[g] Renunciation

[h] Occupation By Mistake

[i] Nonpayment of Taxes

[j] Good Faith Possession

[k] Incorrect Land Description

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Elements Required for Adverse Possession

[b] Burden of Proof

[c] Acts of Occupation Indicating Ownership

[d] Notice to Owner

[e] Renunciation

[f] Occupation By Mistake

[g] Offer to Buy

[h] Good Faith Possession

[i] Incorrect Land Description

§ 13.11 Opposing Motion for New Trial in Quiet Title Action--Possession by Plaintiff's Tenant Attributed to Plaintiff

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[3] Additional Authorities

[a] Possession of Tenant Attributed to Landlord

§ 13.12 Opposing Motion for New Trial in Quiet Title Action--Evidence Sufficient to Show Notice of Adverse Claim

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Presumption of Notice

[b] Proof Necessary

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Presumption of Notice

[b] Proof Necessary

§ 13.13 Opposing Motion for New Trial in Quiet Title Action--Evidence Sufficient to Show Payment of Taxes

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Redemption

[b] Payment By Two Claimants

[c] Misdescription on Assessment Rolls

[d] Nonpayment After Title Acquired

[e] Taxes Not Assessed

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Redemption

[b] Payment By Two Claimants

[c] Misdescription on Assessment Rolls

[d] Nonpayment After Title Acquired

[e] Taxes Not Assessed

§ 13.14 Opposing Motion for New Trial in Quiet Title Action--Evidence Sufficient to Show Possession

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Fence as Substantial Enclosure

[b] Enclosure By Fence and Natural Barriers

[c] Temporary Destruction of Portions of Enclosure

[d] Farming Land Cultivated in Usual Manner

[e] Improvement of Town Lot

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Enclosure By Fence and Natural Barriers

§ 13.15 Opposing Motion for New Trial in Quiet Title Action--Evidence Sufficient to Establish Claim Under Written Instrument

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Ordinary Use

[b] Use As City Residence

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Ordinary Use

§§ 13.16-13.19 [Reserved]

§ 13.20 Supporting Motion for Summary Judgment in Quiet Title Action--Plaintiff Not in Adverse Possession

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Elements of Adverse Possession

[b] Occupation With Permission

[c] Occupation By Lessee

[d] Occupation By Mortgagor

[e] Occupation By Tenant in Common

[f] Recordation of Conveyance to Cotenant

[g] Interruption of Possession

[h] Privity Necessary for Tacking

[i] Limitations Period Does Not Run While Parties Are in Fiduciary Relationship

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Occupation With Permission

[b] Occupation By Tenant in Common

[c] Recordation of Conveyance to Cotenant

[d] Interruption of Possession

§ 13.21 Opposing Defendant's Motion for Summary Judgment in Quiet Title Action--Possession Actually Adverse

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Hostile Possession

[b] Possession Commenced By Mistake

[c] Offer to Purchase Claim Before Title Acquired

[d] Offer to Purchase Interest After Title Acquired

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Hostile Possession

[b] Possession Commenced By Mistake

§ 13.22 Opposing Motion for Summary Judgment in Quiet Title Action--Possession Adverse As to Cotenant

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Acts of Ownership Adverse to Cotenants

[b] Recordation of Deed Conveying Entire Interest

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Acts of Ownership Adverse to Cotenants

§ 13.23 Opposing Motion for Summary Judgment in Quiet Title Action--Possession Continuous for Five Years

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Continuous Personal Presence Not Required

[b] Periods of Vacancy

[c] Seasonal Use

[d] Slight Use

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Continuous Personal Presence Not Required

[b] Periods of Vacancy

[c] Seasonal Use

[d] Slight Use

§ 13.24 Opposing Motion for Summary Judgment in Quiet Title Action--Tacking of Possession for Five Years

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Privity Between Successive Adverse Claimants

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Privity Between Successive Adverse Claimants

§§ 13.25-13.29 [Reserved]

§ 13.30 Supporting General Demurrer to Complaint--Action to Recover Real Property--Bar of Statute of Limitations

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Failure to State Cause of Action

[b] Statute of Limitations

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Failure to State Cause of Action

Virginia A. Johnson n*

FOOTNOTES:
(n4)Footnote *. Virginia A. Johnson is an attorney, adjunct law professor, and freelance writer, specializing in real estate law.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 13 ADVERSE POSSESSION
I. INTRODUCTION

1-13 California Points & Authorities § 13.01

AUTHOR: Virginia A. Johnson

§ 13.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter contains forms of points and authorities for actions in which a party is attempting to establish or oppose the establishment of, title to real property by adverse possession. It also contains a form to support a demurrer to an action by the legal title holder to recover real property based on the bar of the statute of limitations.

Part II, Subpart A, includes forms supporting (see § 13.10) and opposing (see § 13.11 et seq.) a motion for a new trial by a defendant in a quiet title action commenced by a claimant by adverse possession, on the grounds that the evidence is sufficient to establish the elements of adverse possession.

Part II, Subpart B, includes forms supporting (see § 13.20) and opposing (see § 13.21 et seq.) a motion for summary judgment made by the legal title holder against a claimant by adverse possession.

Part II, Subpart C, contains a form for supporting a demurrer against an action brought by the legal title holder based on the bar of the statute of limitations (see § 13.30).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
GovernmentsLegislationStatutes of LimitationsGeneral OverviewReal Property LawAdverse PossessionGeneral OverviewReal Property LawAdverse PossessionElements of Adverse ClaimsReal Property LawAdverse PossessionDefensesReal Property LawAdverse PossessionProcedure

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 13 ADVERSE POSSESSION
I. INTRODUCTION

1-13 California Points & Authorities § 13.02

AUTHOR: Virginia A. Johnson

§ 13.02 Governing Law

Adverse possession is governed by case and statutory law. Dimmick v. Dimmick (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 417, 421, 24 Cal. Rptr. 856, 374 P.2d 824 and its progeny enumerate the five elements necessary to establish title by adverse possession. In addition to judicial enumeration, particular requisites are provided by statute. Specifically, occupancy by adverse possession is governed by Civ. Code §§ 1006, 1007. Title by adverse possession is governed by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 322-325. Actions to quiet title based on adverse possession are governed by Code Civ. Proc. § 760.010 et seq. Statutes of limitations on the commencement of actions to recover real property are set forth in Code Civ. Proc. §§ 318-328.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Real Property LawAdverse PossessionGeneral OverviewReal Property LawAdverse PossessionElements of Adverse ClaimsReal Property LawAdverse PossessionClaims By & Against Governmental EntitiesReal Property LawAdverse PossessionDefensesReal Property LawAdverse PossessionProcedure

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 13 ADVERSE POSSESSION
I. INTRODUCTION

1-13 California Points & Authorities § 13.03

AUTHOR: Virginia A. Johnson

§ 13.03 How to Use the Forms in This Chapter

[1] Page Limits on Points and Authorities

Generally, a supporting or opposing memorandum must not exceed 15 pages, or, in the case of a motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication, 20 pages. A reply or closing memorandum may not exceed 10 pages [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(d)]. Exhibits, declarations, attachments, a table of contents, a table of authorities, and the proof of service are excluded from these page limits. Any party desiring to file a longer memorandum must obtain leave of court [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(e)]. For further discussion of the page limitations under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113, and of other basic format requirements of memoranda, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs, § 1.05.

[2] Using the Forms to Build a Draft Memorandum

Some forms in this chapter contain both a procedural argument (e.g., a motion for new trial) and alternative substantive arguments from which to choose to form a complete memorandum. Other forms contain only substantive arguments, which should be combined with the desired procedural argument. For a detailed discussion on how to select and use the forms to build a draft memorandum and complete the draft, with detailed discussion of all drafting requirements and strategic or stylistic considerations, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs . For a skeletal form of memorandum for use in creating a property formatted outline in which to compile relevant forms from this publication, see also Ch.1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSummary JudgmentSupporting MaterialsMemoranda of LawReal Property LawAdverse PossessionGeneral OverviewReal Property LawAdverse PossessionElements of Adverse ClaimsReal Property LawAdverse PossessionDefensesReal Property LawAdverse PossessionProcedure

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 13 ADVERSE POSSESSION
I. INTRODUCTION

1-13 California Points & Authorities § 13.04

AUTHOR: Virginia A. Johnson

§ 13.04 Related Discussion and Forms

[1] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For detailed legal background discussion, research guides, procedural checklists, and practice forms of complaints, answers, and other papers related to adverse possession, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 13, Adverse Possession , and Ch. 482, Quieting Title (Matthew Bender).

[2] Related Points and Authorities

For other potentially relevant points and authorities, see the following chapters:

- Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .
- Ch. 155, Motions After Trial .
- Ch. 170, Partnerships and Joint Ventures .
- Ch. 180, Pretrial Proceedings .
- Ch. 198, Quieting Title .
- Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Real Property LawAdverse PossessionGeneral OverviewReal Property LawAdverse PossessionElements of Adverse

ClaimsReal Property LawAdverse PossessionClaims By & Against Governmental EntitiesReal Property LawAdverse PossessionDefensesReal Property LawAdverse PossessionProcedure

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 13 ADVERSE POSSESSION
I. INTRODUCTION

1-13 California Points & Authorities §§ 13.05-13.09

AUTHOR: Virginia A. Johnson

[Reserved]

§§ 13.05[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 13 ADVERSE POSSESSION
II. FORMS
A. Motions for New Trial

1-13 California Points & Authorities § 13.10

AUTHOR: Virginia A. Johnson

§ 13.10 Supporting Motion for New Trial in Quiet Title Action--Evidence Insufficient to Establish Adverse Possession

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for New Trial in Quiet Title Action--Evidence Insufficient to Establish Adverse Possession

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR NEW TRIAL
Plaintiff,	)
vs.	)	[Telephone Appearance]
_____ [name],	)	Date: _____
Defendant.	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	Judge: _____
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
	)	Trial Date: _____

_____

THE COURT SHOULD GRANT DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR A NEW TRIAL BECAUSE PLAINTIFF'S EVIDENCE IS INSUFFICIENT TO PROVE ADVERSE POSSESSION.

A. Grounds for New Trial. On the application of the party aggrieved, the _____ [verdict or decision] may be vacated, in whole or in part, and a new trial may be granted, on all or some of the issues, on the ground that the evidence is insufficient to justify the _____ [verdict or decision], if substantial rights of the aggrieved party are materially affected thereby (Code Civ. Proc. § 657).

B. Elements Required for Adverse Possession. In an action to quiet title based on adverse possession, the burden is on the claimant to prove that (1) possession has been by actual occupation under such circumstances as to constitute reasonable notice to the owner; (2) such possession was hostile to the owner's title; (3) the claimant claims the property as his or her own, under either color of title or claim of right; (4) possession has been continuous and uninterrupted for at least five years; and (5) the claimant has paid all of the taxes levied and assessed against the property during that period (Dimmick v. Dimmick (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 417, 421, 24 Cal. Rptr. 856, 374 P.2d 824).

C. Burden of Proof. The burden on the claimant is to prove every essential element of adverse possession by clear and satisfactory evidence, and if one element is not proved, the claim fails (Landini v. Day (1968) 264 Cal. App. 2d 278, 282, 70 Cal. Rptr. 260).

[Optional] D. Acts of Occupation Indicating Ownership. Occupation of the property is not sufficient to prove a claim of adverse possession unless it constitutes a subjection of the property to the will and dominion of the claimant; and it is not established by a mere assertion of title, but, rather, it must be coupled with acts of ownership that proclaim to the world, and bring notice to the owner, that a right is claimed in the land over which the claimant is seeking to exercise dominion (West v. Evans (1946) 29 Cal. 2d 414, 417, 175 P.2d 219). For the purpose of constituting an adverse possession by a person claiming title not founded on a written instrument, judgment, or decree, land is deemed to have been possessed and occupied only when (1) it has been protected by a substantial enclosure; or (2) it has been usually cultivated or improved (Code Civ. Proc. § 325).

[Optional] E. Notice to Owner. Occupation of property is not sufficient to prove a claim of adverse possession unless it is sufficiently open and notorious to notify an ordinarily prudent owner of its existence and its hostile character, or unless the owner is actually notified of it (Saecker v. Cohn (1919) 180 Cal. 151, 156, 179 P. 890).

[Optional] F. Offer to Buy. If a claimant by adverse possession offered, during the five year period, to buy the property from the person whose title he or she disputes, such an offer amounts to a clear recognition of the other person's title (Central P. R. Co. v. Mead (1883) 63 Cal. 112, 113).

[Optional] G. Renunciation. One who uses land with the consent of the owner can effect an ouster for purposes of adverse possession by renouncing, definitely and without qualification, his or her subordination to the owner, and this renunciation must be sufficiently clear to put the owner on notice that subsequent possession is adverse to his or her title (Southern Pac. Co. v. City & County of San Francisco (1964) 62 Cal. 2d 50, 56, 41 Cal. Rptr. 79, 396 P.2d 383).

[Optional] H. Occupation By Mistake. When the occupation of land is by mere mistake, with no intention by the occupant to claim as his or her own land that does not belong to him or her, but with the intention only to claim to the true line, wherever it may be, this occupation is not adverse possession (Holzer v. Read (1932) 216 Cal. 119, 123, 13 P.2d 697).

[Optional] I. Five-Year Occupation with Payment of Taxes. In no case shall adverse possession be considered established under the provisions of any sectionor sections of the Code of Civil Procedure unless it shall be shown that the land has been continuously occupied and claimed for the period of five years and that the claimant or claimants and the predecessors and grantors thereof paid all of the taxes, whether state, county, or municipal, that have been levied and assessed upon the land (Code Civ. Proc. § 325).

[Optional] J. Nonpayment of Taxes. A claimant cannot obtain title by adverse possession unless he or she establishes that no taxes were assessed against the land or that, if assessed, he or she paid them (Mesnick v. Caton (1986) 183

Cal. App. 3d 1248, 1260, 228 Cal. Rptr. 779).

[Optional] K. Good Faith Possession. Possession under color of title must be in good faith; and if a claimant knows when the deed is taken that it is not valid, good faith is lacking (Nutting v. Herman Timber Co. (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 650, 658, 29 Cal. Rptr. 754).

[Optional] L. Incorrect Land Description. A claim of adverse possession cannot be founded on a written instrument, judgment, or decree that does not describe, or that incorrectly describes, the land in question (Sorensen v. Costa (1948) 32 Cal. 2d 453, 458, 196 P.2d 900).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in support of a motion for a new trial in a quiet title action that resulted in a judgment in favor of a claimant plaintiff by adverse possession. The ground of the motion would be that evidence of one or more of the required elements of plaintiff's adverse possession was insufficient to support the verdict or decision [see Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)]. With appropriate modifications this form may be used to support a motion for summary judgment by a defendant (property owner) in a quiet title action commenced by a claimant by adverse possession.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points of law in this form applicable to his or her case with the facts of the case. For example, if the evidence was insufficient to show tax payments by plaintiff for five years, counsel will point out that plaintiff was required to either prove that he or she made the payments or that no taxes were assessed during that period and will point out how the evidence was insufficient to prove either fact.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a form of notice of intention to move for a new trial, and a form of order granting such a motion, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 371, Motions After Trial (Matthew Bender). For discussion of adverse possession and for related complaints, see Ch. 13, Adverse Possession in that publication.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Grounds for New Trial

Insufficiency of evidence to justify a verdict or other decision is a ground for granting a new trial (Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)). Accordingly, if a court or jury in an action to quiet title finds that a claimant has acquired title by adverse possession, and the evidence is insufficient to establish all the principal elements for acquisition of such a title, a motion for new trial on the ground of insufficiency of the evidence would be appropriate.

A party seeking a new trial must file a notice of intention to move for a new trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 659] supported by a memorandum [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1600], and a motion on the ground of insufficiency of the evidence to justify the verdict or other decision must be made on the minutes of the court (Code Civ. Proc. § 658). When the motion is made on the minutes, reference may be made to any depositions or documentary evidence offered at trial, and to the court reporter's report of the proceedings or any certified transcript of the report (Code Civ. Proc. § 660). For more complete analysis of motions for new trial, see Ch. 155, Motions After Trial .

[b] Elements Required for Adverse Possession

Dimmick v. Dimmick (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 417, 24 Cal. Rptr. 856, 374 P.2d 824 , was an action to quiet title by a joint tenant who had exclusive possession of the property for 22 years, except for a beehive stored on the property by the defendant joint tenant. The Supreme Court affirmed a judgment in favor of both parties, as joint tenants, and rejected the plaintiff's contention that he had acquired full title by adverse possession, holding that the possession of one cotenant is presumed to be with the permission of the other cotenant until the cotenant out of possession has notice that the other cotenant's possession is hostile (58 Cal. 2d 417, 422). The court stated in substance the elements of adverse possession set out as Paragraph B (58 Cal. 2d 417, 421).

[c] Burden of Proof

In Landini v. Day (1968) 264 Cal. App. 2d 278, 70 Cal. Rptr. 260 , the courtmade the statement set out as Paragraph C in its opinion supporting a decision affirming a judgment against a claimant by adverse possession (264 Cal. App. 2d 278, 281). The issue was whether an advertising sign on the disputed property constituted claimant's occupation of the property for the five-year period. The court held against the claimant because the evidence was insufficient to establish that the claimant, as opposed to a third party, had placed the sign on the property, and insufficient to establish that the sign had been there for five years (264 Cal. App. 2d 278, 283).

[d] Acts of Occupation Indicating Ownership

West v. Evans (1946) 29 Cal. 2d 414, 175 P.2d 219 , was an action by a cotenant seeking to quiet title against his cotenant. The Supreme Court reversed a judgment for the plaintiff, who was held not to have proved that he had occupied the property sufficiently to acquire title by adverse possession. Plaintiff's mother had received a part interest in the property in a divorce settlement. Plaintiff and his mother continued to live on the property and subsequently plaintiff's mother gave him a deed that did not refer to her fractional share. Plaintiff recorded the deed and paid the property taxes on the property for the required period. The Court held that neither his continuing to live there while his mother was there, nor hisrecording of the deed, was sufficient to indicate an ownership claim to 100 percent of the interest on the grounds that the possession of one cotenant is deemed to be with the permission of the other cotenant. In so holding, the Court stated in substance the rule set out as Paragraph D (29 Cal. 2d 414, 417-418).

[e] Notice to Owner

In Saecker v. Cohn (1919) 180 Cal. 151, 179 P. 890 , the Supreme Court stated, in substance, the rule set out as Paragraph E in its opinion supporting reversal of a judgment for a claimant by adverse possession. The Court found that the claimant's pasturing of sheep on the property for only a few days in the fall and spring, and not even every fall and spring, was not enough to give notice of occupation to the owner (180 Cal. 151, 156).

[f] Offer to Buy

In Central P. R. Co. v. Mead (1883) 63 Cal. 112 , the Supreme Court affirmed a judgment for the owner (plaintiff) and made the statement set out as Paragraph H, after observing that there was evidence tending to show an offer by the claimant (defendant) to purchase the property within the period of five years immediately preceding commencement of the action. The Court stated that such an offer would be a perfect answer to the defendant's claim of adverse possession (63 Cal. 112, 113).

[g] Renunciation

In Southern Pac. Co. v. City & County of San Francisco (1964) 62 Cal. 2d 50, 41 Cal. Rptr. 79, 396 P.2d 383 , the Supreme Court reversed a judgment quieting title in favor of a railroad corporation that held an easement by implication in certain vacated street areas, the title to which was in dispute. The court determined that the fact that the railroad corporation was identified as the owner on the tax assessment rolls was not sufficient to give notice to the owner that the railroad corporation was asserting ownership (62 Cal. 2d 50, 56).

[h] Occupation By Mistake

Holzer v. Read (1932) 216 Cal. 119, 13 P.2d 697 , was a quiet title action involving a boundary dispute resulting from a mistake on a survey. Plaintiff's neighbor was claiming title by adverse possession of that part of the property mistakenly not shown. The Supreme Court affirmed a judgment for the plaintiff and made the statement set out as Paragraph H (216 Cal. 119, 123).

[i] Nonpayment of Taxes

Mesnick v. Caton (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 1248, 228 Cal. Rptr. 779 , was an action by a property owner against a neighboring property owner to regain land beyond a fence built between plaintiff's and defendant's property. Defendant cross complained for declaratory relief and to quiet title on the ground, among others, of adverse possession. In affirming judgment for plaintiff, the court of appeal pointed out that the trial court found the evidence totally insufficient to establish that defendant had paid the taxes on the disputed property. The court said that the adverse claimant had the burden of establishing that no taxes were assessed against the land, or that, if assessed, he paid them, and held that his failure to pay taxes on the land he claimed was fatal to his claim (183 Cal. App. 3d 1248, 1260).

[j] Good Faith Possession

In Nutting v. Herman Timber Co. (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 650, 29 Cal. Rptr. 754 , affirming a judgment against a claimant by adverse possession, the court stated that actual knowledge of a deed's invalidity at the time it was taken eliminates the essential element of good faith and thus negates hostility of possession (214 Cal. App. 2d 650, 658).

[k] Incorrect Land Description

In Sorensen v. Costa (1948) 32 Cal. 2d 453, 458, 196 P.2d 900 , although affirming a judgment in favor of a claimant by adverse possession, the Supreme Court noted that the claimant's adverse possession was not founded on a written instrument, judgment, or decree when the claimant and his predecessors took possession under deeds that incorrectly described the property occupied (32 Cal. 2d 453, 458).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Elements Required for Adverse Possession

The facts and procedural background of Mesnick v. Caton (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 1248, 228 Cal. Rptr. 779 , are discussed in § 13.10[3][i]. The court of appeal, in affirming the judgment for plaintiff, said the elements necessary to perfect a claim for adverse possession are (1) payment of taxes, (2) occupation that is open and notorious, (3) occupation that is continuous, (4) occupation that is hostile to the true owner, and (5) occupation that is under a claim of title (183 Cal. App. 3d 1248, 1258).

[b] Burden of Proof

In Weller v. Chavarria (1965) 233 Cal. App. 2d 234, 43 Cal. Rptr. 364 , affirming a judgment against a claimant by adverse possession, the court stated that the burden is on the claimant to prove every essential element by clear and satisfactory evidence (233 Cal. App. 2d 234, 242).

In Nutting v. Herman Timber Co. (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 650, 29 Cal. Rptr. 754 , affirming a judgment against a claimant by adverse possession, the court stated that (1) adverse possession cannot be proved by inference but can be proved only by clear and positive proof; (2) the burden of proving all essential elements is on the claimant; and (3) if one element is wanting, the claim must fall (214 Cal. App. 2d 650, 657-658).

[c] Acts of Occupation Indicating Ownership

In Sevenman v. Long Bell Lbr. Co. (1954) 129 Cal. App. 2d 528, 277 P.2d 510 , reversing a judgment for a claimant by adverse possession and holding that the claimant's and a predecessor's occasional visits to the land were not sufficient, the court stated that merely because land is hardly usable at all does not excuse a claimant by adverse possession from exercising acts of possession and control that would constitute some notice to the world and to the legal owner of the claimant's hostile conduct (129 Cal. App. 2d 528, 533).

In Enos v. Murtaugh (1941) 47 Cal. App. 2d 269, 117 P.2d 905 , affirming a judgment against a claimant by adverse possession, the court stated that actual residence on the property is not always essential, but there must be a subjection to the will and dominion of the claimant, manifested in some appropriate way. The property was the home of claimant's mother. The court found that the claimant's acts of paying for the lot, building the house, staying there for brief periods, and giving her money for property taxes and other expenses for the house did not indicate that he was asserting ownership (47 Cal. App. 2d 269, 273-274).

[d] Notice to Owner

In Wareham v. Randolph (1960) 184 Cal. App. 2d 218, 7 Cal. Rptr. 483 , reversing a judgment for a claimant by adverse possession, the court stated that an open and notorious occupation with hostile intent is a necessary constituent of an adverse possession; neither a hostile intent without this occupation nor this occupation without hostile intent is sufficient. The court found that the claimant's three visits to the property in five or six years did not satisfy the requirements (184 Cal. App. 2d 218, 224).

[e] Renunciation

In Johnson v. Ocean Shore R.R. Co. (1971) 16 Cal. App. 3d 429, 94 Cal. Rptr. 68 , when the claimant by adverse possession acquired possession originally under an agreement, the court stated that a person cannot acquire title by adverse possession in such a case unless he or she gives clear and actual notice to the owner of the later adverse possession. The court found that letters sent by the claimant railroad company, which had an easement by agreement, did not give unequivocal notice that the railroad company was asserting fee ownership because the letters referred to the claimant's interest as a right-of-way (16 Cal. App. 3d 429, 436).

In Mattes v. Hall (1915) 28 Cal. App. 361, 152 P. 436 , affirming a judgment against a claimant by adverse possession, the court stated that when a person takes possession of property as a tenant at sufferance, he or she cannot acquire title by this possession, no matter how long it continues; rather, the claimant must begin a new period of possession by clearly, positively, and unequivocally disavowing the owner's title and asserting his or her own title in hostility, with actual notice being given to the owner. In this case the claimant's grantor had obtained control of the property from the owner, who had gone away for a while. The court found that the building of an additional fence to enclose the unimproved property was not enough to notify the owner that the holding under permission had become hostile (28 Cal. App. 361, 365).

[f] Occupation By Mistake

The facts and procedural background of Mesnick v. Caton (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 1248, 228 Cal. Rptr. 779 , are discussed in § 13.10[3][i]. The court of appeal, in affirming the judgment for plaintiff, said that though hostile possession and claim of right may be established when the occupancy occurs through mistake, the claimant's possession must be adverse to that of the record owner, unaccompanied by any recognition, express or inferable from the circumstances, of the right of the latter (183 Cal. App. 3d 1248, 1259). The court explained that there appeared to be a mistaken belief as to the true legal boundary, but that the trial court found that defendant claimed only what was his and his intent was not to claim unowned land. The court concluded, therefore, that the element of hostility was absent (183 Cal. App. 3d 1248, 1259-1260).

In Ikola v. Goff (1973) 31 Cal. App. 3d 872, 107 Cal. Rptr. 663 , affirming a judgment against a claimant by adverse possession, the court noted that the claimant intended to possess only what was his. The court held that when a person occupies the land of another by mistake without intending to claim it as his or her own and intends only to claim so much as is his or hers, according to wherever the boundary is, this occupation is not adverse (31 Cal. App. 3d 872, 878).

[g] Offer to Buy

In Lovell v. Frost (1872) 44 Cal. 471, 474-475 , affirming a judgment against a claimant by adverse possession, the Supreme Court stated that an offer to purchase the property, rather than an offer to purchase an outstanding or adverse claim or title for the purpose of quieting the claimant's possession or protecting the claimant from litigation, amounts to a clear and unequivocal recognition by the claimant of the owner's title. This recognition proves that the claimant does not, at that time, claim the title as against the owner; and if this recognition occurs within five years immediately preceding the commencement of an action by the claimant to quiet title in himself or herself, it will defeat the action (44 Cal. 471, 474-475).

[h] Good Faith Possession

In Madden v. Alpha Hardware & Supply Co. (1954) 128 Cal. App. 2d 72, 274 P.2d 705 , determining that a party's knowledge of lack of title at the time a purported purchase of property was made supported the inference of bad faith, the court stated that possession under color of title must be in good faith. If it appears that the claimant knew that the deed conveyed no title, legal or equitable, this does not entitle the claimant to the benefit of the rule as to constructive possession (128 Cal. App. 2d 72, 76-77).

[i] Incorrect Land Description

In Winchell v. Lambert (1956) 146 Cal. App. 2d 575, 304 P.2d 149 , although reversing a judgment against claimants by adverse possession whose improvements encroached on neighboring lots, the court concluded that, because the deed to the property on which the improvements were built did not cover any portion of the lots encroached on, the adverse possession, if any, was not founded on a written instrument, judgment, or decree (146 Cal. App. 2d 575, 581).

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 13 ADVERSE POSSESSION
II. FORMS
A. Motions for New Trial

1-13 California Points & Authorities § 13.11

AUTHOR: Virginia A. Johnson

§ 13.11 Opposing Motion for New Trial in Quiet Title Action--Possession by Plaintiff's Tenant Attributed to Plaintiff

[1] FORM Opposing Motion for New Trial in Quiet Title Action--Possession by Plaintiff's Tenant Attributed to Plaintiff

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORIT-
Plaintiff,	)	IES IN OPPOSITION TO MOTION FOR NEW TRI-
vs.	)	AL
_____ [name],	)	[Telephone Appearance]
Defendant.	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	Judge: _____
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
		Trial Date: _____

_____

DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR A NEW TRIAL SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE THE EVIDENCE IS SUFFICIENT TO PROVE PLAINTIFF ACTUALLY POSSESSED AND OCCUPIED THE PROPERTY FOR FIVE YEARS.

A. Possession of Tenant Attributed to Landlord. When the relation of landlord and tenant has existed between any persons, the possession of the tenant is deemed the possession of the landlord until the expiration of five years from _____ [(when there was a written lease) the termination of the tenancy (or, when there was no written lease) the time of the last payment of rent]_____ [add, if appropriate: notwithstanding that the tenant may have _____ (acquired another title or claimed to hold adversely to the landlord)] (Code Civ. Proc. § 326).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a defendant's motion for a new trial on the ground that the evidence in a quiet title action was insufficient to establish adverse possession, when the plaintiff has been, for the required time period, a landlord of a tenant who actually possessed and occupied the property in question. The form should be combined with any of the forms set forth in §§ 13.12 -13.15 that are applicable to the particular case. With appropriate modifications, this form may be used to oppose a motion for summary judgment made by the defendant in an action to quiet title to real property brought by a claimant by adverse possession.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the point in this form with the facts of his or her his case. Thus, counsel should show that the plaintiff's tenant actually occupied the property for five years.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a form of order denying a motion for a new trial, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 371, Motions After Trial (Matthew Bender). For a form of judgment quieting title based on adverse possession, see Ch. 13, Adverse Possession in that publication.

[3] Additional Authorities

[a] Possession of Tenant Attributed to Landlord

In Palin v. Sweitzer (1937) 8 Cal. 2d 329, 65 P.2d 351 , the Supreme Court affirmed a judgment in a partition action finding that one cotenant had accomplished ouster and disseisin of his cotenants, and that adverse possession had ripened into title. The claimant had for a number of years leased the property and retained the rentals, and the Supreme Court stated that possession by the claimant's tenants was deemed to be the claimant's possession (8 Cal. 2d 329, 331).

In Beckett v. Petaluma (1915) 171 Cal. 309, 153 P. 20 , the Supreme Court affirmed a judgment for the city in a quiet title action. The city claimed title to land by adverse possession, and the Supreme Court held that a finding of bar of the statute of limitations, sufficient to support a judgment in favor of the city, was supported by evidence that the city, through its tenants, had been in exclusive, continuous, and adverse possession of the property for at least 10 years (171 Cal. 309, 312).

In St. James Church v. Superior Court (1955) 135 Cal. App. 2d 352, 287 P.2d 387 , the court of appeal issued a writ of mandate to compel the respondent court to assume jurisdiction of an action by the owner of real property to enjoin a third party from collecting rents from tenants on the property. The court stated that as a general rule, the possession of a tenant is that of his or her landlord. The tenant's possession inures to the benefit of the landlord and constitutes possession by the landlord for the purpose of securing to him or her the benefits of adverse possession and the bar of the statute of limitations (135 Cal. App. 2d 352, 362).

In Fugl v. Edwards (1950) 96 Cal. App. 2d 460, 464, 215 P.2d 802 , the court of appeal determined that evidence was sufficient to establish the necessary elements of adverse possession in favor of a party who was in actual occupation of property through tenants continuously under circumstances that constituted reasonable notice to a party claiming superior title. The court stated that personal occupation is not required because possession by a tenant inures to the benefit of one (i.e., the landlord) claiming by adverse possession (96 Cal. App. 2d 460, 464).

In McLeod v. Reyes (1935) 4 Cal. App. 3d 143, 40 P.2d 839 , the court of appeal affirmed a judgment in favor of the claimants to a title by adverse possession who (1) rented cabins or summer homes on the disputed premises to different persons, (2) rented the premises to campers, and (3) at times rented the premises to motion picture concerns. The court stated that it is not necessary that one claiming by adverse possession be in personal occupation, and that possession by one's tenant inures to one's benefit (4 Cal. App. 3d 143, 148).

109 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 13 ADVERSE POSSESSION
II. FORMS
A. Motions for New Trial

1-13 California Points & Authorities § 13.12

AUTHOR: Virginia A. Johnson

§ 13.12 Opposing Motion for New Trial in Quiet Title Action--Evidence Sufficient to Show Notice of Adverse Claim

[1] FORM Opposing Motion for New Trial in Quiet Title Action--Evidence Sufficient to Show Notice of Adverse Claim

[For caption, see § 13.11.]

DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR A NEW TRIAL SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE THE EVIDENCE IS SUFFICIENT TO SHOW PLAINTIFF'S POSSESSION OF THE PROPERTY CONSTITUTED REASONABLE NOTICE OF PLAINTIFF'S ADVERSE CLAIM.

A. Presumption of Notice. Open, visible, and notorious possession will raise a presumption of notice (Hails v. Martz (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 775, 778, 172 P.2d 52).

[Optional] B. Proof Necessary. All that the claimant must show is that his or her occupation was such as to constitute reasonable notice to the true owner that the claimant claimed the land as his or her own, and the fact that the record owner was unaware of his or her own rights in the land is immaterial (Sorensen v. Costa (1948) 32 Cal. 2d 453, 461, 196 P.2d 900).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in opposition to a defendant's motion for a new trial when the defendant contends the evidence is insufficient to establish that plaintiff's possession of the property constituted reasonably notice of the plaintiff's claim to the land. The form should be combined with any of the forms set forth in §§ 13.11, 13.13 -13.15 that are applicable to the particular case. With appropriate modifications, this form may be used to oppose a motion for summary judgment made by the defendant in an action to quiet title to real property brought by a claimant by adverse possession.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the point of law with the facts of his or her case. Thus, counsel should include a description of the plaintiff's possession that demonstrates that it was open, visible, and notorious.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Presumption of Notice

Hails v. Martz (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 775, 172 P.2d 52 , involved reversal of a judgment against a claimant to an easement by prescription to divert the flow of water from his property to his neighbor's property. In rejecting the contention that the claimant was not entitled to a finding on the issue of a prescriptive right because there was no evidence of actual knowledge by the adverse party, the Supreme Court stated the rule set out as Paragraph A. In substance, the Court concluded that the fact that the claimant's predecessor had constructed a ditch and an embankment that diverted the water flow constituted open, visible, and notorious possession (28 Cal. 2d 775, 778).

[b] Proof Necessary

Sorensen v. Costa (1948) 32 Cal. 2d 453, 196 P.2d 900 , involved affirmance of a judgment for a claimant by adverse possession. In rejecting the contention that a mutual mistake of the parties prevented perfection of the title by adverse possession, the Supreme Court stated the rule set out as Paragraph B (32 Cal. 2d 453, 461).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Presumption of Notice

In Lindsay v. King (1956) 138 Cal. App. 2d 333, 292 P.2d 23 , affirming in part and reversing in part a judgment in an action to establish rights to a flow of water, the court stated the rule set out as Paragraph A, with regard to the knowledge required in cases of prescriptive rights (138 Cal. App. 2d 333, 342).

In Chapman v. Sky L'Onda Mut. Water Co. (1945) 69 Cal. App. 2d 667, 159 P.2d 988 , the court of appeal affirmed a judgment for a defendant in an ejectment action in which the defendant claimed title by adverse possession. The defendant used the property for dams and reservoir sites. The court stated that it is not an indispensable requirement that the adverse claimant show that the record owner had actual knowledge that the claimant was asserting an adverse claim, and that possession so open, visible, and notorious that it will raise the presumption of an adverse claim is the equivalent of actual knowledge (69 Cal. App. 2d 667, 678-679).

In Wood v. Davidson (1944) 62 Cal. App. 2d 885, 145 P.2d 659 , the court of appeal affirmed a judgment for the defendants and held that they had acquired limited title to water by adverse possession. The defendants had diverted water from a spring on the owner's land to their land for irrigation by ditches dug by the defendants. The court stated that the rule is that either the record owner must have actual knowledge or the possession must be so open, visible, and notorious that it will raise a presumption of notice to the record owner of the adverse claim (62 Cal. App. 2d 885, 889-890).

[b] Proof Necessary

In Nielsen v. Gibson (2009) 178 Cal. App. 4th 318, 327, 100 Cal. Rptr. 3d 335 , the court of appeal affirmed a judgment quieting title in favor of the adverse claimants who fenced in the subject property, irrigated it, built a go-kart course on it and paid property taxes on the property. The claimants satisfied the "open and notorious" requirement for adverse possession, so that the owner, who was in Ireland, was presumed to have had notice of the adverse claim [178 Cal. App. 4th 318, 327]. The presumption applied even though the owner was in Ireland. When an adverse claimant is in open possession and the true owner fails to look after his or her interests and remains in ignorance of the claim, it is the owner's own fault [178 Cal. App. 4th 318, 328].

In Kraemer v. Kraemer (1959) 167 Cal. App. 2d 291, 309, 334 P.2d 675 , the court of appeal affirmed a judgment for the plaintiff in a quiet title action in which the plaintiff claimed title by adverse possession, and stated the rule set out as Paragraph B. The plaintiff claimed under color of title and had not been aware that his grantor did not own a 100 percent interest. The court found that the plaintiff's execution of oil and gas leases and receipt of royalties from the leases, and the acts of the tenants in drilling for oil, constituted the notorious acts that gave constructive notice to the legal owner (167 Cal. App. 2d 291, 308).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 13 ADVERSE POSSESSION
II. FORMS
A. Motions for New Trial

1-13 California Points & Authorities § 13.13

AUTHOR: Virginia A. Johnson

§ 13.13 Opposing Motion for New Trial in Quiet Title Action--Evidence Sufficient to Show Payment of Taxes

[1] FORM Opposing Motion for New Trial in Quiet Title Action--Evidence Sufficient to Show Payment of Taxes

[For caption, see § 13.11.]

DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR A NEW TRIAL SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE THE EVIDENCE IS SUFFICIENT TO SHOW PLAINTIFF'S PAYMENT OF TAXES FOR THE REQUISITE PERIOD.

[Optional] A. Redemption. If, after taxes on the property were allowed to become delinquent, a claimant to title by adverse possession made a redemption in good faith while the claimant or his or her successor in interest was in undisturbed possession of the property, then this redemption operates as a sufficient payment of taxes to satisfy the statutory requirement for acquiring title by adverse possession (Gray v. Walker (1910) 157 Cal. 381, 386, 108 P. 278).

[Optional] B. Payment By Two Claimants. A claim to title by adverse possession is not defeated by the fact that taxes on the property were paid by both the claimant by adverse possession and another claimant to the title (Cummings v. Laughlin (1916) 173 Cal. 561, 565, 160 P. 833).

[Optional] C. Misdescription on Assessment Rolls. When a claimant to title by adverse possession has paid taxes actually assessed on the property occupied, the fact that the property was not correctly described on the assessment rolls and tax bills is not controlling, and the claimant has complied with the statutory requirement of payment of taxes to establish title by adverse possession (Sorensen v. Costa (1948) 32 Cal. 2d 453, 466 467, 196 P.2d 900).

[Optional] D. Nonpayment After Title Acquired. The failure of a claimant by adverse possession to pay taxes coming due after the claimant acquired his or her title by adverse possession is not material to the validity of the claimant's acquisition of title by adverse possession (Southern Pac. R.R. Co. v. Whitaker (1895) 109 Cal. 268, 273, 41 P. 1083).

[Optional] E. Taxes Not Assessed. A failure to pay taxes for a period during which no valid levy or assessment was made on the property in question does not preclude a claimant from acquiring title to the property by adverse possession (Harvey v. Meyer (1897) 117 Cal. 60, 61 63, 48 P. 1014).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a defendant's motion for a new trial based on insufficient evidence of payment of taxes when the plaintiff contends that the evidence of payment was sufficient.

With appropriate modifications, this form of points and authorities may be used to oppose a motion for summary judgment made by the defendant in an action to quiet title to real property brought by a claimant by adverse possession.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of her or her case. Thus counsel should show that the plaintiff paid the taxes for the requisite period or that there was no valid assessment.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Redemption

In Gray v. Walker (1910) 157 Cal. 381, 108 P. 278 , the Supreme Court determined that a claimant had acquired title by adverse possession, and affirmed a judgment in favor of the claimant. The Court stated that the fact that in one year the land was sold for delinquent taxes and subsequently redeemed by the plaintiff did not prevent the acquisition of title by adverse possession (157 Cal. 381, 386).

[b] Payment By Two Claimants

In Cummings v. Laughlin (1916) 173 Cal. 561, 160 P. 833 , in affirming a judgment in favor of the claimants to title by adverse possession, the Supreme Court concluded that the claimants fully complied with the law by payment of taxes on the land, even though the taxes were also paid by the record holder of title (173 Cal. 561, 565).

[c] Misdescription on Assessment Rolls

Sorensen v. Costa (1948) 32 Cal. 2d 453, 196 P.2d 900 , was a quiet title action in which the Supreme Court affirmed a judgment in favor of the claimant by adverse possession. The Court found that the claimant proved by substantial evidence that the description on the tax assessment rolls was mistaken and that he and his predecessors not only thought that they were paying taxes on the occupied land (which is, in itself, insufficient) but in fact paid taxes actually assessed against the land (32 Cal. 2d 453, 466-467).

[d] Nonpayment After Title Acquired

In Southern P. R. Co. v. Whitaker (1895) 109 Cal. 268, 41 P. 1083 , affirming a judgment for a claimant by adverse possession, the Supreme Court stated that when a fee is once acquired by a five years' adverse possession, it continues until conveyed or lost to another adverse possessor. Therefore, the failure of one who had acquired title by adverse possession to pay taxes for a year after title was acquired could not divest or in any way affect the title (109 Cal. 268, 273).

[e] Taxes Not Assessed

In Harvey v. Meyer (1897) 117 Cal. 60, 48 P. 1014 , a claimant to title by adverse possession was held to have established title by adverse possession despite his failure to pay taxes during his period of occupancy, when the assessment during the period in question was absolutely void (117 Cal. 60, 61-63).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Redemption

In Owsley v. Matson (1909) 156 Cal. 401, 104 P. 983 , reversing a judgment against a claimant by adverse possession, the Supreme Court stated that a redemption of taxes after the adverse possession had ceased could not relate back so as to make it a payment during the period of adverse possession. However, if the tax has been allowed to become delinquent, a sale has taken place, and a redemption has been made, and all of this has been done in good faith and while the adverse claimant or his or her successor in interest has been in undisturbed possession, it is sufficient to bring the occupant within the terms of the statute, which requires the claimant to pay the taxes on the property claimed (156 Cal. 401, 405).

In Kohler v. Bristow (1955) 131 Cal. App. 2d 692, 281 P.2d 352 , affirming a judgment in favor of a claimant by adverse possession, the court stated the same rule as was set out in the Owsley case, above (131 Cal. App. 2d 692, 698-699).

In Weyse v. Biedebach (1927) 86 Cal. App. 712, 261 P. 1086 , affirming a judgment in favor of a claimant by adverse possession, the court stated that the claimant and his predecessors, following tax sales, exercised every right and performed every duty incidental to ownership, having purchased at sales for delinquent taxes and paid subsequent assessments, besides claiming under a color of title (86 Cal. App. 712, 720).

[b] Payment By Two Claimants

In Cavanaugh v. Jackson (1893) 99 Cal. 672, 34 P. 509 , affirming a judgment in favor of a claimant by adverse possession, the Supreme Court concluded that the requirement of payment of taxes was satisfied when the land was assessed to the claimant and the taxes on the land were paid by him, even though the land was also assessed to the opposing party, who also paid the taxes (99 Cal. 672, 673-675).

In Kendrick v. Klein (1944) 65 Cal. App. 2d 491, 150 P.2d 955 , affirming a judgment in favor of a claimant by adverse possession when the claimant had paid the assessments against the property each year, the court concluded that the fact that the property may have been doubly assessed by the authorities could not serve to destroy the claimant's adverse possession (65 Cal. App. 2d 491, 497).

In Pereira Farms Corp. v. Simas (1924) 69 Cal. App. 159, 230 P. 976 , the court of appeal affirmed a judgment in favor of a claimant by adverse possession and rejected the contention that adverse possession is not established when there is double assessment and double payment of taxes on disputed land. The court quoted a text for the proposition that when there is double taxation and double payment of taxes on land, a claimant to title by adverse possession has fully complied with the law when he or she has paid the taxes on the land, even though they have also been paid by the holder of the record title (69 Cal. App. 159, 163).

[c] Misdescription on Assessment Rolls

In Gilardi v. Hallam (1981) 30 Cal. 3d 317, 178 Cal. Rptr. 624, 636 P.2d 588 , the Supreme Court held that the claimant had not met his burden of proof that taxes were paid. The Court stated, however, in dicta, that when it is shown that there is an error in the description on the assessment roll, the claimant may establish the error and the payment of taxes. It also stated that when the claimant by construction of buildings or other valuable improvements or by building fences has visibly shown occupation of a disputed strip of land adjoining the boundary, the natural inference is that the assessment was not based on the record boundary but on the improvements visibly possessed by the parties. (30 Cal. 3d 317, 326-327).

In Winchell v. Lambert (1956) 146 Cal. App. 2d 575, 304 P.2d 149 , the court of appeal reversed a judgment against claimants by adverse possession whose house encroached on a neighboring lot. The claimants had paid taxes on the whole of their residence, including the encroaching portion. The court concluded that the requirement of payment of taxes was satisfied even though the lot on which the house encroached was described as unimproved for assessment purposes (146 Cal. App. 2d 575, 582-583).

In Frericks v. Sorensen (1952) 113 Cal. App. 2d 759, 248 P.2d 949 , affirming a judgment in favor of claimants by adverse possession, the court concluded that the requirement of payment of taxes was satisfied when the claimants and their predecessors had paid taxes assessed for certain improvements on land occupied by them, despite the fact that the land was mistakenly described on the assessment rolls (113 Cal. App. 2d 759, 762).

[d] Nonpayment After Title Acquired

In LeFevre v. Borwick (1953) 116 Cal. App. 2d 786, 254 P.2d 626 , the court of appeal affirmed a judgment in favor of claimants by adverse possession. The court found that plaintiffs paid all taxes levied on the property for the fiscal years 1946-47, 1947-48, 1948-49, 1949-50, and 1950-51 prior to the commencement of the action. As plaintiffs' possession ripened into title not later than March 1, 1951, their inability to pay the taxes for the fiscal year 1951-52 prior to the commencement of the action did not defeat the title so acquired (116 Cal. App. 2d 786, 789).

In Meier v. Meier (1945) 71 Cal. App. 2d 502, 507, 162 P.2d 950 , affirming a judgment in favor of a claimant by adverse possession, the court stated that the law does not require the impossible, and the fact that taxes became delinquent after the claimant had acquired title to the property could not defeat that title except through a sale held under the tax laws (71 Cal. App. 2d 502, 507).

[e] Taxes Not Assessed

In Oneto v. Restano (1889) 78 Cal. 374, 379, 20 P. 743 , the Supreme Court stated that, with respect to the payment of taxes to establish title by adverse possession, the requirement does not apply when no taxes have been assessed (78 Cal. 374, 379).

In Santa Clara v. Ivancovich (1940) 47 Cal. App. 2d 502, 511, 118 P.2d 303 , the court of appeal affirmed a judgment against a city that sought to recover a strip of land claimed to have been dedicated to public street purposes (the strip having never been assessed for either city or county taxes for the 25 years next preceding trial of the city's action). The court found that no taxes were paid on the strip, and that when no taxes are assessed the failure to make tax payments will not prevent title by adverse possession.

111 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 13 ADVERSE POSSESSION
II. FORMS
A. Motions for New Trial

1-13 California Points & Authorities § 13.14

AUTHOR: Virginia A. Johnson

§ 13.14 Opposing Motion for New Trial in Quiet Title Action--Evidence Sufficient to Show Possession

[1] FORM Opposing Motion for New Trial in Quiet Title Action--Evidence Sufficient to Show Possession

[For caption, see § 13.11.]

DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR A NEW TRIAL SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE THE EVIDENCE IS SUFFICIENT TO SHOW PLAINTIFF'S POSSESSION.

[Optional] A. Fence as Substantial Enclosure. Whether a fence is sufficient to turn cattle is the usual test in determining whether it constitutes a substantial enclosure for purposes of adverse possession (Jones v. Hodges (1905) 146 Cal. 160, 163, 79 P. 869).

[Optional] B. Enclosure By Fence and Natural Barriers. It is not necessary, in order to constitute an adverse possession, that an entire tract be enclosed by a fence, if the fences constructed, together with natural barriers, are sufficient enclosures to turn cattle (Palin v. Sweitzer (1937) 8 Cal. 2d 329, 331, 65 P.2d 351).

[Optional] C. Temporary Destruction of Portions of Enclosure. The mere temporary destruction of portions of an enclosure by fire or flood does not defeat the acquisition of title by adverse possession (Baldwin v. Durfee (1897) 116 Cal. 625, 627, 48 P. 724).

[Optional] D. Farming Land Cultivated in Usual Manner. Adverse possession not founded on a written instrument, judgment, or decree, is established with regard to farming land when the property is farmed and cultivated in the usual manner of farming and cultivating lands in the neighborhood where the property is situated (Trull v. Dunn (1926) 79 Cal. App. 545, 552, 250 P. 185).

[Optional] E. Improvement of Town Lot. Adverse possession not founded on a written instrument, judgment, or decree, is established with regard to a town lot when it was improved in the manner or to the extent usual in the case of similar property; and if so improved, such a lot need not be cultivated (Gray v. Walker (1910) 157 Cal. 381, 385, 108 P. 278).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a defendant's motion for a new trial on the ground that the evidence in a quiet title action was insufficient to establish adverse possession, when the plaintiff asserts that the evidence of adequate actual possession was sufficient. It should be combined with any of the forms set forth in §§ 13.11 -13.13 or 13.15 that are applicable to the particular case.

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may be used to oppose a motion for summary judgment made by the defendant in an action to quiet title to real property brought by a claimant by adverse possession.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, if the claimant did not enclose the property, or used it only occasionally, counsel would argue that this use was sufficient for adverse possession by analogy to one of the cases discussed below.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Fence as Substantial Enclosure

In Jones v. Hodges (1905) 146 Cal. 160, 79 P. 869 , the Supreme Court determined that evidence was sufficient to show erection and maintenance of a substantial enclosure for purposes of adverse possession, although the evidence was conflicting on the question. The Court noted that whether a fence is sufficient to turn cattle is the usual test in determining whether an enclosure is substantial or not (146 Cal. 160, 163).

[b] Enclosure By Fence and Natural Barriers

In Palin v. Sweitzer (1937) 8 Cal. 2d 329, 65 P.2d 351 , affirming a judgment in favor of a claimant by adverse possession, the Supreme Court stated that it was not necessary that the entire tract be enclosed by a fence in order to comply with Code Civ. Proc. § 325 (requiring that land be usually cultivated or improved) if the fences, together with the natural barriers, were sufficient enclosures to turn cattle for pasturage (8 Cal. 2d 329, 331).

[c] Temporary Destruction of Portions of Enclosure

In Baldwin v. Durfee (1897) 116 Cal. 625, 48 P. 724 , affirming a judgment in favor of a claimant by adverse possession, the Supreme Court stated the rule set out as Paragraph C (116 Cal. 625, 627).

[d] Farming Land Cultivated in Usual Manner

In Trull v. Dunn (1926) 79 Cal. App. 545, 250 P. 185 , the court affirmed a judgment in favor of a claimant by adverse possession when the record showed the facts on which the rule set out as Paragraph D is based (79 Cal. App. 545, 552).

[e] Improvement of Town Lot

In Gray v. Walker (1910) 157 Cal. 381, 108 P. 278 , the Supreme Court determined that adverse possession was established and stated that the requirement of the statute (Code Civ. Proc. § 325) that land be usually cultivated or improved meant that it should be cultivated in the manner and to the extent usual in the case of similar property (157 Cal. 381, 385).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Enclosure By Fence and Natural Barriers

In Goodwin v. McCabe (1888) 75 Cal. 584, 586, 17 P. 705 , the Supreme Court reversed a judgment against a claimant to title based on prior possession, when land was bounded on one side by a lake, on another side by a slough that emptied into the lake, and on the remaining sides by a fence. The Court concluded that the claimant was entitled to a jury instruction to the effect that he was entitled to a verdict if, among other factors, he had built a fence of any kind in such a manner that, together with natural barriers, it formed a complete enclosure sufficient to turn cattle (75 Cal. 584, 586).

In Conroy v. Duane (1873) 45 Cal. 597, 603 , when disputed property was bounded on one side by a natural barrier, the Supreme Court determined that no fence was needed on that side, and stated that the rule in this regard is well settled (45 Cal. 597, 603).

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 13 ADVERSE POSSESSION
II. FORMS
A. Motions for New Trial

1-13 California Points & Authorities § 13.15

AUTHOR: Virginia A. Johnson

§ 13.15 Opposing Motion for New Trial in Quiet Title Action--Evidence Sufficient to Establish Claim Under Written Instrument

[1] FORM Opposing Motion for New Trial in Quiet Title Action--Evidence Sufficient to Establish Claim Under Written Instrument

[For caption, see § 13.11.]

DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR A NEW TRIAL SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE THE EVIDENCE IS SUFFICIENT TO ESTABLISH PLAINTIFF'S CLAIM UNDER A WRITTEN INSTRUMENT.

A. Entry Under Claim of Title. When it appears that the occupant or those under whom the occupant claims entered into the possession of the property under claim of title, exclusive of other right, founding this claim upon a written instrument, as being a conveyance of the property in question, and that there has been a continued occupation and possession of the property included in the instrument, decree, or judgment, or of some part of the property, under the claim, for five years, the property so included is deemed to have been held adversely, except that when it consists of a tract divided into lots, the possession of one lot is not deemed a possession of any other lot of the same tract (Code Civ. Proc. § 322).

B. Sufficiency of Possession and Occupation. For the purpose of constituting an adverse possession by any person claiming a title founded upon a written instrument, or a judgment or decree, land is deemed to have been possessed and occupied when _____ [when it has been usually cultivated or improved or when it has been protected by a substantial enclosure or when, although not enclosed, it has been used for the supply of fuel, or of fencing-timber for the purposes of husbandry, or for pasturage, or for the ordinary use of the occupant or when a known farm or single lot has been partly improved, and in that case the portion of the farm or lot that may have been left not cleared, or not enclosed according to the usual course and custom of the adjoining country, shall be deemed to have been occupied for the same length of time as the part improved and cultivated] (Code Civ. Proc. § 323).

C. Ordinary Use. Land has been used for the ordinary use of the occupant when it has been used for a use that is appropriate to the location and character of the property (Posey v. Bay Point Realty Co. (1932) 214 Cal. 708, 712, 7 P.2d 1020).

D. Use As City Residence. Adverse possession founded on a written instrument, judgment, or decree, is established by use of a lot as a city residence, although not completely enclosed, when this use constituted the ordinary use of the occupant (Kockemann v. Bickel (1892) 92 Cal. 665, 668, 28 P. 686).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a defendant's motion for a new trial on the ground that the evidence in a quiet title action was insufficient to establish a claim under a written instrument, judgment, or decree, when the plaintiff asserts that the evidence was in fact sufficient. It should be combined with any of the forms set forth in §§ 13.11 -13.14 that are applicable to the particular case.

With appropriate modification this form of points and authorities may be used to oppose a motion for summary judgment made by the defendant in an action to quiet title to real property brought by a claimant by adverse possession.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, if the claimant used the property as a city residence, counsel should argue that this use was sufficient even without a complete enclosure.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Ordinary Use

In Posey v. Bay Point Realty Co. (1932) 214 Cal. 708, 7 P.2d 1020 , affirming a judgment in favor of a claimant by adverse possession, the Supreme Court stated that the plain meaning of "for the ordinary use of the occupant" in Code Civ. Proc. § 323 is a use appropriate to the location and character of the property, that each case must rest on its own peculiar facts, and that even slight use would be sufficient if only a slight use could be made of the property (214 Cal. 708, 712).

[b] Use As City Residence

In Kockemann v. Bickel (1892) 92 Cal. 665, 28 P. 686 , affirming a judgment in favor of claimants by adverse possession, the Supreme Court concluded that entering, residing on, and improving property satisfies the requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 323, even though an enclosure is not complete, if the property was thus used for the ordinary use of the occupant as a city residence (92 Cal. 665, 668).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Ordinary Use

In Treager v. Friedman (1947) 79 Cal. App. 2d 151, 169, 179 P.2d 387 , affirming a judgment for a claimant by adverse possession, the court stated the rule set out as Paragraph C and found that the requirement was met when the claimant assumed full and exclusive authority in renting and operating four apartment houses and dealing with them without regard to the real owners (79 Cal. App. 2d 151, 169).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 13 ADVERSE POSSESSION
II. FORMS
A. Motions for New Trial

1-13 California Points & Authorities §§ 13.16-13.19

AUTHOR: Virginia A. Johnson

[Reserved]

§§ 13.16[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 13 ADVERSE POSSESSION
II. FORMS
B. Summary Judgment Motions

1-13 California Points & Authorities § 13.20

AUTHOR: Virginia A. Johnson

§ 13.20 Supporting Motion for Summary Judgment in Quiet Title Action--Plaintiff Not in Adverse Possession

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Summary Judgment in Quiet Title Action--Plaintiff Not in Adverse Possession

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORIT-
Plaintiff,	)	IES IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR SUMMARY
vs.	)	JUDGMENT
_____ [name],	)	[Telephone Appearance]
Defendant.	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	Judge: _____
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
		Trial Date: _____

_____

SUMMARY JUDGMENT FOR DEFENDANT IS PROPER BECAUSE ALL THE PAPERS SUBMITTED SHOW THAT PLAINTIFF CANNOT CLAIM ADVERSE POSSESSION.

A. Motion for Summary Judgment. A defendant in any action or proceeding may move for summary judgment if it is contended that the action has no merit, and this motion shall be granted if all of the papers submitted show that there is no triable issue as to any material fact and that the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law (Code Civ. Proc. § 437c).

B. Elements of Adverse Possession. In an action to quiet title based on adverse possession, the burden is on the claimant to prove that (1) possession has been by actual occupation under such circumstances as to constitute reasonable notice to the owner; (2) this possession was hostile to the owner's title; (3) the claimant claims the property as his or her own, under either color of title or claim of right; (4) possession has been continuous and uninterrupted for at least five years; and (5) the claimant has paid all of the taxes levied and assessed against the property during that period (Dimmick v. Dimmick (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 417, 421, 24 Cal. Rptr. 856, 374 P.2d 824).

[Optional] C. Occupation With Permission. A person who has occupied land with the permission or consent of the owner and who has never claimed the land adversely to the owner cannot establish title by adverse possession through this occupation (Huntley v. San Francisco Sav. Union (1900) 130 Cal. 46, 48, 62 P. 255).

[Optional] D. Occupation By Lessee. A tenant cannot have possession of the demised property adversely to the landlord's title (Harvey v. Nurick (1968) 268 Cal. App. 2d 213, 215, 74 Cal. Rptr. 94).

[Optional] E. Occupation By Mortgagor. When the owner and occupier of land has mortgaged the land, his or her continued occupation of the land thereafter is not adverse to the mortgagee's rights and estate unless and until the mortgagor denies those rights and claims an unencumbered title for himself or herself so openly and notoriously that the mortgagee should have known of the adverse claim (Comstock v. Finn (1936) 13 Cal. App. 2d 151, 156, 56 P.2d 957).

[Optional] F. Occupation By Tenant in Common. A tenant in common does not acquire the title of his or her cotenant merely by taking exclusive possession of the property (Dimmick v. Dimmick (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 417, 422, 24 Cal. Rptr. 856, 374 P.2d 824).

[Optional] G. Recordation of Conveyance to Cotenant. The recordation of a deed purporting to convey the entire property in land to a tenant in possession is not, as a matter of law and independent of any other fact, notice to his or her cotenant of the adverse character of the grantee's possession (West v. Evans (1946) 29 Cal. 2d 414, 418, 175 P.2d 219).

[Optional] H. Interruption of Possession. Any interruption of an adverse possession within the required five years prevents acquisition of title by prescription (Big Three Mining & Milling Co. v. Hamilton (1909) 157 Cal. 130, 140, 107 P. 301).

[Optional] I. Privity Necessary for Tacking. A claimant of land by adverse possession who must rely on the possession of a previous holder must show a privity of estate between the claimant and the previous holder and cannot tack to the time of the claimant's possession that of a previous holder when the land claimed adversely was not included within the boundaries of the conveyance the claimant received from the previous holder (Von Neindorff v. Schallock (1937) 21 Cal. App. 2d 44, 48, 68 P.2d 278).

[Optional] J. Limitations Period Does Not Run While Parties Are in Fiduciary Relationship. The statute of limitations does not run when the parties occupy a fiduciary relationship toward each other (Estate of Seifert (2005) 128 Cal. App. 4th 64, 68, 26 Cal. Rptr. 3d 560).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in support of a defendant's motion for summary judgment in a quiet title action commenced by a claimant by adverse possession whose possession has not actually been adverse. With appropriate modifications this form may be used to support a motion for a new trial, on the ground of insufficient evidence, in a quiet title action commenced by an adverse claimant who obtained a judgment in his or her favor.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the relevant points of law to the facts of his or her case. For example, if the defendant occupied the property at any time during the five years prior to the commencement of the action, counsel should argue that this occupation prevented the claimant from acquiring title by adverse possession.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a form of notice of motion for summary judgment, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 537, Summary Judgment (Matthew Bender). For a discussion of adverse possession and related complaints, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 13, Adverse Possession (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Elements of Adverse Possession

Dimmick v. Dimmick (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 417, 421, 24 Cal. Rptr. 856, 374 P.2d 824 , is discussed in § 13.10[3][b].

[b] Occupation With Permission

Huntley v. San Francisco Sav. Union (1900) 130 Cal. 46, 62 P. 255 , was a quiet title action commenced by a claimant whose possession was not taken under any claim of title but was taken with his father's permission, for the purpose of ascertaining whether he could make a living out of it. There was nothing in the record tending to show that the claimant had ever asserted or claimed to hold possession of the land adversely to his father. The Supreme Court affirmed a judgment in favor of the defendant (130 Cal. 46, 48).

[c] Occupation By Lessee

Harvey v. Nurick (1968) 268 Cal. App. 2d 213, 74 Cal. Rptr. 94 , was a quiet title action. During the last portion of the period in which the claimant asserted adverse possession, the claimant was actually a tenant of the owner and paid rent. The court affirmed a judgment in favor of the defendant and stated that as a general rule, "a lessee in possession of real property under a lease cannot dispute his landlord's title nor can he hold adversely to him while holding under the lease" (268 Cal. App. 2d 213, 215).

[d] Occupation By Mortgagor

Comstock v. Finn (1936) 13 Cal. App. 2d 151, 56 P.2d 957 , was a quiet title action in which the trial court found that the necessary element of hostility (adverse claim) was not proved. In affirming a judgment against the adverse claimant, the appellate court stated that the possession of a mortgagor or his or her assignee not only is entirely consistent with the rights and estate of the mortgagee but also, as a general rule, cannot be adverse to the mortgagee's rights and estate until the person in possession denies the mortgagee's rights under the mortgage and sets up an exclusive title in himself or herself so openly and notoriously that the mortgagee must know of the adverse claim (13 Cal. App. 2d 151, 156).

[e] Occupation By Tenant in Common

Dimmick v. Dimmick (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 417, 24 Cal. Rptr. 856, 374 P.2d 824 , is discussed in § 13.10[3][b]. In rejecting the plaintiff's contention that he had acquired full title to the land in question, to the exclusion of the defendant who was a joint tenant, the Supreme Court stated the following: each tenant in common (analogous in this case to a joint tenant) has a right to occupy the whole of the property; the possession of one is deemed the possession of all; each may assume that another in exclusive possession is possessing for all and not adversely to the others; and, therefore, one tenant in common does not, merely by exclusive possession, gain title by adverse possession against the others. This possession will be presumed to be by permission and rightful, unless notice is brought home to the others that it has become hostile (58 Cal. 2d 417, 422).

[f] Recordation of Conveyance to Cotenant

West v. Evans (1946) 29 Cal. 2d 414, 175 P.2d 219 , involved the claim of a tenant in common that he had gained full title as against his cotenant by reason of adverse possession, notice of which was, he contended, given by recordation of a deed purporting to convey full title to him. The Supreme Court made the statement set out as Paragraph G in rejecting this contention (29 Cal. 2d 414, 417).

[g] Interruption of Possession

Big Three Mining & Milling Co. v. Hamilton (1909) 157 Cal. 130, 107 P. 301 , was a quiet title action. In holding against the claimant by adverse possession, the Supreme Court stated that to acquire title by prescription the possession of the property must be not only hostile but also exclusive, continuous, and uninterrupted for a period of five years prior to the commencement of the action, and stated the rule set out as Paragraph H (157 Cal. 130, 140).

[h] Privity Necessary for Tacking

Von Neindorff v. Schallock (1937) 21 Cal. App. 2d 44, 68 P.2d 278 , involved a claim to title by adverse possession. The court stated the rule set out as Paragraph I and cited as authority San Francisco v. Fulde (1869) 37 Cal. 349, 353-354 . The Supreme Court in that case affirmed a judgment against a claimant by adverse possession and stated that a person who preceded the claimant in possession but held for less than five years will be deemed to have held in subordination to the true title, unless there was a privity between that person and the claimant, in which case the possession of the former becomes the possession of the latter, both possessions being referred to the same entry (21 Cal. App. 2d 44, 48).

[i] Limitations Period Does Not Run While Parties Are in Fiduciary Relationship

In Estate of Seifert (2005) 128 Cal. App. 4th 64, 26 Cal. Rptr. 3d 560 , the decedent left a parcel of real property to two sons in his will. A third son, who was also the executor of the estate, claimed that the decedent had previously made him an oral gift of the property. The property was omitted from the distribution of the estate. One of the beneficiaries named in the will filed a petition to have the court require the executor to either produce a deed or reopen probate to distribute the property in accordance with the will. The trial court ruled that the executor had acquired title to the property by adverse possession. In particular, the trial court concluded that the period in which the third son served as executor could be counted in determining that possession was hostile and continuous for a period of five years. The court of appeal reversed. An executor is an officer of the court and occupies a fiduciary relation toward all parties having an interest in the estate. The statute of limitations does not run when the parties occupy a fiduciary relationship toward each other, so long as that relationship is not repudiated. Thus, a guardian may not acquire title by adverse possession against his or her ward, nor an agent against his or her principal, nor an executor against the heirs (128 Cal.

App. 4th 64, 68).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Occupation With Permission

In Janes v. Le Deit (1964) 228 Cal. App. 2d 474, 39 Cal. Rptr. 559 , affirming a judgment for the defendant in a boundary dispute case, the court stated, by way of analogy, that title cannot be acquired by adverse possession when the occupant has entered into possession by permission or consent of the owner (228 Cal. App. 2d 474, 488-489).

[b] Occupation By Tenant in Common

In Oglesby v. Hollister (1888) 76 Cal. 136, 18 P. 146 , reversing a judgment for the plaintiff in a quiet title action, the Supreme Court stated that when possession commences with the consent of the owner, which is the presumption when one tenant in common is in sole possession, there can be no adverse possession until there has been a disclaimer by the assertion of an adverse title, and notice of the disclaimer to the owner, either directly or inferentially from notorious acts (76 Cal. 136, 141).

In Preciado v. Wilde (2006) 139 Cal. App. 4th 321, 42 Cal. Rptr. 3d 792 , a plaintiff who held title to property as tenants in common with his niece and sought to quiet title based on adverse possession failed to carry his burden of proving ouster. The niece testified that she had no notice that the plaintiff wanted to interfere with her right to possession and title. The plaintiff admitted he had never excluded his niece from the property, never restricted her access, or informed her he was challenging her ownership. The plaintiff constructed fences, but admitted they were not designed to exclude family members. The plaintiff conceded that part of the property was fenced in by the niece's father. In addition, some of the changes to the property made by the plaintiff were remote in time or involved only a small area. Finally, other changes were not initiated by the plaintiff until after he had consulted the niece or her father, which refuted the plaintiff's claim of hostility (139 Cal. App. 4th 321, 325-326).

[c] Recordation of Conveyance to Cotenant

In Wilkerson v. Thomas (1953) 121 Cal. App. 2d 479, 263 P.2d 678 , affirming a judgment against a claimant by adverse possession, the court stated that the claimant's recordation of a quitclaim deed was not, as a matter of law and independent of any other fact, notice to a cotenant of the adverse character of the claimant's possession (121 Cal. App. 2d 479, 487-489).

[d] Interruption of Possession

In Strauss v. Canty (1915) 169 Cal. 101, 105, 145 P. 1012 , affirming a judgment against a claimant by adverse possession, the Supreme Court stated that while possession could be maintained by using the land for pasture during the grazing season even though there was no enclosure, the possession must be of an exclusive character; and when the evidence is silent on the question of occupancy by others, which is entirely consistent with a view that the claimant's possession was casual and intermittent, a trial court is justified in finding that exclusive and continuous possession had not been proved (169 Cal. 101, 105).

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 13 ADVERSE POSSESSION
II. FORMS
B. Summary Judgment Motions

1-13 California Points & Authorities § 13.21

AUTHOR: Virginia A. Johnson

§ 13.21 Opposing Defendant's Motion for Summary Judgment in Quiet Title Action--Possession Actually Adverse

[1] FORM Opposing Defendant's Motion for Summary Judgment in Quiet Title Action--Possession Actually Adverse

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORIT-
Plaintiff,	)	IES IN OPPOSITION TO MOTION FOR SUM-
vs.	)	MARY JUDGMENT
_____ [name],	)	[Telephone Appearance]
Defendant.	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	Judge: _____
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
		Trial Date: _____

_____

DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE PLAINTIFF'S POSSESSION WAS ACTUALLY ADVERSE.

A. Hostile Possession. Possession is adverse and hostile when, although the parties have had no dispute as to title during the period of possession, the possession by the claimant is adverse to the owner and unaccompanied by any recognition, express or implied, of the owner's rights in the property (Sorensen v. Costa (1948) 32 Cal. 2d 453, 459, 196 P.2d 900 ; Kunza v. Gaskell (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d 201, 210, 154 Cal. Rptr. 101).

[Optional] B. Possession Commenced By Mistake. Title by adverse possession may be acquired through possession or use commenced by mistake (Gilardi v. Hallam (1981) 30 Cal. 3d 317, 322-326, 178 Cal. Rptr. 317, 536 P.2d 588 ; Sorensen v. Costa (1948) 32 Cal. 2d 453, 460, 196 P.2d 900 ; Kunza v. Gaskell (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d 201, 210-211, 154 Cal. Rptr. 101).

[Optional] C. Offer to Purchase Claim Before Title Acquired. The offer of a party in possession of property that he or she claimsas his or her own to purchase an outstanding title or claim does not admit that the outstanding title or claim is valid and does not destroy that party's effort to acquire title by adverse possession (Furlong v. Cooney (1887) 72 Cal. 322, 328, 14 P. 12).

[Optional] D. Offer to Purchase Interest After Title Acquired. An offer to purchase outstanding interests in property made after acquisition of title by adverse possession does not affect the title already acquired (Montgomery & Mullen Lbr. Co. v. Quimby (1912) 164 Cal. 250, 254, 128 P. 402).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a defendant's motion for summary judgment in a quiet title action commenced by a claimant by adverse possession, when the motion is based on the ground that the plaintiff's possession was not actually adverse or hostile to the defendant. With appropriate modifications this form may be used to oppose a motion for a new trial on the ground of insufficiency of evidence to support a judgment in favor of a claimant by adverse possession.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the relevant points of law to the facts of his or her case. For example, if plaintiff made an offer to buy the property after satisfying all of the elements of adverse possession, counsel would argue that the offer was not an acknowledgment of title defeating the plaintiff's claim.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Hostile Possession

In Sorensen v. Costa (1948) 32 Cal. 2d 453, 196 P.2d 900 , affirming a judgment in favor of a claimant by adverse possession, the Supreme Court stated that the requirement of hostility means not that the parties must have a dispute as to the title during the period of possession, but that the claimant's possession must be adverse to the record owner unaccompanied by any recognition, express or implied, of the rights of the owner (32 Cal. 2d 453, 459).

In Kunza v. Gaskell (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d 201, 154 Cal. Rptr. 101 , an action to quiet title and for ejectment, a fence had been built in 1936 separating the northern and southern parcels of land in question. From 1943 to 1973, each of the owners of the parcels treated the fence as the boundary, and was assessed for and paid taxes on the land up to his or her side of the fence. In 1973, defendant owner of the north parcel destroyed the fence and claimed land south of the fence line. The trial court entered judgment for plaintiff, and defendant appealed. In finding that the record supported the trial court's conclusion that plaintiff and his predecessor in interest had acquired title to the southern parcel through adverse possession, the appellate court cited the statements of the Supreme Court in Sorenson v. Costa (1948) 32 Cal. 2d 453, 459-460, 196 P.2d 900 , which are set out as Paragraphs A and B of this form (91 Cal. App. 3d 201, 210).

[b] Possession Commenced By Mistake

In Gilardi v. Hallam (1981) 30 Cal. 3d 317, 178 Cal. Rptr. 624, 636 P.2d 588 , plaintiff occupied a certain portion of neighboring property based on a mistaken survey. Defendant appealed a verdict quieting title to the property in plaintiff's name. The Supreme Court held that adverse possession can be based on the occupier entering the land mistakenly believing he or she is the owner, unless it is established by substantial evidence that he or she recognized the potential claim of the record owner and expressly or impliedly reflected intent to claim the disputed land only if the record title was determined to be in his or her favor. The Supreme Court reversed, however, holding that plaintiff had not established that he paid the taxes on the property at issue. The Court did note that the failure to establish payment of taxes would not bar plaintiff from establishing the right to a prescriptive easement on the property (30 Cal. 3d 317, 322-326).

The claimant in Sorenson v. Costa (1948) 32 Cal. 2d 453, 196 P.2d 900 (discussed in § 13.22[3][a]) took possession under a deed containing mistaken descriptions of the boundaries. The Supreme Court stated the rule as set out in Paragraph B (32 Cal. 2d 453, 460).

Kunza v. Gaskell (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d 201, 154 Cal. Rptr. 101 , is discussed in § 13.22[3][a].

[c] Offer to Purchase Claim Before Title Acquired

In Furlong v. Cooney (1887) 72 Cal. 322, 14 P. 12 , reversing a judgment against a claimant by adverse possession, the Supreme Court quoted an earlier opinion to the effect that a jury instruction substantially stating the rule set out as Paragraph C is correct (72 Cal. 322, 328).

[d] Offer to Purchase Interest After Title Acquired

In Montgomery & Mullen Lbr. Co. v. Quimby (1912) 164 Cal. 250, 128 P. 402 , affirming a judgment in favor of a claimant by adverse possession, the Supreme Court concluded that a mere offer by the claimant to buy the claim of an opposing party in order to clear the claimant's title, made after the claimant's possession had continued for more than five years, was not an acknowledgment of title breaking continuity of possession (164 Cal. 250, 254).

In Frick v. Sinon (1888) 75 Cal. 337, 17 P. 439 , the Supreme Court, in affirming a judgment in favor of a claimant by adverse possession, concluded that an offer to buy out a hostile claim could not invalidate the title of the claimant or her predecessor in interest because, having acquired title by adverse possession, the claimant could be divested of the title only by conveyance in writing while she remained in possession (75 Cal. 337, 341).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Hostile Possession

In Newman v. Cornelius (1970) 3 Cal. App. 3d 279, 83 Cal. Rptr. 435 , the court of appeal reversed a judgment against claimants by adverse possession and held that they had done all that was necessary to gain title by adverse possession.

The court stated that the requirement of hostility means, not that the parties must have a dispute as to the title during the period of possession or that there is open aggression or combat, but that the claimant's possession must be adverse to the record owner, unaccompanied by any recognition, express or inferable from the circumstances, of the right in the latter. The possession must not only operate as an ouster of the holder of the legal title, but the title must be claimed as against the true owner during the entire statutory period (3 Cal. App. 3d 279, 289).

[b] Possession Commenced By Mistake

In Park v. Powers (1935) 2 Cal. 2d 590, 42 P.2d 75 , affirming a judgment for the claimant by adverse possession who had entered land under the mistaken belief that it was land conveyed to him in a deed that was actually for adjoining lands, the Supreme Court stated the rule set out as Paragraph B (2 Cal. 2d 590, 596).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 13 ADVERSE POSSESSION
II. FORMS
B. Summary Judgment Motions

1-13 California Points & Authorities § 13.22

AUTHOR: Virginia A. Johnson

§ 13.22 Opposing Motion for Summary Judgment in Quiet Title Action--Possession Adverse As to Cotenant

[1] FORM Opposing Motion for Summary Judgment in Quiet Title Action--Possession Adverse As to Cotenant

[For caption, see § 13.21, with which this form may be combined.]

DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE PLAINTIFF'S POSSESSION WAS ADVERSE AS TO HIS/HER COTENANT.

A. Acts of Ownership Adverse to Cotenants. When a tenant in common having possession of the entire property performs acts of ownership of an unequivocal character, overt and notorious, and of such a nature as by their own import to inform his or her cotenants that an adverse possession and disseisin are intended to be asserted against them, the tenant in common's possession is adverse (Johns v. Scobie (1939) 12 Cal. 2d 618, 624, 86 P.2d 820).

B. Recordation of Deed Conveying Entire Interest. When a tenant in common takes possession and claims title under an invalid deed purporting to convey the entire interest in the property to the tenant in common, the recordation of the deed is notice to his or her cotenants of its existence and of the adverse character of the tenant in common's claim so as to start the period of limitations running, provided the tenant in common is not aware of the existence of his or her cotenants (Johns v. Scobie (1939) 12 Cal. 2d 618, 624, 86 P.2d 820).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a defendant's motion for summary judgment in a quiet title action commenced by a claimant by adverse possession, when the motion is based on the ground that plaintiff's possession was not adverse to the defendant for the reason that the parties are tenants in common. With appropriate modifications this form may be used to oppose a motion for a new trial on the ground of insufficiency of evidence to support a judgment in favor of a claimant by adverse possession.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the relevant points of law with the facts of his or her case. Thus, counsel should show that the plaintiff's possession was adverse as to the co-tenant.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Acts of Ownership Adverse to Cotenants

In Johns v. Scobie (1939) 12 Cal. 2d 618, 86 P.2d 820 , concluding that a tenant in common's recordation of a deed purporting to convey property solely to a cotenant claiming by adverse possession was sufficient notice to his cotenants under the circumstances (when the claimant was not aware of the existence of the cotenants), the Court stated the rules set out as Paragraphs A and B (12 Cal. 2d 618, 624).

[b] Recordation of Deed Conveying Entire Interest

Johns v. Scobie (1939) 12 Cal. 2d 618, 86 P.2d 820 , is discussed in § 13.23[3][a].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Acts of Ownership Adverse to Cotenants

In Akley v. Bassett (1922) 189 Cal. 625, 642, 209 P. 576 , the Supreme Court determined that adverse possession was established when the claimant's predecessor in title entered into open and notorious possession of an entire tract under a deed that purported to convey the whole tract, with the claimant in turn entering into possession (189 Cal. 625, 642).

In Zolezzi v. Michelis (1948) 86 Cal. App. 2d 827, 832, 195 P.2d 835 , the court of appeal affirmed a judgment in favor of a claimant by adverse possession. The found that a tenant in common acquired a title by prescription under the statute of limitations because he (1) entered into actual possession of land under claim and color of title, (2) with his predecessors in interest, had maintained possession, and (3) exercised acts of ownership, openly and notoriously, claiming the land adversely to other cotenants who were of age, and to all the world, and (4) paid taxes assessed on the land for the required period.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 13 ADVERSE POSSESSION
II. FORMS
B. Summary Judgment Motions

1-13 California Points & Authorities § 13.23

AUTHOR: Virginia A. Johnson

§ 13.23 Opposing Motion for Summary Judgment in Quiet Title Action--Possession Continuous for Five Years

[1] FORM Opposing Motion for Summary Judgment in Quiet Title Action--Possession Continuous for Five Years

[For caption, see § 13.21, with which this form may be combined.]

DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE PLAINTIFF'S POSSESSION WAS CONTINUOUS FOR FIVE YEARS.

A. Continuous Personal Presence Not Required. It is not essential to the continuity of possession that there should be a continuous personal presence of some person on the property holding for the adverse claimant (Montgomery & Mullen Lbr. Co. v. Quimby (1912) 164 Cal. 250, 253-254, 128 P. 402).

[Optional] B. Periods of Vacancy. Periods of vacancy incident to or occasioned by a change of possession, or by the substitution of one tenant for another, and that are not longer than reasonable in view of the character of the land and the uses to which it is adapted and devoted, do not constitute an interruption of possession, if there is no intention to abandon possession (Botsford v. Eyraud (1906) 148 Cal. 431, 436, 83 P. 1008).

[Optional] C. Seasonal Use. When enclosed land suitable for grazing and pasturage is occupied each year during the full period of the season therefor, possession is continuous within the meaning of the requirement for continuous possession (Park v. Powers (1935) 2 Cal. 2d 590, 595, 42 P.2d 75).

[Optional] D. Slight Use. If but slight use can be made of land claimed adversely, and this slight use is actually made of the land, then the requirement of continuous and uninterrupted occupancy is satisfied (Posey v. Bay Point Realty Co. (1932) 214 Cal. 708, 712, 7 P.2d 1020).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a defendant's motion for summary judgment in a quiet title action commenced by a claimant by adverse possession, when the motion is based on the ground that the plaintiff's possession has not been continuous for five years. With appropriate modifications this form may be used to oppose a motion for a new trial on the ground of insufficiency of evidence to support a judgment in favor of a claimant by adverse possession.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points of law with the facts of his or her case. For example, if plaintiffs tenants occupied the property, with brief periods of vacancy between tenancies, and the purported owner did not occupy during these periods, counsel would argue that these periods did not interrupt plaintiff's possession.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Continuous Personal Presence Not Required

In Montgomery & Mullen Lbr. Co. v. Quimby (1912) 164 Cal. 250, 128 P. 402 , the Supreme Court determined that adverse possession was established although property was vacant during a period after the claimant ceased to use it as a lumber yard until a tenant of the claimant took possession. There was no intrusion by the purported owner or any other person during the period of vacancy. The Court observed that constant occupancy and use is not always required, depending on the character of the property and the use to which it is adapted, and that one who owns a house for rental does not abandon or lose his or her possession every time it remains vacant between tenancies. In rejecting the defendant's claim that the plaintiff's adverse possession was not continuous, the Supreme Court stated the rule set out as Paragraph A (164 Cal. 250, 253-254).

[b] Periods of Vacancy

In Botsford v. Eyraud (1906) 148 Cal. 431, 83 P. 1008 , involved a determination that there was no break in continuity of possession when a predecessor in interest of an adverse claimant deeded enclosed property to another who did not occupy the property for about a year, although the property continued to be enclosed. As authority for this determination, the Supreme Court quoted from a text the rule set out as Paragraph B (148 Cal. 431, 436).

[c] Seasonal Use

In Park v. Powers (1935) 2 Cal. 2d 590, 42 P.2d 75 , affirming a judgment for a claimant by adverse possession, the period of actual use each year lasted from May until October or November (2 Cal. 2d 590, 595).

In Webber v. Clarke (1887) 74 Cal. 11, 17, 15 P. 431 , affirming a judgment in favor of an adverse claimant, the Court concluded that pasturage only during the grazing season was sufficient when the land was not suitable for pasturage the rest of the year and was not occupied by anyone else during that time (74 Cal. 11, 17).

[d] Slight Use

In Posey v. Bay Point Realty Co. (1932) 214 Cal. 708, 7 P.2d 1020 , the Supreme Court stated the rule set out as Paragraph D in affirming a judgment for a claimant by adverse possession. The court found that the claimant's use of the land as a refuge for some stock and only a supplement to the real pasture was sufficient, given that the land was unsuitable for even pasteurage most of the year (214 Cal. 708, 712).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Continuous Personal Presence Not Required

In Newman v. Cornelius (1970) 3 Cal. App. 3d 279, 83 Cal. Rptr. 435 , the court of appeal reversed a judgment against claimants by adverse possession. The court stated, in listing the requirements for acquiring title by adverse possession and concluding that they had been fulfilled, that it is not essential to continuity, in every case, that there shall be a continuous personal presence on the lot of some person holding for the adverse claimant. It is enough, under the code, that it is devoted to the ordinary use of the occupant, when the possession is under color of title. Constant occupancy and use is not always required. It depends on the character of the property and the use to which it is adapted (3 Cal. App. 3d 279, 290).

In Los Angeles County v. Pacific Elec. Ry. Co. (1928) 93 Cal. App. 512, 269 P. 767 , the court of appeal affirmed a judgment in a condemnation proceeding, after amendment to include a finding that a claimant to title by adverse possession was the owner of disputed property, and to provide for payment of proceeds in the proceeding to the adverse claimant rather than to the holder of the legal title. The court stated that the continuity of adverse possession necessary to the maintenance of such a claim, does not require that the claimant be constantly present on the land, and that it is enough if the claimant is present at all times and seasons appropriate to the regular and usual cultivation of the land (93 Cal. App. 512, 514).

[b] Periods of Vacancy

In Bernstein v. Dodik (1933) 129 Cal. App. 454, 18 P.2d 983 , the court affirmed a judgment quieting title to easements for use of a driveway when, although there were periods of vacancy of a duplex bungalow during substitution of one tenant for another, there was no evidence of intention to abandon the right-of-way in dispute (129 Cal. App. 454, 458).

In Merrill v. Hooper (1932) 125 Cal. App. 80, 13 P.2d 786 , affirming a judgment in favor of claimants to title by adverse possession who had rented the disputed premises with some periods of vacancy occurring, the court stated that the temporary periods of vacancy, not evincing any intention of abandonment of possession, did not interrupt the continuity of their possession (125 Cal. App. 80, 84).

[c] Seasonal Use

In Kellogg v. Huffman (1934) 137 Cal. App. 278, 30 P.2d 593 , the court affirmed a judgment in favor of an adverse claimant who for several years had leased land each year for grazing purposes, when no one other than his tenants was permitted to use the land during the period in question (137 Cal. App. 278, 284).

[d] Slight Use

In Newman v. Cornelius (1970) 3 Cal. App. 3d 279, 290, 83 Cal. Rptr. 435 , the court stated that slight use was sufficient when it determined that the requirement of continuous and uninterrupted possession was met when land in a mountainous area was used for summer and weekend recreational purposes, coupled with a modest attempt to extract gold, although not in commercial quantities (3 Cal. App. 3d 279, 290).

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 13 ADVERSE POSSESSION
II. FORMS
B. Summary Judgment Motions

1-13 California Points & Authorities § 13.24

AUTHOR: Virginia A. Johnson

§ 13.24 Opposing Motion for Summary Judgment in Quiet Title Action--Tacking of Possession for Five Years

[1] FORM Opposing Motion for Summary Judgment in Quiet Title Action--Tacking of Possession for Five Years

[For caption, see § 13.21, with which this form may be combined.]

DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE THE PLAINTIFF IS IN PRIVITY WITH HIS/HER PREDECESSOR[S] IN INTEREST, AND TOGETHER THEY HAVE HELD THE PROPERTY FOR FIVE YEARS.

Privity Between Successive Adverse Claimants. It is not necessary that one person be in possession for the full five years to establish a prescriptive title if there is privity between adverse possessors who together have held the property adversely for the full five years (Sorensen v. Costa (1948) 32 Cal. 2d 453, 461-464, 196 P.2d 900).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a defendant's motion for summary judgment in a quiet title action commenced by a claimant by adverse possession, when the motion is based on the ground that the plaintiff has not been in possession for five years, but the plaintiff asserts the continuous possession of himself or herself and predecessors in interest. With appropriate modifications this form may be used to oppose a motion for a new trial on the ground of insufficiency of evidence to support a judgment in favor of a claimant by adverse possession.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points of law with the facts of his or her case. Thus, counsel should show that plaintiff and his or her predecessor(s) in interest were in privity and together were in possession of the property for five years.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Privity Between Successive Adverse Claimants

In Sorensen v. Costa (1948) 32 Cal. 2d 453, 196 P.2d 900 , after noting the rule that privity between successive claimants to title by adverse possession is necessary in order to tack one person's possession onto that of another, the Supreme Court found that there was sufficient privity between a claimant and his predecessors to support a finding of continuous possession for the five-year statutory period. The land had been conveyed by deeds mistakenly describing the property, which supported the conclusion that the claimant's predecessors intended to transfer the land in question, and possession of the land had been transferred to each successive occupant during the five-year period (32 Cal. 2d 453, 461-464).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Privity Between Successive Adverse Claimants

In Saner v. Knight (1927) 86 Cal. App. 347, 260 P. 942 , affirming a judgment in favor of a claimant by adverse possession, the court concluded that the claimant's possession could be tacked to that of the former adverse occupants when the property was conveyed to successive occupants by deeds containing correct descriptions (86 Cal. App. 347, 351-352).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 13 ADVERSE POSSESSION
II. FORMS
B. Summary Judgment Motions

1-13 California Points & Authorities §§ 13.25-13.29

AUTHOR: Virginia A. Johnson

[Reserved]

§§ 13.25[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 13 ADVERSE POSSESSION
II. FORMS
C. Demurrers

1-13 California Points & Authorities § 13.30

AUTHOR: Virginia A. Johnson

§ 13.30 Supporting General Demurrer to Complaint--Action to Recover Real Property--Bar of Statute of Limitations

[1] FORM Supporting General Demurrer to Complaint--Action to Recover Real Property--Bar of Statute of Limitations

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORIT-
Plaintiff,	)	IES IN SUPPORT OF GENERAL DEMURRER TO
vs.	)	COMPLAINT
_____ [name],	)	[Telephone Appearance]
Defendant.	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	Judge: _____
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
		Trial Date: _____

_____

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT FAILS TO STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION IN THAT IT SHOWS ON ITS FACE THAT IT IS BARRED BY THE STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS.

A. Objection By Demurrer. The party against whom a complaint has been filed may object, by demurrer as provided in Section 430.30 of the Code of Civil Procedure, to the complaint on the ground that it does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action (Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)). When any ground for objection to a complaint appears on the face thereof (or from any matter of which the court is required to or may take judicial notice), the objection on that ground may be taken by a demurrer to the complaint (Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(a)).

B. Failure to State Cause of Action. The objection that an action is barred by a statute of limitations must be deemed to be included in the ground of demurrer that the complaint does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action (Bell v. Bank of Cal. (1908) 153 Cal. 234, 245, 94 P. 889).

C. Statute of Limitations. No action for the recovery of real property, or for the recovery of the possession thereof, can be maintained unless it appears that the plaintiff or the plaintiff's ancestor, predecessor, or grantor, was seised or possessed of the property in question within five years before the commencement of the action (Code Civ. Proc. § 318).

D. Commencement of Action. An action is commenced, within the meaning of Code of Civil Procedure Sections 312 through 363, when the complaint is filed (Code Civ. Proc. § 350).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in support of a demurrer to a complaint in a quiet title action, based on the bar of the statute of limitations [see Code Civ. Proc. § 318].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points of law with the facts of his or her case. Thus, counsel should show the facts by which the applicable limitation period is to be determined.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a form of demurrer by which to assert the bar of the statute of limitations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions , and Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings (Matthew Bender). For a form of affirmative defense raising the bar of the statute of limitations in a quiet title action, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 13, Adverse Possession (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Failure to State Cause of Action

Bell v. Bank of Cal. (1908) 153 Cal. 234, 94 P. 889 , was an action for the recovery of shares of stock. The defendant asserted in a general demurrer that the action was barred by a statute of limitations, and the trial court sustained the demurrer and dismissed the action. The method of asserting the defense of bar of a statute of limitations was not, apparently, an issue either in the trial court or on appeal. However, the Supreme Court said, "The bar of the statute of limitations is not specified in the code as a ground of demurrer ...#x2026; and that objection to a complaint, while required to be stated in the demurrer, must be deemed to be included within the ground of want of facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action" (153 Cal. 234, 245).

[b] Statute of Limitations

In Earl v. Lofquist (1933) 135 Cal. App. 373, 27 P.2d 416 , a quiet title action in which it affirmatively appeared from the complaint that the defendant had been in possession of the property for 11 years before the action was commenced, the court held that the action was barred by Code Civ. Proc. § 318 and affirmed a judgment of dismissal after the sustaining of a general demurrer (135 Cal. App. 373, 378-379).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Failure to State Cause of Action

California Safe Deposit & Trust Co. v. Sierra Valleys Ry. Co. (1910) 158 Cal. 690, 112 P. 274 , was an action to foreclose a deed of trust securing corporate bonds. The defendant did not demur but asserted in the answer that the action was barred by a statute of limitations. On appeal from a judgment on the merits, it was contended that the defense of limitations was waived by failure to raise it in a demurrer. The Supreme Court noted that "the only ground of demurrer applicable [in this case] is the failure to state facts sufficient [to constitute a cause of action], and this ground is, by the express provision of section 434 [superseded by Code Civ. Proc. § 430.80], not waived by failure to demur. The true rule, under our practice, is, we think, that the defendant may, if the defect appears on the face of the complaint, set up the bar of the statute either by demurrer or by answer. If the complaint does not show that the statute has run, the defendant must plead his right by answer" (158 Cal. 690, 698).

In Tobin v. Stevens (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 945, 251 Cal. Rptr. 587 , the court held that seisin does not require actual possession of the property and that the seisin requirement was met when the plaintiff had legal title to the property within five years of the commencement of the action (204 Cal. App. 3d 945, 949-951).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 14 ADVERTISING

1-14 California Points & Authorities 14.syn

§ 14.syn Synopsis to Chapter 14: ADVERTISING

§ 14.01 Scope of Chapter

§ 14.02 Governing Law

§ 14.03 How to Use Forms in This Chapter

[1] Page Limits on Points and Authorities

[2] Using the Forms to Build a Draft Memorandum

§ 14.04 Statutory Action for False or Misleading Advertising

§ 14.05 Statutory Action for Unfair Competition

§ 14.06 Tort Action for Fraudulent Misrepresentation

§ 14.07 Regulation of Outdoor Advertising

[1] In General

[2] First Amendment Limitations

§ 14.08 Related Discussion and Forms

[1] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[2] Related Points and Authorities

§§ 14.09-14.19 [Reserved]

§ 14.20 Supporting Contention That Complaint States Statutory Cause of Action for False or Misleading Advertising [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17500, 17535]--General Form

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Use of Unfair Competition Cases

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Duty of Reasonable Care Defined

[b] Specific Language of Each Advertisement Is Not Required

[c] Deceptive Advertising Practice, Though Not Continuing, Will Probably Recur

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Person Who Has Been Injured May Sue for Relief From Violation of False Advertising Law

[b] Restitution or Other Equitable Relief

§ 14.21 Supporting Contention That Complaint States Statutory Cause of Action for False or Misleading Advertising [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17500, 17535]--False or Misleading Advertising Constitutes Unfair Competition [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Advertising and Unfair Competition Statutes Compared

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] False or Misleading Advertising Is Unfair Competition

§ 14.22 Supporting Contention That Complaint States Statutory Cause of Action for Fraud Based on False or Misleading Advertising [Civ. Code §§ 1709, 1710]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] False Advertising May Constitute Actionable Fraud

[b] Intentional Misrepresentation

[c] Negligent Misrepresentation

[d] Fraudulent Concealment

[e] Pleading Rules Are Relaxed When Defendant Possesses More Facts Than Plaintiff

[f] Pleading Rules Are Relaxed When Advertising Campaign Is Based on Long-Term, Cumulative Impact

[g] Liability to Purchasers Who Do Not See Advertising

[h] Promise Concerning Safety of Product Is Statement of Fact, Not "Puffing"

§ 14.23 Opposing Contention That Complaint States Statutory Cause of Action for False or Misleading Advertising [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17500, 17535]--Statutory Prohibitions Do Not Apply to Good-Faith Publisher or Broadcaster of Advertising [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17502]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Good-Faith Publishers or Broadcasters Are Exempted

[b] Deceptive Prize or Gift Offer

[c] Deceptive Real Estate Advertisement

§ 14.24 Opposing Contention That Complaint States Statutory Cause of Action for False or Misleading Advertising [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17500, 17535]--Statutory Prohibitions Do Not Apply to Election Campaign Practices

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statutes Do Not Apply to Campaign Practices

§ 14.25 Opposing Contention That Complaint States Statutory Cause of Action for False or Misleading Advertising [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17500, 17535]--Statute Does Not Authorize Claim for Damages

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] History of Remedies for Deceptive Advertising

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Damages Are Not Authorized

§ 14.26 Opposing Contention That Complaint States Cause of Action for Fraud Based on False or Misleading Advertising [Civ. Code § 1709]--Misrepresentation Was Mere Puffing

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Alleged Misrepresentation Is Mere "Puffing"

§ 14.27 Supporting Contention That Outdoor Advertising Ordinance Is Constitutional--Ordinance Does Not Impermissibly Infringe Free Speech [U.S. Const., Amend. I; Cal. Const. Art. 1, § 2]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Outdoor Advertising Is Protected Commercial Speech

[b] Standard for Regulation of Commercial Advertising

[c] Ban on All Off-Site Commercial Signs Is Permitted

[d] Ban on All Off-Site Signs, Regardless of Content, Is Permitted

[e] California Constitution Does Not Provide Greater Protection

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Standard for Regulation of Commercial Advertising

[b] Ban on All Off-Site Commercial Signs Is Permitted

§ 14.28 Supporting Contention That Outdoor Advertising Ordinance Is Constitutional--Ordinance Is Proper Exercise of Police Power [U.S. Const., Amends. X, XIV; Cal. Const. Art. I, §§ 13, 14; Art. XI, § 7]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Standard for Exercise of Police Power

[b] Traffic Safety

[c] Aesthetic Considerations

§ 14.29 Opposing Contention That Outdoor Advertising Ordinance Is Constitutional--Ordinance Impermissibly Infringes Free Speech [U.S. Const., Amend. I; Cal. Const. Art. I, § 2]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Ordinance Cannot Afford Commercial Speech Greater Protection Than Noncommercial Speech

[b] Ordinance Cannot Make Content-Based Restriction on Noncommercial Speech

[c] Legislative Intent Precludes Saving Construction

§ 14.30 Opposing Contention That Outdoor Advertising Ordinance Is Constitutional--Ordinance Violates Right to Due Process [U.S. Const., amend. XIV; Cal. Const. art. I, § 7(a)] or Takes Property Without Compensation [U.S. Const., amend. V; Cal. Const., art. I, § 19]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Reasonable Amortization Period Is Required

[b] One-Year Amortization Period Is Facially Unreasonable

[c] Ordinance Constitutes Taking Without Compensation if, Among Factors, Amortization Period Is Unreasonable

§ 14.31 Opposing Contention That Outdoor Advertising Ordinance Is Constitutional--Ordinance Violates Equal Protection Guarantees [U.S. Const., Amend. XIV; Cal. Const. art. I, § 7(a)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Ordinance May Not Make Arbitrary Classification

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Ordinance May Not Make Arbitrary Classification

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 14 ADVERTISING
PART I. INTRODUCTION

1-14 California Points & Authorities § 14.01

§ 14.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter contains memoranda relating to actions based on false or misleading advertising practices and actions involving local ordinances regulating billboards and other outdoor advertising displays. It includes memoranda supporting [see §§ 14.20, 14.21] and opposing [see §§ 14.23 -14.25] the contention that a complaint states a cause of action for statutory false advertising or unfair competition, and memoranda supporting [see § 14.22] and opposing [see § 14.26] the contention that a complaint states a cause of action for fraud based on false or misleading advertising. This chapter also includes memoranda supporting [see §§ 14.27, 14.28] and opposing [see §§ 14.29 -14.31] the contention an outdoor advertising ordinance is constitutional.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 14 ADVERTISING
PART I. INTRODUCTION

1-14 California Points & Authorities § 14.02

§ 14.02 Governing Law

The False Advertising Law [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17500 et seq.] generally prohibits false or misleading advertising and authorizes actions for injunctive relief and restitution [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17535]. Note that in some cases, this law can be preempted by federal law [*see, e.g., Silvas v. E*Trade Mortg. Corp. (9th Cir. 2008) 514 F.3d 1001, 1008* (class action against lender dismissed based on federal preemption of lending regulation)]. For discussion, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 14, Advertising, § 14.12[1] (Matthew Bender).

False or misleading advertising also may be a cause of action for equitable relief under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 et seq. (sometimes referred to collectively as the unfair competition law). Billboards and other forms and methods of outdoor advertising are regulated by the Outdoor Advertising Act [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5200 et seq.] and by federal law [see 23 U.S.C. § 131]. For discussion of these actions, see Ch. 565, Unfair Competition ; see also Matthew Bender(R) Practice Guide: Californa Unfair Competition and Business Torts, Ch. 2, Unfair Competition, and Ch. 3, False/Misleading Advertising.

Consumers' remedies for certain deceptive advertising practices are set forth in Civ. Code §§ 1770, 1780, 1781.

Tort actions for fraudulent misrepresentation are governed generally by Civ. Code §§ 1709 and 1710 and case law.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Antitrust & Trade LawConsumer ProtectionFalse AdvertisingState RegulationAntitrust & Trade LawTrade Practices & Unfair CompetitionState RegulationGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 14 ADVERTISING
PART I. INTRODUCTION

1-14 California Points & Authorities § 14.03

§ 14.03 How to Use Forms in This Chapter

[1] Page Limits on Points and Authorities

One of the more significant drafting requirements to keep in mind are page limits: supporting and opposing memoranda may not exceed 15 pages. A reply or closing memorandum may not exceed 10 pages. Exhibits, declarations, attachments, the table of contents, the table of authorities, and the proof of service are excluded from these page limits [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(d)]. Any party must obtain leave of court to file a longer memorandum [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(e)]. These and other drafting requirements are discussed in further detail in Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[2] Using the Forms to Build a Draft Memorandum

Forms in this chapter are in the form of contentions based on particular procedural and substantive points of law, and may be combined with each other depending on the facts and issues involved. They may also be combined with any appropriate procedural forms, depending on the context in which they are raised. For example, the form supporting a contention that a complaint states a statutory cause of action for false or misleading advertising may be combined with appropriate procedural forms in Ch. 116, Injunctions . The contentions in the chapter may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or be used to research office memoranda and jury instructions. Whatever procedural context or paper is involved, counsel should add argument to the points and authorities being used and show the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

For a discussion of how to use the forms in this chapter to draft a memorandum or a trial or appellate brief, and for a sample of a complete memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 14 ADVERTISING
PART I. INTRODUCTION

1-14 California Points & Authorities § 14.04

§ 14.04 Statutory Action for False or Misleading Advertising

Bus. & Prof. Code § 17500 generally prohibits the dissemination of false or misleading advertising that is known, or by the exercise of reasonable care should be known, to be false or misleading. In addition, the False Advertising Law makes many particular methods of false or misleading advertising unlawful. For example, it is unlawful for any newspaper owner or publisher willfully and knowingly to misrepresent the circulation of the newspaper in order to gain subscribers [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17533]. For a detailed discussion of the specific prohibitions, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 14, Advertising (Matthew Bender).

Any person who has suffered injury in fact and has lost money or property as a result of a violation of the False Advertising Law may sue for injunctive and other equitable relief; but the plaintiff may pursue representative claims or relief on behalf of others only if the plaintiff meets that standing requirement and complies with Code Civ. Proc. § 382, concerning class action certification [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17535; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17506 (defining person); see also Committee on Children's Television, Inc. v. General Foods Corp. (1983) 35 Cal. 3d 197, 215, 197 Cal. Rptr. 783, 673 P.2d 660 ; § 14.20]. The action may also be prosecuted by the Attorney General, district attorney, or other specified public prosecutor, who can also obtain civil penalties [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17535]. When they bring such actions, both private persons and prosecuting authorities bear the burden of proving the advertising claims to be false or misleading. Prosecuting authorities, but not private plaintiffs, have the administrative power to request advertisers to substantiate advertising claims before bringing actions for false advertisement [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17508], but the prosecuting authorities retain the burden of proof in the false advertising actions [National Council Against Health Fraud, Inc. v. King Bio Pharmaceuticals, Inc. (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 1336, 1344-1345, 1348, 133 Cal. Rptr. 2d 207 (holding that it would be inappropriate to shift burden of proof to defendant in private plaintiff false advertising action when private plaintiff is not authorized by statute to seek substantiation of advertising claim from defendant)].

As a further remedy in either a private or public action, Bus. & Prof. Code § 17535 authorizes the court to make such orders or judgments, including the appointment of a receiver, as may be necessary to (1) prevent the use or employment of any practices that violate the False Advertising Law or (2) restore to any person in interest any money or property acquired by unlawful practices [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17535].

Claims for injunctive relief under the False Advertising Law are not subject to arbitration [Cruz v. Pacificare Health Systems, Inc. (2003) 30 Cal. 4th 303, 307, 316, 133 Cal. Rptr. 2d 58, 66 P.3d 1157] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Antitrust & Trade LawConsumer ProtectionFalse AdvertisingState RegulationCivil ProcedureJusticiabilityStandingBurdens of Proof

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 14 ADVERTISING
PART I. INTRODUCTION

1-14 California Points & Authorities § 14.05

§ 14.05 Statutory Action for Unfair Competition

A violation of the False Advertising Law is also a cause of action for injunctive and other equitable relief under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 et seq. (commonly referred to collectively as the unfair competition law) [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17200, 17203; e.g., Committee on Children's Television, Inc. v. General Foods Corp. (1983) 35 Cal. 3d 197, 209-210, 197 Cal. Rptr. 783, 673 P.2d 660 ; § 14.21]. Restitution is specifically authorized [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203], and the concept of restitution, in this context, is not limited to the return of money or property that was once in the plaintiff's possession; it is broad enough to allow the plaintiff to recover money or property in which he or she has only a vested interest [Korea Supply Co. v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2003) 29 Cal. 4th 1134, 1149, 131 Cal. Rptr. 2d 29, 63 P.3d 937] . Although the California Supreme Court once held that restitution was available solely as a form of ancillary relief and could not be awarded except along with the issuance of an injunction [Fletcher v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 442, 452-453, 153 Cal. Rptr. 28, 591 P.2d 51] , it is now settled that restitution may be awarded without injunctive relief [ABC Int'l Traders, Inc. v. Matsushita Elec. Corp. of Am. (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 1247,1271, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 112, 931 P.2d 290] .

The plaintiff may not obtain an award of damages [Cel-Tech Communications, Inc. v. Los Angeles Cellular Tel. Co. (1999) 20 Cal. 4th 163, 179, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 548, 973 P.2d 527] unless the plaintiff pleads, in a separate count, a claim for damages in the complaint stating the unfair competition claim [see, e.g., Allied Grape Growers v. Bronco Wine Co. (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 432, 452-453 249 Cal. Rptr. 872 (grape seller was entitled to damages under Com. Code § 2706 along with injunction under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203)].

For additional forms for points and authorities relating to actions based on statutory unfair competition, see Ch. 235, Unfair Competition, § 235.50 et seq.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Antitrust & Trade LawConsumer ProtectionFalse AdvertisingState RegulationAntitrust & Trade LawTrade Practices & Unfair CompetitionState RegulationGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 14 ADVERTISING
PART I. INTRODUCTION

1-14 California Points & Authorities § 14.06

§ 14.06 Tort Action for Fraudulent Misrepresentation

False and misleading advertising may constitute the tort of fraudulent misrepresentation, negligent misrepresentation, or fraudulent concealment [Committee on Children's Television, Inc. v. General Foods Corp. (1983) 35 Cal. 3d 197, 215-221, 197 Cal. Rptr. 783, 673 P.2d 660 ; see § 14.22]. The elements of intentional fraud generally are [Molko v. Holy Spirit Assn. (1988) 46 Cal. 3d 1092, 1108, 252 Cal. Rptr. 122, 762 P.2d 46 ; see Civ. Code § 1710(1)]:

- A misrepresentation.
- Knowledge of its falsity.
- Intent to induce reliance on the misrepresentation.
- Justifiable reliance.
- Resulting damage.

Negligent fraud arises from making the misrepresentation with no reasonable ground for believing it to be true [Civ. Code § 1710(2)]. Fraudulent concealment includes concealment of a fact by one who gives information of other facts that are likely to mislead in the absence of communication of the concealed fact [Civ. Code § 1710(3)].

If the misrepresentation in an advertisement is mere "puffing," or a statement of opinion, there may be no liability for fraud [see Hauter v. Zogarts (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 104, 111, 120 Cal. Rptr. 681, 534 P.2d 377 ; § 14.26]. However, courts interpret "puffing" liberally in favor of injured consumers, especially when the misrepresentation concerns safety [see Hauter v. Zogarts (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 104, 112, 120 Cal. Rptr. 681, 534 P.2d 377] . If the defendant had superior knowledge regarding the subject matter of the representations, and the other party is so situated that he or she may reasonably rely on such supposed superior knowledge or special information, the representations may be construed as fact, not opinion [Toole v. Richardson-Merrell, Inc. (1967) 251 Cal. App. 2d 689, 706-707, 60 Cal. Rptr. 398 (manufacturer's oral and written statements to physicians and advertisements in medical journals concerning safety of drug)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Antitrust & Trade LawConsumer ProtectionFalse AdvertisingState RegulationTortsBusiness TortsFraud & MisrepresentationActual FraudElementsTortsBusiness TortsFraud & MisrepresentationNegligent MisrepresentationGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsFraud & MisrepresentationNondisclosureGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 14 ADVERTISING
PART I. INTRODUCTION

1-14 California Points & Authorities § 14.07

§ 14.07 Regulation of Outdoor Advertising

[1] In General

Before the United Supreme Court ruled that commercial speech is entitled to some First Amendment protection [see Bigelow v. Virginia (1975) 421 U.S. 809, 818, 95 S. Ct. 2222, 44 L. Ed. 2d 600] , state and local regulation of billboards and other outdoor advertising was typically challenged on the ground that the governmental entity was exceeding the police power reserved to the states by U.S. Const., Amend. X. In reviewing legislation for the purpose of testing its propriety as an exercise of the police power, the court determines whether the subject of the legislation is within the state's power and, if so, whether the means adopted to accomplish the result are reasonably designed for that purpose, and have a real and substantial relation to the objects sought to be attained [Serve Yourself Gas etc. Assn. v. Brock (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 813, 817-818, 249 P.2d 545] . The California Supreme Court has made clear that under this standard, the goals of eliminating traffic hazards and improving the appearance of a city are proper objectives for the exercise of the city's police power and an ordinance that virtually eliminates billboards designed to be viewed from streets and highways bears a reasonable relationship to those objectives [Metromedia, Inc. v. City of San Diego (1980) 26 Cal. 3d 848, 855, 859, 164 Cal. Rptr. 510, 610 P.2d 407 , rev'd on First Amendment grounds, 453 U.S. 490, 101 S. Ct. 2882, 69 L. Ed. 2d 800 (1981) ; see § 14.28].

In addition, federal and state equal protection guarantees require that classification of advertising for purposes of regulation must not be arbitrarily made, but must be based on natural, intrinsic, or constitutional distinctions that suggest reasons for and justify the particular legislation [see Carlin v. City of Palm Springs (1971) 14 Cal. App. 3d 706, 712, 92 Cal. Rptr. 535] . Due process requires that a local government may not require the removal of outdoor advertising without either (1) payment of just compensation, or (2) the allowance of a reasonable amortization period, commensurate with the owner's investment [Metromedia, Inc. v. City of San Diego (1980) 26 Cal. 3d 848, 881-882, 164 Cal. Rptr. 510, 610 P.2d 407 , rev'd on First Amendment grounds, 453 U.S. 490, 101 S. Ct. 2882, 69 L. Ed. 2d 800 (1981)] .

[2] First Amendment Limitations

Since 1975, it has been clear that commercial speech is entitled to First Amendment protection, although commercial speech may be made subject to more stringent governmental regulation than noncommercial speech [Virginia Pharmacy Bd. v. Virginia Consumer Council (1976) 425 U.S. 748, 770, 771, 96 S. Ct. 1817, 48 L. Ed. 2d 346 ; Bigelow v. Virginia (1975) 421 U.S. 809, 818, 95 S. Ct. 2222, 44 L. Ed. 2d 600] . The First Amendment protects commercial speech that concerns lawful activity and is not misleading [Posadas de Puerto Rico Assocs. v. Tourism Co. (1986) 478 U.S. 328, 340, 106 S. Ct. 2968, 92 L. Ed. 2d 266] . A governmental restriction on otherwise protected commercial speech is valid under the First Amendment only if it (1) seeks to implement a substantial governmental interest, (2) directly advances that interest, and (3) reaches no farther than necessary to accomplish the given objective [Posadas de Puerto Rico Assocs. v. Tourism Co. (1986) 478 U.S. 328, 340, 106 S. Ct. 2968, 92 L. Ed. 2d 266] .

The application of these constitutional principles in the area of outdoor advertising is, however, uncertain in the wake of the United States Supreme Court's decision in Metromedia, Inc. v. San Diego (1981) 453 U.S. 490, 512, 101 S. Ct. 2882, 69 L. Ed. 2d 800 , because this decision lacked a cohesive majority in setting forth the rationale for its holding invalid a San Diego municipal ordinance that banned all off-site billboard advertisements with certain limited exceptions. For further discussion of Metromedia and subsequent California cases that have applied it, see §§ 14.27 and 14.29.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Constitutional LawBill of RightsFundamental FreedomsFreedom of SpeechCommercial SpeechAdvertisingTransportation LawBridges & RoadsBillboards

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 14 ADVERTISING
PART I. INTRODUCTION

1-14 California Points & Authorities § 14.08

§ 14.08 Related Discussion and Forms

[1] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a discussion and forms relating to actions based on false or misleading advertising and governmental regulation of advertising, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 14, Advertising (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to actions under the Consumers Legal Remedies Act (Civ. Code § 1750 et seq.), see Ch. 504, Sales: Consumers Legal Remedies Act .

For discussions and forms for use in particular cases involving advertising, see the following chapters in that publication:

- Ch. 72, Attorney Practice and Ethics
- Ch. 112, Civil Rights
- Ch. 340, Libel and Slander
- Ch. 349, Literary Property and Copyright
- Ch. 429, Privacy
- Ch. 484, Radio and Television
- Ch. 502, Sales: Warranties
- Ch. 565, Unfair Competition

[2] Related Points and Authorities

For additional points and authorities relating to actions based on statutory unfair competition, see Ch. 235, Unfair Competition . For points and authorities relating to actions based on invasion of privacy for the unauthorized advertising or other use of an individual photograph or likeness, see Ch. 184, Privacy: Invasion of Privacy . For points and authorities relating to products liability of a publisher for failure to inspect a product advertised in its publication, see Ch. 190, Products Liability, § 190.190 et seq. For points and authorities relating to actions based on fraud or deceit and actions for injunctive relief generally, see respectively Ch. 105, Fraud and Deceit , and Ch. 116, Injunctions .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 14 ADVERTISING
PART I. INTRODUCTION

1-14 California Points & Authorities §§ 14.09-14.19

[Reserved]

§§ 14.09[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 14 ADVERTISING
PART II. FORMS

1-14 California Points & Authorities § 14.20

§ 14.20 Supporting Contention That Complaint States Statutory Cause of Action for False or Misleading Advertising [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17500, 17535]--General Form

[1] FORM Supporting Contention That Complaint States Statutory Cause of Action for False or Misleading Advertising [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17500, 17535]--General Form

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE COMPLAINT STATES A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR EQUITABLE RELIEF BASED ON FALSE OR MISLEADING ADVERTISING BECAUSE IT ALLEGES (1) THAT DEFENDANT HAS DISSEMINATED, AND WILL CONTINUE TO DISSEMINATE, ADVERTISING THAT DEFENDANT KNOWS, OR BY THE EXERCISE OF REASONABLE CARE SHOULD KNOW, IS LIKELY TO DECEIVE MEMBERS OF THE PUBLIC AND (2) THAT PLAINTIFF WAS IN FACT INJURED AND LOST _____ [MONEY and/or PROPERTY] AS A RESULT OF DEFENDANT'S VIOLATION OF THE FALSE ADVERTISING LAW.

A. Person Who Has Been Injured May Sue for Relief From Violation of False Advertising Law. An action for relief from a violation of the False Advertising Law, Business and Professions Code Section 17500 et seq., may be maintained by any person who has suffered injury in fact and has lost money or property as a result of the violation (Bus. & Prof. Code § 17535).

B. General Prohibition Against False or Misleading Advertising. It is unlawful for any person to make or disseminate, or cause to be made or disseminated, either to the public in California or from California to the public in any state, any statement concerning real or personal property or services, professional or otherwise, or concerning any circumstance or matter of fact connected with the proposed performance or disposition of the property or services, if the statement (1) is untrue or misleading, (2) is known, or by the exercise of reasonable care should be known, to be untrue or misleading, and (3) is made or disseminated or caused to be made or disseminated with intent directly or indirectly to dispose of the property, to perform the services, or to induce the public to enter into any obligation relating thereto (Bus. & Prof. Code § 17500).

[Optional] C. Duty of Reasonable Care Defined. The duty of reasonable care imposed by Business and Professions Code Section 17500 includes a duty of investigation when facts are present that would put a reasonable person on notice of possible misrepresentations (People v. Forest E. Olson, Inc. (1982) 137 Cal. App. 3d 137, 139, 186 Cal. Rptr. 804).

[Optional] D. Plaintiff Need Not Allege Actual Deception, Reliance, or Damages. A statement is untrue or misleading for purposes of an action under Business and Professions Code Section 17500 if members of the public are likely to be deceived; the complaint need not allege actual deception, reliance, or damages (Chern v. Bank of America (1976) 15 Cal. 3d 866, 876, 127 Cal. Rptr. 110, 544 P.2d 1310 ; Fletcher v. Security Pacific National Bank (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 442, 454, 153 Cal. Rptr. 28, 591 P.2d 51).

[Optional] E. Specific Language of Each Advertisement Is Not Required. The complaint need not plead the exact language of every deceptive statement; it is sufficient for plaintiff to describe a scheme to mislead customers, and allege that each misrepresentation to each customer conforms to that scheme (Committee on Children's Television, Inc. v. General Foods Corp. (1983) 35 Cal. 3d 197, 212-213, 197 Cal. Rptr. 783, 673 P.2d 660).

[Optional] F. Deceptive Advertising Practice, Though Not Continuing, Will Probably Recur. An injunction should issue if the defendant's unlawful advertising practice has ceased but will probably recur (People v. Toomey (1985) 157 Cal. App. 3d 1, 20, 203 Cal. Rptr. 642).

[Optional] G. Restitution and Other Equitable Relief. The court may make such orders or judgments, including the appointment of a receiver, as may be necessary to prevent the use or employment by the defendant of any practices that violate Business and Professions Code Section 17500 et seq., or that may be necessary to restore to any person in interest any money or property that may have been acquired by means of any such violations (Bus. & Prof. Code § 17535).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention that a complaint states a cause of action for false or misleading advertising under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17535. These points and authorities should be combined with other points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which they are raised. For example, they would most commonly be combined with general points and authorities supporting a motion for a preliminary injunction. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Bus. & Prof. Code § 17535 authorizes an action for any violation or proposed violation of the False Advertising Law [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17500 et seq.]. Although this form is based only on the most general statutory prohibition on false or misleading advertising, Bus. & Prof. Code § 17500, it may be adapted to incorporate additional authorities based on the statutes that prohibit specific advertising practices [see § 14.04].

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Use of Unfair Competition Cases

A violation of the False Advertising Law is also a cause of action for injunctive and other equitable relief under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 et seq., commonly referred to collectively as the unfair competition law. Therefore, cases that analyze pleadings and remedies under the unfair competition law are applicable to an analysis of actions based on false or misleading advertising. For points and authorities supporting the contention that false or misleading advertising constitutes actionable unfair competition, see § 14.21. For discussion and other points and authorities based on that unfair competition law, see Ch. 235, Unfair Competition, § 235.50 et seq.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and a form for a complaint for injunctive relief based on statutory false advertising and unfair competition, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 14, Advertising (Matthew Bender). For a form for a notice of motion for a preliminary injunction and other related forms for use in proceedings for injunctive relief generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For additional points and authorities supporting a motion for a preliminary injunction and relating generally to injunctive relief, see the Ch. 116, Injunctions.

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities set out in §§ 14.23 -14.25 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Duty of Reasonable Care Defined

In People v. Forest E. Olson, Inc. (1982) 137 Cal. App. 3d 137, 186 Cal. Rptr. 804 , a real estate brokerage corporation published newspaper advertisements that documented its "fast sales" by listing hundreds of addresses of homes the corporation claimed it had sold within only a few days. The addresses were compiled by the defendant's computer department and given to the corporate officer responsible for the ad campaign. The printout included a substantial number of addresses of newly built tract homes. The corporation had a practice of writing up listing agreements for new tract homes on the day of sale. Therefore, the printout showed that these homes sold on the same day they were listed, even though some of them had remained unsold for over a year. The officer responsible for the ad campaign recognized that many new tract home addresses appeared on the printout, but was not familiar with the corporation's listing practices for new tract homes. Another corporate officer who examined the advertisements was aware of the listing practice but did not investigate whether the large number of new tract home addresses appearing in the advertisements was due to that practice. The People brought an action against the brokerage corporation for violation of Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17200 (unfair competition) and 17500, and the trial court found that the advertisements were false and misleading. However, the court entered a directed verdict for the defendant, finding that the defendant's employees had reasonably relied on the computer printout and so exercised their duty of reasonable care.

The court of appeal reversed, holding that the defendant failed to meet the standard of reasonable care imposed by Bus. & Prof. Code § 17500. The duty is not satisfied by unquestioning reliance on representations made by others. Instead, the statute imposes a duty of investigation. The failure to verify and investigate breaches the duty of care when facts are present that would put a reasonable person on notice of possible misrepresentations. Therefore, the defendant had a duty to attempt to verify the computer printout, especially given the light burden such an attempt would create and the probable success of an investigation (137 Cal. App. 3d 137, 139-140) . The court stressed that the duty to investigate is particularly applicable when the information relied on and the sources of verification are both within the corporation that disseminates the misleading ads. In the corporate context, Bus. & Prof. Code § 17500 imposes a duty of communication among corporate departments. Because the defendant's employees together had all the information necessary to realize the advertisements were misleading, this knowledge was imputed to the defendant (137 Cal. App. 3d 137, 140) .

[b] Specific Language of Each Advertisement Is Not Required

In Committee on Children's Television, Inc. v. General Foods Corp. (1983) 35 Cal. 3d 197, 197 Cal. Rptr. 783, 673 P.2d 660 , a group of plaintiffs, including organizations, adult consumers, and children, filed a class action against a cereal manufacturer, a retailer, and advertising agencies on behalf of California residents who had been or would be misled by defendant's television advertisements of highly sugared cereals. Plaintiff's complaint alleged that defendant's commercials, which were broadcast daily over a period of four years, were directed at a susceptible audience of young children and made numerous implied misrepresentations that the cereals were healthful and nutritious. The complaint included causes of action based on (1) violation of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 et seq. (unfair competition); (2) violation of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17500 et seq. (false or misleading advertising); and (3) intentional, negligent, and "common-law" fraud. Plaintiffs sought damages, restitution, an injunction, and other equitable relief. The trial court sustained various demurrers, ruling that the complaint failed to state causes of action for fraud, which requires that misrepresentations be alleged with specificity, because plaintiffs did not identify the exact times, dates, places, and language of each commercial that was broadcast; that the organizational plaintiffs had no standing in the action for fraud even if it were pleaded with sufficient specificity; and that damages were not available under the unfair competition or false advertising laws. The plaintiffs' failure to describe the alleged deceptive practices with sufficient particularity was also apparently the ground on which the trial court sustained a demurrer to the causes of action under the unfair competition and false advertising laws. A judgment of dismissal was entered, and plaintiffs appealed.

The Supreme Court reversed and remanded for further proceedings, holding that the complaint stated causes of action for injunctive relief and restitution under the unfair competition law and the False Advertising Law (35 Cal. 3d 197, 214) and that the parent and child plaintiffs should be permitted to amend the complaint to set forth a representative selection of defendant's advertisements in support of their causes of action for fraud (35 Cal. 3d 197, 218, 220-221) . The more rigorous pleading requirement applicable to an action for fraud does not apply to pleadings based on violation of the False Advertising Law and the unfair competition law (35 Cal. 3d 197, 212 n.11). In these statutory actions, a plaintiff need not plead the exact language of every deceptive statement; it is sufficient to describe a scheme to mislead customers, and allege that each misrepresentation to each customer conforms to that scheme (35 Cal. 3d 197, 212-213) . Plaintiffs' complaint set out 19 misrepresentations, some general, some specific, as well as 42 material, undisclosed facts concerning the cereals' actual nutritional value. The complaint alleged that each misrepresentation and failure to disclose occurred in every advertisement for the specified product during the period in question. These allegations were sufficient to notify the defendants which advertisements were at issue and what deceptive practices were challenged (35 Cal. 3d 197, 213) . Also, policy considerations mitigated against requiring plaintiffs to set out the specific language of each advertisement because the cost and difficulty of doing so would deter suits seeking to enjoin large-scale campaigns of deceptive advertising (35 Cal. 3d 197, 214) .

The Supreme Court reversed and remanded for further proceedings, holding that the complaint stated causes of action for injunctive relief and restitution under the unfair competition law and the False Advertising Law (35 Cal. 3d 197, 214) and that the parent and child plaintiffs should be permitted to amend the complaint to set forth a representative selection of defendant's advertisements in support of their causes of action for fraud (35 Cal. 3d 197, 218, 220-221) . The more rigorous pleading requirement applicable to an action for fraud does not apply to pleadings based on violation of the False Advertising Law and the unfair competition law (35 Cal. 3d 197, 212 n.11). In these statutory actions, a plaintiff need not plead the exact language of every deceptive statement; it is sufficient to describe a scheme to mislead customers, and allege that each misrepresentation to each customer conforms to that scheme (35 Cal. 3d 197, 212-213) . Plaintiffs' complaint set out 19 misrepresentations, some general, some specific, as well as 42 material, undisclosed facts concerning the cereals' actual nutritional value. The complaint alleged that each misrepresentation and failure to disclose occurred in every advertisement for the specified product during the period in question. These allegations were sufficient to notify the defendants which advertisements were at issue and what deceptive practices were challenged (35 Cal. 3d 197, 213) . Also, policy considerations mitigated against requiring plaintiffs to set out the specific language of each advertisement because the cost and difficulty of doing so would deter suits seeking to enjoin large-scale campaigns of deceptive advertising (35 Cal. 3d 197, 214) .

[c] Deceptive Advertising Practice, Though Not Continuing, Will Probably Recur

In People v. Toomey (1985) 157 Cal. App. 3d 1, 203 Cal. Rptr. 642 , the People brought an action against a seller of discount casino coupons to enjoin advertisements and sales solicitations that allegedly violated Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17200 (unfair competition) and 17500. The trial court issued a preliminary injunction, but defendant continued the illegal advertising practices. After a trial, the court imposed civil penalties against defendant, both for violations of the statutes and for violation of the preliminary injunction, and issued a permanent injunction. In addition, the court ordered defendant to make restitution to all customers who purchased casino coupons during a specified time period, and to maintain an account for this purpose. On appeal, defendant contended that the permanent injunction was improper because he had ceased sales of the coupons before the time of trial.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment, holding in part that a court can issue an injunction under Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17500, 17535, to enjoin an event that has already occurred if there is a showing of threatened future harm or continuing violations. The fact that defendant continued to use many of the same deceptive marketing techniques found objectionable by the trial court when it issued the preliminary injunction, and failed to comply with the preliminary injunction, supported the trial court's conclusion that defendant's illegal practices would continue (157 Cal. App. 3d 1, 20) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Person Who Has Been Injured May Sue for Relief From Violation of False Advertising Law

In Day v. AT&T Corp. (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 325, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 55 , plaintiffs brought suit as private attorneys general on behalf of the people of California for injunctive relief to prevent telephone carriers and phone card retailers who sell prepaid phone cards from engaging in misleading and deceptive advertising under Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17200 and 17500. Defendants demurred on the ground that the action was barred by the "filed rate doctrine." That doctrine derives from the requirement in the Federal Communications Act that common carriers file with the FCC and keep open for public inspection all charges and the classifications, practices, and regulations affecting the charges [47 U.S.C. § 203(a)] The doctrine prohibits an entity subject to these requirements from charging rates other than those properly filed with the appropriate federal regulatory authority, presumes the consumer's knowledge of all lawful rates, and bars consumer suits for damages arising out of claims involving those rates (63 Cal. App. 4th 325, 335) . The superior court sustained the demurrers without leave to amend and dismissed the action. Plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal held that under California's unfair business practices and deceptive advertising provisions, defendants were prohibited from disseminating misleading or deceptive packaging materials with their prepaid phone cards. Plaintiffs were entitled to seek to enjoin the alleged practice, and defendants' demurrers to the claim were erroneously sustained. The court stated that an action which only seeks to enjoin misleading or deceptive practices in the advertising of phone card rates, and seeks no monetary recovery, does not implicate the federal filed rate doctrine and can proceed under Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17200 and 17500. Plaintiffs, however, could not seek to recover money from defendants, as the net effect of imposing a monetary sanction would be to effectuate a rebate, a matter strictly of federal concern under the Federal Communications Act and therefore barred by the filed rate doctrine (63 Cal. App. 4th 325, 335-337) .

[b] Restitution or Other Equitable Relief

The court of appeal in Consumers Union of U.S., Inc. v. Alta-Dena Certified Dairy (1992) 4 Cal. App. 4th 963, 6 Cal. Rptr. 2d 193 , affirmed a judgment requiring a producer of raw certified milk products (RCMP) to place a warning on its RCMP for 10 years stating that it might contain dangerous bacteria and specifying the categories of persons who might be most at risk. The court said the trial court's authority under Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17203 and 17535 was sufficient, given the circumstances, to require the warning. There were findings that as a result of its long-standing and broad-based advertising campaign, defendant had created a public perception that RCMP were safe and nutritionally superior to pasteurized milk (4 Cal. App. 4th 963, 972). The warning was necessary to correct that misperception (4 Cal. App. 4th 963, 972-973). To allow consumers to continue to buy the product on the strength of the impression built up by prior advertising would be unfair and deceptive. The court's authority to "prevent the use or employment" of unfair business practices and false advertising necessarily includes the authority to make orders to prevent the consequences of past conduct and to correct false impressions built up by prior advertising--something that might not be accomplished by an injunction against future violations (4 Cal. App. 4th 963, 973, 975). The court noted that requiring affirmative disclosure as a remedy for consumer deception is not without precedent in California or in matters before the Federal Trade Commission, and discussed many cases that had imposed warnings (4 Cal. App. 4th 963, 973-974).

For a detailed discussion of the coverage of the FLSA, consult Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 1 (Matthew Bender).

For a detailed discussion of the coverage of the FLSA, see Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 1 (Matthew Bender).

For a detailed discussion of the coverage of the FLSA, see California Employment Law, Ch. 1 (Matthew Bender).

Sample text goes here [Gov. Code § 53298.5; see also Gov. Code § 53296 (definitions), Gov. Code § 53297 (right to file administrative complaint alleging improper local government activities), Gov. Code § 53298 (prohibiting reprisal actions for disclosure of improper local governmental activities)]

For discussion and forms for use in particular cases involving civil service actions, see the following chapters in that publication:

- California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 182, Declaratory Relief .
- California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 292, Habeas Corpus .
- See California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions .
- See California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition .

The court of appeal in Consumers Union of U.S., Inc. v. Alta-Dena Certified Dairy (1992) 4 Cal. App. 4th 963, 6 Cal. Rptr. 2d 193 , affirmed a judgment requiring a producer of raw certified milk products (RCMP) to place a warning on its RCMP for 10 years stating that it might contain dangerous bacteria and specifying the categories of persons who might be most at risk. The court said the trial court's authority under Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17203 and 17535 was sufficient, given the circumstances, to require the warning. There were findings that as a result of its long-standing and broad-based advertising campaign, defendant had created a public perception that RCMP were safe and nutritionally superior to pasteurized milk (4 Cal. App. 4th 963, 972). The warning was necessary to correct that misperception (4 Cal. App. 4th 963, 972-973). To allow consumers to continue to buy the product on the strength of the impression built up by prior advertising would be unfair and deceptive. The court's authority to "prevent the use or employment" of unfair business practices and false advertising necessarily includes the authority to make orders to prevent the consequences of past conduct and to correct false impressions built up by prior advertising--something that might not be accomplished by an injunction against future violations (4 Cal. App. 4th 963, 975). The court noted that requiring affirmative disclosure as a remedy for consumer deception is not without precedent in California or in matters before the Federal Trade Commission, and discussed many cases that had imposed warnings (4 Cal. App. 4th 963, 973-974).

Defendant also claimed that safeguarding the public health is a legislative function, and that therefore, a court was constitutionally prohibited posing the warning. The court held a court may incidentally duplicate a legislative function without violating the separation of powers doctrine, and that the warning was incidental to carrying out the judicial function of protecting the public from unscrupulous business practices and not a violation (4 Cal. App. 4th 963, 974-975).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 14 ADVERTISING
PART II. FORMS

1-14 California Points & Authorities § 14.21

§ 14.21 Supporting Contention That Complaint States Statutory Cause of Action for False or Misleading Advertising [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17500, 17535]--False or Misleading Advertising Constitutes Unfair Competition [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200]

[1] FORM Supporting Contention That Complaint States Statutory Cause of Action for False or Misleading Advertising [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17500, 17535]--False or Misleading Advertising Constitutes Unfair Competition [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200]

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE COMPLAINT ALSO STATES A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR UNFAIR COMPETITION BECAUSE ANY VIOLATION OF BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONS CODE SECTIONS 17500 AND 17535 NECESSARILY CREATES A CAUSE OF ACTION UNDER BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONS CODE SECTION 17203.

False or Misleading Advertising Is Unfair Competition. As used in Business and Professions Code Section 17200 et seq., unfair competition means and includes unfair, deceptive, untrue, or misleading advertising and any act prohibited by Business and Professions Code Section 17500 et seq.; therefore, any violation of the false advertising law necessarily violates the unfair competition law (Committee on Children's Television, Inc. v. General Foods Corp. (1983) 35 Cal. 3d 197, 209-210, 197 Cal. Rptr. 783, 673 P.2d 660 ; see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17200, 17203).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention that a complaint that states a cause of action for false or misleading advertising under Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17500, 17535 also states a cause of action for unfair competition under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203. These points and authorities should be combined with other points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which they are raised. For example, they would most commonly be combined with general points and authorities supporting a motion for a preliminary injunction. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

See also § 14.20[2].

[b] Advertising and Unfair Competition Statutes Compared

Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203, which creates a cause of action for unfair competition, and Bus. & Prof. Code § 17535, which creates a cause of action for false or misleading advertising, contain identical provisions for relief. Both statutes authorize an injunction and such orders or judgments, including the appointment of a receiver, as may be necessary to prevent the use or employment by any person of the unlawful practice, or as may be necessary to restore to any person in interest any money or property that may have been acquired by means of the unlawful practice.

For discussion and additional forms of memoranda based on the unfair competition statutes, see the Ch. 235, Unfair Competition, § 235.50 et seq.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] False or Misleading Advertising Is Unfair Competition

The facts and procedural background of Committee on Children's Television, Inc. v. General Foods Corp. (1983) 35 Cal. 3d 197, 197 Cal. Rptr. 783, 673 P.2d 660 are discussed in § 14.20[3][b]. In that case, the Supreme Court held that plaintiffs stated causes of action for injunctive relief and restitution under both Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17203 and 17535 (35 Cal. 3d 197, 214) . The Court framed its analysis of plaintiff's allegations by observing that any violation of the proscription against false advertising, Bus. & Prof. Code § 17500, necessarily violates the unfair competition law, Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 et seq. (35 Cal. 3d 197, 209-210) . Therefore, any advertising scheme involving false, unfair, misleading, or deceptive advertising equally violates both statutes (35 Cal. 3d 197, 211) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 14 ADVERTISING
PART II. FORMS

1-14 California Points & Authorities § 14.22

§ 14.22 Supporting Contention That Complaint States Statutory Cause of Action for Fraud Based on False or Misleading Advertising [Civ. Code §§ 1709, 1710]

[1] FORM Supporting Contention That Complaint States Statutory Cause of Action for Fraud Based on False or Misleading Advertising [Civ. Code §§ 1709, 1710]

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT STATES A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR _____ [INTENTIONAL MISREPRESENTATION and/or NEGLIGENT MISREPRESENTATION and/or FRAUDULENT CONCEALMENT] BECAUSE IT ALLEGES THAT DEFENDANT _____ [MADE A MISREPRESENTATION OF MATERIAL FACT TO PLAINTIFF, WHICH DEFENDANT KNEW WAS FALSE AND ON WHICH DEFENDANT INTENDED PLAINTIFF TO RELY, THAT PLAINTIFF JUSTIFIABLY RELIED ON THE MISREPRESENTATION and/or MADE A MISREPRESENTATION OF MATERIAL FACT TO PLAINTIFF, WHICH DEFENDANT HAD NO REASONABLE GROUND TO BELIEVE WAS TRUE AND ON WHICH DEFENDANT INTENDED PLAINTIFF TO RELY, THAT PLAINTIFF JUSTIFIABLY RELIED ON THE MISREPRESENTATION and/or MADE REPRESENTATIONS OF FACT THAT WERE LIKELY TO MISLEAD PLAINTIFF BECAUSE DEFENDANT FAILED TO DISCLOSE OTHER FACTS THAT MATERIALLY QUALIFIED THE FACTS DISCLOSED], AND THAT PLAINTIFF SUFFERED DAMAGES AS A RESULT.

A. False Advertising May Constitute Actionable Fraud. False and misleading advertising may constitute the tort of intentional or negligent misrepresentation, or fraudulent concealment (see Civ. Code § 1710(1)-(3); Committee on Children's Television, Inc. v. General Foods Corp. (1983) 35 Cal. 3d 197, 215-216, 220-221, 197 Cal. Rptr. 783, 673 P.2d 660).

[EITHER]

B. Intentional Misrepresentation. The elements of intentional fraud are (1) a misrepresentation, (2) knowledge of its falsity, (3) intent to induce reliance on the misrepresentation, (4) justifiable reliance, and (5) resulting damage (Molko v. Holy Spirit Assn. (1988) 46 Cal. 3d 1092, 1108, 252 Cal. Rptr. 122, 762 P.2d 46 ; see Civ. Code § 1710(1)).

[AND/OR]

C. Negligent Misrepresentation. The elements of negligent fraud are (1) a misrepresentation of material fact, (2) no reasonable ground for believing the representation to be true, (3) intent to induce reliance on the misrepresentation, (4) justifiable reliance, and (5) resulting damages (Christiansen v. Roddy (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 780, 785-786, 231 Cal. Rptr. 72 ; see Civ. Code § 1710(2)).

[AND/OR]

D. Fraudulent Concealment. Fraudulent concealment consists of the nondisclosure of facts when the facts materially qualify disclosed facts or when the nondisclosure renders the disclosed facts likely to mislead (Welch v. State of California (1983) 139 Cal. App. 3d 546, 555-556, 188 Cal. Rptr. 726 ; see Civ. Code § 1710(3)).

[CONTINUE]

[Optional] E. Pleading Rules Are Relaxed When Defendant Possesses More Facts Than Plaintiff. The requirement that fraud must be specifically pleaded is relaxed when it appears from the allegations that the facts of the controversy lie more in the knowledge of defendant and when the setting out of each advertisement verbatim, specifying the time, place, and medium, would, as a practical matter, provide less effective notice and be less useful in framing issues than would the setting out of a shorter, more generalized version (Committee on Children's Television, Inc. v. General Foods Corp. (1983) 35 Cal. 3d 197, 217, 197 Cal. Rptr. 783, 673 P.2d 660).

[Optional] F. Pleading Rules Are Relaxed When Advertising Campaign Is Based on Long-Term, Cumulative Impact. Plaintiff need not specify each advertisement seen and relied on when plaintiff acted in response to a long-term advertising campaign, which sought to persuade by cumulative impact rather than by a particular representation on a particular date (Committee on Children's Television, Inc. v. General Foods Corp. (1983) 35 Cal. 3d 197, 218-219, 197 Cal. Rptr. 783, 673 P.2d 660).

[Optional] G. Liability to Purchasers Who Do Not See Advertising. A cause of action for fraudulent advertising exists if defendant made a misrepresentation to one group with the intent to influence the behavior of third parties who ultimately purchase defendant's product, whether or not the terms of the advertisement were repeated to the third parties (Committee on Children's Television, Inc. v. General Foods Corp. (1983) 35 Cal. 3d 197, 219, 197 Cal. Rptr. 783, 673 P.2d 660).

[Optional] H. Promise Concerning Safety of Product Is Statement of Fact, Not "Puffing". An advertisement that does not indicate the seller's subjective opinion about the merits of the product, but rather factually describes an important characteristic of the product, its purported safety, is a statement of fact rather than mere "puffing." Promises of safety have consistently been held to be representations of fact (see Hauter v. Zogarts (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 104, 111-112, 120 Cal. Rptr. 681, 534 P.2d 377).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention that a complaint states a cause of action for the tort of fraud under Civ. Code §§ 1709 and 1710. These points and authorities should be combined with other points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which they are raised. For example, they might be combined with general points and authorities opposing a demurrer or a motion to strike. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion, procedural guide, and forms of complaint for fraud generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For additional forms of memoranda relating generally to tort actions for fraud, see Ch. 105, Fraud and Deceit .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

These points and authorities set out in § 14.26 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the contention supported by this memorandum.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] False Advertising May Constitute Actionable Fraud

The facts and procedure of Committee on Children's Television, Inc. v. General Foods Corp. (1983) 35 Cal. 3d 197, 197 Cal. Rptr. 783, 673 P.2d 660 are discussed in § 14.20[3][b]. The Supreme Court held that parents and children should be permitted to amend the complaint to set forth a representative selection of defendants' advertisements in support of their causes of action for intentional misrepresentation under Civ. Code § 1710(1), negligent misrepresentation under Civ. Code § 1710(2), and fraudulent concealment under Civ. Code § 1710(3) (35 Cal. 3d 197, 215-216, 220-221) .

[b] Intentional Misrepresentation

In Molko v. Holy Spirit Assn. (1988) 46 Cal. 3d 1092, 252 Cal. Rptr. 122, 762 P.2d 46 , former members of Sun Myung Moon's Unification Church brought an action against the church for fraud, intentional infliction of emotional distress, and false imprisonment. Plaintiffs' cause of action for fraud was based on alleged misrepresentations, made by church members who recruited them, about the organization's religious affiliation. The trial court granted summary judgment in the church's favor and the judgment was affirmed on appeal.

The Supreme Court reversed the summary judgment on the cause of action for fraud, holding that there was no constitutional bar to holding the church liable for inducing plaintiffs, by misrepresentation and concealment of its identity, into unknowingly entering an atmosphere in which plaintiffs were then subjected to "coercive persuasion" (46 Cal. 3d 1092, 1119-1120). The necessary elements of a fraud claim, the Court stated, are (1) misrepresentation (false representation, concealment, or nondisclosure), (2) knowledge of falsity, (3) intent to induce reliance, (4) justifiable reliance, and (5) resulting damage (46 Cal. 3d 1092, 1108).

[c] Negligent Misrepresentation

In Christiansen v. Roddy (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 780, 231 Cal. Rptr. 72 , several lenders obtained a judgment against an appraiser and loan broker for making a negligent misrepresentation concerning the value of property securing a loan.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment against the loan broker, holding that there was sufficient evidence to support the trial court's finding that the broker had no reasonable ground for believing the appraiser's valuation to be accurate and that the lenders reasonably and justifiably relied on the loan broker's skill and knowledge (186 Cal. App. 3d 780, 788-789). The court stated that the elements of a cause of action for negligent misrepresentation are (1) the defendant made a representation about a past or existing material fact; (2) the representation was untrue; (3) regardless of his or her actual belief, the defendant made the representation without any reasonable ground for believing it to be true; (4) the representation was made with intent to induce plaintiff to rely on it; (5) plaintiff was unaware of the falsity of the representation, acted in reliance on the truth of the representation, and was justified in his or her reliance; and (6) as a result of his or her reliance on the truth of the representation, the plaintiff sustained damages (186 Cal. App. 3d 780, 785-786).

[d] Fraudulent Concealment

In Welch v. State of California (1983) 139 Cal. App. 3d 546, 188 Cal. Rptr. 726 , a public works contractor brought an action against the state for unanticipated costs of repairing a bridge, alleging that he was misled by the state's failure to disclose information concerning a prior, similar repair project done on the same bridge. The trial court entered a judgment for the state, holding that the state was not liable for the nondisclosure, because plaintiff failed to prove that the state actively and intentionally concealed the information.

The court of appeal reversed and remanded, holding that there is no requirement of proving an affirmative fraudulent intent to conceal in order to recover for nondisclosure (139 Cal. App. 3d 546, 556) . The court recognized that a cause of action for nondisclosure of material facts may arise when the defendant makes representations but does not disclose facts that materially qualify the facts disclosed (139 Cal. App. 3d 546, 555) . Because there is no requirement of intent to conceal, the Court held, the state had a duty to disclose, if disclosure would have eliminated or materially qualified the misleading effect of the representations in the construction plans the state supplied to bidders (139 Cal. App. 3d 546, 556) .

[e] Pleading Rules Are Relaxed When Defendant Possesses More Facts Than Plaintiff

The facts and procedural background of Committee on Children's Television, Inc. v. General Foods Corp. (1983) 35 Cal. 3d 197, 197 Cal. Rptr. 783, 673 P.2d 660 , are discussed in § 14.20[3][b]. In its analysis of the specificity of the complaint, the Court recognized that fraud actions are subject to strict requirements of particularity in pleading. Every element of the cause of action must be alleged factually and specifically to furnish the defendant with notice of definite charges and to enable the court to weed out unmeritorious claims (35 Cal. 3d 197, 216-217) . Less specificity is required, however, when it appears from the nature of the allegations that the defendant must necessarily possess full information concerning the facts of the controversy, or when the facts lie more in the knowledge of the opposite party (35 Cal. 3d 197, 217) . The place, time, and content of the advertisements, the Court found, was fully known to the defendant manufacturer (35 Cal. 3d 197, 217-218) . In addition, the Court observed, plaintiffs' 64-page complaint alleged thousands of misrepresentations in various media over a span of four years. A complaint that set out each advertisement verbatim and specified the time, place, and medium, would, as a practical matter, provide less effective notice and be less useful in framing the issues than would a shorter, more generalized version (35 Cal. 3d 197, 217) . The Court concluded that defendant was entitled to know what it was in the images and words of the advertisements that gave rise to the alleged misrepresentations. For plaintiffs to provide an explanation for every advertisement, however, would be impractical. Therefore, the Court held that the trial court could reasonably require plaintiffs to set out or attach a representative selection of advertisements, to state the misrepresentations made, and to indicate the language or images on which any implied misrepresentations were based (35 Cal. 3d 197, 218) .

[f] Pleading Rules Are Relaxed When Advertising Campaign Is Based on Long-Term, Cumulative Impact

The facts and procedural background of Committee on Children's Television, Inc. v. General Foods Corp. (1983) 35 Cal. 3d 197, 197 Cal. Rptr. 783, 673 P.2d 660 , are discussed in § 14.20[3][b]. The Court rejected the argument that the complaint was deficient because it failed to indicate that any particular child relied on or even saw any particular television advertisement. The Court recognized that a specific statement of the advertisements seen and relied on by the individual plaintiffs would have demonstrated that they had a valid cause of action (35 Cal. 3d 197, 218-219) . The realistic setting of the case, however, made such specific pleading impossible. A long-term advertising campaign, the Court observed, may seek to persuade by cumulative impact, not by a particular representation on a particular date. The Court held that plaintiffs should be able to base their cause of action on an allegation that they acted in response to an advertising campaign, even if they could not recall the specific advertisements (35 Cal. 3d 197, 219) .

[g] Liability to Purchasers Who Do Not See Advertising

The facts and procedural background of Committee on Children's Television, Inc. v. General Foods Corp. (1983) 35 Cal. 3d 197, 197 Cal. Rptr. 783, 673 P.2d 660 , are discussed in § 14.20[3][b]. The Court rejected the argument that the complaint was deficient because it described one group, children, who received the misrepresentations and a different group, parents, who purchased the product. The Court observed that defendants spent millions to advertise cereals on children's programs because they were aware that parents are influenced in their purchases by the desires of their children. Although plaintiffs did not allege that the children repeated the representations to their parents, repetition was not a prerequisite to liability. It was sufficient, the Court held, to allege that defendant made a misrepresentation to one group intending to influence the behavior of the ultimate purchaser, and that defendant succeeded in this plan (35 Cal. 3d 197, 219) .

[h] Promise Concerning Safety of Product Is Statement of Fact, Not "Puffing"

In Hauter v. Zogarts (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 104, 120 Cal. Rptr. 681, 534 P.2d 377 , plaintiff brought a products liability action, including a claim for misrepresentation, for injuries he suffered while using a golf training device that was designed to return hit balls to the golfer by the use of an elastic cord. The box the device was sold in and the accompanying instruction booklet both bore the words "Completely Safe Ball Will Not Hit Player." Following a verdict for defendants, the trial judge granted plaintiff's motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict, and defendants appealed.

The Supreme Court affirmed the trial judge's order, holding in part that, as a matter of law, plaintiff should recover on his cause of action for false representation (14 Cal. 3d 104, 114, 121) . The Court reasoned that defendants were liable under common-law tort principles if "Completely Safe Ball Will Not Hit Player" was a misrepresentation of material fact on which plaintiff justifiably relied. On the other hand, if defendants' assertion of safety was merely a statement of opinion, or mere "puffing," they could not be held liable for its falsity (14 Cal. 3d 104, 111) . The court concluded that defendants' statement was so broad that it properly fell within common-law tort principles (14 Cal. 3d 104, 111-112). The statement did not indicate the seller's subjective opinion about the merits of the product but rather factually described an important characteristic of the product. The court of appeal observed that courts have consistently held similar promises of safety to be representations of fact and that, in addition, there is a trend toward narrowing the scope of "puffing" and expanding the liability that flows from broad statements of manufacturers about the quality of their products (14 Cal. 3d 104, 112).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 14 ADVERTISING
PART II. FORMS

1-14 California Points & Authorities § 14.23

§ 14.23 Opposing Contention That Complaint States Statutory Cause of Action for False or Misleading Advertising [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17500, 17535]--Statutory Prohibitions Do Not Apply to Good-Faith Publisher or Broadcaster of Advertising [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17502]

[1] FORM Opposing Contention That Complaint States Statutory Cause of Action for False or Misleading Advertising [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17500, 17535]--Statutory Prohibitions Do Not Apply to Good-Faith Publisher or Broadcaster of Advertising [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17502]

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

SECTION 17500 [AND SECTION(S) _____ [specify additional section(s) pleaded in complaint, if appropriate, e.g., 17504] OF THE BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONS CODE DOES/DO NOT APPLY TO GOOD-FAITH PUBLISHERS OR BROADCASTERS.

A. Good-Faith Publishers or Broadcasters Are Exempted. The provisions of Sections 17500-17509 of the Business and Professions Code do not apply to any visual or sound radio broadcasting station, to any internet service provider or commercial online service, or to any publisher of a newspaper, magazine, or other publication who broadcasts or publishes, including over the internet, an advertisement in good faith, without knowledge of its false, deceptive, or misleading character (Bus. & Prof. Code § 17502).

[Optional] B. Deceptive Prize or Gift Offer. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17533.8, prohibiting false or misleading advertising regarding a prize or gift offer, does not apply to the publisher of any newspaper, periodical, or other publication, or any radio or television broadcaster, or the owner or operator of any cable, satellite, or other medium of communications who broadcasts or publishes, including over the internet, an advertisement or offer in good faith, without knowledge that it violates the statute (Bus. & Prof. Code § 17533.8(b)).

[Optional] C. Deceptive Real Estate Advertisement. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17530, prohibiting false or misleading advertising regarding real estate, does not apply to the publisher of any newspaper, or any job printer unless the publisher or printer has an interest as owner or agent in the advertised real estate (Bus. & Prof. Code § 17530).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a contention that a complaint states a cause of action for false or misleading advertising under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17535, on the ground that certain statutory proscriptions do not apply to a defendant who is a publisher or broadcaster who disseminated false or misleading advertising in good faith. These points and authorities should be combined with other points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which they are raised. For example, they might be combined with general points and authorities supporting a demurrer to the complaint or a motion for summary judgment. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities set out in this form may be used to oppose the contention supported by the points and authorities set out in § 14.20.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Points and Authorities

For a form of memorandum opposing the contention that a publisher has a duty to investigate an alleged defective product advertised in its publication, see Ch. 190, Products Liability, § 190.190 et seq.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Good-Faith Publishers or Broadcasters Are Exempted

Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17500-17509, which Bus. & Prof. Code § 17502 makes inapplicable to good-faith publishers and broadcasters, include prohibitions against false and misleading advertising generally [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17500], unadvertised limitations on quantity of sales [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17500.5], certain statements about "former price" [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17501], deceptive pricing of goods or services sold only in multiple units [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17504], misrepresentation of control, character, or volume of business [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17505], deceptive pricing of different articles of merchandise or types of service within the same class of merchandise or service [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17507], certain factual claims and brand comparisons [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17508], false claims that consumer goods are safe for the environment [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17508.5], and certain transactions conditioned on the sale or lease of a different product or service [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17509] For discussion of these statutory prohibitions, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 14, Advertising (Matthew Bender).

[b] Deceptive Prize or Gift Offer

Bus. & Prof. Code § 17533.8, which exempts from its terms publishers and broadcasters who act in good faith, makes it unlawful to offer a prize or gift without disclosing at the time of the offer the offeror's intent to make a sales presentation.

[c] Deceptive Real Estate Advertisement

Bus. & Prof. Code § 17530, which exempts publishers and printers who have no interest in advertised real estate, makes it unlawful for a person to publish statements concerning the extent, location, ownership, title, or other characteristic of real estate if the person knows the statements are untrue and publishes the statements with the intention to mislead.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 14 ADVERTISING
PART II. FORMS

1-14 California Points & Authorities § 14.24

§ 14.24 Opposing Contention That Complaint States Statutory Cause of Action for False or Misleading Advertising [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17500, 17535]--Statutory Prohibitions Do Not Apply to Election Campaign Practices

[1] FORM Opposing Contention That Complaint States Statutory Cause of Action for False or Misleading Advertising [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17500, 17535]--Statutory Prohibitions Do Not Apply to Election Campaign Practices

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

SECTIONS 17500-17577.6 OF THE BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONS CODE DO NOT APPLY TO ELECTION CAMPAIGN PRACTICES.

Statutes Do Not Apply to Campaign Practices. Section 17500 et seq. of the Business and Professions Code do not apply to election campaign practices (O'Connor v. Superior Court (1986) 177 Cal. App. 3d 1013, 1014, 1019-1020, 223 Cal. Rptr. 357).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a contention that a complaint states a cause of action for false or misleading advertising under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17535, on the ground that the false advertising statutes do not apply to election campaign practices. These points and authorities should be combined with other points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which they are raised. For example, they might be combined with general points and authorities supporting a demurrer to the complaint or a motion for summary judgment. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities set out in this form may be used to oppose the contention supported by the points and authorities set out in § 14.20.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statutes Do Not Apply to Campaign Practices

In O'Connor v. Superior Court (1986) 177 Cal. App. 3d 1013, 223 Cal. Rptr. 357 , an incumbent politician brought an action for injunctive relief and damages against an election opponent and the opponent's consulting firm, alleging that they had violated Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17200, 17500, by publishing falsified, negative endorsements of plaintiff in their campaign literature. The trial court overruled defendants' demurrers, and they petitioned for a writ of mandate.

The court of appeal issued the writ, holding that Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 et seq. (unfair competition) and Bus. & Prof. Code § 17500 et seq. do not apply to election campaign practices (177 Cal. App. 3d 1013, 1014) . Under the First Amendment, the court explained, it is the context in which the speech is made, rather than the status of the speaker, which determines whether or not speech is protected. The statutes may not regulate conduct in a political campaign, even when the conduct arises in the arguably commercial context of statements made about a candidate for political office by a paid political consulting firm (177 Cal. App. 3d 1013, 1018-1019) . The complete and carefully limited scheme of election regulation and enforcement provided by the Legislature in express penal provisions of the Elections Code do not include a private cause of action for damages and injunctive relief based on false or misleading statements made in an election campaign. Thus, it is apparent that the Legislature recognized that any attempt at wholesale regulation of, or government intrusion into, the content of political literature is constitutionally impermissible (177 Cal. App. 3d 1013, 1019-1020) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 14 ADVERTISING
PART II. FORMS

1-14 California Points & Authorities § 14.25

§ 14.25 Opposing Contention That Complaint States Statutory Cause of Action for False or Misleading Advertising [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17500, 17535]--Statute Does Not Authorize Claim for Damages

[1] FORM Opposing Contention That Complaint States Statutory Cause of Action for False or Misleading Advertising [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17500, 17535]--Statute Does Not Authorize Claim for Damages

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

SECTION 17535 OF THE BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONS CODE DOES NOT AUTHORIZE AN AWARD OF MONEY DAMAGES TO A PRIVATE PLAINTIFF.

Damages Are Not Authorized. Section 17535 of the Business and Professions Code does not authorize recovery of damages by private individuals (Chern v. Bank of America (1976) 15 Cal. 3d 866, 875, 127 Cal. Rptr. 110, 544 P.2d 1310).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a contention that a complaint states a cause of action for false or misleading advertising under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17535, on the ground that plaintiff has no claim for damages. These points and authorities should be combined with other points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which they are raised. For example, they might be combined with general points and authorities supporting a summary adjudication of a cause of action for damages. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities set out in this form may be used to oppose the contention supported by the points and authorities set out in § 14.20.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] History of Remedies for Deceptive Advertising

Before 1972, former Bus. & Prof. Code § 17535 provided that false or misleading advertising could be enjoined in either a private or public action but was silent regarding the power of the trial court to order restitution. Nevertheless, the Supreme Court held that a trial court had the inherent power to order restitution as a form of ancillary relief in an action brought under this earlier version of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17535. The Court reasoned that the statute did not restrict the court's general equity jurisdiction, either expressly or by a necessary and inescapable inference. In the absence of such a restriction, the court may exercise the full range of its inherent powers in order to accomplish complete justice between the parties [People v. Superior Court (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 283, 286, 107 Cal. Rptr. 192, 507 P.2d 1400] .

Before 1976, former Civ. Code § 3369 provided that any person performing or proposing to perform an act of unfair competition within California could be enjoined in either a private or public action. The statute defined unfair competition to include untrue or misleading advertising and any act prohibited by former Bus. & Prof. Code § 17500 et seq. In 1976, former Civ. Code § 3369 was amended to authorize a court to make such orders or judgments, including the appointment of a receiver, as may be necessary to prevent the use or employment by any person of any practice that constitutes unfair competition, or as may be necessary to restore to any person in interest any money or property that may have been acquired by means of that unfair competition. In 1977, the unfair competition provisions of former Civ. Code § 3369 were repealed and replaced by Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17203, 17204, with no significant substantive change in their provisions for injunctive relief, restitution, and other equitable relief. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 was also enacted to define untrue or misleading advertising as a type of unfair competition. In 1992, Bus. & Prof. Code § 17204 was amended to allow the Attorney General or any district attorney or authorized county counsel or city attorney to seek any relief, not just injunctive relief.

Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203, which creates a cause of action for unfair competition, and Bus. & Prof. Code § 17535, which creates a cause of action for false or misleading advertising, contain essentially identical provisions for relief. Both statutes authorize an injunction and such orders or judgments, including the appointment of a receiver, as may be necessary to prevent the use or employment by any person of the unlawful practice, or as may be necessary to restore to any person in interest any money or property that may have been acquired by means of the unlawful practice.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and a form of complaint for injunctive relief based on statutory false advertising, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 14, Advertising (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Damages Are Not Authorized

In Chern v. Bank of America (1976) 15 Cal. 3d 866, 127 Cal. Rptr. 110, 544 P.2d 1310 , bank customers brought a class action for damages and injunctive relief under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17535 against a bank for a violation of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17500 based on the bank's practice of quoting "per annum" interest rates calculated on the basis of a 360-day year. Plaintiffs also sought damages for breach of contract. The named plaintiff admitted that just before she signed a loan contract with defendant, she was presented with a federal truth-in-lending statement that made her aware of the discrepancy in the bank's interest calculation. The trial court granted summary judgment in favor of defendant on all counts, and plaintiff appealed. In affirming summary judgment for defendant on the claim for damages under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17500 for false or misleading statements, the Supreme Court held that the applicable statutes do not authorize recovery of damages by private individuals. Private relief, the Court said, is limited to the filing of actions for an injunction under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17535 or the recovery of civil penalties by specified public officers under Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17535.5, 17536 (15 Cal. 3d 866, 875) .

The holding in Chern was based on the ground that Bus. & Prof. Code § 17535 does not expressly authorize an award of damages. The Supreme Court subsequently has held that Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203, which is identical with respect to available relief, does not allow the plaintiff to recover damages, but authorizes only equitable relief (including restitution) [see, e.g., Cel-Tech Communications, Inc. v. Los Angeles Cellular Tel. Co. (1999) 20 Cal. 4th 163, 179, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 548, 973 P.2d 527 ; Bank of the West v. Superior Court (Industrial Indem. Co.) (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 1254, 1266, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 538, 833 P.2d 545 (incidentally citing Chern and noting that it "interpret[s] the nearly identical language of section 17535")]. It is clear that if the Court were to address the issue now, the Court would likewise hold that damages cannot be recovered under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17535.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 14 ADVERTISING
PART II. FORMS

1-14 California Points & Authorities § 14.26

§ 14.26 Opposing Contention That Complaint States Cause of Action for Fraud Based on False or Misleading Advertising [Civ. Code § 1709]--Misrepresentation Was Mere Puffing

[1] FORM Opposing Contention That Complaint States Cause of Action for Fraud Based on False or Misleading Advertising [Civ. Code § 1709]--Misrepresentation Was Mere Puffing

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE COMPLAINT FAILS TO STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUDULENT MISREPRESENTATION BECAUSE THE REPRESENTATION MADE BY DEFENDANT WAS A MERE STATEMENT OF OPINION, NOT FACT.

Alleged Misrepresentation Is Mere "Puffing". When an alleged misrepresentation in an advertisement is mere "puffing," or a statement of opinion, the advertiser is not liable for fraud, unless the person expressing the opinion does not in fact entertain it, the opinion amplifies false representations of fact, the opinion is expressed in a manner implying a factual basis that does not exist, or the expression of opinion is made by a party possessing superior knowledge (Pacesetter Homes, Inc. v. Brodkin (1970) 5 Cal. App. 3d 206, 211, 85 Cal. Rptr. 39).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a contention that a complaint states a cause of action for intentional or negligent fraud under Civ. Code §§ 1709, 1710. The ground for opposition is that the alleged misrepresentation was a representation of opinion, not fact. These points and authorities should be combined with other points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which they are raised. For example, they might be combined with general points and authorities supporting a demurrer to the complaint or a motion for summary judgment. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be used to oppose the contention supported by the points and authorities set out in § 14.22.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Alleged Misrepresentation Is Mere "Puffing"

In Pacesetter Homes, Inc. v. Brodkin (1970) 5 Cal. App. 3d 206, 85 Cal. Rptr. 39 , a buyer cross complained against a seller in an action for rents due after foreclosure, alleging that the seller fraudulently represented that the rental income of the property would be more than the rents the buyer actually obtained. The seller's agents had told the buyer that the units to be constructed on the property would rent for specified amounts. They also stated, however, that the buildings would be an excellent investment "if you receive the rents as we contemplate." The trial court entered judgment against the buyer, and the buyer appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that the record supported the trial court's determination that the buyer did not establish all the elements necessary to sustain a cause of action for fraud (5 Cal. App. 3d 206, 210) . In its discussion of the requirement that there be a representation of fact, the court rejected the buyer's assertion that the statements of the seller's agents were "the assertion, as a fact, of that which is not true" within the definition of Civ. Code § 1710(2). The trial court was justified, the court held, in construing the statements as those of opinion concerning future estimated rentals and not as an unqualified representation of what those rentals would be (5 Cal. App. 3d 206, 211). The court also noted that certain exceptional circumstances, in which courts will treat expressions of opinion as misrepresentations of fact, were not present in the buyer's case. These circumstances include the following: (1) the person expressing the opinion does not in fact entertain it; (2) the opinion amplifies false representations of fact; (3) the opinion is expressed in a manner implying a factual basis that does not exist; or (4) the expression of opinion is made by a party possessing superior knowledge (5 Cal. App. 3d 206, 211-212).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 14 ADVERTISING
PART II. FORMS

1-14 California Points & Authorities § 14.27

§ 14.27 Supporting Contention That Outdoor Advertising Ordinance Is Constitutional--Ordinance Does Not Impermissibly Infringe Free Speech [U.S. Const., Amend. I; Cal. Const. Art. 1, § 2]

[1] FORM Supporting Contention That Outdoor Advertising Ordinance Is Constitutional--Ordinance Does Not Impermissibly Infringe Free Speech [U.S. Const., Amend. I; Cal. Const. Art. 1, § 2]

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

_____[Cite ordinance or legislation regulating outdoor advertising] DOES NOT VIOLATE THE FEDERAL OR STATE FREE SPEECH CLAUSES BECAUSE IT REGULATES PURELY COMMERCIAL SPEECH, DIRECTLY ADVANCES A SUBSTANTIAL GOVERNMENTAL INTEREST, AND REACHES NO FURTHER THAN NECESSARY TO ACCOMPLISH ITS OBJECTIVE.

A. Outdoor Advertising Is Protected Commercial Speech. Commercial signs and billboards are a form of free speech protected by the First Amendment of the United States Constitution (City and County of San Francisco v. Eller Outdoor Advertising (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 643, 656, 237 Cal. Rptr. 815).

B. Standard for Regulation of Commercial Advertising. A governmental restriction on commercial advertising is valid under the First Amendment if it (1) seeks to implement a substantial governmental interest, (2) directly advances that interest, and (3) reaches no further than necessary to accomplish the given objective (Posadas de Puerto Rico Assocs. v. Tourism Co. (1986) 478 U.S. 328, 340, 106 S. Ct. 2968, 92 L. Ed. 2d 266).

C. Ban on All Off-Site Commercial Signs Is Permitted. A local government may ban all off-site, commercial outdoor signs to achieve the goals of traffic safety and improved aesthetics (Metromedia, Inc. v. San Diego (1981) 453 U.S. 490, 507, 512, 570, 101 S. Ct. 2882, 69 L. Ed. 2d 800 (plurality opinion of White, J.; dissenting opinion of Rehnquist, J.); City and County of San Francisco v. Eller Outdoor Advertising (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 643, 662-664, 237 Cal. Rptr. 815).

D. Ban on All Off-Site Signs, Regardless of Content, Is Permitted. A local government may ban all off-site signs, whether commercial or noncommercial, and permit all on-site signs, whether commercial or noncommercial, because such regulation is content-neutral (City and County of San Francisco v. Eller Outdoor Advertising (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 643, 660-661, 237 Cal. Rptr. 815).

E. California Constitution Does Not Provide Greater Protection. The California free speech clause, Section 2 of Article I of the California Constitution, does not afford pure commercial speech any greater protection than that accorded by the First Amendment (People v. Superior Court (Olson) (1979) 96 Cal. App. 3d 181, 195, 157 Cal. Rptr. 628).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention that a city may enforce an outdoor advertising ordinance because the ordinance regulates commercial speech in conformity with both the First Amendment of the U.S. Constitution and Cal. Const., Art. I, § 2. These points and authorities should be combined with other points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which they are raised. For example, they might be combined with general points and authorities opposing a motion for a preliminary injunction to enjoin enforcement of the ordinance. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion of federal, state, and local regulation of outdoor advertising, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 14, Advertising (Matthew Bender).

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

These points and authorities set out in § 14.29 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the contention supported by this memorandum.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Outdoor Advertising Is Protected Commercial Speech

The facts and procedural background of City and County of San Francisco v. Eller Outdoor Advertising (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 643, 237 Cal. Rptr. 815 , are discussed in § 14.27[3][d]. In upholding an ordinance that regulated outdoor advertising, the court of appeal recognized that it is well established that signs and billboards provide a forum for the expression of ideas. Therefore, any governmental regulation or prohibition of such signs bears scrutiny under the First Amendment. Even commercial speech, which proposes no more than a commercial transaction, enjoys a substantial degree of First Amendment protection (192 Cal. App. 3d 643, 656) .

[b] Standard for Regulation of Commercial Advertising

In Posadas de Puerto Rico Assocs. v. Tourism Co. (1986) 478 U.S. 328, 106 S. Ct. 2968, 92 L. Ed. 2d 266 , the owner of two Puerto Rican casinos challenged a statute and regulations that prohibited advertising of casino gambling to the Puerto Rican public, asserting that they violated the plaintiff's commercial free speech rights under the United States Constitution, as well as the equal protection and due process guarantees. The trial court found the laws constitutional, adopting a narrowing construction that generally allowed such advertising as long as it was aimed at tourists, even if the advertising might incidentally reach the residents of Puerto Rico. The Supreme Court of Puerto Rico dismissed plaintiff's appeal on the ground that it presented no substantial federal question.

The United States Supreme Court affirmed, holding that the statute and regulations as construed did not violate the First Amendment (478 U.S. 328, 344, 106 S. Ct. 2968, 92 L. Ed. 2d 266). The Court applied the test first articulated in Central Hudson Gas & Electric Corp. v. Public Services Comm'n of New York (1980) 447 U.S. 557, 566, 100 S. Ct. 2343, 65 L. Ed. 2d 341 . Under Central Hudson, commercial speech receives a limited form of First Amendment protection so long as it concerns a lawful activity and is not misleading or fraudulent. Once it is determined that the First Amendment applies to the particular kind of commercial speech at issue, then the speech may be restricted only if the government's interest in doing so is substantial, the restrictions directly advance the government's asserted interest, and the restrictions are no more extensive than necessary to serve that interest (478 U.S. 328, 340) .

[c] Ban on All Off-Site Commercial Signs Is Permitted

In Metromedia, Inc. v. San Diego (1981) 453 U.S. 490, 101 S. Ct. 2882, 69 L. Ed. 2d 800 , billboard owners brought an action to enjoin the enforcement of a San Diego ordinance that banned all outdoor advertising signs, with the exception of (1) "on-site" signs, or signs that were located on the premises where the advertised goods or services were made or sold, and (2) a group of other very limited types of signs, such as commemorative historical plaques and temporary political campaign signs. In Metromedia, Inc. v. City of San Diego (1980) 26 Cal. 3d 848, 866-871, 164 Cal. Rptr. 510, 610 P.2d 407 , rev'd, 453 U.S. 490, 101 S. Ct. 2882, 69 L. Ed. 2d 800 (1981) , the California Supreme Court had upheld the ordinance on the grounds that it neither exceeded the city's police power nor violated the First Amendment.

On appeal, the United States Supreme Court reversed, but the majority of the Court was unable to agree on the rationale for its decision. A plurality of four justices concluded that the ordinance could constitutionally ban all off-site commercial signs to achieve the goals of traffic safety and improved aesthetics because such a ban would meet all the criteria in the Central Hudson test (discussed in § 14.27[3][b]) (453 U.S. 490, 507 , opinion of White, J.).

However, this same plurality went on to observe that billboards can carry noncommercial, as well as commercial, messages. Because the San Diego ordinance exempted on-site commercial signs from the general ban, without making any comparable exemption for on-site signs carrying noncommercial messages, the plurality held that it violated the First Amendment in that it impermissibly afforded "a greater degree of protection to commercial than to noncommercial speech" (453 U.S. 490 , opinion of White, J.). The plurality also found the ordinance violated the First Amendment because it permitted some off-site signs carrying certain types of noncommercial messages, such as historic plaques, thereby impermissibly choosing "the appropriate subjects of public discourse" (453 U.S. 490, 514-515 , opinion of White, J.).

Two other justices also found the ordinance unconstitutional, and concurred in the judgment, but disagreed with the plurality's analysis. They found that the practical effect of the ordinance was a total ban on billboards as an effective medium of expression. Therefore, the proper First Amendment test was the test for content-neutral prohibitions of particular media of communication (453 U.S. 490 , concurring opinion of Brennan, J.). Under that test, a city could totally ban billboards if it could show that a sufficiently substantial governmental interest was directly furthered by the total ban, and that no more narrowly drawn restriction would promote the achievement of that goal as well (453 U.S. 490, 528 , concurring opinion of Brennan, J.). Applying the test, the justices concluded that the city failed to demonstrate that the ordinance directly furthered the asserted interest in traffic safety or that the city's interest in aesthetics was substantial enough in the commercial and industrial areas of the city to justify the prohibition of billboards there (453 U.S. 490, 528-534 , concurring opinion of Brennan, J.). They also disagreed with the plurality's view that an ordinance totally banning commercial billboards, but allowing noncommercial billboards, would be constitutional. They reasoned that such an ordinance would pose First Amendment problems at least as serious as those raised by a total ban because it would give city officials the right, before approving a billboard, to determine whether the proposed message was commercial or noncommercial (453 U.S. 490, 536-540 , concurring opinion of Brennan, J.).

Three justices dissented in separate opinions, each expressing the view that the city's ban on billboards was justified by its interest in traffic safety and aesthetic improvement and that the limited exceptions contained in the ordinance did not offend the First Amendment (453 U.S. 490, 540-555, 555-569, 569-570 , dissenting opinions of Stevens, J., Burger, C.J., Rehnquist, J.). One justice asserted that an aesthetic justification alone is sufficient to sustain a total prohibition of billboards within a community (453 U.S. 490, 570 , dissenting opinion of Rehnquist, J.). Another justice asserted that a total ban on billboards to improve the quality of the environment is permissible as long as the ordinance is wholly impartial, without bias in favor of one point of view or another, and the overall market for communication remains open for the communication of ideas (453 U.S. 490, 552-553, 101 S. Ct. 2882, 69 L. Ed. 2d 800 , dissenting opinion of Stevens, J.). Both of these justices also concluded that the limited exceptions in the ordinance, for signs such as historic plaques and temporary political campaign signs, did not present any additional threat to the interest protected by the First Amendment (453 U.S. 490, 553-554 , dissenting opinion of Stevens, J.; 453 U.S. 490, 570 , dissenting opinion of Rehnquist, J.).

Note that in Metromedia there was no clear majority ruling on the point of law cited, that is, that a local government may ban all off-site, commercial outdoor signs to achieve the goals of traffic safety and improved aesthetics. It is arguable, however, that a such majority was apparent in the plurality opinion of Justice White combined with the dissenting opinions. In City and County of San Francisco v. Eller Outdoor Advertising (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 643, 658, 237 Cal. Rptr. 815 (discussed in § 14.27[3][d]), the court of appeal observed that despite the emergence of three distinct schools of thought in Metromedia, a clear majority of seven expressly concluded that the city's substantial interest in safety and aesthetics justified an absolute ban on all commercial, off-site outdoor signs.

On remand from the United States Supreme Court, the California Supreme Court in Metromedia, Inc. v. City of San Diego (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 180, 185 Cal. Rptr. 260, 649 P.2d 902 , found that it could not construe the San Diego ordinance to avoid the prohibition on noncommercial signs and so declared the ordinance invalid (32 Cal. 3d 180, 187, 191) . The Court reasoned that the legislative history showed the city intended to include some noncommercial billboards in its general prohibition and that such a prohibition was unconstitutional (32 Cal. 3d 180, 189). The Court went on to observe that an alternative ordinance that regulates the location, size, and appearance of billboards but that stops short of a total ban would avoid the problem of distinguishing commercial from noncommercial speech. Given the invalidity of a ban on all off-site billboards, the Court said, the city's purpose would be better served by an ordinance that bans most off-site billboards, rather than by one that draws a distinction based on content (32 Cal. 3d 180, 191)).

The facts and procedural background of City and County of San Francisco v. Eller Outdoor Advertising (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 643, 237 Cal. Rptr. 815 , are discussed in § 14.27[3][d]. In that case, the court of appeal upheld the constitutionality of an ordinance that banned all off-site signs in certain areas, with exemptions that were construed to apply to all types of noncommercial messages (192 Cal. App. 3d 643, 662-664) .

[d] Ban on All Off-Site Signs, Regardless of Content, Is Permitted

In City and County of San Francisco v. Eller Outdoor Advertising (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 643, 237 Cal. Rptr. 815 , a city brought a public nuisance action against two billboard companies, as well as the owners of property where the billboards were located, to compel defendants to remove billboards that violated the city's sign ordinance. The ordinance applied to certain areas of the city designated to be of cultural, historic, or scenic importance and was enacted to promote the aesthetics, traffic safety, and economic stability of the area. It prohibited all off-site signs, or those directing attention to a business or other activity conducted off the premises. On-site signs, or signs directing attention to a business or other activity conducted on the premises, were permitted. The ordinance also exempted from the ban certain signs such as historic plaques, temporary political posters, and temporary signs of a patriotic, religious, charitable, or civic character. The trial court denied the city's motion for summary judgment, on the ground that the constitutionality of the ordinance was a triable issue of fact. However, the action was eventually dismissed for failure to bring the case to trial within the mandatory statutory period. The city appealed on the ground that summary judgment should have been granted.

The court of appeal reversed and remanded, holding that the sign ordinance was constitutional as a matter of law (192 Cal. App. 3d 643, 665) . The court observed that the ordinance was essentially content-neutral: it distinguished between off-site and on-site signs but did not distinguish between commercial and noncommercial signs (192 Cal. App. 3d 643, 655-656) . The court held that such a content-neutral ban on all off-site signs is justified by the city's interests in reducing traffic hazards and improving aesthetics (192 Cal. App. 3d 643, 659)). Further, the ordinance left abundant alternative forums for the same communication, and in fact defendant maintained numerous billboards throughout other sections of the city that were not affected by the ban (192 Cal. App. 3d 643, 659)). By permitting all forms of on-site signs, the court observed, the ordinance avoided the flaw in the ordinance struck down by the United States Supreme Court in Metromedia, which permitted only on-site signs referring to commercial goods and services offered on the property (192 Cal. App. 3d 643, 660) . The court noted that the ordinance was facially invalid because it permitted exemptions for many, but not all, categories of signs displaying ideological communication throughout the city. Such discrimination based on content is not allowed in the area of noncommercial speech (192 Cal. App. 3d 643, 662) . Nevertheless, the court was able to give the ordinance a saving construction. Because of the extent of the exemptions, which included signs such as temporary displays of patriotic, religious, charitable, or civic character, the court concluded that the legislative intent was to allow most noncommercial signs. Therefore, the court construed the ordinance to permit all categories of noncommercial messages (192 Cal. App. 3d 643, 664) .

[e] California Constitution Does Not Provide Greater Protection

In People v. Superior Court (Olson) (1979) 96 Cal. App. 3d 181, 157 Cal. Rptr. 628 , the People brought an action against a real estate firm for violation of Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17200, 17500, based on deceptive newspaper advertising. The trial court granted defendant's motion for summary judgment, ruling in part that the imposition of civil penalties for the negligent dissemination of false advertising violated the First Amendment and Cal. Const., art. I, § 2, the California free speech clause. The People petitioned for a writ of mandate.

The court of appeal issued the writ, holding that the statutes did not abridge either the First Amendment or the California free speech clause (96 Cal. App. 3d 181, 189, 195) . The court stated that although in some contexts Cal. Const., art. I, § 2, is more inclusive that the First Amendment, there is no indication that the California Constitution affords pure commercial speech greater protection than that accorded by the First Amendment (96 Cal. App. 3d 181, 195) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Standard for Regulation of Commercial Advertising

The court of appeal in Rodriguez v. Solis (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 495, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 50 , review denied, 1 Cal. App. 4th 495). The court said it could uphold the restriction only if it discerned a substantial governmental interest advanced by the ordinance, which goes no further than is necessary to effect the governmental interest. The court perceived that prohibiting, for aesthetic reasons, freestanding advertising signs oriented toward a landscaped freeway was a substantial governmental interest (1 Cal. App. 4th 495, 513) , and that its ordinance went no further than necessary to accomplish the city's objective (1 Cal. App. 4th 495, 514-516) .

The court of appeal in Tahoe Regional Planning Agency v. King (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 1365, 285 Cal. Rptr. 335 , reversed and remanded for factual determinations to resolve a Fifth Amendment challenge to an ordinance of the Tahoe Regional Planning Agency. A taking challenge turns on whether the ordinance, or whether the amortization period, is a reasonable alternative to compensation. The court cited Nollan v. California Coastal Com. (1987) 483 U.S. 825, 107 S. Ct. 3141, 97 L. Ed. 2d 677 , for the proposition that to survive a Fifth Amendment takings challenge, the interest sought to be advanced by a land-use ordinance or regulation, including those with legitimate aesthetic purposes, must be substantially advanced by the regulation. The ordinance at issue substantially and directly advanced TRPA's legitimate interest in maintaining the natural scenic quality of the region (233 Cal. App. 3d 1365, 1401).

[b] Ban on All Off-Site Commercial Signs Is Permitted

In Showing Animals Respect & Kindness v. City of West Hollywood (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 815, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 134 , the court held that an ordinance banning all mobile billboard advertising (except on buses and taxicabs), which had no definition of advertising, was applicable equally to both commercial and noncommercial speech and was not unconstitutional as applied to a nonprofit organization's vehicle that, while on city streets, presented messages, in both videos and sound recordings, against cruelty to animals (166 Cal. App. 4th 815, 819-825) . The declared purpose of the ordinance was to eliminate mobile billboard advertising within the city "in order to promote the safe movement of vehicular traffic, to reduce air pollution, and to improve the aesthetic appearance of the city," which, as the U.S. Supreme Court noted in the Metromedia opinion (see § 14.27[3][c]), are substantial governmental goals (166 Cal. App. 4th 815, 823) .

Tahoe Regional Planning Agency v. King (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 1365, 285 Cal. Rptr. 335 , is discussed in § 14.27[4][a]. The court of appeal held that an ordinance that is facially invalid under the First Amendment and Fourteenth Amendment because of an exception for a specific type of sign may be construed and thus implemented constitutionally by severing the exception. The ordinance in question prohibited all off-premises commercial signs except for temporary political signs (233 Cal. App. 3d 1365, 1403-1409).

In City of Salinas v. Ryan Outdoor Advertising, Inc. (1987) 189 Cal. App. 3d 416, 234 Cal. Rptr. 619 , a city brought an action under various zoning ordinances to compel an outdoor advertising company to remove certain signs. One of the ordinances banned off-site signs throughout the city, except in commercial zones and, with a permit, unclassified zones. The trial court found for the city, and the judgment was affirmed on appeal.

In the course of the litigation, the United States Supreme Court decided Metromedia (discussed in § 14.27[3][c]). To comply with the decision, the city adopted a new ordinance defining "on-site" signs to include signs used exclusively to present a noncommercial message. The case was remanded to the court of appeal from the United States Supreme Court for further consideration in light of Metromedia.

On remand, the court of appeal affirmed the part of the judgment ordering removal of some of the signs, holding that the ordinances were partially preempted by state law governing outdoor advertising (189 Cal. App. 3d 416, 433-434) . In its discussion of the on-site sign ordinance, the court rejected defendant's argument that the ordinance was invalid because it allowed a city official to determine what was commercial and what was noncommercial speech. The court held that city officials have sufficient guidance from the various court decisions relating to billboards and commercial speech, including the United States Supreme Court's definition of "commercial speech" in Central Hudson Gas & Electric Corp. v. Public Services Comm'n of New York (1980) 447 U.S. 557, 561, 100 S. Ct. 2343, 65 L. Ed. 2d 341 , as "expression related solely to the economic interests of the speaker and its audience" (189 Cal. App. 3d 416, 429-430)).

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 14 ADVERTISING
PART II. FORMS

1-14 California Points & Authorities § 14.28

§ 14.28 Supporting Contention That Outdoor Advertising Ordinance Is Constitutional--Ordinance Is Proper Exercise of Police Power [U.S. Const., Amends. X, XIV; Cal. Const. Art. I, §§ 13, 14; Art. XI, § 7]

[1] FORM Supporting Contention That Outdoor Advertising Ordinance Is Constitutional--Ordinance Is Proper Exercise of Police Power [U.S. Const., Amends. X, XIV; Cal. Const. Art. I, §§ 13, 14; Art. XI, § 7]

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

_____ [Cite ordinance or legislation regulating outdoor advertising] IS A PROPER EXERCISE OF THE POLICE POWER BECAUSE IT BEARS A REASONABLE RELATIONSHIP TO PROPER GOVERNMENTAL OBJECTIVES.

A. Standard for Exercise of Police Power. An ordinance regulating outdoor advertising is a proper exercise of a city's police power if (1) the achievement of the purposes recited in the ordinance are proper objectives for the exercise of the city's police power and (2) the ordinance bears a reasonable relationship to those objectives (Metromedia, Inc. v. City of San Diego (1980) 26 Cal. 3d 848, 855, 164 Cal. Rptr. 510, 610 P.2d 407 , rev'd on other grounds, 453 U.S. 490, 101 S. Ct. 2882, 69 L. Ed. 2d 800 (1981)) .

[Optional] B. Traffic Safety. An ordinance that eliminates billboards designed to be viewed from streets and highways reasonably relates to traffic safety as a matter of law (Metromedia, Inc. v. City of San Diego (1980) 26 Cal. 3d 848, 858-859, 164 Cal. Rptr. 510, 610 P.2d 407 , rev'd on other grounds, 453 U.S. 490, 101 S. Ct. 2882, 69 L. Ed. 2d 800 (1981)) .

[Optional] C. Aesthetic Considerations. Aesthetic considerations alone justify the exercise of the police power to ban all off-site billboards in a community (Metromedia, Inc. v. City of San Diego (1980) 26 Cal. 3d 848, 860-863, 164 Cal. Rptr. 510, 610 P.2d 407 , rev'd on other grounds, 453 U.S. 490, 101 S. Ct. 2882, 69 L. Ed. 2d 800 (1981)) .

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention that a city may enforce an outdoor advertising ordinance because it falls within the proper exercise of the city's police power. These points and authorities should be combined with other points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which they are raised. For example, they might be combined with general points and authorities opposing a motion for a preliminary injunction to enjoin enforcement of the ordinance. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

See also § 14.27[2].

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

The memoranda of points and authorities set out in §§ 14.30 or 14.31 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the contention supported by this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Standard for Exercise of Police Power

The facts and procedural history of Metromedia, Inc. v. City of San Diego (1980) 26 Cal. 3d 848, 866-871, 164 Cal. Rptr. 510, 610 P.2d 407 , rev'd on other grounds, 453 U.S. 490, 101 S. Ct. 2882, 69 L. Ed. 2d 800 (1981) , are discussed in § 14.27[3][c]. The Court held a San Diego ordinance, which banned all outdoor signs except for on-site commercial signs and some other special types of signs, did not violate the First Amendment, but was reversed on this issue by the United States Supreme Court.

However, the high court did not disturb the California Supreme Court's ruling on the issue of whether the ordinance exceeded the proper exercise of the city's police power. The California Court held that the achievement of the purposes recited in the ordinance--eliminating traffic hazards and improving the appearance of the city--represented proper objectives for the exercise of the police power and the ordinance bore a reasonable relationship to those objectives (26 Cal. 3d 848, 855) . The Court rejected the argument that the police power can never be employed to prohibit completely, rather than simply regulate, a business not found to be a public nuisance, overruling Varney & Green v. Williams (1909) 155 Cal. 318, 100 P. 867 (26 Cal. 3d 848, 863-865) .

[b] Traffic Safety

The facts and procedural history of Metromedia, Inc. v. City of San Diego (1980) 26 Cal. 3d 848, 866-871, 164 Cal. Rptr. 510, 610 P.2d 407 , rev'd on other grounds, 453 U.S. 490, 101 S. Ct. 2882, 69 L. Ed. 2d 800 (1981) , are discussed in § 14.27[3][c]. In upholding an ordinance that generally banned all outdoor signs except on-site commercial signs, the Court observed that the party challenging an ordinance has the burden to prove that it does not reasonably relate to its objectives. However, the Court went on to hold that as a matter of law, an ordinance that eliminates billboards designed to be viewed from streets and highways reasonably relates to traffic safety (26 Cal. 3d 848, 858-859) .

[c] Aesthetic Considerations

The facts and procedural history of Metromedia, Inc. v. City of San Diego (1980) 26 Cal. 3d 848, 866-871, 164 Cal. Rptr. 510, 610 P.2d 407 , rev'd on other grounds, 453 U.S. 490, 101 S. Ct. 2882, 69 L. Ed. 2d 800 (1981) , are discussed in § 14.27[3][c]. In upholding an ordinance that generally banned all outdoor signs except on-site commercial signs, the Court overruled Varney & Green v. Williams (1909) 155 Cal. 318 , which had held that aesthetic considerations alone cannot justify the exercise of the police power to prohibit advertising billboards. The Court held that the goal of improving the appearance of the community was sufficient to uphold the ordinance under the city's police power (26 Cal. 3d 848, 860-861).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 14 ADVERTISING
PART II. FORMS

1-14 California Points & Authorities § 14.29

§ 14.29 Opposing Contention That Outdoor Advertising Ordinance Is Constitutional--Ordinance Impermissibly Infringes Free Speech [U.S. Const., Amend. I; Cal. Const. Art. I, § 2]

[1] FORM Opposing Contention That Outdoor Advertising Ordinance Is Constitutional--Ordinance Impermissibly Infringes Free Speech [U.S. Const., Amend. I; Cal. Const. Art. I, § 2]

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

_____ [Cite ordinance or other governmental legislation regulating outdoor advertising] VIOLATES THE FIRST AMENDMENT BECAUSE IT _____ [PROHIBITS ON-SITE NONCOMMERCIAL SIGNS BUT NOT ON-SITE COMMERCIAL SIGNS, THEREBY PROVIDING GREATER PROTECTION TO COMMERCIAL SPEECH THAN TO NONCOMMERCIAL SPEECH and/or PROHIBITS SOME, BUT NOT ALL, SIGNS CARRYING NONCOMMERCIAL MESSAGES, THEREBY MAKING A CONTENT-BASED RESTRICTION ON NONCOMMERCIAL SPEECH].

A. Outdoor Advertising Is Protected Commercial Speech. [See § 14.27[1], P A.]

B. Standard for Regulation of Commercial Advertising. [See § 14.27[1], P B.]

C. Ordinance Cannot Afford Commercial Speech Greater Protection Than Noncommercial Speech. A local government cannot exempt on-site commercial signs from a general ban on outdoor advertising, without also exempting on-site noncommercial signs (Metromedia, Inc. v. San Diego (1981) 453 U.S. 490, 513, 536-540, 101 S. Ct. 2882, 69 L. Ed. 2d 800 (plurality opinion of White, J.; concurring opinion of Brennan, J.).

D. Ordinance Cannot Make Content-Based Restriction on Noncommercial Speech. An outdoor advertising ordinance cannot permit some, but not all, signs carrying noncommercial messages, thereby making a content-based restriction on noncommercial speech (Metromedia, Inc. v. San Diego (1981) 453 U.S. 490, 514-515, 101 S. Ct. 2882, 69 L. Ed. 2d 800).

[Optional] E. Legislative Intent Precludes Saving Construction. An ordinance that unconstitutionally discriminates between permissible and impermissible noncommercial speech cannot be given a saving construction when the legislative history shows that the local legislature intended to prohibit some noncommercial speech, rather than to allow all noncommercial speech (Metromedia, Inc. v. City of San Diego (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 180, 187-189, 185 Cal. Rptr. 260, 649 P.2d 902).

[2] Comments

CAUTION:

Note, especially in the context of Paragraph D of this form, that an ordinance that is facially invalid under the First Amendment and Fourteenth Amendment because of an exception for a specific type of sign may be construed and thus implemented constitutionally by severing the exception [Tahoe Regional Planning Agency v. King (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 1365, 1403-1409, 285 Cal. Rptr. 335 (ordinance prohibited all off-premises commercial signs except for temporary political signs)].

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a contention that a city may enforce an outdoor advertising ordinance, and is based on the ground that the ordinance violates the First Amendment. These points and authorities should be combined with other points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which they are raised. For example, they might be combined with general points and authorities supporting a motion for a preliminary injunction to enjoin enforcement of the ordinance. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities set out in this form may be used to oppose the contention supported by the points and authorities set out in § 14.27.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion of federal, state, and local regulation of outdoor advertising, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 14, Advertising (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Ordinance Cannot Afford Commercial Speech Greater Protection Than Noncommercial Speech

The facts and procedural history of Metromedia, Inc. v. San Diego (1981) 453 U.S. 490, 101 S. Ct. 2882, 69 L. Ed. 2d 800 , are discussed in § 14.27[3][c]. In holding that an ordinance banning all outdoor signs, except for on-site commercial signs and certain types of signs such as historical plaques, violated the First Amendment, a plurality of the United States Supreme Court struck down the ordinance because it exempted on-site commercial signs from the city-wide ban but made no comparable exception for on-site signs carrying noncommercial messages. This, the plurality explained, impermissibly afforded a greater degree of protection to commercial than to noncommercial speech (453 U.S. 490, 513 , opinion of White, J.).

Two other justices found the ordinance unconstitutional, and therefore concurred in the judgment (453 U.S. 490, 528-534 , concurring opinion of Brennan, J.). However, they would also have struck the ordinance if it had permitted all noncommercial billboards. They reasoned that such an ordinance would pose serious First Amendment problems because it would give city officials the right, before approving a billboard, to determine whether the proposed message is commercial or noncommercial (453 U.S. 490, 536-540 , concurring opinion of Brennan, J.).

[b] Ordinance Cannot Make Content-Based Restriction on Noncommercial Speech

The facts and procedural history of Metromedia, Inc. v. San Diego (1981) 453 U.S. 490, 101 S. Ct. 2882, 69 L. Ed. 2d 800 , are discussed in § 14.27[3][c]. In holding that an ordinance banning all outdoor signs, except for on-site commercial signs and certain types of signs such as historical plaques, violated the First Amendment, a plurality of the United States Supreme Court concluded that the exceptions for certain special types of signs created an impermissible infringement on noncommercial speech. It is not constitutional, the Court asserted, to permit some off-site signs carrying certain types of noncommercial messages, such as historical plaques or temporary political campaign signs, because this impermissibly chooses "the appropriate subjects of public discourse" (453 U.S. 490, 514-515 , opinion of White, J.).

Two other justices found the ordinance unconstitutional, and therefore concurred in the judgment (453 U.S. 490, 528-534 , concurring opinion of Brennan, J.). However, they concluded that the ordinance was, in practical effect, a total ban against billboards as a medium for communication because neither the on-site exception nor the other limited exceptions provided a real alternative for the general commercial or noncommercial billboard advertiser (453 U.S. 490, 525-526 , concurring opinion of Brennan, J.).

[c] Legislative Intent Precludes Saving Construction

The facts and procedural history of Metromedia, Inc. v. City of San Diego (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 180, 185 Cal. Rptr. 260, 649 P.2d 902 , the final disposition of the Metromedia case on remand, are discussed in § 14.27[3][c]. In striking down an ordinance that exempted some, but not all, off-site, noncommercial signs from a general ban, the California Supreme Court found that it could not construe it to avoid the prohibition on noncommercial signs (32 Cal. 3d 180, 187, 191) . The Court reasoned that the legislative history showed the city intended to include some noncommercial billboards in its general prohibition (32 Cal. 3d 180, 189) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 14 ADVERTISING
PART II. FORMS

1-14 California Points & Authorities § 14.30

§ 14.30 Opposing Contention That Outdoor Advertising Ordinance Is Constitutional--Ordinance Violates Right to Due Process [U.S. Const., amend. XIV; Cal. Const. art. I, § 7(a)] or Takes Property Without Compensation [U.S. Const., amend. V; Cal. Const., art. I, § 19]

[1] FORM Opposing Contention That Outdoor Advertising Ordinance Is Constitutional--Ordinance Violates Right to Due Process [U.S. Const., amend. XIV; Cal. Const. art. I, § 7(a)] or Takes Property Without Compensation [U.S. Const., amend. V; Cal. Const., art. I, § 19]

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

_____ [Cite ordinance or other governmental legislation regulating outdoor advertising] VIOLATES FEDERAL AND STATE DUE PROCESS PROTECTION AGAINST THE TAKING OF PROPERTY WITHOUT COMPENSATION BECAUSE IT DOES NOT PROVIDE FOR A REASONABLE AMORTIZATION PERIOD BEFORE REMOVAL OF NONCONFORMING SIGNS.

A. Due Process of Law. A person may not be deprived of property without due process of law (U.S. Const., amend. XIV; Cal. Const. art. I, § 7(a)).

B. Reasonable Amortization Period Is Required. If a local government seeks the removal of outdoor advertising without payment of just compensation, it must not require removal until a reasonable amortization period, commensurate with the owner's investment, has passed (Metromedia, Inc. v. City of San Diego (1980) 26 Cal. 3d 848, 881-882, 164 Cal. Rptr. 510, 610 P.2d 407 , rev'd on other grounds, 453 U.S. 490, 101 S. Ct. 2882, 69 L. Ed. 2d 800 (1981)) .

[Optional] C. One-Year Amortization Period Is Facially Unreasonable. Although the reasonableness of an amortization period as applied to a particular billboard depends on facts peculiar to that billboard, a one-year period is generally unreasonable on its face (Metromedia, Inc. v. City of San Diego (1980) 26 Cal. 3d 848, 882-883, 164 Cal. Rptr. 510, 610 P.2d 407 , rev'd on other grounds, 453 U.S. 490, 101 S. Ct. 2882, 69 L. Ed. 2d 800 (1981)) .

[Optional] D. Ordinance Constitutes Taking Without Compensation if, Among Factors, Amortization Period Is Unreasonable. An outdoor advertising ordinance becomes a "taking" rather than a valid noncompensable regulatory action if, among other factors, there is no reasonable amortization period, thereby depriving the owner of all economically viable use of the property (see Tahoe Regional Planning Agency v. King (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 1365, 1394-1402, 285 Cal. Rptr. 335).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a contention that a city may enforce an outdoor advertising ordinance, and is based on the ground that the ordinance violates the right to due process, or the right not to have property taken without compensation, by failing to provide a reasonable amortization period before requiring removal of a sign that violates the ordinance. These points and authorities should be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which they are raised. For example, they might be combined with general points and authorities supporting a motion for a preliminary injunction to enjoin enforcement of the ordinance. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities set out in this form may be used to oppose the contention supported by the points and authorities set out in § 14.28.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion of federal, state, and local regulation of outdoor advertising, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 14, Advertising (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Reasonable Amortization Period Is Required

The facts and procedural history of Metromedia, Inc. v. City of San Diego (1980) 26 Cal. 3d 848, 866-871, 164 Cal. Rptr. 510, 610 P.2d 407 , rev'd on other grounds, 453 U.S. 490, 101 S. Ct. 2882, 69 L. Ed. 2d 800 (1981) , are discussed in § 14.27[3][c]. The Court held that a San Diego ordinance, which banned all outdoor signs except for on-site commercial signs and other special signs such as historic plaques, did not violate the First Amendment, but was reversed on this issue by the United States Supreme Court.

However, the high court did not disturb the California Supreme Court's ruling on the issue of whether the ordinance provided a unreasonably short amortization period after which nonconforming signs must be removed. The California Court held that the ordinance's amortization period, which ranged from one to four years, depending on the depreciated value of the sign, was not facially unreasonable (26 Cal. 3d 848, 883). The Court stated that when local government seeks to eliminate nonconforming uses, it may pursue two constitutionally equivalent alternatives: either (1) eliminate the use immediately by payment of just compensation, or (2) require removal of the use without compensation following a reasonable amortization period commensurate with the plaintiff's investment (26 Cal. 3d 848, 881-882). The determination of the length of a reasonable amortization period involves a process of weighing the public gain to be derived from a speedy removal of the nonconforming use against the private loss that removal of the use would entail (26 Cal. 3d 848, 882-883) . The sign owner has the burden of proving the unreasonableness of the amortization period applied to each sign, taking into account the cost of the billboard, its depreciated value, remaining useful life, length and remaining term of the lease under which it is maintained, and the harm to the public if the structure remains standing beyond the prescribed amortization period (26 Cal. 3d 848, 884) .

[b] One-Year Amortization Period Is Facially Unreasonable

The facts and procedural history of Metromedia, Inc. v. City of San Diego (1980) 26 Cal. 3d 848, 866-871, 164 Cal. Rptr. 510, 610 P.2d 407 , rev'd on other grounds, 453 U.S. 490, 101 S. Ct. 2882, 69 L. Ed. 2d 800 (1981) , are discussed in § 14.27[3][c]. The Court held a San Diego ordinance, which banned all outdoor signs except for on-site commercial signs and some other special types of signs such as historic plaques, did not violate the First Amendment, but was reversed on this issue by the United States Supreme Court.

However, the high court did not disturb the California Court's ruling on the issue of whether the ordinance provided a unreasonably short amortization period after which nonconforming signs must be removed. The California Court held that the ordinance's amortization period was not facially unreasonable. The Court noted cases that held a one-year period was generally unreasonable, with the possible exception of signs that had been fully depreciated for federal income tax purposes. In contrast, amortization periods ranging from two years and eight months to three years have been upheld. Therefore, the amortization period in the San Diego ordinance, which ranges from one to four years, depending on the depreciated value of the sign, was not facially unreasonable (26 Cal. 3d 848, 883) .

[c] Ordinance Constitutes Taking Without Compensation if, Among Factors, Amortization Period Is Unreasonable

The court of appeal in Tahoe Regional Planning Agency v. King (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 1365, 285 Cal. Rptr. 335 , reversed and remanded for factual determinations to resolve a Fifth Amendment "taking" challenge to an ordinance of the Tahoe Regional Planning Agency (TRPA). At issue were the interests of billboard owners and lessees and owners of real property on which nonconforming signs were located. The court said that since First Lutheran Church v. Los Angeles County (1987) 482 U.S. 304, 107 S. Ct. 2378, 96 L. Ed. 2d 250 , and Nollan v. California Coastal Com. (1987) 483 U.S. 825, 107 S. Ct. 3141, 97 L. Ed. 2d 677 , the reasonableness test of an amortization period for discontinuance of nonconforming signs has taken on aspects of the traditional Fifth Amendment "takings" challenge (233 Cal. App. 3d 1365, 1399, 1401). When the interest of the owner of the real property on which the nonconforming sign is located is at issue, the challenge seems to apply not only to the sign but also to the land on which it is situated [see (3) on list of criteria to be considered on remand, below].

Without a reasonable amortization period, the ordinance goes too far and becomes a "taking" rather than a valid noncompensable regulatory action. A taking occurs if the owner has been deprived of "all economically viable use of the property" (233 Cal. App. 3d 1365, 1399, 1401). However, in order for an amortization period to be upheld as a reasonable alternative to compensation, it is not necessary that the nonconforming property have no value at the end of the termination period (233 Cal. App. 3d 1365, 1396-1397). The amortization period cannot be viewed in isolation but is only one of the facts that the court should consider in defining the character of the government action as a valid regulation or a compensable taking (233 Cal. App. 3d 1365, 1400 , citing Georgia Outdoor Advertising v. City of Waynesville (4th Cir. 1990) 900 F.2d 783, 786-787 , as the only previous case applying First Lutheran criteria in context of amortization-or-compensation issue). To survive a takings challenge under Nollan, the interest sought to be advanced by a land-use ordinance or regulation, including one with legitimate aesthetic purposes, also must be substantially advanced by the nonconforming-sign regulation. The court found TRPA's ordinance substantially and directly advanced its legitimate interest in maintaining the natural scenic quality of the region (233 Cal. App. 3d 1365, 1401). In addition, the issue of taking or an amortization period as an alternative to compensation requires a fully developed factual record with regard to the specific property and the particular estimates of economic impact and ultimate valuation relevant in the unique circumstances. The issue cannot often be determined from a joint stipulation of facts or on a motion for summary judgment (233 Cal. App. 3d 1365, 1401-1402, 1401 n.25). All relevant facts are to be considered, including the following (233 Cal. App. 3d 1365, 1402):

(1) The number of billboards that can economically be used for permitted advertising and the number that are economically useless;

(2) The terms of leases for billboard locations;

(3) The land owned for billboard locations and whether it has any other economic use;

(4) The cost of the billboards that can and cannot be used;

(5) The depreciation taken on the billboards and their actual life expectancy;

(6) The income expected during the amortization period, and when a challenge is brought after expiration of the amortization period, the income earned through the time of judicial resolution;

(7) The salvage value of the billboards that cannot be used;

(8) The percentage of affected signs compared to remaining signs in the owner's business unit;

(9) The relative value of affected and remaining signs; and

(10) Whether the amortization period is reasonable.

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 14 ADVERTISING
PART II. FORMS

1-14 California Points & Authorities § 14.31

§ 14.31 Opposing Contention That Outdoor Advertising Ordinance Is Constitutional--Ordinance Violates Equal Protection Guarantees [U.S. Const., Amend. XIV; Cal. Const. art. I, § 7(a)]

[1] FORM Opposing Contention That Outdoor Advertising Ordinance Is Constitutional--Ordinance Violates Equal Protection Guarantees [U.S. Const., Amend. XIV; Cal. Const. art. I, § 7(a)]

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

_____ [Cite ordinance or other governmental legislation regulating outdoor advertising] VIOLATES FEDERAL AND STATE EQUAL PROTECTION GUARANTEES BECAUSE IT MAKES ARBITRARY DISTINCTIONS BETWEEN TYPES OF ADVERTISING.

A. Equal Protection. A person may not be denied equal protection of the laws (U.S. Const., amend. XIV; Cal. Const. art. I, § 7(a)).

B. Ordinance May Not Make Arbitrary Classification. A local government may not restrict or prohibit one type of outdoor advertising but allow another if the classification does not bear a rational relationship to a legitimate state purpose (Carlin v. City of Palm Springs (1971) 14 Cal. App. 3d 706, 712, 92 Cal. Rptr. 535 ; see Metromedia, Inc. v. City of San Diego (1980) 26 Cal. 3d 848, 880, 164 Cal. Rptr. 510, 610 P.2d 407 , rev'd on other grounds, 453 U.S. 490, 101 S. Ct. 2882, 69 L. Ed. 2d 800 (1981)) .

[2] Comments

CAUTION:

Note that an ordinance that is facially invalid under the First Amendment and Fourteenth Amendment because of an exception for a specific type of sign may be construed and thus implemented constitutionally by severing the exception [Tahoe Regional Planning Agency v. King (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 1365, 1403-1409, 285 Cal. Rptr. 335 (ordinance prohibited all off-premises commercial signs except for temporary political signs)].

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a contention that a city may enforce an outdoor advertising ordinance, on the ground that it violates equal protection guarantees because it makes an arbitrary classification between the types of signs that are prohibited and the types of signs allowed. These points and authorities should be combined with other points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which they are raised. For example, they might be combined with general points and authorities supporting a motion for a preliminary injunction to enjoin enforcement of the ordinance. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities set out in this form may be used to oppose the contention supported by the points and authorities set out in § 14.28.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion of federal, state, and local regulation of outdoor advertising, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 14, Advertising (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Ordinance May Not Make Arbitrary Classification

In Carlin v. City of Palm Springs (1971) 14 Cal. App. 3d 706, 92 Cal. Rptr. 535 , the owner of a resort hotel brought an action against a city to enjoin enforcement of an ordinance that prohibited the outdoor display of all "rate signs," or signs that referred to prices. After a trial, the court upheld the ordinance and plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal reversed, holding that the ordinance violated equal protection because there was no natural, intrinsic, or constitutional distinction between rate signs and nonrate signs (14 Cal. App. 3d 706, 714) . Although the government has the power to regulate signs, the court explained, the classification of advertising signs must not be arbitrarily made for the mere purpose of classification but must be based on some distinction, natural, intrinsic, or constitutional, that suggests a reason for and justifies the legislation. The burden of proof rests on the person attacking the legislation to establish that there is no public nexus between the legislation and what it attempts to correct (14 Cal. App. 3d 706, 712) . The court found that the ordinance could not be justified on aesthetic grounds because there is no difference, from an aesthetic viewpoint, between a rate sign and a nonrate sign. The court also rejected the arguments that rate signs create an atmosphere of "bargain basement commercialism" inimical to the general welfare of a resort community (14 Cal. App. 3d 706, 714) . The fact that some rate signs might be deceptive or fraudulent could not justify the ordinance, because other statutes provided penalties for false advertising. Finally, the court rejected the argument that the ordinance was justified on economic grounds because tourists who make reservations in luxury hotels become disgruntled on discovering the existence of low-rate accommodations (14 Cal. App. 3d 706, 715) .

The facts and procedural history of Metromedia, Inc. v. City of San Diego (1980) 26 Cal. 3d 848, 866-871, 164 Cal. Rptr. 510, 610 P.2d 407 , rev'd on other grounds, 453 U.S. 490, 101 S. Ct. 2882, 69 L. Ed. 2d 800 (1981) , are discussed in § 14.27[3][c]. The Court held a San Diego ordinance, which banned all outdoor signs except for on-site commercial signs and some other special types of signs such as historical plaques, did not violate the First Amendment, but was reversed on this issue by the United States Supreme Court.

However, the high court did not disturb the California Court's ruling that the ordinance did not deny the sign owners the equal protection of the laws. The California Court ruled that the ordinance, which did not compensate owners for removal of their billboards, was partially preempted by state law. The state Court, therefore, interpreted the ordinance to require that compensation be paid to owners whose signs were located within 660 feet of federal highways and were therefore covered by the California Outdoor Advertising Act (Bus. & Prof. Code § 5200 et seq.) (26 Cal. 3d 848, 878, 880) . The United States Supreme Court rejected the argument that the ordinance, by failing to pay compensation for signs that fell out of the preemptive scope of the state law, denied equal protection to the owners who received no compensation. When a distinction involves purely economic regulation, the Court stated, it may be sustained if the classification bears a reasonable relationship to a legitimate state purpose (26 Cal. 3d 848, 880) . The Court held that the city could choose the more economical alternative of requiring removal of signs after expiration of an amortization period, rather than paying compensation (26 Cal. 3d 848, 881) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Ordinance May Not Make Arbitrary Classification

In Valley Outdoor, Inc. v. City of Riverside (9th Cir. 2006) 446 F.3d 948 , a sign company began construction without having obtained a permit for erection of a billboard. The governing ordinances included a procedure for granting a permit application after the commencement of construction. The billboard in question was to be placed nearer to a freeway than the city's applicable ordinance allowed. That ordinance, however, was invalidated (in unrelated litigation) on constitutional grounds during the period of construction. An amended ordinance, imposing identical placement criteria, took effect after construction was completed, and consequently, the billboard was not subject to the amended ordinance. Therefore, as a tactic in the city's effort to force removal of the offending billboard, officials refused to accept or process the sign company's application for the post-construction issuance of a permit. The Ninth Circuit, deciding that the company could maintain an action for a declaratory judgment against the city, held that the company's right to equal protection mandated even-handed enforcement of the city's procedure for issuance of a permit on an application after the commencement of construction (446 F.3d 948, 956) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 15 ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGE LICENSING

1-15 California Points & Authorities 15.syn

§ 15.syn Synopsis to Chapter 15: ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGE LICENSING

§ 15.01 Scope of Chapter

§ 15.02 Governing Statutes

§ 15.03 Summary of Licensing Procedure

[1] In General

[2] Administrative Review

[3] Petitioning for Judicial Review

[4] Effect of 1967 Legislation Adding Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 23090-23090.7

§ 15.04 Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

§ 15.05 Related Points and Authorities Chapters

§§ 15.06-15.19 [Reserved]

§ 15.20 Supporting Petition for Writ of Review [Bus. & Prof. Code § 23090; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1067-1077] of Order of Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board Denying Alcoholic Beverage License--By Applicant or Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control--General Form

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Arbitrary Exercise of Discretion

[b] Limited Scope of Review

[c] Reasonable Person Standard

[d] Consideration of Nature of Proposed Premises

[e] Mere Proximity to Church or School

[f] Law Enforcement Problem

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Mere Proximity to Church or School

§ 15.21 Supporting Petition for Writ of Review [Bus. & Prof. Code § 23090; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1067-1077] of Order of Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board Granting Alcoholic Beverage License--By Protestant or Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control--General Form

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Limited Scope of Review

[b] Opinion Testimony

[c] Vicinity of Church, Hospital, School, Playground, or Youth Facility

[d] Law Enforcement Problem

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Limited Scope of Review

[b] Opinion Testimony

[c] Vicinity of Church, Hospital, School, Playground, or Youth Facility

[d] Law Enforcement Problem

§ 15.22 Supporting Petition for Writ of Review [Bus. & Prof. Code § 23090; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1067-1077] of Order of Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board Suspending or Revoking Alcoholic Beverage License for Sale of

Alcoholic Beverage to Minor [Bus. & Prof. Code § 25658(a)]--Minor Gave Proof of Majority [Bus. & Prof. Code § 25660]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Uses

[c] Reliance on Document Issued by Government

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Good Cause as Limitation on Power to Suspend or Revoke License

[b] Reliance on Evidence of Majority as Defense to Suspension or Revocation of License

[c] Right to Assume Validity and Rightful Possession of Document

[d] Mere Suspicion of Invalidity as Not Precluding Reliance on Document

[e] Single Identification Check at Door

[f] Licensee Permitting Minor to Remain on Premises

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Right to Assume Validity and Rightful Possession of Document

§ 15.23 Supporting Petition for Writ of Review [Bus. & Prof. Code § 23090; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1067-1077] of Order of Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board Suspending or Revoking Alcoholic Beverage License for Sale of Alcoholic Beverage to Minor [Bus. & Prof. Code § 25658(a)]--No Face-to-Face Identification of Seller by Minor Decoy [4 Cal. Code Reg. § 141(b)(5)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Failure to Make Face-to-Face Identification Is Defense

§ 15.24 Supporting Petition for Writ of Review [Bus. & Prof. Code § 23090; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1067-1077] of Order of Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board Suspending or Revoking Alcoholic Beverage License for Violation of Law Not Involving Moral Turpitude [Cal. Const., art. XX, § 22; Bus. & Prof. Code § 24200(a)]--Violation as Lacking Rational Relationship to or Actual Effect on Operation of Licensed Business in Manner Consistent With

Public Welfare and Morals

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Relationship of Violations to Conduct of Business

§ 15.25 Supporting Petition for Writ of Mandate [Bus. & Prof. Code § 23090.5; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085, 1086]--Review of Rule or Regulation of Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control--General Form

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Review of Rules and Regulations

[b] Performance of Administrative Duties

[c] Regulation Beyond Scope of Department's Statutory Power

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Review of Rules and Regulations

[b] Performance of Administrative Duties

§ 15.26 Supporting Petition for Writ of Mandate [Bus. & Prof. Code § 23090.5; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085, 1086]--To Restrain Enforcement of Unconstitutional Statute--General Form

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Review of Quasi-Judicial Action

[b] Exhaustion of Administrative Remedies Not Required

[c] Original Jurisdiction of Supreme Court

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Review of Quasi-Judicial Action

§ 15.27 Opposing Petition for Writ of Mandate [Bus. & Prof. Code § 23090.5; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085, 1086]--To Review or Restrain Adjudicatory Action of Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control--Exclusivity of Procedure by Writ of Review [Bus. & Prof. Code § 23090] and Failure to Exhaust Administrative Remedy

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Exclusivity of Procedure by Writ of Review

[b] Exhaustion of Administrative Remedies

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Exclusivity of Procedure by Writ of Review

§ 15.28 Supporting Motion for Summary Judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c] in Action for Restitution of Purchase Money--By Plaintiff--Transfer of Alcoholic Beverage License Denied by State

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Restitution for Failure of Consideration

[b] Unqualified Agreement to Buy Not Implied

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Restitution for Failure of Consideration

§ 15.29 Supporting Motion for Summary Adjudication [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(f)] of Validity of Option Agreement to Retransfer License to Seller of Licensed Premises on Buyer's Default in Purchase--By Plaintiff

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Motion for Summary Adjudication of Issues

[b] Option for Retransfer of Alcoholic Beverage License as Enforceable

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 15 ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGE LICENSING
PART I. INTRODUCTION

1-15 California Points & Authorities § 15.01

§ 15.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter contains memoranda of points and authorities for use in supporting petitions for a writ of review to review an administrative order denying [see § 15.20], granting [see § 15.21], and suspending or revoking [see §§ 15.22, 15.24] an alcoholic beverage license. It also contains memoranda supporting and opposing a petition for a writ of mandate to review acts of the Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control [see §§ 15.25, 15.26, 15.27], supporting a motion for summary judgment in an action for restitution of purchase money after the department fails to approve transfer of a license [see § 15.28], and supporting a motion for summary adjudication of the issue of the validity of an option agreement given by a buyer of licensed premises to retransfer the license to the seller in the event of the buyer's default in the purchase [see § 15.29].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Administrative LawAgency AdjudicationDecisionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentMotions for Summary JudgmentWritten MotionsCivil ProcedureRemediesWritsCommon Law WritsMandamusGovernmentsLocal GovernmentsLicensesGovernmentsState & Territorial GovernmentsLicenses

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 15 ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGE LICENSING
PART I. INTRODUCTION

1-15 California Points & Authorities § 15.02

§ 15.02 Governing Statutes

Alcoholic beverage licenses, including the granting or denial and suspension or revocation of licenses, are governed by Cal. Const., art. XX, § 22 and Bus. & Prof. Code § 23000 et seq. Issuance and transfer of licenses are governed in particular by Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 23950-24082, subject to the restrictions contained in Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 23770-23827. Suspension and revocation of licenses are governed in particular by Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 24200-24211. Miscellaneous restrictions regulating licensees in the conduct of the licensed business are contained in Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 25600-25667. Administrative review of decisions regarding licensing is governed particularly by Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 23080-23089, and judicial review is governed by Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 23090-23090.7.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
GovernmentsState & Territorial GovernmentsLicenses

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 15 ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGE LICENSING
PART I. INTRODUCTION

1-15 California Points & Authorities § 15.03

§ 15.03 Summary of Licensing Procedure

[1] In General

The Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control, as successor to the State Board of Equalization, has the exclusive power to license the manufacture, importation, and sale of alcoholic beverages in California [Cal. Const., art. XX, § 22; Bus. & Prof. Code § 23051]. The department has the power, in its discretion, to deny, suspend, or revoke any specific alcoholic beverages license if it determines for good cause that the granting or continuance of the license would be contrary to public welfare or morals, or that a person seeking or holding a license has violated any law prohibiting conduct involving moral turpitude [Cal. Const., art. XX, § 22]. The transfer of a license is subject to official investigation and approval in the same manner as the initial issuance of a license [Greve v. Leger, Ltd. (1966) 64 Cal. 2d 853, 859, 52 Cal. Rptr. 9, 415 P.2d 824]. It is the department and not the Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board or the courts that must determine whether or not good cause exists for denying a license on the ground that its issuance would be contrary to public welfare or morals [Kirby v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Bd. (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 433, 437, 102 Cal. Rptr. 857, 498 P.2d 1105 ; Sepatis v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Bd. (1980) 110 Cal. App. 3d 93, 102, 167 Cal. Rptr. 729].

[2] Administrative Review

Any person aggrieved by the decision of the Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control may appeal to the Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board. Review of the department's decision by the board is limited to a determination of whether or not the department proceeded without or in excess of its jurisdiction, whether or not it proceeded in the manner required by law, whether or not its decision is supported by the findings, whether or not its findings are supported by substantial evidence in light of the whole record, and whether or not there is relevant evidence which, in the exercise of reasonable diligence, could not have been produced or which was improperly excluded at the hearing before the department [Cal. Const., art. XX, § 22; Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 23081, 23084].

[3] Petitioning for Judicial Review

To obtain judicial review, any person affected by a final order of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board, including the Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control, may apply to the Supreme Court or to the court of appeal for the appellate district in which the proceeding arose, for a writ of review of the order [Bus. & Prof. Code § 23090; see, e.g., Chevron Stations, Inc. v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 116, 123-124, 57 Cal. Rptr. 3d 6 ; Dept. of Alcoholic Beverage Control v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 1518, 1520, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 621 (Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control challenged determination by Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board regarding lawfulness of "trade sampling")]. Notwithstanding the statutory authority of "any person affected" to petition for a writ of review, the only persons who have the right to appear in the review proceedings are the board, the department, and parties to the action or proceeding before the board [Bus. & Prof. Code § 23090.3]. Under the above provisions, standing to seek judicial review of the board's orders is limited to parties who appeared before the board [Rice v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Bd. (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 431, 436 fn. 4, 146 Cal. Rptr. 585, 579 P.2d 476]. If a writ petition is filed in superior court, the court must transfer the writ to the Court of Appeal under the statute mandating that a court lacking subject matter jurisdiction over an action transfer it to a court with jurisdiction [Padilla v. Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control (1996) 43 Cal. App. 4th 1151, 1157-1158, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 133 ; see Code Civ. Proc. § 396 (petition for writ of mandate filed pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5 in superior court, challenging ABC's decision to revoke alcoholic beverage license, treated as writ of review and denied by appellate court)].

Although review by the court is the second successive level of review under Bus. & Prof. Code § 23090, the scope of review at each level is the same. The court, like the board, must uphold the department's decision if the decision is supported by substantial evidence in the original record before the department [Kirby v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Bd. (1968) 261 Cal. App. 2d 119, 121, 67 Cal. Rptr. 628 ; compare Bus. & Prof. Code § 23090.2 with Bus. & Prof. Code § 23084; for a discussion of limitations on the scope of review, see § 15.03[2]]. Following the hearing, the court must either affirm or reverse the department's decision or remand the case for further proceedings before, or reconsideration by, the department [Bus. & Prof. Code § 23090.3].

A petition to a reviewing court for a writ within its original jurisdiction, if the Petition might lawfully have been made to a lower court in the first instance, must set forth the circumstances which, in the opinion of the petitioner, render it proper that the writ should issue originally from the reviewing court [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.490(b)]. Thus, if a petition for a writ of review or writ of mandate is addressed to the Supreme Court in the first instance, counsel, in the memorandum of points and authorities supporting the petition, should set forth circumstances showing why the writ should be issued originally by the Supreme Court rather than by the court of appeal. In the case of proceedings for a writ of mandate, the Supreme Court will exercise its original jurisdiction in appropriate cases when the issues presented are of great public importance and must be resolved quickly [Clean Air Constituency v. California State Air Resources Bd. (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 801, 808, 114 Cal. Rptr. 577, 523 P.2d 617]. Similar factors should probably be emphasized when a writ of review is sought from the Supreme Court in the first instance.

[4] Effect of 1967 Legislation Adding Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 23090-23090.7

By the enactment of Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 23090-23090.7 in 1967, the Legislature removed the superior court as the first level of judicial review [Walsh v. Kirby (1974) 13 Cal. 3d 95, 102 fn. 11, 118 Cal. Rptr. 1, 529 P.2d 33 ; Department of Alcoholic Bev. Control v. Superior Court (1968) 268 Cal. App. 2d 67, 69-71, 73 Cal. Rptr. 780]. The 1967 legislation also specified limitations on the scope of judicial review, but the scope of review as to evidentiary matters was not altered by that legislation [Walsh v. Kirby (1974) 13 Cal. 3d 95, 102-103, 103 n.12, 118 Cal. Rptr. 1, 529 P.2d 33 ; see also Bus. & Prof. Code § 23090.2; Department of Alcoholic Bev. Control v. Superior Court (1968) 268 Cal. App. 2d 67, 75, 73 Cal. Rptr. 780]. Thus, pre-1967 decisions involving evidentiary review of the department's decisions are still good law.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Administrative LawAgency AdjudicationDecisionsGeneral OverviewAdministrative LawJudicial ReviewGeneral OverviewAdministrative LawJudicial ReviewReviewabilityStandingGovernmentsLocal GovernmentsLicensesGovernmentsState & Territorial GovernmentsLicenses

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 15 ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGE LICENSING
PART I. INTRODUCTION

1-15 California Points & Authorities § 15.04

§ 15.04 Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion and forms for use in administrative and judicial proceedings relating to applications for and suspension or revocation of alcoholic beverage licenses, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 18, Alcoholic Beverage Licenses (Matthew Bender). That chapter also includes discussion and forms relating to proceedings for a writ of mandate to compel the department of Alcoholic Beverage Control to perform administrative duties and relating to proceedings for restitution of the purchase price of a liquor license when transfer of the license has been denied by the department.

For discussions and forms relating to proceedings involving licensing by public administrative agencies in general, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 470, Overview of Public Administrative Law , through Ch. 474C, Procedures in Reviewing Agency Decisions (Matthew Bender).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Administrative LawAgency AdjudicationDecisionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesWritsCommon Law WritsMandamusGovernmentsLocal GovernmentsLicensesGovernmentsState & Territorial GovernmentsLicenses

148 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 15 ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGE LICENSING
PART I. INTRODUCTION

1-15 California Points & Authorities § 15.05

§ 15.05 Related Points and Authorities Chapters

For a form of points and authorities relating to public administrative law generally, including points and authorities supporting a demurrer to a petition for a writ of mandate to review a decision of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board, see Ch. 195, Public Administrative Law .

For a form of points and authorities relating to civil liability for furnishing alcoholic beverages, see Ch. 15A, Alcoholic Beverages: Civil Liability for Furnishing .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Administrative LawAgency AdjudicationDecisionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesWritsCommon Law WritsMandamusGovernmentsLocal GovernmentsLicensesGovernmentsState & Territorial GovernmentsLicenses

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 15 ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGE LICENSING
PART I. INTRODUCTION

1-15 California Points & Authorities §§ 15.06-15.19

[Reserved]

§§ 15.06[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 15 ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGE LICENSING
PART II. FORMS

1-15 California Points & Authorities § 15.20

§ 15.20 Supporting Petition for Writ of Review [Bus. & Prof. Code § 23090; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1067-1077] of Order of Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board Denying Alcoholic Beverage License--By Applicant or Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control--General Form

[1] FORM Supporting Petition for Writ of Review [Bus. & Prof. Code § 23090; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1067-1077] of Order of Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board Denying Alcoholic Beverage License--By Applicant or Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control--General Form

IN THE SUPREME COURT OF THE
STATE OF CALIFORNIA

[OR]

IN THE COURT OF APPEAL OF THE
STATE OF CALIFORNIA,
_____ APPELLATE DISTRICT

_____ [DEPARTMENT OF ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGE CONTROL or name of applicant], Petitioner, vs. ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGE CONTROL APPEALS BOARD, Respondent[,] [DEPARTMENT OF ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGE CONTROL, Real Party in Interest].	)	NO. _____ MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES IN SUPPORT OF PETITION FOR WRIT OF REVIEW

_____

THE COURT SHOULD REVERSE THE ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGE CONTROL APPEAL BOARD'S DECISION _____ [AFFIRMING THE ORDER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGE CONTROL DENYING PETITIONER or REVERSING THE ORDER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGE CONTROL GRANTING _____ (PETITIONER or, if Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control is petitioner, name of applicant)] AN ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGE LICENSE BECAUSE THERE IS INSUFFICIENT EVIDENCE OF GOOD CAUSE FOR DENIAL OF A LICENSE.

A. Review of Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board Decision. Within 30 days after a final order of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board is filed, any person affected by the order, including the Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control, may apply to the Supreme Court or to the court of appeal for the appellate district in which the proceeding arose for a writ of review of the final order (Bus. & Prof. Code § 23090). Following the hearing, the court may enter judgment reversing the decision of the department, or may remand the case for further proceedings before, or reconsideration by, the Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control (Bus. & Prof. Code § 23090.3).

[EITHER, if board affirmed department's decision denying license]

B. Arbitrary Exercise of Discretion. The discretion of the Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control to deny a license if it determines for good cause that granting the license would be contrary to public welfare or morals is not an absolute discretion, but must be exercised in accordance with the law, and the department must not act arbitrarily in determining what is contrary to public welfare or morals. To exercise its discretion, the department must know and consider all the material facts in evidence together with the legal principles essential to an informed, intelligent, and just decision, and its decisions must be based on sufficient evidence (Martin v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Bd. (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 867, 875-876, 13 Cal. Rptr. 513, 362 P.2d 337 ; see also Department of Alcoholic Bev. Control v. Alcoholic Bev. Control Appeals Bd. (1981) 122 Cal. App. 3d 549, 554, 175 Cal. Rptr. 342).

[OR, if board reversed department's decision granting license]

B. Limited Scope of Review. Review of the decision of the Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control by the Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board and by the courts is limited to a determination of whether or not the department proceeded without or in excess of its jurisdiction, whether or not it proceeded in the manner required by law, whether or not its decision is supported by the findings, whether or not its findings are supported by substantial evidence in light of the whole record, and whether or not there is relevant evidence which, in the exercise of reasonable diligence, could not have been produced or which was improperly excluded at the hearing before the department (Cal. Const., art. XX, § 22; Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 23084, 23090.2).

[AND, for use with second Paragraph B]

C. Reasonable Person Standard. In determining whether or not the facts established by substantial evidence constitute good cause for concluding that issuance of the license will not be contrary to public welfare or morals, the Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control exercises discretion based on the reasonable person standard, and neither the Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board nor the courts may substitute a contrary decision that is equally or more reasonable (Sepatis v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Bd. (1980) 110 Cal. App. 3d 93, 102, 167 Cal. Rptr. 729).

D. Consideration of Nature of Proposed Premises. The department may consider the integrity of the applicant shown by his or her previous business experience, the kind of business to be conducted on the premises and the probable manner in which it will be conducted, and the type of guests who will patronize it and the probability that their consumption of alcoholic beverages will be moderate (Koss v. Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control (1963) 215 Cal. App. 2d 489, 495, 30 Cal. Rptr. 219 ; see also Sepatis v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Bd. (1980) 110 Cal. App. 3d 93, 100-103, 167 Cal. Rptr. 729).

[Optional] E. Mere Proximity to Church or School. The mere proximity of the proposed premises to a church or school is insufficient to establish good cause for denial of an alcoholic beverage license (Martin v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Bd. (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 867, 880, 13 Cal. Rptr. 513, 362 P.2d 337 (church); Reimel v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Bd. (1967) 255 Cal. App. 2d 40, 45, 62 Cal. Rptr. 778 (school)).

[Optional] F. Law Enforcement Problem. The denial of a license application pursuant to Section 23958 of the Business and Professions Code on the basis that the license would tend to create a law enforcement problem must be supported by substantial evidence of repeated and on-going criminal activity in connection with the applicant's premises or locale, not mere expectation of disturbances of undetermined severity occurring at an indefinite time in the future (Department of Alcoholic Bev. Control v. Alcoholic Bev. Control Appeals Bd. (1981) 122 Cal. App. 3d 549, 556-557, 556-557 fn. 6, 175 Cal. Rptr. 342).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Petitioner _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in support of a petition for a writ of review of a final order of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board denying an alcoholic beverage license. The memorandum may be submitted either by an unsuccessful applicant seeking judicial review of an order affirming a decision of the Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control to deny a license [see first Paragraph B] or by the department or the applicant seeking judicial review of an order reversing a decision of the department to grant a license [see second Paragraph B and Paragraph C].

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. In particular, in cases involving proximity to a church or school, counsel should compare and contrast the detailed facts of the case with the facts presented by the diverse cases involving proposed premises in proximity to churches and schools because the case will turn on the sufficiency of the evidence supporting the department's decision [see Martin v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Bd. (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 867, 880, 13 Cal. Rptr. 513, 362 P.2d 337 ; see cases collected in § 15.20[3][e], [4][a], and cases collected in § 15.21[3][c], [4][c]].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Arbitrary Exercise of Discretion

The applicants in Martin v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Bd. (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 867, 13 Cal. Rptr. 513, 362 P.2d 337 , sought transfer of an on-sale beer and wine license to their restaurant, which was directly across the street from a church. The Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control denied the application on the ground that issuance of the license would be contrary to public welfare and morals because the premises were in the immediate vicinity of a church, although the church did not protest issuance of the license. On applicants' appeal, the Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board reversed on the basis that the record should contain some evidence of good cause for denying the license in addition to the proximity of the premises to a church. The department then sought review of the board's decision by mandamus proceedings in superior court. The court affirmed the board's decision, and the department appealed.

The Supreme Court affirmed. The Court noted that judicial review is necessarily directed at the board's decision, but that any determination of whether the board has exceeded its limited powers incidentally requires a review of the department's decision and of the record that the department's decision is based on (55 Cal. 2d 867, 871-872). The Court recognized the scope of the department's discretion, stating that if reasonable minds might differ as to whether issuance of a license would be contrary to public welfare, the determination of the question falls within the broad area of the department's discretion. However, the Court also stated that the discretion to be exercised by the department is not absolute, but must be exercised in accordance with the law, and that Cal. Const., art. XX, § 22, providing that the department may deny or revoke a license for good cause, implies that the department's decisions should be based on sufficient evidence and that it should not act arbitrarily in determining what is contrary to public welfare or morals (55 Cal. 2d 867, 876). The Court held, however, that the board had properly concluded that there was no substantial evidence supporting the department's determination that good cause existed to deny the license (55 Cal. 2d 867, 880-881).

Although Martin was decided prior to the 1967 legislation that added Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 23090-23090.7, governing judicial review of the board's decisions, that legislation did not change the scope of judicial review on evidentiary matters, and Martin may still be relied on in this regard [Walsh v. Kirby (1974) 13 Cal. 3d 95, 103 fn. 12, 118 Cal. Rptr. 1, 529 P.2d 33].

In Department of Alcoholic Bev. Control v. Alcoholic Bev. Control Appeals Bd. (1981) 122 Cal. App. 3d 549, 175 Cal. Rptr. 342 , the Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control denied an on-sale beer and wine license to a disco music establishment. The department based its decision on findings that the establishment's remote location would result in slow police response times to requests for help, and that the predominance of youthful patrons might result in occasional disturbances occurring in the indefinite future, constituting a law enforcement problem. The Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board affirmed the license denial on an alternative ground of zoning restrictions but rejected the department's determination that issuance of the license would create a law enforcement problem as unsupported by substantial evidence. When the establishment subsequently obtained zoning approval and was granted the license, the department sought review of the board's reversal of the license denial.

The court of appeal affirmed the reversal, holding that (1) the findings of limited police response power were based on conflicting evidence and were not substantially supported by the evidence, and (2) the reasoning of the department that unspecified disturbances might occur at times in the indefinite future was too speculative to meet the probable impairment of public welfare test for good-faith denial of a license under Cal. Const Art XX, § 22 (122 Cal. App. 3d 549, 556-558, 556-557 fn. 6).

[b] Limited Scope of Review

Cal. Const., art. XX, § 22 and Bus. & Prof. Code § 23084 limit the scope of review of the department's decisions by the Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board, as set out in Paragraph B of this form. Bus. & Prof. Code § 23090.2 imposes the same limitations on the scope of review by the court of appeal or Supreme Court.

[c] Reasonable Person Standard

In Sepatis v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Bd. (1980) 110 Cal. App. 3d 93, 167 Cal. Rptr. 729 , the Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control granted an application for transfer of an on-sale retail license even though there were already four "too many" bars in the area of the proposed premises under the department's statistical formula for determining when there is an undue concentration of licenses in a neighborhood. Issuance of licenses where there is undue concentration of licenses is permitted by Bus. & Prof. Code § 23958 if the applicant shows that public convenience or necessity will be served by the issuance. The department reasoned that public convenience or necessity would be served by transfer of the license because the proposed premises would be of a different character than existing bars and would appeal to all segments of the community, including persons in the area who were reluctant to enter other bars in the neighborhood. Protestors appealed to the Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board, which reversed on the ground that "public convenience or necessity" related only to availability of alcoholic beverages and did not permit consideration of the physical appearance or aesthetic features of the licensed premises or of whether the applicant would cater to a particular segment of the public. The applicant petitioned for review of the board's order.

In reversing the board's order and reinstating the department's decision, the court of appeal recognized the limited scope of its review (110 Cal. App. 3d 93, 102). The court stated that on factual issues, the standard of review is whether or not the department's findings are supported by substantial evidence, and that if the evidence supporting the findings is not conflicting, the conclusions reached present questions of law reviewable for correctness, jurisdictional excess, or abuse of discretion [citing Boreta Enterprises, Inc. v. Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 85, 94, 84 Cal. Rptr. 113, 465 P.2d 1 (discussed in § 15.22[3][a]), and Rice v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Bd. (1979) 89 Cal. App. 3d 30, 35, 152 Cal. Rptr. 285]. The court also stated that in determining whether or not the facts established by substantial evidence constitute good cause for determining that issuance of a license will not be contrary to public welfare or morals, the department exercises discretion on a reasonable person standard, which may allow a difference of opinion on the same subject, and that when the decision is the subject of choice within reason, the department is vested with the discretion of making the selection it deems proper, and neither the board nor the courts may substitute a contrary decision, even though equally or more reasonable [relying on Koss v. Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control (1963) 215 Cal. App. 2d 489, 496, 30 Cal. Rptr. 219].

[d] Consideration of Nature of Proposed Premises

In Koss v. Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control (1963) 215 Cal. App. 2d 489, 30 Cal. Rptr. 219 , the Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control granted an on-sale license to a resort owner who wanted to serve alcoholic beverages in the resort's dining room. Members of a nearby church and of the community who had protested the license application appealed to the Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board. The board reversed, holding that the department's findings were not supported by substantial evidence and that the department had abused its discretion in issuing the license. Both the applicant and the department petitioned the superior court for writs of mandate to compel the board to set aside its order. The superior court ordered issuance of the writs, holding that the department's findings were supported by substantial evidence and that issuance of the license had not been an abuse of discretion. Protestants and the board, who had intervened in the mandamus proceedings, appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, stating that the only issues before it were the same as those before the trial court, that is, whether or not the department's findings were supported by substantial evidence and whether or not the decision based on those findings constituted an abuse of discretion (215 Cal. App. 2d 489, 492-493). The department had found that issuance of the license would not be contrary to public morals or welfare and, given the type of operation involved, would not create a moral hazard to the church in the immediate vicinity of the premises, or interfere with the quiet enjoyment of their property by the residents of the predominantly residential area in which the premises were located. The protestants and the board urged that the findings were not supported by substantial evidence because uncontested evidence showed that the members of a church located 200 feet from the premises had vigorously protested issuance of the license, and that 147 residents of the area had also protested issuance, complaining of noise, traffic problems, and the potential for operation of vehicles in the neighborhood by persons under the influence of alcohol (215 Cal. App. 2d 489, 493). After reviewing the nature of the resort, the court stated, relying on prior California law, that mere proximity to a church did not require a finding that issuance of the license would be contrary to public welfare or morals (215 Cal. App. 2d 489, 495). Rather, the court held that the department was entitled to consider the integrity of the applicant as shown by his previous business experience, the kind of business to be conducted on the licensed premises and the probable manner in which it would be conducted, and the type of guests who would patronize it and the probability that their consumption of alcoholic beverages would be moderate (215 Cal. App. 2d 489, 495). The department was also entitled to consider that the protests were primarily directed to previously existing conditions which were attributable to an unlicensed premises and which had ceased to exist since the applicant had purchased the premises, that any aggravation of those conditions and the occurrence of other objectionable conditions, such as intoxicated drivers, assumed overindulgence by the patrons, which was not probable given the type of management, operation, and patrons involved, and that the times when the church was used made interference with its use by guests of the premises unlikely (215 Cal. App. 2d 489, 495-496). These considerations provided substantial evidence in support of the department's decision, and the court held that the board's decision reversing the department was contrary to law (215 Cal. App. 2d 489, 496-497).

The facts and procedural background of Sepatis v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Bd. (1980) 110 Cal. App. 3d 93, 167 Cal. Rptr. 729 , are discussed in § 15.20[3][c].

In Sepatis, the court of appeal reversed the board and reinstated the decision of the department. The court reasoned that since Bus. & Prof. Code § 23958 authorizes issuance of licenses on a showing of public convenience or necessity even though issuance would result in or add to an undue concentration of licenses, "public convenience or necessity" must be based on criteria different from those involved in a determination of "undue concentration" (110 Cal. App. 3d 93, 98). The court was critical of developing a standard that would turn on the appeal of premises to particular segments of the public, but noted, on pages 100-101, that the department may take into account the attractiveness of the premises, the probable manner in which it will be conducted, and the type of guests who will patronize it in determining whether or not licensing premises located near a church would be contrary to public welfare and morals [citing Martin v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Bd. (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 867, 874, 880, 13 Cal. Rptr. 513, 362 P.2d 337 (discussed in § 15.20[3][e]), and Koss v. Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control (1963) 215 Cal. App. 2d 489, 495, 30 Cal. Rptr. 219 , discussed above]. The court declined to propound a definitive interpretation of "public convenience or necessity," holding that substantial evidence in the record supported the department's finding that the proposed premises would appeal to all segments of the community, including residents and business people in the area who were reluctant to enter existing bars in the vicinity, and that the department had not abused its constitutional or statutory discretion in considering that fact as an aspect of public convenience or in concluding that, on balance, issuance of the license would not be contrary to public welfare or morals, as that term is used in the agency's constitutional mandate (110 Cal. App. 3d 93, 102-103).

[e] Mere Proximity to Church or School

CAUTION:

The following cases were decided before the 1992 amendment of Bus. & Prof. Code § 23789 authorizing the department to refuse to issue any retail license for premises located within the immediate vicinity of churches, hospitals, schools, public playgrounds, and nonprofit youth facilities.

The facts and procedural background of Martin v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Bd. (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 867, 13 Cal. Rptr. 513, 362 P.2d 337 , are discussed in § 15.20[3][a].

In affirming, the Supreme Court noted that Cal. Const., art. XX, § 22, empowers the department to deny, suspend, or revoke licenses if it determines for good cause that the granting or continuance of the license would be contrary to public welfare and morals (55 Cal. 2d 867, 871, 872). The Court also noted that the department was specifically authorized to refuse to issue on-sale retail licenses for premises located within the immediate vicinity of a church by

Bus. & Prof. Code § 23789, but held that this statutory provision did not require denial of a license based solely on mere proximity to a church and that the statute could not impair the constitutional requirement that good cause be shown for denial of a license. The Court held that the statutory language and the Constitution required the department to exercise a legal discretion in passing on the application (55 Cal. 2d 867, 875). The Court then canvassed a number of prior California cases dealing with granting or denying licenses to premises near churches, schools, and religious communities, and concluded that the cases were not entirely consistent, each depending on its own facts (55 Cal. 2d 867, 877-880). The Court found that in those cases, the determining factor in upholding the department's decision was whether or not there was substantial evidence on which reasonable minds might differ as to whether issuance of the license would be contrary to public welfare and morals (55 Cal. 2d 867, 880). The Court concluded that the board and superior court had properly found that the department's decision was not supported by substantial evidence, since mere proximity to a church was insufficient to establish good cause for denial. Moreover, the department could not arbitrarily refuse to consider the other pertinent undisputed evidence, and the proximity of the church was not significant enough to support the denial, given the fact that the church did not protest the license and that there were already eight licensed premises within 600 feet of applicant's premises, only one of which had an on-sale beer and wine license. The Court also noted that the proprietors of the proposed premises were law-abiding persons operating a superior restaurant and trying to make its services better and attractive to a larger number of patrons (55 Cal. 2d 867, 880).

In Reimel v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Bd. (1967) 255 Cal. App. 2d 40, 62 Cal. Rptr. 778 , the Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control denied a supermarket's application for an off-sale beer and wine license on the grounds that the proposed premises was in the immediate vicinity of a school and that issuance of the license would be contrary to the public welfare and morals. The Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board reversed, finding that the department's decision was without reason under the evidence, arbitrary, and an abuse of discretion. The department petitioned the superior court for a writ of mandate to overturn the board's decision. The department appealed from the court's denial of the petition.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that mere proximity to a school or church does not as a matter of law constitute the good cause that must be established in order to deny a license under the Constitution. The court then examined the department's finding that issuance of the license would be contrary to public welfare and morals, the only determination that could constitutionally support denial of the license under Cal. Const., art. XX, § 22 (255 Cal. App. 2d 40, 45). The department's findings of fact in support of its determination were that the proximity of the premises to the school was incompatible with the school's legally imposed duty to instruct children as to the evil effects of alcohol, that some of the children went by and entered the supermarket, that the school ground was already being littered with discarded liquor bottles, and that the new license would attract more public imbibers to the area. The court held that none of the findings, when substantively analyzed, was sufficient to sustain the constitutional requirement of good cause for denial of a license (255 Cal. App. 2d 40, 46-50). The court found that the sale of beer and wine anywhere is incompatible with the educational policy of the state regarding alcohol, so that the policy was not substantial evidence that sale of beer and wine across the street from the school would contravene public welfare and morals (255 Cal. App. 2d 40, 46-47). As to children passing by and frequenting the premises, the court noted that the evidence showed that only a few of the students passed by and that even fewer entered the store. Noting the character of the supermarket, including facts indicating that sales to or thefts by children of beer and wine were unlikely, and that none of the students were old enough to purchase beer and wine, the court concluded that the extent to which the students frequented the store did not constitute substantial evidence that issuance of the license would be contrary to public welfare and morals (255 Cal. App. 2d 40, 47-48). The court disregarded the public imbibing and litter problem because: (1) of the school's location in a busy commercial neighborhood with two other off-sale premises nearby; (2) no litter could be attributed to the supermarket, which as yet had made no sales; and (3) reference to liquor bottles was irrelevant since a beer and wine license was involved. Testimony that people might drink in the supermarket's parking lot and drive on the nearby streets under the influence of alcohol was deemed to be mere speculation and conjecture, not constituting substantial evidence (255 Cal. App. 2d 40, 48).

The court distinguished two cases in which an off-sale beer and wine license was denied to premises near a school. The court noted that in Weiss v. State Bd. of Equalization (1953) 40 Cal. 2d 772, 256 P.2d 1 , a license was denied where the proposed premises were 80 pedestrian feet from a high school in a partly residential neighborhood, while in the case before it, the proposed premises was 400 pedestrian feet from an elementary school in a commercial area. In Reimel v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Bd. (1967) 250 Cal. App. 2d 673 , a license was denied where the neighborhood was entirely residential except for the proposed premises, which proposed to sell the alcoholic beverages in connection with the sale of take-out food, making it likely that alcoholic beverages would be consumed near the premises and within 200 feet of the school (255 Cal. App. 2d 40, 49). On pages 49-50, the court concluded that the cases granting and denying licenses to premises near churches and schools are not altogether consistent, each case seeming to turn on its own facts with the determining factor being whether or not there was substantial evidence on which reasonable minds might differ as to whether denying or granting the license would or would not be contrary to public welfare and morals [citing Martin v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Bd. (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 867, 880, 13 Cal. Rptr. 513, 362 P.2d 337 (discussed above)].

Counsel should note that Reimel v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Bd. (1967) 255 Cal. App. 2d 40, 62 Cal. Rptr. 778 , was distinguished in Kirby v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Bd. (1968) 261 Cal. App. 2d 119, 126-129, 67 Cal. Rptr. 628 (discussed in § 15.21[4][c]), in which the court found that substantial evidence supported contentions relating to litter and likely consumption of alcoholic beverages in the vicinity of a school. The court in Kirby made a fairly detailed comparison between the facts of the case before it and the facts of Reimel.

For authorities in which the courts upheld decisions of the department to deny a license because the proposed premises were in close proximity to a church or school, see § 15.21[3][c], [4][c].

[f] Law Enforcement Problem

The facts and procedural background of Department of Alcoholic Bev. Control v. Alcoholic Bev. Control Appeals Bd. (1981) 122 Cal. App. 3d 549, 175 Cal. Rptr. 342 , are discussed in § 15.20[3][a]. In an extensive footnote, the court of appeal discussed cases in which license denials were supported by substantial evidence of repeated and on-going criminal activity in connection with an applicant's premises or locale. Such activity, held the court, constituted a legitimate concern to law enforcement agencies and established a good-faith basis for a denial of a license by the department. The present case, on the other hand, involved only a determination by the department that disturbances of undetermined severity might occur in the indefinite future. The court upheld the board's decision that such a determination was too speculative and broad to meet the good-faith requirement for license denial based on avoidance of a law enforcement problem (122 Cal. App. 3d 549, 556-557 fn. 6).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Mere Proximity to Church or School

As noted in Martin v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Bd. (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 867, 880, 13 Cal. Rptr. 513, 362 P.2d 337 (discussed in § 15.20[3][e]), cases dealing with the proposed licensing of premises near schools and churches appear to turn on their own facts. In these cases, the question before the court is whether or not the findings of the Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control or its predecessor, the State Board of Equalization, are supported by sufficient evidence, or whether or not its actions were arbitrary or an abuse of discretion. In the following cases, the department's decision granting a license was upheld on appeal.

In Koss v. Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control (1963) 215 Cal. App. 2d 489, 30 Cal. Rptr. 219 (discussed in § 15.20[3][d]), the superior court granted a writ of mandate to set aside an order of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board that had reversed a decision of the department granting an on-sale license to a resort owner who wanted to serve alcoholic beverages primarily in the resort's dining room. The court of appeal affirmed the superior court holding that substantial evidence supported the department's decision to grant the license, given the applicant's integrity, the type of business and probable manner in which it would be conducted, the probable type of patrons, the nature of the protests, which related to conditions of the premises when unlicensed and under a prior owner, and the unlikelihood of conflict with services at a church 200 feet away from the licensed premises because of the times at which the church was used (215 Cal. App. 2d 489, 495-496).

In Board of Trustees v. Munro (1958) 163 Cal. App. 2d 440, 329 P.2d 765 , the superior court ordered issuance of a writ of mandate compelling the department and the board to reverse their decisions granting an off-sale license to a supermarket near a high school, a church, a proposed playground, and a proposed Y.M.C.A. The court of appeal reversed, holding that the department's decision was supported by substantial evidence. The evidence had shown that the alcoholic beverages were to be sold in a department separate from the rest of the store to minimize the possibility of theft and inadvertent sale to minors, although protestants had claimed that the students would manage to obtain alcoholic beverages through adults, pilferage, or misrepresentation of age. Church representatives had testified against the license, but had admitted that no bad effects on their congregation could be expected, and Y.M.C.A. representatives had testified that their members would be more apt to drink than if alcoholic beverages were not so handy to their headquarters. The court, however, held that, as a matter of law, this testimony had not proven that granting the license would be contrary to public welfare or morals (163 Cal. App. 2d 440, 442-447).

In Altadena Community Church v. State Board of Equalization (1952) 109 Cal. App. 2d 99, 240 P.2d 322 , the superior court granted a petition for a writ of mandate to reverse a decision of the Board of Equalization that had granted an on-sale general liquor license to a restaurant. The court of appeal reversed, holding that the Board of Equalization had not abused its discretion in granting the license to the restaurant which already had a beer and wine license and which had been licensed before the opening of at least one of the three churches in the immediate vicinity. There had not been any showing that operation of the licensed premises had interfered with the churches' operations (109 Cal. App. 2d 99, 104-105).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 15 ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGE LICENSING
PART II. FORMS

1-15 California Points & Authorities § 15.21

§ 15.21 Supporting Petition for Writ of Review [Bus. & Prof. Code § 23090; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1067-1077] of Order of Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board Granting Alcoholic Beverage License--By Protestant or Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control--General Form

[1] FORM Supporting Petition for Writ of Review [Bus. & Prof. Code § 23090; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1067-1077] of Order of Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board Granting Alcoholic Beverage License--By Protestant or Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control--General Form

[Caption. See § 15.20[1].]

THE COURT SHOULD SET ASIDE THE ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGE CONTROL APPEALS BOARD'S DECISION REVERSING THE ORDER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGE CONTROL DENYING AN ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGE LICENSE TO _____ [name of applicant] BECAUSE THERE IS SUBSTANTIAL EVIDENCE IN SUPPORT OF THE DEPARTMENT'S FINDING THAT GRANTING THE LICENSE WOULD BE CONTRARY TO PUBLIC WELFARE AND MORALS.

A. Review of Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board Decision. [See § 15.20]1], Paragraph A.]

B. Limited Scope of Review. Review of the decision of the Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control by the Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board and by the courts is limited to a determination of whether or not (1) the department proceeded without or in excess of its jurisdiction, (2) the department proceeded in the manner required by law, (3) the department's decision is supported by the findings, (4) the department's findings are supported by substantial evidence in light of the whole record, and (5) there is relevant evidence which, in the exercise of reasonable diligence, could not have been produced or which was improperly excluded at the hearing before the department (Cal. Const., art. XX, § 22; Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 23084, 23090.2). Neither the board nor the court may overturn a finding of fact of the department on the ground that a contrary finding would have been equally or more reasonable, and if reasonable minds can differ as to whether granting a license would or would not be contrary to public welfare, the determination of the question is within the department's discretion (Kirby v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Bd. (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 433, 436, 102 Cal. Rptr. 857, 498 P.2d 1105).

C. Constitutional Limit on Authority of Department to Deny License. The Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control has the power, in its discretion, to deny any specific alcoholic beverages license if it determines, for good cause, that the granting of the license would be contrary to public welfare or morals, or that a person seeking a license has violated any law prohibiting conduct involving moral turpitude (Cal. Const., art. XX, § 22).

[Optional] D. Opinion Testimony. Past experience and expert opinion can constitute substantial evidence in support of the department's assessment of the future impact of the proposed premises on the public welfare and morals (Kirby v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Bd. (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 433, 441, 102 Cal. Rptr. 857, 498 P.2d 1105).

[Optional] E. Vicinity of Church, Hospital, School, Playground, or Youth Facility. The Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control is specifically authorized by statute to refuse the issuance, other than renewal or ownership transfer, of any retail license for premises located within the immediate vicinity of churches and hospitals and within at least 600 feet of schools and public playgrounds or nonprofit youth facilities, including, but not limited to, facilities serving Girl Scouts, Boy Scouts, or Campfire Girls (Bus. & Prof. Code § 23789; see Weiss v. State Bd. of Equalization (1953) 40 Cal. 2d 772, 775, 256 P.2d 1). Even though mere proximity to a church or school does not constitute good cause for denial of a license, such proximity coupled with some additional evidence disclosing a potential threat to public welfare and morals is sufficient to justify denial of a license (Kirby v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Bd. (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 433, 440, 102 Cal. Rptr. 857, 498 P.2d 1105).

[Optional] F. Law Enforcement Problem. The Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control may deny an application for a license if issuance of the license would tend to create a law enforcement problem (Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 23958, 23958.3; see Kirby v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Bd. (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 433, 440-441, 102 Cal. Rptr. 857, 498 P.2d 1105).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in support of a petition for a writ of review of a final order of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board that resulted in granting an alcoholic beverage license by reversing an order of the Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control that had denied issuance of the license.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. In particular, in cases involving proximity to a church, hospital, school, public playground, or nonprofit youth facility, including, but not limited to, facilities serving Girl Scouts, Boy Scouts, or Campfire Girls, counsel should compare and contrast the diverse cases involving proposed licenses for premises in these locales, because the case will turn on the sufficiency of the evidence supporting the department's decision [see Martin v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Bd. (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 867, 880, 13 Cal. Rptr. 513, 362 P.2d 337 ; see cases collected in § 15.21[3][c], [4][c], and in § 15.20[3][e], [4][a]].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Limited Scope of Review

In Kirby v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Bd. (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 433, 102 Cal. Rptr. 857, 498 P.2d 1105 , the Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control denied an application for an off-sale beer and wine license on the ground that it would be contrary to public welfare and morals because the premises were located in a residential area, operation of the premises would disturb the residents' quiet enjoyment of their property, and issuance would create or aggravate an existing police problem in the area. The premises sought to be licensed were located in a shopping center in a community surrounded by a university campus. Shortly before the application was made, there had been civil disturbances on campus and in the community. There were no other licensed premises in the community. A protest was filed by the county sheriff, who testified as to the riots that had taken place in the vicinity. The sheriff also stated that, in his experience, 50 to 60 percent of all persons arrested in the county were under the influence of alcohol, and that the college community had the highest crime rate in the county. On appeal by the applicant, the Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board reversed the department's denial of the application on the ground that it lacked evidentiary support, was arbitrary, and constituted an abuse of discretion. The department petitioned for review of the board's decision.

In reversing the board's decision and affirming the department's denial of the license, the Supreme Court recognized the limitations on the scope of review of the department's decisions by both the board and the courts. The Court stated that neither the courts nor the board could disregard or overturn a finding of fact of the department for the reason that a contrary finding would have been equally or more reasonable. If reasonable minds could differ as to whether granting a license would or would not be contrary to public welfare, the determination of the question falls within the broad area of discretion that the department is empowered to exercise. The Court also stated that the standard of review by the board pursuant to Cal. Const., art. XX, § 22, and by the courts pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 23090.2 is the same, that is, the department's findings must be upheld if supported by substantial evidence in light of the whole record (7 Cal. 3d 433, 436).

[b] Opinion Testimony

The facts and procedural background of Kirby v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Bd. (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 433, 102 Cal. Rptr. 857, 498 P.2d 1105 , are discussed in § 15.21[3][a]. In Kirby, the board and the applicant contended that the evidence failed to establish that the civil disturbances were attributable to the consumption of alcoholic beverages because the sheriff's testimony relating crime to intoxication and regarding the likelihood that the premises might aggravate police problems was mere opinion testimony and wholly speculative. The Court rejected the contention, noting that the department's role in evaluating an application for a license is to assure that the public welfare and morals are preserved from probable impairment in the future. The Court then held that in appraising the likelihood of future harm to the public welfare, the department, of necessity, must be guided to a large extent by past experience and the opinions of experts [relying on Kirby v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Bd. (1968) 261 Cal. App. 2d 119, 129, 67 Cal. Rptr. 628 (discussed in § 15.21[4][b])] (7 Cal. 3d 433, 441). The Court concluded that the sheriff's testimony constituted evidence, based on his 25 years of experience as a law enforcement officer in the area, that granting the license could aggravate an existing law enforcement problem and thus be contrary to the public welfare (7 Cal. 3d 433, 442).

[c] Vicinity of Church, Hospital, School, Playground, or Youth Facility

CAUTION:

The following cases were decided before the 1992 amendment of Bus. & Prof. Code § 23789 authorizing the department to refuse to issue any retail license for premises located within the immediate vicinity of churches, hospitals, schools, public playgrounds, and nonprofit youth facilities.

In Weiss v. State Board of Equalization (1953) 40 Cal. 2d 772, 256 P.2d 1 , plaintiffs filed an application with the State Board of Equalization for an off-sale beer and wine license at their grocery and delicatessen. After hearing, the Board denied the application on the grounds that issuance of the license would be contrary to the "public welfare and morals" because of the proximity of the premises to a high school. Plaintiffs sought a writ of mandate in the superior court to compel the Board to issue the license. The trial court rendered judgment denying plaintiffs' writ petition, and the plaintiffs appealed from the judgment.

The Supreme Court affirmed the judgment. The Court noted, preliminarily, that the Board was authorized by the predecessor statute to Bus. & Prof. Code § 23789 to refuse issuance of an on-sale license to premises in the immediate vicinity of a school. However, the Court held the Department also had the power, under Cal. Const., art. XX, § 22, to refuse issuance of an off-sale license to premises near schools when issuance of the license would be inimical to public morals and welfare (40 Cal. 2d 772, 775). The Court further found the Board did not act arbitrarily in denying the license application, because a reasonable person could conclude that the sale of liquor on premises within 80 feet of some buildings on a high school ground would adversely affect the public welfare and morals (40 Cal. 2d 772, 775-776).

Counsel should note that Weiss was decided not only before the enactment of Bus. & Prof. Code § 23789, but also before the 1992 amendment of the statute, which authorizes the department to refuse the issuance of any retail license for premises located within the immediate vicinity of churches, hospitals, schools, public playgrounds, and nonprofit youth facilities.

The facts and procedural background of Kirby v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Bd. (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 433, 102 Cal. Rptr. 857, 498 P.2d 1105 , are discussed in § 15.21[3][a]. In that case, in a four to three decision over a strong dissent, the Supreme Court reversed the board's order and affirmed the department's decision denying the license. The Court recognized that mere proximity to schools or churches may not constitute good cause for denial, but noted that other cases have held that proximity to a church or school coupled with some additional evidence disclosing a potential threat to the public welfare or morals is sufficient to justify denial of a license. The Court held that the case before it fell into the second category because the proximity of the premises to the university was coupled with the additional factors of the age and past "exuberance" of the community and university population, the absence of any other licensed premises in the area, and the presence of a nearby restaurant with take-out food service that would enhance the likelihood that beer would be consumed near campus (7 Cal. 3d 433, 440). An additional ground supporting denial of the license was that substantial evidence supported the department's finding that the premises might present a law enforcement problem (7 Cal. 3d 433, 440-442).

For authorities in which an alcoholic beverages license was granted notwithstanding the proximity of the proposed premises to a church or school, see § 15.20[3][e], [4][a]. Reference to these authorities is particularly important because, as the Supreme Court stated in Martin v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Bd. (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 867, 880, 13 Cal. Rptr. 513, 362 P.2d 337 , the cases are not entirely consistent, each turning on its own facts, with the determining factor being whether or not there was substantial evidence on which reasonable minds might differ as to whether the denying or granting of the license would or would not be contrary to public welfare and morals. In this regard, it should be noted that in Kirby and in all four cases discussed in § 15.21[4][c], the court upheld the department's original decision.

[d] Law Enforcement Problem

The facts and procedural background of Kirby v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Bd. (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 433, 102 Cal. Rptr. 857, 498 P.2d 1105 , are discussed in § 15.21[3][a]. There, in a four to three decision over a strong dissent, the Supreme Court reversed the board's order and affirmed the department's decision denying the license. The Court held, relying on prior California law and on Bus. & Prof. Code § 23958, that the department may deny a license if it determines, from substantial evidence, that the premises might present a law enforcement problem (7 Cal. 3d 433, 440-441). The Court then rejected a challenge to the sufficiency of the evidence on the issue of a law enforcement problem (see discussion in § 15.21[4][b]) (7 Cal. 3d 433, 441-442).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Limited Scope of Review

In Donia v. Alcoholic Bev. etc. Appeals Bd. (1985) 167 Cal. App. 3d 588, 213 Cal. Rptr. 447 , the Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control denied a market's application for an off-sale beer and wine license on the ground that its issuance would tend to create or aggravate an existing law enforcement problem and would be contrary to the public welfare and morals. The Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board reversed that decision on the ground that it was unsupported by the findings and that the findings were unsupported by substantial evidence. The principal of a nearby elementary school and other concerned citizens petitioned for a writ of review. The court of appeal reversed the board's order, and thoroughly discussed the evidence and expert testimony. It concluded that in reviewing a decision by the department, the board is limited to determining whether the decision was supported by the findings, and whether the findings were supported by substantial evidence in the light of the whole record. Neither the board nor a reviewing court may disregard or overturn a finding of fact of the department for the reason that a contrary finding would have been equally or more reasonable. If it is conceded that reasonable minds might differ as to whether granting a license would or would not be contrary to the public welfare, that concession merely shows that the determination of the question falls within the broad area of discretion which the department was empowered to exercise. Under the general principles of the substantial evidence rule, both the board and the reviewing court must view the evidence in the light most favorable to the department's decision (167 Cal. App. 3d 588, 595).

[b] Opinion Testimony

In Kirby v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Bd. (1968) 261 Cal. App. 2d 119, 67 Cal. Rptr. 628 , the court of appeal, in reinstating a decision of the Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control that had been reversed by the Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board, rejected the contention that some of the evidence was opinion testimony and purely speculative and conjectural. The testimony concerned potential problems with litter and consumption of alcoholic beverages around a fast food stand near the proposed premises. The Court held that the testimony was not objectionable, noting that the proposed business was not yet in operation and that the attempt to assess its future impact on the public welfare and morals had to be based on experience, sound reason, and evidence in the record (261 Cal. App. 2d 119, 129).

[c] Vicinity of Church, Hospital, School, Playground, or Youth Facility

CAUTION:

The following cases were decided before the 1992 amendment of Bus. & Prof. Code § 23789 authorizing the department to refuse to issue any retail license for premises located within the immediate vicinity of churches, hospitals, schools, public playgrounds, and nonprofit youth facilities.

In Kirby v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Bd. (1968) 261 Cal. App. 2d 119, 67 Cal. Rptr. 628 , the court of appeal reversed an order of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board that had reversed a decision of the Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control denying an off-sale beer and wine license to a convenience market. The court held that the department's decision had not been arbitrary when the evidence had shown that the market was 392 pedestrian feet from an elementary school in a partly residential area, that there was heavy student foot traffic past the store's location, and that alcoholic beverages were likely to be consumed in the vicinity of the store due to the presence of a nearby hamburger stand where students and other minors already congregated (261 Cal. App. 2d 119, 123-131).

Reimel v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Bd. (1967) 250 Cal. App. 2d 673, 58 Cal. Rptr. 788 , involved an application for an off-sale beer and wine license that was denied by the Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control. The Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board reversed, and the superior court denied the department's petition for a writ of mandate. The court of appeal reversed the superior court, and upheld the department's decision. The court held that the department had not denied the license arbitrarily when the evidence had shown that the proposed premises was a grocery store located 200 feet from an elementary school, that the school district protested the license, and that the store, which was patronized by 20 children per day, was to be converted into a delicatessen with a take-out food service, giving rise to the possibility that alcoholic beverages might be consumed in the vicinity of the school.

In Bowman v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Bd. (1959) 171 Cal. App. 2d 467, 340 P.2d 652 , the department denied an on-sale license for an inn. The board reversed, and, on a petition for a writ of mandate, the superior court refused to overturn the board's order. The court of appeal reversed, however, holding that the department had not abused its discretion in denying the license when the evidence had established that the inn was located in a small mountain community that was established as a religious community with many youth camps and other campgrounds operated by religious, cultural, and educational institutions in the vicinity, that there was no comparable religious community in Southern California, and that the absence of alcohol was a factor leading to the community's development (171 Cal. App. 2d 467, 469-472).

In Schaub's Inc. v. Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control (1957) 153 Cal. App. 2d 858, 315 P.2d 459 , the department and board both denied an application for transfer of an off-sale license to a supermarket that was located across the street from one church and near another. The superior court denied a petition for a writ of mandate, and the court of appeal affirmed, holding that the department had not acted arbitrarily. The court, noting that the churches were in the vicinity first, relied heavily on the department's discretion (153 Cal. App. 2d 858, 861-866).

[d] Law Enforcement Problem

In Department of Alcoholic Bev. Control v. Alcoholic Bev. etc. Bd. (1982) 133 Cal. App. 3d 814, 184 Cal. Rptr. 367 , the court of appeal reversed the finding of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board, which was that the Department of Alcohol Beverage Control had not established good cause in denying a permit for an off-sale beer and wine license. The court, in holding that it was the department that had the authority to determine whether the issuance of an off-sale license would be contrary to public welfare and morals, ruled that the department's finding that issuance of the license would create an undue concentration of licenses in a high crime area provided a proper basis for denying application and was supported by the evidence. The role of the appeals board and the courts in reviewing the decision of the department, the court stated, was limited to determining whether the department acted arbitrarily in making its decision (133 Cal. App. 3d 814, 817-819).

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 15 ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGE LICENSING
PART II. FORMS

1-15 California Points & Authorities § 15.22

§ 15.22 Supporting Petition for Writ of Review [Bus. & Prof. Code § 23090; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1067-1077] of Order of Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board Suspending or Revoking Alcoholic Beverage License for Sale of Alcoholic Beverage to Minor [Bus. & Prof. Code § 25658(a)]--Minor Gave Proof of Majority [Bus. & Prof. Code § 25660]

[1] FORM Supporting Petition for Writ of Review [Bus. & Prof. Code§ 23090; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1067-1077] of Order of Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board Suspending or Revoking Alcoholic Beverage License for Sale of Alcoholic Beverage to Minor [Bus. & Prof. Code § 25658(a)]--Minor Gave Proof of Majority [Bus. & Prof. Code § 25660]

[Caption. See § 15.20[1].]

THE COURT SHOULD REVERSE THE ORDER OF THE ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGE CONTROL APPEALS BOARD AFFIRMING THE DECISION OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGE CONTROL THAT [SUSPENDED or REVOKED] PETITIONER'S ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGE LICENSE BECAUSE THE DEPARTMENT'S DETERMINATION THAT PETITIONER DID NOT RELY, IN GOOD FAITH, ON BONA FIDE EVIDENCE OF MAJORITY AND IDENTITY IN SERVING THE MINOR IS NOT SUPPORTED BY SUBSTANTIAL EVIDENCE.

A. Review of Alcoholic Beverage Appeals Board Decision. [See § 15.20[1], Paragraph A.]

B. Constitutional Authority of Department to Suspend or Revoke License. The Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control has the power, in its discretion, to suspend or revoke any specific alcoholic beverages license if it determines, for good cause, that the continuance of the license would be contrary to public welfare or morals, or that a person holding a license has violated any law prohibiting conduct involving moral turpitude (Cal. Const., art. XX, § 22).

C. Good Cause as Limitation on Power to Suspend or Revoke License. The constitutional provision permitting the Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control to suspend or revoke a license for "good cause" necessarily implies that the department's decisions must be based on sufficient evidence and that the department must not act arbitrarily in determining what is contrary to public welfare or morals (Boreta Enterprises, Inc. v. Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 85, 95, 84 Cal. Rptr. 113, 465 P.2d 1 ; H.D. Wallace & Associates, Inc. v. Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control (1969) 271 Cal. App. 2d 589, 591-592, 76 Cal. Rptr. 749).

D. Reliance on Evidence of Majority as Defense to Suspension or Revocation of License. Proof that the licensee, or the licensee's employee or agent, demanded, was shown, and acted in reliance on bona fide evidence of majority and identity in any sale of alcoholic beverages to a minor is a defense to any proceeding to suspend or revoke any license based on that sale. Bona fide evidence of majority and identity of the person is a document issued by a federal, state, county, or municipal government, or subdivision or agency thereof, including, but not limited to, a motor vehicle operator's license, an identification card issued to a member of the Armed Forces that contains the name, date of birth, description, and picture of the person, or a valid passport issued by the United States or by a foreign government (Bus. & Prof. Code § 25660(a)). Bus. & Prof. Code § 25660 applies to fake identification cards that purport to be government issued, but are not (Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Bd. (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 1429, 1439-1445, 13 Cal. Rptr. 3d 826).

E. Right to Assume Validity and Rightful Possession of Document. If a bartender or clerk acted in good faith and without actual knowledge, gained from the appearance of the purchaser or otherwise, that the document evidencing majority did not or could not belong to the minor, [and if the alteration of the document was not discernible with reasonable diligence], the bartender or clerk has a right to assume that the person presenting the document would not unlawfully possess or use it (Conti v. State Bd. of Equalization (1952) 113 Cal. App. 2d 465, 466-467, 248 P.2d 31 ; Young v. State Bd. of Equalization (1949) 90 Cal. App. 2d 256, 258, 202 P.2d 587).

F. Mere Suspicion of Invalidity as Not Precluding Reliance on Document. The bartender or clerk is justified in assuming the validity of the document and in accepting the holder as the legal owner unless the personal appearance of the holder of the document demonstrates above mere suspicion that he or she is not the legal owner of the document (Conti v. State Bd. of Equalization (1952) 113 Cal. App. 2d 465, 466-467, 248 P.2d 31).

[Optional] G. Single Identification Check at Door. When a minor patron has exhibited to one of the licensee's employees on entry, and at all times thereafter has on his person, what is found to be bona fide evidence of majority and identity, the licensee may assert reliance on the original demand and exhibition in selling, furnishing, or permitting the consumption of an alcoholic beverage by that minor following that entry. The defense is not lost because a second employee made an inadequate inquiry before serving the minor (Lacabanne Properties, Inc. v. Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control (1968) 261 Cal. App. 2d 181, 193, 67 Cal. Rptr. 734).

[Optional] H. Licensee Permitting Minor to Remain on Premises. Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 25665 does not provide that a licensee automatically commits a violation when a minor is on the premises. The violation occurs only when the licensee "permits" a minor not only to "enter" the licensed premises, but also to "remain" on the licensed premises without lawful business therein [Bus. & Prof. Code § 25665].
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Petitioner _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in support of a petition for a writ of review of a final order of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board which affirmed suspension of an alcoholic beverage license, based on sales to minors in violation of Bus. & Prof. Code § 25658, when the licensee asserts, as a defense, that he or she relied on bona fide documentary evidence of majority and identity exhibited by the minor prior to making the sale [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 25660(c)].

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Uses

Because the defense of reliance on bona fide evidence of majority and identity [Bus. & Prof. Code § 25660(c)] applies to offenses under Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 25658, 25663, and 25665, this form may also be used with appropriate modifications in support of a petition for a writ of review of an order suspending a license for employing a minor in on-sale premises [Bus. & Prof. Code § 25663] or for permitting a minor to enter and remain in licensed premises without lawful business [Bus. & Prof. Code § 25665], as well as for selling alcoholic beverages to a minor, or allowing a minor to consume alcoholic beverages in on-sale premises [Bus. & Prof. Code § 25658].

[c] Reliance on Document Issued by Government

To establish the defense provided for in Bus. & Prof. Code § 25660, the licensee must show that he or she acted in good faith in reliance on documentary proof of age. There is no independent good-faith defense absent reliance on a document issued by a federal, state, county, or municipal government, or a subdivision thereof. The defense may be established even though the document is altered, forged, or otherwise spurious, but no defense is established if the licensee acted in reliance on a notarized identification card prepared by the minor, even though the licensee acts in good faith [Kirby v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Bd. (1968) 267 Cal. App. 2d 895, 897-899, 73 Cal. Rptr. 352 ; but see Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Bd. (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 1429, 1439-1445, 13 Cal. Rptr. 3d 826 (Bus. & Prof. Code § 25660 applies to fake identification cards that purport to be government issued, but are not); Keane v. Reilly (1955) 130 Cal. App. 2d 407, 412, 279 P.2d 152 (reliance on official-appearing document prepared by minor held sufficient)].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Good Cause as Limitation on Power to Suspend or Revoke License

Boreta Enterprises, Inc. v. Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 85, 84 Cal. Rptr. 113, 465 P.2d 1 , involved revocation of an on-sale license on the ground that the licensee's employment of topless waitresses was contrary to public welfare and morals, which is grounds for revocation under Cal. Const., art. XX, § 22 and under Bus. & Prof. Code § 24200(a). An additional ground relied on by the Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control was that the employment of topless waitresses constituted keeping a disorderly house in violation of Bus. & Prof. Code § 25601, making revocation proper under Bus. & Prof. Code § 24200(b) (providing for revocation if licensee violates Bus. & Prof. Code § 23000 et seq.). The department acted on two separate accusations against the licensee relating to separate occasions. In both cases, the department revoked the license, subject to a one-year probation, and the Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board affirmed. In each case, the licensee filed a petition for a writ of mandate in the superior court. Although the cases were not consolidated, they were treated together. The superior court held that there was insufficient evidence to support revocation of the license under Bus. & Prof. Code § 24200 and issued a writ of mandate compelling the department to set aside its decision. The department appealed the judgment granting the writ to the Supreme Court.

In affirming, the Supreme Court, held that the department's discretion is not absolute, but must be exercised in accordance with law, and that the provision of Cal. Const., art. XX, § 22, which allows the department to revoke a license "for good cause," necessarily implies that the department's decisions should be based on sufficient evidence and that the department should not act arbitrarily in determining what is contrary to public welfare or morals [quoting Stoumen v. Reilly (1951) 37 Cal. 2d 713, 717, 234 P.2d 969] (2 Cal. 3d 85, 95). On the merits of the cases, the Court held that use of topless waitresses could not be deemed per se contrary to the public welfare and morals and concluded that there was insufficient evidence that their employment had led to improper activity on the licensed premises that would be contrary to public welfare and morals (2 Cal. 3d 85, 99-106).

Counsel should note that in Boreta Enterprises, Inc., the Court invited the department to adopt regulations relating to topless waitresses (2 Cal. 3d 85, 106). The department since adopted regulations relating to topless waitresses and nude entertainment. The courts have upheld such regulations, so that licensees are subject to suspension or revocation of their licenses for employing a topless waitress in violation of the department's regulations [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 24200(b) (violation of regulation as ground for suspension or revocation of license); Kirby v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Bd. (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 360, 361-366, 120 Cal. Rptr. 847 ; Locker v. Kirby (1973) 31 Cal. App. 3d 520, 521-527, 107 Cal. Rptr. 446].

In H.D. Wallace & Associates, Inc. v. Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control (1969) 271 Cal. App. 2d 589, 76 Cal. Rptr. 749 , the Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control revoked petitioner's corporate liquor license, but stayed the revocation for six months on condition that the sole shareholder of the corporation divest himself of ownership of the business and not be employed in any managerial capacity. The revocation was based on the ground that the shareholder's overall arrest record, involving public drunkenness, drunk driving, and driving with suspended licenses, showed that he was not a fit person to hold an alcoholic beverage license. After the Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board affirmed the department's decision, the licensee petitioned the court of appeal for a writ of review.

The court of appeal reversed. On pages 591-592, after noting that the department has authority to suspend or revoke a license in its discretion if it determines for good cause that continuation of the license would be contrary to public welfare or morals, the court held that the good-cause requirement necessarily implies that the department must base its decision on sufficient evidence and avoid arbitrariness [relying on Stoumen v. Reilly (1951) 37 Cal. 2d 713, 717, 234 P.2d 969] (271 Cal. App. 2d 589, 591-592). The court found that there was no evidence that the convictions had any actual effect on the conduct of the licensed business and that there was no rational relationship between the offenses and operation of the licensed business in a manner consistent with public welfare and morals. Thus, the court held that since there was no substantial evidence that continuation of the license would be contrary to the public welfare or morals, good cause for revocation was lacking (271 Cal. App. 2d 589, 593-594).

[b] Reliance on Evidence of Majority as Defense to Suspension or Revocation of License

In Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Bd. (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 1429, 13 Cal. Rptr. 3d 826 , the department suspended a liquor license after the licensee's clerk sold two six-packs of beer to a minor. The minor used a fake identification card, purporting to be issued by the State of California, identifying the minor as 22 years old, rather than 19. The department rejected the licensee's defense under Bus. & Prof. Code § 25660, which requires the licensee to reasonably rely on identification issued by a government agency. The department implicitly found the statute applied to fake identification cards that purport to be government issued, but found the licensee did not reasonably rely on the fake ID.

The Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board reversed the department's determination, holding that the defense under Bus. & Prof. Code § 25660 did not apply to identification cards that were not in fact issued by a government agency. It also held that the licensee did reasonably rely on the minor's ID card.

The court of appeals reversed the Appeals Board's decision. The court held that Bus. & Prof. Code § 25660 applies to fake identification cards that purport to be issued by a government agency, but that the licensee failed to exercise reasonable diligence and did not reasonably rely on the fake ID (118 Cal. App. 4th 1429, 1439-1445). The court also held that the Appeals Board may not reweigh the evidence or exercise independent judgment to overturn the department's factual findings to reach a contrary, although equally reasonable, result (118 Cal. App. 4th 1429, 1437). Specifically, the court held the Appeals Board was wrong to reject the department's finding that the licensee had not reasonably relied on the minor's fake ID.

[c] Right to Assume Validity and Rightful Possession of Document

In Conti v. State Bd. of Equalization (1952) 113 Cal. App. 2d 465, 248 P.2d 31 , the Board of Equalization suspended a liquor license based on evidence showing that the licensees sold a bottle of beer to a 19-year-old Coast Guard member who presented an out-of-state driver's license for identification. The driver's license identified the person as being over the age of 21 years. The liquor licensees defended under former Section 61.2(b) of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Act (see now Bus. & Prof. Code § 25660), which provided a defense to the charge of sale of alcoholic beverages to minors if the licensor his agent or employee demanded and was shown bona fide documentary evidence of majority and identity prior to making the sale. The Board of Equalization found that the licensee failed to establish the defense. The licensees brought a proceeding in mandamus to review the board's order. The superior court annulled the board's order on the ground that it was not supported by any substantial evidence, and the board appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that licensees are not required to determine at their peril whether a driver's license is a bona fide license of the party presenting it (113 Cal. App. 2d 465, 466). The court quoted Young v. State Bd. of Equalization (1949) 90 Cal. App. 2d 256, 258, 202 P.2d 587 , in support of the proposition that a defense is established on the demand for and presentation of one of the types of documentary evidence described in former § 61.2(b) and that the seller, if acting in good faith and without actual knowledge gained from the appearance of the purchaser, or otherwise, that the identification could not belong to the minor, has a right to assume that anyone presenting such identification would not unlawfully possess or use it (113 Cal. App. 2d 465, 467). The court found no conflict in the evidence, but only a shade of difference in the suspicions that the witnesses might have had because of the minor's personal appearance (113 Cal. App. 2d 465, 466). The court then held that unless the personal appearance of the holder of the driver's license demonstrates above mere suspicion that he or she is not the legal owner of the license, a bartender is justified in assuming that the driver's license is valid and that the holder is its legal owner (113 Cal. App. 2d 465, 466-467). The court noted that the board's hearing officer had made no findings of fact relating to presentation and inspection of the driver's license, but had only concluded that no defense was established under § 61.2(b), and that the trial court had found that there was no substantial evidence to support the hearing officer's determination (113 Cal. App. 2d 465, 467).

In Young v. State Bd. of Equalization (1949) 90 Cal. App. 2d 256, 202 P.2d 587 , the Board of Equalization suspended liquor licenses based on a sale of whiskey to a 17-year-old boy. At the sales clerk's request for identification, the boy presented a draft registration card issued in another person's name. The boy had altered the card so that it would show its holder to be over the age of 21. The clerk looked at both sides of the card and asked the boy to sign a piece of paper, and, finding a fair resemblance between the signature on the card and the boy's signature, he made the sale. The board found that the liquor licensees had not established the defense of demanding and being shown documentary evidence of majority and identity. The liquor licensees petitioned for a writ of mandate to set aside the board's order suspending their license. A writ was issued by the superior court, and the board appealed.

On appeal, the board contended that the draft card did not constitute bona fide documentary evidence of majority and identity because it had been issued to a person other than the minor and because the age shown on the card had been altered. The court, however, held that the defense was established when the clerk demanded identification and was shown the draft card, which at that time constituted bona fide documentary evidence of majority and identity under former § 61.2(b) of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Act [but see now Bus. & Prof. Code § 25660 (no longer listing registration certificate as bona fide evidence and requiring document shown to licensee to have person's name, date of birth, description, and picture on it)]. The court held that if the clerk acted in good faith and without actual knowledge, gained from the appearance of the purchaser or otherwise, that the card did not or could not belong to the minor, and if the alteration was not discernible or ascertainable with reasonable diligence, he had a right to assume that anyone presenting such a card would not unlawfully possess or use it (90 Cal. App. 2d 256, 258). Noting that the clerk had made a comparison of signatures, that he did not know the boy personally, and that there was no contention that the boy's appearance was such as to arouse suspicion that he was under age, the court affirmed, holding that it would not disturb the trial court's finding that the board's decision was not supported by substantial evidence (90 Cal. App. 2d 256, 258).

[d] Mere Suspicion of Invalidity as Not Precluding Reliance on Document

Conti v. State Bd. of Equalization (1952) 113 Cal. App. 2d 465, 248 P.2d 31 , is discussed in § 15.22[3][c].

[e] Single Identification Check at Door

In Lacabanne Properties, Inc. v. Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control (1968) 261 Cal. App. 2d 181, 67 Cal. Rptr. 734 , the Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control suspended an alcoholic beverage license based on sales of alcoholic beverages to two minors and on permitting the minors to consume the beverages on the licensed premises. Charges that the licensee allowed the minors to enter the licensed premises were dismissed because the defense of reliance on bona fide evidence of majority and identity under Bus. & Prof. Code § 25660 was established as to those offenses. The licensee's door checker had demanded documentary evidence of the majority and identity of the minors when they entered the premises. The minors exhibited bona fide documentary evidence of their majority and identity in the form of California driver's licenses naming persons over 21 years of age, and the door checker relied on the licenses in admitting them to the premises. The bartender then served the minors alcoholic beverages and permitted the minors to consume the beverages on the premises, without inspecting their identification. Before serving one of the minors, the bartender did receive oral confirmation from the door checker that his identification had been checked, but the bartender neither inspected the other minor's identification nor sought oral confirmation from the door checker that his identification had been checked. The licensee appealed to the Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board, and the board reversed the charges relating to the first minor, but affirmed as to the second minor. The superior court denied the licensee's petition for a writ of mandate to set aside the department's order and the board's decision to the extent that it affirmed the department's order. The licensee appealed from the superior court's judgment.

The court of appeal reversed, rejecting the argument of the department and board that because a licensee's acts in (1) allowing entry to the licensed premises, (2) selling alcoholic beverages, and (3) permitting their consumption on the licensed premises are separate transactions, the employee or agent engaging in each particular transaction must satisfy himself or herself that bona fide evidence of age and identity has been shown and act in reliance thereon. The court noted that the interest of the licensee, not of the bartender, was at stake, and that since a licensee is barred by the acts and omissions of his or her employees, he or she should have the benefit of their collective conduct, knowledge, and reliance (261 Cal. App. 2d 181, 190). The court held that the defense of the door check, which had been held effective against the otherwise admitted offense of allowing the minors to enter, should not be lost to a transaction of which the entry is but a part. Even though permitting entry and permitting consumption might be separate offenses, they are not necessarily separate transactions when the sale and consumption immediately follow the entry. Absent a duty to make a second demand before serving the minor, the second employee's inadequate inquiry should not defeat the licensee's right to rely on the original determination that the patron had shown the evidence required by law. The court found this to be particularly true in the case before it since the patron possessed, had shown, and could have shown again a driver's license which, although altered, was found to show that he was over the age of 21. The court found that nothing in prior case law required the exhibition of evidence for each purchase made on the same occasion, and the court rejected the contentions of the department and board that a double check was necessary to protect against serving minors who may properly be admitted to the premises on lawful business, to discourage exchange of evidence of identity inside the premises, and to increase the chances of catching altered documents and cases of false identity (261 Cal. App. 2d 181, 191-193). The court concluded that if the minor patron has exhibited to one employee on entry, and at all times thereafter has on his or her person, a document which is found to be bona fide evidence of majority and identity, the licensee may assert reliance on the original demand and exhibition in selling, furnishing, or permitting the consumption of an alcoholic beverage by that minor following that entry. Moreover, that defense is not lost because a second employee pursued an inadequate inquiry before serving the minor (261 Cal. App. 2d 181, 193).

[f] Licensee Permitting Minor to Remain on Premises

In CMPB Friends, Inc. v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board (2002) 100 Cal. App. 4th 1250, 122 Cal. Rptr. 2d 914 , the Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board affirmed a decision of the Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control to suspend petitioner's on-sale liquor license for ten days. The suspension was based on the ground that a minor entered the licensee's premises and her identification was not checked for about ten minutes. The court of appeal reversed and held that the passage of ten minutes before a licensee attempts to check a minor's identification is not, by itself, enough to warrant the conclusion that a Bus. & Prof. Code § 25665 violation occurred (100 Cal. App. 4th 1250, 1255-1257). There is no set period of time in which a violation occurs. When one waitress was serving 40 to 60 patrons and took ten minutes to observe and approach the minor who entered the bar, those ten minutes do not necessarily constitute an unreasonable amount of time within which to demand proof of age. On the other hand, a licensee may be found to have behaved so passively with regard to its affirmative duty to exclude minors from its premises that a violation is established (100 Cal. App. 4th 1250, 1256).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Right to Assume Validity and Rightful Possession of Document

In Dethlefsen v. State Bd. of Equalization (1956) 145 Cal. App. 2d 561, 303 P.2d 7 , the State Board of Equalization suspended a liquor license after the licensees' employee sold an alcoholic beverage to a minor. The employee did not demand evidence of age and identify because she remembered the minor from a recent occasion when she had demanded identification, and he had exhibited a draft registration card. The card had been issued to him, but he had altered the date of birth to show that he was over 21 years old. Both the employee and minor testified that the employee had looked at the description on the card and thoroughly compared the minor's physical appearance with the description. The licensees obtained a writ of mandate from the superior court setting aside the findings and order of the board as not supported by substantial evidence. The board appealed from the judgment.

The court of appeal affirmed, citing Young v. State Bd. of Equalization (1949) 90 Cal. App. 2d 256, 258, 202 P.2d 587 (discussed in § 15.22[3][c]), for the proposition that if a clerk acts in good faith and without actual knowledge, gained from the appearance of the purchaser, or otherwise, that the identification card did not or could not belong to the minor, and if the alteration of the card was not discernible or ascertainable with reasonable diligence, he or she has a right to assume that anyone presenting such a card would not unlawfully possess or use it (145 Cal. App. 2d 561, 565). The court also quoted Conti v. State Bd. of Equalization (1952) 113 Cal. App. 2d 465, 466, 248 P.2d 31 (discussed in § 15.22[3][c]), for the proposition that unless the personal appearance of the holder of the driver's license demonstrates above mere suspicion that he or she is not the legal owner of the license, the bartender is justified in assuming the validity of the driver's license and in accepting the holder as the legal owner (145 Cal. App. 2d 561, 566). The court found that in the case before it, there was no finding of bad faith or that the employee in fact discovered the alteration of the card, nor had the board made any express finding that the employee lacked diligence. The board had merely found that the alteration should have been apparent from a reasonably careful inspection of the card, so that the employee was not justified in assuming that the minor was of age on the basis of the card (145 Cal. App. 2d 561, 566). The card was before the court, and the court noted that it was difficult to detect the alteration without a close and critical examination (145 Cal. App. 2d 561, 564-565). Also, noting that the minor was almost 20 years old and fit the description on the card, the court held that the board's finding was not supported by substantial evidence (145 Cal. App. 2d 561, 566-567). The court rejected the board's criticism that the court was improperly weighing the evidence, holding that the purpose of Bus. & Prof. Code § 25660 was to protect licensees when they are confronted with a patron whose appearance made it doubtful whether or not he or she was an adult. When that doubt arises, the licensee can rely on documentary evidence, the bona fides of which must be ascertained if the lack of bona fides would be disclosed by reasonable inspection under the circumstances. The court held, however, that in making the inspection, the clerk has the right to presume that the holder has not committed the crime of altering the document (145 Cal. App. 2d 561, 567-568).

153 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 15 ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGE LICENSING
PART II. FORMS

1-15 California Points & Authorities § 15.23

§ 15.23 Supporting Petition for Writ of Review [Bus. & Prof. Code § 23090; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1067-1077] of Order of Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board Suspending or Revoking Alcoholic Beverage License for Sale of Alcoholic Beverage to Minor [Bus. & Prof. Code § 25658(a)]--No Face-to-Face Identification of Seller by Minor Decoy [4 Cal. Code Reg. § 141(b)(5)]

[1] FORM Supporting Petition for Writ of Review [Bus. & Prof. Code § 23090; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1067-1077] of Order of Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board Suspending or Revoking Alcoholic Beverage License for Sale of Alcoholic Beverage to Minor [Bus. & Prof. Code § 25658(a)]--No Face-to-Face Identification of Seller by Minor Decoy [4 Cal. Code Reg. § 141(b)(5)]

[Caption. See § 15.20[1].]

THE COURT SHOULD REVERSE THE ORDER OF THE ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGE CONTROL APPEALS BOARD AFFIRMING THE DECISION OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGE CONTROL THAT [SUSPENDED or REVOKED] PETITIONER'S ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGE LICENSE, BECAUSE THE MINOR DECOY FAILED TO MAKE A FACE-TO-FACE IDENTIFICATION OF THE ALLEGED SELLER, AND THE FAILURE IS A COMPLETE DEFENSE TO THE DEPARTMENT'S CHARGE.

A. Review of Alcoholic Beverage Appeals Board Decision. [See § 15.20[1], Paragraph A.]

B. Constitutional Authority of Department to Suspend or Revoke License. [See § 15.22[1], Paragraph B.]

C. Good Cause as Limitation on Power to Suspend or Revoke License. [See § 15.22[1], Paragraph C.]

D. Minor Decoy Must Make Face-to-Face Identification of Alleged Seller. Following any completed sale, but not later than the time a citation, if any, is issued, the peace officer directing the decoy must make a reasonable attempt to enter the licensed premises and have the minor decoy who purchased alcoholic beverages make a face-to-face identification of the alleged seller of the alcoholic beverages (4 Cal. Code Reg. § 141(b)(5)).

E. Failure to Make Face-to-Face Identification Is Defense. Failure to comply with 4 Cal. Code Reg. § 141(b)(5) is a defense to any action brought pursuant to Business and Professions Code Section 25658 (4 Cal. Code Reg. § 141(c); Acapulco Restaurants, Inc. v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Bd. (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 575, 581, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 126).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Petitioner _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in support of a petition for a writ of review of a final order of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board that affirmed suspension of an alcoholic beverage license, based on sales to minors in violation of Bus. & Prof. Code § 25658. This form may be used when the licensee asserts, as a defense, that the minor decoy failed to make a face-to-face identification of the alleged seller [4 Cal. Code Reg. § 141(b)(5)].

When appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

For example, in a case in which no face-to-face identification was made, and there is no dispute regarding that fact, the petitioner may argue:

- The peace officer directing the decoy is required to make a reasonable attempt to enter the licensed premises and have the minor decoy make a face-to-face identification, as required by 4 Cal. Code Reg. § 141(b)(5).

- It is undisputed that no such attempt was made.

- The failure to comply with the requirements of rule 141 is a defense to any action brought under Bus. & Prof. Code § 25658.

- Therefore, the suspension of the petitioner's license should not stand.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Failure to Make Face-to-Face Identification Is Defense

In Acapulco Restaurants, Inc. v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Bd. (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 575, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 126 , a 19-year-old decoy working with a city police department entered a restaurant, sat down at the bar, and ordered a beer. Without first requesting identification, the bartender served the decoy. The decoy paid for the beer and a police officer seated at a nearby table observed the transaction. The Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control cited the restaurant's owner for selling an alcoholic beverage to a minor in violation of Bus. & Prof. Code § 25658(a). The restaurant's owner denied the accusation and a hearing was held. The police officer testified that on completion of the transaction, he informed the bartender that she sold beer to a minor and identified the decoy as the minor. It was undisputed that the police officer did not have the decoy make the required face-to-face identification of the bartender. An administrative law judge sustained the charge and ordered a 15-day suspension of Acapulco's liquor license. The restaurant owner appealed to the Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board, contending the decoy's failure to make a face-to-face identification of the bartender was a complete defense to the Department's charge. The Board refused to give rule 141 a "rigid and literal interpretation" because the police officer had been sitting only a few feet away at the time of the sale. The Board affirmed the 15-day suspension, and the restaurant owner petitioned for writ of review in the court of appeal.

The court of appeal issued a writ of review, reversed the Board's decision affirming the Department's order, and directed the Department to enter a new order withdrawing the accusation. The Board argued that its refusal to apply rule 141 was no more than an exercise of its right to interpret a rule governing its enforcement obligations. The court held, however, that 4 Cal. Code Reg. § 141(b)(5) "means what it says." According to the court, the Department's increasing reliance on decoys demands strict adherence to the rules adopted for the protection of the licensees, the public, and the decoys themselves. The court stated that if the rules are inadequate, the Department has the right and the ability to seek changes. It does not have the right to ignore a duly adopted rule (67 Cal. App. 4th 575, 581). It was undisputed that no attempt was made to reenter or remain on the restaurant's premises so that the decoy, who purchased the beer, could make a face-to-face identification of the bartender. It was also undisputed that 4 Cal. Code Reg. § 141(c) provides a defense when there is a failure to comply with the requirements of rule 141. It follows, therefore, that the restaurant owner's suspension could not stand (67 Cal. App. 4th 575, 581, 582).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 15 ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGE LICENSING
PART II. FORMS

1-15 California Points & Authorities § 15.24

§ 15.24 Supporting Petition for Writ of Review [Bus. & Prof. Code § 23090; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1067-1077] of Order of Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board Suspending or Revoking Alcoholic Beverage License for Violation of Law Not Involving Moral Turpitude [Cal. Const., art. XX, § 22; Bus. & Prof. Code § 24200(a)]--Violation as Lacking Rational Relationship to or Actual Effect on Operation of Licensed Business in Manner Consistent With Public Welfare and Morals

[1] FORM Supporting Petition for Writ of Review [Bus. & Prof. Code § 23090; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1067-1077] of Order of Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board Suspending or Revoking Alcoholic Beverage License for Violation of Law Not Involving Moral Turpitude [Cal. Const., art. XX, § 22; Bus. & Prof. Code § 24200(a)]--Violation as Lacking Rational Relationship to or Actual Effect on Operation of Licensed Business in Manner Consistent With Public Welfare and Morals

[Caption. See § 15.20[1].]

THE COURT SHOULD REVERSE THE ORDER OF THE ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGE CONTROL APPEALS BOARD AFFIRMING THE DECISION OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGE CONTROL THAT _____ [SUSPENDED or REVOKED] PETITIONER'S ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGE LICENSE BECAUSE THE _____ [SUSPENSION or REVOCATION] WAS BASED ON PETITIONER'S VIOLATIONS OF LAW NOT INVOLVING MORAL TURPITUDE AND NOT HAVING ANY RATIONAL RELATIONSHIP TO OR ACTUAL EFFECT ON THE OPERATION OF THE LICENSED BUSINESS IN A MANNER CONSISTENT WITH THE PUBLIC WELFARE AND MORALS.

A. Review of Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board Decision. [See § 15.20[1], Paragraph A.]

B. Constitutional Authority of Department to Suspend or Revoke License. [See § 15.22[1], Paragraph B.]

C. Good Cause as Limitation on Power to Suspend or Revoke License. [See § 15.22[1], Paragraph C.]

D. Relationship of Violations to Conduct of Business. In order to establish good cause for suspension or revocation of an alcoholic beverage license due to violations of law that do not involve moral turpitude, there must be a rational relationship between the offense and the operation of the licensed business in a manner consistent with public welfare and morals or there must be evidence that the offense had an actual effect on the conduct of the licensed business (H.D. Wallace & Associates, Inc. v. Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control (1969) 271 Cal. App. 2d 589, 593-594, 76 Cal. Rptr. 749).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Petitioner _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in support of a petition for a writ of review of a final order of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board which affirmed suspension or revocation of an alcoholic beverage license based on the licensee's violations of law, when those violations did not involve moral turpitude and did not have any actual effect on or rational relationship to the operation of the licensed premises.

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Relationship of Violations to Conduct of Business

The facts and procedural background of H. D. Wallace & Associates, Inc. v. Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control (1969) 271 Cal. App. 2d 589, 76 Cal. Rptr. 749 , are discussed in § 15.22[3][a]. In that case, the court of appeal noted that the department had found that the licensee's sole shareholder was not a fit and proper person to hold an alcoholic beverage license because of his arrest record involving his intemperate use of alcoholic beverages, even though the record contained impressive evidence as to the reputation regarding conduct of the business. The department had found that none of the offenses involved moral turpitude, and had based revocation of the license on the ground that its continuation would be contrary to the public welfare and morals within the meaning of Cal. Const, Art XX, § 22 and Bus. & Prof. Code § 24200(a) (271 Cal. App. 2d 589, 591). The court recognized that, in regard to personal fitness, Cal. Const., art. XX, § 22 and Bus. & Prof. Code § 24200(d) provide for suspension or revocation based on offenses involving moral turpitude in absolute terms without regard for the effects of the conduct on the licensed business (271 Cal. App. 2d 589, 592-593).To give both the moral turpitude and the public welfare and morals provisions their maximum scope without clashing with one another, the court held that, properly construed, the public welfare and morals clause permits revocation for violations of law not involving moral turpitude, but having a rational relationship to the operation of the licensed business in a manner consistent with public welfare and morals. Noting that the department had apparently believed that the past conduct of the licensee's sole shareholder might cause a future problem, the court found that the department had, in effect, revoked the license on conjecture and speculation (271 Cal. App. 2d 589, 593) The court held that there was no evidence that the convictions had an actual effect on the licensed business and that there was no rational relationship between the offenses and operation of the business in a manner consistent with public welfare and morals (271 Cal. App. 2d 589, 593-594). The court held that since there was no substantial evidence that continuation of the license would be contrary to the public welfare or morals, good cause for revocation did not exist (271 Cal. App. 2d 589, 594).

H. D. Wallace & Associates, Inc., was distinguished in Kirby v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Bd. (1970) 7

Cal. App. 3d 126, 86 Cal. Rptr. 433 . In Kirby, the licensee's sole shareholder, while intoxicated at a bar other than his own licensed premises, flagrantly flouted the regulatory authority by physically assaulting persons he recognized to be department representatives acting within the scope of their duty. The court of appeal held that it is an oversimplification to say that the rational relationship rule precludes exercise of the disciplinary authority unless the act occurs on, or in direct connection with the operation of, the licensed premises. The court found that a rational relationship existed between the licensee's violation of law and the operation of the licensee's business in a manner consistent with public welfare and morals because the shareholder's acts showed a reasonably close potential for disregard of regulatory authority in the operation of his own premises (7 Cal. App. 3d 126, 128-129).

Counsel should note that if suspension or revocation of a license is based on the licensee's violation of a law involving moral turpitude, there is no requirement that its effect on the conduct of the licensed business be shown [Rice v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Bd. (1979) 89 Cal. App. 3d 30, 38, 152 Cal. Rptr. 285].

155 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 15 ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGE LICENSING
PART II. FORMS

1-15 California Points & Authorities § 15.25

§ 15.25 Supporting Petition for Writ of Mandate [Bus. & Prof. Code § 23090.5; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085, 1086]--Review of Rule or Regulation of Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control--General Form

[1] FORM Supporting Petition for Writ of Mandate [Bus. & Prof. Code § 23090.5; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085, 1086]--Review of Rule or Regulation of Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control--General Form

IN THE SUPREME COURT OF THE
STATE OF CALIFORNIA

[OR]

IN THE COURT OF APPEAL OF THE
STATE OF CALIFORNIA,
_____ APPELLATE DISTRICT

_____ [name],	)
Petitioner,	)	NO. _____
vs.	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORIT-
DEPARTMENT OF ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGE	)	IES IN SUPPORT OF PETITION FOR WRIT OF
CONTROL,	)	MANDATE
Respondent.	)	[Bus. & Prof. Code § 23090.5; Code Civ. Proc. §§
	)	1085, 1086]

_____

THE COURT HAS JURISDICTION TO ISSUE A WRIT OF MANDATE AGAINST THE DEPARTMENT OF ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGE CONTROL TO REVIEW THE DEPARTMENT'S _____ [RULES AND REGULATIONS or ADMINISTRATIVE ACTIONS].

A. Review of Actions of Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control by Writ of Mandate. The _____ [Supreme Court or court of appeal] has jurisdiction to issue a writ of mandate against the Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control in any proper case (Bus. & Prof. Code § 23090.5; see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085, 1086).

B. Writ of Mandate to Compel Act When No Adequate Remedy at Law. A writ of mandate may be issued to compel the performance of an act which the law specially enjoins, as a duty resulting from an office, trust, or station, or to compel the admission of a party to the use and enjoyment of a right or office to which he is entitled, and from which he or she is unlawfully precluded (Code Civ. Proc. § 1085). The writ must be issued in all cases where there is not a plain, speedy, and adequate remedy, in the ordinary course of law (Code Civ. Proc. § 1086).

[EITHER]

C. Review of Rules and Regulations. The appellate courts have jurisdiction of proceedings challenging rules and regulations of the Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control by writ of mandate pursuant to Section 23090.5 of the Business and Professions Code, which partially limits and supersedes Section 11350 of the Government Code which generally permits review of regulations adopted under the Administrative Procedure Act by actions for declaratory relief in superior court (see Schenley Affiliated Brands Corp. v. Kirby (1971) 21 Cal. App. 3d 177, 196, 98 Cal. Rptr. 609).

[OR]

C. Performance of Administrative Duties. Section 23090.5 of the Business and Professions Code provides for judicial review by writ of mandate of orders, rules, decisions, or other acts of the department in the performance of its duties when it is acting in its administrative capacity, rather than in its limited judicial capacity (Samson Market Co. v. Kirby (1968) 261 Cal. App. 2d 577, 581, 68 Cal. Rptr. 130 , appeal dismissed, 393 U.S. 11, 89 S. Ct. 49, 21 L. Ed. 2d 18).

[Optional] D. Regulation Beyond Scope of Department's Statutory Power. Substantive review of administrative regulations focuses on whether or not the regulation would alter or amend the statute or enlarge or restrict the agency's statutory powers (Schenley Affiliated Brands Corp. v. Kirby (1971) 21 Cal. App. 3d 177, 182, 98 Cal. Rptr. 609).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Petitioner _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in support of a petition for a writ of mandate either to challenge the validity of regulations promulgated by the Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control or to review actions of the department undertaken in an administrative, rather than quasi-judicial, capacity. A regulation may be reviewed to determine whether or not it is within the authority delegated to the department, whether or not it is reasonable, and whether or not the department followed proper procedure in issuing it [Ralphs Grocery Co. v. Reimel (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 172, 175 fn. 2, 70 Cal. Rptr. 407, 444 P.2d 79]. The petition must be filed in the Supreme Court or a court of appeal because Bus. & Prof. Code § 23090.5 deprived the superior courts of jurisdiction to review any orders, rules, or decisions of the department [Schenley Affiliated Brands Corp. v. Kirby (1971) 21 Cal. App. 3d 177, 195-196, 98 Cal. Rptr. 609].

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms relating to petitions for writs of mandate generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition .

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For additional forms of memoranda of points and authorities supporting a petition for writ of mandate and for forms of memoranda of points and authorities opposing a petition for a writ of mandate, see Ch. 150, Mandate and Prohibition in this set.

For a form of points and authorities supporting a demurrer to a petition for a writ of mandate that seeks review of a decision of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board, see Ch. 195, Public Administrative Law .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Review of Rules and Regulations

In Schenley Affiliated Brands Corp. v. Kirby (1971) 21 Cal. App. 3d 177, 98 Cal. Rptr. 609 , petitioners, a group of liquor distillers and wholesalers, brought suit in superior court to enjoin the Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control from enforcing one of its administrative regulations. The superior court refused to intervene on the ground that Bus. & Prof. Code § 23090.5 deprived it of jurisdiction, and petitioners then applied to the court of appeal for a writ of mandate either to restrain the director of the department from enforcing the regulation or to compel the superior court to hear a lawsuit directed to the same end. Petitioners contended that the department lacked statutory power to promulgate amendments to former 4 Cal. Code Reg. § 100(f) (repealed), which restricted the variety and rates of discounts in wholesale prices of distilled spirits, and that improper procedures were followed in adoption of the amendments. The court held that the amendments were improper to the extent that they prohibited multiple discount rates in the sale of a single brand or item of distilled spirits because the department lacked statutory authority to veto the prices set by producers (21 Cal. App. 3d 177, 185-187). The court upheld the amendments in other respects and also held that the department had not used improper procedures in enacting the regulations (21 Cal. App. 3d 177, 187-195). The court then rejected petitioners' contention that Bus. & Prof. Code § 23090.5 only deprived superior courts of jurisdiction to review the department's quasi-judicial actions in adversary proceedings, as opposed to its quasi-legislative actions, such as rulemaking (21 Cal. App. 3d 177, 195-198). The court recognized that Bus. & Prof. Code § 23090 governs review of the department's quasi-judicial actions, and held that Bus. & Prof. Code § 23090.5 is distinctly designed to channel into the appellate courts proceedings challenging the department's rules and regulations. Thus, the court held that Gov. Code § 11440 (now see Gov. Code § 11350), which provides for review of administrative regulations by declaratory relief actions in superior court, is limited and superseded by Bus. & Prof. Code § 23090.5 (21 Cal. App. 3d 177, 196). Petitioners also argued that if Bus. & Prof. Code § 23090.5 did apply to review of regulations, it unconstitutionally infringed on the original jurisdiction of the superior courts and deprived petitioners of a de novo hearing, but the court rejected this argument because there would be no more right to a de novo hearing in the superior court than in the appellate court (21 Cal. App. 3d 177, 195-198).

[b] Performance of Administrative Duties

In Samson Market Co. v. Kirby (1968) 261 Cal. App. 2d 577, 68 Cal. Rptr. 130 , appeal dismissed, 393 U.S. 11, 89 S. Ct. 49, 21 L. Ed. 2d 18 , petitioner, having failed to obtain renewal of the lease on the premises for which it held an off-sale alcoholic beverage license, surrendered its license to the Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control as required by 4 Cal. Code Reg. § 65(a). Rule 65(d) at that time provided that such a voluntarily surrendered license would be cancelled if not transferred to another person, transferred for use at another premises, or redelivered and the licensed activity resumed, within six months from the date of surrender, unless the period was extended by the department. Shortly before the six-month period elapsed, petitioner requested, pursuant to Rule 65(d), that the time for cancellation be extended to allow consummation of a proposed sale. The department denied the request. Three accusations were then pending against petitioner's license. Petitioner sought writs of mandate from the superior court and from the court of appeal to compel the director of the department to extend the time for cancellation. The superior court placed the proceeding off its calendar on the ground that it lacked jurisdiction, and the court of appeal issued its alternative writ to determine which court had jurisdiction to grant petitioner relief.

The court of appeal noted that the parties had agreed that the case did not involve a judicial decision of the department, so that a writ of review pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 23090 was not authorized and that any possible relief could only be by way of writ of mandate (261 Cal. App. 2d 577, 580). The court recognized that in enacting Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 23090-23090.4, the Legislature had established a new procedure for review of final orders of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board in cases involving the department's exercise of its limited judicial powers, and the court determined that the Legislature had not intended to provide an alternative procedure for judicial review of such orders or decisions when it enacted Bus. & Prof. Code § 23090.5. The court held that Bus. & Prof. Code § 23090.5 was intended to provide for judicial review of the orders, rules, decisions, or other acts of the department in the performance of its duties when acting in its administrative capacity rather than in its limited judicial capacity (261 Cal. App. 2d 577, 581). The court then held, relying on cases construing comparable language in Lab. Code §§ 5950-5956 and Section 67 of the former Public Utilities Act (now see PUC § 1759), that under Bus. & Prof. Code § 23090.5, the superior courts do not have jurisdiction to issue a writ of mandate to review such administrative actions by the department, while courts of appeal do have such jurisdiction (261 Cal. App. 2d 577, 581-584). The court held, however, that petitioner was not entitled to relief on the merits of its claim (261 Cal. App. 2d 577, 584-585).

[c] Regulation Beyond Scope of Department's Statutory Power

The facts and procedural background of Schenley Affiliated Brands Corp. v. Kirby (1971) 21 Cal. App. 3d 177, 98 Cal. Rptr. 609 , are discussed in § 15.25[3][a]. In that case, the court of appeal stated, on page 182, that substantive review of administrative regulations is guided by the well-established principles that the regulation is shielded by a presumption of regularity and that the focus of judicial inquiry is whether or not the regulation would alter or amend the statute or enlarge or restrict the agency's statutory powers [citing Ralphs Grocery Co. v. Reimel (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 172, 175, 70 Cal. Rptr. 407, 444 P.2d 79 , and Morris v. Williams (1967) 67 Cal. 2d 733, 748-749, 63 Cal. Rptr. 689, 433 P.2d 697] (21 Cal. App. 3d 177, 182). The court held that an administrative regulation prohibiting producers and wholesalers of distilled spirits from establishing multiple discount rates for the sale of a single brand of distilled spirits was invalid. The court reasoned that the department exceeded its power by vetoing prices when it only had statutory authority under Bus. & Prof. Code § 24756 to require price posting, and that the regulation would increase the scope of the legislation beyond that fixed by the Legislature (21 Cal. App. 3d 177, 184-186). The court upheld a second regulation, however, holding that the regulation, prohibiting discounts conditioned on the purchase of seller-designated assortments of brands, was a reasonable implementation of Bus. & Prof. Code § 25503, prohibiting indirect discrimination in the price of any brand of distilled spirits sold to different retail licensees under like terms and conditions (21 Cal. App. 3d 177, 187-190). The court also rejected an attack on the procedures followed in adopting the amendments to the regulations which were the subject of the challenge (21 Cal. App. 3d 177, 190-195).

NOTE:

Bus. & Prof. Code § 24756 was declared invalid in that it violated the Sherman Antitrust Act (15 U.S.C. §§ 1-31) in Lewis-Westco & Co. v. Alcoholic Bev. etc. Appeals Bd. (1982) 136 Cal. App. 3d 829, 840, 186 Cal. Rptr. 552 .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Review of Rules and Regulations

In Locker v. Kirby (1973) 31 Cal. App. 3d 520, 107 Cal. Rptr. 446 , the court entertained a proceeding on a writ of mandate in which the petitioners unsuccessfully challenged the constitutionality of a regulation of the Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control relating to topless waitresses. The court did not, however, discuss the propriety of the procedure used.

[b] Performance of Administrative Duties

In American Drug Stores, Inc. v. Stroh (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 1446, 13 Cal. Rptr. 2d 432 , a liquor licensee, threatened with disciplinary action by the Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control (the ABC), sought declaratory and injunctive relief in superior court to prevent the ABC from imposing penalties against the licensee. The trial court sustained the ABC's demurrer on the ground that the superior court lacked jurisdiction. The court relied on Bus. & Prof. Code § 23090.5, which gives the supreme court or appellate courts exclusive jurisdiction to "review, affirm, reverse, correct, or annul any order ... [of the ABC] or to suspend, stay, or delay, the operation or execution thereof, or to restrain, enjoin, or interfere with [the ABC] in the performance of its duties." The trial court found that although there had not yet been any "order" (i.e. disciplinary action), section 23090.5 applied because the instant action merely sought preemptively to attack the validity of a future order, triggering the application of section 23090.5 (10 Cal. App. 4th 1446, 1449).

The court of appeal affirmed, finding that the language of Bus. & Prof. Code § 23090.5 divests the superior courts of any jurisdiction to review actions by the ABC. The court held that the statutory scheme comprehensively vests exclusive jurisdiction in the supreme court or appellate courts to review disciplinary actions by the ABC, and that this jurisdiction may not be circumvented by filing a superior court action to a prospective disciplinary action styled as a claim for declaratory or injunctive relief (10 Cal. App. 4th 1446, 1449-1452).

For a discussion of the court's decision regarding the appellant's claim to treat the appeal as a writ of mandate, see § 15.27[4][a].

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 15 ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGE LICENSING
PART II. FORMS

1-15 California Points & Authorities § 15.26

§ 15.26 Supporting Petition for Writ of Mandate [Bus. & Prof. Code § 23090.5; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085, 1086]--To Restrain Enforcement of Unconstitutional Statute--General Form

[1] FORM Supporting Petition for Writ of Mandate [Bus. & Prof. Code § 23090.5; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085, 1086]--To Restrain Enforcement of Unconstitutional Statute--General Form

[Caption. See § 15.25[1].]

THE COURT SHOULD EXERCISE ITS JURISDICTION OVER THIS PROCEEDING FOR A WRIT OF MANDATE BECAUSE PETITIONERS CHALLENGE THE CONSTITUTIONALITY OF A STATUTE ON ITS FACE, NO MATERIAL FACTS ARE DISPUTED, ISSUES OF STATEWIDE IMPORTANCE ARE RAISED, AND PETITIONER WILL BE SUBJECT TO PENALTY BECAUSE HE/SHE MUST CHOOSE WHICH ONE OF CONTRADICTORY LAWS TO OBEY.

A. Review of Actions of Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control by Writ of Mandate. [See § 15.25[1], Paragraph A.]

B. Writ of Mandate to Compel Act When No Adequate Remedy at Law. [See § 15.25[1], Paragraph B.]

C. Review of Quasi-Judicial Action. Mandamus is an appropriate writ for the review of the exercise of quasi-judicial power by the Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control (Sail'er Inn, Inc. v. Kirby (1971) 5 Cal. 3d 1, 7, 95 Cal. Rptr. 329, 485 P.2d 529 ; Midcal Aluminum, Inc. v. Rice (1979) 90 Cal. App. 3d 979, 981, 153 Cal. Rptr. 757 , aff'd sub nom. California Liquor Dealers v. Midcal Aluminum (1980) 445 U.S. 97, 100 S. Ct. 937, 63 L. Ed. 2d 233).

D. Exhaustion of Administrative Remedies Not Required. Petitioners are not required to exhaust their administrative remedies before the court may issue a writ of mandate when petitioners challenge the constitutionality of a statute on its face, no material facts are in dispute, important issues of statewide significance are raised, and petitioners are placed in the untenable position of having to choose to obey possibly conflicting federal and state laws and face a penalty under the one they choose to disobey (Sail'er Inn, Inc. v. Kirby (1971) 5 Cal. 3d 1, 6-7, 95 Cal. Rptr. 329, 485 P.2d 529 ; Midcal Aluminum, Inc. v. Rice (1979) 90 Cal. App. 3d 979, 981-982, 153 Cal. Rptr. 757 , aff'd sub nom.

California Liquor Dealers v. Midcal Aluminum (1980) 445 U.S. 97, 100 S. Ct. 937, 63 L. Ed. 2d 233).

[Add points and authorities supporting contention that challenged statute is unconstitutional.]

[Optional] E. Original Jurisdiction of Supreme Court. The Supreme Court will exercise its original jurisdiction in a mandate proceeding when the issues presented are of great public importance and must be resolved promptly (San Francisco Unified School Dist. v. Johnson (1971) 3 Cal. 3d 937, 944-945, 92 Cal. Rptr. 309, 479 P.2d 669 , cert. denied sub nom. Fehlhaber v. San Francisco Unified School Dist., 401 U.S. 1012, 91 S. Ct. 1266, 28 L. Ed. 2d 549 ; see Sail'er Inn, Inc. v. Kirby (1971) 5 Cal. 3d 1, 7, 95 Cal. Rptr. 329, 485 P.2d 529).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Petitioner _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in support of a petition for a writ of mandate challenging the constitutionality of a statute on its face before the Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control has taken action based on the statute.

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities set out in § 15.27 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose a petition for a writ of mandate supported by this memorandum.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms relating to a petition for a writ of mandate generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition .

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For additional forms of memoranda of points and authorities supporting a petition for a writ of mandate and for forms of memoranda of points and authorities opposing a petition for a writ of mandate, see Ch. 150, Mandate and Prohibition .

For a form of points and authorities supporting a demurrer to a petition for a writ of mandate that seeks review of a decision of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board, see Ch. 195, Public Administrative Law in this set.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Review of Quasi-Judicial Action

In Sail'er Inn, Inc. v. Kirby (1971) 5 Cal. 3d 1, 95 Cal. Rptr. 329, 485 P.2d 529 , petitioners were on-sale liquor licensees. Some of the petitioners had hired women bartenders and had been charged by the Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control with violation of Bus. & Prof. Code § 25656, which prohibited women from tending bar. Other petitioners had not been charged, but desired to hire female bartenders. Petitioners sought a writ of mandate from the California Supreme Court to prevent the department from revoking their licenses for violation of Bus. & Prof. Code § 25656, arguing that the statute was unconstitutional. The Court held that mandamus is an appropriate writ for the review of the exercise of quasi-judicial power by the department. Noting that under Code Civ. Proc. § 1085, a writ of mandate may be issued to compel the admission of a party to the use and enjoyment of a right to which he or she is entitled, and from which he or she is unlawfully precluded by an inferior tribunal or board, the Court held that mandate was an appropriate remedy for both groups of petitioners, even though certiorari might have been an appropriate remedy for the petitioners who had already been charged with violations of Bus. & Prof. Code § 25656 by the department (5 Cal. 3d 1, 7). The Court found the statute unconstitutional on a variety of grounds (5 Cal. 3d 1, 8-22).

Petitioner in Midcal Aluminum, Inc. v. Rice (1979) 90 Cal. App. 3d 979, 153 Cal. Rptr. 757 , aff'd sub nom. California Liquor Dealers v. Midcal Aluminum (1980) 445 U.S. 97, 100 S. Ct. 937, 63 L. Ed. 2d 233 , was the subject of an accusation filed before the Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control, complaining that petitioner had violated California fair trade and price posting laws regulating the wholesale and retail sale of wine. Petitioner stipulated to the truthfulness of the facts set forth in the accusation and further stipulated that the department might subject petitioner to penalties pursuant to the Business and Professions Code, subject to a judicial determination of the constitutionality of the wine fair trade and price posting laws [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 24850-24881]. Petitioner then applied to the court of appeal for a writ of mandate. The court, relying on Sail'er Inn, Inc. v. Kirby (1971) 5 Cal. 3d 1, 7 , above, held that mandate is an appropriate writ for review of the exercise of quasi-judicial power by the department (90 Cal. App. 3d 979, 981). The court then held that the fair trade and price posting laws were invalid because they conflicted with federal law (90 Cal. App. 3d 979, 982-986).

[b] Exhaustion of Administrative Remedies Not Required

The facts and procedural background of Sail'er Inn, Inc. v. Kirby (1971) 5 Cal. 3d 1, 95 Cal. Rptr. 329, 485 P.2d 529 , are discussed in § 15.26[3][a]. In Sail'er Inn, the Supreme Court recognized that mandamus will not ordinarily issue until after the administrative agency has made its final order or decision (5 Cal. 3d 1, 7). The Court held, however, that it would be improper to require exhaustion of administrative remedies under the extraordinary circumstances of the case. The circumstances pointed to by the Court were that petitioners challenged the constitutionality of the statute on its face, no material facts were disputed, important legal issues of statewide significance were raised, and two of the petitioners were placed in the untenable position of having to choose whether to obey possibly conflicting federal and state laws and face a penalty under the one they chose to disobey (5 Cal. 3d 1, 6-7).

Counsel should note, however, that except in the circumstances set forth in Sail'er Inn, Inc., above, exhaustion of administrative remedies is required even though a statute is challenged on constitutional grounds. The constitutional issue must be raised before the Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control first, unless extraordinary circumstances exist, such as petitioner being exposed to penalties under the one of two conflicting laws he chooses to disobey [Subriar v. Bakersfield (1976) 59 Cal. App. 3d 175, 192-193, 130 Cal. Rptr. 853 (distinguishing Sail'er Inn, Inc., above, on the ground that in the case before it there were no such extraordinary circumstances)].

The facts and procedural background of Midcal Aluminum, Inc. v. Rice (1979) 90 Cal. App. 3d 979, 153 Cal. Rptr. 757 , aff'd sub nom. California Liquor Dealers v. Midcal Aluminum (1980) 445 U.S. 97, 100 S. Ct. 937, 63 L. Ed. 2d 233 , are discussed in § 15.26[3][a]. There, the court of appeal held that it would be improper to require petitioner to exhaust its administrative remedies, pointing to the same set of circumstances as were relied on by the Supreme Court in Sail'er Inn, Inc. v. Kirby (1971) 5 Cal. 3d 1, 6-7 , discussed above, in excusing petitioners from the exhaustion requirement (90 Cal. App. 3d 979, 981-982). The court of appeal in Midcal Aluminum rejected the department's contention that the court's assumption of jurisdiction would encourage similar petitions, attempting to bypass administrative procedures through feigned constitutional issues. The court considered that possibility unlikely since the court was not reviewing the accusation, but only the validity of the statutes on which it was based, and rejection of petitioner's claims would leave petitioner before the department to face accusations it had admitted (90 Cal. App. 3d 979, 982).

[c] Original Jurisdiction of Supreme Court

In San Francisco Unified School Dist. v. Johnson (1971) 3 Cal. 3d 937, 92 Cal. Rptr. 309, 479 P.2d 669 , cert. denied sub nom. Fehlhaber v. San Francisco Unified School Dist., 401 U.S. 1012, 91 S. Ct. 1266, 28 L. Ed. 2d 549 , the California Supreme Court stated, at page 944, that the Court entertains original jurisdiction in mandamus only in cases in which the issues presented are of great public importance and must be resolved promptly [citing Sacramento County v. Hickman (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 841, 845, 59 Cal. Rptr. 609, 428 P.2d 593]. The issues before the court were the interpretation and constitutionality of Educ. Code § 1009.5 (now Educ. Code §§ 35350, 72209), which prohibits transportation of students without written permission of their parents. The Court determined that these issues were of great public concern and importance, their prompt resolution being essential to orderly planning and pupil assignment throughout the state (3 Cal. 3d 937, 945).

The facts and procedural background of Sail'er Inn, Inc. v. Kirby (1971) 5 Cal. 3d 1, 95 Cal. Rptr. 329, 485 P.2d 529 , are discussed in § 15.26[3][a]. In that case, the Supreme Court issued the alternative writ to review the exercise of quasi-judicial power by the Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control. The case presented the issue of the constitutionality of Bus. & Prof. Code § 25656, prohibiting women, with some exceptions, from tending bar. The Court noted that important legal issues of statewide significance were raised by the petitioners (5 Cal. 3d 1, 6-7). At page 7, the Court stated that by issuing the alternative writ, they had determined that the exercise of their jurisdiction in the case was proper [relying on prior California law, including San Francisco Unified School Dist. v. Johnson (1971) 3 Cal. 3d 937, 945, 92 Cal. Rptr. 309, 479 P.2d 669].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Review of Quasi-Judicial Action

In Norman Williams Co. v. Rice (1980) 108 Cal. App. 3d 348, 166 Cal. Rptr. 563 , the court of appeal entertained a petition for a writ of mandate to determine the validity of Bus. & Prof. Code § 23672, prohibiting licensed importers from importing any brand of distilled spirits unless designated as an authorized importer by the brand owner and to restrain the Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control from enforcing the statute. The court held that it had jurisdiction to consider the validity of the statute, which was alleged to be in fatal conflict with federal law, in a proceeding for a writ of mandate (108 Cal. App. 3d 348, 354 fn. 2). The court held that the statute was partially invalid (108 Cal. App. 3d 348, 355-363).

157 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 15 ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGE LICENSING
PART II. FORMS

1-15 California Points & Authorities § 15.27

§ 15.27 Opposing Petition for Writ of Mandate [Bus. & Prof. Code § 23090.5; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085, 1086]--To Review or Restrain Adjudicatory Action of Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control--Exclusivity of Procedure by Writ of Review [Bus. & Prof. Code § 23090] and Failure to Exhaust Administrative Remedy

[1] FORM Opposing Petition for Writ of Mandate [Bus. & Prof. Code § 23090.5; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085, 1086]--To Review or Restrain Adjudicatory Action of Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control--Exclusivity of Procedure by Writ of Review [Bus. & Prof. Code § 23090] and Failure to Exhaust Administrative Remedy

IN THE SUPREME COURT OF THE
STATE OF CALIFORNIA

[OR]

IN THE COURT OF APPEAL OF THE
STATE OF CALIFORNIA,
_____ APPELLATE DISTRICT

_____[name],	)
Petitioner,	)	NO. _____
vs.	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORIT-
DEPARTMENT OF ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGE	)	IES IN OPPOSITION TO PETITION FOR WRIT OF
CONTROL,	)	MANDATE
Respondent.	)	[Bus. & Prof. Code § 23090.5; Code Civ. Proc. §§
	)	1085, 1086]

_____

THE COURT DOES NOT HAVE JURISDICTION OVER A PETITION FOR A WRIT OF MANDATE TO REVIEW AN ADJUDICATORY ACT OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGE CONTROL BECAUSE THE EXCLUSIVE PROCEDURE FOR JUDICIAL REVIEW IS BY WRIT OF REVIEW PURSUANT TO Bus. & Prof. Code § 23090 [AND BECAUSE PETITIONER HAS NOT EXHAUSTED HIS/HER ADMINISTRATIVE REMEDIES].

A. Exclusivity of Procedure by Writ of Review. Section 23090.5 of the Business and Professions Code authorizes a writ of mandate only to review the orders, rules, decisions, or other acts of the Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control in the performance of its duties when acting in its administrative capacity, and does not authorize an alternative avenue of judicial review of the department's adjudicatory decisions apart from the writ of review provided for in Sections 23090-23090.7 of the Business and Professions Code (Top Hat Liquors v. Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control (1974) 13 Cal. 3d 107, 111-112, 118 Cal. Rptr. 10, 529 P.2d 42).

[Optional] B. Exhaustion of Administrative Remedies. Courts are generally without jurisdiction to review a decision of the Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control adversely affecting a licensee until the administrative remedies provided in Sections 23080-23089 of the Business and Professions Code have been exhausted (Top Hat Liquors v. Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control (1974) 13 Cal. 3d 107, 110-111, 118 Cal. Rptr. 10, 529 P.2d 42).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Respondent _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a petition for a writ of mandate which seeks to review or restrain an adjudicatory action of the Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control. If the petition for a writ of mandate is brought before the department has acted or before the Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board has made a final order reviewing the department's decision, Paragraph B of this form may be included as an additional objection to the petition.

This memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a petition for a writ of mandate [Bus. & Prof. Code § 23090.5; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085, 1086] supported by the points and authorities set out in § 15.26.

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Points and Authorities

For a memorandum of points and authorities supporting a demurrer to a petition for a writ of mandate brought in superior court to review a decision of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board, see Ch. 195, Public Administrative Law .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Exclusivity of Procedure by Writ of Review

In Top Hat Liquors v. Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control (1974) 13 Cal. 3d 107, 118 Cal. Rptr. 10, 529 P.2d 42 , the Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control collected evidence of 11 sales of alcoholic beverages by employees of a licensee below the minimum retail prices established in accordance with Bus. & Prof. Code § 24755 [held unconstitutional in Rice v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Bd. (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 431, 459, 146 Cal. Rptr. 585, 579 P.2d 476]. Then, in a single proceeding, the department imposed a $250 fine for the first sale and fines of $1,000 for each successive sale pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 24755.1. The licensee petitioned the Supreme Court for a writ of mandate to compel reduction of the penalty to $250, claiming that the imposition of such cumulative penalties is not permissible under Bus. & Prof. Code § 24755.1 and that, if permissible, it is unconstitutional. After petitioning the Court, the licensee also filed an appeal with the Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board, but since the board had not acted on the appeal when the court ruled on the petition, the Court treated the administrative remedies as unexhausted.

The Court, having held that Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 23090-23090.7 provide the exclusive avenue for judicial review of the board's final orders, noted that it had not overlooked Bus. & Prof. Code § 23090.5, which authorizes the Supreme Court and courts of appeal to issue writs of mandate in any proper case. The Court held, however, that Bus. & Prof. Code § 23090.5 does not authorize review of the department's adjudicatory decisions by writ of mandate as an alternative to the writ of review provided for in Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 23090-23090.7. The Court reasoned that when the Legislature enacted Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 23090-23090.7 in 1967, it intended to limit the scope of review of the department's adjudicatory decisions, which were previously reviewed pursuant to general mandamus provisions. The writ of mandate remains available in accordance with Code Civ. Proc. § 1085 to challenge departmental acts or failures to act which the law specially enjoins or which deny a party of the use or enjoyment of a right or office to which he or she is entitled (13 Cal. 3d 107, 111). On pages 111-112, the Court held that in Bus. & Prof. Code § 23090.5, the Legislature intended to provide for judicial review of the orders, rules, decisions, or other acts of the department in the performance of its duties when acting in its administrative rather than its limited judicial capacity [citing Samson Market Co. v. Kirby (1968) 261 Cal. App. 2d 577, 581, 68 Cal. Rptr. 130 (discussed in § 15.25[3][b])]. Thus, the Court held that the effect of the 1967 legislation is to deny the availability of the writ of mandate to review the department's adjudicatory acts (13 Cal. 3d 107, 112).

[b] Exhaustion of Administrative Remedies

The facts and procedural background of Top Hat Liquors v. Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control (1974) 13 Cal. 3d 107, 118 Cal. Rptr. 10, 529 P.2d 42 , are discussed in § 15.27[3][a]. In that case, the Court did not reach the merits of petitioner's claims because petitioner had not exhausted its administrative remedies, but the Court did note that in pursuing those remedies, petitioner would be entitled to the benefit of the Court's decision in Walsh v. Kirby (1974) 13 Cal. 3d 95, 118 Cal. Rptr. 1, 529 P.2d 33 , which held that the imposition of cumulative penalties on similar investigative practices was, in that case, arbitrary and capricious and constituted a denial of due process (13 Cal. 3d 107, 109). The Court noted the rule that courts are generally without jurisdiction to review administrative action until after the administrative remedy provided by statute has been exhausted and held that that rule applies to cases of liquor licensees adversely affected by a decision of the department (13 Cal. 3d 107, 110). The Court held that Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 23090-23090.7 provided the exclusive route for judicial review of the department's decisions (13 Cal. 3d 95). Since Bus. & Prof. Code § 23090, specifying the conditions under which applications for a writ of review may be made, limits applications to persons affected by a final order of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board, the Court held that it is manifest that review is only possible after the board has made a final order, that is, after the administrative remedies have been exhausted (13 Cal. 3d 107, 111). The Court found no merit to petitioner's claim that it would be irreparably injured if required to assert the administrative remedy because it failed to show that its situation was unique (13 Cal. 3d 107, 112).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Exclusivity of Procedure by Writ of Review

The facts and procedural background of American Drug Stores, Inc. v. Stroh (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 1446, 13 Cal. Rptr. 2d 432 , are discussed in § 15.25[3][a]. In an attempt to preserve the action, the liquor licensee sought to treat the appeal from the sustaining of the ABC's demurrer as a writ petition under Bus. & Prof. Code § 23090.5. The appellate court refused to do so because the licensee's request for treating the appeal as a petition for extraordinary relief was not made in its opening brief but was raised for the first time in its reply brief. The court held that points raised for the first time in a reply brief will ordinarily not be considered because such consideration would deprive the respondent of an opportunity to counter the argument (10 Cal. App. 4th 1446, 1453).

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 15 ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGE LICENSING
PART II. FORMS

1-15 California Points & Authorities § 15.28

§ 15.28 Supporting Motion for Summary Judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c] in Action for Restitution of Purchase Money--By Plaintiff--Transfer of Alcoholic Beverage License Denied by State

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Summary Judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c] in Action for Restitution of Purchase Money--By Plaintiff--Transfer of Alcoholic Beverage License Denied by State

	)
	)	NO. _____
SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORIT-
COUNTY OF _____	)	IES IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR SUMMARY
_____ [name],	)	JUDGMENT
Plaintiff,	)	Date: _____
vs.	)	Time: _____
_____ [name],	)	Location: _____
Defendant.	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

THE COURT SHOULD GRANT PLAINTIFF'S MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT BECAUSE, WHEN THE SALE OF A BUSINESS THAT INCLUDES AN ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGE LICENSE IS MADE CONTINGENT ON STATE APPROVAL OF THE TRANSFER OF THE LICENSE TO THE VENDEE, AND TRANSFER OF THE LICENSE IS NOT APPROVED, THE VENDEE IS ENTITLED TO RESTITUTION OF AMOUNTS PAID INTO ESCROW DUE TO THE FAILURE OF CONSIDERATION.

A. Summary Judgment. A plaintiff may move for summary judgment in any action or proceeding if it is contended that there is no defense to the action. Such motion must be granted if all of the papers submitted show that there is no triable issue as to any material fact and that plaintiff is entitled to a judgment as a matter of law (Code Civ. Proc. § 437c).

B. Restitution for Failure of Consideration. When a contract for the sale of a business that includes an alcoholic beverage license is contingent on the state's approval of transfer of the license, denial of the application for transfer of the license results in a total failure of consideration to the buyer, and the buyer is entitled to restitution of the sums that he or she has paid into escrow, so that the seller will not be unjustly enriched (Lenchner v. Chase (1950) 98 Cal. App. 2d 794, 801-802, 804, 220 P.2d 921).

[Optional] C. Unqualified Agreement to Buy Not Implied. In view of the provisions of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Act and the administrative rules and regulations respecting transfer of licenses, an unqualified agreement to purchase a business with an alcoholic beverage license, or an undertaking on the buyer's part amounting to a warranty to have the license transferred to the buyer, will not be implied in a contract to purchase a business having such a license (Richards v. Dep't of Alcoholic Beverage Control (2006) 139 Cal. App. 4th 304, 314, 42 Cal. Rptr. 3d 782 ; Lenchner v. Chase (1950) 98 Cal. App. 2d 794, 803, 220 P.2d 921).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in support of plaintiff's motion for summary judgment in an action for restitution. The form is for use when the plaintiff, as buyer, has brought an action for restitution of the purchase price after rescinding a contract for the purchase of a business which includes an alcoholic beverage license because the Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control denied the application to transfer the license.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. In addition, counsel should attach affidavits or declarations that support the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c].

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a form of complaint for restitution based on rescission and for money had and received by a transferee against a transferor of an alcoholic beverage license and against the escrow holder after transfer of the license has been disapproved, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 18, Alcoholic Beverage Licenses and Ch. 19, Alcoholic Beverages: Civil Liability .

For discussion and additional forms relating to actions for restitution based on rescission, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 490, Rescission and Restitution . For discussion and additional forms relating to actions for money had and received, see Ch. 121, Common Counts in that set.

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to summary judgments, generally, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Restitution for Failure of Consideration

In Lenchner v. Chase (1950) 98 Cal. App. 2d 794, 220 P.2d 921 , plaintiffs deposited $15,000 in escrow in connection with their proposed purchase of a tavern. Plaintiffs and defendant seller joined in applying for transfer of defendant's liquor license to plaintiffs. Transfer of the license was denied by the State Board of Equalization, and two weeks later, defendant seller repossessed the premises, which plaintiffs had been operating for about three months. Defendant seller had contemporaneously bought another tavern, and defendant escrow holder had paid itself and its salesman commissions on both sales. Defendant seller had also made a demand on the escrow holder, at the escrow holder's request, to pay $10,000 from the escrow fund to the seller of the tavern that defendant seller was buying. When plaintiffs demanded return of the $15,000, defendants refused, and plaintiffs brought suit for money had and received. The trial court held that the contract was contingent on transfer of the license, relying on the language of the application for transfer of the license, the only paper signed by both parties. The application had stated that transfer of title to the licensed business would coincide with transfer of the license, as was provided by the board's rules at that time. The court found no undertaking on plaintiffs' part to have the license transferred to them, no provision for forfeiture in the event of failure to obtain a license, nor any express warranty that plaintiffs had no police record (which was apparently the basis for the board's denial of the transfer). Defendants appealed from a judgment awarding plaintiffs $15,000, less profits taken by them while they operated the premises, and less some adjustments relating to inventory.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court held that the language of the application that transfer of title to the licensed business was to coincide with transfer of the license not only fixed the time when title to the business would pass, but also meant that without a transfer of the license there could be no transfer of title to the licensed business (98 Cal. App. 2d 794, 801). Since transfer of title to the business was the consideration for payment of the $15,000, the inability to transfer it resulted in a total failure of consideration (98 Cal. App. 2d 794, 802). The court rejected defendants' contention that plaintiffs' own acts made performance impossible, with the same legal effect as if plaintiffs had voluntarily refused to proceed with performance. The contention was based on plaintiffs' acts over a four-year period ending five years before the contract was entered into (the acts apparently relied on by the board in denying transfer of the license). The court held that these acts, occurring prior to the time of contracting, could not be considered, and that plaintiffs had taken affirmative actions in furtherance of the performance of the contract (98 Cal. App. 2d 794, 802-803). Moreover, the court noted, there was no language in the writings involved to support defendants' claim that plaintiffs had unqualifiedly promised to purchase the tavern or had undertaken to have the license transferred to themselves, and that no such promise could be implied due to the provisions of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Act [Bus. & Prof. Code § 23000 et seq.] and the rules of the board regarding transfers (98 Cal. App. 2d 794, 803). The court also rejected defendants' argument that there was not a scintilla of evidence that the parties agreed that the money would be returned in the event transfer of the license was denied. The court held that no such agreement was necessary, the case being a simple one of unjust enrichment [citing Riff v. Mayhew (1949) 90 Cal. App. 2d 712, 717, 203 P.2d 812] (98 Cal. App. 2d 794, 804).

[b] Unqualified Agreement to Buy Not Implied

In Richards v. Dep't of Alcoholic Beverage Control (2006) 139 Cal. App. 4th 304, 42 Cal. Rptr. 3d 782 , plaintiff entered into a sales agreement to buy a restaurant and the alcoholic beverage license. However, the buyer did not apply to the agency for a transfer of the license. While investigating reports of license violations, the agency became aware of the sale of the tavern and obtained a surrender of the license from the previous owner. The buyer filed a complaint against the agency alleging that he acquired the license by purchasing the tavern and that the license was "summarily revoked" without prior warning. The Department moved for summary judgment or summary adjudication arguing that the buyer had no standing to sue the Department because he never applied for a transfer of the license. The trial court granted the motion.

The Court of Appeal affirmed, holding that Bus. & Prof. Code § 24071.1 does not provide for an automatic transfer of the license upon the sale of the tavern, and that transfer of a license from the licensee to another person is valid only upon approval by the Department (139 Cal. App. 4th 304, 313, 314). The requirement for such approval is an implied condition of all agreements for the transfer of alcoholic beverage licenses, whatever the context and whatever the nature of the consideration (139 Cal. App. 4th 304, 314).

Lenchner v. Chase (1950) 98 Cal. App. 2d 794, 220 P.2d 921 , is discussed in § 15.28[3][a].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Restitution for Failure of Consideration

Plaintiff in Riff v. Mayhew (1949) 90 Cal. App. 2d 712, 203 P.2d 812 , paid $25,000 to defendant escrow holder in connection with plaintiff's proposed purchase of a cocktail lounge and restaurant from defendant sellers. The premises were located in an area zoned for apartment house use. The premises had apparently been operated as a social club, a use permitted by the zoning ordinance, which did not permit public places of entertainment or restaurants. At the time the escrow opened, defendant sellers were unsuccessfully attempting to get an entertainment cafe license from the city. The escrow agreement stated that the premises were being purchased for the purpose of operating an on-sale alcoholic beverage establishment. The State Board of Equalization, however, denied defendants' application to transfer to plaintiff a liquor license covering the location on the grounds that plaintiff was not the real party in interest and that the application had contained misrepresentations. When the application for transfer of the liquor license was denied, plaintiff gave notice to defendants of his election to terminate escrow on the ground that the board had refused to allow transfer of the license. Plaintiff demanded return of the money he had paid into escrow, and on the same day, abandoned the premises, which he had been operating under an oral agreement with defendants. Plaintiff subsequently brought suit for rescission based on denial of the application to transfer the license, and defendant sellers' failure to deliver a valid assignment of lease or sublease into escrow. Defendants denied that there had been a final denial of the transfer of the license, and filed a cross complaint alleging that plaintiff caused the license transfer to be denied by refusing to name his partners in the purchase. The trial court found in plaintiff's favor that there had been a material failure of consideration due to denial of the application for transfer of the license, which was found to have been denied due to defendants' inability to provide a valid sublease and not solely because of plaintiff's withholding and misstating information. Defendants appealed from the judgment awarding plaintiff the $25,000 he had placed in escrow.

On appeal, plaintiff urged that under the zoning ordinance, no transfer of the liquor license could be made, and that nothing plaintiff did could have changed the situation (90 Cal. App. 2d 712, 716). The court of appeal held that although there was conflicting evidence, the material findings and judgment were supported by substantial evidence, which precluded the court of appeal from interfering with the trial court's decision. The court found this rule to be particularly applicable to the findings that there was a complete failure of consideration and that the objects of the escrow agreement were impossible of fulfillment, and held that it would be contrary to both law and equity to allow defendants to retain the $25,000 in those circumstances. The court stated that the impossibility of conducting the premises for the purpose stated in the escrow agreement was of sufficient materiality to excuse plaintiff from further performance of the contract, and that there was, moreover, substantial evidence to support the finding that the impossibility did not result solely from plaintiff's actions or representations due to the zoning regulations prohibiting the use (90 Cal. App. 2d 712, 717). Since plaintiff's alleged default was not the sole cause of the collapse of the proposed transaction, the court held that defendants could not retain the money (90 Cal. App. 2d 712, 717-718).

159 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 15 ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGE LICENSING
PART II. FORMS

1-15 California Points & Authorities § 15.29

§ 15.29 Supporting Motion for Summary Adjudication [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(f)] of Validity of Option Agreement to Retransfer License to Seller of Licensed Premises on Buyer's Default in Purchase--By Plaintiff

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Summary Adjudication [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(f)] of Validity of Option Agreement to Retransfer License to Seller of Licensed Premises on Buyer's Default in Purchase--By Plaintiff

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORIT-
vs.	)	IES IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR SUMMARY
_____ [name],	)	ADJUDICATION
Defendant.	)	[Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(f)]
	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

THE COURT SHOULD GRANT PLAINTIFF'S MOTION FOR SUMMARY ADJUDICATION OF PLAINTIFF'S CAUSE OF ACTION BASED ON DEFENDANT'S BREACH OF THE OPTION AGREEMENT, BECAUSE SECTION 24076 OF THE BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONS CODE PROVIDES NO DEFENSE TO AN ACTION FOR DAMAGES FOR BREACH OF AN OPTION AGREEMENT TO RETRANSFER AN ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGE LICENSE FOR A VALUABLE CONSIDERATION ON THE DEFAULT OF THE BUYER IN THE PURCHASE OF THE PREMISES.

A. Motion for Summary Adjudication of Issues. If it is contended that there is no defense to a cause of action, any party may move for summary adjudication as to that cause of action (Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(f)).

B. Option for Retransfer of Alcoholic Beverage License as Enforceable. An agreement giving the seller of licensed premises an option to repurchase the alcoholic beverage license covering the premises for more than nominal consideration is not forbidden by Section 24076 of the Business and Professions Code which forbids licensees to pledge their licenses as security for the fulfillment of an agreement (Greve v. Leger, Ltd. (1966) 64 Cal. 2d 853, 860, 52 Cal. Rptr. 9, 415 P.2d 824). Section 24076 of the Business and Professions Code prohibits specific enforcement of such an option more than 90 days after it was entered into, but does not provide any defense to an action for damages (Greve v. Leger, Ltd. (1966) 64 Cal. 2d 853, 862, 52 Cal. Rptr. 9, 415 P.2d 824).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in support of plaintiff's motion for summary adjudication on the ground that there is no defense to his or her cause of action for breach of an option agreement to repurchase an alcoholic beverage license from a buyer who has defaulted in the purchase of the licensed premises. For forms relating generally to a motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Motion for Summary Adjudication of Issues

Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(f) provides that if it is contended that there is no defense to a cause of action, any party may move for summary adjudication concerning that cause of action. The statute further provides that a motion for summary adjudication can be made by itself or as an alternative to a motion for summary judgment and must proceed in all procedural respects as a motion for summary judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(f)]. For further discussion and forms, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[b] Option for Retransfer of Alcoholic Beverage License as Enforceable

In Greve v. Leger, Ltd. (1966) 64 Cal. 2d 853, 52 Cal. Rptr. 9, 415 P.2d 824 , plaintiffs had sold a hotel, together with liquor licenses, to defendant. Defendant had given plaintiffs an option, exercisable on defendant's default in purchasing the hotel, to repurchase the licenses for the amount defendant had paid for them. Defendant did default, and plaintiffs repossessed the hotel and tendered the option price for the licenses. When defendant refused the tender, plaintiffs sued to enjoin transfer of the licenses to a third party and to compel defendant to retransfer the licenses to plaintiffs. The court sustained a demurrer to the complaint without leave to amend, and plaintiffs appealed from the judgment of dismissal that followed. At oral argument in the court of appeal, defendant revealed that the licenses had been sold to third parties, and in their appeal to the Supreme Court, plaintiffs sought leave to amend the complaint to seek damages.

The Supreme Court reversed, rejecting defendant's argument that plaintiffs' suit was prohibited by Bus. & Prof. Code § 24076, which forbids agreements pledging transfer of a license as security for the fulfillment of any agreement and forbids transfer of a license to fulfill an agreement entered into more than 90 days before the transfer application is filed. The Court first determined that the traditional meaning of "security" would not include an option exercisable only on payment of substantial additional consideration, or which, on performance, does not give the option-holder any asset out of which to satisfy the underlying claim against the option-giver (64 Cal. 2d 853, 858). The Court then refused to follow previous California court of appeal cases that had read "security" so broadly as to include an option given to the lessor of licensed premises by the lessee to repurchase the license at the termination of the lease, concluding that those cases had incorrectly divined the purpose of Bus. & Prof. Code § 24076 and that the section was not intended to outlaw all agreements for the transfer of licenses which serve to assure the value of some other asset (64 Cal. 2d 853, 857-860). Thus, the Court held that the agreement before it was not a security device within the meaning of Bus. & Prof. Code § 24076, even though it tended to preserve the value of plaintiffs' interest in the hotel in the event of repossession, because the option did not perform either of the ordinary functions of a "security": (1) it did not give plaintiffs an automatic right to retake the licenses on defendant's default, but only to repurchase at the same price defendant had paid, which could not be deemed nominal, and (2) exercise of the option would not have given plaintiffs an asset out of which they could satisfy their claim against defendant for its default on the contract to purchase the hotel (64 Cal. 2d 853, 860).

The Court further held that the portion of Bus. & Prof. Code § 24076, forbidding transfer of a license to fulfill an agreement over 90 days old, unlike the provision forbidding parties from concluding an agreement pledging a license as security, does not make agreements for the transfer of licenses illegal, but only prevents transfer of licenses in satisfaction of such agreements. Consequently, the Court held that Bus. & Prof. Code § 24076 precluded specific performance of the option agreement, but did not render the agreement illegal, and did not provide any defense to an action for damages for breach of the option agreement (64 Cal. 2d 853, 861-862).

Although the Supreme Court in Greve did criticize and refuse to adopt the reasoning of Elmquist v. Lock (1961) 194 Cal. App. 2d 372, 377 , it did not expressly disapprove Elmquist (64 Cal. 2d 853, 859-860). In Elmquist, the purchaser had agreed to do all things necessary to have his name removed from the license in the event he defaulted before half the combined purchase price of the licensed premises and the license was paid. The Elmquist court reasoned that the agreement could not be permitted because its performance would vest ownership of the license in the person to whom performance was due regardless of his qualifications to be licensed, and that this would violate the purpose of Bus. & Prof. Code § 24076 to prevent a transfer of ownership by any means other than the statutory procedure which limits transfers to those who are qualified to hold licenses. In Greve, the Supreme Court found this reasoning to be erroneous because it assumed that the purchaser's performance of the agreement to remove his name from the license would automatically effect a transfer of the license without official approval. That assumption was incorrect because California case law has held that all agreements for the transfer of alcoholic beverage licenses are subject to an implied condition that official approval of the transfer is required (64 Cal. 2d 853, 859). Nonetheless, the result in Elmquist may have survived Greve because, unlike the agreement in Greve, the agreement in Elmquist provided for retransfer of the license on the buyer's default in paying of a purchase price which included payment for the license itself, as well as for the licensed premises, and did not call for the seller to give any consideration for retransfer of the license. These distinguishing factors make the agreement in Elmquist more like a pledge of security than the agreement in Greve, where retransfer was not tied to default in the purchase price of the license itself, but only of the licensed premises, and the seller was required to pay for the retransfer. For these reasons, an agreement such as the one in Elmquist might still be held invalid under Bus. & Prof. Code § 24076 as a pledge of a license as security for an agreement.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 15A ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGES: CIVIL LIABILITY FOR FURNISHING

1-15a California Points & Authorities 15a.syn

§ 15a.syn Synopsis to Chapter 15a: ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGES: CIVIL LIABILITY FOR FURNISHING

§ 15A.01 Scope of Chapter

§ 15A.02 Governing Statutes

§ 15A.03 Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

§ 15A.04 Related Points and Authorities

§§ 15A.05-15A.19 [Reserved]

§ 15A.20 Supporting Defendant's Motion for New Trial on Ground of Insufficiency of Evidence [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action Against Tavern Keeper to Recover for Personal Injuries Received in Assault by Other Patron--Defendant Unaware of Assailant's Violent Propensity

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Reweighing Evidence

[b] Known Violent or Vicious Propensity as Prerequisite to Liability

[c] Circumstances Establishing Duty of Proprietor

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Reweighing Evidence

§ 15A.21 Supporting Motion for Summary Judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c] in Action Against Furnisher of Alcoholic Beverage to Recover for Injuries Caused by Intoxicated Person--By Defendant--Statutory Immunity [Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602(b); Civ. Code § 1714(c)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statutory Immunity From Liability for Furnishing Alcoholic Beverages

[b] Immunity From Liability for Permitting Consumption on Premises

[c] Action for Nuisance Also Barred

[d] Suit by Consumer Barred

[e] Social Host's Immunity

[f] Exception to Immunity Limited to Cases Involving Obviously Intoxicated Minor

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Statutory Immunity From Liability for Furnishing Alcoholic Beverages

[b] Social Host's Immunity

§ 15A.22 Supporting General Demurrer [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10(e), 430.30(a)] in Action Against Furnisher of Alcoholic Beverages to Minor to Recover for Injuries Caused by Intoxicated Person--By Defendant--Statutory Immunity [Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602(c); Civ. Code § 1714(b)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statutory Immunity From Liability for Furnishing Alcoholic Beverages to Sober Minor

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Statutory Immunity From Liability for Furnishing Alcoholic Beverages to Sober Minor

§ 15A.23 Opposing Defendant's Motion for Summary Judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c] in Action Against Furnisher of Alcoholic Beverages to Recover for Injuries Caused by Intoxicated Person--Exceptions to Statutory Immunity [Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602(b); Civ. Code § 1714(c)]--Furnishing Alcoholic Beverage to Intoxicated Minor or Incompetent Persons [Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602.1]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statutory Exception to Immunity for Selling, Furnishing, or Giving Away Alcoholic Beverages to Obviously Intoxicated Minors

[b] No Statutory Immunity When Furnishing Alcoholic Beverage to Person Suffering From Exceptional Physical or Mental Condition

[c] "Obviously Intoxicated" Defined

§ 15A.24 Opposing Defendant's Motion for Summary Judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c] in Action Against Furnisher of Alcoholic Beverages to Recover for Injuries Caused by Intoxicated Person--Exceptions to Statutory Immunity [Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602(b); Civ. Code § 1714(c)]--Negligent Performance of Undertaking Resulting in Harm to Third Person

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Negligent Performance of Undertaking

[b] Conduct Outside Scope of Statutory Immunity

§ 15A.25 Opposing Contention That Furnisher of Alcoholic Beverages Not Liable for Injuries Caused by Intoxicated Person--Exceptions to Statutory Immunity [Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602(b); Civ. Code § 1714(c)]--Duty of Premises Owner or Possessor to Protect Patrons From Tortious Conduct of Third Parties

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Duty to Protect Against Wrongful Conduct of Third Persons

[b] Statutory Immunity Inapplicable

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 15A ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGES: CIVIL LIABILITY FOR FURNISHING
PART I. INTRODUCTION

1-15a California Points & Authorities § 15A.01

§ 15A.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter contains memoranda of points and authorities relating to civil liabilities of persons furnishing alcoholic beverages. It includes a memorandum in support of defendant's motion for a new trial in an action to recover damages from a tavern keeper for injuries suffered on the defendant's premises in an assault by a third party [see § 15A.20]. This part also contains memoranda supporting [see § 15A.21] and opposing [see § 15A.23] a defendant's motion for summary judgment, and supporting a defendant's general demurrer [see § 15A.22], in an action to recover damages for injuries when the sole basis of liability is that defendant furnished alcoholic beverages to the plaintiff or a third party. This part also contains memoranda opposing a defendant's motion for summary judgment on the ground that the action seeks recovery not for furnishing alcoholic beverages to the plaintiff or a third party, but for the breach of an independent duty of care [see § 15A.24] and opposing the contention that the furnisher of alcoholic beverages is not liable on the grounds that an exception to statutory immunity imposes a duty on a premises owner to protect patrons from the tortious conduct of third parties [see § 15A.25].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New TrialsTortsNegligenceDutyAlcohol ProvidersDram Shop StatutesTortsNegligenceDutyAlcohol ProvidersKnowledge RequirementsTortsNegligenceDutyAlcohol ProvidersSocial HostsTortsPremises Liability & PropertyGeneral Premises LiabilityDefensesGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 15A ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGES: CIVIL LIABILITY FOR FURNISHING
PART I. INTRODUCTION

1-15a California Points & Authorities § 15A.02

§ 15A.02 Governing Statutes

Civil liability based on the furnishing of alcoholic beverages to another is restricted by Civ. Code § 1714(b), (c) and Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602(b), (c). Civil liability based on the furnishing of alcoholic beverages to a minor is governed by Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602.1.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
TortsNegligenceDutyAlcohol ProvidersDram Shop StatutesTortsNegligenceDutyAlcohol ProvidersKnowledge RequirementsTortsNegligenceDutyAlcohol ProvidersSocial Hosts

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 15A ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGES: CIVIL LIABILITY FOR FURNISHING
PART I. INTRODUCTION

1-15a California Points & Authorities § 15A.03

§ 15A.03 Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion and forms relating to actions against a party who furnished alcoholic beverages to another, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 19, Alcoholic Beverages: Civil Liability , and Ch. 421, Premises Liability (Matthew Bender).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 15A ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGES: CIVIL LIABILITY FOR FURNISHING
PART I. INTRODUCTION

1-15a California Points & Authorities § 15A.04

§ 15A.04 Related Points and Authorities

For a form of points and authorities relating to alcoholic beverage licensing, see Ch. 15, Alcoholic Beverage Licensing .

For memoranda of points and authorities supporting and opposing summary judgment in premises liability cases based on acts of third parties, see Ch. 178, Premises Liability .

Related memoranda of points and authorities that may be useful in particular cases involving a furnisher of alcoholic beverages may be found in the following chapters:

- Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .
- Ch. 80, Discovery: Scope, Regulation, and Timing .
- Ch. 81, Discovery: Privileges and Other Discovery Limitations .
- Ch. 82, Discovery: Sanctions for Discovery Misuse .
- Ch. 83, Discovery: Depositions .
- Ch. 84, Discovery: Interrogatories .
- Ch. 85, Discovery: Production or Inspection of Tangible Evidence .
- Ch. 86, Discovery: Requests for Admissions .
- Ch. 87, Discovery: Physical and Mental Examinations .
- Ch. 88, Discovery: Exchange of Expert Witness Information .

- Ch. 89, Discovery: Preservation of Evidence .
- Ch. 89A, Discovery: Review of Discovery Orders .
- Ch. 104, Fictitiously Named Defendants (DOES) .
- Ch. 160, Motions to Strike .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsAdmissionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePretrial JudgmentsJudgment on the PleadingsGovernmentsLocal GovernmentsLicensesGovernmentsState & Territorial GovernmentsLicensesTortsNegligenceDutyAlcohol ProvidersDram Shop Statutes

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 15A ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGES: CIVIL LIABILITY FOR FURNISHING
PART I. INTRODUCTION

1-15a California Points & Authorities §§ 15A.05-15A.19

[Reserved]

§§ 15A.05[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 15A ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGES: CIVIL LIABILITY FOR FURNISHING
PART II. FORMS

1-15a California Points & Authorities § 15A.20

§ 15A.20 Supporting Defendant's Motion for New Trial on Ground of Insufficiency of Evidence [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action Against Tavern Keeper to Recover for Personal Injuries Received in Assault by Other Patron--Defendant Unaware of Assailant's Violent Propensity

[1] FORM Supporting Defendant's Motion for New Trial on Ground of Insufficiency of Evidence [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action Against Tavern Keeper to Recover for Personal Injuries Received in Assault by Other Patron--Defendant Unaware of Assailant's Violent Propensity

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____ _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORIT-
Plaintiff,	)	IES IN SUPPORT OF NEW TRIAL
vs.	)	[Code Civ. Proc. § 657]
_____ [name],	)	Date: _____
Defendant.	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
	)	[Trial Date: _____]

_____

THE COURT SHOULD GRANT DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR NEW TRIAL BECAUSE THE EVIDENCE IS INSUFFICIENT TO SHOW THAT DEFENDANT KNEW OF PLAINTIFF'S ASSAILANT'S VICIOUS PROPENSITIES.

A. Motion for New Trial. On the application of the party aggrieved, the _____ [verdict or decision] may be vacated, in whole or in part, and a new trial granted on all or some of the issues on the ground that the evidence is insufficient to justify the _____ [verdict or decision], if the substantial rights of the aggrieved party are materially affected thereby (Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)).

[Optional, in case of motion after jury trial] B. Reweighing Evidence. On a motion for new trial, the court must reweigh the evidence, the inferences therefrom, and the credibility of the witnesses in determining whether the jury clearly should have reached a different verdict (Code Civ. Proc. § 657; Lippold v. Hart (1969) 274 Cal. App. 2d 24, 25, 78 Cal. Rptr. 833). The court may grant a new trial even though the evidence might justify the verdict, and it is the court's duty to set aside the jury's verdict whenever the court's conscience is impressed with the injustice of the verdict, or the court believes that the evidence is unreliable (Moore v. City & County of San Francisco (1970) 5 Cal. App. 3d 728, 738, 85 Cal. Rptr. 281).

C. Known Violent or Vicious Propensity as Prerequisite to Liability. The proprietor of a place where alcoholic beverages are served is not an insurer of his or her patron's safety. His or her duty is limited to the exercise of reasonable care, and he or she is liable only if he or she has negligently received or harbored guests of known violent or vicious propensities (Kingen v. Weyant (1957) 148 Cal. App. 2d 656, 661, 307 P.2d 369 ; see also Saatzer v. Smith (1981) 122 Cal. App. 3d 512, 518, 176 Cal. Rptr. 68).

D. Circumstances Establishing Duty of Proprietor. The duty to protect a patron from injury by another arises only when one or more of the following circumstances exists: The proprietor (1) allows a person on the premises who has a known propensity for fighting, (2) allows a person to remain on the premises whose conduct has become obstreperous and aggressive to such a degree that the proprietor knows or ought to know that it endangers others, (3) has been warned of danger from an obstreperous patron and fails to take suitable measures for the protection of others, (4) fails to stop a fight as soon as possible after it started, (5) fails to provide adequate staff to police the premises, and (6) tolerates disorderly conditions (Slawinski v. Mocettini (1963) 217 Cal. App. 2d 192, 196, 31 Cal. Rptr. 613 ; see also Saatzer v. Smith (1981) 122 Cal. App. 3d 512, 516, 518-519, 176 Cal. Rptr. 68).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted by defendant in support of a motion for a new trial after plaintiff has been awarded a favorable jury verdict or court decision in an action against the defendant proprietor of a place where alcoholic beverages are served to recover for injuries sustained by plaintiff on the defendant's premises from an assault by another patron. The form is for use when there is insufficient or no evidence that defendant knew that the assailant had a violent propensity.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Although not essential, counsel might also show the lack of any evidence showing that the assailant had a violent propensity in the first place, which would give further strength to the argument that defendant did not know of any such propensity.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms relating to motions for new trials, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 371, Motions After Trial (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For memoranda of points and authorities supporting and opposing motions for new trial in general, see Ch. 155, Motions After Trial .

For memoranda of points and authorities supporting and opposing motions for summary judgment in cases involving premises liability in general, see Ch. 178, Premises Liability .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Reweighing Evidence

Lippold v. Hart (1969) 274 Cal. App. 2d 24, 78 Cal. Rptr. 833 , involved an action for personal injuries arising out of an automobile accident in which the jury gave a verdict for the defense. At the hearing on plaintiffs' motion for a new trial, the trial judge stated that plaintiff driver was definitely entitled to recover something, that he disbelieved some of defendant's testimony, and that defense counsel's ingenuity and persuasiveness had led the jury to disbelieve plaintiff driver's testimony. Even though the judge stated that an unjust result had occurred, he denied the motion, stating that he had to abide by the unanimous verdict. Plaintiffs appealed from the adverse judgment.

In reversing the judgment, the court of appeal held that the trial judge's statements showed that he had misconceived his function on the motion for new trial. The court found that the statements suggested that the judge thought himself bound to uphold the jury verdict because the evidence was conflicting (274 Cal. App. 2d 24, 25). The court, however, relying on Code Civ. Proc. § 657 and prior California law, held that a judge is not bound by a conflict in evidence when ruling on a motion for a new trial. Rather, he must reweigh the evidence, the inferences therefrom, and the credibility of the witnesses in determining whether the jury clearly should have reached a different verdict (274 Cal. App. 2d 24, 25-26). Because the period during which the trial court had jurisdiction to order a new trial had expired when the court of appeal ruled on the appeal, the court reversed the judgment rather than attempting to revive the trial court's jurisdiction by vacating the judgment and order denying a new trial (274 Cal. App. 2d 24, 27).

Moore v. City & County of San Francisco (1970) 5 Cal. App. 3d 728, 85 Cal. Rptr. 281 , involved an action for false imprisonment and false arrest. After the jury returned a verdict for defendant, the judge granted plaintiff's motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict as to part of the case, and for a new trial as to another part of the case, based on insufficiency of the evidence and other grounds. Both parties appealed. The court of appeal reversed the partial judgment notwithstanding the verdict, but affirmed the order granting a new trial. In affirming the order granting a new trial, the court held that trial courts have the power to grant a new trial even though the evidence might justify a verdict, and that the trial judge has the duty to set aside a jury's verdict whenever his or her conscience is impressed with the injustice thereof or if he or she believes the evidence is unreliable (5 Cal. App. 3d 728, 738). The court held that the trial judge, who had found the evidence concerning the arrest weak and subject to a great deal of doubt in his mind, had acted well within his discretion (5 Cal. App. 3d 728, 738-739).

[b] Known Violent or Vicious Propensity as Prerequisite to Liability

In Kingen v. Weyant (1957) 148 Cal. App. 2d 656, 307 P.2d 369 , plaintiff's injury occurred as his assailant was leaving a tavern after a brief altercation with a third party. During that altercation, the bartender had said, "Boys, break it up," and a gentlemanly settlement was reached. The assailant then grabbed his wife off a bar stool and headed out of the tavern. On the way to the door, the assailant either hit or pushed plaintiff, who was playing shuffleboard, and plaintiff fell, resulting in personal injuries. There was evidence that plaintiff had put a hand on the assailant, with whom he was acquainted, and objected to assailant's treatment of assailant's wife. Plaintiff sued the tavern owners, alleging that they negligently served intoxicating beverages to the assailant with knowledge that he had vicious, violent, quarrelsome, and disorderly propensities, and that they negligently failed to control his conduct and allowed him to assault plaintiff. The jury returned a verdict in defendants' favor, but the trial court granted plaintiff's motion for a new trial. Defendant tavern owners appealed from the order granting a new trial.

The court of appeal reversed, holding that the evidence would not support a judgment against defendant tavern owners (148 Cal. App. 2d 656, 660). The court applied the rule that the proprietor of an inn is under a duty to protect his patrons from injury, annoyance, and mistreatment, but is not an insurer of their safety. The court held that a proprietor's obligation is limited to the exercise of reasonable care, and that he or she is liable only when he or she negligently receives or harbors guests with known violent or vicious propensities. The plain ground of this liability is the proprietor's negligence in harboring persons dangerous to the peace and comfort of the patrons, for whose comfort the proprietor is bound to provide (148 Cal. App. 2d 656, 661). The court recognized the common law rule that then prevailed, that the sale of liquor to an ordinary man does not imposeliability on the seller for damages resulting from the intoxication (148 Cal. App. 2d 656, 660). The evidence showed that the assailant had been a frequent patron of defendants' tavern for several years, and had had only one argument on the premises which was with his wife. Plaintiff had known the assailant for two years and had never seen him in a fight (148 Cal. App. 2d 656, 660-661). The court held that under this evidence, the assailant was not shown to be known to defendant tavern owners as a violent person (148 Cal. App. 2d 656, 661). The court also found that the bartender had taken prompt and effective action in terminating the argument between the assailant and the third party, his admonition to break it up having been heeded by the assailant. At that point there was no reasonable probability that the assailant would attack anyone because he immediately started to leave. The court held that the bartender could not be required to anticipate plaintiff's action of attempting to restrain the assailant as he was leaving and that the actions of defendant tavern owners could not be considered the proximate cause of plaintiff's injuries (148 Cal. App. 2d 656, 661-662).

In Saatzer v. Smith (1981) 122 Cal. App. 3d 512, 176 Cal. Rptr. 68 , a tavern patron brought a negligence action against the owner for injuries suffered as a result of a fight between two other customers. The owner's motion for summary judgment was granted, and the court of appeal affirmed. At the time plaintiff's cause of action accrued, a commercial vendor of alcoholic beverages could be held liable for injuries proximately caused by the sale of liquor to an obviously intoxicated person (122 Cal. App. 3d 512, 517-518). The only other ground for liability of an owner for negligence, the court noted, is an owner's failure to exercise reasonable care in protecting patrons from injury caused by other customers, such as in receiving or harboring guests of known violent propensities. No evidence of a breach of either duty was demonstrated by plaintiff in her opposing declarations. Rather, the facts were that the fighting patrons had not been previously noticed to be intoxicated or boisterous, their altercation occurred suddenly and unexpectedly, and the employees reached and stopped the fight as soon as possible after it began. The evidence all refuted plaintiff's claim that defendant was negligent in not providing for the protection of his patrons, or in serving liquor to intoxicated patrons. As the court noted, a tavern owner is not an insurer of customer safety, but is only responsible for exercising reasonable care, and such care was demonstrated by defendant's evidence (122 Cal. App. 3d 512, 516, 518-519).

The court also rejected plaintiff's claim that the owner breached a duty of care owed to customers injured as a result of a fight on the premises by failing to ascertain the names of the combatants. The case cited by plaintiff in support of her contention, Clemente v. State of California (1980) 101 Cal. App. 3d 374, 161 Cal. Rptr. 799 (disapproved in Williams v. State of California (1983) 34 Cal. 3d 18, 28 n.9, 192 Cal. Rptr. 233, 664 P.2d 137), involved a special relationship arising between an investigating police officer and an injured pedestrian who was completely dependent on the officer for the identity of the motorcyclist who hit him. The court held that no special relationship exists between a tavern owner and a customer so as to give rise to a duty to ascertain the identities of other customers causing injuries (122 Cal. App. 3d 512, 519-520).

[c] Circumstances Establishing Duty of Proprietor

Plaintiffs' decedent in Slawinski v. Mocettini (1963) 217 Cal. App. 2d 192, 31 Cal. Rptr. 613 , was drinking in defendants' tavern and restaurant from about 11 o'clock on a Saturday morning until about 8:30 that evening. His assailant came in around 11:00 a.m. for a beer and again at 6:00 p.m. Decedent and his assailant did not know one another, but engaged in a normal and friendly conversation until 8:00 p.m. when decedent backhanded the assailant off his stool, and they scuffled on the floor. They were separated by other patrons, and the assailant left without saying a word to anyone. The evidence was conflicting as to whether he looked angry and rushed out or walked out in a normal manner. About 30 minutes later, the assailant returned with a gun and shot decedent five or six times, killing him. Plaintiffs brought suit against defendant tavern owners based on their failure to properly supervise and control their premises so as to prevent the attack and for harboring the assailant. After the jury returned a verdict in plaintiffs' favor, the court granted defendants' motion for a new trial on the ground, in part, that the evidence was insufficient because there was no probative evidence that defendants should have known that the assailant had dangerous propensities and that he would cause bodily harm to decedent. Plaintiffs appealed from the order granting a new trial.

In affirming, the court of appeal noted that plaintiffs had conceded that no cause of action for the negligent furnishing of intoxicating beverages could (at that time) be maintained in California, and that the complaint was based wholly on defendants' failure to properly control and police the premises and prevent the assailant from injuring decedent. The court noted the well-settled proposition that the proprietor of a place where intoxicating beverages are sold owes a duty to exercise reasonable care to protect his or her patrons from injury by fellow guests. Any guest of such a place has the right to assume that he or she is in an orderly house and that the proprietor or his or her employees will exercise reasonable care in maintaining appropriate decorum. The court further stated that although the proprietor is under a duty to protect his or her patrons from injury, annoyance, and mistreatment, he or she is not an insurer of their safety and is only liable for negligently receiving or harboring guests of known violent or vicious propensities. The court relied on Kingen v. Weyant (1957) 148 Cal. App. 2d 656, 661, 307 P.2d 369 (discussed in § 15A.20[3][b])]. The court concluded that a tavern keeper's duty to protect a patron from injury by another arises only when one or more of the following circumstances exists: The tavern keeper (1) allows a person on the premises who has a known propensity for fighting; (2) allows a person toremain on the premises whose conduct has become obstreperous and aggressive to such a degree that the tavern keeper knows or ought to know that it endangers others; (3) has been warned of danger from an obstreperous patron and fails to take suitable measures for the protection of others; (4) fails to stop a fight as soon as possible; (5) fails to provide adequate staff to police the premises; and (6) tolerates disorderly conditions (217 Cal. App. 2d 192, 196). The test of whether or not the duty of reasonable care has been discharged is the probability or foreseeability of injury to a plaintiff. Reviewing the evidence, the court found conflicting evidence as to the assailant's reputation for a hot temper, but found it to be uncontroverted that defendants were unaware of this and had never had trouble with him. Any breach of duty, the court concluded, would have had to arise from a negligent evaluation of the situation after the first incident between decedent and his assailant. In that regard, the court concluded that there was no evidence that defendants had any way of knowing that the assailant would return (217 Cal. App. 2d 192, 197). The court held that considering the state of the evidence, there was no doubt that the trial court properly granted the motion for a new trial. The court discussed the standard of review of orders granting a new trial, noting that all presumptions favor the order over the verdict and that an appellate court will reverse an order granting a new trial only when it can be said as a matter of law that there is no substantial evidence to support a contrary judgment (217 Cal. App. 2d 192, 198).

Saatzer v. Smith (1981) 122 Cal. App. 3d 512, 176 Cal. Rptr. 68 , is discussed in § 15A.20[3][b].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Reweighing Evidence

The facts and procedural background of Slawinski v. Mocettini (1963) 217 Cal. App. 2d 192, 31 Cal. Rptr. 613 , are discussed in § 15A.20[3][c]. In affirming an order granting defendants' motion for a new trial, the court noted that the order had to be affirmed even if the reviewing court might have ruled differently in the first instance. The court stated that in considering the sufficiency of the evidence on the hearing of a motion for a new trial, it is the trial court's exclusive province to judge the credibility of witnesses, to determine the probative force of testimony, and to weigh the evidence, and that the trial court may draw reasonable inferences therefrom opposed to those drawn by the trier of fact at the trial (217 Cal. App. 2d 192, 198).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 15A ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGES: CIVIL LIABILITY FOR FURNISHING
PART II. FORMS

1-15a California Points & Authorities § 15A.21

§ 15A.21 Supporting Motion for Summary Judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c] in Action Against Furnisher of Alcoholic Beverage to Recover for Injuries Caused by Intoxicated Person--By Defendant--Statutory Immunity [Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602(b); Civ. Code § 1714(c)]

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Summary Judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c] in Action Against Furnisher of Alcoholic Beverage to Recover for Injuries Caused by Intoxicated Person--By Defendant--Statutory Immunity [Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602(b); Civ. Code § 1714(c)]

[Caption. See § 15A.20[1].]

THE COURT SHOULD GRANT DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT BECAUSE CIVIL LIABILITY BASED ON FURNISHING ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGES TO AN INTOXICATED PERSON IS BARRED BY SECTION 25602(b) OF THE BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONS CODE [AND SECTION 1714(c) OF THE CIVIL CODE].

A. Summary Judgment. [See § 15A.20[1], Paragraph A.]

B. Statutory Immunity From Liability for Furnishing Alcoholic Beverages. No person who sells, furnishes, gives, or causes to be sold, furnished, or given away, any alcoholic beverage to any habitual or common drunkard or to any obviously intoxicated person pursuant to Section 25602(a) of the Business and Professions Code may be held civilly liable to any injured person or the estate of such person for injuries inflicted on that person as a result of intoxication by the consumer of such alcoholic beverage (Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602(b)).

[Optional] C. Immunity From Liability for Permitting Consumption on Premises. Section 25602 of the Business and Professions Code, reasonably construed, bars suit against those who simply permit the consumption of alcoholic beverages on their premises as well as against those who supply alcohol (Leong v. San Francisco (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 827, 833-834, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 41).

[Optional] D. Action for Nuisance Also Barred. Section 25602(b) of the Business and Professions Code bars a cause of action for nuisance based on the sale or furnishing of alcoholic beverages in violation of alcoholic beverage licensing statutes (Cory v. Shierloh (1981) 29 Cal. 3d 430, 436, 174 Cal. Rptr. 500, 629 P.2d 8).

[Optional] E. Suit by Consumer Barred. Section 25602(b) of the Business and Professions Code bars suit by the intoxicated consumer as well as by third persons injured by the consumer (Cory v. Shierloh (1981) 29 Cal. 3d 430, 437, 174 Cal. Rptr. 500, 629 P.2d 8).

[Optional] F. Social Host's Immunity. No social host who furnishes alcoholic beverages to any person may be held legally accountable for damages suffered by such person, or for injury to the person or property of, or death of, any thirdperson, resulting from the consumption of such beverages (Civ. Code § 1714(c)).

[Optional] G. Exception to Immunity Limited to Cases Involving Obviously Intoxicated Minor. By declaring that the consumption of alcohol, and not the sale or furnishing of such, is the proximate cause of injury inflicted by intoxicated persons, the legislature spoke loudly and clearly that it rejected the concept of preserving even limited liability for those selling or furnishing alcoholic beverages to anyone other than obviously intoxicated minors (Cardinal v. Santee Pita, Inc. (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 1676, 1683, 286 Cal. Rptr. 275).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in support of a motion for summary judgment by a defendant who furnished alcoholic beverages to an intoxicated person in an action to recover for damages that were caused by the intoxicated person.

Optional Paragraph G supports the argument that the intoxicated person is not within the class of persons for which an exception to the statutory immunity applies; that is, he or she was not an obviously intoxicated minor [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602.1]. It may be used to oppose a contention that the plaintiff's claim is exempt from the immunity bar because the defendant was a social host who knew that his or her guest was one who because of some exceptional physical or mental condition should not have been served alcoholic beverages and was or should have been aware of the risks included in providing that person with alcohol [see Cantor v. Anderson (1981) 126 Cal. App. 3d 124, 130-131, 178 Cal. Rptr. 540 (Third Appellate District) ; see also § 15A.23[3][b]]. The authority cited in this form, Cardinal v. Santee Pita, Inc. (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 1676, 1683, 286 Cal. Rptr. 275 (Fourth Appellate District) [see § 15A.21[3][f]], criticizes, and is in conflict with the position taken in Cantor. From a tactical standpoint, counsel may wish to raise the argument in a reply brief to counter an argument in an opposition memorandum that the plaintiff's claim is exempt from the statutory bar of immunity.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should show, by specific reference to affidavits or declarations that support the motion, that defendant is within the class of persons exempted from civil liability under Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602(b) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(b) (support required for motion for summary judgment)].

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. In addition, counsel should attach affidavits or declarations which support the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §

437c].

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms and discussion relating to civil liability based on acts of intoxicated persons, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 19, Alcoholic Beverages: Civil Liability (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For forms and discussion relating to the liability of a premises owner for the tortious acts of third parties, see Ch. 178, Premises Liability .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

If appropriate, the points and authorities in §§ 15A.23 -15A.25 may be used to oppose the contention supported by the points and authorities in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statutory Immunity From Liability for Furnishing Alcoholic Beverages

The legislature's purpose in adding subsection (b) to Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602 was to abrogate the holdings in cases such as Vesely v. Sager (1971) 5 Cal. 3d 153, 158-167, 95 Cal. Rptr. 623, 486 P.2d 151 , Bernhard v. Harrah's Club (1976) 16 Cal. 3d 313, 317, 324-325, 128 Cal. Rptr. 215, 546 P.2d 719 ; and Coulter v. Superior Court (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 144, 149-155, 145 Cal. Rptr. 534, 577 P.2d 669 , in favor of prior judicial interpretation finding that the consumption of alcoholic beverages rather than the serving of them is the proximate cause of injuries inflicted on another by an intoxicated person [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602(c)]. The Supreme Court has held that Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602(b) is constitutional [Cory v. Shierloh (1981) 29 Cal. 3d 430, 437-441, 174 Cal. Rptr. 500, 629 P.2d 8] .

[b] Immunity From Liability for Permitting Consumption on Premises

In Leong v. San Francisco Parking, Inc. (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 827, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 41 , plaintiffs brought an action against a city parking authority and a major league baseball team for the wrongful death of their son. The decedent was killed when a vehicle collided with him after the driver left the stadium parkinglot. The first amended complaint alleged that the driver had been drinking alcoholic beverages in the parking lot both before and after the game, and was intoxicated at the time of the accident. The defendants demurred on the grounds that the plaintiffs' claim failed to state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action and was uncertain because there was no allegation that the driver was an obviously intoxicated minor. The trial court sustained the demurrer without leave to amend. The plaintiffs' filed a motion for reconsideration or, in the alternative, to vacate the judgment. The trial court denied the motion and the plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgments. The principle issue was whether Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602 applied to immunize the defendants. The plaintiffs argued that § 25602 does not bar suit against the defendants because the plaintiffs could plead specific facts alleging that the defendants did not "furnish, sell or give alcoholic beverages to patrons to consume in or about their vehicles in the parking lot." Further, they contended that the absence of any allegation that the city furnished the driver with alcohol rendered the city subject to suit for negligence, notwithstanding § 25602 (235 Cal. App. 3d 827, 832). The court disagreed, citing Coulter v. Superior Court (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 144, 148, 145 Cal. Rptr. 534, 577 P.2d 669 (partially abrogated by Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602 and Civ. Code § 1714(b)). In Coulter, the plaintiffs claimed that one defendant permitted the driver to be served alcoholic beverages on its premises. In the portion of the opinion unaffected by subsequent legislation, the Supreme Court held that because the complaint did not allege that the defendants actually furnished liquor to the driver, no liability was imposed (235 Cal. App. 3d 827, 832). Thus, the court of appeal held that Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602, reasonably construed, bars suit against those who simply permit the consumption of alcoholic beverages on their premises as well as against those who supply alcohol (235 Cal. App. 3d 827, 833-834).

In addition, the court cited DeBolt v. Kragen Auto Supply, Inc. (1986) 182 Cal. App. 3d 269, 272 , which held that § 25602 specifically abrogated the Supreme Court's application of common-law negligence principles to alcohol consumption-related injuries (235 Cal. App. 3d 827, 834).

[c] Action for Nuisance Also Barred

The plaintiff in Cory v. Shierloh (1981) 29 Cal. 3d 430, 174 Cal. Rptr. 500, 629 P.2d 8 , was a minor who was injured when he lost control of his vehicle while attempting to drive home from a party at which he had become intoxicated. Plaintiff brought suit against the lessor of the building where the party was held, the liquor stores that had sold the liquor, the host, and others. One theory of the suit was that the host's use and occupancy of the premises constituted a nuisance because the host permitted the unlicensed and unlawful sale and furnishing of alcoholic beverages to minors and others on the premises. Defendant host demurred to the complaint on the basis of the 1978 amendments to Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602 and Civ. Code § 1714. The trial court sustained the demurrer, and plaintiff appealed from the ensuing judgment of dismissal.

The Supreme Court affirmed. The Court noted that the trial court had held that the legislature, by mandating that the proximate cause of injuries resulting from intoxication is the consumption of alcoholic beverages rather than the furnishing of the beverages or the management of one's property, extended immunity to the sale or furnishing of alcoholic beverages in violation of licensing statutes, whether or not such acts also constituted a nuisance (29 Cal. 3d 430, 436). The Supreme Court found itself forced to agree, because the essence of each cause of action against defendant host was that he had unlawfully caused or permitted plaintiff's intoxication to occur, and that plaintiff was injured as a proximate result (29 Cal. 3d 430, 436-437). The Court held that Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602(b) granted defendant immunity from liability to plaintiff, emphasizing the language of the statute that "No person who sells, furnishes ...#x2026; any alcoholic beverage ...#x2026; shall be civilly liable to any injured person ...#x2026; for injuries inflicted on that person as a result of intoxication by the consumer of such alcoholic beverages." The Court did not reach the question of whether defendants could be deemed social hosts who would be additionally shielded from liability by Civ. Code § 1714(c) (29 Cal. 3d 430, 437).

The exception from immunity that leaves an alcoholic beverage licensee open to liability for causes of action based on injuries caused by selling or furnishing alcoholic beverages to an obviously intoxicated minor did not apply because defendant host was not an alcoholic beverage licensee (29 Cal. 3d 430, 436).

[d] Suit by Consumer Barred

The facts and procedural background of Cory v. Shierloh (1981) 29 Cal. 3d 430, 174 Cal. Rptr. 500, 629 P.2d 8 , are discussed in § 15A.21[3][c]. The Supreme Court held that Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602(b), which immunizes persons who furnish alcoholic beverages from liability to anyone injured as a result of the consumer's intoxication, applies to actions brought by the injured consumer as well as to actions by third persons injured by the consumer (29 Cal. 3d 430, 437).

[e] Social Host's Immunity

The legislature's purpose in adding subsection (c) to Civ. Code § 1714 was the same as the purpose in adding subsection (b) to Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602 [see Civ. Code § 1714(b); see also § 15A.21[3][a]]. The statute has been held constitutional [see Cory v. Shierloh (1981) 29 Cal. 3d 430, 437-441].

[f] Exception to Immunity Limited to Cases Involving Obviously Intoxicated Minor

Cardinal v. Santee Pita, Inc. (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 1676, 286 Cal. Rptr. 275 , involved an action for damages based on personal injuries that the plaintiff sustained when he was struck by a motor vehicle after he left defendant's bar. The complaint alleged that the defendant and its employees continued to serve the plaintiff alcoholic beverages even though defendant knew, or should have known, that the plaintiff was disabled and mentally incompetent, and unable to control his consumption of alcohol due to his disability. Defendant demurred to the complaint on the ground that an action against it was barred by Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602 and Civ. Code § 1714. The trial court sustained the demurrer without leave to amend and dismissed the complaint. The plaintiff appealed after the judgment of dismissal was entered.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment. The plaintiff contended that his cause of action was not barred by the absolute immunity provided servers of alcoholic beverages because he was within a class of persons unable to resist the consumption of alcohol due to an exceptional mental or physical condition, an exception judicially recognized in Cantor v. Anderson (1981) 126 Cal. App. 3d 124, 130-131, 178 Cal. Rptr. 540 (Third Appellate District) . The court of appeal disagreed, finding Cantor's interpretation of case law "strained" and its analysis of the 1978 dramshop legislation "shaky at best" (234 Cal. App. 3d 1676, 1683). Although the Supreme Court referred to Cantor in Strang v. Cabrol (1984) 37 Cal. 3d 720, 724, 726, 209 Cal. Rptr. 347, 691 P.2d 1013 [see § 15A.22[3][a]], the court considered that reference to be dictum (234 Cal. App. 3d 1676, 1682). The court, instead, cited Strang's recitation of the maxim that an express exclusion from the operation of a statute indicates that the legislature intended no other exceptions to be implied (234 Cal. App. 3d 1676, 1681). The court relied on the holding in Strang that the legislature abolished tort liability against the furnisher of alcoholic beverages except in one situation, namely, the providing of alcohol to an obviously intoxicated minor. Thus, the court held that the plaintiff, as a matter of law, could not state a cause of action (234 Cal. App. 3d 1676, 1683).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Statutory Immunity From Liability for Furnishing Alcoholic Beverages

Hepe v. Paknad (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 412, 244 Cal. Rptr. 823 , was an action for damages for injuries sustained by plaintiff in a traffic accident allegedly caused by a bar's sale and service of alcohol to the alcoholic driver of a car that hit plaintiff's motorcycle. The court of appeal affirmed the trial court's ruling, which sustained defendants' demurrers without granting plaintiff leave to amend the complaint and entered judgment of dismissal against plaintiff. The court of appeal refused to find that the defendant driver's alcoholism constituted an exceptional physical or mental condition sufficient under Cantor v. Anderson (1981) 126 Cal. App. 3d 124, 178 Cal. Rptr. 540 [see § 15A.23[3][b]], to except defendant bar owner from immunity under Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602. The court rejected the Cantor analysis as not resting on a sound statutory basis. Instead, the court relied on the holding of Strang v. Cabrol (1984) 37 Cal. 3d 720, 728, 209 Cal. Rptr. 347, 691 P.2d 1013 [see § 15A.22[3][a]], that no exceptions to the immunity of Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602 exist, or are to be implied, other than that applicable to the provision of alcohol to an obviously intoxicated minor (199 Cal. App. 3d 412, 418-419).

[b] Social Host's Immunity

In Bass v. Pratt (1986) 177 Cal. App. 3d 129, 222 Cal. Rptr. 723 , plaintiff brought an action against defendants who had served alcohol in their home to an already intoxicated minor, who subsequently caused injury to plaintiff when their automobiles collided. On appeal from the trial court's grant of defendant's motion for summary judgment, the court of appeal affirmed. The court considered plaintiff's argument that the case came within the parameters of Cantor v. Anderson (1981) 126 Cal. App. 3d 124, 132, 178 Cal. Rptr. 540 , which held that a social host could be held liable for furnishing liquor to a guest known to have an "exceptional physical or mental condition" that made the consumption of liquor unsafe. The court rejected the contention that youth itself constitutes a physical condition that precludes the safe and lawful provision and consumption of alcohol. The court held that the statutory provisions of Civ. Code § 1714 and

Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602 immunize a social host against civil liability for furnishing alcoholic beverages to an intoxicated minor, absent a showing that the minor was incompetent, incapable of voluntary action, or otherwise suffering from some peculiar mental disability (177 Cal. App. 3d 129, 135-137).

In Andre v. Ingram (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 206, 210 Cal. Rptr. 150 , plaintiff lived with defendant's adult son in defendant's home. Plaintiff brought and later drank a bottle of liquor with defendant's son in defendant's home. The couple were later in an accident in plaintiff's car, which was driven by defendant's intoxicated son. Plaintiff brought an action for personal injuries against defendant. The trial court dismissed after sustaining defendant's demurrer. The court of appeal affirmed. Plaintiff based her argument on a special relationship of host and guest that she alleged required defendant to prevent her drunk son from driving or to warn plaintiff that her son was an alcoholic and therefore appeared not intoxicated when he really was. The court stated that Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 25602, 25602.1, and Civ. Code § 1714 provide that consumption, not furnishing, of alcoholic beverages is the proximate cause of injuries resulting from intoxication and that no social host who furnishes alcoholic beverages to anyperson shall be held legally accountable for damages or injury resulting from the consumption of those beverages (164 Cal. App. 3d 206, 209-210).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 15A ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGES: CIVIL LIABILITY FOR FURNISHING
PART II. FORMS

1-15a California Points & Authorities § 15A.22

§ 15A.22 Supporting General Demurrer [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10(e), 430.30(a)] in Action Against Furnisher of Alcoholic Beverages to Minor to Recover for Injuries Caused by Intoxicated Person--By Defendant--Statutory Immunity [Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602(c); Civ. Code § 1714(b)]

[1] FORM Supporting General Demurrer [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10(e), 430.30(a)] in Action Against Furnisher of Alcoholic Beverages to Minor to Recover for Injuries Caused by Intoxicated Person--By Defendant--Statutory Immunity [Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602(c); Civ. Code § 1714(b)]

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____ _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES IN SUPPORT OF DEMURRER BY _____ [name] TO COMPLAINT OF _____ [name] ON GROUND OF STATUTORY IMMUNITY [Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602(c); Civ. Code § 1714(b); Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10(e), 430.30(a)]
vs.	)
_____ [name],	)
Defendant.	)
	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
	)	[Trial Date: _____]

_____

THE COURT SHOULD SUSTAIN DEFENDANT'S GENERAL DEMURRER BECAUSE THE COMPLAINT SHOWS ONLY THAT DEFENDANT FURNISHED ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGES IN VIOLATION OF SECTION 25658(a) OF THE BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONS CODE, IN WHICH CASE CIVIL LIABILITY IS BARRED BY SECTION 1714(b) OF THE CIVIL CODE AND SECTION 25602(c) OF THE BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONS CODE.

A. General Demurrer. The party against whom a complaint has been filed may object to it by demurrer on the ground that it fails to state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action when the ground of objection appears on the face of the complaint [or from any matter of which the court must or may take judicial notice] (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10(e), 430.30(a)).

B. Statutory Immunity From Liability for Furnishing Alcoholic Beverages to Sober Minor. A person who sells, furnishes, gives, or causes to be sold, furnished, or given away any alcoholic beverage to any person under the age of 21 who is not obviously intoxicated, in violation of Section 25658(a) of the Business and Professions Code, may not be held civilly liable to any injured person or the estate of such person for injuries inflicted on that person as a result of intoxication by the consumer of such alcoholic beverage due to the sweeping civil immunity provided by Section 1714 of the Civil Code and Section 25602 of the Business and Professions Code (Strang v. Cabrol (1984) 37 Cal. 3d 720, 724-725, 209 Cal. Rptr. 347, 691 P.2d 1013).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in support of a general demurrer by a defendant who furnished alcoholic beverages to a minor, in an action to recover for damages caused by the minor. It may also be modified for use in support of a motion for summary judgment [see § 15A.21]. Counsel should note, however, that legislation has extended liability to all persons who sell or cause to be sold an alcoholic beverage to an obviously intoxicated minor for those injuries proximately caused to a third party as a result of the sale [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602.1].

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms and discussion regarding demurrers, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings (Matthew Bender). For forms and discussion regarding civil liability based on acts of intoxicated persons, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 19, Alcoholic Beverages: Civil Liability (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to demurrers generally, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statutory Immunity From Liability for Furnishing Alcoholic Beverages to Sober Minor

Plaintiff in Strang v. Cabrol (1984) 37 Cal. 3d 720, 209 Cal. Rptr. 347, 691 P.2d 1013 , was injured in an accident caused while riding in a vehicle driven by an intoxicated minor. She brought an action against defendants, retail liquor dealers, alleging that, in violation of Bus. & Prof. Code § 25658, they sold alcholic beverages to a minor who in turn provided the alcohol to the minor driver who consumed the alcohol and whose intoxication caused plaintiff's injuries. The trial court sustained a general demurrer by defendants without leave to amend. Plaintiff appealed.

The Supreme Court affirmed. The Court rejected the argument that defendants remained exposed to common law tort liability because Bus. & Prof. Code § 25658 did not include any express language of civil immunity like that in Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602. The Court concluded that, on the contrary, the sweeping civil immunity provided under Civ. Code § 1714 and Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602 were intended to encompass the situation in which alcoholic beverages are sold to a minor in violation of Bus. & Prof. Code § 25658. The only exception to this sweeping immunity is expressly provided by Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602.1, which only applies in a situation in which a licensed defendant sells alcoholic beverages to an obviously intoxicated minor (37 Cal. 3d 720, 724-725). In holding that a defendant who furnished alcoholic beverages to a sober minor was immune from civil liability, the Court expressly disapproved the inconsistent holding in Burke v. Superior Court (1982) 129 Cal. App. 3d 570, 181 Cal. Rptr. 149 (37 Cal. 3d 720, 728).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Statutory Immunity From Liability for Furnishing Alcoholic Beverages to Sober Minor

In DeBolt v. Kragen Auto Supply, Inc. (1986) 182 Cal. App. 3d 269, 227 Cal. Rptr. 258 , consolidated wrongful death actions arising out of an automobile accident caused by an intoxicated minor, the court of appeal affirmed the trial court's judgment, dismissing plaintiffs' complaints after sustaining defendant's demurrers without leave to amend. The court held that the social host immunity of Civ. Code § 1714(b) shielded defendant from liability incurred by serving alcohol to the minor at a party hosted by defendant, and then ordering the minor to leave the party when she became intoxicated and disorderly (182 Cal. App. 3d 269, 276). In so holding, the court ruled that plaintiffs could not avoid the effect of Civ. Code § 1714(b) by alleging defendant's wrong to be forcing the minor toleave the party or failing to provide her with safe transportation, not furnishing the alcohol (182 Cal. App. 3d 269, 274).

In Rogers v. Alvas (1984) 160 Cal. App. 3d 997, 207 Cal. Rptr. 60 , the court of appeal affirmed the grant of summary judgment for defendants, retail liquor dealers, who sold whiskey to a sober minor. The minor drank the whiskey, became intoxicated, obtained an automobile, and drove it through plaintiff's house, causing personal injury to her. The court concluded that licensed alcoholic beverage dealers who provide alcoholic beverages to sober minors are statutorily immune from claims by third parties injured as a result of the intoxication of those minors by virtue of Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602.1. Defendants contended that Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 25602, 25602.1, and Civ. Code § 1714 established their statutory immunity from plaintiff's claim. The court discussed the legislative history of the enactment and amendment of those code sections and Cory v. Shierloh (1981) 29 Cal. 3d 430, 174 Cal. Rptr. 500, 629 P.2d 8 (discussed in § 15A.21[3][c]), concluding that defendants' immunity was clearly required (160 Cal. App. 3d 997, 1000-1004).

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 15A ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGES: CIVIL LIABILITY FOR FURNISHING
PART II. FORMS

1-15a California Points & Authorities § 15A.23

§ 15A.23 Opposing Defendant's Motion for Summary Judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c] in Action Against Furnisher of Alcoholic Beverages to Recover for Injuries Caused by Intoxicated Person--Exceptions to Statutory Immunity [Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602(b); Civ. Code § 1714(c)]--Furnishing Alcoholic Beverage to Intoxicated Minor or Incompetent Persons [Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602.1]

[1] FORM Opposing Defendant's Motion for Summary Judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c] in Action Against Furnisher of Alcoholic Beverages to Recover for Injuries Caused by Intoxicated Person--Exceptions to Statutory Immunity [Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602(b); Civ. Code § 1714(c)]--Furnishing Alcoholic Beverage to Intoxicated Minor or Incompetent Persons [Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602.1]

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____ _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORIT-
vs.	)	IES IN OPPOSITION TO MOTION FOR SUM-
_____ [name],	)	MARY JUDGMENT
Defendant.	)	[Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]
	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE THE STATUTORY IMMUNITY FROM CIVIL LIABILITY BASED ON _____[SELLING OR CAUSING TO BE SOLD or FURNISHING OR CAUSING TO BE FURNISHED or GIVING OR CAUSING TO BE GIVEN AWAY] ALCOHOL TO ANOTHER PERSON PROVIDED BY SECTION 25602(b) OF THE BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONS CODE AND SECTION 1714(c) OF THE CIVIL CODE DOES NOT APPLY WHEN DEFENDANT _____ [SOLD OR CAUSED TO BE SOLD or FURNISHED OR CAUSED TO BE FURNISHED or GAVE OR CAUSED TO BE GIVEN AWAY] ALCOHOL TO _____ [AN OBVIOUSLY INTOXICATED MINOR or A PERSON HAVING AN EXCEPTIONAL PHYSICAL OR MENTAL CONDITION OF WHICH DEFENDANT WAS OR SHOULD HAVE BEEN AWARE].

[EITHER]

A. Statutory Exception to Immunity for Selling, Furnishing, or Giving Away Alcoholic Beverages to Obviously Intoxicated Minors. Notwithstanding*Section 25602(b) of the Business and Professions Code* (barring civil liability generally for damages caused by furnishing alcoholic beverages to obviously intoxicated persons), a cause of action may be brought by or on behalf of any person who has suffered injury or death against any person holding an alcoholic beverage license pursuant to Section 23300 of the Business and Professions Code, or any person required to be licensed under that section, or any person authorized by the federal government to sell alcoholic beverages on a military base or other federal enclave, who sells, furnishes, gives, or causes to be sold, furnished, or given away any alcoholic beverage, or any other person who sells, or causes to be sold, any alcoholic beverage, to any obviously intoxicated minor when the sale, furnishing, or giving of that beverage to the minor is the proximate cause of the personal injury or death sustained by that person (Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602.1; see Chalup v. Aspen Mine Co. (1985) 175 Cal. App. 3d 973, 975-979, 221 Cal. Rptr. 97).

[OR]

A. No Statutory Immunity When Furnishing Alcoholic Beverage to Person Suffering From Exceptional Physical or Mental Condition. An action may be brought for any resulting damages against a person who furnished an alcoholic beverage to another person knowing that because of an exceptional physical or mental condition the other person should not be served alcohol, when the person furnishing the beverage was or should have been aware of the risks involved in furnishing the beverage (Cantor v. Anderson (1981) 126 Cal. App. 3d 124, 132, 178 Cal. Rptr. 540).

[Optional] B. "Obviously Intoxicated" Defined. "Obvious intoxication" is defined by a person's appearance. Outward manifestations of obvious intoxication include incontinence, unkempt appearance, alcoholic breath, loud or boisterous conduct, bloodshot or glassy eyes, incoherent or slurred speech, flushed face, poor muscular coordination or unsteady walking, loss of balance, impaired judgment, and argumentative behavior (Jones v. Toyota Motor Co. (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 364, 368, 370, 243 Cal. Rptr. 611). These outward manifestations must be sufficient to cause a reasonable person with normal powers of observation to believe that the minor [or exceptionally disabled person] was intoxicated (Schaffield v. Abboud (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 1133, 1140-1141, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 205).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a motion for summary judgment by a defendant who has sold, furnished, or given alcoholic beverages to an underage person or an exceptionally disabled person in an action to recover for damages that were caused by the person who was sold, furnished, or given the beverage.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. In addition, counsel should attach affidavits or declarations setting out factual allegations required for the exceptions to statutory immunity to apply [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c].

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in this form may be submitted in opposition to a motion for summary judgment supported by the points and authorities in § 15A.21.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statutory Exception to Immunity for Selling, Furnishing, or Giving Away Alcoholic Beverages to Obviously Intoxicated Minors

Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602.1 provides that, notwithstanding Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602(b) (barring civil liability for damages caused by furnishing alcoholic beverages to obviously intoxicated persons), a cause of action may be brought by or on behalf of any person who has suffered injury or death against any person licensed, or required to be licensed, pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 23300 (licensing of alcoholic beverage vendors), or any person authorized by the federal government to sell alcoholic beverages on a military base or other federal enclave, who sells, furnishes, gives, or causes to be sold, furnished, or given away any alcoholic beverage, or any other person who sells, or causes to be sold, any alcoholic beverage to any obviously intoxicated minor, when the furnishing, sale, or giving of that beverage to the minor is the proximate cause of the personal injury or death sustained by that person.

Former Civ. Code § 25 [now see Fam. Code § 6500] provides that minors are all persons under 18 years of age. In enacting former Civ. Code § 25 (now see Fam. Code § 6500), however, the legislature also adopted a statement of intent declaring that whenever the term "21 years of age" or any similar phrase regarding such age appears in any provision of law, it shall be deemed to mean 18 years of age, except for those provisions relating to the minimum age for the sale, purchase, or consumption of alcoholic beverages [Stats. 1971, ch. 1748, § 1].Bus. & Prof. Code § 25062.1 appears in that part of the Business and Professions Code which forbids liquor transactions to person less than 21 years of age. For these reasons, it appears that the term "minor" as used in Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602.1 may refer to persons under 21 years of age rather than merely to persons under 18 years of age.

In Chalup v. Aspen Mine Co. (1985) 175 Cal. App. 3d 973, 221 Cal. Rptr. 97 , plaintiff, an 18-year-old woman, became intoxicated while sitting at the bar in defendant restaurant. After leaving the restaurant she ran across the street against the traffic signal and was hit by a car, sustaining injuries. Plaintiff brought an action against defendant for negligence in serving her alcoholic beverages. The trial court granted summary judgment in favor of defendant. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal reversed. The sole issue on appeal was whether a cause of action existed under Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602.1 for a minor patron against a licensed purveyor of alcohol for injuries suffered by the minor as a proximate result of the sale of the alcoholic beverages to her while she was obviously intoxicated. The court carefully examined the legislative history and meaning of Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602.1, saying that the ordinary and usual meaning of its words would include minors in the absence of a statement excluding them, since "any person" means any person. Minors are among the persons allowed to sue under the Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602.1 exception to the statutory immunity provided by Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602(b) (175 Cal. App. 3d 973, 975-979).

[b] No Statutory Immunity When Furnishing Alcoholic Beverage to Person Suffering From Exceptional Physical or Mental Condition

In Cantor v. Anderson (1981) 126 Cal. App. 3d 124, 178 Cal. Rptr. 540 , plaintiff alleged that defendants, knowing of the resident's disability, served alcoholic beverages to one of the residents of the home for developmentally disabled persons maintained by plaintiff. As a result of consuming the beverages, the disabled resident fell into a seizure, lost consciousness, was rendered unable to control his actions and subsequently became violent, injuring plaintiff. Defendants interposed a general demurrer, which the trial court sustained without leave to amend.

The court of appeal reversed and directed the trial court to enter a new order sustaining the demurrer with leave to amend. Reviewing the history of liability of a person furnishing alcohol to another for damages caused by the person to whom alcohol had been furnished as a result of intoxication, the court cited a series of cases in which the Supreme Court had held that both a vendor and a social host who had furnished alcohol to an obviously intoxicated person could be held liable for any proximately caused damage. The court noted that the rule set forth in these cases was subsequently abrogated by the legislature. As the court noted, the legislature amended Civ. Code § 1714 (providing that everyone is responsible for an injury occasioned to another by want of ordinary care or skill in managing his or her own property or person), on which the Supreme Court had relied when it imposed liability on the furnisher of alcoholic beverages, by adding to that section subsections (c) (social host who furnishes alcoholic beverages to guest not liable for damages suffered by either guest or any third person resulting from consumption of such beverages) and (b) (reinstating prior judicial interpretation of the section that it is the drinking of alcoholic beverages and not the serving of them which is the proximate cause of any injury resulting from intoxication). The court also noted that Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602 (furnishing alcoholic beverage to an obviously intoxicated person by licensed vendor of such beverages as misdemeanor), on which the Supreme Court had relied when it imposed liability on persons who furnished alcohol in commercial settings, was similarly modified by the legislature [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602(b), (c)] (126 Cal. App. 3d 124, 128).

The court held that since the meaning of Civ. Code § 1714(c) is determined by the legislative intent declared in Civ. Code § 1714(b) to return to the original common law rule, that rule, as set forth by the Supreme Court in the case of Cole v. Rush (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 345, 289 P.2d 450 , was the applicable rule in the present case (126 Cal. App. 3d 124, 129). However, the court also noted that returning to the Cole rule required returning to the limitations of that rule as well. Reviewing the Cole case, the court noted that the Supreme Court had addressed itself to the sale of alcoholic beverages to the ordinary person and had held only that the voluntary consumption of alcoholic beverages by a competent person contributed directly to any resulting injury, thus superseding any sale or gift of the beverage as proximate cause. The court cited several cases to show that the traditional common law rule did not affect liability for furnishing alcohol to a person unable to resist its consumption (126 Cal. App. 3d 124, 130).

The court further held that Civ. Code § 1714 did not prevent the drinker's exceptional physical or mental condition from being deemed a concurrent proximate cause when the injuries complained of were a joint effect of the alcohol and the drinker's condition. Thus, the statutory abrogation of liability for the alcohol did not bar a claim based on liability for the injuries as a foreseeable and concurrent result of the exceptional condition (126 Cal. App. 3d 124, 130-131).

The court concluded that the complaint as written did not state a cause of action under the principles that it had set forth. However, the court stated that the addition of an allegation that the defendants not only knew of the drinker's condition when they served him an alcoholic beverage but also knew or should have known the effect which the beverage would have on the drinker by reason of his condition would cure the insufficiency of the complaint. Thus, the court heldthat the trial court's dismissal of the complaint without leave to amend was error (126 Cal. App. 3d 124, 132).

NOTE:

The decision by the Third Appellate District Court of Appeal in Cantor v. Anderson (1981) 126 Cal. App. 3d 124, 130-131 , is in conflict with the position taken by the Fourth Appellate District Court of Appeal in Cardinal v. Santee Pita, Inc. (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 1676 [see § 15A.21[3][f]]. Cardinal held that, by providing a specific statutory exception to the immunity allowed a seller or furnisher of alcoholic beverages in cases in which alcoholic beverages are sold to an obviously intoxicated minor [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602.1], the legislature rejected even limited liability for those selling or furnishing such beverages to anyone other than obviously intoxicated minors [see Cardinal v. Santee Pita, Inc. (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 1676, 1683, 286 Cal. Rptr. 275]. Cantor has also been criticized by the Sixth Appellate District Court of Appeal [Hepe v. Paknad (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 412, 418-419, 244 Cal. Rptr. 823 ; see § 15A.21[4][a]].

[c] "Obviously Intoxicated" Defined

Jones v. Toyota Motor Co. (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 364, 243 Cal. Rptr. 611 , was an action for damages for injuries sustained by plaintiff when, as a passenger, he was seriously injured in a single vehicle collision, against a liquor licensee for having served alcohol to the allegedly obviously intoxicated minor driver [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602.1]. The jury returned a unanimous verdict for the defendant, and plaintiff appealed, contending that the jury instructions were prejudicially erroneous.

The court of appeal found one of the jury instructions to be erroneous, but held that error to be harmless under the facts of the case, and affirmed the judgment. In so holding, the court stated that "obvious intoxication" is defined by a person's appearance (198 Cal. App. 3d 364, 368]. The court held that the jury was properly instructed that it should consider several outward manifestations of obvious intoxication, which included the factors set forth in Paragraph B of § 15A.29[1] (198 Cal. App. 3d 364, 370].

In Schaffield v. Abboud (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 1133, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 205 , an minor struck plaintiff's motor scooter with a car, injuring plaintiff. Plaintiff brought an action for damages against defendant on the ground that the latter has sold alcoholic beverages to the minor when his was obviously intoxicated. The jury returned a verdict for the defendant, and plaintiff appealed, contending that the trial court improperly instructed the jury that the minor was not obviously intoxicated unless he exhibited one or more signs of intoxication that were sufficient to cause a reasonable person to believe he was intoxicated.

The court of appeal held that these instructions were correct because the standard for determining obvious intoxication is measured by the observations of a reasonable person. Sellers are liable only if they do not perceive warning signs that a reasonable person would have perceived, or if they ignore warning signs that the did in fact perceive. Holding otherwise would impose strict liability on the seller (15 Cal. App. 4th 1133, 1140-1141).

170 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 15A ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGES: CIVIL LIABILITY FOR FURNISHING
PART II. FORMS

1-15a California Points & Authorities § 15A.24

§ 15A.24 Opposing Defendant's Motion for Summary Judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c] in Action Against Furnisher of Alcoholic Beverages to Recover for Injuries Caused by Intoxicated Person--Exceptions to Statutory Immunity [Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602(b); Civ. Code § 1714(c)]--Negligent Performance of Undertaking Resulting in Harm to Third Person

[1] FORM Opposing Defendant's Motion for Summary Judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c] in Action Against Furnisher of Alcoholic Beverages to Recover for Injuries Caused by Intoxicated Person--Exceptions to Statutory Immunity [Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602(b); Civ. Code § 1714(c)]--Negligent Performance of an Undertaking Resulting in Harm to Third Person

[Caption. See § 15A.23[1].]

DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE THERE IS A TRIABLE ISSUE OF MATERIAL FACT REGARDING WHETHER DEFENDANT OWED PLAINTIFF A DUTY BASED ON DEFENDANT'S UNDERTAKING TO RENDER SERVICES TO ANOTHER THAT HE/SHE SHOULD HAVE RECOGNIZED AS NECESSARY FOR THE PROTECTION OF A THIRD PERSON. SUCH CONDUCT IS OUTSIDE THE SCOPE OF IMMUNITIES ALLOWED FURNISHERS OF ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGES.

A. Negligent Performance of Undertaking. One who undertakes, gratuitously or for consideration, to render services to another that he or she should recognize as necessary for the protection of a third person or his or her property, is subject to liability to the third person for physical harm resulting from his or her failure to exercise reasonable care to protect his or her undertaking if _____ [his or her failure to exercise reasonable care increases the risk of harm or he or she has undertaken to perform a duty owed by the other to the third person or the harm is suffered because of reliance of the other or the third person on the undertaking] (Williams v. Saga Enters., Inc. (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 142, 151, 274 Cal. Rptr. 901).

B. Conduct Outside Scope of Statutory Immunity. Although, under Section 25602 of the Business and Professions Code and Section 1714 of the Civil Code, a furnisher of alcoholic beverages has no duty to the public insofar as his or her patrons' consumption of alcohol affects those persons, a furnisher of alcoholic beverages may nonetheless be held liable under the principles expressed in Section 324A of the Restatement (Second) of Torts (Williams v. Saga Enterprises., Inc. (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 142, 153-154).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a motion for summary judgment by a defendant who has undertaken to render a service to another, such as to a patron, to whom the defendant has sold, furnished, or given alcoholic beverages, and the circumstances were such that the defendant should have recognized that the services were necessary for the protection of a third person. Under these circumstances, the defendant assumes a "good Samaritan" role that takes the case out of the scope of the liability limitations in Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602 and Civ. Code § 1714 and places it within the parameters of Restatement (Second) of Torts § 324A [see Williams v. Saga Enters., Inc. (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 142, 151, 274 Cal. Rptr. 901].

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel would refer to facts in declarations tending to show that the defendant had undertaken to render a service to another which he or she should have recognized as necessary for the protection of a third person or his things.

For example, in Williams v. Saga Enterprises, Inc., counsel presented a partial reporter's transcript from the criminal trial of the drunk driver who caused the plaintiff's injuries. The transcripts reflected the testimony of the defendant restaurant's manager to a custom that the accused had of giving his car keys to the bartender at the restaurant whenever he came to the establishment. From this evidence, the court concluded that the plaintiff submitted a triable issue of material fact regarding whether the defendant and its patron, the drunk driver, had an arrangement or agreement on the night of the accident to the effect that the keys would not be returned if the patron were under the influence of alcohol. Such an arrangement would permit liability under Restatement (Second) of Torts § 324A [Williams v. Saga Enters., Inc. (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 142, 153, 274 Cal. Rptr. 901 ; see § 15A.24[3][a]].

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the motion supported by the points and authorities in § 15A.21.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Negligent Performance of Undertaking

Williams v. Saga Enters., Inc. (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 142, 274 Cal. Rptr. 901 , involved an action for personal injuries stemming from an automobile accident in which the plaintiff alleged that his injuries resulted from the defendant's intoxication at the time of the accident. The complaint also named asa defendant the owner of a restaurant where the defendant driver had been drinking before the accident occurred. In discovery, plaintiff learned that employees of the defendant restaurant had received the defendant driver's car keys before serving him drinks and had returned the keys to him after the defendant driver became intoxicated. The plaintiff contended that the returning of the keys constituted negligent entrustment of the vehicle and rendered the defendant restaurant liable to the plaintiff. The defendant restaurant filed a motion for summary judgment, contending that it could not be charged with negligent entrustment, and that under Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602 and Civ. Code § 1714, it could not be held liable for the defendant driver's negligence while intoxicated. The trial court granted the summary judgment motion, and the plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal reversed the judgment, and remanded the cause to the trial court with directions to vacate its order and conduct further proceedings. The court acknowledged that a tavern owner has no duty to the public insofar as his or her patrons' consumption of alcohol affects those persons. The court concluded, however, that testimony at the defendant driver's criminal trial by the defendant restaurant's manager, regarding a custom that the accused had of giving his car keys to the bartender at the restaurant whenever he came to the establishment, supported the inference that the defendant driver placed his keys with the defendant restaurant's bartenders to keep himself from driving while under the influence. Together, the court held that this evidence was sufficient to create a triable issue of material fact over whether the restaurant employees had assumed (and breached) a duty under Restatement (Second) of Torts § 324A (225 Cal. App. 3d 142, 151).

The defendant restaurant argued that since no special relationship exists between a tavern owner and its patrons, summary judgment was warranted. The court, however, cited Williams v. State of California (1983) 34 Cal. 3d 18, 192 Cal. Rptr. 233, 664 P.2d 137 (which involved Restatement (Second) of Torts § 323, a companion section to § 324A), for the proposition that even without any special relationship, § 324A prevents such a judgment in light of the evidence of the undertaking by the restaurant employee (225 Cal. App. 3d 142, 152). The court did agree that the case did not involve negligent entrustment because the defendant restaurant did not own the vehicle driven by the defendant driver. This was of no value to the defendant restaurant, however, given the existence of an issue regarding Restatement (Second) of Torts § 324A (225 Cal. App. 3d 142, 153).

[b] Conduct Outside Scope of Statutory Immunity

The facts and procedural background of Williams v. Saga Enters., Inc. (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 142, 274 Cal. Rptr. 901 , are discussed in § 15A.24[3][a]. The court concurred with the plaintiff's assertion that a "good Samaritan" role adopted by a tavern owner's employees with respect to the tavern owner takes the case out of the scope of the liability limitations in Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602 and Civ. Code § 1714. The court stated that by statute a tavern owner has no duty to the public insofar as his or her patrons' consumption of alcohol affects those persons. The tavern owner may, however, be held liable under the principles expressed in § 324A of the Restatement (Second) of Torts (225 Cal. App. 3d 142, 153-154).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 15A ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGES: CIVIL LIABILITY FOR FURNISHING
PART II. FORMS

1-15a California Points & Authorities § 15A.25

§ 15A.25 Opposing Contention That Furnisher of Alcoholic Beverages Not Liable for Injuries Caused by Intoxicated Person--Exceptions to Statutory Immunity [Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602(b); Civ. Code § 1714(c)]--Duty of Premises Owner or Possessor to Protect Patrons From Tortious Conduct of Third Parties

[1] FORM Opposing Contention That Furnisher of Alcoholic Beverages Not Liable for Injuries Caused by Intoxicated Person--Exceptions to Statutory Immunity [Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602(b); Civ. Code § 1714(c)]--Duty of Premises Owner or Possessor to Protect Patrons From Tortious Conduct of Third Parties

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT IS LIABLE FOR INJURIES CAUSED PLAINTIFF BY AN INTOXICATED THIRD PARTY BECAUSE DEFENDANT OWED PLAINTIFF A DUTY AS AN [OWNER or POSSESSOR] OF PREMISES TO PROTECT PLAINTIFF FROM THE TORTIOUS CONDUCT OF THIRD PARTIES ON THOSE PREMISES AND THEREFORE DEFENDANT'S LIABILITY IS NOT PRECLUDED BY THE STATUTORY IMMUNITY PROVIDED TO FURNISHERS OF ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGES.

A. Duty to Protect Against Wrongful Conduct of Third Persons. An owner or possessor of premises, including a business proprietor, owes a duty to invitees, including patrons, to take affirmative action to protect them against the wrongful conduct of third persons that threatens their safety if that conduct and its accompanying harm are reasonably foreseeable (Frances T. v. Village Green Owners Ass'n (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 490, 499-503, 229 Cal. Rptr. 456, 723 P.2d 573 ; Southland Corp. v. Superior Court (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 656, 664, 250 Cal. Rptr. 57).

B. Statutory Immunity Inapplicable. Although, under Business & Professions Code Section 25602(b) and Civil Code Section 1714(c), the consumption rather than the serving of alcoholic beverages is the proximate cause of injuries inflicted on another by an intoxicated person and a furnisher of alcoholic beverages has no duty to the public, insofar as the consumption of alcohol by his/her/its patrons affects others, a furnisher may nonetheless be liable to a patron for failure to maintain a safe premises because he/she/it has permitted his/her/its premises to be used as an arena for aggressive tortfeasors (Cantwell v. Peppermill, Inc. (1994) 25 Cal. App. 4th 1797, 1802-1803, 31 Cal. Rptr. 2d 246).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that a defendant who has furnished alcoholic beverages to a third person is not liable under Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602(b) and Civ. Code § 1714(c) for the injuries suffered by plaintiff because of that third person's tortious conduct. The basis for opposition is that the furnisher, as a premises owner or possessor, has a duty to maintain a safe premises and to protect patrons from the reasonably foreseeable wrongful acts of third persons, and that this duty is outside the scope of the immunity from liability afforded by those statutes.

These points and authorities may be combined with a form of memorandum of points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel raises the issue of the liability of a furnisher of alcoholic beverages to patrons injured by the tortious acts of a third person. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should discuss facts showing the wrongful conduct of the third party, the harm it caused, and why that conduct was reasonably foreseeable to an extent that justifies imposing on defendant a duty to prevent that harm.

If appropriate, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the points and authorities in §§ 15A.21 and 15A.22.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms and discussion regarding civil liability based on acts of intoxicated persons, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 19, Alcoholic Beverages: Civil Liability (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For forms and discussion relating to the liability of a premises owner for the tortious acts of third parties, see Ch. 178, Premises Liability .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Duty to Protect Against Wrongful Conduct of Third Persons

In Frances T. v. Village Green Owners Ass'n (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 490, 229 Cal. Rptr. 456, 723 P.2d 573 , plaintiff was robbed and raped in her condominium by an assailant who entered her dwelling under the cover of darkness. Plaintiff brought a negligence action against the condominium association for negligently failing to provide adequate lighting in the common areas that it controlled and for wrongfully ordering her to remove the additional lighting she had provided on her own initiative. The trial court sustained defendant's demurrer to plaintiff's cause of action.

The Supreme Court reversed. The Court held that defendant was under the same duty to maintain the common areas as that of a landlord (42 Cal. 3d 490, 499-501). Under this standard, defendant was potentially liable for failure to take steps to protect plaintiff from the criminal acts of third parties. Plaintiff hadalleged in her cause of action that defendant knew that the lighting around her unit was inadequate and also knew that a number of crimes had been committed in the area as a result of poor lighting. The Court held that these allegations, if proven, would support a finding of negligence, and that the negligence was a legal cause of plaintiff's injuries (42 Cal. 3d 490, 503).

Southland Corp. v. Superior Court (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 656, 250 Cal. Rptr. 57 , was a mandate proceeding arising out of an action for damages against the owners of a convenience store by a customer who, after leaving the defendants' premises, was criminally assaulted while walking to his car. The car was parked on a vacant, unpaved lot adjacent to the store; defendants neither owned nor leased the lot but knew that its patrons used the lot for parking. The trial court denied defendants' motion for summary judgment, and defendants petitioned the court of appeal for a writ of mandate to compel the trial court to grant their motion.

In denying a peremptory writ and discharging the alternative writ on the ground that there were triable issues of fact regarding whether defendants controlled the adjacent lot and whether harm to plaintiff was foreseeable, the court of appeal held that a premises owner or possessor who opens those premises to the public for business purposes is subject to liability to members of the public for physical harm caused them on the premises by the accidental, negligent, or intentionally harmful acts of third persons and by the failure of the premises owner or possessor to exercise reasonable care either to discover that these acts are occurring or are likely to occur, to give a warning adequate to enable the visitors to avoid the harm, or to protect them against it in some other way. Liability is normally imposed if a premises owner or possessor has reasonable cause to anticipate the misconduct of third persons (203 Cal. App. 3d 656, 663). The court explained that premise owners or possessors are not the insurers of the safety of persons on their premises, but that they do have a duty to take reasonable steps to protect those persons from foreseeable injury, even to the extent of controlling the conduct of third parties (203 Cal. App. 3d 656, 668).

[b] Statutory Immunity Inapplicable

In Cantwell v. Peppermill, Inc. (1994) 25 Cal. App. 4th 1797, 31 Cal. Rptr. 2d 246 , plaintiffs were a married couple who were dining at a restaurant, bar, and lounge (at which alcoholic beverages were served) operated by defendants. Another patron who had been furnished alcoholic beverages by defendants assaulted and stabbed the husband. Plaintiffs' original complaint for personal injury and loss of consortium alleged two causes of action: liability for furnishing alcohol to the assailant that caused his aggressive behavior; and premises liability for failing to protect patrons against assaults. Defendants demurred to the complaint in reliance on Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602(b), which provides that a furnisher of alcoholic beverages to intoxicated persons is not civilly liable to any injured person for injuries resulting from the intoxication of the consumer of the alcoholic beverages, and the trial court gave plaintiffs leave to file an amended complaint. Plaintiffs' amended complaint omitted the first cause of action, alleging that defendants had known for three years about assaults committed on the premises, but had failed to warn or otherwise protect its patrons. The trial court sustained defendants' demurrer to the amended complaint and granted judgment of dismissal, and plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal reversed and remanded, holding that Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602 does not preclude all actions against innkeepers merely because they furnish alcohol. A proprietor has a duty of care to protect patrons from the reasonably foreseeable criminal or tortious conduct of third persons, whether or not these third persons purchased or consumed alcohol on the proprietor's premises (25 Cal. App. 4th 1797, 1801). The court noted that a license to sell alcoholic beverages does not confer a grant of immunity to an innkeeper who permits the premises to be used as an arena for aggressive tortfeasors. The court held that the purpose of Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602 was to immunize defendants from liability to plaintiffs injured by the intoxicated drivers to whom defendants had furnished alcoholic beverages, not to immunize innkeepers who encourage or permit their patrons to become so drunk and belligerent that they assault other patrons (25 Cal. App. 4th 1797, 1802-1803).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 16 AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS

1-16 California Points & Authorities 16.syn

§ 16.syn Synopsis to Chapter 16: AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS

§ 16.01 Scope of Chapter

§ 16.02 Governing Statutes

§ 16.03 Distinction Between Amended Pleadings and Amendments to Pleadings

§ 16.04 Procedure for Amending Pleadings

§ 16.05 Counter Motion to Reopen Case After Amendment

§ 16.06 Forcible Entry and Detainer

§ 16.07 Use of Noticed Motion and memorandum

§ 16.08 Actions Involving Child Support

§ 16.09 Page Limits on Memorandum

§ 16.10 Related Pleadings and Practice Forms

§ 16.11 Related Points and Authorities

§§ 16.12-16.29 [Reserved]

§ 16.30 Supporting Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--General Form

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

[c] Limitations on General Rule of Liberality

[d] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statutory Authority

[b] Liberal Allowance of Amendment

[c] Denial of Leave to Amend Rarely Justified

[d] Timely Motion to Amend to Assert Meritorious Claim or Defense

[e] Amendment at Any Time Before Judgment

[f] Postponement of Trial Appropriate

[g] Amendment in Fast Track Proceedings

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Liberal Allowance of Amendment

[b] Denial of Leave to Amend Rarely Justified

[c] Timely Motion to Amend to Assert Meritorious Claim or Defense

§ 16.31 Supporting Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading to Conform to Proof [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 469, 470, 473(a), 576]--General Form

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Failure to Amend to Conform to Proof

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[d] Limitation on Amendment to Conform to Proof

[e] Notice of Motion

[f] Filing Formal Amendment

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statutory Authority

[b] Discretion of Court

[c] Liberal Allowance of Amendment

[d] Amendment at Any Stage of Trial

[e] Notice Not Required

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Discretion of Court

[b] Liberal Allowance of Amendment

[c] Amendment at Any Stage of Trial

§ 16.32 Supporting Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--Before Court Grants Judgment on Pleadings

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Amendment of Defective Pleading Before Judgment on the Pleadings

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Amendment of Defective Pleading Before Judgment on the Pleadings

§ 16.33 Supporting Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--Correction of Mistaken or Inadvertent Statement

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Amendment to Correct Error Caused by Mistake or Inadvertence

[b] Amendment to Omit Allegation

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Amendment to Correct Error Caused by Mistake or Inadvertence

§ 16.34 Supporting Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--To More Fully or Accurately State Cause of Action or Defense

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Amendment to State Cause of Action or Defense More Fully or Accurately

[b] Amendment to State Cause of Action or Defense More Fully or Accurately

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Amendment to State Cause of Action or Defense More Fully or Accurately

§ 16.35 Supporting Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--Complaint--To Correct Failure to State Cause of Action

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[i] Related Uses

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Alleging Essential Element of Cause of Action

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Alleging Essential Element of Cause of Action

§ 16.36 Supporting Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--Complaint--Correction of Technical Defect

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[i] Related Uses

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Amendment to Cure Technical Defect

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Amendment to Cure Technical Defect

§ 16.37 Supporting Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--Complaint--New Theory of Recovery After Limitations Period Has Run

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

[i] Related Uses

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Relation Back of Amendment Based on Same General Set of Facts

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Relation Back of Amendment Based on Same General Set of Facts

§ 16.38 Supporting Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--Complaint--Change in Relief Sought

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[i] Related Uses

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Changing Relief Sought

[b] Change From Law to Equity

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Changing Relief Sought

§ 16.39 Supporting Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--Complaint--Increased Demand for Damages

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Uses

[c] Amendment to Conform to Proof Increasing Damages

[d] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Increase in Amount of Damages

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Increase in Amount of Damages

§ 16.40 Supporting Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--Complaint--Addition of Party Defendant or Correction of Misnomer of Defendant

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Opposing Memorandum

[c] Notice of Motion

[d] Prior Dismissal Does Not Bar Reinstating Defendant as Doe Defendant

[e] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[f] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Amendment to Add Party or Correct Misnomer

[b] Correction of Misnomer After Statute of Limitations Has Run

[c] Suit Brought Against Wrong Defendant Because of Similarly Named Dual Entities

[d] Prior Dismissal Without Prejudice Does Not Bar Amendment Reinstating Defendant

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Correction of Misnomer After Statute of Limitations Has Run

[b] Suit Brought Against Wrong Defendant Due to Similarly Named Dual Entities

§ 16.41 Supporting Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--Complaint--Addition of Party Plaintiff

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Addition of Party Plaintiff

[b] Addition of Party Plaintiff

[c] Addition of Plaintiff's Solely-Owned Professional Corporation

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Addition of Party Plaintiff

§ 16.42 Supporting Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--Complaint--Substitution of Plaintiffs or Change in Plaintiff's Capacity to Establish Standing to Sue

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Amendment to Change Plaintiff's Capacity

[b] Amendment to Bring In Real Party In Interest as Plaintiff

[c] Amendment to Correct Mistake In Plaintiff's Name

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Amendment to Bring In Real Party in Interest as Plaintiff

[b] Amendment to Correct Mistake in Plaintiff's Name

§ 16.43 Supporting Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--Answer--Particular Liberality in Allowing Amendment of Answers

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Liberal Amendment of Answers

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Liberal Amendment of Answers

§ 16.44 Supporting Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--Answer--To Assert New Defense

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Amendment to State New Defense

[b] Proposed Defense Is Novel Question

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Amendment to State New Defense

[b] Proposed Defense Is Novel Question

§ 16.45 Opposing Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--General Form

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Amendment Only in Furtherance of Justice

[b] Showing to Justify Exercise of Discretion

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Showing to Justify Exercise of Discretion

§ 16.46 Opposing Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading to Conform to Proof [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 469, 470, 473(a), 576]--General Form

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Failure of Proof

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Introduction of New Issue

[b] Prejudice to Adverse Party

[c] Lack of Evidence

[d] Evidence Objected to

[e] Based on Evidence Relating to Pleaded Issue

[f] Amendment on Appeal is Not Permitted if the Trial Court Sustains a Demurrer With Leave to Amend and the Plaintiff Elects Not to Amend the Pleading

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Introduction of New Issue

[b] Prejudice to Adverse Party

[c] Lack of Evidence

§ 16.47 Opposing Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--Failure to Present Copy of Amendment

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Copy of Amendment

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Copy of Amendment

§ 16.48 Opposing Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473, 576]--Unwarranted Delay in Presenting Amendment

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Lack of Diligence Unavailable as Grounds Early in Proceedings

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Unwarranted Delay as Grounds for Denial

[b] Lack of Due Diligence

[c] New Issue Requiring Further Investigation or Discovery

[d] Motion on Eve of Trial

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Unwarranted Delay as Grounds for Denial

[b] New Issues Requiring Further Investigation or Discovery

§ 16.49 Opposing Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--Failure to Correct Defect

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Failure to Correct Defect

§ 16.50 Opposing Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--Unexplained Omission of Allegation Fatal to Pleading

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Purpose of Rule

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Unexplained Omissions

[b] Answers

[c] Unverified Pleadings

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Unexplained Omissions

[b] Unverified Pleadings

§ 16.51 Opposing Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§

473(a), 576]--Contradiction of Admission in Original Pleading

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Mistake or Inadvertence

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Contradictory Amendment

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Contradictory Amendment

§ 16.52 Opposing Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--Complaint--Proposed Amendment States No Ground for Relief

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[i] Related Uses

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Amendment if No Relief Possible

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] No Amendment if No Relief Possible

§ 16.53 Opposing Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--Complaint--Entirely New Cause of Action or New Party Plaintiff After Statute of Limitations Has Run

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[i] Related Uses

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Amendment to State Entirely New Cause of Action Barred by Statute of Limitations

[b] New Party Enforcing Independent Right

[c] Different Instrumentality

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] No Amendment to State Entirely New Cause of Action Barred by Statute of Limitations

[b] New Party Enforcing Independent Right

§ 16.54 Opposing Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--Complaint--Addition of Party Defendant After Statute of Limitations Has Run

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[i] Related Uses

[b] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Amendment to Add New Party After Limitations Period Has Run

[b] Amendment to Correct Characterization of Party's Capacity

[c] Amendment to Deficient Initial Complaint For Purposes of Relation Back Doctrine

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] No Amendment to Add New Party After Limitations Period Has Run

§ 16.55 Opposing Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--Answer--Inequitable Defense

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Inequitable Defense

§§ 16.56-16.69 [Reserved]

§ 16.70 Supporting Motion for Leave to File Supplemental Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 464(a)]--General Form

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Discretion of Court

[b] Liberal Allowance of Supplemental Pleadings

§ 16.71 Supporting Motion for Leave to File Supplemental Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 464(a)]--To Recover Additional Relief Based on Same Issues

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Award of Additional Relief Without Supplemental Complaint

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Additional Relief Based on Same Issues

[b] Installments Accruing After Original Complaint

[c] After Appeal

§ 16.72 Supporting Motion for Leave to File Supplemental Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 464(a)]--Seeking Different Relief

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Supplemental Pleading Not Necessary in Equity

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Change in Relief Sought

§ 16.73 Supporting Motion for Leave to File Supplemental Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 464(a)]--Substitute Personal Representative for Defendant in Pending Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 377.41]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Substitution of Personal Representative

§ 16.74 Supporting Motion for Leave to File Supplemental Answer [Code Civ. Proc. § 464(a)]--General Form

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Occurrences Material to Defense

§ 16.75 Supporting Motion for Leave to File Supplemental Answer [Code Civ. Proc. § 464(a)]--Defense Arising After Filing of Original Answer

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Assertion of New Defense

[b] Discharge in Bankruptcy

[c] Res Judicata

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Res Judicata

§ 16.76 Opposing Motion for Leave to File Supplemental Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. § 464(a)]--Matters Not Occurring Between Original Pleading and Judgment

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Matters Occurring Before Original Pleading or After Judgment

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Matters Occurring Before Original Pleading or After Judgment

§ 16.77 Opposing Motion for Leave to File Supplemental Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 464(a)]--Not in Furtherance of or Consistent With Original Action

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Furtherance of and Consistency With Original Action

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Furtherance of and Consistency With Original Action

§ 16.78 Opposing Motion for Leave to File Supplemental Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 464(a)]--No Cause of Action When Original Complaint Filed

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Cause of Action When Original Complaint Filed

§ 16.79 Opposing Motion for Leave to File Supplemental Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 464(a)]--Introducing New Cause of Action

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] New Cause of Action

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] New Cause of Action

§ 16.80 Opposing Motion for Leave to File Supplemental Answer [Code Civ. Proc. § 464(a)]--Insufficient to Assert Defense

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Defense Stated

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] No Defense Stated

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 16 AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

1-16 California Points & Authorities § 16.01

§ 16.01 Scope of Chapter

This part contains memoranda of points and authorities relating to amended pleadings. It includes general forms for use in supporting [see § 16.30] and opposing [see § 16.45] a motion for leave to file an amended pleading. Also included are general forms for use in supporting [see § 16.31] and opposing [see § 16.46] a motion for leave to amend to conform to proof.

In addition to the general forms, forms relating to specific grounds for granting or denying a motion for leave to amend are included in this part. These forms should be incorporated in the general forms as appropriate. Included are forms relating to specific grounds in support of a motion for leave to amend that may apply to any type of pleading [see §§ 16.32 -16.34], forms that apply to complaints [see §§ 16.35 -16.42], and forms that apply to answers [see §§ 16.43, 16.44].

This part also contains forms relating to specific grounds in opposition to a motion for leave to amend that may be applicable to any type of pleading [see §§ 16.47 -16.51], that apply to complaints [see §§ 16.52 -16.54], and that apply to answers [see § 16.55].

This part contains memoranda of points and authorities relating to motions for leave to file supplemental pleadings. It includes:

- General forms for use in supporting a motion for leave to file a supplemental complaint [see § 16.70] or answer [see § 16.74].

- Forms designed to be combined with the general forms and presenting specific grounds for granting a motion for leave to file a supplemental complaint [see §§ 16.71, 16.72] or answer [see § 16.75].

- A form supporting a motion to file a supplemental complaint to substitute a personal representative for a defendant who dies pending the action [see § 16.73].

- Forms for use in opposing a motion for leave to file a supplemental complaint [see §§ 16.77 -16.79], answer [see § 16.80], or either type of supplemental pleading [see § 16.76].

Provisions relating to amendment of pleadings and supplemental pleadings in particular proceedings, such as Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1173 (forcible entry and detainer) and 1250.340 (eminent domain) are not included. Also excluded are amendments under Code Civ. Proc. § 474 to designate the true name of fictitiously named defendants. For forms of points and authorities related to proceedings involving fictitious defendants, see Ch. 104, Fictitiously Named (DOES).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsConforming Pleadings to EvidenceCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsLeave of CourtCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsRelation BackCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsSupplemental Pleadings

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 16 AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

1-16 California Points & Authorities § 16.02

§ 16.02 Governing Statutes

Generally, amendment of pleadings is governed by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 469-475, 576, and Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1324.

Supplemental pleadings in general are governed by Code Civ. Proc. § 464.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsConforming Pleadings to EvidenceCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsLeave of CourtCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsRelation BackCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsSupplemental Pleadings

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 16 AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

1-16 California Points & Authorities § 16.03

§ 16.03 Distinction Between Amended Pleadings and Amendments to Pleadings

Amended pleadings and amendments to pleadings set forth facts occurring before the action was begun, while the purpose of supplemental pleadings is to allege material facts occurring after the former complaint or answer was filed [compare Code Civ. Proc. § 464 (supplemental pleadings) with Cohen v. Superior Court (1966) 244 Cal. App. 2d 650, 657, 53 Cal. Rptr. 378 (amended pleadings and amendments to pleadings)].

An amended pleading is a complete new pleading that totally replaces the prior pleading of the party who files it, as distinguished from an amendment to a pleading which alters only part of the prior pleading. In either case, the subject of the amendment relates to facts that occurred before the action was instituted [Cohen v. Superior Court (1966) 244 Cal. App. 2d 650, 657, 53 Cal. Rptr. 378]. The forms of memoranda in this part may be used in support of or in opposition to motions for leave to file either amended pleadings or amendments to pleadings.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsConforming Pleadings to EvidenceCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsLeave of CourtCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsRelation BackCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsSupplemental Pleadings

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 16 AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

1-16 California Points & Authorities § 16.04

§ 16.04 Procedure for Amending Pleadings

Without moving for leave of court, a party may amend any pleading once as a matter of course before the answer or demurrer is filed, or after demurrer and before the trial of the issue of law on the demurrer. Thus, a plaintiff has a right to amend his or her pleading at any time before a responsive pleading is filed and even after a responsive pleading is filed up to the time of the hearing on the demurrer, if applicable [Barton v. Khan (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 1216, 1222, 69 Cal. Rptr. 3d 238]. The amended pleading is merely filed and a copy served on the adverse party [Code Civ. Proc. § 472].

Otherwise, leave of court is required in order to file an amended pleading. The court may, in furtherance of justice and on any terms as may be proper, allow a party to amend any pleading or proceeding by adding or striking out the name of any party, or by correcting a mistake in the name of a party, or a mistake in any other respect [Code Civ. Proc. § 473(a)]. No notice requirement is imposed by Code Civ. Proc. § 473 for such a motion. Such amendments may add new parties to the action [National Secretarial Service, Inc. v. Froehlich (1989) 210 Cal. App. 3d 510, 519, 258 Cal. Rptr. 506].

Once a judgment has been rendered, a pleading may not be amended unless the judgment is first vacated [see Issa v. Alzammar (1995) 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 617].

The court may likewise, in its discretion, after notice to the adverse party, allow, on such terms as may be just, an amendment to any pleading or proceeding in other particulars [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]. Although Code Civ. Proc. § 576 does not impose any notice requirement, the procedures for amendment under Code Civ. Proc. § 473(a) should be followed because Code Civ. Proc. § 576 was apparently enacted merely to clarify the law so as to ensure that amendment of pretrial orders would be subject to the same principles as amendment of pleadings [see Gonzales v. Brennan (1965) 238 Cal. App. 2d 69, 74-75, 47 Cal. Rptr. 501].

A memorandum must accompany the notice of motion for leave to file an amended pleading. The court may construe absence of the memorandum as an admission that the motion is not meritorious and as cause for its denial [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(a)].

A motion to amend a pleading before trial must include a copy of the proposed amendment or amended pleading, which must be serially numbered to differentiate it from previous pleadings or amendments; it must state what allegations in the previous pleading are proposed to be deleted, if any, and where, by page, paragraph, and line number, the deleted allegations are located, and it must state what allegations are proposed to be added to the previous pleading, if any, and where, by page, paragraph, and line number, the additional allegations are located [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1324(a)(1)-(3)]. The motion must be accompanied by a supporting declaration that specifies: the effect of the amendment; why the amendment is necessary and proper; when the facts giving rise to the amended allegations were discovered; and the reasons why the request for amendment was not made earlier [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1324(b)(1)-(4)]. Local Court Rules governing motions to file amended pleadings are null and void as they are preempted by the California Rules of Court [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.20(a)]. For forms of declarations in support of a motion for leave to file an amended pleading, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 21, Amended and Supplemental Pleading (Matthew Bender).

A motion for leave to amend and, therefore, a memorandum in support of the motion are not necessary in order to obtain leave to amend a pleading after a demurrer to it is sustained because leave to amend within 10 days is deemed granted when the demurrer is ruled on, unless the court orders otherwise [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 3.1100, 3.1320(g); see also Code Civ. Proc. § 472a].

If a complaint or cross complaint is amended, a copy of the amendment or amended complaint or cross complaint must be filed and served on the defendants or cross defendants affected by it [Code Civ. Proc. § 471.5].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProceduresPleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsDemurrersCivil ProceduresPleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProceduresPleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsLeave of CourtCivil ProceduresPleading & PracticePleadingsAnswersCivil ProceduresPleading & PracticePleadingsSupplemental Pleadings

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 16 AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

1-16 California Points & Authorities § 16.05

§ 16.05 Counter Motion to Reopen Case After Amendment

If the adverse party is denied the opportunity to present material evidence on any issue due to an amendment to conform to proof introducing a new issue, the adverse party should apply to the court to reopen the case so that the evidence may be introduced [Reidy v. Collins (1933) 134 Cal. App. 713, 722-723, 26 P.2d 712 ; Hedstrom v. Union Trust Co. (1908) 7 Cal. App. 278, 283, 94 P. 386 ; see also Simone v. McKee (1956) 142 Cal. App. 2d 307, 314, 298 P.2d 667]. On applying to reopen the case, it must be shown that the adverse party was misled or prevented from introducing evidence to rebut the evidence on which the amendment was based and that, on reopening, he or she will be able to introduce evidence tending to overcome that evidence [see Hedstrom v. Union Trust Co. (1908) 7 Cal. App. 278, 283, 94 P 386]. However, it has been held that a party was prejudiced in presenting her case by an amendment introducing a new issue, contributory negligence, when plaintiff reasonably declined the opportunity to reopen to avoid unduly highlighting the issue [Brautigam v. Brooks (1964) 227 Cal. App. 2d 547, 560, 38 Cal. Rptr. 784].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProceduresPleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProceduresPleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsLeave of CourtCivil ProceduresPleading & PracticePleadingsSupplemental Pleadings

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 16 AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

1-16 California Points & Authorities § 16.06

§ 16.06 Forcible Entry and Detainer

When on the trial of any proceeding under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1159-1179a (forcible entry and detainer), it appears from the evidence that the defendant has been guilty of either a forcible entry or forcible or unlawful detainer other than the offense charged in the complaint, the judge must order that the complaint be forthwith amended to conform to the proof. The amendment must be made without any imposition of terms, and no continuance is to be permitted on account of the amendment unless the defendant shows by affidavit, good cause therefor to the satisfaction of the court [Code Civ. Proc. § 1173].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProceduresPleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProceduresPleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsLeave of CourtCivil ProceduresPleading & PracticePleadingsSupplemental PleadingsReal Property LawLandlord & TenantLandlord's Remedies & RightsEviction ActionsForcible Entry & DetainerReal Property LawTitle QualityAdverse Claim ActionsUnlawful Detainer

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 16 AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

1-16 California Points & Authorities § 16.07

§ 16.07 Use of Noticed Motion and memorandum

A plaintiff or defendant may be allowed to make a supplemental complaint or answer on motion [Code Civ. Proc. § 464]. The Code of Civil Procedure does not require the motion to be noticed, but it has been suggested that a noticed motion should be used in all but "exceptional cases" [see California Civil Procedure Before Trial, Vol. 1, § 23.17 (Cal. CEB 3rd ed.)]. If counsel proceeds by noticed motion, a memorandum must be filed with the notice of motion [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 3.1113(a)].

Counsel proceeding ex parte might wish to submit a supporting memorandum as well. Although it is not required, it provides a procedure for bringing authorities and argument before the judge in case he or she has doubts as to granting the motion.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsLeave of CourtCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAnswersCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsComplaintsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsSupplemental Pleadings

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 16 AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

1-16 California Points & Authorities § 16.08

§ 16.08 Actions Involving Child Support

In actions involving child support, a party may file a supplemental complaint to establish paternity or support for another child of the parents of the child whose paternity and support are already in issue. The supplemental complaint may be filed without leave of court [Code Civ. Proc. § 464(b); see Code Civ. Proc. § 464(c) (amended or supplemental summons)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsComplaintsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsSupplemental PleadingsFamily LawChild SupportGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 16 AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

1-16 California Points & Authorities § 16.09

§ 16.09 Page Limits on Memorandum

Generally, a memorandum must not exceed 15 pages in length, or, in the case of a motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication, 20 pages in length. A reply or closing memorandum may not exceed 10 pages in length [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(d)]. Any party desiring to file a longer memorandum must obtain leave of court [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(e)]. For further discussion of the page limitations under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113, and of other basic format requirements of memoranda see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs, § 1.05.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsSupplemental PleadingsCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentSupporting MaterialsMemoranda of Law

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 16 AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

1-16 California Points & Authorities § 16.10

§ 16.10 Related Pleadings and Practice Forms

For a discussion and forms relating to amendment of pleadings, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 21, Amended and Supplemental Pleadings (Matthew Bender).

For a discussion and forms relating to amendment of complaints to increase the damages sought, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 177, Damages (Matthew Bender).

For a discussion and forms relating to amendment of prayers, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 420, Prayers (Matthew Bender).

For additional discussion and forms relating to bringing a new party into an action, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 395, Parties (Matthew Bender).

For discussion relating to amendment of pleadings after the statute of limitations has run, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions (Matthew Bender).

For a discussion of continuances when a pleading is amended, and forms relating to continuances generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 136, Continuances (Matthew Bender).

For a discussion and forms relating to amendment of pretrial orders, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 425, Pretrial Proceedings (Matthew Bender).

For discussion and forms relating to supplemental pleadings generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 21, Amended and Supplemental Pleadings (Matthew Bender).

For a discussion of amending and supplementing pleadings in eminent domain proceedings, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 247, Eminent Domain (Matthew Bender).

For discussion and forms relating to supplemental pleadings for use in particular cases, see the following chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender):

- Ch. 226, Dissolution of Marriage: Attorney's Fees .
- Ch. 122, Community Property .
- Ch. 440, Probate: Is Probate Necessary? , et seq.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsSupplemental PleadingsCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 16 AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

1-16 California Points & Authorities § 16.11

§ 16.11 Related Points and Authorities

Memoranda that may be useful in particular proceedings when amended pleadings are sought to be filed may be found in Ch. 66, Death and Survival Actions , and Ch. 186, Probate of Wills .

For forms of memoranda supporting a motion for an order to bring a new party into an action, see Ch. 168, Parties , in this set. For memoranda relating to substitution of named parties for fictitiously named defendants, see Ch. 104, Fictitiously Named Defendants (DOES).

For a memorandum relating to amendment of pleadings and pretrial orders under Code Civ. Proc. § 576, see Ch. 180, Pretrial Proceedings .

For memoranda relating to motions to strike amended pleadings, see Ch. 160, Motions to Strike .

For related memoranda for use in substituting a personal representative for a deceased party, see Ch. 10, Abatement and Survival of Actions .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProceduresPleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProceduresPleading & PracticePleadingsSupplemental PleadingsCivil ProceduresPartiesSubstitutionsDeath of PartyTortsWrongful Death & Survival ActionsSurvival Actions

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 16 AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

1-16 California Points & Authorities §§ 16.12-16.29

[Reserved]

§§ 16.12[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 16 AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
PART II. FORMS
A. Amended Pleadings

1-16 California Points & Authorities § 16.30

§ 16.30 Supporting Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--General Form

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--General Form

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)
Plaintiff,	)
vs.	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	memorandum IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR Defendant.	)	LEAVE TO FILE _____
	)	[AMENDED or AMENDMENT TO A(N)]
	)	_____ [COMPLAINT or DEMUR-
		RER or ANSWER or CROSS COMPLAINT]

_____

THE DISCRETION OF THE COURT TO ALLOW A PARTY TO AMEND ANY PLEADING SHOULD BE LIBERALLY EXERCISED SO THAT CASES MAY BE DETERMINED ON THEIR MERITS.

A. Statutory Authority. The court, in its discretion, may allow an amendment to any pleading in the furtherance of justice and on such terms as may be proper (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576). A[n] _____ [complaint or demurrer or answer or cross complaint] is a pleading (Code Civ. Proc. § 422.10). Amendment may be allowed by the court at any time before or after commencement of trial (Code Civ. Proc. § 576).

B. Liberal Allowance of Amendment. The power of the courts to allow amendment of pleadings is to be liberally exercised so that cases may be decided on their merits (Desny v. Wilder (1956) 46 Cal. 2d 715, 751, 299 P.2d 257 ; Klopstock v. Superior Court (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 13, 19-20, 22, 108 P.2d 906).

C. Denial of Leave to Amend Rarely Justified. A court will very rarely be justified in refusing a party leave to amend so that he or she may properly present the case (Guidery v. Green (1892) 95 Cal. 630, 633, 30 P. 786 ; Redevelopment Agency v. Herrold (1978) 86 Cal. App. 3d 1024, 1031, 150 Cal. Rptr. 621).

D. Timely Motion to Amend to Assert Meritorious Claim or Defense. It is an abuse of the court's discretion to deny a timely motion to amend when the refusal deprives a party of the right to assert a meritorious cause of action or defense, if granting leave to amend will not prejudice the opposing party (Redevelopment Agency v. Herrold (1978) 86 Cal. App. 3d 1024, 1031, 150 Cal. Rptr. 621 ; Morgan v. Superior Court (1959) 172 Cal. App. 2d 527, 530, 343 P.2d 62).

E. Amendment at Any Time Before Judgment. A trial court has complete power to allow amendment of pleadings at any time before entry of judgment (Bank of America v. Superior Court (1942) 20 Cal. 2d 697, 702, 128 P.2d 357).

[Optional] F. Postponement of Trial Appropriate. Trial courts may allow amendments to pleadings and if necessary, postpone trial. Motions to amend are properly granted as late as the first day of trial or even during trial if the defendant is alerted to the charges by the factual allegations, no matter how framed and the defendant will not be prejudiced. If the original pleading has not framed the issues in an articulate and precise manner, a plaintiff should not be precluded from having a trial on the merits (Honig v. Financial Corp. of America (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 960, 965, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 922).

[Optional] G. Amendment in Fast Track Proceedings. Matters should be promptly resolved. However, if an amendment is appropriate, the trial court should continue the trial if necessary, even if the matter is on fast track (Honig v. Financial Corp. of America (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 960, 967, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 922).

[Add supporting points and authorities relating to any specific reasons why the amendment should be allowed (see §§ 16.32 -16.44).]

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in support of a motion for leave to file an amended pleading or an amendment to a pleading. It contains only general points supporting amendment, and is designed to be used as a framework for a supporting memorandum. More specific points and authorities supporting amendment of a complaint [see §§ 16.35

-16.42] and an answer [see §§ 16.43, 16.44] are included in this part and should be combined with this form as relevant to the case. Points and authorities relating to specific grounds for allowing amendment that may apply to any type of pleading are also included [see §§ 16.32 -16.34] and should likewise be combined with this form as relevant.

For a general form of points and authorities that should be used to support a motion for leave to amend to conform to proof see § 16.31, rather than § 16.30.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. In particular, counsel should indicate why the motion is timely and why amendment would not prejudice the opposing party.

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities set out in § 16.45 may be used in an appropriate case to generally oppose a motion for leave to amend supported by this memorandum, as may the points and authorities set out in §§ 16.47 -16.55, relating to specific grounds of opposition.

[c] Limitations on General Rule of Liberality

Even though courts ordinarily exercise liberality in allowing amendment of pleadings, particularly of answers [see § 16.43], allowance of amendments rests in the sound discretion of the trial court. Courts are much more critical of proposed amendments to pleadings offered after long unexplained delay or on the eve of trial, or when there is a lack of diligence, or there is prejudice to the opposing party [Hulsey v. Koehler (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 1150, 1159, 267 Cal. Rptr. 523 ; Permalab-Metalab Equipment Corp. v. Maryland Cas. Co. (1972) 25 Cal. App. 3d 465, 472, 102 Cal. Rptr. 26 ; see Rainer v. Community Memorial Hosp. (1971) 18 Cal. App. 3d 240, 257-258, 95 Cal. Rptr. 901 ; see also Kolani v. Gluska (1998) 64 Cal. App. 4th 402, 405, 412, 75 Cal. Rptr. 2d 257 (leave to amend may be denied if there is prejudice to opposing party, such as delay in trial, loss of critical evidence, or added costs of preparation; absent this or any statute of limitations concern, trial court should have granted leave to amend, rather than sustaining demurrer without leave to amend, when it knew of potentially viable claim at time of sustaining of demurrer, even though plaintiff did not request leave to amend)]. Moreover, the right to amend should be denied if a change is made in the liability sought to be enforced or it appears to a certainty that no basic right exists or no relief can possibly be granted [Hunt v. Smyth (1972) 25 Cal. App. 3d 807, 101 Cal. Rptr. 4 ; Landis v. Superior Court (1965) 232 Cal. App. 2d 548, 554, 42 Cal. Rptr. 893].

Denial of amendment has been upheld on two grounds--the subject matter of the proposed pleading or the conduct of the parties. If the subject matter raises a disfavored plea, is insufficient to state a cause of action or defense, contradicts an admission in the original pleading without a showing of mistake or excuse, or changes the cause of action, denial is upheld. If the conduct of the party shows long and unexplained delay, particularly if indicative of bad faith or if requiring a continuance, denial is upheld. Reversals are common, however, where the appellant shows prejudice from the denial of the motion to amend [Hunt v. Smyth (1972) 25 Cal. App. 3d 807, 101 Cal. Rptr. 4 ; Landis v. Superior Court (1965) 232 Cal. App. 2d 548, 554-555, 42 Cal. Rptr. 893].

[d] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms of notices of motion for orders to grant leave to amend pleadings, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice., Ch. 21, Amended and Supplemental Pleadings (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statutory Authority

The section most often cited as providing authority to the court to allow amendment of any pleading in furtherance of justice is Code Civ. Proc. § 473 which specifically allows amendment, without notice to the adverse party, to add or strike out the name of any party, or to correct a mistake in the name of a party, or a mistake in any other respect. Code Civ. Proc. § 473 also provides that the court may, in its discretion, after notice to the adverse party, allow amendment to any pleading in other particulars, on such terms as may be just.

Additional authority for amendment of pleadings is provided by Code Civ. Proc. § 576, which provides that any judge, at any time before or after commencement of trial, in the furtherance of justice, and on such terms as may be proper, may allow the amendment of any pleading or pretrial conference order. The purpose of Code Civ. Proc. § 576 is to clarify the effect of amendments to pleadings when the pretrial conference order is not amended, and to give statutory support to the rule of Feykert v. Hardy (1963) 213 Cal. App. 2d 67, 28 Cal. Rptr. 510 , that the same principles which govern judicial discretion in allowing amendments of pleadings apply with respect to amendments of pretrial orders [Gonzales v. Brennan (1965) 238 Cal. App. 2d 69, 74-75, 47 Cal. Rptr. 501]. Given this function of Code Civ. Proc. § 576 and its failure to address procedural matters relating to amendments, it is suggested that the notice provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 473 be complied with even though Code Civ. Proc. § 576 contains no express notice requirement.

[b] Liberal Allowance of Amendment

In Desny v. Wilder (1956) 46 Cal. 2d 715, 299 P.2d 257 , plaintiff's first amended complaint alleged that defendants had contracted to pay plaintiff if they used his entire 65-page story to make a motion picture, but that they appropriated the story without paying plaintiff. Plaintiff's testimony, however, revealed that only a synopsis of the story was ever submitted to defendants. After summary judgment was entered against him, plaintiff moved for an order setting aside the judgment and for leave to file an amendment to his amended complaint to allege that he submitted the synopsis rather than the 65-page story to defendants. The court denied the motion and plaintiff appealed from the summary judgment entered against him.

Defendants' argument, inter alia, that the proposed amendment would have substituted a different cause of action which was barred by the statute of limitations, was rejected by the Supreme Court which held that great liberality is indulged in allowing amendment so that lawsuits may be determined on their merits (46 Cal. 2d 715, 751). The Court ruled that the proposed amendment should have been allowed because it did not state facts giving rise to a wholly distinct and different legal obligation against defendants, but merely conformed the pleading to the plaintiff's testimony as to the manner in which the story was submitted to defendants (46 Cal. 2d 715, 752).

Klopstock v. Superior Court (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 13, 108 P.2d 906 , involved a stockholder's representative suit originally brought by an improper party. The suit was initiated by the executor of a person who had been the legatee of shares in the corporation. The executor won a judgment in favor of the estate of the legator which was reversed by the court of appeal because the legator's estate was not a party to the action. The court of appeal also declared that plaintiff was not a proper party to bring the action. Subsequent to the reversal, the trial court granted plaintiff's motion for leave to file an amended and supplemental complaint to name the administratrix of the legator's estate as plaintiff. The trial court also denied defendants' motion to dismiss which asserted that, under the court of appeal's decision, the complaint did not state a cause of action in the plaintiff, and that this fundamental defect could not be cured by amendment. Defendants then applied for a writ of mandate to compel dismissal of the action.

The Supreme Court, in rejecting the defendants' contention, stated that Code Civ. Proc. § 473, empowering courts to permit amendments in furtherance of justice, has been very liberally construed and that the discretionary power of courts to allow amendment of pleadings is to be liberally exerted in favor of hearing cases on their merits (17 Cal. 2d 13, 19, 22). Applying that liberal standard, the Court held that, given the circumstances that a plaintiff in a derivative action is merely a nominal party asserting a claim on behalf of a corporation, and that the defendants had been fully aware of the facts underlying the claim since the original complaint was filed, the trial court acted well within its discretion in allowing amendment of the complaint to bring in a new person as the nominal plaintiff (17 Cal. 2d 13, 21

).

[c] Denial of Leave to Amend Rarely Justified

Guidery v. Green (1892) 95 Cal. 630, 30 P 786 , involved an action for an accounting and dissolution of a partnership. The defendant answered, denying the existence of the partnership and denying that plaintiff's decedent performed the conditions required of him by the contract of partnership. Defendant also raised an affirmative defense that a subsequent contract superseded, vacated, and annulled the contract that was the basis of plaintiff's suit. At trial, after defendant proved execution of the subsequent contract, he sought to show that it had been executed on the consideration and agreement that the prior agreement be canceled and all of plaintiff's claims under it against defendant waived. Plaintiff objected that the evidence was not responsive to any pleaded issue, and the court sustained the objection. Defendant then sought to amend the answer to raise the issue, but the court sustained plaintiff's objection that the amendment was too late and took plaintiff by surprise. The court ordered recovery in plaintiff's favor and denied defendant's motion for new trial. Defendant appealed from the order refusing a new trial.

The Supreme Court reversed, finding that the amendment stated a good defense to plaintiff's claim and that the court should have allowed amendment for that reason, if no other. As to any surprise on plaintiff's part, the court could have continued the case until plaintiff had prepared to meet the defense and could also have imposed on defendant such terms as would compensate plaintiff for the expense and delay (95 Cal. 630, 633). The Court went on to state that it can very rarely happen that a court will be justified in refusing a party leave to amend his or her pleading so that he or she may properly present the case, and obviate any objection that the facts that constitute the cause of action or defense are not embraced within the issues, or properly presented by the pleadings (95 Cal. 630, 633-634). The Court stated that the rule was particularly compelling when the objection to testimony was not that it was brought to the adversary's notice for the first time, but that it was not within the terms of the issue due to the language of the pleadings. In the case before the Court, the defendant had attempted to raise the defense in his original answer, and the testimony was excluded only because the trial court had held that the phraseology used did not raise the issue. Thus, the Court concluded, the trial court should have allowed the amendment (95 Cal. 630, 634).

Redevelopment Agency v. Herrold (1978) 86 Cal. App. 3d 1024, 150 Cal. Rptr. 621 , involved an eminent domain proceeding. Almost 10 months after filing an answer that asserted four affirmative defenses, defendant landowner filed a notice of a motion to amend the answer to add a fifth affirmative defense, which would allege that plaintiff was guilty of fraud, bad faith, and abuse of discretion. The motion to amend was twice denied, and summary judgment was ultimately rendered against defendant, who appealed.

The court of appeal stated the rule that it is a rare case in which a court will be justified in refusing a party leave to amend the pleadings so that his or her case may be properly presented, citing Morgan v. Superior Court (1959) 172 Cal. App. 2d 527, 530, 343 P.2d 62 , discussed above (86 Cal. App. 3d 1024, 1031). The court found that defendant's amendment asserted a meritorious defense, and that any delay which might have resulted from further discovery was far outweighed by defendant's right to have the case determined on the merits (86 Cal. App. 3d 1024, 1032).

[d] Timely Motion to Amend to Assert Meritorious Claim or Defense

The facts and procedural background of Redevelopment Agency v. Herrold (1978) 86 Cal. App. 3d 1024, 150 Cal. Rptr. 621 , are discussed in § 16.30[3][c]. There, the court of appeal quoted Morgan v. Superior Court (1959) 172 Cal. App. 2d 527, 530, 343 P.2d 62 , for the proposition that if a motion to amend is timely made and granting it will not prejudice the opposing party, it is error to refuse permission to amend, and when the refusal also results in a party being deprived of the right to assert a meritorious cause of action or a meritorious defense, it is not only error, but an abuse of discretion (86 Cal. App. 3d 1024, 1031). The court found that defendant's proposed amendment asserted a meritorious defense, that denial of the motion deprived defendant of the right to assert that defense, and that any delay due to further discovery was far outweighed by defendant's right to have the case determined on the merits. The court also found that plaintiff must have been aware of defendant's theory from interrogatories propounded five months before the amendment was first requested, and that the only possible prejudice to plaintiff would be a determination that defendant's position was correct. In this situation, the court concluded that the denial of defendant's motion to amend was an abuse of discretion (86 Cal. App. 3d 1024, 1032).

In Morgan v. Superior Court (1959) 172 Cal. App. 2d 527, 343 P.2d 62 , plaintiff filed a complaint for divorce alleging extreme cruelty as grounds (case arose when law required pleading of grounds for divorce). At the time she filed the complaint, plaintiff believed that defendant had committed adultery, but lacked positive proof. During extended negotiations relating to property rights and support, plaintiff obtained proof, but to protect the parties' children and name, did not amend her complaint. When negotiations subsequently proved fruitless, however, and a contested action became unavoidable, plaintiff filed notice of a motion for leave to file an amendment to the complaint to allege adultery as a further ground for divorce. The motion was made before either party had moved to set the matter for trial. The trial court denied the motion, and plaintiff sought a writ of mandate to compel the trial court to permit the amendment.

The court of appeal issued the writ, stating that the discretion to permit amendments to pleadings cannot be exercised arbitrarily, that a court is rarely justified in refusing leave to amend in order to properly present a case, and that it is error to deny a timely made motion that is not prejudicial to the opposing party. Moreover, if the denial deprives a party of the right to assert a meritorious cause of action or defense, the denial is an abuse of discretion (172 Cal. App. 2d 527, 530). Applying these principles, the court found that defendant did not and could not contend that he was taken by surprise, and that he was not otherwise prejudiced, while denial would deprive plaintiff of the right to prove many facts that would influence the court in dividing the community property (172 Cal. App. 2d 527, 530-531). Accordingly, the court held that the trial court acted arbitrarily and abused its discretion in denying plaintiff's motion, an abuse emphasized by its ignoring plaintiff's uncontradicted reasons for not including the allegation in her original complaint (172 Cal. App. 2d 527, 531).

[e] Amendment at Any Time Before Judgment

Bank of America v. Superior Court (1942) 20 Cal. 2d 697, 128 P.2d 357 , involved a motion to amend made when the case was on remand from a prior appeal. In the original proceedings, the trial court had sustained a demurrer to a four-count complaint without leave to amend and entered a judgment of dismissal. On plaintiffs' appeal from that judgment, the court of appeal held that the trial court had properly sustained the demurrer to counts one and two, but that the third and fourth counts did state causes of action. The court of appeal therefore reversed, directing the trial court to grant plaintiffs leave to file an amended complaint. On remand, the court granted plaintiffs' motion for leave to amend their complaint as to counts one and two over defendant's objection that the court lacked jurisdiction over those two counts due to the appellate decision as to them. Defendant then petitioned for certiorari to annul the order allowing amendment.

In denying the petition, the Supreme Court held that the trial court had power to allow amendment at any time before entry of judgment (20 Cal. 2d 697, 702). The Court also held that parties have the same right to apply for permission to amend after reversal as they would have had if there had never been a judgment entered, and that there is only one judgment regardless of the number of counts in the complaint, so that the trial court was well within its jurisdiction in permitting the amendment (20 Cal. 2d 697, 701-703).

[f] Postponement of Trial Appropriate

In Honig v. Financial Corp. of America (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 960, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 922 , plaintiff filed a complaint alleging, among other things, attempted constructive termination, and the action was assigned to a "fast track" court pursuant to the Trial Court Delay Reduction Act [Gov. Code § 68600 et seq.]. Three months after the complaint was filed, plaintiff was fired for insubordination. Approximately two months before the scheduled trial date, plaintiff filed an opposition to defendants' motion for summary judgment and moved for leave to amend his complaint to assert a cause of action for termination in violation of public policy, a contention that the insubordination charge was merely a pretext for his termination, and a cause of action for defamation. The trial court granted the summary judgment motions and denied plaintiff's motion to amend (6 Cal. App. 4th 960, 964).

The court of appeal, reversing, held the trial court abused its discretion in refusing the amendment. The court noted that the proposed amendments finished telling the story begun in the original complaint, events of which the parties were fully aware, and that permitting amendment would not have prejudiced the defendants (6 Cal. App. 4th 960, 966). In so ruling, the court noted that trial courts may allow amendments to pleadings and, if necessary, postpone trial. Motions to amend are properly granted as late as the first day of trial or even during trial if the defendant is alerted to the charges by the factual allegations, no matter how framed and the defendant will not be prejudiced. If the original pleading has not framed the issues in an articulate and precise manner, a plaintiff should not be precluded from having a trial on the merits (6 Cal. App. 4th 960, 965).

[g] Amendment in Fast Track Proceedings

The facts and procedural background of Honig v. Financial Corp. of America (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 960, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 922 , are discussed in § 16.30[3][f].

In finding that the amendment should have been allowed, even two months before the scheduled trial date, the court expressed its awareness of the purposes of the fast track, which it supports. The court noted, however, that, if an amendment is appropriate, the trial court should continue the trial if necessary, even if the matter is on a fast track (6 Cal. App. 4th 960, 967).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Liberal Allowance of Amendment

In Haley v. Dow Lewis Motors, Inc. (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 497, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 352 , plaintiffs, after having filed a Chapter 7 bankruptcy petition, filed a complaint alleging several causes of action, some of which had accrued before and others after the bankruptcy petition was filed. In holding that the trial court erred in granting the defendants' motion for judgment on the pleadings and in denying plaintiffs' motion to amend the complaint to substitute the bankruptcy trustee as plaintiff, the court of appeal noted that leave to amend a complaint is entrusted to the trial court's sound discretion, and under the liberal amendment policy set forth in Klopstock v. Superior Court (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 13, 108 P.2d 906 and subsequent cases, with regard to the causes of action that accrued before the bankruptcy petition was filed, plaintiffs should have been permitted to amend their defective pleading (72 Cal. App. 4th 497, 506-509). The court further noted that the causes of action that accrued after the filing of the bankruptcy petition were not property of the bankruptcy estate, and thus granting defendants' motion for judgment on the pleadings as to them had been improper (72 Cal. App. 4th 497, 503-506).

In Solit v. Tokai Bank (1999) 68 Cal. App. 4th 1435, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 243 , the court of appeal reversed judgment in favor of the cross defendant. The court concluded that the trial court erred in denying the cross complainant's motion for leave to file a second amended cross complaint when the trial court erroneously concluded that the cross complainant's earlier release of a mechanic's lien prevented the cross complainant from filing any valid mechanic's lien thereafter. The court noted that the trial court should have considered the cross complainant's motion for leave to file an amended pleadings on the merits, to wit, on whether the cross complainant, the party seeking to amend, was not diligent in offering the amendment after knowledge of the facts, or whether delay prejudiced the adverse party. Generally, leave to amend must be granted liberally, provided there is no statute of limitations concern, nor any prejudice to the opposing party, such as delay in trial, loss of critical evidence, or added preparation costs (68 Cal. App. 4th 1435, 1448).

In Higgins v. Del Faro (1981) 123 Cal. App. 3d 558, 176 Cal. Rptr. 704 , the court of appeal reversed a trial court's denial of leave for plaintiff to amend her complaint, noting that the amendment would have corrected a minor technical error of the pleading (attachment of the wrong document), would not have resulted in undue delay, and would not have prejudiced the adverse party. Failure to grant leave in such a case, the court stated, is a denial of justice and is directly opposed to the policy that cases should be tried and decided on the merits (123 Cal. App. 3d 558, 564-565).

The rule of liberality of pleading was applied to support amendment of an answer to conform to proof in Davis v. Cordova Recreation & Park Dist. (1972) 24 Cal. App. 3d 789, 101 Cal. Rptr. 358 . Plaintiffs, claiming negligence on defendant's part, brought an action to recover for the death of their child, who had drowned in a pond maintained by defendant. The only affirmative defense raised in the answer was contributory negligence, but at trial both parties introduced evidence on the issue of the design immunity defense. At the close of trial, the court ruled that the design immunity defense was established, directed judgment for defendant, and granted defendant permission to amend the answer to conform to the proof. On appeal, plaintiffs claimed prejudice and surprise, but the court of appeal found that plaintiffs had anticipated the defense and had directed their cause so as to defeat it. The court proceeded to uphold the trial court's action allowing amendment in accordance with the policy of liberally allowing amendment of pleadings in order that litigation may be tried on its merits (24 Cal. App. 3d 789, 794).

The complaint in Barba v. Superior Court (1966) 239 Cal. App. 2d 572, 49 Cal. Rptr. 60 , a suit arising out of an automobile collision, failed to allege that defendant owner had given defendant driver permission to drive the car involved in the accident, an allegation necessary to fasten full civil liability on the owner. When the case came to trial, plaintiffs moved to amend the complaint to allege that the car was being driven with the consent and permission of defendant owner. The motion was denied, and defendant owner moved for dismissal of the action which was granted on the grounds that no cause of action was stated against the owner for imputed liability as owner of a car driven by another. Plaintiffs then sought a writ of mandate to compel the trial court to allow the amendment.

In ordering the writ to issue, the court of appeal stated that courts should show great liberality at all stages in permitting such amendments as will facilitate the production of all the facts bearing on the questions involved in the action, where this can be done without working great delay and without jeopardizing the rights of an adverse party, and where the cause of action and the issues involved will not be radically changed (239 Cal. App. 2d 572, 577).

[b] Denial of Leave to Amend Rarely Justified

In Branick v. Downey Savings & Loan (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 235, 46 Cal. Rptr. 3d 66 , plaintiffs alleged that defendant savings and loan association had misrepresented and overcharged customers for recording fees. They claimed standing to sue on behalf of the general public and did not allege that they had transacted business with the savings and loan association, paid the fees, suffered injury in fact, or lost money or property as a result of the alleged practices. The trial court ruled that federal law preempted the claims. While the appeal was pending, Proposition 64 (approved November 2004) took effect and repealed that statutory authorization to sue on behalf of the general public. The court of appeal held the federal law did not preempt the claims, that Proposition 64 revoked the plaintiffs' standing, and that the trial court should determine whether to grant leave to amend the complaint to allege injury in fact. The Supreme Court concluded that Proposition 64 did not affect the ordinary rules governing amendment and relation back. Thus, it was proper to remand the matter to the trial court to exercise its discretion under Code Civ. Proc. § 473(a)(1), in ruling whether to grant leave to amend. In so ruling, the court held that leave to amend a compliant is entrusted to the sound discretion of the trial court. The exercise of that discretion will not be disturbed on appeal absent a clear showing of abuse. More importantly, the discretion to be exercised is that of the trial court, not the reviewing court. Thus, even if the reviewing court might have ruled otherwise in the first instance, the trial court's order will not be reversed unless, as a matter of law, the order is not supported by the record.

The plaintiff in Sanai v. Saltz (2009) 170 Cal. App. 4th 746, 88 Cal. Rptr. 3d 673 made various claims under the Fair Credit Reporting Act [15 U.S.C. § 1681 et seq.], the Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act [Civ. Code, § 1785.1 et seq.], and state common law. Specifically, he alleged that furnishers of credit information failed to investigate the accuracy of reported information upon receiving notice of a dispute. In alleging a violation of 15 U.S.C. § 1681s 2(b), he first asserted that he had informed the furnishers of the dispute. He then sought to amend his complaint to allege that he also informed the consumer credit reporting agency of the dispute and that the agency notified the furnishers. The trial court held that plaintiff would be allowed to amend his complaint only if plaintiff could produce admissible evidence that shows that he contacted the credit reporting agency and that the agency contacted the furnishers of the information. Plaintiff submitted a declaration under penalty of perjury regarding his written complaints to the agency and its response; plaintiff further argued that the court's stay of all discovery precluded him from producing additional admissible evidence. The trial court subsequently ruled that plaintiff's showing was insufficient to permit an amendment to his complaint, and granted the motion for judgment on the pleadings without leave to amend.

The appellate court noted that the trial court has every right to guard against sham pleadings and to prevent abuse of the litigation process. For example, the trial court has discretion to deny leave to amend when the proposed amendment omits or contradicts harmful facts pleaded in a prior pleading unless a showing is made of mistake or other sufficient excuse for changing the facts. Absent such a showing, the proposed pleading may be treated as a sham. Although noting that the trial court had good reason to be hesitant to accept new factual allegations from the plaintiff, at least to the extent they were inconsistent with prior allegations, the appellate court held that the trial court went too far when it demanded the production of admissible evidence, specifically excluding plaintiff's own testimony, to support the proposed amendment to the complaint while at the same time preventing plaintiff from conducting any discovery. While noting that the trial court has powerful tools to shield parties and nonparties from abusive litigation tactics, the appellate court concluded that "the trial court is simply without power to demand, as the condition for leave to amend, that a party present admissible evidence sufficient to withstand summary judgment" (170 Cal. App. 4th 746, 770) .

In Johnson v. County of Los Angeles (1983) 143 Cal. App. 3d 298, 191 Cal. Rptr. 704 , an action for wrongful death against a county and county employees, the court of appeal reversed the trial court's order sustaining defendants' demurrer to the complaint without leave to amend and dismissing the action on the ground of sovereign immunity. The court of appeal discussed the rules governing amendment after demurrer before reaching the substantive issues in the action. The court stated that denial of leave to amend after a demurrer is sustained is an abuse of discretion when the complaint is not fundamentally deficient in alleging facts showing a right to some relief that can properly be given but is deficient only with respect to the manner or form in which the facts warranting relief have been pleaded. The court further noted that liberality in permitting amendments is the rule, not only when a complaint is defective regarding form but also when it is deficient in substance, if a fair opportunity to correct the substantive defect has not previously been given (143 Cal. App. 3d 298, 306).

Saari v. Superior Court (1960) 178 Cal. App. 2d 175, 2 Cal. Rptr. 856 , was an action for personal injuries arising out of an automobile accident. The case went to trial on the original complaint which alleged negligence, and nonsuit was granted on the basis of plaintiff's contributory negligence. The judgment in favor of defendant was reversed on appeal, but both before and after that appeal, plaintiff moved to amend his complaint to allege willful and wanton misconduct. The court denied plaintiff's motions on both occasions, and plaintiff petitioned for a writ of mandate to compel the court to allow the amendment.

The court of appeal held that the amendment was not objectionable as setting up a distinct and different legal obligation that was barred by the statute of limitations, as contended by defendant, but that it merely constituted a change in the theory of recovery of damages for personal injury inflicted by a particular car, which was also the gist of the original complaint (178 Cal. App. 2d 175, 178-179). The court then quoted Morgan, above, on the principles governing amendment of pleadings, and directed the writ of mandate to issue (178 Cal. App. 2d 175, 180).

Daum v. Superior Court (1964) 228 Cal. App. 2d 283, 39 Cal. Rptr. 443 , involved a suit for breach of contract. The trial court sustained defendants' demurrer without leave to amend until such time as the conditions precedent in the contract between the parties might occur. Plaintiffs moved to vacate that order and for leave to file a second amended complaint alleging anticipatory breach and a second cause of action for services rendered. After the court denied plaintiffs' motion, they sought a writ of mandate.

The court of appeal granted the writ, noting that plaintiffs were not attempting to introduce an entirely new cause by the proposed second amended complaint, but were merely proposing a change of theory in their action against defendants from breach of contract to anticipatory breach of contract (228 Cal. App. 2d 283, 286-287). The court held that denial of plaintiffs' motion to amend was an abuse of discretion, relying on Morgan, above, as cited by Saari, above (228 Cal. App. 2d 283, 289).

[c] Timely Motion to Amend to Assert Meritorious Claim or Defense

Dunzweiler v. Superior Court (1968) 267 Cal. App. 2d 569, 73 Cal. Rptr. 331 ; Daum v. Superior Court (1964) 228 Cal. App. 2d 283, 39 Cal. Rptr. 443 ; and Saari v. Superior Court (1960) 178 Cal. App. 2d 175, 2 Cal. Rptr. 856 , are discussed in § 16.30[4][b].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 16 AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
PART II. FORMS
A. Amended Pleadings

1-16 California Points & Authorities § 16.31

§ 16.31 Supporting Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading to Conform to Proof [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 469, 470, 473(a), 576]--General Form

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading to Conform to Proof [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 469, 470, 473(a), 576]--General Form

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)
Plaintiff,	)
vs.	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	memorandum IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR Defendant.	)	LEAVE TO AMEND _____
	)	[COMPLAINT or ANSWER or CROSS COM-)	PLAINT] TO CONFORM TO PROOF

_____

THE COURT SHOULD LIBERALLY EXERCISE ITS DISCRETION TO ALLOW AN AMENDMENT TO CONFORM TO PROOF AT ANY STAGE OF TRIAL.

A. Statutory Authority. No variance between the allegation in a pleading and the proof is to be deemed material, unless it has actually mislead the adverse party to his or her prejudice in maintaining his or her action or defense on the merits. Whenever it appears that a party has been so mislead, the court may order the pleadings to be amended, on such terms as may be just (Code Civ. Proc. § 469). If the variance is not material, the court may direct the fact to be found according to the evidence, or may order an immediate amendment, without costs (Code Civ. Proc. § 470). The court, in its discretion, after notice to the adverse party, may allow an amendment to any pleading in the furtherance of justice and on any terms as may be just, at any time before or after commencement of trial (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576).

B. Discretion of Court. An amendment to allege a new cause of action to conform to proof is favored, and a trial court abuses its discretion by prohibiting such an amendment when it would not prejudice another party (South Bay Building Enterprises, Inc. v. Riviera Lend-Lease, Inc. (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 1111, 1124, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 647 ; Brady v. Elixir Industries (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 1299, 1303, 242 Cal. Rptr. 324). Although the Code of Civil Procedure statutes use the word "may," thus committing the matter to the trial court's discretion, the court must permit an amendment to conform to proof offered by plaintiff where no prejudice results to defendant. The same rule applies to a plaintiff's request to direct the fact to be found according to the evidence as provided by Code of Civil Procedure Section 470 (Walker v. Belvedere (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 1663, 1670, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 773).

C. Liberal Allowance of Amendment. The power of the courts to allow amendment of pleadings is to be liberally exercised so that cases may be decided on their merits, and the greatest liberality is encouraged in allowing amendments to conform to proof (Desny v. Wilder (1956) 46 Cal. 2d 715, 751, 299 P.2d 257 ; Bidart Bros. v. Elmo Farming Co. (1973) 35 Cal. App. 3d 248, 259, 110 Cal. Rptr. 819).

D. Amendment at Any Stage of Trial. The trial court may permit amendment to conform to proof at any stage of the trial, even after submission of the cause (Lee v. Murphy (1897) 119 Cal. 364, 367, 51 P. 549 ; Jud Whitehead Heater Co. v. Obler (1952) 111 Cal. App. 2d 861, 869, 245 P.2d 608).

E. Notice Not Required. Notice of a motion to amend to conform to proof is not required (State Medical Educ. Bd. v. Roberson (1970) 6 Cal. App. 3d 493, 502, 86 Cal. Rptr. 258 ; McKee v. Mires (1952) 110 Cal. App. 2d 517, 522-523, 242 P.2d 954).

[Add, where appropriate, supporting points and authorities relating to any specific reasons why the amendment should be allowed (see §§ 16.32 -16.44).]

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be used in support of a motion for leave to amend pleadings to conform to proof. It contains only general points supporting amendment, and is designed to be used as a framework for a supporting memorandum. More specific points and authorities supporting amendment of a complaint [see §§ 16.35 -16.42] and an answer [see §§ 16.43, 16.44] should be combined with this form as relevant to the case. Points and authorities relating to specific grounds for allowing amendment that may apply to any type of pleading are also included [see §§ 16.32 -16.34] and should likewise be combined with this form as relevant.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Counsel should attempt to show that the opposing party was not mislead in order to allow the court to amend under Code Civ. Proc. § 470 rather than Code Civ. Proc. §§ 469, 473, or 576 thereby avoiding costs and the imposition of other terms that might be imposed under Code Civ. Proc. § 469. The other terms that might be imposed could include reopening the case for the opposing party to meet any new issues that may be pleaded, unless the opposing party has already presented his or her full case [see Simone v. McKee (1956) 142 Cal. App. 2d 307, 314, 298 P.2d 667].

[b] Failure to Amend to Conform to Proof

The general rule in a contested cause is that, absent an amendment to the complaint to conform to proof, a court may not award the plaintiff a sum in excess of the amount of damages plaintiff claims to have sustained [Castaic Clay Manufacturing Co. v. Dedes (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 444, 449, 240 Cal. Rptr. 652]. However, it is the averments of the complaint, not the prayer, that determines the maximum sum that may be awarded. A court may grant a plaintiff any relief consistent with the case made by the complaint and embraced within the issue [Castaic Clay Manufacturing Co. v. Dedes (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 444, 449, 240 Cal. Rptr. 652 (citing Code Civ. Proc. § 580, which provides that the relief granted to the plaintiff, absent an answer, cannot exceed the relief demanded in the complaint, but that otherwise the court may grant plaintiff any relief consistent with the case made by the complaint and embraced within the issue)]. Thus, an award of compensatory damages in an amount greater than that set forth in the complaint does not prejudice the defendant when evidence was admitted on the issue of damages of at least the amount that was awarded and the parties actually tried the issues of damages in amounts above the limits set forth in the body of the complaint [Castaic Clay Manufacturing Co. v. Dedes (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 444, 449-450, 240 Cal. Rptr. 652]. Hence, although a failure to seek leave to amend the complaint to conform to proof on the amount of damages claimed may be lamentable, a judgment in excess of the amounts prayed for may nevertheless be affirmed on appeal for the sake of judicial economy, which would be ill served by requiring retrial of a case because of the technical omission [Castaic Clay Manufacturing Co. v. Dedes (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 444, 449-450, 240 Cal. Rptr. 652].

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities set out in § 16.46 may be used to generally oppose a motion for leave to amend supported by this memorandum, as may the points and authorities set out in §§ 16.48, 16.53, and 16.54, relating to specific grounds of opposition.

[d] Limitation on Amendment to Conform to Proof

While a mere variance may be remedied by amendment, a failure of proof is fatal [Johnson v. De Waard (1931) 113 Cal. App. 417, 423, 298 P. 92 (holding, however, that proof of a written contract with somewhat different terms from the oral contract alleged in the complaint did not constitute a failure of proof)]. There is a failure of proof, rather than a variance under Code Civ. Proc. § 469 or 470 (discussed in § 16.31[3][a]), when the allegation of the claim or defense to which the proof is directed is unproved, not in some particular or particulars only, but in its general scope and meaning [Code Civ. Proc. § 471]. Under Code Civ. Proc. § 471, the plaintiff may not use an amendment to conform to proof to abandon the entire case made by his or her pleading in favor of a new and different case, but the amendment is proper and the court has discretion to allow it if it is not entirely foreign to the original action and the relief sought arises on the same general state of facts as the prior pleading [Sieck v. Hall (1934) 139 Cal. App. 279, 301, 34 P.2d 844 (amendment proper where both original and amended complaint were for indebtedness in money based on contract to pay bonus, amendment changing only method of computing bonus)].

Cases dealing with the propriety of allowing amendment to conform to proof do not appear to cite Code Civ. Proc. § 471 often. For a discussion of cases that deal with the closely related proposition that an amendment to conform to proof should not be allowed to introduce new issues into the case, see the cases collected in § 16.31[3][b] and 16.46[3][a], [4][a].

[e] Notice of Motion

Notice of a motion to amend to conform to proof is not required [State Medical Educ. Bd. v. Roberson (1970) 6 Cal. App. 3d 493, 502, 86 Cal. Rptr. 258]. A memorandum is only mandatory in the case of a motion made on notice [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(a)]. Therefore, submission of this memorandum is optional.

[f] Filing Formal Amendment

When leave to amend to conform to proof is granted and the proof has been made, a formal amendment to the pleading in question need not be filed [Donovan v. Wechsler (1970) 11 Cal. App. 3d 210, 213, 89 Cal. Rptr. 669 ; Fitzsimmons v. Fitzsimmons (1946) 72 Cal. App. 2d 545, 548-549, 164 P.2d 934]. It is not essential to a good motion to amend to conform to proof that the exact amendment sought to be made be shown [Youngblood v. Los Angeles (1958) 160 Cal. App. 2d 481, 490, 325 P.2d 587]. It is better practice to file the amendment, however [Fitzsimmons v. Fitzsimmons (1946) 72 Cal. App. 2d 545, 548-549, 164 P.2d 934].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statutory Authority

The basic authority of the court to allow amendment of pleadings to conform to proof is provided by Code Civ. Proc. § 473 [Simone v. McKee (1956) 142 Cal. App. 2d 307, 314, 298 P.2d 667 ; see also Code Civ. Proc. § 576 (overlapping Code Civ. Proc. § 473)]. Additionally, Code Civ. Proc. § 469 provides express authority to amend to conform to proof, on such terms as may be just, when there has been a material variance between the allegation in a pleading and the proof, that is, a variance that actually mislead the adverse party to his or her prejudice in maintaining his or her action or defense on the merits. If the variance is found not to be material, as provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 469, the court may, pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 470, direct the fact to be found according to the evidence, or may order immediate amendment, without costs.

[b] Discretion of Court

South Bay Building Enterprises, Inc. v. Riviera Lend-Lease, Inc. (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 1111, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 647 , involved an action by a junior lienholder against a senior lienholder and the debtor for fraud and conspiracy in relation to the nonjudicial foreclosure sale in which plaintiff's junior lien was extinguished without plaintiff receiving any proceeds of the sale. Plaintiff moved to amend its complaint to conform to the evidence offered at trial, seeking to add two new causes of action, one for money due under Civ. Code § 2924k and one for conversion. The trial court denied the motion and ultimately granted defendants' motion for a directed verdict. Plaintiff appealed.

In reversing the judgment, the court of appeal concluded that the trial court had erred in denying plaintiff's request to amend its complaint. In so doing, the court, quoting Brady v. Elixir Industries (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 1299, 1303, 242 Cal. Rptr. 324 , stated that a pleading may be amended at the time of trial unless the adverse party can establish prejudice. When a party is allowed to prove facts to establish one cause of action, an amendment which would allow the same facts to establish another cause of action is favored, and a trial court abuses its discretion by prohibiting such an amendment when it would not prejudice another party. A variance between pleading and proof does not justify the denial of an amendment unless the unamended pleading mislead the adverse party to his or her prejudice in maintaining his or her action or defense on the merits (72 Cal. App. 4th 1111, 1124).

In Brady v. Elixer Industries (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 1299, 242 Cal. Rptr. 324 , the plaintiff employee alleged sex discrimination and constructive discharge against her employer. At trial, certain evidence that was not pleaded in support of the discrimination cause of action was admitted as proof of the allegations of constructive discharge. She then moved to amend her discrimination cause of action to conform to the proof presented on the discharge cause. The court denied the motion as not timely presented and subsequently granted nonsuit on the discrimination cause of action (196 Cal. App. 3d 1299, 1302).

The appellate court reversed and held that the amendment should have been allowed. If a party is allowed to prove facts to establish one cause of action, an amendment that would allow the same facts to establish another cause of action is favored. It was an abuse of discretion to prohibit the amendment to conform to proof. Such an amendment should only be denied if a party was misled to its prejudice in maintaining the action or defense on the merits (196 Cal. App. 3d 1299, 1303).

In Walker v. Belvedere (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 1663, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 773 , plaintiff brought a personal injury action against the driver and the owner of a vehicle that struck her car. The action against the owner was based on negligent entrustment. Judgment was entered in the defendant owner's favor. Two weeks later, the plaintiff moved to set aside the judgment and enter a new one adding recovery against the owner under Veh. Code §§ 17150 and 17151, which hold an owner liable up to $15,000 for a permissive user's negligence. The trial court denied the motion, and plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal reversed, addressing the issue, among others, that the plaintiff did not plead a cause of action for owner's statutory liability, nor did she ask to amend to conform to proof (16 Cal. App. 4th 1663, 1669). The court first acknowledged the fundamental principle that a plaintiff must recover, if at all, on the cause of action set out in the complaint, and not on some other which may be developed by the proofs. However, the court went on to quote Code Civ. Proc. §§ 469 and 470, as set out in Paragraph A of the form and discussed in § 16.31[3][a]. Making the statement set out in the form, the court went on to find no prejudice in this case, in which the defendant was on notice throughout of the circumstances surrounding the plaintiff's claim, and the statutory liability theory added nothing previously unknown or unexpected (16 Cal. App. 4th 1663, 1670).

[c] Liberal Allowance of Amendment

Desny v. Wilder (1956) 46 Cal. 2d 715, 299 P.2d 257 , is discussed in § 16.30[3][b].

In Bidart Bros. v. Elmo Farming Co. (1973) 35 Cal. App. 3d 248, 110 Cal. Rptr. 819 , plaintiff, who bought real property from defendant subject to outstanding leases, sued to recover rents collected by defendant on plaintiff's behalf. In paying the rents collected to plaintiff, defendant had offset property taxes it paid and interest due on the purchase price notes given to defendant by plaintiff. Plaintiff appealed from a judgment which allowed the offset, urging that the trial court had erred in allowing defendant to file an amended answer alleging the offset as an affirmative defense after the close of trial.

In affirming, the court of appeal stated that allowance of amendments to conform to proof rests in the sound discretion of the trial court, that abuse of discretion is not shown unless prejudice appears and unless new and entirely different issues are thus brought into the case, and that the greatest liberality is encouraged in this respect, citing Crown Prod. Co. v. California Food Prod. Corp. (1947) 77 Cal. App. 2d 543, 550, 175 P.2d 861 , discussed below (35 Cal. App. 3d 248, 259). Plaintiff argued that it could have established a waiver of the defense of setoff or an estoppel to assert it, but the court found it difficult to understand how plaintiff could have been surprised and unprepared on that element of the case, which went to the very heart of the litigation (35 Cal. App. 3d 248, 259-260).

[d] Amendment at Any Stage of Trial

On appeal from a judgment foreclosing a mortgage in Lee v. Murphy (1897) 119 Cal. 364, 51 P 549 , defendant argued that the trial court erred in allowing plaintiff to amend the complaint after having gone to trial and submitting the case for decision. Although reversing on other grounds, the Supreme Court rejected this argument. The Court held that while it is unusual to find it necessary to amend the complaint after a case has been submitted, there is no time before judgment when the power of the court to allow amendment in the interest of justice under Code Civ. Proc. § 473 ceases (119 Cal. 364, 366-367).

Jud Whitehead Heater Co. v. Obler (1952) 111 Cal. App. 2d 861, 245 P.2d 608 , involved consolidated cases in which a sole proprietor and his successor corporation sued a former employee and his wife to impose constructive trusts on property purchased by defendants with money embezzled from plaintiffs before and after incorporation of the business. The individual plaintiff's complaint included a claim against certain jewelry. The proof, however, revealed that the funds to pay for the jewelry were taken after the business was incorporated, and the court allowed the corporation to amend its complaint to include that claim. On defendants' appeal from a judgment for plaintiffs, defendants urged that the court had erred in allowing the amendment.

Defendants claimed that they had been prejudiced because, if the cases had not been consolidated, judgment on the claim for the jewelry could not have been given to plaintiff corporation because the evidence relating to the jewelry would not have been admissible under the then issues. The court of appeal rejected defendants' argument since the evidence would have been admissible in the corporation's case, even though the claim was not pleaded, to show transactions between the parties as bearing on whether the moneys that were pleaded were stolen. Thus, the corporation could have amended to conform to proof even if the actions had not been consolidated (111 Cal. App. 2d 861, 868). The court held that the law is settled that the trial court may permit an amendment to a complaint to conform to the proof at any stage of the trial, even after submission of the cause, unless the amendment introduces a new and independent cause of action, quoting Sandvold v. Perrot (1946) 74 Cal. App. 2d 344, 348-349, 168 P.2d 995 .

[e] Notice Not Required

In State Medical Educ. Bd. v. Roberson (1970) 6 Cal. App. 3d 493, 86 Cal. Rptr. 258 , plaintiff sued to recover on a student loan that became payable in the year defendant finished her internship. The complaint alleged that defendant completed her internship in Washington, D.C. in 1962, but in the course of discovery, it was learned that she actually finished it in California in 1966. After the court granted a motion made by plaintiff for summary judgment, defendant moved for reconsideration. When defendant's motion came on for hearing, the court denied it and at the same time granted a motion to amend the complaint to conform to proof that was apparently made by plaintiff at the hearing. Judgment was entered, and defendant appealed.

In affirming, the court of appeal rejected defendant's contention that formal notice of the motion to amend was necessary. The court, relying on prior California law, held that notice of a motion to amend to conform to proof need not be given because in the case of such an amendment the evidence has already been offered as to the subject matter of the amendment so that it would not be worthwhile to require notice to the adverse party (6 Cal. App. 3d 493, 502).

By the original complaint in McKee v. Mires (1952) 110 Cal. App. 2d 517, 242 P.2d 954 , defendants were sued individually and as partners. After trial, the court granted plaintiff's motion, made in open court, to amend to conform to proof by alleging defendants' liability as ostensible partners. The facts were found in plaintiff's favor, and judgment was entered against the defendants, who appealed.

The court of appeal rejected defendants' contention that the trial court had committed prejudicial error in permitting amendment of the complaint without service and filing of a motion or notice of hearing on the motion to amend. The court held that it was unnecessary to serve and file the motion because the motion was made in open court (110 Cal. App. 2d 517, 522-523). The court also noted that defendants were not misled or prejudiced by the amendment because the transactions between the parties had been gone into fully and defendants had abundant opportunity to refute the issues raised by the amended pleading (110 Cal. App. 2d 517, 523).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Discretion of Court

In A.N. v. County of Los Angeles (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 1058, 90 Cal. Rptr. 3d 293 , A.N. filed his original complaint in May 2005 and his amended complaint in November 2005. A.N. filed the bulk of his Doe amendments in August 2007 and served most of his Doe amendments at that time. A.N.'s counsel did not state the dates upon which counsel learned the names of the Doe defendants and did not explain why their identities could not have been discovered sooner, as the record indicated that counsel had access to the information sooner. In affirming the trial court's finding that the delay was unreasonable and prejudicial, the appellate court saw no reasonable explanation in the record for A.N.'s roughly two year delay in filing and serving the Doe amendments, observing that Code Civ. Proc. § 474 includes an implicit requirement that a plaintiff cannot unreasonably delay the filing of a Doe amendment after learning a defendant's identity (171 Cal. App. 4th 1058, 1066-1067) .

Bidart Bros. v. Elmo Farming Co. (1973) 35 Cal. App. 3d 248, 110 Cal. Rptr. 819 , is discussed in § 16.31[3][b].

[b] Liberal Allowance of Amendment

Davis v. Cordova Recreation & Park Dist. (1972) 24 Cal. App. 3d 789, 101 Cal. Rptr. 358 , is discussed in § 16.30[4][a].

Crown Prod. Co. v. California Food Prod. Corp. (1947) 77 Cal. App. 2d 543, 175 P.2d 861 , is discussed in § 16.31[3][c].

[c] Amendment at Any Stage of Trial

The facts of Union Bank v. Wendland (1976) 54 Cal. App. 3d 393, 126 Cal. Rptr. 549 , are discussed in § 16.44[3][a]. In reversing a judgment in plaintiff's favor, the court of appeal held that the trial court had abused its discretion in denying defendant's motion to amend the answer to conform to proof (54 Cal. App. 3d 393, 400-401). Defendant had made the motion after the case was submitted for decision, and the court held that amendment to conform to proof may be allowed after submission, relying on prior California law (54 Cal. App. 3d 393, 400 n.3).

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 16 AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
PART II. FORMS
A. Amended Pleadings

1-16 California Points & Authorities § 16.32

§ 16.32 Supporting Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--Before Court Grants Judgment on Pleadings

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--Before Court Grants Judgment on Pleadings

[The following should be combined with a general form of memorandum in support of a motion for leave to file an amended pleading or an amendment to a pleading (see § 16.30).]

THE COURT SHOULD GRANT LEAVE TO AMEND THE _____ [COMPLAINT or ANSWER or CROSS COMPLAINT] BEFORE GRANTING JUDGMENT ON THE PLEADINGS SO THAT _____ [specify moving party] IS GIVEN AN OPPORTUNITY TO CORRECT THE DEFECTIVELY PLEADED _____ [CAUSE OF ACTION or DEFENSE] BECAUSE _____ [THE FACTS INDICATE THE EXISTENCE OF A GOOD _____ (CAUSE OF ACTION or DEFENSE) AND THE DEFECTS WERE NOT CALLED TO _____'S (specify moving party) ATTENTION or THE _____ (COMPLAINT or ANSWER or CROSS COMPLAINT) HAS BEEN UPHELD AGAINST A GENERAL DEMURRER].

Amendment of Defective Pleading Before Judgment on the Pleadings. A trial court should grant leave to amend before granting judgment on the pleadings when the facts indicate that the party probably has a good cause of action or defense, but that it has been pleaded imperfectly or defectively, and the defects have not been called to his attention by demurrer or by notice of motion for judgment on the pleadings or if the defective pleading was earlier upheld against general demurrer (MacIsaac v. Pozzo (1945) 26 Cal. 2d 809, 815-816, 161 P.2d 449 ; Dobbins v. Hardister (1966) 242 Cal. App. 2d 787, 796, 51 Cal. Rptr. 866).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in support of a motion for leave to file an amended pleading or an amendment to a pleading when the motion to amend is made in response to a motion for judgment on the pleadings. It does not provide a complete memorandum but is designed to be combined with the general form of memorandum supporting amendment of pleadings set out in § 16.30. It may also be used with forms relating to any other grounds which may exist for amending the pleading [see §§ 16.33 -16.44].

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Amendment of Defective Pleading Before Judgment on the Pleadings

MacIsaac v. Pozzo (1945) 26 Cal. 2d 809, 161 P.2d 449 , was an action for a declaratory judgment that a joint venture agreement was valid. Defendants' answer alleged that the agreement was invalid because it was induced by fraud. By cross complaint based on the fraud, defendants sought to be paid a greater percentage of moneys payable to the joint venturers than called for in the agreement. The cross complaint, however, did not expressly seek rescission or specifically ask for damages. When the case came to trial, the court granted judgment for plaintiffs on the pleadings on the ground that the cross complaint did not state any cause of action against the plaintiffs. There had been no notice of the motion for judgment on the pleadings, nor had there been any demurrer to defendant's pleadings. The court denied defendants' request for leave to amend their answer to conform with the court's expressed opinion regarding the pleadings, and defendants appealed.

The Supreme Court reversed, stating that defendants' failure to ask for the proper relief in their cross complaint was not fatal to their cause because the defect was curable by amendment (26 Cal. 2d 809, 815). Quoting Kelley v. Kriess (1885) 68 Cal. 210, 9 P 129 , the Court stated that if a plaintiff has a good cause of action which has not been set out in the complaint by accident or mistake, the court, on motion for judgment on the pleadings, should permit amendment on application to do so. The Court proceeded to hold that this proposition applies to defendants' pleadings as well. Thus, the Court held that when the facts stated indicate that the party probably has a good cause of action or defense, but that it has been pleaded imperfectly or defectively, and the defects have not been called to the party's attention by demurrer or by notice of motion for judgment on the pleadings, the party should be given an opportunity to elect to stand on the pleadings or to amend them before the motion for judgment on the pleadings is granted (26 Cal. 2d 809, 815-816).

Plaintiffs in Dobbins v. Hardister (1966) 242 Cal. App. 2d 787, 51 Cal. Rptr. 866 , sued for the value of goods sold and delivered to defendant. Defendant answered denying the allegations of the complaint on information and belief, and the court denied a demurrer to the answer which asserted that the answer was insufficient for failure to positively admit or deny matters which were presumptively in defendant's knowledge. Plaintiffs later noticed a motion for judgment on the pleadings on the same grounds, and the motion was granted. Defendant appealed.

After agreeing with the trial court that defendant's answer was insufficient, the court of appeal reversed and directed that defendant be granted leave to amend (242 Cal. App. 2d 787, 794, 798). The court found that there are two situations in which a trial court must grant leave to amend before granting judgment on the pleadings. For the first situation, the court cited the rule in MacIsaac v. Pozzo (1945) 26 Cal. 2d 809, 161 P.2d 449 , discussed above, allowing amendment when the facts show that a party probably has a good cause of action or defense which has been defectively pleaded. For the second situation, the court relied on Shabrick v. Moore (1961) 195 Cal. App. 2d 56, 15 Cal. Rptr. 310 (discussed in § 16.32[4][a]), stressing the need to allow amendment before granting a motion for judgment on the pleadings when the complaint or answer has already been upheld against a general demurrer (242 Cal. App. 2d 787, 796). The court held the rule in Shabrick, above, applicable because defendant's answer had been upheld against an attack on the same grounds on demurrer and it appeared probable that the defect could be corrected by amendment (242 Cal. App. 2d 787, 796-797).

The court reached this decision even though defendant did not appear at the hearing on the motion for judgment on the pleadings and did not request leave to amend, noting that under Code Civ. Proc. § 472c, when a demurrer is sustained without leave to amend, a request for leave to amend is not necessary to obtain appellate review of whether the trial court abused its discretion in making the order, and citing MacIsaac, above, for the proposition that the reason for the Code Civ. Proc. § 472c rule applies equally to a motion for judgment on the pleadings so that the same result should obtain (242 Cal. App. 2d 787, 797-798).

Note, however, that in Tiffany v. Sierra Sands Unified School Dist. (1980) 103 Cal. App. 3d 218, 162 Cal. Rptr. 669 , the court stressed the language in MacIsaac, above, that on a motion for judgment on the pleadings, the court should permit amendment on the pleader's application to do so. In Tiffany, the plaintiff made no effort to amend his complaint before, at, or after trial, and the court of appeal held that the trial court did not abuse its discretion in granting judgment on the pleadings without leave to amend (103 Cal. App. 3d 218, 225-226). Thus, unless the party desires to stand on the pleadings as they are, a motion for leave to file an amended pleading appears to be the safest way to preserve the opportunity to amend to correct defects in the pleading that are asserted in a motion for judgment on the pleadings.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Amendment of Defective Pleading Before Judgment on the Pleadings

See Ludgate Ins. Co. v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2000) 82 Cal. App. 4th 592, 98 Cal. Rptr. 2d 277 , discussed in § 16.36[4][a].

In San Diego County Council, Boy Scouts of America v. Escondido (1971) 14 Cal. App. 3d 189, 92 Cal. Rptr. 186 , a consolidated appeal, plaintiffs sought a declaration that defendant held title to certain real property in trust for the benefit of boys and girls who might from time to time be members of the Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts of the Escondido area. In one of the actions, the plaintiff was an organization in the Boy Scouts hierarchy that encompassed that area. The dispute arose after the property was deeded to defendant by the trustee, and defendant proposed using the proceeds of any sale of the property for a broader public use. After the first witness was sworn, defendant objected to the introduction of evidence on the ground that the complaint did not state a cause of action by eligible parties. The court sustained the objection and denied plaintiff's motion to amend the complaint. Plaintiff appealed from the ensuing judgment on the pleadings.

The court of appeal reversed. The court noted that the plaintiff held itself ready to amend the complaint to allege the factual background in more detail, to make a detailed allegation of plaintiff's nature and standing, and to join as parties the attorney general and the Girl Scouts organization with status equivalent to that of plaintiff in the Boy Scouts. In holding that the plaintiff's request to amend should have been granted, the court cited MacIsaac v. Pozzo (1945) 26 Cal. 2d 809, 161 P.2d 449 (discussed in § 16.32[3][a], on the propriety of allowing amendment on a motion for judgment on the pleadings when a party with a good cause of action has failed to set it out by accident or mistake, especially when the defects were not earlier called to the pleader's attention (14 Cal. App. 3d 189, 194).

Plaintiffs in Olson v. Sacramento County (1969) 274 Cal. App. 2d 316, 79 Cal. Rptr. 140 , brought suit against defendant for breach of contract, and defendant cross complained alleging fraud. The court granted plaintiffs' motion, as cross defendants, for judgment on the pleadings on the ground that the action for fraud was barred by the statute of limitations because the cross complaint did not allege facts excusing failure to discover the fraud within the statutory period. Before judgment was entered on the order, cross complainant moved for a new trial on the order granting the judgment or alternatively for leave to amend the cross complaint, but judgment was entered the next day, and cross complainant appealed.

The court of appeal reversed, holding that the proposed amended cross complaint contained sufficient allegations to avoid the statute of limitations and that since it stated a cause of action which was not barred by the statute of limitations, the trial court should have allowed it to be filed (274 Cal. App. 2d 316, 327-329). The court relied on Dobbins v. Hardister (1966) 242 Cal. App. 2d 787, 51 Cal. Rptr. 866 (discussed in § 16.32[3][a]), and Shabrick v. Moore (1961) 195 Cal. App. 2d 56, 15 Cal. Rptr. 310 , discussed below, finding them applicable both because the proposed amended cross complaint showed that defendant had a good cause of action which had been defectively pleaded in the original cross complaint and because, although there had been no prior demurrer to the cross complaint, it had been earlier upheld against motions to dismiss and to strike, and for judgment on the pleadings which had been denied by a different judge from the one who granted the second motion for judgment on the pleadings (274 Cal. App. 2d 316, 329-330).

In Shabrick v. Moore (1961) 195 Cal. App. 2d 56, 15 Cal. Rptr. 310 , the trial court granted defendant's motion for judgment on the pleadings. On plaintiff's appeal, the court of appeal held that the trial court had not abused its discretion in granting the judgment as to plaintiff's claim on an oral contract that was barred by the statute of frauds because the defect clearly could not be corrected by amendment (195 Cal. App. 2d 56, 60). At the same time, however, the Shabrick court held that the trial court did err in granting judgment on the pleadings on a claim for quantum meruit that was poorly pleaded and sought the wrong measure of damages, holding that an opportunity to amend should have been allowed, particularly because the complaint had already been upheld against demurrer earlier in the proceedings (195 Cal. App. 2d 56, 63).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 16 AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
PART II. FORMS
A. Amended Pleadings

1-16 California Points & Authorities § 16.33

§ 16.33 Supporting Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--Correction of Mistaken or Inadvertent Statement

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--Correction of Mistaken or Inadvertent Statement

[The following should be combined with a general form of memorandum in support of a motion for leave to file an amended pleading or an amendment to a pleading (see § 16.30) or to amend to conform to proof (see § 16.31).]

THE COURT SHOULD ALLOW AMENDMENT OF THE PLEADING BECAUSE THE PROPOSED AMENDMENT MERELY CORRECTS AN ERROR RESULTING FROM MISTAKE OR INADVERTENCE.

A. Statutory Authority. The court may, in furtherance of justice, and on any terms as may be proper, allow a party to amend any pleading by correcting a mistake in the name of a party, or a mistake in any other respect (Code Civ. Proc. § 473(a)).

[EITHER]

B. Amendment to Correct Error Caused by Mistake or Inadvertence. A party should be allowed to amend to correct an error in a pleading caused by mistake or inadvertence (Meyer v. State Bd. of Equalization (1954) 42 Cal. 2d 376, 386, 267 P.2d 257 ; Board of Trustees v. Superior Court (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 1154, 1167-1170, 57 Cal. Rptr. 3d 755 ; Freidberg v. Freidberg (1970) 9 Cal. App. 3d 754, 761, 88 Cal. Rptr. 451).

[OR]

B. Amendment to Omit Allegation. A party should be allowed to amend a pleading to omit allegations that where made as the result of a mistake or inadvertence (Lamoreux v. San Diego & Ariz. E. Ry. Co. (1957) 48 Cal. 2d 617, 623, 311 P.2d 1).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a motion for leave to amend a pleading to correct a misstatement of fact in the original pleading by correcting or omitting an allegation. They do not provide a complete memorandum, but are designed to be combined with one of the general forms of memoranda of points and authorities supporting amendment of pleadings set out in §§ 16.30 and 16.31, as well as with forms relating to any other grounds that may exist for amending the pleadings [see §§ 16.32, 16.34 -16.44]. The first variation of Paragraph B is for use if an error is to be corrected by changing an allegation or replacing it with a new allegation; the second variation of Paragraph B is for use only if the error is to be corrected by omitting an allegation.

The case law underlying this memorandum relates to the objections to a motion to amend that the proposed amendment omits, without explanation, an allegation fatal to the pleading [see § 16.50] or contradicts an admission made in the original pleading [see § 16.51].

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities set out in § 16.50 or 16.51 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose a motion for leave to amend supported by this memorandum.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Amendment to Correct Error Caused by Mistake or Inadvertence

In Meyer v. State Bd. of Equalization (1954) 42 Cal. 2d 376, 267 P.2d 257 , plaintiffs brought suit to recover sales taxes that they had paid under protest. In their complaint, plaintiffs alleged that their role in relation to the sales in question was that of broker. Defendant's answer did not admit or deny this allegation, but an amended answer did deny it. Ultimately, however, plaintiffs prevailed in trial court, and defendant appealed.

The Supreme Court reversed, rejecting plaintiffs' position in defense of the judgment that the trial court had erred in allowing amendment of defendant's answer. The Court acknowledged the rule that a party cannot be allowed to file an amendment contradicting an admission made in his or her original pleadings, but held that the rule is subject to an exception when it is clearly shown that the earlier pleading is the result of mistake or inadvertence (42 Cal. 2d 376, 386).

In Board of Trustees v. Superior Court (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 1154, 57 Cal. Rptr. 3d 755 , the court considered the validity of a complaint signed by the party's father, with the party's knowledge and consent, instead of by the party or his/her attorney of record, as required by Code of Civ. Proc. §§ 446 and 128.7. In reviewing the language of section 446, its legislative history, and the wider historical circumstances of its enactment, the court found no suggestion that the Legislature intended a plaintiff's failure to comply with the subscription requirement to constitute an incurable defect. Similarly, the court found that section 128.7 also does not support the contention that a signature defect of the type at issue renders the complaint void and not subject to amendment. Thus, the court concluded that section 128.7 may be interpreted to allow correction of a signature defect in a complaint after the defect is called to the attention of the plaintiff, where the correction is promptly made and the court finds that the plaintiff actually assented to the filing of the action (149 Cal. App. 4th 1154, 1167-1170) .

Freidberg v. Freidberg (1970) 9 Cal. App. 3d 754, 88 Cal. Rptr. 451 , involved plaintiff's attempt to set aside a property settlement agreement with defendant, her former husband, on the ground that it had been procured by his fraud. The complaint alleged that defendant had represented to plaintiff that the community interest in his law practice was not more than $22,000, when it was actually in excess of $200,000. However, in a later deposition, plaintiff stated that defendant had insisted that there was no community interest in the law practice at all. In the deposition the plaintiff explained the allegation in the complaint by suggesting that in drafting it her attorneys must have drawn on the property settlement agreement which stated that plaintiff would receive a certain amount per month in consideration for giving up her interest in the law practice. Plaintiff moved for leave to amend her complaint to correct a mistake of fact unknown to the pleader at the time the complaint was filed, but the court apparently denied the motion. The trial court granted summary judgment for defendant and plaintiff appealed.

In reversing, the court of appeal held that the plaintiff should be allowed to amend her complaint, stating that the right of a party to correct a misstatement of fact when it appears the error was the result of a mistake or inadvertence cannot be denied (9 Cal. App. 3d 754, 761-763). The court recognized that when a verified pleading is amended to correct an error resulting from mistake or inadvertence, the resulting contradiction with the original allegation does not carry with it the onus of untruthfulness (9 Cal. App. 3d 754, 761).

[b] Amendment to Omit Allegation

In Lamoreux v. San Diego & Ariz. E. Ry. Co. (1957) 48 Cal. 2d 617, 311 P.2d 1 , plaintiff brought suit for the wrongful death of her husband, who was killed in a railroad crossing accident. Plaintiff's suit named both her husband's employer and the railroad as defendants, alleging that they were jointly engaged in raising the grade at the crossing and so negligently performed the work as to create a trap for motorists. Plaintiff also filed a claim for workmen's compensation which resulted in a settlement and release of the employer. An amended complaint subsequently omitted the employer as a party and omitted the allegations connecting the employer with the accident. Plaintiff won a verdict against the railway, but an order granting a new trial was entered, and plaintiff appealed from that order.

In affirming the order, the Supreme Court addressed the railway's contention that the release of the employer acted to release the railway as a joint tortfeasor as well. The railway relied on the allegations in the original complaint as establishing that it was a joint tortfeasor with the employer, and the Court recognized that when a verified complaint contains allegations destructive of a cause of action, the defect cannot be cured in later pleadings by simply omitting the allegations without explanation. However, the Court stated that a party should be allowed to correct a pleading by omitting an allegation which, it appears, was made as the result of a mistake or inadvertence. The Court proceeded to hold that plaintiff was not bound by the allegations of her original complaint which were omitted from the amended complaint in light of her explanation that after further investigation, she had become satisfied that the evidence would not support the allegations relating to the employer's negligence (48 Cal. 2d 617, 623).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Amendment to Correct Error Caused by Mistake or Inadvertence

In Higgins v. Del Faro (1981) 123 Cal. App. 3d 558, 176 Cal. Rptr. 704 , the court of appeal reversed the trial court's denial of plaintiff's motion to amend her complaint, noting that the amendment would have corrected a minor technical error in the pleading (attachment of wrong document) and would not have caused undue delay in the trial. The court stated that the policy of liberally allowing amendment any time before or during trial prevails so long as no prejudice is shown to the adverse party, and no such prejudice was demonstrated in the instant case (123 Cal. App. 3d 558, 564).

In Hooper v. Romero (1968) 262 Cal. App. 2d 574, 68 Cal. Rptr. 749 , plaintiff sued the driver and owner of a truck for damages, including damages to "plaintiff's automobile" suffered in an accident which occurred while plaintiff was riding in the automobile and her husband was driving it. After both sides had presented their cases, defendants sought an instruction on imputed contributory negligence on the ground that plaintiff's allegation in the complaint constituted an admission that the automobile was her separate property so that the negligence of her husband in driving it was imputable to her. Plaintiff moved to amend the complaint to delete any language which could be construed as alleging that she was the sole owner of the automobile, or alternatively, to clarify the language to reflect its intended meaning that plaintiff had a community property interest in the automobile (which would prevent her husband's negligence from being imputed to her) and to reopen the case to offer evidence of the nature of the ownership. The court denied the motion, and gave an instruction on imputed contributory negligence to the jury which returned a verdict for defendants. Plaintiff appealed.

Reversing, the court of appeal stated that when a party inadvertently makes an allegation which is destructive of his or her cause of action or of a valid defense, the courts generally favor amendment of pleadings to permit the party to assert the true facts and to correct the innocent error, and that this liberality applies during, as well as before trial. The court held that the trial court abused its discretion by denying the proposed amendment because it would not have deprived defendants of any valid defense, but would only, on reopening of the case, have allowed the true facts as to ownership to be proved. Then if community ownership were not established, defendants would still have been able to assert their defense (262 Cal. App. 2d 574, 580).

Gould v. Stafford (1894) 101 Cal. 32, 35 P. 429 , involved a dispute between riparian landowners over defendant's allegedly wrongful diversion of water from a stream. After the first trial of the case, the Supreme Court reversed a judgment in defendant's favor, and on remand, defendant moved to amend the answer to change the defense from a claim that he was entitled to more water than his flume could carry, to a claim that tenants on his property over whom he had no control were solely liable for any excessive diversion of water. The trial court allowed the amendment over plaintiff's objection. A second trial ensued, resulting in a judgment for plaintiff which was also reversed by the Supreme Court. Prior to the third trial, plaintiff moved to strike the amended answer, and the motion was denied. Defendant prevailed on the third trial, and plaintiff appealed.

The Supreme Court finally affirmed, rejecting plaintiff's contention that the amendment should not have been allowed because it was based mainly on a mistake of law made by defendant's attorney. The Court held that the power of a court to allow an amendment is not limited by the character of the mistake which requires it to be exercised, citing the power conferred on the courts by Code Civ. Proc. § 473 to allow amendment to correct, in addition to certain enumerated mistakes, mistakes in any other respect or in any other particulars (101 Cal. 32, 34).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 16 AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
PART II. FORMS
A. Amended Pleadings

1-16 California Points & Authorities § 16.34

§ 16.34 Supporting Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--To More Fully or Accurately State Cause of Action or Defense

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--To More Fully or Accurately State Cause of Action or Defense

[The following should be combined with a general form of memorandum in support of a motion for leave to file an amended pleading or an amendment to a pleading (see § 16.30).]

THE COURT SHOULD ALLOW THE AMENDMENT TO STATE THE _____ [CAUSE OF ACTION or DEFENSE] MORE FULLY OR ACCURATELY.

Amendment to State Cause of Action or Defense More Fully or Accurately. Ordinarily, a motion to amend a pleading to state a cause of action or defense more fully or accurately should be granted (Wells Fargo & Co. v. McCarthy (1907) 5 Cal. App. 301, 316, 90 P. 203 ; see also Oakes v. McCarthy Co. (1968) 267 Cal. App. 2d 231, 261-262, 73 Cal. Rptr. 127 and Angie M. v. Superior Court (1995) 37 Cal. App. 4th 1217, 1227, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 197).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a motion for leave to amend a pleading to state a cause of action or defense more fully and accurately when it has already been generally or ambiguously pleaded. It does not provide a complete memorandum, but is designed to be combined with one of the general forms of memoranda of points and authorities set out in §§ 16.30 and 16.31, as well as with forms relating to any other grounds that may exist for amending the pleading [see §§ 16.32, 16.33, 16.35 -16.44].

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Amendment to State Cause of Action or Defense More Fully or Accurately

In Wells, Fargo & Co. v. McCarthy (1907) 5 Cal. App. 301, 90 P. 203 , an action to foreclose a mortgage, defendants sought to introduce evidence of a novation of the promissory note that plaintiff had sued on. When the court excluded the evidence on the ground that it was not admissible under the pleadings, defendants asked leave to file an amended answer to assert the agreement that they claimed to constitute a novation. After the court denied the motion, one defendant moved to file an amended answer setting up the agreement as a novation giving him a lien on the premises prior to plaintiff's lien. The court sustained plaintiff's objection to the motion, and defendants ultimately appealed from a judgment in favor of plaintiff.

Although the court of appeal did not reverse the trial court, it stated, that, ordinarily, an application to amend a pleading to present more fully or accurately a cause of action or defense should be granted on such terms as appear just (5 Cal. App. 301, 316). The court held that the trial court had not abused its discretion in the case before it, however, due to defendants' delay in asserting the defense, noting that the action had been pending for over five years when the amendment was sought and that it would not be in the furtherance of justice to allow the amendment, which would have defeated plaintiff's right to enforce a just obligation (5 Cal. App. 301, 316-318).

Oakes v. McCarthy Co. (1968) 267 Cal. App. 2d 231, 73 Cal. Rptr. 127 , was a suit for damages arising out of movement of the filled lot on which plaintiffs' house was built. One of plaintiffs' claims against the developer was a claim for fraud based in part on affirmative misrepresentations that the work on the premises was done in good workmanlike manner. After plaintiffs rested their case in chief, they moved to amend the pleadings to conform to proof to add an allegation to the fraud count stating that the affirmative misrepresentations had been made that the house had been constructed in compliance with FHA requirements and that inspection by FHA inspectors was plaintiffs' assurance of proper grading of the lot. Plaintiffs recovered a judgment against the developer for fraud, and the developer appealed, claiming, inter alia, that the trial court erred in granting the motion to amend.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that the amendment did not attempt to add a new cause of action, but only elaborated on the representation of good workmanship which had been previously pleaded. Noting that the trial court had allowed defendants a one-week continuance to take depositions on the issue in response to their claim of surprise, the court held that absent an abuse of discretion prejudicing the opposing party, amendments are to be allowed with liberality and that the trial court had acted within its discretion (267 Cal. App. 2d 231, 262).

[b] Amendment to State Cause of Action or Defense More Fully or Accurately

In Angie M. v. Superior Court (1995) 37 Cal. App. 4th 1217, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 197 , plaintiff brought an action for childhood sexual abuse and intentional infliction of emotional distress. Defendant demurred to the cause of action for intentional infliction of emotional distress, and the trial court sustained the demurrer without leave to amend on various grounds, including that plaintiff failed to allege any facts showing that she suffered "severe" emotional distress.

The court of appeal agreed with the trial court on the issue that the complaint failed to plead sufficient facts demonstrating the nature, extent or duration of the alleged emotional distress. However, the court stated that denial of leave to amend constitutes an abuse of discretion unless the complaint shows on its face that it is incapable of amendment. Furthermore, liberality in permitting amendment is the rule if a fair opportunity to correct any defect has not been given. Since the deficiencies in plaintiff's pleading appeared to be easily corrected, the court concluded that it was an abuse of discretion for the trial court to deny leave to amend to allege specific facts sufficient to show the severity of plaintiff's alleged emotional distress (37 Cal. App. 4th 1217, 1227). The court thus issued a writ of mandate directing the trial court to vacate its order sustaining the demurrer without leave to amend.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Amendment to State Cause of Action or Defense More Fully or Accurately

Plaintiffs in Eatwell v. Beck (1953) 41 Cal. 2d 128, 257 P.2d 643 , brought suit for damages resulting from misrepresentations as to the income of a motel they purchased. Plaintiffs failed to plead or prove the proper measure of damages allowable in a case of fraud in the sale of property, and at the close of plaintiff's case, defendants moved for nonsuit. Before the court ruled on the motion, plaintiffs moved to reopen the case and for leave to amend the complaint so that the property values relevant to the appropriate measure of damages could be proven. The court denied plaintiffs' motion and granted defendants' motion for nonsuit. On appeal, the Supreme Court reversed. The Court stated that the original complaint clearly attempted to state a cause of action for damages for fraud, and that although it did not specifically allege damages under the proper theory, the facts alleged tended at least inferentially to show that there was such damage. Finding no apparent prejudice to defendants by the plaintiffs' failure to have earlier pleaded the more specific facts as to damage, the Court held that plaintiffs' request for leave to amend should have been granted (41 Cal. 2d 128, 135-136).

In Brooks v. E.J. Willig Truck Transp. Co. (1953) 40 Cal. 2d 669, 255 P.2d 802 , the trial court allowed plaintiffs to amend the complaint, which alleged that defendants were negligent in the operation and control of a truck, to allege that defendant driver violated two sections of the Vehicle Code relating to hit and run accidents. The court subsequently sustained defendants' demurrer to the amended complaint on the ground that the new allegations were barred by the statute of limitations. At trial proof was made of the statutory violations, and on appeal from a judgment in plaintiffs' favor, defendants argued that they were prejudiced because the court's rulings had led them to believe that these issues were excluded from the case. In rejecting defendants' contention, the Supreme Court stated that the demurrer to the new allegations in the amended complaint should not have been sustained in the first place because the new allegations set forth specific acts and omissions which were a part of the operation and control of the truck, and since they were not unrelated to the facts alleged in the original complaint, they were not barred by the statute of limitations (40 Cal. 2d 669, 681).

The original complaint in Jaffe v. Heffner (1959) 173 Cal. App. 2d 512, 343 P.2d 374 , sought a judgment quieting title to real property in plaintiff. At trial, the court allowed plaintiff to amend the complaint to allege a constructive trust, and plaintiff prevailed on that theory. On appeal, defendants claimed that they were prejudiced by the amendment, but the court of appeal rejected their contention, holding that an amended complaint elaborating allegations in a preceding one, though adding additional misrepresentations, does not state a new cause of action (173 Cal. App. 2d 512, 516-517).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 16 AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
PART II. FORMS
A. Amended Pleadings

1-16 California Points & Authorities § 16.35

§ 16.35 Supporting Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--Complaint--To Correct Failure to State Cause of Action

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--Complaint--To Correct Failure to State Cause of Action

[The following should be combined with a general form of memorandum in support of a motion for leave to file an amended pleading or an amendment to a pleading (see § 16.30) or to amend to conform to proof (see § 16.31).]

THE COURT SHOULD ALLOW AMENDMENT OF THE COMPLAINT BECAUSE THE AMENDMENT SUPPLIES AN ESSENTIAL ELEMENT OF THE CAUSE OF ACTION ORIGINALLY SOUGHT TO BE ALLEGED.

Alleging Essential Element of Cause of Action. The court should allow amendment of a complaint to supply an essential element of the cause of action sought to be alleged in the original complaint (Smith v. Los Angeles Bookbinders Union (1955) 133 Cal. App. 2d 486, 495, 284 P.2d 194 ; see Title Insurance & Trust Co. v. Affiliated Gas Equip., Inc. (1961) 191 Cal. App. 2d 318, 330-332, 12 Cal. Rptr. 729).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be used in support of a motion for leave to amend a complaint that failed to state a cause of action. It does not provide a complete memorandum, but is designed to be combined with one of the general forms of memoranda of points and authorities set out in §§ 16.30 and 16.31, as well as with forms relating to any other specific grounds that may exist for amending the complaint [see §§ 16.32 -16.34, 16.36 -16.42]. If the failure to state a cause of action is the result of a particularly technical defect, counsel may want to consider use of § 16.36 along with this form.

If a precautionary amendment is to be made to ensure that the complaint is sufficient, and counsel does not wish to admit the deficiency of the complaint by arguing that the amendment should be allowed because it will provide an essential element of the cause of action, it may be preferable to support the motion on the ground that the amendment will more fully or accurately state the cause of action [see § 16.34].

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[i] Related Uses

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may be used to support a motion for leave to file an amended cross complaint or an amendment to a cross complaint.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Alleging Essential Element of Cause of Action

Smith v. Los Angeles Bookbinders Union (1955) 133 Cal. App. 2d 486, 284 P.2d 194 , involved an action for libel. When the case came to trial, defendants objected to the introduction of evidence on the ground that the complaint did not state a cause of action. The objection was based on the complaint's failure to allege matter that was libelous on its face, as is necessary to constitute libel per se, or if the matter could be considered libel per quod due to innuendo, the complaint failed to allege any special damages that would make it actionable. The court sustained the demurrer with leave to amend. An amended complaint was subsequently filed which did allege special damages, but defendants' demurrer to the amended complaint on the ground that it stated a new cause of action barred by the statute of limitations was sustained. Plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal reversed, first determining that the complaint had not alleged libel per se because the matter was not libelous on its face (133 Cal. App. 2d 486, 492-494) . The court then held that a complaint that fails to state a cause of action because it does not allege an essential element of the cause of action may be amended to incorporate that indispensable element. The defendant is not surprised or prejudiced by such an amendment because it only corrects a defective statement of the cause of action attempted to be stated in the original complaint (133 Cal. App. 2d 486, 495). Such an amendment does not constitute the allegation of a new cause of action after the statute of limitations has run where there is no attempt to state facts giving rise to a wholly distinct and different legal obligation against defendant (133 Cal. App. 2d 486, 495-496). In the case before the court, the basic cause of action was the plaintiffs' right to be free from defamation, and so long as the same publication was the gist of the original and amended complaints, there could be no difference in the identity of the cause of action, whether libel per se or per quod (133 Cal. App. 2d 486, 497).

Plaintiffs in Title Ins. & Trust Co. v. Affiliated Gas Equip., Inc. (1961) 191 Cal. App. 2d 318, 12 Cal. Rptr. 729 , sued to recover for property damages resulting from a fire caused by a furnace. The original complaint included claims based on negligent manufacture and installation of the furnace and breach of express and implied warranties. At the beginning of trial, defendants moved to dismiss the causes of action based on breach of warranty due to plaintiffs' failure to allege that notice of the breach was given to defendants within a reasonable time after breach, an essential element of a cause of action for breach of warranty. Plaintiffs countered with a motion to amend the complaint to include the missing allegation. The court denied plaintiffs' motion and granted defendants' motions to dismiss. Plaintiffs appealed from judgments entered in favor of two defendants and as to a third defendant, from a judgment notwithstanding the verdict and order granting a new trial.

In reversing the adverse judgments and affirming the order granting a new trial, the court of appeal held that the motions to dismiss were erroneously granted and that leave to amend should have been allowed (191 Cal. App. 2d 318, 329-332). The court found that the motion to amend did not surprise or prejudice defendants since the original complaint alleged breach of warranty except for the element of notice, and defendants' pretrial statement and the pretrial order recognized the existence and breach of warranty as issues to be tried (191 Cal. App. 2d 318, 330-332).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Alleging Essential Element of Cause of Action

The facts and procedural background of Klopstock v. Superior Court (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 13, 108 P.2d 906 , are discussed in § 16.30[3][b]. In criticizing the unqualified statement that a new or different cause of action cannot be introduced by amendment, the Supreme Court noted that the most common kinds of amendments are those amending complaints that do not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action. The Court recognized that such amendments do in fact introduce a new cause of action for the first time, and concluded that the better formulation of the rule is that a wholly different cause of action is not to be introduced by amendment (17 Cal. 2d 13, 20).

The facts of Barba v. Superior Court (1966) 239 Cal. App. 2d 572, 49 Cal. Rptr. 60 , are discussed in § 16.30[4][a]. The court of appeal in Barba noted that, although plaintiffs' complaint was inartfully drawn, it was apparent from defendant owner's answer and conduct at pretrial that defendant was at all times aware that it had been sued on the theory that it was the owner of a vehicle which was being driven by a person who had permission to drive it at the time of the accident. The answer had not raised the issue, and at pretrial, defendant owner had stated that permissive use was not in issue (239 Cal. App. 2d 572, 576). Recognizing that an amendment should not be allowed to introduce a wholly different cause of action, the court relied on Klopstock v. Superior Court (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 13, 108 P.2d 906 , discussed above, for the proposition that the test for a wholly different cause of action is not based on technical rules of pleading, but is whether an attempt is made to state facts which give rise to a wholly distinct and different legal obligation against the defendant (239 Cal. App. 2d 572, 577-578). Applying that test, the court held that plaintiffs were attempting to enforce only one legal obligation against defendant owner, and that the amendment, relating only to the driver's status, was not prejudicial to defendant owner where nothing in the pleadings or pretrial statements and order indicated any other theory of liability. The court finally held that the trial court had abused its discretion in refusing to allow amendment, and ordered the writ of mandate to issue to compel the trial court to allow the amendment (239 Cal. App. 2d 572, 578).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 16 AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
PART II. FORMS
A. Amended Pleadings

1-16 California Points & Authorities § 16.36

§ 16.36 Supporting Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--Complaint--Correction of Technical Defect

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--Complaint--Correction of Technical Defect

[The following should be combined with a general form of memorandum in support of a motion for leave to file an amended pleading or an amendment to a pleading (see § 16.30) or to amend to conform to proof (see § 16.31).]

THE COURT SHOULD ALLOW AMENDMENT OF THE COMPLAINT BECAUSE THE AMENDMENT WILL CORRECT A TECHNICAL DEFECT IN AN OTHERWISE ADEQUATE PLEADING.

Amendment to Cure Technical Defect. An amendment designed to cure a technical defect in a pleading otherwise adequate to put the other party on notice of the true basis of the pleader's case should be allowed in furtherance of the policy favoring trial on the merits (Bice v. Stevens (1955) 136 Cal. App. 2d 368, 379, 289 P.2d 95).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a motion for leave to amend a complaint that is subject to a technical defect in pleading. It does not provide a complete memorandum, but is designed to be combined with one of the general forms of memoranda of points and authorities set out in §§ 16.30 and 16.31, as well as with forms relating to any other specific grounds that may exist for amending the complaint [see §§ 16.32 -16.35, 16.37 -16.42]. This form should be used when the complaint puts the defendant on notice of plaintiff's claim, but fails to state a cause of action for some technical reason. It is, therefore, closely related to § 16.35, and counsel should particularly consider use of § 16.35 with this form.

If correction of the technical defect requires the omission or contradiction of a fact pleaded in a prior complaint, counsel should consider use § 16.36 and should note that an explanation of the mistake or inadvertence leading to the erroneous pleading of the fact to be omitted or contradicted is required [see §§ 16.50, 16.51]. However, since this form relates to technically imperfect pleadings, it is more likely to require an elaboration on the facts pleaded (as where the wrong measure of damages has been pleaded) than to require an omission or change of pleaded facts.

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[i] Related Uses

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may be used to support a motion for leave to file an amended cross complaint or an amendment to a cross complaint.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Amendment to Cure Technical Defect

Bice v. Stevens (1955) 136 Cal. App. 2d 368, 289 P.2d 95 , involved claims of fraud arising out of an exchange of commercial properties. The complaint alleged the impossibility of rescission and sought damages in lieu of rescission, but alleged an incorrect measure of damages. Defendants objected to the introduction of any evidence on the ground that the complaint failed to state a cause of action. The court sustained the objection on the basis that no damages were alleged because the complaint did not allege the property values necessary to determine damages. Plaintiffs moved to amend the complaint to allege the relevant values, but the court denied the motion on the ground that, four years after the original complaint was filed, it raised new and different issues on which the defendants could not be expected to be prepared to go to trial. Plaintiffs appealed from the judgment entered against them.

The court of appeal reversed, taking note of the rule that when facts alleged in a complaint show that the plaintiff is entitled to some sort of damages, failure to plead the correct rule of damages is not fatal (136 Cal. App. 2d 368, 373-374) . Consistent with this rule, the court held that the defect in the complaint was a technical one in a pleading which was otherwise adequate to put the defendant on notice, and that in such a case, amendment had to be allowed in furtherance of allowing trial on the merits. The court did not consider the defendants to be prejudiced by the delay because the question of damages was not a new issue, but was already in the case. Accordingly, the court held that the trial court had abused its discretion by rejecting the proposed amendment (136 Cal. App. 2d 368, 379).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Amendment to Cure Technical Defect

In Central Concrete Supply Co., Inc. v. Michael Bursak (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 1092, 105 Cal. Rptr. 3d 909 , the underlying complaint alleged that the defendant/appellant attorney had conspired with a former client to defraud the plaintiff/respondent company. At the trial court level, defendant/appellant moved to strike the complaint due to plaintiff/respondent's failure to comply with Civ. Code § 1714.10(a), which prohibits the unauthorized filing of an action for nonexempt civil conspiracy against an attorney based on conduct arising from the representation of a client that is in connection with any attempt to contest or compromise a claim or dispute; the section requires a plaintiff who desires to pursue such an action to first commence a special proceeding by filing a verified petition naming the attorney as respondent. The trial court granted defendant/appellant's motion to strike the complaint, but gave plaintiff 30 days leave to amend the complaint. Civ. Code § 1714.10(b) provides that the failure to obtain the court approval required in § 1714.10(a) is a defense to the action.

On appeal, defendant/appellant contended that because the company neither complied with the prefiling requirement of Civ. Code § 1714.10(a) nor alleged any exceptions to that requirement under Civ. Code § 1714.10(c), leave to amend was improperly granted. The court of appeal held that subsection (b) does not divest the trial court of its authority, under Code Civ. Proc. § 473, to grant leave to amend; in appropriate circumstances, amendment after a sustained demurrer is permissible. Such circumstances existed here because the company might be able to plead that the attorney was not representing his former client at the time of the conspiracy or that he went beyond his professional obligations and conspired to violate a legal duty for financial gain.

In Board of Trustees v. Superior Court (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 1154, 57 Cal. Rptr. 3d 755 , the court considered the validity of a complaint signed by the party's father, with the party's knowledge and consent, instead of by the party or his/her attorney of record, as required by Code of Civ. Proc. §§ 446 and 128.7. In reviewing the language of section 446, its legislative history, and the wider historical circumstances of its enactment, the court found no suggestion that the Legislature intended a plaintiff's failure to comply with the subscription requirement to constitute an incurable defect. Similarly, the court found that section 128.7 also does not support the contention that a signature defect of the type at issue renders the complaint void and not subject to amendment. Thus, the court concluded that section 128.7 may be interpreted to allow correction of a signature defect in a complaint after the defect is called to the attention of the plaintiff, where the correction is promptly made and the court finds that the plaintiff actually assented to the filing of the action (149 Cal. App. 4th 1154, 1167-1170) .

In Ludgate Ins. Co. v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2000) 82 Cal. App. 4th 592, 98 Cal. Rptr. 2d 277 , defendant and cross complainant appealed from a judgment on the pleadings entered in favor of plaintiff and cross defendant. The court of appeal reversed. The court noted that the trial court implicitly concluded that because the cross complainant had failed to state that exhibits attached to the cross complaint and extensively discussed in the body of the cross complaint were "incorporated by reference" as part of the cross complaint, they were not part of the pleading, and should not be considered in determining whether the cross complaint stated a cause of action. The court of appeal found this to be a technical exercise and stated that the mantra "incorporated by reference" is not sacrosanct and under a rule of liberal construction cannot defeat an otherwise adequate pleading. Moreover, if all that was needed was to state the magic words "incorporated by reference," the trial court should have allowed the cross complainant to further amend the cross complaint to add those words. Denying cross-complainant the opportunity of such a harmless amendment was an abuse of discretion (82 Cal. App. 4th 592, 608-610).

In Dieckmann v. Superior Court (1985) 175 Cal. App. 3d 345, 220 Cal. Rptr. 602 , after plaintiff had substituted a defendant's true name, the trial court granted defendant's motion for judgment on the pleadings due to the absence, in the original complaint, of an allegation that the true names of the fictitiously named defendants were unknown to plaintiff, as required by Code Civ. Proc. § 474. Plaintiff filed a petition for writ of mandate to direct the trial court to vacate its order. The court of appeal directed the writ to issue, holding that the absence of the allegation constitutes a technical pleading omission, subject to liberal amendability under Code Civ. Proc. § 473 (175 Cal. App. 3d 345, 358).

Babcock v. Antis (1979) 94 Cal. App. 3d 823, 156 Cal. Rptr. 673 , involved several actions for unlawful detainer and damages brought in municipal court. Each complaint contained a request for contingent, uncalculated, future damages in a certain amount per day which could potentially exceed the $5,000 jurisdictional limit of the municipal court. Although the judgments recovered by plaintiffs in municipal court were within the $5,000 limit, the appellate department of the superior court reversed the judgments as being void for lack of jurisdiction because the complaints had failed to specify a $5,000 limit on recovery. The cases were transferred to the court of appeal, which reversed the appellate department. The court of appeal held that pleadings technically vulnerable to a construction that might defeat the court's jurisdiction after entry of judgment may be corrected after judgment by amendment to conform to proof (94 Cal. App. 3d 823, 830). Although it would have been preferable to amend before judgment, the court of appeal held that it had power to correct technical mistakes in pleadings not affecting the substantial rights of the parties, and accordingly, the court ordered its clerk to insert a limitation on damages in the prayer of each complaint (94 Cal. App. 3d 823, 830-831).

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 16 AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
PART II. FORMS
A. Amended Pleadings

1-16 California Points & Authorities § 16.37

§ 16.37 Supporting Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--Complaint--New Theory of Recovery After Limitations Period Has Run

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--Complaint--New Theory of Recovery After Limitations Period Has Run

[The following should be combined with a general form of memorandum in support of a motion for leave to file an amended pleading or an amendment to a pleading (see § 16.30) or to amend to conform to proof (see § 16.31).]

THE COURT SHOULD ALLOW AMENDMENT OF THE COMPLAINT TO STATE THE NEW THEORY OF RECOVERY EVEN THOUGH THE STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS HAS RUN BECAUSE RECOVERY IS SOUGHT ON THE SAME GENERAL SET OF FACTS AS IN THE ORIGINAL COMPLAINT AND THE AMENDED COMPLAINT WILL THEREFORE BE DEEMED TO RELATE BACK TO THE FILING OF THE ORIGINAL COMPLAINT TO AVOID THE BAR OF THE STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS.

Relation Back of Amendment Based on Same General Set of Facts. An amended complaint should be allowed even though it adds a new theory of recovery on which the statute of limitations has run or alleges new specific facts, or both, if recovery is sought in both pleadings on the same general set of facts. The amended complaint is deemed filed as of the time the original complaint is filed to avoid the bar of the statute of limitations (Smeltzley v. Nicholson Mfg. Co. (1977) 18 Cal. 3d 932, 939-940, 136 Cal. Rptr. 269, 559 P.2d 624 ; Grudt v. Los Angeles (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 575, 583-585, 86 Cal. Rptr. 465, 468 P.2d 825).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a motion for leave to amend a complaint to state a new theory of recovery and to allege any specific facts that are required to establish that theory. The form is for use when the new theory would be barred by the statute of limitations if it were not deemed to relate back to the filing of the original complaint. It would also support such a motion made when the new theory would not be barred by the statute of limitations, although there is less likelihood of objection to the amendment in that situation. The form does not provide a complete memorandum, but is designed to be combined with one of the general forms of memoranda of points and authorities supporting amendment of pleadings set out in §§ 16.30 and 16.31, as well as with forms relating to any other grounds that may exist for amending the complaint [see §§ 16.32 -16.36, 16.38 -16.42].

The primary purpose of the memorandum is to overcome the objection to a motion to amend that the proposed amended complaint states a new cause of action on which the statute of limitations has run [see § 16.53]. Therefore, rather than raising the issue in the points and authorities supporting the motion to amend, counsel for the moving party may wish to wait until opposing counsel objects to amendment on those grounds, and then raise the point and authorities contained in this form in a reply memorandum, if time allows (or after requesting a continuance) and if permitted by local court rules and practice, or in oral argument on the motion for leave to amend. However, if the court decides that this is an issue which should have been anticipated and addressed in the papers supporting the motion to amend, rather than disposed of later on a demurrer to the amended complaint, moving party might lose the opportunity to address the issues at all, or, fully and in writing, if the court will not permit oral argument on the point or accept reply memoranda and moving party has not raised the issue in the supporting memorandum.

If the proposed amendment involves a change in the relief sought as well as in the theory of recovery by which relief is sought, counsel may want to consider use of § 16.38 in addition to this form.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities set out in § 16.53 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose a motion for leave to amend a pleading supported by this memorandum.

[i] Related Uses

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may be used to support a motion for leave to file an amended cross complaint or an amendment to a cross complaint.

This form may also be used, with appropriate modifications, to oppose a motion to strike or a demurrer to an amended complaint when the motion is brought on the ground that it is barred by the statute of limitations.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For additional discussion relating to amendment of pleadings after the statute of limitations has run, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Relation Back of Amendment Based on Same General Set of Facts

In Smeltzley v. Nicholson Mfg. Co. (1977) 18 Cal. 3d 932, 136 Cal. Rptr. 269, 559 P.2d 624 , plaintiff was injured while operating a machine. The original complaint alleged that plaintiff was injured because defendants failed to provide him with a safe place to work and acted in reckless disregard of his safety. Plaintiff's employers were named as defendants, along with standard fictitious defendants alleged in each cause of action. After the statute of limitations had run, plaintiff filed an amended complaint substituting the manufacturer of the machine that had injured him for Doe I, and alleging that his injury was caused by the defective condition of the machine. The trial court sustained the manufacturer's demurrer to the amended complaint without leave to amend on the ground that the action against the manufacturer was barred by the statute of limitations, and plaintiff appealed from the resulting judgment dismissing his action as to the manufacturer.

The Supreme Court reversed, applying the general rule stated in Austin v. Massachusetts Bonding & Insurance Co. (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 596, 15 Cal. Rptr. 817, 364 P.2d 681 (discussed in § 16.37[4][a]), that an amended complaint relates back to the filing of the original complaint, thus avoiding the bar of the statute of limitations, so long as recovery is sought in both pleadings on the same general set of facts (18 Cal. 3d 932, 934, 940). The Court also relied on Garrett v. Crown Coach Corp. (1968) 259 Cal. App. 2d 647, 66 Cal. Rptr. 590 , where the complaint had alleged that named and fictitious defendants negligently maintained and operated a school bus. There, the trial court sustained a demurrer to an amended complaint which substituted the bus manufacturer for Doe I and alleged negligent design and manufacture of the bus, and the court of appeal reversed. The Supreme Court in Smeltzley noted the striking parallel with Garrett, in that in each case the amendment only changed the basis of the alleged liability from responsibility for the operation of the injury-causing instrumentality to responsibility for the manufacture of it, while the accident and injuries alleged remained the same as in the original complaint (18 Cal. 3d 932, 936-937).

The Smeltzley Court also relied on Barnes v. Wilson (1974) 40 Cal. App. 3d 199, 114 Cal. Rptr. 839 , in which the original complaint had charged named defendants, tavern owners, and fictitious defendants with failing to warn decedent of the danger created by the presence of his assailant, and failing to protect decedent. The court of appeal in Barnes held that an amendment bringing in the owners of a neighboring tavern as Does and alleging that they served the assailant liquor when he was already intoxicated, satisfied the test requiring recovery to be sought on the same general set of facts. Additionally, the Smeltzley Court relied on Grudt v. Los Angeles (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 575, 86 Cal. Rptr. 465, 468 P.2d 825 , discussed below, which applied the same test in a case involving a new cause of action asserted after the statute of limitations had run, but not involving the addition of a new party (18 Cal. 3d 932, 938).

In Smeltzley the Court stressed that under Austin, above, and its progeny, the original and amended complaints rested on different theories, invoked different legal duties, and required proof of significantly different facts. The Court reiterated the warning of Austin that any attempt to determine whether an amendment relates back to the filing of the original complaint by inquiring whether it states a wholly different cause of action results in confusion and undue restrictions on the right to amend. Thus, the fact that the amended complaint rests on a different legal theory and states a different cause of action is irrelevant under Austin; the test is whether the amended complaint relates to the same general set of facts as the original complaint. The Smeltzley Court deemed the test satisfied because both complaints sought recovery for the same accident and injuries (18 Cal. 3d 932, 940).

Plaintiff in

Grudt v. Los Angeles (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 575, 86 Cal. Rptr. 465, 468 P.2d 825 , brought a wrongful death action against two police officers and the city based on the shooting of her husband. The original complaint alleged that the officers were employees of the city and that they had intentionally and wrongfully shot her husband. Plaintiff's motion to amend the complaint to add a second cause of action against the city for negligently employing dangerous and violence-prone officers was granted by the law and motion department, but stricken by the trial judge on the first day of trial on the ground that it was barred by the statute of limitations. Plaintiff appealed after a jury verdict for defendants.

The Supreme Court held that the trial court erred in striking plaintiff's second cause of action. The Court applied the prevailing rule in actions involving parties designated by their true names in the original complaint, that if an amendment is sought after the statute of limitations has run, the amended complaint is deemed filed as of the date of the original complaint provided recovery is sought in both pleadings on the same general set of facts (2 Cal. 3d 575, 583). The Court determined that although the second cause of action added a significant new dimension to the lawsuit, both counts in the amended complaint recited the same acts of the officers as the gravaman of the action and both sought compensation for plaintiff's loss of her husband. The allegation of additional incidental facts regarding the officers' prior dangerous conduct and the city's knowledge of it did not set up a significantly different cause of action, and the general rule applied to allow amendment without encountering the bar of the statute of limitations (2 Cal. 3d 575, 583-585).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Relation Back of Amendment Based on Same General Set of Facts

In Wilson v. Bittick (1965) 63 Cal. 2d 30, 45 Cal. Rptr. 31, 403 P.2d 159 , plaintiff brought suit for trespass to a quarter section of land. After the statute of limitations had run, plaintiff amended the complaint to claim trespass to an entire half section of land, and to double the compensatory damages sought. The court granted defendants' motion for summary judgment, and on appeal, defendants argued in support of that judgment that the second amended complaint was barred by the statute of limitations. The Supreme Court held that the amended complaint did not state a new cause of action by adding an additional quarter section of land to the claim, because recovery was sought on the same general set of facts as was the original complaint, relying on Austin v. Massachusetts Bonding & Insurance Co. (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 596, 15 Cal. Rptr. 817, 364 P.2d 681 , discussed below, for the test of when an amended complaint related back to the filing of the original complaint thereby avoiding the bar of the statute of limitations (63 Cal. 2d 30, 37-38).

In Austin v. Massachusetts Bonding & Insurance Co. (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 596, 15 Cal. Rptr. 817, 364 P.2d 681 , plaintiff sued several defendants by name and others by fictitious name to recover securities and moneys delivered to defendants. The complaint stated that the named defendants were covered by a bond, but did not seek to recover on the bond. Over two years later, plaintiffs filed an amended complaint with leave of court substituting the company that issued the bond for one of the fictitiously named defendants and seeking to recover on the bond. Plaintiffs appealed from a judgment entered in favor of the bonding company after its demurrer was sustained without leave to amend.

The Supreme Court reversed, rejecting defendant's argument that plaintiffs' claim on the bond was barred by the statute of limitations. The Court followed the modern rule that, when parties are designated by their true names, the limitations bar against an amended complaint filed after the statute of limitations has run is avoided by deeming the amended complaint filed as of the date of the original complaint, provide recovery is sought in both pleadings on the same general set of facts (56 Cal. 2d 596, 600-602). The Court found that such an amendment did not affect a fictitiously named defendant any differently than it affected a truly named defendant, and that a plaintiff who was unaware of the defendant's true identity at the time the original complaint was filed was as much in need of the liberality of amendment permitted by the rule as a plaintiff who had been aware of the defendant's identity (56 Cal. 2d 596, 602-603). Therefore, and in furtherance of the policy of litigating cases on their merits, the Court applied the modern rule to the case and held that the suit was not barred by the statute of limitations.

In Wennerholm v. Stanford Univ. School of Medicine (1942) 20 Cal. 2d 713, 128 P.2d 522 , plaintiff's first four complaints alleged that defendants' negligent failure to disclose the dangerous side effects of a drug caused her to use the drug, and resulted in her blindness. The fifth amended complaint alleged that the representations were made with knowledge of their falsity, and the trial court sustained a demurrer to it. On plaintiff's appeal, defendants urged that the demurrer was properly sustained because the fifth amended complaint for fraud stated a new and different cause of action than the prior complaints for negligence and was barred by the statute of limitations. Applying the rule that an amended complaint relates back to the date of filing the original complaint so long as both seek recovery on the same general set of facts, the court held that the mere change in legal theory from negligent to fraudulent misrepresentation did not constitute statement of an entirely different cause of action (20 Cal. 2d 713, 717-718).

In Walton v. Guinn (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1354, 232 Cal. Rptr. 451 , plaintiff, who was injured in an automobile accident, brought suit against the other driver and his insurer. Plaintiff's original complaint alleged that the driver negligently operated a motor vehicle, causing injury to plaintiff, and the insurer acted in bad faith in refusing to pay benefits to the plaintiff. These allegations were listed under the heading "CAUSE OF ACTION--Breach of Contract," and made no reference to special damages. Plaintiff then filed an amended complaint against the insurer alleging bad faith. The action was dismissed as premature. After the period of limitations had run, plaintiff filed another amended complaint alleging a cause of action against the driver for negligence including special damages. The trial court entered judgment for defendant on the ground that the action was barred by the statute of limitations. The court of appeal reversed. It held that the first amended complaint did not supersede the original complaint for the purposes of avoiding the statute of limitation under the relation back doctrine (187 Cal. App. 3d 1354, 1359-1361). The court also held that an amended complaint alleging special damages not mentioned in the original complaint may relate back to the original complaint as long as the special damages are the result of the injury alleged in the original complaint (187 Cal. App. 3d 1354, 1362).

In Nelson v. Nevel (1984) 154 Cal. App. 3d 132, 201 Cal. Rptr. 93 , plaintiff brought suit against the man with whom she had cohabited for a share of property jointly acquired by them. Defendant moved for judgment on the pleadings, based on the bar of the two-year statute of limitations of Code Civ. Proc. § 339 for actions based on implied contracts. The court granted the motion without allowing plaintiff to amend the pleading to set forth an equitable action. Under equitable actions, the four-year statute of limitations, Code Civ. Proc. § 343, would have applied, and plaintiff's case would have been timely filed. The court of appeal reversed, holding that the trial court abused its discretion by not allowing plaintiff an opportunity to amend her complaint to assert an equitable action because plaintiff would thus be denied justice, and defendant would not be prejudiced, because he had long known of plaintiff's defect but had made no move to raise the problem until the date of trial (154 Cal. App. 3d 132, 141). The court stated that the modern rule allows an amended complaint to relate back to the date of filing of the original complaint and thus avoids the bar of the statute of limitations so long as recovery in both pleadings is based on the same general set of facts (154 Cal. App. 3d 132, 142).

In Lamont v. Wolfe (1983) 142 Cal. App. 3d 375, 190 Cal. Rptr. 874 , plaintiff and plaintiff's wife brought suit for personal injury and loss of consortium for injuries allegedly caused by the negligence of the hospital and doctors who treated plaintiff's wife. After plaintiff's wife died, plaintiff sought to amend the complaint to change the theory of recovery to wrongful death. The trial court sustained defendants' demurrer to the action based on the ground that it was barred by Code Civ. Proc. § 340.5 because it was not filed within one year of plaintiff's wife's death. The court of appeal held that the wrongful death action related back to the timely filed complaint for loss of consortium because both pleadings related to the same general set of facts; the same negligent acts of defendants and the same injuries to plaintiff (142 Cal. App. 3d 375, 378-381).

In Hirsa v. Superior Court (1981) 118 Cal. App. 3d 486, 173 Cal. Rptr. 418 , plaintiff brought suit for personal injuries sustained when his vehicle was struck by a van driven by one defendant and owned by the other defendant. Defendant owner was also sued in its capacity as defendant driver's employer. After the statute of limitations had run, plaintiff moved to amend the complaint to add a cause of action against defendant owner and employer for negligent entrustment of the van to defendant driver. The motion was denied by the trial court, and plaintiff petitioned the court of appeal for a writ of mandate to compel the trial court to grant the motion. The court of appeal ordered the writ to issue, holding that the pleadings related to the same general set of facts so that the amendment related back to the filing of the original complaint and was not barred by the statute of limitations (118 Cal. App. 3d 486, 489).

The complaint in Rainer v. Community Memorial Hosp. (1971) 18 Cal. App. 3d 240, 95 Cal. Rptr. 901 , a medical malpractice suit arising out of numerous operations, was based on negligence, and did not raise any issue of informed consent or battery. The issue of informed consent arose on the first day of trial, but the court excluded evidence on that matter despite plaintiffs' assertion that the complaint would be amended to raise the issue. The court also denied a motion made by plaintiffs at the close of their case to amend the complaint to conform to proof to raise the issue of informed consent and to add a cause of action for battery. Plaintiffs appealed from a judgment which was only partially in their favor.

The court of appeal held that the trial court had abused its discretion in denying the amendment (18 Cal. App. 3d 240, 254-256). The court stated, relying on Austin v. Massachusetts Bonding & Insurance Co. (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 596, 15

Cal. Rptr. 817, 364 P.2d 681 , discussed above, and other prior California law, that where additional investigation and discovery is not required to meet the new issue, it would constitute an abuse of discretion not to permit amendment of a complaint, even at the outset of trial, if the amendment merely adds a new theory of recovery on the same set of facts constituting the cause of action (18 Cal. App. 3d 240, 254). The court then noted that defendants had only objected to introduction of the issue because it had not been pleaded, and not because of surprise or the necessity for additional investigation (18 Cal. App. 3d 240, 255). Resolving the issue, the court held that the claim of battery was not a new cause of action, but only a new theory of recovery, and that the amendment should have been allowed the first time it was requested, so that the issue could have been fully litigated (18 Cal. App. 3d 240, 255-256).

On the other hand, the court of appeal held that the trial court had not abused its discretion in denying plaintiff's motion to amend to plead a theory of independent negligence against the hospital in addition to the theory of respondent superior (18 Cal. App. 3d 240, 257-259). The court held that the motion, made on the third day of trial, had been properly denied due to plaintiffs' long unexcused delay which was prejudicial to defendants because interjection of the new issue would have further complicated the trial, and defendants had not made discovery and preparation for trial on the issue (18 Cal. App. 3d 240, 258). This aspect of Rainer is discussed in § 16.48[4][b].

Plaintiff in Overholser v. Glynn (1968) 267 Cal. App. 2d 800, 73 Cal. Rptr. 628 , was a shareholder and, with other shareholders, a guarantor of a corporation's notes. After the corporation's default, plaintiff's assets were used to satisfy the notes, and the bank assigned the obligations secured by the shareholder guarantees to plaintiff. Plaintiff brought suit as the bank's assignee, but during pretrial it appeared that there was a valid defense to that action. Accordingly, plaintiff moved to amend the complaint to set forth as a second cause of action a common count for money had and received. The court granted the motion and plaintiff went on to recover against defendants, one of whom appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. Defendant argued that the amendment had been improperly granted because the statute of limitations had run. The court, however, found that the amendment related back to the filing of the original complaint, thereby avoiding the bar of the statute of limitations, because the common count was based on the facts alleged in the original complaint supplemented by defendants' answers and varied only the theory of recovery (267 Cal. App. 2d 800, 805). The court held that it is the basic set of facts and not legal theory pleaded that determines plaintiff's right to amend after the statute of limitations has run, citing Austin v. Massachusetts Bonding & Insurance Co. (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 596, 15 Cal. Rptr. 817, 364 P.2d 681 , discussed above, and other prior California authority (267 Cal. App. 2d 800, 805-806). The court also held that a change in the form or type of contractual obligation alleged may be only a change in legal theory, not affecting the cause of action for breach of the obligation. As an example, the court pointed to amendment of a complaint on an express contract to change to a claim for, or to add a count for, quantum meruit (267 Cal. App. 2d 800, 806).

The original complaint in Landis v. Superior Court (1965) 232 Cal. App. 2d 548, 42 Cal. Rptr. 893 , sought damages and declaratory relief based on breach of an oral contract. Before the case was set for pretrial or trial, plaintiff twice moved for leave to file an amended complaint for reformation of a written contract and for damages and declaratory relief based on breach of the written contract as reformed. The trial court twice denied plaintiff's motion, and plaintiff sought a writ of mandate.

The court of appeal rejected defendants' contention that the amendment should not be allowed because reformation was barred by the statute of limitations, and issued a writ of mandate compelling the trial court to permit amendment. Relying on Austin v. Massachusetts Bonding & Insurance Co. (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 596, 15 Cal. Rptr. 817, 364 P.2d 681 , discussed above, the court held that an amendment is to be allowed, and will relate back to overcome the bar of the statute of limitations, if recovery is sought on the same general set of facts as the original complaint and that for the purpose of amendment, the term "cause of action" includes any claim based on the same general set of facts. Noting that although reformation is sometimes referred to as a "cause of action," it is really only one of several remedies for a single wrong, the court held that the pleadings revealed one inseverable transaction falling within the rule of Austin (232 Cal. App. 2d 548, 555-556).

In Youngblood v. Los Angeles (1958) 160 Cal. App. 2d 481, 325 P.2d 587 , plaintiff brought suit against the city and the county flood control district for erosion damage his property had sustained during a storm. Plaintiff claimed that the city had negligently dumped an increased volume of water in a channel near plaintiff's property which cause erosion and brought down a large tree. Massive erosion followed when the city and flood control district then removed the tree, which had supported plaintiff's property, rendering the city and district liable for inverse condemnation. At trial, it appeared that the real cause of the erosion had been the negligent construction of a revetment by the district. At the close of plaintiff's case, his motion to amend the complaint to conform to proof was denied, the court granted a nonsuit, and plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal reversed as to the flood district. The court found that the record made out a prima facie case for inverse condemnation against the district based on its construction of the revetment which had diverted water from its natural channel onto plaintiff's land (160 Cal. App. 2d 481, 487-488). Noting the rules that an amendment is not objectionable for stating a new cause of action if it simply shifts from one theory of liability to another or supplies an essential element of the cause of action which was missing in the original complaint, the court held that the trial court had abused its discretion in denying plaintiff's motion to amend to conform to proof (160 Cal. App. 2d 481, 489-490). It should be noted, however, that the court also held that the trial court had not abused its discretion in denying the motion to amend as to the city. That amendment would have stated an entirely different and new cause of action against the city based on a new and different obligation by changing from a common law claim relating to removal of the tree to a statutory claim relating to construction and maintenance of a nearby bridge (160 Cal. App. 2d 481, 490-492).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 16 AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
PART II. FORMS
A. Amended Pleadings

1-16 California Points & Authorities § 16.38

§ 16.38 Supporting Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--Complaint--Change in Relief Sought

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--Complaint--Change in Relief Sought

[The following should be combined with a general form of memorandum in support of a motion for leave to file an amended pleading or an amendment to a pleading (see § 16.30) or to amend to conform to proof (see § 16.31).]

THE COURT SHOULD ALLOW THE AMENDMENT TO THE COMPLAINT BECAUSE IT MERELY CHANGES THE RELIEF SOUGHT.

A. Changing Relief Sought. A change by amendment from one kind of relief to another is not a change in the cause of action if the transaction is the same, and the court may properly allow such an amendment (Peters v. Binnard (1933) 219 Cal. 141, 149, 25 P.2d 834).

[Optional] B. Change From Law to Equity. The fact that the change made by an amendment is from legal to equitable relief is immaterial (Rosemead Co. v. Shipley Co. (1929) 207 Cal. 414, 420, 278 P 1038 ; Walsh v. McKeen (1888) 75 Cal. 519, 17 P 673).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be used in support of a motion for leave to amend a complaint to change the relief sought. It does not provide a complete memorandum, but is designed to be combined with one of the general forms of memoranda of points and authorities set out in §§ 16.30 and 16.31, as well as with forms relating to any other grounds that may exist for amending the complaint [see §§ 16.32 -16.37, 16.39 -16.42].

The primary purpose of this memorandum is to overcome the objection to a motion to amend that the proposed amended complaint states a new cause of action on which the statute of limitations has run [see § 16.53]. Therefore, rather than raising the issue in the points and authorities supporting the motion to amend, counsel for the moving party may wish to wait until opposing counsel objects to amendment on that ground, and then raise the points and authorities contained in this form in a reply memorandum, if time allows (or after requesting a continuance) and if permitted by local court rules and practice, or in oral argument on the motion for leave to amend. However, if the court decides that this is an issue which should have been anticipated and addressed in the papers supporting the motion to amend, rather than disposed of later on a demurrer to the amended complaint, moving party might lose the opportunity to address the issues at all, or fully and in writing, if the court will permit argument on the point or accept reply memoranda, and moving party has not raised the issue in the supporting memorandum.

The cases underlying this memorandum arose in response to objections that the proposed amendment would improperly introduce a new cause of action. For that reason, the language of the form states the negative proposition that the change in relief sought does not constitute a new cause of action. In this connection, it should be noted that the test of a proper amendment is no longer whether the amendment states a new cause of action, but whether the amendment seeks recovery on the same general set of facts as the original complaint [see Smeltzley v. Nicholson Mfg. Co. (1977) 18 Cal. 3d 932, 940, 136 Cal. Rptr. 269, 559 P.2d 624 , discussed in § 16.37[3][a]]. Counsel using this form may also want to see § 16.37, which sets forth the modern rule allowing amendments based on the same general set of facts, because an amendment that changes only the relief sought would fall within the terms of that rule.

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[i] Related Uses

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may be used to support a motion for leave to file an amended cross complaint or an amendment to a cross complaint.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a discussion and forms relating to amendment of prayers, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 420, Prayers (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Changing Relief Sought

In Peters v. Binnard (1933) 219 Cal. 141, 25 P.2d 834 , plaintiff originally sought, in part, $5,000 damages for defendants' failure to cancel a note, thereby breaching a contract between the parties. After the parties had submitted their cases, the court ordered that plaintiff have leave to file an amended complaint to conform to proof. The amended complaint prayed for cancellation of the note or, in the alternative, for damages, and a judgment was entered ordering cancellation of the note. On appeal, defendants complained that the order allowing amendment was in error. The Supreme Court affirmed, holding that a change by amendment from one kind of relief to another is not a change in the cause of action if the transaction is the same, relying on Rosemead Co. v. Shipley Co. (1929) 207 Cal. 414, 420, 278 P 1038 , discussed in § 16.38[3][b].

[b] Change From Law to Equity

At the opening of trial in Rosemead Co. v. Shipley Co. (1929) 207 Cal. 414, 278 P 1038 , the court allowed plaintiffs to file an amended complaint changing the prayer for relief from a request for a money judgment to a request for a variety of equitable remedies, including (1) a declaration that plaintiffs owned the property in dispute, and (2) cancellation of a contract, deed, and court decree on the ground that they were fraudulently obtained. The court entered a judgment granting the requested relief, and on appeal, the Supreme Court held that the amendment, contrary to defendants' contention, did not introduce a new cause of action. The Court held, relying on prior California law, that a change by amendment from one kind of relief to another is not a change in the cause of action if the transaction is the same, and that the fact that the change is from legal to equitable relief is immaterial (207 Cal. 414, 420).

In Walsh v. McKeen (1888) 75 Cal. 519, 17 P 673 , plaintiff, as executrix, prayed for a judgment in a particular amount of money, claiming that the estate was entitled to the money as decedent's contribution to a partnership and his share of the profits. During trial, the court allowed plaintiff to amend the prayer of her complaint to ask for an accounting and such other or further relief as might be deemed equitable and proper. On defendant's appeal, the Supreme Court held that the amendment was properly allowed, holding that an action does not fail because plaintiff has made a mistake as to the form of remedy. The Court held that a party cannot be sent out of court merely because the facts do not allow relief to be granted at law, or in equity, as the case might be, but that a party can be sent out of court only when no relief can be allowed on the facts in law or equity (75 Cal. 519, 521-522).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Changing Relief Sought

The original complaint in Jaffe v. Heffner (1959) 173 Cal. App. 2d 512, 343 P.2d 374 , sought a judgment quieting title to real property in plaintiff. At trial, the court allowed plaintiff to amend the complaint to allege a constructive trust, and plaintiff prevailed on that theory. On appeal, defendants claimed that they were prejudiced by the amendment, but the court of appeal rejected their contention, holding that the amendment of a complaint to change from one kind of relief to another is not a change in the cause of action if the transaction is the same (173 Cal. App. 2d 512, 516-517).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 16 AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
PART II. FORMS
A. Amended Pleadings

1-16 California Points & Authorities § 16.39

§ 16.39 Supporting Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--Complaint--Increased Demand for Damages

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--Complaint--Increased Demand for Damages

[The following should be combined with a general form of memorandum in support of a motion for leave to file an amended pleading or an amendment to a pleading (see § 16.30) or to amend to conform to proof (see § 16.31).]

THE COURT MAY ALLOW THE AMENDMENT TO INCREASE THE DAMAGES SOUGHT.

Increase in Amount of Damages. An amendment to a complaint praying for damages greater than originally sued for is properly allowed if it relates solely to the identical cause of action set forth in the original complaint (Nuttman v. Chais (1950) 101 Cal. App. 2d 476, 479, 225 P.2d 660 ; Babcock v. Jewell (1930) 110 Cal. App. 323, 325-326, 294 P 30).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a motion for leave to file an amended complaint or an amendment to a complaint in order to increase the damages requested in the prayer. It does not provide a complete memorandum but is designed to be combined with one of the general forms of memoranda of points and authorities supporting amendment of pleading set out in §§ 16.30 and 16.31, as well as with forms relating to any other grounds that may exist for amending the pleading [see §§ 16.32 -16.38, 16.40 -16.42].

This form would not be used in an action for personal injuries or wrongful death, because in such cases, the complaint may not state the amount of damages claimed [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.10(b)].

The rule in this form provides that an amendment to increase the damages claimed may be allowed if based on the identical cause of action as the original complaint. In this connection, it should be noted that the test of whether an amendment is proper is no longer whether the amendment states a new cause of action, but whether the amendment seeks recovery on the same general set of facts as the original complaint [Smeltzley v. Nicholson Mfg. Co. (1977) 18 Cal. 3d 932, 940, 136 Cal. Rptr. 269, 559 P.2d 624 , discussed in § 16.37[3][a]]. Counsel using this form may also want to use § 16.37, which sets forth the modern rule allowing amendments based on the same general set of facts because an amendment that only increases the demand for damages would most likely fall within the terms of that rule.

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Uses

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may be used to support a motion for leave to file an amended cross complaint or an amendment to a cross complaint.

[c] Amendment to Conform to Proof Increasing Damages

An amendment to increase the amount of damages requested should not be made in the presence of the jury after the production of evidence, because a motion granted under such circumstances has been held to be prejudicial error [see Sanguinetti v. Moore Dry Dock Co. (1951) 36 Cal. 2d 812, 819, 228 P.2d 557]. However, a motion to amend to increase the damages requested may be made during trial outside the presence of the jury [see Russell v. Geis (1967) 251 Cal. App. 2d 560, 570-571, 59 Cal. Rptr. 569 (motion made during conference between court and counsel during voir dire)].

[d] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a discussion and forms relating to amendment of complaints to increase the damages sought and to amendment of prayers, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 177, Damages and Ch. 420, Prayers (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Increase in Amount of Damages

Defendants in Nuttman v. Chais (1950) 101 Cal. App. 2d 476, 225 P.2d 660 , appealed from a judgment foreclosing mechanics' liens on their property, arguing that plaintiff should not have been allowed to amend the complaint to conform to the proof by alleging a greater amount due than was alleged in the original complaint. The court of appeal affirmed, holding that the trial court did not abuse its discretion in allowing the amendment, and stating that an amendment to a complaint praying for damages greater than originally sued for is properly allowed if the evidence justifies such increase and relates solely to the identical cause of action in the original pleading, relying on prior California law (101 Cal. App. 2d 476, 479).

In Babcock v. Jewell (1930) 110 Cal. App. 323, 294 P. 30 , plaintiff sued to recover usurious interest and a penalty for exacting it. Plaintiff alleged that she paid $372.09 to defendants for a six-month loan of $1,288, but later amended her complaint to allege that she paid defendants $6,172 for a six-month loan of $4,500. On defendants' appeal from a judgment in plaintiff's favor, defendants argued that the amended complaint asserted a new cause of action, based on three separate transactions, and was barred by the statute of limitations. The court of appeal disagreed, and held that the identical cause of action, a claim for a usurious charge arising out of a loan of a definite amount of money, was presented because on the facts there had been but one transaction (110 Cal. App. 323, 325-326) . Additionally, the court stated that if the complaint, as amended, related solely to the identical cause of action set forth in the original complaint, the fact that the amendment increased the amount of damages claimed would not present any tenable legal objection (110 Cal. App. 323, 325).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Increase in Amount of Damages

The facts and procedural background of Wilson v. Bittick (1965) 63 Cal. 2d 30, 45 Cal. Rptr. 31, 403 P.2d 159 , are discussed in § 16.37[4][a]. The Supreme Court noted that it is settled that a complaint may be amended to increase the amount of damages prayed for without incurring the bar of the statute of limitations (63 Cal. 2d 30, 39 fn. 7).

In Russell v. Geis (1967) 251 Cal. App. 2d 560, 59 Cal. Rptr. 569 , defendant appealed from a judgment on an adverse jury verdict in an action for defamation, contending, in part, that the trial court erred in allowing plaintiffs to amend their complaints (the cases were consolidated for trial and appeal) to double the claim for general damages. Plaintiffs had informed defendant of their intention to amend to increase the damages claimed, but did not formally move to amend prior to commencement of trial. Defense counsel mentioned the amount of damages requested in the original complaints while questioning the second juror, at which time questioning was interrupted, and in a conference between court and counsel, plaintiffs' attorneys moved to amend the complaints. The court of appeal held that there was no error in allowing the amendment, because it had not been made in the presence of the jury, and because defendant had mentioned the amount of the prayer before any evidence had been adduced, with the intention of precluding amendment under Sanguinetti v. Moore Dry Dock Co. (1951) 36 Cal. 2d 812, 228 P.2d 557 . Sanguinetti precludes amendment to increase the damages prayed for, if the motion to amend is made in front of the jury after the evidence in a case has been submitted, in order to prevent the jury from being influenced by the court allowing the motion. The Russell court distinguished Sanguinetti on the facts and held that if there were any error in the trial court permitting amendment, it was harmless (251 Cal. App. 2d 560, 570-571).

Plaintiffs in Duffey v. General Petroleum Corp. (1949) 93 Cal. App. 2d 757, 209 P.2d 986 , sued defendant for $2,100 in damages alleging that defendant spilled gasoline that contaminated plaintiffs' water supply. At the beginning of trial and without notice, the court allowed plaintiffs' motion to amend their complaint to increase the alleged amount of damage to $4,000 over defendant's objection. After the jury returned a verdict for $4,000, defendant appealed, urging that the amendment should not have been allowed because it was inevitably prejudicial to defendant, and took defendant by surprise. The court of appeal rejected defendant's contention, holding that defendant could not have been prejudiced because the answer had denied any damages at all, and defendant had not moved for a continuance in the trial court. The court also noted that the plaintiffs had not acted in bad faith or without just reason because, after the complaint was filed, they drilled a new well to secure a noncontaminated water supply, but the water at the new location was found to be contaminated also (93 Cal. App. 2d 757, 759).

Relying on Duffey, above, the court of appeal in Hougham v. Eyherabide (1951) 103 Cal. App. 2d 673, 230 P.2d 139 , held that the trial court had not erred in allowing amendment without notice at the beginning of trial to increase the amount of damages claimed for injury to growing crops in an action for trespass (103 Cal. App. 2d 673, 674-675).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 16 AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
PART II. FORMS
A. Amended Pleadings

1-16 California Points & Authorities § 16.40

§ 16.40 Supporting Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--Complaint--Addition of Party Defendant or Correction of Misnomer of Defendant

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--Complaint--Addition of Party Defendant or Correction of Misnomer of Defendant

[The following should be combined with a general form of memorandum in support of a motion for leave to file an amended pleading or an amendment to a pleading (see § 16.30), or to amend to conform to proof (see § 16.31).]

THE COURT SHOULD ALLOW AMENDMENT OF THE COMPLAINT TO _____ [ADD or CORRECT A MISTAKE IN THE NAME OF] A PARTY DEFENDANT.

A. Amendment to Add Party or Correct Misnomer. The court may, in furtherance of justice, and on such terms as may be proper, allow a party to amend any pleading by adding or striking out the name of any party, or by correcting a mistake in the name of a party (Code Civ. Proc. § 473; Fifth & Broadway Partnership v. Kimny, Inc. (1980) 102 Cal. App. 3d 195, 199, 162 Cal. Rptr. 271).

[Optional] B. Correction of Misnomer After Statute of Limitations Has Run. The court should allow a party to amend a pleading to correct an error in naming a _____ [defendant or cross defendant] who was served with summons and who ought to realize that he or she is the party intended to be named defendant even though the statute of limitations may have run at the time of amendment (Thompson v. Southern Pac. Co. (1919) 180 Cal. 730, 733-734, 183 P. 153 ; Canifax v. Hercules Powder Co. (1965) 237 Cal. App. 2d 44, 57-58, 46 Cal. Rptr. 552).

[Optional] C. Suit Brought Against Wrong Defendant Because of Similarly Named Dual Entities. Even though amendment to correct a misnomer cannot be used to substitute parties after the statute of limitations has run, amendment should be allowed when _____ [plaintiff or cross complainant] has made an excusable mistake attributable to the existence of dual entities with strikingly similar business names or to the use of fictitious names, and the real tortfeasor is aware of the suit (Mayberry v. Coca Cola Bottling Co. of Sacramento (1966) 244 Cal.

App. 2d 350, 352-354, 53 Cal. Rptr. 317). Amendment is allowed under the theory of equitable estoppel when, in this situation, the defense takes willful action to mask the error from the petitioner (Cuadros v. Superior Court (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 671, 676-678, 8 Cal. Rptr. 2d 18).

[Optional] D. Prior Dismissal Without Prejudice Does Not Bar Amendment Reinstating Defendant. A plaintiff may amend a complaint to reinstate a defendant when a dismissal without prejudice regarding that defendant was previously entered (Kuperman v. Great Republic Life Insurance Co. (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 943, 947, 241 Cal. Rptr. 187).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a motion for leave to amend a complaint to add a party defendant or to correct a misnomer of a defendant who was named, although improperly, in the complaint. It is not for use in support of an amendment substituting a truly named defendant for a fictitiously named defendant, such amendment being mandatory when the defendant's true name is learned [see Code Civ. Proc. § 474].

By including the appropriate optional paragraph, the memorandum may be used when the amendment is sought to correct a misnomer of the defendant (when the proper defendant has been sued by the wrong name) after the statute of limitations has run [Optional Paragraph B]; to substitute defendants after the statute of limitations has run if the plaintiff was misled and sued the wrong defendant because of the existence of related businesses with similar names [Optional Paragraph C]; or to reinstate a defendant when a dismissal without prejudice regarding that defendant had been entered [Optional Paragraph D].

The form does not provide a complete memorandum, but is designed to be combined with one of the general forms of memoranda set out in §§ 16.30 and 16.31, as well as with forms relating to any other grounds that may exist for amending the complaint [see §§ 16.32 -16.39, 16.41, 16.42].

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

With appropriate modifications, this memorandum may be used to support a motion for leave to file an amended cross complaint or an amendment to a cross complaint.

[b] Opposing Memorandum

The memorandum set out in § 16.54 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose a motion for leave to amend supported by this memorandum.

[c] Notice of Motion

Notice of a motion to amend a pleading by adding or striking out the name of any party, or by correcting a mistake in the name of a party is not required [Code Civ. Proc. § 473]. Therefore, because a memorandum is mandatory only in the case of a motion made on notice [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(a)], submission of this memorandum is optional.

[d] Prior Dismissal Does Not Bar Reinstating Defendant as Doe Defendant

Paragraph D provides a basis for reinstating a named defendant after that defendant has been effectively dismissed without prejudice because the defendant was omitted from a prior amended complaint. An alternative method for reinstating a defendant who was mistakenly dismissed is through an amendment to substitute the defendant's true name for a Doe defendant [see Parker v. Robert E. McKee, Inc. (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 512, 516-517, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 347]. For a discussion of the substitution of true names of fictitious defendants, see Ch. 104, Fictitiously Named Defendants (DOES).

[e] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a discussion and forms relating to bringing a new party into an action, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 395, Parties (Matthew Bender). For a discussion of amendment of a complaint to bring in a new party defendant after the statute of limitations has run, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions (Matthew Bender).

[f] Related Points and Authorities

For forms of memoranda of points and authorities supporting a motion for an order to bring a new party into an action, see Ch. 168, Parties .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Amendment to Add Party or Correct Misnomer

In Fifth & Broadway Partnership v. Kimny, Inc. (1980) 102 Cal. App. 3d 195, 162 Cal. Rptr. 271 , an unlawful detainer action, the complaint named an individual doing business as Orange Delite as a sublessee defendant. The individual answered, but during trial, it was revealed that the subtenant in possession and using the premises for a fast food stand called Orange Delite was Kimny, Inc. The individual defendant was the sole shareholder and president of the corporation, was responsible for its day-to-day operations, and was the only person authorized to sign checks on its behalf or withdraw funds from its bank account. When defendant closed his case, plaintiff moved to amend the complaint to add the corporation as a defendant. The court granted the motion, declaring Doe I to be "Kimny, Inc., dba Orange Delite," and the corporation appealed from judgment entered against it alone.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that under Code Civ. Proc. § 473 a court has discretion to allow amendment to add a party not named in the original complaint. The court further held that the trial court had not abused its discretion in allowing amendment because the record did not show, nor did the corporation claim, that it was prejudiced by the amendment adding it as a party (102 Cal. App. 3d 195, 199) .

[b] Correction of Misnomer After Statute of Limitations Has Run

Thompson v. Southern Pac. Co. (1919) 180 Cal. 730, 183 P. 153 , involved a suit for personal injuries against a railroad. The complaint named Southern Pacific Railroad Company, stated to be a California corporation, as defendant. There was, in fact, a company of that name, incorporated in California, but it was not the company involved in the accident. The proper defendant was a Kentucky corporation, Southern Pacific Company. Summons was served on the Kentucky corporation, however, and the court denied that corporation's motion, made in a special appearance, to quash summons. After the statute of limitations had run, plaintiff moved to amend his complaint to correct defendant's name. Southern Pacific Company again appeared specially to oppose the motion to amend, and after the motion was granted, answered, still reserving its special appearance. The verdict on the first trial was set aside and when the case came to trial the second time, defendant objected to introduction of evidence on the ground that it had been brought into the case as a defendant by amendment after the statute of limitations had run without ever having been served with process. Defendant appealed from a subsequent judgment for plaintiff.

The court of appeal held that the amendment was proper, noting that the real defendant's agent received the summons and knew the contents of the complaint, as evidenced by the corporation's special appearance in the action. The court held that since the trial court acquired jurisdiction of the person of the defendant, it had power to correct the misnomer of the party defendant in the complaint (180 Cal. 730, 734).

The plaintiffs in Canifax v. Hercules Powder Co. (1965) 237 Cal. App. 2d 44, 46 Cal. Rptr. 552 , attempted to bring suit against the manufacturer of a dynamite fuse for negligently failing to warn of the timing of the fuse. Plaintiffs named Coast Equipment Company as the defendant manufacturer mistakenly believing that to be the name of the manufacturer, which in fact was Coast Manufacturing and Supply Company. Coast Manufacturing nonetheless answered the complaint denying that "Coast Equipment" had manufactured the fuse. After the statute of limitations had run, Coast Manufacturing moved for summary judgment, and plaintiffs moved to amend the complaint to correctly name defendant. The court denied the motion to amend and granted summary judgment to defendant.

On plaintiff's appeal the court reversed, finding that defendant was not prejudiced or misled, but had full notice that it was the party intended to be sued. The court held that a mere misnomer may be corrected after the statute of limitations has run without incurring its bar when full notice is given and a reasonably prudent person would realize that he or she is the party intended to be named as defendant (237 Cal. App. 2d 44, 57-58).

[c] Suit Brought Against Wrong Defendant Because of Similarly Named Dual Entities

In Cuadros v. Superior Court (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 671, 8 Cal. Rptr. 2d 18 plaintiff was rear-ended by a vehicle rented from a Budget Rent-A-Car franchise located in Santa Monica. Correspondence regarding the incident generated a response from Budget Rent-A-Car of Brentwood (Budget Brentwood). After plaintiff filed an action naming Budget, Inc. as a defendant, plaintiff was advised by an attorney for Budget Rent-A-Car in Chicago that the vehicle was owned by Budget Rent-A-Car of Santa Monica (Budget Santa Monica). Plaintiff then designated Budget Santa Monica as a Doe defendant, and Budget Santa Monica answered the complaint. Sometime after defendants obtained substitute counsel, plaintiff and defendants stipulated to binding arbitration and to dismiss the Doe defendants. At the arbitration defendants revealed for the first time that the vehicle involved was owned by Budget Rent-A-Car of Westwood (Budget Westwood). The arbitrator entered judgment in favor of the named defendants. Plaintiff moved to vacate the arbitration award and to amend the complaint on the ground that she had mistakenly named Budget, Inc., and Budget Santa Monica instead of Budget Westwood. The trial court denied the motion to amend on the ground that the statute of limitations had run (6 Cal. App. 4th 671, 676).

The court of appeal, applying the doctrine of equitable estoppel, held that the trial court had abused its discretion in denying plaintiff's motion to amend. Under equitable estoppel, a defendant may not, by statement or conduct, lull the plaintiff into a false sense of security resulting in inaction (6 Cal. App. 4th 671, 675). In Cuadros, as in Mayberry, discussed below, the named defendants and the correct defendant had strikingly similar names, and each, regardless of their official titles, referred to itself as either "Budget" or "Budget Rent-A-Car" or both. Further, all entities used the same Santa Monica address, and one individual was the owner or officer or both of each entity (6 Cal. App. 4th 671, 676). The defendants conducted themselves for over three years as though they were properly named defendants (6 Cal. App. 4th 671, 677). The participation of the various Budget entities in settlement negotiations, discovery, and arbitration, the similarity of names, and the substantial identity of the persons involved were sources both of the plaintiff's excusable mistake and the real tortfeasor's awareness. The court found it difficult to see how the proper defendant would be harmed if the motion to amend were granted (6 Cal. App. 4th 671, 678).

Mayberry v. Coca Cola Bottling Co. of Sacramento (1966) 244 Cal. App. 2d 350, 53 Cal. Rptr. 317 , involved an action for damages caused by drinking a bottle of contaminated Coca-Cola. The beverage was bottled by Coca Cola Bottling Co. of Sacramento, a partnership, but plaintiff brought suit against a corporation of the same name. In fact the corporation supplied syrup to the partnership, and the partners were also the officers and directors of the corporation. The corporation answered and asserted contributory negligence as an affirmative defense. No indication was given by defendant corporation that identity would be at issue in the trial until testimony was being taken at trial. When the error was revealed, plaintiff's motion to amend to substitute the partnership for the corporation was granted. The court then, however, granted the partnership's demurrer based on the statute of limitations, and plaintiff appealed from the ensuing judgment of dismissal.

The court of appeal reversed, noting that after the statute of limitations has run, a complaint may be amended to correct a misnomer, but not to permit replacement of parties (244 Cal. App. 2d 350, 352). The court found that the general rule would not allow amendment because plaintiff specified the corporation as defendant, rather than just giving the fictitious name which could have meant either the partnership or corporation (244 Cal. App. 2d 350, 353). However, the court recognized and applied an exception to the rule taking into consideration the fact that modern business practice often divides integrated business operations into a group of artificial legal entities. In such cases, when the similar business names or fictitious names of dual entities cause a plaintiff to make an excusable mistake, the mistake may be cured by amendment. The real tortfeasor's knowledge of the suit is another factor to be considered (244 Cal. App. 2d 350, 353). The court directed the trial court to allow amendment, finding that the manner in which the partnership and corporation were entwined showed both excusable mistake on plaintiff's part and awareness on the tortfeasor's part (244 Cal. App. 2d 350, 353-354).

[d] Prior Dismissal Without Prejudice Does Not Bar Amendment Reinstating Defendant

In Kuperman v. Great Republic Life Insurance Co. (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 943, 241 Cal. Rptr. 187 , plaintiffs filed a complaint against several defendants, including Great Republic Life Insurance Co., alleging several causes of action based on denial of benefits under an insurance policy. Plaintiffs filed a first amended complaint naming all the same defendants, a second amended complaint omitting Great Republic as a defendant, and a third amended complaint including Great Republic again. The trial court granted Great Republic's motion to strike the third amended complaint, on the ground that the prior omission of its name effected a dismissal barring the action against it. Plaintiffs unsuccessfully moved for leave to file the third amended complaint or, in the alternative, to vacate the court's order granting the motion to strike. Plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal reversed, holding that although the filing of plaintiffs' second amended complaint effected a dismissal regarding Great Republic, the dismissal was without prejudice, and did not bar the filing of a subsequent action against that defendant. Great Republic was therefore properly reinstated as a defendant in the third amended complaint, and the trial court erred in striking that pleading (195 Cal. App. 3d 943, 946-947).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Correction of Misnomer After Statute of Limitations Has Run

Lazar v. Estate of Lazar (1962) 208 Cal. App. 2d 554, 25 Cal. Rptr. 354 , involved a suit to recover property from a decedent's estate after the coexecutors denied plaintiff's claim. The suit named as defendant the estate of the decedent, and a copy of the summons and complaint was served on the executors' attorney. The court sustained a demurrer to the complaint without leave to amend and entered judgment that plaintiff take nothing on the ground that an estate is not legal entity subject to suit. On plaintiff's appeal, the court of appeal held that it was apparent that plaintiff used the name of the estate as the proper legal name against which he might prosecute his action. The court then held that since the attorney for the executors appeared in the action on behalf of the "estate" and urged in his brief that the logical defendants obviously should have been the executors, it was reasonable to assume that the executors were aware that the word "estate" was an erroneous designation and that they would not be taken by surprise if the complaint were amended to name them as defendants. Accordingly, the court reversed and held that plaintiff was entitled to amend the complaint (208 Cal. App. 2d 554, 561).

[b] Suit Brought Against Wrong Defendant Due to Similarly Named Dual Entities

Smith v. Pickwick Stages Sys. (1931) 113 Cal. App. 118, 297 P 940 , involved a suit for personal injuries suffered by plaintiff at a stage station where she was meeting a passenger. Plaintiff brought a suit against "The Pickwick Corporation, a Corporation," when in fact the stage system and station were operated by Pickwick Stages System, a Corporation. After summons was served on the person who was president of both corporations, The Pickwick Corporation filed a verified answer asserting the defense that plaintiff's injury was caused by her own negligence. After the statute of limitations had run on the accident, the court permitted plaintiff's motion to amend the complaint to correct the mistake in defendant's name. Defendant ultimately appealed from judgment entered on a jury verdict for plaintiff.

The court of appeal affirmed, noting two essential facts: (1) the president of Pickwick Stages System was actually served in the action so that the court had jurisdiction over that corporation, and (2) the two corporations used their names interchangeably throughout California and Pickwick Stages System advertised the stage business under the name Pickwick Corporation, which was Pickwick Stages System's holding company (113 Cal. App. 118, 122-123). The court went on to note that the allegations of the original complaint regarding the defendant's operation of a stage line were applicable only to Pickwick Stages System and not to the other corporation, so that any officer of Pickwick Stages System who read the complaint had to have known that it was the intended defendant. Moreover, the court stated that Pickwick Stages System must actually have appeared in the action because the verified answer asserted facts which could only be truthfully sworn to by the corporation whose employees actually participated in the events surrounding the accident (113 Cal. App. 118, 124).

Plaintiffs in Most Worshipful Sons v. Sons of Light Lodge (1958) 160 Cal. App. 2d 560, 325 P.2d 606 , sought to recover assets of a fraternal organization which were taken by a seceding group. One of the assets was a building which the seceding group deeded to a building corporation. Plaintiffs did not file their second amended complaint, which first joined the building corporation as a defendant, until seven years after filing the original and first amended complaints and over five years after the building corporation acquired the property. The court overruled a demurrer to the amended complaint and denied the motion to strike it. Defendants appealed from a subsequent judgment for plaintiffs.

In affirming, the court of appeal reasoned that the action against the building corporation was to establish the fictitious identity of the corporation as an alter ego of the other defendants, and that it was therefore properly brought into the action (160 Cal. App. 2d 560, 566-567). Further, the court held that because the corporation was the alter ego of the originally named defendants, there could be no laches in plaintiff's delay to amend the complaint and the statute of limitations could not run (160 Cal. App. 2d 560, 569).

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 16 AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
PART II. FORMS
A. Amended Pleadings

1-16 California Points & Authorities § 16.41

§ 16.41 Supporting Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--Complaint--Addition of Party Plaintiff

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--Complaint--Addition of Party Plaintiff

[The following should be combined with a general form of memorandum in support of a motion for leave to file an amended pleading or an amendment to a pleading (see § 16.30) or to amend to conform to proof (see § 16.31).]

THE COURT SHOULD ALLOW AMENDMENT OF THE COMPLAINT TO ADD A NEW PARTY PLAINTIFF BECAUSE THE SUBSTANTIAL RIGHTS OF THE PARTIES ARE NOT AFFECTED.

A. Statutory Authority. The court may, in furtherance of justice, and on any terms as may be proper, allow a party to amend any pleading by adding or striking out the name of any party, or by correcting a mistake in the name of a party, or a mistake in any other respect (Code Civ. Proc. § 473(a)).

B. Addition of Party Plaintiff. The court may allow amendment of a complaint to add a party as plaintiff if the amendment does not affect the substantial rights of the parties (Polk & Hensley v. Coffin & Swain (1858) 9 Cal. 56, 58 ; California Air Resources Bd. v. Hart (1993) 21 Cal. App. 4th 289, 301, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 153).

[Optional] C. Addition of Plaintiff's Solely-Owned Professional Corporation. An individual plaintiff may be allowed to amend the complaint to add his or her solely-owned professional corporation as a new party plaintiff, after the statute of limitations has run, if the plaintiff and the professional corporation are, for purposes of the action, essentially the same, the same general set of facts are alleged in the amended complaint, and the defendant will not suffer prejudice (Pasadena Hospital Assn., Ltd. v. Superior Court (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 1031, 1033, 251 Cal. Rptr. 686).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in support of a motion for leave to amend a complaint to add a new party plaintiff. It does not provide a complete memorandum, but is designed to be combined with one of the general forms of memoranda of points and authorities supporting amendment of pleadings set out in §§ 16.30 and 16.31, as well as with forms relating to any other grounds that may exist for amending the pleading [see §§ 16.32 -16.40, 16.42].

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities set out in § 16.53 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose a motion for a leave to amend supported by this memorandum.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms of amended complaint, of notice of motion for leave to file an amended complaint, and of supporting declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 21, Amended and Supplemental Pleadings (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For forms of memoranda of points and authorities relating to joinder of parties, see Ch. 168, Parties .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Addition of Party Plaintiff

In Polk & Hensley v. Coffin & Swain (1858) 9 Cal. 56 , plaintiff brought suit for damages to his cattle. During trial, it appeared that plaintiff shared title to the cattle with another, and at the close of trial, the court allowed amendment of the complaint to add the joint owner as coplaintiff. On defendants' appeal from judgment for plaintiffs, defendants urged that there had been a fatal variance of proof in regard to ownership of the cattle, because the original complaint had alleged only that the original plaintiff was the owner. In rejecting this contention, the Supreme Court held that it is always in the power of the court to allow an amendment to a complaint, so long as it does not affect the substantial rights of the parties, and that the amendment in question did not change the merits of the case or the liability of the defendants (9 Cal. 56, 58-59).

[b] Addition of Party Plaintiff

In California Air Resources Bd. v. Hart (1993) 21 Cal. App. 4th 289, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 153 , the plaintiff filed a complaint for civil penalties for the sale of new motorcycles in violation of California air pollution control standards against an individual who owned a motorcycle sales business. The defendant moved to dismiss on the grounds that Health & Safety Code § 43154(b) provided for prosecution of such an action exclusively by the Attorney General and that the action had to be prosecuted in the name of the People of the State of California instead of the Board. In response to the motion, the Board moved to amend the complaint to substitute the People as plaintiff, and argued that the Attorney General had delegated by letter to the Board the power to prosecute the action. The trial court granted the motion and dismissed the action without prejudice (21 Cal. App. 4th 289, 293-294).

The court of appeal reversed, holding that the Attorney General's delegation of authority to prosecute the action was permitted by Health & Safety Code § 7, which allows a public officer to delegate to another any power granted to him or her under that code and by Gov. Code § 11040, which specifically allows a state agency to employ counsel with the written consent of the Attorney General and did not violate any public policy. The court further stated that Code Civ. Proc. § 473 has been construed to permit amendment to substitute a plaintiff with standing for one who is not a real party in interest. It noted that allowing an amendment and relation back to avoid the statute of limitations does not depend on whether the parties are technically or substantially changed but whether the nature of the action is substantially changed. It found that where leave is sought to substitute a new plaintiff based upon a technical defect in the plaintiff's status due to an honest mistake in the naming of a party, amendment is generally proper. However, it is not proper when used to interject a new party into the litigation for the first time under the guise of a misnomer. Based on the record, the court concluded that the plaintiff's proposed amendment was a technical one which did not affect the nature of the action and authorized the board to maintain the action in the name of the People of the State of California on remand (21 Cal. App. 4th 289, 298-301).

[c] Addition of Plaintiff's Solely-Owned Professional Corporation

Pasadena Hospital Assn. v. Superior Court (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 1031, 251 Cal. Rptr. 686 , was a libel action brought by a doctor against a hospital. At the time the alleged libel occurred, the doctor was practicing as a professional corporation. After the expiration of the applicable limitations period, the doctor moved to amend the complaint to name the professional corporation, of which he was the sole shareholder, as a new party plaintiff. The trial court granted the motion and subsequently overruled defendant's demurrer based on the statute of limitations. Defendant petitioned for a writ of mandate.

The court of appeal denied the writ, holding that the amendment related back to the original filing of the complaint because (1) the doctor and his professional corporation were, for purposes of the action, essentially the same; (2) the same general set of facts was alleged in the amended complaint; (3) and the hospital would suffer no prejudice (204 Cal. App. 3d 1031, 1033). The court observed that, although professional corporations are considered to be separate entities, their primary purpose is to gain tax advantages. The court found that none of the doctor's duties or services changed when he stopped practicing as a sole practitioner for the hospital and began practicing as a professional corporation. The claims of both the doctor and the corporation were identical in that they arose from the same conduct on the defendant's part. Any harm caused by the libel to the doctor affected the corporation as well. The damages, if any, to the corporation were of like character and were incurred in like manner as the damages to the doctor. Therefore, the court concluded, the addition of the doctor's corporate status did not constitute an addition of an entirely new and different party but merely remedied a technical defect to reflect plaintiff's status at the time the alleged injury occurred (204 Cal. App. 3d 1031, 1036). The interests of justice weighed in favor of treating the amendment as one of form rather than of substance. Because, in addition, no possible prejudice to the hospital would result, the amendment properly related back to the original complaint (204 Cal. App. 3d 1031, 1037).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Addition of Party Plaintiff

In Citizens Assn. for Sensible Development of Bishop Area v. County of Inyo (1985) 172 Cal. App. 3d 151, 217 Cal. Rptr. 893 , plaintiffs sought writs of mandate to review two county board of supervisors' decisions relating to approval of a shopping center project. After the statute of limitations had run, an amended petition was filed in one of the proceedings adding a new plaintiff. The trial court denied any relief, and on plaintiffs' appeal, one of defendants' arguments was that the amended petition had been properly denied because one plaintiff improperly injected itself into the litigation without leave of court after the period of limitations had run. The court of appeal rejected this contention. The court, citing Code Civ. Proc. § 473, recognized the court's power to allow parties to amend pleadings to add parties, and stated that when recovery is sought on the same basic set of facts, the main policy of the statute of limitations is satisfied. The mere addition of a plaintiff did not alter the general set of facts originally alleged; thus defendants were not prejudiced and no reasonable purpose would have been served by dismissing that plaintiff. The court granted that the plaintiffs did not have a right to add a party as a matter of course, but noted that plaintiffs at least implicitly sought permission by naming the party in the amended petition, and that the trial court's statements and actions (telling plaintiffs they had a right to be there, not striking the amended complaint, and ultimately denying the petition on other grounds) supported the conclusion that the court permitted the new party to be included (172 Cal. App. 3d 151, 160).

In Guenter v. Lomas & Nettleton Co. (1983) 140 Cal. App. 3d 460, 189 Cal. Rptr. 470 , plaintiff filed a class action against defendant, naming as the class members the 28 named beneficiaries in a second deed of trust. The trial court denied certification of the class, holding that the class was not so numerous as to make joinder impracticable. After the statute of limitations on the action had expired, plaintiff moved to amend the complaint to name as plaintiffs all 28 beneficiaries. The motion was denied, and plaintiff appealed. The court of appeal reversed, holding that the amendment should have been allowed to relate back to the date of the original complaint because the plaintiffs who were sought to be brought in by amendment were, in the original action, members of the class that the named plaintiff sought to represent (140 Cal. App. 3d 460, 468-469). Guenter was criticized in Bangert v. Narmco Materials, Inc. (1984) 163 Cal. App. 3d 207, 210-211, 209 Cal. Rptr. 438 , for opening a door that would allow members of a decertified class to avoid statute of limitations as long as original litigation continued [see also Jolly v. Eli Lilly & Co. (1988) 44 Cal. 3d 1103, 1119, 1123-1126, 245 Cal. Rptr. 658, 751 P.2d 923 questioning Bangert and further discussing the effect of class actions on the statute of limitations].

Pruitt v. Fontana (1956) 143 Cal. App. 2d 675, 300 P.2d 371 , disapproved on other grounds in Mattei v. Hopper (1958) 51 Cal. 2d 119, 126, 330 P.2d 625 , involved an action for breach of contract and other causes of action arising out of an agreement to sell real estate. After a demurrer to plaintiff's third amended complaint was sustained with leave to amend, plaintiff filed a fourth amended complaint that added three new causes of action and a new plaintiff. The new plaintiff was the transferee by written assignment of a portion of the original plaintiff's interest in the transaction underlying the suit. Defendant moved to strike the complaint on the grounds that it added new causes of action and parties. The motion was granted, and plaintiff's subsequent motion for leave to file the complaint was denied. Plaintiff appealed from the judgment dismissing the action and from the orders striking the complaint and denying leave to file it.

In reversing, the court of appeal noted that the addition of a party plaintiff who is a partial assignee of the obligation sued on is not prejudicial to defendant, but is to defendant's advantage because it allows his liability on a single claim to be adjudicated in one suit (143 Cal. App. 2d 675, 683-684). The court held that amendment is proper when there is no attempt to state a new and different cause of action, but merely to add a partial assignee as a party plaintiff to secure a complete determination of the original cause of action, and that the trial court abused its discretion in striking the amended complaint and denying leave to file it (143 Cal. App. 2d 675, 684).

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 16 AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
PART II. FORMS
A. Amended Pleadings

1-16 California Points & Authorities § 16.42

§ 16.42 Supporting Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--Complaint--Substitution of Plaintiffs or Change in Plaintiff's Capacity to Establish Standing to Sue

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--Complaint--Substitution of Plaintiffs or Change in Plaintiff's Capacity to Establish Standing to Sue

[The following should be combined with a general form of memorandum in support of a motion for leave to file an amended pleading or an amendment to a pleading (see § 16.30) or to amend to conform to proof (see § 16.31).]

THE COURT SHOULD ALLOW THE AMENDMENT OF THE COMPLAINT [TO CHANGE THE CAPACITY IN WHICH PLAINTIFF BRINGS SUIT SO AS] TO SUBSTITUTE THE REAL PARTY IN INTEREST FOR A PLAINTIFF WHO LACKS STANDING.

A. Statutory Authority. [See § 16.41[1], Paragraph A.]

[EITHER]

B. Amendment to Change Plaintiff's Capacity. When plaintiff has brought suit in the wrong capacity, a complaint may be amended to change the capacity in which plaintiff brings the suit (Thorpe v. Story (1937) 10 Cal. 2d 104, 114, 73 P.2d 1194 ; Olsen v. Lockheed Aircraft Corp. (1965) 237 Cal. App. 2d 737, 741, 47 Cal. Rptr. 242).

[OR]

B. Amendment to Bring In Real Party In Interest as Plaintiff. The court may allow amendment of a complaint to bring in a party plaintiff with standing to sue when the original plaintiff lacked standing (Cal. Gas. Retailers v. Regal Petroleum Corp. (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 844, 850-851, 330 P.2d 778 ; Klopstock v. Superior Court (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 13, 19-21, 108 P.2d 906).

[AND, for optional use with second paragraph B]

C. Amendment to Correct Mistake In Plaintiff's Name. A party bringing suit in the wrong name may amend the complaint to substitute the name of the real party in interest (Bank of America v. Superior Court (1973) 35 Cal. App. 3d 555, 557, 110 Cal. Rptr. 709).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in support of a motion for leave to amend a complaint to substitute a party with standing to assert the cause of action for a party without standing. The form may be used where the original plaintiff's lack of standing resulted from naming the correct plaintiff, but in the wrong capacity (first alternative Paragraph B), or from naming an incorrect plaintiff (second alternative Paragraph B). By including optional Paragraph C with the second alternative Paragraph B, the form may be used where the original plaintiff was named incorrectly due to a mistake.

The form does not provide a complete memorandum, but is designed to be combined with one of the general forms of memoranda of points and authorities supporting amendment of pleadings set out in §§ 16.30 and 16.31, as well with forms relating to any other grounds that may exist for amending the complaint [see §§ 16.32 -16.41].

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities set out in § 16.53 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose a motion for leave to amend supported by this memorandum.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms of amended complaint, notice of motion for leave to file an amended complaint, and supporting declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 21, Amended and Supplemental Pleadings (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Amendment to Change Plaintiff's Capacity

In Thorpe v. Story (1937) 10 Cal. 2d 104, 73 P.2d 1194 , the members of a bondholders' protective committee sought recovery in their own names on a written guaranty of a bond issue. At trial the court ruled that plaintiffs were not suing in their individual capacities, but were trustees of an express trust, and allowed amendment of the complaint to reflect that plaintiffs sued in their capacity as trustees. Subsequently, plaintiffs were given judgment against defendants, and all parties appealed.

On appeal defendants asserted, inter alia, that plaintiffs lacked standing because the bondholders' protective agreement did not make plaintiffs "holders and purchasers" of the bonds to whom the guaranty ran. The Supreme Court held that the complaint as amended at trial was sufficient, stating that the amendment was properly allowed and did not constitute a change in the cause of action or theory on which the suit was predicated (10 Cal. 2d 104, 114) .

Olsen v. Lockheed Aircraft Corp. (1965) 237 Cal. App. 2d 737, 47 Cal. Rptr. 242 , involved a suit for wrongful death arising out of a Texas airplane crash. After some rather convoluted proceedings, defendants moved for judgment on the pleadings on the ground that cross complainant decedent's widow, could not sue in her individual capacity under the Texas wrongful death law. Before the court could rule on the motion, however, cross complainant filed a notice of motion to amend her complaint and a proposed "Second Amended Complaint" in which she sued as administratrix of decedent's estate. The court granted both motions and entered judgment for cross defendants on the first amended cross complaint. Defendants then demurred to the second amended cross complaint contending that it was not an amendment, but a new complaint that was barred by the statute of limitations. The demurrer was sustained, and cross complainant appealed from the resulting judgment.

The court of appeal reversed, applying California law to the procedural issues before it (237 Cal. App. 2d 737, 740). The court cited Cal. Gas. Retailers v. Regal Petroleum Corp. (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 844, 851, 330 P.2d 778 , discussed in § 16.42[4][a] for the proposition that great liberality is allowed in amending pleadings, particularly when the only change is a substitution of parties without alteration of the substantive grounds of the suit. The court then held the amendment was properly allowed, quoting Reardon v. Balaklala Consol. Copper Co. (C.C.N.D. Cal. 1912) 193 F. 189 , in stating that there was no change in the facts or cause of action alleged and that a change in the name of the plaintiff and capacity in which he or she sues is a change of form rather than substance which in no sense constitutes the bringing of a new cause of action (237 Cal. App. 2d 737, 741) . Because the amendment was proper, the court held that it related back to avoid the statute of limitations, and that cross defendants' demurrer should not have been sustained (237 Cal. App. 2d 737, 742).

[b] Amendment to Bring In Real Party In Interest as Plaintiff

Cal. Gas. Retailers v. Regal Petroleum Corp. (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 844, 330 P.2d 778 , was a suit brought by a nonprofit corporation consisting of members who were distributors of major oil company products. Plaintiff alleged that defendants, independent service station operators, had committed unfair trade practices and other conduct causing plaintiff's members to suffer loss of customers and sales. After both sides had rested, plaintiff moved for leave to file an amendment to the complaint to add one of its members as a plaintiff. The motion was granted on the day decision was rendered, and judgment was entered in favor of plaintiffs on one of the causes of action that had been alleged. Defendants appealed.

The Supreme Court first held that the corporation was not a proper party (50 Cal. 2d 844, 849-850). However, relying on the power of courts to allow amendments under Code Civ. Proc. § 473 to add or strike the name of any party, the Court went on to hold that the amendment of the complaint to include as a plaintiff the individual member, who was a proper party to assert the claims, had cured the original defective pleading (50 Cal. 2d 844, 850-851). Noting that the amendment had not stated any new cause of action or any new facts, and that defendants had not been prejudiced by the amendment, the Court decided that the trial court had not abused its discretion in permitting amendment (50 Cal. 2d 844, 851).

The facts and procedural background of Klopstock v. Superior Court (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 13, 108 P.2d 906 , are discussed in § 16.30[3][b]. In Klopstock, the Supreme Court held that the trial court had acted properly in allowing amendment of a complaint to substitute a proper party for the original plaintiff after judgment in favor of plaintiff had been reversed by a court of appeal and the case had been remanded (17 Cal. 2d 13, 19-22). The Court recognized that a complaint cannot be amended to state a wholly different cause of action (17 Cal. 2d 13, 20). Then, however, the Court went on to find that there was no change in the liability asserted against defendants, who were fully apprised of the facts that were relied on to state a right to relief against them from the time the original complaint was filed. Also noting that the party who presses a derivative suit on behalf of a corporation is a nominal party, the Court held that the amendment was well within the discretion of the court under Code Civ. Proc. § 473 (17 Cal. 2d 13, 21). The Court found support for its decision in Curtis v. Nye & Nissen (1927) 86 Cal. App. 507, 512-513, 261 P. 747 , in which the court of appeal held that an amendment substituting a corporation for an individual plaintiff on a showing that the corporation was the party with the right to bring the action did not constitute an attempt to set up a new cause of action (17 Cal. 2d 13, 21-22).

[c] Amendment to Correct Mistake In Plaintiff's Name

Bank of America v. Superior Court (1973) 35 Cal. App. 3d 555, 110 Cal. Rptr. 709 , involved an action by Continental Assurance Company against a bank to recover money. Plaintiff's counsel, however, mistakenly brought suit in the name of Continental Casualty Company. Over one year after the complaint was filed, the court granted a motion made in the name of the original plaintiff to amend the caption by substituting the name of the real party in interest for that of the original plaintiff. The bank petitioned for a writ of mandate to compel the trial court to vacate its order.

The court of appeal denied the writ, noting that the cause of action was not changed by the amendment, and that the pleadings set forth copies of the check which was involved in the action and revealed the name of the real party in interest as maker. The bank therefore always knew exactly the case it would have to meet. The only prejudice the bank suggested was that it had inquired of the secretary of state whether the original party was authorized to do business in California and had been informed that it was. However, it was stipulated that if the request had been made in reference to the real party in interest, the response would have been the same. The court thus followed Klopstock v. Superior Court (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 13, 108 P.2d 906 , discussed in § 16.42[3][b].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Amendment to Bring In Real Party in Interest as Plaintiff

Plaintiff in Tenants Assn. of Park Santa Anita v. Southers (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 1293, 272 Cal. Rptr. 361 , was an unincorporated association of residents in a mobilehome park. The trial court sustained defendants' demurrers without leave to amend based on plaintiff's lack of standing to sue. The court of appeal held that the association did have standing as to some parts of the action, but not as to others. The court cited Cal. Gas. Retailers v. Regal Petroleum Corp. (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 844, 330 P.2d 778 , discussed in § 16.42[3][b] for its reasoning that a pleading may be amended even after the cause was submitted, if the amendment states no new cause of action, does not state any new facts, and defendants are not prejudiced. The court found that because allowing plaintiff to add its members as plaintiffs would not involve stating any new cause of action or new facts, the defendants would not be prejudiced. Then, in reversing the dismissal, the court directed the trial court to give plaintiff leave to amend the complaint to add individual members of the association as plaintiffs to the already stated causes of action as to which the association lacked standing (222 Cal. App. 3d 1293, 1304-1305).

In Jensen v. Royal Pools (1975) 48 Cal. App. 3d 717, 121 Cal. Rptr. 805 , the original plaintiff was an unincorporated association, consisting of condominium owners, which sought damages for the negligent construction of a defective swimming pool in the common area of the condominium project. The pool builder moved for summary judgment on the ground that a condominium owner's association does not have standing to sue to recover damages to common areas of a condominium. The association was allowed to amend the complaint to add individuals who owned a condominium unit as plaintiffs, to represent themselves and the class of owners. The court then sustained defendant's demurrer to the amended complaint on the ground that the action was barred by the statute of limitations, and the individual plaintiffs appealed.

On appeal, the only issue was whether the amended complaint related back to the time of filing of the original complaint so as to be timely. The court of appeal noted the modern rule in cases involving parties designated by their true names in the original complaint, that an amendment made after the statute of limitations has run will be deemed to relate back to the date of filing the original complaint when recovery is sought in both pleadings on the same general set of facts, citing Austin v. Massachusetts Bonding Insurance Co. (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 596, 600, 15 Cal. Rptr. 817, 364

P.2d 681 (discussed in § 16.37[4][a]). The court then noted that the same rule applies even when new plaintiffs are substituted or added after the statute of limitations has run, citing Cox v. San Joaquin Light & Power Co. (1917) 33 Cal. App. 522, 166 P. 578 , in which amendment to substitute decedent's personal representative for an heir was allowed (48 Cal. App. 3d 717, 721). The court concluded that the only justification for permitting defendants to raise the statute of limitations would be prejudice, and relied on Klopstock v. Superior Court (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 13, 108 P.2d 906 , and Cal. Gas. Retailers v. Regal Petroleum Corp. (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 844, 330 P.2d 778 (both discussed in § 16.42[3][b]), in finding that defendants were not prejudiced by the substitution of plaintiffs (48 Cal. App. 3d 717, 721-722). Thus, the court held that the trial court had erred by sustaining defendants' demurrer.

Powers v. Ashton (1975) 45 Cal. App. 3d 783, 119 Cal. Rptr. 729 , involved seven causes of action against employers relating to contributions allegedly owed by the employers to four employee trust funds pursuant to collective bargaining agreements. The suit was initiated by the administrator of the funds, and defendants demurred on the ground that the administrator was not the real party in interest and, therefore, lacked standing to sue. The court sustained the demurrer without leave to amend and plaintiff appealed. The court of appeal agreed that the trustees of the funds were the real parties in interest, so that the demurrer had been properly sustained. The court went on, however, to hold that the trial court had abused its discretion by denying leave to amend, citing Klopstock v. Superior Court (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 13, 108 P.2d 906 (discussed in § 16.42[3][b]), for the proposition that Code Civ. Proc. § 473 permits amendment to substitute a plaintiff with standing for one who is not a real party in interest (45 Cal. App. 3d 783, 790).

[b] Amendment to Correct Mistake in Plaintiff's Name

Plaintiff in California Cent. Airlines v. Fritz (1959) 169 Cal. App. 2d 436, 337 P.2d 531 , brought suit for breach of contract in the name "California Central Airlines, a California corporation." At pretrial conference, plaintiff's counsel revealed that the suit had inadvertently been brought in the wrong name and that the contract was actually by California Coastal Airlines, a California corporation, doing business as California Central Airlines. Plaintiff then moved to amend the complaint, and defendant moved for summary judgment. The court denied plaintiff's motion and granted summary judgment to defendants. Plaintiff appealed.

In reversing, the court of appeal noted that the obligation asserted by plaintiff was fully described in the complaint and that the answer showed that defendants were fully aware of the details of the transaction. Moreover, although there had been two prior incarnations of California Central Airlines, Inc., the only entity shown to have ever existed called California Central Airlines without the "Inc." was California Coastal Airlines doing business under that name. Defendants made no showing that the original complaint misled them as to the transaction sued on or the true party asserting the claim. Relying on Klopstock v. Superior Court (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 13, 108 P.2d 906 (discussed in § 16.42[3][b]), the court reversed and directed the trial court to grant plaintiff's motion to amend (169 Cal. App. 2d 436, 438-439).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 16 AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
PART II. FORMS
A. Amended Pleadings

1-16 California Points & Authorities § 16.43

§ 16.43 Supporting Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--Answer--Particular Liberality in Allowing Amendment of Answers

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--Answer--Particular Liberality in Allowing Amendment of Answers

[The following should be combined with a general form of memorandum in support of a motion for leave to file an amended pleading or an amendment to a pleading (see § 16.30) or to amend to conform to proof (see § 16.31).]

THE POLICY OF LIBERALLY ALLOWING AMENDMENT OF PLEADINGS IS PARTICULARLY APPLICABLE TO AMENDMENT OF ANSWERS.

Liberal Amendment of Answers. The rule that courts should liberally allow amendment of pleadings if the amendment does not prejudice the substantial rights of others is particularly applicable to answers (Gould v. Stafford (1894) 101 Cal. 32, 34, 35 P. 429 ; Dunzweiler v. Superior Court (1968) 267 Cal. App. 2d 569, 576, 73 Cal. Rptr. 331).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This points and authorities may be submitted in support of a motion for leave to amend an answer. It does not provide a complete memorandum, but is designed to be combined with one of the general forms of memoranda of points and authorities set out in §§ 16.30 and 16.31, as well as with forms relating to any other specific grounds that may exist for amending the answer (see § 16.32)].

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Liberal Amendment of Answers

The facts and procedural background of Gould v. Stafford (1894) 101 Cal. 32, 35 P. 429 , are discussed in § 16.33[4][a]. The Supreme Court rejected plaintiff's contention that the amendment changing the ground of defense should not have been allowed. The Court affirmed, holding that the trial court had not abused its discretion in permitting the amendment, stating the rule that courts will be liberal in allowing an amendment to a pleading when it does not seriously impair the rights of the opposite party, particularly when the pleading is an answer (101 Cal. 32, 34).

The facts and procedural background of Dunzweiler v. Superior Court (1968) 267 Cal. App. 2d 569, 73 Cal. Rptr. 331 , are discussed in § 16.30[4][b]. In holding that a writ of mandate should issue to compel the trial court to allow the defendant to amend his answer, the court of appeal held that the policy of great liberality in allowing amendment to pleadings at any stage of the proceedings so as to dispose of cases on their merits when the permission to amend will not prejudice the substantial rights of others is particularly important when amendment is sought as to an answer, relying on Gould v. Stafford (1894) 101 Cal. 32, 35 P. 429 , above, and Hyman v. Tarplee (1944) 64 Cal. App. 2d 805, 149 P.2d 453 , discussed in § 16.43[4][a].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Liberal Amendment of Answers

In Ramos v. Santa Clara (1973) 35 Cal. App. 3d 93, 110 Cal. Rptr. 485 , the court of appeal, affirming summary judgment in favor of defendant, held that defendant's failure to assert the affirmative defenses of accord and satisfaction and release in its answer did not preclude assertion of them on a motion for summary judgment. The court reasoned that although the defenses had to be specially pleaded in order to be raised as issues, the failure to raise them in the answer did not preclude assertion of them on a motion for summary judgment because a trial court has discretion to allow amendment of pleadings at any stage of the proceedings. The court noted that liberality should be particularly displayed in allowing amendment of answers so that a defendant may assert all available defenses, citing Gould v. Stafford (1894) 101 Cal. 32, 35 P. 429 (discussed in § 16.43[4][a]), and Hyman v. Tarplee (1944) 64 Cal. App. 2d 805, 149 P.2d 453 .

Hyman v. Tarplee (1944) 64 Cal. App. 2d 805, 149 P.2d 453 , involved a dispute over funds in a bank account and whether they had been the subject of a valid gift as claimed by defendants. The original answer had alleged that a gift of the funds had been made and was to be effective on the donor's death. After the attorney who drafted the answer died, defendants' new attorneys ascertained that the answer did not set forth the facts correctly, and several weeks before the trial, moved to amend the answer to allege that there had been an absolute gift prior to the donor's death. The court granted the motion and, ultimately, defendants prevailed on the merits. Plaintiff appealed.

In affirming, the court of appeal held that the trial court had not abused its discretion in allowing the amendment. Plaintiff argued that allowing an amendment that set up an entirely different transaction from the one relied on as a defense in the original answer was an abuse of discretion, but the court held that allowing the amendment was obviously within the discretion of the trial court. The court noted that the rule of liberality in allowing amendments when they do not seriously impair the rights of the opposite party is particularly applicable to answers (64 Cal. App. 2d 805, 813-814).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 16 AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
PART II. FORMS
A. Amended Pleadings

1-16 California Points & Authorities § 16.44

§ 16.44 Supporting Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--Answer--To Assert New Defense

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--Answer--To Assert New Defense

[The following should be combined with a general form of memorandum in support of a motion for leave to file an amended pleading or an amendment to a pleading (see § 16.30) or to amend to conform to proof (see § 16.31).]

THE COURT SHOULD ALLOW THE AMENDMENT OF THE ANSWER TO STATE A NEW DEFENSE.

A. Amendment to State New Defense. Granting or denying a motion for leave to file an amendment to an answer to set up a new defense is a matter committed to the sound discretion of the trial court (Wrightson v. Dougherty (1936) 5 Cal. 2d 257, 265-266, 54 P.2d 13 ; see Union Bank v. Wendland (1976) 54 Cal. App. 3d 393, 400-401, 126 Cal. Rptr. 549).

[Optional] B. Proposed Defense Is Novel Question. When the legal sufficiency of the proposed defense is a novel question almost certain to be tested in an appellate court, the preferable practice is to permit the amendment and allow the parties to test its legal sufficiency by demurrer, motion for judgment on the pleadings, or other appropriate proceedings (California Casualty Gen. Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1985) 173 Cal. App. 3d 274, 281, 218 Cal. Rptr. 817).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a motion for leave to amend an answer to assert a new defense. Optional Paragraph B is included for use if the proposed defense is a novel question almost certain to be tested in an appellate court [see California Casualty Gen. Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1985) 173 Cal. App. 3d 274, 281, 218

Cal. Rptr. 817]. It does not provide a complete memorandum, but is designed to be combined with one of the general forms of memoranda of points and authorities set out in §§ 16.30 and 16.31, as well as with forms relating to any other specific grounds that may exist for amending the answer [see § 16.32].

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities set out in § 16.55 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose a motion for leave to amend supported by this memorandum.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Amendment to State New Defense

Wrightson v. Dougherty (1936) 5 Cal. 2d 257, 54 P.2d 13 , involved a dispute over the ownership of certain securities. The court granted defendants' motions for nonsuit and judgment on the pleadings, made after plaintiff's opening statement, on the grounds that plaintiff's cause of action was barred by the statute of limitations. Judgments of dismissal were then entered, and plaintiff appealed.

In affirming, the Supreme Court rejected plaintiff's claim that the trial court had abused its discretion in allowing amendment of the answers to plead the statute of limitations. The Court, relying on prior California law, held that it is settled that motions for leave to amend answers are committed to the sound discretion of the trial court, including motions for leave to amend so that the statute of limitations may be pleaded (5 Cal. 2d 257, 265-266).

In Union Bank v. Wendland (1976) 54 Cal. App. 3d 393, 126 Cal. Rptr. 549 , plaintiff sued defendant on a promissory note. Defendant's answer asserted that plaintiff's action sought a deficiency judgment barred by Code Civ. Proc. § 580b. After the case was submitted, defendant moved to amend the answer to conform to proof to allege that the action was barred by a different antideficiency statute. The court denied defendant's motion, and judgment was entered for plaintiff. Defendant appealed.

The court of appeal reversed. The court noted that granting permission to amend answers is largely within the discretion of the court, and stated the basic rule applicable to amendments to conform to proof, that the amended pleading must be based on the same general set of facts as those on which the cause of action or defense as originally pleaded was grounded (54 Cal. App. 3d 393, 400-401). The court then noted that the proposed amended answer was based on the same general set of facts as the affirmative defense in the original answer, and that whichever statute was relied on, the whole theory of defense was that plaintiff could not have a deficiency judgment. The court held that it was an abuse of discretion to deny defendant's motion for leave to amend to conform to proof (54 Cal. App. 3d 393, 401).

[b] Proposed Defense Is Novel Question

California Casualty Gen. Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1985) 173 Cal. App. 3d 274 , 218 Cal. Rptr. 817 , was an action to recover compensatory and punitive damages for, inter alia, defendant insurers' alleged breach of the duty of good faith and fair dealing regarding a claim submitted under plaintiff's automobile insurance policy. The trial court denied defendants' motion seeking leave to amend their answer to add a fourth affirmative defense, which stated that plaintiff and her former attorney's bad faith conduct in the prosecuting, handling, and management of the uninsured motorist claim precluded defendants from obtaining full and complete information. Defendants consequently requested that any damages awarded against them for bad faith be reduced by the amount of the bad faith conduct of plaintiff and her former attorney. Defendants sought an alternative writ of mandate to review the superior court order denying their motion.

The court of appeal issued the writ, noting that the failure of a proposed amendment to state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action or defense may support an order denying a motion to amend (173 Cal. App. 3d 274, 280). However, when the legal sufficiency of the proposed defense is a novel question almost certain to be tested in an appellate court, the preferable practice would be to permit the amendment and allow the parties to test its legal sufficiency by demurrer, motion for judgment on the pleadings, or other appropriate proceedings. The proceedings might serve to develop the factual content of the proposed defense and to refine the language in which it is pleaded. Should a general demurrer ultimately be sustained, the appellate court would at least be apprised of the ground on which the proposed defense was rejected, and therefore be in a position to focus its attention on the appropriate considerations on review (173 Cal. App. 3d 274, 281).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Amendment to State New Defense

Gonzales v. Brennan (1965) 238 Cal. App. 2d 69, 47 Cal. Rptr. 501 , involved a medical malpractice suit, brought against a doctor employed by a county. On the day of trial, defendant moved in chambers to amend the pretrial order and the answer to allege that plaintiff failed to file a claim in accordance with the then prevailing requirements of the Government Code. Defendant also moved for dismissal, if the other motions were allowed. The court took the matters under submission, and later granted the motions to amend the answer and pretrial order. In subsequent proceedings in chambers, defendant orally moved for summary judgment or judgment on the pleadings, and the court granted summary judgment. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, although criticizing the use of summary judgment as an inappropriate tool (238 Cal. App. 2d 69, 76). Plaintiff urged that amendment of the pretrial order was error, but the court applied cases decided under Code Civ. Proc. § 473, allowing amendment to plead the statute of limitations on the day of trial or even later, for the rule that granting or refusing leave to amend an answer is a matter committed to the sound discretion of the trial court (238 Cal. App. 2d 69, 75). The court held that the same principles that govern the exercise of discretion in allowing amendment of pleadings apply with respect to amendment of pretrial orders (238 Cal. App. 2d 69, 74-75). In response to plaintiff's contention that he was prejudiced by the amendment, the court noted the distinction between prejudice and detriment, and held that the fact that plaintiff might have won the lawsuit if the amendment had not been allowed, did not constitute prejudice (238 Cal. App. 2d 69, 75-76).

In White v. Citizens Nat'l Trust & Sav. Bank (1941) 46 Cal. App. 2d 418, 116 P.2d 117 , plaintiffs, on appeal from an adverse judgment entered after trial, argued that the trial court had erred in allowing defendant to amend the answer to plead estoppel during the trial. Plaintiffs argued that they were surprised and were not given time to meet the issue. Affirming the court of appeal held otherwise, noting that the trial judge had offered to give more time to plaintiffs at the end of trial if they needed it, and they had never requested it.

Plaintiff in

Marr v. Superior Court (1939) 30 Cal. App. 2d 275, 86 P.2d 141 , sued defendants in justice court on a promissory note and for obtaining a loan by false representations. Plaintiff's amended complaint included a statement that one of the defendants had been adjudged bankrupt, and defendants' answer admitted the allegation of bankruptcy. At trial, the attempts of defendant bankrupt to introduce evidence of his discharge in bankruptcy were opposed because he had not pleaded a discharge. His motion to amend the answer to plead the discharge was denied and judgment was entered against him. After appealing to the superior court, defendant twice moved to amend the answer, and his motion was twice denied. He then sought a writ of mandate to compel the superior court to allow amendment.

The court of appeal directed the writ to issue. The court held that the discharge in bankruptcy was a meritorious defense, and stated the rule that amendments are allowed in the furtherance of justice when they can be permitted without prejudice to substantial rights of others, and not simply to give one a technical advantage. The court noted that under such circumstances, denial of a motion to file an amended pleading has been held to be reversible error, citing Hurley v. Lake County (1933) 133 Cal. App. 219, 23 P.2d 838 (30 Cal. App. 2d 275, 278).

Plaintiff in Rose v. Doe (1907) 4 Cal. App. 680, 89 P. 135 , appealed from an order denying his motion for a new trial, asserting, inter alia, that the trial court had erred in granting defendant leave to file an amended answer after a motion for nonsuit had been denied. In affirming the order, the court of appeal held that amendments setting up special defenses other than those presented in the original answer may be permitted. The court stated that allowance of an amended answer is a matter for the court's discretion, which is best exercised when it tends to bring about judgment on the merits of controversies. The court went on to note that allowing amendment to set up a defense on the merits that has not been previously pleaded would very rarely be held erroneous (4 Cal. App. 680, 685).

[b] Proposed Defense Is Novel Question

Kittredge Sports Co. v. Superior Court (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 1045, 261 Cal. Rptr. 857 , was an action by a retailer against a sporting goods manufacturer for breach of an express indemnification for products liability in refusing tender of defense in a personal injury lawsuit. Subsequently, the retailer settled with the injured party and sought to amend its complaint against the manufacturer to add causes of action for breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing and tortious denial of the existence of the contract. The trial court denied the motion, and plaintiff petitioned the appellate court for a writ of mandate.

In granting a peremptory writ directing the trial court to vacate its order denying the motion and to enter a new order granting leave to amend the complaint, the court of appeal first pointed out that under Code Civ. Proc. § 473 the trial court has discretion to allow amendments to the pleading in furtherance of justice and that this discretion should be exercised liberally in favor of amendments, for judicial policy favors resolution of all disputed matters in the same lawsuit (213 Cal. App. 3d 1045, 1047). In reply to defendant's assertion that the law does not recognize a cause of action in tort for the mere denial of liability under the contract and that a tort arises only when a party denies the existence of a contract, not merely liability, the court of appeal, citing California Casualty Gen. Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1985) 173 Cal. App. 3d 274, 281, 218 Cal. Rptr. 817 (discussed in § 16.44[3][b]), said that even if the proposed legal theory is a novel one, the preferable practice would be to permit the amendment and allow the parties to test its legal sufficiency by demurrer, motion for judgment on the pleadings, or other appropriate proceedings (213 Cal. App. 3d 1045, 1048).

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 16 AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
PART II. FORMS
A. Amended Pleadings

1-16 California Points & Authorities § 16.45

§ 16.45 Opposing Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--General Form

[1] FORM Opposing Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--General Form

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)
Plaintiff,	)
vs.	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	memorandum IN OPPOSITION TO MOTION FOR Defendant.	)	LEAVE TO FILE [AMENDED or AMENDMENT
	)	TO A(N)] _____ [COMPLAINT
	)	or DEMURRER or ANSWER or CROSS COM-PLAINT] [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473, 576]

_____

THE COURT SHOULD DENY THE PROPOSED AMENDMENT BECAUSE ALLOWING THE AMENDMENT WOULD NOT BE IN THE FURTHERANCE OF JUSTICE.

A. Amendment Only in Furtherance of Justice. Amendment is only to be granted if the court, in the exercise of its discretion, finds that it will be in furtherance of justice (Bank of Woodland v. Heron (1898) 122 Cal. 107, 109, 54 P 537 ; Nelson v. Specialty Records, Inc. (1970) 11 Cal. App. 3d 126, 139, 89 Cal. Rptr. 540).

B. Showing to Justify Exercise of Discretion. An application for leave to amend is addressed to the sound discretion of the court and may be denied when no showing is made to justify exercise of the court's discretionary power ( Tognazzi v. Wilhelm (1936) 6 Cal. 2d 123, 127, 56 P.2d 1227).

[Add opposing points and authorities relating to any specific reasons why amendment should not be allowed (see §§ 16.47 -16.55).]

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted to oppose a motion for leave to file an amended pleading or an amendment to a pleading. It contains only general points opposing amendment, and is designed to be used as a framework for an opposing memorandum. More specific points and authorities opposing amendment on various grounds are set out in §§ 16.47 -16.55 and should be combined with this form as relevant to the case. For a general form of points and authorities opposing a motion for leave to amend to conform to proof, see § 16.46.

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

This form may be used in opposition to a memorandum in support of a motion for leave to amend a pleading pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473, 576, or both sections, such as the one set out in § 16.30.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Amendment Only in Furtherance of Justice

Plaintiff in Bank of Woodland v. Heron (1898) 122 Cal. 107, 54 P. 537 , brought an action to foreclose a mortgage that secured a promissory note made by defendant husband. The complaint alleged and the answer admitted the proper acknowledgment and recordation of the mortgage, but at trial evidence was introduced showing that the acknowledgment had been irregularly made so that the mortgage was not entitled to be recorded. Defendant wife, to whom defendant husband had transferred the mortgaged land after executing the promissory note, then filed a declaration of homestead on the property and moved to amend to state that fact and to deny the allegations in the complaint regarding due acknowledgment of the mortgage. The court refused to allow amendment to deny due acknowledgment and judgment was entered for plaintiff. Defendants appealed from the judgment.

On appeal, defendant wife argued that the amendment should have been allowed. Affirming, the Supreme Court held that the great liberality with which amendments are to be allowed should only be displayed in furtherance of justice. The Court found that while plaintiff bank had parted with money on the security of the mortgage, defendant wife had received the property by gift and sought to set up a homestead and to amend in order to impair plaintiff bank's security and perhaps defeat collection of a just debt by taking advantage of the disclosure at trial, in testimony which was irrelevant to any point in controversy, that the acknowledgment was faulty. The Court stated that the case was so far from showing an abuse of discretion in denying the amendment that the Court would be more inclined to hold that it would have been an abuse to have allowed the amendment. Holding that a proposed new defense must not only be a legal defense, but must also be an equitable defense, the Court held that under the circumstances, the proposed defense was highly inequitable (122 Cal. 107, 109).

In Nelson v. Specialty Records, Inc. (1970) 11 Cal. App. 3d 126, 89 Cal. Rptr. 540 , plaintiff, as assignee, brought suit for breach of contract alleging that his assignor had fully performed its part of the contract. Plaintiff's opening statement, however, revealed that plaintiff intended to prove that performance by his assignor had been waived or excused in part, and defendants moved for dismissal on the ground that proof of waiver or excuse of performance would constitute an impermissible material variance from the pleadings. Plaintiff then moved for permission to amend his pleadings to allege waiver or estoppel in regard to the contract obligation that his assignor had not performed. Noting that the complaint had been filed five years earlier and that plaintiff's counsel had been on the case for 18 months, the court denied the motion to amend and granted the motion to dismiss. Plaintiff appealed from the ensuing judgment of dismissal.

Affirming, the court of appeal stated that it is the contemporary policy of the law to permit amendment of pleadings even at the commencement of trial so that litigation may be fully tried, but that an amendment is to be granted only if the trial court in the exercise of its discretion finds that it will subserve the interests of justice (11 Cal. App. 3d 126, 139). The court found that there was no abuse of discretion under the circumstances, stressing the long unexcused delay in amending to assert an issue known to plaintiff long before the original complaint was filed (11 Cal. App. 3d 126, 139-140). Moreover, to show reversible error, plaintiff would have had to show that a continuance would not have been granted to defendants, because if the case had been continued, it would have become subject to mandatory dismissal the next day for failure to come to trial within five years from the filing of the complaint. The court also questioned the substance of plaintiff's position on waiver of performance, and concluded that plaintiff did not make a prima facie showing that the amendment would have promoted the interests of justice or placed plaintiff in any better position than he was on the close of his opening statement (11 Cal. App. 3d 126, 140-141).

[b] Showing to Justify Exercise of Discretion

The original complaint in Tognazzi v. Wilhelm (1936) 6 Cal. 2d 123, 56 P.2d 1227 , sought a declaration of plaintiff's rights to certain real property, which plaintiff allegedly conveyed to her daughters as a sham to protect the property against a possible deficiency judgment. After the court sustained a demurrer to the complaint without leave to amend, plaintiff moved to vacate the order and for leave to file an amended complaint. The proposed amended complaint alleged that defendant daughter induced the conveyance by false representations and that plaintiff had no intention of defrauding any creditors in making the conveyance. The court denied the motion and plaintiff appealed the judgment entered on the order sustaining the demurrer.

In affirming on the ground that the amended complaint contained allegations contradicting an admission in the original pleading, the Supreme Court stated, citing Brown v. Aguilar (1927) 202 Cal. 143, 149, 259 P 735 , that an application for leave to amend is addressed to the sound discretion of the court and may be denied when no showing is made to justify exercise of the court's discretionary power (6 Cal. 2d 123, 127).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Showing to Justify Exercise of Discretion

The original answer in Baxter v. Riverside Portland Cement Co. (1913) 22 Cal. App. 199, 133 P. 1150 , denied the complaint's allegations of negligence and asserted the defense of contributory negligence. On the day of trial, defendant moved to amend the answer to assert the additional defense of assumption of risk. The motion was denied, and after trial, defendant moved to amend the pleadings to conform to proof by adding the defense of assumption of risk, this time explaining that the facts underlying the defense were not ascertained until two days before trial. The court also denied this motion, and defendant appealed from the judgment recovered by plaintiff.

The court of appeal affirmed, noting that courts universally require, and should require, that some showing be made to justify the exercise of the court's discretionary power to allow amendments. The court then held that the trial court properly exercised its discretion in denying the first request to amend because no reason was given for the failure to make all of the defenses available in the original answer (22 Cal. App. 199, 201). Nor was there error in denying the motion to conform to proof because the case was fully tried on the theory of assumption of risk and there was no prejudice to defendant in the failure to allow amendment (22 Cal. App. 199, 201-202).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 16 AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
PART II. FORMS
A. Amended Pleadings

1-16 California Points & Authorities § 16.46

§ 16.46 Opposing Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading to Conform to Proof [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 469, 470, 473(a), 576]--General Form

[1] FORM Opposing Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading to Conform to Proof [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 469, 470, 473(a), 576]--General Form

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)
Plaintiff,	)
vs.	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	MEMORANDUM IN OPPOSITION TO MOTION
Defendant.	)	FOR LEAVE TO AMEND _____
	)	[COMPLAINT or ANSWER or CROSS COM-)	PLAINT] TO CONFORM TO PROOF [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 469, 470, 473, 576]

_____

THE COURT SHOULD DENY THE MOTION TO AMEND TO CONFORM TO PROOF BECAUSE THE AMENDMENT WOULD _____ [INTRODUCE A NEW ISSUE TO THE CASE or BE PREJUDICIAL TO _____ (specify opposing party) or both].

[EITHER]

A. Introduction of New Issue. A trial court abuses its discretion if it permits an amendment to conform to proof that will introduce into the case new and substantially different issues not included in the pleadings, on which the adverse party had no opportunity to defend (Trafton v. Youngblood (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 17, 31, 69 Cal. Rptr. 568, 442 P.2d 648).

[AND/OR]

B. Prejudice to Adverse Party. A trial court abuses its discretion by permitting amendment to conform to proof if the rights of the adverse party will be prejudiced by the amendment (Trafton v. Youngblood (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 17, 31, 69 Cal. Rptr. 568, 442 P.2d 648 ; Garcia v. Roberts (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 900, 912, 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 286).

[Optional] C. Lack of Evidence. It is manifestly erroneous for the court to grant leave to amend to conform to proof when the record shows that no conformity results due to the absence of the claimed evidence (Hunt v. Smyth (1972) 25 Cal. App. 3d 807, 829-830, 101 Cal. Rptr. 4 ; Brautigam v. Brooks (1964) 227 Cal. App. 2d 547, 560, 38 Cal. Rptr. 784).

[Optional] D. Evidence Objected to. A motion to amend to conform to proof cannot be predicated on evidence to which an objection has properly been made (Hunt v. Smyth (1972) 25 Cal. App. 3d 807, 101 Cal. Rptr. 4 ; Brautigam v. Brooks (1964) 227 Cal. App. 2d 547, 561, 38 Cal. Rptr. 784).

[Optional] E. Based on Evidence Relating to Pleaded Issue. When proof has been introduced in conformity with the pleadings, there is no room for a court to exercise its discretion to allow an amendment of the pleadings to introduce another issue that the proof also supports. When evidence was properly admitted under the original pleading, failure to object to its admission does not estop a party from objecting to a motion to amend to conform to the proof based on that evidence (Winberry v. Lopez (1960) 178 Cal. App. 2d 672, 679, 3 Cal. Rptr. 245 ; Makovsky v. Makovsky (1958) 158 Cal. App. 2d 738, 744-745, 323 P.2d 562).

[Optional] F. Amendment on Appeal is Not Permitted if Trial Court Sustains Demurrer with Leave to Amend and Plaintiff Elects Not to Amend Pleading. While the failure to request leave to amend in the trial court ordinarily does not prevent a plaintiff from making such a request for the first time on appeal (Code Civ. Proc. § 472c(a)), this general rule does not apply if the trial court sustains a demurrer with leave to amend and the plaintiff elects not to amend the pleading (Las Lomas Land Co., LLC v. City of Los Angeles (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 837, 861, 99 Cal. Rptr. 3d 503 , citing Reynolds v. Bement (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 1075, 1091, 32 Cal. Rptr. 3d 483, 116 P. 3d 1162).

[Add, where appropriate, opposing memoranda relating to any other reasons why amendment should not be allowed (see §§ 16.48, 16.53, 52)].

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted to oppose a motion for leave to amend pleadings to conform to proof. It contains only general points opposing amendment and is designed to be used as a framework for an opposing memorandum. More specific points opposing amendment on various grounds are set out in §§ 16.48, 16.53, and 16.54 and should be combined with this form as relevant to the case.

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

This form may be used in opposition to a memorandum in support of a motion for leave to amend to conform to proof pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 469, 470, 473, and 576 such as the one set out in § 16.31.

[b] Failure of Proof

While a mere variance may be remedied by amendment, a failure of proof is fatal [Johnson v. De Waard (1931) 113 Cal. App. 417, 423, 298 P. 92]. For a discussion of failure of proof, see § 16.31[2][b].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Introduction of New Issue

In Trafton v. Youngblood (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 17, 69 Cal. Rptr. 568, 442 P.2d 648 , defendant, an attorney, answered plaintiff's claim for money had and received and for violation of an escrow agreement by asserting affirmative defenses of laches and what was in effect an account stated. Defendant also cross complained for an amount due on the account stated. After trial, the court prepared a memorandum decision rejecting those defenses and during oral argument on defendant's objections to the proposed findings of fact, defendant moved to reopen the case to permit him to file an amended answer asserting the reasonable value of his services as a counterclaim (counterclaim practice now eliminated in favor of cross complaints [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 426.10-426.70]). The court denied the motion and rendered judgment in plaintiff's favor. Defendant appealed.

The Supreme Court affirmed, finding that defendant had deliberately asserted his claim for fees as an account stated in order to avoid a determination of their reasonableness by the court and that he had sought to assert the new defense only when the failure of his tactic became apparent (69 Cal. 2d 17, 29-30). The Court cited Lavely v. Nonemaker (1931) 212 Cal. 380, 385, 298 P. 976 , for the proposition that amendments to conform to proof should not be allowed when they raise new issues not included in the original pleadings and on which the adverse party had no opportunity to defend. At trial in Trafton, defendant never raised, and in fact renounced, any issue of the reasonable value of his services (69 Cal. 2d 17, 31). There had been some evidence introduced on the issue of account stated from which the reasonable value of defendant's services could have been determined. The Court held, however, that this mere fortuity would not allow injection of a new issue into the case under the guise of an amendment to conform to proof, because evidence introduced on one issue cannot be considered as establishing another issue that was not before the court for trial. Since the issue of the reasonableness of the services was not before the court by the explicit agreement of the parties, defendant's proposed amendment clearly would have substantially prejudiced plaintiff, who had had no opportunity to offer evidence on the issue during trial (69 Cal. 2d 17, 32).

[b] Prejudice to Adverse Party

The facts and procedural background of Trafton v. Youngblood (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 17, 69 Cal. Rptr. 568, 442 P.2d 648 , are set forth in § 16.46[3][a]. There, the Supreme Court, in affirming a judgment for plaintiff, held that the trial court had not abused its discretion in denying defendant's motion to amend to conform to proof.

In affirming, the Court stated the general principle that allowance of amendments to conform to proof rests largely in the trial court's discretion, which will not be disturbed on appeal absent an abuse of discretion. The Court went on to state that no abuse of discretion is shown unless by permitting the amendment new and substantially different issues are introduced in the case or the rights of the adverse party are prejudiced (69 Cal. 2d 17, 31). The Court found that the amendment would have injected a new issue into the case that defendant had never raised and indeed had renounced as an issue (69 Cal. 2d 17, 31-32). Thus, the Court concluded that allowance of the amendment would have substantially prejudiced plaintiff, who had had no opportunity to offer evidence on the issue (69 Cal. 2d 17, 32).

In Garcia v. Roberts (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 900, 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 286 , plaintiff alleged that defendants reneged on an agreement to allow plaintiff to purchase real property. The trial court permitted plaintiff, through a successor in interest, to amend the complaint at trial to conform to the proof, adding a claim for breach of written contract to the initial claims, which included breach of oral contract. The Court of Appeal reversed the order permitting plaintiff to allege a breach of written contract cause of action and vacated the part of the judgment awarding damages on that cause of action, holding that the amendment at trial unfairly prejudiced defendants and that the trial court therefore abused its discretion under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473, 576, and 469. Plaintiff testified at his deposition that there was only an oral loan agreement between the parties concerning the property and that he had no knowledge of any agreement in the nature of a written lease-option. That testimony reasonably limited the focus of defendants' discovery efforts and the manner in which they prepared for trial. A number of significant factual issues that specifically related to the lease-option agreement were not pursued, since it became unnecessary to do so in light of plaintiff's deposition. Indeed, since plaintiff denied knowledge of the lease-option agreement, the pursuit of discovery from plaintiff on that subject could reasonably go no further. Further, at the time of trial plaintiff was deceased and so could not be questioned on any issues relevant to the lease-option agreement. Plaintiff, whom it turned out knew about the lease-option agreement but refused to allow his attorney to raise it, could not be permitted through his successor-in-interest to blow hot and cold to defendants' prejudice (173 Cal. App. 4th 900, 912-913) .

[c] Lack of Evidence

Plaintiffs in Hunt v. Smyth (1972) 25 Cal. App. 3d 807, 829, 101 Cal. Rptr. 4 , were obligors on a promissory note that called for payments of $250 per month, increasing to $350 after a certain time. Plaintiffs missed numerous payments and after the payments should have increased, never paid more than $250 per month. When defendant took steps to foreclose on a deed of trust securing the note, plaintiffs brought suit to enjoin the foreclosure based on the theory that defendant had waived payment of the $100 increase in payments. After suit was initiated, plaintiffs learned by a letter from defendant's attorney that defendant was relying on all missed payments as the grounds for foreclosure. When the letter was introduced in evidence, defendant attempted to limit its use to the issue of whether there had been an agreement to reduce payments on the note from $350 to $250, but the court overruled defendant's objection. It also appeared at trial that a second notice of default had been filed to cure a defect in the original notice. When testimony in the case had been concluded, and the court called for briefs on the issues of the amount of payments and the adequacy of the second notice of default, plaintiffs brought up the issue of waiver of all the missed payments, and the court stated that the issue came under the general question of whether there had been a waiver. Subsequently, plaintiffs filed an amendment to their complaint addressing the issues of the notice of default and waiver of all missed payments. The court granted defendant's motion to strike the amendment insofar as it related to the missed payments, and denied plaintiffs' following motion for leave to amend to allege the matters that had been stricken. Plaintiffs appealed from a judgment which denied them the injunctive relief they sought, ordered them to pay defendant on the original terms of the note, and awarded attorney's fees to defendant.

In affirming, although modifying on other grounds, the court of appeal held that the trial court had not abused its discretion in denying leave to amend. The court primarily relied on plaintiffs' delay and the failure of the facts relied on to entitle plaintiffs to any relief. In regard to the latter ground, the court cited Brautigam v. Brooks (1964) 227 Cal. App. 2d 547, 38 Cal. Rptr. 784 , below, for the proposition that granting leave to amend to conform to proof is manifestly erroneous when no conformity will result due to the absence of the claimed evidence (25 Cal. App. 3d 807, 829-830).

The original answer in Brautigam v. Brooks (1964) 227 Cal. App. 2d 547, 38 Cal. Rptr. 784 , a personal injury case arising out of an automobile collision, alleged that plaintiff was contributorily negligent. At the opening of trial, defendants expressly withdrew that defense. During cross examination of plaintiff, defendants' counsel asked plaintiff about her actions immediately prior to the accident. The court allowed the questions over plaintiff's objection that contributory negligence was not at issue, ruling that the evidence simply showed the incidents leading up to the accident, and that it had nothing to do with contributory negligence. After the parties had rested, defendant moved to amend to conform to the proof by reasserting plaintiff's contributory negligence. The court granted the motion, and gave plaintiff the opportunity to reopen the case to introduce evidence on the issue of contributory negligence. Plaintiff declined the opportunity, however, in the belief that offering evidence relating to the defense at that stage of the jury trial would unduly highlight the defense. Plaintiff appealed from a judgment entered on an adverse verdict.

The court of appeal reversed after it reviewed the evidence and found that there was no substantial evidence of contributory negligence (227 Cal. App. 2d 547, 555-560). The court found that the case went to trial with no plea of contributory negligence and that the case was not tried on that issue (227 Cal. App. 2d 547, 555). The court concluded that it is manifestly erroneous to grant leave to amend to conform to proof when no conformity results because the claimed evidence is absent (227 Cal. App. 2d 547, 560).

[d] Evidence Objected to

The facts and procedural background of Hunt v. Smyth (1972) 25 Cal. App. 3d 807, 101 Cal. Rptr. 4 , are discussed in § 16.46[3][c]. In Hunt, the court of appeal affirmed, although modifying on other grounds (25 Cal. App. 3d 807, 837). The court held that the trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying leave to amend primarily because of plaintiffs' delay and because the facts relied on in the proposed amendment would not entitle them to any relief (25 Cal. App. 3d 807, 829-830). In the course of its opinion, the court noted that, moreover, a motion to amend to conform to proof cannot be predicated on evidence to which an objection has properly been made, relying on Brautigam v. Brooks (1964) 227 Cal. App. 2d 547, 38 Cal. Rptr. 784 , discussed in § 16.46[3][c] (25 Cal. App. 3d 807, 829).

The facts and procedural background of Brautigam v. Brooks (1964) 227 Cal. App. 2d 547, 38 Cal. Rptr. 784 , are set forth in § 16.46[3][c]. The court of appeal, relying on prior California law, held that when evidence is promptly objected to as not supporting the allegations of the pleadings, a motion to amend to conform to proof after the evidence has been admitted should not be granted, and that if it is granted, it cannot cure the error in admission of the evidence and constitutes an abuse of discretion (227 Cal. App. 2d 547, 561).

[e] Based on Evidence Relating to Pleaded Issue

Plaintiff in Winberry v. Lopez (1960) 178 Cal. App. 2d 672, 3 Cal. Rptr. 245 , sued defendant to recover on a promissory note and obtained a writ of attachment on a parcel of real property once owned by defendant. Defendant's former wife intervened to quiet title to the property in her name. Plaintiff answered the complaint in intervention alleging actual fraud in the conveyance from defendant to intervenor. Evidence that defendant had been insolvent at the time of the transfer was admitted at trial for the sole purpose of showing circumstances that might lead to an inference of fraudulent intent. Plaintiff moved to amend his answer to conform to the proof of defendant's insolvency by specifically alleging that insolvency, so as to establish a case of constructive fraud. The court denied the motion, and plaintiff appealed from a judgment quieting title in the intervenor.

The court of appeal affirmed because the evidence of insolvency was properly admissible under the original answer and the evidence was admitted for that purpose alone (178 Cal. App. 2d 672, 679). The court followed Makovsky v. Makovsky (1958) 158 Cal. App. 2d 738, 323 P.2d 562 , below, in which the court stated that when proof adduced is in conformity with the pleadings, there is no room for a court to exercise its discretion and allow amendment of the pleading. No element of estoppel works against a party for failure to object to evidence that is made the basis of an amendment to conform to proof, when that evidence was proper under the original pleading. The court concluded that evidence of insolvency admitted to show actual fraud could not be converted into proof of constructive fraud by amendment of the answer when constructive fraud had not been pleaded and the case was tried only on the issue of actual fraud (178 Cal. App. 2d 672, 679).

Plaintiff in Makovsky v. Makovsky (1958) 158 Cal. App. 2d 738, 323 P.2d 562 , alleged in her complaint for divorce that the community property included a jewelry business. Defendant's answer admitted the allegation, disputing only the value of the business. At trial, evidence was admitted relating to the acquisition of the business, which showed that it was defendant's separate property. Plaintiff's attorney stated that he had no objection to admission of the evidence "for historical reasons only" (158 Cal. App. 2d 738, 744). In a memorandum decision after a nonjury trial, the court authorized defendant to amend his answer to conform to the proof that the business was his separate property, and defendant did so. Plaintiff appealed from a judgment awarding the business to defendant as his separate property.

Reversing, the court of appeal held that the trial court had abused its discretion in allowing the amendment (158 Cal. App. 2d 738, 744-745). The court found that the evidence as to acquisition of the business might well have been admissible under the original pleadings, and held that when proof adduced is in conformity with the pleadings, there is no room for a court to exercise its discretion and allow amendment of the pleadings to change an admission therein to a denial. The court further noted that facts not controverted by the answer are not in issue, that no evidence of them is required, and that when proof at trial is consonant with such admitted facts, a judge abuses his discretion by allowing amendment, to the prejudice of a party, after submission of the case (158 Cal. App. 2d 738, 744). The court also noted that parties ordinarily are estopped from objecting to such an amendment because they have allowed the issue to be tried without objection. However, estoppel is based on failure to assert a right that should have been asserted, and an estoppel does not arise out of failure to object to the admission of evidence that is in conformity to with the original pleadings (158 Cal. App. 2d 738, 744-745). The court found that plaintiff was prejudiced because she might have introduced different evidence if she had known that the court was considering the evidence relating to the business as determinative of its status as separate or community property. Because she was not informed, she was deprived a full and fair trial on the issue (158 Cal. App. 2d 738, 745).

[f] Amendment on Appeal is Not Permitted if the Trial Court Sustains a Demurrer With Leave to Amend and the Plaintiff Elects Not to Amend the Pleading

In Las Lomas Land Co., LLC v. City of Los Angeles (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 837, 99 Cal. Rptr. 3d 503 , a city terminated its environmental review of a proposed development project and rejected the project before the completion of a draft environmental impact report (EIR), after the developer allegedly spent millions of dollars in an effort to comply with the city's requirements. The developer sought to compel the city to complete the EIR for the proposed project before making any decision on the project. The city generally demurred to the complaint. At the conclusion of the hearing on defendant's demurrer, the court stated that it would sustain the demurrer on all counts, and asked whether plaintiff was requesting leave to amend the petition and complaint; plaintiffs counsel said no. The appellate court noted that the general rule allowing a plaintiff to request leave to amend for the first time on appeal does not apply if the trial court sustains a demurrer with leave to amend and the plaintiff elects not to amend the pleading; in those cases, it must be presumed that the plaintiff has stated as strong a case as he can (citing Reynolds v. Bement (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 1075, 1091, 32 Cal. Rptr. 3d 483). The trial court here did not enter an order sustaining the demurrer with leave to amend, but instead asked whether plaintiff was requesting leave to amend. In responding "no," plaintiff's counsel expressly declined an opportunity to amend the pleading just as surely as if the court had granted leave to amend and plaintiff had elected not to do so. The court of appeal found that the result should be the same, and concluded that plaintiff forfeited its claim of error based on the denial of leave to amend and deny the motion for leave to amend its petition and complaint (177 Cal. App. 4th 837, 861) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Introduction of New Issue

In Avedissian v. Manukian (1983) 141 Cal. App. 3d 379, 190 Cal. Rptr. 291 , an action for breach of a promissory note, the parties executed a stipulation to extend the period for prosecution of the action. After the original five-year period had passed and on the first day of trial, plaintiff moved to amend the original complaint to add a new cause of action involving the issues of ratification and estoppel. The trial court denied the motion, and the court of appeal affirmed the order. The court held that the trial court had not abused its discretion in denying an amendment that would add a new set of facts and theories not included in the complaint filed more than five years ago. To seek such an amendment nearly six years after the original complaint was filed and on the first day of trial was not an act of due diligence and would have undoubtedly prejudiced the defendant, who had been waiting six years to defend against the original claim (141 Cal. App. 3d 379, 384). The fact that the parties had stipulated to extend the time for prosecution had no relationship or effect on the limitations for amending complaints (141 Cal. App. 3d 379, 383).

In Earp v. Nobmann (1981) 122 Cal. App. 3d 270, 175 Cal. Rptr. 767 , the court of appeal, in holding that the trial court had erroneously permitted defendant to amend its cross complaint to conform to proof, noted that although courts are liberal in permitting amendments to conform to proof, such an amendment must not introduce a new cause of action or a new issue, or substantially change the claim or defense. The court held that in the case before it, the amendment alleged facts entirely outside the cause of action stated in the original cross complaint, since facts under which defendant sought to uphold the award of damages against plaintiff had not even occurred at the time the original cross complaint was filed (122 Cal. App. 3d 270, 286). The court concluded that such subsequent facts may only be brought into the action by means of a supplemental cross complaint, and, in this case, defendant had failed to move for leave to file a supplemental pleading, as required by Code Civ. Proc. § 464 (122 Cal. App. 3d 270, 286-287).

Barcelon v. Cortese (1968) 263 Cal. App. 2d 517, 69 Cal. Rptr. 657 , involved consolidated actions for real estate commissions brought by plaintiffs, who were brokers, against defendant buyer. At the close of plaintiff Barcelon's case, defendant moved for a nonsuit on the ground that there was insufficient written evidence of the employment relationship. The day after an extensive discussion of the nonsuit in chambers, plaintiff moved to amend the complaint to conform to proof so as to allege that there was a third-party beneficiary contract to pay him a fee. The court granted the motion for nonsuit and denied plaintiff's motion as the amendment was beyond the issues set forth in the pretrial order, which was directed solely to defendant's breach of his contract with plaintiff. On plaintiff's appeal from the judgment of nonsuit, the court of appeal found no abuse of discretion and affirmed, noting that the proposed amendment would have introduced a new issue and could have substantially changed the defense (263 Cal. App. 2d 517, 528).

The facts and procedural background of Brautigam v. Brooks (1964) 227 Cal. App. 2d 547, 38 Cal. Rptr. 784 , are set forth under § 16.46[3][c]. In holding that the trial court abused its discretion in allowing an amendment to conform to proof that introduced the defense of contributory negligence, the court stated that amendments to conform to proof must not introduce a new cause of action or new issue, or substantially change the claim or defense (227 Cal. App. 2d 547, 561).

Plaintiff in Bank of United States v. Foreman (1929) 102 Cal. App. 756, 283 P 874 , sued defendant as an accommodation indorser on nine notes. Defendant answered, denying the allegations of the complaint seriatim. After trial, the court filed a memorandum for judgment in plaintiff's favor. Thereafter, defendant moved to amend the answer to conform to the proof to allege for the first time that the notes were indorsed and transferred to plaintiff on the express condition that part of the proceeds be held on deposit for defendant's security. The court granted the motion and found in defendant's favor that plaintiff had fraudulently converted that part of the proceeds to its own use, and offset that amount against plaintiff's recovery. On plaintiff's appeal from the unsatisfactory judgment in its favor, the court of appeal modified the judgment to eliminate the offset allowed by the trial court. The court stated the rule that an amendment to pleadings at or following trial should not be allowed over the adverse party's objection when the amendment raises new issues that were not included in the original pleadings, relying on prior California law. The court found that the rule applied since the bank's fraud was not an issue at the trial of the case, and the bank had had no opportunity to defend the accusation of fraud (102 Cal. App. 756, 764).

[b] Prejudice to Adverse Party

Hulsey v. Koehler (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 1150, 267 Cal. Rptr. 523 , was an action for declaratory relief and reformation of a promissory note executed in connection with plaintiffs' sale of a mobilehome park to defendant. The trial court had denied defendant's motion, made some three years after defendant had answered plaintiffs' amended complaint, to amend her answer to conform to proof to allege specially as an affirmative defense that the action was barred by the mandatory cross complaint statute (Code Civ. Proc. § 426.30) because of plaintiffs' failure to plead their cause of action as a cross complaint in a prior action by the defendant against the plaintiffs. Judgment was for the plaintiffs, and defendant appealed.

The court of appeal said that courts ordinarily should exercise liberality in permitting amendments at any stage of the proceeding and, in particular, liberality should be displayed in allowing amendments to answers, for a defendant denied leave to amend is permanently deprived of a defense. The court explained, however, that whether such amendment is allowed rests in the sound discretion of the trial court, and that courts are much more critical of proposed amendments to answers when offered after long unexplained delay or on the eve of trial, or where there is a lack of diligence, or there is prejudice to the other party (218 Cal. App. 3d 1150, 1159). The court noted that defense counsel's excuse for the delay was simply that he had discovered Code Civ. Proc. § 426.30 as a potential defense only two days before trial while reading a transcript of the deposition of one of the plaintiffs. The court further noted that the trial court, in denying the motion as untimely, impliedly found an unreasonable lack of diligence in the belated assertion of the defense, that the delay had prejudiced the plaintiffs because of the attorney's fee provision, and that plaintiffs had a right to know the risk and weigh their exposure prior to trial, and certainly prior to the time they put on their evidence (218 Cal. App. 3d 1150, 1159). The court concluded that the trial court had not abused its discretion and affirmed the judgment (218 Cal. App. 3d 1150, 1150-1160).

[c] Lack of Evidence

Plaintiff in Johnston v. Yolo County (1969) 274 Cal. App. 2d 46, 79 Cal. Rptr. 33 , sued the county for personal injuries sustained in an automobile accident, alleging that the road as constructed constituted a dangerous condition. Defendant did not assert a design immunity defense in the original answer, but after some testimony at trial relating to the construction of the road, defendant moved to amend the answer to allege the immunity to conform to proof. The motion was never acted on, and defendant's motion for nonsuit on the basis of design immunity was later denied. Defendant appealed a judgment entered on an adverse jury verdict.

In affirming, the court of appeal held that the design immunity defense was properly excluded from the case, because a fact crucial to one element of the defense had not been proven (274 Cal. App. 2d 46, 54-55). The court stated that notwithstanding prevailing liberality in the amendment of pleadings to conform to proof, an amendment will not be permitted where there is a complete failure of proof, citing Code Civ. Proc. § 471 for the proposition that there is a complete failure of proof when the allegation of the claim or defense to which the proof is directed, is unproved, not in some particular or particulars only, but in its general scope and meaning. The court went on to hold that the refusal to allow amendment had to be sustained because a fact vital to the proposed defense was unproved in its general scope and meaning (274 Cal. App. 2d 46, 51).

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 16 AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
PART II. FORMS
A. Amended Pleadings

1-16 California Points & Authorities § 16.47

§ 16.47 Opposing Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--Failure to Present Copy of Amendment

[1] FORM Opposing Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--Failure to Present Copy of Amendment

[The following should be combined with a general form of memorandum in opposition to a motion for leave to file an amended pleading or an amendment to a pleading (see § 16.45).]

THE COURT SHOULD DENY THE MOTION TO AMEND THE PLEADING BECAUSE _____ [specify moving party] HAS NOT PRESENTED A COPY OF THE PROPOSED AMENDMENT TO THE COURT.

Copy of Amendment. The court may properly deny a motion for leave to file an _____ [amended or amendment to a] pleading when the _____ [moving party] does not propose a specific amendment in writing (Neher v. Kauffman (1925) 197 Cal. 674, 686, 242 P. 713 ; Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Ry. Co. v. Superior Oil Co. (1966) 243 Cal. App. 2d 289, 295, 52 Cal. Rptr. 53).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This points and authorities may be used in opposition to a motion for leave to file an amended pleading or an amendment to a pleading when the moving party fails to present a copy of the proposed amendment to the court. It does not provide a complete memorandum but is designed to be combined with the general form of memorandum opposing amendment of pleadings set out in § 16.45, as well as with forms relating to any other grounds that may exist for denying permission to amend the pleading [see §§ 16.49 -16.55].

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Copy of Amendment

One issue urged by defendants on their appeal from a judgment entered in plaintiff's favor after trial in Neher v. Kauffman (1925) 197 Cal. 674, 242 P. 713 , was that the trial court erred in denying them leave to file asecond amendmentto the answer. Defendants had asked for leave to file the amendment during the course of trial, but the court did not immediately rule on the request and defendants did not insist on a ruling. After trial, the court made a minute entry of an order denying the motion. The Supreme Court held that there was no error because allowing amendment during trial is largely in the discretion of the trial court and because no error could be predicated on the ruling since defendants never prepared or tendered for filing any proposed amendment (197 Cal. 674, 686).

Notwithstanding the rule in Neher, however, a request for leave to amend "to conform with" the trial court's ruling that the pleading was defective was held to be sufficient specification of the nature of the proposed amendment even though proposed pleadings were not tendered in MacIsaac v. Pozzo (1945) 26 Cal. 2d 809, 816, 161 P.2d 449 . There, the Supreme Court stated that defendants were not bound to appear at trial armed with proposed amendments when there had been no indication that the pleadings would be attacked at the opening of trial by a motion for judgment on the pleadings (26 Cal. 2d 809, 816).

In Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe. Ry. Co. v. Superior Oil Co. (1966) 243 Cal. App. 2d 289, 52 Cal. Rptr. 53 , plaintiff sued defendants as employers of a driver who ran into plaintiff's train, causing property damage. After all the evidence was in, plaintiff expressed a desire in chambers to amend the complaint to include a cause of action against defendants based on their directly causing the accident by overworking the driver. The court denied the suggestion of amendment, and plaintiff appealed from the judgment entered in defendants' favor.

The court of appeal noted defendants' argument that plaintiff's failure to propose a specific amendment in writing was reason alone to justify denial of the attempted amendment (243 Cal. App. 2d 289, 295). Then, after finding that even under the proposed amendment defendants' liability would hinge on the negligence of the driver, the court recognized that allowance of amendments is a matter within the discretion of the trial court and held that the trial court correctly denied the informal suggestion of amendment (243 Cal. App. 2d 289, 296-297).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Copy of Amendment

The trial court in Jones v. Daly (1981) 122 Cal. App. 3d 500, 176 Cal. Rptr. 130 , sustained a general demurrer to a complaint without leave to amend, and the court of appeal affirmed. The court stated that although it is normally an abuse of the trial court's discretion to sustain a general demurrer without leave to amend, the burden is on the plaintiff to prove such abuse, and that burden was not met when plaintiff failed to indicate the manner in which the complaint would be amended and how the amendment would cure the pleading defects (122 Cal. App. 3d 500, 510-511).

In Hook v. Wren (1941) 44 Cal. App. 2d 441, 112 P.2d 669 , the court of appeal affirmed a judgment of dismissal entered after a demurrer to an amendment to an amended complaint was granted without leave to further amend. In affirming, the court held that plaintiffs' motion for leave to further amend was properly denied because they neither disclosed the nature of the alteration they desired to make, nor presented a copy of the proposed amendment to the trial court (44 Cal. App. 2d 441, 442).

De L'Eau v. Williams (1934) 139 Cal. App. 116, 33 P.2d 427 , involved an action on a contract. During trial, defendant's counsel stated that just that morning, he and defendant had learned of fraud in the underlying transaction in that undisclosed dual commissions had been taken, and he further stated that he was going to ask leave to file an amended answer and amended cross complaint to set up those facts. The court denied the motion when it was made. Defendant never actually presented a proposed pleading to the court nor stated the exact wording of the proposed pleading to the court. Plaintiff recovered judgment after trial, and defendant appealed, urging, inter alia, that the trial court had abused its discretion in refusing leave to amend.

The court of appeal, however, held that there was no abuse of discretion given the attempt to assert a new defense based on an agency relationship when none of the pleadings had alleged an agency relationship between the parties, the very long delay in moving to amend (over five years after the action had commenced), and the insufficient explanation of defendant's failure to discover the new facts earlier. The court went onto hold that no error could be predicated on the ruling denying permission to amend because defendant never prepared or tendered for filing any proposed amendment, citing Neher v. Kauffman (1925) 197 Cal. 674, 242 P. 713 , discussed above (139 Cal. App. 116, 118).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 16 AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
PART II. FORMS
A. Amended Pleadings

1-16 California Points & Authorities § 16.48

§ 16.48 Opposing Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473, 576]--Unwarranted Delay in Presenting Amendment

[1] FORM Opposing Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473, 576]--Unwarranted Delay in Presenting Amendment

[The following should be combined with a general form of memorandum in opposition to a motion for leave to file an amended pleading or an amendment to a pleading (see § 16.45) or to amend to conform to proof (see § 16.46).]

THE COURT SHOULD DENY THE PROPOSED AMENDMENT BECAUSE OF _____'S [specify moving party] UNWARRANTED DELAY IN PRESENTING IT.

A. Unwarranted Delay as Grounds for Denial. Unwarranted delay in presenting a proposed amendment may be grounds in itself for denial of a motion for leave to amend (Record v. Reason (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 472, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 547 ; Roemer v. Retail Credit Co. (1975) 44 Cal. App. 3d 926, 939-940, 119 Cal. Rptr. 82). Denial may rest on the lack of diligence in offering the amendment after knowledge of the facts or the effect of the delay on the adverse party (Roemer v. Retail Credit Co. (1975) 44 Cal. App. 3d 926, 939-940, 119 Cal. Rptr. 82).

[Optional] B. Lack of Due Diligence. A lack of due diligence may be inferred from a long delay in presenting an amendment after knowledge of the facts (Roemer v. Retail Credit Co. (1975) 44 Cal. App. 3d 926, 940, 119 Cal. Rptr. 82).

[Optional] C. New Issue Requiring Further Investigation or Discovery. Denial of permission to amend pleadings may be based on long unexcused delay especially when the proposed amendment interjects a new issue that may require further investigation or discovery procedures (Green v. Rancho Santa Margarita Mortgage Co. (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 686, 692, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 706 ; Cain v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. (1976) 62 Cal. App. 3d 310, 315, 132 Cal. Rptr. 860).

[Optional] D. Motion on Eve of Trial. The court may deny a motion to amend a pleading when the motion is made on the eve of trial, the amendment alleges a new issue based on different facts that were known to _____ [plaintiff or defendant] when the original _____ [complaint or answer] was filed, but no excuse is given for the delay, the original _____ [complaint or answer] gave no inkling of the new facts, and a continuance would be required if leave to file the amended _____ [complaint or answer] were granted (Moss Estate Co. v. Adler (1953) 41 Cal. 2d 581, 586, 261 P.2d 732 ; see Magpali v. Farmers Group, Inc. (1996) 48 Cal. App. 4th 471, 487-488, 55 Cal. Rptr. 2d 225).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a motion for leave to file an amended pleading or an amendment to a pleading when the motion is made after an unexplained or unexcusable delay. It does not provide a complete memorandum but is designed to be combined with one of the general forms of memoranda of points and authorities opposing amendment of pleadings set out in §§ 16.45 and 16.46, as well as with forms relating to any other grounds that may exist for denying permission to amend the pleading [see §§ 16.47, 16.49 -16.55].

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Lack of Diligence Unavailable as Grounds Early in Proceedings

In Landis v. Superior Court (1965) 232 Cal. App. 2d 548, 557, 42 Cal. Rptr. 893 (discussed in § 16.37[4][a]), the court of appeal stated that it was unable to find any case upholding denial of a motion to amend based solely on lack of diligence at a stage of the proceeding when pretrial or trial had not been set. The court also stated that it is unreasonable to deny permission to amend when the only apparent hardship to a defendant is that he or she will have to defend. Therefore, counsel, in relating the facts of the case to this form, should emphasize the closeness of the motion to amend to the trial date, and point to any prejudice other than the necessity of meeting a potentially valid issue.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Unwarranted Delay as Grounds for Denial

In Record v. Reason (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 472, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 547 , an action for personal injuries, the defendant moved for summary judgment based on primary assumption of risk. The plaintiff moved for leave to amend the complaint to assert a cause of action for reckless or intentional behavior, the motion to be heard at the same time as the summary judgment motion. The court granted summary judgment in defendant's favor and denied plaintiff's motion as being untimely and having no good cause. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. In concluding that the trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying plaintiff leave to amend the complaint, the court pointed out that plaintiff had knowledge of the circumstances on which plaintiff based the amended complaint on the day plaintiff was injured, almost three years before plaintiff sought leave to amend. Quoting Roemer v. Retail Credit Co. (1975) 44 Cal. App. 3d 926, 939-940, 119 Cal. Rptr. 82 , the court noted that even if a good amendment is proposed in proper form, unwarranted delay in presenting it may itself be a valid reason for denial (73 Cal. App. 4th 472, 486-487). The court also noted that the appellant was not prejudiced by the denial of the amendment because the court had to consider the issue of recklessness in determining whether primary assumption of risk applied, and plaintiff's evidence opposing the summary judgment motion was nearly identical to the evidence supporting the motion to amend.

In Roemer v. Retail Credit Co. (1975) 44 Cal. App. 3d 926, 119 Cal. Rptr. 82 , a libel action, defendant requested leave to amend its answer to plead partial truth of the defamatory statements in mitigation of damages. The request was made at the close of defendant's case, on the second trial of the matter, and was denied by the court. Defendant appealed from a judgment entered on an adverse verdict.

In affirming, the court of appeal held that the trial court had not abused its discretion in denying leave to amend both because the proposed amendment contradicted a prior stipulation and because of defendant's delay in presenting it. Defendant claimed that the evidence introduced at the second trial had shown that some of the statements were true, but the court found that the truth of the matters had been shown at the first trial as well, and held that such long delay in offering the amendment after knowledge of the facts could be construed by the court to constitute a lack of due diligence (44 Cal. App. 3d 926, 940). The court stated, relying on prior California law, that the law is clear that even if a good amendment is proposed in proper form, unwarranted delay in presenting it may be of itself a valid reason for denial based on the lack of diligence after knowledge of the facts or the effect of the delay on the adverse party (44 Cal. App. 3d 926, 939-940).

[b] Lack of Due Diligence

Roemer v. Retail Credit Co. (1975) 44 Cal. App. 3d 926, 119 Cal. Rptr. 82 , is discussed in § 16.48[3][a].

[c] New Issue Requiring Further Investigation or Discovery

Green v. Rancho Santa Margarita Mortgage Co. (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 686, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 706 , involved a race discrimination action against, among others, a mortgage broker, for failure to obtain a loan for plaintiffs to purchase a new home in a development. At the close of plaintiffs' case in the first trial of the action, plaintiffs moved to amend their complaint to add a claim for professional negligence against the broker, but the trial court denied the motion. The jury then found the broker liable for damages, but in responses to special questions found the race was not a factor in broker's failure to obtain a loan. The trial court set aside the judgment based on the verdict, entered a judgment in the broker's favor and immediately vacated that judgment and granted plaintiffs a new trial.

Plaintiffs were then granted permission to file a new complaint adding a cause of action for professional negligence, but in to avoid an additional deposition, plaintiffs agreed to retrial without the professional negligence cause of action. Plaintiffs never did file an amended complaint, and the court ultimately entered an order precluding the plaintiffs from prosecuting a negligence claim against the broker and reinstated the earlier judgment in the broker's favor. Plaintiffs appealed, and appellate court reversed on the ground the trial court could not reinstate the judgment it had vacated. The court also held that the trial court had properly refused to allow plaintiffs to amend their complaint to add a negligence cause of action and remanded for new trial solely on the cause of action for race discrimination.

On remand, the broker moved to amend its answer to include an affirmative defense based on its own negligence. The trial court denied the motion, plaintiffs prevailed on the retrial, and defendant broker appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, noting that the proposed amendment contradicted defendant's verified original answer which unequivocally asserted that defendant had worked diligently to obtain a loan for plaintiffs (28 Cal. App. 4th 686, 691-692). The court further found that the amendment would have interjected a new issue in the case requiring plaintiffs to conduct further discovery as well as to redo their trial strategy (28 Cal. App. 4th 686, 693). The court also noted that defendant offered no excuse for its delay in seeking the amendment and characterized defendant's action as "legal gamesmanship in its purest sense" (28 Cal. App. 4th 686, 692-693).

Cain v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. (1976) 62 Cal. App. 3d 310, 132 Cal. Rptr. 860 , involved an action for invasion of privacy. On the morning the action was set for trial, plaintiffs moved to amend the complaint to allege that defendant's wrongful conduct occurred over a period of time ending well within one year of the time the suit was instituted. No reason was given for the motion's untimeliness and no supporting affidavits or other proof were submitted. Defendant objected on the basis that a continuance would be necessary for further research and investigation, and the trial court denied the motion. The issue of the statute of limitations was then tried before the other issues in the case, resulting in a judgment for defendant from which plaintiffs appealed.

Although reversing on other grounds, the court of appeal held that there was neither error nor abuse of discretion in denial of the motion. Relying on prior California law, the court stated that a long unexcused delay may be the basis for denying permission to amend pleadings, especially when the amendment would interject a new issue that might require further investigation or discovery procedures (62 Cal. App. 3d 310, 315).

[d] Motion on Eve of Trial

The theory of defense in the original answer in Moss Estate Co. v. Adler (1953) 41 Cal. 2d 581, 261 P.2d 732 , an action to quiet title, was that defendant had an interest in a well on plaintiff's adjoining land because it had tapped a pool underlying both properties. Only 12 days before the date set for trial, defendant moved to amend her answer to assert a new defense based on violation of confidential and agency relationships giving rise to an equitable interest in the well. The court denied the motion, and after plaintiff was given judgment quieting title, defendant appealed.

The Supreme Court held that the trial court had not abused its discretion in denying leave to amend. In reaching its decision, the Court noted that the defendants' motion to file the amended answer, which would have alleged a new defense based on different facts, came on the eve of trial, over two months after defendant had notice of the trial date, and over one year after the original answer had been filed. The Court also noted that defendant had known the facts when the original answer was filed, no excuse was given for the delay, and a continuance would have been necessary to give plaintiff time to investigate the new issues of fact if leave to amend had been granted (41 Cal. 2d 581, 586).

In Magpali v. Farmers Group, Inc. (1996) 48 Cal. App. 4th 471, 55 Cal. Rptr. 2d 225 , plaintiff's original complaint was based on breach of contract, fraud, and intentional infliction of emotional distress arising out of plaintiff's tenure as an insurance agent for defendant. The complaint alleged that defendant breached the parties' agreement by telling plaintiff how to run his business, putting him in a status that restricted his ability to bind Farmers policies, and terminating the agreement without good cause. The complaint included an allegation that plaintiff was specifically told to avoid writing policies for Hispanics and Filipinos. Plaintiff sought to amend his complaint on the eve of trial to add an Unruh Civil Rights Act violation alleging racial discrimination by a business establishment based on the allegation that he was specifically told to avoid writing policies for Hispanics and Filipinos. The trial court denied leave to amend the complaint. Plaintiff dropped the breach of contract claim, and after plaintiff presented his case on the other causes of action, the court granted defendant's motion for nonsuit. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal found no abuse of discretion in the denial of the request for leave to amend, noting that the amendment was proposed on the eve of trial, nearly two years after the complaint was originally filed, with no explanation for the delay (48 Cal. App. 4th 471, 486). The court stated that although courts are bound to apply a policy of great liberality in permitting amendments to complaints at any stage of the proceedings, up to and including the trial, this policy should be applied only where no prejudice is shown to the adverse party. The policy of liberality does not apply when inexcusable delay and probable prejudice to the adverse party are shown (48 Cal. App. 4th 471, 487). The court found that in this case adding the new cause of action would have significantly changed the tenor and complexity of the complaint because the original complaint focused on dealings between the plaintiff and the defendant and the amended complaint would have required exploration of the defendant's activities and practices in the entire Southern California area. Plaintiff conceded that addition of the new claim would have necessitated, at the very least, a continuance to allow defendant to depose new witnesses. The court concluded that where the trial date is set, and counsel, the parties, the trial court, and the witnesses have blocked the time, and the only way to avoid prejudice to the opposing party is to continue the trial date, then refusal of leave to amend cannot be an abuse of discretion (48 Cal. App. 4th 471, 487-488).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Unwarranted Delay as Grounds for Denial

In A.N. v. County of Los Angeles (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 1058, 90 Cal. Rptr. 3d 293 , A.N. filed his original complaint in May 2005 and his amended complaint in November 2005. A.N. filed the bulk of his Doe amendments in August 2007 and served most of his Doe amendments at that time. A.N.'s counsel did not state the dates upon which counsel learned the names of the Doe defendants and did not explain why their identities could not have been discovered sooner, as the record indicated that counsel had access to the information sooner. In affirming the trial court's finding that the delay was unreasonable and prejudicial, the appellate court saw no reasonable explanation in the record for A.N.'s roughly two year delay in filing and serving the Doe amendments, observing that Code Civ. Proc. § 474 includes an implicit requirement that a plaintiff cannot unreasonably delay the filing of a Doe amendment after learning a defendant's identity (171 Cal. App. 4th 1058, 1066-1067) .

In Englert v. Ivac Corp. (1979) 92 Cal. App. 3d 178, 154 Cal. Rptr. 804 , the court of appeal held that denial of a motion to amend a complaint in an action for replevin to allege malice and add a prayer for punitive damages was not an abuse of discretion when the motion was made on the day of trial. The court noted that plaintiff claimed that the amendment would not require discovery of new evidence, and that he had unsuccessfully moved to amend five weeks earlier without alleging malice, so that he had both the evidence and opportunity to suggest the amendment earlier. In finding no abuse of discretion, the court relied on Roemer v. Retail Credit Co. (1975) 44 Cal. App. 3d 926, 119 Cal. Rptr. 82 , discussed in § 16.48[3][a] for the rule that unwarranted delay without more can be a valid reason for denying a motion to amend (92 Cal. App. 3d 178, 190).

Permalab-Metalab Equipment Corp. v. Maryland Cas. Co. (1972) 25 Cal. App. 3d 465, 102 Cal. Rptr. 26 , involved an action on a construction contract bond issued by defendant bonding company. Defendant's answer raised the defense of plaintiff's breach of contract and in answer to an interrogatory served a month before trial, defendant stated that it was relying on breach of contract to support its defense and counterclaim. Five days before the day set for trial, however, defendant served and filed notice of a motion to amend the answer to assert an affirmative defense based on the lack of a mechanic's lien claim or giving statutorily required notice to defendant. The motion was heard and denied on the day of trial. After plaintiff prevailed in the trial court, defendant appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. Defendant urged that the motion was based on facts discovered after the original complaint was filed. The court however, found that defendant's delay of nearly three years in moving to amend was prejudicial to plaintiff which lost rights it would have had against the contractor which had gone out of business in the interim (25 Cal. App. 3d 465, 471). Relying on prior California law, the court recognized that courts are critical of proposed amendments to answers when they are offered after long unexplained delay, or on the eve of trial, or when there is a lack of diligence, or there is prejudice to the other party. Accordingly, the court held that the trial court had not abused its discretion in denying the motion to amend (25 Cal. App. 3d 465, 472).

[b] New Issues Requiring Further Investigation or Discovery

Plaintiff in Marvin v. Marvin (1976) 18 Cal. 3d 660, 134 Cal. Rptr. 815, 557 P.2d 106 , brought an action for declaratory relief to determine her contract and property rights against defendant, with whom plaintiff had lived, without being married to him, for several years. Plaintiff also sought to impose a constructive trust on half of the property acquired during the relationship. On the day of trial, plaintiff asked for leave to file an amended complaint to add two causes of action for breach of contract against a corporation that was not a party to the suit. Plaintiff alleged that the corporation was the alter ego of defendant. The court denied leave to amend, and on appeal from a subsequent judgment on the pleadings in defendant's favor, plaintiff argued that the trial court had abused its discretion in denying leave to amend. Although reversing on other grounds, the Supreme Court rejected plaintiff's argument that she should have been allowed to amend her complaint. The Court cited Hayutin v. Weintraub (1962) 207 Cal. App. 2d 497, 24

Cal. Rptr. 761 , in holding that denial of the motion was not an abuse of discretion because, if the motion had been granted, a long continuance would have been required to investigate wholly new factual issues, and discovery would have to be done again, all at substantial inconvenience and needless and substantial additional expense to defendant (18 Cal. 3d 660, 667 n.2).

In Young v. Berry Equipment Rentals, Inc. (1976) 55 Cal. App. 3d 35, 127 Cal. Rptr. 200 , plaintiff brought suit for personal injuries arising out of an accident involving a fork lift. Among the defendants was the owner of the fork lift who was alleged to be vicariously liable as owner pursuant to statute. After a jury verdict was returned in favor of all defendants, judgment notwithstanding the verdict was entered against the owner of the fork lift, and a new trial was granted, solely on the issue of damages. Thereafter, plaintiff moved to amend the complaint to allege a new theory of liability against the owner based on negligent entrustment. The court denied the motion to amend because the new trial was limited to the issue of damages. Dissatisfied with the judgment that was entered in his favor in the second trial, plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal reversed on other grounds, but held that the trial court had not abused its discretion in denying the motion. The court relied on prior California law for the proposition that a long unexcused delay may be the basis for denying permission to amend pleadings, especially when the amendment would interject a new issue that might require further investigation or discovery procedures (55 Cal. App. 3d 35, 39). Plaintiff argued that the amendment was based on information first learned at trial, but the court noted that defendant owner had been a party subject to the rules of discovery from the beginning of the action, and that the motion to amend came nearly a year and a half after the original complaint was filed (55 Cal. App. 3d 35, 39). In addition to the motion's untimeliness, the amendment would have prejudiced defendant owner by allowing the issue of liability to be reopened and exposing the owner to greater liability than in the original action because the statutory vicarious liability on which the judgment was based was subject to a $15,000 maximum damage limit (55 Cal. App. 3d 35, 39-40). The court stated that allowing the amendment, which would permit plaintiff to avoid a statute plaintiff should have been aware of before or during trial, would not only have been prejudicial to defendant, but would have condoned plaintiff's lack of preparation for trial (55 Cal. App. 3d 35, 40).

One of the claims in Rainer v. Community Memorial Hosp. (1971) 18 Cal. App. 3d 240, 95 Cal. Rptr. 901 , a medical malpractice suit, was against defendant hospital based on respondeat superior. On the third day of trial, plaintiffs moved to amend the complaint to add a theory of independent negligence against the hospital. The court denied the motion, and plaintiffs ultimately appealed from a judgment that was only partially in their favor.

The court of appeal rejected plaintiffs' contention that the denial was erroneous, relying on prior California law to hold that a long unexcused delay may be the basis for denying permission to amend pleadings, especially when the proposed amendment interjects a new issue that may require further investigation or discovery procedures. The court noted that plaintiff, without good cause, had waited until the third day of trial, five years after commencement of the suit and over 10 months after having notice of the theory, before seeking amendment, and even then did not have the evidence ready to prove the issues. Additionally, defendants showed that interjection of the amendment would have further complicated an already complicated trial before a jury, that no discovery and preparation on the trial of these issues had been made by them, and that matters which might have been the subject of pretrial investigation would not be admissible under the Evidence Code (18 Cal. App. 3d 240, 258). The court concluded that denial of the amendment was not an abuse of discretion (18 Cal. App. 3d 240, 258-259). The court held, however, that an amendment first sought at trial on the second day of testimony to add issues of informed consent and a battery to issues of negligence should have been allowed, since that amendment merely added a new theory of recovery on the same set of facts constituting the cause of action and would not have required additional investigation or discovery (18 Cal. App. 3d 240, 251-256). This aspect of Rainer is discussed in § 16.37[4][a].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 16 AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
PART II. FORMS
A. Amended Pleadings

1-16 California Points & Authorities § 16.49

§ 16.49 Opposing Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--Failure to Correct Defect

[1] FORM Opposing Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--Failure to Correct Defect

[The following should be combined with a general form of memorandum in opposition to a motion for leave to file an amended pleading or an amendment to a pleading; (see § 16.45).]

THE COURT SHOULD NOT ALLOW AMENDMENT OF THE PLEADING BECAUSE THE AMENDMENT DOES NOT CORRECT THE DEFECT IN THE ORIGINAL PLEADING.

Failure to Correct Defect. The court may properly deny permission to amend when the proposed amended pleading is vulnerable to objection on the same grounds as the original pleading (Rose v. Ames (1942) 53 Cal. App. 2d 583, 589, 128 P.2d 65 ; Stiebel v. Roberts (1941) 42 Cal. App. 2d 434, 440, 109 P.2d 22)

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a motion for leave to file an amended pleading or an amendment to a pleading when the amendment is defective on the same grounds as the original pleading. It does not provide a complete memorandum but is designed to be combined with the general form of memorandum opposing amendment of pleadings set out in § 16.45, as well as with forms relating to any other grounds that may exist for denying permission to amend the pleading [see §§ 16.47, 16.48, 16.50 -16.55].

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Failure to Correct Defect

In Rose v. Ames (1942) 53 Cal. App. 2d 583, 128 P.2d 65 , plaintiff appealed from a judgment entered after the court sustained a demurrer to the complaint and denied plaintiff's motion for leave to file an amended complaint. The court of appeal held that the trial court had not abused its discretion in denying plaintiff's motion because the proposed amended complaint did not supply the material allegations that were missing from the original complaint and was therefore vulnerable to demurrer on the same grounds as the original complaint (53 Cal. App. 2d 583, 589).

In Stiebel v. Roberts (1941) 42 Cal. App. 2d 434, 109 P.2d 22 , defendants' objection to the introduction of evidence on the ground that the complaint did not state a cause of action was sustained. Plaintiffs' motion to amend the complaint was then made and denied, and judgment was entered in defendants' favor. On plaintiffs' appeal, the court of appeal held that the trial court had not abused its discretion in denying plaintiffs' motion because the complaint still would not have been sufficient to state a cause of action even if the amendments had been allowed (42 Cal. App. 2d 434, 440).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 16 AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
PART II. FORMS
A. Amended Pleadings

1-16 California Points & Authorities § 16.50

§ 16.50 Opposing Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--Unexplained Omission of Allegation Fatal to Pleading

[1] FORM Opposing Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--Unexplained Omission of Allegation Fatal to Pleading

[The following should be combined, where appropriate, with a general form of memorandum in opposition to a motion for leave to file an amended pleading or an amendment to a pleading (see § 16.45).]

THE COURT SHOULD DENY THE MOTION TO AMEND THE PLEADING BECAUSE THE AMENDMENT OMITS AN ALLEGATION FATAL TO THE PLEADING WITHOUT EXPLANATION.

A. Unexplained Omissions. If a verified pleading contains an allegation rendering the complaint vulnerable, the defect cannot be cured by simply omitting the allegation in a later pleading without explanation, and the court may properly deny leave to make such an amendment (Payne v. Bennion (1960) 178 Cal. App. 2d 595, 603-604, 3 Cal. Rptr. 14)

[Optional] B. Answers. The rule that facts once alleged under oath, rendering an original pleading vulnerable to attack, cannot be withdrawn from consideration by simply filing an amended pleading omitting those facts without explanation, applies to answers (Hardy v. Admiral Oil Co. (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 836, 840, 16 Cal. Rptr. 894, 366 P.2d 310)

[Optional] C. Unverified Pleadings. The rule that the unexplained omission of allegations destructive of a cause of action will not cure the defect applies to unverified pleadings as well as verified pleadings (Reichert v. General Ins. Co. (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 822, 836, 69 Cal. Rptr. 321, 442 P.2d 377)

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be used in opposition to a motion for leave to file an amended pleading or an amendment to a pleading when the amendment deletes, without explanation, an allegation which was fatal to the pleading. It does not provide a complete memorandum but is designed to be combined with the general form of memorandum opposing amendment of pleadings set out in § 16.45, as well as with forms relating to any other grounds that exist for denying permission to amend the pleading [see §§ 16.47 -16.49, 16.51 -16.55].

By including the appropriate optional paragraph, the form may be directed specifically toward a proposed amended answer [Paragraph B], an unverified pleading [Paragraph C], or both.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

This form may be used in opposition to a memorandum in support of a motion for leave to amend a pleading pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473, 576, or both, such as the one set out in § 16.33.

[b] Purpose of Rule

The rule that allegations of fact in a verified complaint that are subsequently omitted or contradicted are still binding on the plaintiff is valid and useful to defeat abuses of the privilege to amend, and to discourage sham and untruthful pleadings. However, the rule is not intended to prevent honest plaintiffs from correcting erroneous allegations of generic terms that may have legal implications but that are also loosely used by laypersons, or to prevent the correction of ambiguous statements of fact [Contreras v. Blue Cross of California (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 945, 950, 245 Cal. Rptr. 258].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Unexplained Omissions

Plaintiff in Payne v. Bennion (1960) 178 Cal. App. 2d 595, 3 Cal. Rptr. 14 , brought suit for wrongful death alleging that the decedent's death was caused by defendant driver's negligence while acting within the scope of her employment by defendant superintendent of schools. Defendants' demurrer to the complaint was sustained with leave to amend as to defendant driver only. Plaintiff moved for permission to file an amended complaint as to both defendants, and the court denied the motion. The second cause of action in the amended complaint would have omitted the allegation regarding scope of employment, and instead would have alleged on information and belief that defendant driver was not acting within the scope of her employment at the time of the accident. Judgment was subsequently entered for defendants based on the order sustaining the demurrer, and plaintiff appealed.

The primary question before the court of appeal was whether the trial court abused its discretion in denying leave to amend. The determination of that question required the court to determine whether the proposed amended complaint stated a cause of action against either defendant (178 Cal. App. 2d 595, 598). The court held that the original complaint and the first cause of action in the amended complaint failed to state a cause of action due to immunities and notice requirements applicable to public employees (178 Cal. App. 2d 595, 598-602). The court then applied the rule that if any verified pleading contains an allegation which renders a complaint vulnerable, the defect cannot be cured simply by omitting the allegation, without explanation, in a later pleading. Because plaintiff had originally alleged that defendant driver had been acting within the scope of her employment and did not offer any explanation for omitting that allegation from the amended complaint, the amended complaint was deemed to contain the same defect as the original and the court held that the trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying leave to amend (178 Cal. App. 2d 595, 603-604).

[b] Answers

In Hardy v. Admiral Oil Co. (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 836, 16 Cal. Rptr. 894, 366 P.2d 310 , plaintiff brought suit to recover a down payment on a contract. The court granted plaintiff's motion for judgment on the pleadings on the ground that the third amended answer did not state facts constituting a defense and that it appeared from all the verified pleadings on file that plaintiff was entitled to judgment. Judgment was entered accordingly and defendant appealed.

The Supreme Court affirmed, stating that the issue on appeal was whether or not it could be determined from all the verified pleadings on file that defendant had admitted the delivery of preliminary title reports showing any defect of title (56 Cal. 2d 836, 839). Defendant argued that its third amended answer placed this issue in controversy, but the Court stated the rule that facts once alleged under oath, rendering an original pleading vulnerable to attack, cannot be withdrawn from consideration by simply filing an amended pleading omitting such facts without explanation, relying on prior California law, including Payne v. Bennion (1960) 178 Cal. App. 2d 595, 603, 3 Cal. Rptr. 14 (discussed in § 16.50[3][a]). Defendant had made the crucial admission in its original and first amended answers, and the rule applied to prevent defendant from avoiding the admissions made in the earlier answers (56 Cal. 2d 836, 840-841).

[c] Unverified Pleadings

Plaintiff in Reichert v. General Ins. Co. (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 822, 69 Cal. Rptr. 321, 442 P.2d 377 , sued five insurance companies for failure to pay a claimed loss pursuant to a conspiracy to defraud plaintiff. The complaint revealed that plaintiff had been adjudged bankrupt after the events of which he complained. Demurrers to the complaint were sustained on the ground, inter alia, that plaintiff lacked standing to sue due to the bankruptcy. The first and second amended complaints later filed asserted four common counts without reference to the bankruptcy. Judgment for defendants was entered after the court sustained their demurrer to the second amended complaint, again partly on the ground that any cause of action had passed to the trustee in bankruptcy, and plaintiff appealed.

The Supreme Court affirmed, relying on prior California law for the rule that when a verified complaint contains allegations destructive of a cause of action, the defect cannot be cured in subsequently filed pleadings by simply omitting such allegations without explanation, because the original defect will infect the subsequent pleading to render it vulnerable to demurrer. The Court recognized that a party should be allowed to correct a pleading by omitting allegations which were made mistakenly or inadvertently, but noted that plaintiff offered no explanation that the prior allegation of bankruptcy was the result of mistake or inadvertence and that its omission was to correct an error (68 Cal. 2d 822, 836-837). The Court held that these principles applied even though the original complaint did not appear to have been verified (68 Cal. 2d 822, 836).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Unexplained Omissions

Continental Ins. Co. v. Lexington Ins. Co. (1997) 55 Cal. App. 4th 637, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 116 , involved an insurance coverage dispute arising out of a catastrophic, multi-vehicle traffic accident. The accident was allegedly caused by the driver of a tractor/trailer rig who was acting as agent for the lessee of the tractor/trailer rig. Plaintiff had issued a liability insurance policy to the lessor of the trailer portion of the rig. One defendant (Planet) had issued a liability insurance policy to the lessor of the tractor portion (or power unit) of the rig, and the other defendant (Lexington) had issued an umbrella liability insurance policy also to the lessor of the tractor portion of the rig, in which the Planet insurance policy was specified as underlying insurance. Following settlement of the personal injury and wrongful death lawsuits arising out of the accident, plaintiff filed an action for equitable indemnity, contribution, and declaratory relief against Planet and Lexington. Lexington filed a general demurrer to the complaint which was sustained without leave to amend. Plaintiff appealed from a judgment of dismissal entered thereafter.

The court of appeal affirmed. On appeal, plaintiff contended that since Lexington's demurrer was sustained without leave to amend, for the purposes of the appeal the court must assume that the liability policy issued on the tractor by Planet (who was not a party to the appeal) did not provide for permissive user coverage, with the effect that Lexington's policy dropped down and provided primary coverage for the lessee and the driver as permissive users of the tractor. In rejecting this contention, the court noted that plaintiff specifically alleged in its complaint that the Planet policy provided coverage for permissive users of the tractor, including the driver. Even if plaintiff were given leave to amend its complaint, it would not be allowed to amend the complaint to state a fact directly contradictory to one stated previously. A plaintiff may not discard factual allegations of an earlier complaint, or avoid them by contradictory averments in a superseding, amended pleading. Thus, the court must assume for purposes of the appeal that the Planet policy did provide permissive user coverage (55 Cal. App. 4th 637, 646).

Software Design & Application, Ltd. v. Hoefer & Arnett, Inc. (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 472, 56 Cal. Rptr. 2d 756 involved an action by a foreign corporation and its sole owner and founder against banks and brokerage firms. Plaintiffs, who were not customers of defendants, attempted to state causes of action for negligence, conversion, and violation of California Uniform Commercial Code § 11204. The real culprit, however, was the plaintiffs' faithless financial consultant entrusted with a valuable portfolio, who liquidated the assets with the help of his sister through a scheme involving a series of fictitious accounts. One transaction involved the transfer of the individual plaintiff's Paine-Webber portfolio to an account opened by the consultant in the name of a limited partnership that did not exist with defendant Hoeffer & Arnett, Inc. The trial court sustained demurrers to the first amended complaint, concluding there was no liability under the pleadings, and then dismissed the complaint after plaintiffs failed to further amend.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment. The court pointed out that in connection with the transfer of the individual plaintiff's Paine-Webber portfolio to defendant Hoeffer & Arnett, the plaintiffs averred that certain documentation from Paine-Webber accompanied the transfer which indicated that the securities and funds being transferred were owned and controlled exclusively by the individual plaintiff. The initial pleading stated that the documentation included true copies of a letter signed by the plaintiff, as well as a transfer request form also signed by the plaintiff, both of which were attached as exhibits. The amended complaint, however, did not include a description of this documentation, nor were copies of those documents attached. The court noted that the documents were not at all questionable or irregular on their face, and authorized a transfer of the plaintiff's account. The court further noted that the plaintiffs cannot retreat from the allegations and supporting exhibits concerning actual documentation, and supplant them in amended pleadings with conclusory allegations characterizing the documentation in general terms, and with an entirely different twist. When a, complaint contains allegations destructive to a cause of action the defect cannot be cured by their omission without explanation in a subsequent pleading. Moreover, allegations in a complaint must yield to contrary facts found in exhibits to the complaint (49 Cal. App. 4th 472, 484).

In Leong v. San Francisco Parking, Inc. (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 827, 832 n.5, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 41 , plaintiffs's son was killed by an intoxicated driver leaving a baseball stadium parking lot. The first amended complaint alleged that defendants, the baseball team, and the parking company provided alcoholic beverages during the game and that the driver became intoxicated at the stadium and parking lot. Defendants demurred on the ground that statutory law affirms prior judicial interpretation finding that the consumption of alcoholic beverages rather than the serving of them is the proximate cause of injuries inflicted upon another by an intoxicated person [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602(b)]. Despite plaintiffs' contention that they could plead specific facts alleging that defendants did not furnish alcoholic beverages for patrons to consume in the parking lot, the court sustained the demurrer without leave to amend (235 Cal. App. 3d 827, 830).

The court of appeal affirmed, stating that plaintiffs cannot avoid dismissal by simply omitting, with no explanation other than a desire to avoid the pertinent statute, allegations destructive of their cause of action (235 Cal. App. 3d 827, 833).

Colapinto v. County of Riverside (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 147, 281 Cal. Rptr. 191 , was an action for damages for the destruction of a building and its contents allegedly caused by the negligence of the defendant county's fire department when, in fighting a fire, but without making an investigation and without having fire fighting equipment in proper working order or in place, they smashed open a large door of the building allowing air to rush in on what was a smouldering fire, causing it to burst into flames that they couldn't control. Defendant's demurrer to the complaint, on the ground the county had absolute immunity under Gov. Code §§ 850 and 850.2, was sustained with leave to amend. Plaintiff's amended complaint omitted the foregoing facts and alleged that the department's negligent operation of a motor vehicle caused the destruction of the building. The defendant's motion for summary judgment was granted, and plaintiff appealed.

In affirming the summary judgment, the appellate court said that if a party files an amended complaint and attempts to avoid the defects of the original complaint by either omitting facts which made the previous complaint defective or by adding facts inconsistent with those of previous pleadings, the court may take judicial notice of prior pleadings and may disregard inconsistent allegations in the amended pleading (230 Cal. App. 3d 147, 151). The court said that plaintiffs' original complaint had alleged negligence in the manner in which the firefighters fought the blaze; in the first amended complaint, they changed the facts to allege that the negligent operation of a motor vehicle resulted in the destruction of the building. The court said the amended complaint does not mention that the motor vehicle was used as a method to fight the fire or explain the manner in which the firefighters fought the fire. This amendment changed the facts and was made solely to avoid the summary judgment. The court said that, therefore, it could ignore the amendment (230 Cal. App. 3d 147, 152). The court further noted that a complaint against a public entity is subject to a demurrer or judgment on the pleadings if the facts or theory of the complaint are different from those alleged in the original claim filed with the public entity, and that, under this rule, the first amended complaint was subject to dismissal by either procedure, had they been used (230 Cal. App. 3d 147, 152 n.1).

[b] Unverified Pleadings

Amid v. Hawthorne Community Medical Group, Inc. (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 1383, 261 Cal. Rptr. 240 , was an action by a surgeon, alleging various theories of recovery, against a hospital for damages arising out of the hospital's having sent to an affiliated health insurer a copy of a peer review committee's evaluation of plaintiff's medical performance. The evaluation had been adopted by the hospital's board of directors. In affirming the judgment of dismissal after defendant's demurrer to plaintiff's fourth amended complaint was sustained without leave to amend, the court said that although generally courts will disregard the original pleading after an amended pleading has been filed, they will not do so where an amended complaint attempts to avoid defects set forth in a prior complaint by ignoring them. The court may examine the prior complaint to ascertain whether the amended complaint is merely a sham (212 Cal. App. 3d 1383, 1387).

NOTE:
The court never expressly stated that the complaints involved were unverified; however, it consistently referred to them as "complaint," "first amended complaint," and so forth. This would appear to indicate that they were not verified. Moreover, the court's foregoing statement of the rule is not on its face limited to verified complaints or pleadings. Consequently, the case would appear to support the point that the rule applies to unverified complaints, as well as to verified complaints.

In Hills Transp. Co. v. Southwest Forest Indus., Inc. (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 702, 72 Cal. Rptr. 441 , the unverified original complaint sought recovery for breach of a written contract based on letters attached to the complaint. The unverified first amended complaint maintained the claim for breach of contract, but deleted the exhibits attached to the original complaint, and added a claim for fraud. Both complaints succumbed to demurrers, as did a second amended complaint which also alleged breach of contract and fraud and was verified. The demurrers to the second amended complaint were sustained without leave to amend, and plaintiff appealed the judgment of dismissal, complaining of the trial court's refusal to allow further amendment.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court reviewed the exhibits to the original complaint to find that those letters showed that there was no written contract (266 Cal. App. 2d 702, 711-712). Then, noting that the original complaint had alleged those letters as the contract, and that the second amended complaint merely omitted the letters while continuing to allege a written contract, the court stated the rule that a pleader may not attempt to breathe life into a complaint by omitting relevant facts which made the previous complaint defective. That principle, together with the trial court's right to take into account plaintiff's failure to produce other writings to support the claim of contract after the writings originally relied on were ruled insufficient, justified the trial court in denying further leave to amend (266 Cal. App. 2d 702, 712-713). In taking a superseded pleading into account in determining whether further pleading should be allowed, the court held that no distinction should be drawn between verified and unverified pleadings, so that trial courts may function without blinkers and take note of the entire history of the pleadings when pertinent (266 Cal. App. 2d 702, 710-711).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 16 AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
PART II. FORMS
A. Amended Pleadings

1-16 California Points & Authorities § 16.51

§ 16.51 Opposing Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--Contradiction of Admission in Original Pleading

[1] FORM Opposing Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--Contradiction of Admission in Original Pleading

[The following should be combined with a general form of memorandum in opposition to a motion for leave to file an amended pleading or an amendment to a pleading (see § 16.45).]

THE COURT SHOULD NOT ALLOW AMENDMENT OF THE PLEADING BECAUSE THE PROPOSED AMENDMENT CONTRADICTS AN ADMISSION IN THE ORIGINAL PLEADING.

Contradictory Amendments. As a general rule, a party will not be allowed to file an amendment contradicting an admission made in his or her original pleadings (Tognazzi v. Wilhelm (1936) 6 Cal. 2d 123, 127, 56 P.2d 1227 ; Brown v. Aguilar (1927) 202 Cal. 143, 149, 259 P. 735)

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a motion for leave to file an amended pleading or an amendment to a pleading when the amendment contradicts an admission in a prior pleading of the moving party. It does not provide a complete memorandum but is designed to be combined with the general form of memorandum opposing amendment of pleadings set out in § 16.45, as well as with forms relating to any other grounds that may exist for denying permission to amend the pleading [see §§ 16.47 -16.50, 16.52 -16.55].

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Mistake or Inadvertence

The rule that a party may not make an amendment contradicting an admission made in his or her original pleading is subject to an exception when it is clearly shown that the earlier pleading is the result of inadvertence or mistake [Meyer v. State Bd. of Equalization (1954) 42 Cal. 2d 376, 267 P.2d 257 , discussed in § 16.33[3][a]].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Contradictory Amendment

The facts and procedural background of Tognazzi v. Wilhelm (1936) 6 Cal. 2d 123, 56 P.2d 1227 , are discussed in § 16.45[3][b]. The Supreme Court in Tognazzi affirmed, first holding that the trial court properly sustained the demurrer without leave to amend because equity will not assist the grantor in a conveyance in fraud of his or her creditors to obtain a reconveyance from the grantee (6 Cal. 2d 123, 125). The Court then found that the allegation of the proposed amended complaint that the plaintiff had no intent to defraud any creditors flew squarely in the face of the allegation in the original complaint that the conveyance was a sham (6 Cal. 2d 123, 126-127). Accordingly, the Court held that the trial court had not abused its discretion in denying the motion for leave to file the amended complaint. The Court relied on prior California law for the general rule that a party will not be allowed to file an amendment contradicting an admission made in his original pleadings (6 Cal. 2d 123, 127).

It should be noted that the Court went on to state that if an amendment contradicting a prior admission is proper in any case, it must be on very satisfactory evidence that the party was deceived or misled, or that the pleading was made under a clear mistake as to the facts (6 Cal. 2d 123, 127). See, generally, the cases discussed in § 16.36.

In Brown v. Aguilar (1927) 202 Cal. 143, 259 P 735 , plaintiff, as assignee of a contractor, sued defendant for the balance due on a construction contract. The case went to trial on defendant's third amended answer which included an admission that a named person was the architect and agent employed by defendant to draw plans for and supervise erection of the building. The trial court refused to allow defendant to file a fourth amended answer changing that admission, and on appeal from an adverse judgment entered after trial, defendant asserted the refusal as error.

The Supreme Court affirmed, stating the same general rule, and qualification to it, that the Court cited in Tognazzi, above. The Court held that the trial court had not abused its discretion in denying the motion to amend, but, on the contrary, had acted wisely in denying the application (202 Cal. 143, 149). An additional factor supporting the Court's decision was that defendant had been given an earlier opportunity to amend after the faulty allegation had been called to her attention and had not done so (202 Cal. 143, 148).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Contradictory Amendment

In American Advertising & Sales Co. v. Mid-Western Transport (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 875, 199 Cal. Rptr. 735 , the president of plaintiff corporation sued to enforce a contract with defendant. Defendant sought summary judgment on the ground that plaintiff was not licensed by the Interstate Commerce Commission and therefore could not enforce the contract as a matter of law (152 Cal. App. 3d 875, 877, 878 n.2). Plaintiff's president then requested leave to amend his complaint to allege that defendant's contract was not with plaintiff corporation but with a properly licensed wholly owned subsidiary. The trial court denied the motion to amend, and plaintiff appealed (152 Cal. App. 3d 875, 877-878). The court of appeal affirmed, stating as well established the rule that a proposed amendment that contradicts an earlier pleading will not be allowed absent very satisfactory evidence that clearly shows that the earlier pleading was the result of mistake or inadvertence (152 Cal. App. 3d 875, 879). Here, the only evidence was a declaration by the president that he had been mistaken. The court held that there had been no abuse of discretion in denying leave to amend, since the trial court could reasonably have suspected the credibility and good faith of this declaration, considering the president's unlimited access to, and presumptive knowledge of, the correct facts, which he had nonetheless repeatedly denied before the motion for summary judgment (152 Cal. App. 3d 875, 878-880).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 16 AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
PART II. FORMS
A. Amended Pleadings

1-16 California Points & Authorities § 16.52

§ 16.52 Opposing Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--Complaint--Proposed Amendment States No Ground for Relief

[1] FORM Opposing Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--Complaint--Proposed Amendment States No Ground for Relief

[The following should be combined with a general form of memorandum in opposition to a motion for leave to file an amended pleading or an amendment to a pleading (see § 16.45).]

THE COURT SHOULD DENY PERMISSION TO AMEND THE COMPLAINT BECAUSE IT APPEARS TO A CERTAINTY THAT NO RELIEF COULD POSSIBLY BE GRANTED UNDER THE PROPOSED AMENDMENT.

No Amendment if No Relief Possible. The right to amend a pleading should be denied if it appears to a certainty that no relief could possibly be granted under the amended pleading (Robinson & Wilson, Inc. v. Stone (1973) 35 Cal. App. 3d 396, 413, 110 Cal. Rptr. 675 ; Bernstein v. Financial Indem. Co. (1968) 263 Cal. App. 2d 324, 328, 69 Cal. Rptr. 543)

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a motion for leave to file an amended pleading or an amendment to a pleading when the amendment does not state grounds for relief. It does not provide a complete memorandum but is designed to be combined with the general form of memorandum opposing amendment of pleadings set out in § 16.45, as well as with forms relating to any other grounds that may exist for denying permission to amend the pleading [see §§ 16.47 -16.54].

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[i] Related Uses

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may be used to oppose motion for leave to file an amended cross complaint or an amendment to a cross complaint.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Amendment if No Relief Possible

In Robinson & Wilson, Inc. v. Stone (1973) 35 Cal. App. 3d 396, 110 Cal. Rptr. 675 , plaintiffs, general contractors, sued defendant owners for breach of a construction contract, and defendants cross complained against plaintiffs for alleged breaches of the contract. Six months before trial, defendants moved to amend the cross complaint to assert a claim for attorneys' fees pursuant to the contract. The court denied the motion, and after defendants prevailed at trial, they appealed from the order denying their motion to amend the cross complaint.

The court of appeal affirmed the order, finding that the contract terms did not provide for an award of attorneys' fees, and that an express contractual provision was essential to such recovery (35 Cal. App. 3d 396, 411-414). The court held, relying on prior California law, that the right to amend a pleading should be denied if it appears to a certainty that no relief could possibly be granted under the amended pleading (35 Cal. App. 3d 396, 413).

Plaintiff in Bernstein v. Financial Indem. Co. (1968) 263 Cal. App. 2d 324, 69 Cal. Rptr. 543 , brought suit for breach of contract premised on the theory that defendant had no right to terminate the contract. When plaintiff sought to introduce testimony on that theory, defendant objected, based on the parol evidence rule. To counter the objection, plaintiff asked leave to amend the complaint to add a new cause of action alleging a contemporaneous oral agreement not to terminate the contract. The motion was denied, plaintiff rested his case, and defendant moved for judgment. Plaintiff appealed from the adverse judgment entered after the court granted defendant's motion.

In affirming, the court of appeal rejected plaintiff's contention that the trial court erred by denying leave to amend the complaint (263 Cal. App. 2d 324, 327-328). The court held that it seemed settled that the right to amend should be denied if it appears to a certainty that no relief could possibly be granted under the amended pleading. The court then found that the proposed cause of action based on wrongful termination of the contract was wholly unsustainable given the conceded right of either party to terminate the contract at any time on written notice. Thus, the court concluded that if the proposed pleading had been allowed to be filed, it could not state facts sufficient to state a cause of action for wrongful breach of contract, and that since no relief was obtainable under it, refusal to allow its filing was manifestly proper (263 Cal. App. 2d 324, 328).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] No Amendment if No Relief Possible

In Central National Ins. Co. v. California Ins. Guarantee Assn. (1985) 165 Cal. App. 3d 453, 211 Cal. Rptr. 435 , appellant insurance company, defendant in an action for declaratory relief brought by another insurance company, filed a cross complaint for declaratory relief against an insurance association. The trial court sustained a demurrer to the cross complaint without leave to amend on the ground that the association's "covered claims" did not include any obligations to insurers or any claim asserted by an assignee or one claiming by right of subrogation, and that appellant fell clearly within the excluded class. The court of appeal affirmed, holding that leave to amend should be denied when the facts are not in dispute, and the nature of the plaintiff's claim is clear, but, under the substantive law, no liability exists (165 Cal. App. 3d 453, 460-461).

In Lemoge Electric v. County of San Mateo (1956) 46 Cal. 2d 659, 297 P.2d 638 , the Supreme Court affirmed a judgment entered on an order sustaining a demurrer to a complaint for reformation of a contract without leave to amend.

The Court recognized the rule that it is ordinarily an abuse of discretion to sustain a demurrer without leave to amend if there is a reasonable possibility that the defect can be cured by amendment, but in affirming, the Court noted that plaintiff clearly could not amend to state a cause of action for reformation or rescission, and that plaintiff had not shown how the complaint could be amended to state a cause of action in quasi contract (46 Cal. 2d 659, 664).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 16 AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
PART II. FORMS
A. Amended Pleadings

1-16 California Points & Authorities § 16.53

§ 16.53 Opposing Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--Complaint--Entirely New Cause of Action or New Party Plaintiff After Statute of Limitations Has Run

[1] FORM Opposing Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--Complaint--Entirely New Cause of Action or New Party Plaintiff After Statute of Limitations Has Run

[The following should be combined with a general form of memorandum in opposition to a motion for leave to file an amended pleading or an amendment to a pleading (see § 16.45).]

THE COURT SHOULD DENY LEAVE TO AMEND THE COMPLAINT BECAUSE THE PROPOSED AMENDMENT ALLEGES AN ENTIRELY NEW CAUSE OF ACTION VIOLATING A DIFFERENT PRIMARY RIGHT AND BASED ON ENTIRELY DIFFERENT FACTS FROM THE ORIGINAL COMPLAINT AND IS BARRED BY THE STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS.

A. No Amendment to State Entirely New Cause of Action Barred by Statute of Limitations. After the statute of limitations has run, a party may not file an amended complaint alleging an entirely new cause of action violating an entirely different primary right and based on an entirely different set of facts than the original complaint (Shelton v. Superior Court (1976) 56 Cal. App. 3d 66, 76-77, 128 Cal. Rptr. 454)

[Optional] B. New Party Enforcing Independent Right. The court should not allow amendment of a complaint to add a new party plaintiff who seeks to enforce an independent right after the statute of limitations has run (Dubbers v. Goux (1875) 51 Cal. 153, 154-155 ; Diliberti v. Stage Call Corp. (1992) 4 Cal. App. 4th 1468, 1471, 6 Cal. Rptr. 2d 563)

[Optional] C. Different Instrumentality. If the instrumentality alleged to have caused an injury in the amended complaint is different from the instrumentality alleged in the original complaint to have caused the injury, the complaints relate to different accidents, and the amended complaint is not based on the same general set of facts as the original complaint and does not relate back to avoid the statute of limitations (see Coronet Manufacturing Co. v. Superior Court (1979) 90 Cal. App. 3d 342, 345-347, 153 Cal. Rptr. 366).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a motion for leave to file an amended complaint or an amendment to a complaint that would introduce an entirely new cause of action or, after the statute of limitations has run, add a new party plaintiff. It does not provide a complete memorandum but is designed to be combined with the general form of memorandum in § 16.45, as well as with forms relating to any other grounds that may exist for denying permission to amend the pleading [see §§ 16.47 -16.52, 16.54].

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

This form may be used in opposition to a memorandum in support of a motion for leave to amend a pleading pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 473 or 576, or both sections, such as the ones set out in*§§ 16.37*, 16.41, and 16.42.

[i] Related Uses

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may be used to oppose a motion for leave to file an amended cross complaint or an amendment to a cross complaint.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Amendment to State Entirely New Cause of Action Barred by Statute of Limitations

Shelton v. Superior Court (1976) 56 Cal. App. 3d 66, 128 Cal. Rptr. 454 , involved a joint complaint by a husband and wife for personal injuries each received in an automobile accident. After the statute of limitations had run, plaintiffs moved to amend the complaint to include claims for damages for loss of consortium. The court denied the motion and plaintiffs petitioned for a writ of mandate to compel the trial court to allow the amendment.

The court of appeal denied plaintiffs' petition following Bartalo v. Superior Court (1975) 51 Cal. App. 3d 526, 124 Cal. Rptr. 370 , discussed in § 16.53[3][b] to the extent that each plaintiff sought to assert a claim for loss of consortium by amending the other's cause of action for personal injuries (56 Cal. App. 3d 66, 73-74).

The court then determined that the amendment could not be allowed even if it were assumed that the amendment sought to add each plaintiff's claim for loss of consortium to his or her own claim for personal injuries. The court held that the rule of Austin v. Massachusetts Bonding & Insurance Co. (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 596, 15 Cal. Rptr. 817, 364 P.2d 681 (discussed in § 16.37[4][a]), that an amendment based on the same general set of facts as the original complaint will relate back to the date of filing the original complaint to avoid the statute of limitations, did not apply (56 Cal. App. 3d 66, 76-81). The court distinguished Austin and similar cases on several grounds. While Austin had allowed only one recovery on the general set of facts, plaintiffs sought to add a second recovery, for injuries to each other, in addition to recovery for injuries to themselves. Also, although the facts giving rise to defendants' liability for loss of consortium were related to the facts alleged in the original complaint, the facts measuring that liability were novel and were not asserted until the amendment (56 Cal. App. 3d 66, 77). Moreover, the amendment was not a mere change in legal theory, but the assertion of an entirely different cause of action based on violation of a different primary right, the right to be free of loss of consortium due to a tortious injury of a spouse, as opposed to the right to be free of tortious personal injury to oneself (56 Cal. App. 3d 66, 78, 80). The severable and independent nature of those rights was not changed by the fortuitous fact that they were both violated by the same tortious act, and assertion of one within the statutory period did not excuse failure to assert the other (56 Cal. App. 3d 66, 80).

[b] New Party Enforcing Independent Right

In Dubbers v. Goux (1875) 51 Cal. 153 , plaintiff moved to substitute his wife as plaintiff based on an affidavit that she had been the real party in interest when the action was commenced. The court granted the motion, and the defendant ultimately appealed from a judgment recovered by the substituted plaintiff, arguing that Code Civ. Proc. § 473 did not allow amendment to substitute a party who has a cause of action for a party who never had a cause of action.

The Supreme Court reversed, noting that there was no contention that plaintiff wife had succeeded to any interest of her husband pending the action or that she had any joint interest with him in the subject matter. The Court found that she was substituted because she was the sole party in interest at the time the action had commenced, so that, in effect, she was permitted to prosecute a new suit, for another cause of action, by merely being substituted as sole plaintiff in the former action. The Court held that Code Civ. Proc. § 473 did not authorize such an amendment, and that the trial court had erred in allowing the substitution (51 Cal. 153, 154-155).

In Diliberti v. Stage Call Corp. (1992) 4 Cal. App. 4th 1468, 6 Cal. Rptr. 2d 563 , sisters were involved in an automobile accident as driver and passenger. The driver was not injured, but the passenger was. The action, however, was mistakenly filed in the name of the driver against the driver of the other car alleging personal injury and not even mentioning that there was a passenger. After the statute of limitations had run, the error was discovered, and plaintiff's counsel moved to amend the complaint to substitute the injured passenger for the uninjured plaintiff driver. The motion was denied, and plaintiff appealed.

The issue on appeal was whether the substitution could be made after the statute of limitations had run. The court noted that it would have no trouble permitting the substitution if the original complaint sounded as a claim for a passenger. Changing the caption would be nothing more than correcting an obvious mistake in form. However, the issue turned on whether the mistake was a merely a misnomer in the description of a party or a substitution or entire change of parties. In determining whether the amendment will relate back to avoid the statute of limitations, the focus is not on whether the parties substantively changed but on whether the nature of the action is substantially changed (4 Cal. App. 4th 1468, 1470). The court cited Bartalo v. Superior Court (1975) 51 Cal. App. 3d 526, 124 Cal. Rptr. 370 (discussed in § 16.53[4][b]) for the proposition that where an additional party plaintiff joining in a suit seeks to enforce an independent right, the amended pleading does not relate back to allow the substitution. The court found the situation in this case to be identical to Bartalo except that sisters were involved rather than husband and wife and affirmed denial of the motion (4 Cal. App. 4th 1468, 1471-1472).

[c] Different Instrumentality

The original complaint in Coronet Manufacturing Co. v. Superior Court (1979) 90 Cal. App. 3d 342, 153 Cal. Rptr. 366 , an action for wrongful death, alleged that plaintiffs' daughter was electrocuted while using a defective electric hair dryer manufactured by the named defendant. Several "Does" were included as defendants, and the complaint alleged that all defendants supplied parts for the hair dryer. After the statute of limitations had run, plaintiffs filed their second amended complaint substituting another manufacturer for one of the "Does," dropping the original named defendant from the suit, and adding an allegation that the defendants manufactured and supplied component parts for a table lamp. The court overruled defendant's demurrer to the second amended complaint, and defendant petitioned for a writ of mandate to compel the trial court to enter an order sustaining the demurrer.

The issue on appeal was whether the amended complaint related back to the filing of the original complaint to avoid the bar of the statute of limitations. The court of appeal stated the rule to be that an amended complaint will relate back if it rests on the same general set of facts as the original complaint and refers to the same action and the same injuries referred to in the original complaint, even though it may rest on a different legal theory or state a different cause of action (90 Cal. App. 3d 342, 345). Reviewing prior California law, the court reasoned that amendments relate back when they are based on the same accident without change in the offending instrumentality, and that the amendment to change the instrumentality in question from a hair dryer to a lamp was distinguishable (90 Cal. App. 3d 342, 345-347). While both complaints related to death by electrocution at the same location, the original complaint involved one accident with one instrumentality, a hair dryer, and the second amended complaint related another accident involving a different instrumentality, a lamp (90 Cal. App. 3d 342, 347). Concluding that the second amended complaint did not relate back, the court ordered the writ of mandate to issue, but also ordered that plaintiffs be given the opportunity to further amend because, if they could plead that the hair dryer was connected to the lamp switch and socket, the complaints would relate to the same accident, use of the hair dryer, and the second amended complaint would relate back (90 Cal. App. 3d 342, 347-348).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] No Amendment to State Entirely New Cause of Action Barred by Statute of Limitations

In County of Santa Clara v. Atlantic Richfield Co. (2006) 137 Cal. App. 4th 292, 40 Cal. Rptr. 3d 313 , a group of governmental entities in a class action suit against lead manufacturers sought leave to file an amended complaint adding a cause of action for continuing trespass. The trial court denied leave on the ground that the proposed allegations did not state a cause of action. The court of appeal affirmed, holding that there was no cause of action for trespass in this instance because the pleadings clearly established that the lead was placed on plaintiffs' property either by the plaintiffs or with their consent. Where the owner has consented to the entry of the product onto the land there can be no cause of action for trespass. The court of appeal held that the trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying leave to file an amended pleading adding the proposed trespass cause of action because the proposed allegations did not, in fact, state a trespass cause of action (137 Cal. App. 4th 292, 314-316) .

In Boyle v. City of Redondo Beach (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 1109, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 164 , the appellate court affirmed a judgment in respect to the trial court having sustained demurrers without leave to amend as to plaintiff's first amended complaint with regard to alleged violations of the open meeting requirements of the Brown Act (Gov. Code § 54950 et seq.) concerning a particular meeting because the appropriate limitations period had expired. In reaching this conclusion, the court noted that an amended complaint relates back to the original complaint and avoids the statute of limitations as a bar only if it (1) rests on the same set of general facts as the original complaint, and (2) refers to the same accident and same injuries as the original complaint (70 Cal. App. 4th 1109, 1119). At the same time, the court reversed the judgment as to the award of attorney fees and remanded to the trial court to make appropriate findings.

In Andalon v. Superior Court (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 600, 208 Cal. Rptr. 899 , plaintiff sought to amend her complaint for negligent infliction of emotional distress because of the failure to detect or properly apprise her of the possibility of a genetic defect in her unborn child to include a cause of action for negligent infliction of bodily injury by medical treatment. The court of appeal held the proposed amendment to be barred by statute of limitations, since it found the general set of facts underlying the cause of action in the original complaint to be distinct from those underlying the proposed amendment, and the instrumentality of causation of bodily injury to be different in each cause of action (162 Cal. App. 3d 600, 616).

The first amended complaint in Warden v. Kahn (1979) 99 Cal. App. 3d 805, 160 Cal. Rptr. 471 , alleged violation of the Invasion of Privacy Act of 1967 [Penal Code § 630 et seq.] based on the secret recording of plaintiff's telephone conversations by one defendant who shared the recordings with the other defendants so that one of the defendants could present fraudulent claims against plaintiff and extort settlements and monetary concessions from plaintiff. After a demurrer to that complaint was sustained with leave to amend and one of the defendants filed a motion for summary judgment and judgment on the pleadings, plaintiff filed a second amended complaint alleging extensive factual matters unrelated to the first amended complaint, and asserting many additional theories and causes of action based on conspiracy, including fraud, deceit, defamation, malicious prosecution, intentional interference with contracts and business relations, and intentional infliction of severe emotional distress. The allegations regarding the recorded telephone conversations were alleged in the second amended complaint as one of the many overt acts which ripened into the conspiracy. The trial court granted a motion to strike the second amended complaint made on the ground that, except for the allegations concerning the recordings, the complaint set up wholly different causes of action. Plaintiff appealed from the ensuing judgment of dismissal.

The court of appeal affirmed the dismissal of the second amended complaint. The court noted that while the first amended complaint was founded solely on violation of the Invasion of Privacy Act, the second amended complaint alleged entirely new causes of action, alleging violation of an entirely different primary right, and was based on an entirely different set of facts (99 Cal. App. 3d 805, 809-810). The court, acknowledging the general rule allowing great liberality in the amendment of pleadings, held that the law is settled that a party may not file an amended complaint which states such an entirely new and different cause of action (99 Cal. App. 3d 805, 810).

Coronet Manufacturing Co. v. Superior Court (1979) 90 Cal. App. 3d 342, 153 Cal. Rptr. 366 , is discussed in § 16.53[3][c].

In Youngblood v. Los Angeles (1958) 160 Cal. App. 2d 481, 325 P.2d 587 , plaintiff brought suit against the city and the county flood control district complaining of removal of a tree during a storm which allowed flood waters to erode his land. The trial court granted a nonsuit after denying plaintiff's motion to amend the complaint to conform to proof. The court of appeal, after reversing and holding that the amendment should have been allowed as to the flood control district [see discussion in § 16.37[4][a]], affirmed as to the city. The court held that the proposed amendment, basing the city's liability for the erosion damage on a statutory obligation relating to the construction and maintenance of a defective and dangerous bridge, when the original complaint had charged the city with, if anything, violation of a common law obligation related to the tree removal, was not merely a change in theory, but constituted the introduction of an entirely different and new cause of action because it was based on a new and different obligation. Thus, the trial court had not erred in denying amendment of the complaint as to the city (160 Cal. App. 2d 481, 491-492).

In Taliaferro v. Industrial Ind. Co. (1955) 131 Cal. App. 2d 120, 280 P.2d 114 , plaintiff's original complaint sought to enjoin defendant from commencing a threatened action at law to collect a premium charge which defendant claimed to be due and owing. After a demurrer to this complaint was sustained, plaintiff filed an amended complaint containing the same allegations and additionally alleging that defendant had overcharged plaintiff for seven years. A demurrer to the amended complaint was sustained without leave to amend and plaintiff appealed, contending that it was error to sustain the demurrer without leave to amend because the complaint could be amended to state a cause of action. The court rejected this contention in regard to plaintiff's attempt to enjoin defendant's threatened suit (131 Cal. App. 2d 120, 122). The court then went on to reject the argument that the allegations of past overcharges made the action necessary to prevent a multiplicity of actions, holding that the allegations of money due for past overcharges were completely foreign to the cause of action attempted to be stated in the original complaint and that a trial court does not abuse its discretion in denying leave to amend a complaint to state an entirely different cause of action from that originally pleaded (131 Cal. App. 2d 120, 122-123).

Plaintiffs in Lewis & Queen v. S. Edmondson & Sons (1952) 113 Cal. App. 2d 705, 248 P.2d 973 , recovered judgment against defendants on a labor and material bond, and one of defendants' contentions on appeal was that the trial court had abused its discretion in denying defendants' motion to file an amendment to their answer to assert a counterclaim on the day the case was called for trial. The counterclaim was an alleged claim on an open book account for work, labor, services, and rental rendered and delivered by defendants to plaintiffs. The court of appeal held that the trial court had not abused its discretion because, in part, a party should not be permitted an amendment that raises a new cause of action or a new defense, and defendants had attempted to inject new issues into the action at the time of trial (113 Cal. App. 2d 705, 710-711).

[b] New Party Enforcing Independent Right

Bartalo v. Superior Court (1975) 51 Cal. App. 3d 526, 124 Cal. Rptr. 370 , was an action for personal injury resulting from an accident. After suit was filed and over a year after the accident, the California Supreme Court first recognized a cause of action for loss of consortium. Plaintiff and her husband thereafter successfully moved to file an amended complaint adding the husband as plaintiff with a cause of action for loss of consortium. Defendant's demurrer to the new cause of action in the amended complaint was denied, and defendant petitioned for a writ of mandate to compel the trial court to sustain the demurrer.

The court of appeal reversed. The court applied Austin v. Massachusetts Bonding & Ins. Co. (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 596, 600-601, 15 Cal. Rptr. 817, 364 P.2d 681 (discussed in § 16.37[4][a]), as to when an amended complaint will relate back to the filing of the original complaint to avoid the statute of limitations. The court reasoned that the husband's loss of consortium was a wholly different legal liability or obligation from his wife's claim for personal injuries because the elements of the loss were personal to him (51 Cal. App. 3d 526, 533). The court stated the general rule that if an additional plaintiff joins in a suit to enforce an independent right after the statute of limitations has run, the complaint does not relate back (51 Cal. App. 3d 526, 533). The court also distinguished cases such as Cal. Gas. Retailers v. Regal Petroleum Corp. (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 844, 330 P.2d 778 , and Klopstock v. Superior Court (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 13, 108 P.2d 906 (discussed in § 16.42[3][b]), which allow substitution of a different plaintiff to correct a technical defect in plaintiff's status, to join a necessary party, or to substitute the real party in interest for a nominal plaintiff. The court held that an amendment to add a new and additional party seeking damages not previously pleaded on a different obligation after the statue of limitations had run did not fall into any of these categories (51 Cal. App. 3d 526, 534).

In Dominguez v. Alhambra (1981) 118 Cal. App. 3d 237, 173 Cal. Rptr. 345 , plaintiff, individually and as guardian ad litem of her children, sued for the wrongful death of her husband, who died as a result of injuries sustained in a vehicle accident. After the statute of limitations had run, plaintiff moved to amend the complaint to assert a claim, as administratrix of decedent's estate, for a survival cause of action for damages incurred by decedent prior to his death. The defendants included governmental entities and private parties. The trial court denied plaintiff's motion to amend as to the governmental entities, and after allowing the amended pleading to be filed as to the private parties, sustained their demurrer to it on the ground that it was barred by the statute of limitations. Plaintiff appealed from the adverse orders.

The court of appeal ruled that the order denying the motion to amend operated as a final judgment against plaintiff, as administratrix, in regard to the governmental entities. As to the private parties, the court ordered the trial court to enter, nunc pro tunc as of the date of the order sustaining the demurrer, a judgment on the order sustaining the demurrer, and proceeded to consider the matter as an appeal from that judgment (118 Cal. App. 3d 237, 241-242). The court found that the amended complaint was not timely filed with regard to either category of defendants and held that the amendment did not relate back to the date of filing the original complaint so as to avoid the statute of limitations. The court distinguished prior California cases that allow amended complaints to relate back when the amendment merely identifies a defendant previously designated as a Doe defendant, or makes a technical change in the capacity in which the plaintiff sues on the same cause of action, or adds a new cause of action asserted by the same plaintiff on the same general set of facts. The court found that the survival cause of action, which could have been brought by decedent in his lifetime, was wholly different from the decedent's heir's cause of action for wrongful death. The court thus held that the amended complaint sought to enforce an independent right of an independent entity, the decedent's estate, and that it could not relate back to the filing of the heir's action for wrongful death. The court therefore affirmed the order denying plaintiff's motion to amend and the judgment entered on the demurrer (118 Cal. App. 3d 237, 242-245).

Plaintiff in Phoenix of Hartford Ins. Companies v. Colony Kitchens (1976) 57 Cal. App. 3d 140, 128 Cal. Rptr. 893 , sued for damages arising out of an automobile accident. Defendant asserted the bar of the statute of limitations as to the claim for personal injuries, and defendant's motion for judgment on the pleadings was granted with leave to amend. An amended complaint was filed adding plaintiff's insurer as a party plaintiff "by and through its assured, [the original plaintiff]." The insurer sought recovery of the amount it had paid plaintiff for his injuries, based on a statutory right of subrogation applicable to insurers that pay on uninsured motorist claims and that provided a longer period of limitations. Defendant appealed from an adverse judgment on the amended complaint.

The court of appeal reversed as to the insurer holding that the amended complaint did not relate back to the date of filing the original complaint under the same general set of facts rule stated in Grudt v. City of Los Angeles (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 575, 86 Cal. Rptr. 465, 468 P.2d 825 , and Austin v. Massachusetts Bonding & Insurance Co. (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 596, 15 Cal. Rptr. 817, 364 P.2d 681 . The court held that the recovery sought by the original plaintiff was based on a set of facts supporting an action in tort under common law, which accrued as a cause of action when plaintiff was injured by defendant's negligence, while the recovery sought by the amended complaint was based on a set of facts supporting an action on subrogated rights provided by a statute and accruing only when the insurer paid its insured under the uninsured motorist provision in its policy (57 Cal. App. 3d 140, 145-146). The court further held that the doctrine of relation-back does not apply when the cause of action in the complaint is in favor of one plaintiff and the cause of action in the amended complaint is in favor of another plaintiff, referring to Dubbers v. Goux (1875) 51 Cal. 153, 154 , discussed in § 16.53[3][b].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 16 AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
PART II. FORMS
A. Amended Pleadings

1-16 California Points & Authorities § 16.54

§ 16.54 Opposing Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--Complaint--Addition of Party Defendant After Statute of Limitations Has Run

[1] FORM Opposing Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--Complaint--Addition of Party Defendant After Statute of Limitations Has Run

[The following should be combined with a general form of memorandum in opposition to a motion for leave to file an amended pleading or an amendment to a pleading (see § 16.45) or to amend to conform to proof (see § 16.46).]

THE COURT SHOULD NOT ALLOW AMENDMENT OF THE COMPLAINT BECAUSE THE PROPOSED AMENDMENT WOULD ADD A NEW DEFENDANT TO THE SUIT AFTER THE STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS BARRED THE CAUSE OF ACTION.

A. No Amendment to Add New Party After Limitations Period Has Run. After the statute of limitations has run, amendment should not be permitted to add a party who, up to the time of the proposed amendment, was neither a named nor a fictitiously designated party to the proceeding (Ingram v. Superior Court (1979) 98 Cal. App. 3d 483, 492, 159 Cal. Rptr. 557).

[Optional] B. Amendment to Correct Characterization of Party's Capacity. Even though an amendment may be allowed to change the characterization of the defendant from an individual, partnership, or other association after the statute of limitations has run if there is merely a defect in the characterization, amendment should not be allowed if it constitutes a substitution or entire change of parties (Thompson v. Palmer Corp. (1956) 138 Cal. App. 2d 387, 390, 291 P.2d 995).

[Optional] C. Amendment to Deficient Initial Complaint For Purposes of Relation Back Doctrine. Amendment of a complaint for purposes of invoking the relation back doctrine when the statute of limitations has passed is impermissible if the initial complaint's pleadings are so deficient that the adversary is not informed of the factual basis of the claim (Davaloo v. State Farm Ins. Co. (2005) 135 Cal. App. 4th 409, 419, 37 Cal. Rptr. 3d 528).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a motion for leave to file an amended complaint or an amendment to a complaint that would add a new party defendant after the statute of limitations had run on the cause of action. It does not provide a complete memorandum but is designed to be combined with one of the general forms of memoranda of points and authorities opposing amendment of pleadings set out in §§ 16.45 and 16.46, as well as with forms relating to any other grounds that may exist for denying permission to amend the pleading [see §§ 16.47 -16.53].

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

This form may be used in opposition to a memorandum in support of a motion for leave to amend a pleading pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 473, or 576, or both sections, such as the one set out in § 16.40.

[i] Related Uses

With appropriate modifications, this points and authorities may be used to oppose a motion for leave to file an amended cross complaint or an amendment to a cross complaint.

[b] Related Points and Authorities

For a memorandum opposing a motion to bring in a new party on the ground that the person sought to be joined is not required to be joined as a party, see Ch. 168, Parties .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Amendment to Add New Party After Limitations Period Has Run

Plaintiff in Ingram v. Superior Court (1979) 98 Cal. App. 3d 483, 159 Cal. Rptr. 557 , brought suit for personal injuries he sustained in an automobile accident. The named defendants were the owner of the truck in which plaintiff was riding and the owner and driver of the car with which it collided. The complaint did not name the driver of the truck or his estate as a defendant, but did allege his negligence in regard to the accident. On learning that the insurance coverage of the truck owner was limited in cases of derivative liability, plaintiff acted to amend the complaint to bring in the truck driver's estate as a party. The court, which had allowed the amendment after the statute of limitations had run, subsequently granted a motion to strike the amendment, and plaintiff petitioned for a writ of mandate.

The court of appeal denied the writ. Citing Stephens v. Berry (1967) 249 Cal. App. 2d 474, 57 Cal. Rptr. 505 , discussed in § 16.54[4][a] the court applied the straightforward rule that amendment after the statute of limitations has run will not be permitted to add a party who, up to the time of the proposed amendment, was neither a named nor fictitiously designated party to the proceeding. The court noted that the complaint and plaintiff's pretrial statement clearly raised the issue of the truck driver's negligence in order to establish the truck owner's liability and not the driver's liability. Thus, the amendment, sought after plaintiff learned of the limitation on the owner's insurance coverage, was not one calculated to correct a clearly defined or obvious error of omission, as would be the case of a misnomer of a defendant (249 Cal. App. 2d 474, 492).

[b] Amendment to Correct Characterization of Party's Capacity

Thompson v. Palmer Corp. (1956) 138 Cal. App. 2d 387, 291 P.2d 995 , was an action for personal injuries brought against, inter alia, five individuals, doing business as Bob'N Del. After the statute of limitations had run, the court granted plaintiffs' motion for leave to file an amended complaint to allege the corporate existence and capacity of Bob'N Del and to allege the relationship of the individual defendants to the corporation. The corporation, however, objected to the introduction of any evidence against it on the ground that the statute of limitations barred any action against it, and the court sustained the objection and dismissed the action against the corporation. Plaintiffs appealed.

Affirming, the court of appeal rejected plaintiffs' contention that the amendment merely corrected a misnomer in the name of a party to the original complaint. The court stated the general rule providing that amendment is to be allowed to change the description or characterization of a party from an individual, partnership, or other association after the statute of limitations has run, if the misdescription or mischaracterization is merely a misnomer or defect in the description or characterization. Amendment is not to be allowed, however, if it constitutes a substitution or entire change of parties (138 Cal. App. 2d 387, 390). The court found that it was controlled by the reasoning in Craig v. San Fernando Furniture Co. (1928) 89 Cal. App. 167, 264 P 784 , which addressed the question of whether an amendment to change a defendant from a corporation to partnership of the same name and to designate the individual partners as defendants constituted a change in parties defendant (138 Cal. App. 2d 387, 391-392). The Thompson court noted that Craig held that changing the designation of the business from a corporation to a partnership did not constitute a change in the defendant entity, but that since an association of persons transacting business under a common name is a distinct entity from the individual persons who are its members, the amendment to add the individual partners as defendants constituted an attempt to add new parties that was barred by the statute of limitations (138 Cal. App. 2d 387, 392-394). Because the original complaint in Thompson had not named "Bob'N Del" as a defendant, but instead had correctly named individual defendants with the merely descriptive words "doing business as Bob'N Del," the court held that it was a case of attempting to add a new party after the statute of limitations had run. The court noted, however, that a different question would have been presented if Bob'N Del had been named as a defendant in the original complaint, but incorrectly describe as a partnership (138 Cal. App. 2d 387, 396).

A more liberal view toward allowing amendment to correct a misnomer which results in bringing in a new party may be taken if the case involves related entities with similar names [see Mayberry v. Coca Cola Bottling Co. of Sacramento (1966) 244 Cal. App. 2d 350, 53 Cal. Rptr. 317 (discussed in § 16.40[3][c]).

[c] Amendment to Deficient Initial Complaint For Purposes of Relation Back Doctrine

In Davaloo v. State Farm Ins. Co. (2005) 135 Cal. App. 4th 409, 37 Cal. Rptr. 3d 528 , the defendant insurance company demurred to the plaintiff's initial complaint seeking recovery of damages caused by the Northridge earthquake. The initial complaint was filed during the special time period under Code Civ. Proc. § 340.9 which revived certain time-barred claims for policy benefits against insurers for losses caused by the January 17, 1994 Northridge earthquake and provides a cause of action on such a claim may be commenced within one year of the statute's January 1, 2001 effective date. The trial court sustained the demurrer with leave to amend. The plaintiff subsequently filed an amended complaint after the expiration of the Code Civ. Proc. § 340.9 time period. The defendant subsequently demurred on the grounds the amended complaint was essentially the same complaint with the caption changed, and that both complaints did not meet the factual pleading requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 425.10(a)(1). The trial court sustained the demurrer with leave to amend, concluding the original complaint was so devoid of facts that it amounted to a sham complaint. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal upheld the order sustaining the demurrer with leave to amend. The court held the requirement that the complaint allege ultimate facts forming the basis for the plaintiff's cause of action is central to the relation-back doctrine and the determination whether an amended complaint should be deemed filed as of the date of the original pleading. An amended complaint relates back to a timely filed original complaint, and thus avoids the bar of the statute of limitations, only if it rests on the same general set of facts and refers to the same "offending instrumentalities," accident and injuries as the original complaint (135 Cal. App. 4th 409, 415). The relation-back doctrine, therefore, requires courts to compare the factual allegations in the original and amended complaints (135 Cal. App. 4th 409, 416). "Just as a plaintiff who changes the essential facts upon which recovery is sought is not entitled to the benefits of the relation-back doctrine, so too a plaintiff who files a complaint containing no operative facts at all cannot subsequently amend the pleading to allege facts and a theory of recovery for the first time and claim the amended complaint should be deemed filed as of the date of the original, wholly defective complaint: Going from nothing to something is as much at odds with the rationale for allowing an amended pleading to relate back to the filing of the original documents as changing from one set of facts to a different set" (135 Cal. App. 4th 409, 416). Other than in the caption, the original complaints do not name either of the plaintiffs or the defendant; do not identify the property at issue by address or otherwise, merely averring it is within California (not even Southern California); and do not provide the number of the applicable insurance policy, let alone describe its terms. The complaints contain a number of generic allegations describing the full range of improper actions any insurer theoretically could have taken in response to a claim for policy benefits for damages caused by the Northridge earthquake but give no specifics of any kind as to a dispute between the plaintiff's) specified in the caption and State Farm. Under the most liberal construction of the pleadings, the body of each of the original complaints alleged nothing more than the Northridge earthquake caused harm to a resident or residents of Los Angeles County. Such an allegation falls far short of apprising the defendant insurer of the factual basis of the claim (135 Cal. App. 4th 409, 417).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] No Amendment to Add New Party After Limitations Period Has Run

Stephens v. Berry (1967) 249 Cal. App. 2d 474, 57 Cal. Rptr. 505 , involved an action for damages arising out of a three-car accident. Plaintiffs' vehicle was struck in the rear by a Ford Falcon driven by one Berry. The impact propelled plaintiff's car into a DeSoto in front of them which was driven by one Reynolds. Subsequently, plaintiffs negotiated unsuccessfully with Berry's insurer for a settlement. When the negotiations proved fruitless, plaintiffs brought suit, but named Reynolds as defendant alleging that he struck them from the rear while driving his DeSoto. Over four months later, plaintiffs amended the complaint to allege that Reynolds rearended them with a Ford Falcon. Plaintiffs first served Berry as Doe I, after the statute of limitations had run. Berry moved to strike the complaint as to himself. Plaintiffs then served Berry as Doe II and as the person sued as Reynolds, and moved to amend the complaint to substitute Berry for Reynolds as defendant. The court granted Berry's motion to strike and denied plaintiff's motion to amend. Plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, rejecting plaintiffs' contention that they merely misnamed the proper defendant and that the court could correct this clerical error. The court recognized the power of courts to allow amendment to correct clerical error when misnomer is evident, but stressed the need to distinguish corrections of honest mistake in naming a party from the question of whether or not a claimed misnomer is a guise for adding a party to the suit for the first time (249 Cal. App. 2d 474, 478). The court followed the general rule that a party cannot be added to a suit by amendment after the statute of limitations has run because even if plaintiffs always had intended to sue Berry, the case was not one of misnomer, but of failure to name the right party as defendant, which falls within the general rule (249 Cal. App. 2d 474, 478-479).

Plaintiff in Chitwood v. Los Angeles County (1971) 14 Cal. App. 3d 522, 92 Cal. Rptr. 441 , brought suit for damages to plaintiff's property caused by construction of a pipe, on property maintained by defendant, which changed the natural flow of rainfall. After the statute of limitations had run, plaintiff learned that the property was owned by the Los Angeles County Flood Control District rather than by defendant, and sought to amend her complaint to substitute the Flood Control District for the defendant named in the complaint. Plaintiff's motion was denied, and summary judgment was granted to defendant. On plaintiff's appeal, the court of appeal held that amendment is not permitted after the statute of limitations has run to drop one party and add a new party who up to the time of amendment was not a party to the proceedings, citing Stephens v. Berry (1967) 249 Cal. App. 2d 474, 57 Cal. Rptr. 505 . The court added that the fact that the wrong party was named by honest mistake does not avoid that rule.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 16 AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
PART II. FORMS
A. Amended Pleadings

1-16 California Points & Authorities § 16.55

§ 16.55 Opposing Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--Answer--Inequitable Defense

[1] FORM Opposing Motion for Leave to File Amended Pleading or Amendment to Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(a), 576]--Answer--Inequitable Defense

[The following should be combined with a general form of memorandum of points and authorities in opposition to a motion for leave to file an amended pleading or an amendment to a pleading (see § 16.45).]

THE COURT SHOULD NOT ALLOW THE PROPOSED AMENDMENT OF THE ANSWER BECAUSE IT WOULD ASSERT A DEFENSE WHICH IS INEQUITABLE UNDER THE CIRCUMSTANCES OF THE CASE.

Inequitable Defense. Amendment should not be allowed to assert a defense which is inequitable under the circumstances of the case. It is not enough that the proposed defense be a legal defense, it must be an equitable defense as well (Bank of Woodland v. Heron (1898) 122 Cal. 107, 109, 54 P 537)

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose a motion for leave to file an amended answer or an amendment to an answer when it would be inequitable to allow assertion of the new defense contained in the amendment. It does not provide a complete memorandum but is designed to be combined with the general form of memorandum opposing amendment of pleadings set out in § 16.45, as well as with forms relating to any other grounds that may exist for denying permission to amend the answer [see §§ 16.47 -16.51].

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

This form may be used in opposition to a memorandum in support of a motion for leave to amend an answer to state a new defense pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 473, or 576, or both sections, such as the one set out in § 16.44.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Inequitable Defense

Bank of Woodland v. Heron (1898) 122 Cal. 107, 54 P 537 , is discussed in § 16.45[3][a]. In Bank of Woodland, the Supreme Court stated that a proposed new defense to be introduced by amendment of the answer must be equitable as well as legal. The Court noted that in the case before it, defendant wife had sought to assert a homestead on property she had received by gift from her husband and thereby to impair plaintiff bank's security interest in the property. The security interest was based on a mortgage executed by defendant husband prior to transfer of the land to defendant wife, and she had not filed her homestead claim until learning, during the course of the trial, that the mortgage had been improperly recorded. The Court held that the proposed defense was highly inequitable under the circumstances of the case, and stated that it would have been more inclined to hold that there had been an abuse of discretion if the trial court had allowed the amendment (122 Cal. 107, 109).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 16 AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
PART II. FORMS
A. Amended Pleadings

1-16 California Points & Authorities §§ 16.56-16.69

[Reserved]

§§ 16.56[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 16 AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
PART II. FORMS
B. Supplemental Pleadings

1-16 California Points & Authorities § 16.70

§ 16.70 Supporting Motion for Leave to File Supplemental Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 464(a)]--General Form

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Leave to File Supplemental Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 464(a)]--General Form

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	memorandum IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR vs.	)	LEAVE TO FILE SUPPLEMENTAL COMPLAINT
_____ [name],	)	Date: _____
Defendant.	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	Judge: _____
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
	)	Trial Date: _____

_____

THE COURT SHOULD LIBERALLY EXERCISE ITS DISCRETION TO ALLOW A SUPPLEMENTAL COMPLAINT ALLEGING MATERIAL FACTS OCCURRING AFTER THE ORIGINAL COMPLAINT WAS FILED.

A. Statutory Authority. The plaintiff may be allowed, on motion, to make a supplemental complaint alleging facts material to the case occurring after the former complaint (Code Civ. Proc. § 464(a)).

B. Discretion of Court. Permission to file a supplemental complaint is in the discretion of the trial court, provided it is in furtherance of and consistent with the original complaint and does not state a new or independent cause of action (Stephani v. Abbott (1934) 137 Cal. App. 510, 516, 30 P.2d 1033).

C. Liberal Allowance of Supplemental Pleadings. Trial courts should exercise liberality in permitting the filing of supplemental pleadings when the alleged after-occurring facts are pertinent (People ex rel. Dep't of Public Works v. Douglas (1971) 15 Cal. App. 3d 814, 820, 93 Cal. Rptr. 644). The policy of law is to generally permit the filing of supplemental pleadings (Louie Queriolo Trucking, Inc. v. Superior Court (1967) 252 Cal. App. 2d 194, 197, 60 Cal. Rptr. 389).

[Add, where appropriate, supporting points and authorities relating to any specific grounds for allowing the supplemental complaint to be filed (see §§ 16.71, 16.72)].

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be used in support of a motion for leave to file a supplemental complaint. It contains only general points and is designed to be used as a framework for a supporting memorandum. More specific points and authorities in support of filing a supplemental complaint on various grounds are set out in §§ 16.71 and 16.72 and should be combined with this form as relevant to the case.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities set out in §§ 16.76 -16.79 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose a motion for leave to file a supplemental pleading supported by this memorandum.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Discretion of Court

Plaintiff in Stephani v. Abbott (1934) 137 Cal. App. 510, 30 P.2d 1033 , brought suit to enjoin defendants from diverting waste or irrigation water over plaintiff's land and for damages. The trial court allowed a supplemental complaint to be filed over defendants' objection. The supplemental complaint alleged nine items of damage caused by flooding on later dates, sought an injunction, and set up a plea in bar based on a prior judgment. Defendants appealed from a judgment in plaintiff's favor.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that the trial court had not abused its discretion in allowing the supplemental complaint to be filed. The court stated that permission to file a supplemental complaint is in the discretion of the trial court, provided it is in furtherance of and consistent with the original complaint and is not a new or independent cause of action. The supplemental complaint was properly allowed because it recited further instances of trespasses similar to those originally alleged, so that both complaints showed invasion of plaintiff's right to the use of her property without interference from defendants and damages incidental to that invasion (137 Cal. App. 510, 516).

[b] Liberal Allowance of Supplemental Pleadings

In People ex rel. Dep't of Public Works v. Douglas (1971) 15 Cal. App. 3d 814, 93 Cal. Rptr. 644 , the state brought suit to condemn defendants' land for freeway purposes, and defendants answered claiming damages. About eight months after the answer was filed and four months before commencement of trial, the court denied defendants' motion for leave to file a supplemental answer. The supplemental answer alleged a settlement of the action and repudiation of the settlement by the state, all occurring after the original answer was filed. After judgment was entered on a jury verdict awarding defendants less compensation than had been provided for in the settlement, defendants appealed.

In reversing and holding that the trial court had committed prejudicial error in denying leave to file the supplemental answer, the court of appeal stated that a trial court should exercise liberality in permitting the filing of supplemental pleadings when the alleged after-occurring facts are pertinent. The court found the prejudicial nature of the error to be apparent since the ruling prevented defendants from first litigating an issue that might have been decisive, thereby obviating a long and costly trial relating to the value of the land (15 Cal. App. 3d 814, 820).

Louie Queriolo Trucking, Inc. v. Superior Court (1967) 252 Cal. App. 2d 194, 60 Cal. Rptr. 389 , arose out of an accident in which a truck driven by an employee of plaintiff fell into an excavation made by defendant in a highway. In its complaint for damages, plaintiff alleged that defendant was negligent in regard to the excavation and that plaintiff's employee was not contributorily negligent, while defendant denied negligence on its part and alleged that plaintiff's employee was contributorily negligent. Plaintiff moved to file a supplemental complaint alleging that the employee had recovered a judgment against defendant for injuries sustained in the accident in a suit in which the same issues were presented. After the court denied the motion, plaintiff sought a writ of mandate.

The court of appeal ordered the writ of mandate to issue (252 Cal. App. 2d 194, 200). Because a court may deny the right to file a supplemental pleading if the new matter in it fails, as a matter of law, to constitute a defense, the court assumed that the trial court had denied the motion, which would have presented a defense to the claim of contributory negligence, on the ground that plaintiff was not entitled to assert the prior judgment as a collateral estoppel (252 Cal. App. 2d 194, 198).

The court held, however, that plaintiff would be entitled to urge the alleged judgment as a collateral estoppel (252 Cal. App. 2d 194, 198-200). Thus, the court held that the trial court had abused its discretion in denying leave to file the supplemental complaint, stating that the attitude of California trial courts is that there should be great liberality in permitting adjustments to pleadings, if timely requested, and that the law's policy is generally to permit the filing of supplemental pleadings. The court cited Code Civ. Proc. § 464 and Blanchard v. Superior Court (1935) 5 Cal. App. 2d 115, 42 P.2d 689 (252 Cal. App. 2d 194, 197, 200).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 16 AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
PART II. FORMS
B. Supplemental Pleadings

1-16 California Points & Authorities § 16.71

§ 16.71 Supporting Motion for Leave to File Supplemental Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 464(a)]--To Recover Additional Relief Based on Same Issues

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Leave to File Supplemental Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 464(a)]--To Recover Additional Relief Based on Same Issues

[The following should be combined with a general form of points and authorities in support of a motion for leave to file a supplemental complaint (see § 16.70).]

THE COURT SHOULD ALLOW FILING OF THE SUPPLEMENTAL COMPLAINT TO CLAIM ADDITIONAL RELIEF BASED ON THE SAME ISSUES AS THE ORIGINAL COMPLAINT.

A. Additional Relief Based on Same Issues. When a party's right to additional relief depends on exactly the same issues as the right to recover under the original complaint, the court may allow a supplemental complaint to be filed to seek the additional relief even though, technically, new causes of action are added (Perkins v. Benguet Consol. Mining Co. (1942) 55 Cal. App. 2d 720, 772-774, 132 P.2d 70 ; Stephani v. Abbott (1934) 137 Cal. App. 510, 516, 30 P.2d 1033).

[Optional] B. Installments Accruing After Original Complaint. When a plaintiff's claim is for payments due in installments under a contract, the court should allow a supplemental complaint to be filed to recover installments accruing after the original complaint was filed and up to the date of trial to avoid a multiplicity of actions (Brix v. Peoples Mut. Life Ins. Co. (1935) 2 Cal. 2d 446, 455-457, 41 P.2d 537 ; Strickler Co. v. Eisner (1935) 5 Cal. App. 2d 441, 443-444, 42 P.2d 1065).

[Optional] C. After Appeal. A supplemental complaint may be allowed to claim payments accruing subsequent to the original complaint after remittitur from the appellate court (Davis v. Stewart (1944) 67 Cal. App. 2d 415, 419, 154 P.2d 447).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in support of a motion for leave to file a supplemental complaint that seeks to recover additional relief based on the same issues as the original complaint. It includes specific optional paragraphs for use if the case involves an installment contract (Paragraph B) or a supplemental complaint sought to be filed after remittitur from an appellate court (Paragraph C). This form does not provide a complete memorandum but is designed to be combined with the general form of memorandum supporting a motion to file a supplemental complaint set out in § 16.70, as well as with points and authorities relating to any other grounds that may exist for allowing the supplemental complaint to be filed [see, e.g., § 16.72].

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Award of Additional Relief Without Supplemental Complaint

Damages may be awarded, in a judicial proceeding, for detriment resulting after commencement of the proceeding [Civ. Code § 3283]. Under Civ. Code § 3283, no supplemental pleading is required to recover such damages [Hicks v. Drew (1897) 117 Cal. 305, 312, 49 P 189 ; see also Minor v. Minor (1960) 184 Cal. App. 2d 118, 127, 7 Cal. Rptr. 455] Civ. Code § 3283, however, simply refers to damages that may accrue in the future as the proximate result of the tort of breach of contract on which the action is based [Brix v. Peoples Mut. Life Ins. Co. (1935) 2 Cal. 2d 446, 452, 41 P.2d 537 (discussed in § 16.71[3][b])]. If new causes of action accrue after the complaint has been filed, but relief on the new causes of action depends on the same issues as are raised by the original complaint, a supplemental pleading may be filed [Brix v. Peoples Mut. Life Ins. Co. (1935) 2 Cal. 2d 446, 456-457, 41 P.2d 537 (additional breaches of installment contract); Stephani v. Abbott (1934) 137 Cal. App. 510, 516, 30 P.2d 1033 (additional trespasses, discussed in § 16.71[3][a])]. Note, however, that although installments accruing after commencement of the suit may be the subject of a supplemental complaint under Brix, above, it may not be necessary to file a supplemental complaint to recover later accruing installments in an action at law where the original complaint sought to recover an installment debt in its entirety, so as to include installments that had not matured when suit was commenced, if no plea in abatement was filed based on the prematurity of the action as to the unaccrued installments. In such a case, judgment may be rendered for all installments that have matured at the time of judgment [see Kelley v. Upshaw (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 179, 186-189, 246 P.2d 23 ; Minor v. Minor (1960) 184 Cal. App. 2d 118, 127, 7 Cal. Rptr. 455 ; Kazanteno v. Cal.-Western Etc. Ins. Co. (1955) 137 Cal. App. 2d 361, 377, 290 P.2d 332] .

A supplemental complaint is not necessary in equity because of the principle that a court of equity will make a final disposition of litigation governed by the circumstances as shown to exist at the time judgment is rendered rather than at the inception of the litigation [Kazanteno v. California-Western States Life Ins. Co. (1955) 137 Cal. App. 2d 361, 376, 290 P.2d 332] .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Additional Relief Based on Same Issues

Perkins v. Benguet Consol. Mining Co. (1942) 55 Cal. App. 2d 720, 132 P.2d 70 , involved a dispute over entitlement to dividends declared by defendant, a foreign business organization analogous to a corporation. The original complaint sought recovery of dividends declared in the seven years prior to the suit. Three supplemental complaints were filed seeking to recover dividends for additional years during the pendency of the suit. Defendant appealed from a judgment awarding plaintiff the dividends for the entire period covered by all the complaints.

Although reversing in part on other grounds, the court of appeal rejected defendant's contention that the supplemental complaints were erroneously allowed because they set up new causes of action as to each dividend sought. The court acknowledged the general rule that a supplemental complaint may not set up a new cause of action, but stated that the rule is not of inevitable application. The court noted that Code Civ. Proc. § 464 provides for setting up after-occurring facts that are material to the case. The court held that the "case" concerned plaintiff's ownership of the stock and her attendant right to dividends. The court concluded that the declaration of dividends after the filing of the original complaint was material to the case since plaintiff's right to dividends, whether declared before or after the original complaint, depended on the same issues. Thus, the court held that the trial court had not erred in allowing the supplemental complaints to be filed (55 Cal. App. 2d 720, 773-774).

Stephani v. Abbott (1934) 137 Cal. App. 510, 30 P.2d 1033 , is discussed in § 16.70[3][a].

[b] Installments Accruing After Original Complaint

Plaintiff insured in Brix v. Peoples Mut. Life Ins. Co. (1935) 2 Cal. 2d 446, 41 P.2d 537 , sued defendant insurer for unpaid disability benefits payable monthly under a contract of insurance. When suit was instituted only four payments were due to plaintiff, but at the conclusion of trial plaintiff moved for leave to file a supplemental complaint to conform to the evidence, which showed that by then 13 installments had accrued and were unpaid. The court never ruled on plaintiff's motion, but did enter judgment in plaintiff's favor awarding him the total sum of the 13 payments. Defendant appealed.

The Supreme Court affirmed, although modifying the judgment on other grounds. The Court held that the supplemental complaint could be filed nunc pro tunc as of the date of trial, and proceeded to consider the case as though it had been filed (2 Cal. 2d 446, 455-456). The Court then held that in an action to recover the amount due on an insurance policy, payable in installments, the plaintiff is entitled to recover all benefits that have accrued at the time the suit was filed and can file a supplemental complaint to include installments up to the date of filing the supplemental complaint (2 Cal. 2d 446, 456). The Court found that this rule was in harmony with the spirit of modern procedure which endeavors to provide for the settlement in a single action of all controversies between the parties growing out of the same subject matter (2 Cal. 2d 446, 457).

In Strickler Co. v. Eisner (1935) 5 Cal. App. 2d 441, 42 P.2d 1065 , a suit to recover unpaid installments of rent, the court allowed plaintiff to file a supplemental complaint to claim unpaid installments that accrued after the original complaint was filed. On defendant's appeal from a judgment in plaintiff's favor, defendant urged that the trial court had erred in allowing the supplemental complaint because it presented new causes of action accruing after filing of the original complaint. The court of appeal held, relying on out-of-state law, that when an installment contract is involved, installments that accrue after suit is filed may be covered by a supplemental pleading. The court indicated that adoption of the rule would tend to save a multiplicity of actions (5 Cal. App. 2d 441, 443-444).

[c] After Appeal

Davis v. Stewart (1944) 67 Cal. App. 2d 415, 154 P.2d 447 , involved, in part, an accounting for defendant's stewardship of real property. The case was appealed three times. After the remittitur went down from the second appeal, defendant surrendered possession of the premises. Plaintiff then filed a supplemental complaint for a final accounting of defendant's stewardship. The trial court made findings and entered an order favorable to plaintiff, and defendant prosecuted his third appeal. One of defendant's contentions was based on an argument that the prior judgment was interlocutory rather than final (67 Cal. App. 2d 415, 418). In rejecting this argument, the court of appeal reasoned that the account involved contracts that presented many severable issues, that the prior judgment was a final one, completely adjudicating all demands that were fully matured when the action was commenced, and that there was no way of knowing that there would be further issues to try until the supplemental complaint was filed. In the course of its reasoning, the court stated that after the remittitur went down, the plaintiff had the right to file the supplemental complaint presenting demands that accrued subsequent to the issues pleaded in the original complaint (67 Cal. App. 2d 415, 419).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 16 AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
PART II. FORMS
B. Supplemental Pleadings

1-16 California Points & Authorities § 16.72

§ 16.72 Supporting Motion for Leave to File Supplemental Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 464(a)]--Seeking Different Relief

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Leave to File Supplemental Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 464(a)]--Seeking Different Relief

[The following should be combined with a general form of points and authorities in support of a motion for leave to file a supplemental complaint (see§ 16.70).]

THE COURT SHOULD ALLOW THE SUPPLEMENTAL COMPLAINT TO BE FILED BECAUSE IT ONLY SEEKS DIFFERENT RELIEF.

Change in Relief Sought. The filing of a supplemental complaint may not be objected to on the ground that it requests different relief (Jacob v. Lorenz (1893) 98 Cal. 332, 338, 33 P 119 ; Jaffa v. Guttman (1959) 175 Cal. App. 2d 790, 798, 346 P.2d 876)

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in support of a motion for leave to file a supplemental complaint that seeks relief different from that sought in the original complaint. It does not provide a complete memorandum but is designed to be combined with the general form of memorandum supporting a motion to file a supplemental complaint set out in § 16.70, as well as with forms relating to any other grounds that may exist for allowing the supplemental complaint to be filed (see, e.g., § 16.71).

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Supplemental Pleading Not Necessary in Equity

A court of equity will make a final disposition of litigation governed by the circumstances as shown to exist at the time judgment is rendered rather than at the inception of the litigation, and a supplemental pleading is not necessary to that end [Schaefer v. Berinstein (1960) 180 Cal. App. 2d 107, 134, 4 Cal. Rptr. 236] . Thus, a trial court may make an award of damages that are purely incidental to the equitable relief originally sought even though no supplemental complaint was filed alleging the existence of facts occurring subsequent to the filing of the original complaint [Kazanteno v. Cal.-Western Etc. Ins. Co. (1955) 137 Cal. App. 2d 361, 377, 290 P.2d 332] . Therefore, it is not necessary to use this form when the original complaint seeks equitable relief.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Change in Relief Sought

Plaintiff in Jacob v. Lorenz (1893) 98 Cal. 332, 33 P 119 , initiated suit to enjoin defendants from washing away a ditch owned by plaintiff. After defendants answered, alleging that they had destroyed part of the ditch since the complaint had been filed, the court allowed plaintiff to file a supplemental complaint alleging the partial destruction of the ditch and praying for damages and an injunction restraining further injury to the ditch. The court denied defendants' motion to strike the supplemental complaint, and defendants appealed from a judgment in plaintiff's favor.

The Supreme Court affirmed. The Court recognized that a supplemental complaint must have reference to matters which may be consistent with and in aid of the case made by the original complaint, and that it cannot substitute a new and independent cause of action for that alleged in the original complaint. The Court found, however, that the trial court had not violated any of these limitations on its discretionary power to allow the filing of supplemental complaints (98 Cal. 332, 337). The Court reasoned that the subject of the action was plaintiff's property and right to convey water in his ditch, a right that was not destroyed and was still the subject of litigation. The claim for damages was incident to that right and consistent with it, rather than being an independent cause of action. The Court also noted that it was defendants' own act that made the different or additional relief necessary. Holding that it is no objection to a supplemental complaint that different or additional relief is asked for, and that the object of the supplemental complaint is to obtain additional or different relief without resort to a new trial, the Court held that the trial court had properly denied defendants' motion to strike the supplemental complaint (98 Cal. 332, 338).

In Jaffa v. Guttman (1959) 175 Cal. App. 2d 790, 346 P.2d 876 , plaintiff's amended complaint sought specific performance of a contract for joint purchase of certain real estate and for imposition of constructive and resulting trusts on the property. In a supplement to the amended complaint, plaintiff alleged that the property had been lost to the parties by foreclosure of a trust deed executed by defendant, and prayed for rescission of the contract, an equitable lien on excess funds realized on the foreclosure sale, and recovery of funds spent on taxes and improvements. The court denied defendant's motion to strike the supplemental complaint, and after trial, rendered judgment for plaintiff. Defendant appealed.

Affirming, the court of appeal held that the trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion to strike the supplement to the complaint. The court held that it is no objection to a supplemental complaint that different relief is asked for, citing Jacob v. Lorenz (1893) 98 Cal. 332, 338, 33 P 119 , discussed above. The court noted that the foreclosure sale affected the rights plaintiff asserted in her amended complaint, and that she properly sought a monetary judgment against defendant secured by the surplus realized in the foreclosure proceedings (175 Cal. App. 2d 790, 798).

Counsel should note that in Vavuris v. Pinelli (1957) 147 Cal. App. 2d 390, 394, 305 P.2d 149 , the court of appeal stated, in dicta, that a supplemental complaint cannot be used by a plaintiff to change an election of remedies. In Vavuris, the original pleading had sought damages for breach of an oral agreement to execute a lease, while the proposed pleading sought damages on the theory that a new lease was in effect between the parties, and the court held that the denial of plaintiff's motion for leave to file the supplemental complaint was not prejudicial error because both theories turned on the existence of an agreement to execute a lease, which was found not to exist.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 16 AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
PART II. FORMS
B. Supplemental Pleadings

1-16 California Points & Authorities § 16.73

§ 16.73 Supporting Motion for Leave to File Supplemental Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 464(a)]--Substitute Personal Representative for Defendant in Pending Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 377.41]

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Leave to File Supplemental Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 464(a)]--Substitute Personal Representative for Defendant in Pending Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 377.41]

[Caption. See § 16.70.]

THE COURT SHOULD ALLOW PLAINTIFF TO FILE THE SUPPLEMENTAL COMPLAINT TO ALLEGE SUBSTITUTION OF DEFENDANT'S PERSONAL REPRESENTATIVE FOR DEFENDANT AND FILING OF A CREDITOR'S CLAIM.

A. Statutory Authority. [See § 16.70[1], Paragraph A.]

B. Substitution of Personal Representative. It is proper to file a supplemental complaint substituting a deceased defendant's personal representative for the defendant and alleging the filing of a creditor's claim (Clary v. Miller (1951) 101 Cal. App. 2d 790, 793, 226 P.2d 32)

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in support of a motion for leave to file a supplemental complaint substituting a personal representative for a defendant who has died and alleging that a claim has been filed in the probate proceeding.

The motion supported by this form would be made concurrently with a motion pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 377.41 to allow an action to be continued, after the death of a party, against the party's representative. For forms of memoranda relating to motions pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 377.41, see Ch. 10, Abatement and Survival of Actions in this set.

When a personal representative is substituted for a deceased plaintiff in a pending action, it is not necessary to file an amended or supplemental complaint. The order substituting the personal representative as a party is sufficient to continue the suit as the substitution involves no change in the defense [see Kittle v. Bellegarde (1890) 86 Cal. 556, 561-563, 25 P. 55]. It is logical that a supplemental complaint must be filed when a personal representative is substituted for a defendant, however, since the plaintiff must prove the filing of his or her claim with the court in order to recover against the decedent's estate [see Prob. Code § 9370; see also Prob. Code § 9150(b)].

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a form of notice of motion for an order substituting a personal representative for a defendant, a form of declaration in support of the motion, and a form of a supplemental complaint for such use, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 454, Probate: Claims Against the Estate (Matthew Bender). Additional forms of notice of motion for an order substituting a personal representative for a defendant and supporting declaration appear in California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 21, Amended and Supplemental Pleadings (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to motions for the substitution of a personal representative for a defendant, see Ch. 10, Abatement and Survival of Actions .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Substitution of Personal Representative

In Clary v. Miller (1951) 101 Cal. App. 2d 790, 226 P.2d 32 , an action to recover money and interest due on a loan, defendant died after filing an answer but before trial. A personal representative was appointed and plaintiff duly presented a creditor's claim to her. When the claim was not allowed, plaintiff moved to revive and continue the action against the personal representative and for leave to file a supplemental complaint naming the representative as a party defendant. The motion was granted, and after trial, judgment was entered in plaintiff's favor. On appeal, defendant contended that the supplemental complaint did not state a cause of action against the personal representative. The court of appeal rejected that contention, stating that it is proper to file a supplemental complaint substituting a personal representative as a party defendant and alleging presentation of a creditor's claim to the personal representative (101 Cal. App. 2d 790, 793).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 16 AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
PART II. FORMS
B. Supplemental Pleadings

1-16 California Points & Authorities § 16.74

§ 16.74 Supporting Motion for Leave to File Supplemental Answer [Code Civ. Proc. § 464(a)]--General Form

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Leave to File Supplemental Answer [Code Civ. Proc. § 464(a)]--General Form

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)
Plaintiff,	)
	)	NO. _____
vs.	)	memorandum IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR
_____ [name],	)	LEAVE TO FILE SUPPLEMENTAL ANSWER
Defendant.	)	[Code Civ. Proc. § 464]
	)
	)

_____

THE COURT SHOULD LIBERALLY EXERCISE ITS DISCRETION TO ALLOW A SUPPLEMENTAL ANSWER ALLEGING MATERIAL FACTS OCCURRING AFTER THE ORIGINAL ANSWER WAS FILED.

A. Statutory Authority. The defendant may be allowed, on motion, to make a supplemental answer, alleging facts material to the case occurring after the former answer (Code Civ. Proc. § 464)

B. Liberal Allowance of Supplemental Pleadings. [See § 16.70[1], Paragraph C.]

C. Occurrences Material to Defense. A court may allow a defendant to file a supplemental answer alleging occurrences which are material to the defense and which happened after the commencement of the action and prior to judgment (Security-First Nat'l Bank v. Hauer (1941) 47 Cal. App. 2d 302, 307, 117 P.2d 952).

[Add, where appropriate, supporting points and authorities relating to any specific grounds for allowing the supplemental answer to be filed (see e.g., § 16.75)].

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be used in support of a motion for leave to file a supplemental complaint. It contains only general points and is designed to be used as a framework for a supporting memorandum. More specific points and authorities in support of filing a supplemental answer on various grounds are set out in § 16.75 and should be combined with this form as relevant to the case.

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities set out in §§ 16.76, 16.80 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose a motion for leave to file a supplemental answer supported by this memorandum.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Occurrences Material to Defense

Plaintiff in Security-First Nat'l Bank v. Hauer (1941) 47 Cal. App. 2d 302, 117 P.2d 952 , brought an action to recover the proceeds of the sale of crops that secured the purchase price of agricultural land plaintiff had sold to defendant. Summary judgment was ordered in plaintiff's favor, but before judgment became final, plaintiff mailed defendant notice of forfeiture of all of defendant's interest under the sales agreement. Defendant received the notice on the day the judgment was entered and promptly moved to set aside the judgment on the ground of fraud. Plaintiff appealed from the order granting defendant's motion.

The court of appeal affirmed the order because the remedies of forfeiture and an action for the purchase price are inconsistent remedies, the choice of one precluding the right to exercise the other (47 Cal. App. 2d 302, 305-307). The court also held, citing Code Civ. Proc. § 464, that the trial court did not err in permitting defendant to file a supplemental answer alleging occurrences which were material to the defense and happened after the action was commenced and prior to judgment (47 Cal. App. 2d 302, 307).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 16 AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
PART II. FORMS
B. Supplemental Pleadings

1-16 California Points & Authorities § 16.75

§ 16.75 Supporting Motion for Leave to File Supplemental Answer [Code Civ. Proc. § 464(a)]--Defense Arising After Filing of Original Answer

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Leave to File Supplemental Answer [Code Civ. Proc. § 464(a)]--Defense Arising After Filing of Original Answer

[The following should be combined, where appropriate, with a general form of points and authorities in support of a motion for leave to file a supplemental answer (see § 16.74).]

THE COURT SHOULD ALLOW FILING OF THE SUPPLEMENTAL ANSWER BECAUSE IT ALLEGES A DEFENSE THAT AROSE AFTER THE ORIGINAL ANSWER WAS FILED.

A. Assertion of New Defense. A defense arising after the original answer was filed may be presented by supplemental answer (People ex rel. Dep't of Public Works v. Douglas (1971) 15 Cal. App. 3d 814, 819, 93 Cal. Rptr. 644)

[Optional] B. Discharge in Bankruptcy. A defendant should be granted leave to file a supplemental answer to set up a discharge in bankruptcy obtained subsequent to the commencement of the action, when the motion to file the supplemental answer is made within a reasonable time after obtaining the discharge (Jensen v. Dorr (1911) 159 Cal. 742, 748, 116 P 553).

[Optional] C. Res Judicata. A court may allow a defendant to file a supplemental answer to set up the defense of res judicata by pleading a judgment rendered after the suit was commenced (Keech v. Beatty (1899) 127 Cal. 177, 181-182, 59 P. 837)

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be used in support of a motion for leave to file a supplemental answer alleging a defense that arose after the original answer was filed. It does not provide a complete memorandum but is designed to be combined with the general form of memorandum supporting a motion to file a supplemental answer set out in § 16.74.

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Assertion of New Defense

The facts and procedural background of People ex rel. Dep't of Public Works v. Douglas (1971) 15 Cal. App. 3d 814, 93 Cal. Rptr. 644 , are discussed in § 16.70[3][b]. There, the court of appeal reversed, holding that denial of leave to file a supplemental answer that alleged the making and repudiation by plaintiff of a settlement after filing of the original answer constituted prejudicial error. The court stated, citing Code Civ. Proc. § 464 and Faye v. Feldman (1954) 128 Cal. App. 2d 319, 325-326, 275 P.2d 121 (also involving a settlement), that a defense arising after the original answer was filed is properly presented by supplemental answer (15 Cal. App. 3d 814, 819) .

[b] Discharge in Bankruptcy

In Jensen v. Dorr (1911) 159 Cal. 742, 116 P 553 , plaintiff sued for services and material furnished at defendant's request. After the suit had been commenced, defendant obtained a discharge in bankruptcy. Defendant asked leave to file a supplemental answer setting up the discharge in bankruptcy as a defense against his personal liability for the debts which plaintiff had sued on, but the court denied leave and ultimately gave a personal judgment against defendant for the full amount of plaintiff's claims. Defendant appealed, and the court of appeal held that the denial of leave to file the supplemental answer constituted prejudicial error. The court stated that it cannot be doubted that it is an abuse of discretion for a trial court to refuse leave to a defendant to set up by supplemental answer a discharge in bankruptcy obtained after the action was commenced, when proper application to supplement is made within a reasonable time after obtaining the discharge (159 Cal. 742, 748).

[c] Res Judicata

Plaintiff in Keech v. Beatty (1899) 127 Cal. 177, 59 P. 837 , sued defendants to recover specific personal property or its value. After the suit was commenced, a judgment was entered in another action in favor of defendants against the same plaintiff, who had sued in the same capacity for the same property on the same grounds, but in another county. Defendants were allowed by leave of court to file supplemental answers setting up the judgment in the other county by way of plea in bar. Judgment was subsequently entered in defendants' favor, and plaintiff appealed. The Supreme Court affirmed, holding that the trial court had properly allowed filing of the supplemental answers (127 Cal. 177, 182).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Res Judicata

In Johnston, Baker & Palmer v. Record Mach. & Tool Co. (1960) 183 Cal. App. 2d 200, 6 Cal. Rptr. 847 , defendant appealed from an order entering judgment nunc pro tunc as of the date a settlement agreement was stipulated to in open court. The judgment dismissed both plaintiffs' action and defendant's cross complaints with prejudice. On his appeal, defendant urged, inter alia, that there was not a sufficient showing to justify entry of the order nunc pro tunc, and that such entry was prejudicial because it would bar him from proceeding with a new action that he had instituted. The court, however, held that defendant could not establish prejudicial error because plaintiffs were, in any event, entitled to entry of the judgment as of the time it was actually entered, and that judgment, if not final when plaintiffs had to file their answer as defendants in the new action, could have been pleaded as a defense to the new action in the nature of res judicata by a supplemental answer after it had become final (183 Cal. App. 2d 200, 211).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 16 AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
PART II. FORMS
B. Supplemental Pleadings

1-16 California Points & Authorities § 16.76

§ 16.76 Opposing Motion for Leave to File Supplemental Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. § 464(a)]--Matters Not Occurring Between Original Pleading and Judgment

[1] FORM Opposing Motion for Leave to File Supplemental Pleading [Code Civ. Proc. § 464(a)]--Matters Not Occurring Between Original Pleading and Judgment

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)
Plaintiff,	)
vs.	)	NO. _____
	)	memorandum IN OPPOSITION TO MOTION FOR
_____ [name],	)	LEAVE TO FILE SUPPLEMENTAL Defendant.	)	_____ [COMPLAINT or AN-)	SWER]
	)	[Code Civ. Proc. § 464]

_____

THE COURT SHOULD NOT ALLOW THE SUPPLEMENTAL _____ [COMPLAINT or ANSWER] TO BE FILED BECAUSE IT DOES NOT RELATE TO MATTERS OCCURRING AFTER THE ORIGINAL _____ [COMPLAINT or ANSWER] WAS FILED.

A. Statutory Authority. A supplemental complaint or answer may only allege facts which are material to the case and occurring after the former complaint or answer (see Code Civ. Proc. § 464).

B. Matters Occurring Before Original Pleading or After Judgment. The function of a supplemental complaint is to present facts material to the case occurring after the former complaint, and the right to file a supplemental complaint can only be exercised with reference to matters that occurred between the time of filing the original complaint and the trial or judgment in the action (Gleason v. Gleason (1880) 54 Cal. 135, 136 ; Erickson v. Boothe (1954) 127 Cal. App. 2d 644, 647, 274 P.2d 460). [If form used in opposition to motion to file supplemental answer, add: Since Section 464 of the Code of Civil Procedure contains the same requirements for supplemental answers as for supplemental complaints, this rule would apply to the right to file a supplemental answer as well].

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be used in opposition to a motion for leave to file a supplemental pleading on the ground that the proposed supplement does not relate to matters occurring between the time the prior pleading was filed and the time judgment was entered. If the memorandum is being submitted in opposition to a motion for leave to file a supplemental answer, the bracketed material in Paragraph B of the form should be included.

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

This form may be used in opposition to a memorandum in support of a motion for leave to file a supplemental pleading pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 464 such as the ones set out in §§ 16.70 and 16.74.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Matters Occurring Before Original Pleading or After Judgment

In Gleason v. Gleason (1880) 54 Cal. 135 , plaintiff moved to file a supplemental complaint several months after a decree had been rendered dissolving plaintiff's marriage to defendant. The supplemental complaint involved a dispute over the title to property acquired by defendant, allegedly in trust for plaintiff, pursuant to a contract made when the parties were married. Defendant did not, however, acquire title to the property until after the prior judgment. Plaintiff appealed from the court's order denying the motion. The Supreme Court affirmed, holding that a supplemental complaint can only be filed with reference to matters that occurred between the time of filing the original complaint and the trial or judgment in the action. The Court also found the proposed supplemental complaint objectionable as setting forth a new and distinct cause of action (54 Cal. 135-136).

Erickson v. Boothe (1954) 127 Cal. App. 2d 644, 274 P.2d 460 , involved an action for declaratory relief relating to possession of a ranch. After prolonged proceedings, the court determined that plaintiff had wrongfully dispossessed defendant and ordered plaintiff to show cause why she should not be ordered to account to defendant for the value of her use of the premises. Plaintiff then moved for leave to file a supplemental complaint for damages caused by waste committed by defendant during his possession of the property. The court denied plaintiff's motion, and plaintiff appealed from a judgment in defendant's favor.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that the trial court properly denied the motion to file a supplemental complaint. The court noted, citing Code Civ. Proc. § 464, that the function of a supplemental complaint is to bring to the notice of the court and opposing party facts material to the case occurring after the former complaint (127 Cal. App. 2d 644, 647). The court quoted Gleason v. Gleason (1880) 54 Cal. 135 , above, for the proposition that a supplemental complaint can only have reference to matters that occurred between the time of filing the original complaint and the trial or judgment in the action (127 Cal. App. 2d 644, 647). Because waste could only have been committed by defendant while he was in possession, and the original complaint had not been filed until after he was out of possession, it was impossible for the supplemental complaint to relate to facts occurring after the original complaint or between the time of filing the original complaint and the trial or judgment.

Although Gleason and Erickson speak in terms of matters occurring after filing of the original complaint, this point has equal application to an answer, and the language of Code Civ. Proc. § 464 makes it apparent that supplemental answers must be limited to matters occurring after the original answer was filed [Code Civ. Proc. § 464].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Matters Occurring Before Original Pleading or After Judgment

Thomas v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1976) 59 Cal. App. 3d 731, 131 Cal. Rptr. 164 , involved a petition for a writ of mandate to compel the defendant to collect taxes, and license and registration fees on all vehicles owned and operated by state and national banks in California. The original petition was filed in December, 1972, on the theory that the California Constitution compelled collection of the taxes after the Congress of the United States removed a bar against taxing national banks in 1969. One year after the court announced its intended decision, which was adverse to petitioner on the ground that a saving provision in the federal statute postponed its effect as to the taxes at issue until January, 1973, petitioner moved for leave to file a supplemental petition for a writ of mandate. The supplemental petition sought to compel defendant to collect taxes for the period after January 1, 1973. The court denied the motion and entered a judgment denying relief. Petitioner appealed from the judgment.

The court of appeal modified the judgment, but held that the trial court had not erred in denying petitioner's belated motion to file a supplemental petition because the proposed petition did not allege any facts material to the case occurring after the former petition, citing Code Civ. Proc. § 464 (59 Cal. App. 3d 731, 741).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 16 AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
PART II. FORMS
B. Supplemental Pleadings

1-16 California Points & Authorities § 16.77

§ 16.77 Opposing Motion for Leave to File Supplemental Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 464(a)]--Not in Furtherance of or Consistent With Original Action

[1] FORM Opposing Motion for Leave to File Supplemental Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 464(a)]--Not in Furtherance of or Consistent With Original Action

[Caption. See § 16.76.]

THE COURT SHOULD NOT ALLOW FILING OF THE SUPPLEMENTAL _____ [COMPLAINT or ANSWER] BECAUSE IT IS NOT IN FURTHERANCE OF AND CONSISTENT WITH THE ORIGINAL ACTION.

A. Statutory Authority. [See § 16.76[1], Paragraph A.]

B. Furtherance of and Consistency With Original Action. A supplemental complaint must be in furtherance of and consistent with the original action (Gonzales v. Arbelbide (1957) 155 Cal. App. 2d 721, 726-727, 318 P.2d 746).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be used in opposition to a motion for leave to file a supplemental complaint on the ground that the proposed supplement is not in furtherance of or consistent with the original action.

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

This form may be used in opposition to a memorandum in support of a motion for leave to file a supplemental complaint pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 464 such as the one set out in § 16.70.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Furtherance of and Consistency With Original Action

The original pleadings in Gonzales v. Arbelbide (1957) 155 Cal. App. 2d 721, 318 P.2d 746 , were all addressed to the parties' rights to use the water of a creek. Over a year after the original complaint was filed, plaintiffs were allowed to file a supplemental complaint seeking damages and extra relief for an alleged trespass on their property by defendant and plaintiffs in intervention. The supplemental complaint did not allege that the trespass was related in any way to the use of the water. Rather, the supplemental complaint involved a boundary dispute between plaintiffs and plaintiffs in intervention and the location of a fence. On appeal from the judgment in the suit, plaintiffs in intervention argued that the trial court erred in allowing the supplemental complaint to be filed. The court of appeal agreed, relying on prior California law for the propositions that the office of a supplemental complaint is to present facts material to the case occurring after the former complaint which would affect the rights asserted and the judgment to be rendered, and that a supplemental complaint must be in furtherance of and consistent with the original action (155 Cal. App. 2d 721, 726-727).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Furtherance of and Consistency With Original Action

In Majors v. Merced County (1962) 207 Cal. App. 2d 427, 24 Cal. Rptr. 610 , the court of appeal upheld the trial court's action in denying leave to file a supplemental complaint that would have added an action for wrongful death to a suit that had originally been brought by the decedent for hospital expenses and lost wages. In so doing, the court of appeal noted that the function of a supplemental complaint is to present facts material to the case occurring after the former complaint that would affect the rights asserted and the judgment to be rendered. The court also stated that a supplemental complaint must be in furtherance of and consistent with the original action (207 Cal. App. 2d 427, 436).

Stephani v. Abbott (1934) 137 Cal. App. 510, 30 P.2d 1033 , is discussed in § 16.70[3][a]. In upholding the trial court's action in allowing a supplemental complaint, the court of appeal noted the requirement that supplemental complaints be in furtherance of and consistent with the original action (137 Cal. App. 510, 516).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 16 AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
PART II. FORMS
B. Supplemental Pleadings

1-16 California Points & Authorities § 16.78

§ 16.78 Opposing Motion for Leave to File Supplemental Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 464(a)]--No Cause of Action When Original Complaint Filed

[1] FORM Opposing Motion for Leave to File Supplemental Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 464(a)]--No Cause of Action When Original Complaint Filed

[Caption. See § 16.76.]

THE COURT SHOULD NOT ALLOW FILING OF THE SUPPLEMENTAL COMPLAINT BECAUSE PLAINTIFF HAD NO CAUSE OF ACTION WHEN THE ORIGINAL COMPLAINT WAS FILED.

A. Statutory Authority. [See § 16.76[1], Paragraph A.]

B. No Cause of Action When Original Complaint Filed. Because a supplemental complaint is proper only in aid of the case made by the original complaint, relief cannot be granted on a supplemental complaint when the proof shows that the plaintiff had no cause of action when the original complaint was filed. If a party has no cause of action at the time of the institution of his action, he or she cannot maintain it by filing a supplemental complaint founded on matters which have subsequently occurred (Imperial Land Co. v. Imperial Irrigation Dist. (1916) 173 Cal. 668, 673, 161 P 116 ; Walton v. Kern County (1940) 39 Cal. App. 2d 32, 34, 102 P.2d 531).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a motion for leave to file a supplemental complaint on the ground that a supplemental complaint cannot be allowed when there was no cause of action at the time the original complaint was filed, where the nonexistence of the cause of action was due to prematurity of the original complaint or due to plaintiff's failure to prove the allegations of the original complaint [see Imperial Land Co. v. Imperial Irrigation Dist. (1916) 173 Cal. 668, 673, 161 P 116 (failure to prove original allegations); Walton v. Kern County (1940) 39 Cal. App. 2d 32, 34, 102 P.2d 531 (premature action)].

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

This form may be used in opposition to a memorandum in support of a motion for leave to file a supplemental complaint pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 464 such as the one set out in § 16.70.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Cause of Action When Original Complaint Filed

The original complaint in Imperial Land Co. v. Imperial Irrigation Dist. (1916) 173 Cal. 668, 161 P 116 , attacked an assessment levied by defendant district. In a supplemental complaint, plaintiffs sought to enjoin enforcement of the assessment on the ground that a petition for an election had been filed with the district, and that therefore, the assessment could not be enforced until an election was held on it. The court ruled against plaintiffs on both complaints, and plaintiffs appealed from the judgment that they take nothing.

The Supreme Court affirmed, first holding that the trial court had ruled correctly in finding no merit in the attacks made on the assessment by the original complaint (173 Cal. 668, 670-672). The Court then held that since a supplemental pleading is proper only in aid of the case made by the original complaint, relief cannot be granted on a supplemental complaint when the proof shows that the plaintiff had no cause of action when the original complaint was filed. The Court relied on prior California law for the proposition that if a party has no cause of action at the time the action is instituted, the action cannot be maintained by filing a supplemental complaint founded on matters that have subsequently occurred. Because the plaintiffs had no cause of action when the complaint was filed as shown by the findings of the trial court against their allegations, plaintiffs could not make a new case by supplemental complaint. The supplemental complaint was also faulty for asserting a new and independent cause of action (173 Cal. 668, 673).

The rule of Imperial Land Co., above, was recognized in Cohn v. Cohn (1941) 47 Cal. App. 2d 683, 118 P.2d 903 , but the court distinguished Imperial Land Co. because in Cohn the parties had stipulated to the filing of the supplemental complaint to set up a new cause of action, and therefore, it had to be regarded as a substituted pleading (173 Cal. 668, 689-690).

Plaintiff in Walton v. Kern County (1940) 39 Cal. App. 2d 32, 102 P.2d 531 , sued defendant public entity for a death allegedly caused by improper maintenance of a road. Plaintiff had filed a claim with the defendant which was never acted on. Over one year after suit was initiated, defendant filed notice of a motion for judgment on the pleadings on the ground that the action had been prematurely filed before the expiration of the 90-day period which defendant had to act on plaintiff's claim. Plaintiff responded with a motion for leave to file a supplemental complaint alleging that the claim had been rejected by defendant's failure to act on it within 90 days. The court denied plaintiff's motion and granted defendant's motion for judgment on the pleadings. Plaintiff appealed from the judgment.

Affirming, the court of appeal applied the general rule that when an action is prematurely brought and the original complaint must fall, a supplemental complaint has no place as a pleading (39 Cal. App. 2d 32, 34).

Counsel should note that Walton has been questioned to the extent that it stands for the proposition that a plaintiff has no cause of action against a local governmental entity until the entity has rejected the claim. It is now recognized that the waiting period requirement is not part of the cause of action but a procedural prerequisite to suit [Cory v. Huntington Beach (1974) 43 Cal. App. 3d 131, 134-135, 117 Cal. Rptr. 475].

The rule in Walton is not absolute and universal in application [Radar v. Rogers (1957) 49 Cal. 2d 243, 247, 317 P.2d 17]. In Radar plaintiffs sued fictitiously named defendants as administrators of the estate of the tortfeasor, who was killed in the accident that caused plaintiffs' damages. Plaintiffs had made no claim against the estate because no personal representative had been appointed when suit was brought, but when an administratrix was appointed, they filed a claim which was rejected. Subsequently, plaintiffs filed amended complaints, the first to name the personal representative and the second to allege presentation and rejection of their claims. On plaintiffs' appeal from a judgment entered on an order sustaining a demurrer to the second amended complaint, the Supreme Court treated the amended complaints as supplemental complaints because they alleged facts occurring after the original complaint was filed. The Court held that the rule of Walton, above, was not absolute and universal in application. Walton was distinguished because in Radar the cause of action did exist when the original complaint was filed, while in Walton, the court had held that a supplemental complaint cannot aid an original complaint filed before the cause of action has arisen (49 Cal. 2d 243, 247). The Court reversed, finding that the purpose of the Probate Code sections requiring claims to be made prior to institution of suit against estates had been fulfilled, and that the defense was a disfavored plea in abatement (49 Cal. 2d 243, 247-250).

In Grant v. Sun Indem. Co. (1938) 11 Cal. 2d 438, 80 P.2d 996 , the Supreme Court also refused to apply the rule that a supplemental complaint cannot be filed when the cause of action was not complete when the suit was commenced, although the Court did not cite Imperial Land Co., above, or Walton, above. In Grant the suit was premature when the original complaint was filed due to a provision of the insurance policy that was being sued on. The Court, however, applied the rule that an insurance company cannot repudiate a policy and stand on a provision of the policy to its own benefit at the same time, and gave effect to the supplemental complaint alleging satisfaction of the provision the insurance company was relying on (11 Cal. 2d 438, 440).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 16 AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
PART II. FORMS
B. Supplemental Pleadings

1-16 California Points & Authorities § 16.79

§ 16.79 Opposing Motion for Leave to File Supplemental Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 464(a)]--Introducing New Cause of Action

[1] FORM Opposing Motion for Leave to File Supplemental Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 464(a)]--Introducing New Cause of Action

[Caption. See § 16.76.]

THE COURT SHOULD DENY THE MOTION FOR LEAVE TO FILE THE SUPPLEMENTAL COMPLAINT BECAUSE IT INTRODUCES A NEW CAUSE OF ACTION.

A. Statutory Authority. [See § 16.76[1], Paragraph A.]

B. New Cause of Action. A supplemental complaint alleging a new cause of action cannot be allowed because it is not material to the original case (Brown v. Valley View Mining Co. (1900) 127 Cal. 630, 633, 60 P 424 ; Flood v. Simpson (1975) 45 Cal. App. 3d 644, 647, 119 Cal. Rptr. 675).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a motion for leave to file a supplemental complaint on the ground that the proposed supplement would introduce a new cause of action.

For limitations on the scope of the proposition that a supplemental complaint cannot state a new cause of action, see §§ 16.71 and 16.72.

For a related discussion of amending complaints to state a new theory of recovery, see § 16.37.

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

This form may be used in opposition to a memorandum in support of a motion for leave to file a supplemental complaint, pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 464, such as the one set out in § 16.70.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] New Cause of Action

Plaintiff in Brown v. Valley View Mining Co. (1900) 127 Cal. 630, 60 P 424 , originally sued defendant on an employment contract calling for defendant to pay plaintiff a certain sum for a certain period of services. At the close of testimony, plaintiff moved for leave to file a supplemental complaint alleging that the employment continued for 22 months after suit was instituted at $20 per month, and that this sum had not been paid. Judgment was awarded to plaintiff on both complaints, and defendant appealed.

The Supreme Court reversed, finding that the supplemental complaint set up a contract for employment by the month at a certain amount per month which was a different contract from the one sued on in the original complaint and constituted a cause of action distinct and independent from that asserted in the original complaint. Noting that the facts alleged in a supplemental pleading must relate to and be material to the original case, the Court held that the trial court erred in allowing the supplemental complaint to be filed, and that it could not be considered (127 Cal. 630, 633, 635).

In Flood v. Simpson (1975) 45 Cal. App. 3d 644, 119 Cal. Rptr. 675 , the court of appeal held that, notwithstanding the policy of liberality in permitting supplemental pleadings to allege pertinent "after-occurring" facts, the trial court had not abused its discretion in denying leave to file a supplemental complaint, that would have introduced new causes of action when the case was called for trial, over three years after the original complaint was filed, citing Brown v. Valley View Mining Co. (1900) 127 Cal. 630, 60 P. 424 , discussed above, and other prior California law (45 Cal. App. 3d 644, 647).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] New Cause of Action

The facts and procedural background of Imperial Land Co. v. Imperial Irrigation Dist. (1916) 173 Cal. 668, 161 P 116 , are discussed in § 16.78[3][a]. There, the Supreme Court held that a supplemental complaint seeking suspension of an assessment until after an election stated a different cause of action from the original complaint which sought to have the assessment ruled invalid. The Court held that the supplemental complaint was therefore not consistent with or in aid of the original complaint. The Court stated that it is well settled that the facts alleged in a supplemental pleading must relate to and be material to the original case, relying on prior California law. The Court also relied on the principle that a supplemental complaint cannot be the basis for relief when the plaintiff had no cause of action when the original complaint was filed (173 Cal. 668, 673).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
CHAPTER 16 AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
PART II. FORMS
B. Supplemental Pleadings

1-16 California Points & Authorities § 16.80

§ 16.80 Opposing Motion for Leave to File Supplemental Answer [Code Civ. Proc. § 464(a)]--Insufficient to Assert Defense

[1] FORM Opposing Motion for Leave to File Supplemental Answer [Code Civ. Proc. § 464(a)]--Insufficient to Assert Defense

[Caption. See § 16.76.]

THE COURT SHOULD DENY THE MOTION FOR LEAVE TO FILE THE SUPPLEMENTAL ANSWER BECAUSE THE PROPOSED SUPPLEMENT IS INSUFFICIENT TO ESTABLISH A DEFENSE.

A. Statutory Authority. [See § 16.76[1], Paragraph A.]

B. No Defense Stated. A court may properly deny leave to file a supplemental answer when the proposed supplement is wholly insufficient to establish a defense (Horton v. Goodenough (1920) 184 Cal. 451, 459, 194 P 34).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a motion for leave to file a supplemental answer on the ground that the supplemental answer is not sufficient to establish a defense.

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Defense Stated

The trial court in Horton v. Goodenough (1920) 184 Cal. 451, 194 P 34 , denied defendant leave to file a supplemental answer that alleged a judgment against plaintiff in another action brought by plaintiff against defendant. When judgment was entered in plaintiff's favor after trial, defendant appealed, asserting, inter alia, the denial of leave to file the supplemental answer as error. The Supreme Court reversed on other grounds, but since a new trial was necessary, reached the question regarding the supplemental answer. The Court held that defendant's motion had properly been denied because the proposed answer was wholly deficient to show any estoppel against plaintiff (184 Cal. 451, 459). The proposed answer had failed to adequately specify that the prior judgment was based on the same issues that were presented in the action in which the proposed answer was to be filed (184 Cal. 451, 459-460).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] No Defense Stated

The facts and procedural background of Louie Queriolo Trucking, Inc. v. Superior Court (1967) 252 Cal. App. 2d 194, 60 Cal. Rptr. 389 , are discussed in § 16.70[3][b]. There, the court of appeal stated, in dicta, that a trial court may deny the right to file a supplemental pleading if the new matter contained in it fails, as a matter of law, to constitute a defense, relying on Horton v. Goodenough (1920) 184 Cal. 451, 194 P 34 (discussed in § 16.80[3][a]) and Key v. Caldwell (1940) 39 Cal. App. 2d 698, 104 P.2d 87 (252 Cal. App. 2d 194, 198).

The facts and procedural background of Louie Queriolo Trucking, Inc. v. Superior Court (1967) 252 Cal. App. 2d 194, 60 Cal. Rptr. 389 , are discussed in § 16.70[3][b]. There, the court of appeal stated, in dicta, that a trial court may deny the right to file a supplemental pleading if the new matter contained in it fails, as a matter of law, to constitute a defense, relying on Horton v. Goodenough (1920) 184 Cal. 451, 194 P 34 (discussed in § 16.80[3][a]) and Key v. Caldwell (1940) 39 Cal. App. 2d 698, 104 P.2d 87 (252 Cal. App. 2d 194, 198).

52 of 174 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 1 Chapters 1-19 WRITING LEGAL MEMORANDA AND BRIEFS; ABATEMENT AND SURVIVAL OF ACTIONS---to---AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS
Chapters 17through 19 RESERVED

1-17 California Points & Authorities Chapters 17through 19

RESERVED

Chapters 17RESERVED

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20 ARBITRATION: COMPELLING

2-20 California Points & Authorities 20.syn

§ 20.syn Synopsis to Chapter 20: ARBITRATION: COMPELLING

§ 20.01 Scope of Chapter

§ 20.02 Governing Law

[1] Federal Arbitration Act

[2] International Arbitration Agreements

[3] Provisional Remedies

[4] Private Arbitration in California

[a] Judicial Proceedings Limited

[i] Petitions Involving Private Arbitration Agreements

[ii] Responses in Arbitration Proceedings

[iii] Compelling Arbitration

[iv] Jurisdiction to Determine Petitions

[v] Staying Related Action or Proceeding

[vi] Consolidating Separate Arbitration Proceedings

[vii] Costs

[b] Statutes Relating to Arbitration of Specific Controversies

[5] Judicial Arbitration in California

§ 20.03 How to Use the Forms in This Chapter

[1] Page Limits on Points and Authorities

[2] Using the Forms to Build a Draft Memorandum

§ 20.04 Related Discussion and Forms

[1] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[2] Related Points and Authorities

§§ 20.05-20.09 [Reserved]

§ 20.10 Supporting Petition to Compel Arbitration [and Motion to Stay Related Action]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Memoranda

[e] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Proving Existence of Agreement to Arbitrate

[b] Evidentiary Hearing

[c] Federal Right to Jury Trial Is Not Applicable in State Court

[d] Fact That Presumption of Going Forward With Evidence Was Met Does Not Negate Sufficiency of Evidence to Support Finding That Arbitration Agreement Exists

[e] Arbitrator, Not Court, Should Determine Compliance with [Private] Limitation Period

[f] Under Federal Arbitration Act, Arbitrator, Not Court, Determines Waiver

[g] Arbitrator, Not Court, Determines Arbitrability

[h] Federal Arbitration Act Is Not Offended When Arbitrator Allows Court to Determine Legality of Entire Contract

[i] Under Federal Arbitration Act, Arbitrator, Not Court, Determines Illegality

[j] Code of Civil Procedure Section 1281.2 Is Not Applicable to Deny Arbitration for Possible Conflicting Rulings

[k] Under Federal Arbitration Act, Court, Not Arbitrator, Determines Challenge that Arbitration Provisions Are Unconscionable

[l] Under Federal Arbitration Act, Court, Not Arbitrator, Determines Existence of Entire Contract

[m] National Association of Security Dealers Class Arbitration Rule

[n] Parties' Agreement Gives Court Authority to Award Attorney's Fees for Petition to Compel Arbitration

§ 20.11 Supporting [Petition to Compel Arbitration and] Motion to Stay Related Action

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Action to Be Stayed Until Arbitrability Determined and Arbitration Had

[b] Action to Be Stayed Until Arbitration Had

§ 20.12 Party Staying Action for Arbitration Need Not Be Party to Arbitration

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Party Staying Action for Arbitration Is Not Required to Be Party to Arbitration

§ 20.13 Supporting Petition to Consolidate Separate Contractual Arbitrations

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Venue for Petition Filed After Commencement of Arbitration

[b] Under Federal Arbitration Act, Arbitrator Determines Whether to Consolidate Separate Arbitrations

[c] Possibility of Conflicting Rulings on Common Issues of Law or Fact Exists

[d] No Substantial Right or Obligation Will Be Impaired

[e] Consolidated Arbitration Must Be by Three-Arbitrator Panel

[f] Effect of Clause Prohibiting Consolidation

§ 20.14 Consolidating Contractual Arbitration of Uninsured Motorist Claims and Judicial Arbitration of Related Third-Party Claims

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Consolidating Contractual Arbitration of Uninsured Motorist Claims and Judicial Arbitration of Related Third-Party Claims

§ 20.15 Supporting Petition to Compel Joinder of Contractual Arbitration [of Uninsured Motorist Claims] and Related Civil Action

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Court's Authority to Order Joinder When Faced With Possibility of Conflicting Rulings

§§ 20.16-20.19 [Reserved]

§ 20.20 Federal Preemption of Matters Involving Admiralty or Interstate Commerce

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[d] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Federal Substantive Law of Arbitrability

[b] Section 2 of the Federal Arbitration Act Reaches to Full Extent of Congressional Power Under the Commerce Clause

[c] Contemplation of Parties Not Relevant in Determining Whether Contract Is in Interstate Commerce

[d] Arbitration Clauses Must Be on Equal Footing With Other Contract Clauses

[e] Employment Contracts Are Excluded Only for Transportation Workers

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Federal Law of Substantive Arbitrability

§ 20.21 Federal Statutory Claims That Are Arbitrable Under the Federal Arbitration Act

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[d] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Determining Arbitrability of Statutory Claims

[b] Arbitrability of Federal Securities Claims

[c] Arbitrability of Sherman Antitrust Claims

[d] Arbitrability of Claims Under the Age Discrimination in Employment Act of 1967

[e] Arbitrability of Claims Under the Fair Labor Standards Act

[f] Claims Under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act

[g] Arbitrability of Claims Under the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act (RICO)

[h] Burden of Proving That Cost of Arbitration Prevents Vindication of Statutory Rights

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Determining Arbitrability of Statutory Claims

[b] Arbitrability of Federal Securities Claims

§ 20.22 California Statutory Claims That Are Arbitrable Under the Federal Arbitration Act

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[d] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Federal Law Preempts Section 31512 of the Corporations Code (Franchise Investment Law)

[b] Federal Law Preempts Section 229 of the Labor Code

[c] Arbitrability of Cartwright Antitrust Claims

[d] Arbitrability of Claims Under the Fair Employment and Housing Act (Government Code Section 12900 et seq.)

[e] Arbitrability of Claims Under the Unruh Civil Rights Act (Civil Code Section 51 et seq.)

[f] Arbitrability of Damage Claims Under the Consumer Legal Remedies Act (Civil Code Section 1750 et seq.)

[g] Arbitrability of Damage Claims Under the Unfair Competition Law (Business and Professions Code Section 17200 et seq.)

[h] Arbitrability of Damage Claims Under the False Advertising Law (Business and Professions Code Section 17500 et seq.)

[i] Code of Civil Procedure Section 1298.7 Preempted by Federal Arbitration Act

[j] Federal Law Preempts Section 1298 of the Code of Civil Procedure

[k] False Claims Act (Government Code Section 12650 et seq.) Claims Are Arbitrable

§ 20.23 Arbitration Agreement Provides, or Can Be Interpreted to Provide, Minimum Requirements for Vindication of Unwaivable Statutory or Common Law Rights

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[d] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Requirements for Arbitration of Unwaivable Statutory or Common Law Right

[b] Implied Agreement to Adequate Discovery

[c] Agreement Interpreted to Require Findings and Conclusions in Award

[d] Agreement Interpreted to Require Employer to Pay Forum Costs of Arbitration

[e] Armendariz May Be Applied Retroactively

[f] Armendariz Minimum Requirements Apply to Tameny Claims

[g] Armendariz Minimum Requirements Apply to Claims Under Labor Code Section 970

[h] Consumer Legal Remedies Act Provides for Unwaivable Rights

[i] Vehicle Leasing Act Provides for Unwaivable Rights

[j] Arbitral Costs to Vindicate Rights Under Consumer Protection Statute

[k] Little May Be Applied Retroactively

[l] Armendariz Minimum Requirements Apply to Claims Under Franchise Investment Act

[m] Armendariz Minimum Requirements Apply to Claims Under Cartwright Act

[n] Armendariz Minimum Requirements Apply to Claims Under Uniform Trade Secrets Act

[o] Armendariz Minimum Requirements Apply to Claims Under Unfair Competition Law

[p] Court Must Make Initial Fee-Shifting Determination Even if Arbitrator Has Authority to Allocate Arbitral Fees and Costs

[q] Armendariz Minimum Requirements Apply to Claims Under Ralph Civil Rights Act

[r] Armendariz Minimum Requirements Apply to Claims Under Tom Bane Rights Act

§§ 20.24-20.29 [Reserved]

§ 20.30 General State Law Contract Principles

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Memoranda

[e] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] General State Law Contract Principles Govern

§ 20.31 Incorporation by Reference

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Memoranda

[e] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Incorporation by Reference

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Incorporation by Reference

§ 20.32 Attempted Revocation of Stipulation to Arbitrate Comes Too Late

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Attempted Revocation of Stipulation to Arbitrate Comes Too Late

§ 20.33 Principal Must Arbitrate Under Agreement Signed by Attorney in Fact

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Principal Is Bound by Agreement Signed by Attorney in Fact

[b] Agent Under Probate Code Section 4701 Health Care Power of Attorney Can Bind Principal [and Successor(s)] to Arbitration.

§§ 20.34-20.39 [Reserved]

§ 20.40 Arbitration Agreement Applies to Related Tort Claim

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[d] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Arbitration Agreement Applies to Related Tort Claim

[b] Emotional Distress Claims Must Be Arbitrated: Bodily Injury Exclusion Does Not Apply

[c] Insurer's Duty to Defend Is Broader Than Its Duty to Indemnify

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Arbitration Agreement Applies to Related Tort Claim

§ 20.41 Arbitration of Federal Securities Claims

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] State Court Jurisdiction Under Securities Act of 1933

[b] State Court Jurisdiction Under Securities Exchange Act of 1934

[c] Federal Securities Law Preempts State Law Adhesion Contract Principles

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] State Court Jurisdiction Under Securities Exchange Act of 1934

§ 20.42 Arbitrability of Claims of Fraud in Inducement of Contract Containing the Arbitration Clause

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[d] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Claims of Fraud in Inducement of Contract Containing Arbitration Clause Are Arbitrable

[b] No Duty to Explain Provision

[c] Reliance Must Be Reasonable

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Claims of Fraud in Inducement of Contract Containing Arbitration Clause Are Arbitrable

§ 20.43 Arbitration of Uninsured Motorist Claim, Including Subordinate Issues

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[d] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Arbitration of Claims Under Uninsured Motorist Coverage

[b] Claim Has Been Preserved

[c] Declaration Regarding Workers' Compensation Claim

[d] Issue of Physical Contact With Uninsured Motorist Is Arbitrable Under Policy Language

[e] Whether Insurer Is Bound by Default Judgment Against Driver Who Was at Fault Is Arbitrable

§ 20.44 Legality of Severable Contract Provision Is Arbitrable

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[d] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Legality of Severable Contract Provision Is Arbitrable

§ 20.45 Arbitration of Pre-Contract Medical Malpractice Claim

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[d] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Agreement to Arbitrate Medical Malpractice May Extend to Pre-Contract Claims

[b] Provision for Arbitration of Pre-Contract Claims May Be Adhesive

[c] This Provision for Arbitration of Pre-Contract Claims Is Not Adhesive

[d] Patient's Medicated State Did Not Render Parties' Bargaining Positions Unequal

[e] Arbitration Agreement Applies to Later Treatment of Another Condition

§ 20.46 Arbitration Agreement Applies to All Aspects of Transaction to Which It Relates

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[d] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Arbitration Agreement Applies to All Aspects of Transaction to Which It Relates

§ 20.47 Malpractice Claim, or Fee Dispute, or Both, May be Arbitrated Because Client Has Waived Arbitration or Respondent Has Rejected Nonbinding Award Under Mandatory Fee Arbitration Act

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Malpractice Claim, or Fee Dispute, or Both May Be Arbitrated

[b] Respondent's Rejection of Mandatory Award Permits Contractual Arbitration

§§ 20.48-20.59 [Reserved]

§ 20.60 Nonsignatory Physician Must Arbitrate Under Medical Services Agreement Between Hospital and Subscriber

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Physician Employed by Hospital Is Bound by Arbitration Clause in Medical Services Agreement

§ 20.61 Subscriber Must Arbitrate Under Medical Services Agreement Signed by Agent/Employer

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[d] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Agent or Fiduciary Negotiating for Medical Care Is Authorized to Provide for Arbitration

[b] Health Care Plan Requiring Arbitration Is Not Unconstitutional

§ 20.62 Spouse Must Arbitrate Under Medical Services Agreement Signed by Spouse Who Received Medical Care

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[d] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Nonsignatory Spouse Bound

§ 20.63 Heirs Must Arbitrate Wrongful Death Claims Under Medical Services Agreement

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Heirs of Contracting Party May Be Expressly Bound to Arbitrate

§ 20.64 Minor Is Bound by Mother's Medical Services Agreement (Prenatal or Postnatal Care)

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[d] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Parent May Bind Child to Arbitration of Medical Malpractice Claims Arising From Negligent Prenatal or Postnatal Treatment

§ 20.65 Surety on Performance Bond Is Bound by Reference to Construction Contract Which Is Incorporated in Bond

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Surety Under Performance Bond Is Bound by Arbitration Provision in Related Construction Contract

§ 20.66 Employee Must Arbitrate With Employer That Is Third Party Beneficiary of Employee's Agreement With Professional Organization

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Employee Must Arbitrate With Employer That Is Third Party Beneficiary of Employee's Agreement With Professional Organization

§ 20.67 People Who Have Accepted Benefits of Underlying Agreement

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] People Who Have Accepted Benefits of Underlying Agreement

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] People Who Have Accepted Benefits of Underlying Agreement

§ 20.68 Persons Whose Joinder Was Consented to in Arbitration Agreement

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Persons Whose Joinder Was Consented to in Arbitration Agreement

§ 20.69 Equity Requires Signatory to Arbitrate on Demand of Nonsignatory

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Equity Requires Arbitration With Nonsignatory

[b] Agent of Signatory Can Compel Arbitration

[c] Nonsignatory Alleged To Be Alter Ego of Corporate Signatory

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Equity Requires Arbitration With Nonsignatory

§§ 20.70-20.79 [Reserved]

§ 20.80 Unreasonable Delay in Seeking to Compel Arbitration Does Not Amount to Waiver Unless There Is Some Prejudice to Other Party

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[d] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Waiver Is Question of Fact for Court to Decide

[b] Substantial, Unreasonable Delay and Prejudice Required for Waiver

[c] Burden of Proving Waiver Is on Party Asserting It

[d] Insurer Did Not Waive Right to Compel Arbitration

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Waiver Is Question of Fact for Court to Decide

[b] Burden of Proving Waiver Is on Party Asserting It

§ 20.81 Filing Lawsuit Does Not Necessarily Waive Right to Compel Arbitration

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[d] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Filing of Lawsuit Does Not Necessarily Constitute Waiver of Right to Compel Arbitration

[b] Seeking Provisional Remedy Does Not Necessarily Waive Right to Arbitration

[c] Contractual Deadline for Demanding Arbitration Tolled by Commencement of Judicial Action

[d] Attempts to Settle Do Not Necessarily Waive Right to Arbitration

[e] Demurrer to Complaint Does Not Necessarily Waive Right to Arbitration

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Filing of Lawsuit Does Not Necessarily Constitute Waiver of Right to Compel Arbitration

§ 20.82 Arbitration Provision Is Neither Contract of Adhesion Nor Unconscionable

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[d] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Contract Containing Arbitration Provision Is Not Adhesion Contract

[b] Arbitration Provision Not Shown to Be Contract of Adhesion or Procedurally Unconscionable

[c] Arbitration Provision Not Shown To Be Substantively Unconscionable

§ 20.83 Arbitration Under Contract of Adhesion

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[d] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Arbitration Provision in Adhesion Contract Not Unenforceable If Not Contrary to Expectations of Fairness

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Arbitration Provision in Adhesion Contract Not Unenforceable If Not Contrary to Expectations of Fairness

§ 20.84 Compulsory Agreement to Arbitrate Employment-Related Disputes Is Enforceable

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Compulsory Arbitration Agreement Covering Employment-Related Disputes

§ 20.85 Respondent Must Disprove Existence of Agreement to Arbitrate

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[d] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Respondent Failed to Disprove Existence or Enforceability of Arbitration Agreement

[b] Respondent Failed to Bear Burden of Showing Not All Necessary Parties Signed Arbitration Agreement

§ 20.86 Agreement May Be Enforced With Unconscionable Provision(s) Severed

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[d] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] The Arbitration Agreement Can Be Enforced Without Unconscionable Clause, Which Is Severable

[b] Severance of Class Arbitration Waiver Is Appropriate

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Provision for Arbitral Review May Be Severed

§ 20.87 Provision for Review by Second Arbitrator Is Valid and Enforceable

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[d] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Provision for Review by Second Arbitrator Is Valid and Enforceable

§ 20.88 Foreign Law Governs This Contract and Renders Class Action Waiver Enforceable

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Memoranda

[e] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Foreign Law Governs This Contract and Renders Class Action Waiver Enforceable

§ 20.89 Arbitration Claim Is Not Subject to Motion to Strike Pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure Section 425.16

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleadings and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Arbitration Claim Is Not Subject to Motion to Strike Pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure Section 425.16

§ 20.90 Enforcement of Unconscionable Arbitration Clause in Credit Card Agreement Cannot Be Enjoined Under California Legal Remedies Act (Civ. Code § 1750 et seq.)

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleadings and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Enforcement of Unconscionable Arbitration Clause in Credit Card Agreement Cannot Be Enjoined Under California Legal Remedies Act (Civ. Code § 1750 et seq.)

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20 ARBITRATION: COMPELLING
PART I. INTRODUCTION

2-20 California Points & Authorities § 20.01

§ 20.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter contains memoranda and contentions relating to judicial supervision of contractual arbitration under private agreements pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1280 et seq. Most of the forms address the following issues or judicial procedures:

- General principles related to compelling arbitration (see § 20.10 et seq.).
- Particular claims subject to arbitration (see § 20.40 et seq.).
- Particular persons bound by arbitration agreement (see § 20.60 et seq.).
- Negating defenses to arbitration (see § 20.80 et seq.).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionArbitrationsArbitrabilityCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionArbitrationsFederal Arbitration ActCoverage & ExceptionsCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionArbitrationsFederal Arbitration ActOrders to Compel ArbitrationCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionArbitrationsWaiversContracts LawContract Conditions & ProvisionsArbitration Clauses

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20 ARBITRATION: COMPELLING
PART I. INTRODUCTION

2-20 California Points & Authorities § 20.02

§ 20.02 Governing Law

[1] Federal Arbitration Act

Arbitration of disputes involving maritime law or interstate or foreign commerce are governed by the Federal Arbitration Act (9 U.S.C. § 1 et seq., commonly referred to as the FAA).

[2] International Arbitration Agreements

International arbitration agreements and awards are governed by the Convention on the Recognition and Enforcement of Foreign Arbitral Awards, June 10, 1958 [21 U.S.T. 2517, T.I.A.S. No. 6997, 330 U.N.T.S. 38 (as implemented by 9 U.S.C. §§ 201-208)], entered into force for the United States on December 29, 1970. For the text of the Convention, see note to 9 U.S.C. § 201. Chapter 1 of the FAA (9 U.S.C. §§ 1-16) applies to situations governed by Convention [see 9 U.S.C. § 202].

In California, judicial enforcement of international commercial arbitration agreements is implemented by Code Civ. Proc. § 1297.100 et seq., which is discussed in California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 35, Arbitration and Conciliation of International Commercial Disputes (Matthew Bender).

[3] Provisional Remedies

Provisional remedies relating to arbitrable issues are available in California, as well as under the FAA and the Convention [see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration (Matthew Bender)].

Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.8(b) provides that a party to an arbitration agreement may file an application for a provisional remedy in connection with an arbitrable controversy, but only on the ground that the award to which the applicant may be entitled may be rendered ineffectual if provisional relief is not granted. Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.8(b) does not supplant the requirements set forth in the code sections governing the specific provisional remedies listed in Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.8(a). Thus, for instance, a showing that the arbitrator's award might be rendered ineffectual is not sufficient to obtain a preliminary injunction. The moving party must also meet the requirements of Code Civ. Proc. §§

526, 527 [Woolley v. Embassy Suites, Inc. (1991) 227 Cal. App. 3d 1520, 1527-1529, 278 Cal. Rptr. 719] . Nor is an injunction a proper remedy to take possession of property that is subject to a security interest. A writ of possession under the claim and delivery law that meets the requirements of Code Civ. Proc. §§ 512.010-512.060, including posting of a bond, is the provisional remedy by which a secured party enforces its rights to take possession of collateral under Com. Code § 9609. An injunction to restrain removal of the property from a particular place (to prevent the debtor from putting it beyond the reach of the creditor), may be appropriate. If the only showing made is that all that is necessary to maintain the status quo during arbitration is to restrain removal of the collateral from the debtor's place of business, a writ of possession should not issue [Simms v. NPCK Enterprises, Inc. (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 233, 236-240, 134 Cal. Rptr. 2d 557] .

Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.8(d) provides that an application for provisional remedy under Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.8(b) does not operate to waive any right of arbitration that the applicant may have pursuant to a written agreement to arbitrate, if certain conditions are met.

The Ninth Circuit has interpreted the Federal Arbitration Act to allow a court, pending arbitration, to grant a provisional remedy if it is necessary to preserve the meaningfulness of the arbitration [see PMS Distributing Co., Inc. v. Huber & Suhner, A.G. (9th Cir. 1988) 863 F.2d 639, 641-642 ; accord Davenport v. Blue Cross of California (1997) 52 Cal. App. 4th 435, 451-453, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 641 (though in neither case was there sufficient showing for provisional remedy)].

[4] Private Arbitration in California

[a] Judicial Proceedings Limited

[i] Petitions Involving Private Arbitration Agreements

Arbitration under private agreements, and judicial proceedings with respect to private arbitration in California, or when the parties choose to be governed by California law, are governed by Code Civ. Proc. § 1280 et seq., and regulated under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1330.

Ethics Standards for Neutral Arbitrators in Contractual Arbitration, which are applicable to neutral arbitrators who are appointed to serve on or after July 1, 2002 [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Appen., Div. VI, Standard 3(a)], are found in Cal. Rules of Ct., Appen., Div. VI. The California Ethics Standards will not apply in any arbitration which the parties have agreed will be conducted in accordance with New York Stock Exchange (NYSE) Arbitration Rules or the National Association of Securities Dealers (NASD) Code of Arbitration Procedure. Both preempt the California Ethics Standards to the extent that the Securities and Exchange Commission has approved those rules and procedures in accordance with the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 [Credit Suisse First Boston Corp. v. Grunwald (9th Cir. 2005) 400 F.3d 1119, 1132 (NASD rules) ; Mayo v. Dean Witter Reynolds (N.D. Cal. 2003) 258 F. Supp. 2d 1097, 1112 , as corrected at 260 F. Supp. 2d 979 ; accord Wilmot v. McNabb (N.D. Cal. 2003) 269 F. Supp. 2d 1203 ; Jevne v. Superior Court (JB Oxford Holdings, Inc.) (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 935, 949, 28 Cal. Rptr. 3d 685, 111 P.3d 954] . NYSE Rules and NASD Code of Arbitration Procedure have their own disclosure requirements [see NYSE Arbitration Rule 610; NASD Code of Arbitration Procedure, Rule 10312].

A proceeding related to private arbitration in California is commenced by the filing of a petition in accordance with Code Civ. Proc. § 1290.

A petition is heard in a summary way in the manner and on the notice provided by law for the making and hearing of motions [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1290.2; § 20.10[1]]. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(a) requires a party filing a notice of motion to serve and file with it a memorandum. The absence of the memorandum may be construed by the court as an admission that the motion is not meritorious and as cause for its denial.

Code Civ. Proc. § 1290.4 provides for service of a copy of the petition and a written notice of the time and place of the hearing of the petition and any other papers on which the petition is based.

[ii] Responses in Arbitration Proceedings

Any person named as a respondent in a petition filed under Code Civ. Proc. § 1280 et seq. may file a response in accordance with Code Civ. Proc. § 1290 [see Ch. 20A, Arbitration: Resisting, Ch. 20A, Arbitration: Resisting, § 20A.10[1].

[iii] Compelling Arbitration

A petitioner alleging that he or she, and respondent, are parties to a written agreement to arbitrate a controversy, and that the respondent refuses to arbitrate the controversy, may apply to the appropriate court [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1292; set forth in § 20.10[1]], for an order compelling the parties to arbitrate the controversy [Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.2; see § 20.10[1]].

A defendant may also file a petition to compel arbitration pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.2 in lieu of filing an answer to a complaint. If the petition is denied, the defendant has 15 days from denial to plead to the complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.7].

Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1330 requires that a petition to compel arbitration or to stay proceedings pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1281.2 and 1281.4 must state the provisions of the written agreement and the paragraph that provides for arbitration. The provisions must be stated verbatim or a copy must be attached to the petition and incorporated by reference.

[iv] Jurisdiction to Determine Petitions

After a petition has been filed under Code Civ. Proc. § 1280 et seq. [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1292 (venue for petition filed before commencement of arbitration), set forth in § 20.10[1]], the court in which the petition was filed retains jurisdiction to determine any subsequent petition involving the same arbitration agreement and the same controversy; any subsequent petition must be filed in that same proceeding [Code Civ. Proc. § 1292.6].

Any petition made after the commencement or completion of arbitration is to be filed in a court having jurisdiction in the county where the arbitration is being, or has been, held, or, if the arbitration is, or was, not held exclusively in any one county of California, or if held outside California, then the petition is to be filed as provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 1292, which is set forth in § 20.10[1] [Code Civ. Proc. § 1292.2].

Superior courts have jurisdiction over arbitration-related petitions whether the matter is a limited or unlimited civil case [see Cal. Const., art. VI, § 10; Code Civ. Proc. § 86(a)(10)(A); see also Code Civ. Proc. § 85 (defining "limited civil case")].

[v] Staying Related Action or Proceeding

If the arbitrable controversy involves an issue that is also involved in an action or proceeding pending in a California court, and the petitioner seeking to compel arbitration is a party to that action or proceeding, the petitioner may move the court to stay the matter before it until the application to compel arbitration is determined and, if arbitration is in fact ordered, until an arbitration is had in accordance with the order (unless the court specifies an earlier time) [Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.4]. If such an action or proceeding is pending in the superior court, the motion normally is combined with the petition to compel and supported by the same memorandum, as the petition must be filed in that superior court [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1292.4, set forth in § 20.10[1]]. Otherwise, the motion to stay the action or proceeding is to be filed in the court in which that action is pending [Code Civ. Proc. § 1292.8; see § 20.11[1]].

[vi] Consolidating Separate Arbitration Proceedings

Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.3 authorizes a court to order the consolidation of separate arbitration proceedings on petition of a party to an arbitration agreement when:

- Separate arbitration agreements or proceedings exist between the same parties, or one party is a party to a separate arbitration agreement or proceeding with a third party;
- The disputes arise from the same transaction or series of related transactions; and
- A common issue or issues of law or fact create the possibility of conflicting rulings by more than one arbitrator or panel of arbitrators.

For a memorandum in support of a petition to consolidate separate arbitration proceedings, see § 20.13[1].

The court may exercise its discretion to deny consolidation or to consolidate separate arbitration proceedings only concerning certain issues, leaving other issues to be resolved in separate proceedings. If the arbitration agreements in consolidated proceedings contain inconsistent provisions, the court must resolve the conflicts and determine the rights and duties of the various parties, to achieve substantial justice under all the circumstances [Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.3].

[vii] Costs

Code Civ. Proc. § 1293.2 provides for costs to be awarded in arbitration proceedings. If the arbitration agreement provides for an award of costs of both arbitration and court proceedings, the court may enforce that provision [see Ch. 20C, Arbitration: Confirming, Correcting, or Vacating the Award, § 20C.350].

In addition, Code Civ. Proc. § 998 is applicable to contractual arbitration, so a party who does not receive an award that is more favorable than a pre-arbitration settlement offer will be charged with the offeror's post-offer costs and expert witness fees.

[b] Statutes Relating to Arbitration of Specific Controversies

Agreements to arbitrate certain types of controversies are governed by other specific statutes, including the following:

- Bus. & Prof. Code § 6200 et seq. (attorney's fee disputes).
- Code Civ. Proc. § 1273.010 et seq. (compensation for property taken by eminent domain).
- Code Civ. Proc. § 1295 (medical malpractice disputes).
- Code Civ. Proc. § 1296 (public construction contract disputes).
- Code Civ. Proc. § 1297.11 et seq. (international commercial disputes).
- Code Civ. Proc. § 1298 et seq. (contracts to convey real property).
- Ins. Code § 11580.2 (uninsured motorist claims).

- Lab. Code § 229 (wage claims).
- Lab. Code § 1700.45 (labor contracts with talent agencies).
- Lab. Code §§ 6144-6146 (state employees' workers' compensation and insurance).

[5] Judicial Arbitration in California

Judicial arbitration is required in California for certain actions, mainly those in which the amount in controversy does not exceed $50,000. Judicial arbitration is governed by Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.10 et seq. and Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.810 et seq., and is the subject of Ch. 131A, Judicial Arbitration [see also California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 36, Judicial Arbitration (Matthew Bender)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionArbitrationsFederal Arbitration ActArbitration AgreementsCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionArbitrationsFederal Arbitration ActOrders to Compel ArbitrationCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionArbitrationsFederal Arbitration ActStays Pending ArbitrationCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionArbitrationsForeign Arbitral AwardsCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionArbitrationsWaivers

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20 ARBITRATION: COMPELLING
PART I. INTRODUCTION

2-20 California Points & Authorities § 20.03

§ 20.03 How to Use the Forms in This Chapter

[1] Page Limits on Points and Authorities

One of the more significant drafting requirements to keep in mind are page limits: supporting and opposing memoranda must not exceed 15 pages, or 20 pages in a summary judgment proceeding. A reply or closing memorandum may not exceed 10 pages in length [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(d)]. Exhibits, declarations, attachments, tables of contents and authorities, and proof of service are not counted. Any party must obtain leave of court to file a longer memorandum [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(d), (e)]. These and other drafting requirements are discussed in further detail in Chapter 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs, § 1.05.

[2] Using the Forms to Build a Draft Memorandum

The forms included in this chapter are designed to be combined with other forms to form a complete memorandum. For detailed discussion on how to select and use the forms in the publication to build a draft memorandum and complete the draft, with detailed discussion of all drafting requirements and strategic or stylistic considerations, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs, §§ 1.03 -1.06. For a skeletal form of memorandum for use in creating a properly formatted outline in which to compile relevant forms from this publication, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs, § 1.10.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProceduresPleading & PracticeMotion PracticeContent & FormCivil ProceduresPleading & PracticeMotion PracticeOpposing MemorandaCivil ProceduresPleading & PracticeMotion PracticeSupporting Memoranda

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20 ARBITRATION: COMPELLING
PART I. INTRODUCTION

2-20 California Points & Authorities § 20.04

§ 20.04 Related Discussion and Forms

[1] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For detailed legal background discussion, research guides, procedural checklists, and practice forms of motions and other papers relating to private contractual arbitration proceedings, see:

- California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration (Matthew Bender).

- California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 33, Contractual Arbitration: Appointment of Arbitrator and Conduct of Proceeding (Matthew Bender).

- California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 34, Contractual Arbitration: Judicial Review (Matthew Bender).

[2] Related Points and Authorities

Chapters in this publication with related forms include:

- For resisting arbitration, see Ch. 20A, Arbitration: Resisting .

- For selecting arbitrators and determining arbitral immunity, see Ch. 20B, Arbitration: Selecting Arbitrators; Arbitral Immunity .

- For confirming, correcting, or vacating an arbitration award, see Ch. 20C, Arbitration: Confirming, Correcting, or Vacating the Award .

- For dismissing an arbitration, see Ch. 20D, Arbitration: Dismissing .

- For determining the effect of an arbitration award, see Ch. 20E, Arbitration: Effect of Award .

- For situations in which attorney's fees may be recovered, see Ch. 25, Attorney's Fees .

- For contract provisions in general, see Ch. 50, Contracts .

- For situations in which contracts may be avoided or declared void, see Ch. 92, Duress, Menace, Fraud, Undue Influence, and Mistake .

- For requirements of injunctions, see Ch. 116, Injunctions .

- For general principles relating to specific performance of contracts, see Ch. 214, Specific Performance .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionArbitrationsFederal Arbitration ActArbitration AgreementsCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionArbitrationsFederal Arbitration ActOrders to Compel ArbitrationCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesGeneral OverviewContracts LawDefensesDuress & Undue InfluenceGeneral OverviewContracts LawRemediesSpecific Performance

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20 ARBITRATION: COMPELLING
PART I. INTRODUCTION

2-20 California Points & Authorities §§ 20.05-20.09

[Reserved]

§§ 20.05[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20 ARBITRATION: COMPELLING
PART II. FORMS
A. General Principles Related to Compelling Arbitration

2-20 California Points & Authorities § 20.10

§ 20.10 Supporting Petition to Compel Arbitration [and Motion to Stay Related Action]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF PETITION TO Petitioner,	)	COMPEL ARBITRATION [AND MOTION TO
vs.	)	STAY ACTION]
_____ [name],	)	Date: _____
Respondent.	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

PETITIONER, AS A PARTY TO AN ARBITRATION AGREEMENT, IS ENTITLED TO AN ORDER COMPELLING ARBITRATION BECAUSE RESPONDENT HAS REFUSED TO ARBITRATE A CONTROVERSY UNDER THAT AGREEMENT.

A. Court to Order Arbitration Under Agreement. On petition of a party to an arbitration agreement alleging the existence of a written agreement to arbitrate a controversy, and that a party thereto refuses to arbitrate the controversy, the court shall order the parties to so arbitrate if it determines that such an agreement exists, unless the right to compel arbitration has been waived, there are grounds for revoking the agreement, or, except as to certain actions against health care providers, a party to the arbitration agreement is a party to a pending court action or special proceeding with a third party arising out of the same or series of related transactions, and there is a possibility of conflicting rulings on a common issue of law or fact (Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.2).

[EITHER]

[Optional] B. Venue for Petition Made Prior to Commencement of Arbitration under Private Agreement. [Except as otherwise provided by this article], [A]ny petition made prior to the commencement of arbitration shall be filed in a court having jurisdiction in (Code Civ. Proc. § 1292):

(a) The county where the agreement is to be performed or was made.

(b) If the agreement does not specify a county where it is to be performed and the agreement was not made in any county in California, the county where any party to the court proceeding resides or has a place of business.

(c) In any case not covered by subdivision (a) or (b) of this section, in any county in California.

[OR]

[Optional] B. Venue for Petition to Compel Arbitration if Related Action Has Already Been Commenced. If a controversy referable to arbitration under an alleged agreement is involved in an action or proceeding in a superior court, a petition for an order to arbitrate shall be filed in that action or proceeding (Code Civ. Proc. § 1292.4).

C. Proving Existence of Agreement to Arbitrate. When a petition to compel arbitration is filed and accompanied by prima facie evidence of a written agreement to arbitrate the controversy, the court itself must decide whether the agreement exists, and if any defense to its enforcement is raised [--either fraud in the execution voiding the agreement or a statutory defense of waiver or revocation--], whether the agreement is enforceable. Because existence of the agreement is a statutory prerequisite to granting the petition, the petitioner bears the burden of proving its existence by a preponderance of the evidence. [If the party opposing the petition raises a defense to its enforcement, that party bears the burden of proving by a preponderance of the evidence, any fact necessary to the defense] (see Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.2(a), (b); Engalla v. Permanente Medical Group, Inc. (1997) 15 Cal. 4th 951, 972, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 843, 938 P.2d 903 ; Rosenthal v. Great Western Fin. Securities Corp. (1996) 14 Cal. 4th 394, 413, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 875, 926 P.2d 1061 ; Hotels Nevada v. L.A. Pacific Center, Inc. (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 754, 758, 761, 50 Cal. Rptr. 3d 700).

[Optional] D. Evidentiary Hearing. The hearing to determine a petition to compel arbitration pursuant to a contract requires the petitioner to prove by affidavit or declaration and documentary evidence, with oral testimony taken only by the court's discretion. [There is no authority for the proposition that a trial court necessarily abuses its discretion, in a motion proceeding, by resolving evidentiary conflicts without hearing testimony], although the better course would normally be for the trial court to hear oral testimony and allow the parties the opportunity for cross-examination. [A court errs by failing to exercise its authority by holding an evidentiary hearing to determine arbitrability before it rules on a motion to compel arbitration] (Code Civ. Proc. § 1290.2; Engalla v. Permanente Medical Group, Inc. (1997) 15 Cal. 4th 951, 972-973, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 843, 938 P.2d 903 ; Rosenthal v. Great Western Fin. Securities Corp. (1996) 14 Cal. 4th 394, 413-414, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 875, 926 P.2d 1061 ; Hotels Nevada v. L.A. Pacific Center, Inc. (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 754, 758, 761-763, 50 Cal. Rptr. 3d 700).

[Optional] E. Federal Right to Jury Trial Is Not Applicable in State Court. Title 9 of the United States Code, section 4 does not require a California court to hold a jury trial on the existence of an arbitration agreement, because the California procedure is not contrary to and does not frustrate the federal law (Engalla v. Permanente Medical Group, Inc. (1997) 15 Cal. 4th 951, 972, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 843, 938 P.2d 903 ; Rosenthal v. Great Western Fin. Securities Corp. (1996) 14 Cal. 4th 394, 407-410, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 875, 926 P.2d 1061).

[Optional] F. Fact That Presumption of Going Forward With Evidence Was Met Does Not Negate Sufficiency of Evidence to Support Finding That Arbitration Agreement Exists. Evidence that one party mailed documents containing the arbitration agreement to the other party creates a presumption affecting burden of producing evidence, which the other party can meet by testimony that he or she did not receive those documents. Nevertheless, contradictory evidence that remains is still substantial evidence that will support a finding that the parties agreed to arbitrate (see Craig v. Brown & Root, Inc. (2000) 84 Cal. App. 4th 416, 421-422, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d. 818).

[Optional] G. Arbitrator, Not Court, Should Determine Compliance With [Private] Limitation Period. A defense that the claim sought to be arbitrated is barred by the statute of limitations is for the arbitrator, not the court, to decide. That the statute of limitations has run on the underlying claims is not one of the legislatively or judicially recognized justifications for denying a petition to compel. Rather, the statute of limitations is an affirmative defense that falls naturally within the plain language of the parties' agreement to arbitrate. [This is true whether the limitation period is a statute or a private limitation period imposed by the parties' agreement or the arbitration rules they have designated as applicable] (Howsam v. Dean Witter Reynolds, Inc. (2002) 537 U.S. 79, 123 S. Ct. 588, 592-594, 154 L. Ed. 2d 491 ; Wagner Construction Co. v. Pacific Mechanical Corp. (2007) 41 Cal. 4th 19, 24, 26, 28, 58 Cal. Rptr. 3d 434, 157 P.3d 1029).

[Optional] H. Under Federal Arbitration Act, Arbitrator, Not Court, Determines Waiver. The issue of waiver of the right to compel arbitration is determined by the court if the matter is governed by Code of Civil Procedure Section 1281.2. However, if the matter is governed by the Federal Arbitration Act (FAA) and there is no explicit choice of California law, the arbitrator determines whether the party seeking to compel arbitration has waived the right to do so, [unless the claim of waiver is based on litigation conduct, in which case the court determines the issue of waiver] (Howsam v. Dean Witter Reynolds, Inc. (2002) 537 U.S. 79, 84, 123 S. Ct. 588, 592-594, 154 L. Ed. 2d 491 ; Omar v. Ralphs Grocery Co., Inc. (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 955, 962-965, 13 Cal. Rptr. 3d 562 ; Thorup v. Dean Witter Reynolds, Inc. (1986) 180 Cal. App. 3d 228, 233-235, 225 Cal. Rptr. 521 ; see 9 U.S.C. § 3; see also Wagner Construction Co. v. Pacific Mechanical Corp. (2007) 41 Cal. 4th 19, 24, 25-27, 58 Cal. Rptr. 3d 434, 157 P.3d 1029 (remanding to have trial court determine waiver)).

[Optional] I. Arbitrator, Not Court, Determines Arbitrability. When the contract provides for arbitration in conformance with rules that specify the arbitrator will decide the scope of his or her own jurisdiction, the parties' intent is clear and unmistakable, even without a recital in the contract, that the arbitrator will decide any dispute over arbitrability (Rodriguez v. American Technologies, Inc. (2006) 136 Cal. App. 4th 1110, 1123, 39 Cal. Rptr. 3d 437 ; Dream Theater, Inc. v. Dream Theater (2004) 124 Cal. App. 4th 547, 557, 21 Cal. Rptr. 3d 322). When parties explicitly incorporate rules that empower an arbitrator to decide issues of arbitrability, the incorporation serves as clear and unmistakable evidence of the parties' intent to delegate such issues to the arbitrator (Greenspan v. LADT, LLC (2010) 185 Cal. App. 4th 1413, 1442, 111 Cal. Rptr. 3d 468) .

[Optional] J. Federal Arbitration Act Is Not Offended When Arbitrator Allows Court to Determine Legality of Entire Contract. Part of the issue of the existence of a valid contract for arbitration is the determination of whether the contract as a whole is illegal, which under California law, and thus under a contract governed by the Federal Arbitration Act which includes a California choice of law provision, is for the court to decide. The Federal Arbitration Act (9 U.S.C. § 1 et seq.) is not offended when the arbitrator defers to allow the court to determine in the first instance whether the entire contract is illegal (Hotels Nevada, LLC v. Bridge Banc, LLC (2005) 130 Cal. App. 4th 1431, 1436-1438, 30 Cal. Rptr. 3d 903).

CAUTION:

The authority in Optional Paragraph J has been overruled by the United States Supreme Court authority in Optional Paragraph K to the extent it holds that California law and Code Civ. Proc. § 1281 empower the court to determine the legality of the agreement containing the arbitration clause as a whole when the Federal Arbitration Act governs [Hotels Nevada, LLC v. Bridge Banc, LLC (2005) 130 Cal. App. 4th 1431, 1435-1437] . Hotels Nevada may still have validity in a situation in which the issue has first been presented to the arbitrator, who acknowledged his or her authority to determine that issue, but ceded it to the court for reasons of economy or speedy resolution [see Hotels Nevada, LLC v. Bridge Banc, LLC (2005) 130 Cal. App. 4th 1431, 1438 (court might have decided differently if matter had not first been submitted to arbitrator)].

[Optional] K. Under Federal Arbitration Act, Arbitrator, Not Court, Determines Illegality. Under the Federal Arbitration Act, when the challenge is to the validity of the contract as a whole and not just the arbitration clause, the issue of the illegality of that contract is to be determined by the arbitrator (see 9 U.S.C. § 2; Preston v. Ferrer (2008) 552 U.S. 346, 128 S. Ct. 978, 169 L. Ed. 2d 917, 923, 925-926 ; Buckeye Check Cashing, Inc. v. Cardegna (2006) 546 U.S. 440, 126 S. Ct. 1204, 1208-1210, 163 L. Ed. 2d 1038).

[Optional] L. Code of Civil Procedure Section 1281.2 Is Not Applicable to Deny Arbitration for Possible Conflicting Rulings. By examining the language of the parties' contract, it is clear that they unequivocally adopted both the substantive and procedural sections of the Federal Arbitration Act to govern their arbitration. Thus, Section 1281.2 of the Code of Civil Procedure is not applicable, and the court has no discretion but to compel arbitration as to the issues and parties bound by the arbitration agreement (see Rodriguez v. American Technologies, Inc. (2006) 136 Cal. App. 4th 1110, 1115-1123) .

[Optional] M. Under Federal Arbitration Act, Court, Not Arbitrator, Determines Challenge that Arbitration Provisions Are Unconscionable. When the complaint challenges the validity or enforceability of the agreement containing the arbitration provision, the question of whether the agreement, as a whole, is unconscionable must be referred to the arbitrator. When the crux of the complaint is not the invalidity of the contract as a whole, but rather the unconscionability of the arbitration provision itself, then the [federal] court must decide whether the arbitration provision is invalid and unenforceable under the Federal Arbitration Act (see 9 U.S.C. § 2; Nagrampa v. MailCoups, Inc. (9th Cir. 2006) 469 F.3d 1257, 1276-1277 ; see also Sanchez v. Western Pizza Enterprises, Inc. (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 154, 165-166, 90 Cal. Rptr. 3d 818 ; Bruni v. Didion (2008) 160 Cal. App. 4th 1272, 1283-1290, 73 Cal. Rptr. 3d 395 ; Baker v. Osborne Development Corp. (2008) 159 Cal. App. 4th 884, 893-894, 71 Cal. Rptr. 3d 854 (because arbitration provisions were ambiguous, there was no "clear and unmistakable" direction that arbitrator determine issue); Murphy v. Check 'N Go of California, Inc. (2007) 156 Cal. App. 4th 138, 144-146 , 67 Cal. Rptr. 3d 120 (provision for arbitrator to determine unconscionability was itself substantively unconscionable); Higgins v. Superior Court (Disney/ABC International Television, Inc.) (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 1238, 1247, 1249-1251, 45 Cal. Rptr. 3d 293).

[Optional] N. Under Federal Arbitration Act, Court, Not Arbitrator, Determines Existence of Entire Contract. Under the Federal Arbitration Act, issues regarding the validity or enforcement of a putative contract mandating arbitration should be referred to an arbitrator, but challenges to the existence of a contract as a whole must be determined by the court prior to ordering arbitration (Sanford v. Member Works, Inc. (9th Cir. 2007) 483 F.3d 956, 962, 964) .

[Optional] O. National Association of Security Dealers Class Arbitration Rule. National Association of Security Dealers (NASD) Code of Arbitration Procedure Rule 12204, approved by the Securities and Exchange Commission in 1992 with the intent to allow investor class actions to proceed in federal court, makes all actions agreed by the parties to be arbitrated under those rules ineligible when sought to be or actually certified as a class. Both the court and the arbitrator have authority to make the determination of ineligibility (Clark v. First Union Securities, Inc. (2007) 153 Cal. App. 4th 1595, 1601, 1610-1611, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 313).

[Optional] P. Parties' Agreement Gives Court Authority to Award Attorney's Fees for Petition to Compel Arbitration. Under the particular agreement involved in this case, which specifies that _____ [describe provision, e.g., should any party institute any legal action or administrative proceeding against the other by any method other than arbitration, the responding party is entitled to recover from the initiating party all damages, costs, expenses, and attorney's fees incurred as a result of that action], it is proper for the trial court to award petitioner its attorney's fees reasonably expended in moving this matter to arbitration, even though it is an interim award and even though petitioner may not be the ultimate prevailing party (Acosta v. Kerrigan (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 1124, 1130-1133, 58 Cal. Rptr. 3d 865).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of a petition for an order to compel arbitration under a contract when the respondent refuses to arbitrate in accordance with the provisions of that contract calling for arbitration. It sets forth the basic requirements for establishing the existence of an agreement to arbitrate [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1281.2, 1290.2; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1330].

Optional Paragraph G is for use when counsel want to make sure the issue of compliance with any applicable statute of limitations defense will be determined by the arbitrator. The bracketed language regarding a private limitation period is based on the fact situation in Howsam v. Dean Witter Reynolds, Inc. (2002) 537 U.S. 79, 123 S. Ct. 588, 154 L. Ed. 2d 491 , discussed at [3][f], below. If the matter is governed by the Federal Arbitration Act and counsel anticipates a claim of waiver of the right to compel arbitration based on something other than litigation conduct, use Optional Paragraph H. If the question of whether a particular arbitration agreement should be interpreted to impliedly prevent classwide arbitration is at issue, counsel should include authority from Ch. 20C, Arbitration: Confirming, Correcting, or Vacating the Award, § 20C.105 which holds that it is the arbitrator, not the court, who should make that interpretation.

If the matter is one in which the parties have clearly stated their intention that the arbitrator determine arbitrability, counsel should use optional Paragraph I, which also may be used in a petition or other request to the arbitrator or arbitration panel to determine arbitrability. Counsel who use optional Paragraph I should probably cite and attach the particular arbitration rule that provides for the arbitrator to determine arbitrability as well as the part of the arbitration agreement that specifies that rule is to govern.

Optional Paragraph J is for use when the matter is governed by the Federal Arbitration Act and the arbitrator has agreed to defer to the court to allow the court to determine in the first instance whether the entire contract is illegal. Optional Paragraph K is for use to support the contention that the arbitrator, not the court, is to determine any claim of illegality of the agreement containing the arbitration clause as a whole. Optional Paragraph L is to anticipate or rebut an attempt to resist arbitration when there is litigation pending with a party or parties who are not bound by the arbitration agreement and a possibility of conflicting rulings in that litigation and in the arbitration when the arbitration agreement clearly provides that even the procedural aspects of the Federal Arbitration Act have been adopted by the parties. In this situation, the party worried about conflicting rulings may want to move under Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.4 to have the litigation stayed during the arbitration.

Optional Paragraph M is for use to make clear that the court, not the arbitrator, has the responsibility to determine a challenge to the arbitration agreement alone (not the entire contract in which it appears) based on unconscionabilty. See Forms §§ 20.11 and 20.12.

Optional Paragraph N contains the federal authority for the proposition that under the Federal Arbitration Act, when the existence of the underlying contract (not just the arbitration clause) is contested, the matter is to be determined by the court.

Optional Paragraphs O and P have limited application to particular situations: Paragraph O is for use if the parties have agreed to arbitrate under the NASD Rules of Arbitration Procedure and plaintiff wants to proceed with class arbitration. Paragraph P is for use if the parties' contract provides expressly for attorney's fees on a motion to compel arbitration.

Petitioner may wish to anticipate any opposition on grounds of absence of anagreement, waiver, or revocation as the basis of the respondent's refusal to arbitrate, so that authority contrary to the points to be raised by the respondent is clearly before the court. For that purpose, appropriate memoranda from § 20.80 et seq. may be combined with this memorandum.

In addition, if petitioner wishes the order to specify governing law, or the scope of arbitrable issues under the agreement, or that a particular party is bound by the agreement, all applicable authorities from §§ 20.20 et seq., 20.30 et seq., 20.40 et seq., 20.60 et seq., and Ch. 20C, Arbitration: Confirming, Correcting, or Vacating the Award, § 20C.105 should be combined with this memorandum.

If there is an action pending relating to the arbitrable controversy, petitioner probably will want to combine this memorandum with the memorandum at § 20.11 to stay that action [see Marcus v. Superior Court (1977) 75 Cal. App. 3d 204, 212-213, 141 Cal. Rptr. 890 (time during which action is stayed is excluded from the five-year period contemplated by mandatory dismissal statute)]. In that case, the motion to stay may be combined with the petition and supported by the same memorandum.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form, and in the other forms combined with this form, with the facts of his or her case. For example, if petitioner wishes to anticipate a claim by respondent that petitioner has waived its right to arbitrate, counsel's argument should focus on the critical points made in the supporting declarations, and in any other pleadings or motions before the court of which petitioner requests to court to take judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.] regarding the lack of prejudice to respondent on account of any action taken by petitioner and regarding the fact that none of petitioner's actions were inconsistent with arbitration.

It is advisable for counsel to submit cognizable evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file, including verified pleadings, or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied when plaintiff/respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement)].

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California

Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a form of a petition to compel arbitration that may be supported by this memorandum, and for a notice of hearing on that petition, as well as a notice of motion to stay proceedings, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Memoranda

For additional memoranda to combine with this form, regarding other matters that the petition may need to address, see §§ 20.11 -20.14, 20.20 et seq., 20.30 et seq., 20.40 et seq., 20.60 et seq., and 20.80 et seq.

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[e] Opposing Memoranda

The memoranda in Ch. 20A, Arbitration: Resisting, § 20A.10 et seq. may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the memorandum set out in this general form and also to oppose the memoranda designed to be combined with this form.

For a memorandum supporting the proposition that in a matter governed by the Federal Arbitration Act, the arbitrator, not the court, interprets the arbitration provision to determine whether it permits classwide arbitration, see Ch. 20C, Arbitration: Confirming, Correcting, or Vacating the Award, § 20C.105. If counsel wishes to challenge a ban on classwide arbitration in a contract governed by the Federal Arbitration Act as unconscionable, see Ch. 20A, Arbitration: Resisting, § 20A.91.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Proving Existence of Agreement to Arbitrate

Engalla v. Permanente Medical Group, Inc. (1997) 15 Cal. 4th 951, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 843, 938 P.2d 903 , arose out of a medical malpractice claim between plaintiffs' decedent and defendant (Kaiser). The claim was to have been arbitrated under the "Service Agreement" between decedent's employer and Kaiser, but decedent died one day after the neutral (third) arbitrator's appointment was acknowledged by Kaiser, which was approximately three months after the 60 days provided in the Service Agreement for the appointment of the neutral arbitrator by the two party-appointed arbitrators. Shortly thereafter decedent's family and representatives refused to continue with the arbitration and filed a complaint for medical malpractice and for fraud, alleging in the fraud claim that Kaiser had fraudulently induced decedent to enter into the service agreement by falsely representing that it intended to abide by the terms of the agreement regarding the expedition of arbitration, in particular the appointment of arbitrators, when in fact it was likely to take two years rather than the 60 days provided for in the agreement for the arbitrators to be appointed. The complaint also alleged that Kaiser engaged in a course of dilatory conduct designed to postpone Engalla's arbitration hearing until after his death. Kaiser petitioned to compel arbitration of the claims in the suit. Plaintiffs opposed the petition on the grounds the agreement had been induced by fraud and that Kaiser had waived its right to arbitrate by bad faith and unreasonable delay in appointment of arbitrators. The trial court agreed, and refused to grant the petition to compel arbitration, but the court of appeal reversed.

The Supreme Court reversed and remanded to the trial court because there were still issues of fact to be determined by the trial court regarding the claims of fraud and waiver. In discussing the proper procedure for resolving a petition to compel arbitration, the Court held that petitioner bears the burden of proving the existence of a valid arbitration agreement by the preponderance of the evidence, and the party opposing the petition bears the burden of proving by a preponderance of the evidence any fact necessary to its defense (15 Cal. 4th 951, 972) [see also additional discussion of Engalla under [b], below].

Rosenthal v. Great Western Fin. Securities Corp. (1996) 14 Cal. 4th 394, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 875, 926 P.2d 1061 , was a suit by 24 investors in stock and bond mutual funds against the brokerage firm, and four of its employees, from whom they bought the funds, an affiliated bank, and the parent company of both. The suit alleged breach of fiduciary duty, fraud, negligent misrepresentation, intentional and negligent infliction of emotional distress, unfair business practices, and invasion of privacy. Defendants petitioned to compel arbitration under the predispute arbitration clause in the agreement plaintiffs executed to purchase the securities. Plaintiffs opposed the petition on the grounds (1) that there was fraud in the inception of the contract and (2) that the contract they signed was permeated with fraud. Plaintiffs submitted declarations in support of their position. Generally the declarations stated that plaintiffs were longtime depositors of the bank, that the brokers represented themselves to be employees of the bank [and in some cases referred to supposedly confidential information about plaintiffs' deposits at the bank], that the brokers materially misrepresented the nature of the investments being sold, and did not tell plaintiffs that the client agreement contained an arbitration clause, but rather that the agreement was merely a formality required to open an account. The trial court agreed with defendants that the Federal Arbitration Act's provision for a jury trial [9 U.S.C. § 4] did not apply, and at a nonevidentiary hearing denied the petition to compel arbitration as to all but one of the plaintiffs on the grounds that each of those plaintiffs presented sufficient evidentiary support for their allegations of fraud in the inception of the arbitration agreement. Defendants appealed.

The court of appeal held that the federal jury trial provision was applicable in state court, and did not reach the fraud claims, but remanded for the trial court to determine whether plaintiffs had sufficiently alleged fraud in the making of the arbitration agreement, and if so, to try, by jury if requested, the issue of whether the arbitration agreements were the result of fraud. The Supreme Court granted defendant brokerage firm's petition for review and held:

- That the Federal Arbitration Act's provision for a jury trial [9 U.S.C. § 4] does not apply in state court to determine the existence or validity of an arbitration agreement, overruling Rice v. Dean Witter Reynolds, Inc. (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1016, 1025, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 265 ; Strotz v. Dean Witter Reynolds, Inc. (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 208, 272 Cal. Rptr. 680 ; and Main v. Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, Inc. (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 19, 136 Cal. Rptr. 378 , to the extent they reach the opposite conclusion (14 Cal. 4th 394, 407) . The Supreme Court reversed the judgment of the court of appeal insofar as it directed the trial court to conduct jury trials on plaintiffs' claims of fraud in the inception (14 Cal. 4th 394, 431) .

- That the proper procedure is for the trial court to hold an evidentiary hearing to determine if an arbitration agreement exists, and if any defense to its enforcement is raised, whether the agreement is enforceable (14 Cal. 4th 394, 413) .

- That the so-called "permeation doctrine" should no longer be recognized in California to the extent that doctrine indicates that an agreement to arbitrate may be found invalid simply because the contract as a whole was induced by fraud [see Prima Paint Corp. v. Flood & Conklin (1967) 388 U.S. 395, 404, 87 S. Ct. 1801, 18 L. Ed. 2d 1270, 1277] (14 Cal. 4th 394, 418-419) .

- That to the extent that the permeation doctrine is merely another name for fraud in the execution of a contract it is unnecessary (14 Cal. 4th 394, 418) .

- That most of the plaintiffs did not present legally sufficient evidence that they reasonably relied on defendants' misrepresentations and therefore did not prove claims of fraud in the inception or execution of the agreements sufficient to render the agreements void (14 Cal. 4th 394, 426-427) . As to those plaintiffs, the Court affirmed the court of appeal's judgment to reverse the order denying the petition to compel arbitration of their claims (14 Cal. 4th 394, 426-427, 431) .

- That as to other plaintiffs, who had limited facility with English or were legally blind, remanded to the trial court for determination of claims of fraud in the execution or inception of the agreements (14 Cal. 4th 394, 427-431) .

In considering the proper procedure for determining arbitrability, the Court noted that Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1281.2, 1290.2 establish the procedure for determining the existence or validity of an agreement to arbitrate. When a petition to compel arbitration is filed and accompanied by prima facie evidence of a written agreement to arbitrate the controversy, the court itself must decide whether the agreement exists, and if any defense to its enforcement is raised, whether it is enforceable. Because existence of the agreement is a statutory prerequisite to granting the petition, the petitioner bears the burden of proving its existence by a preponderance of the evidence. If the party opposing the petition raises a defense to its enforcement--either fraud in the execution voiding the agreement or a statutory defense of waiver or revocation [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.2(a), (b)], that party bears the burden of producing evidence, and of proving by a preponderance of the evidence, any fact necessary to the defense (14 Cal. 4th 394, 413) .

Hotels Nevada v. L.A. Pacific Center, Inc. (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 754, 50 Cal. Rptr. 3d 700 , arose out of a purchase and sale agreement for a $75 million property. Plaintiff/seller filed a complaint for rescission based on fraud, cancellation of written instruments based on illegality and conspiracy, alleging that defendant/buyer "manipulated, fabricated, and manufactured" the agreement to in correctly reflecta 60-month holdback period for $5 million of the purchase price rather than the 12-month period to which plaintiff had agreed. Defendant moved to compel arbitration. The trial court denied the motion, concluding that defendant had failed to meet its burden to show that it had an enforceable agreement to arbitrate and that an evidentiary hearing would be necessary to determine whether the parties had a contract. Defendant/seller appealed.

The court of appeal reversed and remanded, stating that the time for the trial court to hold the evidentiary hearing was before it ruled on the motion to compel arbitration, not after (144 Cal. App. 4th 754, 758, 766) . The court cited Rosenthal v. Great Western Fin. Securities Corp. (1996) 14 Cal. 4th 394, 413-414, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 875, 926 P.2d 1061 (Rosenthal; discussed above) for the proposition that the role of the trial court on a motion to compel arbitration is to sit as a trier of fact, weighing any affidavits, declarations, and other documentary evidence, together with oral testimony received at the court's discretion, to reach a determination on the issue of arbitrability (144 Cal. App. 4th 754, 758). When a petition to compel arbitration is filed and accompanied by prima facie evidence of a written agreement to arbitrate the controversy, the court itself must determine whether the agreement exists and, if any defense to its enforcement is raised, whether it is enforceable. Because the existence of the agreement is a statutory prerequisite to granting the petition, the petitioner bears the burden of proving its existence by a preponderance of the evidence. If the party opposing the petition raises a defense to enforcement--either fraud in the execution voiding the agreement, or a statutory defense of waiver or revocation--that party bears the burden of producing evidence of, and proving by a preponderance of the evidence, any fact necessary to the defense (144 Cal. App. 4th 754, 761). Again citing Rosenthal, the court of appeal noted that ordinarily, the facts will be proven by affidavit or declaration and documentary evidence, with oral testimony taken only in the court's discretion. Here, the trial court failed to comply with this authority, by denying the motion to compel arbitration without the benefit of any evidence (144 Cal. App. 4th 754, 762) . The trial court erred by denying the motion to compel arbitration on the basis of the complaint's allegations instead of a factual determination made after a hearing (144 Cal. App. 4th 754, 763). On remand, the court of appeal directed the trial court to conduct an evidentiary hearing on the motion (144 Cal. App. 4th 754, 766).

[b] Evidentiary Hearing

The facts and procedural background of Engalla v. Permanente Medical Group, Inc. (1997) 15 Cal. 4th 951, 64 Cal.

Rptr. 2d 843, 938 P.2d 903 , are discussed in [a], above. In discussing the proper procedure for determining arbitrability, the Supreme Court held that in these summary proceedings, the trial court is the trier of fact weighing all the affidavits, declarations, and other documentary evidence as well as oral testimony received at the court's discretion, to reach a final determination (15 Cal. 4th 951, 972) . The Court noted that it appeared that the trial court in this case, as in Rosenthal v. Great Western Fin. Securities Corp. (1996) 14 Cal. 4th 394, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 875, 926 P.2d 1061 , incorrectly treated the procedure as a motion for summary judgment in which it was obliged to determine that there was a legitimate factual dispute among the parties but not to resolve that dispute. The Court quoted the trial court's statement that plaintiffs had made a substantive challenge to the arbitration clause and had presented facts tending to show that they were victims of fraud in the inducement and execution of the arbitration clause. The Court said the trial court appeared to have followed Rowland v. PaineWebber Inc. (1992) 4 Cal. App. 4th 279, 6 Cal. Rptr. 2d 20 , that a trial court must only determine whether there are any facts supporting the allegation of fraud in the inducement (15 Cal. 4th 951, 972) . The trial court was apparently of the view that it did not have to definitively decide the fraud issue in order to dispose of the petition because that issue would ultimately be decided in a jury trial in the context of the damage action. Because the trial court, understandably confused by case law [see cases cited at Rosenthal v. Great Western Fin. Securities Corp. (1996) 14 Cal. 4th 394, 407, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 875, 926 P.2d 1061] , apparently abdicated its role as trier of fact in deciding the petition to compel, the Court concluded that the case had to be remanded to the trial court for it to resolve any factually disputed issues, unless there was insufficient support for plaintiffs' claim (15 Cal. 4th 951, 973) .

The facts and procedural background of Rosenthal v. Great Western Fin. Securities Corp. (1996) 14 Cal. 4th 394, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 875, 926 P.2d 1061 , are discussed under [a], above. In discussing the evidentiary nature of the hearing to determine the petition to compel arbitration, the Court noted that the hearing contemplated by Code Civ. Proc. § 1290.2 ("in the manner ... provided by law for the ... hearing of motions") would ordinarily mean the facts are to be proven by affidavit or declaration and documentary evidence, with oral testimony taken only by the court's discretion. Defendant contended that when the documentary evidence and declarations present a material factual dispute, the trial court must proceed to a summary bench trial. The Court said there is no authority for the proposition that a trial court necessarily abuses its discretion, in a motion proceeding, by resolving evidentiary conflicts without hearing testimony, although the Court agreed that, as is common with allegations of fraud, the better course would normally be for the trial court to hear oral testimony and allow the parties the opportunity for cross-examination. The Court noted the trial court's remark that "it's pretty difficult to weigh credibility without seeing the witness" (14 Cal. 4th 394, 413-414) . Because the trial court in this case only determined that a factual issue existed, and did not resolve it, to the extent that plaintiffs did produce legally sufficient evidence of fraud to void the agreement, the trial court must determine the factual issues on remand (14 Cal. 4th 394, 414) .

Hotels Nevada v. L.A. Pacific Center, Inc. (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 754, 50 Cal. Rptr. 3d 700 , is discussed at [a], above.

[c] Federal Right to Jury Trial Is Not Applicable in State Court

The facts and procedural background of Engalla v. Permanente Medical Group, Inc. (1997) 15 Cal. 4th 951, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 843, 938 P.2d 903 , are discussed in [a], above. In discussing the proper procedure for determining arbitrability, the Supreme Court noted that no jury trial is available to determine a petition to compel arbitration (15 Cal. 4th 951, 972) .

The facts and procedural background of Rosenthal v. Great Western Fin. Securities Corp. (1996) 14 Cal. 4th 394, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 875, 926 P.2d 1061 , arediscussed under [a], above. All parties agreed that because the case involved interstate commerce, the action was governed by the Federal Arbitration Act. Both 9 U.S.C. § 2 and Code Civ. Proc. § 1281 provide that arbitration agreements are enforceable except on such grounds as exist for the revocation of any contract. Both 9 U.S.C. § 4 and Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.2 provide that the court may deny a petition to compel arbitration when the party resisting arbitration did not agree to arbitrate or if the agreement is revocable (14 Cal. 4th 394, 406) .

9 U.S.C. § 4 provides that the party resisting arbitration may demand a jury trial on the issue of the existence of the agreement. California law does not provide for a jury trial on that issue, but requires the issue to be determined in the manner provided by law for the making and hearing of motions [Code Civ. Proc. § 1290.2]. California courts of appeal have been divided on the availability of the right to a jury trial [see Strauch v. Eyring (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 181, 186, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747 (9 U.S.C. § 4 provision for jury trial is not applicable in state court); Rice v. Dean Witter Reynolds, Inc. (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1016, 1025, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 265 ; Strotz v. Dean Witter Reynolds, Inc. (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 208, 210, 272 Cal. Rptr. 680 ; and Main v. Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, Inc. (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 19, 24-25, 136 Cal. Rptr. 378 (party entitled to jury trial in state court)]. The Supreme Court held that 9 U.S.C. § 4 does not require a California court to hold a jury trial on the existence of an arbitration agreement, and overruled the court of appeal cases cited above to the extent they reach the opposite conclusion (14 Cal. 4th 394, 407) . The California procedure is not contrary to and does not frustrate the federal law. Having a court rather than a jury decide whether an arbitration agreement exists will often resolve the dispute more quickly and less expensively; and thus, the California procedure for deciding motions to compel arbitration serves to further, rather than defeat, full and uniform effectuation of the federal law's objectives (14 Cal. 4th 394, 409-410) .

The Supreme Court also considered and disagreed with plaintiffs' claims (1) that the California procedure for determining the existence of a contract is impermissible under federal law because it constitutes a special rule for arbitration agreements not applicable to contracts generally (14 Cal. 4th 394, 410) and (2) that the right to a jury trial is required by the California constitution. A petition to compel arbitration is in essence a suit in equity to compel specific performance of a contract. Actions for specific performance were not recognized at common law. Thus, the California constitution does not guarantee the parties a jury trial even if the court must determine the existence of the agreement or whether the agreement is void for fraud (14 Cal. 4th 394, 411-413) .

[d] Fact That Presumption of Going Forward With Evidence Was Met Does Not Negate Sufficiency of Evidence to Support Finding That Arbitration Agreement Exists

Craig v. Brown & Root, Inc. (2000) 84 Cal. App. 4th 416, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d. 818 arose out of plaintiff's termination of employment with defendant. Plaintiff alleged wrongful termination, sexual harassment, gender discrimination, and other causes of action. The arbitration agreement was part of a dispute resolution program that covered all employee disputes. Employer's evidence was that on two occasions, it had mailed the dispute resolution program brochure and memorandum to plaintiff's home and that they were never returned. Plaintiff's testimony was the she never received the materials. After the matter was arbitrated and the award in favor of the employer confirmed, plaintiff appealed, claiming that she never agreed to arbitrate and that the arbitration agreement was unfair, unconscionable, and unenforceable.

The court of appeal affirmed. As to the existence of an agreement to arbitrate, the court said that defendant's introduction of evidence that it mailed the brochure and memorandum to plaintiff and that they had not been returned, created a presumption that plaintiff received them, and shifted the burden of producing evidence to plaintiff [Evid. Code § 641 (a letter correctly addressed and properly mailed is presumed to have been received in the ordinary course of mail)] (84 Cal. App. 4th 416, 421) . This is a presumption affecting the burden of producing evidence, which, once established, requires the trier of fact to assume the existence of the presumed fact unless and until evidence is introduced to support a finding of its nonexistence. However, the presumption disappears when, as here, it is met with contradictory evidence. Nevertheless, inferences may be drawn from the same circumstances that gave rise to the presumption in the first place. The disappearance of the presumption does not mean there is insufficient evidence to support the trial court's finding that an agreement to arbitrate existed (84 Cal. App. 4th 416, 421) . Accordingly, there was substantial evidence (1) that plaintiff received the memorandum and brochure; (2) that plaintiff continued to work for defendant after receipt of the memorandum and brochure; and (3) that plaintiff thereby agreed to be bound by the terms of the dispute resolution program, including its provision for binding arbitration (84 Cal. App. 4th 416, 422) . The portion of the opinion addressing plaintiff's claim of unconscionability is discussed at § 20.23[3][a].

[e] Arbitrator, Not Court, Should Determine Compliance with [Private] Limitation Period

